Yemeni leader back; bloody fighting rages

By NABILA MEGALLI, The Associated Press

President Ali Nasser Mohammed of South Yemen was reported back in his small, embattled Arab nation Monday with the bloody struggle against a rival Marxist faction raging into its second week.

British Foreign Office sources in London were quoted as saying that fighting had died down in Aden, the capital, but war among rival Marxists and tribal factions appeared to be spreading in the hinterlands of the nation on the tip of the Arabian Peninsula.

Evacuees reaching Djibouti from Aden described it as a "city of death," with bodies and burned out military vehicles lining the streets.

They said Aden, a city of 55,000 people, was closed down except for the fighting — food stores shut, no water, supply — electricity, hospitals contig in the cross fire and the stretch of death everywhere.

Britain's Queen Elizabeth, Soviet Premier and French warships have been "rescuing" foreigners — Bahrain, quoted reliable sources in Arab diplomatic sources in Persian Gulf said the warring sides controlled separate parts of Aden. The sources said the army was divided, but both sides seemed agreeable to possible attempts to arrange a compromise.

Both sides also appeared in process of discussing terms of a cease-fire, but no firm commitment was announced.

Radio broadcasts heard in San'a, capital of North Yemen, indicated that both sides were claiming to be the weaker radio-beaming in the name of the government, said Syria and Col. Moummar Khadaffi of Libya.

The president was said to have returned Sunday night from a brief visit to Aden, Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, which, like South Yemen, is a key Soviet ally in the Red Sea region.

He was said to have begun telephoning Arab leaders from an undisclosed location in South Yemen, including Hafey Assad of Syria and Col. Moummar Khadaffi of Libya.

All four nations are members of the so-called Arab Six and have been in conflict since the 1960s. The president was said to have returned Sunday night from a brief visit to Aden, Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, which, like South Yemen, is a key Soviet ally in the Red Sea region.

Protests, parades mix on first King holiday

By The Associated Press

Protests, mingled with parades Monday on the first federal holiday in honor of Martin Luther King Jr., a day in which ironic touches measured how close the country has come to achieving the slain civil rights leader's dream.

Tens of thousands of people gathered and marched to honor King in Washington, D.C., Atlanta, Chicago, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, San Francisco, New Orleans, and Honolulu, among others. Church bells pealed in Minnesota, Illinois and Rhode Island, and radio stations around the nation's cities "state joined broadcasting tirades of King's "I Have a Dream" speech. Dozens of stars performed in three cities in a nationally televised birthday party for King.

Five hundred blacks gathered on the Capitol steps at Montgomery, Ala., where Gov. George Wallace had vowed "segregation now, segregation forever" in 1963, to hear a proclamation honoring King, Wallace, recently released from a hospital,

Iowa Senate adopts resolution mourning victims of farm crisis

By The Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — The Iowa Senate approved a resolution Monday mourning people who have died as a result of the current farm economy crisis, but added an amendment condemning murders by distraught farmers.

"Murder is never something that inevitably happens because of what we've been suffering," Sen. Douglas Ritsema said in a speech on the Senate floor.

The resolution commemorates all who have died as a result of suicide, murder, stress or other circumstances related to the poor farm economy.

But Ritsema said it should not be interpreted as condoning the actions of farmers such as Dale Burr of rural Hills, who killed his wife, a neighbor and his banker last year before taking his own life.

Ritsema said he was upset by comments from people who had said they had expected such an event would occur and anticipated more violence from debt-strapped farmers.

"We do not anticipate murder in this state, and we do not condone it as a reasonable reaction to the farm crisis," Ritsema said. "We should be shocked by what happens."

The amendment and the resolution were both approved on voice votes without dissent. The resolution now goes to the House, where approval is expected.

The resolution would require that a wreath commemorating victims of the farm crisis be kept on display at the state Capitol throughout the 1986 legislative session, and then be placed in the State Historical Building.

In Minnesota strike Governor calls National Guard

By JEFF BAENEN, The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Minn. — Striking meatpackers and supporters blockaded the Geo. A. Hormel & Co. plant Monday, and Gov. Rudy Perpich called out the National Guard to prevent violence as workers crossed the picket lines.

One man was injured, a former photographer who was kicked in the groin, said plant manager Deryl Arnold. It was the first injury reported since the plant reopened a week ago for the first time in the five-month strike by 1,500 members of Local P-9 of the United Food and Commercial Workers.

About 100 meatpackers, who had been gathered outside the plant's main gate since early in the day, ended their blockade and began to go home shortly after Perpich's announcement.

"I think you should make it clear that if they want to call out the National Guard, they should call out the National Guard," Hormel was pleased with Perpich's decision, Arnold said.

"We expect to operate the plant tomorrow and we understand the National Guard will be present to assure our employees and to provide employees of safe exit and exit at the plant," Arnold said.

Perpich said he decided to call out the National Guard after receiving a request from Austin Mayor Tom Kough. Police Chief Don Hoffman and the Chisler County sheriff's office.

Arnold said earlier in the day that there had been no complete loss of law and order at the plant.

"The police are powerless to control mob violence," mass picketing, wanton destruction of property, and mob psychology has taken over," he said.

P-9 President Jim Guyette said it was unnecessary for Perpich to call out the Guard, and he dismissed Hormel's statements about violence at the plant gates.

"Police called paychutes rather than violence at the plant," Guyette said. "We're talking about a non-violent struggle, and there's been no violence." Guyette told reporters at the union hall.

But the police chief said things just got out of control. It was such a potentially dangerous thing that we needed the governor.

About 50 cars drove in front of the $100-million plant and stopped, forming a bumper-to-bumper barricade, while about 50 other cars circled the plant and the drivers blew their horns.

Police halted paychutes rather than violence at the plant, Guyette said. "We're talking about a non-violent struggle, and there's been no violence." Guyette told reporters at the union hall.

Channel rail tunnels receive go-ahead

By PAUL TROUTHARDT, The Associated Press

LILLE, France — France and Britain announced plans Monday to build twin rail tunnels under the English Channel, achieving a 100-year-old dream of linkage that has been frustrated repeatedly by politics and financial problems.

President Francois Mitterrand and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher made the announcement at a ceremony in the Lille City Hall, which was draped for the occasion with huge French and British flags. They called the decision "a new link in the construction of Europe" that is "of immense significance for commerce and transport between our two countries."

Mitterrand described the project as "a grandiose vision of the future."

At the end of a speech delivered in France, Mrs. Thatcher said the twin tunnel was "not the last word" but "just the first step."

She said she had supported the first projects that would have included road links.

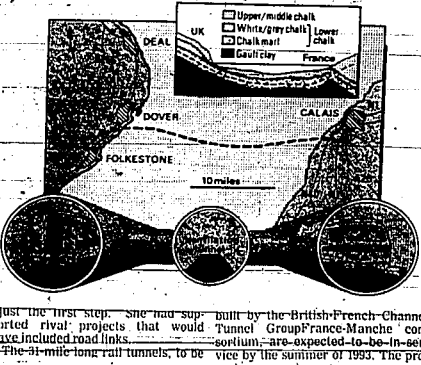

The 31-mile-long rail tunnels, to be built by the British-French Channel Tunnel Group-France-Manche consortium, are expected to be in operation by the summer of 1993. The projected cost is $3.9 billion, with the expense of financing nearly doubling that figure.

The tunnels will run under the major ferry route from Dover to Calais, Lille, where they announcement was made, is the major city of northern France and about 60 miles from Calais.

High-speed trains will travel through the tunnels, carrying passengers and vehicles. Travel time between Paris and London will be reduced from five hours to about three.

France's preference for the simpler cheaper rail tunnels won out in tough negotiations over the past two weeks. The rival projects were joint rail and road tunnels, and a combination road, bridge and tunnel.

As a concession, CTF/France-Manche pledged to submit a proposal for a road link by the year 2000, which would be built only when technically possible.

'Economic reality' queries circulating

The Associated Press

BOISE — A group of Idaho House members have introduced what they call the "Idaho Economic Reality Act," which actually is a group of proposals to raise taxes.

A (Republican) legislator, Rep. R.L. Dick Davis of Rexburg, says instead of thinking of ways to increase taxes and spending, the Legislature should be "looking at cutting spending."

He circulated a questionnaire among members of the House Education Committee on Monday, seeking support for various ways to cut state spending for education. Davis labeled his questionnaire the "Economic Reality Act."

"Economic reality suggests that we should raise 1984 to reducing spending by 10 percent," Davis said. "The need for higher taxes will come soon enough."

He suggested that education should do its share of "belt-tightening" along with other state agencies.

Davis asked members to indicate their support for:

- Eliminating kindergarten from public schools, and requiring parents to turn to private organizations or teachers.
- Confining kindergarten to a short session in the summer when schools aren't busy.
- Eliminating paid teacher aides, with parents or volunteers to take up the slack.
- Considering year-around sessions for public schools.

Freezing education funding and giving future increases only on increases in enrollment and proven increases in fuel, utility and insurance costs.

Repealing the state law triggering an automatic property tax increase if state support to public schools is cut.

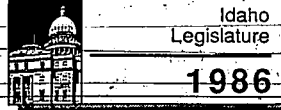

Making students pay for busing.

Curtailling athletics, including fewer games and less travel, or cutting the number of students who can take part by raising eligibility standards.

Community colleges at Twin Falls and Coeur d'Alene are partially supported by local property taxes; should the same local taxes be imposed at the sites of the four state-supported colleges and universities, Pocatello, Moscow, Lewiston and Boise?

Cutting all educational salaries by 5 percent.

Workers in private industry are being asked to concede that much more, said Davis.

Long years of separation end King for Russo-American couples

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Two American women were reunited Monday with their Russian husbands after years of separation and one of the wives said she hopes the Kremlin will permit similar reunions for other couples in the same position.

The two men, along with a Soviet-American couple reunited in West Germany on Sunday, arrived on the same flight at Newark International Airport on Monday evening.

The three couples are among 10 sets of husbands and wives the Kremlin promised before the Geneva summit to allow to reunite in the West.

But Sandra Gubin, 38, of Kalamazoo, Mich., who had fought for 4 1/2 years to be with her husband Pavel Lodov, said there are at least 20 other couples kept apart by the Kremlin.

"I'm hoping that over the next couple weeks people will be called in and the Soviets will gradually move on the other cases," she said. "This is a case where the Soviets are violating the rights of American citizens."

Ms. Gubin, a social scientist, was a Fulbright scholar at Kiev University when she met her husband in Kiev in 1980.

After leaving the Soviet Union in 1981, she and her husband traveled to the United States, where she met her husband in Kiev in 1980.

Gubin formed the Divided Spouses Coalition, which has flooded U.S. and Soviet officials with pleas to allow divided Soviet-American couples a life together.

She returned to the Soviet Union twice on a tourist visa, the last time in September.

Also reunited with her husband Monday was Robin Rubenstein, 25, of Brookline, Mass. She is married to Leonid Ablavsky.

Edith Luthi, 31, of Holliston, Mass., was reunited with her husband Michael when he returned to the United States last time more than three years ago.

First, a computer programmer, she will see his 2 1/2-year-old son in the next few days when the couple returns to their home outside Boston, said Ms. Gubin.

Monday's protests focused on states and communities that stood aloof from the holiday.

In Memphis, 300 people gathered in the pot-holed parking lot of the Lorraine Motel where King was murdered. The motel is now owned by a civic group.

"Hate is what killed him, but love is what makes him alive today," said State Rep. Roscoe Dixon.

In Wisconsin, several hundred volunteers led by Gov. Anthony Earl spent the day helping snow-bound farmers pick corn.

"We honor Dr. King by rolling up our sleeves, putting on our galoshes and going into the fields," the Rev. Fred Trost of Madison said as Earl met volunteers at the Barneveld-Lu-theran Church.

After King's son Dexter laid a wreath at his father's tomb in Atlanta, the president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference challenged the nation to move forward toward complete racial equality.

"In the name of Martin, we ain't going back," said the Rev. Joseph Theran, who heads the organization.

"We honor Dr. King's memory too far, we've worked too strenuously, we've marched too long, we've prayed too hard, we've wept too bitterly, we've bled too profusely and we've died too young."

Lowery, joined Vice President George Bush, South African Bishop Desmond Tutu, Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Mack Mattingly, R-Ga.; Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young; Georgia Gov. Joe Frank Harris; and members of King's family at an ecumenical service at Ebenezer Baptist Church near downtown Atlanta.

King a winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, was awarded the annual Martin Luther King Jr. Peace Prize.

"America today bears witness to the fact that Dr. King's faith in America was true faith," Bush said. "Love has overcome hate."

In Louisiana, all 485 students at a black high school in Plaquemines Parish stayed home to protest the school board's refusal to recognize the holiday in December.

"No one showed up this morning. No one but the teachers," said James Jones, assistant principal at Phoenix High School.

Plaquemines Parish employees had the day off, as did state employees and parish workers in Louisiana, which celebrates the holiday every year.

Absentee rates were also high in Tulsa, Okla., as black students protested the city's decision to hold classes to make up for a bad weather day in December.

"We are protesting the fact that the city and schools refuse to honor the first legal holiday to honor a black American," said the Rev. Lawrence L. Taylor, director of the Tulsa Urban League.

In California, 60,000 people sang, chanted signs and marched through downtown San Francisco, while 10,000 people lined the streets of Los Angeles for two parades, one down Martin Luther King Boulevard.

In Portland, Ore., 20 students at Lewis & Clark College began what they said would be a five-day fast to protest racial discrimination.

Vandals in Buffalo, N.Y., painted a bust of King white Sunday night, but city park crews cleaned it in time for holiday celebrations.

James L. House Jr., a 59-year-old security guard, said he heard about the vandalism at 5 a.m. on the radio, and came to the park to protect the bust from further damage until city crews arrived.

"This is pitiful, because Dr. King showed unity to poor whites and poor blacks," he said.

United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar announced Monday that he had accepted a request by African delegates to make King's birthday a U.N. holiday, beginning next year. It will replace one of nine holidays now observed by the U.N. staff.

About 2,000 people gathered at the Washington Convention Center for an emotional outdoor tribute.

Noting that the district had celebrated the holiday since 1969, council member Polly Shackleton exclaimed, "at long last, the federal government has caught up with us."

About 5,000 people came to Convention Hall in Philadelphia for an ecumenical service.

Because Dr. King marched to protest injustice I can stand here as the mayor of the fifth-largest city in America," said Mayor W. Wilson Goode, the city's first black chief executive. "I don't know whether Dr. King dreamed I'd be mayor, but his dream is being fulfilled."

