California levee breaks; thousands homeless

By DOUG WILLIS
The Associated Press

MARYSVILLE, Calif. — Floodwaters from a ruptured levee spread across two submerged towns on Friday, leaving 28 square miles under water and as many as 26,000 people without homes, authorities said.

Trucks hauled rock 30 miles from a quarry in a frantic effort to fill in the 150-foot-wide gap in the Yuba River levee, which began to crumble Thursday at dusk after more than a week of fierce rains. And boats and helicopters searched the area for people stranded in the water.

“(Rescuers) found people boarded inside of houses, where they had taken boards and nailed them to the doors to keep the water out. They literally had to be pulled through windows and pulled through holes,” said Ron Heideke, a Marysville City Council member.

The water began to recede Friday evening, shrinking the flooded area to about 16 square miles, said Yuba County Undersheriff Dennis Moore.

As many as a third of the 26,000 residents of the farming communities of Linda and Olivehurst would be able to return to their homes Saturday, said Moore. But he said it could be two weeks before all the flood waters are gone.

Gov. George Deukmejian toured the area Friday, reporting that the Federal Emergency Management Agency has recommended the White House approve federal disaster aid for 29 counties.

“Obviously, it’s a very, very tragic sight to see water literally up to eaves of houses and up to the windows of shopping centers,” he said.

Later Friday, President Reagan declared a major disaster in the state, making residents of at least nine flood-ravaged counties eligible for federal disaster assistance. More counties may be added later, federal officials said.

About 200 people were airlifted out of the area Friday, including nursing home residents and about 50 “infirm and elderly,”

Sheriff's deputies use a boat to search streets of Linda, Calif., for stranded persons Friday after a levee on the Yuba River broke. At right, three dogs wait for rescue from the roof of a house in Linda.

under water Friday was more than half the size of the city of San Francisco, he said.

One victim of the flooding was the Peach Tree Mall, a shopping center of 35 stores in Linda near the site of the break, which began as a 40-foot gap Thursday night about 130 miles northeast of San Francisco. Water was 16 feet deep at the mall, Moore said.

“Part of it is a two-story building, and all you can see of it is the ‘K’ mart sign on the roof,” said Moore.

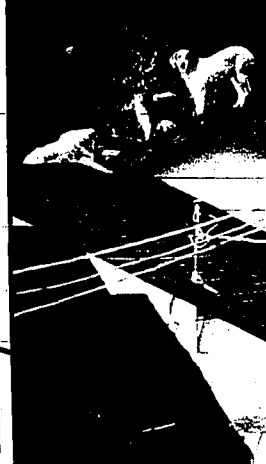

A series of Pacific storms which began Feb. 12 killed at least 17 people, flooded thousands of acres and homes and set off hundreds of avalanches and mudslides in the West. An estimated 20 percent of Napa

County’s vineyards were damaged, and Deukmejian said damage could total $300 million.

The storms drove the Yuba river to a depth of 76.5 feet on Tuesday, well above flood stage, although it had dropped significantly when the levee broke.

“In the summertime, it’s just a trickle,” said Capt. Joseph Saxon, a spokesman at Beale. “You can walk across it.”

“This is my third flood — one in Arkansas, the big flood in Yuba City” in 1955 and now this,” said Connie Dickens, 67, of Olivehurst. “This is the third time I’ve had to start over. I’m going to get some place in the hills. I’ve lost everything.”

Snow spreads into Northeast as West continues to dig out

By The Associated Press

As Westerners dug out from a week of rain that flooded thousands of homes, snow spread from the Midwest to the Northeast on Friday, forcing officials to close schools in dozens of Michigan districts and highways in Montana.

California Gov. George Deukmejian estimated damage in his state from a week of Pacific storms at $300 million, and officials in Utah and Nevada estimated damage at more than $18 million in the storms that claimed at least 17 lives, forced 36,000 people to evacuate, and dropped up to 2 feet of rain.

President Reagan declared a major disaster in California, making residents of at least nine flood-ravaged counties eligible for federal disaster assistance. More counties may be added later, federal officials said.

The National Weather Service said most rivers in northern California were receding, but flood warnings remained in effect. Many highways were still closed. Flood warnings were also in effect for the Owyhee and Portneuf rivers in Idaho.

Deukmejian declared a state of emergency in 29 counties, and some roads were still closed. Four counties in Utah and four in Nevada were also declared in states of emergency.

In Inyo County, the state Department of Forestry sent 365 workers to help clean up Friday. Officials have said 20 percent of the county’s vineyards were damaged.

To the east, snow fell from eastern Ohio across northwestern New York to Maine. Findlay, Ohio, reported 3 inches in one hour Friday morning, and parts of Indiana had 6 inches.

Gusty winds caused drifting in the Northern Plains, and visibility was reduced to zero in northwestern Minnesota.

Travelers’ advisories were posted for the northern half of Montana, and officials recommended that motorists stay off U.S. 2 along the southern edge of Glacier National Park because of strong winds and poor visibility.

The Montana Highway Department said U.S. 89 was closed north and south of Browning for a time Friday morning.

“Even though we’ve got the road open, people shouldn’t be driving on it,” said Don-nis Unsworth, Highway Department spokesman.

More than 540 avalanches have been reported to the Colorado Avalanche Information Center since the snow moved into that state Feb. 13, and although the storms have ended, danger remained.

Nine weather-related deaths were reported in California since the storms hit, three in Utah, two Nevada and one each in Wyoming, Oregon and British Columbia. Three people in California were listed as missing.

Spy stories

Convicted former CIA employee takes own life in jail cell

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Larry Wu-tai Chin, the first American ever convicted of spying for China, killed himself in jail Friday, two weeks after a federal jury found the retired CIA employee guilty of crimes that could have led to life imprisonment.

Jail personnel at the Prince William County, Va., facility found Chin unconscious in his cell bunk with a plastic bag over his head, the U.S. Marshals Service said in a statement.

Guards at the Prince William-Manassas Regional Adult Detention Center, and later, medical personnel, were unable to revive him and he was pronounced dead at 7:35 a.m. MIST. An autopsy was scheduled for Saturday and the marshals service declined to say that Chin had died of suffocation. He was alone in the cell when he was found.

Prosecutors said Chin’s spying career spanned 30 years and introduced documents portraying of Peking-born Chin as a heavy gambler — in contrast to the quiet, scholarly image he presented in court. By the time he went to trial, the 63-year-old translator had parlayed his $30,000 annual CIA salary and whatever outside income he generated into real estate holdings valued at more than $700,000.

Chin, who became a U.S. citizen in 1970, admitted passing secret documents to Chinese spy handlers but said he did it because he wanted to bring China and the United States together. He had left his native land during the communist revolution.

Britain charges former U.S. naval officer with espionage

The Associated Press

LONDON — Britain lodged an espionage charge Friday against a man identified as a former U.S. naval commander and intelligence specialist. Pentagon records indicate that he worked at one time on secret submarine projects.

Police said the man was arrested while trying to flee the country.

John Bothwell, 59, identified in court as a retired Navy commander who quit the military 22 years ago and then worked in a U.S. intelligence agency for 10 years, was arraigned on a charge of violating Britain’s 1911 Official Secrets Act.

He was accused of preparing to divulge information that could have been “useful to an enemy.” The charge did not specify the information or the foreign power allegedly involved.

Press Association, Britain’s domestic news agency, reported without attribution that Bothwell gave police a lengthy statement in which he allegedly admitted having a relationship with the Soviet Union over the past 10 years.

The news agency said Bothwell told police he acted as a middleman in unspecified trade deals between the Soviet Union and South Africa.

Soviet KGB colonel defects, receives asylum in America

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Soviet KGB colonel has defected in Greece and been flown to the United States with his 8-year-old son and a woman described as a family friend, the State Department said Friday.

Department deputy spokesman Charles Redman identified the three as Victor P. Gundarev, his son Maxim and Galina Grumova.

Redman had no information on the woman but other officials, who asked not to be identified, said they believed she was the boy’s nanny. Redman said the three came to the United States at their request.

The other officials said they had seen reports that Soviet diplomats, apparently concerned when Gundarev dropped from sight, circled the U.S. Embassy in early last Saturday in a car in hopes of thwarting his defection.

U.S. security guards called police to the scene, the officials said, adding that the diplomats reportedly were questioned about their activities.

According to the officials, Gundarev is regarded here as a “medium-level” defector who “is not in the same league” as Vitaly Yurchenko, the high-ranking KGB officer who defected last August and returned to the Soviet Union after three months in CIA custody.

Magazine claims tests were ignored

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — NASA went ahead with the launch of Challenger even though its tests a year ago showed that weather conditions like those overnight on Jan. 27-28 could freeze critical seals on booster rockets, an aerospace magazine says.

Aviation Week and Space Technology, a respected industry magazine, said the NASA wind tunnel tests showed that wind blowing against the super-chilled shuttle tank across the lower section of the right solid rocket booster could cause a stiffening of the rubber-like seals, making them ineffective.

Engineers believe this situation set up a deadly sequence of events, stemming from overnight cold, that eventually caused the Challenger’s right solid rocket booster to break loose from the fuel tank. The solid rocket booster apparently crashed into the wing, the magazine said, illustrating its article, with photographs.

The still-unused, new shuttle launch pad at Vandenberg Air Force Base in California is equipped with heaters, using the 150-250-degree exhaust from two jet engines, for warming shuttles in cold weather. NASA discussed a similar installation at the Kennedy Space Center in the 1970s, but rejected it because of Florida’s usually warm and humid weather.

