Agreement reached in jail lawsuit

By PAT MARGANTONIO
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — A bond issue to support a "bare bones" proposal for a new Twin Falls County jail is part of an agreement reached late Thursday by the county and two former inmates over alleged poor conditions at the 74-year-old jail.

The lawsuit, filed Oct. 22 by attorney Greg Fuller on behalf of the inmates, was scheduled to go to trial Tuesday. At the hearing, 5th District Judge Daniel Hurbutt would have decided whether the jail met constitutional standards. Instead, Hurbutt will be presented Tuesday with the proposed agreement for his approval.

Fuller said Friday that an agreement had been reached late Thursday.

The terms of the tentative agreement appear to echo some demands sought by the plaintiffs in the lawsuit, such as reducing the jail population and a new county jail.

Attorney Lloyd Webb, who is representing the county, said details of the agreement will be released next week. Generally, the agreement includes presenting county voters with a bond issue to finance a "bare bones" jail proposal. The proposal would exclude a new prosecutor's office and several other proposed items county residents seem to have rejected in an earlier jail bond election, Webb said.

County residents decisively turned down a $6.2 million bond issue last March to build a new jail-law enforcement complex. The proposed building, which would have been built next to the Theron Ward Judicial Building, would have contained a 90-bed jail and new offices for the sheriff, public defender and coroner and an emergency center that would have doubled for a county communications center.

While it could take years to prepare another jail proposal and eventually build a new jail, the agreement calls for some interim action, Webb said. These actions include reducing the jail population to 30 inmates, which will result in the county spending money to board inmates in other jails, often at $20 to $24 a day per inmate.

The county, from September through December, spent about $12,000 boarding prisoners elsewhere.

But the county would have spent much more if the court closed the facility, because all the inmates would have to be transferred to other jails, Webb said.

The average population at the jail was 32 in the 1983-84 fiscal year, according to county officials.

The total bed capacity in the main facility on the 4th floor of the County Courthouse is 66 people, according to a county booklet on the jail. There are about 10 more beds in the holding and trustee cells on other floors.

Jailers previously reported that they couldn't fill the jail to capacity because of Court attacks law

Effect delayed on Gramm-Rudman

By CLIFF HAAS
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A special federal court panel may have dealt a blow to the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law Friday, but the statute is far from dead.

For one thing, the three-judge court specifically noted that the effect of its ruling is delayed until the matter can be decided by the Supreme Court. That leaves nothing to block the $11.7 billion in automatic spending cuts scheduled to take place March 1 under the law. Notice of that appeal was filed later on Friday.

Moreover, Congress may find it politically impossible to ignore the law's future deficit targets no matter what the Supreme Court eventually decides on the narrow legal issue of how the cuts to reach those targets can be imposed.

Legal experts familiar with the Supreme Court have estimated that the justices will hear arguments in May and issue a ruling by July.

The impact is unclear on the 1987 fiscal year which begins Oct. 1, but prolonged legal battles obviously could create chaos.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said: "I would hope

Sen. Phil Gramm says act remains in effect despite ruling and the White House to meet to bring the budget into balance by 1991. The court left those targets alone.

But the law also says the Congressional Budget Office and the White House Office of Management and Budget are to determine

Haitians rejoice, loot after Duvalier departs

By KRIVAN TURNER
The Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — A military-civilian council took power Friday after so-called "President-for-Life" Jean-Claude Duvalier fled to France.

The apparent end of 28 years of Duvalier family rule sparked rejoicing and their looting, "revenge killing and a curfew in effect for 16 hours a day."

"He flew away!" shouted thousands of Haitians who poured into downtown Port-au-Prince.

Army chief of staff Gen. Henri Namphy said on national television that he was head of the new council. He appealed for "calm and serenity," and said the military has no political ambitions. "not now or ever."

Independent news agency photographers told The Associated Press they saw a wild crowd break into the tomb of former President Francois Duvalier, Jean-Claude's father, and carry through town what was believed to be his remains.

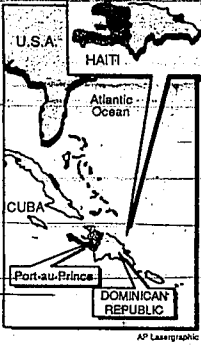

One young man danced through the streets with a skull in his hand said to be that of "Papa Doc," the nickname of Francois Duvalier, who had declared himself "president for life" after he was elected in 1957. Jean-Claude had taken the title at the age of 19, when his father died.

Businesses in the capital city of Port-au-Prince were closed for 16 hours, and at least one government ministry was looted.

Duvalier's last departure ceremony became known as "Soldiers' Used Tear Gas" in an attempt to enforce the curfew, and fired shots in the air. No casualties were reported.

A mob of Haitians smashed the general flame monument located just in front of the national palace, built in honor of Haitian patriots.

 - Duvalier leaves Haiti on U.S. jet to France
 - Government will be run by civilian-military junta

In another part of town, an American missionary reported an angry crowd brutally beat a member of the militia used by both Duvaliers to maintain their hold on the poverty-stricken Caribbean island, the dreaded Tonton Macoutes.

He quoted a second missionary as saying that a militiaman had been dismembered.

After Duvalier's departure, demonstrators shouted, "Down with the Macoutes, long live the army." Some pelted militia members with fruit and vegetables.

The militiamen appeared scared and confused, shouting at each other to stick together and head-for-the barracks.

The missionaries also said they were in radio and telephone contact with St. Marc. One report from the town north to the north of Port-au-Prince said the local headquarters of the militia had been destroyed.

Duvalier flew to Grenoble, France, in a U.S. Air Force plane. He was accompanied by his wife and about 20 others.

In a taped message to Haiti's 6 million people, broadcast on radio nearly four hours after his departure, the 34-year-old Duvalier said his decision to leave "permits a peaceful and rapid solution to the current crisis."

His government, which allowed no political parties and relied on a national militia to put down dissent, had been the target of growing protests since last November.

Indicted NASA chief may resign; commission holds closed meeting

By DAVID ESPO
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — James M. Beggs on leave as NASA administrator since his indictment on fraud charges, may resign, enabling President Reagan to appoint a new permanent boss for the beleaguered space agency, White House spokesman Larry Spokes said Friday.

Spokes' disclosure that Beggs "apparently has told some people he is considering stepping aside and may do so" came as the president's commission investigating last week's shuttle explosion moved its hearings behind closed doors to discuss classified information.

None of the commission members spoke to reporters as they arrived for their session in an office building across from the White House.

But early statements by officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration have focused on an unusual plume of flame that appeared near the shuttle Challenger's right-side rocket booster a few seconds before the ship exploded during launch on Jan. 28, killed its seven-member crew.

While the bureaucratic wheels turned in Washington, improving weather off the Florida coast aided the search for the space shuttle's two rocket boosters. NASA believes both boosters are lying about 20 miles apart in the Atlantic Ocean northeast of the launch pad.

The Navy sent 22 divers to a prime search area, as the Coast Guard ended its sea sweeps for floating shuttle debris to concentrate on recovering underwater wreckage.

Reports persisted that searchers have found some of the personal effects of the seven astronauts who were aboard the Challenger when it blew up, including a helmet that was fished from the water. But NASA spokesmen refused to confirm that any such remains have been retrieved.

At the same time, government officials moved through the vast

Aquino gains narrow lead in Philippine election tally

By DAVID BRISCOE
The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — Challenger Corazon Aquino, who had already claimed victory on the basis of her unofficial tally, jumped narrowly ahead of President Ferdinand E. Marcos in the government's own vote tabulations Saturday.

An aide said she was making plans to call on Marcos "to arrange an orderly transfer of power."

The Commission on Elections, appointed by Marcos, reported Mrs. Aquino had an edge of 2,822 votes of the 490,000 counted 21 hours after polls closed Friday. The commission said its tally showed Mrs. Aquino with 424,417 votes to Marcos' 421,485, giving her 50.8 percent of the votes counted.

The nine-member commission is the official vote-tallying body.

The figures represent about 3 percent of the total voted in Friday's balloting by 26 million voters as reported by 7 percent of the more than 80,000 voting stations. Final figures were not expected for days.

Mrs. Aquino, in a statement released 10 hours after polls closed at 3 p.m. Manila time on Friday (midnight MST), said, "The trend is clear and irreversible. The people and I have won and we know it."

"The Marcos spell is broken," she said. "The myth of his invincible machine has been shattered. Against his guns, against his goons and against his gold, the Filipino people have prevailed."

Spokesmen at Marcos' Malacanang Palace were not available for comment on the commission report.

Vote-counting has proceeded slowly, drawing charges of election irregularities. The return of election-day reports of violence, intimidation, vote-buying and ballot-box switching.

"The Legislature put the 5 percent cap on. It's time to take it off," said Loveland. "Do we have the guts to do it?"

Loveland, a former member of the State Tax Commission, said the Legislature made a mistake when it imposed the tax limit.

The One Percent Initiative wasn't enacted as it was passed. If it had been, we wouldn't have the problems we have now," he said.

Rep. Myron Jones, R-Malad, noted that voters could repeal the 5 percent limit at any time through initiative, if there were enough support for that idea.

House panel approves bills expanding local taxing options

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Two bills allowing local government in Idaho more authority on tax matters have been approved by the House Revenue and Taxation Committee and have been sent to the floor for a vote.