Harry Belafonte and Bill Cosby were co-hosts for a three-city celebration, which NBC aired and broadcast Monday night. The segment at New York's Radio City Music Hall was headlined by Ashford & Simpson, Ruben Blades, Tito Puente, Betty Miller, Billy Joel and Al Jarreau.

Waste hauling fees may rise

BOISE (AP) — Two bills approved for introduction Monday by the House Transportation and Defense Committee would make it more expensive to haul hazardous waste into Idaho.

One measure would raise a fee on hazardous waste transporters, mainly to pay for another seven Idaho State Police officers trained in regulations covering hazardous waste shipments.

Idaho's only hazardous waste disposal site is the Enviro-Site Idaho facility near Grand View.

The truckers would be charged a $100 yearly fee for hauling hazardous waste, of a one-time charge of $60.

Sponsors of the legislation said that would generate about $960,000 per year, of which $200,000 would be given to the Department of Transportation to cover the expense of issuing fees.

N. Idaho cleanup to be costly

BOISE (AP) — Cleaning up 21 square miles of soil contaminated by lead and other chemicals will be a long and costly process, legislators have been advised.

It could cost up to $50 million to remove, cover or otherwise get rid of lead, cadmium and other pollutants generated by a century of operation of the Bunker Hill mine and smelter at Kellogg, said Lee Stokes, chief of the Environmental Division of the Department of Health and Welfare.

The Legislature's environmental committee got an "overview" Monday of efforts to clean up the area, which health officials described as a continuing hazard, especially to young children.

Dr. Fritz Dixon, state health officer, said there has been a steady decline in lead levels in the blood of Kellogg-area children since 1974.

Today's weather

Cloudy skies, mild temperatures due

Twin Falls: Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding:
Cloudy today and tonight. Patchy night and morning fog. Highs 40-50. Lows 25-35. Wednesday: Highs 35 to 45. Camas Prairie, Hatley and the Lower Wood River Valley:
Partly cloudy today and tonight. Patchy night and morning valley fog. Highs 30 to 35. Lows zero to 15 above zero. Increasing clouds Wednesday. Highs 35 to 45.

Northern Utah and Nevada:
Utah: Widespread fog continuing in northwest Utah. Mostly fair today with increasing clouds by late afternoon. Mostly cloudy tonight and Wednesday with a few showers Wednesday. Lows 15 to 20. Highs 30s.

Nevada: Increasing high clouds today and tonight. Partly cloudy on Wednesday. Overnight lows mostly 20s tonight. Highs from the mid 40s to the mid 50s.

Synopsis:
The National Weather Service said strong gusty winds continued across the Pacific, along the Snake River valleys Monday afternoon.

Sustained winds remained in the 20 to 30 mph range with peak gusts of 48 and 42 mph at Pocatello and Burley respectively.

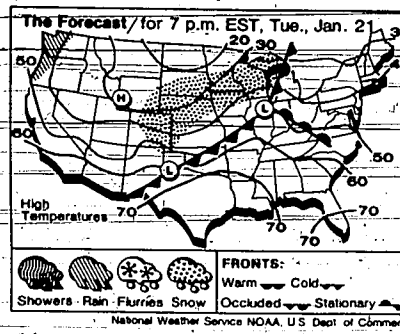

The cause of the strong winds was the storm system that passed through Idaho early in the morning. In addition to the wind, cloudy skies and light precipitation lingered over northern and extreme eastern Idaho.

Most precipitation was in the form of rain, with snow observed along the Montana border region.

Cloudy skies returned to the western sections of the Gem State while the south central and central portions were rainless. "Clear" trees bring pressure building in from the west. Light to entire state and bring slightly cooler temperatures today.

The warmest temperature in Idaho Monday was 45 degrees at Salmon and the coldest reading was 13 degrees at Elk City.

The extended outlook for Southern Idaho: Scattered rain or snow showers Thursday. Drying Friday but increasing chance rain or snow showers west again by late Saturday. Highs 30s to low 40s

BOISE — Senate Education Committee Chairman Sen. Terry Sversten, R-Cataldo, said Monday he will try again to convince the Idaho Legislature to pay for a career ladder program for teachers.

The controversial program, by which teachers could increase their pay by submitting to standard evaluations and performing extra duties, did not win funding from the Legislature last year.

"It's going to take a selling job," Sversten said Monday. "It's an issue we really need to look at at the beginning of the year."

Despite the lack of state funds for the career ladder program, 15 Idaho school districts went ahead and pursued approval of their career ladder plans this year, state Department of Education staffer Terry Donchik told the committee.

Donchik said all those plans meet the requirements of House Bill 475, under which funds were promised for career ladders in 1984. Donchik said there could be as many as 50 career ladders approved and waiting for funds next year.

Sen. Rod Beck, R-Boise, asked Donchik if there is anything preventing local school boards from asking patrons for override levy funding for the ladders.

"Our school boards are not given enough flexibility. If they can sell it to the public, they ought to have the tools," Beck said.

"I don't think districts are going to go out and fund a state-conceived program with local dollars," Donchik said after the committee meeting. "It will die; things are just too tight in this state."

Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, said he wants to know how much it would cost to fund only a few school districts career ladders as test programs.

"We do not need to start getting a handle on how much these programs will cost. I'm just not ready to throw in the towel," Noh told the committee.

Donchik said he had no idea how much a few pilot programs might cost, but guessed $1 million would be close.

After the meeting, Noh said career ladder funding would be "the legislative lost opportunity of the decade if we let it slip by."

"The career ladders ought to be attractive to legislators," Noh said, because they say they want to see teacher pay less controlled by negotiated and more determined by evaluated performance.

Sen. Gail Bray, D-Boise, said Democrats in the Legislature doubt the Legislature will come up with funding for any ladder program, even a $1 million pilot. "We haven't thrown in the towel," we're just political realists," she said.

Republican legislators say they want to improve Idaho schools but won't spend the money she says is necessary. "The words have been eloquent, the actions have been destitute," she said.

Bray said she will support a pilot program if it is suggested.

Committee offers lottery bill

BOISE (AP) — Supporters of an Idaho state lottery, trying to ease some of the opposition that has killed their plan in the past, have won Senate committee introduction of a revised lottery bill.

Introduced Monday on a 4-2 vote by the State Affairs Committee, the proposed constitutional amendment is similar to the panel introduced last week — except — that it specifically states that if voters repeal the ban on a state lottery creation one of them will take action by the Legislature.

"Whether you're for it or against it, I would hope we could put this on the ballot in November and let the voters of the state decide the issue," Sen. Vern Lammson, D-Finchurst, said.

Although the original lottery proposition would have also required further legislative action to set up a lottery after voters repealed the current ban, Lammson and Sen. Herb Carlson, R-Boise, indicated the more specific wording to that effect might be enough to swing the votes needed to get the issue before voters.

Speaker at ease with deficit act

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — House Speaker Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, said Monday that his meetings with President Reagan and cabinet officials last week have set his mind at ease about possible effects of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings federal deficit reduction act.

Stivers and Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls, flew to Washington, D.C., Thursday and Friday for a series of meetings arranged by the American Legislative Exchange Council, a group for conservative legislators. Stivers is former national chairman of ALXEC and Scott is current chairman.

The prospect of the automatic cuts called for in the bill if Congress fails to meet budget-cutting deadlines was more worrisome before a meeting with Secretary of the Treasury James Baker, Stivers said.

"Baker said, 'Who's kidding who? Congress doesn't want this Gramm-Rudman to take effect,'" Stivers said after the House of Representatives adjourned Monday morning.

Congress will make selective cuts to meet the deadline rather than let the knife automatically fall across the board on federal programs, said Stivers. Selective cuts will hurt the state less than automatic cuts, he said.

State budgeteers cannot attempt to predict what cuts will be made under so-called "take the center budget into consideration until it is finalized later this year," said Stivers.

Because of its support of the conservative agenda, ALXEC has more clout in the Reagan administration than it had in the past, Stivers said. When Jimmy Carter was president, the group met with lower-level bureaucrats than it does now.

The program of the annual presidential and cabinet briefing Stivers brought back with him showed meetings with Reagan, Baker, Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole, Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger, Secretary of Education William Bennett and Secretary of Health and Human Services Otis Bowen.

Estee Lauder
Changes Forever
The Way We View The Sun —
Especially The Winter Sun

From the world of technology and the laboratories of Estee Lauder comes ESTEE LAUDER SUN — a new series of sun-care formulas that contain a discovery so new, so innovative, it could change forever the way we look at sunbanning.

Now ESTEE LAUDER SUN makes it possible to develop a glorious natural tan faster than before — and keep it longer than before. It actually allows you to maximize your individual natural tanning potential. And the twelve tanning and sun-care formulas provide the specialized care skin needs to prepare it for the sun, to protect it during sunning and to moisturize and soothe it afterward.

Before Sunning

- New GOLDEN SUN PRE-TAN ACCELERATOR. A technological breakthrough that increases your natural tanning potential. This exclusive formula with Biotin prepares your skin for tanning. It promotes a faster tan by helping accelerate the skin's own natural production of melanin. 12.50

During Sun Exposure

ESTEE LAUDER SUN provides a full range of sun-care formulas with Sun Protection Factors of 4, 8, and 15 respectively, to meet the needs of different skin types when in the sun.

- New GOLDEN SUN TANNING MILK, SPF 4. For skin that tans easily and rarely burns. 10.00.
- New GOLDEN SUNNING LOTION, SPF 8. For skin that tans gradually and tans moderately. 10.00.
- New ULTRA SCREENING CREME, SPF 15. For skin that burns easily and tans minimally. 10.00.

For Total Sun Blocking

TOTAL SUN BLOCK CREME, SPF 23. Provides ultra protection for sun-sensitive areas. 10.00.

After Sunning

- APRES TAN MAINTAINER FOR FACE. A rich, moisturizing cream specifically formulated for the face. 10.00.
- APRES TAN MAINTAINER FOR BODY. A luxurious, light, non-greasy body-moisturizer that quickly replenishes needed moisture to sun-dried skin all over. 10.00.

Tanning Without The Sun

- SELF-ACTION TANNING CREME. A lightweight cream that helps you acquire a natural-looking color rapidly, without the sun. 10.00.

Special Care

Four highly effective products designed to give specialized care and extra protection under the sun. Each addresses specific problems that can occur while tanning, and each one works with companion Estee Lauder sun formulas.

- ANTI-WRINKLE SUNCREME FOR FACE, SPF 15. Helps prevent premature wrinkles and serious sun damage while promoting a faster tan. 10.00.
- PROTECTIVE EYE SHIELD, SPF 16. 8.50.
- PROTECTIVE LIP SHIELD, SPF 6. 4.50.
- WATERWORLD SUNSCREEN, SPF 15. A sunscreen so water-resistant it's still effective even after a 30-minute swim. 12.50.

Despite tape flap, IEA point is valid

The Idaho Education Association has once again found itself in hot water with the Idaho Legislature, this time with members it should consider friends. Once again, the IEA's woes will make some people on the Far Right happy.

The result, in our view, will again be a setback for moderate, responsible debate on important educational issues and a victory for those in the state, both in and out of the Legislature, who want to tell us all what to read and think.

The latest flap involves an IEA videotape which paints the Legislature in pretty unflattering terms. Designed to be viewed by teachers, the tape applies a broad brush, linking by innuendo, all Republicans and conservatives to ultra-right groups. In these links, it is wrong.

When the tape was aired in the Senate last week, even strong education supporters squirmed uneasily, including such moderate Republicans as Lynn Tominga, R-Paul; Laird Noh, R-Kimberly; and Phil Batt, R-Idaho.

Batt was particularly incensed at the tape's careless explanation of his 1982 gubernatorial contest in which, it was claimed, he "never completely severed his ties" to a comic book attacking both his opponent, John Evans, and the IEA. In fact, Batt had made such a disavowal.

The IEA's representative, Sue Hovey of Moscow, further angered moderates when she refused to issue anything remotely like an apology for the errors.

The whole episode left education supporters uneasy that the teachers' union was again positioning itself and its members badly in what is shaping up as another difficult political year in Boise.

The IEA's latest problem will undoubtedly cause some uneasiness among the Legislature's Far-Right group, which is seeking to alter much of the state's educational structure.

Bills to pack the state textbook committee and to lower the qualifications for state schools superintendent may well emerge from the House Education Committee which has recently been tilted toward the Far Right by House Speaker Tom Stivers' appointments. Other legislation of this kind is said to be in the hopper.

The Legislature this year seems to be polarizing into those who want such laws and those who believe people should have the right to think for themselves. Most of the membership is in this second group, as are most of the legislative leaders. A few — including some very visible ones — are not.

The IEA videotape is a Cassandra attempt to warn about this Far Right threat. In spots, it goes overboard, and for those errors, the IEA should apologize.

But it should not back away from the tape's main theme that the threat from the Far Right is a serious one about which all Idahoans should be concerned. That remains a valid point.

Board's action defended

Referring to your editorial, "The School Box Issue," The Times-News Jan. 17: "The last paragraph is an error on your part. When in a public meeting, if a subject is brought to the floor that may result in court action; to protect the right of the parties involved; the body must go to closed session."

I would think the school board did the only thing possible. The subject is not only controversial, it has great potential for charges or lawsuits.

With this one exception, it was a fine editorial. DAVID STEEN, Twin Falls

Editor's Note: Under the Idaho Open Meetings Law, an executive session may be held "to consider and advise its legal representatives in pending litigation." In this case, no school board attorney was present, nor had a legal action been filed. The Times-News stands by its position that the executive session to discuss the "box" was an illegal meeting from which the public should not have been excluded.

Let parents try teaching

To Duke Wiseman and Carl Snow: I find it difficult to believe that you would be criticized for the use of one of the best methods of dealing with the trouble-making student that I have ever noted.

This is one more example of parents who do not teach their children self-discipline and will not allow teachers or school administrators to do so. You might label "the box" a "learning carrel" and it will have the image that should appeal to all educators and parents. The greatest frustration of the teacher is that of dealing with distractions, the worst of which is the disruptive student.

Parents who are so knowledgeable about "child psychology" that they are offended by reasonable efforts to create a positive learning situation for all students ought to be given the opportunity to teach junior high classes for a day or two — the bigger the class, the better. They would welcome the help of a "learning carrel" — or a quantity of them.

DELSLAUGHTER, Early-Retired Teacher, after 33 years Twin Falls

Secret methods questioned

It seems inconceivable that an official of the Twin Falls school system would construct or have constructed such an appalling structure as the O'Leary Jr. High detention box. There is more room in the enclosures at the City Dog Pound.

Moreover, when a concerned parent questions the school board's knowledge of such a structure, he is immediately whisked behind closed doors. Were they, in fact, totally unaware of its existence?

