Civil war still raging

Fighting in South Yemen thwarts bids at rescue

QURAIISH BORDER POST. South Yemen — Palesinian forces heading for Aden to try to arrange a cease-fire were barred from crossing this frontier post Sunday, and indications were that "rebel troops may have seized control of South Yemen in this Marxist country's civil war.

Diplomatic sources based along the Persian Gulf said Sunday there were signs that President Ali Nassir Mohammed has been ousted, basing their assessment on reports received from their Aden missions and a transmission on the government radio wave length describing the president as "irresponsible."

But the British Broadcasting Corp. and a television monitor said Mohammed was on his way back to the capital, Aden, after fleeing to Ethiopia Saturday.

A radio station which said it was transmitting from Aden on behalf of an unidentified new leadership broadcast a communique Sunday indicating that rebels had ousted Mohammed after a week of fighting, a news report said.

The Bahrain-based Gulf News Agency quoted the radio as accusing Mohammed of irresponsibility and dictatorship and that he had tried to "physically liquidate" members of the governing Yemeni Socialist Party Political Bureau and to undermine state institutions.

Frontier guards at Quraiish Border Post said fighting "is still continuing" in the capital.

"It is dangerous to proceed further because of the fighting, and anyway, nobody is allowed through," said the officer in charge of the post, who refused to give his name.

It was not clear which side the border guards supported. They included half a dozen uniformed troops and about a dozen Lebanese carrying long carved weapons known as jambayas.

Fighting has shut down international communications with South Yemen and there has been no way to verify most reports. Diplomats in the region said the situation appeared ambiguous.

The BBC reported without attribution Sunday that Mohammed was on his way back to Aden after fleeing to Ethiopia in his personal plane Saturday.

In Tel Aviv, radio and television monitor Mickey Gurdus said he heard Ethiopian state television announce that Mohammed left Aden's Alaha for Aden Sunday afternoon.

The Israeli also said he picked up a conversation in which the pilot of a small aircraft said he had "a very important person" aboard.

Gurdus said the plane landed in Tatz in North Yemen, about 20 miles from the South Yemen border.

Soviets urge arms action

Parliament makes an appeal for congressional response

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

MOSCOW. — The Soviet Parliament urged the U.S. Congress on Sunday to accept the new Kremlin disarmament plan as "the only reasonable and feasible alternative to nuclear weapons" and renewed a plea that the United States halt nuclear tests.

The appeal through the official news agency Tass kept up Moscow's unrelenting publicity for the proposal and appeared to be part of the Kremlin effort to win Americans and others over to the plan.

"The time has come to put an end to the nuclear arms race madness," the nuclear threat should be "eliminated for good," the 1,500-member Supreme Soviet or national parliament, told Congress.

The Soviet press Sunday said early U.S. reaction did not raise hopes for quick progress and stressed that a space weapons ban is essential to the plan.

Most national dailies printed letters from readers praising the disarmament proposal, unveiled by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev Thursday. They also ran positive commentary from officials and news media abroad.

Soviet commentators portrayed Gorbachev's proposal as the best way to achieve disarmament, and suggested that "opposition" could come only from "militarist circles" in the West who they said benefit from arms production.

The threat of nuclear war, said the government newspaper Izvestia, "came into being and is growing only because there are in the West thousands, possibly even tens of thousands of people who are parasites living off a general threat to mankind."

Gorbachev's plan, billed as a way to end making of nuclear weapons by the year 2000, would begin with a 30 percent cut in superpowers' strategic missiles and removal of all U.S. and Soviet medium-range rockets from Europe.

Gorbachev also extended the Soviet moratorium on nuclear testing for three months, to the end

Royal yacht returns in effort to save foreigners

The Associated Press

LONDON. — The royal yacht Britannia returned to the coastal waters of South Yemen Sunday and began its second evacuation of foreigners trapped by fighting there, the Defense Ministry reported.

A spokesman said Queen Elizabeth II's luxurious yacht maneuvered close to a beach east of the capital, Aden, to pick up the refugees.

"It's a different beach from the one used as a pick-up point in the first evacuation on Saturday," he said.

"We have no knowledge at present of whether there is any fighting in the area of the evacuation."

The Britannia evacuated about 350 people of 42 nationalities Saturday to Djibouti, about 160 miles across the Gulf of Aden from South Yemen's capital, and then returned to the war-torn country's coast Sunday. British warships also were reported standing by.

The Britannia was in the Red Sea headed for New Zealand for the queen's February visit when the war broke out in South Yemen, and Buckingham Palace said the queen was "delighted" the ship could be used to help.

Earlier, the ship's commander, Rear-Adm. John Garbler, said 150 people were assembled on the beach to be picked up Sunday, and "we know the location of 1,974 people," to be evacuated.

Garbler, speaking from a ship-to-shore connection, said two other British ships in the area, the frigate Jupiter and the destroyer Neveling, were in touch with the foreigners on shore, making assembly arrangements.

"Shrapnel" started flying all round the launches," said British insurance salesman Jeremy Flaxman, who was one of the last evacuees to wade into the surf and be picked up by small boats from the yacht at dawn Saturday.

In a radio interview broadcast in London, Flaxman said he and others who had sought refuge in an Aden hotel went to the beach carrying white flags made of broomsticks and pillow cases.

Full agenda Budget plights lead long list in Congress

By STEVEN KOMAROW
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON. — The debate over guns versus butter — raised to new intensity by the sweeping Gramm-Rudman budget cuts — dominates the agenda along with tax revision as the second session of the 99th Congress opens this week.

The lawmakers will be operating for the first time under the Gramm-Rudman law, they passed last month, which mandates deep spending cuts if Congress and the president fail to pass enough cutbacks or tax increases to meet deficit reduction targets.

Government agencies are already laboring to make the $11.7 billion cut required on March 1, which would still leave a deficit of about $208 billion. "Part of the price of the program of more than $50 billion in cuts to meet the fiscal 1987 deficit target of $14 billion. The 1987 fiscal year begins Oct. 1, so the decision-making will be spotlighted in the campaigns for 31 Senate and 435 House seats.

Gramm-Rudman, to reach a balanced budget by fiscal 1991, cuts a wide range of programs, and "that's going to be very unfair to some programs and some groups," said Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va.

Rep. Les Aspin, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, on Sunday released a report projecting that Gramm-Rudman will take more out of military personnel and readiness than out of high-tech hardware.

"Over the next five years, Gramm-Rudman will give us weapons, but without all the people or repair funds needed to man and maintain them," the Wisconsin Democrat said.

Gramm-Rudman cuts don't hit Social Security or welfare benefits, veterans compensation, or interest on the national debt. But foreign aid, law enforcement, air traffic control and countless other government tasks are being cut back, and shuffling one area from cuts would mean other areas get hit harder.

President Reagan helped push through the House a major tax reform, limiting individual and corporate tax rates while eliminating or reducing some deductions in the program. The administration will try in the Senate to take away some of what the president considers anti-business bias in the House plan.

Gramm-Rudman, named for its sponsors, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, and Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., doesn't rule out tax increases to reduce deficits. But Reagan promises he'd veto any move in that direction.

"The president rejects a tax increase," Reagan's budget director James C. Miller III said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press" program, adding "not this year, not in the future I don't think."

As a result, the fiscal 1987 spending plan the administration will take more out of Feb. 24 is expected to miss the $14 billion deficit ceiling without tax increases and continuing the defense buildup — while eliminating or deeply slashing many domestic programs.

Reagan tried a similar approach in his fiscal 1986 budget, which was largely rebuffed in Congress. Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., of the Senate Budget Committee, said the same tactics this year "won't fly either."

Miller, however, said budget-making will be different this year because "you don't have that big barrel of red ink to ride in this year that you had last year. With the rules of the game changed, even some of the same proposals that were rejected last year look a lot more attractive this year."

Tutu travels to Atlanta to honor King

The Associated Press

South African Archbishop Desmond Tutu joined Sunday in events honoring the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. as Americans of all races remembered the slain civil rights leader on the eve of the first national holiday marking his birth.

A candlelight memorial service was planned Sunday night at King's tomb in Atlanta, in advance of Monday's official holiday. His widow, Coretta Scott King, was to place a wreath at the tomb Monday.

Tutu was among those scheduled to participate Sunday in an international conference in opposition to South Africa's apartheid system at Atlanta's Ebenezer Baptist Church, where King was pastor. He also spoke earlier at Ebenezer's Sunday morning service.

Monday's scheduled observances included "Living the Dream," a musical celebration at several top recording stars and others in Washington, New York City and Atlanta. Performers will include such people as Bob Dylan, Joan Baez, Quincy Jones, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Patti LaBelle and more, with Harry Belafonte and Bill Cosby as co-hosts.

South African Archbishop Desmond Tutu, right, joins the Rev. Joseph Lowery in honor of Martin Luther King Jr.

"I think he would have viewed this holiday as something to be celebrated in the cause of humanity, not as Martin Luther King's birthday," said Belafonte, who was a close friend of King. "I think he would like to see his work continued, not simply remembered."

The program will be recorded in all three cities and edited for a two-hour national television special on the same night as a fund-raiser for the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Non-Violent Social Change in Atlanta.

Belafonte, who is also chairman of the Martin Luther King New York State Holiday Commission, said the idea for the linked performances in three cities came from Stevie Wonder, a longtime proponent of a national holiday for King.

In addition to that program, Washington was to hold its 17th city observance of King's birthday, King's actual birthday was Jan. 15.

Indiana ammonia explosion forces 500 to flee

HUNTINGBURG, Ind. (AP). — An explosion at a Turkey processing plant Sunday released a cloud of a toxic, highly irritating gas that burned the worker and prompted the emergency evacuation of more than 500 people, the mayor said.

Mayor Dale Hemerich declared a state-of-emergency following the 7:20 p.m. explosion of anhydrous ammonia at the Farbest Foods plant on the south side of town. A fire created by the explosion was contained about two hours later.

"We evacuated an area of 10 to 15 blocks," the mayor said, "I declared a state-of-emergency because ammonia was leaking and coming into our community and causing a serious situation."

The residents were allowed to return to their homes about 45 minutes after the fire was contained.

The ammonia, which causes a burning irritation to skin and eyes, was carried by winds the city of about 5,000.

James Bailey, 33, a maintenance worker at the plant, suffered chemical burns to both eyes. He was listed in stable condition at St. Joseph Medical Center in Huntington, the nearest hospital said. No other injuries were reported.

The ammonia was used as a cooling agent in a section of the plant where the turkey products were frozen, said Huntington Fire Chief Marvin Boggin. He said the source of the ammonia had been cut off, but some of the gas still was seeping from compressors damaged in the explosion.

The nearest homes are about four blocks from the plant on two sides. Farm fields and an industrial area border the plant on other sides.

Train off tracks near Tacoma

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — An Amtrak train traveling from Los Angeles to Seattle with about 190 passengers aboard derailed south of here Sunday, setting one of its engines on fire, officials said. Minor injuries were reported.

The Coast Starlight derailed at about 4:30 p.m. in a deep, wooded area at Nisqually, which was drenched by torrential rains during the weekend. Some cars were overturned, said Howard Kallio, a spokesman for Burlington Northern railroad.

Most of the injuries appeared to be minor, said Daryl Cysensky, Pierce-County communications supervisor.

Firefighters were sent by rail to the site by truck vehicles to extinguish the flames from the engine fire, he said.

Danny Boehr, an Amtrak spokesman in Washington, said there were about 190 people on the train.

Hyatt crew faces revocation

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A state board could revoke the professional licenses of two engineers found negligent in the collapse of two normal walkways that killed 114 people in a hotel lobby.

Daniel M. Duncan and Jack D. Gillum, both of St. Louis, were found guilty by a state hearing officer of "gross negligence, incompetence and unprofessional conduct" for failing to perform safety tests on the connections that held up the aerial walkways at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Kansas City.

Report: Marcos' deal cost him

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos engaged in a secretive deal with a California-based businessman that may have cost his government more than $50 million, a newspaper said Sunday.

In a copyright report, the San Francisco Examiner said it obtained documents that provide evidence that Marcos personally has been involved in private financial negotiations in the United States.

The deal was designed to keep documents embargoed and his family under wraps and to ensure the cooperation of businessman Vicente Chuidian, the newspaper said.

Radio reports a Lesotho coup

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Lesotho's paramilitary force has ousted Prime Minister Leabua Jonathan, and commander Maj. Gen. Justin Lekanya will rule as chairman of a military council, government radio reported today.

The radio said King Moshoeshoe II will remain head of state, and that government ministries will be run temporarily by principal secretaries, the top civil servants in the departments.

Residents of the capital, Maseru, contacted by telephone, said they heard intercom automatic weapons fire near the Makoanyane paramilitary barracks on the edge of the city late Sunday.

American crash dead named

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has notified the families of five Americans believed to have been on an Aerovias jetliner that crashed in a northern Guatemalan jungle over the weekend, killing all aboard, a department spokesman said Sunday.

The department was basing its identifications of the victims on "strong circumstantial evidence," including such things as the finding of a passport and an eyewitness having seen someone board the aircraft, spokesman Pete Martinez said.

Agenda

Foreign policy
Congress is expected to scrutinize arms sales and subsidies for anti-communist insurgents in Nicaragua, Angola and Afghanistan.

Congress delayed last year the sale of advanced air defense weapons to Jordan and the administration has been considering offering a similar package to Saudi Arabia. But Congress will be looking for definite progress toward peace between those countries and Israel before approving the sales.

Congress last year showed a willingness to subsidize anti-communist rebels.

It repealed a ban on aid to any political or military movement against the Marxist government of Angola and approved $27 million for non-lethal aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

The administration is expected to push for military aid for the Contras and money for Angolan anti-communists, along with continued covert assistance for the Afghanistans fighting Soviet troops.

A congressional delegation recently returned from South Africa, and without more progress to end racism there, Congress could push for stronger sanctions. Reagan last year ordered sanctions of his own only when Congress was about to act.

The halls of Congress will again ring with condemnations of international terrorism.

Trade
Republicans and Democrats in Congress appear ready to butt heads with the administration, which has blocked moves to protect U.S. industries from foreign competition.

The Senate is ready to take up bills to retaliate against Japanese trade barriers and to strengthen the hand of the International Trade Commission. The ITC approved quotas but the plan was shot down by the White House last year.

House Democrats hope to make trade a major campaign issue this year. Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., was teamed with the tax overhaul in 1985. But is expected to quickly produce a trade bill.

Agriculture

Topping the list will be how to deal with farmers' mounting credit problems. The issue always arises during the spring planting and lending season and will be even more acute in this election year when many farm-state members' jobs are on the line.

Congress also faces a substantial list of leftovers from last year's five-year farm bill, and reauthorization of pesticide legislation and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

Environment

Both the House and Senate passed bills last year extending and expanding the "Superfund" hazardous waste cleanup program, but failed to resolve their disagreements before adjourning. Conferees still have to work out differences on funding levels in the bills, who should be taxed to pay for cleanups, cleanup standards and other issues.

