Crew lost in shuttle explosion

By HOWARD BENEDICT
The Associated Press

No way to escape—A3

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — A catastrophic explosion blew apart the space shuttle Challenger 74 seconds after liftoff Tuesday.

The fiery blast sent schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe and six NASA astronauts to a fiery death in the sky eight miles out from Kennedy Space Center.

"We mourn seven heroes," said President Reagan.

The accident defied quick explanation, though a slow-motion replay seemed to show a flame or other abnormality on one of two peel-away rocket boosters followed by the detonation of the shuttle's huge external fuel tank. The tank-turned-fireball destroyed Challenger high above the Atlantic while crew families and NASA officials watched in despair from the Cape.

Other observers noted that the boosters continued to fly crazily through the sky after the explosion, indicating that the problem might have originated in the giant tank itself.

"We will not speculate as to the specific cause of the explosion based on that footage," said Jesse Moore, NASA's top shuttle administrator. National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials are organizing an investigating board and Moore said it will take a "careful review" of all data "before we can reach any conclusions."

It was the first in-flight disaster in 56 manned space missions. John Glenn, the former astronaut, recalled that three astronauts died in a launchpad training accident 19 years ago and said the history of pioneers is often one "of triumph and tragedy."

The explosion followed an apparently flawless launch, delayed two hours as officials analyzed the danger from icicles that formed in the frosty Florida morning along the shuttle's new launch pad.

"There were no signs of abnormalities on the screens" as flight controllers monitored Challenger's liftoff and ascent, a source said. The source, at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, said the blast occurred "unexpectedly and with absolutely no warning."

"We have a report from the flight dynamics officer that the vehicle has exploded. Flight director confirms that," said flight director Steve Nesbitt.

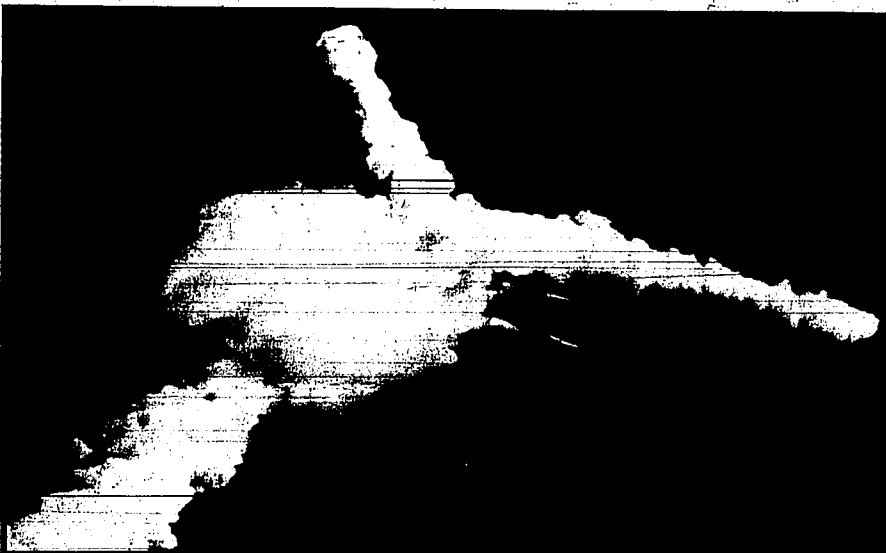

The cheers at McAuliffe's Concord (N.H.) high turned to sorrow.

NASA said its computers showed that all communications with the shuttle broke off 74 seconds after liftoff, marking that as the moment of the explosion.

Mission Control reported that there had been no indication of any problem with the three shuttle engines, its twin solid boosters or any other system and that the shuttle "suddenly blew apart 10 miles high and 8 miles downrange of Cape Canaveral. Ninety minutes after the accident, controllers were still at their consoles, solemnly examining

Twin Falls' shock—B1

BOTH — A combination of shock, sorrow and thankfulness swept the community of McCall and all Idaho as students, friends and colleagues of backup teacher-in-space Barbara Morgan watched the fiery explosion of the space shuttle Challenger.

Mrs. Morgan, 34, was chosen by NASA last year as an alternate to Sharon Christa McAuliffe, a Concord, N.H., high-school teacher, who was to be the first civilian in space. Mrs. McAuliffe and the six other shuttle crew members were killed in Tuesday's accident.

"I think there's always an unsaid fear—an unfelt fear—but nobody talks about it, nobody expressed anything but complete confidence in the vehicle and the systems," said Mrs. Morgan's father-in-law, Dr. City Morgan of Boise, who had met many of the people involved with Tuesday's launch during visits to Florida and Texas.

In McCall, where Mrs. Morgan teaches second grade at McCall-Donnelly Elementary School, about 700 students were watching the ill-fated launch on commercial television or special TV link with NASA.

"We feel we know her through the training films," Sue Anderson, a second-grade teacher, said of Mrs. McAuliffe. "To have it end so tragically is something that affects the whole school. I'm very sorry that it had to happen."

Shortly after the explosion, elementary-school Principal John

Wall struggled to explain to the younger children what had happened and that Mrs. McAuliffe and other members of the crew might have been killed.

"It got deathly silent, and when they said there was an explosion, that's when it got...." Wall said as his voice trailed off.

Most students were stunned into silence, but high school principal Doug Fleming helped console teachers overwhelmed by emotion.

"It's one time that it's good to be second as far as Barbara Morgan is concerned," he said.

David Marquart, 44, a teacher at Boise High School who also was among the finalists for the NASA program, was at the Ames Research Center near San Jose, Calif., on Tuesday. He has been promoting the teacher-in-space program for 10 years.

"Right now I'm still in a state of shock," Marquart said in a telephone interview. "I think in all our minds, we had that knowledge of Mrs. McAuliffe's program. But we never expressed it. I guess we all feel we're immortal until something like this happens."

Still, Marquart said he would not hesitate to ride the space shuttle if the opportunity arose and it meant representing his profession.

"I think the space program is still going to go forward and I want to be

Address delayed; flights to continue

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, stunned by America's first in-flight space disaster, abruptly postponed his State of the Union address Tuesday.

He took the opportunity to praise the lost Challenger astronauts as heroes and vow the nation's manned space flight program will continue.

"The future doesn't belong to the faint-hearted," the president said. "It belongs to the brave."

looking speech because "today is a day for mourning and remembering."

"I've always had great faith in and respect for our space program," Reagan said, "and what happened today does nothing to diminish it. We'll continue our quest in space. There will be more shuttle flights and more shuttle crews and, yes, more volunteers, more civilians, more teachers in space."

The Challenger Seven, Reagan said, "were daring and brave, and they had that special grace, that special spirit that says, 'Give me a challenge, and I'll meet it with joy.'"

Calling the disaster "a truly national loss" and saying "Nancy and I are pained to the core by the tragedy," Reagan extended his sympathy not just to the grieving families but to the thousands of employees of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration on the ground, paying tribute to their decades of dedication and professionalism.

"We know of your anguish," he said. "We share it."

Words from doomed shuttle were routine

The Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Words from space shuttle Challenger were all routine through the 74 seconds of flight.

There was silence after the spacecraft erupted into a fireball. Here is a transcript of those seconds:

- Mission Commentator: 10-9-87-6, we have main engine start, 4-3-2-1, and liftoff—of the 25th space shuttle mission. And it has cleared the tower.
- Pilot Mike Smith: Roll program.
- Mission Control: Roger, Roll program confirmed, Challenger, now including the range.
- The engines are throttling down now at 94 percent. Normal throttle for most of the flight is 104 percent. We'll throttle down to 65 percent shortly. Engines at 65 percent. Three engines running normally. Three good fuel cells. Three good APUs (auxiliary power units). Velocity 22,057 feet per second—(4,400 miles per hour), altitude 4.3 nautical miles (4.9 statute miles), downrange distance 3.4 nautical miles (3.4 statute miles). Engines throttling up, three engines now 104 percent.

- Mission Control: Challenger, go at throttle up.
- Smith: Roger, go at throttle up (Fireball occurs)
- Mission Control commentator: We're at a minute 15 seconds, velocity 2900 feet per second (1977 mph) altitude 9 nautical miles (10.35 statute miles), range distance 7 nautical miles (8.05 statute miles)
- There was a long silence.
- Mission Control commentator: Flight controllers are looking very carefully at the situation. Obviously a major malfunction. We have no downlink (communications).

First lady watched explosion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan, watching Tuesday's launch of the space shuttle on television from the White House, exclaimed "Oh, my God, no!" when the Challenger exploded across the screen.

The first lady was alone in the private quarters of the executive mansion when she viewed the tragedy, according to her press secretary Elaine Crispin.

Mrs. Crispin said she telephoned Mrs. Reagan immediately after learnin of the blast to inform her, but that the first lady had already seen it.

"She was alone, but she said her first words were, 'Oh, my God, no!'" Mrs. Crispin said.

Mrs. Crispin said the first lady was "shocked" and "in disbelief."

"She said she would start praying, for some thread of hope," the press secretary added.

Mrs. Reagan spoke with President Reagan by telephone after the explosion, Mrs. Crispin said.

Astronauts had no way out after Challenger began flight

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The astronauts aboard the space shuttle Challenger had no way to escape once the vehicle left the launch pad, a NASA spokesman said Tuesday.

Astronauts aboard Apollo, Gemini and Mercury missions could be ejected from their spacecraft, and astronauts aboard the first four space shuttle missions had ejection seats as well, spokesman Terry Whitesaid.

But the ejection provision was removed once the program advanced from the testing phase and the size of crews grew, Whitesaid.

It is doubtful any escape mechanism would have helped the Challenger crew in Tuesday's explosion, Whitesaid.

"After launch, there is no egress except for an intact landing," Whitesaid. "It's basically like a commercial aircraft. How do you rescue people?"

The shuttles and other NASA space vehicles have emergency slides on launch pads for the crews, and the shuttles have hatches through which the crew could escape in the event of an emergency landing or a belly crash into the ocean. The shuttle carries "two emergency survival kits but no parachutes," Whitesaid.

Mercury and Apollo space capsules had an escape rocket that would blast the crew's capsule to safety in an emergency, Gemini astronauts had ejection seats, Whitesaid.

"With small craft that was practical. . . . But the shuttle was too big. You had people on two decks and crews of up to eight. How would you arrange something like that?" Whitesaid.

The Apollo escape tower, which was designed to pull the capsule off the rocket and parachute it to safety, was never used, even in the flash fire that killed the crew of Apollo 1 on Jan. 27, 1967, on the ground.

The first four test flights of the shuttle Columbia, each carrying two-man crews, were equipped with ejection seats much like those on a jet fighter, where the pilot can "punch out," Whitesaid.

But there never was any intent in the shuttle program to allow for in-flight ejection and there were "no provisions for escape in a catastrophic failure like we had today," Whitesaid.

Garn retains confidence in NASA

WASHINGTON (AP) — A shaken Sen. Jake Garn, a shuttle astronaut himself, said Tuesday that he still had "great confidence" in the space program despite the explosion that apparently killed seven astronauts and ended that he felt "liftoff."

"It's very difficult for me to talk about it," Garn said in an interview broadcast by Cable News Network about two hours after the latest shuttle flight exploded shortly after liftoff.

President was silent while watching replay

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan watched a television replay of the fiery explosion of the shuttle Challenger in "stunned silence" on Tuesday but later defended the safety record of America's space program and said "you don't back up and quit" because of tragedy.

"We'll continue our quest in space," Reagan declared in a nationally broadcast address from the Oval Office six hours after learning of the disaster. "There will be more shuttle flights and more shuttle crews and, yes, more volunteers, more civilians, more teachers in space."

But for now, he said, "We mourn seven heroes."

The president signed a proclamation ordering that the United States flag be flown at half-staff through next Monday at all public buildings and grounds, military posts, on Navy vessels and at U.S. embassies and diplomatic offices throughout the world.

It was earlier in the day that Reagan's spokesman described in the chief executive as stunned at television pictures of the explosion and the president told reporters that tragedy is no reason to "back up and quit."

Reagan was conferring with top advisers in the Oval Office when Vice President George Bush and National Security Adviser John Pointdexter brought word of the tragedy—the president broke off the meeting and went to an adjacent study to watch developments on television.

"Quite frankly, the president stood there in almost stunned silence as he watched the television," said presidential spokesman Larry Speakes. "You could certainly read the concern, the sorrow, the anxiety on his face as he watched."

Speakes said the incident would not deter U.S. exploration of space.

Describing his emotions as he watched the explosion on television replays, Reagan said, "It just was — I saw — a very traumatic experience."