NASA investigators are quoted as saying telemetry data and tracking photographs show a rupture in the booster broke the lower strut attaching the rocket to the tank, whereupon the top of the rocket pitched into the tank. The resultant explosion destroyed the shuttle, its crew and cargo.

Second by second — A4

The shuttle was eight miles high and nine miles away from the coast line when it exploded in the 74th second of flight on Jan. 28.

The account appeared in the magazine as members of the presidential Challenger commission carried their investigation to Huntsville, Ala., Brigham City, Utah, and Cape Canaveral, Fla.

Friday was the deadline imposed by commission chairman William Rogers for documents relating to pre-launch activities by Morton Thiokol, which makes the boosters, and from NASA.

“Materials are being received,” said commission spokesman Mark Weinberg. He said the commission’s and a newly acquired technical staff would go over the documents over the weekend.

The temperature at launch pad 35B, which dropped to 24 degrees overnight, is suspected of causing rubber compound seals to stiffen and become ineffective on the boosters, which generate 2.9 million pounds of thrust each to propel the shuttle to

Mexico seeks debt reductions

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Miguel de la Madrid said Friday Mexico will soon begin negotiating with international bankers, asking them to make sacrifices to help his country reduce its $96.4 billion foreign debt and battle tumbling oil prices.

"No one is obliged to do the impossible," the president said in a national television speech on the economy. "We will make a new in-depth proposal on servicing the debt in relation with the country's capacity for payment."

De la Madrid did not call for a moratorium on payments, as leaders in other Latin American countries have suggested. He strongly rejected any possibility that would veer from what he called "responsible economic management."

Jet skids off runway; 1 injured

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — A USAir jetliner landing in Erie from Toronto with 23 people on board skidded past the end of a snow-covered runway Friday, and one person was injured evacuating the plane, authorities said.

The DC-9 went off the runway about 7 a.m. MST, rumbled down an embankment and came to rest in a field. A local radio and Erie International Airport officials closed the runway, one of two, until early afternoon.

The nose of the $14 million plane was damaged, said USAir spokeswoman Nancy Vaughan. She said the extent of damage was not immediately clear.

Embassies in Peru bombed

LIMA (AP) — Several foreign embassies, including the American compound, were dynamited late Friday night but there were no immediate reports of injuries, a radio station reported.

Radio Programas said there were also bombings at the Spanish, Indian and West German embassies. There were no immediate reports of damage and details remained sketchy.

Today's weather

Rain scatters through warming trend

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding: Today and tonight, occasional rain. Sunday winds 10 to 15 mph. Highs 45 to 50. Lows mid-30s. Sunday, partly cloudy. Highs near 50. Camas Prairie, Halley and the Lower Wood River Valley: Partly to mostly cloudy with occasional snow or rain. Snow level near 6000 feet. Windy. Highs near 40. Lows low 30s. Sunday, partly cloudy. Highs in the 40s.

Northern Utah and Nevada: Utah — Variable clouds with scattered snow showers early today. Becoming fair to partly cloudy Sunday. Lows tonight in the 20s and low 30s. Highs in the 30s and low 50s.

Nevada — Mostly cloudy today. Slight chance of rain, mainly near the Oregon-Idaho borders. Clearing trend tonight then fair and slightly warmer Sunday. Lows in the 20s to low 30s. Highs in the upper 40s to upper 50s today with warmer areas into the low 60s Sunday.

Skyies over Idaho Friday afternoon were mostly cloudy except for some areas in the east, where winds were gusty.

Idaho Falls reported peak winds of 48 mph. Pocatello had winds gusting to 34 mph and Twin Falls and Burley both reported gusts to near 30 mph.

Afternoon temperatures were mostly in the 40s except for higher elevations where the mid- to upper 30s were common. Overnight lows were mostly in the mid-20s to mid-30s.

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 51 degrees in Hagerman and the coldest was 3 degrees below zero at PortHill.

The extended outlook for Southern Idaho, Monday through Wednesday, indicates dry and mild conditions. Afternoon high temperatures 45 to 55. Overnight lows 25 to 30 east and 30s west.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday the warmest readings were 45 degrees at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and the coldest was 26 degrees below zero at Grand Forks, N.D.

Ariane rocket launch 'success'

KOUROU, French Guiana (AP) — The Ariane rocket blasted off from its South American base Friday night and launched two satellites into orbit in a mission that will test the credibility of Europe's space program and challenge American research.

Ariane, a conventional three-stage unmanned launcher, lifted off from the Kourou Space Center on its 14th mission after eight months of delay and new uncertainty in the commercial satellite market since the U.S. space shuttle disaster last month.

The Ariane liftoff was on schedule at 6:44 p.m. MST, European Space Agency officials announced. Minutes later, the booster rocket successfully fired into orbit a Swedish science probe and a sophisticated French observation satellite, the agency said, calling the mission a "complete success."

Chinese pilot requests asylum

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A Chinese pilot landed his MIG-19 fighter jet landed at an Air Base Friday after an interception by South Korean warplanes and said he had defected, the Defense Ministry said. A 13-minute air raid siren was sounded in the capital during the chase.

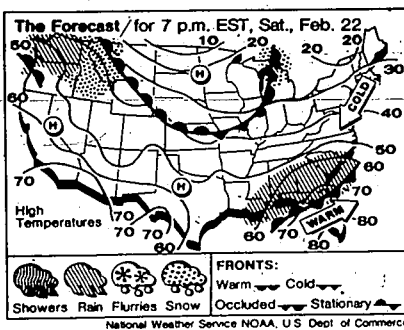

A ministry statement issued Saturday said the Chinese pilot had requested political asylum in a third country, and the request would be dealt with after an investigation.

Fire destroys Navy warehouse

TOKYO (AP) — A fire burned down a supply warehouse at a U.S. Navy Air base south of Tokyo early Saturday, causing damage in the millions of dollars but no injuries, a Navy spokesman said.

About 90 U.S. servicemen and Japanese firefighters extinguished the fire at the U.S. Atsugi Naval Air Facility near Yokohama city, 18 miles south of Tokyo, said the officer, who would not give his name.

The officer, reading a prepared statement, said the cause of fire was unknown and U.S. officials are investigating the incident.

Durenberger urges Reagan to coax Marcos out of office

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee urged President Reagan on Friday to try to persuade Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos to step down.

Sen. David Durenberger added his voice to a rising crescendo of congressional criticism following widespread reports of fraud in the Feb. 7 balloting.

"By all independent estimates, Mr. Marcos clearly lost the election," said Durenberger. "Nevertheless, by use of fraud on a scale that would scandalize a Chicago ward heeler, he has claimed a tainted 'victory' over opposition candidate Corason Aquino."

Saying Reagan is "a longtime friend" of Marcos, Durenberger said the president "is the one person who may be able to persuade Marcos that it is time to step aside."

The president must make that effort while exploring ways to render Mr. Marcos' departure as honorable and face-saving as possible," the senatorial conservative leader asked Reagan to "make arrangements for the orderly evacuation" of Marcos and to "ensure the installation" of Mrs. Aquino as the country's legitimate leader.

F. Andy Messing Jr., director of the conservative National Defense Council, added that future U.S. aid to the Philippines should have been conditioned on a cutoff that could "destabilize the transition" to an Aquino government.

Meanwhile, hundreds of demonstrators marched in front of the White House under pressure on Reagan to denounce Marcos and "stand up for democracy."

"We hope to sustain the pressure on the executive branch to follow the steps already being taken by the legislature and finally withdraw all support for Marcos to persuade him to step down peacefully," said Raul

Durenberger's appeal came a day after a House subcommittee voted 9-4 to halt direct U.S. aid to Marcos' government and instead channel the money to non-governmental agencies, including the Roman Catholic Church.

As Durenberger revealed his appeal to Reagan, the chief of the technical team of U.S. observers of the Philippine election said that Marcos is closely following the U.S. reaction, particularly in Congress.

Allen Weinstein, president of the Center for Democracy, was part of a team of U.S. observers led by Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., and Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa.

Weinstein recently returned from Manila, where he had met earlier this week with Marcos.

Marcos rebukes election critics, calls opposition ungracious losers

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos on Friday told foreign leaders who say he won re-election by fraud that what happens in the Philippines is none of their business, and called his opposition sore losers.

"We deplore these actions as the acts of ungracious electoral losers and of modern-day imperialists who evidently think that a nation like the Philippines should simply submit to their dictates and wishes."

The Japanese news agency Kyodo quoted Marcos as saying he would replace about half the members of his Cabinet.

A national police captain resigned Friday in support of Mrs. Aquino, calling the Marcos government "illegitimate, repressive, unjust and corrupt."

Lt. Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, designated the new armed forces commander, asked Marcos to stop the last-minute appointments being made by Gen. Fabian C. Ver who he is to succeed March 1.

year in the August 1983 assassination of Benigno Aquino, Mrs. Aquino's husband. The United States had been urging Marcos to dismiss him.

The inauguration is scheduled for Tuesday, but who will be there remains a question.

Belgium and Canada plan not to send a delegation, and the Belgians said they doubted that other nations of the European Community would send representatives of ambassadorial rank. Britain has not yet been invited, but officials said privately it probably would decline.

The United States has not indicated its intentions for the inauguration.

The U.S. Senate and European Parliament have passed resolutions accusing Marcos of election fraud, and criticism has come from the Reagan administration and other governments.