The 1985 session ended with a House-Senate stalemate over a proposed broad-based manufacturers' tax to pay for Superfund. Senate Republicans and other House Committee Chairman Bob Packwood, Ore., have supported the levy over administration objections, while the House supports taxing the petroleum and chemical industries.

Immigration

The House will likely vote by spring on legislation to slow the flood of illegal immigrants entering the United States. The consequences of the bill will be stiff penalties for employers hiring illegal aliens, and amnesty for many of those already in this country.

The major controversy so far, however, has been over demands by growers of fresh fruits and vegetables — mainly in Western states — to allow large numbers of temporary harvesters into the country.

The Senate passed its version of immigration reform last year, and any bill approved by the House will go to a conference.

Soviets

President Reagan and others in his administration have said they welcomed the proposal. U.S. officials in Washington are considering offering assistance for the Afghanistans fighting Soviet troops.

But they expressed reservations about how the 50 percent strategic arms cut would be achieved and the Kremlin's continued insistence that the United States renounce space weapons research, popularly known as "Star Wars," as a condition for disarmament.

A top commentator for the Communist Party daily Pravda, Yuri Zhukov, said U.S. reservations about the plan are "groundless and not supported by the facts."

"It goes wither, it is disturbing that the comments by the U.S. president and the secretary of state completely evade the fundamental position of our proposals — about not allowing the development, testing or deployment of space strike weapons and about a ban on testing nuclear weapons," Zhukov said.

The Supreme Soviet said development of space weapons would be an "irreparable error."

It also stressed the importance of a space weapons ban and said it was necessary to "ban the development of non-nuclear arms based on new physical principles" like lasers and other high-technology devices.

Zhukov said the Soviet Union was waiting for a specific and detailed response from Washington.

"The resumed arms talks in Geneva will show to what degree the American side is ready to take action toward resolution of those problems which have a real, worldwide significance," he said.

"However, so far, the official reaction of Washington and the statements of responsible representatives of the U.S. administration don't give any special reason to expect quick, constructive decisions from the Americans," Zhukov said.

Pravda and the other central newspapers ran front-page collections of readers' comments on the proposal under headlines such as "A Program of Enduring Peace" and "Into the 21st Century Without Nuclear Arms."

White House may reduce CIA's role in defections

By GEORGE GEDDA
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, unhappy with the CIA's handling of former Soviet KGB agent Viktor Yurchenko, may reduce the role of CIA in defector cases and give primary responsibility to the FBI, informed sources say.

"I think it's a great move," said a senior White House official who contended that defectors in variously have been able to establish much closer relations with FBI personnel than CIA officials.

ing a variety of proposals to end the "distasteful" Soviet "black agents to defect and to avoid another embarrassment similar to the one involving Yurchenko.

Such an institution, they said, would provide a pool of wisdom government policy makers could draw on.

He is regarded by U.S. officials as a genuine defector although he claimed he was abducted, drugged, tortured and held incommunicado by the CIA before his escape.

Jackson: Reagan sends 'racist' signals

NEW YORK (AP) — The Reagan administration has sent "powerfully racist" signals by failing to strongly back affirmative action on a meeting with black congressional leaders, the Rev. Jesse Jackson said Sunday.

"His signals have been powerfully racist. Upon taking office, he in fact exploited the tender racial sensibilities of many whites by not affirming affirmative action, by not actively supporting the Voting Rights Act."

'His signals have been powerfully racist. Upon taking office, he in fact exploited the tender racial sensibilities of many whites by not affirming affirmative action, by not actively supporting the Voting Rights Act.'
— The Rev. Jesse Jackson

Reagan said in a radio address Saturday that he opposed using quotas in minority hiring but rejected charges that his administration has tried to end affirmative action and anti-poverty programs. Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, argued on the same program with Jackson that blacks have gained from an improved economy under Reagan's presidency.

"Four hundred thousand black people got jobs in the last year or so, and they're getting jobs at a rate of 40,000 per month," Hatch said. Democrats said Saturday that black unemployment figures have not improved in Reagan's tenure, standing at 15.6 today as opposed to 12.4 percent in 1976.

Rep. William H. Gray III, a Pennsylvania Democrat, said in response to Reagan's address that the percentage of black families living in poverty has increased to 42 percent from 32 percent in 1969.

Roe vs. Wade anniversary spurs protest action

By KARLA FEUER
The Associated Press

Abortion opponents held demonstrations in several cities over the weekend, gearing up for a protest in Washington this week to mark the 13th anniversary of the Supreme Court ruling legalizing abortion.

Pro-choice activists also planned to mark the anniversary, including a "back alley" rally in Charleston, W. Va., on Tuesday, aimed at recalling the days before the Jan. 22, 1973, Roe vs. Wade ruling.

Anti-abortion protests were held in Dallas and in Providence, R.I. on Sunday and in Birmingham, Ala., Madison, Wis., Austin and Beaumont, Texas, Memphis, Vt., and Concord, N.H., on Saturday.

The Rev. Edward Markley was given probation for smashing abortion equipment and ordered to stay at least 50 yards from any clinic after a 1974 attack.

Major trade partners give warning on tariffs

By TOM RAUM
The Associated Press

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — Protectionist measures to shelter import-battered U.S. industries could jeopardize an upcoming round of world trade talks, the United States is being cautioned by its major trading partners.

DeClerq said that new restrictions on textiles, for instance, could torpedo the new round "because textile exports are so important to many developing nations."

"Our attitude is one of greater liberty and greater liberalization of international trade rules. But this greater flexibility could be put in danger if important trading partners do not play along the same lines."

DeClerq added that if the United States turns to a harsh protectionist stand, it will create difficulties.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army paid more than 10 times the lowest rate to ship household goods of soldiers from West Germany to Washington because of a mistake by military clerks, according to computer records and federal officials.

Major trade partners give warning on tariffs

A new round of talks among the 30-member nations of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) is not a foregone conclusion, trade ministers of the European Community, Canada, and Japan agreed at a three-day conference that ended here Sunday.

Many of the world's developing nations are leary of entering into a new trade pact because of rising protectionism, said Willy DeClerq, vice president for external relations of the European Community.

"We must send a message to those who are still hesitant," DeClerq said. He said it is crucial to the new round for industrialized nations not to aggravate Third-World members of the international trading community with any further actions to protect domestic industries.

The president late last year vetoed legislation to impose import restrictions on textiles, and Yeltsin said during the weekend trade conference that the president is prepared to veto any other other measures that contain similar import restraints.

Golf swing costly

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The Virginia Supreme Court has awarded $200,000 to a man who lost an eye after he was struck in the face by a golf club that flew from his partner's hands.

"A mere statement to the effect that 'Oops, it slipped,' is not sufficient," the court said in ruling on the September 1980 accident.

Smokeless tobacco dangerous for users

On the same day on which the World Health Organization in Geneva was issuing its strongest statement to date linking tobacco use with illness and premature mortality, a U.S. government panel was calling attention to the rising use of smokeless tobacco and its attendant health risks in this country.

Worldwide, the Geneva report says, nearly 1 million deaths a year can be attributed to tobacco consumption, with one-third of all cancers being related to tobacco used for smoking or chewing. The U.S. government panel, convened by the National Institutes of Health, noted the relationship of smokeless tobacco to cancers of the mouth and throat. Oral cancer was responsible for 9,500 American deaths in 1985.

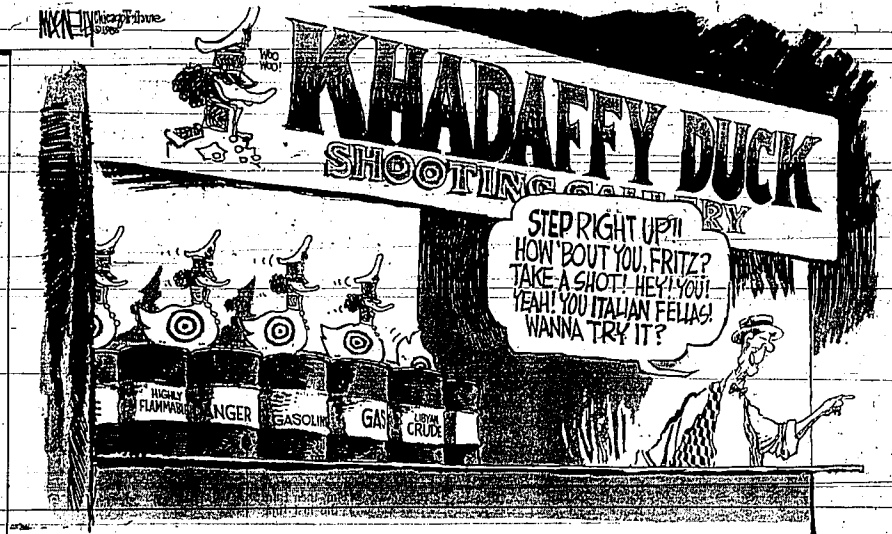

An estimated 10 million Americans, about 3 million of them under the age of 21, use smokeless tobacco — either the chewing variety or snuff. The clear message from the group of health experts is that smokeless tobacco is not a safe alternative to smoking. Nicotine absorption from smokeless tobacco can cause the same kinds of increases in blood pressure, heart rates and blood fats that smoking tobacco produces. Nicotine yields a mild and transient "high"; that's why it's addictive. Smokeless tobacco can be as addictive as cigarettes.

Are the health dangers of smokeless tobacco something that non-users should be concerned about? Yes, because — like any form of health-threatening addiction, whether involving cigarettes, alcohol or hard drugs — a seemingly individual problem can in time become part of a much larger social one. These addictions are expensive. They contribute significantly to health-care costs even as they diminish economic activity through lost productivity and shortened work lives.

Efforts to publicize the health hazards of smoking have led to a modest reduction in the consumption of cigarettes in the United States. Those efforts ought to be expanded to discourage the use of smokeless tobacco as well.

Yuppiness appears to be state of mind

Yuppies are a hot media item these days. Everywhere we turn, we're bombarded with messages for and about Yuppies — Young, Upwardly Mobile, Urban Professionals. Everyone wants a piece of these supposedly affluent, conspicuously consumptive Americans.

But are we all clear on exactly who the Yuppies are? Would you recognize one in a crowd? Are you, perhaps, yourself a Yuppie?

We're told that Yuppies are within a certain age group and have a specific income range. That may be true, but I think Yuppiness is more a state of mind than anything else, unfettered by age and income statistics. I've met Yuppies as young as 11 and as old as 45, with incomes less than adequate for their desires.

Strangely, although we must be surrounded by them, how many of us curiously, with any authority, that someone is definitely a Yuppie? Can you tell by the way they dress? The way they walk? A secret handshake? Do people willingly identify themselves as Yuppies?

Obviously, some guidelines are in order for identification of the species Yuppy Americanus. Unlike most other mammals, Yuppies generally do not openly admit who they are. They know, deep inside, but they seem reluctant to consciously reveal themselves. Some may even deny their essential nature. It doesn't matter. By these signs shall you know them.

Yuppies are motivated to buy over-priced things — Alchobol and Lowenbrau beer, BMWs, Audis and Volvos, Izod shirts, Vuarnet sunglasses, OP shorts, Topsisider shoes and Fatigonia jackets. Some children are also motivated, by peer pressure, but they can be excused, as they're generally still defining their identities. This isn't to say they're anything intrinsically wrong with any of these things. But Yuppies consider no alternatives. They must have The Right Stuff.

Yuppies believe the purpose of life is the acquisition of goods, preferably expensive goods. This is sometimes accomplished through trust funds or other forms of inheritance. When it cannot be avoided, Yuppies work for pay.

The Yuppies who must work believe in starting at the top, or at least a heartbeat away from the top. It's characteristic of this species that they have little patience. It may have taken their parents decades to move up the corporate ladder, buy a house and acquire other worldly possessions, but Yuppies want it right now. They salivate at the words "you" and "all," such as in "You can have it all."

Yuppies have a pathological obsession with physical fitness and other forms of self-improvement. The object seems to be the improved appearance, social acceptance and a greater lifespan, rather than the simple joy of peak performance. In competitive athletics, as in most situations, the object is winning.

Like others who believe in the rightness of their mission, Yuppies distrust, even look down, on those who don't share their values. They seem reluctant to go below the surface of anything, content with appearances. Style is everything, so Yuppies faithfully follow the latest trends.

Yuppies like quick reads and news briefs. Cursed with limited attention spans for anything other than the acquisition of goods, Yuppies get their information from TV, trendy magazines and other media courtting their favor.

They're less interested in broadening their intellectual horizons than in acquiring facts useful in obtaining more goods or greater social acceptance. This reinforces their isolation in the family of man.

Yuppies are nothing new; they've been around forever. The only difference is that superficially materialistic and self-absorption were once considered undesirable qualities. Now they're not only accepted, they're encouraged. The Yuppies' ranks seem to be growing.

Even more depressing is what this all says about conformity: The Yuppy mentality discourages independent thought. Their values are swallowed unquestioningly. It's reminiscent of the 1950s, which isn't surprising. The older Yuppies grew up during those intellectually barren times and the younger ones were born then, to parents who held those values dear.

But most depressing is the thought that married Yuppies are probably raising a new generation of them.

Threat of economic disaster looming over American farms

Dear Mr. President: I write to ask you to take urgent action to prevent an economic disaster. The rapidly growing number of bankruptcies, foreclosures and shut-downs of farms and rural businesses is changing the face of this nation.

Your administration tells farmers they are to blame for their troubles. At the least, that is insensitive to people who have labored long and hard to feed this country. At most, it is inaccurate and begs ignorance of political and economic facts. Most farmers facing economic ruin are not failures but victims of policies only you and the Congress control.

You recently signed a bill that would rescue large agricultural companies but also would lower commodity prices 10 percent by 1990, which will hurt small farmers. The bill does not alter the causes of the farm crisis. More must be done.

The farm problem can be stated very simply: high costs and low prices. Both are directly related to a federal budget that is out of control.

Farming is capital-intensive. Consider the cost of machinery. A new hay harvester that cost less than $5,000 in the early 1970s cannot be bought today for less than $40,000. A grain combine that 10 years ago cost less than $10,000 now costs $100,000.

The government's need to borrow has forced real interest rates to record levels. Meanwhile, as farmers pay more, the prices we receive are plummeting because of the ballooning deficit, which distorts the value of the dollar worldwide.

In 1980, an American wheat farmer could get $3.30 for a bushel of wheat on the world market while an Australian farmer received 30 cents less. Today, because of the realignment of the dollar, the American farmer still gets $3.30 for a bushel while the Australian now makes $4.67.

More alarming, since 1980 American farmers have lost markets worth about 3 billion bushels of commodities. Not only have you crippled our ability to export, but also you've opened the gates for imports. The domestic dairy industry is now drowning in a sea of foreign milk.