Reagan dispatched the vice president and NASA administrator William R. Graham to Cape Canaveral to convey presidential condolences and to get an inquiry under way.

try who paid special attention to this flight because a teacher was aboard and planned to teach about the mission, the president said. "I know it's hard to understand, but sometimes painful things like this happen."

"It's all part of the process of exploration and discovery. It's all part of taking a chance and expanding man's horizons. The future doesn't belong to the fainthearted. It belongs to the brave."

"The Challenger crew was pulling us into the future," Reagan said. "and we'll continue to follow."

In an indirect reference to the secrecy of the Soviet space program, which has suffered its own tragedies, the president said, "We don't hide our space program. We don't keep secrets and cover things up. We do it all up front and in public. That's the way freedom is, and we wouldn't change it for a minute."

Although his spokesman said Reagan "stood in stunned silence" watching the television footage of the explosion just after launch, the president at times appeared determined to go ahead with his plan to appear before a joint session of Congress to deliver the constitutionally required address.

"Things like that have to go on," he told a group of television correspondents and anchors invited to the White House for a luncheon to discuss the speech and Reagan's goals. "You can't stop governing the nation because of a tragedy of this kind."

Cost of exploration is sometimes tragic

Just when we all begin to become comfortable with the idea that man's reach is limited only by his vision, an awful event strikes in our technological expertise, reminding us of how much we still do not know.

For all of man's greatness and for all of man's knowledge, the realm of the unknown is larger still. We can master the technology of space flight, but even in the seemingly routine of a shuttle mission, there is tragically room for misjudgment, mistakes and disaster.

The brave men and women who died Tuesday in the enormous fireball as the shuttle Challenger exploded all worked around that risk.

They knew that a disaster of this kind was possible, but like many people who work with danger, they learned to set their fears aside for the good of their mission and for the knowledge it would bring.

Among them was a spunky, dedicated teacher from Concord, N.H., who exemplified what is best about American educators and the schools in which they work.

Christa McAuliffe had poise and brains. She was going into space, she said in frequent interviews, for what she could bring back to help her students. The transfer of knowledge to them was worth more than its accumulation for its own sake.

In that, she was a marvelous credit to her profession and to the space program which picked her out of some 10,000 applicants to be the first American civilian in space.

The explosion will obviously cause a deep and long-term examination within the space program, but we do not think it will kill it.

To go where few have been before inevitably means that some will lose their lives. That has been the pattern of all exploration throughout human history.

The losses become not barriers to further exploration, but incentives to learn even more, even out of failures.

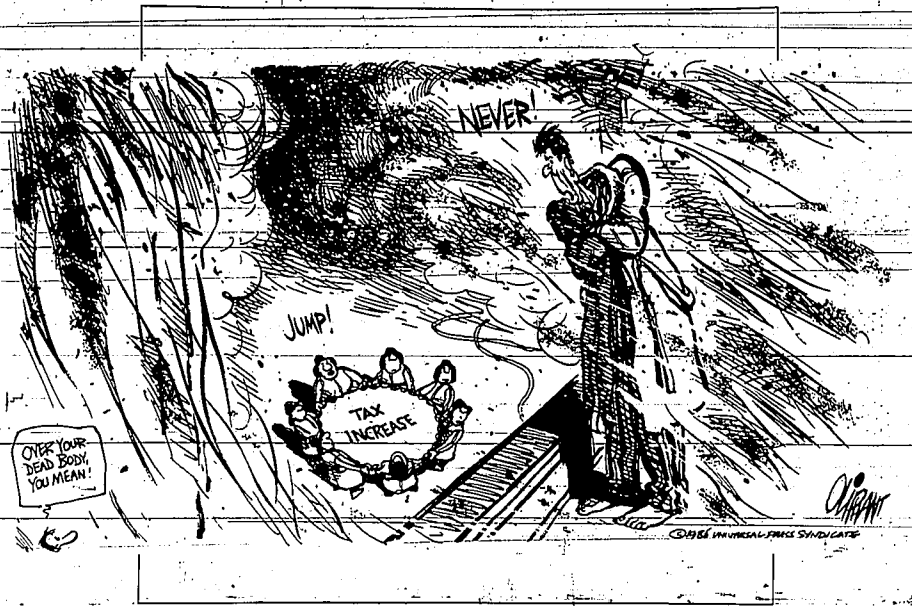

As we sort this tragedy out, we will all of course mourn McAuliffe and her colleagues.

Let us remember that they died, in a sense, in pushing back the edge of human knowledge so that this world, and the space beyond it, might be a better place for all of us.

We think McAuliffe would have agreed that this is what teachers go into teaching to accomplish.

And let us also recall that, no matter how far knowledge expands, there is still much we can probably never know.

That should give us all a deep and abiding respect for the vast power of the universe, and its creator, as well as to those who probe its mysteries.

Future of Social Security at stake now

President Reagan, at his Jan. 7 televised news conference, said, "Social Security is not part of the national deficit. It is a separate fund."

At another time he said, "I think we are wasting a lot of time talking about it. Social Security is running a surplus. And it is funded by a tax that can only be used for that purpose. So when we talk about Social Security, we're really not getting at the deficit problem at all."

Since 1981 there has been a constant assault on Social Security. It has been called a welfare program; it has been said to be one of the four causes of the deficit. These charges have been made over and over and mindlessly repeated by radio commentators as truth, and mindlessly believed by many.

The truth is Social Security taxes are the second largest source of federal revenue. Income taxes are the largest. Monday evening, Jan. 13, a national radio broadcast by James Roosevelt warned of the dangers facing the program which was enacted by his father, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, as (1) a compulsory social insurance program for old age, survivors, disability and health which would replace public assistance and as (2) a stabilizing factor for the economy by providing a viable consumer market. President Roosevelt was concerned that the program be protected from the machinations of politicians.

Each month during the fall of 1985, James Roosevelt said, the Secretary of the Treasury raided the Social Security fund, which had a solid surplus of several billion dollars, to pay other government bills. I've been told, "It shouldn't have happened, but it's been paid back. It's been taken care of."

Financial analyst and journalist Sylvia Porter, 9/21/85, recalled the bitter fight in 1983 that attempted to kill Social Security — a "bitter, no-holds-barred fight."

Cyril F. Brickfield, AARP director, says almost nine in 10 Americans oppose tampering with Social Security as a means of reducing the federal budget deficit by using the fund.

Rep. Richard Stalling has co-sponsored legislation which would remove Social Security from the budget and establish the Social Security Administration as an independent agency. It does not belong in the federal budget; benefits are paid from a special trust fund derived from taxes. The fund last fall was running a substantial surplus projected at $3.2 billion in 1986.

Sen. James McClure said, "Both Steve Symms and I voted to include Social Security in the Gramm-Rudman (falling deficit reduction) plan; you cannot convince me the elderly are no less patriotic, less willing to bear their fair share."

The average income from Social Security pensions, based on 1984 figures, runs about $40 to $50 monthly with many getting less and some getting more. Name calling, "less patriotic, less willing" will not solve the deficit mess.

Under the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983, the system is scheduled to be pulled from the unified federal budget in 1992. Because of the bitter battle this past year by opponents, many congressional leaders are urging quicker action. On Sept. 19, 1985, the senate voted 77-22 to support Sen. John Heinz's (R-Pa.) motion to instruct the budget committee to write a bill by Oct. 15 to remove Social Security by fiscal 1986. The House is also working toward earlier removal. Congressional action can't come too soon.

There are 90,000 plus senior citizens in the Second District. How many in the First? There are two senators from each state, so what our senators do can count as much as the senatorial representation from far more populous states.

Call them, encourage them to change their stand on this vital issue. We know how our Second District representatives, Richard Stalling, Fred Can we count on the representative from the First District, Larry Craig, to help us?

So much is at stake. A phone call before 8 a.m. only costs about 26 cents per minute depending on your location. Phone numbers are: McClure, (202) 224-7373; Stalling, (202) 224-3273. Letters may be sent to the Senate Office Building, Washington D.C. 20510.

Support for O'Leary staff

I'm happy to hear of the support that Mr. Wiseman has received in his efforts to maintain a quality program at O'Leary Junior High School. It is pleasing to hear that there are individuals who understand the necessity of parental support in correcting problems and misbehavior of students.

I believe that there is understanding by people in our community that parents actually can encourage and give license for their children to misbehave when honest and forthright efforts of school officials to maintain discipline are undermined, and that bribery is actually taking place in trying to make Mr. Wiseman out as the culprit and reversing the blame to the school.

Yes, bribery! Bribery in that the school administrators and support staff are being robbed of time that should be spent in building and strengthening the educational program of the school. Bribery in that teachers are being robbed of time that could be spent on teaching activities rather than responding to behavior problems. Bribery in that the quality of life of the student body is being lowered by the misbehaving student. Time that could be spent in positive action and uplifting activities is being robbed.

This dishonesty falls back upon and increases the load of those taxpayers who are providing for the educational opportunities for our community's children, but not pleasingly.

Carry on Mr. Wiseman and O'Leary staff members. I know that there are probably sent individuals (many of whom have probably sent their son or daughter to their rooms or have had them sit on a chair in the corner of a room for misdeeds, which is basically the same concept as the study carrel) who understand and appreciate the efforts to sustain a quality educational program.

Curbing deficit a priority

What a wonderful country this is turning out to be. We execute our children while we let our Mafia and drug dealers go scot free.

We allow our mental health to starve and freeze in the streets in the name of liberty while we allow unconstitutional searches and seizures in the name of law enforcement.

We decide we must snuff out all left-leaning governments no matter how well liked by their citizens and prop up all right-leaning governments no matter how cruel and repressive they are.

We will prostitute our integrity in any manner necessary to keep our beloved foreign bases when they are actually a spoilsite.

We will consider the expense of going to war to punish a few madmen who have killed a few Americans and at the same time refuse the necessary funds to feed and clothe the people who are dying here for lack of funds.

We will tolerate our hospitals practicing the art of dumping unprofitable patients then deny the right of the terminally ill to end their lives at will. We will keep helplessly ill people alive for years yet deny short term care to people who could recover their productivity if treated.

We will deny access to abortions in the name of saving innocent life then refuse to defend people in danger from their own family members and thus waste life.

We will prosecute vigorously any woman or child who takes a man's life in self defense and yet not lift a finger to defend the women and children who dwell in a living hell while the man lives.

We allow our cities the fine art of Greyhound therapy to rid themselves of the expense of the unwanted yet spend thousands to police the roads to maybe save a life or two.

Let's shut down all government until we have saved enough to curb the deficit. We are only spending now to protect the wealthy, the influential, the military and the government interests.

Field experience required

In reference to Sibane Walker's article, "Not impressed by hunters," I was not aware of the fact that hunters in the field or anywhere else were required to impress you or anyone else. Your statement again falls back to lack of experience on the subject.

You cannot gain the experience that I am referring to by getting into the field once or twice a year, you have to get further out than the barn or hay field. You have to get out and live it, smell it and feel it to really know what it's all about. This kind of experience cannot be gained in a few short years, it takes a life time, hopefully after 15 or 20 years in the field as a hunter your impression of what a hunter is will be different.

I also think that those people that assume themselves to be hunters would be better off not preaching about some of their practices in the field.

In closing I would like to say that this will be my last writing on any and all comments on the subject of hunting or hunters coming from the Walker family. I have better things to do with my time, such as planning my next lion hunt with my dogs into these great mountains of Idaho. Thanks for reading.

Freedom of choice denied

During World War II, a group of American citizens were told they had to move by the U.S. government. The government had chosen sites for them to live. They had suddenly lost their rights as American citizens to choose where they wanted to live. They had become second class citizens. Their only crime was that they were of Japanese descent. Many lost their lives in the war to preserve our right to free choice, which they themselves were denied. What happened to them was legal, but it was not right.

Another group of Americans has also lost their freedom to choose where they wish to live. They are known as Rupert City employees. In order to work for the city of Rupert, they must live within an area chosen by the City Fathers of Rupert. The city fathers of Rupert wish to keep them close to town, so they will shop only in Rupert. They are treated as second class citizens. getting more. Name calling, "less patriotic, less willing" will not solve the deficit mess.

Under the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983, the system is scheduled to be pulled from the unified federal budget in 1992. Because of the bitter battle this past year by opponents, many congressional leaders are urging quicker action. On Sept. 19, 1985, the senate voted 77-22 to support Sen. John Heinz's (R-Pa.) motion to instruct the budget committee to write a bill by Oct. 15 to remove Social Security by fiscal 1986. The House is also working toward earlier removal. Congressional action can't come too soon.