What other secret methods does the school system employ that the taxpayers and parents are totally unaware of?

GARY OLSEN, Twin Falls

He learned a lesson well

Since I am a qualified expert on detention, I just have to stand off to the side and clear on this "box" at O'Leary Junior High School and the father that is objecting to about his little darling having to be detained in said "box" ... Ain't it just awful?

It sure beats sitting in Mrs. O'Leary's eyes, Mrs. O'Leary's outer office, one hour per day, five days a week, for a total of six weeks. Here every teacher, student or native and his dog saw you and inquired as to why you were there with your books supposedly studying.

Yep, that was me, and I survived, learned that if you get caught, you pay the piper, and see that you don't do it again. I never stood in jail. I pay my taxes and am just as good a citizen as you and any.

Keep the box and keep using it. It is part of education and doesn't cost all that much. W. K. KEE, Twin Falls

Widow issues appeal for help

I would like to know if you would print this letter for me in your paper. I'm a widow — just recently lost my husband.

Because in losing my husband, it bothered me so much it has left me with an extreme nervous condition and a lot of depression, which prevents me from taking any kind of employment at this time.

I have exhausted every channel that I could think of for help. I have no income at all, except food stamps.

I am a Christian lady and would like to know if there are any Christian people that read this letter, and if they could help me out financially, which would be most appreciated. Thank you so very much. DEANNA PARKS, Twin Falls

Editor's Note: On Nov. 27, a Fifth District Court jury acquitted 38-year-old Deanna Kay Parks of a charge of second-degree murder for the stabbing death of her husband, 62-year-old

Walter Parks. Parks admitted during her trial that she had stabbed her husband with a kitchen knife April 30, but said she acted out of self-defense.

Get behind budget cutters

It was thoughtful of our Washington congressmen to set up workshops in various Idaho towns to address today's agricultural problems, but they should have arranged to have Rep. Richard Stallings present also.

The workshops were announced from Washington with a flood of brochures addressed to "Postal Customer" and were distributed by the mail carriers. Many people thought it was junk mail and threw them in the waste basket.

Adequate announcement was made without cost by local radio, TV and newspapers.

It is urgent that we get behind President Reagan in cutting government expenses to balance the budget. ALVIN HOLMES, Burley

Sometimes history is made

On Dec. 29, I was feeling poorly at about 9:30 a.m. My wife decided not to attend Mass because I "might" need her. Life saving action No. 1.

At a few minutes past 10, I passed out from a gall bladder attack. With the assistance of two sisters, Janet Green and Betty Lind, she got an ambulance and, with the handling by the Paramedics, to the hospital emergency room. Life saving action No. 2.

Under the supervision of Dr. Wayne Wright — my wife was admitted and transferred immediately to a military facility. The emergency crew simply continued the treatment. Even at 75 years of age, I was brought out of it with no physical or mental impairment. Life saving action No. 3.

Consultation with Dr. Ronald Melech, Dr. John McKain determined that I was in no condition then nor would I be, to be transferred anywhere. They began treatment.

I can personally vouch for the fact the good people at MVMC do not just study medical history. Sometimes they make it. WILLIAM GREEN, Twin Falls

Vote as conscience says

In answer to the letter of Jan. 14 by Margaret Jones, who by the way is married to Ron Jones and for no other reason than this should be supportive of him:

Again we must set the record straight. Margaret quotes the Police Policy and Procedure manual as saying the chief of police has complete control over his department and is not accountable to anyone.

Wrong Margaret. Quoting from the manual it reads: "The chief of police is the chief executive officer of the department and the final departmental authority in all matters of policy, operations and discipline, with mayor and council approval. He exercises all lawful powers of his office and issues such lawful orders as are necessary to assure the effective performance of the department. Besides should he have less authority than the city clerk or the water works superintendent in running their departments?" If he's not allowed to make decisions on a day to day basis, then I suppose the mayor, with all of his law enforcement background, should be given that responsibility. What do we have a police commissioner for?

Margaret goes on to quote from Idaho Code Section 50-601, explaining that the police department manual is in direct violation of this section. I realize that not many households own a set of Idaho State Code books, and are not familiar enough with them to look it up at the library. I have taken the liberty to do so for myself.

Section 50-601 states: Qualifications: Any person shall be eligible to hold the office of mayor who is qualified elector during his term of office. The term of office of mayor shall be for a period of four years except as otherwise provided. He shall take office at the time and in the manner provided for installation of councilmen. That is the code section entirely. Why and how would Chief Campbell be in violation of this section with his manual of rules book? I guess this is more of the credible reporting done by our mayor. I suppose you did not think we were capable of looking this section up for ourselves?

Margaret further states that the council again tried to shove this book down the throats of the people. Just what is it, Margaret, that the council was elected to do for the people of Kimberly? I would think that this would be one of their elected duties to oversee and pass a rule book for the police department employees, for their use as guidelines.

The mayor has blatantly ignored the guidelines of good common sense set down by the council and you are right about several things, Margaret. If the mayor is not recalled, this is as you stated "a sick sense of justice." And I must agree with another of your statements; you must let your conscience be your guide and vote accordingly. MAXINE MCCrackEN, Kimberly

Chief should be let go

An open letter to Jack Wright: Mr. Wright, you say that Mayor Jones refers to himself as the "supreme power" in Kimberly. I would suggest that you read the state laws, you'll find out that he is. You say that he never asked for assistance/advice from the council. Well, at a city council meeting June 24, you went into executive session, so he could fill the council in on the Attorney General's investigation. But Wasko kept saying "not unless the city attorney is present." It looks to me, like you didn't want to know.

Wright, you're trying to cloud the issue here. "Poor Chief Campbell is being picked on."

Chief Campbell should be fired. The point isn't how long ago these things took place, it's the fact that Campbell allowed them to happen at all, and happen again and again. As vicious as your attacks are against the mayor, and the way you're trying so hard to destroy his credibility, it would seem that you're running for the office yourself. If Jones were recalled and you were president of the council, then you would be mayor and you could reappoint Wasko. Now wouldn't that be out of the trying pan and into the fire?

Wright, you're trying to set a very dangerous precedent here in Kimberly. In other words, if anyone holding a city office doesn't agree with you, even when you're wrong, then let's recall the guy and get someone who will agree.

Heaven forbid, that we get anyone in with a sense of honesty and a mind of his own. I'm wondering if you have been studying the "Communist Manifesto", written by Karl Marx.

You have been blowing a lot of smoke here and, as far as I'm concerned, both you and Campbell are in for a real awakening. You're going to find out that the mayor's "little band of supporters" isn't as little as you think.

Mayor Jones won't be recalled. Then what are you and Campbell going to do? You could do us all a favor and resign.

People of Kimberly, support our mayor, don't vote in the vindictive, vengeful recall. RICHARD STONE, Kimberly

Campbell dedicated man

During the past several months many comments and articles have been stated and written in a negative manner about the Kimberly Police Department and Chief Jim Campbell.

I have lived in Kimberly for 78 years and retired from the city after 32 1/2 years of service as public works superintendent. During these years as a public servant I had the opportunity to work with Paul Gorder when he was chief of police and also with Chief Jim Campbell. These two men had a lot in common; both dedicated in serving the community with total loyalty, honesty and integrity.

Kimberly is a safe, quiet community today because of the professionalisms of our past chief's efforts. Our streets, homes, children and senior citizens are secure in this city, knowing that our police are out there patrolling and ready to respond to the communities needs every day and night of the year.

Every week a person can read or hear through the news media of rapes, homicides, burglaries, traffic fatalities and assaults happening in other communities in Magle Valley. It most definitely appears that Kimberly experiences little, if any of the above. Evidently our police force are doing their job. What more could we ask of them?

I know from experience that being a public servant is a professional and personal life in a small community is one and the same. It doesn't matter if you're off duty, sick or on vacation; if people need your help, then it's expected that you answer that call and do what you can for that person.

Paul Gorder did, the Paul Gorder did, has given our community total personal dedication in keeping Kimberly a safe, quiet place to live and raise our families.

I believe the citizens of Kimberly are very fortunate to have Jim Campbell as their chief of police these past 16 years. This man's accreditations in his profession is beyond reproach. Not only does he hold the highest level of certification from the Idaho State Peace Officers Training Academy allows; but also is a graduate of the most prestigious law enforcement training facility in the country; The F.B.I. National Academy of Quantico, Va.

Chief Campbell, I, for one, am very pleased with the job you have done for our community. Those of you who agree join me in voicing our opinions at the recall election Feb. 4.

Public colleges' costs jump to average of $4,587 a year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's four-year public colleges and universities traditionally among the best buys in higher education, are getting more expensive.

They now charge an average of $4,587 a year for tuition, room and board.

That is 157 percent more than a year ago, according to a survey released Monday by the American Association of State Colleges and Universities and the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

Tuition alone jumped by 8 percent for students attending college in their home state and 11 percent for out-of-state students.

The steepest increases, in percent, were in Texas, for example, where the average increase in the home-state's least expensive public universities. Tuition and fees for state residents jumped 37 percent from $446 a year to $701, while out-of-state students saw their bills soar 162 percent from $1,497 to $2,764.

The legislature in Texas boosted the colleges' charges amidst a budget crunch brought about largely by depressed oil and gas prices.

Louisiana, another state hit by falling energy prices, had the second highest increase in tuition and fees, 27 percent for residents and non-residents alike. That boosted tuition and fees to $1,071 for home-state students and to $2,134 for non-residents.

The average public college bill of $4,587 is still roughly half what it costs to spend a year at the typical private four-year college that has

Rite honors more victims of Gander crash

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del., and the other Saturday white U.S. Army soldiers' Army and Canadian police saluted as two flag-draped coffins scowled the site for any remains of the Gander Air Force Base on Dec. 12, killing 16 of two more victims of a military charter plane crash last month in Newfoundland, Canada. 28 soldiers from the 101st Airborne One body was recovered Friday at Fort Campbell, Ky., and eight crew members of Arrow Air of Montreal, there were no survivors.

The victims' remains began arriving at Dover Air Force Base on Dec. 16 for autopsies, identification and preparation for burial. To date, 137 soldiers and six crew members have been identified.

Airlines lure Air Force, Navy pilots

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force and Navy are losing experienced pilots at an increasing rate in a manpower drain that officials attribute to stepped-up hiring by commercial airlines.

Newly tabulated figures covering fiscal 1985, which ended last Sept. 30, show the pilot retention rates of both services declined for the second consecutive year.

The Air Force's retention rate slipped to its lowest level in four years.

The continuing exodus of pilots had been predicted last year by Adm. James D. Watkins, chief of naval operations, and Gen. Charles A. Gabriel, Air Force chief of staff, during budget hearings before Congress.

They cited as reasons congressional attacks on the military retirement system, a strong economy and the expansion plans of airlines operating in a deregulated environment.

Both the Navy and Air Force say it takes roughly 18 months and more than $1 million to train a single pilot.

According to the Future Aviation Professionals of America, a trade group based in Atlanta, the major airlines hired 4,541 pilots in 1985, up dramatically compared to the 1,368 hired in 1981.

Hostages' kin bring ribbon for president

WASHINGTON (AP) — Relatives of the American hostages in Lebanon said Monday they hope to present a 3,000-foot-long yellow ribbon signed by more than 7,000 people.

The gigantic ribbon, composed of 3-foot sections sewed together, urges President Reagan to work for the "safe and immediate release" of the six Americans in captivity.

"We want to keep the hostage situation in everyone's mind," said Tom Anderson, 41, the cousin of hostage Terry Anderson. "It's easy to forget there are people suffering over there."

"We would like to wrap it (the ribbon) around the White House but we know it won't fit," said Anderson, a New York City policeman from Valley Stream, N.Y.

On Monday, the families met with officials of the Lebanese embassy; today, their itinerary called for a session with Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., and they hoped to give the ribbon to White House officials. They also sought a session with the Syrian ambassador.

Heckler says she'll be back

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — Newly appointed Ambassador to Ireland Margaret Heckler, forced to resign her Cabinet post for what President Reagan insisted was a promotion, said Monday she now agrees her new job will be a challenge and that it's not the finale to her career.

At a news conference in her hometown, the 53-year-old former secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services said she has a "unique window of opportunity" to help the peace process in Ireland because of a recently signed British-Irish accord.

"Ancient wounds that have produced so much bloodshed in Ireland potentially now can be healed," said Mrs. Heckler, who represented eastern Massachusetts for eight terms in Congress.

L.M. Boyd
What's what

Sir, how'd you like to work for a company that wanted you to show up every morning unshaven? Such is the American Safety Razor Company in Stoughton, V. Va. About 300 plant workers there test razors.

Q. Isn't "Fresno" Spanish for "poplar tree"?
A. No, that's "Alamo." "Fresno" is "ash tree."

WHAT'S A TRACTOR?

Farm kids may learn something, if they take agriculture courses in college. But it's not the farm kids who learn the most. Eighty-percent of such students nationwide have never before driven a tractor or hooked up a milking machine.

Trees at water's edge along the Pacific Coast bend inland. From the wind of the water? you say. No, sir, it's the salt. It kills all the branch buds on the westerly side.

A night in a hotel room for two with breakfast in New York City now costs an average of $210. If you don't count anything but the hotel room and the breakfast.

Said Oscar Wilde: "It is better to be beautiful than good, but it is better to be good than ugly."

MURDER

If the body of the murdered woman found in bed appears covered, arms at sides, legs together, exposed to the chin, she most probably was killed by her husband or lover. Or so say police researchers. This is what baffled detectives in yesterday's infamous Boston Stangler case. The murder scenes were arranged in what police called "compassionate setting."

Q. If a 24-year-old woman is widowed, are the chances she'll take another husband?
A. Not as great as you might think, research reveals. Only three out of every 10 widows in that age bracket - 21 to 25 - marry again. That name "Boleyn" is pronounced "Bullen" by the English.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Many changes are taking place and you should be alert to and aware of these new beginnings which can be so important in your life, but you must first stop holding onto the past; let it go.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You now understand better how to handle business matters better and can get ahead faster.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't permit an old-time partner to keep you from advancing along more modern lines. Be sure to keep a promise made.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Get that new plan whittled down to a workable size and then it can become successful. Listen to what associates have to suggest.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) See good friends who can help you gain your highest ambitions. Don't permit your mate to keep you from using your talents.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get busy at public work or important business matters and make great progress during the daytime.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Leave mullins for a while and find out how others are operating and you'll learn a great deal and become more successful in the future.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Listen to what others have to suggest to get ahead faster and stop mulling in your own stew.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get busy at all the work you have promised to do and don't accept any delays or obstacles.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Make arrangements to have a long time with Venus and find more modern ways to do so.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Be sure to make conditions at home more as you want them to be. Be firm yet kind with others.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TO charming, young people who will be alive and alert to everything going on, particularly of a modern nature. One who will do well in sales work or in humanitarian services. Many friends may be made but lost for awhile and then come back later.