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., charged that Republican leaders on the Senate Commerce Committee, which has been studying the accident, are "stonewalling" for the Rogers commission by deciding to hold only occasional hearings to monitor the work of the panel.

The White House is said to be considering five people "and probably several others" for the administrator's post held by James M. Beggs, who took a leave of absence when he was indicted in connection with a previous job he held.

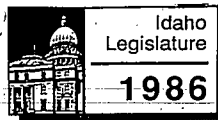

Despite the speculation about successors to Beggs, Rep. Manuel Lujan, R-N.M., said that White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan told him "they are not looking for a change in the near future" at the agency. The two men discussed the issue at a

Senate GOP caucus still split on 1% increase in sales tax

BOISE (AP) — Senate Republicans emerged from more than four hours of closed party caucuses Friday still split over the House-passed penny increase in the state sales tax.

Party leaders immediately postponed until Monday any further action on the bill, needed to erase Idaho's huge budget deficit. Hearings were likely to be held then by the Local Government and Taxation Committee.

The issue of bypassing that committee where tax bills have been buried in the past, was never seriously discussed, leaders said.

"We never obtained sufficient support to pass the bill," GOP Caucus Chairman Phil Batt of Wilder said after the final secret session ended around mid-afternoon.

"There are a number of senators who have some questions about various provisions of the bill, and they want some time to study it," Batt said. "We'll be back in early Monday to caucus again."

In a rare move, the leadership let GOP Lt. Gov. David Leroy, the party's 1986 candidate for governor, address the secret session. His remarks were not disclosed, and Batt declined to assess whether Leroy had an impact on the thinking of the caucus.

The inability of the Senate Republicans to force a quick consensus for the measure, mirroring the fragmentation that haunted the House GOP caucus for nearly seven weeks, threatened final passage of the bill in time to put it into effect by the March 1 target date.

For the Tax Commission to have the time needed to gear up for the change, officials said the bill must win final approval by early Monday.

Sen. Robert Speck, R-Idaho Falls, generating the revenues needed to wipe out the remaining $20 million deficit in the 1986 budget and provide Republican caucus mirrored the split that plagued the House for much of the past six weeks. Some conservative members of the caucus continued objecting to any tax increase, recalling the promise most party members made to voters in the 1984 campaign to hold the line on taxes.

Others continued to press for only a temporary tax increase to erase 1986 red ink and sweeten the revenue pie for 1987, hoping for economic recovery to bolster state tax receipts in the years that follow.

Still others objected to all the money diverted from the general treasury for special purposes, particularly the deficit reserve account, arguing that there was an immediate need for those dollars.

But in the House there was compromise from some Republicans in each of those camps, apparently brought into perspective by the lengthy deadlock and fear the Democratic minority could force a coalition with moderate Republicans on a more preclusive tax increase plan.

Even conservative House Speaker Sam Strayer, R-Twin Falls, voted for the bill, just two months after telling the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho that now was not the time to raise any Idaho taxes.

Legislative consideration of the tax hike came amid issuance of the latest economic bulletin from the Division of Finance Management. It showed unusually high income tax collections during January but abated that an observation that will be offset in coming months.

With sales tax revenues stabilizing and Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon pulling back from an $11.5 million investment, earnings estimate based on a falling interest rates, analysts said it appeared the dramatically reduced forecast for current year revenues is on target.

Vice President George Bush jokes with Sen. James McClure at the Lincoln Day Banquet

Bush backs 'surgical strikes' against foreign competitors

BOISE (AP) — "Herbie the robot" had its moment of glory here Friday.

"Herbie" is a robot device, part of the "state-of-the-art" warehouse distribution system at the Hewlett-Packard computer plant.

Herbie put on a demonstration for Vice President George Bush and other officials, picking up a cardboard box and moving it to another area, unaided by human hands.

It was part of the high-tech demonstrations put on for Bush by the Hewlett-Packard plant, largest of the big computer company's worldwide operations.

Later in a "coffee talk" speech to Hewlett-Packard employees, Bush said surgical strikes, not massive retaliation, is the way this country should deal with unfair foreign trade competition.

The plant tour was the last event in a quick Boise visit by the vice president. He spoke briefly to most of the plant's 2,900 workers, before leaving for Salt Lake City.

He said the Reagan administration is committed against erecting trade barriers or taking massive retaliation against unfair foreign trade competition.

"Because of producers such as you," he told employees of the computer firm, "we must not retreat from foreign trade. I can't think of anything worse."

Bush said the administration is trying to stop unfair foreign trade, but will fight against "pure protectionism" which will only result in retaliation against exporting industries such as high-tech and agriculture.

He praised the "imagination, dedication, creativity and optimism that went into the creation of these machines," after touring the Hewlett-Packard plants.

Thursday night, Bush told about 900 people attending the annual Boise Lincoln Day gathering of state Republicans that he's certain Republicans will avoid the traditional off-year election losses, following the party's tremendous victory in 1984.

"I have a very confident feeling that we will be stronger," after this fall's elections, said.

He told those attending the $35 per plate event that Republicans' top priority in this year's election is re-taking control of the U.S. Senate.

That means re-electing Republican senators such as Steve Symms, he said.

"I have absolute confidence that he will be re-elected," Bush said of Symms, who faces a challenge from Democratic Gov. John Evans.

Bush and his wife, on a campaign swing that started Tuesday, arrived in Boise Thursday afternoon and were greeted by Lt. Gov. David Leroy and other state and local officials. Leroy and his wife, Helen, accompanied Bush and Mrs. Bush on their Hewlett-Packard plant tour.

The annual Lincoln Day gathering in Boise dates back to 1912, and is billed as the oldest continuous Republican Lincoln Day gathering.

Payment of pre-natal expenses in adoptions approved by House

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho House has passed a bill that will allow the payment of pre-natal expenses to a woman who's planning on giving her child up for adoption — a move proponents say will curtail abortions.

Opponents argued that the measure would make adoption a privilege of only the wealthy and Rep. Dieter Hoyer, R-Boise, said it could "lead to baby-bartering in the state of Idaho."

But other lawmakers argued that the bill would eliminate some abortions, curtail the need for Aid to Families With Dependent Children, and rightfully put a complex decision in the hands of private individuals rather than the state.

"It's a private decisions bill. If you don't do it this way, who will pay the bill?" asked Rep. James H. Lucas, R-Moscow. "It's a bill to prevent abortion."

"It allows people to negotiate a very complex situation," he said.

The measure, which passed the House 50-33, goes to the Senate. It would allow the payment by private individuals of up to $3,000 in medical and living expenses for one year to a mother who's planning on giving up her child for adoption. Such arrangements now would be a felony under Idaho state law.

The House passed the measure Thursday afternoon, then decided to reconsider it.

"What we're really talking about here is a live baby or abortion," said Rep. Dennis Scott, R-Twin Falls. "It's a crime to consider that might be a felony."

"The only thing this particular statute does is say if you want to pay $3,000 of this girl's living expenses and adopt her baby, it's not illegal," said Rep. Robert Speck, R-Genoa/Alamo.

"The more people I talked to, the more confusing it became," said Hoyer said. "There's so many unanswered questions, I'd come to the conclusion that we ought to dig a little deeper."

"I'm very concerned that middle-class people who have a lot of love to give can't get (babies) because they've priced out of their range," Hoyer said.

Rep. Jeff Stoker, R-Twin Falls, said the bill may raise the cost of adoption in some cases, but said the benefits outweigh the disadvantages.

He said the division already regulates PCBs at the Grand View facility under its solid waste disposal regulations, but he described them as "crude by comparison to procedures" that would be available under the bill. Stokes also said the change would effectively have no impact on the requirements Envoisafe or any other hazardous waste handler must now meet.

But Stokes conceded that the issue of PCB handling is only a short-term one in view of federal requirements that transformers using PCBs as insulation be phased out by 1990.

He also said the bill was drafted to give the state authority to enact more stringent regulations on PCBs than the federal government has — an issue that has created controversy in the committee for the past several years.

Committee kills PCB control bill

BOISE (AP) — Legislation backers say will improve state regulation of toxic polychlorinated biphenyls, known as PCBs, has been effectively killed by the Senate Health and Welfare Committee.

The committee voted along party lines Friday to withhold the bill from a vote by the full Senate.

Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, who favored a Senate vote on the measure, called the committee decision another example of the state's inexplicable persistence to serve as the hazardous waste dump of the nation.

Peavey claimed refusal to endorse that bill and others merely "makes Idaho very susceptible to the receipt of all hazardous waste" in the nation.

The bill would have given the state Division of Environment authority under the state Hazardous Waste Management Act to enact regulations controlling the handling of PCBs.

Division Director Lee Stokes, rejecting suggestions that the bill was aimed at putting the EnviroSafe Services of Idaho waste dump out of business, said the bill would merely make state regulation of the material more efficient.

He said the division already regulates PCBs at the Grand View facility under its solid waste disposal regulations, but he described them as "crude by comparison to procedures" that would be available under the bill. Stokes also said the change would effectively have no impact on the requirements Envoisafe or any other hazardous waste handler must now meet.

But Stokes conceded that the issue of PCB handling is only a short-term one in view of federal requirements that transformers using PCBs as insulation be phased out by 1990.

He also said the bill was drafted to give the state authority to enact more stringent regulations on PCBs than the federal government has — an issue that has created controversy in the committee for the past several years.

Huff admits guilt in scam

BOISE (AP) — A former Idaho First National Bank credit officer accused of bilking the bank of thousands of dollars to finance his store operations has pleaded guilty in federal court to five of 22 counts of fraud.