There are 90,000 plus senior citizens in the Second District. How many in the First? There are two senators from each state, so what our senators do can count as much as the senatorial representation from far more populous states.

Call them, encourage them to change their stand on this vital issue. We know how our Second District representatives, Richard Stalling, Fred Can we count on the representative from the First District, Larry Craig, to help us?

So much is at stake. A phone call before 8 a.m. only costs about 26 cents per minute depending on your location. Phone numbers are: McClure, (202) 224-7373; Stalling, (202) 224-3273. Letters may be sent to the Senate Office Building, Washington D.C. 20510.

Quality schooling at stake

Quality education across the state and specifically in the Minicoussia area is at stake. Proof? Last year Idaho ranked 49th in the nation in per capita expenditures on education. Teachers' salaries in this state are among the lowest nationwide. Only 29 percent of Idaho's elementary school meet state accreditation criteria.

Locally, grave problems exist and grow worse. In Mindokoa County, third graders' desks and teachers cope with as many as 34 pupils per classroom. All through the new school will probably open next fall, there is concern that financial constraints may not allow for proper staffing.

While perhaps not in as critical a condition, Cassia County has not escaped unscathed. Witness the number of district schools experiencing serious problems.

These problems and more scream for attention. The legislative forecast shows little relief and perhaps even further belt tightening for public school budgets already cut to the bone.

When we come to the bottom line, what does this parade of horrors mean? It means that our children, the future stewards of this state, are being accorded less a desirable.

The education community does the best it can under the circumstances, and will continue to do so. In light of the present problems however, and as members of a local coalition representing school board members, parents, teachers and administrators, we urge legislators and citizens to take immediate action.

Specifically, we urge the Legislature to seriously consider equitable, viable measures, such as the bipartisan Economic Recovery Act, in order to raise revenues.

Further, all supporters of public education and in particular, parents of public school children, are urged to attend a local rally for quality education to be held at West Minicoussia High School on Saturday, Feb. 1 at 1 p.m. You will have an opportunity to hear local legislators' viewpoints, ask questions and express your own opinions. Your presence will signify your concern and support for Minicoussia public education.

As members of the local education community, we thank the citizenry for past support and look forward to working with them in order to secure a free, quality public education for Idaho's children.

Hispanic population growing rapidly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's Hispanic population is growing much faster than the population as a whole, and now accounts for one out of every 14 Americans, new Census Bureau figures show.

There were 16 million people of Spanish origin in the United States as of March 1985, the bureau reported Tuesday, up 2.3 million since the 1980 national head count.

That's a growth of nearly 16 percent in just five years, compared to a national population increase of 3.3 percent. The Census Bureau said.

This sizeable increase was the result of high fertility and the resulting large natural increase and of substantial immigration to the United States from Mexico, Cuba and other Spanish-speaking countries of Central and South America," the bureau reported in a new study of the nation's Hispanic population.

The report found that Hispanics tended to be younger, less educated, members of larger families and more likely to be living in poverty than Americans in general.

But the statisticians also noted sharp variations within the Hispanic community itself, with Cubans statistically more like other U.S. residents than Mexicans, Puerto Ricans, Central and South Americans and other people of Hispanic origin.

The 16.9 million Hispanics in 1985 constituted 7.2 percent of the population of the United States, up from 6.1 percent in 1980, when the Census counted 14.6 million.

While earlier studies have emphasized that Hispanics are concentrated in a few states rather than being distributed across the nation, the new report did not break down their numbers by state or region.

Overall, Mexicans were the nation's largest share of Hispanics with 10.3 million, far ahead of second-place Puerto Ricans, with 2.6 million. There were 1.9 million other Hispanics and 1 million Cubans.

Turning to education, 47.9 percent of Hispanics aged 25 and over had completed high school.

Angola help sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The press agent-guided tour-including Reagan administration urged Congress to support rebels fighting the Cuban-backed government in Angola, but cautioned there is "no possibility of an outright military victory for either side."

And conservative groups, who hailed the forces of guerrilla leader Jonas Savimbi as "brave anti-communist freedom fighters," renewed their call for U.S. companies to close their operations in the African country.

UNITA, though it reportedly has asked the Senate Intelligence Committee for $10 million to $15 million in covert assistance to be administered by the CIA.

December cold hikes heat costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans spent $10.8 billion for home heat in December, the third highest heating demand for any December on record, new government statistics show.

Cold weather across the nation boosted the average home heating bill to $150.71, or $18.59 above normal, according to the new report.

That was about $41 more than December of 1984, when milder weather prevailed.

Last December's weather was similar to that of December 1983 — the most recent — extremely cold, December, according to the National Environmental Satellite, Data and Information Service, which analyzed records dating back 55 years. While fuel prices were not widely different in 1983 and 1985, statisticians said a direct comparison of consumer costs could not be made because of differing methods of calculation that were used two years ago.

All three major residential heating fuels experienced above normal temperature-related consumption at the national level, according to the heating cost study released Monday.

Americans heating with electricity saw their bills rise 15 percent above normal for the month, with natural gas costs up 14 percent and heating oil users paying 12 percent more, according to the service's Assessment and Information Services Center.

The above-normal heating costs stemmed from weather that was "extremely cold" and "below normal during the month."

For the heating season so far — October, November and December — the national total heating bill was estimated at $20.8 billion, about 3 percent above normal. But the $10.8 billion spent in December alone was 14 percent above normal for that month.

Some Hormel workers stay outside lines

AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — Union meatpackers posted only a few pickets Tuesday outside Hormel's flagship plant and the government began recalling National Guard troops as workers in two other states honored picket lines and the company announced record earnings.

The earnings report, issued at a closely guarded shareholders meeting in Houston, covered a period including the first two months of the strike, which began Aug. 17 when 1,500 workers walked out here.

The workers not on strike "busted their pickets to have a recon quarter," Hormel chief executive officer R. L. Knowlton said at the meeting, where the company said it earned $38.6 million in fiscal 1985.

Striking Local P-9 of the United Food and Commercial Workers Union had expanded its picketing Monday to include plants in Ojamawa, Iowa, and Fremont, Neb. The company then fired about 265 workers who honored Local P-9's picketing pickets.

About three dozen National Guard troops stood guard outside the company's gates here in temperatures that felt like 40 below with the wind chill, as workers drove through the plant gates without incident.

Flu victim Nixon fired but talkative

MIAMI (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon, hospitalized with a viral infection, was feeling better but talkative Tuesday discussing medical costs, the Super Bowl and Florida's cold snap, according to the doctor treating him.

Nixon, 73, probably will be hospitalized for two to three more days, said Dr. Lewis Elias.

"He's doing reasonably well this morning. He's still feeling very tired, but he's very alert," Elias said. "He had a good night's sleep and he's in excellent spirits."

Measure lacks support Sales tax boost bill due for vote

BOISE (AP) — A bill increasing Idaho's sales tax from 4 to 5 percent on March 1 is headed to a vote on the House floor.

But there are indications it might be in trouble, because the measure has run into Democratic opposition, and couldn't even generate majority support in the 67-member Republican House caucus.

The House Revenue and Taxation Committee voted 11-5 Tuesday morning after only brief debate to send the bill to the floor with a "do pass" recommendation.

Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, sponsored the bill, which boosts the sales tax, and also creates a new budget reserve account.

House leaders, meanwhile, said they won't allow the Neibaur bill to come up for House discussion until his sponsor returns to the Legislature.

Rep. Harold Reid, D-Craigmont, led Democratic opposition to the bill in committee debate.

"We can't start creating a rainy-day fund when we have a rainy-day now," said Reid, referring to a budget crisis in the current state budget.

Voting against sending the bill to the House floor were Reid and the committee's other three Democrats, and Republicans Chris Hooper of Boise and Noy Brackett of Twin Falls.

Leading the drive to put the bill before the entire House for a vote were conservatives Rep. Myron Jones, R-Malad, and Rep. Boyd Hill, R-Meridian.

Jones said after the session that it's apparent the state needs more revenue, and it appears the sales tax is the best way to generate it.

The state estimates it will be $27.1 million short of generating enough tax revenue to cover the current state budget. Tax officials also say the state needs more revenue, and it appears the sales tax will need an extra $40 million to maintain current operations in the budget year starting July 1.

Neibaur's bill will require some cutting by state agencies to balance the current budget.

As written, it will generate $15 million toward the current deficit, requiring $12.1 million in spending cuts by state agencies in the next five months. State agencies already are under a one-percent holdback, but that would have to be increased to balance the budget.

"We need to send something to the floor to give us direction where we are going," said Jones.

When asked if he would vote for it, Jones said, "You bet."

"We have to start somewhere," Jones also said he's supporting the Neibaur bill because it requires more state agency spending cuts, and because it creates the budget reserve account to ease future budget problems.

"If we had started this several years ago, we wouldn't be in this deficit situation now," said Jones.

Jones said it was his feeling that people in his area prefer a sales tax increase to other forms of tax increases.

The bill also channels an extra $7 million into state construction. About $6 million per year now is going into the Permanent Building Fund, including $500,000 from sales taxes. If Neibaur's bill becomes law, the fund would more than double.

The Neibaur bill specifies that 5 percent of sales tax revenue is to go into a budget reserve account, until the reserve fund hits $75 million. Neibaur said that would be $35 million to $14 million in the next state budget.

He said his bill would provide about $601 million in general tax revenue for the 1986-87 state budget, which should allow continuing of maintenance budgets.

Reid contended that a variety of taxes could go up if the bill is passed, because property owners would have to meet higher medical bills for indigents.

"Why are we creating a rainy-day fund up to $75 million, when the fund is washing us out?" asked Reid.

After a GOP caucus Tuesday afternoon, Chairman Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, said members did not support the Neibaur bill, and it is doubtful it will pass, even if the Democrats support it.

Little support also was indicated for proposals to increase the sales tax by one-half cent, and only a temporary increase, Bateman said.

But he remains convinced Republicans agree there is a need for more state tax revenue.

Senators already are working today, including selling one state building, Bateman said.

Neibaur enters hospital after testifying on bill

BOISE (AP) — Just minutes after he testified before a House committee Tuesday, Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, was hospitalized for examination after complaining of numbness in his face.

The 40-year-old legislative veteran testified before the House Revenue and Taxation Committee this morning. The panel voted 11-6 to send Neibaur's bill raising the state sales tax from 4 to 5 percent to the House floor for a vote.

While he was testifying, Neibaur complained of illness; the told committee members he felt like the left side of his face was numb.

Committee Chairman Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, instructed committee members to limit their questioning of Neibaur on the major tax bill, because he didn't feel well.

After the session, Rep. Dean Sorenson, R-Boise, a physician, took Neibaur to the nearby St. Luke's Regional Medical Center.

The hospital said later Neibaur had been admitted for observation, but there was no other information on his condition.

Sorenson said House members later Neibaur was undergoing various tests and diagnostic studies. He said Neibaur was stable and comfortable.

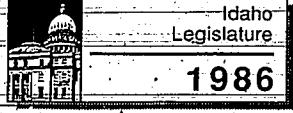

Rep. Robert Goodies, R-Preston, who had dinner with Neibaur Monday night, said Neibaur also complained then of not feeling well.

Jones' objections lead to rewritten bill

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — Constitutional objections by Attorney General Jim Jones to proposed changes in Idaho's environmental protection laws prompted a flurry of last-minute amendments to a bill approved by the Senate Health and Welfare Committee Tuesday.

Without the amendments, Jones said, the director of the Department of Health and Welfare would have the power to bring suit against polluters without the approval of the attorney general.

Jones said that was "infringing on the powers and responsibilities of the Attorney General's Office."

No other state department head has that power, Jones said, and if the law went into effect without the changes, it would eventually be challenged as unconstitutional. "When someone goes to court who is not deputized by the attorney general, you will have a challenge," said Jones.

The bill was amended to suit Jones and to clear up some minor technicalities and the committee unanimously voted to send it to the full Senate with the recommendation that it be made law.

If passed, the bill will make it easier for the DHW to prosecute and penalize mining companies and other industries found polluting Idaho water and air. The bill also sets limits on searches by department investigators.

The unanimous vote to support the bill followed a series of impromptu meetings in a hallway outside the committee room, which yielded amendments Jones and others interested in the bill could agree on.

With the changes, the bill allows the DHW to hire an attorney to help it build a case against polluters, but the Attorney General's Office must oversee any trial or court action.

Jones said there has never been a case that he knows of in which an attorney general refused to prosecute a case on behalf of a department of state government.