But a third measure, sponsored by the governor's office, went down to defeat. The committee voted to hold indefinitely the governor's proposal to allow voters in a taxing district to decide if they want to remove property tax limits.

The tax limits were imposed after voters in 1976 approved the One Percent Initiative. That law says budgets for local government may not go up more than 5 percent year.

The governor's bill allowed the limit to be removed by a simple majority. But similar legislation, requiring 55 percent approval for the limit could be removed, won enough committee support to be sent to the House floor for a vote.

Under normal procedures, the measure would be up for a final vote next week.

A second bill allows voters to impose a local-option personal income tax up to 1 percent of taxable income. Like the property tax measure, it requires approval by 55 percent of the registered voters in a county.

"We are just giving tools" for local government to solve their financial problems, said sponsor Rep. Chris Hooper, R-Boise.

"It's easier to work out the complications at the local level," said Rep. Gary Robbins, R-Boise, supporting Hooper. "They need to have the right to find local government."

Rep. Don Loveland, R-Boise, noted that the Legislature was unable to figure out how to impose the One Percent Initiative, which was to limit property taxes to no more than 1 percent of real estate's market value.

"Instead," he said, "the Legislature imposed the 5 percent growth limit."

"The Legislature put the 5 percent cap on. It's time to take it off," said Loveland. "Do we have the guts to do it?"

Peavey bill package proposes interest rate cuts for farmers

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — Saying that Idaho's farm crisis has gone unrecognized this winter, Sen. John Peavey, D-Covey, has introduced a package of bills that says will save borderline farmers and ease the strain of those going bankrupt.

Peavey said Friday that the massive federal deficit of recent years has hit farmers, especially hard because of their reliance on borrowed money and the deficit's effect on interest rates.

Peavey said the farm crisis will hit hard later this year when farmers begin to go to banks seeking operating loans.

Peavey said the farm crisis will hit hard later this year when farmers begin to go to banks seeking operating loans. With banks carrying large numbers of bad loans from previous years and with crop prices expected to stay depressed, loans will be hard to come by, and the farmers who survived this year may not be able to borrow the same amount this year.

Under Senate Bill 1384, farmers would be given reduced interest rates through a joint state and federal cooperation with banks. Peavey said Friday that a new "buy-down" program in the 1986 Farm Bill, if combined with a state contribution and a 2-percent rate cut by banks, could yield farmers a 6-percent reduction in interest rates.

The federal program offers to guarantee the loans to banks if the farmer can show a projected profit at the reduced interest rates. Peavey said he will seek $3 million in state funds for a 2-year program.

Peavey said Friday that the bill will alter Evans' plan by adding four full-time employees, three of whom would be financial experts to help farmers in financial trouble. The bill would also allow the board to hire attorneys to help farmers in bankruptcy and other proceedings. Farmers in bankruptcy can fill a lot of attorneys, while the banks have plenty of attorneys representing them in court, said Peavey.

Superintendent qualifications, rejected

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — The House Education Committee voted 17-7 Friday morning in favor of a bill to do away with minimum qualifications for the state superintendent of public instruction.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Robert Forrey, R-Nampa, said Idahoans ought to be able to choose whomever they wish to run the state's public school system, regardless of their credentials.

Opponents said the job requires a specialized training and "should be held" by a professional educator.

Forrey said he trusts the voters to choose the best-qualified candidate. "A trained administrator would win over a person who can read or write... a crumbum would not end up in office."

Statutory requirements that candidates for the job have college diplomas, administrative certificates, and work in the school system, are unconstitutional and exclude many people for running for the job of chief educator for the state, Forrey said. Vowing to fight the bill on the House floor, Rep. Steve Herndon, D-Sandpoint, voted with the Republican majority to move the bill out of committee.

"I'm going to get it to the floor to see how these people vote. A lot of people are going to go to the polls this fall," he said.

Rep. Dieter Bayer, R-Boise, said that if the superintendent needs a set of qualifications, then the governor, state treasurer, and other elected officers should too.

"I think we need to show a little more respect for the electorate," Bayer said.

"We have to rely on the people of the state of Idaho; they have more wisdom than what I would call an intellectual elite," he said.

Idaho Association of School Administrators representative Joe Whitten told the committee that education is very technical and that by requiring the state superintendent to be a professional educator, state law guarantees a quality education for Idahoans.

"That outweighs the right to vote for anyone we want to," said Whitten.

Post Falls School Superintendent Anne Fox told the committee the state superintendent must set a leadership role, must be an effective public speaker, and must have taught in order to know "what learning is all about."

With one third of the state's local district superintendents leaving every year, she said, an experienced and knowledgeable state leader is necessary.

"If school districts get wrong advice, it could cost the state in attorneys' fees," she said.

Forrey said the job is an executive position and a good manager will delegate out detail work.

Rep. John Sessions, R-Driggs, said an unqualified candidate who was likable and had a great deal of money could be elected, only to serve as a figurehead. The cost of hiring underlings to do his job would be expensive, Sessions said.

"Do we fear letting the people make a choice? There's risk in freedom," Forrey said in response to Sessions.

Aryan chief convicted in murder plot

BOISE (AP) — White supremacist Elden "Bud" Cutler was convicted by an all-white federal jury Friday in the plot to contract for the decapitation murder of a key witness against the violent neo-Nazi group known as The Order.

The verdict against the security chief for the Aryan Nations, which spawned The Order, was returned by the 10-woman, two-man jury after about 12 hours of deliberation over two days. Jurors heard nearly three days of testimony before U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan.

Cutler, 60, was convicted of paying $2,000 to an undercover FBI agent posing as an assassin to decapitate government informant Thomas Martinez, considered a traitor to The Order.

Ryan ordered a pre-sentence investigation and scheduled sentencing for March 21. Cutler could receive a maximum of 30 years in prison and a $500,000 fine for the four counts of tampering with, and retaliating against, a federal witness and using interstate commerce and the United States mail in murder-for-hire.

Jury foreman David Kohtz, 39, a Jerome farmer, said jurors took as long as they did to reach a decision because they had to review hours of videotape that made up the heart of the government's case against Cutler.

"We tried to figure out whether he was a member of The Order, but it wasn't the issue," he said.

"He's a farmer, a logger, a grandfather," court-appointed defense attorney David Nevin said after hearing the verdict. "He did some things here that weren't very smart and the jury now says are illegal... but he is not a vicious man."

Nevin said he was disappointed but not particularly surprised by the outcome. He said he did not know whether the case would be appealed.

Soviet dissident must stay

PARIS (AP) — A French newspaper Friday quoted Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev as saying dissident scientist Andrei Sakharov cannot leave the Soviet Union because he knows secrets that could harm the country.

That has long been the official Soviet line, but the interview published in the Communist Party newspaper L'Humanite was the first time a Soviet leader has publicly made such remarks about Sakharov.

Gorbachev was quoted as saying that Sakharov, under internal exile in the closed city of Gorky, "is still considered in the possession of state secrets of particular importance (and) cannot, for this reason, leave the U.S.S.R."

Gorbachev told L'Humanite that the Soviet Union wants to withdraw its troops from Afghanistan, but "There are external forces in that conflict... which are interested in continuing and expanding it. These are Pakistan and the U.S.A."

Khadafy orders retaliation

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Col. Moammar Khadafy announced on Friday that he has ordered Libyan warplanes to intercept Israeli airliners over the Mediterranean and force them to land at a Libyan base to be searched for "Zionist terrorists."

The Libyan leader told a news conference he issued the orders to retaliate for Israel's interception of a Libyan executive jet Tuesday in an attempt to seize Palestinian guerrillas.

Coinciding with Khadafy's announcement, two U.S. aircraft carriers and supporting warships headed south from Italian ports toward an area of the Mediterranean just north of the Libyan coast.

Khadafy told reporters the Libyan air force attempt to capture Israeli airliners would not be stopped by U.S. 6th Fleet warships or carrier-based planes. "If the Americans commit aggression against our planes we will attack them," he said.

Black-president idea blasted

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — President P.W. Botha on Friday rebuked his foreign minister for suggesting that a black man might someday be president of South Africa, a rare public split in the ruling National Party.

After announcing to the white chamber of Parliament that he was lifting the state of emergency in seven of 30 districts, Botha defended hard-line comments by one Cabinet member and then denounced remarks a day earlier by Foreign Minister R.F. Botha.

Following the president's address, the veteran leader of the opposition Progressive Federal Party, Frederik van Zyl Slabbert, announced he was quitting Parliament in frustration over the lack of concrete race reforms.

Crowd causes wall to fall

TRICHUR, India (AP) — A crowd of people hoping for a glimpse of Pope John Paul II surged into a metal wall Friday and it collapsed, killing one person and injuring 18, police and witnesses said.

They said the stampede occurred in a side street about 100 yards off the pontiff's motorcade route just as his helicopter was landing about a mile away after a flight from Cochín, a Roman Catholic stronghold in southern Kerala state.

John Paul passed the area about 15 minutes later in the motorcade, which took him to a prayer meeting attended by about 300,000 people.

At the service, the pope dedicated a housing project for the poor and donated $20,000 to it. He blessed the marriages of 131 couples who had taken their vows in a mass wedding ceremony earlier Friday.