Mr. President, you were elected on the promise to balance the budget and end deficit spending. The truth is, however, that your administration has resorted to more deficit spending than the combined total of all previous presidencies.

You criticize spending on social programs, such as Aid for Families with Dependent Children. Then you implement massive tax cuts for large corporations. This move is largely responsible for the unbelievable federal deficit and should be known as President Reagan's AFDC — Aid for Dependent Corporations.

These tax breaks were sold to a trusting public as a way to increase investment in American plants and thereby increase jobs. But what did the corporations do with this new money? They played Wall Street Monopoly games, buying each other.

None of this created new jobs. If companies built new plants with this new windfall, the plants were often in Taiwan or Hong Kong. The result, of course, is not only the loss of jobs here, but the loss of markets for our commodities. The new American-owned textile mill in Taiwan will buy wool from nearby Australia, not the United States.

What's more, in many instances these large corporations bought farm land or invested in agriculture not to raise crops but to lose money to further reduce their tax bill. Corporations, through these tax avoidance operations, enjoy a 46 percent tax discount on all their expenses. How many of us would be in trouble if we discounted expenses 46 percent?

Corporate tax relief has nearly bankrupted rural America. Mr. President, you stood by as farmers foreclosed on properties. Repeal the corporate tax breaks. Mark the money for deficit reduction.

Declare an emergency moratorium on farm foreclosures. Produce a tax policy that requires corporations to share the load. We need responsible legislation that will bolster our income until interest rates return to moral levels and export commodities are no longer priced out of the market.

Mr. President, if you delay too long, your administration will make Herbert Hoover's Great Depression look like a Fourth of July picnic, and your only friends will be international bankers and the extravagantly wealthy.

Write Sen. John T. Peavey, Carey, represents Senate District 22 in the Idaho Legislature. This letter was sent to President Ronald Reagan with some 1,400 Idaho signatures.

SEN. JOHN PEAVEY Sends message to president

Constituents call for government to cut back in hard times

MONDAY, JAN. 17

"One ringy dingy," "Two ringy dingies," "Just like Ernestine's," my telephone has been ringing off the hook today. It's my fault. I've sent out nearly 1,000 survey forms asking people throughout the district their opinions on government expansion and taxes. The number and the content of the responses have been somewhat of a surprise.

First, I have found that people are upset — really ticked — about government growth. "How can you guys in Boise justify spending more money when we're cutting back?" one of my constituents wrote.

Almost unanimously, people are telling me that government should cut back in hard economic times. Just like the board, although some say that education should be excluded from reductions. Ironically, education consumes 75 percent of the budget, making cuts solely in other areas extremely difficult.

Second, the people, again nearly unanimously, oppose any increase in taxes, especially property taxes. Some have indicated that if a tax increase is absolutely essential, it should be a sales tax.

Sen. Larry Anderson

"Everyone pays it. It's the fairest tax," was scribbled at the bottom of one of the surveys.

There is little variation in the surveys I have received. Generally speaking, people are tired of government growth and resist increased taxation. I wonder if their elected representatives are listening.

TUESDAY, JAN. 14

The Democrats have been complaining, loudly and publicly, about the closed caucuses of the SECRET SOCIETY of Republicans. If they only knew... Our caucuses are a lively and sometimes heated exchange of ideas. In private we are able to hammer out compromises that we could not accomplish in the open.

This morning Sen. Lee Staker, R-Idaho Falls, and I realized the soundness of the wonderful democratic principle of the open caucus. When the Senate Democrats held upstairs to their caucus, Staker and I saw that it was time to put this non-partisan principle into practice. We tagged along behind. Guess what, folks? They wouldn't let us in.

WEDNESDAY JAN. 15

It looks like the "shortfall" for fiscal 1986 will be $27 million. This means the growth of the economy, and therefore tax receipts, are far below expert predictions.

But we've got a deeper problem. Since the inception of the one per cent initiative, more and more funding for cities, counties, and education has come from the state. There is now a funding "gap" from the state budget into their budgets. As the needs of the schools and local governments have grown, so has the rate of taxation by the state to meet those needs.

Like us to the tough, county commissioners, mayors and teachers come running to the legislature with their funding requests. But the trough is now empty. And the people of Idaho are reluctant to fill it up again.

THURSDAY, JAN. 16

In politics, a person learns early to disregard name calling. You either learn to live with it or you find another job. But you do not expect the leaders of an organization largely responsible for the education of our children to make vicious, baseless attacks on the elected representatives of the people. This afternoon, with half of the members of the Idaho Senate, I watched an hour-long film produced by the Idaho Education Association (IEA). The program branded the Republican Idaho Legislature as fascist and racist. Conservative members were compared to the Aryan Nation while supremacists.

The IEA said there were tragedies and triumphs in the 1984 elections — the tragedy was that the Republican party gained control of both houses of the legislature; the triumph was that Richard Stallings was elected to Congress. The leaders of Idaho's teacher union chose to broadcast this fine example of balance and fair play nationwide by satellite.

However, when Rep. Bob Porrey, R-Nampa, asked the IEA for a copy of the program, I refused to share it with him. We saw the film only because a copy was later left on his doorstep.

I know that most teachers do not subscribe to these vulgar tactics. Perhaps Idaho's teachers should seriously reconsider what kind of leaders they are sending to Idaho's capitol; leaders that demand more money from a Republican legislature, and at the same time vilify that legislature.

Sen. Larry Anderson, R-Twin Falls, writes an occasional column from the Idaho Legislature in the form of a daily journal.

Aquino will try Marcos if elected

Claims he is guilty of rights violations

By BRIAN BARGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Philippine presidential candidate Corazon Aquino said Sunday if she wins the Feb. 7 elections, she would put President Ferdinand Marcos on trial for human rights violations.

Mrs. Aquino, appearing on CBS's "Face the Nation," said she held Marcos responsible for the assassination of her husband, opposition leader Benigno Aquino, who was gunned down as he stepped out of a plane under military escort at the Manila airport in 1983.

He was returning from exile in the United States.

Philippine armed forces chief of staff Gen. Fabian Y. and 25 others on trial for the assassination were recently acquitted of charges they were involved in Aquino's murder in what opposition leaders have labeled a rigged trial.

"It is not only my husband who has been the victim of Mr. Marcos' repressive regime. There are so many others, probably thousands," Mrs. Aquino said.

FERDINAND MARCOS
Accused of crimes

"Mr. Marcos will go on trial (and) will be protected by due process of law, rather than let some of these people take the matter into their own hands," she added.

Mrs. Aquino, 52, saying she was "greatly concerned about the coming elections," charged that Marcos was also behind the killing last Wednesday of one of her campaign leaders, Jeremias de Jesus and his driver were killed when their jeep was ambushed in Mrs. Aquino's home province of Tarlac.

She said two others in the jeep survived the attack, "and they can point to the actual assassin."

State Department spokesman Bernard Kab said Thursday the murdered politician had met with U.S. Embassy officials the day before his death to complain about political violence in Tarlac province.

Marcos has been accused by opponents of election fraud trying to intimidate voters during his 20-year presidency.

"If I lose because of gross cheating and terrorism, then I am afraid this may be the last time we will have elections in this country," Mrs. Aquino said.

Officials leave Laos with doubts

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — The parting toasts were cordial, but little new information emerged from talks between a U.S. congressional delegation and Laotian officials Sunday on the issue of 550 Americans still missing in action in Laos from the Vietnam War which ended in 1975.

After the talks, all four U.S. lawmakers said in interviews that the Laotian government rejects the possibility of Americans entering Laos to conduct joint investigations of possible sightings of living Americans.

Since the war ended, 806 "live" sightings of Americans in Indochina have been reported, mostly by refugees, according to U.S. government records. Investigations have ruled out the possibility of living Americans in all but 93 reports, including 19 reported live sightings in Laos, U.S. officials say.

Europe's finance ministers vow unity

LONDON (AP) — Finance ministers and central bank governors of the five biggest industrialized nations outside the communist world rejected Japan's proposal at their weekend meeting to cut worldwide interest rates, sources said Sunday.

An official statement said the financial officials were "satisfied" with efforts they have made since September to lower the value of the dollar and contained no hint of further measures to devalue the dollar.

Reacting to reports of the meeting, foreign exchange dealers said they expected the value of the dollar to stay at its current level in the near future.

Official sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the financial representatives of the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Japan rejected a Japanese proposal for coordinated interest rate cuts.

Later, Bank of Japan Governor Saitoshi Sumita told reporters he did not expect U.S. interest rates to fall soon.

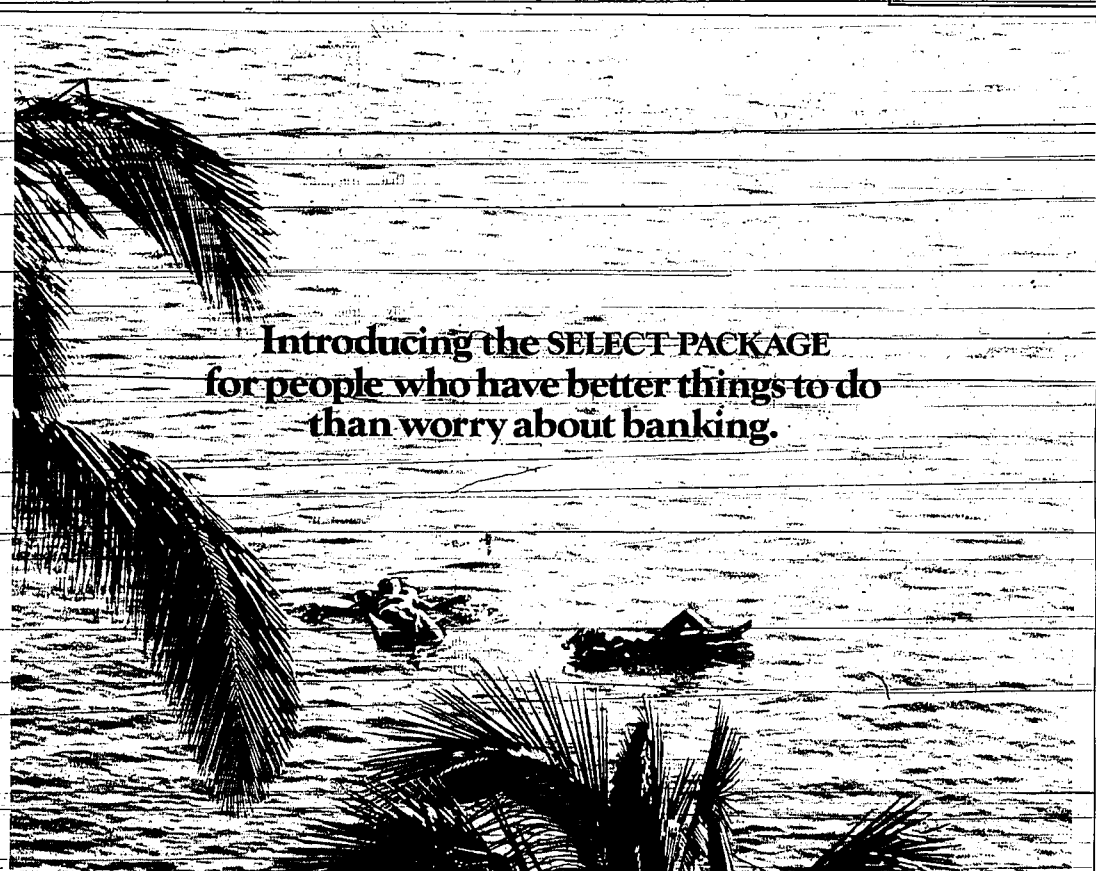

A two-paragraph statement released on the group's behalf by the British Treasury said the Saturday-Sunday meeting "was an informal one to take stock of developments since the meeting in New York on 22 September."

The financial leaders customarily do not officially announce what actions they decide upon in their meetings.

However, last September they announced they had agreed to coordinate intervention on world currency markets to drive down the value of the dollar.

After that meeting, the value of the dollar fell about 10 percent. It now is worth about 20 percent less than a year ago, when its skyrocketing value spurred calls for protectionist legislation in the U.S. Congress.

The finance ministers and central bank governors were satisfied with the progress made so far, continued the statement released Sunday, which appeared to signal new efforts to further devalue the dollar.

Q. A mountain is a big hill, a hill is a little mountain, right?

A. Not right, say the experts. Erosion makes a hill, upheaval makes a mountain. That's the difference.

In the open ocean between Brazil and Africa are some rocks sticking out of the water. St. Paul's Rocks, by name. On them live small brown moths. These moths eat nothing but feathers.

Q. If you can't speak well of a man, don't talk about him, you say. All right; but what do you think when a man habitually kisses his dog?

A. That's a silly dog.

THE BIBLE

Q. "Rise and shine" said my dad every morning when he stuck his head through my bedroom doorway. Where'd that line come from?

A. The British Navy's traditional wake-up call. "All hands... heave ho... Lash up and stow... Wake ye, wake ye, rise and shine; the morning's fine." And so on. It's lengthy.

The Bible was written in the East. It's better known in the West. "Das Kapital" was written in the West. It's better known in the East.

The Louvre is loaded with masterpieces, and none, not a one, is insured.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get your home in better shape early in the day. Tonight you may find that the pleasures you had anticipated do not work out.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Handle communication ideally in the morning, and then you can handle important home affairs.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY—he or she could be very clever at business matters so slant the education along such lines, and there can be much success in this lifetime. Later there may be a desire to get into other kinds of activities, but teach to be steadfast to whatever has been started.

Dolls reflect Oregon woman's talent

MEDFORD, Ore. (AP) — Some artists paint, create pottery or cut waxes on paper. Theresa McQuiston Robinson makes dolls. She's created between 2,000 and 3,000 of them in the last 10 years, for people all over the United States and in several foreign countries.

She creates quietly and modestly behind the counter of the shop in which she works, the Calico Junction in Jacksonville, as well as at home.

"I started as a home business," she says. "From there it just blossomed."

Theresa attributes part of her success to timing. She got interested in making dolls in the early 1970s, "before Cabbage Patch," and before national interest in sewn dolls "became in."

Living in the San Francisco-Bay area at the time, she tried experimenting with making a few dolls. A friend took a couple of the dolls to work with her and showed them to her co-workers. Theresa suddenly started to get orders. The quality of her work became known by word of mouth. That word spread.

Her dolls sold in shops in Beverly Hills and Santa Monica, often for as much as $500 each. She made dolls for Disney World and Universal Studios.

Theresa moved to the Rogue Valley eight years ago and has worked at the Calico Junction for six years.

At one point, she began creating patterns for dolls. Gingham Goose, affiliated with VIP of New York, commissioned her to do 12 patterns.

She did, and they were very successful.