If that ever does happen, Jones said, the attorney general could be booted out of office in the next election.

Jones' objections to the bill were an unexpected snag; the measure had previously been approved by representatives of the Idaho Conservation League, the Idaho Mining Association, and a summer study committee of legislators.

Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho Falls, the sponsor of the bill, agreed to the changes in wording after hearing those objections.

Crapo said the bill was not written with the intention of giving the director of DHW increased power to bring lawsuits.

With groups of people moving in and out of the committee room, Chairman Denton Darrington, R-Decla, allowed the committee to continue hearing testimony on the bill from various industry and environmental group representatives.

Meanwhile, an assistant to Jones, Crapo; Renee Quick of the ICL; Jack Peterson of the Idaho Mining Association; and Sen. John Peavy, D-Carey, conferred outside in the hallway, rewriting the bill.

Darrington apologized for the confusion and called a recess at one point to allow a short meeting of Crapo and others. "I don't want to lose this piece of legislation," Darrington said.

With the changes in place, the bill will go to the full Senate with his support, Jones said.

Exemptions to insurance laws advance

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Senate Commerce and Labor Committee Tuesday approved passage of a bill to grant insurance exemptions to Bull's Mennonite Church members and their brethren from other parts of Idaho.

Senate Bill 1220 was given unanimous support by the committee and may hit the Senate floor as early as Thursday, said Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly.

Noh sponsored the bill on behalf of Mennonite church members from Buhl.

Mennonites have religious objections to insurance and also believe in following the laws of the countries in which they live.

So they buy legally required insurance for automobiles from commercial insurers. But for other kinds of protection against casualties and destruction of property, they band together and contribute to a nationwide self-protection fund.

They have done so for 40 years and only recently discovered it was not legal. The proposed law would grant them an exception to laws governing insurance sales.

Idahoan's trial starts in Missouri

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — A Boone County Circuit Court jury began hearing testimony Tuesday at the second trial of David Tate, a reputed neo-Nazi already convicted of murdering Missouri state trooper Jimmie Linegar.

Tate, 23, of Athol, Idaho, is being tried on charges of first-degree assault and armed criminal action, the wounding of another trooper, Alan Hines. Tate, sentenced to life without parole for killing Linegar, is a member of The Order, a militant white supremacist group.

The trial, like the first one on the murder charge, was moved to Columbia from Taney County, where Linegar was slain and Hines wounded during a routine traffic stop April 15. Tate was arrested five days later after a manhunt.

After nearly three hours of questioning by Boone County Circuit Judge Frank Conley, Taney County Prosecutor James Justus and Greene County Public Defender Patrick Deaton, seven men and five women were chosen from a panel of 52 prospective jurors.

After a GOP caucus Tuesday afternoon, Chairman Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, said members did not support the Neibaur bill, and it is doubtful it will pass, even if the Democrats support it.

Little support also was indicated for proposals to increase the sales tax by one-half cent, and only a temporary increase, Bateman said.

But he remains convinced Republicans agree there is a need for more state tax revenue.

Senators already are working today, including selling one state building, Bateman said.

Thursday hearing set on day care licensing

BOISE (AP) — Only one day care licensing bill will be the subject of a hearing before a legislative committee here Thursday.

That was assured at a Tuesday meeting of the Senate Health and Welfare Committee when it abruptly adjourned just as member Rep. Jeanne Givens, D-Coeur d'Alene, was about to ask members to introduce and print a competing bill.

On Thursday, the committee plans a hearing on a day-care licensing bill sponsored by Rep. Pam Bengson, R-Boise. It would allow Idaho's seven district health departments to come up with regulations and licensing procedures for day care centers.

That bill has been described as a compromise between a task force, which is pushing for the state Department of Health and Welfare to regulate day care centers, and some legislators who want less restrictive day care licensing laws.

The task force bill has been introduced in the Senate by Sen. Ron Beiteltspacher, D-Orofino, and others. At a rally at the Statehouse on Monday, Beiteltspacher urged supporters not to compromise, but to work for the task force proposal.

Mrs. Givens wanted to introduce a similar House measure on Tuesday, so it could be discussed at the same time as the Bengson proposal.

When the Health and Welfare Committee finished its other work Tuesday, Mrs. Givens asked Committee Chairman Chris Hooper, R-Boise, for time to discuss her legislation.

But Mrs. Bengson moved for immediate adjournment, a motion which is not debatable. It carried, and Mrs. Givens couldn't ask the committee to consider her measure.

Hooper said he intends to hold a hearing on the merits of the Bengson bill only, not whether Idaho should have day-care licensing laws.

"I think members of the committee, with possibly one exception, accept the need for day-care licensing laws," said Hooper.

He said he will allow discussion of the Bengson bill only, and hopes the committee will vote on it at the Thursday meeting.

Rep. Liz Allan, R-Nampa, has testified against any statewide regulations of day-care centers, saying it should be the responsibility of parents to determine for themselves whether a day-care center is being operated properly.

Drinking age bills on slate

BOISE (AP) — Two competing bills to raise the legal drinking age from 19 to 21 will be debated before a legislative committee here next week.

The House State Affairs Committee voted Tuesday to take up both bills at the same time. Chairman Rep. Walter Little, R-New Plymouth, said the hearing probably will be scheduled for 9 a.m. in Room 412.

One measure simply raises the legal drinking age from 19 to 21. A second bill, introduced by Rep. Dean Haegenson, R-Coeur d'Alene, raises the drinking age and also allows liquor-by-the-drink sales on Sunday. It would allow legal drinking until 2 a.m. instead of the 1 a.m. closing time now in effect.

The Legislature has debated the issue in the past, but has failed to pass the legislation. But Idaho, and other states are under a federal deadline to have the age 21 drinking limit in effect by this fall or risk the loss of millions of dollars in highway funds.

Church demands watch on balloting

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Philippines' top Roman Catholic church official on Tuesday demanded that independent pollwatchers be allowed to monitor next week's presidential election in an effort to prevent fraud.

The admonition from Manila Cardinal Jaime Sin came as President Corason E. Marcos campaigned on the island of Mindanao and opposition candidate Corason Aquino stumped in towns south of Manila.

"In my capacity as archbishop of Manila, I demand that with NAMFREL (National Movement for Free Elections) is asking should be given," said Sin.

NAMFREL chairman Jose Conception said Sin, among other things, was referring to demands that the group be allowed to conduct its own "quick count" of returns from the Feb. 7 election.

Sin's statement during mass was followed by the reading of a pointed pastoral letter from 11 Philippine bishops, who said they see signs of fraud and violence similar to the pattern of past elections.

"Fourteen people have been killed in election-related incidents in the month-old presidential campaign. The bishops did not criticize or endorse Marcos or Mrs. Aquino and were not explicit about who was committing the alleged abuses, but their criticism supported actions that would tend to help Mrs. Aquino.

Marcos appeared before a huge rally on troubled Mindanao island, the scene of a growing communist insurgency and a decades-old Muslim secessionist rebellion, and told crowds in Zamboanga his administration had done everything to help the poor.

Marcos announced the establishment of a college, the improvement of another school and the issuing of land titles. Marcos has doled out millions of dollars worth of government benefits at his campaign rallies.

Mrs. Aquino drew an estimated 150,000 people on a day-long motorcade through Cavite province, just south of Manila.

In Manila, about 1,500 leftists called for a election boycott, saying a clean election was impossible under Marcos. The demonstrators from the militant May 1 Movement marched through the city to a downtown plaza, dispersing peacefully after a four-hour rally.

South African blacks end boycott of schools

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Black students ended two years of school boycotts Tuesday and streamed back to classes for the new academic year on the strength of a pact between the white-led government.

Attendance was heavy as schools reopened in urban centers including Johannesburg, Pretoria, Cape Town and Port Elizabeth, where boycotts cut attendance for much of 1984 and 1985.

On some days in recent months, more than 200,000 black students boycotted classes out of 1.7 million enrolled in urban areas. The boycotts have been a central factor in 17 months of racial unrest that led to the deaths of more than 1,000 people, most of them blacks.

Outside a school in Johannesburg's huge black township of Soweto, police used tear gas to break up groups of chanting students, residents said. But there were no other reports of trouble, and the fragile accord appeared to have opened the door to normalizing the long-troubled black schools.

Police reported the stabbing deaths of four black men in a fight between rival gangs at a camp outside Cape Town. Police headquarters in Pretoria also acknowledged riot patrols shot dead a 15-year-old girl and a 35-year-old man Monday in Kagiso, west of Johannesburg.

The girl was slain after police broke up a rally to debate whether to return to school, one of several such meetings banned by authorities. The Kagiso youths decided to go to school Tuesday, but a black newspaper noted the incident could be threatened by such incidents.

Boycotts over black demands for equal education with white children started in early 1984 as part of the protest against apartheid, the system of legal racial segregation under which 5 million whites deny the vote and other rights to 24 million blacks.

A breakthrough came in late December, when education officials negotiated with the National Parents' Crisis Committee, a group with widespread backing from activist youths.

Anti-terror feelers out

ROME (AP) — Italy's premier said Tuesday that Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy has offered to ask Palestinian terrorists not to strike European targets in return for a U.S. pledge not to attack Libya.

Premier Bettino Craxi also blamed renegade Palestinian guerrilla leader Abu Nidal for the Dec. 27 Rome and Vienna airport attacks and the Nov. 23 hijacking of an Egyptian jetliner to Malta.

The United States says Abu Nidal, for whom Italy has issued an arrest warrant, ordered the airport attacks and accuses the radical Libyan leader of harboring him.

Speaking at a news conference, Craxi also indicated Libya might help track down Abu Nidal.

"They also tell me, but I don't have the confirmation or the exact wording, that the Libyan government would be disposed to follow through on the arrest warrant," the Italian premier said. He did not elaborate.

Khadafy made his offer in a message relayed earlier in the day by Prime Minister Carmelo Mifsud Bonnici of Malta, Craxi said.

Ugandan rebel takes over

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Rebel commander Yoweri Museveni, whose National Resistance Army captured Kampala last weekend, will be sworn in Wednesday as president of Uganda, an aide reported.

Radio Uganda announced Tuesday evening that a new president would take office in the morning but did not give a name. Ben Kiwanga, who has been named as press secretary for Museveni, said the rebel leader would become head of state.

Captain who sank JFK's PT-109 dies

TOKYO (AP) — Katsumori Yamashiro, commander of the Japanese destroyer that sank the late President John F. Kennedy's patrol torpedo boat in the Pacific Ocean during World War II, has died of pneumonia, hospital officials said Monday. He was 86.

The officials said Yamashiro died Saturday. They gave no other details.

Yamashiro's destroyer Amagiri collided with the motor torpedo boat PT-109 on islands off Kennedy's 1943. Kennedy and his crew swam three miles to a small, unoccupied island, where they were rescued several days later by natives. Kennedy was sent home as a result of his injuries.

Farmers seek OK for temporary alien labor

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

RUPERT — With the irrigation season approaching quickly, the recently-formed Snake River Farmers Association is asking federal officials to admit at least 1,000 alien workers into the country this summer to move pipes in southern Idaho and Oregon farm fields.

George Grant Jr., Snake River Farmers president, said Tuesday that close to 200 farmers have requested alien labor in three batches of applications now before the U.S. Department of Labor for certification.

"If approved, the farm workers — many of them former illegal aliens — would enter the country legally after a 60-day search for domestic workers to fill the jobs.

So far, the numbers of U.S. workers seeking irrigation work is falling far short of the demand from crop farmers, Grant said.

"I can tell you now, in the month's time (since recruiting began) they've been able to refer 16 domestics that have been interested in the jobs, and of those 16 it looks like there's only 12 of them that are qualified," Grant said.

The Idaho Department of Employment and similar agencies in other states now are recruiting for those jobs.

The Snake River Farmers Association was organized last summer by Grant and others to help area farmers obtain alien labor legally under the H-2 program, a special provision in immigration law. The group now numbers 260 members, from Teton to Ontario, Ore. Farmers for years have been hiring illegal aliens to take the punishing, but essential, work of moving heavy irrigation pipe twice a day. There is a great shortage of American workers willing to take the jobs, Grant said.

"I think Americans feel they are not good for the jobs they can quite frankly find better jobs and if they can't find a better job, they'd rather not work at all," he said.

Farmers who hire illegal aliens can face force to raise by the U.S. Border Patrol. A sudden interdiction in irrigation also could damage crops severely.