Six weeks after conviction, ex-mayor hosts radio show

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Former Mayor Roger Hedgecock began working as host of a radio talk show Monday, six weeks after he was convicted of 13 felonies involving election violations.

The first show coincided with the first federal holiday in honor of slain civil rights leader the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and included taped interviews with the Rev. Jesse Jackson and the Rev. Robert A. Taft, an activist black minister in San Diego.

Hedgecock, 39, resigned as mayor Dec. 10, an hour before he was sentenced to 365 days in county custody, three years probation and fined $1,000.

He was accused of accepting more than $350,000 in illegal contributions for his 1983 campaign and lying about it on state-mandated disclosure forms.

Hedgecock may not run for office for the length of his probation.

through a fire escape window Sunday and left a note with his name and address and a photograph of himself.

O'Donnell said nothing was reported missing from the apartment in The Dakota, a condominium on Central Park West.

Ms. Oso, widow of former Beatle John Lennon, woke up when she heard a noise early Sunday and found the note and a photograph. She then called police.

He said Naess offered to pay all travel and accommodation costs for the privately organized choir, including one boy who is currently in the United States.

Allen, Nightingale due for broadcasting honors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mel Allen, once the voice of the New York Yankees, and Earl Nightingale, the radio voice of Sky King and host of "Our Changing World," will receive the 1986 Hall of Fame award from the National Association of Broadcasters.

Since 1976, the award has recognized individuals who have made significant contributions to the radio industry. Allen's and Nightingale's selections were announced Monday.

Nightingale began broadcasting in 1944 in Jacksonville, N.C.

He was the voice of flying rancher Sky King from 1950 to 1954 and created a talk show which grew from 15 to 30 minutes. Today, his daily five-minute "Our Changing World" is heard in all 50 states and at least a dozen foreign countries.

Allen did play-by-play broadcasts of the Yankees from 1930 to 1961 and now hosts a syndicated TV show, "This Week in Baseball."

Induction will be made April 15 at the NAB convention in Dallas.

Norwegian boys choir to sing at Ross' wedding

OSLO, Norway (AP) — The 50-member Norwegian "Soelvguttene" boys choir has accepted an invitation to sing at the wedding of American Ross Diana Ross and Norwegian financier and mountaineer Arne Naess in Switzerland on Feb. 1, its conductor Torstein Grythe said Monday.

"We are flattered and appreciate very much the opportunity to sing at this wedding and to perform for the first time in Switzerland," Grythe said.

"Naess has heard our choir sing many times," Grythe said. "At the wedding he wants six songs, including Schubert's 'Ave Maria.' I've sent tapes to Miss Ross so she can select the other songs from our repertoire."

Man leaves note, photo for Ono in apartment

Retiring 'father of artificial organs' receives emotional birthday tribute

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — International medical experts traced the birth of artificial organs back to the waxen wings of Icarus as they paid an emotional tribute Monday to the modern father of artificial organs.

Dr. William Johan Koff, who will retire as director of the University of Utah's Institute for Biomedical Engineering on his 76th birthday Feb. 14, opened his arms and grinned broadly as participants in a biomedical symposium in his honor paid to applaud him.

Koff said he hoped more attention would be paid to "obscure projects" which could someday become as prominent as the artificial heart and artificial kidney he designed.

Koff, who invented the artificial kidney in his native Netherlands in 1943, came to the University of Utah in 1949 and worked on the heart-lung machine and the artificial heart. Earlier, he helped create the intra-aortic balloon pump — a cardiac assistance device which improves blood circulation.

Speakers at the opening session of the symposium referred to Koff as "father" and praised him as a strict but understanding teacher whose ideas — often rejected at first by his peers — had saved thousands of lives.

"Very often, Dr. Koff's minority opinion proved to be correct," said Dr. Yukihiko Nose, chairman of the Department of Artificial Organs at the Cleveland Clinic in Ohio.

"It's appropriate for us to think of the thousands of people who owe their lives to the vision and the courage of this man," said Dr. Keith Reetsma, a member of the artificial heart faculty of the University of Utah.

Reetsma recalled the Greek myth of Daedalus and Icarus, the father and son who formed wings of wax and feathers to escape from the angry king of Crete, and joked that that Icarus whose wings melted when he flew too near the sun, "underwent acute rejection... for a survival rate of 50 percent."

Dr. Horst Klumpp, a professor of internal medicine at the University of Tübingen, East Germany, quoted Koff as saying, "If man knows the structure and function of a part of his body, he should be able to build it."

"Pim Koff never ceased to challenge society," Klumpp said.

Koff said after the session that he wanted to devote further study to preventing strokes suffered by artificial heart patients.

"We're working very hard on making artificial hearts that will not cause thrombosis (blood clotting) and is very cheap," he said. "We spend $2.5 billion on an artificial kidney per year. It is way too much and is not necessary."

Dr. Donald Olsen, who will succeed Koff as director of the biomedical engineering institute, said Koff's retirement probably won't halt his search for answers to numerous unsolved medical puzzles, including development of an internal artificial kidney. However, he said Koff hopes for more federal support.

Latin rebound creates shortage

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — A recent surge in the popularity of high school Latin courses has produced a shortage of teachers of the language, says a classics professor at Miami University.

"The nation's universities have not yet responded to the need for Latin teachers," said John Dutra, associate professor of classics at Miami. "There is most definitely a shortage."

Enrollment in high school Latin classes nationally hit a low of 150,000 in 1975, but rebounded to 170,000 in 1984, rekindled by the back-to-basics movement in education.

However, the number of newly certified Latin teachers fell from a high of 464 in 1965 to 39 last year, according to the American Classical League, which is based at Miami.

More than half of all public high school students studied Latin at the turn of the century, Dutra said. Enrollment in Latin courses fell dramatically after World War II, then climbed steadily through 1962, when it reached a peak of 702,000.

Another slump in interest followed, and enrollment in Latin courses plummeted by 79 percent in the mid-1970s.

Hauler gets two-year term, claims he's been dumped on

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The first man given a state prison term for dumping hazardous waste says his two-year sentence is unduly harsh.

"I get out of the joint and who is going to do business with me? I'm dead," said Ronald Martin, 46.

"They want to put the small fry, like me, out of business," Martin, a resident of Cypress who ran a one-man-hauling service, said in a recent interview from jail.

Martin pleaded guilty to four counts of illegally transshipping wastes. Prosecutors said his record, which includes about 14 years in prison for convictions involving bad checks, armed robbery and escape, influenced them to press for a prison term.

"We need to send a message out to haulers that we intend to make sure residents of Cypress are properly disposed of," said William Carter, Los Angeles County deputy district attorney.

S. African bombs fail to darken city

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Five bombs exploded in Durban in a period of minutes Monday night, doubling a power pylon in an apparent guerrilla attempt to break out from the Indian Ocean port, police said.

A police spokesman, Capt. Winston Heunis, said no one was injured and the pylon remained in service.

Another police report said officers shot a black man dead Monday when a crowd stoned a patrol in KwaNdebele, a black tribal area northeast of Johannesburg and Pretoria.

More than 1,000 people have been killed in 16 months of violence against apartheid, the race laws through which the government reserves privilege for South Africa's 5 million whites and denies rights to the 24 million blacks.

The army said Monday it had discovered two more land mines on a farm that abuts South Africa's border with black-ruled Botswana. A white man and his daughter-in-law were killed when their vehicle struck a mine on the farm two weeks ago.

The five explosions began at about 9:15 p.m. It was the third multiple-bomb attack in 11 days in Durban, which has a tradition of applying apartheid laws less harshly than other South African cities.

Three men still are hospitalized with injuries suffered in explosions Jan. 9. One has critical burns.

The Durban attacks are the first examples in South Africa of multiple bombs, which have been used in Beirut, Lebanon, and other places. The apparent targets of the delayed explosions are police, rescue workers and others who rush to the scene after the first blast.

Heunis said four bombs went off seconds apart Monday night and the fifth exploded about 20 minutes later.

Dancing follows coup

MASERU, Lesotho (AP) — Thousands of people danced in the streets Monday to welcome an apparent bloodless coup that ousted the authoritarian prime minister, Chief Leabua Jonathan, a day after he declared himself "in complete control."

The takeover by a military commander described as a moderate appeared to presage the end of a South African economic blockade that had paralyzed this mountain kingdom since the first of the year. South Africa, whose territory surrounds Lesotho, accused Jonathan of harboring guerrillas.

Maj. Gen. Justin Rakanyane, who overthrew Jonathan, is said to be about 55 years old. He commands the 1st Battalion, Lesotho Paramilitary Force that serves as both army and police.

Government radio reported the coup at dawn to the 1.3 million people of Lesotho, which is about the size of Maryland. The radio said Oxford-educated King Moshoeshoe II, 77, remained in head of state.

No information was available about the whereabouts of Jonathan or members of his Cabinet, who also were swept from office.

Airliner's recorders found at crash site

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Searchers recovered two in-flight recorders from the jetliner that crashed in northern Guatemala, killing all 94 people aboard, officials said Monday they will fly to the United States to help determine the cause of the disaster.

Col. Adolfo Corzo Anleu, head of Guatemalan civil aeronautics, said the recorders from the twin-engine Caravelle were found Sunday.

The plane, built in the late 1950s or early 1960s, crashed into the jungle Saturday morning on approach to the Santa Elena airport, 150 miles north of Guatemala City.

U.S. officials here said seven or eight Americans were among the victims, most of whom were flying to Santa Elena for a tour of the ancient Mayan ruins at Tikal, 25 miles north of Santa Elena.

Volcano building new island

TOKYO (AP) — An underwater volcano has thrust its fiery peak above the surface of the Pacific Ocean near Iwo Jima, creating the first new island in the region in 78 years, said the Maritime Self Defense Force.

Crowned by a lava cone blasting smoke and rocks high into the sky, the new island is already 2,310 feet long, up to 990 feet wide and about 50 feet high, said Defense Force spokeswoman Miwa Watanabe.

On Monday, the Defense Force vessel Takuyo confirmed sighting the new island about 30 miles southwest of Iwo Jima, where high spurts of smoke were first seen Sunday, said Ms. Watanabe.

Iwo Jima, a volcanic island in the Pacific that was the site of a major World War II battle, is about 940 miles south of Tokyo.

Arrow craft had an engine lacking power

OTTAWA (AP) — The right outboard engine on the Arrow Air DC-8 that crashed last month in Newfoundland, killing 218 U.S. servicemen, was delivering less power than the other three engines at impact, the head of the Canadian investigation said Monday.

Peter Boag, the Canadian Aviation Safety Board's chief investigator for the crash, told a news conference he has not concluded that the engine's lower rate of revolutions per minute contributed to the crash, and said he still is not close to deciding what caused the plane to fall to earth just after takeoff.

The safety board's chairman, Bernard Deschenes, said he and four other board members will conduct public hearings in Ottawa beginning April 9 to present results of the investigation and hear witnesses. The board also plans to visit the crash site in Gander, Newfoundland, on March 24-25 to prepare for the inquiry.

The Arrow Air flight, carrying 248 soldiers of the U.S. Army's 101st Airborne Division home from peacekeeping duties in Egypt's Sinai desert, crashed on takeoff from Gander Dec. 12. All passengers and the eight crew members were killed.

Bomb in hold caused crash

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Five Indian scientists blame last June's Air-India crash on an explosion in the front cargo hold, the Press Trust of India reported Monday.

The jumbo jet plunged into the Atlantic, killing all 329 people aboard.

The scientists reached their conclusion after examining recovered wreckage of the Boeing 747 and conducting tests that include experiments with plastic explosives, the news agency said.

Hoshnar Singh Khola, India's director of safety, also said in a report submitted to the High Court in November that there was an explosion in the cargo section. Khola based his finding on analysis of the cockpit voice recorder and the control tower tapes at Shannon, Ireland.

Nicaragua, China discuss loan terms

PEKING (AP) — The first Nicaraguan delegation to visit China since the two countries established diplomatic relations last month discussed on Monday an interest-free loan of goods to the Central American nation, the official Xinhua news agency reported.

Dionisio Arevalo, Nicaraguan presidential adviser and minister of planning and budget, met with Chinese Foreign Trade Minister Zheng Tuobin to discuss the Chinese aid, the report said.

Counties seeking support for indigency plan

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

BOISE — A committee of the Idaho Association of Counties is attempting to line up support for its proposal to revamp the state law on indigency before approaching the state Legislature.

Kootenai County Commissioner Glenn Jackson, who also is chairman of the association's indigency committee, said he will meet with the Idaho Hospital Association at the end of the month on several items proposed in the recodification.

Proposal includes limit of $100,000 on medical claims

One item sure to be of interest to the operations to generate funds for those in need is a proposed limit of $100,000 on medical-indigent claims. Under current state law, there is no limit on how much counties have to pay on an indigent medical claim — though the law does say counties may pay at reduced Medicaid rates.

That same law also gives the counties responsibility for the needs of the indigent and allows them to levy above the 5-percent limitation placed on most other county income of a household may not be considered in an indigency claim, Jackson said.

The committee proposes to change that and at the same time, allow the counties to consider the "potential earning power" of an applicant, such as his ability to buy a new car on a long-term contract.

Before the Idaho Association of Counties committee takes its proposal to the Legislature, however, it will do some public relations work.

"We're recognizing that many forces come into play and it's to our advantage to be in harmony with those directly affected by the bill," Jackson added.

The association's plan to proceed with the legislation proposal wasn't altered by a recent proposal to legislators by the Governor's Task Force on Indigency, Jackson said. The task force suggested a state program to take over the responsibility of medical indigent claims. The program would be operated by the state Department of Health and Welfare.

Celebrating the dream

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Most of those gathered in Twin Falls City Park Monday noon to celebrate the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr. were not yet born when the civil rights leader was assassinated in 1968.

But two area ministers were on hand to share their remembrances of the civil rights movement of the '60s with fifth-graders from Lincoln Elementary School and first-, second- and third-graders from St. Edward's Catholic School.

"When I was your age, in certain parts of the nation, black and white people couldn't come together like this," said the Rev. Erv Huston. "I've been amazed from 1954 to the present date in the changes that have occurred that have been positive... with the help of leaders like Martin Luther King. It's an example of what a person committed to peace and non-violent change can do."