The problem, she says, is that there is no money in creating doll patterns "unless you own the company," and then there are risks.

Pattern creators are paid a lump sum. She got $125 per pattern. The company that sold them made a lot of money, but Theresa didn't.

On the other hand, trying to market your own doll pattern is risky, she says. It costs about $8,000 to create one. It may or may not sell.

Theresa now prefers to take someone else's pattern and create dolls with it. If you compare her doll "with the pattern" from which it came, you'll notice obvious differences.

Vet, family should investigate benefits

DEAR ABBY: My father was rushed to the hospital with a sudden stroke. He is also suffering from heart failure and diabetes.

He was in a World War II veterans' service and was told that as soon as Dad's condition stabilized, he could be transferred to the veterans hospital, where he would be eligible for his veterans benefits.

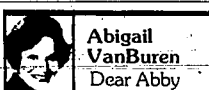

"Well, Dad's condition finally stabilized, but the veterans hospital refused to take him. Why? Because he was not taken to the veterans hospital."

Abby, Dad has earned the right to be treated at the veterans hospital, but because we didn't know about this "rule," he is being denied the benefit he earned. He served his country when it needed him, and now, just because he went to the "wrong" hospital first, it's as though he didn't spend a day in the Army. This is so unfair.

I am the proud daughter of "The Big Swede," Ove H. Anderson, but sign me.

—ANNA IN HILLSBORO, ORE.

DEAR ANNA: You need to know your father's rights and how to get them, so I recommend you get the newly published paperback titled:

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

"The Viet Vet Survival Guide." It contains valuable up-to-date information for ALL veterans — male and female — not just those from the Vietnam era.

Realizing the average Vietnam veteran did not get past high school, the authors use plain language and short sentences. They tell how to get medical care, psychiatric counseling, disability compensation, housing, and even how to apply for loans and upgrade bad discharges. They also deal with issues from Agent Orange to postwar stress, drug and alcohol dependency, and patients' rights, and clearly spell out what a veteran and his dependents are entitled to.

"The Viet Vet Survival Guide" (published by Battantion) is available for $3.95 in most bookstores — or send $4.50 (check or money order) to VVA Product Sales, P.O. Box 3666, Santa Rosa, Calif. 95402.

DEAR ABBY: Is there a nice way to tell a friend to mind her own business? I am a widow with time on my hands.

I would dearly love to join groups with common interests, but my neighbor (across the hall) tells people that I am "too busy" to join anything so not to bother me. She also tells acquaintances that I go to bed early, so not to call me in the evening. (I stay up for the 11 o'clock news every night.)

This woman is educated and well liked, but I am spending many lonely evenings because she decides what I can and cannot do.

I'm getting feedback from mutual friends who think she is great to take an interest in me.

What would you do?

—TIM ON MY HANDS

DEAR TIME: I would confront this "friend" and tell her exactly what you have told me.

press his emotions. The weak man hides.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped 439-cent self-addressed inverted envelope. If you prefer, send your check to: "Dear Abby, Letter Booklet," P.O. Box 38922, Hollywood, Calif. 90030.

MRI: Magnetism produces interior images

By KRISTIN TUCKER
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — For the past two years, Susan had been steadily losing strength in her legs.

Doctors using standard diagnostic techniques were unable to pinpoint the cause of her trouble.

But last month Susan was one of the first patients of Boise's new MRI Center of Idaho, spending $700 to lie inside an eight-foot magnet for 45 minutes.

After a few hours later, a neurologist pointed to video screen images of her brain and spinal cord and explained that her problems were due to a primary lateral sclerosis. With medication, Susan should gain strength in her legs almost immediately.

MRI, or magnetic resonance imagery, uses magnetic forces, radio frequency pulses and computer images to "see" things that had always before been nearly invisible.

"It gets very nice diagnostic images," says Twin Falls radiologist Dr. Sid Henderson. "But it is very expensive. CT (computerized tomography) scanning is half the cost. Is MRI worth it? That question has not been answered."

Michael Czech, director of the MRI Center, says MRI often saves the patient money by eliminating the need for other diagnostic techniques such as CT exams, X-rays and myelograms, an X-ray of the spinal cord which requires an injection of dye for contrast. MRI procedures do not require hospitalization, contrast dyes or radiation — and there are no known biological risks.

"MRI is not bothered by bone," says Czech, and MRI is especially valuable for looking at the spine and brain stem, areas where bone structures interfere with other diagnostic techniques. Brain and spine troubles account for 90 percent of the patients at the MRI Center, says Czech.

Scientists are studying other MRI applications, and predict its importance in diagnosing kidney, heart, eye and pelvic ailments. Other diseases may be possible by using MRI scans and a "process of elimination" that first tells doctors what the patient does not have.

Twin Falls neurologist Dr. Alan Schaffert says he knows of several Magic Valley patients, who have been referred to Boise's MRI Center, including one whose multiple sclerosis was confirmed by an MRI diagnosis. But for disk problems, Schaffert prefers using myelograms and CT scans. "I don't think we need (an MRI center) in the Magic Valley," he says. "If anything, we could use another CT scanner."

"MRI is so new and there are so many things they don't know," says Schaffert, saying that doctors may have trouble interpreting the exceptionally clear images.

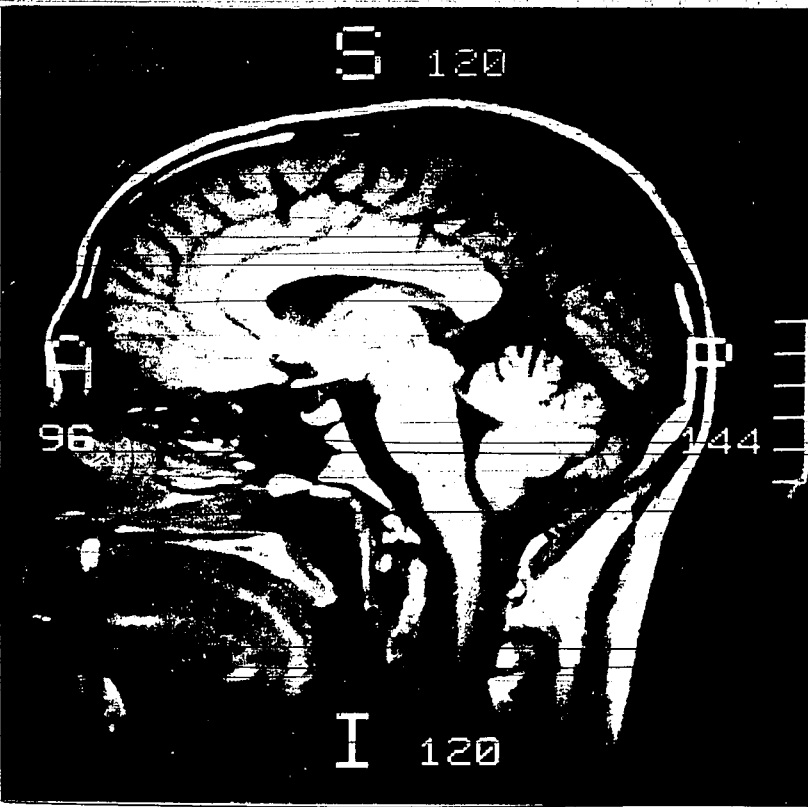

"The CT gave us pictures we had never had before," says Henderson. "We learned its limitations, and it fit into the overall scheme fairly quickly. (MRI) isn't doing that. But there are a few isolated areas where it beats anything we've got."

"The big picture is three, five, ten years down the road. We just won't know for a while," says Henderson. Czech says an MRI scan costs $600 to $800, depending on the type of study. As a free-standing, for-profit center, the MRI Center was established by St. Alphonsus, Mercy and West Valley hospitals and several area physicians to "hold its own" financially. Expenses are paid by MRI patients, not by hospital patients who don't need MRI, says Czech.

The MRI magnet is a large cylinder, with a watermelon-shaped magnetic field that extends 25 feet to each side and 50 feet front and back. Using the magnetic force requires patients to leave all metallic objects and watches outside the examination room, and excludes people wearing pacemakers, intracranial implants or surgical clips.

Patients lie on a $30,000 examination table which tumbles inside the magnet for the procedure. It is claustrophobic, say some. And the radio pulses produce a constant knocking sound—patients are given a pair of earplugs to help soften the noise.

In its first six weeks of operation, the center has been busy. People have been coming from Oregon, Washington, Nevada and all parts of Idaho, sent here by their physicians for this high-tech diagnostic technique. With scans taking an hour to an hour and a half to complete, the center is operating at full capacity, with about ten patients a day. And there is a waiting list.

Magnetic resonance imagery reveals strikingly clear pictures, such as that of the brain above, with no known risks

Prenatal or newborn, babies are proving themselves smart

Doctor believes in prenatal education

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — Every morning and every night during the last month of Ellen Danielson's pregnancy, her husband would lay his cheek against her swollen belly and have a heart-to-heart chat with their unborn child.

One day he said, "Hi, Baby. This is Daddy, and the baby kicked right back. As time went on, it became clear that when Daddy Danielson talked to Baby Danielson responded."

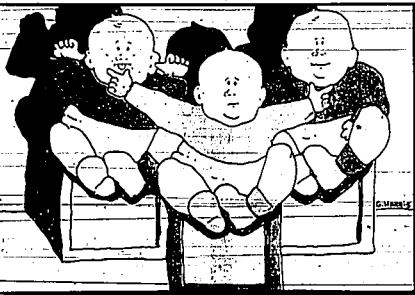

In the delivery room last October, Robert Danielson spoke to his son face-to-face for the first time. "He said, 'Hi, Baby. This is Daddy and immediately, the baby stopped crying,'" Danielson said. "As soon as he heard my voice, he tried to lift his head and turn to look at him. It was amazing."

Now, 13 months, red-haired, blue-eyed Bobby Danielson has had an amazing first year. At four months, he could say, "Momma" and "Da da." At seven months, he began walking. Now he says words like, "juice" and "vacuum" and amuses himself with picture books for 15 and 20 minutes at a time.

And he already has received his first degree: "Baby Superior" from Dr. E. Rene Van de Carr's Prenatal University, where more than 700 expectant parents have learned the simple techniques that Danielson used to give their unborn child a head start on communication.

The program was born in 1979 when one of Van de Carr's patients told him that she and her husband had been playing games with their baby, patting her stomach and encouraging the child to kick in a certain way.

Making faces with baby shows intellect

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Andrew Meltzoff spends a lot of his time making faces at babies.

He sticks out his tongue. He opens his mouth. He protrudes his lip. And he watches what happens. The babies stick out their tongues, open their mouths, protrude their lips.

We're talking very young babies, here, too. Days old. Hours old. In at least one case, minutes old.

This is not supposed to happen. It is contrary to some dearly held beliefs of child development specialists. It even challenges some of the precepts set forth by the late Swiss psychologist Jean Piaget, who revolutionized thinking about the early years of human emotional, social and cognitive development on a few decades ago.

and it became etched in psychological dogma — that children should be unable to imitate before they are about a year old.

So not surprisingly, it became controversial when Meltzoff published his first report on two- and three-week-old babies imitating face-making adults (mainly Meltzoff himself) about eight years ago in the journal Science.

In the succeeding years, Meltzoff, at the Department of experimental psychology at Oxford University and more recently at the Child Development and Mental Retardation Center at the University of Washington in Seattle, has been able to replicate and confirm his earlier findings.

And in addition, he has been able to see FACES on Page B2

The grass is always greener . . .

The hottest health rage in La Liand (the term used to identify Los Angeles by everyone except those who live there) is drinking a foul brew made of pulverized wheatgrass, according to People magazine. Wheatgrass juice is supposed to increase stamina and decrease appetite. . . powers that probably could be marketable, although the claims are not exactly based on scientific fact. But as one of its advocates suggests, the chief benefit of wheatgrass juice could be psychological: "The taste is so bad, I figure it must be good for you."

Going the extra mile dangerous

As a number of researchers have observed, running more than 25 miles a week results in a dramatic increase in injuries. Aerobics guru Kenneth Cooper argued that extra running first yields diminishing returns and eventually negative ones. For non-racers, he set minimums and maximums: no less than two miles, four times a week; and no more than three miles on five days. The cardiovascular benefits of running five three-mile jaunts per week are said to be the same as running 80 miles.

This diet trick you can count on Trying to lose weight? St. Louis Post Dispatch columnist Elaine Vietz has a diet trick that just might take the cake. She diets by calorie counting. The trick, though, is to be selective about which calorie count is utilized. In her search for the lowest calorie count, Vietz has assembled a massive library of calorie-count publications. She has become an expert in her ability to find the best diet plan where calorie count is concerned. In some cases, calorie counts for beer can vary as much as 80 calories, or the equivalent of one or two Oreos cookies . . . depending upon which chart you consult.

Touring centers offer Alpine alternative

By DOUG NOBLE GREENE
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — When it comes to getting serious about cross-country skiing, there are two places that stand out in southern Idaho: Sun Valley and Wood River Nordic ski touring centers.

With the largest staffs and trail systems in the Wood River Valley, these touring centers each has its own character.

Sun Valley Nordic Ski Touring Center is celebrating its 15th birthday this year, along with Sun Valley's 50th anniversary.

Founder and director Elf Odmark virtually introduced cross-country skiing as a commercial enterprise to the Sun Valley area. At one point he worked as a coach for the U.S. Nordic Olympic Team and he has authored books on the sport, including "Cross-Country Skiing . . . The Natural Way."

While he was still teaching Alpine, or downhill, skiing on Mt. Baldy, he started cross-country tours in the backcountry. He said one of the most popular was taking people by helicopter over to Elkhorn's Indian Creek area, with the party ski-ing back to Sun Valley Nordic. He also established trail systems in the backcountry north of Sun Valley, including the Prairie Creek system now managed by the Forest Service.

Sun Valley Nordic has over 25 kilometers of trails, approximately 10 of them with skating trails. The rest is doubletracked.

Odmark has a new, large snow-grooming machine that has increased both the quality and quantity of his tracks. The "courtesy trail" that links his operation with the eastern end of Ketchum is a popular addition. So is the challenging 6-kilometer trail sking lane that winds around the Sun Valley Gun Club.

To go with these miles and miles of trails is some of the best scenery in the Wood River Valley. Much of the system meanders along Trail Creek and winds through The Fairways, Sun Valley's equivalent of Beverly Hills.

Odmark, in conjunction with the Sun Valley Co., has begun a new service: lunches at Trail Creek Cabin. A 3-kilometer trail paralleling Trail Creek stops right at the restaurant's door. Their soup and salad bar is one of the best in town. And for those with nocturnal instincts, you can cross-country ski there for dinner, using headlamps available for rent at the center.

Now in their third season, Wood River Nordic is the new kid in town. In that time, owners Bill and Annie Vanderbil have turned the Bigwood Golf Course into a 20-kilometer trail system, complete with the largest skating network in the valley. When driving just north of Ketchum on Highway 75, it is not unusual to see dozens of brightly dressed skiers of all calibers skating, striding and plodding their way around the course.