In a few cases, farmers also could be jailed. While hiring illegal aliens is not currently a crime, farmers who arrange to bring labor into the country are subject to federal prosecution.

The Snake River Farmers Association provides staff time and expertise to get the complicated applications filed and approved. It charges each farmer a $250 membership fee plus $100 for each worker needed.

"An individual simply couldn't afford to do this on his own," Grant said.

The group's first applications, which sought alien workers to start jobs on March 15, encountered legal problems concerning wages.

The association had agreed to pay the prevailing wage of $3.50 an hour for the entire season, as well as 10 cents per pipe moved. However, it disputed a U.S. Department of Labor ruling requiring the wages to be increased if the agency found they were depressing wages for other local workers in irrigation jobs, said Jim Bailey, regional director of the U.S. Employment Service at Seattle.

The association last an appeal on an administrative law judge in Washington, D.C. It now has agreed informally to amend its applications to pay the "adverse wage rate" if necessary, Bailey said.

Grant also said the association has submitted amendments. The Department of Labor has not yet decided whether to require the special wage rate this year.

Other minor matters still are under discussion, but they are not likely to interfere with hiring, the federal official said.

From his office in Rupert, Grant said the Snake River Farmers Association has filed the bulk of this year's applications for starting dates up to April 15. It may file some additional requests for work dates to June 1.

Charboneau gets death sentence for murder of former wife

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jamie Charboneau, 25-year-old former rodeo performer, listened with what appeared to be no emotion as Judge Phillip Becker read his death sentence in 30th District Court here Tuesday afternoon.

Judge Becker sentenced Charboneau to death for the July 1, 1984, murder of his former wife, Marilyn Arbaugh, 36.

Becker set the date of Feb. 24 for execution, but after pronouncing judgment, explained that an appeal to the Idaho Supreme Court is automatic in the event of a death sentence.

Becker read his judgment that followed the lengthy murder case to about 30 persons gathered in the District Court room of the Jerome County Courthouse, including Charboneau's mother, Misty Hamilton and her husband Rex, as well as James and Mary Arbaugh, parents of the victim.

Becker said he had reviewed the case's evidence, testimony and studied the findings of fact from both the prosecution and defense, and had given all of the information one more serious consideration.

Becker said established facts show Arbaugh was shot to death July 1 at the farm where she resided in Jerome County. He recalled evidence that her teenage daughter, Tiffie, heard shots after her mother left their house to put some horses back in the corral, and went to investigate.

"At that time she found her mother lying on the ground wounded. She was alive then and the sentence for her son. She said defendant was standing over her Marilyn Arbaugh had threatened with a gun and he told her daughter, suicide on numerous occasions."

"The defendant could, in all probability, have saved her (Marilyn Arbaugh's) life at that point," the judge continued.

Becker said Arbaugh could likely have survived with immediate medical attention. However, he said, facts show that 2 minutes after returning to the house, the daughter heard additional shots.

Becker said Charboneau had about 2 minutes to decide if he would save the life or destroy it. When the daughter returned the second time to the barn, she found her mother dying, the judge added. He said all of the shots were fired from a rifle Charboneau held, one which required a pull of the trigger for each shot.

Becker said he believes these facts constituted necessary, aggravating circumstances for a death penalty — a murder that is especially "heinous, atrocious or cruel, manifesting exceptional depravity." He said it also shows another requirement — a disregard for human life.

Charboneau, dressed in a bright red Western shirt, sat facing the judge with his back to the audience. He made no move during the 30-minute reading of his sentence by Becker.

Several officers and courthouse employees who attended the sentencing speculated following the session that appeals could keep the case and defendant alive for several years.

Several officers said they doubted the sentence would ever be carried out.

A sobbing Misty Hamilton said that after sitting through hearings and the trial that "were totally placed against Jamie" that she probably should have expected the sentence for her son. She said defendant was standing over her Marilyn Arbaugh had threatened with a gun and he told her daughter, suicide on numerous occasions.

Adamson announces GOP nomination bid

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

BOISE — The number of Republicans seeking the nomination for 2nd District U.S. representative increased by one as Jerome attorney Dan Adamson announced he again will be a candidate.

Adamson narrowly lost his bid in the May 1984 primary to George Hansen, despite Hansen's conviction months earlier on four felonies related to the filing of false financial statements to Congress. Hansen, the seven-term Republican incumbent, later lost by a paper-thin margin to Rexburg Democrat Richard Stallings.

State Sen. Dane Watkins and state

Rep. J.F. Chadband, both of Idaho Falls, already are campaigning for the opportunity to challenge Stallings. Idaho Falls broadcaster Mel Richardson and state Rep. Gary Robbins, R-Dierich, also have expressed an interest in the nomination. Most recently, Connie Hansen, the wife of the embattled former congressman, said she was almost positive she might enter the race.

Adamson said his edge over the pack is his knowledge of national issues. He's been boning up on them since 1983, when he first decided to challenge Hansen for the GOP nomination.

"I've done everything in my power to acquaint myself with major, and

City questions county clerk's bills

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls is withholding payment on three bills from Twin Falls County Clerk Richard Pence until city officials find out whether the bills are legal.

The bills for the city's Nov. 5 election ask that payments be made to the county, to Pence personally and to county maintenance worker Larry Haycock personally.

The first bill, for $16, is marked "Pay To: Richard A Pence" and gives his home address. Pence says the charges are for programming of the voting machines, which he did on weekends, and for his work past 5 p.m. on election night. Since $15 is for mileage and expenses, the bill indicates.

The second bill, for $100, is marked "Pay To: Larry Haycock" and gives that employee's home address. The bill includes $150 charged for programming and election night work and $10 for mileage.

The third bill, for $300, is payable to the county. It includes a charge of $120 for 6 hours of work by Pence and another county employee on election day, between 11 a.m. and their normal quitting time of 5 p.m. It also includes a $220 charge for moving 18 county voting machines used by the city, $80 for machine supplies, and $30 for re-programming the machines.

City Manager Jim Courtney is questioning Pence's personal bill for his time.

"I'm of the opinion he's on a salary like the rest of us," he said. "I question whether it's a legitimate bill and whether we can legitimately pay it."

City Finance Director Rick Thompson said he had told Pence that he did not believe that as chief election official in the county Pence should be billing the city for the work he did outside his usual working hours should be reimbursed by the city.

"I don't have time to do city work on county time," he said Tuesday. "I draw a salary from the county not the city." He said he felt it best not to run the charges for Haycock or himself through the county budget. Haycock is paid an hourly wage and is reimbursed for overtime work done for the county.

Pence also said "he did not owe the city anything." He compared the work he did outside of normal county working hours to freelancing.

The city is not challenging costs for election supplies, Courtney said. But he is questioning what he sees as a rental charge for the

Bickel sixth-grade class stunned as shuttle tragedy unfolds

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "Silent shock" was the initial reaction Tuesday of Twin Falls teachers and 31 students at Bickel Elementary who were watching the launch when the space shuttle exploded, killing all seven aboard.

Just prior to the explosion, Bickel teacher Theo Merrick's sixth-grade class had been watching the liftoff.

"It was a real exciting moment for this age group to see the launch," said Merrick, whose class had been following teacher Christa McAuliffe and the shuttle program all year. "It was just unbelievable. They had counted on it, anticipated it," she said. The TV had been on all morning, although most students were doing classwork at the time because delays had pushed the launch back 2 hours.

"About four or five boys were really interested in this and had gone over to watch," she said. "And then one little boy said 'Something's gone wrong.'"

Merrick said the students became instantly quiet as they watched the unfolding tragedy, and then one girl started crying and told her "This is so sad."

Merrick canceled lesson plans for the rest of the day because she said the students in her class of 31 could not concentrate on schoolwork.

"Work just fell apart," she said. "Two boys came up and said they just couldn't stop thinking about it."

Merrick, who has been teaching 16 years, said she felt it was important to discuss what had happened.

"Tragedy is part of everyday life, you have to expect it," she said. "You can't have good parts of life all the time."

When Merrick's students returned from lunch, they continued watching television for the latest updates.

"We've seen this eight times, and we're still glued to the set," she said as the students watched a small, black-and-white set on a table in the classroom.

IEA expresses sorrow at loss of 'one of us'

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Education Association Tuesday expressed its grief at the explosion of the space shuttle that killed all seven aboard, including the first teacher in space, Christa McAuliffe.

Christa McAuliffe was one of us, pioneer for our nation and a person who personally because of the direct involvement of two of our own members, Idaho teachers Barbara Morgan and Dave Markquart — We sorrow for the loss they are feeling."

Morgan, from McCall, was selected as an alternate. Markquart, from Boise, was one of the national final-member of the IEA is deeply saddened by the loss.

Raasch said teachers felt the loss personally because of the direct involvement of two of our own members, Idaho teachers Barbara Morgan and Dave Markquart — We sorrow for the loss they are feeling."

Morgan, from McCall, was selected as an alternate. Markquart, from Boise, was one of the national finalists.

The IEA said it will continue with Friday's scheduled education rally in Boise and it expected its members and the public who will be asked to wear "some visible symbol of mourning" honoring McAuliffe.

"We will still gather, but now with an even stronger sense of dedication to our profession," Raasch's statement said.

Showy looks jazz up high fashion shows

By SUZY PATTERSON
The Associated Press

PARIS — Couture clothes for next summer will be sexy, molded, and showy, as seen during Tuesday's shows at Chanel, Ungaro and Feraud. Even at Chanel, sexy looks strutted down the runway in waist- and hip-hugging narrow dresses and suits, mainly knee-revealing for daytime. There were many of the usual gold buttons, big-link chokers, white collars, silk flowers and bows. From favorite navy and white silks to soft pastel or hot orange tweed suits, the clothes marked waists and emphasized shoulders. The cut of the clothes was sometimes pure Karl Lagerfeld, who has designed for several seasons now for this prestigious house. The newly hipped-waist line looked good in soft Prince of Wales gray suits with white collars. One super big navy diagonal plaid greatcoat came out after a matching fitted coat and white pants. In a Belle Epoque decor at the Ecole des Beaux Arts, the Chanel show attracted dozens of wealthy women and wives of France's top politicians, who may, however, prefer their clothes less than skin-tight. Like an abstract-expressionist painting, the news at Ungaro's show was heartening — for those with good figures. The hourglass figure promanaged throughout, from black and white fitted, suits with narrow short skirts or pants to shiny cocktail dresses that were explosive with hot colors. Remarkable details and elaborate draping mark these clothes. Sleeves are often leg o'mutton style, with many buttons at the wrist. Tiny, waisted jackets are usually long, often with a big, stiffened peplum. The plethora of tiny rhinestone buttons, also saucy — cut-outs — the distal trains add to the excitement of these sophisticated clothes. Emanuel Ungaro got a big hand for his spectacular use of fabrics and draping. L. A. Feraud's message in shapely clothes was sheer opulence. He has several designers helping him dream up some of the loudest prints in town, and the wild prints often look

Too many visitors take cheer from Christmas

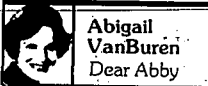

DEAR ABBY: Your answer depends on whether I should apologize or not. My husband and I have three children. Both sets of grandparents live out of state, so we invited them to spend Christmas at our house. All four arrived on Dec. 23. On the 24th, my two brothers, their wives, and a total of seven children arrived unannounced. (They live 275 miles from here.) They said they heard the folks would be here, and they wanted to see them, so they invited themselves to my house for Christmas.

My own mother and two sisters-in-law sat around talking to each other while my mother-in-law and I prepared the entire dinner for 20 people (11 of whom had not been invited). The two of us served the dinner and cleaned up while everyone else entertained themselves. When I said to my mother-in-law, "Mom, I could use a good stiff drink and a little peace and quiet," she said, "Grab your coat. I'm buying."

We filled in the bubbles, then Mom and I went to the neighborhood bar for a couple of drinks. When we got home, my mother said I owed my guests an apology. She said, "A gracious hostess doesn't walk out on her own party to get plastered somewhere else!"

Abby, I was not plastered, and don't think I owed anybody an apology. What do you think?

HAD IT WITH CHRISTMAS DEAR ABBY: Skip the apologies. You were understandably overworked and under a lot of pressure with a houseful of unexpected company, but instead of allowing them to sit around while you did all the work, you should have asked them to pitch in.

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a guy who is so cheap that instead of buying Christmas cards, he uses the cards that he's received from other people? He just crosses out their name, writes in his own and gives it to someone else. I'm not making this up, Abby. John (his real name) has a nice little auto parts business in town and makes a pretty fair living. Oh, he doesn't mail out these recycled cards; he waits until he runs into someone on the street, or they come into his store, and he just hands it to them. Everybody in town likes John, but he's got to be the cheapest guy in Indiana — or the craziest.

