Reagan cuts business ties to Libya

President Reagan gestures to emphasize a point during his news conference Tuesday

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan on Tuesday ordered all American and American companies to quit doing business with Libya. He also pledged that unspecified "further steps" would be taken if Moammar Khadafi does not end his "longstanding involvement in terrorism."

Reagan said there was "irrefutable evidence" that the Libyan leader was involved in the Dec. 27 airport massacres in Rome and Vienna, but offered no details. "These are things that should not be revealed," he said.

The president, facing reporters in the White House, said he takes seriously Khadafi's threats to dispatch suicide squads to this country. "I find that he's not only a barbarian, but he's flaky," he added.

On other matters, Reagan said he intends to ask Congress to raise Pentagon spending by 3 percent after inflation in the 1987 budget that he submits to Congress next month. At the same time, he is expected to propose more than $50 billion in politically painful domestic program cuts needed to meet the deficit reduction goals in the new Gramm-Rudman budget reauthorization. Asked about fresh calls in Congress for a tax increase to help reduce $200-billion annual deficits, Reagan said "not now," and added he is afraid that a hike "could even trigger possibly a slump in the economy."

Reagan opened by announcing the economic embargo, saying that Khadafi provided support for terrorists led by Abu-Nidal, the Palestinian who Reagan said was responsible for the airport attacks. A statement accompanying Reagan's remarks said: "U.S. companies will no longer pump Libyan oil or purchase it for sale anywhere in the world."

Administration officials said several firms, including Occidental Petroleum, have continued to do business in Libya. Occidental quickly said it would comply with the administration's order.

Reagan did not have a chance to study Khadafi's terrorism," Reagan said. "I promise you that further steps will be taken."

He did not say what those might be, but administration officials said he would not provide details.

The president said the United States had thwarted dozens of terrorist plots in the last year, but would not provide details.

"We have actually recorded in the last year—and know that we have aborted 126 terrorist missions. Now, I want to say further and I'm not going to tell you how this was done," he said, refusing to specify how. See REAGAN on Page A2

With or without allies' help, U.S. moves against Khadafy

By BARRY SCHWEID
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With a shrug of the shoulder, President Reagan acknowledged Tuesday night it's frustrating to try to tame Col. Moammar Khadafi without the concerted support of U.S. allies.

But, Reagan said, the United States must do "what has to be done" to try to counter terrorism and to combat the Libyan leader, who he denounced as both "flaky" and "a barbarian."

The sanctions announced by Reagan will affect the incomes of American workers who are being ordered home from the North African country and the American companies forbidden to do business with Libya.

It would cost the Europeans considerably more if they followed the U.S. lead, Reagan acknowledged. "Their investment in the Libyan economy and said he was not even urging the allies to cut their business ties with Khadafi.

Analysis

Instead, his hope is that the allies—even neutral nations—will follow the U.S. example. State Department officials, who have been seeking this cooperation, acknowledged before the news conference that the outlook was uncertain.

Italy and West Germany are major trading partners of Libya. In fact, Italy, whose airport in Rome was the target of a bloody assault, stands second only to the Soviet Union in selling munitions to Khadafi and buys $2.5 billion in oil annually.

Clearly, there were other considerations as Reagan weighed a response to the bombings in Rome and in Vienna. There are American hostages being held in Lebanon and an estimated 1,000 to 1,500 Americans working in Libya.

Asked about the hostages, Reagan said he would not provide details.

sought to separate their plight from the Libyan attacks. He said the situations were separate and apparently they are as reasonably good health as could be expected.

The Americans believed held hostage by Moslem extremists are Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press; William Buckley, a political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut; David Jacobson, administrator of the American University Hospital in Beirut; Lawrence Martin Jenco, director of Catholic Relief Services in Lebanon; Peter Kilburn, a librarian at American University; and Thomas Sutherland, acting dean of a faculty at American University.

The State Department has said the government is operating on the assumption that all six hostages are alive, but published reports have said that Buckley and Kilburn died in captivity. Columnists Jack Anderson and Dale Gribble attributed the information to intelligence sources.

Moslem nations give Libya support

By JEFFREY ULBRICH
The Associated Press

FEZ, Morocco — Moslem nations declared themselves Tuesday in "firm solidarity" with Libya, which has expressed fears of military attack by the United States and Israel because of its alleged support for terrorism.

A resolution passed by the 45-member Islamic Conference Organization condemned "aggressive escalation on the part of international imperialism and the Zionist entity" against Col. Moammar Khadafi's radical Arab government.

The United States was not named. "Zionist entity" is a standard Arab name for Israel.

edged, however: "If Israel is bent on attacking Libya, this declaration is not going to stop them."

Libya came to the week-long meeting of Islamic foreign ministers, which began Monday, for the same sort of backing the Arab League gave in Tunis over the weekend. Ali Abdussalam Treki, the Libyan foreign minister, declared himself satisfied with the statement but added that his government wants action from the Islamic nations, "even military."

Khadafi's official news agency, JANA, reported Tuesday night that he had ordered state-run media to stop attacks on all Arab countries, including Egypt and Iraq, because of the conference's action. Libya and Egypt have been enemies for years, and Khadafi supports Iran in its war with Iraq.

The United States and Israel claim Khadafi harbors the Abu-Nidal Palestinian terrorist group, which they blame for attacks at the Rome and Vienna airports Dec. 27 in which 19 people were killed and 120 wounded. The dead included five Americans, two Israelis and four terrorists.

In its resolution, the Islamic Conference pledged "firm solidarity with the Arab Libyan people and its active support in the defense of their sovereignty, territorial integrity and territorial waters."

In a broader reference, the conference statement expressed support for all "Islamic and Arab countries exposed to Zionist threats."

Nuclear regulators seek to close meeting doors

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Despite widespread opposition, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission is planning to take more of its discussions about how it deals with atomic safety problems behind closed doors in what it calls "non-meeting gatherings."

In a proposed final regulation that could be approved formally next week, a majority of the five commissioners already has signed it will change the agency's definition of a "meeting" under the federal Sunshine Act to exclude "big picture" discussions.

According to an NRC memo released Tuesday by a congressional critic of the agency, the change also would allow commissioners to hold nonpublic gatherings to discuss the agency's relations with Congress, the news-media, the nuclear industry, public as a whole.

The commission has scheduled a public meeting for Jan. 17 to discuss and possibly vote formally on the changes, which triggered an outpouring of more than 50 opposing editorials and 32 formal comments when they were first proposed last May.

Since then, legislation also has been introduced in the House to forbid the NRC from reversing its 1975 decision to hold all of its discussions about the nuclear safety issues in public.

Block resigns from his Agriculture post

By JIM DRINKARD
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Agriculture Secretary John R. Block, who has presided over the most difficult times for American farmers since the Depression, announced Tuesday he will resign next month.

Block said he had accomplished his foremost goal—pushing through Congress a five-year farm bill aimed at linking agriculture more closely to markets and less to federal subsidies.

"I've done a great deal. I've made a difference," a relaxed Block told a group of reporters and department officials. "I believe that today, now, is the time to leave."

Block, 50, said he planned to leave his $62,200-a-year job by mid-February.

Reagan accepted Block's resignation, effective Feb. 14, "with deep regret and heartfelt appreciation for your service."

Reagan told Block, "You've had a challenging assignment and you've handled it with great distinction." Saying that Block should be particularly proud of the farm bill, as well as other achievements, Reagan added, "I guess I say it all when I say that you have been an invaluable member of our team from day one. We knew we could always count on you."

In his letter, Block said, "The times have been difficult in America for many but with farm program reforms, farm credit legislation and interest rate declines, I think we have set the stage for real recovery. Although there is much yet to be accomplished, we have made meaningful progress."

Sources said Richard E. Lyng, a former deputy to Block, was his likely successor.

Reagan was asked during his news conference Tuesday night if Block's successor would be a working farmer.

"Well, I'm certainly going to want someone just as Jack and I who has all the experience necessary," Reagan replied. "Yes, it would be fine if we could come up with a working farmer."

Asked if he thought the depressed farm economy had hit bottom, Reagan said he thought it had.

"It's going to take a little patience, or time. You can't do something instantly—to pull out a rug that's been there for many decades," Reagan said. "But we think we have a program now that is going to help maintain an income for the farmer at the same time we get

House Education Committee takes more conservative cast

By DEAN S MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — Saying he wanted to do away with Idaho Education Association (IEA) influence in the House Education Committee, House Speaker Tom Silvers, R-Twin Falls, has traded a pair of moderate Republicans from the committee for a pair of conservatives.

Rep. Robert Fry, R-Horseshoe Bend, and Rep. Hilde Kellogg, R-Fest Falls, said Tuesday they learned of their transfer to the powerful State Affairs Committee just minutes before Silvers dropped the gavel to open the session Monday.

They have been replaced on the Education Committee by Rep. Lee Allan, R-Caldwell, and Rep. Cyril Burt, R-St. Anthony. "I am not a bed-fellow of the IEA," Allan said Tuesday. She described herself as a supporter of the education system and has a good relationship with school boards, superintendents, and the IEA. Though her views and theirs are frequently similar, she said, she has differed with them at times.

Fry said he too is a supporter of education and frequently agrees with IEA positions on bills, but is not a bed-fellow. Without her and Fry in place to moderate or help kill some bills that surface in the House Education Committee, the Senate Education Committee will have to work harder and House members may be forced to vote on controversial issues, Kellogg said.

And Silvers' suggestion that the Lewis and Clark State University lose funding as a full four-year school may have less opposition in the House Education Committee this year, said Kellogg.

"It's no secret that I'm a very strong supporter of the CLSC," she said.

Kellogg and Fry cast determining votes against various measures opposed by the IEA last year, including a law prohibiting the discussion of homosexuality with students, a law eliminating collective bargaining with school teachers, and a law encouraging equal class time to be given to evolutionary theory and creationism.

Allan is associate director of the Center for the Study of Market Alternatives, a libertarian research center in Caldwell. She introduced a resolution last year calling for the inclusion of parents in the state's textbook review process.

Silvers said Fry and Kellogg were moved off the Education Committee against their will because they voted against the majority last year on a number of procedural motions, credit Including a challenge to the chair, which is Silvers.

"It's not punishment, just a redistribution of power," Silvers said with a smile.

The State Affairs Committee had only one North Idahoan serving on it and needed geographic balance, Silvers said. In addition, he said, Fry and Kellogg were better suited to serve on the State Affairs Committee.

Allan said she is a strong supporter of education and would support a tuition-tax credit or voucher system to force schools-in-to competition with each other.

The IEA is opposed to the tuition tax credit.

Company says it shouldn't defend Heyburn default suits

BOISE (AP) — A New Hampshire-based insurance company has asked a federal judge in Boise to rule that it is not responsible to defend the city of Heyburn against lawsuits stemming from the Washington Public Power Supply System's massive bond default.

Heyburn and 87 other utility companies in the Northwest had contracted for a share of the power generated from the WPPSS nuclear plants that were scrapped during construction when the power was no longer needed.

WPPSS sold $2.25 billion in bonds to finance construction of the plants, but defaulted in 1983 when it could no longer pay the debt. More than 78,000 people and institutions that invested in the project were left holding the bag.

Heyburn filed suit in 5th District Court in October to force its liability insurance carrier, Home Indemnity Co., to defend it against a number of claims arising from the default. Including one filed in 1982 by the Chemical Bank of New York.

The suit was moved to U.S. District Court in Boise on Dec. 10. Home Indemnity filed a complaint for a declaratory judgment on Tuesday in response.

In its suit, Home Indemnity asked the court to rule that it has no duty or obligation to defend Heyburn, or to assume any liability for the acts of the city's legal fight in the WPPSS case.

McRoberts may be co-sponsor of task force's day-care bill

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — Sen. Darrel McRoberts, R-Twin Falls, will likely be one of three sponsors of a day-care bill drafted by Gov. John Evans' Day-Care Task Force.

McRoberts, who served on the task force this summer, said Tuesday that he may help introduce the bill on the floor of the Senate with Senators Atwell Parry, R-Melba, and Ron Beltespacher, D-Grangeville.

"I like the bill because of similarities between it and the bill that passed the Senate last year," McRoberts said. "I like the bill because of similarities between it and the bill that passed the Senate last year, McRoberts said. I like the bill because of similarities between it and the bill that passed the Senate last year, McRoberts said."

Parry, who has introduced similar day-care bills in the Senate in each of the last two sessions, says that it is an issue he prefers not to politicize, despite the opposition of his fellow conservatives to day-care licensing managed by the Department of Health and Welfare.

"I would like to view this as not a political issue. I think that what we're looking at here is a real basic need," Parry said Tuesday morning.

Parry said he first got involved in the issue three years ago, after church members in his area contacted him and urged him to support day-care licensing.

Beltespacher and Parry said they expect pressure from the newly organized Child Care Coalition to move the bill through both houses of the Legislature.

Day-care licensing died in the House last year after debate over local control of licensing and the refusal of Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls, and other conservatives to put licensing in the hands of the Department of Health and Welfare.

Shannon Corson, president of a Coalition member group, said a letter and phone call campaign in support of the bill from the 23,000-member Child Care Coalition will begin late this week.

Also included among the supporters of the bill are a group of Boise-area businesses including Albertson's, the J.R. Simplot Co., Sunshine Mining Co. and Idaho Power Co.

Parry and Beltespacher both signed a letter to the governor Tuesday endorsing the task force bill.

The task force presented the bill and the results of its study this summer to the governor at a Tuesday afternoon hearing.

But when Evans asked legislators at the meeting when they would be introducing the bill, he was told by Rep. Jenne Givens, D-Coeur d'Alene, that legislative supporters will be moving slowly.

She said she will wait for the bill to gain momentum in the Senate before bringing it to the House.

The task force bill would give the Department of Health and Welfare licensing control. Uniform statewide standards would govern staff-to-child ratios, record-keeping, and health and safety measures.

The bill sets up four categories of day-care centers, depending on the number of children being cared for. Preschools are in

Potato, dairy men cautiously hopeful

By DEAN S. MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — Spokesmen for the potato and dairy industries offered members of the Legislature's Revenue Projections Committee a vision of cautious hope and a prediction of reduced earnings Tuesday.

The Revenue Projections Committee is hearing testimony from a variety of industry representatives this week in an attempt to predict what the state's economic health and tax revenues will be next year.

Gordon Randall of the Idaho State Potato Commission told the House and Senate members of the committee that the potato industry can expect better prices next year and the state can expect to benefit from that increase.

This year's crop, which was predicted to be a bumper crop until frost damaged about 18 percent of the state's spuds, will not be as profitable for farmers as it could be, Randall said, but will set the conditions for a good crop next year.

There are three factors that will lead to less planting and better prices next year, providing weather cooperates, Randall said.

Because of the number of farm mortgage failures, financing will be hard to get and some farmers may not be able to plant next year.

farmers hit hard by this year's frost may not plant again.

And the frost may have damaged much of the seed potato crop, said Randall.

"If you look at this year, you can write it off; next year there can be a ray of hope," he said.

Compounding the Dairymen's Creamery Association, said the dairy industry will show "a serious decline in economic contributions to the Idaho economy in the coming months."

The combined effect of reduced or frozen price supports under the new farm bill; the dairy herd reduction program in the farm bill; and stiffer competition in markets outside of Idaho will take its toll on the dairy industry in Idaho, he said.

Beyond 1987, the provisions of the Gramm-Rudman federal deficit reduction act will likely mean further reductions in the support price, he said.

Milkfeed prices this year have been the lowest since the 1980s, saving the industry, said Kromer.

The Dairyman's representative said his comments did not take into account an earlier spokesman's prediction that "prices will rise next year."

Budget writers lacking space to maneuver on Gem deficit

BOISE (AP) — Economic analysts are giving legislative budget writers little room to maneuver in handling the looming $30 million state budget deficit, adding more bad news about Idaho tax receipts while predicting a major loss in federal money as well.

For the new budget year that begins next July, the analysts told the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee on Tuesday that it will take between $25 million and $40 million more than the current tax system can produce just to maintain state programs at present levels for another year.

Without some kind of tax increase, analyst Mark Falconer said, lawmakers will have no choice but to reduce state support for some programs to avoid another deficit.

The latest report on the state sales tax, provided the committee as it began its deliberations on the session's second day, showed a 10 percent drop in sales tax receipts during the last half of 1985, actually trailing revenues from the tax during the same period in 1984.

Although December sales tax receipts were up nearly $500,000 over December 1984, total revenues from the tax between July and year's end hit only $124.2 million, $566,000 less than collected during the second half of 1984.

"There is nothing to indicate any change in direction toward a $20-million deficit," analyst Jeff Youtz told the committee.

He said sales tax revenues alone needed to total nearly $136 million at the end of December to keep the present state budget that runs through June in the black.

In addition, Youtz said receipts from personal income taxes, projected to rise 6 percent over the last budget year, are up only 3.5 percent so far — another reflection of the continued deterioration in the overall state economy.

State income tax receipts are projected to offset the deficit, advocated strongly by legislative leaders, would have to total 4.5 percent for all programs including public school support or a percent if the schools are exempted, he said.

Compounding lawmakers' problems in resolving the state budget crisis was Youtz prediction that the new federal deficit-cutting amendment will likely cost Idaho another $27 million in federal aid during 1986 and possibly $11.3 million in 1987, if Congress and the president do not abandon the controversial plan.

The decision on just federal funds for the state will come in March if President Reagan and Congress cannot reach agreement on how to trim nearly $12 billion from the projected federal deficit.

Without a plan for spending cuts or increased revenues, automatic cuts will take effect in March, and Youtz said they would slash federal highway aid in Idaho by nearly $1.3 million a year. Eighteen other states programs receive federal funds, and would suffer cutbacks as well.

Senators push for vote on lottery

BOISE (AP) — Two Republican state senators are hoping for quick action on legislation to clear the way for a statewide vote on lotteries.