The Rev. Tom Tucker of the United Methodist Church in Twin Falls told the children of a conversation he had had with an elderly black man in 1965 in Selma, Ala.

"He said, 'You know the way I see it, there are good people and bad in every race, and we have to learn to love them all,'" Tucker related.

Tucker led the crowd of more than 100 children and about 35 adults in a prayer "for the dream he 'king' had to continue in our lifetime."

Some of the fifth-graders had been studying Martin Luther King in school and knew of his "I Have a Dream" speech.

"He was trying to free the blacks," said fifth-grader Tamara Futrell. "He didn't think it was fair just for white people to have freedom."

The highlight of the program, at least for the children, was the release of hundreds of multi-colored balloons stamped "wage peace." The balloon launch was a sign to the Magic Valley that "we want peace," Tucker said.

At the count of three, the children loosened their grips on the strings they had held through the program and craned their necks to watch the balloons whipped to the northeast by a brisk, bone-chilling wind.

Those who honored King Monday in Twin Falls were mostly white, as would be expected in an area where the latest census showed a population only 3 percent black. There were a few black faces in the crowd, however.

"I liked it," said Bob Nora, a black resident of Twin Falls, of the birthday celebration. "It's real nice to see people care."

Stuart principal balks at rezoning

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two Twin Falls junior high school principals were at odds Monday over rezoning and overstaffing problems at O'Leary Junior High School.

Robert Stuart, Principal Jack Watts said Monday he was upset to read that rezoning may be the answer to O'Leary Junior High School's accreditation problems.

"We have all we can handle," Watts said. "We don't want to be stuck with his problems over here."

The issue of rezoning arose last week after O'Leary, with 954 students, received a warning from the Northwest Accreditation Association. The warning gave O'Leary a year to alleviate staffing problems before losing its accreditation.

O'Leary Principal Duke Wiseman said last week he thought rezoning was the only answer, because 13 teachers at O'Leary have more than 100 students, which is above the NAA standard.

But Watts said shipping more students to his school was not the answer, nor could Robert Stuart handle the class scheduling adjustments at O'Leary, along with some boundary shifts.

"What we really need to look at is balancing the schedule," said Snow, former O'Leary principal for more than 10 years. "With 954 students and 42 teachers, that's about 26.5 students per teacher for a six-period day. That does not constitute an overload."

He said O'Leary has one less teacher Monday, but rezoning is also down. Normally, enrollment has been at or above 1,000 students, he said.

Snow, however, added that the district will be sending 25 to 35 seventh-graders to Robert Stuart next year as part of a phased-in, three-year rezoning plan.

Parent launches litigation over school's 'box'

By JANE ROBISON

TWIN FALLS — O'Leary Junior High officials have put "the box" to rest, but the issue is not dead.

Parent Arlo Kent Monday took what he said was the first step toward suing the Twin Falls School District for detaining his 15-year-old son in the "box," a 4-foot-square, 6-foot-5-inch-tall plywood box with a door that until last week was used to confine students on in-house suspension at O'Leary Junior High School.

Kent presented a notice of claim, the first step toward litigation, to the district Monday morning. He said he was taking the action to "prevent a whitewash" of the issue, even though district officials admitted to using the box, have taken off the door, and are making plans to build individual cubicles.

At a Twin Falls School Board meeting last Tuesday, when the issue was first made public, Kent said his son had not been detained in the "box." Since then, Kent said, his son told him that he was placed in the box, for one hour after school on Dec. 2. Kent said his son was placed on detention for several tardies.

During an interview Monday, Kent said he wanted the box dismantled and a public apology from O'Leary Principal Duke Wiseman.

But in the 2½-page notice he presented to the School District, Kent did not ask for an apology or seek damages, and School District officials said they are ignoring it.

"We took care of the matter, and as far as we're concerned, there was no violation," Superintendent Carl

Snow said Monday. "This is not an official claim, and we're not even clear what he wants."

In August, Kent filed a $1 million lawsuit against the city of Twin Falls and two Twin Falls Police officers, alleging his family's constitutional rights were violated when police illegally confiscated his son's bike.

The suit was dismissed in October because Kent failed to follow court rules, which included filing a claim for damages. Kent acted as his own lawyer in that case.

Details remain for senior center

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — KMYT Television moved out of its old studio on Eastland Drive this weekend, but work remains to be done before the Twin Falls Senior Citizens take up occupancy there.

First the deed for the property needs to be transferred from KMYT to the city of Twin Falls or the senior organization, says the City Council's senior liaison, Gale Kleinkopf. KMYT offered to donate the building to replace the crumbling city building used now for a senior center when the firm purchased the old Sierra Lake building on Blue Lakes Boulevard.

The council and the senior organization have not yet decided which will hold the deed to the building or whether it will be split between the two, Kleinkopf says.

Both are non-profit organizations that would yield tax reductions for KMYT, no matter which owns the building.

"Some councilmembers would like the seniors to own the building and take the lead in the remodeling work," Kleinkopf says.

Already, the senior organization has commissioned a new floor plan for the building from Dave Armstrong of Armstrong and Co. Kleinkopf says.

The most essential remodeling work will take several months to complete, he says, and he will not be encouraging seniors to move from their 4th Avenue West building until that is done.

That work includes re-siding the present leaky roof. A kitchen will have to be installed to feed as many as 300 people daily, and several restrooms will have to be added.

Councilmembers are hoping much of the initial remodeling will be covered with a $41,412 federal grant awarded to the city for a portion of the renovation. The seniors have also been building a construction fund over the last few years.

The city will be applying for another federal grant to complete further remodeling, such as modifying the basement for senior access, Kleinkopf says.

The city has wanted to move senior citizens from a deteriorating and potentially unsafe building since 1982. This year, when plans were being made for a kitchen expansion, a preliminary investigation found part of the floor in the back section sloped 2 1/2 inches per foot. From members' rolled joints and other related loose-bearing walls and other irregularities have caused much of the building to be closed from use since then.

IFF sewer plan awaits only EPA permit

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Preparations have been completed for Idaho Frozen Foods' waste to be handled at the Twin Falls City sewage treatment plant, but the city is still waiting for final approval from the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

The EPA permit could be signed in a week, said Dick Harville, plant superintendent.

The permit, if all goes as planned, will allow the city to discharge 103 milligrams per liter of suspended solids and biological oxygen demand. Now the plant is limited to 30 milligrams per liter.

difficult to meet than the straight discharge limits.

In December 1985, IFF moved 96 percent of waste, measured by suspended solids and biological oxygen demand, to also well within the flat discharge limits, with 12 milligrams per liter of suspended solids and 11 milligrams per liter of biological oxygen demand.

The plant has been open one hour since a day since the city contracted operations to Operations Management International in May. The plant will begin operations around the clock when IFF comes on line.

OMF worked the winter months on the additional maintenance worker, he said. The other workers are already on the payroll.

will be fed to the plant slowly at first, to allow the organisms that feed on the waste to increase, he says.

During those two weeks, OMI will have company consultants in Twin Falls to help with the start-up process, Harville says.

IFF will pay at least $600,000 annually to use the plant. Spreading overhead costs and more efficient operating procedures allowed by greater volume may save plant customers in Twin Falls and Kimberly between $100,000 and $110,000 annually, city staff members have estimated.

The City Council has voted to put any savings back into the city. The 23-year-old sewer line that serves some of the west side of the city needs a $2 million reconstruction, and equipment at the plant is in need of $500,000 in repairs.

Savings the council adds up now will be used to avoid, or at least limit, a bond issue to do the work.

Residents will still be paying lower sewer bills than they did last year. The council lowered monthly rates about 30 cents per household after OMI began operating the plant more efficiently than the city had operated it.

The increased limits effectively take into account how much effluent IFF was allowed to discharge at its waste treatment facility, although the firm has used a soil percolation system rather than piping cleaned waste directly into the Snake River.

The EPA is also expected to continue a requirement that 85 percent of the waste in the water be removed. That standard may be more

Body odor makes work unpleasant

DEAR ABBY: I am an electrologist. A woman came to me to have her hair on her upper lip removed by electrolysis. I just finished her fifth treatment, and I do not think I can give her another.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Abby, this woman has, and I do not think I have ever encountered! I noticed that her hair is always filthy. I don't believe she bathes at all. She smells so bad that it is impossible for me to work on her. Also, the room smells after she leaves.

Her husband drives her to her appointments, and I cannot for the life of me understand how he can live with her and let this go on. How do dentists, physicians, opticians, and other health-care professionals handle a problem like this?

DEAR NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE: DEAR NO NAME: You assumed that because the woman's hair is filthy and she smells bad, she doesn't bathe. A reasonable assumption, but it may not be true; she may have a serious medical problem of which she is unaware, so it would be a kindness to recommend that she see her physician about her chronic body odor.

Health-care professionals should (and most do) instruct patients with chronic body odor due to carelessness to bathe and wear clean clothing for their next visit.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for two years and have one child. We live on the East Coast. My in-laws, who live on the West Coast, visited us this last Christmas. When she was here, my mother-in-law made it clear that she wants all her children to be with her next Christmas. My in-laws are in their early 50s; in good health and quite well-off financially.

I think her request is outrageous and beyond our means. Although I have a good job, we are heavily in debt: $5,000 for a new car, $7,500 for my university loans, and $5,000 for other debts to begin our new home. I mentioned that I might be too expensive for us to be with them next

Christmas, and my mother-in-law put us on notice to start saving now so we could make it!

Her other children are also struggling to make ends meet, but she informed them that they are expected to start saving now!

Abby, is this woman within her rights to make such demands? And am I within my rights to tell her I think she's asking too much?

— FURIOUS SON-IN-LAW
DEAR FURIOUS: She is within her rights to issue any kind of invitation she wishes. And you are within yours to decline if you feel it's beyond your means. Whether you permit yourself to be manipulated is still your choice.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Can't Win," who received a telephone call (from Europe) informing her that a mutual relative had died suddenly. She was asked to notify the immediate family who had already left town to attend a family wedding. "Can't Win" did as she was told and was severely criticized for having spoiled the wedding. Some relatives thought she should have waited until after the wedding to convey the sad news.

A similar incident happened to me in reverse. My best friend's father passed away suddenly while I was vacationing in California. His friends and family thought it would be better not to notify me since there was nothing I could do about it, and it probably would ruin my vacation. Although I appreciated their good intentions, I regret that I was not notified. Whether I would have returned immediately is hard to say, but at least I would have had the opportunity to make that decision.

Philosophy class teaches kids to think

HONOLULU (AP) — To some, the study of philosophy conjures up images of long-drawn-out metaphysical discussions. But to a fifth-grader here it is "fun and easy as pie."

Megan, a 10-year-old at Benjamin Parker Elementary School in nearby Kaneohe, is talking about "Philosophy for Children," a program that started on the mainland and is being introduced in Hawaii schools.

The program teaches kids how to think, says University of Hawaii philosophy professor Roger Ames, project director. Ames, together with Drs. Thomas Jackson and Karen Lee of the UH philosophy department, developed Hawaii's program.

"Kids are graduating and don't know how to think. They can give you back information they have memorized, but as soon as you ask them to think for themselves and give reasons for their answers they are lost," Ames says.

Philosophy in this program is not the Jargon-heavy discipline found in traditional philosophy classes. Students do not discuss Plato or Hegel's dialectic. However, through dialogue, they are using a dialectic approach to the discussion, Ames says.

They are analyzing, refuting and questioning scientific, social, and philosophical principles in the manner children understand. They are learning to think critically, Ames says.

The idea is to get children to talk about things that interest them and Teramae, a teacher at Parker Elementary, says, Evelyn

Former heart patient sets jumping record

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A man who says he's recovered from two heart attacks, a stroke and triple bypass surgery has claimed a world record for jumping rope in a 12-hour, 15-minute non-stop undertaking to help other cardiac patients.

"What a wonderful mechanism the body is, and when it's treated right, what wonderful things it can do," Robert Commers, 35, said Monday about his weekend marathon.

"I just try to show a lot of people that when you think everything's down, it's never too late," he said in a telephone interview from the Courthouse Family Fitness Center, where he is an instructor.

Watched by a host of witnesses, Commers began jumping rope about 6 a.m. Saturday. Except for several rope changes lasting only a few seconds each, he said he continued uninterrupted for 12 hours, 15 minutes and 8 seconds.

The "Guinness Book of World Records" credits Frank P. Oliveri with jumping rope for a world-record 12 hours, eight minutes at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center near Chicago on June 13, 1951.

Commers said he would submit documentation of his feat to Guinness for verification.

"I consider myself a motivator especially where heart disease is concerned," said Commers, who teaches cardiac patients how to combine exercise and diet to live with heart disease.

Linda Honchar, area director for the American Heart Association Western Pennsylvania Chapter, said it was possible to lead a normal life after a heart attack.

"Not everyone who's had heart disease can go through what Bob did, but they see that if you've had a heart attack or open heart surgery, it's not the end of your life."

Prospective jurors sent home after guilty plea in stabbing

By RONDA-TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

RUPPERT—David W. Rushton, 47, pleaded guilty Monday in Minidoka Magistrate Court to voluntary manslaughter in the stabbing death of Evan Thompson outside a Paul Tavern on Jan. 3, 1985.

Rushton changed his plea from innocent before Judge George Granata Jr. after attorneys for both sides discussed the matter in the judge's chambers.

Prospective jurors, in the midst of selection for what was to have been a five-day trial, were sent home about 45 minutes before court convened and the plea was entered.

The guilty plea was entered pursuant to North Carolina vs. Alford, meaning the defendant doesn't admit to guilt, but does admit to being present at the date and place in question. There also must be strong prosecuting evidence to the fact that a crime did occur. Granata told the court this plea is "based on the U.S. Supreme Court case which says the defendant may plead guilty despite having processed innocence."

Rushton, a resident of Firih, will be sentenced by Granata after a pre-sentencing hearing which is completed within a month to six weeks. The minimum sentence is a withheld judgment, while the maximum sentence would be 15 years and/or $15,000.

He is free on bond, pending sentencing.

Based on information from the preliminary hearing, Granata said he didn't believe Rushton would be sentenced to a prison term; instead, the possibility of county jail time. However, he said this would depend upon the results of the presentencing investigation.

Thompson's father Richard, the proceedings just a joke.

"I've always felt that he murdered Evan deliberately, but see if he gets the same time in jail as a drunk driver," Thompson said.

Rushton's attorneys, Roger Cox and Dean Brandstetter, would not comment about why they entered the "Alford" plea. They emphasized that Rushton "did not actually plead guilty to the crime."