If you put this in your column, leave my name off. This is a very small town and everybody knows me, too. — "ME" IN ROME CITY, IND.

DEAR "ME": I think John's Christmas cards are hilarious. But don't write him off as penurious. He's crazy like a fox.

DEAR ABBY: Well, Christmas has passed, and we are demoralized by the unabashed neglect of our many nieces and nephews. High in expectations, we sent them all greeting cards now that most of them are grown up and married. Only three responded! My wife is downhearted and I am bristling!

When they were youngsters, we sent them all greeting cards now that most of them are grown up and married. Only three responded! My wife is downhearted and I am bristling! as do-nothing ornaments, breeding self-serving lifestyles. They fill their bellies full of pizzas, hot dogs, colas and french fries, then loosen their belt another notch to give vent to rousing choruses of "We Are the World."

Miss Teenager contest applications available

BOISE — Applications are now being accepted for the Miss Idaho National Teen-Ager pageant, which will be held May 23-25 at the Red Lion Inn/Riverside in Boise.

Rather than a beauty pageant, this is a scholarship pageant for girls 14-19 and seeks to recognize the scholastic achievements and leadership in American teenagers, according to Jeanne Wallin, state director. Tuition scholarships totaling over $40,000 will be awarded in addition to cash awards and other prizes.

The winner will receive a full two-year tuition scholarship to Oklahoma City University, a $2,000 savings bond, official tiara, banner and trophy, as well as an all-expense paid trip to the National Pageant.

Two $10,000 tuition scholarships to Eckerd College, St. Petersburg, Fla., will be awarded to the senior and underclass winner of the Citizenship Award. This award is based solely on academic achievement and leadership. State winners of the award will be considered for one of 10 regional $16,000 scholarships and one of two $24,000 national scholarships.

The contestant with the greatest potential in business, computer systems, food service or hospitality-related programs will receive a two-year scholarship valued at $7,000 from Johnson Wales College, Providence, R.I.

A $4,000 tuition scholarship to Millikin University, Decatur, Ill., will also be awarded to the talent winner.

Participants in the Miss Idaho National Teen-Ager Pageant will be judged on scholastic achievement, poise-personality and appearance. There will be no swimsuit competition. The talent/essay division is separate and will not affect the overall scoring.

Finalists are housed at the hotel Friday and Saturday nights.

For more information or applications, write to Jeanne Wallin, state director, 214 Fifth Ave., Leigh Acres, Fla. 33936, or call 813-369-4283.

Bush to address Gem GOP

BOISE (AP) — Vice President George Bush will be the featured speaker at the Boise Lincoln Day Association's fund-raising dinner Feb. 20, Association President Jim Collier has announced. "We are honored that the vice president has accepted our invitation," Collier said Monday. "His presence will not only make this one of the greatest Lincoln Day Association banquets in history but will be a tremendous boost for the campaign election efforts of (Sen.) Steve Symms, (Rep.) Larry Craig and (Lt. Gov.) Dave Lenoir.

Water monitoring starts

SANDPOINT (AP) — Seven monitoring wells are being installed in the Sandpoint area to determine if hazardous wood preservatives are contaminating ground water. State and federal officials are concerned that groundwater contamination might lead to pollution of Lake Pend Oreille. The test wells and soil sampling will help determine the extent of the contamination and potential threat to the lake. Pentachlorophenol has been found at three forest products facilities. The three sites are within a mile of each other, prompting concerns about groundwater contamination. "The three combined are definitely enough of a concern to warrant additional study," said Environmental Protection Agency environmental protection specialist Ron Moseyger. "Results of the tests conducted at the two sites in November are expected later this week," said Brad Harr, Idaho Division of Environment hazardous materials expert.

'Accountant' must be earned

BOISE (AP) — To call yourself an "accountant" in Idaho, you must be certified and licensed by the Idaho State Board of Accountancy, an attorney general's opinion says. The state has a vested interest in making certain that the public is protected from what could be misleading advertising, said an opinion issued Monday, prepared by Chief Deputy Attorney General John McMahon. "The unrestricted use of such terms can be deceptive and misleading," the opinion said. The opinion was requested by state Rep. Delores Crow, R-Nampa.

Revenue shift 'a bit late'

BOISE (AP) — A recent suggestion from Lands Department Director Stan Hamilton that revenue from timber sales and land leases should go directly into the Public School Endowment Fund is "welcome, but a bit late," state Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon said. The treasurer, who is custodian of the Public School Endowment Fund, filed a suit last year against the Land Board to ensure money from these sources goes toward the Endowment Fund. Oral arguments are scheduled before the Idaho Supreme Court on Feb. 10. Hamilton made his suggestion at a recent hearing of the Senate Education Committee. He said his department had been working on the proposal "for a long time." However, both the department's attorney and senior controller opposed it in papers filed in Miss Moon's court suit.

Stallings explains his vote

BOISE (AP) — Rep. Richard Stallings says he supported the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings federal budget-balancing law because it was the only way to address the $200 billion federal deficit. Stallings told 140 Democrats at the Ada County Democrats' weekly legislative luncheon Monday that there would be efforts to raise taxes to avoid the cuts mandated by the measure. "But the 2nd District congressman said, 'If we are going to have a tax increase, it is going to come from the White House.' He said he expects many programs to be eliminated, including the Small Business Administration, revenue-sharing and economic-development programs. The three Republican members of the Idaho delegation also voted for the measure. "Stallings said Idaho Republicans have "bad-mouthed" the federal government for many years. At the same time, they have looked to Washington, D.C., to fund many programs, he said.

Shooting called 'justifiable'

POCATELLO (AP) — The death of a man shot by a Pocatello policeman on New Year's Eve was "justifiable homicide," Bannock County officials have decided. Coroner Jim Allen said at a news conference Tuesday that his office's investigation into the death of Shannon Biggers, 25, was closed, and Prosecutor Shawn Anderson said he does not plan any hearings into the matter. Biggers was shot and killed Dec. 31 after two policemen entered his apartment to help his wife get some of her personal belongings. Armed with an eight-inch kitchen knife, he allegedly charged at Sgt. Steve Findley, according to police reports.

Courts deny request for execution stay

BOISE (AP) — Both 4th District Judge Robert Newhouse and the Idaho Supreme Court have denied requests to stay the scheduled Monday execution of convicted murderer Thomas Eugene Creech, officials said. Attorney Rolf Kehne filed the motions last week in an attempt to stop officials from pulling Creech to death by lethal injection on Monday at the Idaho State Penitentiary. A spokeswoman for Newhouse said the judge rejected Kehne's request early Tuesday and acting Chief Justice Allan G. Shepard signed an order Tuesday afternoon denying a similar motion. "Having exhausted all state appeals, Kehne said he planned to submit a request for a stay of execution in U.S. District Court in Boise. "We have absolutely no way of predicting the federal court's responses, to the constitutional claims we make," he said. "If our attacks on the (Idaho death penalty) statute are successful, we're going to save him from the death penalty completely and forever." Creech was sentenced to die after pleading guilty to the 1981 slaying of fellow inmate David Jensen. At least four execution dates have been set for the 35-year-old Ohio native over the past 10 years. Kehne said he would argue on appeal through the federal court system that Creech's request to withdraw his guilty plea should be granted, that Idaho's death penalty is unconstitutional and that Newhouse erred during sentencing hearings. Penitentiary Warden A.J. Arave has scheduled a complete walkthrough of the execution procedure today. However, Idaho Corrections Director Al Murphy, his said he does not expect any execution to be conducted in the state for at least 16 to 18 months.

Inadequate audits threatening grants

BOISE (AP) — Some $250 million in federal grants to Idaho and possibly more may be in jeopardy because of the state's inability to meet increasingly strict federal standards for auditing the use of government money, Legislative Auditor Bruce Balderston is warning. "I can't say we will lose that money, but we run the risk," Balderston told the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee on Tuesday. "It depends when and if the federal government decides to impose sanctions," Balderston said. "The federal government is being very careful about this. They're waiting for something specific to happen before responding."

Although the auditing problem has existed for over a year, Balderston said it has intensified since Congress took federal regulations on the auditing requirements and turned them into federal law. "They're becoming more aggressive in enforcing it, and it's coming — straight from Congress," Balderston said. "And I don't think it's out of line, the position they're taking. They're pouring money into the states; and they want to make sure it's spent responsibly." But Balderston, who is seeking authorization to expand his present auditing corps of 18 to cope with the mounting federal demands, said he has already been notified that the state will receive letters of non-compliance on auditing requirements for federal money in the Departments of Education and Health and Welfare. Prompting those non-compliance notices, he said, is the fact that his staff cannot meet the biennial auditing requirement set by both the federal government and state law. Audits of six other state agencies receiving federal funds are also candidates for similar notices, he said. "I do not think, in any way, shape or form, that's part of the job description," Balderston told the committee.

Trucker dies in accident

BOISE (AP) — A South Carolina truck driver was killed Tuesday on Interstate 84 when the truck he was riding in skidded on ice and rolled. Charles R. Freeman, 35, Ware Shoals, S.C., was riding in the sleeper of a Wayne Daniel Trucking Co. truck when it swerved on ice several miles east of Boise and hit a guard rail, Idaho State Police Cpl. Jim Barber said. Freeman was thrown from the truck and killed as it rolled over him. Driver Brian Perkins, also of South Carolina, was not hurt in the crash.

Good chicken stock basic for soup

By TOM HOGE
The Associated Press

Man has always been a hunter and among his earliest prey, more than 3,000 years ago, was a small jungle fowl, more than 3,000 years ago, was a chicken.

The Romans served chicken dressed at their banquets and, centuries later, the bird began appearing on dinner tables in France. Shortly after 1600, settlers had brought the fowl to America, where it has become a prime source of food ever since.

Chicken soup seems to be a universal favorite, and over the years immigrants from many parts of the world have brought their favorite recipes to the New World.

All chicken soups are based on one key ingredient: chicken stock. It can be made from meat taken from almost any part of the bird. Legs and thighs have a full flavor. You can also use wing tips, backs and giblets. But if you want a clear broth, do not include liver, because it clouds the stock. Simmer the stock over low to medium heat to develop the taste. Chicken bones give a full flavor and should be included in the pot until the stock is ready.

If you wish to freeze the stock for future use, place it in plastic freezer containers. Well covered, it can keep for three or four months. If you are making a chicken vegetable soup, make sure the greens are fresh, and do not freeze the mixture after they have been added.

Most soups do gain flavor, however, if stored in the non-freezer part of the refrigerator for a couple of days. To seal in the flavor, cover the soup well, leaving the fat on top until ready to serve.

Here is a recipe for chicken vegetable soup calling for fresh greens. Here the meat included is already cooked.

- 1 cup potatoes, cut into 1/2-inch strips
- 1 cup carrots, cut into 1/2-inch strips
- 4 cups chicken stock or broth

- 1 tablespoon dry sherry
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup onions, sliced thin
- 1 cup carrots in 1/2 by 2-inch sticks
- 1 cup celery in 1/2 by 2-inch sticks
- 1 cup fresh green beans in 2-inch pieces
- 2 cups cooked chicken in julienne strips
- 1 cup zucchini in 1/2 by 2-inch sticks
- In medium saucepan over medium-high heat bring potatoes to boiling point in enough salted water to cover. Cook potatoes five minutes, drain and set aside. In large saucepan, heat stock and sherry to boiling. Season with salt and pepper. Add onions, carrots and celery and simmer five minutes. Stir in green beans and chicken and heat soup to boiling. Add zucchini and potatoes and simmer one minute longer. Serve or keep in refrigerator until ready to eat.

Healthful methods to cook burgers

By MINNIE BERNARDINO
Los Angeles Times

Q. Which is the healthiest way to prepare hamburgers: broiled in a conventional oven or cooked on an appropriate rack in a microwave oven? My preference is to skip them entirely but my son does not agree with that. I tried microwaving one on a paper napkin on a paper plate, but it looked so greasy that I have not done that again. I do not like to fry them.

A. Both broiling and microwaving methods, as well as barbecuing, work well as healthier alternatives to frying hamburgers. Cooking hamburgers on a rack in the microwave will result in about the same calorie levels as broiling, varying only according to length of time that the meat is cooked. Of course, the longer the meat is cooked, the more fat is extracted.