Kennedy shown on Soviet TV

MOSCOW (AP) — In a surprise move by the Kremlin leadership Sen. Edward M. Kennedy was allowed to appear on Soviet television Friday night. He urged a compromise to achieve nuclear disarmament, saying, "Together we will make history or together we will end it."

Kennedy, who discussed arms control with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Thursday, said he believed Gorbachev is ready to negotiate a real reduction in nuclear weapons and he knew that President Reagan is prepared to do the same.

Kennedy left Moscow before his remarks were broadcast. He boarded a flight to London for an overnight stay on route back to Washington.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Jaroslav Verner said the senator had asked that the text of his speech not be made available to the press.

Earlier Friday, Kennedy met briefly with a group of Soviet citizens trying to join their American spouses and told them he raised their cases with Soviet officials.

Soviet fishermen escape drowning

MOSCOW (AP) — Rescuers using helicopters, ropes and makeshift bridges — saved — thousands — of fishermen caught on a vast expanse of ice that suddenly broke loose from shore, a Soviet newspaper reported Friday.

Komsomolskaya Pravda, the newspaper of the Communist Party youth league, said no one was killed or injured in the incident, which occurred last Saturday on the shore of Sakhalin Island off Siberia.

About 10,000 people were fishing through the ice over an area of several square miles when a fissure several yards wide developed.

Labor-force dip pushes up employment rate

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

National figures — B4

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley unemployment rate plummeted to a full percentage point in January, repeating a pattern of previous years.

With the labor force shrinking, the seasonally adjusted rate for Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding counties dropped to 5.2 percent, the Idaho Department of Employment reported.

A smaller labor force statewide also helped to push the Idaho jobs rate down slightly to 6.2 percent. But the rate did not translate to 396,100 — almost 17,000 below December's robust count of 413,000 workers, the department announced.

Magic Valley's unemployment rate has taken a dive in January during each of the past 4 years, said state labor force analyst Lon McDonald, who is based at Twin Falls.

The drop occurred because of a large seasonal adjustment for normal labor changes at this time of the year, he said.

Generally, analysts expect many more people to be out of work in January than in December. The lower unemployment rate and the return of some workers at Potlatch Corp. factories in the northern part of the state were important influences during January, he said. Potlatch workers late last year agreed to wage concessions to reopen the company's mills and regain their jobs.

However, job losses in other areas more than offset the Potlatch gains.

"Several of the food processing plants were temporarily shut down or working with reduced crews. Mining activity and student employment around the state was also down," McDonald said.

The result was the lowest employment level in the past year, 15,000 people below December. Most of those disappeared from the state's unemployment statistics showed 26,000 people without jobs during January.

Major declines in unemployment rates also were reported in most parts of Idaho, with Pocatello reporting the only rise. The January jobs rate and the change from December are shown for each region:

- Idaho — 6.2 percent, down .1 percent
- Magic Valley — 5.2 percent, down 1 percent
- Pocatello — 7.3 percent, up .4 percent
- Idaho Falls — 3.9 percent, down .1 percent
- Ada County (Boise) — 4 percent, down .4 percent
- Canyon County — no report
- Lewiston — 6.3 percent, down 1 percent
- Panhandle-Coeur d'Alene — 7.6 percent, down .5 percent

CSI suit spurs bill on rights to water

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — The College of Southern Idaho's lawsuit against the Idaho Department of Water Resources over dropping pressure and temperature in its geothermal wells has spurred a pair of proposed changes in Idaho water law.

And although the bill's sponsor says the changes would have little effect on CSI's suit, future suits over geothermal water rights could be affected.

CSI has sued the state because it says the state has failed to protect its prior right to a certain amount of hot water and the artemesian pressure driving it up from underground.

Other wells tapped into the same hot water reservoir underground have had pressure from CSI's system.

The state has argued that CSI's water right does not entitle it to be entitled to a guaranteed amount of artemesian flow and the accompanying reduction in pumping costs.

The Senate Resources and Environment Committee Friday rejected one of the Department of Water Resources' proposals and selected to allow further consideration of the other.

Headed for further discussion in the committee is a proposal that would make non-irrigation uses of water like CSI's subject to groundwater use rules, rather than geothermal rules.

Under the proposed bill, the department would have to consider the value of the warm water and artemesian flow in attaching an expectation of pumping costs to the hot water right.

Water Resources Administration spokeswoman Young said Friday that if the proposed bill passes, it would allow the department to set reasonable amounts of pumping a water right holder could expect.

"The water level you extract from geothermal wells is not entitled to a historical level," said Young.

The second section of the proposed bill makes it clear that groundwater rules would apply in the use of warm or hot groundwater from underground reservoirs, he said.

The committee snubbed a proposed bill to stiffen penalties for not controlling an artemesian well or for wasting the water from a well. One such well near Twin Falls bled pressure from CSI's system last year and authorities had a hard time shutting it down.

"The idea was to get some enforcement tools to get some effective enforcement on geothermal wells," Young said.

Wells tapping and sending water sideways underground or simply flowing across the ground are a waste of a public resource, he said.

"Another water bill" axed by the committee Friday, but having nothing to do with the CSI suit, would have permitted the DWR to work with water users to develop new water-use plans in critical groundwater areas, such as those around Mullanburg and Sandburg hot springs.

"In areas where aquifers are in trouble, it would have allowed the director to tailor use to the public interest," said Young.

Some state Sen. Laird Nor. B. Kimberly said the bill would have allowed a plan to ignore the "first in time, first in right" doctrine that governs water rights.

Doctors give ninth-graders medical-career prognosis

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Compassion, good grades and a lot of money are the key ingredients to majoring in medicine, a group of three physicians told O'Leary Junior High students Friday.

"The patient is primary. You need to have a lot of compassion to be a physician," said Dr. Harry Brumbach, a Twin Falls physician and surgeon. "Medicine is also an art. Science is involved, of course, but there's also a lot of art involved in helping people."

Brumbach was among a group of Twin Falls medical specialists who participated in O'Leary's first career day, for its 425 ninth-grade students.

Dr. Paul Miles, a Twin Falls pediatrician who grew up in Wendell, told students that if they are serious about a medical career, they need to be serious about school — beginning with high school.

"You have to do well in high school to get into a good college," said Miles, who chose medicine because of his best friend's father. "And the biggest hurdle is getting into medical school."

Dr. David McClusky, a Twin Falls physician and surgeon who was raised in Twin Falls, warned students they need to "plan ahead" if they're serious about medicine because of the tremendous cost involved.

"For some schools, tuition is now $22,000 a year," McClusky said. "It's very expensive. You can get loans, but that's becoming more and more difficult."

McClusky encouraged students to consider entering the service — an option which he chose — and use the G.I. bill to help pay for medical school.

Also participating in Friday's Career Day were Claudine Buetner, a nurse and acting chair of the nursing program at the College of Southern Idaho; Greg Heller and Chris Roberts, advanced emergency medical technicians; Dr. Hyward Ronk, a veterinarian; Rebecca Villiers, a physical therapist; and Chris Pepper, a medical technologist.

"This has helped a lot," said student Leena Watkins after a session on physical therapy. "I was interested in being a veterinarian. But my dad was a burn victim, so I might consider physical therapy. Either way, you have to care a lot."

Leroy pushes support bill for farm loans

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — While meeting and shaking hands with customers at the Lincoln Inn in Gooding Friday, gubernatorial candidate Lt. Gov. David Leroy was asked, "What are you going to do for farmers?"

A few minutes later, in a speech to the Gooding Rotary Club, Leroy gave his answer: He is introducing new legislation to encourage investment in Idaho farms and ranches.

A simple adjustment in Idaho tax laws, explained Leroy, can help to encourage commercial banks and private lenders to make a greater investment in agricultural operations loans for agriculture in the next year.

Leroy said his bill would make the interest on agricultural operating loans free of state taxes for the next five years. As a result, he said, investment in an Idaho agricultural operating loan will be equally attractive to investors as bonds from New York, federal government tax-free securities and other popular investments.

An emergency clause would put the bill into effect immediately. The bill also contains a limitation to make the interest-free provision apply only to the first $300,000 of an operating capital loan to any particular operator.

Business relations between farmers and bankers have been strained, Leroy said, with farmer's equity being worth less than what is written on paper and bankers unable to look at a loan that may create a loss.

Leroy said his bill will encourage lenders to make a greater number of "useful and productive" operating loans. This "simple adjustment," he said, will help ease that strained relationship and rebuild confidence between farmers and bankers or other investors.

Leroy said he was surprised to find the tax impact of his proposed bill will be minimal, according to state Tax Commission figures. The 21 income taxes Idaho paid only $71,588 in income taxes last year, Leroy said.

"It's tough for the bankers; it's tough for the farmers," he said.

Leroy also reported that Idaho farmers produce about $2.3 billion worth of commodities each year. Idaho banks, he noted, have about $93 million worth of agricultural loans.

He said the proposed bill will not create a loss of state revenues but, rather, will shift investments into Idaho and add "significant gains from operating farms."

Leroy also advocated that the repayment time of agricultural loans be extended more leniently by bankers. This, he explained, would allow farmers some leeway in waiting for better farm commodity prices.

Another way to help farmers is to increase foreign trade through the Agricultural Trade Forum, Leroy said.

Dozens of trade teams from foreign markets come to Idaho every year, he said, and they can deal directly with the farmers. The trade forum, made up of commodity commissions, chamber of commerce, university research services and others with an expertise in products to be sold, promotes this foreign trade.