The new cross-country technique of skating is especially popular here. It is often easier to learn, a faster way to ski and hassle-free because there is no need to apply kick wax. You can ski for that 10 minutes you would have spent in the wax room. But if you do want to wax, there are two workbenches downstairs, complete with irons and wax scrapers. All you bring is your wax, and cork.

Do you agonize over making decisions? Faces

Decisions. Decisions. Everywhere you turn, there's a decision to be made. You can't avoid them.

If you act, you decide. If you don't act, you decide. Just to be alive means making constant decisions—some easy, some difficult, some momentary, and some whose effects last a lifetime.

If you're like most people, at one time or another you've been afflicted with paralyzing indecisiveness. Your mind keeps spinning around in circles. You procrastinate, delay, consult friends and family (whose advice confuses you even more) and keep hoping for a miracle. But nothing happens to point to a clear, easy way out.

So why is decision-making so difficult? Because, says Andrea Williams, author of "Making Decisions," "Your mind craves what is simple, clear-cut, and obvious. It craves certainty. But life is often indefinite, unpredictable, or complicated. Your mind wants to know, and you are asking it to guess."

A decision is always only a guess, observes Williams. For that reason, you may run into trouble making decisions when you assume:

- You "should" know exactly how everything is going to turn out. (You don't.)
- There is a perfect, right answer. (There isn't.)
- All loss, pain or discomfort you or others experience could somehow be avoided if only you could figure out which is the "right" choice. (You can't.)
- Complicating the picture is that you could be a pleaser who makes decisions to placate other people, because you fear ridicule and rejection. Or you could be a hard-driving perfectionist who relentlessly considers every possible alternative until you become up with so many choices you become immobilized, or you're simply a bargain hunter who hesitates to commit yourself until the last minute for fear something better will come along.

But you don't have to be a pleaser, a perfectionist or even a bargain hunter to have trouble making decisions. Making a choice (particularly one you consider vital) is itself a stress-provoking event, "points out Judy Gaylin, author of "How to Make a Decision." The stress that accompanies a tough decision, in fact, can sometimes be so intense it will even blind you to available alternatives.

If the reasons for indecisiveness are myriad, so are the strategies for improving your skill in decision-making. Here are a few to consider:

- Adopt the philosophy that making any decision, any move, even the wrong one, is better than just sitting there.
- Use a balance sheet approach to write down the advantages and disadvantages of each course of action. Writing is a must to help you formulate and weigh your choices.
- As you're weighing alternatives, write each one up, ask yourself, "What's the worst thing that could happen, and what could I do if it did?" It may be a relief to look at the worst possible outcome and see that you could really deal with it.
- Remember, no matter how tough the problem, there are always options. If you can't see them, work until you can.
- Develop the habit of being decisive. If you find yourself making a decision if you need to, like what you want for breakfast or what to wear, and then move to the larger ones. Go with your first choice, and don't look back.

Plan on making some "wrong" decisions and decide now you're not going to punish yourself because you didn't have adequate information or couldn't foresee the future. You did the best you could. Besides that, you have to risk in order to grow.

Remember that you'll always run across people who won't like your decisions. But, as one author astutely observes, "Try to make all things to all people and you disappear." So please yourself—that you can do!

Don't get hung up going "right" just because someone says, "go left." It's easy to slide into old habits of rebelling against what others want for you instead of asking yourself, "What do I want?" Do what you want, even if it happens to be what others also want for you. That way, you're in control.

Remember that, with a little thoughtful weighing of pros and cons, a quick decision may be as good as that takes a day. The amount of time spent on a decision is generally not an adequate indicator of its quality.

Quit looking for people to tell you what to do. You may be an expert at that.

With heavy-duty decisions, keep in mind there's no such thing as a perfect choice. It's all relative. Each decision leads down a different path in life—not necessarily better or worse—just different.

Decision-making takes on a new perspective when you realize that many decisions can be changed. So move ahead and, if necessary, make adjustments later.

If you're panicking under a deadline decision, check to see if you can make more time. You may find that the time limit imposed by you meone else is actually more elastic than you thought.

If you can't decide between two courses of action, try doing both in small doses.

If you agonize over small decisions, adopt the motto, "Don't sweat the little things." Most of the decisions you make simply don't matter in the long run.

If you want to combat indecisiveness, the first firm decision you could make—right now—is to decide more and suffer less. Now see, wasn't that easy?

Ski

When the Vanderbilts bought Wood River Nordic, they established their two biggest goals as "consistent, high-quality tracks and an atmosphere that encourages a variety of people in the tracks and in the shop," they say.

This year, they added a larger snow-grooming machine that has substantially increased their ability to groom top-quality tracks. Most of their system is groomed with two traditional tracks next to a side-skating lane. They also have a 6-kilometer "river loop" without the skating lane. Bill says, "It's for touring only. It is an easy trail with beautiful views of the Wood River."

Wood River Nordic has instructors that can teach all levels of skiing. They often have special clinics covering everything from skating to "cross-country" skiing for Alpine skiers. "If you want to see yourself in action, they'll provide video lessons too."

One of the most popular items at Wood River Nordic has nothing to do with equipment or technique. It's their soap junctions. "The Vanderbilts say, "Last year most of our phone calls were to find out what the 'wax of the day' was. Now we get a lot of calls inquiring about the 'soup of the day.'"

Trail fees at Wood River Nordic and Sun Valley Nordic are $3 and there are a variety of lesson options. Rather than being in competition with Alpine skiing, Omdark and the Vanderbilts are finding visitors to their tracks saying that cross-country skiing has given them another reason to come back to Sun Valley.

to show that the ability to synchronize different senses—for example to touch or hear something and later on identify it by looking at it—occurs at a much earlier age than had previously been thought.

This ability to process information using more than one sense, is known to specialists as "cross-modal matching," or "active inter-modal matching." Most specialists believed that this perceptual skill was acquired slowly as the infant developed and did not normally occur until months, perhaps even a year, after birth.

"We can now say with confidence that the capacity to imitate facial gestures is part of man's innate endowment and does not depend on learned associations," Meltzoff said at a meeting of the National Center for Infant-Infant-Program training institute in Washington last month.

Some of Meltzoff's most recent work, published in the Journal Child Development, shows that "even newborn infants (one of them only 43 minutes old) can imitate facial gestures."

"What we find out about imitation has direct and important implications for theories of infant perceptual, cognitive, and social development," Meltzoff said. "His work shows that babies are innately able to process information from their environment—much sooner than anyone believed and are therefore not blank slates."

Meltzoff also determined that 12 to 21 day-old babies could imitate facial expressions even when their response was delayed until after the demonstration was ended. "To keep the baby from imitating too soon, Meltzoff said, "we simply put a pacifier in the baby's mouth while we did the gestures... Then we stopped doing the gestures, assumed a passive face and only then pulled out the plug and let the baby respond."

Again there was a high rate of infant response. As soon as the pacifier came out, the tongue came out of the mouth opened or the lip protruded, depending on the earlier adult gesture.

In order to eliminate the possibility that the infants had not previously seen an adult making faces or were not responding to some sort of innate instinct, Meltzoff tried another experiment. He wanted to test whether infants can associate specific sounds with specific facial expressions demonstrating an ability of the infants to associate information received by one sense with identification using another. This would indicate a more complex central nervous system organization.

To test this, he studied 32 4-month-old babies who were propped up—one at a time—in infant seats in front of a panel that displayed a photograph of an adult with his mouth open as he says "ahhh," and another photograph with an adult saying "ecccc." There was a speaker between the two photographs.

In a few minutes, the infants learned to associate the sounds with the correct facial expression when one sound was presented with one picture. But then, when both pictures were shown, but only one sound came through the speaker, the infants consistently looked at the picture of the adult articulating that sound.

Penicillin-resistant gonorrhea cases reported doubled last year

ATLANTA (AP) — Cases of a penicillin-resistant strain of gonorrhea doubled last year, fueled by an unprecedented outbreak in south Florida, according to federal health officials.

The national Centers for Disease Control reported Thursday that at least 6,020 cases of the disease occurred in the first nine months of 1986, compared with 2,975 cases in the same period a year earlier.

For the first time, the disease — known to scientists as penicillinase-producing Neisseria gonorrhea — was seen in all 50 states last year, although New York, Los Angeles and the state of Florida accounted for 71 percent of all cases.

The sexually transmitted disease is resistant to treatment with penicillin, although treatment is possible with other antibiotics.

Florida reported 2,886 cases of the disease in 1985, up 181 percent from the year before. Dade County, which includes Miami, accounted for 1,740 cases.

"The epidemic situation in south Florida is without precedent in the United States," the CDC said in its weekly report.

"Origin-related, part-time prostitution" has been identified as a factor in the Dade County epidemic, the Atlanta-based health agency said.

The disease was first seen in the United States in 1976.

HHS: Pregnant women warned not to drink

WASHINGTON (AP) — The secretary of health and human services called on the medical profession Thursday to alert all women cause drinking during pregnancy can cause birth defects and is a leading cause of mental retardation.

"We owe it to ourselves and our unborn children to give this simple, forceful advice to women: If you're pregnant or about to become pregnant, don't drink," said Bowen, who is a physician.

"The burden clearly falls on each of us in the health field to help prevent these unnecessary tragedies to ensure that every woman knows she can better protect her child by abstaining from drinking throughout pregnancy," he said.

tain spot.

"She'd move her hand, and the baby would move its foot," Van de Carr said. "They'd be chasing each other around the abdomen so to speak."

Child development specialists he consulted insisted such efforts were a waste of time, but Van de Carr's own knowledge of fetal development, his theories about prenatal psychology and the experiences of his patients convinced him otherwise.

"The baby can hear the intestines of the mother, the mother's heart, her breathing movements, and many, many sounds that come in from the outside," Van de Carr said. "But until the baby learns that some sounds are more important than others, the baby has no way of discerning what has meaning and what doesn't."

Channeling the baby's perceptions begins at five months with the "Kick Game," a way of getting the child's attention twice a day for a few minutes each time. When baby kicks, the parent pats that spot, then waits for baby to kick again.

"After you don't do anything for a minute or two, the baby kicks again," Van de Carr said. "You pat again, then pause. The baby waits for a little while, then kicks again. If you pat someplace else, the baby may actually move its foot to kick where you patted."

After two months of the Kick Game, the baby's response pattern is established, and it's time to add what Van de Carr calls his "primary word list" — six basic words connected with distinct physical sensations: pat, rub, squeeze, shake, stroke and tap.

It's also time to begin talking to the baby, reading to it and playing some music — the same song each time, preferably something soothing.

In one study involving 150 mothers — those who faithfully followed the Prenatal University program reported that their children had a significantly higher incidence of pre-speech, early speech and use of compound words, Van de Carr said.

Familiarizing unborn children with elementary communication helps ease the trauma of birth, Van de Carr believes.

We are proud to introduce a whole new way to care for your health and the people who really care. Everything we do makes for a healthier you.

While the term "health maintenance" seems to be just beginning to gain popularity, you should be aware that it has long been the underlying philosophy of chiropractic health care. Chiropractic teaches that the body has an in-born tendency to maintain a state of good health. Given the proper essential ingredients of food, water, rest, clean air, adequate nutrition, and a properly functioning nerve system, the body is capable of maintaining health. Chiropractic is a natural, drugless health care system, which focuses on preventing or correcting the cause rather than treating the symptoms of illness.

The science of chiropractic holds that the cause of many illnesses is improper nerve supply to the body organs or tissues. The main procedure in chiropractic health care is examining the spine for deviated positioning or malfunctioning of spinal vertebrae that alter the normal nerve supply necessary for the body to function properly. Early detection of spinal deviations BEFORE they interfere with the nervous system and cause symptoms, can help the body maintain a state of health.

We at Fox Chiropractic Clinic are all intensely involved in promoting chiropractic health care as THE means of Health Maintenance today. Why not join us, and your friends and neighbors, who are enjoying the benefits of regular, chiropractic check-ups? Make an appointment today.

USDA delays contract cut

Storage inspections improve

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has withdrawn a threat to cancel its contract with the Idaho Department of Agriculture for grain warehouse inspections this month.

Marxman, deputy administrator for commodity programs in the U.S. Stabilization and Conservation Service, said Friday that the government is continuing the agreement beyond a Jan. 15 expiration date because of improvements made in state inspection procedures.

Federal officials notified the state agency last October that the contract was being ended on Jan. 15 because of suspensions of 16 Idaho warehouses from federal reserve programs. Eight are located in the Magic Valley.

"They (state officials) are making progress," Marxman said Friday. "I've temporarily put on hold the decision to terminate the agreement."

The changes have included tighter examination procedures and stricter methods for tracking grain movements, said Lane Jolliffe, administrator for the Idaho Department's Division of Agricultural Inspections.

Jolliffe also said Friday that Jim

R. Boatman, chief of the state Bureau of Warehouse Control, resigned Jan. 1, although he will stay on the job while the department recruits a replacement.

Jolliffe said the resignation came about because of the "overall situation," but Boatman was not forced out.

"We had some discussions on it and it probably was mutually agreed," Jolliffe said.

Boatman late Friday said he preferred to decline comment.

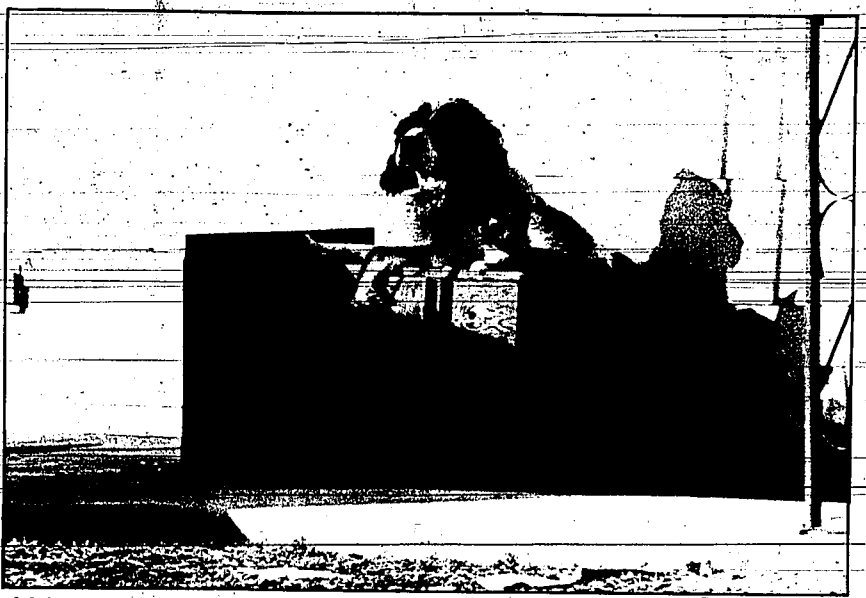

The U.S. Commodity Credit Corp., a branch of the ASCS, suspended the warehouses from taking in grain for federal reserves late last summer. Federal officials alleged that the warehouses had moved — and, in many cases, sold — wheat under government care without permission from the CCC and in violation of federal rules.