Douglas D. Huff, 44, now of Hillsboro, Ore., entered the plea Thursday in U.S. District Court in Boise before Judge Marion Callister.

Huff, formerly a credit officer in a Nampa branch of the bank, was indicted on 22 counts of misapplication of funds, 14 counts of false entry in bank books and one count of wire fraud.

The amount of money involved was not specified in the 17-page grand jury indictment.

Larry Westberg, Huff's court-appointed attorney, said the government moved to dismiss the remaining 22 counts after Huff pleaded guilty to five. Huff had been scheduled to stand trial Thursday.

Sentencing of Huff, who remained free on his own recognizance, was scheduled for April 9.

House sends drinking age measure back

BOISE (AP) — Legislation raising Idaho's legal drinking age from 19 to 21 was withdrawn from the House on Friday when it appeared the measure was headed toward certain defeat.

With amendments tacked onto the bill earlier in the week, opposition surfaced from all sides. Rep. Dean Haegenson, R-Idaho Falls, the chief sponsor, said he allowed the bill to be sent back to State Affairs Committee rather than have it defeated.

The bill raised Idaho's legal drinking age from 19 to 21, effective Oct. 1. Haegenson argued that is necessary so Idaho will avoid the loss of $1.5 million this year and $9 million next year in federal highway funds.

But the bill also extended the legal hours for drinking from 1 a.m. to 2 a.m. and would have allowed Sunday drinking.

Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, also had the bill amended earlier in the week to allow 19 and 20-year olds to be in establishments which serve liquor, even though they couldn't legally drink.

She said that was necessary to avoid massive losses by restaurants and other establishments which cater to a younger crowd.

Some opponents didn't want to raise the drinking age; others didn't want to expand drinking hours.

Haegenson said he will attempt to introduce new legislation, removing the McDermott amendment but retaining the expanded drinking hours and Sunday sales. But he said after the debate Friday it's uncertain whether even that version will be approved by the State Affairs Committee.

Another drinking age bill, raising the legal age to 21 but not expanding drinking hours, was held in the State Affairs Committee when it voted to send Haegenson's bill to the floor for a vote.

AIDS victim's return to school clipped

KOKOMO, Ind. (AP) — Ryan White, the 14-year-old boy who was banned from school because he has AIDS, went back to the classroom Friday, but a judge later issued a temporary order to keep him from returning.

Before the ruling by Circuit Judge Alan Brubaker, Ryan said it was "good to be back" at Western Middle School. Dozens of parents kept their children home in protest.

Brubaker's ruling came after a parents' group requested that Ryan be barred from classes because he has a communicable disease.

The judge said he agreed with parents who argued that pupils could be harmed if Ryan were in school.

"The plaintiffs presently have no other adequate remedy under the law and they have some likelihood of success" in winning a favorable decision in a full hearing, he said. He did not set a date for another hearing.

More than 80 people filled the courtroom as Brubaker issued his ruling after the three-hour hearing, and many cheered and applauded. "I'm upset," said Ryan's mother, Jeanne White. "I think anybody that was there would have to be upset. I was stunned. Ryan is very disappointed. He really enjoyed school today."

Principal Ronald Colby said Ryan's return to school, opposed by many parents, had gone without incident.

"Ryan was accepted by the children," Colby added. "I saw no one cringing up against the wall."

Ryan, whose acquired immune deficiency syndrome stems from blood treatments taken for hemophilia, said as he left school that his first day back "was a lot of fun. It was good to be back."

He said he was treated "just like everybody else. They just came up, a lot of them, and said, 'Hi.'"

Colby said 151 of the 300 students, just over 50 percent, were absent. In 35 cases, he said, parents specified that they were keeping their children home because of the AIDS controversy.

Data suggests right rocket booster became dislodged

WASHINGTON (AP) — One wing may have been severed and the rear of the Challenger seared by flames from a dislodged rocket booster just before the shuttle exploded, detailed tracking of the shuttle's last seconds reportedly show.

The data transmitted from the shuttle and photographs have caused NASA engineers to believe that the rear part of the shuttle's right rocket booster dislodged just over 72 seconds into the flight.

The description from data transmitted from the Challenger in its final seconds of flight, as well as from tracking photography, is reported in next week's edition of Aviation Week & Space Technology.

The magazine gives this chronology of the Challenger's destruction, using increments of one-thousandths of a second into the flight:

- 00.058: Solid rocket boosters ignite and Challenger starts its liftoff.
- 00.445: Cameras record first evidence of black smoke from near the rear joint of the right rocket booster.
- 12.000: Last evidence of black smoke as Challenger completes its roll maneuver.
- 20.000 to 36.000: Challenger throttles down routinely to 65 percent of power.
- 40.000: Challenger is buffeted by a wind shear.

- 58.774: Cameras record another puff of smoke from rear of right booster.
- 59.000: Challenger reaches maximum planned dynamic pressure.
- 59.249: An intense plume of flame shoots from the side of the right booster.
- 60.164: Plume gets larger and pressure reading in right booster diverges from those recorded from left booster.
- 62.484: Challenger's pitch changes slightly as guidance system reacts to winds.
- 66.174: Fire emerges around the lower part of the booster, indicating rupture is spreading along where sections are joined.
- 66.484: Liquid hydrogen pressure changes in the huge external fuel tank.
- 72.141: Start of breakup sequence as vehicle is tugged to the right, probably severing the right booster's attachment to the external fuel tank.
- 72.201: Gyro data from the booster shows it has broken free from the tank at its lower attachment point. Its lower end has begun to move away while its top end tilts toward the external tank filled with liquid hydrogen and oxygen.
- 72.281: The rear of the booster has begun to pitch back toward the orbiter and may have struck and severed the right wing while also searing the rear right side of the orbiter with a 5,000-degree Fahrenheit rocket plume.

- (Recovered portions of orbiter show rear right portions severely burned.)
- 72.601: Shuttle vehicle begins to yaw to the left.
- 72.884: Top of booster begins to rupture the external tank; external liquid oxygen lines from the tank to the orbiter are severed.
- 73.173: A massive cloud of oxygen or hydrogen gas appears along the side of the external tank, as the fuel streams from the top of the tank. Some gas begins to spread along the bottom of the tank as well, indicating the beginning of a possible breakup there as well.
- 73.200: A flash of fire appears under the forward part of the orbiter.
- 73.226: A powerful explosion occurs near the forward booster attachment point as penetration of the tank by the top of the booster causes rapid mixing of the liquid oxygen and liquid hydrogen propellants.
- 73.399: The external tank is destroyed.
- 73.534: The No. 1 main engine of the orbiter shuts down at the last moment before the vehicle is destroyed.
- 73.605: Last data is transmitted from the Challenger.
- 110.000: Right and left rocket boosters are exploded by NASA safety officers after concern they might hit populated areas.

Booster strut temperature reading wasn't given to NASA

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — The "ice team" that inspected Challenger hours before last month's disastrous launch made a temperature reading of minus 8 degrees on a key strut that held the space shuttle's suspect right rocket booster in place, a Morton Thiokol official said Friday.

The official, who declined to be identified, said Morton Thiokol would never have given NASA a go ahead to launch had it known about the temperature reading — but the data "was not passed along."

The company manufactures and maintains the shuttle's booster rockets.

The official, who talked on a condition of anonymity, said the strut reading was made at the same time and by the same team of engineers that saw a 7 to 9 degree Fahrenheit temperature on the skirt of the booster.

Slain Filipino's son arrested

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP) — The 17-year-old son of Philippine News executive Oscar Salvatierra and the son's girlfriend were arrested for investigation of murdering him and faking a threat of political assassination to cover it up, police said Friday.

Salvatierra, 41, had been the manager of the Los Angeles bureau of the Philippine News, a San Francisco-based weekly that long has opposed the regime of Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Officers said 18-year-old Teressa Kay Deburger, a Glendale High School student, and son Arnel Salvatierra were taken into custody Thursday night in the shooting death.

Glendale Police Chief David J. Thompson said police had recovered the gun used in Wednesday's shooting.

He said the son had a longstanding hatred for his father, but would not elaborate on the animosity.

Leovigildo Anolin, acting Philippine consul general in Los Angeles, said his government was "greatly relieved."

Leak injures 76

SOUTH GATE, Calif. (AP) — A ruptured chlorine gas line at a Purex Co. plant created an irritating green cloud Friday that forced the evacuation of an elementary school and injured 76 people, including 39 children, authorities said.

Dozens of people who inhaled the gas went to emergency rooms, but hospitals reported admitting only two people, both in good condition.

Hospitals may face off over sell-off proposal

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Twin Falls Clinic and Magic Valley Regional Medical Center may go toe-to-toe in the Legislature over a bill that will allow county hospitals such as MVRMC to compete with private hospitals such as the Twin Falls Clinic.

By allowing county boards of commissioners to transfer county hospitals to locally controlled, non-profit corporations, House Bill 579 would help county hospitals get around state laws that prohibit public hospitals in their pursuit of business.

Dr. Russell Newcomb, a shareholder in the Twin Falls Clinic, was the first to testify against the bill in a House State Affairs Committee hearing Friday.

So far, MVRMC Administrator John Bingham and the hospital's attorney, Kent Taylor, have been the major proponents of the bill. Newcomb said he objects to the bill because he would be more in favor of selling the hospital to a private company than he would be of "propping up a county bureaucracy."

