6th Fleet sinks 2 more Libyan patrol vessels

By NORMAN BLACK The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. jets and warships destroyed two Libyan patrol boats and damaged a radar missile site Tuesday, and the Pentagon declared the renewed American action a defense against "hostile Libyan intentions," even though no hostile fire provoked it.

For a second straight day, the Navy's 6th Fleet opened fire on Col. Moammar Khadafi's forces in the dispute over Libya's claim to sovereignty over the Gulf of Sidra.

At first, on Tuesday morning, the Pentagon's chief spokesman said the renewed attacks came in retaliation against Libyan missile attacks aimed unsuccessfully at U.S. planes. Later, the administration said there had been no new fire from the Libyans.

One of the patrol boats was sunk by the cruiser Yorktown, marking the first time a Navy ship had used its surface-to-surface missiles against a Libyan vessel.

U.S. officials said the attacks, which occurred during the pre-dawn hours Tuesday, Tripoli time — or late Monday night Mountain Standard Time — were justified to protect American sailors and ships from attack by a country that had already demonstrated "hostile intentions."

The attacks came even though the Libyan boats and missile installation did not fire on American forces. But U.S. officials said the battle force had standing orders that declared any Libyan plane or boat approaching them to have hostile intentions.

"We have been given ample evidence of hostile Libyan intentions... and we will defend ourselves," declared Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims, referring to Libya's launch of ground-to-air missiles against U.S. planes on Monday.

In a televised interview on the "CBS Evening News" Tuesday night, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger also would not rule out a further U.S. response. "If we're fired on again or if hostile acts are committed or hostile intent is demonstrated, then we will have to take action to preserve and protect the fleet and the men in it," he said.

There were conflicting reports, meantime, as to whether the United States might end its maneuvers below Libya's so-called "line of death" before the scheduled deadline of April 1.

Secretary of State George Shultz said the Mediterranean exercise, which began Saturday night, would continue as planned. But Weinberger and Sims both suggested that the commander of the 6th Fleet, Vice Adm. Frank Kelso, could decide to end the exercise before April 1.

Reagan sends Honduras aid

By W. DALE NELSON The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan gave $20 million in emergency military assistance to Honduras on Tuesday and agreed to the use of U.S. helicopter pilots in response to an incursion by troops of the Marxist-led government of neighboring Nicaragua.

As many as 1,500 Nicaraguan troops had crossed the border into Honduras, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said. The Honduras government confirmed the incursion and said it had requested U.S. aid.

Speakes said U.S. personnel are "not to be introduced into combat situations."

"The use of the president's authority responds to the unforeseen emergency which exists in Honduras," Speakes said. "The personnel are not to be introduced into combat situations."

Nicaragua's Marxist-led Sandinista government, however, called the border crossing report "one more lie by the Reagan administration."

Administration officials described the Nicaraguan military move as the largest of more than 100 Sandinista border crossings into Honduras since the Nicaraguan rebels began using that country as a base of operations more than four years ago.

White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan, after meeting with Republican Senate leaders, said transportation assistance will be approved or disapproved by Congress.

supplied by U.S. helicopters and pilots. He said they are in Honduras already as part of an on-going military exercise, "Operation Big Pine '86."

Regan said that while they will be used in support of the Honduran military forces "they will go nowhere near the location of the invasion."

The president's action came as the Senate prepared to consider his request, already rejected by the House, for $100 million in aid to the Contras opposing the Nicaraguan government.

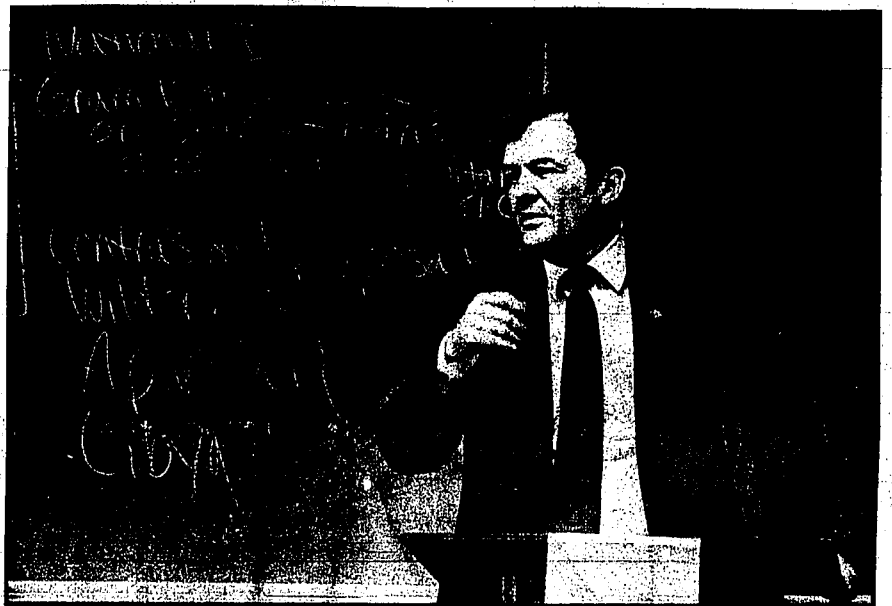

Republican Senate leaders said that the incident had greatly strengthened their hands and predicted approval of the aid package by a strong margin.

The GOP leaders moved Tuesday to delay the beginning of debate on the aid package, and a vote on the plan was expected today or Thursday.

Speakes said that on Monday night, Honduran President Jose Azcona Hoyo "requested urgent U.S. military assistance to include assistance in airlifting Honduran troops as necessary."

Regan notified key members of Congress of his decision early Tuesday morning and signed the formal transfer of funds shortly before noon, his spokesman said.

Speakes said the action, which Regan, after meeting with shifts Pentagon funds into a foreign assistance account, is not subject to transportation assistance will be approved or disapproved by Congress.

Senate turns back budget amendment

By JAMES ROWLEY The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate narrowly rejected Tuesday a budget amendment requiring a balanced federal budget, killing by a single vote a proposal that opponents argued could grind the government to a halt.

The vote was 69-34, one vote short of the 70 votes — two-thirds of the Senate's 100 members — needed for approval.

The Senate's vote reversed one taken four years ago, when the chamber approved a similar budget "constitutional" amendment by a vote of 69-31. A similar proposal in the House that year failed by 66 votes to get the needed two-thirds margin.

Idaho's Republican senators, James McClure and Steve Symms, both voted for the proposed amendment.

Ten Republicans joined Democrats in voting against the proposal, while 25 Democrats and 45 Republicans voted for the measure.

The White House issued a statement saying that President Reagan is disappointed that the Senate failed by only a single vote to simply ask the American Congress to do what every American family must spend no more money than they take in.

"Tonight's vote was merely a spur us to come back and try again," the White House statement said. "Presidential FILER — Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, defended both himself and President Reagan on Tuesday, saying the Libyan incident was justified, as was his no vote on Contra aid to Nicaragua.

Stallings, answering pointed questions from about 30 Filer High School students in an American government class, said he supported America's handling of the Libyan missile incident, and he called Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi "a lunatic."

"We were completely within our rights," said Stallings, who added Khadafi was angling for a situation to "kick America around."

American warplanes knocked out a Libyan missile site and disabled two guided-missile patrol boats on Monday after Libya fired at least six missiles at U.S. jets.

The incident was triggered when U.S. jets flew past Khadafi's "line of death" in the Gulf of Sidra, a line that extends 125 miles off Libya's shore. Internationally, all countries recognize only a 12-mile territorial limit offshore.

"Khadafi needed that kind of act to generate support at home," said Stallings. "Their economy is in shambles. He is not popular in his own country."

"Fortunately, he doesn't have anything to shoot with. I assume the missiles were written in Russian, and Libyans couldn't read the instructions," said Stallings, referring to the six missiles that missed American targets.

While Stallings said he does not anticipate a war with Libya, he said he does believe Khadafi will retaliate by stepping up terrorist activities against American tourists and students traveling in Europe and against American installations abroad.

"We need to beef up security at our embassies," Stallings said. "(Khadafi) will exploit it as far as he can."

When pressed by a student over where the incident will lead, Stallings said America was "limited in its options."

"There's nothing we can do short of war," he said.

Pressed again, Stallings said America would declare war on Libya if Khadafi sends hit squads to the United States, and if "we can't get them to Libya."

On his vote against Reagan's request to send $100 million to the Contra rebels fighting the Sandinista government in Nicaragua, Stallings said the vote may not have been "politically wise, but it was morally correct."

Stallings also said he received 2,800 calls last week before the Thursday vote, and 240-1 were against the aid.

Stallings said he was not opposed to any aid, but he said there should be some accountability over where the money was spent.

He said a Contra, who was in Washington last week lobbying for support, admitted that the $27 million in U.S. aid last year was used to buy Russian-made AK-47 machine guns.

"When I asked him where they bought those weapons, he said off the international market, from North Korea," said Stallings. "And you know our money is finding its way to Russia."

Stallings was asked later if he had a change of heart following reports late Monday that Nicaragua invaded Honduras to wipe out Contra bases.

"I have no information about that and no confirmation," said Stallings. "But if there is evidence of an invasion, we have a $20 million military aid package ready to send (to Honduras) to defend themselves. That's a different situation."

Turning to more local matters, one student asked Stallings what he thought about House Speaker T.W. Stivers, R-Twin Falls, telling a Boise teacher simply "Goodbye" after she wrote him a letter telling him she may not be able to stay and teach in Idaho.

Stallings said, "Idaho has the poorest excuse for a state Legislature I have seen. It was outrageous and insensitive, and it is a sign of the arrogance that comes from a one-party system."

'Pork barrel' bill passes, ends hope for extra school money

By QUANE KENYON The Associated Press

BOISE — It took a divide and conquer tactic, but the Idaho House on Tuesday voted 45-3 for a $7 million public works construction bill that apparently closes the door on efforts to pump significant amounts of extra money into the education budgets.

A bill loaded with appropriations for the colleges and universities won enough votes from legislators from those areas to carry, despite moderate Republican opposition. Even opponents of the measure, dubbed the "pork barrel" by some, acknowledged that it was difficult for college-town legislators to vote against it.

"This has been very carefully crafted politically to split higher education support from public school support," said Rep. Dean Haugenson, R-Coeur d'Alene.

Opponents made a last-minute effort to put the bill up for amendment, with a goal of taking $6.6 million out of the construction bill and putting it into public school support. But the vote was 61-33, one vote less than a similar effort achieved one day earlier.

Then 10 Democrats joined 35 Republicans in passing the bill, which now goes to the governor. The governor's press secretary, Jean Terra, said she has not discussed the measure with Gov. John Evans, and can't predict whether he will sign it.

All of the Democrats who supported the construction bill are from college towns except Silver Valley Democrats Lou Horvath and Dorothy McCann.

The debate centered on $6.6 million allocated to the colleges and universities for various construction projects. Opponents alleged those projects, not high on the priority list approved by the state Board of Education, were put into the bill mainly to buy support from college-town legislators.

Sponsor Rep. Mack Nelbaur, R-Paul, defended the extra money as long overdue. Some of goes for long-delayed maintenance work.

"You cannot run a good education system in a tent or on a lawn," said Nelbaur. "These are essential projects. They have gone without for years," he said.

Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, a 10-year legislative veteran, called his vote against the construction bill "the most difficult of my legislative career."

He said it was a hard vote, because the bill contains money for a multipurpose building at the Eastern Idaho Vocational-Technical School at Idaho Falls. But Bateman, a school teacher, said he is committed to keeping public school funding up.

"We have to consider the greater needs of the state," he said.

Rep. Robert Fry, R-Horseshoe Bend, praised Bateman's "honesty and integrity" in the face of political pressure and urged other legislators to do the same.

Rep. Pam Bengson, R-Boise, led the unsuccessful drive to put the bill up for amendment, so more money could be put into the public school budget. She said she voted to raise the state sales tax from 4 to 5 percent so more money would go to schools.

But Rep. Preston Brimhall, R-Idaho Falls, said he didn't feel that all the revenue from the additional sales tax had to go to public school. "Education doesn't require special treatment," he said.

Of the EIVTS appropriation, Brimhall denied it was put on the construction list to buy votes. "It's on the list because of its merits. It is not pork barrel," he said.

Rep. Steve Herndon, D-Sandpoint, calling it a "crummy, rotten bill," said the $6.6 million wasn't going for low-priority projects from sales tax revenue; in reality, it was coming from the underfunded general state agencies.

U.S. strikes Libya on legal pretext after extended hostility

By BARRY SCHWEID
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration has seized on a legal argument with Col. Muammar Khadafi to bloody Libya after 16 years of unending verbal and economic hostility with the erratic regime in Tripoli.

While fighting in the Gulf of Sidra has escalated, the conflict so far is limited to the Libyan coast. But the consequences could be larger. Here, in question and answer form, are some of the emerging issues and the outlook for dealing with them.

What was the aim of the Reagan administration in contesting Khadafi's claim that the waterway is strictly Libyan territory? U.S. officials say the purpose simply was to assert the recognized right of international transit. Suggestions that the U.S. armada was sent to Sidra to provoke Khadafi were dismissed Monday by Larry Speakes, the presidential spokesman, as unfounded.

And yet the Reagan administration undeniably has grown angry and frustrated with Khadafi and the purported role Libya has played in training and executing terrorist attacks against Americans and other civilians.