As much as 1 million bushels may have been moved, industry sources estimated.

However, some warehouse owners said they thought they had obtained permission from the Bureau of Warehouse Control. The Bureau is the state agency which conducts examinations of warehouses under the federal inspection agreement.

"There may have been misunderstandings on both sides," said Jolliffe. "There was a question."

Murder's familiar in Idaho

'Usually, you're killed by someone you know'

By JANE ROBISON
and PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writers

TWIN FALLS — Murder seems to belong to the rugged, quiet, self-sufficient environment of small communities in Idaho. But murder does happen in rural Idaho and when it does, usually, you're killed by someone you know," said Bill Overton, Idaho's chief of law enforcement.

"Usually, it's a family-oriented thing," Overton said.

In Idaho there were 34 murders committed in 1984. Of those, 22 occurred in rural areas, 5 in the metro area and 7 in other cities of 10,000 population or more.

Overton characterized the motives for murder in family fights as "irrational, people just get carried away."

Figures compiled by the Federal Bureau of Investigation found that 67 percent of the murders committed in 1984 were perpetrated by relatives or persons acquainted

The study, "Crime in the United States," also found that arguments resulted in 30 percent of all murders, and of the murders that involved family relationships, 48 percent involved spouses killing spouses.

The study concluded that "murders are primarily a societal problem over which law enforcement has little or no control."

Law enforcement officials in Paul, Idaho, saying there was little that could have prevented Ken Arthur Hayden, the ex-husband of City Clerk Judy McLean, from crashing through her bedroom window two weeks ago and killing her. He was shot and killed by her husband, Kermit McLean, in the attempt.

Overton said his Hayden case was not typical. Most homicides that are the result of domestic disputes are quick, emotional responses, and are not premeditated, he said.

Overton called the Paul murders a case of depression.

"In cases of extreme depression, a person may think ahead and follow a plan through that he or she would never dream of normally," Overton said. "Depression does add things to people."

In most murder cases in the Magic Valley over the past few years, the suspects had been strangers to their victims. And, a majority of the dead were women.

Deanna Kay Parks was an exception, however, among the usually male suspects.

Parks, 38, was charged with second-degree murder for the death of her husband, 62-year-old Walter Parks, April 30 in Twin Falls. Parks was acquitted Nov. 27 by a jury. During the trial, she said she had stabbed her husband in self-defense. She said her husband had regularly abused her.

Jerome officers still are investigating an Oct. 10 murder of Pauline Slater, 68, and her husband, John Slater, 81. The police originally believed Slater shot his cancer-stricken wife, then shot himself. But officials have not released their findings.

Indigent bills already dig deep in Gooding

By JANE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Paying for indigent care in Gooding County has been expensive this year. Of $200,000 budgeted for indigent care in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, 1985, less than $20,000 remains for use in the next nine months.

County Commission Chairman Robert Thackeray said Monday $57,000 was used as Gooding's share in the state catastrophic medical care program and the rest used for indigent expenses, both in medical and other care to the needy.

The state catastrophic fund pays medical claims over $10,000, and Thackeray said one more $10,000 claim on the Gooding fund will just about exhaust the fund.

He explained that the county is required by state law to provide indigent care, and if the money runs out before the new fiscal year begins in October, the county will have to borrow money against anticipated taxes, and then levy an additional property tax to cover the bill.

In other business, Dale Gilbert of Wendell, asked the commission to consider using the county's share of state recreational water user fees to improve a fishing spot near the Bell Rapids docks on the Snake River.

He said the dock area, known locally as "social security hole" because it is a favorite fishing spot for senior citizens, needs to be enlarged with better access provided.

The commissioners told Gilbert they would talk with the county's Water Ways Commission to see what can be done.

"Tourism is the only cash crop left in Magic Valley and this could be an economic boost to the county if that area is improved," Gilbert told the commission.

Mayors, church groups join forces in celebrating World Religion Day

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When newly installed Mayor Robert Fort of Filer was selected by a news reporter as one of several prominent citizens to comment on his New Year's resolutions, his spontaneous response was that he would work for world peace.

That offhand answer brought Fort an invitation to the World Religion Day observance in Twin Falls Sunday to present the official proclamation for the second phase of the International Year of Peace program and to express his hopes for peace in more detail.

Fort told those gathered in the Presbyterian Church gymnasium Sunday afternoon that he had no time to think about the reporter's question that day—but instead of such things as keeping his desk clean or giving up a bad habit, it was world peace that came the foreground as he looked to the new year.

Fort read the World Religion Day proclamation, which he signed along with mayors of several other Magic Valley towns. It called on the citizens of Magic Valley to unite in prayers and action for peace in a move that could help inspire the spread of world peace.

Fort said it is fitting the local observances of World Religion Day and Martin Luther King Day should come together on Sunday and Monday.

"Martin Luther King lived his dream for America, and America has become a better place because of his dream," Fort said. "He helped us build greater concerns for civil and human rights and helped bring these rights-as-political issues to the conference tables of the world."

Fort explained the "Beyond War Movement" is an effort fostered by concerned persons who know the world now faces extinction through global war. War, he said, is caused by the way humans think and there is change under way about the way humans think about war.

"I hope you will pray to God to let there be peace and that you will say, 'Let it begin with me.'" Fort concluded.

Both youth and adults met Sunday in the second phase of the Magic Peace Project, a local International Year of Peace effort to build peace through international fellowship.

In addition to entertaining musical and dance numbers and a children's story by Twin Falls Junior Miss, Kelly Custer, the program featured an explanation of the ten "magic tricks" of the local effort to promote International Peace.

Harry Massoth and Mary Lee Roberts shared master of ceremonies duties at the opening of the program, which was sponsored by members of the ecumenical youth group from Presbyterian, Episcopal and Methodist churches in the Magic Valley.

Different youth delegates explained the ten magic tricks. These included the magic of proclamation, friendship, prayer, inspiration, positive vision, action, participation, giving, celebration and choice.

Park event to mark King's birthday

TWIN FALLS — Today will be a work and school day as usual for Magic Valley residents, but Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday will not pass entirely unnoticed.

Local churches and peace activists are planning a half-hour celebration of the civil rights leader's birthday in the Twin Falls City Park. The gathering will feature prayers for peace and a sing-along, culminating in the release of 2,000 balloons.

The unity gathering will begin at 12:45. That celebration, along with others scheduled for last weekend in honor of World Religion Day, and sponsored by the Magic Valley Committee for the International Year of Peace, Twin Falls Association of Churches, Fellowship of Reconciliation and Bahais of the Magic Valley.

The Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce reports that businesses and banks will be open as usual today. In addition, city, county and state government offices and the College of Southern Idaho will be open.

Today has been declared a federal holiday, however. That means no mail will be delivered. And federal offices such as that of the Internal Revenue Service will be closed.

Gov. John Evans has asked Idaho citizens to recognize the holiday, even though it has not been declared an official state holiday.

"Dr. King spent much of his life working on civil rights issues on the behalf of black Americans," Evans said. "But his dream was the same for all Americans — to be loving rather than hating, showing understanding instead of anger, and making peace, not war."

Liability claims above normal

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — During the past three years city insurers have paid out $100,000 for claims brought against the city in cases that ranged from deaths to sprained ankles in city parks.

The city still faces $1.1 million in claims over the same time period, including mostly frivolous claims, says Tim Obenchain, who acts as insurance broker for the city.

That does not include the 75 percent of claims which Obenchain says are obviously frivolous and never result in any action. For example, city employees say residents have asked that a swing set be repainted after a building was condemned and burned down, and they have attempted to collect for injuries when a spark allegedly landed in the eye of a spectator at a fireworks display.

City insurers have paid 14 claims in the last three years. The largest two claims paid by insurers on the city's behalf during that time involved the death of children, city records show.

A settlement of $50,000 was made when Chad Lopez, age 8, was killed in September 1983 when the bike he was riding

Murder

Robert Wade Saunders of Arizona admitted July 17 to a charge that he strangled 67-year-old Darwin Frank Taylor in the home of Marilyn Arzoo in Twin Falls.

Perkins testified that he had been staying at Perkins' house a few days before the murder.

Jamie Charboneau, 25, was found guilty by a jury in May of fatally shooting to death Marilyn Arzoo, 36, June 1, 1984, at her Jerome County home.

Teenager Cory Sellers was sentenced March 5 to life imprisonment for the death of 67-year-old Faye Ostler of Hazelton May 1984.

Demetrio Beltran, a Mexican national, pleaded guilty in November 1984 to the shooting death of 25-year-old Maria Teresa Velazquez Oct. 1, 1984, in Buhl. The two were co-workers.

Jerry Pennell, 21, was found guilty of shooting a neighbor for the beating death of his deaf-mute girlfriend, 27-year-old Carlene Gillespie, March 23, 1983. The death was the result of a quarrel between the two.

Keith Hogenrath, 31, also was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter for the shooting death of his former girlfriend and her male companion June 18, 1983, in Buhl.

Dr. Frederick Smith, chief psychologist with the regional state Department of Health and Welfare in Twin Falls, says some people may focus all their troubles on former spouses, girlfriends or relatives.

When the stress of life becomes too much, the focus of their anger may be injured. The bottom line is how people manage their lives with the most common denominator, stress.

While some may handle stress by internalizing it, others externalize it. Ostler and Sellers had been neighbors. Ostler was beaten with a baseball bat.

Domestic fights particularly are dangerous to outsiders because of unpredictability, Smith adds. Someone who steps in to help one partner may find the person doesn't want to be helped and quickly turns to help the partner he or she is fighting with.

Twin Falls County Sheriff Jim Munn agrees deputies always use extra caution when responding to domestic quarrels because "You don't want to you're getting into it. Nine out of every 10 female victims in the U.S. were murdered by males, while males were most often murdered by males, 83 percent.

Claims

The other settlement was for $45,000 when a child drowned at Dierkes Lake in June 1984.

The third largest payment, $40,330, was made when a man stepped into a water meter hole left open by city employees on private property in April 1983.

A woman who fell and broke her ankle on the boat dock at Dierkes Lake was paid $15,000. Two sprained ankles on city-owned property were worth a total of $6,344. One person who slipped and sprained an ankle on the lake diving board was paid $1,844 of that. The remainder went to a man who fell in an "improperly maintained" alley; city records show.

Another ankle injury, caused when a park visitor stepped on a sprinkler head, resulted in a payment of almost $500.

Most of the other claims were for property damages when employees driving city vehicles had traffic accidents or cut buried telephone cables while digging trenches.

However, one settlement of $3,900 was made for a sewage backup problem. City attorney Shant Bengoechea says that in the future he would like to see the city fight similar claims. A city law requires that residents install backflow preventers.

Snake River claims Ririe man

RIRIE (AP) — Searchers have found the body of a missing Ririe man in the South Fork of the Snake River, about 300 yards below where his boat capsized a week earlier.

Larry Hanner, 50, was found by a fisherman in a logjam on Saturday, a Jefferson County Sheriff's Deputy said.

Searchers began looking for Hanner Jan. 11 after he was reported missing. The search was suspended later in the week.

Sheriff's deputies said Hanner, his son Kip, also of Ririe, and Idaho Falls resident Jim Pike were fishing about 1 1/2 miles east of the Lorenzo bridge. The boat ran into a log jam and capsized, throwing the three men into the frigid waters.

Boat murder trial set to begin

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — More than three years after eight bodies were found in a smoldering fire on a boat in a quiet cove, jury selection is about to begin in the trial of the man accused of the killings.

John Kenneth Peel, 25, a boat builder from Bellingham, Wash., faces eight counts of first-degree murder and a charge of first-degree arson in the trial, which begins Monday in Ketchikan. He was freed on $1 million bond raised mostly by neighbors and friends and has been living with his family.

The 50-foot boat investor, from Blaine, Wash., was found burning Sept. 7, 1982, between Fish-Egg and Cole Islands, near Craig, some 50 miles west of Ketchikan in Alaska's southeastern tip.

Outdoors hearing set locally

BOISE (AP) — The State of Idaho plans to look in to its residents' favorite outdoor activities. The information will be relayed to the President's Commission on American Outdoors as it could set policy on many recreational programs.

Two public hearings will be conducted in Burley and Twin Falls by the Governor's Task Force on American Outdoors and a public opinion survey will be held in eastern Idaho. Outdoor Recreation Planner John Barnes says that it has been 20 years since such a study was made. The first effort resulted in the creation of the Wilderness Act, the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act, the National Trails System, and the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation.

The Burley meeting is scheduled on Jan. 28 in the Burley City Hall. The local hearing is slated for Jan. 29 at the Canyon Springs Inn, 1357 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

Fierce rains pelt Washington

SEATTLE (AP) — A fierce rainstorm dumped more than 4 inches of rain on western Washington state, spawning floods and mudslides and leaving one man critically injured and another feared drowned, authorities said Sunday.

In Juanita, an east-Seattle suburb on the shore of Lake Washington, a mudslide Saturday damaged eight homes and trapped Teresa and Bryce Michael, both 25.

Michael was listed in critical condition at Evergreen General Hospital Sunday morning, said nursing supervisor Linda Turner. Mrs. Michael suffered minor injuries and was discharged Saturday night, the hospital said.

A mudslide north of Seattle covered a 100-foot-long stretch of Burlington Northern rail line, forcing the rerouting of two Amtrak trains, said Dan Engstrom, Amtrak crew base supervisor.

Loveland hustles to put state sales tax hike to a quick vote

By QUANE KENYON

Idaho Legislature
1986

BOISE — Rep. Don Loveland, R-Boise, says he doesn't want to see the Idaho Legislature still in session next fall.

"That's why he will be pressing this week for a quick vote on the House floor on a bill raising the state sales tax."

With the Legislature beset with financial problems, Loveland says it appears the only solution is more money—and that may mean raising the state sales tax from 4 to 5 percent.

"We should try sales tax first, at least that's my feeling," he said. "We need to run something out of the floor so we can get an idea what people are thinking about and go from there."

Otherwise, "we'll be here next fall, I don't want to be here next fall," he said.

Loveland heads one of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee subcommittees assigned to work on the horde of tax bills which have surfaced in the first two weeks of the legislative session.

And the floor appears unlikely to abate. On Monday, the committee takes up yet another approach toward generating more tax revenue.

Committee members will consider a measure adding an extra $10-per-state tax return for the next four years to generate $100 million for building a new state prison.

Sponsors estimate that would generate $17.5 million, a little more than the current estimate cost of the new facility.