Sen. Herb Carlson, R-Boise, said he's sponsoring a bill calling for a constitutional amendment to allow a state-run lottery in Idaho. The state Constitution has a ban on gambling that would have to be amended to allow a lottery.

Carlson said he's preparing legislation that would allow voters in the next general election to decide whether they want a constitutional amendment allowing lotteries.

Sen. Walter Yarnough, R-Grand View, said he hopes to bring the lottery proposal up for quick consideration in his State Affairs Committee.

It would require two-thirds majority in both House and Senate to put the lottery question before voters.

Sen. Vern Lannen, D-Pinehurst, has sponsored lottery bills in the past, which have failed to clear the Senate. In recent months, he's been advocating a lottery proposal with proceeds earmarked for economic growth efforts.

But Lannen said Monday he will support Carlson's proposal, which says nothing about how lottery proceeds are to be spent. Lannen said if a lottery bill succeeds, subsequent Legislatures can decide how to spend the proceeds.

Election bill fills 63 pages

BOISE (AP) — One of the first bills to come up in the 1986 Idaho Legislature also may be one of the biggest.

Rep. Phil Childers, R-Boise, is sponsoring a 63-page bill to consolidate elections in the state.

Childers wants to eliminate special elections, require cities, counties, school districts and other agencies to hold all their elections on the same dates as the primary and general elections.

Childers said Illinois adopted a similar law several years ago, and it appears to be working well. But he said the Illinois law allows five elections in a two-year period, rather than no more than two per year, because Illinois has a different primary election system.

Delegation's first step is to visit state prison

BOISE (AP) — On Monday, Senate President Pro Tem James Risch promised quick action on the governor's request for preliminary work on a new maximum security prison.

Tuesday morning, the lawmakers got down to work on the problem of what to do about overcrowding at the prison south of Boise.

About 20 state legislators left for a tour of prison facilities, conducted by Corrections Director Al Murphy.

Last month, state prison officials and legislators made an inspection trip to a new maximum security prison in Colorado's Adams County.

The state Board of Corrections has imposed a limit of 1,300 prisoners in Idaho's correctional facilities. That limit was reached last month. Since then, some counties have been holding prisoners in their county jails until there's room for them in the state prison.

In his State of the State message to the Legislature on Monday, Gov. John Evans urged the Legislature to do at least preliminary work on design and location of a new maximum security prison.

"Few state government problems have attracted more attention in recent years than our corrections system. We are presently operating under a federal court order brought about by overcrowding at the prison as well as a lack of services," Evans said.

Evans said his budget request calls for money to start the site selection and design process.

"Although the costs will be substantial, we have little choice in this matter," he said.

After the State of the State speech, Risch said the Legislature was aware of the problem, and planned to give it top priority.

With Stivers, to get along, you go along House Speaker T.W. Stivers, R-Twin Falls, tells a story about a House member who, he says, didn't vote with the House leadership in a number of key votes last year. When it came time to appoint committee members, the individual wound up with a lesser assignment.

When the person asked why, Stivers said he alluded to the votes. "I didn't think you were keeping score," said the committee member.

"I always keep score," said Stivers.

Indeed, it appears he does. As one of Stivers' first acts of the new legislative session, Stivers this week bumped two of the more liberal members of the House Education Committee and shunted them to sleepy Purgatory, otherwise known as the State Affairs Committee. Gone are Reps. Hilde Kellogg of Post Falls and Bob Fry of Horseshoe Bend.

In their place, Stivers named Reps. Liz Allen of Caldwell and Cyril Burr of St. Anthony, who are more conservative.

That may make a difference when the Far Right's education agenda comes into the committee, which killed virtually all of them last year on close votes.

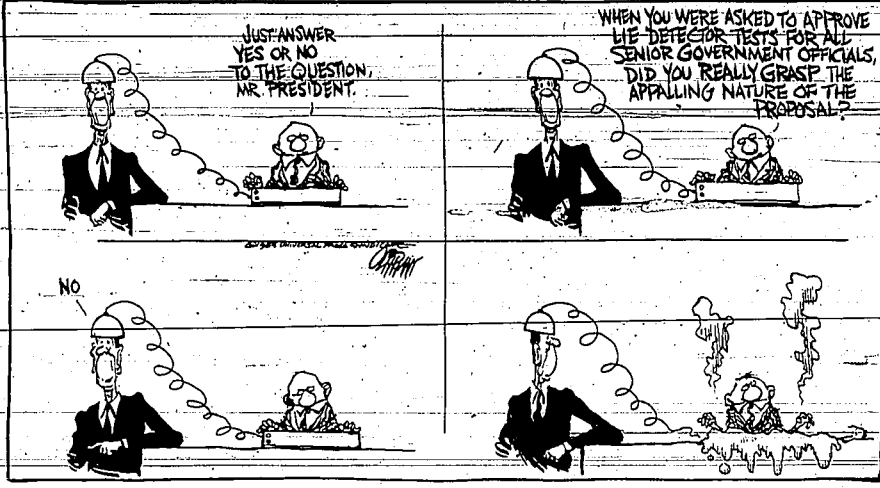

A few thoughts come to mind about this little scenario, and what it means:

One is that politics is a game of hardball. Stivers plays it with the best of them, if not always in the open. Sometimes in politics, as in life, you don't get angry, you just get even.

Two is that the Far Right agenda on education, if it gets to the floor of the House, will not bring the state any closer to meeting the needs of our children.

You can huff and puff all you want about promoting home schools; gutting the Idaho Education Association and censoring the books our children read, but none of these will give our children any better education. They'll just get a narrower one.

It has been said that politics is the art of compromise, that the great task is for everyone to win. Yeah, sure.

Letters

Recall will not help Kimberly

First of all, I'd like to set Dan Beard straight on a point he brought up in his letter. The recall against Jack Wright is not "still pending due to lack of support."

Quite the contrary. We've had people call us and ask to sign the petition, or come to us to sign it. Quite a few of these people were people who voted for Wright. At the request of the Mayor, we're holding our fire for now. You see, a recall is going to cost us a bundle in tax dollars, and unlike our opponents, we're concerned about Kimberly as a whole, not just one of the problems we have here. The money spent on a recall could do a lot for the city budget. But like children, they're saying "you either play the way I want, or don't play."

Secondly, I'd like to thank Gene C. Jones for the comments in his letter of Jan. 3. He made some points we've been trying to make for months.

We should be more interested in the operations of our police department. Do you feel good about telling your children, "Trust these men, they're police officers, they're honest and fair, you can go to them for help?" I don't. The investigations should have taken place years ago, but I can't change that now. So we've got to change our police department from a "slaphash operation" to a department to be respected.

It's obvious that Jim Campbell doesn't deserve this respect, and he's had 16 years of second chances. He isn't concerned about our community. He's concerned about Jim Campbell and a few others who can help his means.

Just like the council, this recall will do nothing good for our city. All it's going to do is cost us money. They want to get rid of the Mayor because he pinpointed a big problem in this city, because he wants to make Kimberly better, and because he believes that we, as citizens, have a right to know what's going on. Is this America or the USSR?

I am urging all of the citizens of Kimberly. Do not go to the polls to vote on Feb. 4th. If we don't participate in their recall, then we'll be supporting our Mayor, the freedom of information, the justice of law enforcement, and everything else that this country stands for. Which, obviously, the city council does not.

Tribute to a 'true fan' of CSI

Supporters and fans come in all shapes and sizes, or all ages and vocations. Some are vocal and some are very supportive in a quiet way. A "true fan" is one who is beside you at all times; with you while you struggle as well as while you are playing well and winning. One who does not need something in return for their actions or efforts. Such was Brian Garrison, a young man who finally lost the battle against a lifetime opponent which was too big to overcome.

To the Garrison family we extend our deepest condolences for the loss of a son and an exceptional fan. He will be missed and not forgotten by all of us.

Baby boomers realizing they still possess political power

The baby boom that began this week 40 years ago on New Year's Day, 1946, and continues today, produced 75 million men and women who are now between the ages of 21 and 30.

They are all of voting age now, a political factor whose potential magnitude can be calculated by noting that the total number of Americans who voted in the presidential election of 1984 was just under 90 million.

The power of those numbers has dazzled more than a few American politicians and political analysts. The most notable of them might be 64-year-old pollster Patrick Caddell, who has tried to convince a series of Democratic candidates — from George McGovern to Jimmy Carter to Gary Hart — that his "generation" identifies just that way, as "the generation." Find out what unit them. Caddell has argued, and you have the key to the next 30-40 years of American politics.

What always united the people of the Pepsi, now, Woodstock and Me generations was distrust of authority — parents, teachers, and the authorities who brought them Vietnam and Watergate, inflation and bureaucracy. Now, as they get older, more baby boomers and Yuppies seem to be united by the realization that each of them is getting a smaller share of America's wealth precisely because there are so many of them. Equally, income of Americans between 18 and 34, for instance, dropped 14 percent in real dollars between 1973 and 1984.

Understanding their distrust, Caddell has thought that the baby boomers would continue to be attracted to politics that was, or appeared to be, outside established systems.

"Movement politics" was their thing — "anti-Vietnam" or "nuclear freeze."

Landon Y. Jones, whose 1980 book, "Great Expectations," is the definitive work on baby boomers, has a somewhat similar view of the generational psychology: "The baby boom may still be uniquely vulnerable to a mass political movement," he wrote.

"They will be growing up disaffected, crowded out of advancement ... All of this approaches the psychological state of an ungrounded person particularly vulnerable to a charismatic religious leader — only it will be doing to an entire generation."

Jones saw a "need for heroes" — and the election results in that year, 1980, and in 1984 would indicate that many boomers found a charismatic figure in Ronald Reagan. But it is hard to believe that commitment will be permanent, particularly when the economics of young experience is so obviously at odds with the optimistic rhetoric of Reaganism, and American conservatism.

"Yuppies," now the most celebrated of baby boomers, are still up for grabs in the analysis of David Boaz of the Cato Institute, a libertarian think tank. "There are special interests in both parties," he said. "If neo-liberal Democrats really move toward a market-oriented economics ... In combination with their liberalism on foreign policy and social issues, they could become the party of the Yuppies."

The future will be determined by whether the Democrats declare their independence from the AFL-CIO before the Republicans break free of the Moral Majority.

All possible, but the only thing anyone is sure of about the boomers is that they have the power to change national politics but have shown little inclination to do much beyond towering the voting age and trying not to be drafted into the Army. They have spent one so fervently committed to themselves that it's hard to tell whether they will go to the Republicans or the Democrats, conservatism or liberalism — or simply burn out their political energies in their own ritualistic flames.

My own guess is that despite their attraction to Father Reagan and the religion of Reaganomics, the postwar babies are beginning to understand why their parents voted Democratic for so long. The boomers are getting a lesson now in the hard rules of a conservative free market, a supply-and-demand system.

Millions of baby boomers who had been promised everything from their education were being delivered nothing," Jones wrote in "Great Expectations," "forever shackled to the oversupply inherent in their large numbers."

The shock of recognition by the 78 million Americans born between 1946 and 1964 that there are just too many of them for all to have it all may lead to understanding that a principal difference between conservatism and liberalism is that liberals believe government has an obligation to try to soften the blows for those hit hardest by the inherent shocks of capitalism. More and more boomers will be caught between a rock and a hard place: and many of them are going to need and demand help from a friendly government — a friendly liberal or neo-liberal government.

Positive attitude, pulling together can bring district back

Sometimes we go through life with blinders on. I'm here tonight to tell you that this district is in bad shape financially. I've been here 19 1/2 years and it's worse than it's ever been. Taxes are not coming in. In fact, we were $36,646 short of what we anticipated in July.

We do not receive state money like we used to. I used to be able to invest over $1 million at one time. Now the state keeps that money to invest, and sends out six times a year. This way we cannot earn the interest we used to.

When Rex Enrighting hired me in 1966, he told me if I watched real close, I could earn my wages with my investments. I was real proud of myself because I always did. At that time I earned about $5,000; so the year I earned $5,000 in general fund alone, I put this cute little lie in with the board material. Guess I didn't impress them too much because they never offered to raise my wages to $85,000. Maybe it's just as well — this year so far we've only earned a little over $5,000.

In other words, the economy is bad. People everywhere are hurting. Farming is the backbone of this country and this is a farming community. Everyone knows the farmer is hurting. My father was a farmer and I always thought he was one of the smartest men around. I also have two sons that farm, so I'm kind of partial to farmers. I also know that it's hard work — long hours — and you have to know a lot to be a good farmer. You also need a positive attitude.

It takes a lot of people to run a school district. Patrons — parents — a school board which is elected by the patrons — custodians — school lunch personnel — bus contractors and drivers — and last but not least, students.

I would like to have each of you take a good look at yourselves and not criticize someone else unless you've walked in their shoes for at least a week. We need everyone working together to make this district work. We need positive attitudes and not negative ones. Ask yourselves the following questions:

1. Have I ever been guilty of running someone else down without getting all the facts? Have I taken the time to look at the other side of the question?

2. If a student needs help can I be found in my room or do I spend my time in the lounge where I can't be found?

3. Have I been guilty of labeling a child as obnoxious or slow to learn? These labels stay with a child. Have I ever been guilty of belittling a child in front of the class? In other words, do I ever consider that he might have a problem? I've known some obnoxious kids in my day, but I've also known some obnoxious teachers.

Do I think the district owes me — like maybe making a long distance phone call and not paying for it, sending personal mail through and not paying for the stamp, copying material on the copy machine and not paying for it? These things do cost the district money. I believe everyone has been guilty of this at one time or another. Now is the time for all of us to look at ourselves and instead of talking negative — talk positive.

I had a teacher tell me once that "if I was paid a little more, I would be a better teacher." That's a bunch of bull. You're either a dedicated teacher or you're not. This is the profession you have chosen.

Where else can you work for 100 days a year of all-Thanksgiving time and Christmas — and still get paid? Idaho is known for being low wages. It's this way all over the state. If you don't like it here — then leave.

I've known too many people that just couldn't wait to get out of Idaho but came back because I was such a good place to raise your children. So let's give Idaho a little credit.

We need a board that works together. Let's forget personalities and listen to both sides. That doesn't mean you need to agree on everything, but at least listen to each other. Board members are human, too. They make mistakes just like any other people. They are dedicated people. Why else would they take the abuse they get? You believe me — they do without getting paid for it. And this may come as a surprise to some of you, but superintendents are human, too. I should know. I've worked for four.

It's amazing how two of them were SOB's while they were here and turned into very little gods when they left. The other one was a little tin god while he was here and turned into a SOB when he left. Superintendents get hurt from all sides

— I should know. I've even done a little cursing myself. I'm sure most of you will find that hard to believe — but I never worked for one that wasn't fair and wouldn't listen to my side of the story. A lot of times, it didn't do me any good, but they at least listened.

This superintendent came into a bad situation. Let's give him a chance. Of course — he needs to look at the other side, too. Let's be positive and an pun together and see if we can get this district back on its feet.

Principals also get hell from all sides. Why would anyone want to be a principal? They are being dedicated people. Let's give them credit — they take criticism the same as the superintendent.

We need the principals thinking positive and backing the administration, but we also need them backing the teachers — in other words, we all need to work together. Principals have to deal with parents that are emotionally distraught — same way as a superintendent and teacher does.

Parents have a hard time seeing two sides to a problem when they are emotionally upset over their child. I've been emotionally distraught a few times in my life — so I know the feeling. We need principals, teachers and parents to look at both sides of a problem. I always felt like I needed all the help I could get when I was raising my kids.

I always felt the teachers were more than fair. Give them credit — they have a stressful hard job and it takes dedication to do it well. It's hard for parents and teachers to be level-headed at all times but let's both try and look at both sides.

In this district we have certified and non-certified people for the classrooms — if you will. Now, since I happen to be a non-certified person — I'm naturally a little sensitive about this.

I wish everyone would get it through their thick skulls that janitors, secretaries, aides, hot lunch personnel, bus contractors and drivers are just as important in running a school as teachers are. I'd like to see a school run without a custodian. In fact, maybe they should be in the No. 1 spot. It's awful hard to be a custodian — and I don't sign your checks — I also have to work on my attitude each morning. If I don't, Sandra straightens me out. That's what good help is for — to make you look at yourself!

Same way with secretaries. It's amazing how many people will complain to a secretary because they really don't want to see the "big cheese." It's their way of venting their anger — so I really think secretaries have a special place in heaven. Let's quit thinking what the district can do for me — but what we can do for the district to make it work. Let's think positive.

I would like you to remember — I may be non-certified, but I do work all year around — I do balance the books — I do reconcile the bank statements each month — I do know how much money is in the bank — and I do sign your checks — I also have to work on my attitude each morning. If I don't, Sandra straightens me out. That's what good help is for — to make you look at yourself!

Audrey Sisson, Buhl, has been district teacher at Buhl Public Schools since 1966. This article is adapted from remarks she made to the Buhl School Board at its December meeting.

Bonner heart surgery Monday

BOSTON (AP) — Heart bypass surgery has been scheduled Monday for Soviet dissident Yelena Bonner, wife of Nobel Peace Prize winner Andrei Sakharov, a spokesman at Massachusetts General Hospital said Tuesday.

Mrs. Bonner, 62, who suffers severe angina or heart pain, will be admitted to the hospital Sunday and chief surgeon W. Gerald Austen will perform the operation the next day with cardiac surgeon Cary Akins, said spokesman Martin Bander.

Mrs. Bonner, a pediatrician, left the Soviet Union on a three-month visa that expires March 2.

Hospital bill sent to Reagan

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — President Reagan has been billed $10 million for the hospital treatment of illegal aliens, and county commissioners voted to sue if payment isn't made.

The bill, mailed to Reagan on Monday, claims the government of Thomson General Hospital $7.5 million for treatment of undocumented aliens during 1985 and $2.5 million for Medicare-Medicaid reimbursements that are more than 90 days overdue, officials said.