"Force may not be the best means, but it may be necessary," Secretary of State George P. Shultz said in January on ways to contain the mercurial Libyan leader.

Taming Khadafi could be one aim of the U.S. military assault; trying to isolate him could be another.

Analysis

What are the potential consequences to the United States?

A reduction in terrorism, if Khadafi feels threatened by the display of American military power. More attacks on U.S. targets, conversely, if he feels he is being backed by the United States and decides to seek retribution. He vowed to maintain "brave confrontation," and there were thinly veiled threats of suicide missions in the Libyan media.

Perhaps the greatest fear in the nuclear age is that a small country like Libya would somehow get its hands on an atomic weapon and use it to terrorize enemies or even detente.

Diplomatically the administration risks the disapproval of some allies and neutrals. Italian Prime Minister Bettino Craxi said U.S. military action did not appear to be an appropriate way to uphold international law. "Italy does not want a war on its front door," he said.

The West German foreign ministry said it hoped the hostilities would not escalate. Greece and Australia called for restraint.

The media in the Arab world condemned U.S. military actions against Libya.

What are the consequences to US-Soviet relations?

The administration notified Moscow at the start of the naval maneuvers. It is not clear, however, that the Soviets were informed that U.S. gunships would open fire on Soviet-built missiles. There is no word yet on whether Soviets were at the sites or are among the casualties or whether President Reagan has been in touch with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The initial Soviet reaction was critical. "The armed aggression against Libya has been launched against the backdrop of preparations for a direct U.S. aggression also against Nicaragua," the news agency Tass said. Radio Moscow called the fighting "an open provocation aimed at creating a pretext for American military intervention in Libyan waters."

Privately, however, Moscow could choose another course and attempt to rein in Khadafi rather than risk a broader conflict.

Parent union takes over local

WASHINGTON (AP) — The parent union of 1,000 meatpackers striking the Geo. A. Hormel & Co.'s flagship plant at Austin, Minn., moved Tuesday to take over the day-to-day operations of the renegade local.

The United Food and Commercial Workers union said it will hold a hearing April 7 in Bloomington, Minn., on placing its Austin P-7 local in trusteeship for "refusing to comply with that parent union's direction to end . . . the strike."

Pesticide turns up in meats

WASHINGTON (AP) — The pesticide heptachlor that contaminated thousands of gallons of milk in Arkansas, Missouri and Oklahoma has shown up in the country's meat supply, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

Of 196 meat samples tested, six had illegally high amounts of the chemical, officials said. An additional 125 samples are still being analyzed.

Snuff declared health hazard

WASHINGTON (AP) — The surgeon general on Tuesday declared snuff and chewing tobacco to be "a significant health risk" that can lead to addiction and cancer.

Surgeon General C. Everett Koop said long-time snuff dippers may face nearly 20 times greater risk of cancer of the cheek or gum. He said scientific evidence has established that snuff and chewing tobacco are not safe alternatives to smoking.

Western film star dies at 82

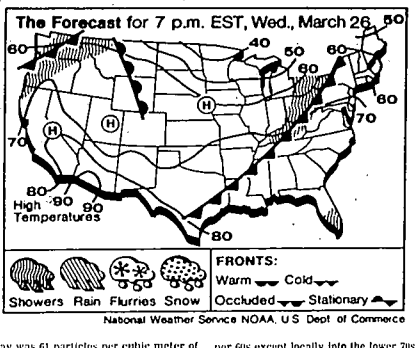

BORREGO SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Charles Starrett, a founder of the Screen Actors Guild who appeared in scores of Westerns as the Durango Kid, has died at age 82.

Starrett, who died Saturday, joined 17 other actors in a meeting in Boris Karloff's garage in 1933 to help shape the charter of the Screen Actors Guild, said his longtime friend and actor-comedian Pat Buttram.

side, the gulf, but the carriers remained outside it to the north.

In other developments: Khadafi was shown on NBC News on Tuesday at a Tripoli trade fair, crowd shouting anti-American slogans. "It is a time of war, a time of confrontation. And we have decided the Gulf of Sidra (Sidra) is ours. We have decided this by sacrifice, by blood," the Libyan leader declared.

But he also described Americans living in Libya as "guests," saying: "We are a civilized people."

Pentagon sources said the U.S. armada was being closely shadowed by Soviet combat ships and that the flagship of the Soviet flotilla remained in port in Tripoli, passing along intelligence information. Sims would not provide a precise count on the Soviet ships, although he indicated at least four were near the American vessels.

Libyan air forces remained absent from the combat arena. Weinberger said Libyan fighters had been detected over the air, but had made no move toward the gulf.

White House officials said the plan to engage Libyan forces in the Gulf of Sidra was approved after intelligence reports disclosed that Libya was "zeroing in" on American diplomats as potential terrorist targets. The New York Times reported in today's editions. It did not identify the officials.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes and Sims said there was another "event" on Tuesday involving a Libyan patrol ship, but no further details were immediately forthcoming. Speakes said there was a possibility the boat managed to slip away.

State Department spokesman Michael Austrian said that perhaps "a couple hundred" Americans remain in Libya following a U.S. order to leave by Feb. 12. "We hold Libya responsible for their safety."

In Moscow, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said the Soviet Union "resolutely condemns" the U.S. action in the gulf. But reaction in Congress remained generally favorable.

spokesman Larry Speakes had said earlier that Reagan was lobbying senators by telephone on the issue.

"It's a big disappointment," said Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz. "It's going to be a long time before we get an opportunity to pass it again."

"Unless we replace some of the members who voted against this, I don't see any way we are going to pass this in the next Congress," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, another sponsor of the amendment. "This was a very, very crucial vote."

"Gramm-Rudman was a crucial factor," people say. "We have Gramm-Rudman, we don't need this," said Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., another sponsor.

Sen. Daniel Evans, R-Wash., who led the opponents, agreed with Simon that the deficit-reduction law had an impact on the outcome. But "I think it had a proper impact."

"I think there is a great reluctance to amend the Constitution. Our forefathers were wise to require a two-thirds vote," Evans said.

He also expressed "some real irritation" that two members of the Republican leadership, Sens. John Heinz of Pennsylvania and John Chafee of Rhode Island, voted against the proposal.

The proposed constitutional amendment, which would have required Congress to spend no more in a fiscal year than the government collects in revenues, needed approval by two-thirds of those voting in the Senate. It also would have needed approval by two-thirds of voting House members and ratification by 38 states.

The amendment required a vote of three-fifths of all the members of both houses to approve deficit expenditures. Tax increases would have to be approved by a bare majority — 51 senators and 218 House members. Congress could waive the provisions to allow deficit spending during a declared war.

ing off Libya's coast on Tuesday initially produced only confusion. In disclosing the new attacks on Libyan boats and a missile battery at the coastal city of Sirte, the Pentagon issued a statement saying up to 12 missiles had been fired at U.S. planes and that some of the additional missile launches had occurred Tuesday.

House Republicans on homosexuality bill: News coverage biased; supporting letters held

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho news media is doing a bad job of informing Idaho residents of the dangers of homosexuality, four state legislators claim.

Conservative Republicans Dieter Bayer of Boise, Gene Winchester of Kuna, Myron Jones of Malad and Nampa's Robert Forrey told a news conference here Tuesday they feel the Idaho media has done a "poor and slanted job" of covering a controversial bill on homosexuals.

House Bill 523, sponsored by Jones, threatened Idaho teachers with the loss of their jobs and teaching certificates if they taught or advocated that homosexuality was acceptable as an alternative lifestyle.

The House approved the bill 54-26 on Feb. 16 after a stormy debate in which Winchester called two other House members "queer lovers." Several House members demanded an apology from Winchester because of that for disrupting the usually polite decorum of the House. Winchester said opponents of the anti-homosexual bill should apologize for refusing to support good legislation.

Since then the legislation has been stuck in the Senate Education Committee. Chairman Sen. Terry Sversten, R-Catolco, has declared that he will not let it out of committee.

House Bill 523, sponsored by Jones, threatened Idaho teachers with the loss of their jobs and teaching certificates if they taught or advocated that homosexuality was acceptable as an alternative lifestyle.

The House approved the bill 54-26 on Feb. 16 after a stormy debate in which Winchester called two other House members "queer lovers." Several House members demanded an apology from Winchester because of that for disrupting the usually polite decorum of the House. Winchester said opponents of the anti-homosexual bill should apologize for refusing to support good legislation.

The Idaho Statesman, said later the paper has printed 20 letters on the Winchester statements, 5 in his favor and 15 against. Another two letters are in the process, along with about 100 other letters to the editor, he said.

The Statesman has refused to print three letters on the Winchester debate, one because it was too long and two others because they were not factual, Sandeen said.

"We do have a problem. To stick our heads in the sand and pretend there is no problem is irresponsible," Winchester said.

He said the state practically forces children to be sent to public schools. As a parent, he said he does not want his children to be taught things he doesn't believe in.

"I don't want them teaching my children," said Forrey.

Jones said Idaho has many fine teachers who do not support "homosexuals and the deviant activities of the far left."

"We need to be teaching the hazards of homosexuality and sodomy. Those acts will destroy any civilization," he said.

The press has been doing a poor and slanted job of covering this issue," said Forrey. "I'm very disturbed about what has not been covered."

From that, he said, "it appears the press generally is supportive of deviant lifestyles."

Forrey said he and the others weren't out to get anyone. But he said groups are promoting homosexuality, "and we had to do something about it."

House panel OKs night moves bill

BOISE — A bill to protect farmers' night moves cleared the House Agricultural Affairs committee Tuesday.

Senate Bill 1304, which makes it legal for farmers to move their implements from field to field on state and county roads at night, will next go before the full House for discussion. It has already passed the Senate.

Sponsored by Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, the bill was a response to several car-tractor accidents last summer in which farmers were ticketed under a little-known section of Idaho law that prohibits farmers from getting out on the roads' at night with their harvesting or other machinery.

After scuffles, shelter care changes killed

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — After a bipartisan tag-team debate effort on the House floor Tuesday, amendments to a bill protecting funding for specialized shelter care homes were defeated 46-31.

The failure of the amendments frees the bill for debate on the House floor.

Conservatives on the House Health and Welfare Committee on Monday won the chance to amend the bill, which they had opposed in committee, by allowing all existing shelter homes to qualify for special funds.

But on Tuesday, when they brought their amendments to the floor, the tide turned and the House defeated the proposed amendments.

Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls, who had opposed the bill in committee, supported the proposed amendments to mix developmental, physically disabled and mentally ill patients in shelter homes and to grant the special funds to any homes now in existence, regardless of the 15-bed size limitation in the original bill.

existence, regardless of the 15-bed size limitation in the original bill.

In debate Tuesday, Scott said she reluctantly supported the amendments and wanted the House to know that if accepted, they would mean a large increase in state spending, as would the original bill.

"Reason prevailed," House Health and Welfare Committee chairman Chris Hooper, R-Boise, said after the amendments died.

After opponents of the bill finished debating in favor of their amendments, which Hooper said would have killed the bill, the tag-team effort fired up.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Pam Bengson, R-Boise, teamed with two other Republicans and a Democrat in urging that the amendments be dropped and the bill be allowed to move to the House floor unchanged.

Hooper, who was incorrectly identified as the carrier of the bill in a Tuesday Times-News article, said he expects the bill will come up for debate today.

Bengson was the official sponsor of the bill.

Senate panel accelerates on belt bill

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — Idaho motorists will be required by law to wear seat belts in the front seats of their cars if the state don't start improving highway safety statistics.

On Tuesday, the committee voted 7-2 to approve House Bill 414, which mandates seat-belt wearing and is aimed at cutting down on death and injury on Idaho's roadways.

Dissenting committee members argued the bill was unenforceable and another example of the legislature knocking under to federal government demands. The federal Department of Transportation has threatened to mandate expensive air bag safety devices if the states don't start improving highway safety statistics.

Lobbying for the Idaho Safety Restraint Coalition, Ken McClure told the committee that in states with mandatory seatbelt laws, seatbelt use rises from the national average of 15 percent to about 80 percent.

The bill allows a motorist to be penalized for not wearing a seatbelt only if convicted of another traffic violation first. Transportation Committee co-chairman Sen. Skip Smyser, R-Parma, said he was voting for the bill but didn't think it really mandated seatbelt wearing.

Registering one of the two votes against the measure in the committee, Sen. Phil Batt, R-Wilder, said he was wrong when he expected administration of President Ronald Reagan to produce fewer federal mandates aimed at the states; Batt said legislators should be replaced by robots who cave in to federal government demands for law and rule changes.

U.S., Libya head for a Mideast collision

Once again, the United States and Libya are trading insults and missiles, this time over the American assertion of a well-established international right to use the high seas.

When American military exercises crossed the "Line of Death" in the Gulf of Sidra, a confrontation became inevitable. Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy had few choices, given his sharp previous rhetoric.

Are both sides "cruising for a fight" in this situation? Perhaps.

There have been a number of world government movements over the centuries, but nationalism and self-interest still remain the dominant forces in international relations. Libya and the United States, at this point in their respective histories, are each intensely nationalistic.

Libya sees itself as an emerging leader of Arab unity, positioned by history and geography to play a major role in the fundamentalist form of Islam which is building in the Middle East.

The United States is also being driven by powerfully nationalistic forces. Emerging from the defeat of Vietnam, the national mood has found expression in the style, as well as the substance, of Ronald Reagan. A clash, or perhaps a series of them, may be inevitable.