Because it allows a county hospital to be transferred to a non-profit corporation at the will of the current hospital board and the county board of commissioners without a voter referendum, the bill shuts voters out, Newcomb said.

"It disenfranchises the voters... those voters are the true owners," Newcomb said. He also said the bill would limit access of citizens to the financial records of a hospital that was supported by tax dollars until a few years ago.

As state law now stands, any sale or transfer of a county hospital requires the approval of voters through a referendum.

Taylor told the committee in a hearing last week that it would be difficult for county commissioners to explain to voters that hospitals now have to compete and that formation of non-profit corporations would help. To maintain local control of hospitals, he said, the bill makes it impossible for hospitals ever to be sold. In the event a non-profit corporation fails, a hospital would be returned to the county.

Newcomb told the committee he would also like to see any non-profit corporation taking over a hospital pay a fee to the county as a return on the investment of taxpayer dollars.

If the non-profit county hospitals are going to expand their services to stay afloat, Newcomb said, they should be barred from competing with tax-paying private enterprise hospitals. New hospital ventures should be limited to areas of medical necessity and areas that are medically underserved, he said. As an example, he said, MVRMC should be permitted to go into partnership with

Jail-suit attorney wants fee

Asks county to pay $10,192 in expenses

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County did some legal sparring Friday with attorney Greg Fuller over his request for $10,192 in attorney fees related to a lawsuit he filed over the county jail.

Judge Daniel Hurlbutt took Fuller's request for fees and costs of the lawsuit under advisement after a hearing Friday morning. Hurlbutt said he would issue a written decision. The judge also told the county it could file additional material next week.

Fuller had requested $1,088 for expert witnesses, filing fees, telephone calls and other expenses related to the lawsuit he filed Oct. 22 against the county on behalf of two inmates over alleged poor conditions at the jail. In terms of his time, he said, he and his associate, Dan Mink, spent about 136 hours on the case. At $75 an hour, that amounted to $10,192.

Fuller claimed in his written arguments and before Hurlbutt Friday that he deserved the fees for a number of reasons, including the fact that the plaintiffs were the "prevailing party."

An agreement reached by both parties over the lawsuit was approved by Hurlbutt Feb. 11. In the agreement, the county agreed to implement some changes in jail procedure, install some safety devices, reduce the jail population and begin work on a bond proposal to present to voters for financing a new jail.

The agreement echoed what the plaintiffs requested in the complaint, Fuller said. "We even got more than we bargained for," he said, such as some interim changes at the current jail.

In addition, the fees should be awarded because the county's case against the suit was without foundation and frivolous, Fuller said. Munn had warned the public, through some material related to a failed jail bond election last year, that the jail had many problems. Experts retained by the plaintiffs also pointed to many hazards.

A report from a Colorado sheriff stated the current jail was "dangerous" and should be phased out, Fuller read from the report.

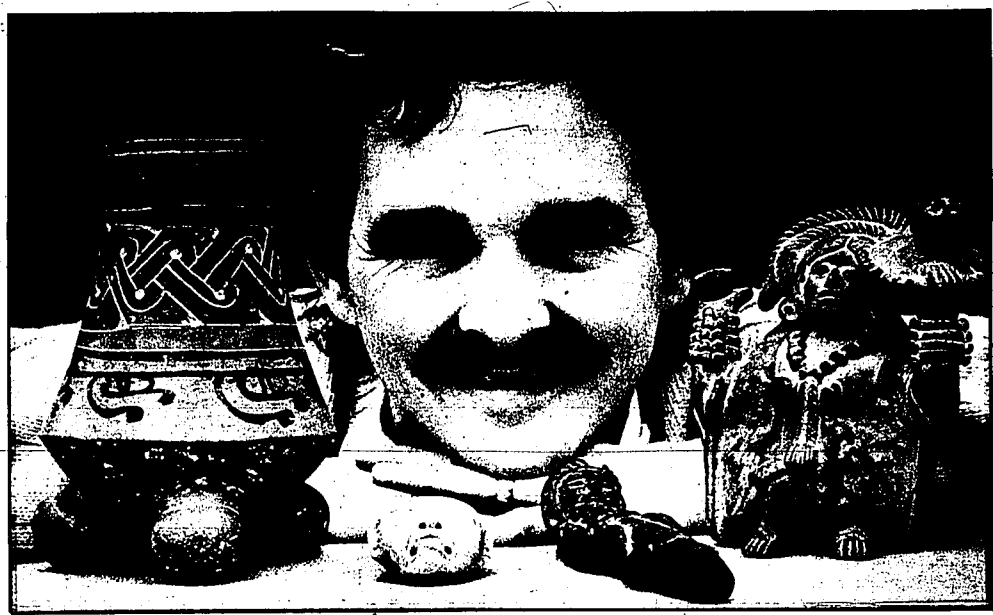

"We are indeed the prevailing party," he added. "I feel we got the job done, and if we hadn't have filed it wouldn't have got done."

What really concerned him was that the public might think all the problems are solved after the completion of interim solutions the county agreed to implement, Fuller said.

But the current jail never will be "okay," he added. He may be considered the "bad guy" for filing the suit, but the litigation forced the county into action, Fuller said. As a result of the agreement, some fire and safety hazards and the potential of lawsuits that could cripple the county financially would be minimized.

Many so-called normal citizens are finding themselves in jail because of the stricter drunken-driving laws, Fuller argued.

"They certainly are entitled to have a safe jail," he said. "If the bond issue doesn't pass, Fuller warned, 'I'm

James Woods poses with some of the Herrett's collection of Mayan artifacts: a "tripod jar," left, an Olmec pendant, a flute and a whistle

Three weeks in ruins

Museum director leaves today for dig to study Mayans

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — James Woods will travel great lengths and get down on his knees to bring information home to local school children.

Woods, director of the Herrett Museum, leaves today for an archaeological expedition in Central America.

For the next three weeks, he will sift through the ruins of the Mayan Indians in Colha, Belize, a small country on the coast of the Gulf of Honduras, next to Guatemala and Mexico.

The expedition is part of EarthWatch, a program that teams volunteers with professional archaeologists to work side-by-side at sites around the world. Woods will join archaeologists from the University of Texas at San Antonio and Texas A & M University on a dig to study the Mayans, an advanced civilization of farmers and tradesmen who lived on the Yucatan Peninsula between 600 and 900 A.D.

Because of strict customs laws, artifacts no longer are allowed to leave Belize, so Woods will not bring pieces back. However, the information, he gleans will be used to build a better Mayan exhibit, planned for the Herrett Museum this fall.

Herrett's has a small collection of Mayan artifacts, ranging from an intricately carved whistle to jade jewelry and pottery pieces. The pieces were collected and later donated by Norman Herrett.

Museum workers are in the process of identifying the artifacts from Herrett's collection, which will be part of a Mayan exhibit that will open in September at the museum.

In the past, the museum's exhibits, geared toward teaching area school children, have attracted 10,000 fourth- and sixth-graders, Woods said.

"That's why Norman Herrett got involved. He wanted to do something for public schools," Woods said.

One thing students may learn about is the impact satellites and civil wars are having on archaeological digs.

Mayan ruins have been studied in other parts of Central America, but because of all the civil unrest and wars in many Central American countries, digs have been halted, Woods said.

Sites also are being heavily looted in war-torn countries, which makes the Belize dig even more important, said Woods, who has dreamed for years of participating in a Mayan dig. It was a dream "nurtured" by Don Crabtree, a renowned archaeologist who lived in Kimberly.

"Don went down and did some work several years ago, and he said if you ever get a chance, go," said Woods, standing near a collection of Mayan artifacts in the basement of the museum.

Woods' personal expertise is in the study of stone tools in the Great Basin, rather than the Mayan culture. But, as museum director, he wants to expand his awareness so the museum's exhibits will be better.

"It's important for a museum to have experience in all areas," Woods said. "And the Mayans were so fascinating."

Mayans developed a decimal system much like our own, were good at predicting solar and lunar events, developed a sophisticated calendar system and had an elaborate highway and trade network, Woods said.

With the aid of satellite photographs, archaeologists also are just discovering that the Mayans developed row crops and an irrigation system. In the dense jungles, canal and crop patterns were impossible to spot at ground level, Woods said.

"We're learning new things about (Mayans) all the time," he said.

New snow increases avalanche danger

By KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Avalanche danger is high at all elevations in the northern sections of the Sawtooth National Forest, said Ed Waldapfel of the U.S. Forest Service office in Twin Falls.

Cross-country skiers and other travelers are urged to stay out of backpack areas until more stability develops in the snowpack, Waldapfel said.

Waldapfel stressed, however, that developed ski areas are safe for skiers. Snow conditions are continuously being monitored at those areas and avalanche control efforts have been taken where needed.

In the South Hills and Burley District south of Twin Falls, Waldapfel said, avalanche danger is low to moderate. "It's imperative for people to understand, however, that it doesn't mean that an avalanche can't or won't occur," he added.

In the mountains to the north, Waldapfel said, dense well-developed slabs of snow have formed on top of lighter snow, creating very unstable conditions. The weight of a single skier could cause the slabs to release and start an avalanche, he said.

Butch Harper, snow ranger with the Sawtooth National Forest's Ketchum Ranger District, said skiers in the north should "be really careful on anything steeper than 32 degrees." It is also recommended that skiers avoid narrow chutes and gullies.

Harper said forecasts predict mountains in the north will get another 6 to 8 inches of snow at higher elevations this weekend, with rain in the valleys.