The foreign trade teams, Leroy said, can easily see what products are available and, while they are here, can deal directly with the trade.

Lawyer says Piler has chance in suit

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Gary Piler, former superintendent of Twin Falls Schools, has picked up support from an unexpected source in his $1.75 million lawsuit against the School District.

A lawyer who represents the trustee appointed over Piler's estate in his bankruptcy proceeding believes strongly that Piler has a winnable case against the Twin Falls School District. That suit is of special interest to creditors because the lawyer does not believe any money received from the district would go to pay of Piler's debts.

Jim Pappas, a Pocatello attorney representing L.D. Fitzgerald filing suit in Thursday that Piler was "evidently wronged" by the School District and the suit "should be pursued." And Pappas said Fitzgerald has joined Piler's suit as a friend of the court.

Piler is suing the School District for alleged violations of his constitutional right to due process when a board fired him in August 1984. A trial date was set for July 28, 1986. But the case ground to a halt in January until the question of whether or not the trustee owned part of Piler's lawsuit against the district was resolved.

Pappas, during a phone interview, said there was "little doubt" that if Piler wins his lawsuit, the trustee would own part of his claim, and that money in turn would pay off creditors.

Piler and his wife Susan filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy in November, listing more than $46,000 of debts in unsecured loans.

Pappas said a plan to pay creditors from any money Piler receives from the district has yet to be worked out.

Piler's lawyer, James Meservy, said Thursday that he has entered an agreement with Fitzgerald to act as a friend of the court.

Trucking firm terminates state freight operations

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Salt Lake City-based trucking company has shut its four Idaho terminals and 16 others after seeking protection from creditors in bankruptcy court late last week.

Maxway, which serves 16,000 customers in five Intermountain states, halted operations in the Magic Valley on Monday, said Twin Falls Terminal Manager Dennis Irish.

The company filed for reorganization at U.S. Bankruptcy Court on Jan. 31. Kevin Maxfield, secretary of the corporation, confirmed Friday.

"We have cut back on freight operations in Idaho, obviously, trying to figure out how to carry general freight statewide, according to state regulators."

Maxfield said the company plans to reopen Idaho, but he did not yet know when. Company executives Friday were still trying to figure out finances leading to a new plan of operation, he said.

"We're right at the point of putting some figures together (for court filings)," he said.

From its headquarters in Salt Lake City, Maxway runs a fleet of 150 trucks on 20 terminals in Idaho, Utah, Nevada, Montana and Wyoming. The hauler moved into Idaho in fall of 1983 and is licensed to carry general freight statewide, according to state regulators.

Maxfield said the company's expansions had caused its financial problems. "We expanded too fast and we outgrew ourselves," he said.

Filing for reorganization prevents creditors from taking immediate action to collect bills. They instead must submit claims to a bankruptcy court.

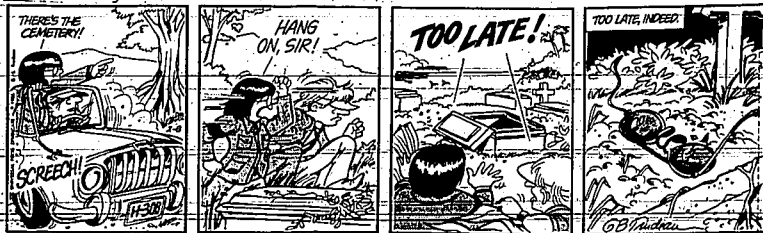

Among the creditors are the firms of Twin Falls employees who are owed 30 days of back pay, and COD shippers throughout the state.

Irish said the Twin Falls terminal serves 1,000 customers in the Magic Valley with its 11 trucks. The office employed 20 drivers, dispatchers and supervisors, when it closed, he said. Eight others had recently been laid off.

Irish said the regional company is organized to deliver general freight to destinations in the five states within 24 hours.

Defense firm gets clean slate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Dynamics Corp. has regained the right to obtain military contracts and, in an unusual agreement, was assured the Defense Department will not impose any further contract suspensions for past misconduct, a top Navy official said Friday.

The unprecedented agreement is based on the extent of management improvements made over the past year by General Dynamics and the company's agreement to set aside a $50 million escrow account to cover potential liabilities resulting from its recent fraud indictment and other on-going investigations, said Everett Pyatt, the assistant Navy secretary for shipbuilding and logistics.

Pyatt disclosed that General Dynamics is facing at least three federal grand jury investigations and "10 to 15" separate Defense Department probes.

Third skeleton, bullets found

STRATTON, Colo. (AP) — Workers unearthed a third human skeleton and two bullets Friday at a ranch whose former owner is charged with murdering a truck driver, and investigators said they expect to find up to six more bodies.

"Seven, eight or nine" bodies are expected to be found on the 2,880-acre spread 20 miles from the Kansas border, where two bodies were found earlier this week, said Kit Carson County Sheriff Sharon Heinz.

The ranch was once owned by Thomas McCormick, 52, who is in the Jefferson County Jail, charged with murdering a trucker who disappeared from a truck stop in 1983. The trucker's body was excavated last week from a field 100 miles west of Stratton after authorities were led there by McCormick's son, Michael.

Authorities were led there by McCormick's son, Michael. County Coroner Bob Hendricks said the two skeletons found earlier were the remains of men more than 25 years old. He said the death of one of the two men was "not accidental." Two bullets were found buried near the head of the skeleton found Friday.

ABA to fight gun-law change

BALTIMORE (AP) — The president of the American Bar Association said Friday that pending legislation in Congress to ease a 1968 gun control law is "a reprehensible move... that will undermine the rule of law in this country."

William W. Falsgraf, speaking to reporters at his organization's national convention, said the ABA's Board of Governors voted Friday to fight the bill.

"It is irresponsible legislation and should be defeated," Falsgraf said.

Contending that the proposed law would weaken federal efforts to control handgun sales, he added: "Virtually every major police law enforcement organization in this country opposes the bill."

The bill, already approved by the Senate and pending in the House, would ease restrictions on interstate gun sales.

U.S. will give 'mole' in spy deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government is planning to trade an alleged Czech spy, one of only two "moles" ever found inside the CIA, in an impending multi-nation prisoner-swap with the Soviet Union, administration sources said Friday.

The administration sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the anticipated swap will include Karl F. Koehler, 52, and his wife, Hana, 42. The swap is anticipated early next week.

The sources said Koehler recently pleaded guilty or no contest to espionage charges at a secret proceeding in federal court in New York City. He was sentenced to time served since his arrest Nov. 27, 1984, on condition that he is successfully swapped for Sheharansky, the sources said.

The one count of conspiracy to commit espionage, on which he was indicted, carried a top penalty of life in prison.

This is the third time in less than a year that the United States has swapped accused or convicted foreign spies back to foreign countries.

John L. Martin, head of the Justice Department's internal security section, has said that increased use of spy swaps has led U.S. intelligence agencies to cooperate more with the FBI in the recent, sharply increased prosecution of foreign spies here. The theory is that the swaps prove that if foreign nations retaliate against U.S. spies, the accused will not have to languish in brutal foreign prisons.

Koehler worked as a contract translator and consultant to the CIA from February 1973 to August 1975. The government has said in court papers that he was trained by the Czech intelligence service from 1963 to 1965 and sent here in 1965.

Statue of Liberty committee passes fund goal, needs more

NEW YORK (AP) — The committee raising funds to restore the Statue of Liberty has raised $230 million, surpassing its goal of $220 million, but the project is going to cost more than estimated, officials said Friday. "We have exceeded our original of $225 million to complete the project raising funds to restore the $230 million goal, and work on the job," said Leo A. Jacocca, chairman of the Statue of Liberty Committee of the Chrysler Corp. and chairman of the City of New York. The project is going to cost more than estimated, officials said Friday. Bail to be set for Hofmann

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A judge on Friday decided to set bond for a Mormon documents dealer charged with first-degree murder in twin bombings last October that killed two people, a defense attorney said.

Mark W. Hofmann was to appear later in the day before 5th Circuit Judge Paul Grant, who scheduled arguments from attorneys before deciding on the amount of the bond and on a date for a preliminary hearing.

Ronald Yengle, Hofmann's attorney, said the judge told him he had decided to allow bond in the case. Such rulings are rare in capital murder cases.

Hofmann, 31, still on crutches from injuries suffered when a third bomb went off in his car Oct. 16, was charged Tuesday with two counts of first-degree murder and 26 other charges, including fraud.

House overrides Evans' vetoes

BOISE (AP) — It's clear now what the Idaho Legislature will do with at least part of its $27.1 million deficit in state budget. It remains less clear how the lawmakers plan to come up with the rest of the answer although indications Friday pointed toward a temporary 1-cent increase in the state sales tax through July 1. The House on Friday worked its way through 11 line-item vetoes signed by Gov. John Evans — a day earlier. The governor was attempting to stave off about $1.5 million of the $7.6 million in state agency spending reductions ordered by the Legislature as part of the effort to deal with the deficit.

In each of the 11 separate votes, a few Republicans sided with all 17 House Democrats in an effort to sustain the vetoes, and restore some of the budget money. But by margins ranging from two to seven votes, the House overrode all of the vetoes. The Senate took similar action on Thursday. Meanwhile, House GOP Caucus Chairman Rep. Linden Batesuan, R-Idaho Falls, said Friday it appears the 67 Republicans in the House are nearing agreement on a temporary increase in the sales tax, but aren't there yet.