We ought to ask, nonetheless, whether any rational objective of foreign policy is served by the confrontation.

Clausewitz observed that war was merely the conduct of national and international affairs by violent means. By that context, Libya and the United States are merely carrying on their tumultuous relationship before the world community.

It is probably refreshing to some of the allies on each side, particularly to those in the West who would like to swat Khadafy, but lack either the will or the power to do so.

There is no way to be sure, of course, but the likelihood of Khadafy being able to precipitate a region-wide war in the Mediterranean is remote. Thus, the risk is low for both participants and bystanders.

Frustrated by the policy defeat over Nicaragua aid, it may be tempting for the Administration to turn on Libya.

All Americans may sense some satisfaction in our strikes against the country, but we should all remember that, in international affairs, nothing is certain. Let us, then, go cautiously.

Script unclear on benefits from clash

Monday's clash between American and Libyan military forces went according to script.

Observers worldwide have been predicting for weeks what would happen: The United States would exercise its right of free navigation in the Gulf of Sidra, below the so-called line of death that Libya has drawn across the head of the gulf. Libya would attack, and the United States would respond. Barring an extraordinary twist, the United States would win.

Robert E. Hunter

The script now calls for the United States to complete its diplomatic demonstration, secure that it has registered its message; Libya's Moammar Khadafy cannot with impunity play by his own rules. Meanwhile, he has no interest in continuing this combat. He already has what he needs to try once again to play David to our Goliath.

The puzzling question is why the United States chose to make this particular demonstration. This past January, Washington entered a new phase of obsession with the Libyan dictator. Terrorist bombings at the Vienna and Rome airports were treated to his doorstep. He had to be stopped. The economic sanctions that followed, however, seemed unconvincing as a means of compelling Khadafy to change his ways. Even the U.S. case that he is the world's arch-terrorist failed to be convincing to many nations, compared with the role played by Syria and Iran.

Combating terrorism is a high priority for the U.S. government. This is so not because of the actual threat to Americans traveling abroad.

That risk is infinitesimal compared to the chances of being subjected to equivalent violence in this country. International terrorism is mailed to television, however, and is an indignity both to individual Americans and to the nation.

Yet, given that we must counter terrorism and that it is a global problem, it is not surprising that we sought this confrontation with him. In denials that we provoked Khadafy, U.S. credibility became a minor casualty of the episode.) Politically, there are domestic benefits. It looks like something is being done about terrorism, even though the Reagan administration still lacks a coherent policy and does little about the political causes of much Middle East terrorism.

COL. MOAMMAR KHADAFY Unlikely to change behavior

Beyond our shores, it is less clear that we gain politically from Monday's encounter. The Soviet Union has a potent issue to use in propaganda, especially in continuing to divert attention from what it is doing in Afghanistan. Last week, anticipating U.S. naval maneuvers in the Gulf of Sidra, Moscow foreshadowed its role. Reading the tea leaves as well as anyone, it took the unusual step of protesting an "innocent passage" of U.S. warships through Soviet Black Sea waters.

The allies in Western Europe, bemused by January's sanctions of Libya and the tenor of debate over Nicaragua, are likely to wonder about the instruments of U.S. action, further U.S. unilateralism, and the relative benefits to the two antagonists.

Within the Middle East, events will have complex effects. Just as he will backfire on Moscow into providing more arms, Khadafy will use the incident to try the same tactic to gain political backing from other Arab countries. He will try to translate the incident into added internal pressures against two friends of the United States, Tunisia and Egypt, both of which are now unusually vulnerable.

To be sure, sympathy in the Middle East for Khadafy will be expressed in the form of crocodile tears. Behind the soaking handkerchiefs will be broad smiles that Khadafy has suffered a military humiliation, that his posturing did not pay off. Washington will be applauded privately by many of the same governments that will scold it publicly.

But countries in the region that we want to influence will notice that there is something missing. Khadafy is still in power. The U.S. military response was hardly more than a pinprick. And there is no reason to believe that the Libyan dictator will moderate his behavior toward other regimes or forsake terrorism as an instrument of his ambitions.

There is no doubt that the United States was within its rights in challenging "the line of death," just one of Khadafy's B-movie formulations. When attacked, we reacted correctly and with proportionate military force. Yet it is doubtful whether we are better off now than we were before.

Split-screen message of Adspeak is purely schizophrenic

BOSTON — The following is a tale of two workers.

One we will call Hugh, as in Hewlett-Packard. The other we will call Ellen, as in Xerox. Hugh and Ellen have been the stars of 30-second vignettes at the cutting edge, as they say in Adspeak, of the conflict between work and family.

Hugh, when we first meet him, is in the shower. But is he humming his favorite tune? No, Hugh is thinking about business. Suddenly he turns off the water, wraps a towel around his toned torso, puts on his glasses, strides to the phone without even a glance at the gorgeous woman curled up on his sofa, and dials a colleague: "Y'know that electronic mail project for the bank? Well, I have an idea."

The not-so-subliminal message of this ad is that Hugh and his Hewlett-Packard are not the clock-watching 9-to-5 types. As the voice-over says: "An idea can happen anytime. And when you work for Hewlett-

Ellen Goodman

Packard, you don't just sell business computing systems, you solve problems. So when you have an idea, you do something about it."

What about Ellen? Actually, the real star of last year's hit commercial was Rock's daughter Sarah. Sarah had her face up against the window, hoping that daddy would get there in time for the birthday party. Rock had been working later and later.

As the happy ending of this ad implied, Xerox came to the rescue! The new office efficiency had "one very important side benefit. The birthday party his daughter never forgot." Rock is not working all the time.

There are differences between Hugh and Rock that go beyond the hours they keep. Hugh lives in an upscale urban apartment. Rock lives in a house with curtains. The only woman in Hugh's life is an elegant lady who glances up adoringly as he breezes past her to the phone. Isn't he cute when he's working? The woman in Rock's life, however, is Little Sarah. Isn't she cute when he isn't working?

But the biggest gap between these two models and role models is in the sales pitch. Hugh is selling what he, the person you want to hire, Rock is the person you want to be, or at least marry. Hugh is the person you want for your company. Rock is the person you would want for your family.

In real life, these two personalities may not play as neatly segregated as they do in the 30-second adworld. In real life, Total Worker Hugh may marry the woman on his sofa, start a family and become a Mixed Loyalty Rock. He may even ask for paternity leave.

In real life, Rock may instinctively search for a Hugh to get the office in shape so that he can make it to the birthday party. He may even demand that Hugh work overtime until the job is done.

In this same real life, most of us have personalities that are splitting all over the place. We want one thing from our employers and quite another from our employees.

A woman who has felt the demands of job and children for the past decade now manages a small business. Two of her own workers have been pregnant in the past year. Today, she confesses to me ruefully, her empathy is showing stretch marks. A friend was recently asked to speak at a weekend conference on balancing work and family. When this man, a father with two small children, said that he doesn't work weekends, the conference manager was wholly surprised and not pleased.

Stories like these are endemic. We want reasonable work hours for ourselves and the telephone number for plumbers who work nights. We want to be able to see our own kids' school plays and able to call our doctors out of their kids' plays. We want to get home early and to have the supermarket managers stay late.

We are all a part of the conflict between work and family, between the successful worker and the successful parent. We are its victims and its producers. To the papa Rocks go the happy children, the unnumbered Hughs get the glibly apartments; and to the rest of us goes the schizophrenic.

What happens when we try to live by this split-screen message? We get stuck between a Rock, a Hugh and a very hard place.

Letters/ Democratic process in United States has gone off the track

'Safer' climate 2 weeks off

A teacher, high school level, once remarked to me that she practiced democracy in her classroom. She gave her students an opportunity to vote on an issue and then she told them what to do.

This incident symbolized to me just where the democratic process has gone off the track. This is where we all learned how the process really works as we were learning how it is supposed to work. What struck is not how to use democracy for the good of all, but how to abuse the process for the good of the person who holds or is seeking to hold power.

Thus, the student learns how it works with the teacher; the teacher is treated in the same way by the administration and the school board; the voter is asked to express themselves to the council which then does what it wants; the representatives ask for our opinion and then disregard it when it feels politically safe to do so; and, the representative votes on an issue in the Legislature and the Speaker disregards them.

The American people voted their opinion to their representatives against aid to the Contras. In two weeks, all this discussion, debate, poll-taking will be disregarded. The "safer" political climate stage has been set by Speaker Tip O'Neill when he promised the President another vote in two weeks.

The President will get what he wants and Congress will pat itself on the back because they were exercising the "Democratic Process" as they have grown to understand it. Our representatives will succumb to the lies, insinuations and barely veiled threats; they will allow themselves to be convinced at a time that they will feel politically safer; and we, who don't know enough to make decisions, will pay the $100,000,000 blackmail.

When, in all of history, has money ever bought Democracy? MARGE CHUPA Twin Falls

Some 'good homes' aren't

I feel that the good people of Idaho should be made aware that when they advertise their plans for "Free to Good Home" ads they may be subjecting them to a horrible living death. There are unscrupulous individuals that make their living by obtaining these animals under false pretenses, and selling them to laboratories for animal research. A possible solution to this would be to insist on later visitation rights, to determine if your beloved pet's destination was a "good home" as promised, or a slow, horrible, lingering death in a research lab. Stallings doing good job

Since Thursday's defeat in the House of President Reagan's proposed $100 million aid to the Contras, Idaho's Congressman, Richard Stallings, has taken a lot of verbal abuse in the press for his vote against the package. I've read that his vote was due to the influence of eastern bosses and not the will of the people. I've read that he's unpatriotic and out of touch with his constituents.

I believe Rep. Stallings is a breath of fresh air in Idaho's delegation. For years, I've written to Senators Symms and McClure and felt like I was pounding my head against a cement wall.

It's been wonderful to have a representative who is educated as to all sides of an issue, who can make an intelligent, informed decision based on all the facts.

I've made a mistake in not continuing my one-sided dialogue with Senators Symms, McClure and Rep. Craig. On the Contra issue, especially, I must continue to make my views known, even though it seems hopeless.

So thank you Congressman Stallings for taking your job seriously. For listening to your constituents and not being bullied by President Reagan's fear campaign. As for Senators Symms, McClure and Rep.

Larry Craig, you'll be hearing from me. SYLVIA GREEN Haley

Idea lurks in spud cellars

Do they really believe they can profitably make fuel alcohol from potatoes? The idea seems to be lurking around in dark spud cellars.

Food is too precious to be made into fuel. It takes sweat, sweat and often worry and tears, besides fertile land and clean water, to produce food.

Fortunately, we have able men in Washington who frown on making fuel alcohol from agricultural products.

In the tragic days of the Great Depression they burned precious corn and wheat in stoves to keep warm. Let us pray that Idaho's No. 1's will never be carried away to the alcohol plant. ALVIN HOLMES Burley

Senate OKs $90.7 million for schools; still divided on plan

BOISE (AP) — Senate Republicans rammed through a $90.7 million general revenue appropriation for higher education in 1987 on Tuesday, but the GOP supermajority remained sharply divided on a financing program for public education.

Although the higher education budget was sent to the House on a solid 24-17 vote, Republican Senate leaders were unable to gain any similar kind of agreement on the 1987 public school support measure.

The party's 28-member supermajority moved behind closed doors for nearly 90 minutes late Tuesday, but emerged still at odds over both the level of public school support and the way that support money should be allocated. Caucus Chairman Phil Batt of Wilder said.

"We didn't get enough votes to pass a school budget at this point," Batt said, describing factions within the caucus as ranging from those supporting the pending proposal of $312.5 million to those wanting up to $314 million or more and those backing anywhere from zero to $12 million in so-called Pro Team James Risch and others GOP-ed one-time money that is disbursed without recognition of the financial disparity among the 116 local school districts.

While no set course of action was agreed to, Batt said members discussed the possibility of adding money to the pending proposal, citing options from a cigarette tax increase to raising other funds to just spending the money even though the state does not have it right now.

"They really haven't gelled yet," Batt said, but he remained optimistic that the session can still be adjourned by week's end.

That caucus followed the refusal of the Senate Finance Committee to increase the $312.5 million 1987 state allotment to public schools despite fears of Senate President Diane Bilyeu along with other Democrats in the Senate called the higher education budget inadequate, Republican supporters pointed out that it generally mirrored the recommendation made in December by Democratic Gov. John Evans.

While Evans proposed just under $90.7 million in general tax support including about $1.7 million in one-time money for library resources and equipment, the bill that cleared the Senate called for $90.7 million exact with $2.5 million in one-time money.

"You know it isn't enough money, but they tell you there isn't any more money," complained Democratic Sen. Norma Dobler, whose districts includes the University of Idaho at Moscow. "But it's a terrible mistake we're making here... Education is not an expense. It's an investment, and we're not managing it."

But Republicans contended that by comparison to surrounding states with equivalent university systems Idaho has been generous with the schools at Moscow, Pocatello, Boise and Lewiston, and the 14 Democrats managed to draw only three Republicans — Laird Nash of Kimberly, Terry Sversten of Cataldo and Lynn Tomingava of Paul — to their opposition ranks.

Senate 'boat bills' beat odds, hit floor

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — Just when it looked like both of this year's boat fee and boat safety bills were some last-minute committee room maneuvering sent the south Idaho bill to the Senate floor.