In tests done by the Consumer Services Department of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, hamburgers microwaved using cooking racks were not as desirable as those done directly on glass baking dishes. However, because some fat will be reabsorbed by the burgers, this direct method will produce more calories than broiling.

Due to differences in microwave ovens, lean-to-fat ratios of ground beef and initial temperature of beef, it is impossible to recommend accurate cooking times. The most common complaint about microwaved burgers is the lack of nice browning and even cooking.

To help achieve these qualities, the meat board recommends forming the patties into doughnut shapes and rubbing the surface with seasonings. Shape one pound of ground beef into three to four patties, about half an inch thick and four to 4 1/2 inches in diameter. Form a three-quarter-inch hole in the center and place in an eight-inch square microwave-safe baking dish. Sprinkle patties with a mixture of salt and pepper to taste, a little four-and-a-half-paprika for color. Cover with wax paper and microwave on HIGH, rotating patties halfway during cooking. Cooking time for a single four-ounce patty will take about one minute and 15 seconds plus one minute stand time and requires turning it over at about midpoint in cooking and turning back during standing time.

Aside from buying leaner meat, to help reduce calories in burgers, drain well after cooking.

Bean dishes pack a nutritional wallop

By BETSY BALSLEY
Los Angeles Times

There is no such thing as a quick dry bean dish... unless you open a can. But if it is easy cooking you are looking for, beans should be high on your list of choices as a basic ingredient.

Beans frequently are given a truly undeserved bum rap. Maybe they are just too earthy for today's ambiance-oriented society, as it is difficult to design a "food painting" on a plate with a batch of beans. Or maybe they are overlooked because of their reputation for causing slight digestive problems with some people. Newer preparation methods largely have managed to overcome beans' tendency to create gas in the digestive tract, however, so maybe it is time to give old-fashioned bean dishes another try.

Probably the best reason for including beans in the diet is the nutritional wallop they pack for the price. Dry beans contain a goodly amount of quality vegetable protein. While they lack methionine, one of the amino acids necessary to make complete protein, combining them with a compatible non-meat food such as corn or rice, will provide the body with a complete meal-sized protein. Meat or dairy products such as cheese or eggs also are good sources of the missing amino acid.

Beyond the vegetable protein they provide, dry beans also contain a number of essential minerals such as iron, calcium and potassium. They are a good source of fiber, high in carbohydrate content, low in fat and have no cholesterol.

All of which means dry beans should be given serious consideration when it comes to menu planning by nutritional packers for a good low-cost nutritional package.

MARINATED GARBANZO SALAD

- 1 pound dry garbanzo beans
- 2 red peppers
- 2 green peppers
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1-2 cup oil
- 1-2 cup rice vinegar
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 red onion, thinly sliced
- 2 stalks celery, sliced
- 1-2 cup cilantro leaves, minced
- Juice of 1 lemon

Salt, pepper
1/2 cup lettuce

Place garbanzo beans in saucepan with water to cover. Bring to boil. Boil 2 minutes. Turn off heat. Let stand, covered, 1 hour. Drain beans. Return to pot and add fresh water to cover. Cover and cook over medium heat until beans are tender, about 1-2 hours. Drain and cool.

Broil red and green peppers until black. Place inside paper or plastic bag to sweat. Peel and cut into strips. Cool. Place in large bowl and add garbanzo beans, garlic, oil, vinegar, sugar, red onion, celery, cilantro leaves and lemon juice. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Cover and marinate overnight in refrigerator. Drain, if desired, and serve on bed of lettuce. Makes about 12 servings.

Thai flavors pick up main-course salmon salad

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press

A Japanese-American friend of mine often develops delightful recipes for me. But recently, when she sent one of these, she said it was a joint inspiration.

She met a journalist from Thailand visiting in the United States, and discussed ways of combining Asian flavors with American staples. They finally worked out the following recipe for Thai-style Salmon Salad.

Three of us at my house enjoyed the salad for lunch a few weeks ago. If you like a light but satisfying main course with interesting flavor, chances are you will welcome this one.

THAI-STYLE SALMON SALAD

- 7 1/2-ounce can salmon
- 1 small (2 ounces) onion
- 1 medium cucumber
- 1/2 cup fresh coriander (cilantro) or parsley leaves
- 1/2 cup white rice wine vinegar

1 tablespoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon grated lime rind
1 dried chili pepper
Boston lettuce
Thin lime slices, each halved

Drain salmon, reserving 2 tablespoons of the liquid. Turn salmon in to a medium bowl; flake in large pieces, removing skin and any large bone.

Peel onion, quarter and thinly slice to make about 1/2 lightly packed cup. Pare cucumber; thinly slice. Top salmon with onion, cucumber and coriander; do not mix.

In a small saucepan over low heat, stir together vinegar and sugar until sugar dissolves and mixture is hot. Add red stir in lime rind, chili pepper, and reserved salmon liquid; cool slightly. Carefully toss with layers of salmon, onion, cucumber and coriander. Cover lightly with saran and refrigerate about 1 hour.

Before serving, remove chili pepper. Arrange Boston lettuce on individual plates; top with salmon mixture, drained if you like. Garnish with lime slices.
Makes 3 servings. Recipe may be doubled.

Good chicken stock basic for soup

By TOM HOGE
The Associated Press

Man has always been a hunter and among his earliest prey, more than 3,000 years ago, was a small jungle fowl, later domesticated — the chicken.

The Romans served chicken dishes at their banquets and, centuries later, the bird began appearing on dinner tables in France. Shortly after 1600, settlers had brought the fowl to America, where it has been a prime source of food ever since.

Chicken soup seems to be a universal favorite, and over the years immigrants from many parts of the world have brought their favorite recipes to the New World.

All chicken soups are based on one key ingredient: chicken stock. It can be made from meat taken from almost any part of the bird.

Legs and thighs have a full flavor. You can also use wing tips, backs and giblets. But if you want a clear broth, do not include liver, because it clouds the stock.

Simmer the stock over low to medium heat to develop the taste. Chicken bones give a full flavor and should be included in the pot until the stock is ready.

If you wish to freeze the stock for future use, place it in quart-size or larger containers. Well covered, it can keep for three or four months.

If you are making a chicken vegetable soup, make sure the greens are fresh, and do not freeze the mixture after they have been added.

Most soups do gain flavor, however, if stored in the non-freezer part of the refrigerator for a couple of days. To seal in the flavor, cover the soup well, leaving the fat on top until ready to serve.

Here is a recipe for chicken vegetable soup calling for fresh greens. Here the meat included is already cooked.

- 1 cup potatoes, cut into 1/2-inch strips
- 1/2 cup carrots, cut into 1/2-inch strips
- 4 cups chicken stock or broth

- 1 tablespoon dry sherry
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1 cup onions, sliced thin
- 1 cup carrots in 1/2 by 2-inch sticks
- 1 cup celery in 1/2 by 2-inch sticks
- 1 cup fresh green beans in 2-inch pieces
- 2 cups cooked chicken in julienned strips
- 1 cup zucchini in 1/2 by 2-inch sticks

In medium saucepan over medium-high heat, bring potatoes to boiling point in enough salted water to cover. Cook potatoes five minutes, drain and set aside. In large saucepan, heat stock and sherry to boiling. Season with salt and pepper. Add onions, carrots and celery and simmer five minutes. Stir in green beans and chicken-and-heat soup-to-boiling. Add zucchini and potatoes and simmer one minute longer. Serve or keep in refrigerator until ready to eat.

Healthful methods to cook burgers

By MINNIE BERNARDINO
Los Angeles Times

Q. Which is the healthiest way to prepare hamburgers: broiled in a conventional oven or cooked on an appropriate rack in a microwave oven? My preference is to skip them entirely but my son does not agree with that. I tried microwaving one on a paper napkin on a paper plate, but it looked so greasy that I have not done that again. I do not like to fry them.

A. Both broiling and microwaving methods, as well as barbecuing, work well as healthier alternatives to frying hamburgers. Cooking hamburgers on a rack in the microwave will result in about the same calorie levels as broiling, varying only according to length of time that the meat is cooked. Of course, the longer the meat is cooked, the more fat is extracted.

In tests done by the Consumer Services Department of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, hamburgers microwaved using cooking racks were not as desirable as those done directly on glass baking dishes. However, because some fat will be reabsorbed by the burgers, this direct method will produce more calories than broiling.

Due to differences in microwave ovens, lean-to-fat ratios of ground beef and initial temperature of beef, it is impossible to recommend accurate cooking times. The most common complaint about microwaved burgers is the lack of nice browning and even cooking.

To help achieve those qualities, the meat board recommends forming the patties into doughnut shapes and rubbing the surface with seasonings. Shape one pound of ground beef into three to four patties, about half an inch thick and four to 4 1/2 inches in diameter. Form a three-quarter-inch hole in the center and place in an eight-inch square microwave-safe baking dish. Sprinkle patties with a mixture of salt and pepper to taste, a little fat and paprika for color. Cover with wax paper and microwave on HIGH, rotating patties halfway during cooking. Cooking time for a single four-ounce patty will take about one minute and 15 seconds plus one minute stand time and requires turning it over at midpoint, broiling and turning back during standing time.

Aside from buying leaner meat, to help reduce calories in burgers, drain well after cooking.

Bean dishes pack a nutritional wallop

By BETSY BALSLEY
Los Angeles Times

There is no such thing as a quick dry bean dish... unless you open a can. But if it is easy cooking you are looking for, beans should be high on your list of choices as a basic ingredient.

Beans frequently are given a truly undeserved bum rap. Maybe they are just too earthy for today's ambiance-oriented society, as it is difficult to design a "food painting" on a plate with a batch of beans. Or maybe they are overlooked because of their reputation for causing slight digestive problems with some people. Newer preparation methods largely have managed to overcome beans' tendency to create gas in the digestive tract, however, so maybe it is time to give old-fashioned bean dishes another try.

Probably the best reason for including beans in the diet is the nutritional wallop they pack for the price. Dry beans contain a goodly amount of quality vegetable protein. While they lack methionine, one of the amino acids necessary to make complete protein, combining them with a compatible, non-meat food that does contain this amino acid, such as corn or rice, will provide the body with a complete meatless protein. Meat or dairy products such as cheese or eggs also are good sources of the missing amino acid.

Beyond the vegetable protein they provide, dry beans also contain a number of essential minerals such as iron, calcium and potassium. They are a good source of fiber, high in carbohydrate content, low in fat and have no cholesterol.

All of which means dry beans should be given serious consideration when it comes to menu planning by those looking for a good low-cost nutritional package.

MARINATED GARBANZO SALAD

- 1 pound dry garbanzo beans
- 2 red peppers
- 2 green peppers
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1/2 cup oil
- 1-2 cup rice vinegar
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 red onion, thinly sliced
- 2 stalks celery, sliced
- 1-2 cup cilantro leaves, minced
- Juice of 1 lemon

Salt, pepper

Crisp lettuce

Place garbanzo beans in saucepan with water to cover. Bring to boil. Boil 2 minutes. Turn off heat. Let stand, covered, 1 hour. Drain beans. Return to pot and add fresh water to cover. Cover and cook over medium heat until beans are tender, about 1 1/2 hours. Drain and cool.

Broil red and green peppers until black. Place inside paper or plastic bag to sweat. Peel and cut into strips. Cool. Place in large bowl and add garbanzo beans, garlic, oil, vinegar, sugar, red onion, celery, cilantro leaves and lemon juice. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Cover and marinate overnight in refrigerator. Drain, if desired, and serve on bed of lettuce. Makes about 12 servings.

Author makes Sweet and Sour Shrimp deliciously simple

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

If there's one Chinese dish that Americans have favored over the years—it's shrimp or a whole fish served with a sweet and sour sauce.

SWEET AND SOUR SHRIMP
8-ounce can unseasoned pineapple slices

Sweet-Sour Mixture, see recipe
1 pound medium shrimp (24 to 28)
1-3/4 cup cornstarch
1 tablespoon medium sherry
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
6-ounce green pepper
6-ounce red pepper
Vegetable oil
Drain pineapple, saving juice (1/2 cup) for Sweet-Sour Mixture. Cut pineapple slices into small wedges. Reserve juice and wedges. Make up Sweet-Sour mixture and reserve. Shell and devein shrimp. In a medium bowl stir together cornstarch, sherry and soy sauce until smooth; add shrimp and mix well to coat; reserve.

Seed and derib green and red pepper; cut into about 3/4-inch squares.
In a 10-inch skillet, over medium heat, heat one tablespoon oil. Add peppers and stir-fry for a minute or two. With a slotted spoon remove peppers and reserve. Wipe skillet with a paper towel and set aside for later use.