Over the past week, heavy, wet snow has created avalanche problems throughout the Forest Service's Intermountain Region.

Shoshone School Board to discuss cuts today

By HOWARD MILLER
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Shoshone School Board Chairman Donna Hibbard has called a special meeting of the board at 7 p.m. today to discuss personnel and program cuts.

Because of financial problems in the district, the trustees will make recommendations about classes and staff in an effort to get the district operating in the black, Hibbard said.

The recommendations that come out of today's meeting, however, will be proposals only, she said. Patrons will have a chance to comment on the proposals at a public meeting

March 4 before any final action is taken.

"There's a possibility that someone out there has an idea we haven't even thought of," Hibbard said.

The board met in executive session following its regular meeting last week to hear Superintendent Tim Adsit's recommendations on potential reductions.

Because the board was unable to agree on proposals to submit to the public, Hibbard said she called the extra meeting for today.

"It was a pretty emotional meeting," she said. "Any time you

Superintendent blasts lack of funding

By MICHAEL VANAUDELN
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — With education fighting an uphill battle in the Legislature, Kimberly School Board Superintendent Richard Bauscher said Friday he is upset with the lack of funding for education in the state.

"I think they (legislators) have a responsibility and they have not accepted it," he said. "But we will continue to pressure them."

Despite passage by the House of Representatives of a 5 percent-sales tax bill, Bauscher said he feels education is being neglected. "There was not a dime for education," he said.

"I don't think the Legislature is going to move to provide the kind of funding that education needs," he said. "No, I'm not optimistic at all."

However, Bauscher will continue to supervise operations of the Kimberly School Board for at least three more years. His contract was extended Thursday by the Kimberly School Board to June 30, 1989.

The board also gave one-year contracts for supervising positions: the three school principals, food supervisor, maintenance supervisor and special education supervisor.

In other business at Thursday's board meeting, the trustees changed the date of the high school graduation ceremony from May 23 to May 22 due to a scheduling conflict with the state track meet. Bauscher said Kimberly may have from six to 12 seniors attending the meet.

"Yes, we have had a little resistance from some of the seniors," Bauscher said. "Usually, the seniors are out two weeks before the rest of the school, but this time they will be out two days later."

"This way, they can be accounted for," he joked.

Bauscher said that if needed, the board has the power to waive the 180-day rule if requirements are fulfilled but said the extra days would be of benefit to the senior students.

The board also agreed to continue the Teachers' Educational Reimbursement system that the Kimberly district adopted a few years ago. Teachers who take extra college classes that are applicable to their teaching subjects are reimbursed $200 from district funds for each class.

"We feel that we need to go the extra mile and that it's necessary to keep up the quality of the teachers," Bauscher said. He said he did not know if any other district in the state had a similar program.

 anyone who wants to open a clinic in Jackpot, Nev., where there is little prospect of a doctor going to work of his own accord.
 The hospital should not be allowed to pit its high-volume laundry against private laundries that service hotels and resorts in the Magic Valley, he said. Nor should the hospital be allowed to use its kitchen for a catering service to which it with other kitchens in town; he said.

Both plans have been considered by the hospital in the past two years as ways to boost revenues.
 Bingham and Taylor were joined Friday by Idaho Hospital Association lobbyist John Hutchison, who said his group and the Idaho Association of Counties both support the bill.
 Hutchison represents 47 of 48 hospitals in Idaho, 19 of which are county hospitals.

Bingham told the committee the bill will allow county hospitals to survive in the competitive health-care market by making them better able to go into partnership with private firms and to contract medical services to large corporations at pre-negotiated rates.
 Without the law, those moves are not possible, he said.
 The committee took no vote on the bill and will consider it further next week.

Jail

 coming back into court to close that jail.
 Attorney Lloyd Webb, who represented the county, county commissioners and Sheriff Jim Mann, questioned whether the plaintiffs really were the "prevailing party."
 The plaintiffs prevailed on some issues in the case, but not all, Webb said. Under Idaho law, the plaintiffs must "wholly prevail," he added.
 The defendant's case wasn't frivolous, Webb continued.
 "They (the commissioners) worked their hearts out for three years to get a new jail," Webb said.
 Fuller was to blame for running up his own bill because he filed amended versions to the original complaint, which "swept with a very wide brush," Webb said.
 The "zealith" of this unnecessary activity was questioning the commissioners' right to hire private counsel for the case instead of using County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter, Webb said. The commissioners had every right to choose who they wanted to represent them, he said.
 The commissioners responded quickly to the case, cooperated and rightly sought to clarify issues raised by Fuller, Webb said.

 "Had we chosen, we would have tested Mr. Fuller's mettle" on several factual and legal issues, he added.
 Now they are being punished because Fuller accused them of dragging out the case, he said.
 The court must decide whether the time Fuller spent on the case directly relates to the action resulting from the lawsuit and what degree of success the lawsuit achieved, Webb said.

Shoshone

 are talking about making cuts, you are going to have differences of opinions," she said.
 Before trustees went into the closed session, board members from the district staff to explore all possibilities before reducing programs and personnel and to be honest and open with the staff and the community.
 Lincoln Grade School Principal Dan Pagoga, speaking on behalf of the teaching staff, said the teachers have a growing uneasiness about the possibility of cuts.
 "There's a concern that we will not be able to pass an override," he said.
 Pagoga said the staff feels there has been some misrepresentation to the community. "We need to be very clear about our position."
 "We should not take the tack that there will be cuts if an override doesn't pass," Pagoga said. "We should make the cuts first, be honest and open as much as possible to the community and explain to them this is what we want to do — this is what we need for help."
 Shoshone Education Association President Larry Bond said local people are concerned about the quality of education. "They do not want to see it destroyed at any cost," he said.
 Bond said the most important consideration should be the needs of the students. "What's going to happen to the students if we make these cuts? Is it worth the money?" he asked. He said decisions that would affect a lot of people needed to be made very carefully.
 Hibbard said the board was not anxious to make any cuts, and is agonizing over the decision.
 Trustee Rusty Tews told the teachers that overcoming the school district's deficit may require some cuts.
 "Your point is well taken," he said. "Philosophically, I don't think this board wants to cut anything. We kind of like the school we've got."
 "We've got a goal. We've got to overcome the deficit."
 The Shoshone School District faces a deficit of $70,000 for 1968-69, $120,000 for the coming fiscal year, ADSB said. An in-district deficit accounts for $70,000, with state shortfalls estimated to reach as much as $50,000.

Lincoln Grade School teacher Sue Hafner questioned whether the board expected to eliminate the deficit in one year. She said the teachers would support a program to help save the quality of education in the schools.
 "But, I don't think we could support something that we do not agree with philosophically or that we didn't think was in the best interest of the schools," Hafner said.
 Hibbard said it would be impossible to help save a solution that would meet with everyone's approval. "I don't think that there's any real happy answers," he said.
 Pagoga agreed, saying no decision will be easy. "I know the board has agonized over this. I know the staff has agonized. I know that Tim (ADSB) and I have agonized," he said.
 "The main thrust," Pagoga said, "is we need to be open and we need to be honest, not only with the public, but with our personnel. When they know they should know."
 Hibbard thanked the teachers for coming to the board meeting. "This is going to be a crucial year, and we need your help," he said.

Church to host peace workshop Monday

TWIN FALLS — "Ecumenical Alternatives to Armageddon" is the topic of the fifth in a series of meetings promoting "Peace," to be held Monday evening at the Church of Brethren, 461 Filer Ave., beginning at 7:30 p. m.
 The workshop is free and guests are welcome.
 The Rev. Bill Taylor of St.

Jerome's Catholic Church in Jerome, featured speaker for the evening. The topic is "The position against modern evangelical interpretations of the 'Book of the End,' as set forth in the 'Book of Daniel and the Book of Revelation.'
 The final workshop of the series will be held March 3 at the Presbyterian Church. The topic

Gov. John Evans supported the bill at a speech in Burley this week.
 The new Western Borrowers Association grew out of the Magic Valley Farm Borrowers Association at the meeting earlier this week. The Western association will operate throughout the region, officials said earlier. The Snake River Borrowers Association also was created this week to cover eastern Idaho.
 The Magic Valley Farm Borrowers Association also dropped the reference to "Farm" in its name at a meeting. President Walt Muelter said.

Man catches suspect but comes up short

TWIN FALLS — When Bob Richards, manager of The Lockhart Company's office at 161 Main Ave., looked up from his work Tuesday and saw someone in the front office reaching into the cash register, he caught the thief.
 Richards told police he was in the back part of the office and his secretary was out at about 2 p. m.

He heard the door close and when he looked up, saw a figure behind the counter, reaching into the till.
 Richards chased the man out the door and down the street to 156 2nd Ave. W., where he arrested and stopped the young man. Richards said the suspect gave him back what he thought was the money taken, so he let him go. However, when he returned to the office and counted the money, he found $756 had been taken from the cash register and the suspect had kept about $50.

 Police said the area was combed after the man, but he was not found. Officers said the crime was conducted by the thief, since the loss was only $50.

Evolution-advocacy charges dropped

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Trustees of Abilene Christian University have voted their support of two biology professors who were accused of advocating the theory of evolution in their classrooms last year...

Williams and Manis sought to convince their students of the truth of the organic evolution of man, or intended to undermine their students' faith in the Bible.

ACU professors create 'state of art' hymnal

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — "Bringing in the Sheaves" is out because it's too rural, but "Victory in Jesus" is in as the Churches of Christ adopts its first completely revised hymnal in nearly a half-century...