"I think they're going to have to face up to the problem," said County Judge Pat O'Rourke, the El Paso County chief administrative officer who wrote a 2½-page letter to Reagan that was attached to the bill.

Weather delays shuttle again

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The shuttle Columbia's return to space was delayed for a fifth time Tuesday by sand blowing off the Sahara and clouds in Spain and Florida that blocked visibility at emergency runways.

"We have a bad habit going here," remarked mission commander Robert Gibson as he and his six astronaut colleagues left their spacecraft after once again waiting hours for a launch that did not happen.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration reset the liftoff for 5:05 a.m. MST Thursday.

Acid rain drive given boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of President Reagan and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney are recommending that the United States spend $5 billion to speed the commercial use of so-called "clean coal" technologies to help fight acid rain, sources said Tuesday.

Sulfur dioxide and oxides of nitrogen emitted by coal-burning power plants and factories form acid rain. Canada has said that half the acid rain falling in its eastern provinces originates in the United States.

New head to give Postal Service wings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Albert V. Casey took over as postmaster general on Tuesday promising to strengthen the ability of the U.S. Postal Service to compete by introducing a new style of marketing techniques.

The former American Airlines president told reporters "the post office is selling services to the public... the post office is involved with all forms of competition today. These are very similar principles to what we've just been through with AT&T."

At American, a press release said, Casey "successfully turned the company's 1974 losses of $49 million into a profit of $29 million in 1981 through skilled financial management and executive selection."

Casey joked that he might figure a way to give mailers something similar to the frequent flyer bonuses airlines offer top customers.

He pledged to develop ways for the $30-billion-a-year agency to compete with overnight delivery services and other competitors such as newspapers, which carry advertising circulars that also could be delivered by mail.

Asked how long he planned to serve, Casey, who celebrates his 66th birthday next month, said "the technological innovations and utilization of people in the most efficient manner possible." He said it was impossible to believe that such reorganization could take place from within the Postal Service.

John R. McKean, chairman of the Postal Board of Governors which named the new postmaster general, said Casey had received no commitments on how long or how short his tenure would be.

"I've been brought into similar situations where it seemed appropriate to reorganize, revitalize and change some people around," Casey said.

Charities, newspapers hit with new rate boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Schools and libraries, churches and newspapers will be hit with their second postage increase of the month on Jan. 18, the Postal Service Board of Governors decided on Tuesday.

On the heels of a Jan. 1 increase, which ranged from 23 to 41 percent, these mailers will have an additional rate hike of up to 11 percent.

The rate increase is designed to make up the $72 million difference in what the Postal Service expected to receive from Congress and what it actually got when Congress appropriated money for the Postal Service on Dec. 19.

The taxpayers make up the difference between the normal postage rates and the cheaper preferred rates ordered by Congress for mailing items such as church bulletins, charitable appeals and newspapers delivered in the county where they are published, farm and classroom publications, and mail between libraries.

Interviewed by telephone from Los Angeles where his organization is holding a conference, George E. Miller, president of the Nonprofit Mailers Federation said the rate increase may be challenged in court on grounds that nonprofit mailers are already paying the full cost of sending their mail.

John R. McKean, chairman of the Postal Service Board of Governors, told reporters Tuesday that the agency has "no right to expect" that Congress will continue to spend tax dollars to give reduced rates to

Heating of cylinder broke rules

WEBBERS FALLS, Okla. (AP) — Workers at a uranium processing plant violated company policy when they heated an overfilled cylinder, which ruptured and spewed tons of radioactive particles and a cloud of acid fumes, a company official said Tuesday.

One worker died Saturday when he was overcome by hydrofluoric acid fumes that filled the air when the 14-ton cylinder of highly corrosive uranium-hexafluoride ruptured at the Sequoyah Fuel Corp. plant in rural-eastern Oklahoma.

A white vapor cloud spread over the plant and was carried by a brisk northerly wind as far as 16 miles away. Tons of radioactive uranium fluoride particles were carried at least 300 yards downwind.

More than 100 workers and people living near the plant were examined at hospitals after the chemical release. One worker remained hospitalized Tuesday, Perelles said.

Company officials and a team from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission have not determined why the cylinder ruptured. The condition of the metal is being checked.

Company spokesman Ray Perelles said at the news briefing that Kerr-McGee was trying to determine why employees at its subsidiary heated the cylinder to try to reduce the amount inside from 69,500 pounds to 27,500 pounds.

The NRC said Sunday that the cylinder was not on the scales squarely as it was being loaded and was overfilled.

The company prohibits heating of overfilled cylinders, Perelles said. Martin said he was not aware of a federal regulation prohibiting such action.

Threat leads man to prison

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A judge has sentenced a 41-year-old man to 16 months in prison for threatening to blow up the MGM Grand-Reno last April unless the casino resort paid him $60,000.

U.S. District Judge Edward Reed sentenced Moses Zackry Smith of Susanville, Calif., on Monday after the defendant told the court he was "confused" last April.

Smith pleaded guilty last year to an interstate travel charge, but insisted the idea for the plot came from a friend who was desperate for money.

Smith was accused of calling the casino from a pay phone and demanding $300,000 be dropped from a helicopter at a predetermined spot. He threatened to detonate four bombs planted at the casino if his demands weren't met. No explosives were found.

Smith could have received up to five years in prison.

Priest's family keeps up its vigil a year after his abduction

CHICAGO (AP) — The yellow ribbons are still tied securely around the trees in Mac Mihalich's yard. Today, she'll change the sign out front to read 365 days of captivity for her brother, the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, abducted by Muslim extremists in war-torn West Beirut. After 12 agonizing months of trying to gain his release — including trips to Washington, D.C., to press officials — Jenco's family will gather today in their Joliet hometown for a special one-year anniversary Mass to pray again for his freedom. "We're hanging in there and still have hope," Mrs. Mihalich said in a telephone interview Tuesday from her home in Joliet, a city of 76,000 about 40 miles southwest of Chicago. "We just have to — there's no ifs, ands or buts," she said. Jenco is one of six Americans missing in Lebanon. The 51-year-old Roman Catholic priest was abducted Jan. 8, 1985, when eight gunmen overtook his chauffeur-driven car. He had been in Beirut five months as local director of Catholic Relief Ser-

REV. LAURENCE MARTIN JENCO Before his abduction During Lebanon imprisonment

Members of the Shiite Moslem organization Jihad Islami, or Islamic Holy War, have claimed responsibility for his abduction, saying it was intended as a warning to Americans to leave the country. The 55 members of Jenco's family, who say he suffers from a heart problem, have lobbied Congress, talked to reporters and visited President Reagan to press for help. So have relatives of the other missing Americans.

"We didn't know we had it in us," Mrs. Mihalich said. "We just thought we were plain American people who let the American government take care of things. We found out it doesn't always work that way."

Family members plan to visit Washington again Jan. 20 to meet with Syrian and Lebanese officials, she said.

Mrs. Mihalich said the U.S. government "is doing all that it can" to win the hostages' release, but added Jenco's family will keep campaigning "to make sure they don't forget."

On the front lawn of the Mihalich home is a sign bearing Jenco's picture, the number of days he's been held and the words, "Set the captives free."

Yellow ribbons garb trees around the Mihalich and Jenco homes and those of their neighbors. "You find out really who your friends are, and some are people you wouldn't even have suspected," said Lois Jenco, the priest's sister-in-law.

Mrs. Jenco said the ordeal has drawn the already close-knit family even closer.

Hundreds are expected to join them at Wednesday's mid-afternoon Mass at St. Bernard Catholic Church, which Jenco attended as a boy.

Among those expected to attend are the Rev. Benjamin Weir, 61, a Presbyterian minister and former hostage who was freed Sept. 14 and now lives in the San Francisco area, and several Illinoisans held hostage during the Midwest hijacking of the TWA jetliner last summer, she said.

Five other Americans are missing in Lebanon. Here are their names and the dates they disappeared: • Terry Anderson, 38, chief Middle East correspondent for "The Associated Press," March 16, 1985.

• William Buckley Jr., a political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, March 18, 1984. • David Jacobson, 54, administrator of American University Hospital, May 28, 1985. • Peter Kilburn, 60, a librarian at the American University of Beirut, Dec. 3, 1984. • Thomas Sutherland, 54, acting agriculture dean at the American University, June 9, 1985.

After 13 operations, they are ready to take their fight to court Let baby son die in peace, parents ask hospital

BOSTON (AP) — Three months ago, Lynn and Jack Bellingham thought they would do anything to save their deformed newborn son, Ricky.

But after approving 13 surgical procedures at a cost of $1 million, the couple is now preparing to go to court to demand that Children's Hospital relinquish control of the infant and let him "die in peace, not pain."

"Enough is enough," said Mrs. Bellingham. "My question to the hospital is, 'What do they consider life?' The baby has a right to be treated like any other human being."

Ricky has been in intensive care since his birth Sept. 24, five weeks premature. He has a deformed esophagus and trachea, a hernia, internal bleeding, blot clotting problems, an enlarged gall bladder and pneumonia. He is sedated with morphine, connected to an artificial respirator and fed through a tube to his stomach.

Doctors told the Bellinghams their son would need at least two more operations in the near future, and that his prognosis was uncertain.

"Because of the infections, he has a decreased brain capacity, but we don't know how much," said Mrs. Bellingham.

Last week, the couple asked the hospital to let them not to perform any further surgery and to remove intravenous feeding tubes.

Mrs. Bellingham said the hospital told her it was considering a court petition to gain custody of the boy in order to continue medical treatment.

"We said, 'No surgery, and the hospital told us to get a lawyer,' she added. "We will fight it. It's a matter of principle. We had a right to bring a child into the world, and we should have the right to tell us what's best."

The Bellinghams said they are ready to file suit against the hospital as soon as it orders more surgery. Hospital officials refuse to discuss the case, citing the infant's right to privacy, but spokeswoman Nancy Collins said Tuesday that, in general, doctors make every effort to preserve life, even when hope is sparse.

"We do not make decisions to preserve or terminate life based on social, economic or lifestyle reasons," Ms. Collins said. "It is hard to know when to stop treating a patient because in some cases, especially in pediatrics, things change for the better."

Ms. Collins said the hospital tries to follow the wishes of parents whose children are terminally ill, but that if doctors believe a child can be saved the hospital will petition a court for custody or emergency permission to continue medical treatment.

Mrs. Bellingham, a 42-year-old young children from a previous marriage, lives in suburban Marshfield with her husband, a 40-year-old construction worker.

"In the beginning, we went along with everything the hospital wanted to do," she said. "We wanted this baby. It is my husband's first son."

But she said they decided that the baby should be allowed to die when "we saw there was no hope for recovery."

"He has a lot of problems, and we're talking about major problems," she added. "Even if he survives, there is no chance he would be normal. The baby should be allowed to die in peace, not pain."

"The bills are just sitting here in a pile. At this point insurance has run out. But this isn't a matter of money."

Legal and ethics experts interviewed Tuesday said such cases are becoming more common as medical technology makes it possible to prolong the lives of sick infants.

"It's a very difficult, very traumatic and reasonable financial question and then what's in this child's best interest from the child's perspective," said George J. Annas, a professor of health law at Boston University.

"The question is, is this child better off dead than being treated this way?"

"These are difficult questions. You can't say it's black or white."

Couple's 64 years of togetherness ends

PORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Clarence and Malinda Figel were born just one day apart. They worked together and died on the same day.

Clarence Figel died of pneumonia Thursday at Lutheran Home, where he had been a resident for several years. About seven hours later, Mrs. Figel died at St. Joseph's Hospital after apparently suffering a massive brain hemorrhage.

A memorial service was held Monday. They died "with dignity and very much in love with each other," said their daughter, Clarlynn M. Young. It was almost as if her mother waited for her life-long friend to die and then quietly went to join him," she said.

Both were 87. Figel was born on Aug. 23, 1898, in Hillsdale, Mich. Mrs. Figel was born Aug. 24, 1898, in Fort Wayne.

"They met when they were just teen-agers. I think it was at a basketball game," said Mrs. Figel's sister, Martha Delister, who was her maid of honor. A notebook Clarence Figel kept while in the United States Signal Corps — at Fort Benjamin Harrison in Indianapolis and in France during World War I — makes frequent references to Malinda.

"That was one of the few times in their lives they were apart," their son said Monday.

They were married on Armistice Day 1921. The marriage produced two youngsters, five grandchildren and a contracting company — Clarence W. Figel Inc. — he was president and she was his bookkeeper.

Their togetherness became more difficult about three years ago when Figel had a stroke and became partially disabled, Mrs. Young said. "He was just too much for us to care for," said Bill Figel. "So he went to the Lutheran Home where we knew he'd get the care he needed."

Mom went to see him almost every day — when she couldn't go in person, she would call."

Mrs. Figel was summoned to the retirement home Thursday because her husband was not feeling well. When she and her daughter arrived, they learned he was dying.

"We went home and Mom fixed something to eat," Bill Figel said. "She sat down but then slumped over in her chair. We rushed her to the hospital, but there was nothing anybody could do."

Folk festival slates return

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Following two years of a painful revival of the Newport Folk Festival, organizers are planning another concert for this summer.

The festival was brought back in 1985 by producer George Wein, who stopped the annual event in 1978 after rowdy fans triggered opposition from local politicians.

Wein recouped his $75,000 investment in the 1985 festival and made a small profit, co-producer Robert Jones said Monday.

Organizers of this year's two-day folk concert, planned for Aug. 23-24 at Fort Adams State Park, are searching for a corporate sponsor.

The state Department of Environmental Management has reserved the park for the folk festival even though no contract has been signed, state officials say.

Halt overseas trips, school head asks

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The Memphis superintendent of schools has asked the city Board of Education to temporarily halt school-sponsored overseas trips because of the threat of terrorist attacks.

"I feel uneasy," Superintendent Willie W. Herenton told the board Monday night. "I don't feel I'm overreacting. I'm throwing up a precautionary flag."

The board will vote on Herenton's recommendation in two weeks.

Last month, 22 members of a Ridgeway High School group landed at Rome's Leonardo Da-Vinci Airport about three hours after a terrorist attack.

Kimberly Council OKs police manual draft

By DOUG WRIGHT
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY—Despite objections by Mayor Ron Jones and councilmember-elect Tom Lewis, the Kimberly City Council unanimously approved a preliminary draft of a Manual of Rules in a special meeting on Tuesday night.

The manual, which specifically spells out the duties, responsibilities and restrictions placed on Kimberly Police Chief and the department, is now in preliminary form and will be amended in subsequent meetings, said Councilmember Jack Wright.

"I think it's a start in the right direction, although some amendments do need to be made," said Wright.

However, Jones and Lewis objected to the adoption of the preliminary form before additional corrections could be made and tried to postpone the vote until next week.

"The problems should be worked out before we adopt it," said Jones.

Lewis agreed, saying that the vote should be postponed so that he could have input and could vote on the manual when he assumes his position on the council next week.

Lewis said, "I don't want to see a manual that is not recognized through this motion just to recognize the efforts and input of a departing councilmember (Ted Wasco)," said Lewis.

'The problems should be worked out before we adopt it.'
—Kimberly Mayor Ron Jones

'The bulk of that book we need in the worst way. We can amend as we go.'
—Councilmember Jack Wright

However, Wright and the rest of the council disagreed. "The bulk of that book we need in the worst way," argued Wright. "We can amend as we go, but we need the bulk of those rules now, so let's get it started."

Jones also objected to the wording of a specific clause about the police chief's functions and which city officials oversee the chief and department. The controversial amendment adopted by the council states that the police chief shall have general police powers, pending approval of the mayor and city council.

Jones objected to the inclusion of "city council," arguing that it violated state law. Under Idaho Code 50-61, the mayor, and not the council, has the superintendent control over city employees, said Jones.

"So the city council should have no part of that," he stated.

He stated that he would correct the amendment in a later meeting.

"The council called for revisions to be made in the Manual of Rules in the wake of investigations by the Idaho Attorney General's Office and the Twin Falls Police Department into alleged misconduct in the Kimberly Police Department.

The allegations of misconduct involved missing guns, bicycle, drug and police file burglaries and neglect of public duty by Kimberly Police Chief Jim Campbell.

After reviewing both reports, the council decided that Jim Campbell, although he did make some procedural mistakes, did not have any criminal intent and should be retained. The council said that the procedural errors which were made have been corrected.

No criminal charges were brought against anyone as a result of the investigations, but the issue has caused a rift between Jones and the council. Jones faces a recall election on Feb. 4 over the issue.

Paul deaths probed

Officials say McLean acted in self-defense

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

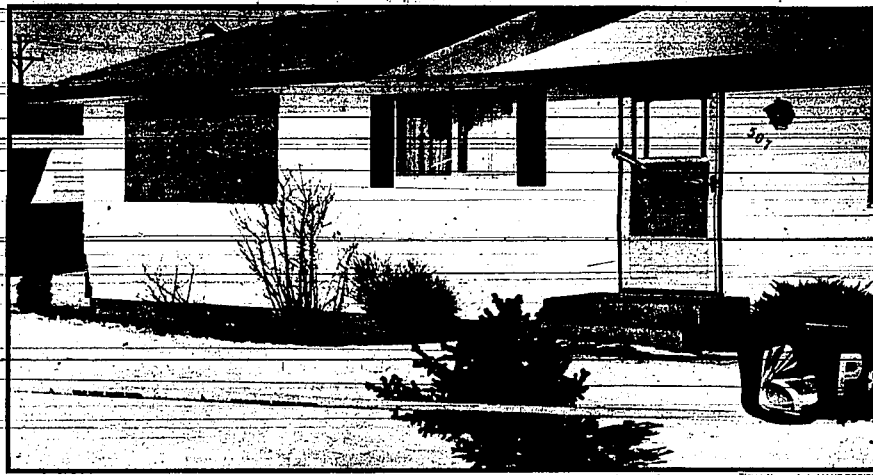

PAUL—No charges will be filed against the Paul man who shot his wife's killer in a pre-dawn gun battle Saturday stemming from a prolonged child custody dispute, Minidoka County authorities said Tuesday.