Debate over the so-called "boat bills" has been divided over whether boat registration fees should increase and whether the money collected should be centrally controlled by the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation or individually controlled by the counties, as it currently is.

On Tuesday, a bill to freeze fees and route them through the department before they go to the counties squeaked out of the Senate Transportation Committee.

Statewide, about $500,000 in boat registration money is sitting in county accounts, some of it in counties where there is little or no boating. The bill adopted by the committee does nothing to force counties to spend that money on boating facilities or programs.

Sponsored by Sen. Ann Rydalch, R-Idaho Falls, House Bill 567 was initially defeated Tuesday in committee, along with its alter ego, a bill drafted by a north Idaho legislator who hoped to see the counties keep control of the boat fees.

But Rydalch's bill, which she has sponsored in two previous legislative sessions, was resurrected by Sen. Skip Smyser, R-Parma, and approved by the committee.

Smyser had initially voted against the bill, but at the end of the meeting he said he didn't want the Legislature to go home without passing any boat bill, so he asked for reconsideration of the bill and voted for it, bringing Sen. Larry Anderson's new vote for the bill along with him.

"I think it's important we get one of these bills out of committee," Smyser said.

With his vote and Anderson's, the measure passed the committee 5-3.

The bill has already passed the House and must now pass the Senate and the governor's review before it becomes law.

Hazardous trucking bill detoured

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — A bill to charge hazardous materials truckers a fee — to be used in helping police deal with spills — failed to clear its way to the floor Tuesday and will be detoured through the Senate's amending process.

With Democrats C.E. "Chick" Bilyeu of Pocatello and Bruce Sweeney of Lewiston dissenting, the Senate Transportation Committee followed the lead of co-chairman

Sen. Skip Smyser, R-Parma, who asked that he be allowed to amend the bill.

Smyser said his amendments would likely do away with language in the bill to put fees in a protected state account and would also follow the suggestions of representatives of the petroleum hauling industry.

Among their complaints about the bill were that it does not distinguish between pesticides, hazardous waste, and petroleum products.

The bill, which originated in the House, was already amended there and will have to be sent back to the House for approval if the Senate further amends it.

Attorney General Jim Jones has sponsored the bill, and he testified before the committee Tuesday to urge that it be passed as it stands.

He said the petroleum representatives entered into the debate on the bill late in the legislative session.

Jones said his plan to charge fees to hazardous waste haulers followed defeat of a plan to pay for the hazardous materials control program out of funds appropriated by the Legislature from tax revenues.

He said the proposed fee started at $100 per truck per year and has slid down to $3 per truck per year.

House passes optional collegiate tuition bill

BOISE (AP) — For the past 25 years, says veteran House member Rep. Harold Reid, D-Craigmont, the Idaho Legislature has been voting down proposals to allow the state's colleges and universities to charge tuition.

On Tuesday, the tradition was broken. The House voted 56-26 for a proposed constitutional amendment allowing tuition.

It was exactly the two-thirds majority needed to pass the legislation. It goes to the Senate, where it faces an uncertain fate this week in what are expected to be the final days of the 1986 session.

It was the second try this month. Last week, the House killed similar legislation. The first bill would have allowed students to be charged up to one-third of the cost of their education; the latest measure drops that to one-fourth of the cost.

Still, opponents argued against the proposal, saying it could price many students out of a college education.

"We should call this bill the back to the future bill," said Rep. James Stolcheff, D-Sandpoint. He called it a "sleep backwards" for students to be forced to bear much of the cost of a college education, after generations of keeping the student cost as low as possible.

"This measure doesn't raise the cost of going to college," argued sponsor Rep. Michael Simpson, R-Blackfoot.

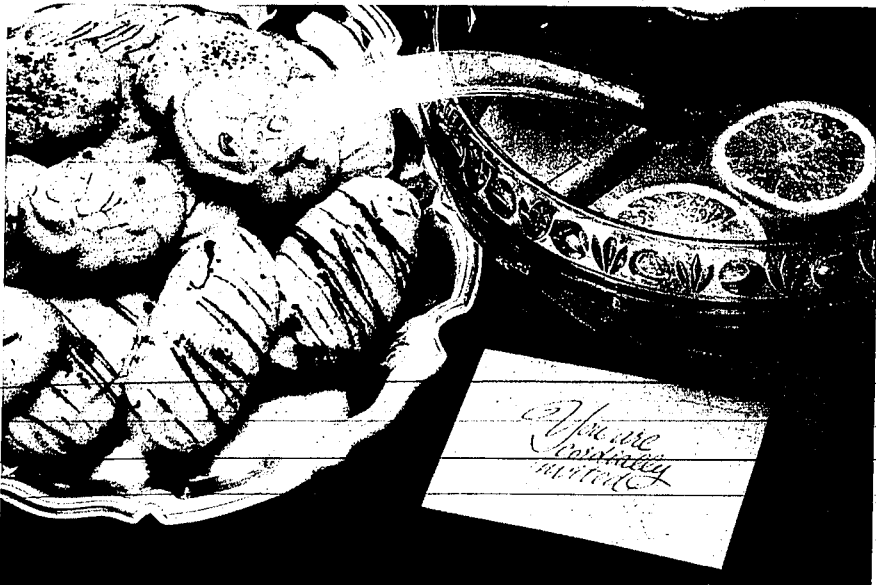

He said it would give the state Board of Education another management tool.

Idaho's constitution forbids charging tuition to University of Idaho students. State law extends the ban to other colleges, although the schools in recent years have taken to adding "fees" to registration charges.

Rep. Janet Hay, R-Nampa, former president of the Board of Education, said in reality, the "fees" have been "tuition."

"Honesty states that what we have been doing really is charging tuition," she said, since the schools started adding institutional maintenance fees five years ago.

'Purple' rejection casts pall on post-Oscar party

By BOB THOMAS
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The Motion Picture Academy's overwhelming rejection of "The Color Purple" kept Hollywood uneasily abuzz Tuesday, after an Oscar telecast that for once spared a modest hit with viewers.

The film about a rural black woman's struggle for self-worth had gone into the awards night with 11 nominations, the same number as "Out of Africa" which won seven Oscars, including best picture.

But "The Color Purple" failed to win even once, tying the 1977 movie "The Turning Point" as the most-nominated film to lose in every category.

The snub added to the controversy that already surrounded the academy's snub of Steven Spielberg, who was not even nominated for directing the movie.

"I think there is a very strong social implication," co-producer Quincy Jones said about the snub, but did not elaborate. "That's the way it is, and we'll have to do something about that."

"I guess not enough people liked it," theorized Walter Mirisch, former Academy president. "I think people really enjoyed 'Out of Africa,' which was a good, big-scale movie, the kind that David Lean has made."

At the post-Oscar Governor's Ball, the 1,500 guests drifted away unusually early. By midnight, the International Ballroom of the Beverly Hilton Hotel was two-thirds empty, for a party that traditionally lasts long into the morning.

Between arrival and departure,

William Hurt, left, captured an Oscar for best actor for 'Kiss of the Spider Woman' and Geraldine Page won an Oscar for best actress for 'The Trip to Bountiful'

The party spirit was dampened as the action also brought the talk of the snub colored the air. "I can't explain it," said Academy president Robert Wise. "Except that maybe it was a reaction of the Academy at large over questioning the integrity of the director's branch. Perhaps the voters felt that the Academy's reputation had been maligned."

Wise, an Oscar winner for "The Sound of Music" and "West Side Story," was referring to stories suggesting that the 230 members of the director's branch who made the nominations may have been envious of Spielberg's success.

Sydney Pollack, winner as director and co-producer for "Out of Africa," declined to analyze the reason behind "Purple's" failure. "You put me in a difficult spot," he told a reporter, "because I can't win no matter how I answer that question. And I would like not to put a damper on the evening by trying to speculate on an undiplomatic question with an undiplomatic answer."

But the post-Oscar celebration was unusually subdued, suggesting a pall had been cast by the failure of an acclaimed and commercially successful movie that may have been a victim of in-fighting among Academy members.

Other winners included Geraldine Page for best actress in "The Trip to Bountiful," William Hurt as best actor in "Kiss of the Spider Woman," Anjelica Huston for best supporting actress in "Prizzi's Honor," and Don Ameche as best supporting actor for "Cocoon."

The Oscar show, in ratings trouble for the last two years, appeared to have recouped some of its previous year's rating losses, according to overnight figures from 12 cities. ABC-TV said the three-hour, 14 minute show had a 5.3 rating with a 53 share. Changes are often made in the numbers when the national ratings are compiled, but it would have to drop considerably to fall below last year's national rating of 27.7 and audience share of 45 for the 1985 show.

Most critics said the show didn't have enough of Robin Williams' pop-the-balloon humor. Williams, one of three co-hosts, opened the show by trying to get two highly proper Price Waterhouse executives to open the winner envelopes early.

Williams "opens the show in Orson Welles' tuxedo, then apparently gets locked in the men's room and doesn't reappear for two hours," wrote the Los Angeles Times' Howard Rosenberg. "When the brilliant Williams finally did get some stage time, he brought the inertia to a screeching halt."

But Rosenberg did say the show included a nice ode to past losing nominees, and likable Teri Garr got the evening off to a kicky start with a campy airplane-riding tribute to earlier Hollywood.

At the Oscar ball, many of the guests congratulated Stanley Donen for producing a lively show, and he remarked, "I devoted the last six months to this show, and I think I did the best job I could do, considering the limitations."

Youths reduce Holi Day in India into day for harassment of women

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Today is Holi Day in India, a time to splash friends with colored powder and exchange sweets, but for many young rowdies in New Delhi have made it an unholy holiday during which women hide in their homes.

The city administration is urging residents to "celebrate Holi in a holy way," but to little avail. Police are posted at strategic points and plainclothes officers ride buses to catch young men armed with dye-filled balloons and water pistols.

According to Hindu mythology, holi marks the burning of an evil woman named Holika, who wanted to kill her nephew for not worshipping her brother, the king.

Traditionally, people rub and splash each other with color, exchange sweets and drink an intoxicant called bhang.

In the past few years, however, Holi celebrations have passed the bounds of ordinary merry-making. The Festival of Colors has become a license to pinch and paw women and sing lewd songs.

"This is Holi! This is Holi! Everything goes on Holi!" the young hooligans shout.

Many Indian women are subject on any given day to what is called "eve-teasing": crude comments, obscene gestures and physical harassment. The Holi festival makes it worse.

"Tomorrow we will be locked in. Half the girls have left for home anyway. We will just play among ourselves," Vinki Ahuja, a math student at the Miranda House college for women, said Tuesday.

"There is such a scare that girls stop coming to the college two days before."

She added, however, that police patrols had helped to "reduce the Holi menace tremendously." I remember two years ago we couldn't go out days before for fear of getting drenched or worse."

The city administration declared in advertising that it was taking "stern steps to curb hooliganism," including prohibiting the sale of water balloons and banning use of dyed water on "unwilling persons."

Those bent on what they consider a good time generally ignore the warnings.

An additional 1,600 policemen have been deployed in the city with strict instructions to detain all anti-social elements," police duty officer Bhallinder Singh said. "A mob of men raided the college cafeteria a few days before Holi, but we are keeping our fingers physically assaulted women students and tore their clothes."

Anti-terrorist measures taken

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bodyguards have been assigned to the secretary of the Navy and to the chief of naval operations, and U.S. officials said Tuesday that embassies overseas have taken additional security precautions designed to deal with potential terrorist threats.

The General Services Administration, meanwhile, sent out instructions to security guards in the 7,200 civilian federal properties it manages directing them to be especially vigilant.

The measures were in effect as the United States continued to attack Libyan armed forces in the Gulf of Sidra.

Bodyguards were provided to Navy Secretary John F. Lehman and Adm. James Watkins, the chief of naval operations, because of "terrorist threats," Pentagon sources said.

Bill targets Senate newsletters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Pete Wilson, striking at what he called "congressional self-promotion at the taxpayers' expense," introduced a bill Tuesday that would ban the newsletters members of the House and Senate mail to their constituents.

Wilson's bill would eliminate government funds for the newsletters, which are expected to cost $146.2 million this year. One supporter of the measure, Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., called that sum a "scandal."

Wilson, R-Calif., told a news conference that the congressional franking or free-mail privilege "has been abused until millions of taxpayer's dollars have been channeled into extravagant mailings that are barely distinguishable from campaign literature."

Shuttle chief promises checks

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The new shuttle boss promised NASA workers Tuesday that every element of the spacecraft will be re-examined and, if necessary, redesigned before it flies again, and said when launches do resume the emphasis will be on "conservative flying."

In addition, Richard H. Truly, a former astronaut and NASA's associate administrator for space flight, said in a speech that he will direct a reassessment of NASA's management, and a redesign of "this nation's best talent" of the rocket booster suspected of causing the destruction of the shuttle Challenger.

Weinberger predicts Soviet advance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union's modernization of its weapons arsenal is continuing at such a pace that it is "challenging the technological edge" on which U.S. security depends, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said Tuesday.

"Soviet modernization has not abated," Weinberger said in releasing the Pentagon's latest annual assessment of Soviet military power.

"Based on current trends, our projections for the '90's give us no reason to feel that we can rest in our effort to prevent the Soviets from achieving a very significant, exploitable military advantage," he said.

"They have more weapons of higher quality and higher capability," Weinberger said.

He released the study, entitled "Soviet Military Power 1986," during a press conference Tuesday beamed around the world by the U.S. Information Agency.