Parole board meeting bill OK'd

BOISE (AP) — Legislation to end the open meetings controversy that has halted operations of the State Commission on Pardons and Parole has passed the Idaho Senate. After undergoing amendments twice in the past two weeks, the bill was finally approved on a 35-2 vote Friday and forwarded to the House.

The bill, pushed by the commission and Gov. John Evans, was prompted by an attorney general's opinion last month that effectively declared illegal the previously secret hearings, deliberations and decisions by the five-member board. In response, all five board members threatened to resign and immediately halted any future meetings until getting some kind of legislative reprieve from the requirements of the so-called "Sunshine Law."

AT&T withdraws rate request

BOISE (AP) — AT&T Communications, which in October asked for a $3-million rate increase on Friday withdrew the request, saying it wanted to study the impact on its rate structure of recent Public Utilities Commission decisions.

AT&T Communications asked for additional revenue in October, asking for "changes in rates and time-of-day discounts." The company also proposed a new optional calling plan discounting rates on calls under 55 miles and handled by AT&T. Later Friday, the commission announced it was canceling a March 27 hearing on the rate request.

Roark Nagler, manager for regulatory relations, said AT&T Communications wants to study the impact of a PUC ruling on access charge allocations and other matters.

No change seen for economy

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho economy will continue to grow slowly during 1986, with increases in income, employment and sales predicted to be about the same as last year or lower, a First Security Corp. economist is predicting.

"Business conditions in Idaho in 1986 will not be significantly different than last year," Kelly K. Matthews, economist and senior vice president, told those attending the company's annual economic symposium in Boise Thursday. "Unfortunately, areas of financial pain persist, with depreciated real estate values a primary source of discomfort."

He said total personal income in Idaho during 1986 would increase 5 to 5.5 percent — little change from the 4.75 percent increase last year and a significant slowdown from the 8.3 percent gain in 1985.

Day care bill up for Senate amendment

BOISE (AP) — A Senate committee has sent a controversial day-care licensing bill to the floor — but it will be for amendment.

And at least one senator who voted for that action on Friday, Sen. Ann Rydalen, R-Idaho Falls, said it was her intention to amend the bill to strike the enacting clause, which would in effect kill the legislation.

The bill sent out of the Senate Health and Welfare Committee on Friday by a 6-4 vote gives the state Department of Health and Welfare authority to come up with statewide regulations for the centers which care for children. It's the latest bill in an effort of several years to end Idaho's position as the only state with no statewide day-care licensing regulations. The first vote in the committee, to send the bill to the Senate floor for a vote with a "do-pass" endorsement, ended on a 5-4 vote. Voting against the bill to the floor were Republicans Mrs. Rydalen, Mike Crapo, Denton Darrington, Lee Staker and Larry Anderson.

Anderson voted with Rep. Darrell McRoberts, R-Twin Falls, and Democrats John Pavey, Marjorie Calabretta and Ralph Lacey to defeat a motion to table the bill, which essentially is a killing motion. Some witnesses urged the committee in testimony to retain that distinction, claiming it should be up to parents to determine whether day care centers are safe.

The bill "was prepared by a statewide task force on day-care licensing. Some of the senators who voted to put the bill up for amendment said some of the provisions need clarification. Pastor Ted Buck, Central Assembly Church, Boise, criticized the bill on other grounds. Buck said as written, the measure could cover churches, such as his, which care for children during Sunday School and other church-sponsored activities. Some exemptions are written into the bill, he said, but churches are not specifically exempt.

Buck said his church buses in "several hundred" children per week, and could be regulated under the Senate bill. "That is not what was intended. We are very concerned about that," he said.

Committee adjourns due to budget conflict

BOISE (AP) — The Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee was forced to abruptly adjourn Friday when Democrats, disgruntled over the Republican override of Gov. John Evans' spending-cut vetoes, tried to force a vote on one of the programs targeted for elimination because of the cuts.

The short-lived confrontation was the first in what could be a string of semi-shutdowns between minority Democrats and majority Republicans since the GOP's entire $7.6 million package of 1986 spending cuts was put into effect over Evans' partial objections.

The Democrats tried to force Republican members of the budget-writing panel to take a stand on emergency aid needed to continue the program in the wake of not only state spending cuts but even greater federal budget cuts.

State Health and Welfare Director Rose Bowman announced earlier that if the state and federal cuts materialize, she will accommodate them by simply terminating state contracts with the 14 workshops on March 31. Those workshops serve about 500 developmentally disabled Idahoans.

Evans, who originally ordered some spending curtailment in that program, vetoed all reductions for it on Thursday but his objections were ignored by the Republican majority in the Legislature.

"It seems to me that the judgment the Department of Health and Welfare has made is not the best long-range policy decision," Rep. Pam Benson, R-Boise, told the legislative budget writers in an unscheduled appearance to make a pitch for money to keep the sheltered workshop program going.

Eagles plunder Vikings

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Chris Blocker was nearly incomparable, Greg Boyd was unconscious, CSI was generally uncontainable and the Golden Eagles made good on their first Region 18 home showing of the season Friday night by whipping Ricks College Vikings 112-79.

The victory pulled CSI even with Ricks in the race for the northern division title as the teams square off at 8 p.m. again today to settle the "sole possession" question.

Statistically it was all CSI as the Eagles, battling a Jeff Schofield-Joe Terstegen inspired first 10 minutes, led by four to six points over the first 10 minutes. Then in a four-minute burst it was all over.

They were hanging from the rafter inside and a lot of people simply walked away when they saw the ticket lines. The CSI gymnasium was more than 65 percent full by the end of halftime of the women's game.

say we were too quick and too deep for them but we know we'll see a different Ricks team tomorrow night and it was would expect a lot to anticipate that we could duplicate that first-half shooting."

The Eagles, who had lost 2.7 points off their national offensive-leading average and failed to score more than 92 points the last three times out, got to the crowd-pleasing 100 mark when Jeff Rikeweg hit a long shot out of the corner with 3:35 to play.

Snarling hits chord in CSI women's team

CSI was leading 26-22 when it started and it quickly went to 35-22 when Eric Newman, Boyd and Blocker all came up with points. After Ricks interrupted briefly with a free throw, CSI took off again to push it to 42 and the contest was effectively over.

The Eagles got their transition game going and were devastating. The crowd oohed over the 10-12 field goal shooting of Boyd in the first half but Blocker was 6-10 and came up with a half-dozen assists—with Newman being the chief beneficiary.

In the second half the Eagles threatened the 40-point advantage a couple of times but never quite reached it.

"We're not letting this get us over-confident," said Coach Fred Trenkle after the victory. "We know that Ricks is a better ball team than we saw tonight and the way we shot and played, it just wasn't a good game to compare the two teams. Ricks played hard. Their players worked hard. I thought we were just a little too quick for them and our depth with just about the same amount of quickness was more than they expected tonight."

"Early we gave them too many offensive rebounds and that kept them in the game until we had the breakthrough. Boyd was out of his guard and so was Chris. Tonight I

"I snarled a little bit at them this week," said Coach Lloyd Hardesty of the practices that have occurred since his CSI women turned in two feeble performances in losing a pair at North Idaho last weekend.

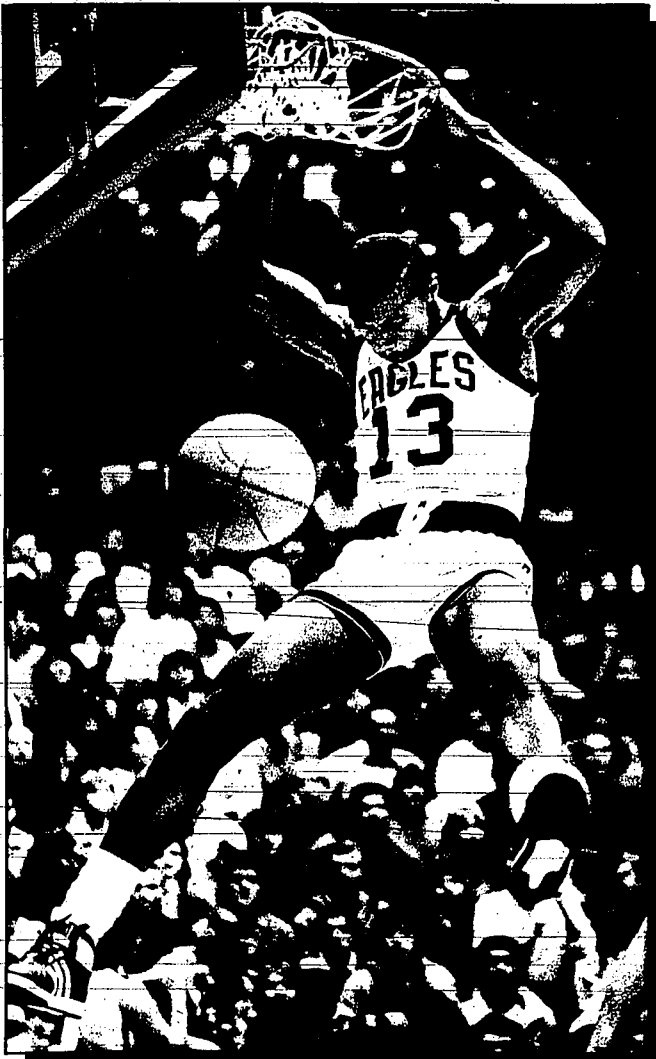

Friday night, the CSI girls did some snarling of their own, coming up with their strongest overall performance of the season to trip the Ricks women 66-57 and keep their hopes for a regional tournament berth burning.