In a wok, heat two cups oil to 375 degrees. Add half the reserved shrimp, one at a time, and fry until golden brown and crisp — a few minutes. Remove shrimp to paper towels to drain. Repeat with remaining shrimp.
Into the 10-inch skillet over medium heat, pour the reserved Sweet-Sour Mixture and stirring, constantly, cook until clear, thickened and boiling. Add reserved pineapple wedges, peppers and shrimp. Mix and reheat briefly. Serve hot with rice.

Makes 4 main-dish servings.
SWEET-SOUR MIXTURE: In a small bowl stir together one tablespoon cornstarch and 3 tablespoons sugar. Gradually whisk in 1/2 cup pineapple juice (reserved from pineapple slices), 1/4 cup elder vinegar, 1/4 cup ketchup and 1/2 teaspoon soy sauce until smooth. Stir in 1 finely chopped garlic clove.

Unusual pairings of food, wine put mark on tribute

By NATHAN CHIROMAN
Special to the Los Angeles Times

Not wanting to be bound by traditional matchups of white wine with fish and red wine with meat, chefs Maurice Toulemonde of the University Club and Century Plaza executive chef Edmund Hofmeister worked for at least a year on unusual wine and food matchups for a recent Les Amis d'Escoffier Society Dinner at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles. The annual dinner honored the memory of the late Auguste Escoffier, generally considered the "king of chefs."

Escoffier believed that unconventional food and wine pairings were the mark of a true culinary artist. A prime example was his pairing of fine Champagne with a Japanese salad at a dinner at the Carlton Hotel in London. Made with pineapples, oranges, tomatoes, lettuce hearts and fresh cream, the salad received considerable praise, but many an eyebrow was raised when it was served with Champagne. Only after repeated tastings was it accepted.
Similar challenges were faced by Toulemonde and Hofmeister. A beautiful soup enriched with flavors of wild mushrooms, quenelles and juniper proved not an easy match for any wine. Their choice was Madeira Verdelho, Special Reserve, a medium-sweet, rich, full-flavored wine, which cleared the palate nicely for the multiflavored soup.
Unfortunately, Madeira of this type is not favored these days, but it should be, especially on cooler evenings.
Hudson Valley duck liver in an herbéd aspic could have been matched to a dry, fine, sparkling wine, but the chef preferred a white Burgundy—Meursault—Narvaux 1982, a fat, round, big-styled wine. Meursaults in general, especially from good vintages like 1982 and 1983, have the structure and power to take on liver, paté and not overly spiced delicatessen meats. California Sauvignon Blanc and Chardonnay are worthy candidates also.
Another atypical, match-up was deep-fried eggplant served with Creole mustard sauce and crayfish sausages. Ordinarily, beer would have been my choice, but a lean, elegant Puligny Montrachet, Les Combettes would have been more than overpowered and showed well. To its credit it was not overly fruity and, indeed, a California full-bodied Chardonnay might have had a difficult time. A restrained, less fruity Pinot—Blanc or even a mild Sauvignon Blanc also is an appropriate candidate for a variety of today's popular Cajun-style dishes. Try Jehel's Arroyo Blanc (Pinot Blanc 1984).

The Henri Clerc wine selected is one of his best. It was aged in one-third new oak for 10 months with fermentation in the barrel. Also assisting in the match-up is the wine's unusually high 14 percent alcohol, which may be another asset in Cajun food pairings.
Pairing fillet of rabbit in a spicy Cajun-style hazelnut breading with a red wine stunned the experts. A soft silky chard would have been ideal, but a Chateau Talbot, St. Julien, Grand Cru Classe, 1979 worked well. It is just beginning to come around from a vintage that still is suffering from great expectations and hardness. The latter characteristic, generally considered a negative one, helped tame the spicy character of the fish.

Talbot is usually a good buy, even in off years, because it is fuller bodied and less costly than most of the wines of that district. Additionally, it is known to age sooner than its more noted neighbors from chateaux Latour and Mouton. The wine destroyed the myth that Cajun foods cannot be enjoyed with a red of elegance and finesse. In fact, it is a well-made Cabernet Sauvignon—St. Julien, Private Reserve, 1981. Here is a well-made Cabernet able to handle assertively spiced foods. As with any wine, it is simply a matter of orienting the palate.

Tangy apricots offset honey in quick bread

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Quick breads made entirely from dark flour are particularly good, I find, when they include dried fruit and honey. For example, here is a recipe for an Apricot-Whole-Wheat Bread in which the tang of apricots and the sweetness of honey offset each other.
It's a loaf that's fine to serve with tea, coffee, hot chocolate or milk for snacks. At a company dinner it may be offered after the main course with cheese or another bland white cheese. It's a versatile loaf to have in the house.

APRICOT-WHOLE WHEAT BREAD
3 cups stirred whole wheat flour (spoon and level)
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon

1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 large egg
1 1/2 cups milk
1 cup honey
2 tablespoons salad oil
1 cup dried apricots, chopped-medium-fine
1 cup walnuts, chopped-medium-fine
In medium bowl, stir together flour, baking powder, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg. In a small bowl beat egg until yolk and white are blended; add milk, honey and oil; beat to blend. Pour over flour mixture and stir just enough to moisten. Fold in apricots and walnuts.
Turn into a greased 5 by 3 by 3-inch loaf pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean, 50 to 70 minutes. Let stand about 10 minutes; loosen edges and turn out on a wire rack; turn right side up. Cool completely. Wrap tightly to soften crust before slicing.

Hopper says to adjust the amount in the recipe according to the size of the bird. A little bird can quit quite a long way.
There are quite a few recipes you might never need — like one for Rocky Mountain Rattlesnake — but it's nice to know you have a recipe if your neighbor calls and wants to share the bounty.
This next recipe I liked because it was for one of those hard-to-find, something-good-to-do-with-cuts-of-meat.

BARBECUED ELK RIBS
2-1/3 pounds elk ribs
1 tablespoon butter
1 cup onions, chopped
1 teaspoon coarse ground pepper
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons paprika
2 teaspoons worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon red pepper sauce

18-ounce can tomato sauce
1/2 cup vinegar
1/4 cup water
1/4 cup brown sugar
Steam the ribs on a rack over water in a large pan, covered with foil, for 30-40 minutes until the paper starts dripped out. Dry well on paper towels.
Brown the ribs in butter and set aside.
Mix the remaining ingredients in a large covered skillet or roaster. Bring to a boil and add ribs. Cover with lid or foil and simmer on top of range, basting frequently, until thoroughly done, between 1 and 2 hours.
If you have packages of lamb ribs in your freezer, I'll bet this recipe could be used with them, only I would add some garlic to the barbecue sauce.
There's a couple of ideas on what to do with wild game. Enjoy!

Butter's been valued for centuries

By TOM HOGE
Associated Press

The origin of butter reaches back into the mists of time, but the exact date seems to be unknown. One account says that thousands of years ago, a wandering nomad set out by camel back one day with a leather bag of sweet milk hung around his neck, in case he got thirsty. After riding for hours he decided to quaff some milk. But he found that his bag now contained a fatty substance apparently formed by the beast's movement. This substance was soon used by the Greeks and Romans, not as a food, but a salve for burns and injuries. It still is in some backwoods region of this country.

Soon women were using butter in hair dressing and cosmetic ointment. Then tribes in Northern Europe began eating butter, preferring it rancid, for some reason. Before long, Europeans were drinking butter in ale and hot buttered rum as an antidote for colds. To this day, incidentally, many sailors drink hot buttered rum after a day on the frozen slopes. Still, people in many countries in both Europe and Asia rarely if ever eat butter, preferring olive oil on fish and meats, and even spread it over bread. In the West, cow's milk is the prime source of butter, but in other lands, the milk of sheep, goats and even yaks is used. Some chefs put butter to other uses. They stir it over hot heat, for instance, until melted and serve it with silvered almonds over meats. There are also spreads, like softened butter combined with salt, pepper, minced parsley and lime juice. This can be livened up with a dash of cognac brandy or white wine. Here is a recipe for anchovy butter which goes well spread on hot meat or fish.

1/4 cup butter, creamed until soft
1 teaspoon anchovy paste
1/2 teaspoon onion juice
1/4 teaspoon lime juice
Dash Tabasco

Beat into the softened butter the anchovy paste, onion juice, lime juice and Tabasco. Spread over hot broiled fish, broiled steak or hot canapes. Serves 4 people.

Zucchini and carrots a tasty combination

ZUCCHINI CARROTS
2 medium large zucchini (1 pound)

1/2 cup water
1/2 of a 1/2-pound stick butter, cut into 4 equal pats

Salt to taste
 Scrub zucchini in cold water and cut off and discard ends; coarsely grate zucchini — there should be 4 cups not packed down. Pare carrots and coarsely grate — there should be 2 1/2 cups not packed down. Into a 10-inch skillet turn carrots and water; simmer, covered, until tender-crisp and water evaporates — 5 to 10 minutes. Add zucchini, butter and salt; mix well. Cook rapidly, uncovered and stirring often, just until zucchini is tender-crisp (it may not look transparent) and extremely hot — about 5 minutes; keep heat high so zucchini does not exude water. Makes 4 servings.

Artichokes embellish onion casserole

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

It takes a certain amount of bravery to prepare artichokes so they may be silted and used in a casserole. But if you're mastering a new technique, doing so may gratify you. After the artichokes are prepared they are sliced and, in the case of this particular recipe, baked with onion rings first cooked in a little olive oil, herbs, tomatoes and Monterey Jack cheese. In other words a perfect casserole to offer with baked chicken or fish for a company supper.

- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 2 medium onions (each 5 ounces), sliced 1/4-inch thick and separated into rings
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1/2 teaspoon dried crushed basil
- 1/2 teaspoon dried crushed thyme
- 1/2 teaspoon dried crushed oregano
- 2 medium (each 1 ounce) tomatoes, sliced 1/4-inch thick
- 6 ounces Monterey Jack cheese, sliced 1/4-inch thick

With a sharp heavy knife, cut off 2 inches from the top of each artichoke. Bend back outer petals of an artichoke until they snap off easily near the base, making sure the small edible part at the bottom of each petal remains on the artichoke heart. Continue to snap off and discard the thick petals until the central core of pale green petals or partly yellowish-green petals is left. With a swivel-blade peeler, pare outer dark green layer from the stem of the artichoke. With a small, sharp knife, cut out center petals. With a sturdy teaspoon, scoop out fuzzy center — called the choke or thistle portion. Cut artichoke lengthwise into 1/4-inch thick slices. Toss with lemon juice to prevent discoloration. Continue to treat each artichoke this way.

In a medium skillet, in the hot oil, gently cook onion until yellowed, 5 to 8 minutes. Arrange onion in a layer in the bottom of a shallow 1 1/2 quart baking dish. Sprinkle with basil, thyme and oregano. Top with a layer of tomatoes, then a layer of artichokes and finally the cheese. Tightly cover dish with foil if necessary. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until the artichoke slices are tender — about 40 minutes. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

European-style cut makes liver dish good

By ROSE DOSTI
Los Angeles Times

Dear SOS: My husband used to tell me that I made great liver and onion pies at the Picolo's in Los Angeles. Would you be a dear and try to get their recipe? — BARBARA

Dear Barbara: We asked, and this was the reply from Ron Colbert, the manager at Picolo restaurant: "We make liver and onion pies special at Picolo's in the European-style cut. The liver is sliced in thin strips as for stroganoff. We use only fresh beef liver."

- 1 Grated peel and juice of 1 large lemon
- 2 cups whipping cream, whipped
- Meringue Crust
- 1 tablespoon powdered sugar
- Beat egg yolks with sugar-lemon peel and juice until light. Cook stirring in top of double boiler over boiling water until thickened. Remove from heat and cool thoroughly.
- Fold in half of whipped cream.
- Turn into Meringue Crust and refrigerate at least 2 hours to set.
- Fold powdered sugar into remaining whipped cream and spread over chilled pie. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

PICOLO BEEF LIVER AND ONIONS
 1 1/2 pounds beef liver
 Salt, pepper
 Flour
 Unsalted butter
 2 onions, thinly sliced
 Slice liver into thin strips. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Dust with flour, shaking off excess. Melt 1/4 cup butter in skillet and dredge liver and saute until liver turns uniform brown color, tossing to brown evenly. Keep warm.

In separate skillet, melt 1/4 cup butter. Add onions and saute until golden brown, tossing occasionally to brown evenly. Place liver on platter or individual plates and top with mound of onions. Makes 4 to 6 servings.