"It's not necessary for us to match the Soviet forces in each category because we rely on our technological leadership to provide systems that are sufficiently superior so as to offset their numerical advantages," Weinberger said.

"But their military has moved increasingly into an era of high technology, and they're challenging the technological edge on which our security depends," he added.

The study included previously unreleased pictures of an intermediate-range SS-20 missile on its launcher, the newest version of the Delta missile submarine, now said to be on sea trials, and the SU-27 fighter, a look-alike of the U.S. F-15 that the Pentagon says became operational early this year.

It concludes that beyond developing new generations of nuclear missiles, the Soviets are engaged in a massive program to protect their land-based arsenal. They also have attained parity with the United States in the development of cruise missiles, have a crude but workable laser weapon capable of blinding spy satellites, and are continuing to outpace the Pentagon in building tanks, planes, helicopters and artillery.

Reagan rejects budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House doesn't expect the Republican-led Senate to pass a fiscal 1987 budget that President Reagan can support, but there's no urgency to seek a compromise, top administration officials said Tuesday.

"No way" was Reagan's response to the bipartisan budget approved last week by the Senate Budget Committee, said James C. Miller III, director of the Office of Management and Budget.

The budget, drafted by Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the committee, and Sen. Lawton Chiles, the committee's ranking Democrat, would cut Reagan's military spending request by $25 billion and increase taxes by $18 billion. The committee plan avoided many of the deep domestic spending cuts proposed by the president.

"What's going on in Congress right now is everybody trying to get his little part... protected," Miller said in a speech to an Export-Import bank conference. "We can surely find a nickel on a dollar to save in domestic programs."

"We're talking to a number of people in the Senate about modifying (the budget) on the floor to bring it more closely in line with the president's budget," Miller said.

High court OKs military dress codes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, giving the armed services sweeping authority to enforce dress codes even when religious freedom is at stake, ruled Tuesday the Air Force may ban the wearing of Jewish yarmulkes by military personnel in uniform.

The court ruled, 5-4, against Simcha Goldman, a former Air Force captain an Orthodox Jewish rabbi who said his constitutional rights were violated when he was ordered to remove his yarmulke, the traditional skull cap.

The military must be given a free hand in setting dress codes to "foster instinctive obedience, unity, commitment and esprit de corps," the court said.

Goldman said the decision "illustrates the difficulty of applying to reality the theory that servicemen have civil rights."

In another freedom-of-religion decision, the court cleared the way for students in a Williamsport, Pa., public high school to meet during school hours for prayer and religious worship.

But the 5-4 ruling set no national precedent in the continuing debate over the role of religion in public schools.

In a third decision, the court made it easier for people to sue local governments over alleged violations of their rights by government employees. The 6-3 ruling allows a Cincinnati, Ohio, physician to sue Hamilton County for a 1977 incident in which police chopped down a door to his offices.

The court said even a single incident of misconduct, if authorized by policymakers, may be grounds for a lawsuit against a public agency.

Explosion levels Thiokol building

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — An explosion Tuesday destroyed a Morton Thiokol building containing material used in Trident missile rocket propellant, but no one was injured, a spokesman said.

Rocky Raab, a spokesman for Morton Thiokol's Wasatch Division about 30 miles northwest of here, said the explosion caused an estimated $1.5 million in damage to a "remotely operated HMX oxidizer dryer building" and its contents.

The blast occurred shortly before noon at Air Force Plant 78, operated by Morton Thiokol's Wasatch Operations Strategic Division. No one was injured, said Phillip Dykstra, strategic division general manager.

Treasurer for county plans to retire

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Juanita Stettler will not seek another term as Twin Falls County treasurer and will retire after 43 years on the county payroll.

County employee Bonnie Bruning, however, has announced she wants the job.

The 63-year-old Stettler said it was time to leave county service.

"I've worked long enough and hate to retire, but I'd like to do a lot of other things," she said Tuesday.

Stettler, a native of the county, was hired in 1943 as a deputy clerk in the treasurer's office. She was appointed chief deputy in 1964 and treasurer in 1978. She has been re-elected on the Republican ticket ever since.

When she first started work in the treasurer's office, there were some 8,000 tax notices to mail and $1 million in real property taxes to collect. At that time, there only were two deputies and it took about a month to prepare the tax notices.

Now, her office has four deputies responsible for mailing 35,000 tax notices and collecting $16 million in personal, real, occupancy and mobile home property taxes. With the help of computers, the tax notices take a week to prepare, she said.

The treasurer also is responsible for apportioning tax revenue to the various taxing districts, such as schools and cities, Stettler said.

In addition, her office serves as the bookkeeper and "bank" for the other county offices.

"As the other offices grow, it makes ours a bit busier," she added.

"We always could use more help."

Through the years, the people of Twin Falls County have been good about paying taxes on time and, as a result, the county rarely sells property to obtain back taxes, she said.

Her staff, however, is more occupied than in the past with bankruptcies because they research whether any delinquent taxes are owed.

"When she retires she will miss the figures and people," Stettler said.

"I've always liked working here."

But she wants to have more time for travel, gardening, painting and other hobbies — and especially for a first grandchild expected in May, she added.

BONNIE BRUNING
Announces candidacy for job

Bruning said she would not be running for office if Stettler had sought re-election because Stettler is doing a good job.

The 40-year-old Bruning is the data computer supervisor in the assessor's office, where she is responsible for various activities. She also is chairman of the County Employees Council.

This is the first time she has sought public office.

If elected, she believes she can make a smooth transition into the treasurer's office, to which she now provides some assistance, Bruning said. She wants to bring her six years of computer experience to the office.

"They do a lot of totaling and balancing and reports there, and I think some of that could be put on computer to make their work more simple and efficient for the office and courthouse."

On a personal basis, she wants to be treasurer because "I just would like to grow professionally."

Bruning said she's not challenging Assessor Dorothy Hamby, who also is up for re-election this year, because she is doing a "terrific" job.

Campaigning should be interesting and challenging, she added.

"This is all very new to me," she said. "For a while, it will be a little strange, but I think I can adapt. I enjoy being with people."

The deadline to file a candidacy petition for county office is April 18 in order to have a place on the ballot for the May 27 primary.

Goodwill grows in farm planting

By KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

FILER — Tuesday was a near perfect day for field work, so a group of nine farmers took advantage of the spring weather to plow, harrow and plant a farm south of Filer.

But, this group was different — they were not working their own fields. Instead, they were donating their time to help their friend and neighbor, Herbert Roesler.

Roesler broke his back last Nov. 18 when he was knocked off a cattle truck near Salmon. He spent a month at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise and then was transferred to the Elks Rehabilitation Hospital in Boise for another three months.

"I just got home Saturday," said Roesler, as his neighbor Glenn Meyer drove him around the farm in a specially equipped van to survey the plowing and planting. Although presently confined to a wheelchair, Roesler has hopes of being able to handle more of his operation himself later this summer.

"It was kind of suprised," Roesler said, of finding out that his neighbors were coming as a group to work his fields.

"I'd rather be out there myself," he said, "but it is real nice."

Glenn Meyer, who also farms in the area south of Filer near the Roeslers, helped organize the group through the Luther Layperson's League at Clover Trinity Lutheran Church southeast of Buhl.

Meyer said the group was able to work about half of the day on Monday and a full day on Tuesday. Three plows, four roller harrows, one corrugator and a grain planter were working Roesler's 240 acres of farmable ground on Tuesday. Most of the land was being worked for grain and corn, he added, and they plan to return later in the week to finish plowing.

Roesler added that with all the help, this will probably be the earliest he has ever had his planting done.

Emergency lights add to jail upgrading

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — More improvements have been made to the Twin Falls County jail, in compliance with an agreement reached in a lawsuit over the aged facility.

Additional emergency lights were added in the cell area last week at a cost of $527, Sheriff Jim Munn reported. Installed by county personnel, the lights are operated by a battery pack and will switch on if there is a power failure.

"The only emergency lights in the jail were located near the exits," Munn said.

In about two weeks, county employees should start replacing the standard light bulbs in the cell area with 14 fluorescent fixtures, Munn said. The new lights are on order. He did not have the final cost on the project.

A new tamper-proof medicine cabinet already is in use, the sheriff reported. The cabinet cost $170.

County employees and jail trustees recently completed installing a push bar to the door of the fire-escape silo outside the Twin Falls County Courthouse. The door previously had been secured by a padlock on the outside. The push bar will allow inmates to escape a fire by pushing the door from the inside.

The next step in the list of improvements is the addition of smoke detectors, Munn said.

Under review is replacement of some cell doors. Instead of swinging in, the doors should swing out or slide open. Munn said he had an estimate about changing the doors, but refused to release it until further study.

County officials agreed to implement the improvements in the pact they signed Feb. 11 as the result of a lawsuit filed Oct. 22 in 5th District Court against the county, Board of Commissioners and Munn. Attorney Greg Fuller filed the suit on behalf of two jail inmates, who claimed the facility didn't meet constitutional standards.

Many of the improvements in the agreement were suggested by experts hired by the plaintiffs to inspect the 7½-year-old jail, located on the fourth floor of the courthouse.

County officials had agreed to complete or at least report to the court on the progress of the improvements by April or May. Shortly after the agreement was approved by the court, however,

Munn and his staff started making the necessary changes, mostly using county workers or trustees.

Ketchum hotel meets P&Z OK

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — A 120-room hotel in Ketchum received design review approval from the Planning and Zoning Commission Monday.

In his first look at the project along Idaho 75 on the south entrance to town, the commission found little to object to about the project. It imposed minor conditions on the approval, including a traffic study, a ban on earth work in the flood plain and installation of a turn lane on the highway.

Highway 75 Associates, the hotel's developer, gave the board little to object to: The developers asked for no waivers, conditional uses or anything outside the city's building code.

Because they asked for no special considerations, the hotel's owners now need only a building permit to begin the project, which they want finished for the 1987-88 ski season.

"It's not a development deal," said Henry Taylor, a principal in the group. "We all live here. It's not a condominium project. It's not separated into rooms. We will own and operate it."

All the hotel's owners live in the Blaine County area, said Taylor, who owns several motels and hotels in the Western states, including the Comfort Inn in Halley. He also said he is the former owner of the Tyrolen and Christiana lodges in Ketchum.

In describing his project, Taylor said the hotel would be a solution to the city's lack of hotel rooms, which "have" decreased since the closure of the Holiday Inn in the late 1970s. Although the Holiday Inn was remodelled as the Alpenrose Hotel, it has fewer rooms than the original design.

The owners will rent the hotel rooms in the "medium-price category" — with a first-year price of about $90 per room that will not compete with the Sun Valley Lodge or Elkhorn Resort Hotel, Taylor said.

"We don't see ourselves competing with those people," he said. "We do not have tennis courts, we do not have golf courses and we do not have a 50-year tradition."

What the hotel will have is a typical room of 13 feet by 20 feet with either two queen-size beds or single king-size beds. Taylor said the hotel will easily accommodate small families or groups of skiers.

Some larger rooms, two-room units and rooms with more elaborate seating than the typical rooms will go into the four-story, 135,000-square-foot hotel located on the west side of Idaho 75 and south of the Andorra Villa condominiums.

Other features include an indoor pool, 3,000 square feet of meeting and convention space and a restaurant and lounge, Taylor said.

The commission's main concern for the project was possible traffic problems. The highway slopes to the bridge crossing Trail Creek to the north of the hotel, and Commissioner Reid Black, wondered if the slope might impair the vision of southbound traffic.

With two exits onto the highway from the hotel's parking lot, the added traffic from the hotel might become a problem if there is poor visibility, Black said.

Black suggested a letter from the Idaho Department Transportation concerning the visibility and the effectiveness of a turn lane be sent to the city as a condition of the city's approval.

Hansen man seeks Democratic bid for House

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Charging current lawmakers are running the government "by committee," a Hansen resident on Tuesday announced his candidacy for the seat held by House Speaker T.W. Stivers, R-Twin Falls.

Garry M. Nielsen, 41, said he is finding people are disgusted with the current crop of legislators.

"People don't feel their views and opinions are being represented in Boise," said Nielsen, who has lived and worked in auto sales and management in Hansen for 10 years.

"The last two years of the Legislature have been a circus. The people elected do what they feel is best for us, and they don't listen to us. People want a say in government."

As proof of that, Nielsen said it only took him a day to collect the required 50 signatures on his petition, which he will file today. During the Nielsen campaign, he has canvassed the area, and he said response "has been fantastic."

Nielsen, who was born and grew up in Gooding, will not be running against Stivers in the May primary, Nielsen is on the non-commercial ticket. However, he said he is more of a maverick or independent than a Democrat. And he is distancing himself from the Democratic Party in Twin Falls.

"They offered this support, and I said, no, I want to do this on my own," said Nielsen, who has been unemployed for the last year following a back injury.

He added he was prompted to run as a Democrat when he heard local radio talk show host L. James Koutnik say a Democrat could not get elected in this area.

"Anything that can't be done, I've got to do it," Nielsen said as he sat with the sleeves of his Western shirt rolled up to his elbows.

Asked how he would run his campaign without party support, Nielsen answered he will take it door-to-door and club-to-club, speaking wherever and whenever he can. And he said he expects to finance most the race himself.

"I will take small donations, but from private individuals, I don't want ties to businesses or any special groups."

Nielsen said his main message was that he is a man "who will listen and take their ideas to Boise."

