Storm leaves genuine phenomenon

Snowrollers bowl over area residents

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls-area residents awoke Friday to discover a bona fide meteorological phenomenon — fields and lawns littered with an array of multi-size snowballs, known technically as snowrollers.

Power outage — A5

"It's very rare that we have the right kind of conditions," said meteorologist Rick Ochoa, with the National Weather Service in Boise. "It's a combination of strong winds, the right type of snow, and the temperatures."

Westerly winds gusted to 40 miles an hour during an early morning storm. The snowfall was wet, and the temperatures were around 30 to 32 degrees in the Twin Falls area.

When the wet, supple flakes fell on the cold, dry snow, it caused enough friction for the wind to dig in, pick them up, and push them along unobstructed fields, according to Ochoa.

It was warm enough for the snowflakes to hold together like glue, and the wind pushed them along until they got larger and larger," he said. "They actually look more like jelly rolls than snowballs."

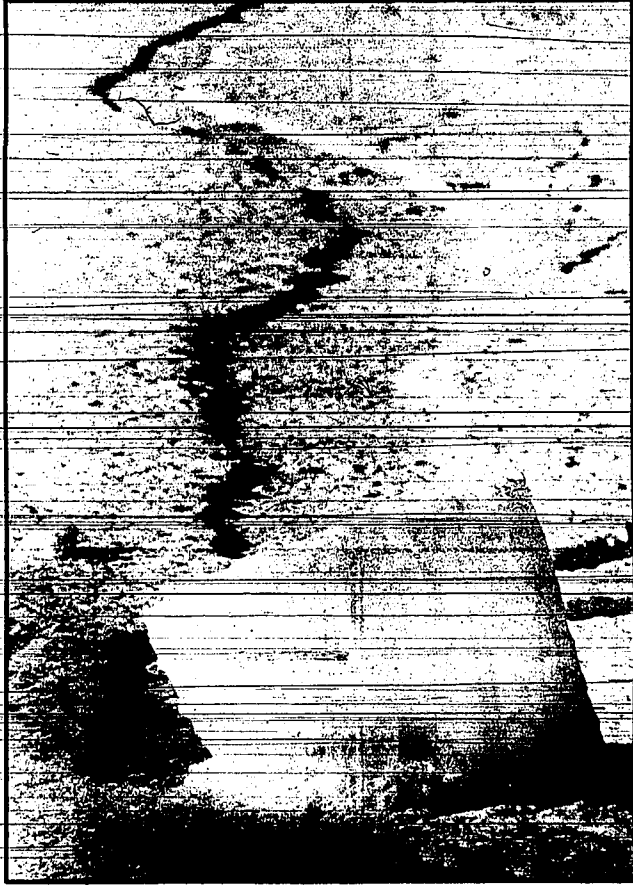

Sure enough, fields along Highway 30 toward Ellier were strewn with the multi-size rolls that crushed easily to the touch, some with hollow middles, some the size of hand-size balls, and others more than a foot-and-a-half in diameter.

Ochoa said he had no idea of the last time such conditions occurred, causing the variety of puffy, round and oblong snowballs.

Shifting winds would have caused more normal-looking snowballs, he said. But since the winds blew straight, the snow was picked up and rolled in layers for undetermined distances.

The phenomenon was confined to the Twin Falls area. The small snowrollers may have gone unnoticed along the road in town. But more than 30 people called the Times-News Friday morning to report the unexplained snowballs that dotted outlying fields.

Said one woman who called, "You've just got to get a picture of this."

Some snowrollers grew to over a foot in diameter as they zigzagged through fresh snow.

Amicable session on border

MEXICALI, Mexico — President Reagan met with Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid Friday and praised his government's efforts to repair its damaged economy and curb international narcotics traffic.

After the meeting, U.S. officials said Reagan had agreed to a Mexican proposal for a "law enforcement summit" at which attorneys general of several Latin American countries would coordinate efforts to stem the international drug flow.

The fourth meeting of the two leaders was described by officials of both sides as harmonious, in contrast to some previous sessions. On Aug. 14, 1983, in La Paz, de la Madrid bluntly told Reagan that "regional stability in Central America was threatened by U.S. shows of force" which threaten to touch off a conflagration.

Friday the two presidents barely mentioned their differences on Central America in their public statements, although de la Madrid reaffirmed Mexican support for a negotiated settlement in Nicaragua.

Reagan and de la Madrid spent nearly 10 minutes discussing Central America in the almost two hours of formal talks before lunch, a Mexican administration official said. U.S. officials said that Reagan in private, without pressing the point, reiterated his view that Nicaragua was the principal source of terrorism and subversion in Central America.

Reagan also objected to Mexican support for United Nations resolutions sharply critical of U.S. activities in the region, and of what one U.S. official termed "name-calling" resolutions on such issues as Namibia and South Africa.

But Reagan, like his Mexican counterpart, also was more conciliatory on Central America than in the past. In a toast, the president approvingly quoted from a recent de la Madrid statement praising the advance of democracy in Latin America.

The emphasis Friday was on economic issues. Mexico, where the annual rate of inflation is 60 percent, is struggling to recover from an economic crisis and a foreign debt of nearly $100 billion, the second largest in the Third World.

The United States has put forward the Baker Plan, named after Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, who attended Friday's meetings, to help solve Mexico's problems. It calls for less government intervention, reliance on more private financing, and economic reform.

De la Madrid lauded the proposal, which he called "a step forward," and said he hoped it would become "the starting point for imaginative, efficient formulas."

U.S. Treasury Secretary Jesus Silva Herzog said after the meeting that the Baker Plan did not represent "the definitive solution" for Third World indebtedness but that it was "constructive, positive and useful."

At a luncheon in Reagan's honor, de la Madrid said "Mexicans have made increasingly strenuous efforts in the last years to cope with the country's severe economic crisis." While some U.S. officials have criticized Mexican efforts as insufficient, Reagan responded positively to de la Madrid's declaration.

"Mexico's debt burden remains a serious challenge," Reagan said in a toast. "But I am impressed with the commitment that you have made, Mr. President, to meet this challenge and to take the necessary steps to achieve a robust growing economy."

Reagan also expressed appreciation for Mexican attempts to curb the flow of narcotics into the United States.

American joins with you in mourning the death of those valued Mexican officials who have been killed in the struggle against narcotics," Reagan said. "There are tears on both sides of the border for the Mexican policemen killed recently. They have shown honor and courage that transcend international boundaries."

Inmates relinquish control of prison

By MARTHA BRAYSON HODEL
The Associated Press

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va. — Rioting inmates freed their last seven hostages and relinquished control of the West Virginia Penitentiary on Friday after killing three prisoners in a siege that started as a protest of bad conditions and ended in a destructive rampage.

Gov. Arch Moore said the three dead inmates were apparently considered "snitches" and had been killed following mock trials held by inmates acting as "judge, jury and executioner."

"We've got three dead inmates and the rest of them we found alive," State Police Superintendent W.F. Donohoe said late Friday after all areas of the prison had been inspected.

Some of them were hidden, well-hidden because they feared execution," he said. "We found one on top of the security cells, one in between two block walls and one on top of an oven."

Moore and Corrections Commissioner A.V. Dodrill, accompanied by two bodyguards, entered the prison about 2:15 p.m. MST to meet with an inmate grievance committee. Emerging about 30 minutes later, the governor said he listened but made no promises.

Food service worker Bill Henderson, the last hostage released, said he felt "fantastic" as he walked through the south gate at 12:45 p.m. Officials said none of the hostages had been seriously injured.

Sixteen hostages were seized when knife-wielding inmates took over the penitentiary on New Year's Day. The prisoners agreed Thursday to free their captives in stages in return for a meeting with Moore to discuss grievances in the dilapidated, 120-year-old prison.

But after the agreement was reached, prisoners swarmed through the main building Thursday night, raided the hospital, drug dispensary and went on a rampage, officials said.

Some areas of the prison were heavily damaged in the rioting. "The command post and captain's office and the inmate exchange in the south yard, they burned it," said corrections official Bill Duncin, adding there "wasn't nearly the destruction we thought we'd see. . . . The leadership of the inmates seemed to maintain pretty good control."

Prisoners were placed under a lockdown after the siege.

"They're a little tense, we're a little tense. But they agreed to the lockdown," Duncin said. "They put about 20 inmates in the cells, closed the doors and waited on us to come down."

Moore said officials had indications that mock trials were held during the two-day inmates were in control of the institution, and he believed informers were targeted

Leasing firm seeks accounting for checks

The Associated Press and The Times-News

BOISE — A Salt Lake City-based leasing company is asking federal court here to order a former employee to account for about $3 million in checks that it alleges were written to business clients but not delivered.

Zions Leasing Co. Thursday filed a U.S. District Court lawsuit against Kerry Collins, described in the lawsuit as an employee of the company's Twin Falls office from Feb. 5, 1978 through July 2, 1985.

Collins, who is from Twin Falls, did not return a phone message and could not be reached Friday evening for comment on the case.

The lawsuit alleges that Zions Leasing signed contracts on five big construction projects to provide equipment and machinery. In each instance, the lawsuit claims that checks to pay for goods and services were issued and sent to Collins to pay the bills. But "none, or at least a small portion, if any, of the proceeds were received by the intended payees," the lawsuit claims.

The lawsuit lists 92 checks, starting with a $200,000 check issued in April 1982. The largest was a $223,295 check issued on April 22, 1983, to Ken Ellis of Twin Falls.

The lawsuit says Zions Leasing has reason to believe other checks, in an amount not specified, were not delivered. It also says it has reason to believe that some of the endorsements on the checks were forged.

The legal action against Collins asks for a court order to him to account for each check, including the names of those who endorsed each check, the number of the account where the checks were originally deposited, and disclosure of the name of the account and a

Navy shifts its strike forces into place

By NORMAN BLACK
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Navy, with the routine deployment of a carrier battle group into the Mediterranean Sea, has forces in place to launch a retaliatory strike against Libya, Pentagon sources said Friday.

But President Reagan has made no decision to proceed with any type of military response to the Dec. 27 terrorist attacks on the Rome and Vienna airports, and any such mission would be fraught with difficulty, Pentagon officials said. Pentagon officials who spoke on condition they would not be identified.

Reagan, posing for pictures in Mexico, Mexico, with Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid, was asked about reports of U.S. military movements in the Mediterranean.

"I'm not aware that we're doing anything out of the ordinary at all," he said.

Asked whether a buildup of U.S. forces was under way, Reagan said, "You've got to stop listening to Khadafi," a reference to Libyan leader Muammar Khadafi, who has accused the United States of aggressive intentions.

The Pentagon sources said top officials, including Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, were asked to prepare for a possible strategy meeting at the White House today.

And the sources also confirmed that earlier this week at least six EA-6B Prowler radar-jamming aircraft were dispatched from their base in Washington state to the Sigonella Air Base in Italy. The planes are now on hand to assist at Secret Service opposes meet — After checking criminal records, the Secret Service said Friday that President Reagan should not go ahead with plans to meet with a Vietnam veteran who fasted 51 days to call attention to American soldiers who may be missing in Southeast Asia.

The veteran, Clio Casanova of Tacoma, Wash., ended his fast in a bamboo hut only after Reagan called him by telephone on Dec. 5 and promised to see him.

The Secret Service has looked at his record and has determined that he should not be permitted to speak with the president, said agency spokesman William Corbett.

Former Congressman indicted

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Former Congressman Richard Tony was indicted Friday on charges of bribing the chairman of the Citimachina Indians to get a contract to run bingo games on their reservations.

The federal indictment charged Tony, who resigned from Congress in a voting scandal in 1977, with conspiracy and interstate travel in aid of racketeering.

Tony was accused of paying $25,000 cash in August 1984 to the tribe chairman to get exclusive rights to run bingo games on the reservation at Charenton, in central Louisiana.

Governor denies clemency bid

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Gov. Dick Riley on Friday refused to block the scheduled execution on Jan. 15 of a man who was charged with murdering two teenagers.

Attorneys for James Terry Roach, who is now 25, had pleaded with the governor to commute his sentence on grounds that Roach is mentally ill, and young at the time of the crime.

Riley had personally reviewed the trial records, the issues that have been raised on appeal, the clemency petition, Riley said Friday at a news conference.

As a result, I can find no reason to intervene in the judicial process or to grant a request for clemency."

Peace marchers halt at border

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — International peace marchers Friday called off efforts to enter Honduras, which refused to permit them to continue their Central American march through Central America.

"We lost the battle of Honduras," said Blaise Bopp, one of the organizers of the March for Peace in Central America.

He said the marchers planned to return to the Nicaraguan-Honduran border.

The Honduran government announced on Dec. 20 that it would not permit the approximately 200 marchers to enter its territory. The governments of El Salvador and Guatemala also have said the marchers were not welcome on their soil.

Veteran receives 12 medals

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — The ex-prisoner was 40 years late, but on Friday, the ceremony was for young Lt. Louis Lowe of San Antonio, Texas, finally receiving 12 medals, including the Bronze Star and Purple Heart, that he earned in the Army Air Force during World War II.

The 66-year-old retired Air Force master sergeant was wounded in combat and held prisoner in the Philippines from 1942 until the end of the war.

It was not until last August that his family found out he had never received his medals and his daughter, Toni Serene, who lives in Manassas, Va.

After the ceremony at Fort McNair, Va., Lowe went to Arlington National Cemetery and laid a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Actor MacRae enters hospital

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Actor Gordon MacRae, "Carousell," was hospitalized Friday with an undisclosed ailment.

No details about the hospitalization of MacRae, 44, were released in accordance with family wishes, said the actor's director of development and public relations for Bryan Memorial Hospital.

MacRae, who is married to the former Elizabeth Schraft of Sterling, has lived in Lincoln for about 15 years.