On the night of the incident Rushton and Thompson, 21, who had never met before, were involved in an argument at the Office Bar. Before leaving the bar, Rushton picked up a bar stool and held it at Thompson, who had followed him from the upstairs portion of the bar, court records show.

Preliminary hearing testimony showed that witnesses had substantially different accounts as to what actually happened after Rushton put down the bar stool and left the bar with his companions Boyd Poole and Ralph Halstrom.

Thompson, with his companions Mitchell Hodge and Mark Peck, followed Rushton's group outside the bar, where Rushton and Thompson began fighting in the street. Thompson, 5-foot, 6-inches tall and 150 pounds, had special training in martial arts and was trained in hand-to-hand combat in the Marine Corps, according to court records.

After Thompson threw the 6-foot, 250-pound Rushton up against a vehicle parked across from the bar, he reportedly ran toward Rushton. Testimony indicated that Rushton's right hand came up immediately, and Thompson stopped running and said "I'm hurt" and "I've been stabbed."

Thompson was helped back into the bar, where he died of a puncture wound to the heart caused by a pocket knife.

Witnesses said that once Thompson was in the bar, Peck and Hodge smashed in the front window and ran driver's side window of the car. Rushton was sitting in the car when he reportedly pulled Rushton, who knocked him down and kicked him repeatedly until "someone yelled, 'you've killed him,' and the kicking stopped."

Rushton and his companions were in a car leaving the scene when they were stopped by police officers.

Jury awards couple damages

TWIN FALLS — A 5th District Court jury awarded a Twin Falls couple $150,463 Thursday over a May 22, 1984 car accident in Twin Falls.

Richard and Debbie Ann Haas filed a lawsuit July 1984 against Arnold A. Burmiston of Green Bank, Wash. and Overland West Inc. of Odgen, Utah.

The couple claimed Burmiston ran his car into the rear of Mrs. Haas' vehicle, which was stopped for traffic on Addison Avenue East. Burmiston's car was owned by Overland West Inc. The couple alleged the driver was negligent and, as a result, Mrs. Haas suffered back injuries. In their claim, the couple sought $450,000 for general damages to Mrs. Haas, $2,000 for property damages and $50,000 for Richard Haas, according to court records.

KIMBERLY — A distribution transformer that failed Sunday evening blacked out 1,275 homes and businesses in Kimberly and the southeast side of Twin Falls.

The power failed at 6:09 p.m. and was down for 63 minutes, said Dial Monson of Idaho Power Co.

Indigency

If the task force recommendation is approved (by the Legislature), then the medical indigency issue becomes moot," Jackson said. And if that occurs, the reification of the indigent law still would be necessary—and viable—because the state proposal doesn't address non-medical indigent items, he added.

Non-medical indigency matters take up the bulk of the county's time while medical indigency bills take up most of the money, he said. Jackson added that he had mixed emotions about the task force plan.

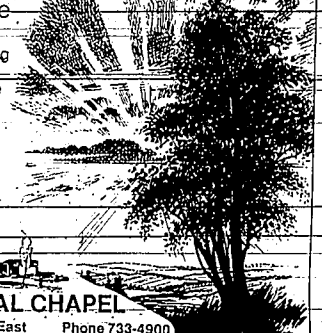

A state program would be supported by the counties based on per capita fee of about $7. He claimed the state program would be cheaper for the counties because of the "matching" federal funds that would be generated by the county portion — and that's why he supports it.

In response to escalating medical bills for indigents, the Idaho Association of Counties organized a program to assist the state in the program. It's the state's job to pay for or for counties, should it find afterward that it needs more revenue for indigent claims. Jackson said, "I don't want the state to bill the county for the program."

Trustees approve new rooms for school

By BARBARA NEIWEIT
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Students at Halley Elementary School will begin the 1986 fall semester with 10 new classrooms at their school.

After considering building priorities in the district at their meeting last Tuesday, Blaine County School District trustees unanimously agreed to appropriate the $275,000 plant facility fees funds for 1986 on the Halley Elementary project.

Recognizing the needs of the Carey School, the board also moved to continue planning and design efforts for the Carey project with construction anticipated for the summer of 1987.

The Halley/Bellevue Parent-Teacher Organization opposed the board's original plan to place the 1987 school on hold until at least 1988 while the design and construction of the Carey School and Hemingway Elementary School in Ketchum.

From an "absolute need" standpoint, said Carey trustee Dar Parke, Carey has a greater need for construction than other five schools in the district. But, as Carey principal Richard Bowers said, the Carey School building project is "complex" from a design standpoint and more time is needed for the planning process.

Parke concurred with the other board members and Superintendent David Noonan's report that the Halley district's administrative personnel are in construction at school prior to Carey.

"Concerning the complexity of the situation and laying all political considerations aside, I go along with him (Bowers)," Parke said.

Chairman Frank Rowland said the Carey project is a major remodeling job, not just an add-on, which makes the planning phase even more vital.

Once the Halley project received the go-ahead, architect Jim McLaughlin presented preliminary plans for construction of eight new classrooms on the south end of the school and remodeling of two existing classrooms into a multi-purpose media center.

Total cost estimates for the project as presented, plus retooling, came to $275,000, some $200,000 over available funds. Board members will work with Halley Elementary Principal Ellen Morfitt to define construction priorities and narrow down the project to fall within budget restrictions.

In other business, art teaching specialist Gail Porter explained the "Arts in Education" program within Blaine County schools use and which accounts for 40 percent of all residency programs within the state. A professional artist works with students in the schools for a two- to four-week period, exposing them to various art forms in which the teaching staff may not have sufficient expertise.

Professional artists nationwide from all arts mediums apply to the programs which originally were established by the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities, but which now are sponsored directly by the school district, Porter said.

"I've seen some kids really come out of the woodwork," said junior/senior high art teacher John Blackman.

Body odor makes work unpleasant

DEAR ABBY: I am an electrologist. A woman came to me to have the hair on her upper lip removed by electrolysis. I just finished her fifth treatment, and I do not think I can give her another.

Abby, this woman has the worst body odor I have ever encountered! I noted that her hair is always filthy. I don't believe she bathes at all. She smells so bad that it's impossible for me to work on her. Also, the room smells after she leaves.

Her husband drives her to her appointments, and I cannot for the life of me understand how he can live with her and let this go on.

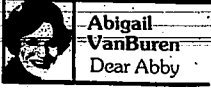

How do dentists, physicians, opticians and other health-care professionals handle a problem like this?

NO NAME OR TOWN PLEASE DEAR NO NAME: You assumed that because the woman's hair is filthy and she smells bad, she doesn't bathe. A reasonable assumption, but it may not be true. She may have a serious medical problem of which she is unaware, so it would be a kindness to recommend that she see her physician about her chronic body odor.

Health-care professionals should (and most do) instruct patients with chronic body odor due to carelessness to bathe and wear clean clothing for their next visit.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been married for two years and have one child. We live on the East Coast. My in-laws, who live on the West Coast, visited us this Christmas. When she was here, my mother-in-law made it clear that she wants all her children to be with her next Christmas. My in-laws are in their early 60s, in good health and quite well-off financially.

I think her request is outrageous and beyond our means. Although I have a good job, we are heavily in debt: $5,000 for a new car, $7,500 for my university loans, and $5,000 for other debts to better our new home. I mentioned that it might be too expensive for us to be with them next

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

Christmas, and my mother-in-law put us on notice to start saving now so we could make it.

Her other children are also struggling to make ends meet, but she informed them that they are expected to start saving now!

Abby, is this woman within her rights to make such demands? And am I within my rights to tell her I think she's asking too much?

DEAR FURIOUS: She is within her "rights" to issue any kind of invitation she wishes. And you are within yours to decline if you feel it's beyond your means. Whether you permit yourself to be manipulated is still your choice.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Can't Win," who received a telephone call (from Europe) informing her that a mutual relative had died suddenly. She was asked to notify the immediate family who had already left town to attend a family wedding. "Can't Win" did as she was told and was severely criticized for having "ruined" the wedding.

relatives thought she should have waited until after the wedding to convey the sad news. A similar incident happened to me in reverse. My best friend's father passed away suddenly while I was vacationing in California. His friends and family thought it would be better not to notify me since there was nothing I could do about it, and it probably would ruin my vacation.

Although I appreciated their good intentions, I regret that I was not notified. Whether I would have returned immediately is hard to say, but at least I would have had the opportunity to make that decision.

Philosophy class teaches kids to think

HONOLULU (AP) — To some, the study of philosophy conjures up images of long-drawn-out metaphysical discussions. But to a fifth-grader here it is "fun and easy as pie."

Megan, a 10-year-old at Benjamin Parker Elementary School in nearby Kaneohe, is talking about "Philosophy for Children," a program that started on the mainland and is being introduced in Hawaii schools.

The program teaches kids how to think, says University of Hawaii philosophy professor Roger Ames, project director. Ames, together with Drs. Thomas Jackson and Karen Lee of the UH philosophy department, developed Hawaii's program.

"Kids are graduating and don't know how to think. They can give you back information they have memorized, but as soon as you ask them to think for themselves and give reasons for their answers they are lost," Ames says.

Philosophy in this program is not the jargon-heavy discipline found in traditional philosophy classes. Students do not discuss Plato or Hegel's dialectic. However, through dialogue, they are using a dialectic approach to the discussion, Ames says.

They are analyzing, refuting and questioning scientific, social and philosophical principles in the manner children understand.

"They are learning to think critically," Ames says. "The idea is to get children to talk about things that interest them and Teramae, a teacher at Parker Elementary, says, "Evelyn Elementary."

Former heart patient sets jumping record

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A man who says he's recovered from two heart attacks, a stroke and triple bypass surgery, set a world record for jumping rope in a 12-hour, 15-minute effort undertaken to help other cardiac patients.

"What a wonderful mechanism the body is, and what a great thing what wonderful things it can do," Robert Commers, 35, said Monday about his weekend marathon.

"I just try to show a lot of people that when you think everything's down, it's never too late," he said in a telephone interview from the Courthouse Family Fitness Center where he is an instructor.

Watched by a host of witnesses, Commers began jumping rope about 5 a.m. Saturday. Except for several rope changes lasting only a few seconds each, he said he continued uninterrupted for 12 hours, 15 minutes and 8 seconds.

The "Guinness Book of World Records" credits Frank P. Oliveri with jumping rope for a world-record 12 hours, 15 minutes at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center near Chicago on June 18, 1981.

Commers said he would submit documentation of his feat to Guinness records. "I consider myself a motivator especially where heart disease is concerned," said Commers, who teaches cardiac patients how to combine exercise and diet to live with heart disease.

Linda Honchar, area director for the American Heart Association Western Pennsylvania Chapter, said it was possible to lead a normal life after a heart attack.

"Not everyone who's had heart disease can go through what Bob did, but they see that if you've had a heart attack or open heart surgery, it's not the end of your life."

Liquor privatization bill to be drafted

BOISE (AP) — This afternoon, a group of Idaho legislators and liquor industry lobbyists will try to craft a bill aimed at winding down the state liquor dispensary system and replacing it with private sales.

Idaho Falls, who sponsored the private liquor sale bill on the floor last year.

But Brimhall voted against it then and said he still opposes the concept. Liquor, he said, should be tightly controlled.

Conservatives like Brimhall last year forged an unusual alliance with Democrats and others worried the state would get less revenue from private than from state liquor sales.

After the House killed Chaddband's bill last year, it gave him a consolation prize — co-chairmanship of an interim committee on liquor sales.

It was well-stocked with privatization backers, most House members on it had voted for Chaddband's bill.

Months of hearings and sharp debate ended with a 5-4 vote in December favoring a new privatization bill this session.

The idea is to fashion a proposal more attractive to legislators this session than it was in 1985, when it failed to pass the House. The measure's sponsor, Rep. Boyd Hill, R-Meridian, needs 15 new votes for passage.

"I think there's a little more support for changing the system this year," he said.

"There's a lot of support for privatization. Hill is a member of a subcommittee on liquor sales chaired by Rep. Ron Crane, R-Nampa, and appointed by Business Committee Chairman Mike Strasser, R-Nampa. Crane said the subcommittee plans to settle on a bill draft on Tuesday and possibly ask the full Business Committee to approve it. Both Crane and Strasser voted for last year's bill.

"I just feel very strongly the state of Idaho needs to be in the business of selling distilled spirits," said Hill, a legislator.

But not all privatization backers approve of private liquor sales. Rep. Preston Brimhall, R-Idaho Falls, is a vocal supporter of privatization and often is an ally of Rep. J.P. Chaddband, R-

House committee passes increase in head tax

BOISE (AP) — Two legislative committee chairmen say the best way to relieve Idaho's prison overcrowding problem is to build a new maximum security prison, financed by an extra $1 tax on every state income tax return for the next five years.

The House Revenue and Taxation Committee went along with the suggestion Monday, approving printing and introduction of the proposal.

Rep. Larry Harris, R-Boise, and Sen. Roger Fairchild, R-Fruitland, told the committee the state's prison system is badly overcrowded, and the state is under a federal court order to do something about it.

The legislators, both committee chairmen, urged approval for legislation doubling the $10 "head tax" charged on every Idaho tax return.

Some committee members said there's a similar pressing problem at State Hospital South, Blackfoot, and they wanted some of the money diverted to new facilities there.

A bill increasing the head tax to pay for new SIS buildings cleared the House last session but died in the Senate.

Fairchild said he was optimistic his legislation could get around a major roadblock, the Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee.

congressional candidate, has vowed that he would rather undergo a public flogging than let any tax bill through this session.

Fairchild said he didn't want to try to fool anyone. "This is a tax increase," he said. "But it meets a direct need."

After the committee meeting, Fairchild said he was optimistic that the Senate leadership would bypass Watkins' committee and send the measure directly to the floor for a vote, if the proposal clears the House.

While he had no assurances from anyone that that would happen, he said legislative support for his proposal is very strong.

Auditor Williams to reveal plans

BOISE (AP) — State Auditor Joe Williams will reveal his political plans this weekend at the annual Jefferson-Jackson Day banquet.

The veteran Democrat, 41, who is in his 28th year as state auditor, hasn't announced yet whether he will run for a record eighth term this year.

Williams said Monday that he will announce his plans at the annual Democrat Party fund-raising event, scheduled Saturday in Boise.

Williams was elected state auditor in the 1958 election, and has been re-elected to four-year terms every time since then.

Donald D. Fryer, 36, of St. Anthony, and John E. Burke Jr., 29, of Charleston, Mo., were killed when Fryer's logging truck and a Jeep Cherokee in which Burke was a passenger collided on the icy road about 18 miles north of Ashton shortly after 6 p.m. MST Sunday.