Hollifield to run against Anderson in primary

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

BOISE — Former state representative Gordon Hollifield announced Tuesday he will challenge Sen. Larry Anderson in the May Republican primary.

Hollifield said to Rep. Waldo Martens, R-Jerome, in the 1984 race for the Jerome, Minidoka and Cassia county seat in district 24. He will challenge Anderson in the enormous eighth-county florial district that encompasses the entire Magic Valley.

Anderson was in caucus Tuesday evening and could not be reached for comment.

Hollifield said his top priority issue would be revision of Idaho's tax code.

"I think that the tax structure has several inequities in it and it doesn't do a good job for education," Hollifield said.

By shifting income taxation from the state to local government, Idaho could control property taxes, he said.

Anderson has also supported giving taxing authority to local government, but Hollifield said that his proposal differs from Anderson's in that Anderson's would have put in place an additional tax, while his plan is to replace state income taxes with local income taxes.

The Jerome real estate agent served five terms before being unseated by Martens in 1984. Prior to serving in the Legislature, Hollifield was a member of the Jerome School Board.

Trade center plan sought

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls group's vision of an Idaho Agricultural World Trade Center apparently has caught the eye of some federal officials who can help it happen.

The U.S. Economic Development Administration is interested enough in the dream to consider a $25,000 grant for a feasibility study that could put the idea on paper.

The agency has asked the private Magic Valley Agricultural Institute and its public sponsor, the Idaho Department of Commerce, to draw up a work plan for a consultant, who would do the study, said Mike Glenn, a spokesman for the Twin Falls Institute.

The "scope of work" essentially would detail a list of questions that need to be answered in the study, he said. They range from location of a center to an analysis of Idaho's possibilities in international trade, Glenn said.

The Department of Commerce, which formally is seeking the grant, the Agricultural Institute and the Twin Falls-based Region IV Development Association, among other agencies, want to hire an out-of-state consulting firm to explore the center's possibilities.

If the grant is approved, the EDA would supply $25,000 cash and the Idaho interests would match it with another $10,000 in work time, money or other contributions.

The institute last fall proposed an international trade center for Idaho's agricultural industry. The center could display products, supply marketing expertise and offer a meeting place where traders could conclude deals, planners have suggested.

The Magic Valley Institute favors placing the center at the College of Southern Idaho. To further the project it has sought broad support from private businesses, commodity commissions and public agencies.

Glenn said the institute plans to return the work plan to the EDA by April 10. Comments from agricultural and related businesses are welcome, he said. The feasibility study itself could be done by September if the EDA awards the grant soon.

Window entry figures in burglaries

TWIN FALLS — A number of Twin Falls homes have been entered recently by a basement window burglar.

Police reports show that several homes with doors locked have been burglarized over the past few weeks.

Police in Twin Falls were continuing to investigate another burglary Tuesday involving three businesses that share a building at 590 Addison Ave.

Diana Lincoln, 498 Heyburn Ave. W., told police Tuesday that her home was burglarized sometime between 5 p.m. March 19 and 3 a.m. Tuesday. She said the basement window was broken out and $411 in tools, clothing and other items were taken from the home.

Police in Twin Falls were continuing to investigate another burglary Tuesday involving three businesses that share a building at 590 Addison Ave.

Reports show entry was gained at

New Beginnings beauty salon, apparently through an unlocked window. The burglary occurred between 2 p.m. Sunday and 5:50 a.m. Monday, owners said. After gaining entry to the building, burglars also visited the quarters of Massage Clinic and Raymond Lichtman's Acupuncture Clinic.

Officials of all three businesses were preparing inventory lists Tuesday of their missing merchandise. About $1,000 worth of cosmetics, sound equipment valued at $300 and other items valued at $150 were on the preliminary list of missing goods.

Auger accident claims part of trucker's foot

BURLEY — An accident at the Western Farm Service plant southwest of Burley shortly before noon Tuesday injured a St. Anthony truck driver.

Ron Bradshaw, 35, of St. Anthony, was listed in fair condition at Cassia Memorial Hospital late in the day.

Officers said part of his foot was cut when he stepped on an auger while unloading a truck at the farm service facility.

Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal said Bradshaw drove to the plant at 1000 South and 500 West to deliver a load of nitrate fertilizer. He was trying to unfasten the tailgate of his truck when he stepped on the auger which was buried in the ground, and it removed part of his foot, Crystal said. An employee of Western Farm Service was assisting at the plant when the accident occurred.

The auger was used to help move loads of supplies to a storage area over the truck. A steel plate covers the sharp instrument, Crystal said, but a small section of the cover plate was dislodged, exposing the auger blade. He said Bradshaw's foot did not become caught, but was simply cut away. He was transported to the Cassia Memorial Hospital by Life Run ambulance service.

Trade center plan sought

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls group's vision of an Idaho Agricultural World Trade Center apparently has caught the eye of some federal officials who can help it happen.

The U.S. Economic Development Administration is interested enough in the dream to consider a $25,000 grant for a feasibility study, that could put the idea on paper.

The agency has asked the private Magic Valley Agricultural Institute and its public sponsor, the Idaho Department of Commerce, to draw up a work plan for a consultant, who would do the study, said Mike Glenn, a spokesman for the Twin Falls Institute.

The "scope of work" essentially would detail a list of questions that need to be answered in the study, he said. They range from location of a center to an analysis of Idaho's possibilities in international trade, Glenn said.

The Department of Commerce, which formally is seeking the grant, The Agricultural Institute and the Twin Falls-based Region IV Development Association.

tion, among other agencies, want to hire an out-of-state consulting firm to explore the center's possibilities.

If the grant is approved, the EDA would supply $25,000 cash and the Idaho interests would match it with another $10,000 in work time, money or other contributions.

The Institute last fall proposed an international trade center for Idaho's agricultural industry. The center could display products, supply marketing expertise and offer a meeting place where traders could conclude deals, planners have suggested.

The Magic Valley Institute favors placing the center at the College of Southern Idaho. To further the project it has sought support from private businesses, commodity commissions and public agencies.

Glenn said the Institute plans to return the work plan to the EDA by April 10. Comments from agriculture and related businesses are welcome, he said. The feasibility study itself could be done by September if the EDA awards the grant soon.

Window entry figures in burglaries

TWIN FALLS — A number of Twin Falls homes have been entered recently by a basement window burglar.

Police reports show that several homes with doors locked have been burglarized over the past few weeks after someone either broke through or found unlocked basement windows.

Diana Lincoln, 498 Heyburn Ave. W., told police Tuesday that her home was burglarized sometime between 5 p.m. March 19, and 3 a.m. Tuesday. She said the basement window was broken out and $411 in tools, clothing and other items were taken from the home.

Police in Twin Falls were continuing to investigate another burglary Tuesday involving three businesses that share a building at 500 Addison Ave.

Reports show entry was gained at

New Beginnings beauty salon, apparently through an unlocked window. The burglary occurred between 2 p.m. Sunday and 5:30 a.m. Monday, owners said. After gaining entry to the building, burglars also visited the quarters of Massage Clinic and Raymond Lichtman's Acupuncture Clinic.

Officials of all three businesses were preparing inventory lists Tuesday of their missing merchandise. About $1,000 worth of cosmetics, sound equipment valued at $300 and other items valued at $150 were on the preliminary list of missing goods.

Auger accident claims part of trucker's foot

BURLEY — An accident at the Western Farm Service plant southwest of Burley shortly before noon Tuesday injured a St. Anthony truck driver.

ing to unfasten the tailgate of his truck when he stepped on the auger which was buried in the ground, and it removed part of his foot. Crystal said an employee of Western Farm Service was assisting at the plant when the accident occurred.

The auger was used to help move loads of supplies to a storage area over the supplies were unloaded from the truck. A steel plate covers the sharp instrument, Crystal said, but a small section of the cover plate was dislodged, exposing the auger blade. He said Bradshaw's foot did not become caught, but was simply cut away. He was transported to the Cassia Memorial Hospital by Life Run ambulance service.

Chess club good for singles moves

DEAR ABBY: You have often been asked a question like this: I am a 26-year-old female who would like to meet a decent, eligible man. I've tried the bar scene, but most men are after a one-night stand. I've tried church groups, but the few men who are present came because their wives made them go. So where do I go from here?

Abby, I have a suggestion: Join a chess club. Women are always welcome. Furthermore, they will find that men outnumber women 10 to 1. Not bad odds! Also, from 25 percent to 40 percent of the men will be unmarried.

Men who play chess on a regular basis are usually of good character. The game requires that the player make individual, intelligent, patient and logical decisions. These attributes carry over into everyday life.

For example, I estimate that 95 percent of steady tournament players do not smoke, and I have never met one who abuses alcohol or drugs. They are almost always employed, are high achievers and have a stable family life.

A woman could counter with, "But I don't know anything about chess." Well, that could be to her advantage. What better way to break the ice than to ask a man of her choice to show her the moves?

If you print this, some women will probably write in and say, "I married a chess player, and you can have him!"

They realize that not every chess player is necessarily an ideal prospect for marriage, but it's a good way to meet eligible men.

—LYLE PROSTERMAN, COLUMBIA

DEAR ABBY: It's a novel idea for a place for women to meet decent men, but the typical chess player (as I perceive him) is not exactly a barrel of laughs.

He's apt to be quiet and pensive, more of an introvert than an extrovert, highly competitive, and slow to make decisions — which isn't all bad. The moves in chess have often been compared with those made by two opposing generals on a battlefield.

A chess game resembles a war in that it consists of attack and defense, whose object is making the "king" surrender. On a second thought, it could be a good training ground for marriage.

DEAR ABBY: You self-appointed goatherders are a conical lot, but your anti-male bias tops all the others.

You presume to explain why a man will pick up a tramp and treat her better than he treats his wife who is a lady. How do you know his wife is a lady? She may be as big a tramp as the prostitutes he picks up.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

There's no difference between the wife who holds her husband's sex life hostage with her "headaches" and/or demands for new clothes than the prostitute who settles for cash only. For most men, a prostitute is much cheaper than a wife.

When women taught their way into men's toilets and locker rooms and chose abortion in lieu of contraception, they ceased to be ladies.

DEAR SID: —SEATTLE SID
You are obviously an angry, bitter man who loves to hate women. You asked for no advice, so I'll not urge you to seek the counseling you so desperately need in order to love and be loved in return. Fly.

DEAR ABBY: I am a U.S. postal employee who wants to say thank you, thank you, thank you for your booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." A co-worker of mine lost a grown child due to a tragic accident, and in your booklet I found just the words that reflected my true feelings. I later heard that my condolence note gave much comfort to the bereaved.

That booklet contains so much good material about how to write letters of every kind. I want you to know it was the best $2.50 I ever spent.

Psychological factors linked to course of melanoma

Bad sunburn hikes risk of cancer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A person who suffers even one case of blistering sunburn in adolescence may double his risk of developing a serious skin cancer later in life, a researcher reported Tuesday.

Another study reported Tuesday suggested that psychological factors may influence the course of the skin cancer called melanoma. That idea has been advanced for other forms of cancer and has ignited debate in medical circles.

Melanoma is fatal in about one in four cases. The sunburn study followed research indicating that melanoma, unlike other, milder skin cancers, does not seem to be closely related to an individual's lifetime exposure to the sun, said Dr. Arthur Sober, associate dermatology professor at Harvard Medical School.

But studies have shown that people living closer to the equator have a higher risk of melanoma. For example, the 1980 melanoma rate in Connecticut was about a third the rate in Arizona, Sober said.

So investigators have wondered whether intense exposure, or bad sunburn, during early life might be a factor in later development of the disease, he said.

His study matched 111 melanoma patients with 107 healthy people of similar ages and same sex, and compared their memories of sun-related experiences during childhood and adolescence.

Results showed that people who had suffered a blistering sunburn in adolescence ran twice the risk of later melanoma. About half the melanoma patients had experienced such sunburns, while less than a third of the other group did, Sober said.

The study also found that people who took vacations of a month or more in sunny areas during adolescent years ran a risk of melanoma 2½ times greater than those who had not.

Sober blames such vacations and other short-term sun exposure for a dramatic rise in melanoma rates, which he said have increased 700 percent between 1940 and 1980, and nearly doubled in the past seven years. The cancer society expects 23,000 melanoma cases this year and 5,600 deaths.

"Our feeling is people probably are spending a lot more time indoors in their work and their schooling, and a lot more time outdoors in intense exposure situations," Sober said.

"It's now becoming more popular to go down to the Caribbean for a tan, and you only have a week" to do all the tanning, he said.

Melanoma is a cancer of the pigment-producing skin cells, and sunlight may nudge those cells or moles toward cancer, Sober said.

Wooden toy recalled for lead excess

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wooden toy horses sold across the country are being recalled because of excessive lead in the paint, the Consumer Product Safety Commission announced Tuesday.

The recall involves the Woodworks Lace Up Horse, Item No. 203, sold by Reeves International of Pequanock, N.J. About 550 of the $5 toys have been sold since 1983, the commission said.

Tests done by the Connecticut Department of Consumer Protection found that the paint on the toys contained 6.8 percent lead. Federal law limits lead content to 0.06 percent.

Although no injuries have been reported, lead can cause brain damage if ingested by children. The commission urged parents to return the toys to the retailer where purchased for a full refund.