U.S.-Libya relations mostly bitter over span of 185 years

By LEE BYRD
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Almost from the start of the American Revolution, U.S.-Libya relations were marred by the leader of Libya than was Thomas Jefferson when he sent a few good Marines to the shores of Tripoli 181 years ago.

But bitter anger has met far less satisfaction.

Hardly a week has passed in recent years without another bitter episode in U.S.-Libya relations, be it the severance of diplomatic ties, an order to shoot down the Gulf of Sidra, accusations of terrorist acts, an oil import boycott; or, more commonly, an exchange of insults.

On Friday, the administration renewed its call for global economic sanctions against the government of Col. Moammar Khadafi in the wake of his embrace of the Palestinian terrorist attacks on airports in Vienna, which killed 15 bystanders, including an 11-year-old American girl.

Just how far Khadafi can push the administration's patience remains undefined. But he's been at the brink since the day he overthrew King Idris in a virtually bloodless coup in 1969. One of his first actions there was to close down U.S. and British military bases.

He ordered the shooting of 20,000 foreigners and nationalized most oil companies, though thousands of Americans remained in Libya early on.

Khadafi used his oil earnings to buy billions of dollars worth of Soviet arms. He claimed as his friends and associates Muammar al-Qaddafi, Ayatollah Khomeini, and President Carter, was the president's maverick brother, Billy, who accepted a six-figure loan from the Libyans.

Through all that, the U.S. government turned the other cheek, doubtlessly in consideration of the hard economic fact that Libya remained the third-largest foreign supplier of oil to the United States, accounting for 8 percent of total imports.

But American tolerance slipped a huge notch in December, 1979, when 200 Moslems marched on the American embassy in Tripoli in support of the Iranian militants who seized the embassy and took hostages in Tehran. Carter ordered the embassy closed, though technically maintaining diplomatic ties. Even so, American oil companies maintained business as usual.

Five months after Reagan was inaugurated, the new president severed diplomatic relations after Khadafi vowed to "wipe out our enemies, wherever they may be," and a number of Libyan dissidents were murdered in western nations. One shooting, albeit not fatal, occurred at Colorado State University.

In August, 1981, two U.S. Navy F-14 fighters shot down two Libyan airplanes when they attempted to intercept the Americans over the Gulf of Sidra. Libya claims that the pilot, though reaching 200 miles from its shores, is part of its territory, while the United States insists it is international waters.

In three months later, a variety of reports surfaced that Libya had sent "hit teams" to North America to assassinate Reagan, Vice President George Bush and other top government officials. Khadafi beefed up security around the White House and Congress, measures which remain in force today.

In December, 1981, the administration banned travel to Libya and called for all Americans living there to leave the country. Some did but many more did not, and Khadafi didn't believe the U.S. government's warning that their lives were in danger.

On March 10, 1982, the United States banned all oil imports from Libya, accusing Khadafi of the "outrageous plan" to kill American officials and their families in Sudan, Exxon and Mobil Oil Corp. withdrew their operations, but other U.S. companies remained as European allies and other global customers declined to alter their behavior. The month's later, industry and government officials acknowledged that the boycott had little effect; and Libya oil even continued to flow into the United States via third countries.

In June, 1983, Navy F-14s again intercepted a pair of Libyan fighters, this time outside the Gulf of Sidra, but there was no shooting.

Throughout Reagan's term, Khadafi charged that the CIA was out to assassinate him. In November of last year, The Washington Post reported that Reagan had authorized the intelligence agency to undermine Khadafi's rule. Khadafi declined comment, and Reagan ordered an investigation into who leaked information.

America's first hostile encounter with Libya was prompted when the U.S. navy was sailing in the Mediterranean Sea. Khadafi's forces gained entrance to the area, and Khadafi's forces were commonly denied other "countries" to protect their ships from pirates in Mediterranean waters.

Refusing to pay, Jefferson sent in a force of Marines to seize the preschance prompted the pasha to sign a treaty ending the protection fees which remain in force today.

Assist American citizens under such circumstances would be severely limited if not non-existent.

The United States repeated its four-year old warning against travel to Libya.

The carrier left Naples with a small group of Italian journalists on board on Friday, suggesting there were no immediate plans to launch an airstrike.

Other sources said, however, that a small number of combat planes had been dispatched from the United States to the Mediterranean region to ensure the Coral Sea's air wing was at full strength. One source said the carrier is equipped with four squadrons of F-16 fighters, one of which includes two squadrons of F-15 Hawkeye jet planes. Each squadron has roughly a dozen planes.

Meantime, the State Department said the group includes two U.S. citizens and its ability to aid those who ignored the warnings would be nearly "non-existent" if the current tensions led to anti-American action.

Other sources said the U.S. has many of them dependents of Libyans, or employed by Libyan or third country business, are in Libya.

Our policy always is to do what we can for our citizens," said department spokesman Charles E. Redman. "We try to make it as clear as we can that when you go to places where we have no diplomatic representation that our ability to Twenty-two policemen were killed Nov. 17 in a narcotics-related shooting in the Gulf state.

Reagan paid tribute to a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent, Enrique Camarena, calling him an American hero, born here in Mexico, who was "brutally murdered" in the drug war.

White House officials said Thursday in Los Angeles that U.S.-Mexican cooperation against narcotics president's honor guard and federal officers had increased notably since the killing of Camarena, who was kidnapped last Feb. 7 in Mexico. His body was found April 5.

Several alleged drug dealers have been arrested in the slaying, but they have not been brought to trial. Reagan met briefly with Camarena's widow, Milka, Friday morning at El Centro Naval Air Station in California. A Howard said a reporter from Madrid about my husband's investigation.

Reagan flew to Andrews Air Force Base, Md., after the meeting, ending a week-long vacation in Palm Springs and Los Angeles.

Falwell forms Liberty Federation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell, complaining the press has "bloodied and beaten" the name of his Moral Majority, is merging the group into a new organization with broader goals and a less controversial name.

The Moral Majority, which has played a major part in the past decade's surge of conservatism into political matters, will continue to exist, emphasizing its "front-burner issues" such as abortion and pornography, Falwell said at a news conference.

But it will no longer be the flagship organization for Falwell, the Lynchburg, Va., Baptist preacher who has emerged as a national spokesman for the "religious right" since the Moral Majority was founded in 1979.

He said he was incorporating the new Liberty Federation as a parent organization, including not only the Moral Majority and its "strictly moral" issues but also such far-ranging subjects as President Reagan's space-defense proposal, budget-balancing plans and the international fight against communism, including "aid for the freedom fighters in Nicaragua."

People for the American Way, a group founded mainly to counter the Moral Majority, quickly applauded the move while continuing to criticize Falwell.

"By changing its name and charter, Moral Majority is finally acknowledging its true identity," said a statement from People for the American Way's chairman, Baptist minister and former Rep. John Buchanan of Alabama. "Now that he admits that he is in the political arena, he should stop suggesting that to disagree with Jerry Falwell is to side with Satan against God."

Falwell, a popular television evangelist, said his new organization will prod right-thinking people to run for political office. But he said he himself will not be a candidate.

In answer to a question, he said he expects Pat Robertson, another conservative Christian with a large television following, to run for president. However, Falwell said he would continue to support Vice President George Bush. "I think Pat Robertson would make an excellent president. I just think George Bush would make a better one," he said.

Falwell said he was merely changing the name of his group to sidestep the criticism it has drawn over the years.

REV. JERRY FALWELL Less controversial name

Rusty Mason is set to help her son Joshua battle AIDS

'Mask' mother faces son's AIDS

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The woman whose struggle to help her mind, body and spirit all combine to son overcome a gross deformity touched millions in the film "Mask" is facing another deadly battle: her other son has AIDS.

Rusty Mason says she will fight for her son as hard as she fought for Rocky, who died in 1978, 10 years later than doctors had predicted.

Ms. Mason's story of drug abuse, motorcycle riding and tireless devotion to her son was depicted last year in a film by Peter Bogdanovich, "Sing-a-long with Peter Bogdanovich."

The story centered on how Ms. Mason, who has since changed her name from Rusty Dennis, helped Rocky ignore ridicule from peers and live years longer than expected despite his rare bone disease, which caused a severe deformity to his skull.

In June, Ms. Mason said her son from a previous marriage, Joshua Mason, 30, was diagnosed as having acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which attacks the body's immune system, leaving him defenseless to a variety of illnesses. There is no cure and doctors say the disease is fatal.

Joshua said on Friday he was diagnosed as having Kaposi's sarcoma, a cancer often associated with AIDS, but is showing no major symptoms. In fact, he said, "For the past several months I feel healthier than I have."

"If you know any of my story, you know I don't have any use for what doctors say," Ms. Mason, 49, said Friday from her apartment, here.

He told me Rocky was going to die before he was 5 and he lived "almost 17 doing some of the same things Joshua is doing now."

Those things include holistic medical techniques designed to keep him from succumbing to the illness that kills AIDS victims, his mother said.

Holistic medicine holds that the mind, body and spirit all combine to bring good health, and that illness can be combated by working on all three.

Ms. Mason said her son is working on nutrition as well as metaphysical healing techniques that work to strengthen the mind and spirit. He may also seek acupuncture treatment, she said, "just in case he does not have faith."

"I'm just an optimistic person," she said. "I understand a lot of things most people won't even look at."

"I think he's healthier now than he's been in years," said Ms. Mason. While her assertion that her son won't succumb to AIDS may not be backed up by doctors, Ms. Mason remains unmoved.

What she believes works: The universe will support anything you choose to believe," she said. "I'm not going to feed negative energy into the situation. If I fed negative energy into Rocky's situation, he'd have died before he was 5."

Joshua agrees. "Being sad, or being angry, just create for yourself. If you think sad or angry thoughts, you just create turmoil for yourself."

"There is no death. The body may die, but the spirit lives on," he said.

Ms. Mason moved to San Francisco in 1979, a year after Rocky's death. Last January, she said, Joshua's former lover died of AIDS.

Chuck Frutuchy of the San Francisco AIDS Foundation said that few AIDS victims live more than four years after they are diagnosed as having the disease.

As for Mason's belief in holistic medicine, Frutuchy says, "More power to him. But adding that looking at various treatments for AIDS, including holistic medicine, 'I can't see a great difference in life expectancy."

Storm kills 1 on way to coast

By The Associated Press

Heavy snow snarled traffic in parts of northern New England on Friday as a blasty storm churned eastward — after its snowbursts dumped 6 inches on the Great Lakes region, killing one man on an icy highway.

The National Weather Service issued winter storm warnings in New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine, predicting that parts of the region would get up to a foot of new snow.

Cars slid off roads along the Maine coast, where snow turned to freezing rain and sleet Friday, while heavy snow fell inland, bringing a fresh coat to ski areas.

"It's snowing like crazy," said Wendy McConry, marketing director for Pleasant Mountain, where several inches had fallen by early afternoon.

Snow fell at a rate of an inch an hour at Lebanon, N.H., and at least four people were injured in a pileup of more than a dozen cars on Interstate 93 in Concord in Merrimack, a car struck a school bus carrying 10 students, but the only injury was to the car driver, who was hospitalized in good condition.

A foot of snow had fallen by midday in Vermont, sending four tractor-trailer trucks sliding off slick roads at East Manchester.

"It's real messy out there," said Ray Burke, dispatcher for the Vermont Highway Department.

Joe Luisi, a meteorologist at the National Weather Service in Burlington, noted a low pressure system was off southern New Jersey Friday afternoon, about to break through a "world of hurt" if it shifted toward Vermont.

Accumulations were expected to range from 3 to 12 inches of new snow, forecasters said.

The storm system, accompanied by gusty winds, mixed rain and snow to parts of Massachusetts and New York, after dumping up to 6 inches of snow on Michigan and other parts of the Great Lakes region.

Poor visibility and a steady snowfall contributed to at least 50 accidents in Ottawa County, Mich., a sheriff's department dispatcher said. The Kent County sheriff's department reported at least 19 accidents and 2-foot snow drifts covering some roads.

Traffic was snarled in Illinois and Wisconsin, and authorities said a Mackinac Park, Ill., man was killed when his car slid out of control and rolled down an embankment on icy and snow-packed Illinois 25 in Stephenson County.

Muskegon, Mich., had 6 inches of snow, Rockford, Ill., reported 5.6 inches in about three hours, the weather service said.

The forecast for Rockford had called for only a 30 percent chance of snow. But Tom Draus, a forecaster at Greater Rockford Airport, said of the fast-moving weather system: "There's absolutely no way of knowing how much (snow) you'll get with these snowbursts, or how long it will last."

High winds, heavy snows pummel Wyoming

By The Associated Press

Wind chills briefly dropped as low as minus 43 in Wyoming on Friday as a cold front stormed through the state, generating winds gusted above 70 mph and leaving up to 8 inches of snow in its wake.

Winds were closed because of the storm, although the National Weather Service and Wyoming Highway Patrol urged motorists to use caution on some highways where visibility was limited by blowing snow.

Yellowstone National Park in the state's northern corner got the most snow, with 4 inches reported near Canyon in the park's interior, the weather service said. Elsewhere in the northwest, accumulations ranged from 3 to 6 inches, the NWS said.

The snow, slick roads prompted the weather service to issue a traveler's advisory for the northwestern section of the state, while trucks in central and southeastern Wyoming were urged to reduce speeds and use caution because of the high winds.

The winds prompted the weather service to issue high wind warnings for areas in and around the Snowy and Laramie mountain ranges in south western and central Wyoming.

Wind gusts between 60 mph and 70 mph can easily overturn a high profile vehicle, especially if the wind gusts hit the vehicle broadside," said a special weather statement issued from the NWS Cheyenne office.