The lecturership, put on by the Churches of Christ, was expected to draw 12,000 visitors from all over the country.

Boyd used as an example the song, "Bringing in the Sheaves." The old hymn is not included in the new hymnal, but "Victory in Jesus," a newer popular hymn, is included, he said.

Shroud of Turin painter's work — researcher

ELIZABETHTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Tests show the images of a mysterious Shroud of Turin came not from Jesus Christ's body and spirit but from an artist's paint brush, a researcher says.

McCrone Research Institute in Elizabethtown, Pa., is conducting a two-day conference on the shroud at Elizabethtown College, McCrone said he based his conclusion on an electronic analysis of fibers he collected by pressing tape on the cloth in 1978 and the color of parts of the image.

He said his analysis found iron oxide and vermillion on the red fibers and evidence of gel possibly used to bind paint.

What's what

Q. Are there any cowboys in Siberia?
A. Are indeed. And in The Philippines, Australia, and Hungary. Great horsemen, those Hungarian cowboys. Maybe the old cowboy movie so quickly went international because the cowboy himself was known to most nations. In France, the Camargue, Spain, the Andalusian. In Venezuela, llanero. In Chile, huaso. In Mexico, vaquero. And in the Argentine, gaucho.

Q. Cue cards used on movie and television sets were invented for one actor. Who?
A. John Barrymore.

Q. At what age did Prince Charles first get to vote?
A. Trick query. As a member of the House of Lords, he's not allowed to vote. Likewise, his mother, the Queen, and his father, Prince Philip.

TIME OF DEATH
Q. How does the medical examiner determine the murder victim's time of death?
A. Normal body temperature minus core rectal temperature divided by 1.5.

Train Speed Update: France's fastest trains now go 168 mph. Japan's, 149 mph.

Q. Why is the wedding ring worn on the third finger of the left hand?
A. Because that finger is the least used, least mobile, least sensitive, so most comfortable for said ring.

HAIR
Ten of the hairs on your head will stop growing today. If yours is a typical head.

Q. What's the color of raw nylon?
A. Translucent ivory.

Farmers now use Teflon-coated plows to turn sticky clay ground.

Q. In space, what differentiates "up" from "down"?
A. Nothing. No "up" and "down," only "inside" and "outside."

There are 479,001,600 ways to ring the 12 bells of the Canterbury Cathedral.

Give a newborn eagle 30 days of growth and it will see four times as well as a man with 20/20.

Be more affectionate with your mate and others and take that "off your shoulder" so that you'll be happier.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) One of great experience can show you how to build a firmer structure to your mode of living.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) A good day to make improvements to your home, add touches of artistry to it and strive for more comfort.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she should have the finest education in some field that he or she desires to pursue as a life work and be happy in it, and will rise very quickly to the top since that is the desire. Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Use this day to your advantage by considering your plans that have the greatest scope to them and going after them with courage and conviction.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You have fine creative ideas and can make them operate nicely for you so be very sociable and charming.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Spend as much time as you can with kin and show you are devoted and interested in their welfare.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A fine day for visiting with those who are successful and can help you to become that way, so listen to suggestions given to you.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get out in public and make a fine impression on others and add to the prestige you now enjoy.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Study your financial status and find some way of gaining a greater abundance in the future.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Look to a generous pal who can show you how to gain your objectives without too much work and trouble.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be sure to see a prominent person you know who can give you backing you need and forget all that data gathering today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Go to some new place where you can garner first-hand knowledge you need, and your car soon increase your success.

'Bloom County' creator leaves hospital; will resume strip

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — "Bloom County" cartoonist Berke Breathed, who underwent surgery for a fractured neck after his ultralight plane crashed last month, has been discharged from the hospital.

Breathed, 28, was released Thursday from St. Joseph Hospital. He is able to walk and will slowly resume his activities, said Bob Fenton, hospital spokesman.

"He told me he's going to start immediately working on 'Bloom County,'" Fenton said. The nationally syndicated strip has been in repeats recently because of the artist's injury.

Beached-freighter story rights sold by socialite

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Heiress Mollie Wilmot, better known as the socialite who put-up-with-the-rusty Venezuelan freighter Mercedes beached in her backyard for 104 days, has sold the movie rights of her saga to Walt Disney Productions.

"Oh yes, it's fun. It's more than fun," Ms. Wilmot said Thursday, declining to say how much she was paid for the film. "It's something I can't believe, to think there's so much enthusiasm and interest."

Beverly Hills producer David Permut said he had followed the story of the 194-foot Mercedes from the time a storm beached it on Ms. Wilmot's estate in November 1984. Various attempts to salvage the vessel failed—and hundreds of sightseers trooped to the post estate.

Mercedes' explosive finish—the ship was blown-up and sunk for an artificial reef on March 6, 1985—was attended by scores of reporters and photographers as Ms. Wilmot watched from the Goodyear Blimp.

We just felt the situation was very funny," said Permut, "and in fact, we're thinking of tailoring it for Bette Midler."

Danish review labels Redford, 'disastrous'

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Meryl Streep "works impressively with accents" but Robert Redford is "a college boy fat to bursting with hamburgers," according to some Danish reviews of the film "Out of Africa" which opened in the home country of actor Karen Blixen.

Baroness Blixen, writing under the name Isak Dinesen, chronicled her years on a Kenyan coffee plantation in the work on which the Sidney Pollack film is based.

The film, which received 11-Oscar nominations, is "beautiful, entertaining and independent," the Copenhagen daily Politiken said, but the tabloid Aktuelt called Redford "disastrous."

West German magazine denies it is anti-Semitic

NEW YORK (AP) — A chief editor at the influential West German magazine Der Spiegel has defended the publication against New York Mayor Edward Koch's claim that it is anti-Semitic.

A letter by the flamboyant mayor appears in the weekly's current issue in response to a Nov. 4, 1985 story that said during Koch's 1977 campaign, "the beautiful Jewish Bess Myerson appeared before the voters side by side with the ugly Jew Ed Koch."

"Is this racist emphasis endemic in German journalism, or is it specific to Der Spiegel?" Koch wrote.

'Voice from the grave' indicts smoking habit

NEW YORK (AP) — Four months after dying of lung cancer, actor Yul Brynner is appearing in a public service spot in which he says, "Now that I'm gone, I tell you: Don't smoke."

A spokeswoman for the American Cancer Society, which produced the 30-second spot, said it was "the most powerful personal indictment of smoking" ever made.

The ad ends with the American Cancer Society's logo on the screen and Brynner's voice saying, "If I could take back that smoking we wouldn't be talking about any cancer, I'm convinced of that."

Cancer society spokeswoman Susan Islam said Friday that the spot was "a voice from the grave, who believed he died from lung cancer because he smoked."

Brynner, who won fame as the King of Slam in the long-running musical "The King and I," died Oct. 10, 1985 at the age of 65. He had been approached months earlier by the cancer society, but wrote on Feb. 19, 1985, that he felt "my public appearances, where I speak out against smoking, are more effective than a sterile TV commercial."

Jacheline Demave, a publicist for "Good Morning America," said the interview with Brynner was shown the day after he died, "and calls came in from all over the country, suggesting it be used to stop people from smoking."

Ms. Islam said Brynner's wife was moved by the idea, but asked the American Cancer Society to wait before releasing a public service spot.

It was just such an appearance, on ABC's "Good Morning America," that was used to make the eloquent public service spot.

On the Jan. 7, 1985, program, Brynner said, "I really wanted to make a commercial when I discovered that I was that sick and my time was so limited and to make a commercial that says simply, 'Now that I'm gone, I tell you: Don't smoke. Whatever you do, just don't smoke.'"

Ms. Islam said 350,000 Americans die from smoking-related illnesses each year, adding, "If this spot can help one of those people quit smoking, that's part of Brynner's legacy to the world."

JOHN ZACCARO JR. Enters plea of innocent

Ferraro's son is arrested on cocaine count

MONTEPELIER, Vt. (AP) — John Zaccaro Jr., 22, son of former vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro, has been arrested on a charge of possessing cocaine.

Zaccaro, a senior at Middlebury College in Middlebury, was arrested late Thursday by local and state police and arraigned Friday in Vermont District Court for Addison County.

Zaccaro pleaded innocent to possession of a regulated drug before Judge Frank Mahady and was released on his own recognizance, according to a court clerk.

Addison County Deputy State's Attorney John Quinn said local and state police joined in executing a search warrant of Zaccaro's off-campus apartment and car Thursday night after an officer made an undercover sale to him.

Quinn said six to eight grams of cocaine was found, along with about $2,000. State police described the cash as "directly related" to cocaine trafficking. Also seized were "electronic scales" and other cocaine-related paraphernalia.

Quinn refused to comment whether Zaccaro might be part of a drug trafficking ring.

Judge holds wife of heir to prenuptial accord

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — "We gave it our best shot," the wife of 79-year-old Kleenex heir James Kimberly said after a judge ruled she will get a divorce settlement in keeping with a 1969 prenuptial agreement, her lawyer quoted her as saying.

Jacqueline Kimberly, 36, had asked for $40,000 a year from her husband, whom she accused of threatening her with a knife and a gun. But Palm Beach County Circuit Judge James R. Stewart Jr. said Thursday

Israelis advance

KFAR DOUNINE, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli troops and tanks stormed this south Lebanon village Friday after being ambushed by Muslim guerrillas on the fifth day of Israel's huge sweep to find two captured soldiers, U.N. officials said.