Also on Monday, legislators will get a look at the environmental contamination problem in northern Shoshone County.

State Department of Health and Welfare officials are scheduled to opt taxes.

Loveland said the tax bill subcommittee hopes to meet about Tuesday and Wednesday around the Legislature's floor measures.

Loveland said he didn't particularly favor one tax-increase bill over another, but lawmakers have a variety of choices from.

Anti-nuclear activists say people can turn tide

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Activists who gathered here to mobilize political forces against the production of nuclear weapons said average citizens can turn the tide with enough desire, perseverance, organization and knowledge.

During a daylong strategy session Saturday at Willamette University, speakers shared tips on how to access information through the federal Freedom of Information Act and how to work the pressure points in the political system.

"This is an exercise that involves the acquisition and the exercising of power," Robert J. Alvarez told the group of about 100 people. Alvarez is director of the nuclear weapons and nuclear power project for the Environmental Institute, a national public-interest organization based in Washington, D.C.

Alvarez said the Hanford Nuclear Reservation's Plutonium Uranium Extraction plant in Washington state was producing more than half of America's plutonium for nuclear weapons. He characterized Hanford as a "crucial piece of the international arms problem."

He said many existing laws including the federal Clean Air Act, Clean Water Act and Nuclear Waste Policy Act could be used as sophisticated tools by knowledgeable people to stop the cycle of nuclear weapons production.

He drew connections between weapons production and contamination of the environment and health problems, especially among closely observed communities of nuclear workers.

Alvarez described Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., chairman of the U.S. Senate Appropriations Committee, as a person with potentially great power to help shut down the nuclear weapons program if enough people locally and nationally showed their interest.

"You have a very powerful member of Congress who at least in principle is opposed to the arms race," Alvarez said.

The crowd split into workshops to discuss topics that included "Making Hanford an Obsolete Household Word," "Influencing Elected Officials on Direct Action," and "The Conference sponsored by the Oregon Hanford Oversight Committee, a coalition of church groups, Indian treaty rights organizations, health-care workers, and environmental and disarmament groups."

The session was expected to lay the groundwork for a regional summit in March with activist organizations from Oregon, Washington and Idaho. Similar meetings elsewhere would help form the foundation for a national network of organizers, predicted.

The Hanford Nuclear Reservation is in southeastern Washington near the Tri-Cities, about 30 miles north of Oregon and upstream on the Columbia River. It is one of three places where the bulk of the nation's plutonium search to find a permanent burial ground for spent fuel rods from commercial nuclear power plants.

Pats keep chilling Super Bowl bets

By TIM DAHLBERG
The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Super Bowl fever has yet to hit this city's legal sports books, where gamblers who normally make the game the heaviest bet of the year are sitting on their wallets, waiting to see if the line favoring the Chicago Bears by 10 points will change.

"Even if you're a Bear fan it's hard for you to give 10 points away," said Jimmy Vaccaro, who runs the MGM Grand Hotel sports book. "Right now, there is no money being bet."

Vaccaro predicted betting on this year's Super Bowl will not match last year when an attractive matchup between the San Francisco 49ers and Miami Dolphins induced bettors to lighten their wallets to the tune of an estimated $45 million. That game matched two teams that bettors were equally divided on who would win, and when the 49ers opened as a 10-point favorite, there was lots of money bet both ways. "We did $250,000 the first night the game went up because it was such a neutral contrast," said Vaccaro. "This year, people are waiting on the 10-point line. Every day the public looks and doesn't do anything. It's another day you go without taking in money."

Sonny Reizner, who runs the Castaways sports book, said he doesn't expect to match last year but still figures to do well on the game.

"There's plenty of time left for people to bet and there will be Chicago people coming in this week with their money," said Reizner. "It will certainly pick up, although I don't think it will be as good as last year." Reizner said New England's appearance in the Super Bowl will hinder betting because people living in that region are more conservative with their money and are not known as big bettors.

However, he added, the Super Bowl always brings out a significant number of people who make it their only bet of the year. "Before it's over, everyone that has ever made a bet manages to come up with some reason why he or she will bet on the Super Bowl," said Reizner. "Everybody gets carried away by reading about it and seeing things on it for two weeks."

Reizner said all the early betting has been on the Bears, although he personally would take the points and

New England, which has been on quite a roll with bettors this year. "They (New England) have won 14 straight bets without losing with the points," he said. "I've never heard of anything like that in my day. I think 10 is a very high number. I think the Patriots will score and I think the Bears will have a great deal of difficulty scoring many points."

Art Manteris, who runs the Caesars Palace sports book, where bets of up to $100,000 are being accepted on the game, agreed.

"The Patriots are the Rodney Dangerfield of football and have not gotten the respect of the betting public or the oddsmakers all year," said Manteris. "A touchdown and a field goal in a big game like this where it is usually played close to the vest is very high."

Besides hoping for a rush of late action on the game, bookies are counting on the popularity of proposition bets to help push the betting total, somewhere near last year's game.

Almost every local book is offering parlay cards, where bettors can choose from an almost infinite array of propositions, including whether William Perry will score a touchdown for the Bears and whether Craig James will rush for more yards than Walter Payton.

"Our cards have something from the opening kickoff to the last part of the game," said Reizner, who has one proposition on which team will make the 13th completion of the game first. "Even if your favorite team is losing badly, you can enjoy the game with these bets."

Broke and 34, Duran plans a comeback

By J. MARTINEZ-ROUSSET
The Associated Press

PANAMA CITY, Panama — His finances exhausted after three years of high living in retirement, former boxing champion Roberto Duran is training hard in his comeback attempt.

It won't be much at first — a 10-round match against Colombian junior middleweight champion Manuel Esteban Zambrano at the capitol's Nuevo Panama Coliseum Jan. 31.

But Alberto Aleman Jr., chairman of the World Boxing Association championship committee, said that if Duran wins, promoter will give him the chance to fight the winner of a bout between John Collins and Robbie Sims March 9 in Las Vegas, Nev.

Collins is ranked No. 5 among middleweights by the WBA and Sims No. 7.

So, Duran — who was fondly called "Manos de Piedra" because of his powerful punches — is training every day at the Rodrigo Colon Sanchez Gymnasium in the impoverished San Miguelito neighborhood where he grew up.

At 34, he says he is down to 175 pounds from the 200 pounds he weighed a couple of months ago but has another 15 pounds or so to lose.

Friends and family members say Duran's huge fortune, amassed when he became lightweight, then welterweight, and finally junior middleweight champion of the world is almost exhausted by unbridled spending.

Thomas Reardon sent Duran into retirement, and he spent most of the money in Las Vegas, where he spent a lot of money on a boat and round knockout.

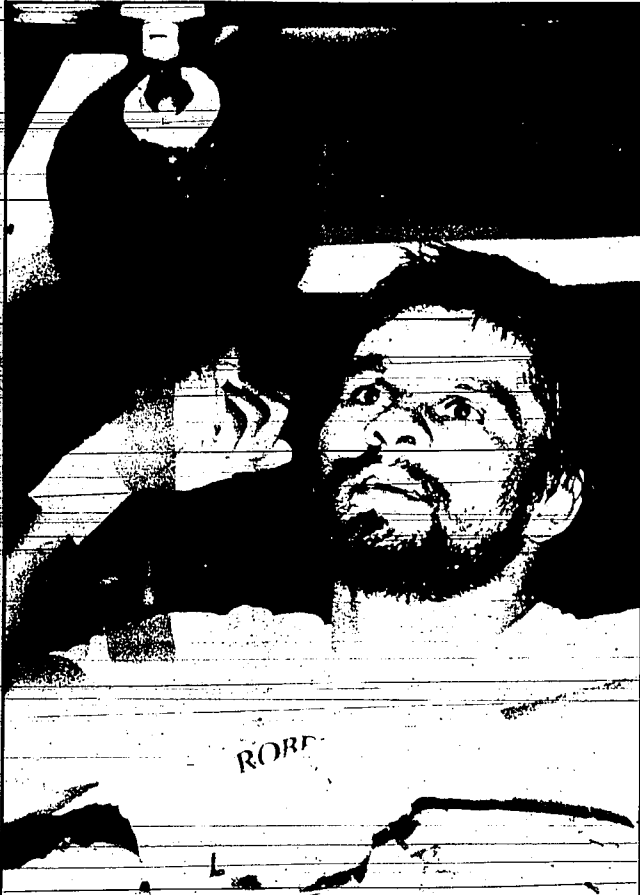

Duran hung up his gloves and lived the life of a playboy.

He learned how to fly ultralight planes and bought one, rode motorcycles and drove fast cars, became a singer and traveled often with an orchestra, his brother owned and he spent money.

A close friend of Duran's, who on condition he not be named, said in an interview Duran's lifestyle was costing him an average of $8,000 a week. He said Duran's height probably had led to hundreds of thousands of dollars gambling at Panama City's high-stake casinos.

"Now Duran has to fight," the friend said. "His manager says that Duran's finances are not brilliant, but they are OK. He says, 'Robbie is returning not so much for the money but because of the glory of winning a fourth world title — something no one has done up to now.'"

Duran himself says he is going back to the ring because he is bored.

Young, Juker picked

In rodeo draft

DENVER (AP) — Two of the three active Magic Valley professional rodeo cowboys were selected in last week's second annual Winston-Tour draft.

Mopar Auto Paris chose bareback rider Mickey Young of Jerome and steer wrestler Bob Juker of Bunk to compete on its Winston-Tour teams in 1985.

Kent Cooper of Albion a saddle bronc rider, was not selected by any of the 17 teams in the draft.

Seventeen sponsors chose teams for the approaching 1985 Winston-Tour competition, sanctioned by the Pro-Tour Division of the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association. Only the top 24 cowboys in each rodeo event were eligible for the draft.

Joe Beaver, who captured a second calf roping title last month at the National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas, Nev., was the first athlete selected. Mopar Auto Paris, by virtue of finishing last in the 1985 season, had the first pick in the opening round of the draft and selected Beaver.

The first of 10 scheduled stops on the Winston-Tour will be Feb. 6 in Rapid City, S.D.

Most of the outfits kept the bulk of their rosters from last year. The sponsors had the option of keeping a player or re-entering the player into the draft pool.

Dee Pickett of Caldwell, the 1984 PRCA all-around champion, was selected as a calf-roper and team roper by Justin Boots. Saddle bronc rider Butch Small of Dubois was picked up by Copenhagen, while team roper Lee Woodbury of Nampa was chosen by Benny Bennion's Horseshoe Casino.

Chicago's 46 defense can be overcome, but not very often

By JOE MOOSHL
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — For the past two seasons, the Chicago Bears defense, known as the "46," has been No. 1 in the National Football League.

Developed and consistently refined by defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan, the "46" is so complicated that defensive game plans often run 100 pages. It has taken some players years to master its intricacies, and others have left training camp when they failed to make any headway.

But once the players learn the "46," they swear by it — and by Ryan.

"I don't think anybody knows what we're doing, except us and Buddy," says Bears Coach Mike Ditka.

Nevertheless, other teams have tried to copy the Bears' defense, and some even have met with a degree of success. The Atlanta Falcons, for instance, used it in defeating the Los Angeles Rams during the regular season.

This led to Ryan's conviction that the Bears could stop the Rams in last Sunday's National Football Conference championship game, which Chicago won 24-0.

Simply stated, the philosophy of the "46" is to bring eight defenders close to the line of scrimmage with the snap of the ball, opening numerous rush possibilities at best, and at least confusing offensive blocking assignments.

The defense had its genesis as a 1-6 alignment when Ryan and Neill Armstrong were with the Minnesota Vikings. That was before they joined the Bears in 1978, Armstrong as head coach and Ryan as his defensive assistant.

The name probably originated from the 4-1-6, although Ryan likes to say it was named for the "46" worn by former Bears safety Doug Plank, a hard-hitter who sometimes moved up from the defensive backfield and lined up alongside the linemen. The Bears' current version of the "46" usually brings linebackers Otis Wilson and Willie Marshall up to the line of scrimmage, presenting what looks like a six-man rush.

Note: The most unusual aspect of this defense brings eight defenders up to the line of scrimmage, where almost every other team uses a variation of the four-man line.

Those two often line up on the same side, and the Bears also bring safety Dave Duerson near the line on the other side. Add middle linebacker Mike Singletary, who starts a half-step behind his defensive linemen, and it amounts to eight defenders facing as few as five blockers.

Usually, Duerson and either Marshall or Wilson, both exceptionally fast for linebackers, will drop back into pass coverage.

But the offense doesn't know which Bears' players are coming and which are not, reducing the chances of double-teaming the pass-rushers: Richard Dent, Dan Hampton and William "The Refrigerator" Perry.

Putting pressure on the quarterback is the top priority of the "46." "If you're going to throw the ball, the first thing you have to do is protect the quarterback," Ryan said. "That means if you're going to stop the pass, you have to get to the quarterback."

"You can't do it with three men," he said. "If you can't do it with three, you can't do it with four. If you can't do it with four, you better use five. If you can't do it with five, use six."

From such an alignment, the blitz can come from anywhere. The possibilities are what makes for confusion.

What will Marshall do? What will Wilson do? Will they blitz or drop back? If they drop back, will Singletary or Duerson blitz? Or will they also enter the backfield — will everyone rush?

The "46" primarily is a defense against the pass, but it also is easily modified to "work" against the run. There are no gaps in the line, and the linebackers also are positioned to smother the run quickly.

"The only weakness of the '46' is the pressure it puts on the defenders who are required to cover the receivers." See 46 on Page D3

Stephenson: BSC can meet new NCAA rules

BOISE (AP) — The NCAA has new eligibility standards for college athletes, but Big Sky Conference Commissioner Ron Stephenson says the new rules won't have much impact on the eight-team league.

Stephenson said the new rules "allow some options" for student-athletes to meet eligibility standards under the controversial Proposition 48 adopted a few years ago. Those options actually will make it easier for many athletes to qualify, he said.

Stephenson said that was probably the best thing that could have happened to the Big Sky's suggestion that college athletes get a flat-five years' eligibility, with no extensions for "red-shirting" or injuries. Student-athletes would preserve their eligibility for military or religious service.

Paper says half of SMU football players couldn't meet stiffer admissions criteria

DALLAS (AP) — New NCAA admission standards would have barred nearly half the football players Southern Methodist University admitted between 1980 and 1984, the Dallas Times Herald reported in a copyright story Sunday.

Of the 111 football players SMU admitted during that time, 46 — or 42 percent — had test scores below the standards adopted last week at the NCAA convention in New Orleans, the newspaper said. See SMU on Page D3

Donnie Who? wins Hope Classic

By BOB GREEN
The Associated Press

PALM DESERT, Calif. — The position was a new one for Donnie Hammond, up there in the highest district among the leaders of a PGA tour event.

"I haven't been there, haven't been in contention much," said Hammond, who hadn't finished higher than a tie for seventh in an official event in his three-year tour career.