Minidoka County Prosecuting Attorney Charles Creason said the investigation indicated 39-year-old Kermit McLean acted in self-defense early Saturday morning when he shot and killed 38-year-old Ken Arthur Hayden.

"It is the conclusion of the investigation that the death of Hayden was justifiable homicide," Creason said in a written statement.

McLean, 35, was shot through the McLeans' bedroom window at about 4:30 a.m. Saturday and fired five shots from a 20-gauge pump-action shotgun. One of those shots struck 35-year-old Judy McLean in his "crotch" in the chest, killing her.

Jeffrey Hayden, 7, the adopted son of Judy and Hayden, was unharmed. Hayden had taken the boy in 1981 and never returned him to his Paul home during a custody dispute.

After a year-long search, Judy McLean was reunited with Jeffrey in front of national television cameras in Connecticut.

The McLeans filed a $25,000 suit against Hayden, his parents and his sister to recover costs of the search, the McLeans' attorney, Don Chisholm, said.

McLean told authorities Monday that after Hayden entered the room, he began grappling with Hayden, trying to get the shotgun away.

McLean said he pushed Hayden into a corner, and Hayden then told him,

"You'd better check Judy." She was already dead.

With Hayden pointing the shotgun at him, McLean told authorities he reached for the loaded, 22-caliber pistol he kept in a closet shelf near where he was standing, Paul Police Chief C.K. Harkness said Monday.

McLean shot Hayden twice in the head, killing him.

Harkness said police found the shotgun empty, and one live shell on the floor. McLean suffered a head wound, apparently caused by flying glass authorities said.

Minidoka County Coroner John Fisher said Tuesday his ruling was the same—justifiable homicide. Fisher said tests were done to determine if Hayden had any drugs or alcohol in his system at the time, but results were not in.

Authorities said a goodbye letter addressed to his family was found on Hayden, but they declined to call it a suicide note.

"I think he just wanted to cover all the bases," Creason said.

Hayden's Twin Falls attorney, Michael Crabtree, who represented Hayden in a civil case, said Tuesday he'd had no indication from Hayden that he was coming to the area.

The McLean house, at 507 E. Lincoln St. in Paul, remained roped off Tuesday and a board covered the front bedroom window, where Hayden entered. The front porch light burned dimly, and a newspaper rested in a box in front of the house.

Neighbors and friends of Judy McLean have set up a trust fund for Jeffrey. So far, neighbors have collected $135, and Agnes Kehrer said she had received about $60 for the Jeffrey Hayden Trust Fund.

Donations will be accepted at Jack's Gas, owned by the Kehrs, at 4 E. Elms in Paul, or the Idaho Bank & Trust in Paul.

Myers gets nod to fill clerk spot in Gooding

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING—Gooding area businessman John Myers has been appointed Gooding County Clerk following the resignation of former Clerk Margaret Clements.

Myers was appointed last week at a special meeting of the county commission. The Democratic Caucus notified the commission in mid-December she would leave the post effective Dec. 31. She cited a need to care for personal matters as her reason for leaving office early.

Myers will fill the vacancy for the remaining 12 months of Clements' term. Clements, who was appointed to the position 13 years ago and has been elected to three 4-year terms, had told the commissioners she did not plan to seek re-election in November.

Myers was recommended for the job by the Gooding County Democratic Central Committee, which also submitted the names of Henry Morrison, chief deputy for the county assessor, and Anita Standa of Judy McLean.

Commission Chairman Robert Thackeray said Tuesday Clements is helping to acquaint Myers with the duties of the office.

The clerk said Myers, who owns the Gooding Credit Bureau, John's Wood Stoves and Adventure Land Videos, has office management experience and was the preferred nominee of the Democratic Central Committee.

Stink over asphalt set aside

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Amid conflicting statements Monday about the alleged smell of a hot mix plant, Twin Falls City Council members tabled the matter, but resolved to conduct their own sniff test.

Alvin Allen and other neighbors of Keith Sligar and Rick Olander's portable hot mix asphalt plant on Addison Avenue West had asked the council to revoke authorization for the plant.

"People have been nauseated, totally sickened by the fumes," Allen said during a public hearing. "I don't enjoy seeing something like this run all day Saturday and Sunday. If you ever get a whiff—if you lived there, you'd know why I'm here. . . I was made sick by the thing. It gave me the worst headache I ever had."

Dave Hamilton, who owns the Holiday Motel, said travelers asked him "what that terrible odor was." An Allen said "Bill all need to know would return from visiting his grandparents, who live near the plant, with the smell on his clothing."

"They say that it is cleaned up," Allen said. "Bill all need to know to see if it is running."

Councilmember Mary McClusky, the only member to visit the plant in operation during the last season, said during her visit in late October there was "a very bad odor" that followed her to the Rock Creek Canyon bridge.

However, at a previous city planning hearing, several commissioners said they had smelled nothing offensive when they visited the plant in operation.

Olander said there was a problem when the plant was set up in August, but since that time the problem had been corrected. Oil was "indirectly" diverted to a drum and had to be burned out, he said. That produced "a terrible smoke, like rubber tires," he said.

"There was also a dust problem the first three to five times the plant operated, he said, but added that gravel was now being watered down.

The state Department of Health and Welfare has since tested the plant and found that it meets emission standards, state documents show. Olander suggested that since many of those complaining about his plant lived upwind from it, they must be smelling something else.

Olander said that if the council told him to move the plant in the middle of his summer season he might as well file bankruptcy."

Race track bid shifts gears

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—Robert G. Watts' plan to build a race track on Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport property came a little closer to realization Monday when the City Council denied neighbors' request to overturn a Planning and Zoning Commission decision.

Also on Monday, Norman Jones, who built "Thunderbluff" Raceway from scratch 10 years ago with his late wife, announced he was withdrawing his application to build a race track on the property.

City officials said he had planned to move Thunderbluff from its site near Hollister to unused airport property. Jones was the first to approach the city about the plan to use airport property.

Jones told city staff members he was concerned about codes he would have to meet on city properly, according to Community Development Director LaMar Orton.

There was some question about whether the facility he now would meet city codes, Orton said.

"There is a lot of politics right now," Jones said. "I will be opening Thunderbluff this spring," he said, but declined to comment further.

The track Watts is proposing is more elaborate than the facility at Hollister. It will have permanent restroom facilities, running water and landscaping, said City Engineer Gary Young, who helped draw plans.

Watts will still have to negotiate a lease with the city and county of Twin Falls for the airport property.

The City Council is concerned about how best to handle the lease to prevent city liability for injuries at the track. Even with a hold-harmless agreement and waivers of liability in the lease agreement, the city might still be at risk, said City Attorney Shane Bengoechea.

"The lease payment will have to be great for the city to undertake it," he said.

Mayor Doug Vollmer said the city might want to consider selling the land to Watts. The matter will have to be studied, since the land proposed for the race track was purchased with Federal Aviation Administration funds.

Residents living near the airport asked the council Monday to overturn the P&Z Commission's decision to allow the race track to be built near the airport.

They said it would create more traffic than county roads could handle, particularly since most traffic would use Gradyville Drive.

Jerome zoning crew puzzles over debated MEDA plant site

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

JEROME—Jerome County zoning authorities mentally moved a proposed cheese factory on a small map late Monday night, trying it out in different places.

The tactic didn't work.

Officials of the Mountain Empire Dairyman's Association said they haven't picked a specific site for the 20,000-square-foot plant. And pumping irrigation water uphill is not exactly economical, they said.

Nor were residents of the area receptive to the idea. They simply aren't interested in living across the land zoned for heavy industry, they said. Industrial zoning is forever, the opponents charged.

Despite six hours of testimony and deliberations at a public hearing Monday, the Jerome County Planning and Zoning Commission stopped short of endorsing or reslating a new MEDA zoning proposal for its factory.

Instead, the zoning board decided to take another look next week at the dairy cooperative's sketches indicating how it might develop 1,560 acres of farmland near Interstate 84.

But, although they held off on the zoning, the commission supported an important change that will affect MEDA and may become important to many Jerome county farmers.

In an unexpected turn about proposed by residents, they agreed to impose special use permits on irrigation of land with non-hazardous agricultural by-products. The only exception is the county's preservation zone, an encompassing governmental land where no spraying is allowed.

Previously, the Jerome County zoning code had been silent about the spraying. However, with the MEDA zoning on the horizon, the commissioners had intended to specifically allow it with no restrictions. MEDA plans to dispose of whey, a byproduct of cheesemaking, by mixing it with water and spreading it over land adjacent to its factory.

But area residents, such as William Mason, feared environmental damage and air pollution. They objected to the county government giving up control over where and how much of even non-hazardous wastes are spread. "They may be biodegradable, but if not well-monitored and well-controlled, no longer become safe to our environment," Mason argued.

MEDAs reaction was straightforward: the dairy association will not accept any special use permits restricting its plant operation, said Rex Gerratt of Burley, MEDA vice president, Monday after the hearing. Special use permits make projects difficult or impossible to finance, because permission to operate can be withdrawn, MEDA officials said.

The commission also left unsettled the effects on other fertilizers or non-hazardous applications spread on crops through irrigation lines.

County Zoning Administrator Al Hewerth said Tuesday that the proposed change might be interpreted to include farmers using those techniques.

For more than a year, MEDA has been pursuing zoning to build a large cheese factory at the site, which is about 1 1/2 miles north and 1 mile east of the U.S. 83 intersection with Interstate 84.

The cooperative, based in Thornton, Colo., originally asked to zone all 1,560 acres of land currently owned by three residents, including P&Z Commission member Clair Ricketts, for heavy industry. MEDA officials said it was the only type of zoning that fit the intended factory and disposal by irrigation.

However, nearby residents objected to the use of the land. Once it is zoned for heavy industry—the most permissive zone allowed by the county—MEDA can sell off the land to any type of industry, they have argued.

Mason and other opponents also have contested the change as unplanned "zoning," which is discouraged by zoning laws.

Meanwhile, business boosters in Jerome have backed the project, saying it will add dairy farmers, provide as many as 35 jobs and bring more money to the area economy.

The P&Z Commission last year sent the MEDA proposal to the Jerome County Board.

Monday's hearing restated many of the views heard in the first round of public comment.

Lincoln county residents have new address system

By JANE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — After two contractors and more than two years, Lincoln County has a rural addressing system.

The Postal Service notified rural Lincoln County customers late last month to begin using the new street addresses instead of the traditional rural route box numbers for mail delivery.

Postmaster Robert Lewin said Friday people have been slow to start using the new addresses, but gradually the new numbers are turning up on mail.

"I will take some time," he said, adding his office has not set any deadline for use of the system.

"We are cooperating with the county to help them," he said. "It just makes things easier when people can use the same address for everything."

And he said he is encouraging rural postal customers to put the new numbers on their mail boxes to aid in delivery and help emergency vehicles locate rural residences.

"It is inconvenient to have to change addresses," he told people in a recent mailing. "However, a system such as this can save critical minutes in an emergency."

Lincoln County is one of three area counties selected by Mountain Bell to try rural addressing systems.

The utility pushed for such a system to improve its own service as well as other utility and delivery services and provided some funding for the project.

Five utilities serving the area — Idaho Power Company and Inter-mountain Gas Co. also provided money for the project.

"Improved ability of fire, police and ambulance services to find rural residences is a basic reason the county agreed to go ahead."

Lewin noted the system will also assist voters registering under Idaho's new voter registration law.

In March 1983 the county contracted with Cascade Consultants of Caldwell to draw up the addressing plan.

On Dec. 17, 1985, the county filed suit against the company alleging operator John Pickens "failed, refused and neglected" to perform the service agreed to by contract.

Boy suffocates after two falls

GOODING — A 5-year-old Gooding boy died Monday afternoon of suffocation in a freak accident at the Gooding Elementary School, according to Gooding County Coroner Lowell Demaray.

Garrett G. Czaplinski, the son of Russell and Rose Czaplinski of Gooding, slipped and fell twice when he was running back into his classroom after the school's recess.

After the second fall, the boy began vomiting gastric contents. But instead of coming out the boy's mouth, the contents entered the lungs and caused the boy to gag.

Teachers rushed the boy to the principal's office, and he was taken by ambulance to the Gooding Memorial Hospital. Although doctors worked on the boy for about an hour after his arrival, he was probably dead by the time he reached the hospital, said Demaray.

The fluid which entered the lungs made it impossible for the boy to breathe and pump enough oxygen to the body, causing the boy to die of suffocation, the coroner added.

Fire victim receives trust fund

RUPERT — A trust fund for Maggie Wilcox, a Rupert resident whose mobile home was totally destroyed in a fire Christmas Eve, has been set up at the D.L. Evans Bank in Burley.

Rupert Fire Marshal Thayne Taylor said the fire began in the bathroom and was apparently caused by an electric heater.

Taylor said mobile home tenants should be very cautious in their use of electric heaters and fireplaces. He also urged residents to plan fire escape routes, install smoke detectors and to keep fire extinguishers handy.

Donations may be sent to D.L. Evans Bank, at Maggie Wilcox Trust Fund, P.O. 1188, Burley, ID 83118.

Man charged in sex complaint

TWIN FALLS — Gary L. Graham, an 18-year-old Twin Falls resident, was charged Tuesday in 5th District Court with lewd and lascivious conduct with a minor under 16.

The complaint alleges that on Jan. 1, Graham attempted to have intercourse with a 5-year-old girl, at the home of the girl's grandparents. After the girl's mother filed a complaint against Graham, he was arrested and taken into custody.

Bail was set at $50,000. No trial date has been scheduled yet.

Some tests returned in Slater investigation

JEKOME — Although Jerome City Police officials have received some of the results of tests made on the clothing items of an elderly Jerome man and his wife, the incident is still under full investigation, according to Jerome Police Chief Darryl Cameron.

John G. Slater, 81, and his 68-year-old wife, Pauline, were apparently found in their mobile home last Oct. 11 by their daughter, Susanne Workman. Pauline had been shot in the state of Slater also received a gunshot wound to the back of the head and died en route to the hospital.

Jerome authorities considered the shooting a mercy killing in the form of a murder-suicide.

Officers said they believed Slater fired a fatal shot into the head of his wife, who was suffering from terminal cancer, and then took his own life.

But Jerome County Coroner Gerald Oster and Twin Falls pathologist John Gray cast doubt on the possibility of Slater shooting himself in the back of the head, based on the angle the bullet entered the skull.

As a result, Jerome County Police comments the investigation and conducted a number of tests which they are having analyzed by the U.S. Treasury Department at Treasure Island, Calif.

Cameron was not able to say when the investigation would be completed.

and turn at 3400 North.

The traffic of hundreds of spectators "driving like A.J. Hoyt" would be dangerous for farmers moving machinery on the roads and children who lived nearby, they said.

Supporters of the race track argued that the area was zoned for industrial use and that any industry would generate traffic on many days, not just the 20 Saturday nights that the race track would be open annually.

Neighbors were also concerned about noise from the race track. Even though race cars make less noise than airplanes, the sound would be constant on Saturday nights, they said.

Racers have offered to use mufflers if noise becomes a problem.

The Airport Board has given the state of building a race track preliminary approval. No industries have yet shown an interest in the land, and the airport needs to find new sources of revenue, because the county is withdrawing financial support.

Proper diet meets dogs' food needs

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Most pets are overfed by overzealous owners, says Dr. Tom Willard, a pet food company official, who notes that more is not better — especially in calorie intake. Willard, who has a Ph.D. in animal nutrition and is vice president of technical services for The Iams Co., relates what they like with what they perceive the dog would like. "Dogs are creatures of habit and frequent diet or food changes can cause the dog to become a picky eater," he explains. "This encourages the owner to try different additives or supplements, which further complicates the problem, and soon a vicious cycle is established. Such diet-related problems, imbalance, which can cause health or weight problems, he says. The key to good nutrition and longevity, he adds, is good food with proper balance of all nutrients, fed to meet the animal's needs — not the owner's."

Daughter's admission of affair not help

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow in my mid-50s. I recently became engaged to a fine gentleman I'll call Clyde. He has been an eligible widower for many years. Our wedding plans are made, but something happened a few days ago that makes me wonder if I should go through with this marriage.

My daughter, Lydia, 32 and married, took me aside and told me that she and Clyde had a "little affair" before he met me. (She and Clyde's daughter were college friends.) Lydia said it was nothing serious so I shouldn't even mention it to Clyde. She was so casual about it, I was stunned.

Now I don't know whether to go through with the wedding, discuss it with Clyde, or what.

I love this man and want to marry him, but I don't know if I can keep quiet about this even though it happened before we met. What do you advise?

—HEAVYHEARTED

DEAR HEAVYHEARTED: First tell Lydia that you intend to clear the air and discuss the matter with Clyde because although it meant nothing to her, it weighs heavily on your heart. Then discuss it with Clyde. Since all this occurred before he met you, there is no betrayal involved, so it shouldn't change your feelings about him. I fail to see why Lydia felt compelled to tell you. If she had, it served no good purpose.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "South Carolina Pastor," who "believes in a lot of home visitations" and gets annoyed when people don't turn off their TV sets during his unannounced visits, showed how insensitive some ministers can be. It reminded me of when I was a victim of the same kind of thoughtlessness. I was hospitalized in only fair condition with a doctor ordered "No Visitors" sign on my closed door, when in strolled my minister as if the sign didn't exist. Being in severe discomfort after a grueling morning in X-ray, all I wanted was rest and relief from pain. The minister proceeded to chat for 15 minutes, totally ignoring my obvious suffering. I finally got up the courage to tell him how sick I felt and asked him to please leave, whereupon he went into a long prayer! I could not believe the insensitivity of this man.