In Casper, the weather service reported that winds were gusting to near 75 mph. Motorists were urged to use extreme caution if driving along the base of Casper Mountain, "especially on Wyoming Boulevard from Cheyenne Avenue to Interstate 25, Interstate 25 southeast to Douglas, and Wyo. 220 southwest to Rawlins."

At one point the gusting winds combined with a 9 degree temperature drop, a wind chill of 43 degrees below zero in Casper, said weather service meteorologist Jim Kramer.

"That's just a brief gust. It definitely won't be prolonged by any means," he added.

A high wind warning for the Casper area was dropped in mid-afternoon as winds diminished to 15 to 35 mph.

Gusts to 52 mph were recorded at Arlington along the higher elevations of Interstate 80 between Laramie and Walcott Junction, the weather service said.

Astronauts try again for space shuttle flight

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Seven astronauts whose flight on space shuttle Columbia was aborted last week, are just 14 seconds from liftoff here Friday for another try Monday.

"We're looking forward now to being the first flight of 1986 instead of the last flight of 1985, and we're proud to go on mission commander Robert Gibson, told reporters as the crew arrived from its training base in Houston.

The countdown will start Saturday, aiming for a liftoff at 5:05 a.m. MSF Monday, Columbia, the flagship of the shuttle fleet, has undergone an extensive overhaul and has not flown in space for more than two years.

The crew of seven includes Rep. Bill Nelson, a Florida Democrat whose district includes Cape Canaveral and the Kennedy Space Center. He is chairman of the House subcommittee on space science and applications and will be the second congressional observer to make a shuttle trip. Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, chairman of a subcommittee that oversees NASA funding, flew last April.

The other crew members are Charles Bolden, Steve Hawley, George Nelson, Robert Center and Franklin Chang-Diaz, the first

VFW requests crash investigation

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States has asked Congress and the Department of Defense to investigate the Newfoundland airplane crash that claimed the lives of 248 American soldiers.

The VFW said in a letter it was inconceivable that military personnel could be transported in commercial aircraft that may not be airworthy.

John S. Staum, national commander-in-Chief of the VFW, said the 2 million-member organization wants Congress to tighten the rules used by the Federal Aviation Administration to insure proper aircraft maintenance. He forced the VFW to assist the authority to inspect, spotcheck and reject commercial airlines that are chartered by the U.S. Military Airlift Command to transport military personnel and their families.

TWA scraps sale plan

NEW YORK (AP) — Financier Carl C. Icahn and Trans World Airlines Inc. have scrapped an agreement for him to buy TWA and entered into a pact under which he controls its board, the financially troubled carrier announced Friday.

The new arrangement, detailed in a statement from TWA's New York corporate offices, came against a background of serious losses for the nation's fourth-largest airline, which Icahn had agreed to buy more than three months ago following a protracted takeover battle with Texas Air Corp. The statement said TWA may have lost up to $140 million for 1985, twice an earlier estimate.

Icahn, who owns 52 percent of TWA's stock, had offered to buy the rest for $24 a share, consisting of $19.50 in cash and $4.50 in securities, but had trouble obtaining the estimated $800 million he needed to complete the purchase because of investor concern about TWA's profitability.

Icahn also became chairman of the TWA board under the pact, and two of his non-Icahn affiliated members resigned, giving his designees con-

National Guard helps to bolster dike

The Associated Press Idaho Gov. John Evans declared a flood emergency in three southwestern counties Friday, clearing the way for National Guard troops to help reinforce dikes...

In the late morning, with 15 million gallons of partially treated sewage in that lagoon, we want to do everything we can to make sure the river doesn't breach that dike and turn all that sewage into the Snake, Wozniak said.

Moore said, although there was some indication it may have been the result of increased snowmelt into the river as temperatures continued warming.

BOISE (AP) — A committee working on a recommendation to change the way Idaho taxes out of state and foreign corporations may come up with a proposal by next week.

PUC rejects utility's schedule change request

BOISE (AP) — From now on, the Idaho Public Utilities Commission says it will not give information when a utility asks for significant changes in depreciation rates.

The Spokane-based utility wanted the new depreciation rates, and cogeneration rates, to go into effect Jan. 1.

But the PUC said it needs more time to study the proposal to determine if it is reasonable. It might consider an interim rate change pending a final order, but even that needs more information, the PUC said.

BOISE (AP) — The 2,500 Washington Water Power Co. customers of Citizens Utility P.U.C. is increasing its rates by Wallace, Silverton, Mullan and 867,839 Jan. 1 and $68,185 on July 1.

The PUC on Friday approved a 4.7 percent rate increase for January customers.

Rate hearings to start soon

POCATELLO (AP) — Public hearings on Utah Power & Light Co.'s request for $14 million in additional rates for its Idaho customers will begin next week.

The Public Utilities Commission has set Jan. 13 for the opening round of hearings on the request that will affect about 40,000 customers in southeastern Idaho.

The utility will present its case in support of the higher rates at those hearings in Pocatello and Mars.

Water company seeks hike

BOISE (AP) — Idaho utility regulators have been asked to approve a 12 percent to 20 percent rate increase for the 2,500 southwest Boise area customers of South County Water Co.

Company officials said the $63,500 in additional annual revenues the proposal will generate is needed to offset rising operating and maintenance costs.

They pointed out that the last rate increase granted the utility was in August 1982, covering only increased power costs. The last general rate hike approved for South County was in 1979.

Power interrupted to 10,500

BOISE (AP) — Some 10,500 customers of Idaho Power Co. were without electricity for at least an hour early Friday after a substation on Boise's west side failed.

Utility spokesman Larry Taylor said an insulator at the substation failed just before 6 a.m., MST, knocking out seven feeder lines serving customers in a three-quarter-mile radius.

There were reports that at about the time the insulator broke a large blue-white flash lit up the pre-dawn sky in the vicinity of the substation.

There is also no immediate determination on whether the roadway itself has been damaged by the slides.

From taxes to water rights, they're packing proposals

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley legislators are packing a wide range of bills to Boise with them to make or change laws on everything from state-wide tax reform to support for a historical museum in Jerome.

Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, said that as chairman of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee, he will have his major focus with the various tax proposals being brought to Boise this year. Antone is serving his ninth term in the Legislature.

So far, a coalition of Democrats and Republicans is working on a sweeping tax reform package to beef up education funding that could raise sales taxes, alter the income tax structure, and allow cities and counties the option to increase tax dollars.

Rep. Mack Nelbauer, R-Paul, has announced that he will push for a cent sales tax increase to head off the tax reform bill.

House Speaker Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, has said neither measure has much chance for success in the Republican-controlled House.

Sen. Larry Anderson, R-Twin Falls, said Friday he will probably have little success in the attempt to eliminate his Senate seat this session. Anderson ran for election on the promise to do away with the district seat, but said Friday this year's probable emphasis on revenue questions will not allow work for consideration of a plan to re-draw legislative district lines.

"I honestly don't think leadership is going to reap it this time," he said. "I'm not going to go up there and kick the dead horse."

Anderson said he is working on a "whistle-blower" bill that would allow state employees to report evidence of waste or mismanagement in state government without the fear of losing their jobs.

The conservative freshman said he will also make another try this year to get a local option tax bill on the books. "I'm going to work to try to prevent a tax increase, but if a tax increase comes I'll work to try to shift the taxing authority to the local level," Anderson said.

Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, will tackle the remaining issues in the Swan Falls water rights agreement in this second half of his third term in the Legislature.

Noh, chairman of the Senate Water Resources Committee, said he will be reviewing the Idaho Department of Water Resources' proposed rules and regulations governing the use of unallocated water from the Snake River.

The earliest drafts of the department's rules would presume that any surface water diversions from the Snake River system and any ground water diversions within four miles of the Snake River, between the Milner and Swan Falls dams, would not be available.

public interest and would require the person going after that water to prove the use of it would be in the public interest.

Noh said this rule seems to be in conflict with the Swan Falls agreement hammered out last winter between the state and Idaho Power Co. That agreement laid the burden of proof on the party protesting the water use application, not on the person making the application.

Noh said the department's final rules will probably hit the Legislature in mid-February.

Also working on water issues will be Rep. Waldo Martens, R-Jerome. Martens, a freshman going into his second legislative session, said he will be pushing a bill he worked on in an interim committee this summer that makes the management and See LAWMAKERS on Page A6

Taylor quits board duties at MVRMC

Hospital's legal counsel seeks to avoid conflict appearance

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls attorney Ken Taylor has resigned as a board member for the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center to act as legal counsel for the hospital.

His resignation was submitted Monday to the Twin Falls County Commissioners, a month after being hired as attorney for the hospital.

Taylor said he resigned to avoid any appearance of a conflict of interest, even though he could have continued to serve in both capacities.

senting the hospital in great detail until after the last board meeting, which was Dec. 15, although he was hired at the end of November," he said. Since then, he has been working on proposed legislation on hospital restructuring that will allow county-owned hospitals to be leased to non-profit corporations. The draft legislation, sponsored by the Idaho Hospital Association, will be presented Monday at MVRMC's 7 p.m. board meeting.

Board Chairman Robert Valentine said he and the board were aware that Taylor was retained as a legal consultant to MVRMC while he was still a board member.

"Appearances are very important," the 42-year-old attorney said Friday. "There's no question that it could have been a conflict. Any number of situations could have arisen, but they're negotiable. As a member of the Finance Committee, for example, I never voted to pay myself."

"There was no conflict of interest because he did not act as a board member and as legal counsel at the same time," Valentine said. "But I don't know why he didn't resign earlier. I kept asking him if he'd turned in his resignation, and he hadn't."

Taylor said that as general counsel he could have billed the hospital for any meetings he attended while he was a board member. "I could have been paid to be at those meetings, but I was willing to forego payment because of my feelings of civic obligation," he said.

Taylor, who was appointed to the board last January, was a member of the Finance Committee, the Long-range Planning Committee and the Marketing Committee. He said the Finance Committee did not meet in December, and therefore he was not in a position to vote on any bills he might have submitted as legal counsel.

Asked why he did not resign earlier to avoid any appearance of a conflict, Taylor first said, "There was no need to," but later added he was out of town for half of December. "There wasn't any reason other than I just didn't do it."

Taylor also said, "A number of people wanted me to do both."

He said he did not start repre-

Commissioner Ann Cover said she would have considered it a conflict of interest if Taylor had continued as a board member. Asked why he didn't, Cover said she "guessed" it was because the hospital board was busy with bond refinancing in December, but you'll have to ask him.

The board has not formally acted on Taylor's hiring as legal counsel. Valentine said the board gave authority to MVRMC Administrator John Bingham three months ago to hire a general counsel. Bingham was out of town, and could not be reached for comment.

Twin Falls attorney Fred Decker served as legal counsel to the hospital for 18 years. Asked Monday if he would continue to represent the board, Decker said he might, on a case-by-case basis, and said the decision not to serve the hospital was reached "by mutual consent."

As general counsel, Taylor said he would coordinate all legal matters for the hospital, such as malpractice suits or collecting indigent bills.

High winds created these unusual snowballs, or snowrollers, and downed a 12,500-volt power line in Twin Falls Friday.

Morning storm's winds create snowballs; power outage

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A snow and wind storm that swept through the Magic Valley early Friday morning did more than create unusual snowballs; it was responsible for a power outage that affected more than 1,300 customers in Twin Falls.

At 2:20 a.m. Friday, Paula Coffey saw a "big blue bill" in the sky near Idaho Fresh Foods, and then watched the sky turn reddish as her power went off.

"I woke up when I heard the storm, and got up to see if the horses were all right," she said Friday. "It lit up the whole sky—I thought maybe it was an explosion."

It was neither an explosion nor Halley's Comet, but a downed 12,500-volt power line near Longview Fibre Co., 248 South Park Ave. W., that caused the bluish burst and knocked out power for 37 minutes to 135 customers on the south and west sides of the city.

An early morning storm, with winds up to 40 miles an hour, may have caused snow to unload off the Longview roof, which in turn blew down the line, said Idaho Power electrical superintendent Dick Monson.

Monson said the bluish burst was definitely the result of the downed, high-voltage line. No one was injured, and there was no damage.

"There's a lot of energy that's dissipated when a line comes down," he said Friday. "The light is extremely bright, like an arc welder's light. In fact, if you're close enough, it could damage your eyes."

Because of monitors installed at a nearby substations, Monson said Idaho Power was aware of the downed line even before Longview Fibre, and notified the company. Monson said that although the downed power line was not live when Idaho Power workers arrived, it could have been, and cautioned the public to stay away from downed lines.

"We always consider it live until we test it," he said. "You never know."

Longview Personnel Manager Duane Laird said the 36 employees working the night shift had to wait about three hours before resuming production at the corrugated box plant.

Ailing news service endures, state director says

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The United Press International news service may no longer be carried in any Idaho newspapers, but it continues to provide broadcast news in every major market in the state, said Idaho UPI Director Steve Green Friday.

In 1983 the service provided news to papers in Boise, Twin Falls, Sandpoint, Coeur d'Alene and Nampa, Green said at a Sawtooth Press Club headliner. But by the end of that year, the Times-News and the Idaho Statesman had both canceled their service.

When UPI filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy in April the company could no longer afford to maintain a print report for just the three papers that continued to subscribe to the service, Green said. The firm decided then to cut the reporting staff from four to two and concentrate on broadcast operations, he said.

The past year has been trying for UPI employees, Green said. Salaries have been cut 25 percent, paychecks have been two weeks late, and they have bounced.

Yet reporters and editors have not let the company's financial problems interfere with news gathering, he said. They are used to being the underdog — the Associated Press is larger — but have not yet let the news report die, he said.