Although trailing through most of the first half, the Eagles put together a 22-6 burst to open the second half, opening up a 52-36 lead and then fight off the rallying Vikings.

Ricks cut back to within five points at 60-55 when CSI hit a five-minute scoring slump. But the Eagles finished with a flurry.

The victory was built on the best performance sophomore Michelle Skyles has played this season. She kept her ball handling under control and her quickness negated Ricks' pressure. She also added 16 points and spearheaded a sticky CSI defense.

Wolves' hides are Indians' property

RON FOLKINGA
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone Indians cemented their No. 1 ranking in the Associated Press Class A-4 prep poll last Friday night as they romped past the fourth-ranked Castleford 72-48 for their eighth straight Magic Valley Conference boys' basketball win.

Neither team was especially sharp as both sides turned the ball over a ninth of times but Castleford shot 23 percent from the floor, giving Shoshone all the "advantage" they would need for the game.

The Indians jumped out, going ahead 8-0 before Gary Reynolds put the Wolves on the scoreboard. Reynolds scored six points in the first quarter as Shoshone led 13-10.

Castleford's ingman Heinrich hit a bucket early in the second period to tie the score. At 12, Shoshone's Tim Rowan quickly untied it with a three-point bomb and Castleford would never again get closer than three. With the score 20-17, the Castleford bench was hit with a technical foul. Wade Cooper hit both free throws, George Shlmer followed with another free throw and Kelly Duffin hit a bucket to push the lead to eight points. Shoshone went to the locker room ahead 29-21.

Shoshone went ahead by 10 in the third period before John Lott and Heinrich hit baskets to bring the Wolves back to within six at 31-25. The Indians then reeled off 10 unanswered points to take a commanding 16-point lead. Shoshone stretched it to 47-29 at the end of three periods.

Castleford's Rodney Sample hit a four-point and four free throws to pull the Wolves to within 12, but it was too little too late as Shoshone responded with six unanswered points of its own to end the Castleford threat.

Both coaches emptied their benches in the latter half of the final quarter as Shoshone completed the rout.

Duffin led all scorers with 17 points and Rowan and Cooper chipped in with 11 and 10 respectively for Shoshone.

Vandals take OT victory from ISU

By TIM KEOWN
Special to The Times-News

MOSCOW — The Idaho Vandals doubled their Big-Sky Conference victory output of a year ago — from one to two — with a 73-66 overtime win over the Idaho State Bengals Friday night.

Like every other Vandal effort of the year, the win didn't come easily. Guard Chris Carey's clutch three-pointer with 13 seconds remaining in regulation time tied the score at 59 and capped a Vandal comeback that saw them overcome a 10-point deficit in the last 4:28 of regulation.

In the overtime, Carey's backcourt mate, Kenny Luckett, gave the Vandals a lead they would never relinquish — by canning a three-pointer on Idaho's first possession. The 62-59 lead was the Vandals' first since 1:12 remaining in the first half.

"We got a little break tonight, for a change," Vandal coach Bill Trumbull said, "There was a little luck on our side."

Up until the 4:28, it was the Bengals who had all the luck. The score was tied at 35-35 at the end of the first half, a brisk and well-played first half that saw hot shooting on both sides.

The Vandals shot 67 percent from the field in the half, but turned the ball over 10 times. The Bengals, led by the shooting of forward of Doni Holston, finished the half shooting at 59 percent.

ISU's Tom Stalick (33) tries to slip through the fence of Idaho's Tom Stalick (13) and Ken Luckett (20)

In contrast to the first 20 minutes, the second half resembled a high school pickup game. The Vandals' hot shooting turned cold as they scored only 12 points in the first 13:37 of the second half to allow the Bengals build an seemingly unmountable 55-45 lead. The Bengal run was sparked by two of the 6-foot-5 Holston's three-pointers and the tough inside play of 6-foot-6 forward Steve Garrity.

The Vandals then turned to Carey and Luckett, who had been held in check by the Bengal defense throughout the night.

'Cats gun down Bruins, 81-67

By The Times-News

REBORN! Twin Falls hit its third consecutive game against Madison's Bobcats needed Friday night as they rolled to an 81-67 Gem State Conference boys' basketball decision over the Bruins.

In a mix of give-and-take, the Bruins held a 24-23 advantage on the missed shot. The Bruins missed a slam dunk attempt, gave up a foul and then failed to get back as Madison rapped in for an uncontested fastbreak crumple.

Thereafter, the Bobcats' outside and medium range shooting—augmented by more transition play—was enough to protect the lead. Gary Lamph personally took control of the contest after a 15-14 halftime. He hit 15 points in almost flawless shooting performance.

The Bruins failed to give up the chase, even after falling behind by 16 in the third quarter. The inside duo of 6-foot-0 Dave Fulton, with 22 points, and 6-10 Pat Clark, with 20 points, pulled Twin Falls back to within contention on three occasions, the last time chipping the deficit to eight with just over three minutes left. But a turnover took Twin Falls out of a chance to put more pressure on and Madison replied with another Lamph field goal that tied things.

"I can't pull my finger exactly where we lost," said Coach John Astorquia. "Even with three minutes left I felt we were going to pull it out. The six-point lapse in the second quarter hurt, our free throw shooting again was a major factor but I felt everything like a weird night with inexplicable things happening all the time. I can't fault the kids, they played hard all night."

Twin Falls dropped to 6-10 on the year and 4-9 in the Gem State Conference while Madison improved to 9-7 and 7-5. The teams split the season series.

Rigby 69
Burley 61

RIGBY — Rigby broke Burley's eight-game winning streak here Friday with a 69-61 Cross State Conference boys' basketball victory.

Tricked by a burst of Justin Canna-mack's five three-point goals, the Trojans burst to an 18-8 first quarter lead and never let the Bobcats closer than five points again.

Cannamack opened the game with 21 points, while teammate Drew Mc-Candless had 14. Burley's Craig Mc-Tee hit 18 points, while teammate Mike Mai had 15 before fouling out in the fourth quarter.

The Indians hit 11 charities in that crucial eighth minute while in outscoring Jerome 15-9 to erase a four-point Tiger halftime margin and went four-of-seven from the field and capped that with eight of nine charity-less as the major force for the visitors.

Jerome drops out at 8-8 for the year and even to 4-1 in conference. The Tigers will entertain Twin Falls at 8 p.m. tonight.

Montana-Reno 74 Montana St. 73

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — Chris Rupp hit one of two free throws with two seconds left to lift the University of Nevada-Reno to a 74-73 Big Sky Conference basketball victory over Montana State Saturday night.

Nevada-Reno, which trailed by as many as 11 points in the second half, rallied to tie the game at 60-60 with 7:43 remaining. The game was tied three more times, the last at 73-73 with 59 seconds remaining.

Nevada State got a shot at the basket with just a few seconds remaining but missed a shot and fouled going for the rebound to send Rupp to the line.

Montana-Reno 74 Montana St. 73

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Senior forward Larry Krystkowiak scored 25 points and grabbed 10 rebounds as Montana held on to edge Northern Arizona 73-71 Friday night and tie the lumberjacks for the lead in the Big Sky Conference basketball race.

The win, the Grizzlies' 23rd straight at home, improved their record to 11-1 overall, with a 10-6 overall. Northern Arizona also is 6-2 in the conference and 16-5 for the season.

Montana, which led 34-31 at halftime, started the second half with 11 straight points for a 24-point lead, 45-21, with 16:30 left.

But then the lumberjacks began to slowly fight back.

With the Grizzlies up 72-55 with just under 17 minutes left, the lumberjacks, taking advantage of several Montana turnovers, scored 14 straight points to come within three with 15 seconds left.

But senior forward John Boyd, who had missed the field in a 1-0-1 contest earlier, hit one of two charity tosses with 11 seconds left to seal the victory.

In the first half Krystkowiak dominated, scoring 16 points, and the Grizzlies' taking advantage normally hot-shooting lumberjacks to just 30 percent on their shots from the field.

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Nine members of the Brigham Young University football team have been suspended for allegedly drinking beer at a Florida Citrus Bowl party in Orlando, Fla., last December, school officials say.

College football

BYU spokesman Paul Richards said the Mormon-owned school also was considering an action against three other players. He would not identify any of the athletes involved in the incident.

However, a source in the BYU athletic department, who asked for anonymity, said none of the players were starters. "I think they're all redshirt-type guys," the source told the Deseret News.

"All infractions involve drinking beer at a Florida Citrus Bowl party," the first-night of the game, were the players. Richards said. "They have nothing to do with Western Athletic Conference or NCAA violations. The violations are those of BYU's Word of Wisdom code."

The code, which reflects the longstanding admission against use of alcohol for Mormons, applies to BYU students.

Six of the athletes have been placed on probation and suspended from the team through spring practice.

At 38, NHL legend Orr almost crippled

By RAY TOSCHES
Los Angeles Times

Hockey

BOSTON — It used to be a knee. It bent and absorbed shock the same way most people's knees do. But that was a long time ago. Today, the area halfway between Bobby Orr's left and right knee is not so much a knee as it is a promise.