What gives men of the cloth the right to ignore the rules of common courtesy by dropping by unannounced and "holding people captive" in their homes or hospital rooms?

DEAR FORMER CHURCHGOER: No one has that right. It's presumptuous enough to drop in unannounced at someone's home, but it's inexcusable to ignore a "No Visitors" sign on a closed door of a hospital room.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem in my bedroom. My wife snores. Sometimes it's so disturbing that she wakes me up and I can't get back to sleep again, so I go downstairs and watch late movies on TV. She went to our family doctor, who told her that nothing could be done for her, but she could buy some earplugs for me. Abby, can something be done for the snorer? Or should I just move into another bedroom? The latter would make her very angry (I'm 67 and she's 65.)

J.K.J.: Your wife should consult an ear, nose and throat specialist. In some cases, a relatively simple surgical procedure will eliminate snoring. Now, isn't that music to your ears?

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for suggesting that there should be a national holiday to honor the native American Indian. I feel that abolishing Columbus Day as a national holiday would be a good first step.

"To honor" a white man for "discovering" land on which people were already living seems ridiculous.

Millionaires are becoming less rare

WASHINGTON (AP) — Being rich is no longer a 1-in-a-million occurrence.

In fact, by the end of this year one American household in 100 will have a net worth of a million dollars or more, according to U.S. News & World Report, a total of a million millionaires.

Citing information from market researchers, the magazine said the route to riches is more likely to be that of an entrepreneur than of a professional. The typical U.S. millionaire is a white male in his early 60s, is still married to his first wife and has a business catering to ordinary needs of his neighbors, it reported.

"The real way people make money is... hard work for 30 years, six days a week," said Thomas Stanley, a Georgia State University marketing professor who has been watching millionaires for more than a decade.

Nor does fortune always go with fame, the report stated. Entertainers, athletes, writers and the like make up less than 1 percent of the millionaire population. Eighty percent of the elite group did not inherit their wealth, but came from middle or working-class backgrounds, it said.

Many millionaires don't see themselves as rich. Most retain their middle-class lifestyles, shunning conspicuous consumption and thinking twice before spending money — including giving to charity, the magazine said.

The highest concentration of millionaires is found in Florida, where 19 out of 1,000 households were in that category. Next are the District of Columbia, with 17 per 1,000, and Connecticut, with 16 per 1,000, the magazine reported.

Most American millionaires don't succeed by being Einstein or Edison but by giving the familiar a new twist, the report says.

Their businesses in which they make their fortunes have none of the glitz and glamour of high-tech and investment banking.

The average annual income of millionaires is $121,000, the magazine said, which the entrepreneur can stretch further by use of perquisites like company-owned cars, expense accounts and pension provisions.

Fashion label popular, profitable

Claiborne unpretentious about success

By NINA HYDE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Is Liz Claiborne for real?

The woman whose name adorns one of the most popular and profitable fashion labels in the country was in Washington recently and said some remarkably unedifying things about herself and her clothes.

"I just listen," she says, "I don't invent anything in fashion. We are not leaders; I make no pretention about that. We are followers."

She's not sure how big her business is. "Maybe $500 million wholesale," she says. "My partners tease me that I have a little trouble with the zeros." In fact, the business is more than $500 million wholesale and generating more than a billion dollars in retail sales.

She shares the company's success record with others: "The business relies totally on the cooperation of four people who are all 'well' experts in their fields."

After listing textiles, production and marketing, the last thing she mentions is her expertise, the designs.

She takes no credit for any of the current designs. She says she "reads" the styles of nine designers creating for all the Liz Claiborne divisions. In fact, she says, she sometimes has trouble selling her own designs to her design team.

Last season, for example, she felt strongly there should be a running grin, the helmet of black hair, the oversized glasses are Claiborne signatures, easily spotted by the enthusiastic crowd at a spanking new downtown department store before a show of her latest designs.

Claiborne is wearing a white silk shirt with epaulets and white tulle jodhpurs, a cut apart from the admiring crowd, many in silk dresses. This is her crowd, though, the women who buy her clothes and for whom they aim to be feminine," says Claiborne. "And she wants help in putting her look together. That's the thing that amazed me the most."

While her dress collection may be one of the fastest growing segments of her business, her label is most popular in sportswear separates.

"It makes good sense," Claiborne says, for both the designer and the customer. A woman can put an outfit together in an individual way not only in terms of the total look but also in terms of how she wears it. Top and a bottom — and some are instance, but the persons you confide in may not forget.

Don't be the life of the office, and go easy on the jokes until you can gauge their effect. Wonten jesters are frequently perceived by their bosses as too unprofessional for promotion.

A Don't tell secrets you don't want known. "It's a good rule of thumb to remember the secret you tell a co-worker is probably going to be shared with at least one other person," said Frederick Grosse, a Phoenix psychotherapist.

That's how yesterday's top secret becomes today's office gossip. Sometimes this is just embarrassing or annoying; at other times, it can cost you promotion or your job.

Why does almost everyone at some time come out with something they could kick themselves later for saying?

"Everyone wants acceptance and attention," Pollack said. "If you tell a joke and everyone laughs, you feel accepted and important. If you get a raise, there's a desire to let the fact be known so that others in the office will know how valuable you are to the corporation."

Sometimes it's better just to mail yourself a letter of appreciation and avoid the possibility of jealousy.

Check out office rules before saying too much

By COSMOPOLITAN

On-the-job socializing can be fun, but it is important to learn the unwritten rules — because talking too much or not enough — with fellow workers can jeopardize success.

Some offices are close-knit, stable, almost family concerns where there's considerable freedom of speech, according to an article in the January issue of Cosmopolitan, while others are shifting, competitive places where it is best to be on guard.

Who you are talking to also matters — a real friend will not betray you, but beware confiding in a casual acquaintance.

You and an office friend share so many of the same frustrations and joys, said Susan R. Pollack, a clinical psychologist and primary therapist for the Employee Assistance Program at the Arizona Bank in Phoenix.

He or she can understand your life at work without long background explanations, and, instead of just sympathizing with you, can really empathize.

With a casual acquaintance, the trick is to be friendly without sharing confidential information, but not to appear cagey to the point of paranoia.

Here are some conversational pitfalls to beware:

When among casual acquaintances, don't volunteer opinions on such potentially explosive life-style issues as sex, religion and politics. A future boss may be in the group and file away in her mind a picture of you that doesn't fit the corporate image.

Don't reveal too much about your weaknesses — they can dilute your professional effectiveness. You may get over jitters about math, for lucky and are vice versa, but you can pick your sizes and lift yourself better without alterations. Nobody wants to bother with that anymore."

Continuing styles in each collection she pegs "everybody's" things that just about everyone can relate to. Then there are variations on the newer styles, introduced simply, in a few colors, that might women-to-own.

But the "everybodies" far outsell the others. She listens to what store buyers say their customers want and keeps 12 women traveling to speak to customers directly. And she watches closely what other designers are doing — particularly those in Paris — to sense and generally re-interpret the avant-garde trends.

She's a bit nervous about the current pet trend of big Paris designers like Azzelina Alaia and Thierry Mugler that includes super-skinny, short skirts. "We're certainly not going to do an Azzelina or Mugler jersey dress that shows off every curve," says Claiborne, but concedes, "You can get the same message across that clothes are getting closer to the body in other ways." Like the Donga — Karen body suit that Claiborne says she has tried on herself: "It is cut beautifully and doesn't reveal all that much."

She's pleased that the working woman is making more adventurous choices. "I'm amazed that in the last year women are getting less conservative. It's fabulous. Even in Washington." Sales, she says, show women venturing away from the expected navy blue or gray flannel suits and even wearing dresses to work.

She's also seen a trend toward more self-confidence, and they don't mind looking like women. Five years ago, you know what they wanted to look like. They walked into a board room and wanted to fade into whatever else was sitting around."

Now, because of their success in business, they are willing to look more feminine.

Guardsmen leave flood duties

ONTARIO (AP) — Most of the 35 Oregon National Guard members pressed into service to fight flooding on the Snake River have gone off duty, as the ice-choked river continues to recede.

Capt. Theo Moore of the Oregon Guard said Tuesday only a handful of Guardsmen remained on duty, on cleanup work.

But about a dozen families, forced from their homes by flooding last week, still have not returned home. Moore said some of the people stored personal possessions at the local armory, but most have been staying at relatives' homes.

Shirley Ocamicha, 31, said she and her husband planned an effort to return to their home Tuesday. If they can find someone to bulldoze ice away from the house.

Woman sues over treatment

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A battered woman who killed her boyfriend has sued her former psychiatrist, alleging he had a sexual relationship with her that heightened her emotional problems before the slaying.

The 1st District Court lawsuit by Joanne Regan requests at least $50,000 in damages from Dr. Gerald P. Johnston and Pine Crest Hospital in Coeur d'Alene.

Ms. Regan, who now lives in Connecticut, received a 10-year suspended sentence in December 1984 for involuntary manslaughter in the death of Ronald Gismondri of Post Falls.

The lawsuit alleges ethical and professional standards were violated when Johnston treated Ms. Regan.

"I was contending he had a sexual relationship with her which interfered with his professional relationship with her," said Ms. Regan's attorney, Kenneth Howard.

Leonard to leave school post

SANDPOINT (AP) — Robert Leonard, Bonner County School District superintendent for about six years, has announced he will retire at the end of this school year.

Leonard's advance notice gives the school board about six months to find a successor.

Leonard, 59, came to the district in 1980 from the Post Falls district, where he was also superintendent.

Prather to retire from bench

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Judge Walt Prather, who has served on the 1st District Court bench for more than two decades, announced Monday that he won't seek re-election this year.

"At the end of my present term, I will have served 21 years as District Judge. That is enough," Prather said in a prepared statement.

"It has been a tremendous and rewarding experience to serve as a judge, but it is now time to seek new challenges."

Prather, 60, who once compared his caseload to "winning upstream in the Mississippi River," is one of four 1st District Court judges. He is serving his fifth term.

Inmate freed from jail early

BOISE (AP) — A potential space crunch at the Bonner County Jail led to the early release of a 19-year-old man who had served 10 months of a one-year sentence for involuntary manslaughter.

First District Judge Dar Cogswell ordered the release of Charles Fine, who was jailed for the death of Mark Godwin in a traffic accident north of here.

In releasing Fine on Monday, Cogswell noted that the prisoner's 10-month term was "very difficult jail time."

Cogswell said many Northern Idaho jails are full. They filled late last month when the state Corrections Department announced that the state penitentiary at Boise was at its 1,300-inmate limit.

Bonner County Sheriff Don Nelson said no county prisoners are headed for the state prison, Nelson said, however, he still plans to bill the state if the county has to hold a state prisoner.

Forest firm cuts pay, benefits

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Idaho Forest Industries has cut wages and benefits by $1.60 an hour for 160 workers at its two non-union sawmills here, the company said.

Tom Richards, IFI president, said the reductions were necessary for the mills to stay competitive in a market of low lumber prices. He said the cuts were less than others have made in the industry.

The reductions, which were effective Jan. 1, will be indefinite, he said.

IFI also owns and operates sawmills at Medford, Ore., and St. Anthony, Idaho.

Richards said reductions were instituted in Medford last year and negotiations are under way with a labor union to make similar cuts at St. Anthony.

Abducted girl found in Idaho Falls

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A Idaho Falls Police Department officer identified a girl who had been abducted from Lakewood, Colo., as the subject of a two-year-long nationwide search.

The girl was found in apparently good condition. Campbell said she was taken to Harbor House in Idaho Falls until her mother, Laura Bales, picked her up Tuesday morning.

After having her photograph appear on television, milk cartons and other locations used to highlight the shelter for children.

Her father, Gregory E. Fisher, 29, was arrested Monday afternoon at his residence in Idaho Falls on a warrant from Lakewood, Colo.

PUC asks for phone bill cuts

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission wants Mountain Bell to cut $1 off the monthly bills of customers who do not make long-distance telephone calls that month.

But the telephone company says that would cut its revenues by $1,014,996 per year. Monthly bills for all customers would have to be boosted by 25 cents per month, credit set, said Jim Wozniak, Idaho district manager for regulatory affairs, in pre-filled testimony.

The PUC on Tuesday opened another round of hearings over its orders last year on Mountain Bell billing procedures.

Wozniak testified that the procedures ordered by the PUC would discourage customers from making long-distance calls, which would hurt long-distance service and increase local rates.

He said customers will be encouraged to use long-distance carriers other than Mountain Bell or AT&T because the company cannot track certain long-distance calls made by alternate long-distance carriers.

Wozniak said a survey indicates 95 percent of its customers do not make long-distance calls during a particular month.

Gary Dempsey, district manager for customer records information systems, said potentially, some long-distance calls might not be identified by the company's billing systems. He listed calls originating in Idaho to 60 numbers, calls billed to a toll-only calling card, and calls transported by other common carriers for which Mountain Bell does not bill.

Because some long-distance calls are difficult to identify, customers might get the $1 per month credit for not making a long-distance call when actually they made calls, he said in his pre-filled testimony.

Bad wiring started fire

BOISE (AP) — A fire that destroyed Idaho's largest bowling alley on New Year's Day was caused by an electrical wiring malfunction, Boise Fire Marshal Dean Goodner said.

Goodner also said Monday that investigators would not be able to determine the cause of a fire that destroyed Viet's Cafe and another downtown business Dec. 10.

The general alarm blaze at Westgate Lanes did about $1 million damage to the building and $1.5 million damage to its contents, Goodner said.

Investigators traced the origin of the fire to the southeast portion of the bowling alley's attic. Goodner estimated the fire burned for half an hour in that portion of the building before it was reported.

"Something in the electrical wiring malfunctioned, but we don't know what," he said.

Official denies MIA coverup

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — U.S. Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Armitage on Tuesday denied allegations the U.S. government has covered up reports that Americans are still being held prisoner in Indochina.

He told a news conference such allegations harm official efforts to resolve the fates of about 1,800 Americans still listed as missing in action in the Vietnam War.

Armitage headed a high-level delegation in Hanoi that concluded Tuesday with Vietnamese officials on the American MIAs, the American delegation stopped in Bangkok on its way back to the United States.

U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war ended in 1973. Two years later, communist forces overran the south.

Armitage, who met Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach during two days of discussions in Hanoi, said that reports by some private Americans of live American prisoners were suspicious and that the motives for issuing such reports were questionable.

"Overall, the allegations harm our ability to prosecute this issue to the fullest possible extent," Armitage said.

Armitage said Vietnamese authorities agreed to investigate the question of American prisoners. He said so far the U.S. government has no proof there is any truth to reports of American prisoners being sighted alive.

Communist Vietnam on Tuesday announced it had gathered 50 new reports on American MIAs and hoped to resolve the problem before the end of 1987.

Armitage said U.S. and Vietnamese officials will discuss the technical aspects of the 50 new reports in Hanoi next month.

The U.S. official said Vietnam denied that its authorities held live Americans.

However, Ann Mills-Griffiths, executive director of the National League of POW-MIA Families, who accompanied the U.S. mission to Hanoi, told the same news conference in Bangkok that information received by her organization indicated some Americans were being held alive in Vietnam and Laos.

"The highest-level U.S. government delegation to Vietnam since the war ended included Assistant Secretary of State Paul Wolfowitz and National Security Council staff member Richard Childress.

Six Americans, some of whom said they personally saw American prisoners of war as recently as four months ago in Vietnam and Laos, on Monday accused the U.S. administration of quashing witness accounts.

They filed an affidavit in the U.S. District Court in Fayetteville, N.C.

"I can question their motives, their analysis and their conclusion," Armitage said, adding that the administration has made it a priority to resolve the MIAs issue.

"We have people who work with this issue day in and day out. The people who themselves were the prisoners of war," Armitage said. "I find it absolutely unbelievable that those should be accused of not having the highest possible regard for their comrades."

Armitage said the talks in Hanoi were limited to humanitarian issues, and that he also discussed the issue of Vietnamese inmates of "re-education" camps.

"We indicated that the door still open to receive (Vietnamese political prisoners), and the Vietnamese said their door is not completely closed to sending out the prisoners," Armitage said.

Armitage said he has discussed details of a draft plan to resolve MIA cases in the next two years, as promised by Vietnam. He said efforts may continue if the task was not completed by then.

Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son led the Vietnamese side in the MIA discussions.

Armitage said Vietnam's draft plan to resolve the problem was ambitious and encouraging, particularly after a Hanoi campaign for cooperation from the Vietnamese people.

Tunisia leader abolishes son's office

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Tunisian President Habib Bourguiba on Tuesday abolished a government post held by his only son since 1977.

Minister Mohammed Mzall said Tuesday.

Mzall did not say why the post of special-counselor to the president held by Habib Bourguiba Jr., was abolished or whether the president's son would retain his status as government minister.

Mzall's statement was carried by the official TAP news agency.

The younger Bourguiba, who is 58, heads the Bank for Economic Development of Tunisia.

S. Africa blocks visit with Mandela

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government Tuesday refused to let a six-member U.S. congressional delegation see jailed guerrilla leader Nelson Mandela, saying simply "the visit will not take place."

The delegates, including four blacks, later had an unexpectedly long three-hour meeting with Foreign Minister R.F. Botha and said they did not regard the Mandela visit refusal as final.

The decision was announced by the Prisons Department.

"We still haven't had the final answer from the president," said Rep. William Gray, a Philadelphia Democrat and a black. The group is to meet President P.W. Botha today at his home in the coastal resort of George.

Foreign Minister Botha said after meeting the Americans, "I trust this will contribute to a greater understanding between South Africa and the U.S. Congress."

Botha has no relation to the president, is a former ambassador to Washington who for nearly two decades has contended with many international critics of apartheid, South Africa's system of legal racial segregation.