Idaho State Police Cpl. Danny Bunderson said the driver of the Jeep, Frank Schoenleben, 33, and his wife Katherine, 27, of Centerville, Utah, were flown from Ashton Memorial Hospital to Bannock Regional Medical Center in Pocatello Sunday night.

Bunderson said a nursing supervisor said both were in serious but stable condition.

Boise project gets blank look

BOISE (AP) — The long-delayed Boise redevelopment project gets its share of poking fun by state legislators.

Such as on Monday, when Rep. Gene Winchester, R-Kuna, told House members he received a copy of the Boise Redevelopment Agency's annual report.

The cover was blank. Winchester asked whether that was intentional or whether the cover depicted progress in the last 20 years toward a downtown Boise mall, which still is in the planning stages.

AIDS growth rate seen slowing

GARDEN CITY (AP) — AIDS, the acquired-immune deficiency syndrome, is growing fast, but the growth rate may have slowed, a state health official says.

Dr. Charles Brokopp, Idaho's epidemiologist, said about 17,000 cases have been reported in the United States, and 9,000 victims have died. He spoke Sunday at an AIDS seminar sponsored by the Idaho AIDS Foundation.

Brokopp said AIDS has the highest fatality rate of any disease. He said there is no case in which an AIDS sufferer has lived for more than five years after contracting the disease.

Idaho was the last state to report an AIDS case, in November. Brokopp said three more have been reported in Idaho since then.

McMahon backs acupuncture

JIM McMAHON
Sits out Bears' care

By JOE MOOSHLI
The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Quarterback Jim McMahon's aching buttock caused a sit Monday night no sooner than the Chicago Bears arrived for their Super Bowl meeting against New England next Sunday.

McMahon revealed he had some acupuncture done Monday morning on his lower left back and the upper left buttock, something apparently frowned on by the Bears.

McMahon said the treatment was rendered by someone named "Hiroshi" something and he appeared miffed that the Bears had not allowed the acupuncturist to board their charter from Chicago.

"It doesn't matter if they approve or if they don't approve," said McMahon, "as long as it works. I had it done earlier today and I could use some more treatments. It relieved a lot of the pressure."

It was learned that the acupuncturist is Hiroshi Shirashi, who is the trainer for the Japanese national track team and was recommended to McMahon and other members of the Bears by teammate Willie Gault.

Gault, a world class sprinter and currently a wide receiver for the Bears, first met Shirashi in Tokyo when Gault was competing in track. "The butt hurts," said McMahon. "I could use a couple of more treatments. Hopefully, we can get the guy down here tomorrow." Trainer Fred Cuito of the Bears was not immediately available for comment but team spokesman Ken Valdieri said the Bears want Cuito to treat McMahon.

Valdieri, speaking for club president Michael McCaskey, said "Fred Cuito has treated Jim and the rest of the squad. Michael McCaskey feels Cuito should continue to treat Jim."

Valdieri revealed that Shirashi has used acupuncture on some of the Bears in the past and "He is not a miracle worker and has not met with much success."

Valdieri added that the acupuncture was administered with the Bears' knowledge but not their approval. McMahon wanted to experiment but the Bears feel that this is not the time to experiment.

McMahon did not practice last week while the Bears were putting in their game plan during workouts at the University of Illinois at Champaign. McMahon suffered the injury in the Bears' 24-0 victory over the Los Angeles Rams in the National Conference championship game a week ago Sunday. He was hurt when he slid feet first on a running play but was hit in the back by the Rams' Doug Reed.

"You're not supposed to get hit when you go feet first but nobody threw the flag," said McMahon. "If they're not going to call it, I'm not going to slide feet first."

"Whether I practice Wednesday, Thursday or Friday makes no difference," said McMahon. "I'll be ready to play Sunday."

McMahon has had a history of injuries, the worst coming last year when he suffered a lacerated kidney against the Los Angeles Raiders which forced him to miss the last seven games of the season and the playoffs.

"Injuries don't make any difference," he said. "When an injury heals, it heals and you go on playing the same way as you always did."

Coach Mike Ditka said "Jim suffered a severe deep bruise. It could be ready to practice by Wednesday. It's tender and if he were to take a hit on it now, it would be very painful."

Urie Bulldog junior forward keeps Kimberly on time

By IRON GATES
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — A little more than three years ago, Audra Urie — now a standout for the Kimberly girls' basketball team — reached a decision that was both good news and bad news.

It turned out to be good news for Bulldogs' Coach Wes Remaley and for Magic Valley Conference girls basketball teams that don't have to contend with her every other year. But it was bad news for Canyon Conference teams that do, and for Hansen, the MVC school from which she transferred.

"They just have better course offerings and my family and I thought that my chances to receive an athletic scholarship would be better in a larger school," she said. Urie, a 5-foot-10 junior forward of the decision to move. "She's a quality player," says Piler Coach Wade Quessell. "She can go the full length of the floor and has a sweet jump shot — you can be right on her on the baseline and she'll still hit it. And she's improved a lot. She's more than just a scoring threat — she's passing more and has the ability to find the open person consistently."

Glenns Ferry Coach Ken Fast agrees. "I think one thing about Audra Urie is that she is really an aggressive basketball player. She often times starts things for Kimberly with her offensive ability. I think the main weapon is the beautiful jump shot that she takes."

"It's as good as any a boy can take." Even though she has consistently reached double figures in scoring, Urie is not the leader in that category every time out. Opponents haven't been able to focus their defensive attention on her this season around because when she over-guard her she gets the ball inside so well to teammates — Cindy Holcomb and Patti Petelere, a pair of six-footers. But the points are there when the defense opts to cut off the passing lanes underneath. Urie is averaging 16.5 points a game through 14 games from her wing position for the 1-18 Bulldogs.

Urie, who professes an interest in sports as far back as she can remember, received her initiation into athletic competition through the old Magic Valley Swim Club at the tender age of 5. She won three state championships in three different age groups.

About the same time, she played little league baseball on boys' teams and while a seventh grader, competed in football along with a female classmate on the Hansen Junior High School squad. Supplementing backyard practice, Urie made her first foray into upper-level training at the annual College of Southern Idaho basketball game.

Invited to last summer's Basketball Congress International camp, Urie had to decline due to a commitment to her softball team. The 16-year-old played third base and catcher for perennial Twin Falls City League powerhouse Falls Brand-Coors of Magic Valley. Next summer, she plans to accept the BCI offer for the experience it affords.

"Through her participation in Kimberly's individual and track programs, Urie has made several trips to state and played a starring role on the Bulldogs' 1985

girls' basketball team that won the District 4 championship after finishing third in the Canyon Conference.

But in this, her junior season, she has really come into her own on the basketball floor.

"I'd say that the most definite improvement she's made this year is that she's more of a team player," says Rentschler. "On defense, I teach them to get their hand on the ball — not steal it — let the other person get the steal. It's an uncharted statistic, but it's important and she gets about 15 of those per game."

An above-average student, she hopes to continue her athletics at the college level while working toward a law degree. But for now, her goals are short-term.

"I just want to do my best and improve every year," says Urie, whose team can clinch a share of the Canyon Conference title tonight by beating Gooding.

"She is only a junior, she has next year," says Remaley in his first season as the Kimberly coach. "But she plays like a senior and I think her defense has improved quite a bit this year. If we need someone to guard their best player she's the one I usually go to. I think she makes everyone better because she has been getting six to eight assists and eight rebounds per game. She gets the fast break started and that's the kind of ball we run. When you do all that you're not only scoring points, but helping everyone else score points."

Eagle-mania: It's becoming epidemic

TWIN FALLS — If there were any doubt in your mind that the sports dollar competes for the entertainment dollar on the commercial market, we've got you the 1985-86 College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles.

Certainly it can't be the competition that is pulling big crowds under the Eagle dome there hasn't been a competitive game since this year.

Which is interesting. During the Jerry Hale-Boyd Grant reigns of terror, the complaint was "I'd go out and watch CSI play but they always beat everyone 30 or 40 points. If they had close games, I'd go."

Inevitably, the eagle cycling was "close games" and you know what the crowds dropped off.

The answer, of course, is even simpler than winning — CSI has only once failed to win more than 20 games in a year.

Julius Domowitz, Castleford, made his first appearance in the CSI Northwest Division game last week because "everyone in Castleford keeps telling me 'go see CSI. They put on a great show.' No one says they play great basketball. They say 'it's a great show.'"

What the team has is "chemistry" of an exciting kind but also an individuality that gives each player a niche in fans' recognition.

Richard Sterling, who handles the logistics of ticket sales at CSI, summed it up. "I would guess," Sterling said with a broad grin, "that Joey (Johnson) has paid for his scholarship."

Johnson is the flyer who pulls fans out of their seats on a solo dash downcourt because they know some kind of jam is coming.

Nor does it hurt to have a Chris Blocker who very probably is the best player to ever represent a school that has had 23 players drafted by NBA teams. And consider freshman Eric Newman, the master of the stolen ball. Had Fred Egan ever bumped into Newman, you'd never heard of The Artful Dodger.

Larry Hovey

What has to be discouraging for opposition, however, remains CSI's ability to dominate on the perimeter. A good point guard comes to town and is immediately greeted by Johnson at the 10-second line. Joey leaves and Gerald Collins comes in. Collins leaves and Keith Jackson is there to catch someone quicker than the last.

That this combination of individuality and teamwork draws was best exemplified when about 1,800 fans showed up to watch the Eagles play the College of Idaho junior varsity. We've seen nights that matchup wouldn't pay the officials.

The K and J Steel tournament had its all-time gate last December and the crowds just seem to get bigger. And, one must remember, none of the teams we usually associate with "crucial" has shown up on the schedule as yet.

Two carloads of Declo residents showed up two weeks ago and announced at the ticket gate they hoped the show was as good as they'd been led to believe. None came back afterward for a refund.

"There must be a dozen Castleford people who refuse to miss a game," Domowitz said.

The biggest crowd of the year came to watch CSI beat Utah Tech, rated one of three solid teams in Utah — or the southern division of the league.

Why is it so hard to keep a count on everyone who comes in? Sterling said of boy Scout nights there were around 2,700 here that night. I think that 3,100 would have people hanging from the rafters."

The bleacher manufacturer puts the CSI gymnasium capacity at 4,800 — but that's figured on 16 inches per fanny. On that basis, each row should hold 60 people over the 93-foot length of the floor. In a practicality, something between 30 and 36 is the norm with 45 showing up a lot. Some people, of course, are taking two and three places.

The overriding impression one brings away from the gymnasium is the near-party atmosphere of the crowd. One suspects no one expects to see the Eagles lose, but underlining that is the impression that losing wouldn't really ruin the fun either.

The basketball park would correctly assess, however, that if someone wanted this bunch of golden Eagles the fans would have seen a heckuva game because they remain first and foremost basketball players.

If you are a fan and haven't seen the Eagles yet, the suggestion is you start making plans or you'll be one of the guys sitting in the corner twiddling his thumbs when the old "remember that 1985-86 team..." stories start.

You have nine more chances and six of those figure to be among the better games from a competitive standpoint, starting with the Jan. 27 encounter with one-beat-on Weber State junior varsity, whose only loss came to CSI in November.

CSI also has a pair of games remaining against Ricks College here on Feb. 7-8, which is always a good matchup regardless of the respective teams' records. Southern Division Region 18 powerhouse Snow College, whom CSI defeated earlier in the season, will come to town on Feb. 17, and North Idaho, featuring 6-foot-11 Swen Meyer and a 6.9 rating, will arrive for a two-game set Feb. 21-22 that could decide the northern division championship.

But for just a good time watching people having a good time, show up any home night. This type of team doesn't show up often.

Prep roundup Indians clinch MVC cage championship

By The Times-News

SIOUSHONE — Shoshone's girls' basketball team pulled away in the fourth quarter to win a non-conference contest with Gooding 54-39 here Monday night, but the Indians clinched the Magic Valley Conference championship before they took the floor.

Shoshone, tied in MVC competition, assured itself of the league title and a first-round bye in next week's District 4 Southside Sub-district tournament when runner-up Oakley decided not to reschedule a game between the two schools that had been postponed last week because of a flu outbreak that closed the Cassia County school.

That left the Hornets with a 7-2 MVC record, but games still scheduled with Murtaugh and Hansen this week.

In order to tie for the league championship, Oakley would have had to beat Shoshone in the makeup game and then win its final two conference games.

Oakley 48 Raft River 44

Oakley — Some miserable free throw shooting by Raft River and the fourth-quarter rebounding and defensive play of Oakley's Sandy Wells paced the Hornets to a 30-11 Magic Valley Conference girls' basketball victory over the Trojans here Monday.

Oakley — Warr 15, Severe 6, Strang 6, Poulton 8, Wells 3, Lloyd 2, Hensch 1, Hiale 2. Points — 11-22.

Atlanta closes in on division leadership

ATLANTA (AP) — Kevin Willis scored a season-high 24 points, including a jumper with 42 seconds left to snap a tie Monday night, pacing the surging Hawks to a 101-98 National Basketball Association victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

The Hawks opened the game by going scoreless for the first 5:45 and trailed 14-0 before Willis scored Atlanta's first points.

Atlanta, winners of 10 of its 22 games, increased its record to 12-17 and moved within four games of the Central Division-leading Bucks, who lost for only the third time in 13 games.

Willis' winning basket put the Hawks up 99-97. Milwaukee's Terry Cummings made one of two free throws to get within a point with 27 seconds left, but the Bucks lost the ball with 12 seconds left on a walking violation by Alton Lister.

Antoine Carr scored on a layup with the second left to tie the victory for the Hawks.

Dominique Wilkins led Atlanta with 33 points. Carr added 14 points and Doc Rivers and Cliff Levingston each had 11.

Sidney Moncrief and Paul Pressey paced Milwaukee with 23 points each. Cummings had 14.

Indiana 105 Detroit 99

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Wayman Tisdale scored 29 points, including 11 in the third quarter, as the Indiana Pacers defeated Detroit Pistons 105-99 on an eight-game NBA losing streak Monday night.

Tisdale also grabbed 15 rebounds as the Pacers beat Detroit for the first time in 10 outings. Steve Siljnovich also had 15 rebounds as Indiana out-rebounded the Pistons 59-38.

The Pacers' biggest lead was 61-63 on a three-point play by Tisdale with 2:53 left in the third period.

Detroit cut it to 87-82 on a Vinnie Johnson layup with 8:54 in the fourth. The Pacers then ran off a 9-2 spurt in the next 3 1/2 minutes to make it 99-84 on a three-point play by Vern Fleming with 5:31 to play.