When the weather changes in New England, it has a tendency to do it every 30 minutes or so. Orr knows it well having to glance outside.

Rain causes left signs. Snow brings a sharper pain.

It is getting worse, too. Orthopedic surgeons have told Orr that without a radical operation to replace what's left of his knee joint with an artificial one, he will snow will be the least of his problems.

In essence, doctors have told Orr that without the surgery, eventually his knee will be able to locate high-pressure systems off Baja California and give fairly accurate temperature readings for several South American cities.

Bobby Orr, one of the greatest hockey players ever, is slowly coming to the realization that the rest of his life will proceed with a limp. Orr, the flash from Perry Sound, Ontario, who redesigned the game, becoming the most potent offensive defenseman the National Hockey League has ever seen, can no longer play tennis or racquetball or squash. He is bearable on the stairs, using an electric cart, but at night of stairs causes big problems.

Orr has already been on the wrong end of a knife six times. Perhaps only William Perry's lunch has seen more stainless steel than Orr's left knee. Six times doctors have operated, removing torn cartilage and clearing out bone chips. For several months, doctors have begged him to have Operation No. 7 to remove more floating chips that turn every step, every curb, into an adventure.

"I'm having some problems with my leg," Orr said in his Boston office. "I really should go in and get it fixed again, but I'm not ready for that."

"They've located several bone chips floating around behind the knee cap, pieces that really should be cleaned out. Sometimes the knee locks up on me, seizes up, and I can't bend it at all. Some days it gets real bad."

"There are many things that I would like to be able to do, but I can't. I am very restricted. I loved to play tennis, but I can't anymore. I got out on the baseball field with my boys, but I'm sure not very fast."

"But here, the knee took a beating during my career. It carried me around for a while. I had a good time, and, well, this is how it ended up."

Orr, six weeks shy of his 38th birthday, sits behind a desk in a plush office of Pandick Press of New England, a financial printer that deals in stock certificates and other documents that must be printed and transmitted within hours to far reaches of the globe. He is the assistant to the president.

From that office, which overlooks the harbor and the weather-beaten fishing boats bobbing up and down, he also runs Bobby Orr Enterprises, marketing his name and public relations skills to such companies as Nabisco, Bay Bank of Boston and the Massachusetts lottery. He also invests heavily in real estate.

Financially, Orr is pretty much set. He has turned the money he earned from his career with the Boston Bruins and, briefly, the Chicago Blackhawks, into a thriving business.

And each day, when he walks too rapidly or turns too suddenly, he is reminded of his bruising career in the National Hockey League.

The protomoments began during a game in 1967, his second year in the NHL.

"I tried to sneak between the boards and a defenseman," Orr recalled. "I was dragging my left leg behind me as I tried to squeeze through. He pinned my leg against the boards and it twisted and tore the cartilage. It bent the way a knee doesn't bend."

"After that, it just got worse and worse. I knew what was happening to it as I got pounded night after night, and I knew the knee couldn't take too much of that hitting. But my game was carrying the puck. That's how I elected to play the game. That's the only way I knew how to play the game."

In his prime, from 1966 through 1974, Bobby Orr was the game. He led the Bruins to Stanley Cup championships in 1970 and 1972, scoring the winning goal each time. He won the Calder Memorial Trophy in 1966 as the NHL's best rookie. He won the Hart Memorial Trophy as the league's most valuable player three consecutive seasons, a record at the time. He won the Norris Memorial Trophy as the league's best defenseman a record eight straight seasons.

In 1970, he won the Art Ross Trophy as the league's scoring champion, the only defenseman ever to earn that award, with 120 points in 76 games.

In 1979, Orr became the youngest player ever to be inducted into the Hockey Hall of Fame. This season, Denis Potvin of the New York Islanders broke Orr's record of 95 points by a defenseman and last week he broke Orr's record of 87 goals by a defenseman. However, Potvin played 240 more games than Orr.

"Bobby Orr will always be the greatest player in the game," Potvin said. "My goal was to be the number one defenseman and maybe I've accomplished that, but it is a good feeling just to be compared with Bobby."

In Boston, it is known simply as the picture. It is more famous, even, than the Boston newspaper that ran in the '70s of a high-ranking state official sitting in a cozy bar with a hooker. It is also much more dramatic.

The picture shows Orr suspended in the air, 4 feet above the ice, his body fully horizontal, his mouth wide open. Also in the picture are St. Louis goalie Glenn Hall and the puck, which Orr has just rammed past Hall 40 seconds into overtime to give the Bruins the Stanley Cup in 1970.

"People remind me of that picture all the time," Orr said. "All the time, I remember it so well because I think of it as being thinking of how hard I was about to hit the ice."

But I didn't feel a thing. I was so excited. I would have been just as excited if someone else on the team had scored it. It just happened to be me."

Right. And it just happened to be Michelangelo who painted the St. Sistine Chapel and Jonas Salk who found the polio vaccine.

If you want to know a superstar athlete whose modesty was at least a match for his enormous skills, go no further than Bobby Orr.

While he was piling up his achievements in hockey, he was always trying to become a player that he never could have done any of it without Phil Esposito and Johnny McKenzie and Derek Sanderson and Teddy Green and John Bucyk and the guy who made new ice on the rink with the Zamboni machine and the guy who gave him the black tape for his stick and the really swell guy who kept his skate blades real sharp.

More than six years after his last game, the tradition continues.

"My parents still have that picture up in their house, but I don't have one," he said. "I don't keep much of that stuff around. Maybe an old sweater or two in the attic. I don't need the pictures and the trophies. I can remember all those great times. That's enough for me."

Bobby Orr retired early in the 1978 season, and a year later was honored at a Boston Garden ceremony. Orr, perhaps the most beloved athlete in a fanatical sports city, watched as his No. 4 was raised to the rafters, retired, never to be seen again.

"I'll always remember the fans," he said, speaking in a halting, emotional voice. "They stood and they cheered and it just went on and on and on. They just wouldn't stop. And then the sweater went up and it was, well, I can't describe the feeling."

"The Bruins were playing a Soviet team in an exhibition and I remember looking over at the Soviet players and they're all looking at me as if to say, 'What the hell is all this about?'"

One of the most remarkable NHL careers had come to an end, leaving in its wake a book full of records, individual and team awards and sweet memories.

And the knee.

Mize takes San Diego lead

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Larry Mize birdied his final hole for a 68 that lifted him into sole possession of the second-round lead Friday in the $450,000 Shearson Lehman Bros.-Andy Williams San Diego Open Golf Tournament.

The last-hole birdie put him one stroke in front of Danny Edwards and Bob Tway, tied at 135 at the tournament halfway point. Edwards had a 69, also on the South course, and Tway on the North.

"I got a little break in the weather," said Mize, the first man off the tee on Torrey Pines' South course.

"I got through most of the holes before the wind kicked up too much. A minute break-off before the play-off compelling a 36-hole total of 134, 10 under par.

Mize, whose only victory came in the 1983 Memphis Open, was one of six tied for the first-round lead, but solved that length with a 2-putt birdie at the 18th hole.

"A pretty solid round. I was pleased to get out of it with a 68," he said after his effort on Torrey Pines' South course, the longer and more difficult of the two layouts used for the first two rounds of this event.

Tony Sills, who scored his career-high with a second and third in his last two starts, led a large group at 136, eight under par.

Sills' 66 on the South included a multiple break-off of at least 100 feet all the way across the green," Sills said. And it marked his 14th consecutive round at par or better.

"I'm playing real solid. Everything is going good. I'm putting well, keeping the ball in play. And when I make a mistake, it's not a big mistake," Sill said.

He was tied with Masters champion Bernhard Langer of West Germany, John Cook, Bob Eastwood, Paul Azinger, Mark Wiebe, Brian Mogg and Rick Ehrig. Eastwood had a 66, Fehr 69, Azinger 69 and Webe 70, all on the South course, while Langer and Cook shot 68 and Mogg 69 on the North.

Tom Watson, a five-time British Open champion attempting to play his best golf in a long slump, finished birdie-birdie for a 69 that left him at 138. ... of the pace and very much in contention for his third victory in this event.

Mize, now in his fifth season on the PGA Tour, scored 29 on his five birdies with 20-foot putts, made it 10 from 10 on the first and 2-putted for the go-ahead margin from 20 feet on the last.

Newspaper poll: Jabbar best cager in history

DALLAS (AP) — Los Angeles Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is the greatest basketball player ever, according to a 60-member panel of experts polled by the Dallas Morning News.

Eighteen of the panelists voted Abdul-Jabbar, playing in his 17th National Basketball Association season, the greatest player in the history of the game.

Basketball

"I've done well enough that I would be considered, but I don't focus on that," said Abdul-Jabbar's choice as the top player of all time. Third with 13 votes was the Boston Celtics' Bill Russell. Bill Chamberlain, who still ranks No. 1 all-time with a 30.3 scoring average, received only six of 60 votes.

Chamberlain played for the Philadelphia and San Francisco Warriors, the Philadelphia 76ers and the Lakers. Four votes went to Celtics forward Larry Bird, while former-Lakers forward Elgin Baylor got two votes.

Former guards Bob Cousy of the Celtics, Jerry West of the Lakers and Bob Davies of Rochester received one each.