The toys were described as wooden horses painted green with a red shoe lace laced through holes. The toy measures about 4 inches by 5½ inches, and was sold in a blister package labeled "High gloss lacquer finish; non-toxic paint. Made in Taiwan."

Consumers needing more information can contact Reeves at 201-694-5006 or the safety commission at 800-638-2772.

Aquino's constitution closes assembly

Briefly

2 police, 3 blacks dead in riots

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Two policemen were shot dead Tuesday and black mobs burned three blacks to death after dousing them with gasoline, police reported.

A Port Elizabeth court lifted a banning order on a black rights activist, its second such action in four days.

Henry Fazzie, regional vice president of the anti-apartheid United Democratic Front, said after the order-lifting on him, but "it's all irrelevant. I don't recognize new restrictions in any form."

A black consumer boycott of white-owned stores was in its second day in Pretoria. A two-day general strike of black workers had a limited effect in a major industrial area south of Johannesburg.

Waldheim denies accusations

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Kurt Waldheim said claims made Tuesday by the World Jewish Congress that he played a role in Nazi atrocities against Yugoslav partisans were nonsense and his wartime activities were respectable.

The congress told a news conference in New York that the former U.N. secretary-general was not a mere translator and staff officer but "a major intelligence figure," whose signature appeared on reports detailing operations against Yugoslav partisans.

The congress said Waldheim's name was among those of 30 officers listed on a table of honor by the Nazis to commemorate a massacre of partisans near the Croatian town of Kozara.

Haitian protests turning ugly

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — U.S. and Haitian officials said Tuesday that protests against the ruling council were taking an increasingly anti-American turn. Hospitalists said at least eight people had been injured, some by gunshots.

Police fired into crowds that gathered Monday night after demonstrators blocked traffic by piling burning tires and other debris in city streets. Rioters overturned a police car at one point.

Anti-government protests began in the capital and other cities after the general who heads the interim governing council named five new cabinet ministers.

There were no reports here of injuries in other cities.

Lycheva to U.N.: Toys, not war

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — If she had been allowed to address the U.N. Security Council, an 11-year-old Soviet schoolgirl said Tuesday she would have told the ambassadors to "spend the money on toys not bombs."

Katerina Lycheva told a reporter during a tour of the United Nations she also would have told the world body that the children of the Soviet Union desire peace. She said she believed American children felt the same way.

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corason Aquino signed a temporary "freedom constitution" Tuesday that gives her powers rivaling those Ferdinand E. Marcos exercised under martial law in the 1970s, including rule by decree.

The interim constitution guarantees civil rights but abolishes the National Assembly, which was controlled by the exiled former president's political party.

Mrs. Aquino said she hoped to have a new permanent constitution and National Assembly in place within a year.

She did not use the word "revolutionary" to describe her government, which came to power when Marcos fled the country Feb. 26. Her justice minister called it "revolutionary in origin and nature, democratic in essence, and essentially transitory in character."

Marcos moves to new Oahu estate

HONOLULU (AP) — Exiled Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos has moved into a private beachfront estate along one of Oahu's busiest highways after spending nearly a month in guest quarters on an Air Force base.

Marcos may stay in the four-bedroom house for several weeks or several months, according to Stan Anderson, who said he is an attorney for Marcos.

In Bern, Switzerland, the government ordered a freeze on all assets of Marcos and his family. It will be in effect until further notice.

Marcos and his wife Imelda were driven to the house by limousine Monday night. Secret Service agents there said only Marcos and his wife were to live in the house. No children or grandchildren were present, they said.

The president said: "Today, I am announcing an interim constitution under which our battered nation can shelter after years of dictatorship. Our newly won rights and liberties will be protected by this temporary freedom constitution."

Marcos ruled the Philippines for two decades, including more than eight years of martial law that began in 1972. He was driven out by a military-civilian revolt supported by the Philippine hierarchy of the Roman Catholic Church.

Marcos' Ople labor minister under Marcos said Mrs. Aquino was taking on the "powers of a dictator in a one-party state." He threatened to reopen the National Assembly despite its abolition under the interim constitution.

Other political opponents were less defiant. Jose Itono, executive secretary of Marcos' party, the New Society Movement, acknowledged the new president's wide support and said of her action: "There's nothing we can do about it."

Leonardo Perez, Marcos' political affairs minister, called Mrs. Aquino's government an "opened-ended dictatorship" and added: "We all hope that while she exercises all these extraordinary powers, they will not be abused."

Mrs. Aquino signed the proclamation on nationwide television one month to the day after Marcos resigned his office and fled the presidential palace to Clark Air Base on route to Hawaii.

Justice Minister Neptali Gonzales said civil rights are fully protected and the president's actions could be limited by judicial review.

Hondurans react to incursion

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The government sent soldiers Tuesday to the border area where military officials say 1,500 Nicaraguan troops made the largest incursion in six years, and the United States pledged to back the Hondurans with $20 million in emergency aid.

President Jose Azcona Hoyo called Daniel Ortega, president of Nicaragua's leftist government, to demand the immediate withdrawal of the Sandinista soldiers from Honduran territory.

In the Nicaraguan capital of Managua, presidential spokesman Manuel Espinoza denied reports from Honduras and Washington that Sandinista troops crossed the border to attack anti-Sandinista rebels based in Honduras.

"It is one more lie by the Reagan administration in its campaign against Nicaragua," Espinoza said in a telephone interview.

"The so-called invasion of Nicaraguan troops in Honduras is an invention of the Reagan administration, a propaganda plan to support aggression against Nicaragua," he charged. The Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry also denied that Sandinista troops had invaded Honduras.

In Tegucigalpa, Foreign Minister Carlos Lopez Contreras told The Associated Press that army troops were sent to the border area where, according to Honduran military intelligence and government sources, 1,500 Nicaraguan soldiers had entered the country.

He said the Nicaraguan action began Thursday. U.S. officials in Washington first reported the incursion on Monday and the first official word from the Honduran government did not come until Tuesday.

Captive in trouble

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Kidnapped British journalist Alice Collett is in "extreme danger" from severe kidney problems, said a statement issued Tuesday that purportedly came from the Moslem extremists who abducted him a year ago.

In Britain, Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe said there was "no justification" for holding Collett and appealed for his release.

Fun foods can help get family involved

Special edible Easter basket is a nest for cookies, candies

Easter, spring's most exciting holiday, is filled with fascinating legends, customs and folklore.

One such notable contribution during this holiday is the Easter rabbit, a custom introduced by the Pennsylvania Dutch in the late 1700's. As legend has it, if the children were good, the Easter rabbit would lay a colorful nest of eggs for them on Easter eve.

Because the Easter rabbit was so shy, he would build the nests in the most secluded places. To help the Easter rabbit, the children would hide their caps or bonnets and later find them filled with beautifully colored eggs. From the caps and fancy paper baskets to today's elaborate baskets, this legend has grown to become one of the most festive traditions of the Easter holiday.

During this festive occasion, get your family involved by creating your own edible Easter basket filled with special holiday treats. This Easter basket is simply a basic cookie dough mixed with crunchy, multi-colored, chocolate candies.

The cookie dough is baked in rings and stacked to form the basket. Adding color to the basket are Pastel Meringue Eggs made with the addition of commercial candies. Another delightful Easter basket treat is the Bunny Cookie Cut-Outs that surprisingly are made with very little effort. They are the perfect cookies for children to make because they can express their creativity by making the cut-outs and decorating with candies resembling miniature Easter eggs.

Treat your family to a traditional Easter menu featuring a juicy glazed ham with all the fixings and as a luscious bonus for the meal, serve the Colorful Fruit Cups. Light and refreshing, the fruit cups are a combination orange sections, grapes, sliced strawberries and a dollop of your favorite yogurt. And remember to leave room to sample your Easter basket goodies.

Pastel Meringue Eggs
2 egg whites, room temperature
1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
1/2 cup sugar

Rotisserie recipe may please tastes of lamb skeptics

It's Easter time, and for lots of people, that means lamb.

I had my youngest daughter the ideal dinner for Easter celebration would be roasted rabbit. She didn't think it was funny either.

I can really relate to people that don't like lamb. I didn't for years. We had a cook in college who served it every Sunday for "Dress Dinner." That was the meal that everybody in the house had to attend — unless you were in the infirmary. And you had to dress up. That is, wearing a dress, heels, hat (maybe) and gloves.

Beside eating decorously and practicing your manners, you sang many songs. By the time you got to sit and eat, the lamb was cold. It was not only cold, but it was fatty. I think now that the cook was probably ripping off the house and serving us mutton, but calling it lamb.

After I was married it took me years to try lamb. Now it's a family favorite and it never, never tastes fatty.

There used to be a mystique associated with cooking lamb, but I firmly believe anyone can cook it to perfection with just a little practice. Of course, you need to know a bit about choosing the right cut. Lamb meat is less than 12 months old — that's the law. Most of the U.S. lamb on the market is six to nine months old, but you can find baby lamb which is only four to six weeks old. Most of the spring lamb, in the markets now, is between two and five months old. You should look for

Food color

1 1/4 cups chopped candy-coated, chocolate candies, such as M&M's
Beat egg whites at low speed until foamy, being sure to use a clean, deep bowl, free from any grease. To ensure the greatest volume from the egg whites, add cream of tartar and beat at medium speed until soft peaks form. Gradually add sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, beating well after each addition. Increase speed to high and beat 5 minutes or until sugar is completely dissolved and stiff peaks form. Add food color as desired (mixture can be divided for several colors.) Fold in 1 cup candies.

Shape heaping tablespoons of mixture into egg-shaped ovals, about 2 1/2 inches long on foil-lined cookie sheets. Sprinkle with remaining candies. Bake at 225 degrees for 1 hour or until eggs lift easily off foil. Turn off oven and with door ajar, let rest until cool. Store in airtight container. Makes about 12 eggs.

Bunny Cookie Cut-Outs

3 cups flour
1 cup butter or margarine
1 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 egg
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Candy-coated, chocolate candies
Beat all ingredients except candies in mixer bowl until dough forms. Divide dough into thirds; wrap and chill at least 2 hours. Working with one-third of dough at a time, roll dough 1/4-inch thick on lightly floured board. Cut into desired shapes with 2-inch cookie cutter. Decorate as desired with candies. Bake at 350 degrees for 10 minutes or until just golden around edges. Cool about 3 minutes. Remove to wire rack to cool completely. Makes about 3 dozen cookies.

The flavor of the lamb depends a great deal on its age. The younger it is, the milder. If you like a more robust flavor, and most people actually do, then go for the regular lamb. You can tell the age by the size. A leg of lamb usually weighs 7 to 10 pounds. The spring lamb legs are only 5 to 7 pounds.

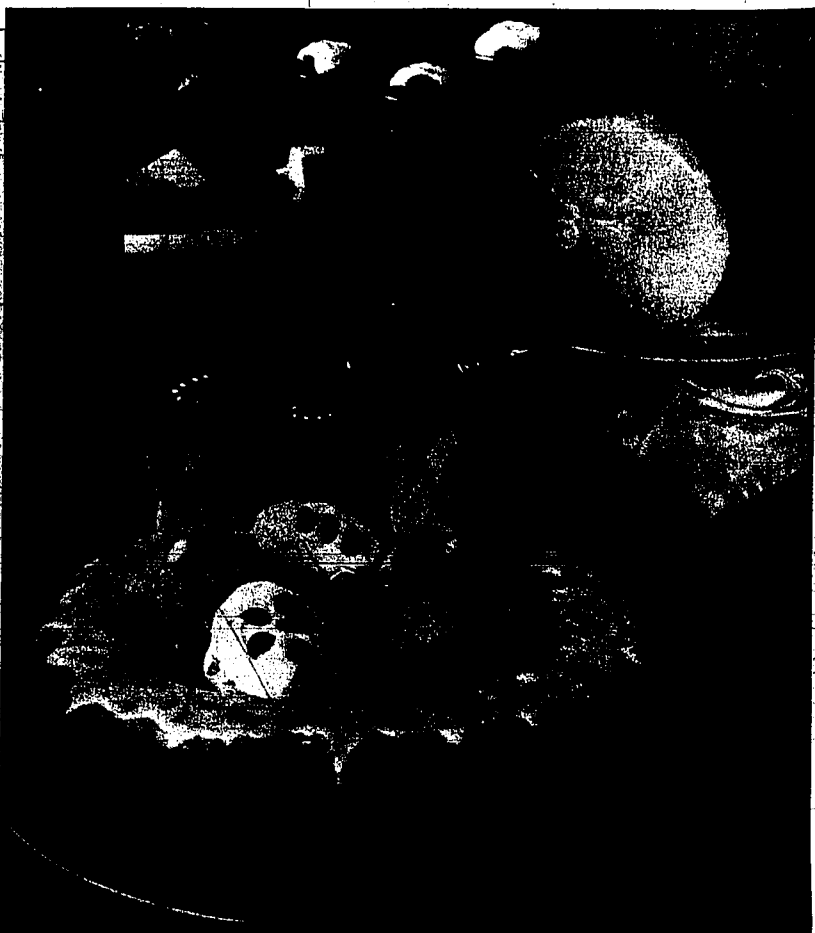

Many of you readers are thinking, "Lamb — it's no big deal. We eat it all the time." I would love to learn how the Basque make lamb cheeks and all their other great dishes that use lamb so well. And many other cultures literally survived for centuries on lamb.

If you were lucky enough to grow up on lamb, this column isn't for you. But right now, I'm trying to get those of you that are faint-hearted about cooking it to take the plunge and serve it up this season.