The firm's financial situation appears to be improving, he said. Mexico newspaper magnate Mario Vasquez bought the firm.

Kimberly sets vote on recall for Feb. 4

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly City Council has set Feb. 4 as the date for a recall election against Mayor Ron Jones. Polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m.

The date was set and election judges and clerks named at a brief noon meeting Friday attended only by the city clerk and the four councilmembers. Mayor Ron Jones did not attend.

"I felt that (attending) would be a direct conflict of interest, since it was to set up voting procedures," Jones said. "I didn't want anyone saying I was padding the game."

City Clerk Edythe Widmer said there must be more votes in favor of the recall than against it for Jones to lose his seat. In addition, at least 328 votes would have to be cast in favor of the recall election. Jones was elected with 328 votes.

Residents not already registered to vote in Kimberly city elections may register at City Hall through Jan. 31, Widmer said. City Hall will be open until 8 p.m. that day for late registration. Anyone 18 or older, who has lived in Kimberly for 30 days prior to the election, may register.

The recall election would cost the city about $500, Widmer estimated. Much of that cost is for renting voting machines from Twin Falls County and purchasing voting materials.

Councilmember Jack Wright sent a letter to Kimberly residents in late December reviewing the eight months of controversy over investigations of the city Police Department and urging citizens to support the recall movement under way against Jones.

Jones said Friday he did not know if he would mount an organized campaign to keep his job.

"It's still a month off," he said. "A lot could happen in a month."

A recall petition has also been taken out against Wright — by Rick Stone, who has backed Jones' position in calling for an investigation of the Kimberly Police Department. Stone said he will file the petition if Jones is voted out of office. If Jones remains in office, the decision on what to do with the petition may depend on what Jones wants to do, Stone said.

Jones said Friday he was not enthusiastic about recalls and had no particular interest in the recall petition against Wright.

Credit union workers stage walkout

TWIN FALLS — The three-member staff of the Idaho Central Credit Union office in Twin Falls staged a walkout Monday, saying they had been ordered to work on a day off.

The walkout was the first since the union was formed in 1975. The union has 150 members in the Twin Falls office.

The credit union has a potential for a large increase in membership, but the union has a long history of being a "company union," said one of the workers who had been ordered to work on a day off.

He said the office in Twin Falls will be closed Monday for customers in spite of the fact that the office is open for business. He said the union has a long history of being a "company union," said one of the workers who had been ordered to work on a day off.

FmHA plays down effect of moratorium end

BOISE (AP) — Some financially strapped farmers will receive notices of intent to take Idaho producers will undoubtedly lose their "adverse action" from the agency because they were at least $100 behind in their loan repayments at the end of 1985.

FmHA, forced to impose the moratorium on farm foreclosures, but state FmHA Director William Norberg says the number will be limited.

"There are people out there who are in financial trouble and will never get out," Norberg said Friday. "Sure there's concern, but how much of it is justified, I don't know. We're not going to be foreclosing on everybody. There's going to be a lot of people out there still farming."

By the end of January or early February, hundreds of the FmHA's 4,900 Idaho borrowers in the state were in arrears, although Norberg said that number generally declines through the end of the year.

Norberg also echoed national FmHA Administrator Vance Clarke in emphasizing that the impending notices do not mean foreclosures are imminent.

"After receiving the notice, he said Idaho borrowers will have 30 days to meet with their local loan supervisors to discuss their situation, and at that time every effort will be made to find some method of restructuring or reamortizing the loans so it can eventually be paid off."

In addition, he said the initiation of foreclosure proceedings, viewed as a last option in dealing with delinquent loans, will be handled on a priority basis. The initial targets, he said, will be chronically delinquent loans — those that have been in arrears for three or more years and with which the agency has had other problems, as well.

"So, if they're taken in priority, I don't think there will be that many foreclosures," Norberg said. "We're going to be fairly lenient on that thing."

But the intensified pressure on Idaho producers will be coming at a time when farm income continues to remain depressed and prospects are not good for any major turnaround in the near future.

The new farm bill enacted last month will cut federal price supports in what critics claim will only drive farm income lower while the new bailout bill for the ailing Farm Credit System sets up a special unit to absorb severely delinquent loans and foreclose on what economists predict will be thousands of farmers across the country.

A survey commissioned by Gov. John Evans last winter while the FmHA moratorium was still in effect found a third of the 24,000 farmers in Idaho faced serious financial problems with debts amounting to 40 percent or more of their assets. Nearly 16 percent of the producers surveyed said they expected to be forced out of farming in another year, and over half indicated they could not last more than five years.

marketing of water rights easier.

Norberg said Friday he will also try to close a loop-hole in the state's Sunshine Law which governs disclosure of political fund-raising and spending records.

Under current law, a Political Action Committee (PAC) must report the names of donors and the amount of donations with the Secretary of State's Office.

"But, if an Idaho PAC receives funds from a PAC operating in a state with no Sunshine Law," the Idaho PAC is required only to list the lump-sum donation from the out-of-state PAC and not the names of the "donors" to the out-of-state PAC.

Under Idaho law, PACs must keep lists of names of the donors to the out-of-state PAC, but the law does not require the list of names to be filed in the public record with the Secretary of State's Office.

Noh says he is sure the loop-hole was unintentional on the part of the bill's original writers.

On tax matters, Noh said, he is not yet decided on what sort of tax increase he will support if it becomes clear more tax dollars are needed. "I want to get Idaho on a predictable funding base," the Kimberly Republican said.

Hoping to ease public donations to foundations supporting elementary and high school programs, Sen. Daniel McRoberts, R-Twin Falls, said Friday he will push a bill to grant taxpayers a tax credit for their donations.

Idaho tax laws now allow deductions for donations to either public school or higher education foundations. But while donations to higher education foundations net taxpayers a credit on their income taxes, donations to public education foundations do not.

McRoberts said the change will save a few dollars for the beneficiaries of public school foundations.

McRoberts will also likely be in the thick of the day-care licensing battle expected in the Legislature this winter. He served on Gov. John Evans' panel to write a day-care licensing bill and said he will probably support the bill in the Senate.

That bill, which calls for Idaho Department of Health and Welfare management of the licensing program, is likely to pass the Senate, as a similar bill did last year, but faces stiff opposition in the House.

Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls, who led the charge against Health and Welfare managed licensing in the House last year, announced later in 1985 that she will carry a similar licensing bill than the governor's in the House.

Idaho is the only state without a mandatory day-care licensing bill.

Sen. Lynn Tomninga, R-Paul, said Friday he will be working for a bill to allow localities to vote by a two-thirds majority to put in place a historical heritage district taxing district to pay for historical museums and Idaho centennial activities.

Tomninga said the bill may get shot down in the previous session, but he hopes the Governor's Centennial Commission will support the plan.

Three students follow the emotional words of speakers who have attempted suicide quez, Traa—with the help of Houston financier Joe Russo, has successfully sold the papers and UPI support for its purchase from UPI management, union and creditors.

However, the purchase will still depend on the approval of additional creditors and successful completion of a suit sought by another bidder, Green said.

The fact that Rana and others bid to purchase the wire service shows indicate that there is a real chance for the business to turn a profit, Green said.

However, Times-News Managing Editor Stephen Hartgen pointed out that Reuters and other well-positioned news companies had considered buying UPI but rejected the offer.

Even if the wire service does begin operating, print news agents will have trouble matching call volume of services of other news agencies, he added.

Hartgen said, for instance, in addition to the AP, The Times-News receives the Los Angeles News Service for only $50 a week, he said.

The Times-News switched from the UPI news service to the AP because of questions about the service's national report and its long-term financial viability, Hartgen said.

However, the paper had no complaints about the quality of the state report, he said.

It will take a long time to build what we have in Idaho, a long time, a lot of staff," Green said. Whether or not the service expands to cover newspapers again will not be decided until the firm is out of bankruptcy.

Montana students protest teen suicides at school rally

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Students at Helena's Capital High School held a rally Thursday to insist that school officials take a greater steps to stop teen suicides.

Students gave Principal Lee Kenney a petition asking for "suicide awareness and prevention program at the school," and promised to review the petition and forward it to school district officials.

Parents, teachers and administrators also jammed the school's gym for the assembly, which was organized over the holiday break by a group of high school students after the latest in a series of suicides.

"Something just had to be done," said organizer Brian Woodson after another Capital student committed suicide Dec. 20.

"It's really scary when you turn around and look and one of your friends is gone," said Stacey O'Reilly, another organizer and daughter of Lewis and Clark County Sheriff Chuck O'Reilly, who also spoke.

The Dec. 20 suicide was the 18th in Lewis and Clark County in 1985 and the second by a Capital student. But four other teen-agers, who were former Capital students, also killed themselves last year.

Since 1981, 15 people aged 13 to 24 have killed themselves in the Helena area, and all were either students or former students at Capital High, one of two public high schools in Helena.

Rupert officials scramble to cover holes left by insurance expiration

By LINDA LARSON
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — After the mayor and two councilmen were sworn into office Thursday, the Rupert City Council tackled the problem of how to cope without liability insurance.

Mayor Bill Whitton and Councilmen Ron Kiebe and Dwillette Allred were re-elected to their seats on the council in November city elections. All three men ran unopposed.

The city's insurance coverage expired at midnight Tuesday. It was originally thought the city councilmen and mayor had error and omission coverage, insurance agent Floyd Green said in his report to the council. However, even that partial coverage is not in force, he said.

After learning Thursday the city also does not have fire coverage, city officials purchased a temporary policy to provide coverage while they continue their search for a permanent policy that will provide all the city's needs.

Trash pickup has been limited to one day weekly because of the insurance problem, Water Department Supervisor Irvin Hardy said. He added that businesses are most affected by the change and may have to receive garbage service more frequently.

Whitton said the city may have adequate coverage in a day or two except for the electric department which will not be covered in the policy that the city hopes to receive soon from Hartford Insurance Co. of Connecticut.

Green said litigation problems with the Washington Power Supply System is the reason the electric department is uninsurable under the Hartford proposal.

Whitton said the problem is serious and if the Legislature does not come to the aid of affected government entities, the result could be bankruptcy for cities and counties around the state.

Auditor gives Wendell good report

By TERRILL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDLELL — Auditor William Oakley of Gooding says Wendell City officials have done well with their city's finances this year.

"The city operated within its budget and appeared to be well managed," the accountant reported.

At the Wendell City Council meeting last week, Oakley read his annual report of Wendell, explaining the most important financial totals.

Expenditures for the 1984-85 fiscal year totaled $271,071 for all city funds while revenues were $333,467.

A major expense was $182,011 for salaries, maintenance and supplies for the water/sewer, sanitation and sanitation departments. Service and miscellaneous revenues in these departments totaled $185,023.

Oakley said the budget was followed closely and revenues exceeded expectations by $67,908 in all city funds. This figure includes $32,659 in revenue sharing funds the city will spend this year.

In other business, County Prosecuting Attorney Lynn Nelson told the council the way to handle court cases for the city. Nelson said he would not handle civil cases for Wendell because there may be a conflict of interest with his position as prosecuting attorney.

Mayor Otto Lemke said attorneys Patricia Gaw and Cindy Campbell of Wendell have made an effort to handle both court and civil cases for the city.

At the council meeting Jan. 2, Lemke will appoint a city attorney or attorneys for Wendell, subject to council approval.

Presently, the city has no appointed attorney, Cecil Hagley, attorney in Gooding, has given legal advice to the council, written orders and prosecuted for the city. Lemke said Hagley is also being considered for the appointment.

Local church leaders see responsibility for moral comment

By MICHAEL VANAUSDELN Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — In line with a growing tide of church involvement in political affairs, many Twin Falls church leaders feel that churches have a primary responsibility to their congregations on moral issues that have moral implications beyond to an extent...

Rev. Tucker was explicit that certain issues were sought a congregation. "I think the Vietnam War did," he said. "There are certain limitations to where a church can place its priorities..."

Rev. Myers felt that the reaction from the Twin Falls community toward church involvement has been positive. "It's been very good," he said. "In fact, in some cases the area churches have rallied to a cause..."

"The Moral Majority had a good idea," said Myers. "To call the nation to its moral responsibilities, to let when they start making a voice..."

Moore felt that the Moral Majority began as a reaction against certain trends that needed addressing, but developed toward political action. "I sympathize with what they're doing, but they're living in a dream," he said. "You can't legislate morality..."

Lindsay, like most of the pastors interviewed, felt that church leadership means counseling on issues affecting its members. "There are definite dangers in letting a church do it," he said, but it is also possible to do too little...

Historian traces the changing image of Christ

By DAN CRYER Newsday

Every era, it seems, requires a Jesus of its own. Christianity's central figure needs to be redefined in light of its own cultural biases. Consequently Jesus of Nazareth, if not quite all things to all men, has served as a sensitive barometer of change throughout Western culture...

Polikan offers an engaging and accessible history of ideas. Each of the 18 chapters is devoted to a different image, beginning with the "tribbi, which looks at the man in the Jewish context, and ending in our time with the Man Who Belongs to the World, in which Jesus is seen as a world figure beyond the borders of Christendom..."

Polikan pilots the layman through these murky waters with considerable grace, though not without a tendency to fall off course from time to time. "It's been my experience that it is very difficult to shut down a business," he said.

begin at 9:45 a.m. and during a funeral you get to know people intimately. The suit was filed Thursday in Kent County Circuit Court on behalf of Ignace Permoda, Robert and Lucy Macejowski and George and Dorothy Merdzinski. Stephen E. Vesbit "has conducted the affairs of St. Isidore's parish in a reckless, haphazard and negligent manner," and asks that he be "ousted" from the parish. St. Isidore's, built in 1912, is attended mostly by people of Polish descent. Some parishioners say they have long been troubled by Vesbit's "insulting and ethnic favor and that they fear Vesbit, who has been in the parish for 1 1/2 years, is trying to undermine the church..." Vesbit declined comment on the suit other than to say a majority of parishioners has been expressing dissatisfaction. "I want to emphasize that there is no trouble at all from the vast majority of the parish family," he said. "I do do 50

What's what

Cornell experiments put steps almost exactly in the tracks of numerous male and female rats into the leader. Hunters who find the little treadmills. To learn that tracks can't tell whether there were female rats, when they so desire, five or so.