A military source in Tel Aviv said Israeli soldiers entered Kfar Dounine to conduct searches and were fired on by guerrillas in the village.

The Israelis opened up with tank and machine-gun fire and swept into the Shitte Moslem village, which is 5 miles north of the security belt Israel has proclaimed and occupies on the border and 13 miles from the actual frontier.

Timur Goksel, spokesman for the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, UNIFIL, told The Associated Press a Ghananian soldier was wounded. Other casualties were not known.

Kfar Dounine is headquarters of the Ghananian battalion attached to the nine-nation U.N. force.

Reporters were unable to get into the village when the Israelis sealed it off, but explosions and heavy machine-gun fire were heard and plumes of smoke rose above the hamlet.

Goksel said 70 men were herded into Dounine's mosque for interrogation as Israeli troops searched the village house-to-house.

Soviets' Far East warriors will stay

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union will not agree to remove its medium-range missiles from the Far East in exchange for the withdrawal of U.S. missiles in Western Europe, a Soviet commentator said Friday.

"The Soviet Union is prepared to destroy its SS-20 missiles in Europe, but Washington will never make the U.S.S.R. dismantle the SS-20 missiles in the eastern regions of the country in return for the elimination of the American medium-range missiles in Europe," said Alexander Malyskin, a disarmament analyst for the Novosti press agency.

Soviet leaders have said before that their missiles in the Far East were necessary for national security.

Tutu's message draws boos

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A crowd of 40,000 blacks shouted angrily and booed Bishop Desmond Tutu on Friday when he told them that a meeting with the white government had gained no concessions on their grievances.

"We are going to be rulers in this land," the black Nobel Peace laureate, who has calmed many mobs during South Africa's long agony of violence, told the sullen crowd at the sports stadium in the riot-torn black township of Alexandra.

"When? When? When?" the people shouted.

He told the people that President P.W. Botha's government had promised to investigate and consider their demands for removal of police patrols from the township and release of riot detainees.

PLO's Arafat still favors talks

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Yasser Arafat was quoted Friday as saying he was ready to resume discussions on Middle East peace talks, despite King Hussein of Jordan's decision to end a year-long attempt to work out a joint approach with the PLO.

Arafat, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, was quoted by Saudi Arabian newspaper Al-Sharq Al-Awsat as saying Hussein's announcement Wednesday left the Middle East peace prospects "open to all kinds of eventualities."

Oldest man dies at age 120

TOKYO (AP) — Shigechiyo Izumi, who had the oldest verifiable birth date in the world, died of pneumonia Friday. He was 120.

Izumi died at his home in Tokunoshima, the semi-tropical island where he was born on June 29, 1865, and spent almost his entire life, police officials on the island said.

Kyoto News Service and Japan Broadcasting Corporation said Izumi's cause of death was pneumonia.

Honor roll

Loman, Pierson register best game, series

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Ken Loman had the high game in city league bowling action last week, but the runner-up was a woman.

Jeanie Mathis' 247 in the Magic City League at the Bowldrome was 10 pins shy of Loman's 257, which came in the Dalrymen's League at the Bowldrome.

Second-best men's game belonged to Greg Halter, who rolled a 246 in the Industrial League at the Bowldrome.

Roger Pierson's 686 in the City Mixed League at the Bowldrome was far and away the top series in the city.

Barb Aslett had the high women's series, a 606, in the Tuesday A.M. Trio League at the Bowldrome.

New Jersey shocks Lakers, 121-106

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — After four straight losses, New Jersey Nets Coach Dave Wohl felt it was time for a change.

Wohl's decision to give forward Mickey Johnson his first start of the season paid off Friday night, as Johnson tallied 21 points and Mike Gminski and Albert King each added 20, giving the Nets to a 121-106 NBA upset of the Los Angeles Lakers.

"I feel the insertion of Mickey in the lineup gave us a big spark," Wohl said. "He helped us match up against the big Lakers lineup and did a good job from beginning to end."

Johnson, who scored 10 points in the first quarter as the Nets took a 29-14 lead, enjoyed the challenge of a starting role.

"I like starting," said the 11-year NBA veteran from Aurora College. "I thought I helped get a good tempo going for us that carried throughout the game."

Johnson, who scored 10 points in the first quarter as the Nets took a 29-14 lead, enjoyed the challenge of a starting role.

Richardson arrested for breaking into his own house

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey Nets' guard Michael Ray Richardson was arrested for breaking into his own house last week, police said Friday.

Richardson, who was charged with assault under the Domestic Violence Act and the matter will probably be handled by Bergen County Family Court, the chief said.

The alleged assault was verbal, "probably from an argument after he realized she locked him out," Alderisio said.

Mrs. Richardson had obtained the court order two days after an apparent domestic dispute, said Alderisio.

A team spokesman said Richardson participated in a practice session Friday and was expected to play against the Los Angeles Lakers Friday night.

Meanwhile, team officials said they were not too concerned with a cut inside Richardson's left hand that forced the player to sit out practice Thursday.

Pro basketball

The victory was the Bulls' second straight, marking the first time they had won consecutive games since Jan. 2.

Trailing 102-89 with 4:02 left, the Pacers scored seven straight points. Ron Anderson had a chance to cut Atlanta's lead to four with 32 seconds left but missed two free throws.

Golden St. 125 L.A. Clippers 123

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reserve guard Terry Teagle scored 24 points and hit a 14-foot jumper with 27 seconds remaining Friday night to lift the Golden State Warriors to a 125-123 NBA victory over the Los Angeles Clippers.

Teagle made his game-winning shot from the left baseline, despite being closely guarded by Cedric Maxwell. It gave the Warriors only their third road victory of the season in 29 games.

The Clippers took a 123-119 lead on a layup by Rudy White, who had 18 of his game-high 26 points in the final quarter.

Baseball

NEW YORK (AP) — Pitcher Orel Hershiser of the Los Angeles Dodgers became the first $1 million winner in this winter's baseball arbitration hearings Thursday when he was granted that salary for the 1986 season.

Hershiser, who made $220,000 last year, had been offered $600,000 by the Dodgers after posting a 19-3 record and 2.03 earned run average. He gives the Dodgers three million dollars in their retention.

Teammate Fernando Valenzuela reached that figure in arbitration in 1983, then played for $1.2 million last year and signed a three-year, $5.5 million contract this week.

Earlier, Boston catcher Rich Gedman's $1 million bid had been rejected in arbitration. He was granted the Red Sox's figure of $650,000.

In other arbitration rulings Thursday, New York Met pitcher Ron Darling and Texas Ranger outfielder Gene Ward lost their cases and Cleveland Indian outfielder Brett Butler was a winner.

That gave the players 15 winners and the 17 losers in this year's arbitration procedure, which ended Friday.

L.A.'s Hershiser wins million from arbitrator

Darling, who had a 16-6 record and 2.30 ERA last season when he made $210,000, had asked for $615,000. Ward, who had a 10-10 record and $140,000, had asked for $210,000. Butler, who was 10-8 last season, won a $530,000 salary in arbitration.

Ward, who batted .267 with 15 home runs and 70 runs batted in for the Rangers, had his request for $200,000 turned down. He was given the Rangers' offer of $165,000, up from the $720,000 he made last year.

Fingers refuses shave, so Reds won't hire him

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Relief pitcher Rolfe Fingers lost his chance to play for the Cincinnati Reds when he refused to get a haircut Friday.

Fingers, who most recently played for the American League's Milwaukee Brewers, contacted Berghesh by phone Friday at the clubhouse of the Reds' spring training complex in Tampa.

After their conversation, Berghesh said he would not hire Fingers. "Fingers started off by asking me if what he had heard and read was true, that is, would we require as a condition for trying out with the Reds, his removal of his handlebar mustache?" I told him, it would be uniformly applied.

Protesting Connors defaulted from semifinals

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Jimmy Connors, enraged by what he felt were "incompetent" line calls, was defaulted Friday for refusing to play in the fifth set of his semifinal match against Ivan Lendl at the Lipton International Players Championships tennis tournament.

Lendl, ranked No. 1 in the world and seeded first here, will meet second-seeded Mats Wilander in Sunday's title match. Wilander advanced when his opponent, fellow Swede Stefan Edberg, retired early in the second set because of a pulled stomach muscle with Wilander leading 6-4, 1-1.

The top two women seeds play their championship match Saturday, with Chris Evert Lloyd defending her No. 1 seeding against Steffi Graf of West Germany.

Tennis

Connors then demanded that Shales call out tournament supervisors for Lendl to discuss the situation.

When Connors refused to return to action, he was given a point penalty, closing out the sixth game and increasing Lendl's lead to 4-2.

When he still refused to play, the next penalty — a default — was called. The official score was 1-6, 6-1, 6-2, 2-6, 5-2, default, with Lendl advancing to the final.

He managed to play despite the pain, but he had trouble serving. He lost his serve in the second and 10th games of the first set, but kept it close by breaking Wilander's serve in the seventh game.

"I feel sad because I really had been playing well here," said Edberg, the fifth seed here. "But it hurts really a lot. It's not right to be out here and play when you can't play your best."

He said he doubts he will be able to play in the men's doubles final with Anders Jarryd Saturday afternoon, which would give the title to Americans Brad Gilbert and Vince Van Patten. Edberg also said he was questionable for Sweden's Davis Cup match March 7-9 against Denmark.

Wilander said he felt sorry for his friend, and for himself.