Gray was equally guarded on the first full day of a four-day trip. "The dialogue was very useful... We shared with the minister the view of the U.S. Congress and, we believe, the views of the American people."

Others in the delegation are Walter E. Fauntroy, a black Democrat who is the District of Columbia's non-voting delegate to the House of Representatives from the District of Reps. Charles Hayes of Chicago, a black; Edolphus Towns of New York City's Brooklyn borough, a black; Peter Kostmayer of Pennsylvania; and Lynn Martin of Illinois.

Albani Martin is a Democrat.

Mandela, widely regarded as the foremost leader among South Africa's 24 million blacks, has been in jail since 1964 for plotting, sabotaging and heading the African National Congress guerrilla organization.

New deadline for chess title match

GENEVA (AP) — Because of a misunderstanding of the rules, world chess champion Garry Kasparov has another three weeks to decide whether he will play a rematch with Anatoly Karpov, an International Chess Federation official said Tuesday.

Lim Kok An, secretary general of the federation, announced earlier that Kasparov had until Monday to agree to the rematch or forfeit his title to Karpov.

But on Tuesday, Lim told The Associated Press "we must have been counting from the wrong dates." He said the rules show that Kasparov must formally accept the rematch by Jan. 27 or lose his title.

And fibers pace '80s diets

If you find yourself reaching for a bran muffin from the coffee cart and ordering a crisp green salad for lunch, you're just one of millions of Americans who have taken the U.S. Dietary Guidelines to heart.

How are we changing our diets? We're eating more fiber, and for the most part, we're eating the Basic Four but limiting those which are high in fat, cholesterol, sodium and sugar. We're also beginning to eat more fruits, vegetables and grains—and, as a result, more dietary fiber.

Fiber was once a far more common part of the American diet. But over the years, more refined foods, fats and sugars have replaced the high-fiber foods our grandparents enjoyed. Although we can live without any fiber, diets lacking in fiber have been linked to a number of diseases, including America's major killers—heart disease, stroke and some forms of cancer.

Each type of fiber has specific health benefits. Water insoluble fibers such as those found in wheat bran aid digestion and laxation. Water soluble fibers, plentiful in oats and dried beans, have been shown to reduce cholesterol levels when incorporated into a low-fat diet, thereby reducing the risk of heart attacks. This type of diet may also help stabilize blood sugar levels for some types of diabetics.

Breads made with whole grain oats are one of the tastiest ways to add more fiber to your diet. Scottish Oat-Scotchman European Toasts make a quick and delicious American breakfast bread. Skim milk and vegetable oil margarine keep fat and cholesterol levels in check while raisins add extra fiber and natural sweetness.

Treat the family to extra slices of Swirled English Muffin Bread at breakfast or snack time. The golden loaves, lightly swirled with cinnamon, have their heartiest flavor and moist texture to oats. Preparation is streamlined for busy bakers. Only one bowl is needed for mixing, and just one rising is required.

When ground into flour, oats can thicken sauces, soups, puddings and steams and become a tasty coating for poultry, fish and vegetables. Nutrition-conscious cooks substitute this hearty whole grain flour for up to one-third of the all-purpose flour called for in favorite cake, cookie and bread recipes.

Ground oat flour, quickly made in the blender or food processor, enhances the nutritional value of Flaky-Oat-Biscuits-Merry-Time Muffins, developed by the home economists in The Quaker Kitchens. Molasses adds a rich taste and deep color, or try honey for a lighter appearance and milder flavor.

Chilled Apricot Oat Breakfast gives cereal-lovers a nutty, fruity, high-fiber change of pace. This wholesome mixture of oats, dried apricots and nuts, lightly sweetened with orange juice and honey, is assembled ahead, and refrigerated overnight. You can wake up to a breakfast that's ready to eat.

Grease two 8x4-inch loaf pans. Sprinkle sides and bottom of each pan with about 1 teaspoon corn meal. Combine 1 tablespoon sugar and cinnamon; set aside. Chinese breed slim, but delicious ducks

PEKING (AP) — Nutritionists have discovered a way of raising a leaner Peking duck, the fatty white-skinned bird favored by the thousands of tourists as the best of northern Chinese cuisine, the official China Daily reported Tuesday. The newspaper said a new method has been introduced to raise the bird breaststuffed with more lean meat, eliminating the traditional thick layer of fat.

It would make the bird more suitable for those special diets such as crispy duck and soy sauce duck. In addition to the complicated Peking roast, "We have given up the traditional force-feeding," said Bao Erjing, a 38-year-old researcher at the Peking Nutrition Research Institute. "They have 15 percent more lean meat than force-fed ducks," he said. Birds raised under the expertly mented method eat at will in wire cages, where the animals are kept away from disease and injury, and grow fatter, heavier and fatter, the report said.

Peking duck is served at specialty restaurants around the Chinese capital, some of them seating 2,500 at a time.

Popularized in the 15th century, the method of preparation is unique. Ducks are coated with molasses, pumped with air and hung to dry. They are then filled with water and roasted over a wood fire. When finished, there is a layer of white fat under the crispy skin.

Cooking for 2 sets of kids

Age spread makes life, dinnertime interesting for family of six

By JOAN BEAN Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — In the home of Kimberly 11th School teacher Karla Sullivan, two-plus definitely equals four. She and her husband, Bob, are raising what amounts to two families of children.

Joe and Marney are 15 and 13, while Mike and Rilely are 5 and 3. "There's really an age spread here," she says, "but it makes for a real interesting home life."

"We've got Joe and Marney doing all their junior high sports; and all their activities, and I'm chauffering them around... and then we've got these two little kids that we've got to go back and see all the old shows with, and have to go through all the little kid stuff all over again with them."

She says she thinks she is raising two generations of children, not just one. And, the combination makes her home life lively.

"Whether we've got rock and roll going, or whether we've got Dr. Seuss going, it all just blends right in, and it's fun," she says.

On weekdays, the whole family arrives home from work, school and preschool at about the same time, ready for dinner. So, while the younger children watch "Thundercat," Joe and Marney help with meal preparation.

She says they can cook and sometimes make pizza or lasas. Otherwise, "everybody sort of chips in," helping to set the table or make a salad.

Bob washes the dishes and cleans up the kitchen. He also does all the laundry. "He is a big help," she says.

Meals taking more than a half hour to 45 minutes to prepare are too long, Sullivan says. Parking Mike and Rilely in front of the TV, she gives them a nutritious snack of fruit or nuts.

"And then I race out to the kitchen and try to get a good meal together in a short amount of time," she says.

Crab enchiladas is one of the delicious, quick-to-fix dishes she likes to prepare.

CRAB ENCHILADAS

- 1 dozen flour tortillas
 - 1 cup whipping cream
 - 1 cup sliced green onions
 - 1 pound crab meat
 - 1 large can of diced green chilies
 - 1/2 cup Monterey cheese
- One approximately 10 1/2-ounce can enchilada sauce

1 cup shredded Monterey Jack or Cheddar cheese. Soak them in the whipping cream for five minutes, so they are soft and somewhat creamy. Meanwhile, saute onions in 1 tablespoon oil—Stir in the tortillas—Roll them up, and place on a baking dish. Pour the rest of the whipped cream over the top. Bake covered with foil 15 minutes at 350 degrees. Remove foil and spread Monterey Jack over top. Bake five more minutes. Heat can of enchilada sauce and pour over top before serving.

Sullivan often makes a large batch of crab enchiladas, so that part of it may be frozen. Then a week or two later, she can put together a quick meal.

She frequently makes clam chowder, and because she feels she has a lot of time to spend on it, she says. See SULLIVAN on Page C2.

Rules for January dieting: Be realistic and kind to yourself

Okay, all you Magic Valley cooks that just happen to be of the male gender, you can come out of the closet. I saw it in Harry (also known as Old Eastwood) pushing a grocery cart in Altkinson's market.

I don't know if he really cooks, but that sighting really made my day!

After spending ten of the Twelve Days of Christmas, in Northern Magic Valley (Blaine County) entertaining bunches for brunches and dozens for dinner, I've got a good case of the post-holiday cook burnout.

I've shared some fantastic meals and I loved every minute of it, yet now I cannot think of anything I'm really anxious to try to cook or eat. But don't worry, I'll force myself just for you!

I know June is Dairy Month and February is Potato Lovers Month, but I think January must be something like Diet Lovers Month.

As a diet expert—that means I've tried them all—I've been doing a lot of reading on the subject the last couple of months. I have found there is a lot of changes in what you previously considered to be the only way to lose weight.

Nancy Joy Jones

to those in the know, is to begin an exercise program at the same time you start a diet regime. That can be a problem with the weather we've had for the last two months, but here are a few ideas to help you keep going.

Make your exercise time interesting. Vary it and try a few different things to find out what is right for you. Most exercise classes will let you come once or twice for a nominal fee so you can see if it's right for you.

Last winter I chose to ride an exercise bicycle. That can really be dull, but here are some of the things I did to jazz up those hours spent riding nowhere.

First, I put the bicycle in front of a window where I could watch the traffic of squirrels and birds in our backyard.

Next, I put a book shelf right in front of the machine where I put books, pulp articles and stories torn out of magazines, that I wanted to read. The shelf also contained a cassette player with earphones and favorite tapes (I tried some of the new story and self-help ones), a sweep second hand watch for getting an accurate pulse, the telephone (so I didn't have to stop to answer it) and a stack of old magazines I could clip. I could even give myself a manicure!

When spring arrived, I really missed that hole. I've saved lots of magazines and such for this winter.

Another thing you might do is a "truth time." Write down all the possible things you could do to diet everything from hints like getting rid of all your favorite mementos to joining an organized diet program.

Did this one. On the original list there must have been 160 different items. These were things I'd heard or read. Then I sat down with that list and asked myself if I would or could (not should) really do each of those ideas.

I ended up with only 12 or 15 ideas that I knew I would do and then formulated my own regime. I lost about 50 pounds and kept it off for over five years.

You can do the same thing. I don't think anything will work unless you really know yourself and how you'll react, so take the time to think it through.

One of the biggest changes in diets has been the inclusion of more complex carbohydrates. That's good news as potatoes are now one of the top diet foods.

If you have friends or acquaintances that have lost quite a bit of weight, don't necessarily jump in and follow whatever they are doing. If they lost that weight over two years ago and have kept it off, then it's worth investigating for yourself.

Go to the library or your favorite bookstore and browse. You'll find hundreds of programs and ideas. Just give yourself enough time and be kind to yourself. Too harsh of a regime is almost always self-defeating.

However, it does help to be very specific on your goal. Write it out and give yourself a deadline. Again, be sensible.

Next week, I'm going to give you some very specific ideas and a few recipes. This week you can get your psyche ready for some weight loss.

Enjoy!

Washington spuds hailed as fry fixins'

By TOM HOGE
The Associated Press

There are about 160 varieties of potatoes grown in the United States, and the biggest producer, I was surprised to learn, is California, not Idaho.

Despite the broad variety of spuds, your greengrocer will probably have only three or four types.

Also of interest is the fact that some potato fanciers consider the russet potato that is grown in Washington state the best choice for baking and french fries.

The high quality of these spuds is due in part to Washington's rich volcanic soil. It's also because these spuds contain less water than some other varieties.

Potatoes with lower solid content tend to break down the body of the frying oil more quickly because of the quantity of moisture. This often produces french fries with soggy interiors.

French fries made with potatoes of high solid content stay crisp longer and have a fluffier interior.

These russets are also good bakers, since there is less moisture to be removed.

Washington farmers have spent considerable time and money on the spud since their State Potato Commission was formed in 1955, having spent more than $18 million at last report.

Here is a recipe from Washington for scalloped potatoes:

- 1/2 cup finely chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup russets, pared and sliced thin
- 3 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided

Combine onion, flour, salt and pepper. Place one third of the potatoes in a greased, 2-quart baking dish. Sprinkle with half the flour mixture. Dot with 1 tablespoon butter. Repeat with another third of the potatoes and final half of flour mixture and 1 tablespoon butter. Top with remaining third of potatoes and 1 tablespoon butter. Pour milk over to barely cover potatoes. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake, covered, at 325 degrees for 45 minutes. Uncover dish and bake 30 minutes longer or until potatoes are tender. Serves 6 to 8.

Apples provide festive fruit fancier desserts

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
The Associated Press

DEAR CECILY: I like to have fruit desserts for company and have used many recipes for compotes. Now I want to serve baked apples in an attractive way. Have you a recipe for this purpose that is appropriate? FRUIT FANCIER

DEAR FRUIT FANCIER: A festive and delicious way to offer apples is to stuff them. Bake them with maple syrup and serve them with a custard sauce. A friend of mine often does this and here is her good recipe. C.B.

MAPLE BAKED APPLES WITH CUSTARD SAUCE

- Custard Sauce, see recipe
- 4 baking apples
- 1 cup chopped pecans
- 1 cup raisins
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 cup maple syrup
- Prepare Custard Sauce

Core apples, starting from stem end, leaving bottoms intact. Peel and core from the stem end two-thirds of the way down. Arrange apples in a shallow baking pan into which they fit slightly apart. Stir together pecans, raisins and cinnamon; spoon into core cavities of apples. Pour maple syrup over apples.

Bake in preheated 350-degree oven, basting occasionally with the syrup, until tender, about 45 minutes. Serve with the Custard Sauce. Makes 4 servings.

CUSTARD SAUCE

In the top of a double-boiler whisk together 2 egg yolks and 3 tablespoons sugar. Over hot (not boiling) water gradually whisk in 1 cup scalded milk. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and coats the back of a metal spoon. Remove from heat and whisk in 1/2 teaspoon grated lemon rind and 1/2 teaspoon vanilla. Cool, stirring often.

National potato promotions panel fights chips' bad press

DENVER (AP) — The National Potato Promotion Board is making "real progress" in changing the junk food image of the potato chip, according to the board's monthly newsletter. "Spotlight On Potatoes."

The Denver-based industry council said it is running a promotional program aimed at pointing out the nutritional value of potato chips with ads in such national magazines as American Family Physician, Pediatrics, Journal of the American Dietetic Association and School Foodservice Journal.

Those specific publications were chosen because they are read by our target audience, i.e., opinion leaders who influence the eating decisions of others," the newsletter said.

The board also is spreading the word about potato chips through the film "Nibbling Away at Nutrition Myths," depicting the wholesome manner in which chips are prepared and how little oil and salt are actually involved, according to the newsletter.

The film has been viewed by more than 250,000 people since 1984 and "fact sheets" including detailed information on the potato chip's nutritional value, have been distributed in the media. The board said.

serves four, doubles the ingredients.

CLAM CHOWDER

Fry two slices of diced bacon. In the bacon grease, saute medium onion, chopped; 1 cup carrot pieces; 1 cup potato pieces; 1 cup water; 1/2 teaspoon salt; dash pepper; and about 2 small cans minced clams. To that add 2 cups milk and half. If desired, chowder may be thickened with a little cornstarch and cold water.

Sullivan often makes chicken divan for her family, and says it is so tasty, there is never a drop left over.

CHICKEN DIVAN

- 2 packages frozen broccoli spears
- 2 cups sliced, cooked chicken
- 2 cans cream of chicken soup
- 1 cup mayonnaise
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 1/2 cup shredded sharp cheese
- 1/2 cup soft bread crumbs

"One of the main things is that you have to have your things in the house — otherwise, it will mess up the whole schedule," she says.

"You can't run out of anything, and so my advice is to keep lots of staples on hand, just so there's always something creative to fix. In addition to the basics, I always have a big five-pound box of frozen fruit bites and things like that on hand, so you know in a minute you can fix something good. I hate to go to the store at 4:30 p.m."

'High Altitude' seeds look good in the dead of winter

I begin dreaming about spring right after Christmas. The seed companies must know my habits, because just after Christmas the catalogs begin arriving in the mail.

In fact, this year I received a few even before Christmas. I can't forget all about the snow and cold outside as I savor all the new varieties that I will plant in the spring.

Seed catalogs are getting better every year. I read to their descriptions were so flowery and exaggerated that you couldn't really believe what they said. Lately the trend has been to more factual information, such as how and when to plant. Notes on which varieties are adapted to particular growing conditions are becoming more common. Some catalogs are even providing recipes among the descriptions, so we will know how to make good use of our harvest.

To make my list of favorites, a catalog must have varieties well adapted to the intermountain area and useful information such as mentioned above. Like companies which actually test the varieties themselves before offering them. Since I like to try new varieties, catalogs with a lot of new things will get my attention.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening.

My favorite vegetable seed catalogs are Johnny's Selected Seeds in Abilene, Mo.; Twilley Seeds in Treviso, Pa.; Stokes Seeds in Buffalo, N.Y.; Vesey's Seeds in Prince Edward Island, Canada; and Burpee Seeds in Warminster, Pa. In addition to these, I discovered a new catalog, called High Altitude Gardens in Ketchum, Idaho, last spring.

All of these companies have their own trial gardens, and I have tested many of their varieties myself and found some very well adapted ones. All of them have a good selection of the newest varieties including hybrids, except High Altitude Gardens. They take more of an organic approach to gardening and specialize in non-hybrid varieties.

For flower seeds, my favorite catalogs are Stokes, Burpee, Park Seed in Greenwood, S.C., and Harris Seeds in Rochester, N.Y. High Altitude Gardens has a wide selection of wildflower seeds for the intermountain area. Two other good wildflower sources are Clyde Riblin Seed Co., Castro Valley, Calif., and Applewood Seed Co. in Arvada, Colo.

I have a list with addresses of these and other favorite catalogs which can be ordered free. If you would like a copy, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Allen Wilson, P.O. Box 50, Rexburg, Idaho 83440.

Although I order a number of new varieties each year from catalogs, I find local nurseries and garden stores to be the most economical source for standard, proven varieties. If you have a large garden, their bulk seeds are less expensive than either catalogs or color packets.