...Gunny... comes from the Sanskrit "guni," meaning "sack." So if you say "gunny sack," you're saying the real rat race the males do what "they" can and the females do as they wish.

When elephants walk in single file -- and that's how they do it when they set out to go someplace -- each looks at or birthday card.

A Christmas cards. By a few years. In the mid-1800s.

Q Color of trees is always a little deeper on the western side. Why?

A More sunlight there.

Q What's the so-called "Wicked Bible"?

A An edition with a misprint reading: "Thou shalt commit adultery." Typographical errors have given such names to several editions. The Lions Bible in 1 Kings 22:19 reads "Out go thy sons" instead of "sons." The Printers' Bible in Psalms 119:161 reads "Printers (instead of Princes) have persecuted me without cause."

Baffin Bay -- which is no bay, as any trivia type will attest -- is a sea, rather, a sizable sea, six times bigger than the Mediterranean.

The birds that go south early come back late. The birds that go south late come back early.

Calendar girl meets tiger

Christa Daniel looks a bit nervously at Taz...

...who suddenly lunges as his trainer intercedes

TORONTO (AP) — An 800-pound Siberian tiger lunged at a model wearing a bathing suit during a photo session in a snow-covered park, but the model was quickly rescued when the tiger's trainer wrestled the big cat to the ground.

Christa Daniel, the English leather-clad calendar girl who is appearing at an international motorcycle show, was frightened but unharmed in the Thursday incident.

Ms. Daniel had been posing behind Taz the tiger, a star attraction at an adventure show over the weekend, when he suddenly jumped up and bowled over the blonde woman.

Trainer Jim Dillman leaped between them, grabbed Taz and wrestled with him as the terrified model scrambled to safety.

"I'm fine," she said later. "But I was incredibly stunned."

The model, from Las Vegas, Nev., said she'd work with the big cats again but said she would not pose for more photos with Taz at least for the day.

"I believe with anything in life, if you get stung once, you go back and do it again," she said.

Houston leading nominee

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Sweet-voiced Whitney Houston received six American Music Award nominations Friday for her debut year as a singer, while veteran country band Alabama and versatile British pop musician Phil Collins garnered five each.

Miss Houston, a former model whose self-titled first album has sold three million, is the daughter of gospel singer Cissy Houston and the niece of pop star Dionne Warwick.

She was nominated for favorite pop female vocalist; favorite rhythm and blues female vocalist; favorite rhythm and blues single for "You Give Good Love"; favorite rhythm and blues album; favorite rhythm and blues female video artist; and favorite rhythm and blues video single, "Saving All My Love For You."

Miss Houston was recently named top new black artist by Billboard Magazine.

Collins was nominated as favorite pop male vocalist; favorite pop album for "No Jacket Required"; favorite pop male video artist; favorite video single (with Philip Bailey) for "Easy Lover"; and with Phil Bailey as favorite rhythm and blues male video artist.

Alabama, named top country band for 1985 by Billboard on the merits of their million-selling "40-Hour Week" album, received nominations for favorite country duo or group; favorite country single for "There's No Way"; favorite country album for "40-Hour Week"; favorite country video duo or group; and favorite video single for "40-Hour Week."

Nominated for favorite pop single were Careless Whisper, Wham! "Money For Nothing," Dire Straits, and "The Power of Love," Huey Lewis and the News.

Nominated for favorite pop album were "Born in the USA," Bruce Springsteen and the E Street Band; "Like a Virgin," Madonna; and "No Jacket Required," Phil Collins.

The winners of the awards will be presented during a three-hour ABC television special on the evening of Jan. 27.

The nominees, who were announced by music and television star Apollo and country star Glen Campbell at the Beverly Hilton Hotel, were based on year-end sales charts of major music publications.

Winners will be voted on via a popularity poll sent to 20,000 people chosen on the basis of location, sex, age and national origin.

Soviet artists deplore U.S. movie trend

MOSCOW (AP) — Popular U.S. films that cast violent figures such as Rambo as heroes are inciting but for ideological reasons and with kind of a perverse relish, Ivanov said.

"People are being brought up with the malicious idea that the Russians can be talked to only in the language of force and arms," he said. "A new generation of Americans is being raised to consider deliberate murder as something natural and even necessary."

"Rambo" is about a military veteran sent to rescue U.S. prisoners of war in Vietnam, and "Red Dawn" is a scenario of a Soviet invasion of the United States.

Ivanov also mentioned "Rocky IV," about an American boxer who takes on an imposing Soviet rival, and a new television series by ABC called "America," which portrays the United States under Soviet occupation.

Yevtushenko also was asked about a recent speech he made to the Soviet writers' union in which he took officials and fellow writers to task for distorting Soviet history and keeping silent about mistakes.

"I am surprised that you are surprised that a poet speaks against bureaucracy because the two words — poet and bureaucrat — are mutually exclusive," Yevtushenko responded.

"If somebody read my poetry, my works, there was really nothing new in these ideas. In my recent speech I simply summarized my whole life's work," he said.

"He also suggested that new U.S. Soviet cultural exchanges be directed by a volunteer group of leading cultural figures from both countries, rather than by government bureaucrats."

"I think that we need people of good will from both sides who don't occupy official posts in any government establishments and who are not afraid to lose their comfortable seats," he said.

The agreement signed in Geneva by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev revives a formal accord on cultural exchanges that languished for six years following the 1979 Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Wyman, rests after surgery

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Jane Wyman, the Oscar-winning actress who plays the autocratic Angela Channing on television's "Falcon Crest," was resting comfortably in the hospital Friday following intestinal surgery.

"There was nothing in there that had to be cut out. They simply freed this adhesion that was twisting the bowel," said Bob Crutchfield, vice president of Lorimar Productions, producer of the show.

He said the actress entered St. John's Hospital on New Year's Day for tests for flu-like symptoms.

The actress' doctor, Donald Green, said through a spokesman that Miss Wyman was resting comfortably at St. John's and "doing fine" following the surgery Thursday afternoon.

"There were no complications and no indication of any condition other than the adhesions," said Green. The actress is expected to be hospitalized for another week, then recuperate at her Santa Monica home for three to five weeks before returning to the "Falcon Crest" set.

Film critics choose 'Ran' as best

NEW YORK (AP) — Akira Kurosawa's masterful epic, "Ran," has been named best picture of 1985 by the National Society of Film Critics.

The Japanese film, loosely based on William Shakespeare's "King Lear," also was awarded the best cinematography prize for Takao Saito and Masaharu Ueda with Asakazu Nakai.

"Prize's Honor," John Huston's off-beat look at the world of Mafia hitmen, won him the best director prize. Jack Nicholson won best actor for his portrayal of a hitman in the movie and Anjelica Huston was given the best supporting actress honor for her rollicking portrayal of the Mafia don's granddaughter.

Vanessa Redgrave won best actress for her role in "Wetherby." Sir John Gielgud was honored as best supporting actor for his work in "Plenty" and "The Shooting Party."

Cited as best documentary was "Shoah," the 9½-hour series of interviews on the Holocaust, and Albert Brooks' satire, "Lost in America," received the prize for best screenplay.

The 35 members of the society include the leading film critics of the nation's major newspapers and national magazines.

"I think that we need people of good will from both sides who don't occupy official posts in any government establishments and who are not afraid to lose their comfortable seats," he said.

Fireman dies from injuries

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A fireman who died of injuries suffered when he was crushed by a woman's car was being buried in a third-floor apartment will have a hero's funeral, fire officials say.

Firefighter Marcus Reddick, 26, a 19-year veteran of the force, died Saturday at University Hospital, said Fire Director John Caulfield. He died a hero. He'll have a hero's funeral.

Reddick spotted Angela Ubeda, 57, screaming and waving from her third-floor window during the Tuesday night, and climbed a 35-foot ladder to try to save her, Caulfield said. As Mrs. Ubeda reached for him, she tumbled to the ground, with her car underneath. He suffered head, leg, back and neck injuries.

Mrs. Ubeda was being treated for smoke inhalation at the hospital, and hospital officials said Reddick may have saved her life by shoving her fall.

Drum-beating protester leads demonstration outside Indian parliament in New Delhi

Thousands demand seizure of Union Carbide properties

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — More than 1,000 protesters shouted slogans Friday near Parliament, demanding seizure of the Union Carbide Corp.'s property in India and additional help for victims of the 1984 Bhopal gas disaster. "Killer Carbide quit India!" yelled the demonstrators, who included more than 50 Bhopal survivors. "Stop using us as guinea pigs!" "Break the bloody claws of Carbide!"

The protesters, surrounded by riot police, assembled at historic Red Fort in Old Delhi Friday morning and walked through crowded market places before gathering near Parliament. At their head were a black-robed man depicting a skull and bones and another swinging a bag full of dollars representing profits of the U.S.-based multinational corporation. "We don't want destruction in the name of development. We don't want our country to be a laboratory," D.K. Nishtry, a social worker from Bhopal, told the crowd.

The protesters sat on lawns near Parliament and watched a street play on the disaster, highlighting "government apathy" and "criminal neglect by Carbide." Demonstration leaders arranged a meeting with industry Minister Narain Dutt Tiwari to present a list of demands with more than 100,000 signatures collected nationwide. The demands included seizure of all 13 Union Carbide factories in India, compensation from the U.S.-based multinational for Bhopal victims, equivalent to its worldwide assets, a hospital in place of the Bhopal plant, and alternative employment for Bhopal factory workers.

Firm forced to handle pesticide ingredient

NEW YORK (AP) — The Indian government forced Union Carbide's Bhopal pesticide plant to handle the volatile and deadly compound that leaked in December 1984, killing more than 2,000 people in history's worst industrial accident, a Carbide lawyer said Friday.

Lawyer Bud G. Holman told a federal judge that until a few years before the accident, the Bhopal plant did not handle the deadly compound, methyl isocyanate, which was processed at a Carbide plant in Indiantown, N.J. — a much less volatile substance — carbonyl — was shipped to India to be converted into pesticides.

Holman urged U.S. District Judge John F. Keenan to send litigation back to India, arguing that its courts are best equipped to deal with the victims' claims, to examine witnesses and documents and to determine whether sabotage or some other factor outside the company's control played a role in the catastrophe. But lawyers for the victims and for the New Delhi government, which are seeking billions of dollars from the Danbury, Conn.-based chemical company, insist the case belongs in the United States.

The arrangement was more profitable for Carbide, Holman said, but was terminated because Indian government officials wanted to limit imports and increase the value of the work done in India. A cloud of methyl isocyanate gas leaked from the Bhopal plant Dec. 3, 1984, and drifted through the crowded slums of the central Indian city. More than 2,000 people died and an estimated 300,000 were affected.

The litigation comes as Carbide is struggling to fend off a hostile takeover by GAF Corp., a much smaller chemical concern. Keenan is not expected to make a decision for several weeks, but many observers have predicted that the ruling will have a strong bearing on the amount Union Carbide ultimately will pay because of the accident.

Underlying the dispute over where the case belongs is the general belief that American courts would be more serious toward the accident victims.

Italy seeks arrest warrant

ROME (AP) — Italian judicial authorities investigating last week's bloody airport attack will seek an international arrest warrant for Abu Nidal, leader of a Libyan-backed Palestinian guerrilla faction, newspapers reported Friday. Magistrate Domenico Sica at the same time ordered an investigation to determine whether there is a large arms cache in Italy that has been used to equip Middle Eastern and European terrorists as well as the Mafia, judicial sources said.

The sources said Sica specifically demanded a nationwide police report on all the Soviet-made Kalashnikov automatic rifles confiscated in Italy in the last 10 years. The government, meanwhile, agreed on a bill designed to clamp down on foreigners entering and staying in the country, a measure proposed weeks ago after various terrorist attacks, including the hijacking of the Achille Lauro cruise liner in October.

French hostages may be freed soon

PARIS (AP) — Four Frenchmen abducted in Lebanon last year are now under Syrian control, not in the hands of their original kidnappers and may be released soon, a French negotiator said Friday. Claude Thierset, editor-in-chief of the photo agency Sipa-Press, said the development came, most probably because of Syrian involvement and that the hostages are "surely under Syrian control." Thierset, who had previously visited Beirut and made contacts with kidnappers, made the announcement in an interview with Radio Monte Carlo.

Peru says Panama to be host to Latin American debt meet

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Panama has agreed to be the host for a Latin American summit to discuss the region's crippling $300 billion foreign debt, and Cuba's Fidel Castro is expected to attend, Peru's official news agency reported Friday from Havana. But initial reaction elsewhere was tepid, with representatives of some nations saying they were unaware of any summit proposal and had no plans to attend such a meeting. Prime Minister Luis Alva Castro, made the announcement during a five-day visit to Cuba. He said no date had been set, but consultations were under way with all Latin leaders "because they have many topics to discuss and need to take joint actions to confront these problems."

Alva Castro, who is also Peru's economy minister, said he had met with the Cuban leader and was certain he would attend the summit. In Buenos Aires, a Foreign Ministry official said the Argentine government was unaware of any specific plans for a summit and President Raul Alfonsin had not received an invitation. A spokesman for the Foreign Ministry in Brasilia said Brazil had not been consulted about a summit and had "no knowledge" of plans for such a meeting. The spokesman, who demanded anonymity, said the idea of a debt summit was nothing new and called the Peruvian announcement "the fruit of expectations, not negotiations."