Cleveland 108 Phoenix 93

RICHMOND, Ohio (AP) — World B. Free scored 18 of his 31 points in the first half Monday as the Cleveland Cavaliers surged to a 25-point, half-time lead on the way to a 108-93 National Basketball Association victory over the Phoenix Suns. Cleveland, 18-23, outscored the Suns 18-5 in the first five minutes of the game and never was threatened. The Cavaliers built the advantage to 62-47 for their biggest half-time lead of the season.

The Cavaliers made 58 percent of their first-half field goal attempts, to 33 percent for the Suns. Phoenix, 15-24, whittled the lead to 88-72 after three periods but lost a third-quarter points by James Edwards, and got within 11 at 104-93 on a three-point shot by Walter Davis with 1:50 to go.

Free, however, retaliated with two free throws a minute later, and John Bagley closed the scoring for Cleveland.

L.A. Lakers 133 Chicago 118

CHICAGO (AP) — Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 12 points in the fourth quarter to quell a pair of late Chicago runs, and teammate James Worthy scored three in the game-high 33 points to lead the Los Angeles Lakers to a 133-118 National Basketball Association triumph Monday over the Bulls.

The loss was the fifth straight for Chicago, which had 23 points from Orlando Woolridge and 19 from George Gervin.

Woolridge and Gervin combined for 20 points in the third quarter to trim the Lakers' 20-point cushion with three minutes left to 97-85 by the end of the period.

The Bulls then narrowed the gap to seven points on three different occasions in the closing period. But Johnson stopped Chicago's first run with a three-point play early in the period, then cooled off a second Chicago spurt with a pair of free throws.

Philadelphia 103 New York 93

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Moses Malone scored 20 points and Charles Barkley added 24 as the Philadelphia 76ers defeated the New York Knickerbockers 103-93 Monday in a National Basketball Association game.

The victory was the 76ers' 15th in their last 17 games. Philadelphia, taking advantage of numerous New York turnovers, jumped out to a 27-8 lead midway through the first quarter and led 49-30 on a jump shot by Clemson Johnson with 5:33 left in the first half.

But the Knicks cut the deficit to 57-48 at halftime and a jumper by Louis Orr brought New York to within 59-54 with 9:05 left in the third quarter.

Bill would give Idaho congressmen a voice in salmon, steelhead rules

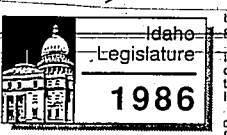

By DEAN MILLER Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho's interest in the salmon and steelhead fisheries will be better protected if the Legislature adopts a measure proposed Monday, said Sen. Gary Chapman, R-Boise.

Chapman wants to put two Idaho senators and two representatives in position to review any new federal law or regulations that will affect salmon and steelhead runs that originate in Idaho rivers.

The Senate Resources and Environment Committee voted Monday to print and further consider a bill that would place legislators on the Pacific Fisheries Legislative Task Force.

Time is running out, the federal law that now governs sea-run fisheries in the Northwest—Legislators in California, Oregon, Washington, Alaska, and Hawaii are trying to put together a unified committee to lobby Congress for changes in the law agreed upon by the states affected, Chapman said.

Resources and Environment Committee Chairman Laird Noh told the committee, there are already six groups overseeing fisheries policy, but none of them are legislative groups.

Noh, a Kimberly Republican, said if nothing else, the group will open communication between states interested in streambank casters.

He said that at a summer meeting of the legislative group, one ocean fisherman didn't know why people in Idaho cared about ocean fishing policies, because he didn't know of the fishing activity upstream near the spawning beds in the rivers.

Because California has lost 96 percent of its natural salmon spawning streams, Idaho's have become of interest to the states that depend on salmon and steelhead that are born in the rivers of Idaho before migrating to the Pacific Ocean, Noh said.

Sen. Herb Carlson, R-Engle, said he supports putting Idaho legislators on the committee, even if they don't have much clout. "This gives us a voice as well as a number of us,"

Committee vote on non-partisan hopeful delayed

BOISE (AP) — Contention over the state's legal jurisdiction on political affiliation of state board and commission members is stalling the Senate confirmation of the newest appointees to the state Fish and Game Commission.

Richard Hansen, a Bayview forester, declared himself as a political independent, belonging to no recognized political party, during his confirmation hearing last week before the Senate Resources and Environment Committee. Hansen was named last fall to succeed Pete Thompson, a Democrat.

Bearcats upend No. 13 Louisville, 84-82

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Sophomore guard Roger McCleendon pumped in 24 of his 35 points in the second half and Tony Peterson had a three-point play with eight seconds left to give the victory upped Cincinnati to overall and No. 1 in the conference. The triumph came in the Bearcats' first game since downing No. 20 Virginia Tech 107-104 in double overtime Saturday.

Louisville led 11-5 and 27-27. Louisville holding a 56-43 lead, Cincinnati went on a 14-0 run to tie within three points with 10:29 left. McCleendon had nine points, mostly on long-range bombs, during the run.

Cincinnati led the game on a 20-10000 by McCleendon with 5:29 left.

The two teams exchanged baskets until Wilson, fouled after picking up a loose ball, hit two free throws to put Cincinnati up 80-76 with 2:30 left.

Louisville cut the lead to 81-80 on a layup by Jeff Hall with 11 seconds left, but Wilson broke free to the inbound play for a layup and was fouled. He sank the free throw with eight seconds left to put Cincinnati up 84-80 and in control.

A layup by Hall at the buzzer counted for the tie score.

A lethargic Louisville team turned the ball over 20 times in the game under pressure from Cincinnati's half-court trapping defense. Cincinnati had 12 turnovers.

Cincinnati also outbounced its taller opponents 33-32, with 20 of those coming on the offensive board.

Georgetown 76 Villanova 72

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Reggie Williams scored 42 points to lead 15th-ranked Georgetown to a 76-72 Big East Conference victory over Villanova Monday night in a rematch of last year's NCAA championship.

It was the first meeting of the two teams since Villanova beat Georgetown just April for the NCAA title in one of the biggest upsets in the history of the tournament.

Villanova, which trailed by as many as 18 points in the first half, rallied behind the scoring of veterans Harold Pressley and Harold Jensen to pull within four points with 6:33 remaining.

But Georgetown, getting four free throws from Williams, scored six of the game's next seven points to take a 64-55 lead, and Villanova never cut the gap below three points the rest of the way.

After the Wildcats scored the opening four points of the game, Georgetown used a 15-4 scoring streak to take an early seven-point lead. The Wildcats' Mark Plamley hit a short jumper to cut the gap to 15-10, but the Hoyas rattled off 13 straight points to take control, 28-10, with just 10 minutes gone in the contest.

Pressing whenever possible, Georgetown hit 9 of 14 free throws. The Big East took advantage of 12 Villanova turnovers to take a comfortable 41-29 lead at intermission.

Notre Dame 91 Hofstra 67

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Donald Royal scored a game-high 30 points as No. 10 Notre Dame defeated Hofstra 91-67 Monday in a nonconference college basketball game.

A diminutive 5-foot-10 Frank Walker led Hofstra, 7-8, with 19 points, often driving down the length of the court in an attempt against the larger Irish defense.

It's unanimous at last: Tar Heels No. 1

By The Associated Press

College basketball

North Carolina, which opened its new arena with a three-point victory over Duke and followed that with a two-point road victory over Marquette last weekend, was the unanimous choice Monday as the No. 1 team in The Associated Press college basketball poll.

The Tar Heels, 19-0, have been on top of the poll in each of the regular-season polls but this was their first week as a unanimous choice. North Carolina received 1,340 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters.

Last season, Georgetown was a unanimous No. 1 choice six times and St. John's was unopposed for one week.

Duke, one of three teams to suffer its first loss of the season last week, was second in the voting with 1,089 points, 20 more than Memphis State, 17-0, of the Metro Conference.

Georgia Tech, the third Atlantic Coast Conference team in the top four, was next with 1,058 points. Fifteen-ranked Oklahoma, 17-0, had 997 points, just two more than Michigan, which entered its first defeat of the season last week — 73-61 to Minnesota — and fell from its No. 2 ranking last week.

Rounding out the Top Ten were Kansas, 88 points, St. John's, 754, Syracuse, 674, and Nevada-Las Vegas, 660.

North Carolina opened the 22,000-seat Dean Smith Student Activities

Center Saturday with a 95-92 victory over Duke. The Tar Heels traveled to Milwaukee that night for their nationally televised game at Marquette and overcame a nine-point deficit with four minutes remaining to hold the No. 1 spot.

Syracuse, fourth last week, dropped to ninth after losing a Big East Conference game to Georgetown, 73-70, and a nationally televised game at Louisville on Saturday, 83-73. The Orangemen, 13-2, had played only one road game this season before embarking on the treacherous road trip last week.

Kentucky, 14-2, led the Second Ten as the Wildcats received just 10 points less than No. 10 Nevada-Las Vegas.

Following Kentucky were Georgetown, Louisville, Louisiana State, Purdue, Notre Dame, Bradley, Alabama-Birmingham, Texas-El Paso and Virginia Tech.

Last week's Second Ten was Kentucky, Alabama-Birmingham, Notre Dame, Louisiana State, Georgetown, Virginia Tech, Texas-El Paso, and Virginia Tech.

Houston Oilers retain interim coach Glanville

HOUSTON (AP) — Jerry Glanville, who took charge of the Houston Oilers on an interim basis for the final two games of the 1985 season, has been named head coach of the National Football League team.

Glanville was chosen after a lengthy search by Oilers General Manager Ladd Hareg and the scrutiny of owner Bud Adams. The other two top finalists were San Francisco coach Bill Walsh and Paul Hackett and Dick Coury, former head coach of the United States Football League's Portland Breakers.

"Jerry's knowledge and aggressive and enthusiastic approach to the game was certainly important in the final analysis," Adams said.

"Jerry has proven himself as a winner as he played an integral part of the Atlanta Falcons organization between 1979 and 1982, which saw the Falcons compete in the NFL playoffs in three of those years," Adams said.

Hareg said that Glanville, an NFL assistant coach for 12 years, could get the "maximum potential" from our football talent in the shortest possible time."

Hareg said Glanville fit the three standards Oilers' executives considered: He had NFL experience, confidence in himself and the football team, and indicated he would hire veteran NFL assistants for his coaching staff.

"I'm very happy that the Houston Oilers' ownership and management has the confidence that I can be a quality coach in the NFL," Glanville said. "Of course, being the head coach of an NFL team is a position that I've always dreamed of having, and now I look forward to proving worthy of my position every time we step out onto the field."

Glanville is the 13th head coach in the 27-year history of the franchise, replacing Hugh Campbell, who was fired Dec. 9 with two games remaining in the 1985 season.

A MESSAGE FROM DAVE

There must be a reason Dave Munroe Chevrolet has been in business for so long. Many automobile dealerships in the Magic Valley have changed owners in the past few years. Some close their doors. We don't claim to be the best, but when we feel we try harder to please the customer. We don't offer anything for free... bicycles, turkeys, robe, stuffed dolls, or stuffed animals, etc. since nothing is free. Ever Free.

We Do Offer: Friendly, courteous personnel. GM trained technicians; excellent service before and after the sale; honesty and integrity at all times; you talk and buy directly from the owners - no high pressure, great buy and trade-in values on America's #1 car & pickup.

Drive on over to Dave Munroe Chevrolet Inc. Buy! It just may be the nicest one you've experienced. You have my word.

Sincerely, Dave Munroe

Coffee export limits on shelf

LONDON (AP) - Coffee producing countries decided Monday to back the suspension of all remaining limits on exports in an attempt to check the rise in prices, which recently hit an eight-year high. Producers agreed that they are ready to anticipate the suspension of quotas immediately...

In anticipation of a severe world shortage this year, because of huge drought losses to the crop in Brazil, the sources traditionally of about 30 percent of world exports. The ICO has already increased the global export quota to the maximum permitted and the only weapon left to it to take the steam out of the market is the suspension of quotas...

that will not damage consumption," Colombia's ICO representative Nestor Osorio, said Monday. He said Colombia is the world's second-biggest producer to Brazil - did not want to see a repetition of what happened in 1977-78, when consumption dropped in the wake of the rise in prices to record levels after a severe 1975 frosts in Brazil. Producer delegates said that their side was anxious to maintain controls over the market once quotas were suspended...

Moore Financial reports gains for 4th quarter

BOISE (AP) - Moore Financial Group Inc., the Boise-based bank holding company, has reported fourth-quarter earnings of $4.8 million, or 31 cents a share, up from $4.1 million, or 27 cents a share, in the same quarter of 1984.

However, net income for all of 1985 was $26.6 million or $3.01 a share, down 5.7 percent from 1984 earnings of $28.3 million, or 6.9 percent per share. Cash dividends declared increased 7.8 percent from 1984.

The Idaho economy continues to experience economic problems which most likely will continue through 1986, Humphreys said. "We believe this allowance is adequate to cover potential credit problems through the end of 1986, if it is a 1.34 percent of total loans and leases, compared to 1.21 percent at the end of the third quarter and 1.15 percent at the end of 1984.

Home sale offers chance to trim taxes

Major opportunities for you to save money on taxes are and will be completely (or almost completely) untouched by any tax law that finally emerges from this Congress. One opportunity common to millions of you is your home. If you own your home, you can take tax deductions for the interest on your mortgage and on the real estate taxes you pay.

Sylvia Porter First in a series

The first $125,000 gain from the sale of a principal residence is tax-free. You get the break regardless of the sales price of the home and, unlike the traditional rollover tax break, this $125,000 is a permanent exclusion - just a tax deferral. Special rules: 1) The property must be your principal residence. It can be a house, a co-op or a condo but it cannot be a vacation cottage or a second home in the country.

RESULTS BY TEAMING UP THE SPECIAL $125,000 EXCLUSION AND THE TAX-FREE ROLLOVER. Many home sellers will have a taxable profit of more than $125,000, even though the actual dollar profit from the sale of their present home may be only, say, $30,000 to $40,000 because they've bought and sold successively more expensive homes over the years.

MORE PEOPLE REACH FOR OUR BOOK THAN ANY OTHER.

Every year, 15 million people in the West get their hands on a U S West Direct Yellow Pages. That's more than any other directory. So when you advertise in our book, your ad will reach out and grab hold of more people in your town.

(In a survey taken last year, we found that 94% of all the people in our territory have our book on hand when they need it. Our nearest competitor didn't even come close.) But that's nothing new. After all, it was our Yellow Pages that started it all 100 years ago in Cheyenne, Wyoming. And we help nearly one million businesses across the West every year.

To find out how we can help your business, talk to a U S West Direct advertising consultant. Call 1-800-422-1234. Then you can start getting your hands on more business.