City, community gardening is bringing in valuable crops

By EARL ARONSON
The Associated Press

More than one million American households grew food in community gardens in the past year, largely in urban settings.

The National Gardening Association based in Burlington, Vt., reported that 71 percent of the nation's community gardens were in urban areas, 17 percent in suburban communities and 12 percent, or about one in 10, in rural areas.

The survey indicated that one out of two community garden plots (44 percent) yielded more than $300 or less; one out of four (25 percent) had a yield worth $101-$250; 23 percent yielded $251-$500 or more; and 7 percent more than $500 worth.

The typical community garden program produced fruits and vegetables worth an estimated $5,000, while operating costs were $900 or less, a 10 to 1 return.

Motivation for community gardens, according to Earl Sommers of the nonprofit association, was: first, better tasting, more nutritious food; second, to save money; third, exercise; fourth, therapy; fifth, to reduce stress; sixth, social interaction; and, tied for seventh, neighborhood improvement and family activity.

The report showed that 90 percent of community gardeners and their families eat the produce they raise, 55 percent share with others and 20 percent sell some.

California leads the states with most community garden sites, followed by New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, New Jersey, Illinois, Wisconsin and Massachusetts.

About one out of every three programs surveyed offer only community garden plots to the public. Two out of three offer programs for specific groups, such as youth, senior citizens, multiple activities, beautification, horticultural therapy, and employee gardening.

Sommers defines a community garden as a place set aside on which to garden for families, individuals and neighborhood groups who do not have access to suitable available garden land of their own.

Sommers said "an estimated 12 million American households or one out of four non-gardening households would be interested in an organized community garden."

The September issue of the member-supported association's "National Gardening" magazine, formerly "Gardens for All," appeared in an attractive new format, simpler in size and easier to read.

Speed Composting

You can make a small amount of compost in a relatively short time. Crumble a bushel of leaves into a clear plastic bag, add two gallons of water and about five pounds of high nitrogen commercial fertilizer such as 20-10-5. Put the bag in a sunny spot and turn it over every other day for 3-4 weeks. By then you should have good quality compost that you can store until ready for use.

Another method is to sprinkle your compost pile with an activator or high-nitrogen fertilizer. Turn the pile occasionally to open it to air and moisture. Leave a depression in the center to catch rain.

Easy Sweep

You can use your lawn mower as a sidewalk or driveway sweeper by blowing clippings back on the turf area. Or you can avoid the need to sweep by facing your mower properly away from walkways.

Allure of sunflowers attracts alley-walkers and country drivers

By HENRY MITCHELL
The Washington Post

One of the innumerable advantages of having dogs is that you see a lot of things going on in the alley that you'd otherwise miss, such as songbirds and sunflowers we always admire when walking the mutts.

These are the great Russian sunflowers with seed heads the size of dinner plates born on a nodding stem. As they ripen (and long before they get hard) the birds assemble and start digging seeds out, but toward the last, when the seed head has bent parallel to the ground, only the smallest and most agile birds can manage.

Although called "Russian," this sunflower comes, like the others, from America, and is simply the result of continued selection for large seed heads, and it is grown for the valuable oil it contains.

When I was a kid I sometimes went down to a railroad switching yard which boasted great stands of sunflowers, and plenty of June bugs. Ever since, I think of our delectable summers as full of sunflowers against a milk-white sky shimmering in the almost visible heat.

Of course you can get sunflowers of different sizes. Some are perennial, but the ones I like are annuals. Some are not taller than waist-high, and some are double like football chrysanthemums, and you can get them in reddish magenta as well as blue or the tints of yellow.

To my mind, however, nothing equals the big old sunflowers, and if I lived on a farm or had a big garden I'd grow them every year, hoping to achieve a bigger and more colorful display elsewhere in the world. As it is, I rarely grow any at all, though it hurts me to pull up the young plants springing up from seeds the birds have dropped.

The National Garden Bureau recently sent along a leaflet extolling the beauty of the sunflower, which is what has resolved me to plant a few this spring, since there will be plenty springing up from the bird-feeder. The oldest remains of sunflowers, the bureau informs me, are to be found in certain archeological sites of SW Asia.

The center of wild-sunflowers is said to be our western-plains country, but the first breeders of sunflowers seem to have been the Indians of the Ozark bluff country, and of course sunflowers were grown immemorably in the Mississippi-Missouri valley lands.

Seeds were lightly roasted, ground and made into bread. The Zunis devised a rattlesnake-bite cure from the sunflower, and the Dakotas made an infusion of the seeds to relieve chest pains.

The first great portrait of the sunflower was that of the Belgian naturalist, Lambert Dodoens, and by 1616 the flower was common in England. John Evelyn invented a recipe for macaroons out of sunflower flour but added in a really excellent bit of advertising, "I like the flower very much, and by the way, it is as agreeable as almonds and is very good for chickens."

The Orthodox Church in Russia prescribed the use of many delicious foods during Lent, but sunflower seeds were off limits, so this was a grand source of oil in the diet without breaking any religious strictures.

National Soup Month provides warm offers

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Did you know that this is National Soup Month? With chilly winds sweeping most of the nation, joining in the celebration sounds like a good idea, and National Soup Month includes a variety of consumer offers that should warm you up — with both soup and savings.

Over the next few weeks, Campbell's Soupmobiles will be giving out free soup to those braving the cold in Atlanta, Denver, Fort Worth, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Portland and Seattle.

"It's a souper celebration for consumers," says H. Pierce Pelouze III, a Campbell's vice president of promotion. Campbell's Soupmobiles and other national brands will together offer a million-dollar giveaway billed as the "National Soup Millionaire Sweepstakes," and we predict it will be a great "trend."

The top prize in the sweepstakes is $1 million, and there are 100,000 other prizes worth more than half a million dollars.

Coupon clippers can start warming themselves to the task of saving money with $1.65 worth of coupons appearing in the National Soup Month free-standing coupon-inserts being distributed in many newspapers.

Included in the coupons are 15 cents off the new Creamy Natural Soups; 10 cents off Campbell's Condensed Soups (red and white label); and 15 cents off another new Campbell's product, the dry soup mix.

There are also coupons from several other manufacturers, such as 20 cents off Sunshine KRISPY Crackers.

"They go well with the soups," said Mr. Pelouze. "And we have a 20-cent coupon for Reynolds Plus Wrap because a lot of it is now being used in microwave ovens by people warming up their soup."

The coupons have the added feature of giving users automatic entry into the Millionaire Sweepstakes. Just write your name nd address in the space provided. But to be included in the sweepstakes, coupons must be redeemed by Jan. 31, 1986.

Do promotions really produce tangible results for the companies that offer them? The people at the Gannett Co., publishers of USA Today, swear that they do. Gannett recently completed a subscription tie-in promotion with General Mills.

The promotion offered free six-month subscriptions to people who purchased eight General Mills products — including cereals such as Cheerios and cake-frosting mixes — and qualified in a coupon with proof of purchase.

Lee Guillar, president of USA Today, says there will be a delay in fulfilling some subscriptions since the response by consumers was far greater than expected. The promotion brought in 450,000 new subscriptions to USA Today and has shown that cereal promotion offers don't have to be limited to stuffed animals and toys.

New cookbook suggests savory soups

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
The Associated Press

One of the most delicious and useful soup recipes we come up with is included in the recently published "From Nika Hazelton's Kitchen," by Nika Hazelton (Viking).

But that's not what one expects to find in one of Nika's cookbooks. She has written almost two dozen of them — spanning half a dozen countries and a variety of subjects — and each reflects her vast knowledge of food and her years of experience in preparing it. She is a great "trend" because she is both enormously literate and amusing.

Her new book, as she says, is a collection of favorite recipes she has cooked over the years because the people she cooks them for, and she herself, like them. Chapters cover Hors d'Oeuvres; Appetizers and Salads; Soups; Eggs, Cheese and Cereals; Fish; Chicken; A Few Other Birds; and One Rabbit. Recipes: Meats; Curries; Vegetables; Sauces and Relishes; Desserts.

SWISS LEEK AND RICE SOUP

6 cups beef bouillon (can be made from cubes)
1 1/2 cup long-grain white rice
4 medium leeks, white and a little of the green parts, thinly sliced
1 1/2 cups grated Swiss cheese
1 cup dry white wine
Extra beef bouillon and white wine

Salt
Freshly ground pepper

Bring the bouillon to a boil. Add the rice and cook over low heat for about 10 minutes, or until the rice is almost tender. Add the leeks and simmer, covered, for 5 to 10 minutes, or until vegetables and rice are tender.

In a small saucepan, combine the cheese and wine. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until the cheese is melted. Turn the cheese mixture into the leek-rice mixture and blend well. Add extra beef bouillon and, if you like, extra white wine to make the consistency you want. Check the seasoning; if necessary, add salt and pepper to taste. Serve very hot with brown bread and butter.

Onion pie as a main dish is a dinner hit

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
The Associated Press

Three of the books on Swiss cooking on my shelves include recipes for open-face onion pies. The recipes are similar; they call for thinly sliced onions, sautéed in butter with eggs, milk or light cream, cheese and seasonings.

"A friend of mine has created her own version of Swiss onion pie. In it she uses almost two dozen of them — the bacon and uses sour cream instead of milk or sweet cream. When we tried her recipe, tasters at my house applauded the changes.

"Prefaced by a soup, Swiss onion pie makes an excellent main course for a meatless meal. All that's needed to accompany the pie is a crisp green salad. Fresh fruit and cookies make a fine dessert.

SOUR CREAM ONION PIE

- Pastry shell, see recipe
- 2 cups thinly sliced sweet onions
- Spanish onion
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- 2 large eggs, slightly beaten
- 1 1/2 cups sour cream
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon crushed dried thyme
- Parsley sprigs

Make pastry shell and partly bake according to recipe directions.

Gently cook onion in butter until soft and golden, but not browned. Sprinkle flour over onion and stir to coat. Spoon onion into partly baked pastry shell. Blend eggs, sour cream, salt, pepper and thyme. Pour over onion in pastry shell. Bake for 10 minutes in a preheated 425-degree oven. Reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees and bake 10 to 15 minutes longer, or until a knife inserted in center comes out clean. Garnish with parsley sprigs. Makes 4 main dish servings.

PASTRY SHELL

- 1 1/4 cups fork-stirred all-purpose flour
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup butter
- 1/2 cup ice-cold water

Combine flour and salt. Cut in butter until mixture is crumbly. Gradually add water and toss with a fork just until mixture holds together. Turn out on a lightly floured surface and roll 1/4 inch thick to fit a 9-inch pie plate or tart pan. Place in pie plate and crimp edge. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven for 5 minutes, or until lightly browned. Bake according to directions in Sour Cream Onion Tart.

Bruins, Minico looking to improve

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

RUPERT—Two teams that still see the future as their best friends collide tonight when the Twin Falls Bruins meet the home of the Minico Spartans.

The Bruins will take a 3-3 overall and 1-2 conference mark into the battle while Minico is 2-4 and 0-3 in this Gem State league matchup.

Tipoff time is 8 p.m.

The teams are pointing toward the latter part of the season with the Bruins trying to pull their scoring up to match their height and the Spartans waiting for their sophomores and freshmen to pick up experience and strength.

Both coaches are looking for a little more consistency overall.

"If you just looked at our stats, you'd get the idea we were having a great year," said Bruin Coach John Astorquia. "Defensively, we're limiting opponents' field goal shooting to 40 percent. At basketball clinics they tell you 40 percent shooting by the opposition is tremendous defense. Our stats have us out-rebounding our opponents 31-19. Put those two together and it should mean dominance. But then look at our other one—we're only shooting 38 percent from the field ourselves. You don't win many games at 38 percent even if your opponents are only shooting 40."

Astorquia, who said before the season started it would take well into January to get things lined out, said "some games I've been pleased. Others I've been disappointed."

But it all goes back to shooting percentage, he notes. "When the ball's going in confidence goes up and all teams play the other facets of the game better. When it stops going in, everything becomes hesitant."

Astorquia said the object of tonight's game is underserving from the start of the season goals.

"We must compete. Hitting or not, we have to go out and compete with Minico because we know they are going to," he said.

"They're a young team with pretty good size and Jess Boltrane is as quick as any point guard we'll face. He's doing a pretty good job of running the team for them. (Sophomore Jack) Bagley is playing great right now. He's third in the last conference stats at 21 points per game and has a high of 31. (Sophomore Robert) Greener is averaging 13 and (freshman Dan) Paulson is hitting 70 percent from the field. They are talented and I'm sure that even though Minico has a losing record right now Coach (Craig) Dexter is undismayed because the team is showing improvement."

Astorquia said he may make some personnel changes for the game, namely shifting 6-3 senior Tom Prater to the wing to take advantage of his rebounding.

Dexter said at times he has mixed emotions with this team but quickly added "basically I feel good about them. Although our record isn't great, they've played everyone pretty tough."

Dexter said the youth and inexperience factor has been most noticeable in the latter stretches of the game.

"We just can't keep up with the stronger, more mature kids," he said.

He also expressed some concern about tonight's game because "losing to Madison (last weekend) was the biggest disappointment. We had an emotional letdown and he can't read how his youngsters will react to that."

In looking at Twin Falls he said "we expect the same-ness. We look for the zone, although Coach Astorquia may surprise me and play some man. We also expect a slow tempo and that suits me fine because it might help us in the fourth quarter."

Indians climb to first place in AP A-4 poll

By The Associated Press

For the first time in six weeks, the verdict on the top Class A-1 high school boys basketball team in Idaho is unanimous. But among the state's small schools, it's still an open question.

Boise High School received all of the first-place votes cast by the state's sportswriters and broadcasters in this week's Associated Press poll. Although the Braves, 9-0, have led the A-1 rankings since the start of the poll, they had never been a unanimous first-place choice until this week.

But in A-4, Genesee and Shoshone are two teams that have alternated in the top spot for four weeks — tied for first-place honors this time. The Indians, 6-1 and coming off a 56-52 victory over Gooding, the No. 1 A-3 team, got 45 points and five first-place votes. That was the same number received by the Bulldogs, 7-1, who held the No. 1 spot in last week's poll.

CSI moves up — D2

ed up from the No. 5 spot. McCall-Donnelly, 7-1, and Sugar-Salem, 4-2, which were tied for third place last week, fell to fourth and fifth, respectively. Neither team played last week.

In A-1, North Gem of Bancroft, 3-1, moved from fourth to third following a 53-48 win over Mackay, while 6-2 Cambridge dropped from third to fourth after losing a pair of games, to Salmon River and to Cascade, Oakley, 3-4, remained in fifth place despite losses to Ducto, the Burley Junior varsity, and the Twin Falls junior varsity.

The group that votes in the weekly prep poll consists of representatives from every daily newspaper in Idaho as well as radio stations throughout the state.

The weekly survey is conducted until the week before the Idaho state basketball tournament.

Here's how Idaho's sportswriters and broadcasters rank the state's high school boys basketball teams this week (first-place votes in parentheses):

Hagerman's Frank Temple looks for someone to whom to pass the ball as Castelford's John Darrow (42) applies pressure during the first half of the Wolves' 75-50 Magic Valley Conference boys' basketball victory over the Pirates Tuesday night in Castelford. The victory, which improved the Wolves' season record to 7-1, kept Castelford in the hunt for the MVC title, one-half game behind league-leading Oakley. Oakley and Hagerman are scheduled to get together in Hagerman on Friday night. See story on Page D2

Tigers stop Carey

Read Northside

By SCOTT TUDENHOPE
Times-News writer

CAREY — Richfield broke Carey's eight-game winning streak here Tuesday with a 43-42 double-overtime victory in a Northside Conference girls' basketball game.

Carey's Ann Reay sent the game into the first extra period with a short-field goal at the end of regulation time. Tiger forward Robin Eastle then evened the score at 42-41 with 11 seconds in the second OT period.

Richfield senior center Peggen Thomas scored the only field goal in the next period, but it proved to be enough as the Tigers extended their record to 9-2 overall and 5-0 in conference.

Carey is 8-1 overall and 4-1 in conference, tied for second place with Bliss. Richfield will host Bliss Thursday night, with the Bears and Panthers slated to get together in Bliss on Friday.

High point Carey-Denise Parke was 22 and 26 for Richfield.

It was a close game throughout. With her team up 12-9 at the end of the first quarter, Parke scored three field goals. In the second eight minutes, Thomas accounted eight of the Tigers' 11 points to bring Richfield back to within two.

The largest spread in the next quarter occurred at 22-26 when Richfield's Caria Norman hit a set shot with less than two minutes to go. Carey Coach Blaine Tingey called a timeout after watching the Tigers put up six straight points and Parke ended the quarter with a short jumper.

In the fourth period, the 6-foot-1 Thomas' commanding height and position that netted her a floor-leading 24 rebounds and a foul-again when she hit and underneath shot to make it 34-28. With 3:30 to go, Richfield went into a spread offense, used for the first time this year according to Coach Jim Thomas.

We tried to win practice a few times but we didn't get any," he said. "I think they got away with a few of our passes, which really hurt."

Had Carey connected on one steal, the game might have been decided at that point without going into

Big Sky to push its 5-year eligibility plan at NCAA meeting

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE (AP)—The Big Sky Conference will ask delegates to next week's National Collegiate Athletic Conference convention to approve a change giving student athletes a flat four years of competition.

That means no "redshirts" or "hardship" extensions for athletes who are injured or otherwise can't compete for a season.

Big Sky Conference Commissioner Ron Stephenson sees the proposal as a good way for schools to graduate far more athletes than they do now. The eight-team Big Sky, which competes in Division I-A in football and Division II in all other sports, will put the proposal before delegates to the NCAA convention opening Monday in New Orleans. Stephenson said he expected the proposal, Number 66, to come to a vote about Tuesday.