"So I just took the attitude that I didn't care if I shot 76, I was going to try to shoot 66 and win this thing."

And that's precisely what he did. Birdies on five of his last six holes produced a 6-under-par 66 and a tie with John Cook for the lead at the hole of play Sunday in the Bob Hope Desert Classic.

And Hammond, a refugee from the mini-tours who made four tries at the Qualifying School before gaining his playing rights, rapped in a 12-foot birdie putt on the first hole of sudden death for his initial tour triumph.

"It's just so satisfying," said Hammond, 28. "I hung in there for the kind of proud of myself."

The victory, which took five days, 91 holes and competition over four desert courses to achieve, was worth $108,000, the total purse of $200,000. That's more than the easy-going Hammond won in any previous full season.

Cook, playing his way out of a slump that has endured since his 583 victory in the Canadian Open, also had a final round of 66, a bogey-free effort, and had matched Hammonds' 90-hole total of 335, 25 shots under par.

Hammond's birdie putt back with two holes to go, hit a long front to within four feet of the flag on the 17th and coaxed in the putt for a share of the lead.

He went in front alone, briefly, when he was green-high in two on the par-5 18th and chipped to tap-in distance. He then waited in the scoring tent beside the 18th green while a resident of a desert resort area and a gallery favorite played the final hole. From the fairway, Cook put his second shot on the green, some 18 feet away from an eagle that would have won it.

But he left that putt short, then tapped in for the birdie that sent it to overtime — the fifth consecutive year this tournament has required a playoff.

On the first extra hole, Cook's approach skipped through the green while Hammond put his near the flag. Cook chipped back close, marked his ball and then watched as Hammond rolled in the right-to-left breaking putt for his first victory.

Jodie Mudd, the leader through four rounds, played the last 74 holes of the tournament without a bogey. But it wasn't enough. His finishing 69 left him at 337, two shots out of the playoff.

Former PGA champion Hal Sutton had 69 despite a balky, erratic putter and was alone at 338.

Payne Stewart, Craig Stadler and Gary Koch followed at 339. Stewart closed up with a 65 in the 85-degree heat, Stadler and Koch each shot 68.

Lendl routs Becker

In Master's final

NEW YORK (AP) — The bazooka serve, powerful groundstrokes and crisp volleys help to win matches, but experience is what counts to win championships, according to Ivan Lendl.

Lendl proved that Sunday when he stopped 18-year-old Boris Becker of West Germany 6-2, 7-6, 6-3 to capture the $500,000 Nabisco Masters tennis championships at Madison Square Garden.

Tennis

"This is the sixth straight year I'm in the finals here, and it's the first time he goes into one," Lendl said. "I think it was the first big match that people expected things of him, and he didn't know how to handle it yet."

Becker finished with nine aces, three more than Lendl. And he had 12 service winners to just nine for the Czechoslovakian winner. But there were other things.

"He made many more errors than he usually does, and he did not do the things he normally does well," Lendl said of his young opponent.

And experience comes into play when you want to control the game.

"I was just trying to take as much time between points as possible today," said Lendl, explaining why he made Becker wait to receive serve and at times when Becker was serving. "When I was younger, I was always ready and I had to wait for John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors, and I learned from that. I think Boris will learn that, too."

Becker said that like his fans, he was expecting himself to do well in the final, "especially since he had been playing so well."

"But once he's on top of you, it's really tough," the young German said of Lendl. "I wish I could have played to 4-0 or 5-0 in the first set. Then you're much closer to him."

Last-second Tripucka bomb beats L.A. 46

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — There is something about the Los Angeles Lakers and national television that brings out the best in the Detroit Pistons. Kelly Tripucka made a 3-point field goal with two seconds left in the fourth quarter Sunday to lift the Pistons to a nationally televised 118-115 National Basketball Association victory over the Lakers.

Pro basketball

The triumph came nearly a year to the day when the Pistons, again on national television, beat the Lakers 121-98, handing Los Angeles its worst defeat of the 1984-85 season. That game was last Jan. 13, also in the Silverdome.

"We played with a lot of confidence," Tripucka said after Sunday's triumph. "We did it in front of a big crowd. It knew why we play well in these situations, we'd already solved our problems long ago."

The victory only was the Pistons' seventh in their last 22 games and raised Detroit's record to 19-21.

Over the last week, we've been a lot more patient on offense is helping us," Tripucka said.

"I think the fact that we're a lot more patient on offense is helping us," Tripucka said.

The Pistons set up Tripucka's game-winning shot with six seconds left.

Nets prepared to reinstate Richardson

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Troubled All-Star guard Michael Ray Richardson will be reinstated by the New Jersey Nets on Monday, but he will have to meet weekly with league counselors and every other day with NBA officials, his agent said Saturday.

Richardson, who was released Thursday from a two-week suspension at a California drug abuse center, will meet with Nets Coach Dave Wohl on Monday when the decision to reinstate him will be made, said Lewis Schaffel, the Nets executive vice president.

The 26-year-old Richardson met Saturday with Schaffel, NBA General Counsel Gary Bettman and Charles Grantman, his agent, for more than two hours at the Nets offices.

Under the post-care program set up at the meeting, Richardson will have to meet with drug counselors from the Adult Substance Abuse Program Family Treatment Center once a week, attend weekly meetings of Cocaine Anonymous and meet with league counselors every other day, for now.

The Lakers outscored Detroit 92 and tied the game 109-109 with 3:06 to play in the fourth quarter. Worthington scored 5 points and Abdul-Jabbar had 4 during the surge.

Worthington tied the game 115-115 with a pair of free throws with 6 seconds left in the fourth quarter. Detroit had taken a 115-113 lead 5 seconds earlier on layup by Isiah Thomas.

Thomas' layup came moments after Abdul-Jabbar missed a short sky hook and Earl Cureton of the Pistons grabbed the rebound.

Thomas and Joe Dumars each scored 18 points for Detroit. Laimbeer scored 16 points, while Tripucka and Vinnie Johnson had 14 apiece. Dumars had 11 assists and Thomas added 10.

The Lakers, who own the NBA's best record, are 31-7. Worthington is 20 points, while Maurice Lucas added 14 points.

Washington 112 Chicago 98

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Jeff Malone tied his career-high with 40 points, including 26 in the second half, and led the Washington Bullets to a 112-98 National Basketball Association victory over the Chicago Bulls Sunday.

Malone scored 12 of Washington's first 14 points in the third quarter as the Bullets increased a 54-48 halftime lead to 68-56. The Bulls rallied to within 70-65 before Washington pulled away to win for the fourth time in five games.

Chicago, which lost its fourth straight game, outshot Washington 54-38 in the first half but made two fewer field goals. The five starters for the Bulls went 8 for 33 from the floor in the first 24 minutes.

Dan Roundfield came off the bench to score 20 points for Washington, which recorded 14 blocked shots, including six by rookie Manute Bol.

Chicago, 5-17 on the road after losing for the sixth time in its last seven contests away from home, was paced by Orlando Woolridge with 20 points. Dave Corzine and Gene Banks had 18 apiece.

Bol and Chicago's Jawann Oldham, who were ejected for fighting in a game at Chicago last Tuesday night, opposed each other without incident.

Smith's free throws lift UNC over Marquette

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Kenny Smith shot all alone at the foul line. Three seconds remained, the score was 64-64 and North Carolina's undefeated basketball season was at stake.

Marquette fans cheered, objects were thrown on the court. A penny hit Smith on the side of the head after the first of two crucial free throws.

"You just have to go up there and concentrate," Smith said after sinking his last free throw Sunday. "It's just me and the basket."

Smith, a 6-foot-3 junior guard, scored North Carolina's last five points to boost the top-ranked and undefeated Tar Heels to a 66-4 non-conference victory over the aggressive Warriors of Marquette.

"We put the game in Smith's hands at the end, and he came through," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, who also was hit with a penny from the crowd.

"He always seems to deliver, especially when the other teams call time out," the coach said. "It seems to say, 'I'll show you for trying to ice me.'"

College basketball

Marquette called its last time out before Smith went to the line.

"We just didn't take care of the ball at the end," Marquette Coach Rick Majerus said. "Our guys played our guts out. We couldn't play any harder."

"But you have to give them credit," Majerus added. "They deserve to be the No. 1 team in the country."

A desperation shot by Marquette's Michael Sims fell short as time ran out.

The Tar Heels, 19-0, trailed by nine points with a little over four minutes remaining before their pressure defense keyed a comeback in front of a seint crowd at Milwaukee Arena and a national television audience.

Brad Daugherty of North Carolina led all scorers with 20 points, while Michael Sims scored 12 of his 16 points in the second half to lead Marquette, which fell to 11-5.

discriminatory. At SMU, which the NCAA already has barred from awarding football scholarships this year because of recruiting violations, 40 players had test scores less than the 700 for the SAT or 15 for the ACT, the Times Herald said its study of the players' test scores showed.

SMU Athletic Director Bob Hitch said the school's own study of the scores produced slightly different figures, but he declined to provide them.

He noted that SMU has been working to recruit athletes with better academic credentials in preparation for the new NCAA standards.

"Our scores have gotten better each year," he said. "We've worked very carefully, building up to this year."

but didn't want to debate it this year.

"Big Sky" schools sponsoring the debate contented that college students don't graduate in four years, the time now allowed for athletic eligibility. Extending eligibility to five years would greatly increase the number of athletes who graduate, Stephens contended.

which usually results in incomplete passes.

"It is somewhat like the nickel defenses that teams use in passing situations. The nickel defense gets its name because it employs five defensive backs instead of four.

But because the Bears' linemen do so much pass coverage, the '46' gives them the added advantage of not having to change personnel to go into the formation.

It is difficult to argue against the '46' and Ryan's philosophies of defense.

"I don't see how we can play any better defense," Coach Mike Ditka said. "In 13 of the 18 games we've played, we've held the opposition to 10 points or less."

Belmont blaze kills 45 horses

ELMONT, N.Y. (AP) — A smoky fire at Belmont Park race track Sunday killed 45 thoroughbred horses in a wooden barn with a sprinkler system that broke 10 days ago, authorities said. Two firefighters suffered minor injuries and the loss was estimated at up to $10 million.

Flames shot 50 feet into the air and caused a large section of the 400-foot-long barn to cave in, said Elmont fire chief James Snadecky. The blaze was reported at 1:19 a.m., and it took 200 firefighters more than an hour to contain it, Snadecky said.

Most of the horses suffocated and were found in their 12-foot-by-12-foot stalls where they had been tied up for the night, said assistant fire chief John Loser.

Racing

"It looked like a fireball in the middle of the barn," Loser said. "It was tough to make a decision not to charge in there and try to get the horses out."

"They didn't have a chance," said Gene Martello, a trainer who works with horses in a neighboring barn. Two firefighters, one suffering smoke inhalation and the other minor burns, were taken to Franklin General Hospital, Snadecky said. They were treated and released.

Initial estimates placed the value of the lost horses and the barn at up to $10 million, said officer Howard Burt, a Nassau County police spokesman.

However, track officials said in a statement Sunday that the barn was worth $1 million and the horses were valued at up to $5 million.

Two horses were rescued. One was Pleasant Sea, an offspring of Pleasant Colony, who won the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness in 1981. Other Pleasant Sea offspring were believed to have died in the blaze, authorities said.

The fire broke out in Barn 48 on the grounds of Belmont, the largest track in the nation. It was first spotted by the night watchman, who from one end saw flames coming out of a stall in the middle of the barn," said John Keenan, vice president of operations for the New York Racing Association.

Workers cover dead horses with hay in what remains of a stable at Belmont Park Race Track

"It's going to be a sad thing for racing to lose that many horses," he said.

The horses were among more than 2,000 kept in 64 barns on the grounds of the 49-acre complex. The track is the site of the Belmont Stakes, the third leg of the Triple Crown series for 3-year-olds.

The green-one-story structure that caught fire contained a hay loft, and Keenan and other officials said it was possible the hay caught fire spontaneously.

However, the cause of the fire remained undetermined, and authorities found "nothing that indicates it would be suspicious," said Detective Lt. William Guttersloh.

commanding officer of the Nassau County arson squad.

Arson investigators were sifting through rubble Sunday, looking for clues and interviewing employees and others. Guttersloh said. Owners of the horses that perished indicated "a good portion of the horses were not insured, and they will have substantial losses," he said.

Trainer Mike Duggell was near tears as he described how eight horses he trained died in the fire.

"I'm so sorry they had to go — and go that way," said Duggell, who has worked with horses since graduating from Portland State University.

"Money doesn't mean anything to me," he said. "By being with them every day, every month, every year, you see them, fulfilled at the race track by winning. That's how they become a part of you."

Horse owner Robert Kern said he lost three horses, including one he had bought just hours before the fire.

"I'm sick," he said. "I'm very upset — and I'm disturbed and brokenhearted. It's a terrible tragedy."

Kern said the sprinkler system did not work because its pipes burst late last week when temperatures zoomed from near zero to almost 50 degrees in one day.

Wheelchair cagers seek support

MADISON, Wis. — The Maple Valley Athletic Club in Madison is seeking interested players for wheelchair basketball and is looking for financial support for wheelchair sports activities. The group sponsors wheelchair basketball competition, which is open to all wheelchair-bound individuals. The athletes practice Tuesday nights from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. The only equipment requirement is for special wheelchair basketball tires.

The group is trying to generate enough interest to play regular wheelchair basketball teams with teams from Holse and Salt Lake City and to organize a national tournament.

Handicaps in Madison is also seeking financial support to help buy wheelchairs for the athletes, which is the major expense involved in wheelchair basketball. Anyone interested in playing wheelchair basketball or in supporting the group's activities should call 423-4307.

Mora to be new Eagles' coach

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An announcement of the appointment of Jim Mora as head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles "could come at any time," most likely today, according to a published report.

The Philadelphia Inquirer quoted unidentified sources in its Sunday edition as saying that Mora and Norman Braman, owner of the National Football League team, have had an agreement since Tuesday but have not yet signed the contract.

The sources insisted there had been no snags in drawing up the contract.

Mora, 49, has coached the Stars of the United States Football League for three seasons and has won two championships in the last two years in Philadelphia and then in Baltimore.

Mora would succeed Marion Campbell, who was fired Dec. 16.

Olson sets new pole vault mark

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Billy Olson added 10 feet, 3/4 inches here Friday to better the world indoor pole vault record set two days earlier by Sergey Bubka of the Soviet Union.

Olson, whose pole vault capped the Sumkit Invitational, set the record on his third and final try at 19.34.

Bubka had established the previous world indoor record at 19.3 in a meet last week in Japan.

Other world bests were established during the first Grand Prix meet of the season at the Los Angeles Sports Arena by Greg Foster in the 50-yard hurdles, Charlie Simkins in the triple jump and middle distance runner Johnny Gray in 800 yards.