The Morning News panel, comprised of current and former general managers and coaches and former players, spanned five decades of expertise. The panel also chose Abdul-Jabbar as the greatest center of all time, and listed Bird at forward and Robertson at guard.

"Abdul-Jabbar" in the center category, received 25 votes, said Chamberlain and Russell tied for second, with 16; votes each. George Mikan got two votes.

Bird, in the forward voting, received 23, while Baylor got 22, Julie Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers seven, and Rick Barry and Bob Pettit one each.

Lakers Coach Pat Riley said it's important to Abdul-Jabbar to be considered the best of all time.

Boitano bolsters early lead in U.S. figure skating finals

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Defending champion Brian Boitano, aided by acupuncture treatments for his ailing ankle, won the men's title Friday to maintain his lead in the men's singles at the National Figure Skating Championships.

Boitano, 22, of Sunnyvale, Calif., received five 8.5s for composition and style in his compulsory skidding, including a triple lutz-double loop combination jump. It was the first time he had attempted any jumps in more than a week.

Skating

"It's not the best short program I've done but I'm just happy to do all the elements clean."

Boitano began the acupuncture treatment on Thursday following the compulsory figures.

"I thought after the figures that I couldn't make it, it hurt so much," Boitano said, smiling. "It's the right angle." It's the first time I tried acupuncture. It was a last resort.

Stocks surge for 3rd record

By RICK GLADSTONE
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market roared to its third record finish of the week Friday in a late buying rush that reversed declines caused by government jobs statistics and a court threat to the new federal deficit-reduction law.

Analysts said Wall Street rebounded because of what they called the underlying long-term trends in the market and because of investors who jumped in after prices fell.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, knocked as low as 1,576.65 during the day, surged late in the session and finished at an unprecedented close of 1,613.42, topping the record set Thursday by 12.73 points.

It was the third time in the week that Wall Street's best-known indicator set a record. On Monday, the Dow Jones industrial rose 22.29 points to 1,594.27 and flirted with the 1,600-level for most of the week.

Earlier in the day, the market was stunned when the Labor Department said civilian unemployment fell from 6.9 percent to 6.7 percent in January with the creation of 565,000 non-farm jobs. Some investors viewed the news as a sign the Federal Reserve Board will not lower interest rates to stimulate the economy. The market took a second hit when a Washington court ruled that a central provision of the Gramm-Rudman law, which requires a balanced federal budget for 1991, is unconstitutional. This also was seen as a signal that interest rates might remain high, which tends to depress

Employment hits peak levels

By MATT YANNEY
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The number of Americans looking for work dipped in January to below 8 million for the first time in Ronald Reagan's five-year presidency, dropping the civilian unemployment rate to 6.7 percent.

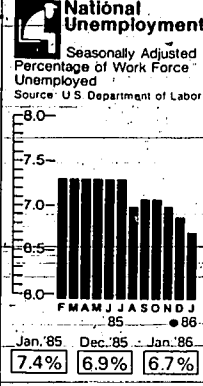

The 0.2 percentage point decrease from December's seasonally adjusted 6.9 percent unemployment rate was accompanied by the creation of 565,000 new non-farm jobs last month, the Labor Department reported Friday.

The total number of Americans at work reached an all-time high of almost 109 million.

The report by the Bureau of Labor Statistics buttressed an administration prediction that the average combined civilian-military unemployment rate for all of 1986 would fall to 6.7 percent, down from an average of 7.1 percent last year.

That alternate rate, which combines the 1.7 million members of the Armed Services with the civilian labor force of 116.8 million, was 6.6 percent in January, the BLS said.

"This is the most solid evidence of all that the economy continues its rebound without let-up," deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said in response to the report. "More jobs and less forecast that the economy will grow at a "moderately robust 4 percent" rate this year, in contrast to the annual rate of 2 percent sluggish growth rate of 1985.

"The gleam in the president's eye when he talks about a new economy is really being supported," said Allan Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Bros., a New York investment house.

"Increased jobs and job security — and the confidence that goes with it — means that consumers will keep spending and the economy will keep growing," Sinai said. He called January's job figures "surprisingly strong."

News of the improved job picture sent stock and bond prices down as investors hoped for a government-indicated lowering of interest rates dimmed. By noon, before a federal court struck as unconstitutional a central provision of the new Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law, the Dow Jones industrial average had dropped 8.26 points, to 1,592.33, from a record high of 1,609.89 set Thursday.

"The figures dash any notion that the Federal Reserve Board will ease off at their meeting next week," said Sinai. "With the unemployment rate coming down and with robust employment growth of 800,000 new jobs in the past two months, there is no reason for easing monetary policy."

The rank of those officially listed as out-of-work-but-seeking jobs fell from 8,023,000 in December of 1985 to 7,831,000 last month, the BLS said.

The last time the number of jobless was that low was in May 1980, when the number of jobless was listed at 7,358,000.

The number of so-called "discouraged" workers fell by 100,000 in the last quarter of 1985, to 1.1 million, the lowest level in four years. The so-called "discouraged workers" are those who lack jobs but are not counted among the ranks of those officially categorized as unemployed because they've stopped looking.

At the depth of the 1981-82 recession in November, 1982, the unemployment rate peaked at 10.7 percent with the rolls of the jobless totaling more than 12 million. Since then, 9.8 million new jobs have been created, 3.1 million of them in the last 12 months, the BLS said.

John Albertine, president of the American Business Conference, called the January figures "another signal that the economy is picking up steam."

However, manufacturers, noting slow growth or even a recession for 1986 have been proven wrong," he said.

Idaho cattle prices drop, spuds inch up

BOISE (AP) — Idaho cattle continued plunging last month, but potato prices while still severely depressed strengthened slightly, according to the government's Crop-and-Livestock-Reporting Service.

The spud market stood at $2.60 a hundredweight, according to the mid-January survey, up a dime from December but still 59 cents below the national price and less than 30 percent of parity, the price producers need to have the same buying power they did 70 years ago.

Compounding problems for potato growers and their record crop last fall was an early freeze that damaged over 7 percent of the total crop, reducing marketing quantities but also raising questions about overall quality.

The concerns over the salable crop prompted the Idaho Potato Commission to slash its planned spring advertising expenditures by $400,000 to reflect the downward revisions in marketable potatoes.

While total advertising expenditures will still hit $2.3 million this year, the commission said it was "only prudent to continually review" the media budget in view of the damaged potatoes.

Lamb prices were the only bright spot on the livestock front, improving $2.70 a hundred pounds to nearly $59 but still holding less than half of parity, the price the producers need to have the same buying power they did 70 years ago. The steady increase in lamb prices may be a reflection of the 10 percent decline in the state's lamb crop last year.

The lamb and stock sheep inventory last month totaled 301,000 head, up slightly from a year ago to mark the first increase in Idaho's stock sheep numbers since 1981.

The decline in cattle prices came as the government also reported that Idaho was one of only two of the 13 major beef producing states to post an increase in the number of cattle on feed this Jan. 1 over Jan. 1, 1985.

Idaho ranchers reported 206,000 head on feed five weeks ago, up from a year earlier.

That, compared with a total inventory of fed cattle in the major states of just under 9.7 million head, down 9 percent from the 10.6 million head recorded in January 1985. Nebraska was the only other major state to report an increased fed catle inventory.

And while ranchers throughout the country plan to curtail marketings this winter by some 4 percent over the 1985 level, Idaho ranchers estimate they will maintain their marketing level at about 130,000 head, another factor that could keep market prices depressed.

Beef cattle prices overall were down almost $3 a hundredweight, with declines posted in all classes. Every category remained below the national average price for the month and under 50 percent of parity.

On the expense side, ranchers also saw prices for alfalfa hay rise $3 a ton last month to the year-ago level of $68.

Wheat prices also continued dropping amid the new 1985 Farm Bill that significantly reduced federal price support levels. The January price fell another nine cents a bushel to $3.21, but that was still slightly higher than the national average of $3.10.

Barley prices were down two cents to $2.33 a bushel while fresh apple prices were steady at $27 a hundred pounds and bean prices picked up a dime to $19.40 a hundredweight.

Fungus condition again menacing Gem wheat

POCATELLO (AP) — A devastating wheat disease that cost southeastern Idaho producers $2 million and forced the reseeding of 40,000 acres after two recent winters is again rearing its head, a plant expert said.

Robert Forster, an extension plant pathologist with the University of Idaho College of Agriculture, told cereal producers in Pocatello and Idaho Falls recently that conditions were perfect last fall for development of the snowmold fungus.

Snowmold, which thrives in thawed ground beneath snow cover, typically flourishes when snow falls on unfrozen soil and provides a protective cover for up to several months.

Forster said that while ground beneath snow generally does not thaw until mid-January in southeastern Idaho, this year the fungus probably has been multiplying since November.

A snowmold-tolerant dryland wheat variety that is adapted well to southeastern Idaho is available, but Forster said growers lost interest in it because of an epidemic of two other diseases that struck after it was planted in 1984.

He said other controls for snowmold include rotating wheat with alfalfa and using fly ash or graphite suspended in dilute fertilizer solution to melt snow cover — a process that should begin this month.

Scientists at Utah State University are conducting extensive studies on fly ash, and a $10,000 grant from the Idaho Wheat Commission is funding snowmold control research in Idaho that is scheduled to begin this spring.