The league has been working to boost support among convention delegates with mixed results. Stephenson said the proposal could fail this convention because it's a new idea, but he said it might gather more support later.

Vandals say they'll redshirt junior star Spears

Steve Adams, Vandals' star, says he'll redshirt this season because of a stress fracture in his foot.

MOSCOW — University of Idaho basketball Coach Bill Trumbo says junior Ulf Spears, the leading returning scorer for the Vandals, will file for hardship status and redshirt the rest of this basketball season.

"Spears, who averaged 9.9 points a game last year, had surgery performed Oct. 15 to repair a stress fracture in his foot."

Trumbo says toward Steve Adams, who averaged 4.0 points a game last season, had recent arthroscopic surgery on a knee that "revealed" extensive damage.

Yet a third injured player, Donald Nelson, redshirted his first year at Pasadena (Calif.) City College and is burning time with a stress fracture of the lower back.

Spears' varsity career included 100 starting assignments as a freshman before being reduced to part time playing status by the foot injury last year.

As a high school standout at Portland's Benson Tech high school, he had attracted honorable mention All-American honors from USA Today, Sports Illustrated and Sports Illustrated Weekly and also picked up all-city and all-state honors.

Keiser letter suggests that allowing athletes to compete over a five-year period would help both student-athletes graduate and also allow institutions to save money.

The NCAA "satisfactory progress" requires a student-athlete to complete 24 semester hours or 36 quarters per year in a specific degree program. An NCAA bylaw requires athletes to be enrolled in at least 12 hours per term, which Stephenson says "translates into a five-year graduation requirement."

"The main reason why student athletes do not graduate is because they leave school when their eligibility expires," said Keiser. Other than leaves an athlete three semesters or five quarters left to graduate.

"Our belief is that many student athletes lose interest in school and lose purpose or direction once their eligibility expires," said Keiser.

Stephenson said under the proposal, allowing a student-athlete five years of competition usually would put the student within six months of graduation when his or her eligibility ran out. He said he would expect a "dramatic increase" in the graduation rate among athletes.

Costs would remain static, because the number of scholarships would not increase. The Big Sky, for example, allows up to 65 football scholarships, with no more than 30 granted per year. If five years were allowed for competition, the total still would be 65, Stephenson said. That might cut recruiting costs, he added.

Stephenson said the proposal allows an extension of the five-year rule for military or church leaves, but nothing else.

The proposal is to call for an effective date of Aug. 1, 1997, because schools will have signed athletes to football and basketball scholarships before that time, based on their seniors having no more eligibility.

Because student fees, tuition and other costs vary so greatly, Stephenson said he has no estimate on the cost of an athletic scholarship. But in Idaho, he estimates it takes about $4,500 per year for a resident student to attend a state school.

feel the five-year proposal "will be the most significant item on the agenda" for this meeting. "I'd be surprised if it passes this time, but not shocked. There is a lot of support out there," Stephenson said.

John Keiser, president of Boise State University, sent out information on the proposal to every Division I athletic director and all conference commissioners on behalf of

Minico five rolls over Twin Falls girls, 56-46

By DRAB-BRIDLAND Times-News Staff Writer

RUPERT — The Minico Spartans held off a late Twin Falls rally Tuesday night to roll to their third Gem State Conference victory of the season, 56-46.

"It was pretty sloppy," said Twin Falls coach Paul Slaver. "We were sloppy. We were sloppy. We were sloppy."

The game was played in the first half with two of the top players out of action for both teams. Shawn Kaba was out of the lineup with a ligament injury for Twin Falls and high-scoring Rose-Stuart had a foot injury and rode the bench for Minico. The clubs had many turnovers with Twin Falls turning the ball over a dozen times while Minico gave the ball back eight times.

"It was pretty sloppy," said Twin Falls coach Paul Slaver. "We were sloppy. We were sloppy. We were sloppy."

Minico Coach Carol Bradshaw agreed. "Offensively it was better," she said. "Defensively, I was not so pleased."

The game went scoreless for the first three minutes when Karrie Patterson when end-to-end and scored. Patterson scored once again at the buzzer, giving the Spartans a 9-6 lead.

In the second quarter, Minico came out with a pressure defense that forced the Bruins to make numerous turnovers. A steal by Lynn McPherson capped a 6-0 Minico spurt and the Spartans led by nine.

"Shelly Wagman helped Twin Falls cut the deficit by scoring six points in the second period, cutting the Spartan lead to 19-13 at the half."

With a little over a minute left in the third period, Ellen Doane scored 18 points to give Minico a 46-18 lead.

Castleford holds off Hagerman in MVC matchup, 75-60

By The Times-News

CASTLEFORD — John Lott and Gary Reynolds took turns bombing the basket Tuesday night in shooting the Castleford Wolves to a 75-60 victory over Hagerman Vikings in the MVC boys basketball decision over the Hagerman Vikings.

"Lott, hitting a career-high 27 points, led the Wolves in the first quarter at Castleford striving to stay within a point. Reynolds took over with 18 of his 24 points in the middle quarters but Hagerman, due to the shooting of Troy Olney and David Pharis, trailed only by three going into the final period.

Then two things happened. Lott came back to life with an 11-point effort and Pharis had to sit out several minutes due to foot problems. That allowed the Wolves to take an eight-point lead and that mushroomed to the final margin in the closing two minutes.

Castleford won the preliminary 52-44.

The Tigers, hitting nine of 15 from the field in the third period, took an 18-point lead into the third quarter. Wendell, which was four-16 in the third quarter, chipped back to within eight points midway through the final stanza but then fell back as Jerome got its inside game and fast break cooking.

Jerome won the preliminary 87-67.

Wendell won the preliminary 67-54.

That's when the ball went inside to Doane for a basket and after Patterson stole the ball and scored, Minico answered to tie the game.

Slaver was proud of the way his team came back, but he was still disappointed at the Bruins' output.

"They don't quit. They battle hard to the very end," said Slaver. "I haven't been able to teach an offense to this team. It's not their fault; that's mine."

Minico's boosted its record to 3-5 in the conference, while Twin Falls is 1-9.

Pistons end losing streak upending Boston

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Ishaq Thomas scored 12 of his game-high 39 points in the decisive fourth quarter Tuesday night as the Detroit Pistons snapped a six-game losing streak with a 113-109 victory over the Boston Celtics.

After a Dennis Johnson layup gave Boston a 102-100 lead with 5:29 remaining in the game, Thomas answered with a turn-around jumper in the lane to tie the score and added a short-baseline jumper moments later to give the Pistons the lead, 104-103.

Johnson's two free throws with 3:23 remaining tied the score again, 104-104, but Vinnie Johnson's double-echo bank shot and a Kelly Thurkey free throw with 2:15 left put Detroit ahead to stay. The Pistons sealed the victory on three clutch free throws by Bill Laimbeer, one by Joe Dumars and two by Thomas in the final two minutes.

Larry Bird came off a baseline jumper with seven seconds remaining for an apparent tie, but Kevin McHale was whistled for an offensive foul and the basket was waived off.

Trippucka scored 18 points for the Pistons, while McHale and Bird scored 29 and 26, respectively, for Boston.

The Celtics were forced to play most of the game without their starting center, Robert Parrish, ejected with a 3:15 left in the second quarter when he took a punch at Laimbeer.

Laimbeer ducked the blow and Thomas retaliated by throwing the ball at Parrish. Thomas was assessed a technical foul following the incident, but allowed to remain.

New York 93 Indiana 85

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrick Ewing scored 21 points, and New York outscored Indiana 15-4 in the final 3 1/2 minutes Tuesday night to defeat the Pacers 93-85 and snap a four-game National Basketball Association losing streak.

A turn-around jumper by Wayne Tinsdale had given Indiana, which trailed by as many as 19 points in the first quarter, an 81-78 lead with 3:54 remaining in the game. But two free throws and a jumper by Louis Orr put the Knicks ahead 82-81 with 3:02 left, and a three-point goal by Trent Tucker, who scored 19 points, made it 85-81.

After a basket by Bill Garnett cut the margin to two, the Knicks scored the straight points for a comfortable 90-83 advantage with 45 seconds remaining.

Steve Stipanovich scored 16 points to lead the Pacers. Garnett added 11.

Ewing scored six of his 11 first-quarter points during a 17-0 run that extended a one-point New York lead to 30-12 as Indiana went 4-7 without a point. The Knicks went on to lead 67-47 in the final minute of the period.

Indiana, which outbounced the Knicks 36-16 in the first half, rallied in the second period, outscoring New York 24-12 to get within 48-45 at halftime.

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Akem Olatujun scored 22 points, grabbed 12 rebounds and blocked 11 shots to keep the Rockets unbeaten at home this season with a 124-115 National Basketball Association victory over Golden State Tuesday night.

Olatujun's triple double helped the Rockets extend their unbeaten string to 18 straight games. Olatujun's blocked shot total was a career best.

The Warriors kept making charges at the Rockets until they hit a cold spell midway in the fourth quarter when they were outscored 17-2.

Ralph Sampson assisted Olatujun with 22 points and 17 rebounds and John Lucas added 18, including 16 in the second half.

The Rockets had to overcome 26-point performances by Eric Floyd and Chris Mullin.

Trailing by 16 points at the half, the Warriors exploded behind Floyd, who hit 14 points in the quarter. Golden State outscored the Rockets 29-23 for the quarter and narrowed the gap to 91-85 going into the fourth period.

ATLANTA (AP) — Dominique Wilkins scored 37 points, including 15 in the fourth period, to lead Atlanta to a 117-103 National Basketball Association victory over the Los Angeles Clippers.

It was the Hawk's fourth straight victory, their longest winning streak since April, 1984.

The Clippers, who have lost five of six, got to within 100-95 on Dominique Wilkins' field goal with 5:43 left to play before the Hawks reeled off nine straight points.

Wilkins scored 12 points in the opening quarter as the Hawks took a 31-28 lead and never trailed after rookie Jon Koncak dropped in a pair of free throws for a 46-44 lead with 2:19 left in the half and led 65-57 at intermission.

Randy Wittman added 18 points for the Hawks while Kevin Willis had 15 and Glenn Rivers 13. Norm Nixon led the Clippers with 23 points and Cedric Maxwell chipped in with 19 as Los Angeles fell to 11-24.

Milwaukee 110 Cleveland 101

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Ricky Pierce scored 20 points and Sidney Moncrief added 17 to lead the Milwaukee Bucks to their seventh consecutive victory, a 110-101 decision over Cleveland in a National Basketball Association game Tuesday night.

Pierce's lay-in with 8:35 left to play gave the Bucks a 99-81 lead, and a Jeff Lamp layup expanded it to 104-85 with 5:57 left. Cleveland then went on a 9-1 spree, pulling within 105-94 when Keith Lee made a jump shot with 3:31 to play.

Terry Cummings added 16 points for the Bucks, who had six players in double figures.

BC halts Redmen's 12-game win string

BOSTON (AP) — Roger McCready scored 29 points, including five early in overtime, and Boston College beat the Big East basketball champion St. John's 74-71 Tuesday night, snapping the Redmen's 12-game winning streak.

The scrappy Eagles capitalized on St. John's late fouls, sinking five free throws in the final 32 seconds of overtime, in improving their record to 10-3 before a disappointing crowd of just 3,306 at Boston Garden.

St. John's, 14-2, was forced to play a third consecutive overtime in the Big East as neither team managed to score after BC pulled into a 65-63 tie on Dana Barros' jumper from the corner with 2:55 left in regulation.

When the Redmen, who hadn't trailed by more than 10 points, spotted the Eagles a basket on a steal by Dominic Pressley at the start of the extra session.

Walter Berry and Ron Kowak quickly put St. John's ahead, 67-65, with consecutive baskets, but McCready regained the lead for the Eagles for good with a layup and a free throw and a short shot off a rebound.

Shelton Jones of St. John's and Troy Bowers then exchanged baskets off rebounds for a 74-71 BC lead.

Pressley cashed one of two free throws with 12 seconds left, but Willie Glass pulled St. John's to within 75-73 with a layup, with 18 seconds remaining.

Pressley added two more free throws with 16 seconds to go, but Jones grabbed a rebound and went up to keep the Redmen alive 77-75 with six seconds left.

Barros then drew a technical foul when the ball was knocked from his hands on the ensuing pass and calmly sank two free throws. The best St. John's could do after that was a basket by Berry just before the buzzer.

Barros, a freshman finished with 18 points, Bowers with 14 and Pressley with 13.

St. John's was led by Berry and Glass with 18 points apiece. However, Berry, who had been averaging 27 points a game, managed just four after picking up his fourth foul with just under eight minutes remaining in regulation.

The BC victory left both teams with 2-1 records in the conference.

Notre Dame 78 Providence 72

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Sophomore guard David Rivers scored a game-high 22 points to lead No. 16 Notre Dame to a 78-72 victory over Providence Tuesday night.

Rivers made 10 of 12 from the line, including six in the final 2:14 when Notre Dame nailed down the victory.

The Fighting Irish, with seven from both Donald Royal and Joseph Price, outbounced the Friars by a 2-1 margin, including 11 from the offensive boards.

Harold Starks led Providence scorers with 18 points, which included eight of 10 from the floor, while Dave Kipler added 16.

Notre Dame jumped to an early lead and went up 23-13 by the 9:25 mark. Providence clipped away and narrowed the gap to 43-39 at the half.

The Friars got the first three baskets of the second half and went up 45-43. Notre Dame countered with seven unanswered points to regain the lead, which they didn't relinquish.

Coeur d'Alene QB commits himself to go to Boise State

BOISE (AP) — Coeur d'Alene High School quarterback Duane Halliday, who guided the Vikings to the state A-1 Division I football championship in 1985, has made a verbal agreement to attend Boise State University.

Boise State assistant coach Herb Criner said the 6-foot 2-inch, 180-pound Halliday made a verbal commitment to the school over the telephone on Sunday. National letters of intent, which formally commit a high school player to a school, cannot be signed until Feb. 12.

"He's what the coaching staff wanted," said Criner, who came to Boise State last fall from Coeur d'Alene, where he was head football coach. "He's the No. 1 quarterback on the high school level that we wanted; he's considered a real catch for us."

Halliday completed 121 of 223 passes that season for 1,709 yards and 13 touchdowns.

"I'm very excited about the prospect of playing for Boise State," Halliday said. "They offered me a really good deal. I'm also excited about playing with coach Criner."

Halliday said he also had been talking with Oregon State and Weber State about playing football.

Lendl edged past the No. 8 seeded Curren in the first set, winning the tie-breaker by a 7-1 score before overpowering the Ecuadorian in the second set.

The Jarryd-Edberg match was even until Jarryd's 7-4 victory in the third set tie-breaker.

Live grenade removed prior to Soviets' game

BOSTON (AP) — Remnants of a live hand grenade found at Boston Garden just before Soviet hockey players arrived for a match were sent to an FBI laboratory...

Chabert said no one assumed responsibility for the grenade found in a trash can at the arena 20 minutes before the Moscow Dynamo team arrived to play the Boston Bruins in an exhibition game...

Both Boston police and FBI agents refused to say whether an arrow clock hooked to the grenade was set to go off. They declined to release details of the investigation...

Bruns' spokesman Nate Greenbaum said neither the explosive nor the protest by more than 100 demonstrators Monday would deter U.S. teams from meeting Soviet teams again.

Hunter, Bunning likely Hall of Fame members

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Larsen, Jim Bunning and Catfish Hunter, a trio of perfect pitchers, hoped to celebrate the perfect climax to their careers Wednesday night — election to baseball's Hall of Fame.

Bunning pitched his perfect game for Philadelphia against the New York Mets on Father's Day in 1954, his first season with the Phillies after being drafted by the Detroit Tigers. He was a 20-game winner in 1957 and a 19-game winner four other times.

Hunter, who moved from Oakland to the New York Yankees in 1975 after a decade with the A's, triggered the players' rush to free agency and big-money contracts, pitched his perfect game against Minnesota in 1968. In 1971 he began a string of five consecutive seasons with 21 or more victories.

Hockey

"As long as we are part of the NHL we have to do our part," Bruins General Manager Harry Sinden said. "Nearly every year since 1972, NHL teams have faced Soviet teams, and U.S. players have learned much from these games."

"They've influenced our game with their passing schemes, crisscrossing, hitting-in-the-crease, Don't-beary, director of NHL, publicly in New York, said."

"But we're also playing the Russians in accordance with what the president of the United States has recommended: the exchange of cultural information to keep communication open," he said.

The Philadelphia Flyers and Toronto Maple Leafs, however, have declined to play Soviet teams. Singing — He Shall Overcome pickets at the Garden greeted the 11,438 fans who arrived for Monday's game at the 14,000-seat arena. Protesters ranged from members of the radical Jewish Defense League to Harvard law professor Alan Bershtowitz.

Inside, fans cheered as players exchanged handshakes after the game, a 4-4 Moscow Dynamo victory.

Baseball

Larsen, also of the Yankees, was injured in the same league as Bunning or Hunter, statistically speaking. He won only 81 games and lost 91 in 14 seasons with eight teams compared to Bunning's 224 wins in 17 years and Hunter's 224 in 15. But Larsen saved his best season for the Yankees, the event, the World Series, pitching his perfect game against the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1956.

Larsen, one of 15 pitchers on the 41-man ballot and the only one with a losing record, has never come close to a locking up, the 300-or-so votes needed for election.

he fell into "disfavor with then manager Billy Gardner. The hiring of Ray Miller to replace Fred Gardner did little to improve Schrom's effectiveness, and he finished with a 9-12 record and 4.99 ERA.

Oelkers was a collegiate standout at Wichita State in 1982. When the Twins drafted him first that year, then Dwight Gooden, now a star with the New York Mets, but big things were expected from him.

But in 1983, he was 0-5 with an 8.65 ERA. He never pitched in the major leagues, again.