Government offices in Panama were closed when the announcement was made and officials could not be reached for comment. If all the region's presidents attended it would be the first such meeting in history without the presence of an American president. The last time they gathered was when President Lyndon Johnson convened them in 1967 in Punta del Este, Uruguay. Cuba was not invited. President Alan Garcia of Peru proposed a summit in his inaugural speech. He urged Panama to host the meeting because it was in Panama City in 1825 where Venezuelan independence leader Simon Bolivar convened leaders of Latin nations recently freed from Spanish rule. Not all those who attended were presidents. Garcia said when he took office he would not institute austerity measures demanded by the International Monetary Fund and would limit Peru's debt payments to 10 percent of annual export earnings. Peru owes $13.7 billion to foreign creditors. Alva Castro said the governments and people of Latin America were in agreement that their debt "is unpayable" under present conditions.

Tass criticizes Reagan's charges Cuba, Nicaragua push drug trade

MOSCOW (AP) — The government news agency Tass on Friday criticized President Reagan's charges that Cuba and Nicaragua are linked to drug trafficking and terrorism and said the United States can be faulted for both problems. Tass-quoted Reagan as tolling the Mexican news agency, Noticias de Mexico, that "the link between the governments of such Soviet allies as Cuba and Nicaragua and international narcotics trafficking and terrorism is becoming increasingly clear." Reagan was in Mexico Friday for a meeting with President Miguel de la Madrid.

Tass said the United States is the largest consumer of narcotics, and charged that involvement of some U.S. police and "big business" in drug trafficking worsens the drug abuse problem. It said 400 Latin American drug experts meeting in Havana last November "were unanimous that drug business plays an ominous role in the continuing aggravation of the problem of drug abuse in the United States and in the involvement of other countries of the continent in illicit narcotics production and trafficking."

Tass also criticized what it said was the Pakistani role in storing and shipping drugs. It contended that Pakistan's northwestern border province was a center for such activities and also called this area a base for attempts for Afghan insurgents to gain control of annual export earnings. An estimated 115,000 Soviet troops are in Afghanistan to help the Soviet-installed government fight the rebels. In another commentary Tass accused an unidentified top official of the U.S. State Department of applying "outrage pressure" to the Comintern group of nations "seeking an end to war and terrorism in Central America."

Mayer replaced

MOSCOW (AP) — Vladimir P. Promyslov, mayor of Moscow for nearly 23 years, has retired and been replaced by the head of the capital's 21 manufacturing plant news reports said Friday. Tass and a television report said Promyslov, 77, retired on pension. The Politburo named Valery T. Saikin the new mayor.

Indians upset No. 1 Solons

Indians led A-3 favorites by 21 at half

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

GOODING — Gooding's road to an undefeated season hit a roadblock Friday night as the Shoshone Indians upset the A-3 top-ranked squad 56-52 in a non-conference game.

The game actually was more of a one-sided affair as the Indians, ranked No. 2 in the A-4 class, took control in the second quarter.

By a glance at the final score, nobody would believe that Shoshone led the Solons by 21 points at the half.

Both squads started out slow, but Gooding only had a point of lead after the first four minutes of the game.

Shoshone, now 5-1 for the season, led until Todd Sims notched a three-point bucket at the end of the quarter.

Gooding, which dropped to 0-3 with the loss, trailed 10-8 with eight seconds left in the first quarter when the 6-2 senior brought the ball up the court. Sims took two steps past the half court line and banged it in off the glass as the quarter ended.

That would be the last time Gooding would lead the game.

In the first three minutes of the second quarter, Shoshone caught fire outscoring the Solons 13-2.

George Shimer and Kelly Duffin combined for nine points as the Indians took a 23-12 lead.

Halfway through the quarter, Tim Rowan banged in a three-pointer increasing the advantage to 13 points.

Curtis Sandy, who led Shoshone with 14 points, also got into the act by firing in a bucket from the three-point line boosting the Indians lead to 35-17.

Shoshone led by 21 at the half and the near capacity crowd was shocked.

"We weren't mentally ready," said Gooding Coach Lou Andersen.

Gooding's William Novis is denied access to the basket by a trio of Shoshone players.

"We played good for the first three or four minutes and we lost our intensity."

Sandy had eight points in the second quarter as the Indians outscored Gooding 30-8.

"We talked about Gooding a lot," said Shoshone Coach Larry Messick.

"When Darcy, Sims and Swenson were in the eighth grade, they beat us 49-4 and we used that as an incentive."

Gooding went to the inside game in the second half.

With 6-6 center Sven Swenson on the bench nursing a knee injury, Brian Darcy, a 6-9 senior, took over.

Darcy, who was held scoreless in the first half, keyed a senior comeback in the second half with six points, but Shoshone kept pace and held a 49-31 lead after three quarters.

Gooding mounted a fourth quarter surge that almost caught the Indians off guard.

Once again, the Senator's turned to Darcy, who slammed two shots and Gooding was back in the game, 53-37.

In the next few minutes, Gooding would outscore the Indians 15-3.

With 1:30 left in the contest, Darcy had a pair of buckets and along with three-point shots by Sims and William Novis, the Senators trailed 56-48.

The next 90 seconds were pure mayhem.

Gooding went into a full-court press and caused Shoshone to commit numerous turnovers, but the Senators couldn't capitalize on the miscues.

The Senators managed to score four points in the final minute, but Shoshone held off the late rally to win, despite scoring just seven points in the fourth quarter.

"We talked about two things before the game: screening them out from the boards and allowing them only one shot," said Messick. "The key was keeping them off the boards in the second half."

Messick was pleased with the performance of the Shoshone squad, but he was quick to point out some individuals.

"The real key was Duffin and Chris Darcy on the boards. Taber especially," said the coach. "Bart Harris did well on defense on Sims, keeping a hand in his face."

"On a rebound, the ball bounced away from us and they got it. We were a step slower tonight," said Andersen. "They played well and beat us. If you're going to lose, one, this is not a bad time to lose."

Darcy led the Senators with 15 points while Sims added 12 for Gooding.

"The war is not over as both teams will meet again later this month with the regular season starting."

(Gooding won the preliminary contest 44-33.)

Rams upset Bruins

Two guards lead a winning 45-37 attack

By RON FOLKINGA
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The Highland Rams led by the play of their starting guards, scored a big upset over Twin Falls Friday night as they downed the taller Bruins 45-37 in a Gem State Conference boys' basketball matchup.

The Highland guards, Larry Davis and Darron Williams — both 6-foot-10 seniors — set the tone for the game as they settled after loose balls and controlled the tempo of the Rams' offense.

Davis scored only three points for the evening, but ran the Highland offense to perfection from his point guard position and played some very aggressive defense. Williams hit a couple of big three-point shots and scored on a heady lay-up late in the game to help seal the Bruins' doom.

"We knew they were going to run the floor, we knew they were going to be aggressive and dive after the loose balls, they just seemed to want it a little more than we did," said Bruin Coach John Astorquia about his team's effort.

"I was fairly pleased with the way we controlled the tempo for most of the game. We played a very poor third quarter and yet we were only down by five points going into the fourth period," said Astorquia.

He said he gave a couple of breaks in the fourth quarter it would have been a different battle.

Early on it looked as if Twin Falls would have no trouble with the much shorter Rams, whose tallest starter Friday night measured just 6-3. The Bruins limped on top 25 after Tat Williams' 24-point performance won the opening tip and Gabe Ostyn hit an open jumper to put the Bruins up 2-0. David Fulton hit a free throw and an eight-foot jumper, Kenny Puelch and John Astorquia.

Falls appeared to be on its way to rout.

Highland would not quit, however, as it scrapped back to tie the gap to 10-12 at the end of the first quarter.

"The two teams traded leads in the second period, with Highland taking a 25-24 advantage into the locker room at halftime."

The third period was much of the same as the first. Highland played offensively. One big play in that period may have hurt the Bruins as much as any. With the score 30-26 in favor of Highland, a Ram player missed two shots. The rebound went long and Highland recovered. Clark was called for goaltending to push Highland back to a six-point advantage from which the Bruins never recovered.

The fourth period was a case of Highland running its offense better and making the front end of its one and one opportunities.

With the loss Twin Falls drops to 10-12 at the end of the Gem State play pending a Wednesday contest at Rupert against Minico. Twin Falls goes on the road next Saturday night against Blackfoot.

Highland's record now stands at 21-5 in the season and 2-1 in league games.

Late surge by Wolves not enough, Hornets win A-4 opener, 62-59

By SCOTT TUBEHOPE
Times-News writer

CASTLEFORD — An 11th-minute surge by Oakley Friday night came up short as Oakley stopped the Wolves 62-59 in the Magic Valley Conference boys' basketball opener for both teams.

It was the first loss in seven outings this season for Castleford, and the third win in four games for Oakley, which is ranked fifth among Idaho A-4 teams in the latest Associated Press poll.

The Wolves very nearly pulled the game out after Ron Owen tied it with a baseline jumper with 2 minutes, 5 seconds left. But Hornet forward Bryant Jenks hit teammate Will Bedke underneath and Oakley won ahead by a bucket.

Owen had 16 points, Gary Reynolds each hit one of two free throws to tie the score at 58 with 1:13 remaining. But Jenks accounted for three of the last four last points in the halgame to put it away.

"We were out for the win, but I would have taken the loss if we learned something from it," said

Coach Neal Wyatt. "Obviously, it's better to win."

Wyatt, 2-0, remaining Owens' basket cut Oakley's advantage to one point, but Oakley's Steve Manning connected on the front end of a one-and-one free throw opportunity to make it 56-54.

Jenks topped all scorers with 23 points, including a three-point goal, while John Oldham, Manning and Bedke all hit in double figures.

High-point man for Castleford was Owen with 19 points.

Castleford fielded long-awaited West German exchange student Ingerman Heinrichs at center, playing him for most of the game. The 6-foot-7 Heinrichs, who became eligible at the first of the year, ended up with five points.

CSI, Utah Tech both win, improve tournament hopes

By LARRY HOADY
Times-News writer

CSI-114 C of 159 Utah Tech 103 Treasure Valley 94

The teams, both vying possible berths for the Region 18 tournament in two months, were coming off the holidays, and wanting to sharpen up before their collision tonight. They got their "warming up" in the last national poll, demolished the young College of Idaho Jayvees 114-59 while Utah Tech, getting 38 points from ambidextrous Alan Andrus, downed Treasure Valley's Chukers 103-94.

The "double header" weekend winds up tonight with College of Idaho meeting Treasure Valley at 7 p.m. and CSI going against Utah

Tech, about 9 p.m.

"We have some lapses," said CSI Coach Fred Trenkie after his team's victory. "Our defense wasn't as sharp as we would like. I didn't get after them a little late in the first half. Then it was pretty good for a while. But it wasn't called. Mike Miller and Greg (Boyd) hit the open outside shot in fact a lot of other guys did that for us tonight. You seen worse performances after layoffs."

Trenkie said defense would have to be CSI's strong suit against Utah Tech tonight.

"They start good overall height and they can bring in more off the bench," he pointed out. "We're going to have to rebound because they go to the boards hard and we'll have to hit the open shot like we did tonight."

"I'm also sure we'll have to rebound because if we let them stand out there, they'll bury it."

Trenkie said tonight's game has a certain carryover effect because the Eagles will be in Provo next Saturday night.

Against the young Coyotes, however, the Eagles enjoyed "spike night" from the time Joey Johnson opened scoring with a shot off of 105 through an 11-foot minute blitz in the last half that blew the game wide open.

"After jumping out 11-2, CSI was never threatened with trailing but Frankie became a little upset with the defense after the Eagles saw a 35-4 lead melt to 14."

At that point however the defense took over, picking College of Idaho five times in seven possessions and converting three of them into slams by Johnson, Chris Blocker and Boyd.

While the luckless young Coyotes stayed at 22, CSI picked up six more points from Blocker, four from Eric Newman and two each from Jeff Rekeyeg and Boyd. That blew things in to a 55-23 halftime advantage.

Dickerson got an easier job for CSI after that although Trenkie put his starting five some on the bench for more than half the period. Dale Karst, Keith Jackson and Miller continued to score well and the Eagles moved steadily away.

AFC playoff: Battle of QBs; NFC playoff: Repeated rivalry

Marino, Kosar prepare to meet again in Miami

By JOEY HOLLEMAN
The Associated Press

Miami — For two years, football experts compared Bernie Kosar and Dan Marino, two talented, young quarterbacks playing in the same town.

The comparisons began again this week as Kosar prepared to return to Miami with the Cleveland Browns.

The AFC Central champion Browns, 8-6, played the AFC Eastern champion Dolphins, 12-4, in a National Football League playoff game at 1 p.m. EST Saturday in the Orange Bowl.

In 1983, Kosar led the University of Miami to the national championship as a freshman and Marino took the Miami Dolphins to the playoffs as a rookie.

They appeared together later that year on the cover of Sports Illustrated, with a story that suggested Marino might have been the second best quarterback in Miami.

Such talk is sacrilegious now.

Marino rewrote the NFL passing records in 1984, and rebounded from a slow start this season to complete 338 of 507 passes for 4,137 yards and 30 touchdowns.

Meanwhile, Kosar struggled through an up-and-down rookie year with the Browns. Playing the second half of the year while alternating with oft-injured starter Gary Danielson, Kosar hit 124 of 248 passes for 1,578 yards and eight touchdowns.

Just as Marino had done in 1983, however, Kosar took over the team late in his rookie season and led it to the division championship. His performances — only three 200-plus yard games and a high of 18 completions — haven't been spectacular, but Kosar got the team into the playoffs of our success."

The Dolphins are just as worried about Kosar as they are about Cleveland's two standout running backs, Kevin Mack and Earnest Byner. Mack ran for 1,194 yards this year, and Byner got 1,002 to give the Browns only the third pair of 1,000-yard runners on the same team in NFL history. But Kosar has been consistent, however, while Kosar remains unpredictable.

"We know he's going to be a great quarterback," said Dolphins defensive end Doug Betters. "He's like a giant looming in the distance. You know he's ready to get hit. We

Ninth playoff face off has Dallas, L.A. primed

By KEN PETERS
The Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The Dallas Cowboys and Los Angeles Rams play it again Saturday when they renew the National Football League's most oft-repeated postseason rivalry.

The meeting at Anaheim Stadium will be the ninth playoff contest between the Cowboys and Rams dating back to the 1970 Playoff Bowl, the NFL's now-defunct championship consolation game.

The postseason series is tied 4-4 heading into this year's playoff opener for both teams, and they appear well-matched this time.

The Cowboys, champions of the National Conference East, have a 10-6 record, and the Rams, champions of the NFC West, are 11-5.

Both teams had similar 1985 campaigns, characterized by fine performances some weeks and dismal outings others.

Each club features a solid defense. An outstanding running back — the Cowboys' Tony Dorsett — and the Rams' Eric Dickerson.

Dorsett gained 1,307 yards on 305 carries this season and caught 46 passes for 493 yards.

Dickerson, who set the league single-season rushing mark in 1984 with 2,105 yards, gained 1,284 yards on 282 carries this season. He was a second, holdout the first two games, then was slowed by several minor ailments during the season.

Dickerson said the Rams need to play error-free football to beat the Cowboys.

"The key is no turnovers and not making mistakes," he said. "Mistakes have been hurting us. It's quite a bit — a lot of little things, missed assignments and so on."

"If the game is close in the fourth quarter, we feel we'll win."

Dallas Coach Tom Flores said of Dorsett's role: "He needs a good game, something in the 70- to 80-yard range. If he gets over 100 yards it would really be a good day for us."

Marino led John Robinson said: "We must stop the long pass, the screen to Dorsett or the long pass to Tony Hill."

The Cowboys would seem to have the edge in quarterback wars they have played season after season.

The Rams, who figure to stick with their conservative, offense-oriented offense, have an NFL rookie

Knicks end DeBusschere's management

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave DeBusschere, a key member of two World Championship teams during the 1970s who saved the Knicks from bankruptcy in the 1980s, was fired Friday as general manager of the team and replaced by Scotty Stump.

DeBusschere, who took the eventful job in 1983, led the Knicks to a 19-17 record in the Eastern Conference and missed the playoffs last season.

DeBusschere was criticized for not making any trades this season, for signing Cartwright to a six-year, $5 million contract after he missed all of last season and just before he was reinstated in training camp this season.

Richfield stuns Devils, 53-49

RICHFIELD—Casey Riley scored the go-ahead points on a field goal with 25 seconds remaining in overtime and Barry Ward added the insurance with a pair of free throws here Friday night to give Richfield a 53-49 Northside Conference victory over Dietrich.

Boys basketball

The Tigers had surged ahead after a see-saw game through the first 20 minutes, taking a three-point lead with less than a minute remaining in regulation. But Dietrich's Alan Stoddard earned a 23-foot jumper for a three-point goal to tie the game at 47 and send it into overtime.

The loss was just the second in 10 games for the Blue Devils, dropping their conference record to 4-1. Richfield's record improved to 10-0.

Stoddard ended the evening with 29 points, while Riley had 13 and Ward 11.

BURLEY—Scott Mal, Shane Newcomb, Mike Melting and Craig Felt combined for 46 of Burley's 56 points here Friday night as the Bobcats dumped Wood River 56-45 in the South-Central Idaho Conference boys' opener for both teams.

Burley leading by 10 points midway through the second period, the Bobcats missed several chances to put the game away. They finally got the job done in the fourth quarter, hitting 10 of 21 free throw opportunities in the final period.

Wood River hurt its chances by missing 10 of 16 foul shots.

Mal, who scored 10 points, finished with 23 rebounds and 10 assists, clipped in 11 boards and 13 points.

Wood River's Tom McCracken was the game's leading scorer, with 14 points, although Burley held him in check on the boards.

Madison 54 Minico 49

RUPERT—The Madison Bobcats fought off a Minico rally in the final two minutes Friday night to post a 54-49 Gem State victory.

The Bobcats appeared headed for an easier win when they blew a three-point halftime lead to 13 going into the last quarter. But Minico chipped back to within two and had one possession to try for the tie with about two minutes left.

The Spartans mistook on that chance and then had to foul in an effort to get the ball back. Madison feasted at the foul line to rebuild its advantage to 10 points with about two minutes to play.

Hagerman 51 Hansen 30

HAGERMAN—Holding Hansen to but four second-quarter points, the Hagerman Pirates stormed to a 51-30 Magic Valley Conference win Friday.

Trailing only by six at the first break, the Huskies cooled in as the second quarter progressed, allowing Devan Pharis, waxed hot to lead by 21 at the half.

The visitors slipped further behind early in the second half as Hagerman lead by as many as 29 before rallying briefly in the final eight minutes.

Hagerman stays perfect in the MVC at 2-0 and boasts their season slate to 4-2 while Hansen at 1-0 drops their first conference encounter.

The Pirates made a sweep of the action with a 51-30 J.V. decision.

Valley 45 Gooding 42

HAZELTON—Duplicating last month's results, the Valley Vikings upended Gooding 45-42 Friday night in a Canyon Conference girls' basketball action.

In an airtight contest Valley had the lead but Gooding owned the ball in the final seconds but the tough Valley defense held the Senators off.

Valley regained the lead for the last time in the final two minutes of the contest and Lori Reed dropped in a pair of charities with just under a minute remaining to give the Vikings a three-point cushion that the visitors were unable to overcome.

The win gives the Viking record 4-1 in conference and 6-7 overall while the Senators fall to 1-5 in the Canyon and 5-6 on the season.

The Senators captured the preliminary game by a single point.

JACKPOT—The Owyhee Braves outscored the Jackpot Jaguars over the middle quarters in capturing a Northern Nevada B boys' basketball Game 58-45 Friday night.

Patrick Jim paced eight Braves in the scoring column with 25 points. Many of Jim's total came in the second period as the visitors came from a point down to lead 29-25 at the half. John Drovek led the Jaguars with a game high 26.

Jackpot drops to 2-6 on the season while Owyhee climbs to 4-5. Conference records were not available.

The Jaguars will host Murtaugh in non-conference action tonight.

Camas 52 Camas 46

CAREY—The Camas County Musters slipped away from a tie with 1:26 left in the ballgame to take a 52-46 Northside Conference boys' basketball decision over Carey Friday.

"The game was pretty much a defensive battle," said Carey Coach Lee Cook.

Trailing through most of the game, the Panthers cranked up their fast break interceptions to finish the tie but couldn't get the ball to drop in the final minute as the Musters hit several charities to ice the contest.

Camas ups their conference slate to 2-1 as Carey evens out at 1-1. Both squads are 3-5 on the season.

Carey took the J.V. contest 46-39.

Sunday's game throwback to era when Bears-Giants meant everything

BY NICHOLAS K. GERANIOS
The Associated Press

CHICAGO—In the days when Mike Ditka had a crewcut and the New York Giants had a quarterback whose first name began with a Y, football games between the Chicago Bears and the Giants really meant something.

It will seem like old times Sunday when the Giants meet the Bears in a National Football Conference playoff game at Soldier Field, with the winners advancing to the conference title game.

"These two teams have been down a long time," said Ditka, who this season coached Chicago to a 15-1 record, best in the National Football League.

Pro football

record, best in the National Football League.

Ditka was a tight end for the Bears when they beat the Giants and quarterback Y.A. Tittle for the 1963 National Football League title, the last time Chicago was the team for a playoff game.

"It was good to 'beat him,' he said, "when you got two teams that were forerunners of most of the NFL teams."

The last time the teams met was in 1977, with the Bears winning to earn a wild card spot in the playoffs.

The Giants, who finished 10-8 during the regular season and lost to the defending Super Bowl champion San Francisco 17-13 in the NFC wild-card game last weekend, have the distinction of facing the two teams with the NFL's best records for two seasons in a row in the playoffs.

"Does this still seem familiar?" asked Len Fontes, the Giants' defensive back coach. "Last year the 49ers were 15-1 and headed for the Super Bowl. We played them tough, tougher than anyone, and lost (21-10)."

"This time the Bears are 15-1, and everybody has them going to the Super Bowl," Fontes said. "You can't tell me we don't have a better team this time."

The Giants feature the second-best overall NFL trailing only the Bears. Their offense is keyed around diminutive running back Joe Morris, the player the Bears consider the key to the game.

"I'm going to have a hard time tackling the guy," a 6-foot-5 defensive tackle Dan Hampton said of the 5-7 Morris.

"I've got a 39-inch in-seam and I think he's 38 inches tall. We'll have a hard time wrapping that guy up," Hampton said.

Morris gained 1,336 yards during the season, scoring 21 touchdowns, but he has been practicing the ppast week with a flak jacket because of bruised ribs.

"We're going to key on (Morris) and (quarterback) Phil Simms," rookie defensive tackle William "The Refrigerator" Perry said. "Those two can hurt us anytime."

Simms, ranked No. 6 among NFC quarterbacks, was selected to the Pro Bowl game after throwing for 3,229 yards and 18 touchdowns during the season. But he was intercepted 20 times, and the Bears led the NFL with 34 interceptions.

Chicago quarterback Jim McMahon is healthy after missing four starts because of tendinitis in his shoulder. But he still finished second among NFC quarterbacks, throwing for 2,392 yards and 15 touchdowns, with only 11 interceptions. It will be McMahon's first playoff appearance, after missing last year with a lacerated kidney.

Water Payton, who gained 1,551 yards in his NFL season, will fly and crash the Giants' distinction as the only NFC team never to allow him 100 yards rushing in a game.

"This year we were more intense than we were last year," Payton said. "We're more determined."

But it probably will be the defenses that decide the outcome, especially if the Chicago weather is bad.

L.A. Raiders will carry a big advantage of history against New England

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The Los Angeles Raiders have a history of being enormously successful both before and during the National Football League playoffs.

The New England Patriots have been a study in mediocrity over the years with very little postseason experience or success.

The Raiders, shooting for a third Super Bowl victory in the past six years and a fourth overall, and the Patriots, who never have been champions, meet Sunday at the Los Angeles Coliseum in an American Football Conference semifinal.

Since they were established in 1960 in the now-defunct American Football League, the Raiders have a 238-121-1 record, best in professional football. The Patriots, also established 26 years ago as a charter member of the AFL, are 174-190-9.

The Raiders are 19-11 in possession action—playing in Oakland at the time they made their first playoff appearance following the 1967 season, beating Houston 40-7 in the AFC championship game before losing to Green Bay 33-14 in Super Bowl I.

Since that time, the playoffs have been almost an extension of their regular season. And as the record indicates, they've been successful.

The Patriots, meanwhile, have a 24 record in postseason games. They are a playoff team for only the fifth time, and their 25-14 victory over the New York Jets in the AFC wild-card game Dec. 28 was their first playoff win since 1963. The triumph over the Jets gave New England a 12-5 record this season.

A crowd of more than 80,000 is expected Sunday for the game. The Raiders were listed 35-3 point favorites.

The game will be the second between the teams in a span of a little more than three months—the AFC West Division champion Raiders, 12-4 during the regular season, hand the Patriots their only home-field loss of 1985, winning 35-20 Sept. 29.

"A lot of things have happened since the time Coach Tom Flores led the Raiders," he said. "They're a different team now, and a much better one than we saw. They're playing with a lot of confidence. They seem to believe in themselves."

"But we're also a different team, and we're a better team than we were at that time."

New England Coach Raymond Berry agreed with Flores, saying, "I've got a hard time wrapping that guy up."

Morris gained 1,336 yards during the season, scoring 21 touchdowns, but he has been practicing the ppast assess a lot football team can have, and it's measurable in real clear ways and it pays off.

"There's no doubt it's an asset. Whether it's enough to beat us ... I don't know. Different teams have our team is going to have an inferiority complex about the playoff thing. We've been playing big games all year. This is another big game."

The Raiders' offense revolves around running back Marcus Allen, who led the NFL in rushing with 1,759 yards on 398 carries and caught 67 passes for 555 yards. The Patriots warmed up for Allen by holding Jets' running back McNeil to 41 yards rushing eight days ago.

Los Angeles quarterback Marc Wilson will be making his first playoff appearance.

Mortgage rates take a dive

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Home mortgage rates took a sharp nosedive last month, falling to their lowest levels in six years, the government reported Friday.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board said fixed-rate mortgages for new homes dropped to 12.06 percent in early December, down by almost one-third of a percentage point from the 12.39 percent of early November.

The bank board survey found that rates on the most popular adjustable rate mortgage dropped to 10.45 percent, down from 10.52 percent in November.

Analysts said mortgage rates have fallen "even lower" since the survey was taken.

Warren Lasko, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association, said "fixed-rate mortgages had declined to between 11.5 percent and 11.75 percent, driven down by a big rally on bond markets in late December.

"There was a dramatic decline in interest rates in the latter part of December as investors reacted to a variety of events," Lasko said. He said that a drop in consumer borrowing, hopes that lower oil prices will keep inflation down and euphoria over passage of the Gramm-Rudman budget movement have all contributed to lower rates.

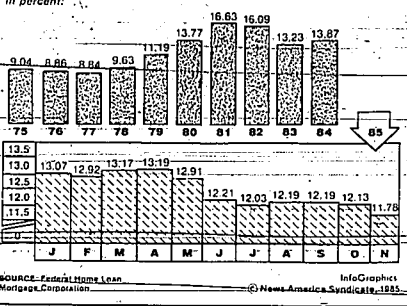

He said the mortgage rate declines would be good news for the survey are for loans on new homes because the mortgage covers at least through the first half of 1986.

Mortgage rates fall to six-year low fective interest rate, which includes any fees or "points" tacked on to the quoted mortgage rate.

The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., which does a weekly survey of mortgage rates, found that fixed-rate loans, most taking into account add-on fees, had dropped to 11.09 percent for the week ending Dec. 27, down from 11.44 percent the week before.

The bank board survey said mortgage rates have been declining fairly steadily since reaching a peak of 15.24 percent for a fixed-rate loan in July 1984.

White rates have fallen 20 percent since that time, new home sales for the first 11 months of this year are running only 6 percent above the level for the same period in 1984.

Analysts said falling mortgage rates normally would have provided a much bigger boost to sales. Some of the positive effect was blunted this time, they said, by tightened loan standards set by financial organizations in an effort to stem a growing tide of mortgage foreclosures.

The bank board report said that the number of mortgages with adjustable rates, interest charges which fluctuate depending on market conditions, stayed steady at 49 percent in December from the peak of 58 percent in the summer of 1984 when fixed-rate loans had risen to high levels.

Stocks stage solid advance

By CHET CURRIER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market staged a broad advance Friday, rebounding from its decline in the first session of 1986.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 8.94 on Thursday, jumped 1.47 to 1,549.20, finishing the week with a net gain of 6.20 points.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 1,053 million shares, against 84.66 million Thursday.

The mid-December selling period General Motors rose 3/4 to 71 1/2, and Chrysler added 3/8 to 46 1/4, but Ford Motor was down 3/4 at 57 1/2.

Elsewhere among the blue chips, International Business Machines picked up 2 1/2 to 154 1/4, Merck 2 1/2 to 130 1/2, and Exxon 1/2 to 55 1/2.

McDonald's dropped 1/4 to 78 1/2, and General Electric was off 1/4 at 71 1/2.

Analysts said there was no ready explanation for the market's recent erratic gyrations. Volume has been light through the past couple of weeks, which have been broken up by the Christmas and New Year's holidays.

Airline issues tell amid signs of intensified fare competition in the industry. UAL dropped 1 1/2 to 48 1/2, AMR 1 1/4 to 40, and Delta Air Lines 3/4 to 38 1/2.

Union Carbide gained 1 3/4 to 75. On Thursday GAF raised its offer to acquire the company's stock from 57 1/2 to 57 3/4 shares. Carbide countered with a series of moves, among them a plan to sell its wide-ranging consumer businesses.

In the overall tally on the Big Board, about five issues advanced in price for every two that lost ground. The exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained 0.76 to 121.50.

GAF shares, down more than a point at midsession, rallied near the close to show a gain of 2 at 55 1/2.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market climbed 73 to 325.72. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 247.73, up 1.23.

Poll: Phone service stable

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans believe telephone service is neither better nor worse than when American Telephone and Telegraph Co. was broken up by two years ago, according to a Media General-Associated Press poll.

The nationwide telephone poll of 1,462 adults found that about two-thirds believed the quality of local and long-distance service was the same as before the breakup.

Thirty-two percent said they thought the quality of telephone service would improve during the next 10 years, while 18 percent believed it would decline.

Businesses set gifts record of $1.6 billion to education

By LEE MITGANG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Higher corporate profits helped push business contributions to education up 16.4 percent to a record $1.6 billion in 1984, $225 million more than the previous year, according to a survey released Friday.

Colleges and universities were the biggest beneficiary, receiving 71 percent of corporate largesse, said the annual survey jointly conducted by the Council for Financial Aid to Education and The Conference Board.

Twenty-nine percent of corporate educational support took the form of scholarships and fellowships, economic education programs, education-related organizations and elementary and high school programs.

Telecommunications firms gave the greatest proportion of their overall charitable contributions to education, at 63.3 percent, followed by electrical machinery firms at 53.5 percent, primary metal companies at 47, and petroleum and natural gas companies at 45.9 percent.

"Although corporate profits are still almost 7 percent below their 1979 peak of $257.7 billion, support of education has grown by 82 percent since then," said JOHN H. Wate, president of the council.

The $1.6 billion represented an estimate of all corporate giving to education, based on the responses to the 11th annual survey. In all, 422 corporations responded out of a total of 7,000 surveys mailed out, according to Arthur C. Kammerman, a spokesman for the council.

The survey mirrors in part the growing sense of mission corporations have toward the problems of both public and higher education. A report issued last September by a group of business leaders and educators, "Investing in Our Children," strongly advocated more corporate support and involvement in the schools at all levels.

Education received 38.9 percent of the contributions reported by the 422 respondents, more than any other cause. Health and human services came second at 27.7 percent, and the remainder went to civic activities, culture and arts, and other causes.

Total contributions to all causes reached an estimated $3.8 billion in 1984, up 15.5 percent from the previous year, according to the survey.

In recent months, the Du Pont Co. has started a program to send "science" teachers from nine states to attend science teaching conventions.

BIC Corp., manufacturer of ball-point pens, has started a "Quality Comes in Writing" program aimed at helping elementary school students learn basic writing skills.

About half the contributions to colleges and universities went for departmental and research grants. The rest represented gifts that businesses gave to colleges and universities to match their employees' contributions, unrestricted operating grants, capital grants and student aid.

Burger King has an Education Assistance Program aimed at helping employees get post-high school education and training.

A survey last year by the Department of Education uncovered over 46,000 business-school partnerships across the country.

The Council for Financial Aid to Education is a nonprofit organization that promotes voluntary support of higher education from all sources, but especially the corporate community. The Conference Board is a private non-profit business organization.

Grand Teton Lodge Co. put on sales block

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — The Grand Teton Lodge Co., a Rockefeller family-owned company that operates the Jackson and Jenny Lake lodges, is for sale, according to a company official and a Rockefeller family spokesman.

But both men have denied reports that the company's holdings in the Jackson Hole area have already been sold.

Sale of the company, a subsidiary of the Jackson Hole Preserve that is managed by Rockresorts, Inc., has been the subject of negotiations with other companies for several years, said Rockefeller family spokesman George Taylor.

"As to whether a sale is imminent, over the years there have been talks with a number of companies," Taylor said. "Those talks are ongoing."

Bernie Hill, company vice president and general manager, said he has not heard that the company has already been sold.

In addition to the lodges, the company also owns the Colter Bay Village and the Jackson Hole Golf and Tennis Club.

Jackson Hole Preserve Inc. is a non-profit wildlife and education foundation established in 1940 by the Rockefeller family to protect some of the nation's scenic land.

Maryland thrift chief indicted

BALTIMORE (AP) — The owner of the troubled savings and loan that triggered Maryland's thrift institution crisis last spring was indicted Friday on a charge of stealing millions of dollars from it and another savings and loan.

The indictment of Old Court Savings and Loan owner Jeffrey A. Levitt was the first resulting from a joint state and federal investigation into the causes of the crisis.

Stephan Attorney General Stephen Sachs said he would seek the return of assets "relating to other individuals" within two or three months.

Levitt was indicted on 12 felony theft charges involving $13.6 million in funds from Old Court and from First Progress Savings and Loan.

The indictment also included 13 misdemeanor charges of fraudulent misappropriation by a fiduciary involving the same $13.6 million plus $1 million from a separate transaction.

If found guilty, Levitt would face up to 15 years in prison and a $1,000 fine for each theft charge and five years in prison for each misdemeanor charge. Levitt also could be required to make restitution.

Deregulation adds new turbulence to air fare war

Airline growth

Airline fare wars this year have contributed to an 11.4 percent increase in travel over 1984. On the 51 major airlines in the U.S., the number of revenue passenger miles rose from 14.8 billion in Feb. 1984 to 16.1 billion for the same month this year, and in the peak month of August from 21.2 billion in 1984 to 23.6 billion this year.

The never-ending wars of the airfares have been kicked into a new era of turbulence by deregulation of the airline industry.

And this time, with the airlines using computers and sophisticated strategies to deploy tactical fare cuts, I defy you to find out where you'll get the most dramatic savings on which routes and when.

To illustrate the sophistication, computers monitor sales so closely that carriers can assign low fares to a specific number of seats on a flight and then modify that number daily.

The fares are offered for a limited period, and other restrictions and rules are being changed without advance notification.

Another technique to coax you into flying empty seats is "holiday fares," which provide you with prices of up to 85 percent of regular fares.

"When you have a period during which business traditionally falls, you try to stimulate it with drastic price cuts," says Ed Perkins, editor of Consumer Reports Travel Letter in Mount Vernon, N.Y.

The most popular routes for airfare wars that lure you: New York-San Francisco, New York-Los Angeles, San Francisco-Los Angeles, some Florida routes. And these wars, mind you, go way beyond the super-saver fares and other reduced fares offered by most airlines.

The airlines are just starting to realize the complexity of their own system. And if you're among those who mean that it's becoming impossible to keep up with fare changes, Perkins returns: "Airlines have become just like any other product. There's no longer just one price. There's a range of prices."

Sylvia Porter

You don't, for instance, expect a central listing of the prices for all models and brands of color television sets.

But, as Perkins points out, many passengers get that kind of list for airfares. They may have been possible in the days before deregulation, but no longer.

Still, cheap flights mean a bonanza for bargain hunters, even though finding the cheap flights is tougher than ever.

"The first place to look is the ads," observes Herbert J. Telson of Dobbs Ferry, N.Y., editor and publisher of "Travel Smart" and "Travel Smart for Business" newsletters. "In most cities, that means the Sunday papers, especially the travel sections."

New promotional fares always are heavily advertised, but be on guard. Read with care the fine print about restrictions, cancellation penalties, advance purchase requirements, seat availability, deadlines.

You still may need more help. "Any competent travel agent should be able to find you the lowest fare that meets your requirements," Perkins stresses. "The minimum acceptable fare may not be the cheapest because of your own plans or standards."

And just as likely, the cheapest seats may be already booked. Only a limited number of these seats are available on any flight.

Moreover, some fares require 30-day or 14-day advance purchase, so last-minute travelers can't take advantage of them. To benefit from many fare deals, you may have to adjust your own plans and at the last minute, as well.

"Be flexible," urges Linda Honts, vice president of Travellor, an Irvine, Calif., firm that specializes in finding the lowest fares for its customers. "If you can possibly manage it, don't insist on flying on a special day, or at a specific time."

Honts also emphasizes that until you actually pay for the tickets, you have no price guarantee.

If you're a business traveler, you'll often find that airlines produce fare deals, but Perkins has a proposal if you would like to beat the system. And who wouldn't, or why not?

As a traveler, book two super-saver fares on two different airlines for two different trips, or alternate carriers, "one going, the other returning. That way, you can evade the rule that you must stay over Saturday night to get the round-trip fare."

"This works out only if you can book (plan) ahead. But if you will look back on your recent trips, you'll find you usually knew in advance when you were going and when returning, and what a satisfying trick! Except to the airlines: I would say: 'Yes, indeed.'"

Sylvia Porter writes on consumer matters for Universal Press Syndicate.

Citrus sellers' sample much better than inferior fruit in box

Q: Yesterday afternoon a young man came to my door selling oranges and grapefruit. He sliced one and passed it around to my family. It was nice and juicy. We bought some.

Q: I saw an ad in the paper for a VCR that was very reasonably priced compared to others I have been looking at. When I got to the store and asked a salesperson to show it to me, he led me to another one. When I again asked about the VCR on sale, he told me that was not what I wanted, that the one he was showing me was a far better machine. I did buy the machine he showed me and when I was telling my neighbor about it, she told me I had been "bait and switched." Is this true?

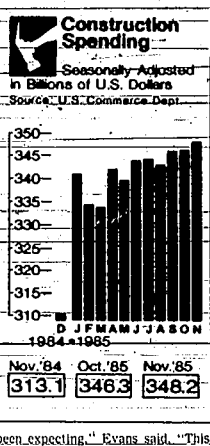

plans "bait and switch" in the following way: The advertiser should make a false impression about the product or service being offered in order to lay the foundation for a later "switch" to other, more expensive products or services, or products of a lesser quality of the same price.

Refusing to show or demonstrate the advertised merchandise or service. Displaying the advertised merchandise or service in a way that is unavailability services and parts, or credit financing.

Is no justification for inadequate estimates of reasonably anticipated demand. Actual sales of the advertised merchandise or service may not preclude the existence of a bait-and-switch scheme.

THE ACES

BOBBY WOLFE

"Nothing is more difficult, and therefore more precious, than to be able to decide."

- Napoleon I.

Choosing the suit to switch to may be easy; choosing the right card might prove more difficult.

Dummy's club ace wins and South takes a losing spade finesse to West's king. Obviously the suit to attack is diamonds. Which card should West lead?

If West leads the queen, dummy's king goes to East's ace, but the defense gets only one more diamond trick for a maximum of four defensive tricks.

A better choice is the lead of a low diamond. If South plays dummy's king, East wins and returns a diamond, giving the defenders five tricks. If South plays a low diamond from dummy, the defenders still prevail. East wins his ace and returns a diamond to dummy's king, and West gets two more diamonds when he wins his ace of hearts.

Possession of the ace of hearts should steer West to the winning defense. The key to the plus score lies in trapping dummy's diamond king but in avoiding the waste of one of West's diamond honors.

ANSWER: Two spades. Poor distribution, but raising partner's known five-card suit is the most constructive move.