If you are hesitant about how your family will react, try barbecuing a leg. But right now, I'm trying to get those of you that are faint-hearted about cooking it to take the plunge and serve it up this season.

Try Portuguese Bread for a lamb Easter treat

Tradition of special bread handed down in Portugal

Easter wouldn't be Easter if dyed eggs are often substituted without a traditional holiday. As in any sweet bread, you may prefer to use raisins. Because it's made with quick-rising yeast, Portuguese rising yeast, rising time is cut in half. If you are out of the yeast, you can use a regular yeast, making it a kitchen quickie. This recipe makes two loaves, but could also be divided into six smaller loaves, each with its own raisin. In traditional egg nests in the United States, See BREAD on Page C3

Shaub family likes a variety of dishes for Easter dinner

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — To the delight of ZooAnn Shaub's family, their Easter dinner menu is not predictable.

"As far as food is concerned, usually that's one of the holidays I experiment and try different things I don't normally do," she says.

Last year, Shaub prepared a crown roast of pork. She says she had not cooked one before, wanted to try it, and thought Easter would be a good day to do so.

The year before, it was cornish game hens, and she says she cooked a turkey — "Easter," just because my family likes it so well. My kids absolutely love dressing."

Last summer, her husband, Dr. Roy Shaub, and their 18-year-old son, Tim, brought home about 100 pounds of salmon they caught in Alaska. So this Easter, the Shaubs will enjoy a salmon roast.

She does a lot of gourmet cooking and says her children prefer it. "I love to cook," she says, "and I've been blessed with a family that loves to eat. They love it when I experiment."

So far, neither Tim, 16-year-old Suzy, nor 13-year-old Jill, have developed a big interest in cooking, but Suzy does enjoy making cookies.

"That's probably because she also likes to eat them," Shaub says.

Easter dinner may vary from year to year, but certain traditions endure. The children still have the fun of receiving goodie-filled baskets and gifts from the Easter Bunny.

"I don't think we had an Easter egg hunt last year, which is probably the first year we didn't," she says.

Although Shaub is a full-time homemaker now, she was Twin Falls County Probate Judge during the '60s and was a Miss America contestant in 1952. Through the years she has done a great deal of volunteer work, and now she is on the executive board of United Way and is general chairwoman of Snake River Swimming, Inc.

This Sunday the Shaub family will be served asparagus, along with the salmon roast. To retain its vivid green color, Shaub will add a pinch of baking soda to the boiling water. Wild rice will also be on the table.

WILD RICE

1/2 cup chopped onions
1/2 cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons butter
2 cans chicken broth

1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon crushed thyme
4 slices bacon
1/4 cup minced parsley
Heat oven to 350 degrees. Cook and stir mushrooms, onion and celery in butter until tender. Stir in the chicken broth, and heat to boiling. Place the rice, salt, pepper and thyme in a two quart casserole.

Bread

5 to 6 cups all-purpose flour
2 packages quick-rising yeast
7/8 cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1 cup milk
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 tablespoon lemon juice
4 eggs
3/4 cup golden raisins
2 uncooked eggs

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. In a large mixing bowl, combine 2 cups flour, yeast, sugar, salt, and lemon peel; mix well. In saucepan, heat milk, butter and lemon juice until very warm (120-130 degrees; butter does not need to melt). Add to flour mixture. Add eggs. Blend at low speed until moistened; beat 3 minutes at medium speed. By hand gradually stir in raisins and enough remaining flour to make a firm dough. Knead on floured surface 5 to 8 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place until double, about 30 minutes.

Punch down dough. Set aside a dough ball about 3 inches in diameter. Divide remaining dough into 2 parts. Shape each half into a round loaf. Place in greased 8-inch cake pans. Cover; let rise in warm place until double, about 25 minutes. Place an uncooked egg in the middle of each loaf. Press down gently to keep in place. From dough ball, make 4 ropes about 9 inches long, and form a cross over each egg. Bake at 375 degrees for 40-45 minutes until golden brown. Remove from pans; cool.

Honey an alternative to sugar for sweetness

By TOM HOGE
The Associated Press

One of the treats I looked forward to as a boy was when my mother baked the week's bread and gave me a slice spread with a thick coating of honey. To this day, I eat pancakes with honey and spread it on homemade muffins.

Many Americans still use honey in making cake and puddings. And some prefer it to sugar in tea and other hot or cold drinks.

In France's Rhone Valley where bees abound, there are dozens of types of honey. Lavender honey is one of the most popular there but the "Eggs" find nectar from many other sources in the valley, including grasses and herbs. Thus the aromas of thyme, rosemary, marjoram and sage, to name a few, can be detected in Rhone Valley honey.

Rice

Pour the chicken broth over the rice and mix. Cover and bake for 30 minutes. Meantime, fry bacon, and drain it. Remove casserole from oven. Stir in parsley. Sprinkle bacon on top. Bake for 30 minutes longer, or until rice is cooked. Serves approximately six.

Because the men in Shaub's family are hunters, there is always a freezer full of game. She often prepares this wild rice dish to go along with it.

So far, she has not decided what the dessert will be on Easter, but she says she might bake a cheese cake, which is her family's favorite. "It is an excellent cheese cake," she says.

LEMONY TWO-CHEESE CAKE

For the crust:
 2/3 cup finely crushed graham cracker crumbs
 2 tablespoons sugar
 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
 3 tablespoons butter, melted
 Mix well and sprinkle it into a well-buttered, nine-inch springform pan and put about a fourth of the crumbs around the sides. The remainder is pressed on the bottom.

For the cake:
 1 pound fine-curd, creamed cottage cheese
 (She puts the cottage cheese through her food processor, so it will be smooth, creamy and curdless.)

 1 pound cream cheese
 4 eggs
 Grated rind of 1 lemon
 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
 3 tablespoons cornstarch
 3 tablespoons flour
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1 pint sour cream
 1/2 cup butter, melted
 Juice of 1/2 lemon

Cream the cheeses until light and fluffy. Gradually beat in 1/2 cups sugar. Add eggs, one at a time, beating thoroughly after each addition. Beat in the lemon rind, the lemon juice and the vanilla. Mix cornstarch, flour and salt together and blend into first mixture. Add 1/2 cup butter, melted, and the sour cream. Mix well and pour into prepared pan. Bake at 325 degrees for 1 hour and 15 minutes. Turn heat off and leave the cake in the oven for 2 hours. Cool, then chill it.

Shaub sets out the ingredients for this cake early so they will be at room temperature when she is ready to mix them together.

Lamb

 The remaining meat should weigh about 6 pounds.

ROTISSERIE STUFFED LAMB
 1 1/2 cups chopped green onions
 3 tablespoons vegetable oil
 4 cups bread crumbs, soft rather than dry
 1/4 cup milk
 4 1/2 tablespoons fresh mint, chopped
 2 tablespoons lemon rind, finely chopped
 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
 1/2 teaspoon ground pepper
 4 garlic cloves, finely minced
 1/2 cup olive oil
 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 First saute the green onions in the vegetable oil over medium heat until soft. Set aside.

In a large bowl, mix together the bread crumbs, milk, 3 tablespoons of the mint, lemon rind, salt, pepper and the green onions, including the oil they were cooked in. Stuff this into the pocket of the lamb and tie to keep it in. Insert the rotisserie rod lengthwise through the center of the meat. Balance it and fasten it to the rod so it turns.

Mix together the garlic, olive oil, lemon juice and remaining mint. Place the rotisserie rod on the grill and cook meat over a low flame, basting with the seasoned oil mixture every 15 minutes or so. Keep the cover on the cooking meat. It should take about an hour. Check for doneness with a meat thermometer. For rare the thermometer should read 140 degrees, for medium 160 degrees and 170 degrees for well done.

You should allow the meat to sit for at least 10 minutes before carving.

Garlic is a natural with lamb, so don't be afraid to use it. It gets milder and milder as it cooks. I use the tip of a sharp knife to make slits about every 1/2-inch or so in a leg of lamb or shoulder roast and insert slices of garlic cloves in each of them. Then I just salt and pepper and cook it as above on a rotisserie, and it's great.

The other favorite way of serving lamb at our house is braising the shanks. I think this must be a favorite of many people, because the shanks are so difficult to find. Keep after your meat department man to get some in for you.

You'll need about 2 shanks for each person. Make sure they are cut by the butcher, as they cook better. I also trim off as much fat as I can. Then heat oil in a heavy kettle. Dust the shanks with seasoned flour and brown until golden. Remove the lamb and saute chopped onions and garlic in the oil until limp. Add a bay leaf, some broth or water, and put the lamb back in the pot. Cover and cook for at least 2 hours. I put in carrots and potatoes, but you could easily add rice toward the end of the cooking time.

I hope this gets you to try some of our delicious Idaho lamb right now during high season for it. May your Easter be joyful! Happy Spring to all of you. Enjoy!

Bread

PORTUGUESE EASTER BREAD

5 to 6 cups all-purpose flour
 2 packages quick-rise yeast
 1/2 cup sugar
 1 teaspoon salt
 1/2 teaspoon grated lemon peel
 1 cup milk
 1/2 cup butter or margarine
 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 4 eggs
 3/4 cup golden raisins
 2 uncooked eggs

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. In a large mixing bowl, combine 2 cups flour, yeast, sugar, salt, and lemon peel; mix well. In saucepan, heat regular and lemon juice until very warm (120-130 degrees); butter does not need to melt). Add to flour mixture. Add eggs. Blend at low speed until moistened; beat 3 minutes at medium speed. By hand gradually stir in raisins and enough remaining flour to make a firm dough. Knead on floured surface 5 to 8 minutes. Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place until double, about 30 minutes.

Punch down dough. Set aside a dough ball about 3 inches in diameter. Divide remaining dough into 2 parts. Shape each half into a round loaf. Place in greased 8-inch cake pans. Cover; let rise in warm place until double, about 25 minutes. Place an uncooked egg in the middle of each loaf. Press down gently to keep in place. From dough ball, make 4 ropes about 9 inches long, and form a cross over each egg. Bake at 375 degrees for 40-45 minutes until golden-brown. Remove from pans; cool.

Cocoa pound cake sweetens tables for holiday company

COCOA POUND CAKE
 2 cups stirred all-purpose flour (spoon and level)
 3/4 cup cocoa
 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1 1/2 cups butter, soft or cut in thin pats
 3 cups sugar
 2 teaspoons vanilla
 5 large eggs
 1 1/2 teaspoons instant coffee dissolved in 1/2 cup hot water
 1 cup buttermilk
 Stir together flour, cocoa, baking powder and salt. In a large mixer bowl cream butter, sugar and vanilla; beat in eggs one at a time, then coffee solution, just until blended after each addition. Gently beat in flour mixture in several additions, alternately with buttermilk, only until smooth after each addition. Bake in a well greased and floured 10-inch angel cake pan in a preheated 325-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 1 hour and 20 to 25 minutes. Let stand on rack for 20 minutes. Loosen around tube and edges; turn out on rack; turn right side up. Cool completely. Wrap tightly and let stand at room temperature overnight before slicing fairly thin. Serve with ice cream and chocolate sauce.

Honey an alternative to sugar for sweetness

By TOM HOGE
The Associated Press

One of the treats I looked forward to as a boy was when my mother baked the week's bread and gave me a slice spread with a thick coating of honey. To this day, I eat pancakes with honey and spread it on homemade muffins.

Many Americans still use honey in making cake and puddings. And some prefer it to sugar in tea and other hot or cold drinks.

In France's Rhone Valley where bees abound, there are dozens of types of honey. Lavender honey is one of the most popular there and the bees find nectar from many other sources in the valley, including grasses and herbs. Thus the aromas of thyme, rosemary, marjoram and sage, to name a few, can be detected in Rhone Valley honey.

Pour the chicken broth over the rice and mix. Cover and bake for 30 minutes. Moisten fry bacon, and drain it. Remove casserole from oven. Stir in parsley. Sprinkle bacon on top. Bake for 30 minutes longer, or until rice is cooked. Serves approximately six.

Because the men in Shaub's family are hunters, there is always a freezer full of game. She often prepares this wild rice dish to go along with it.

So far, she has not decided what the dessert will be on Easter, but she says she might bake a cheese cake, which is her family's favorite. "It is an excellent cheese cake," she says.

LEMONY TWO-CHEESE CAKE

For the crust:
1/2 cup finely crushed graham cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons sugar
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
3 tablespoons butter, melted
Mix well and sprinkle it into a well-buttered, nine-inch springform pan and put about a fourth of the crumbs around the sides. The remainder is pressed on the bottom.
For the cake:
1 pound fine-curd, creamed cottage cheese
(She puts the cottage cheese through her food processor, so it will be smooth, creamy and curdless.)

- 1 pound cream cheese
- 4 eggs
- Grated rind of 1 lemon
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 3 tablespoons cornstarch
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 pint sour cream
- 1/2 cup butter, melted
- Juice of 1/2 lemon

Cream the cheeses until light and fluffy. Gradually beat in 1/2 cups sugar. Add eggs, one at a time, beating thoroughly after each addition. Beat in the lemon rind, the lemon juice and the vanilla. Mix cornstarch, flour and salt together and blend into first mixture. Add 1/2 cup butter, melted, and the sour cream. Mix well and pour into prepared pan. Bake at 325 degrees for 1 hour and 15 minutes. Turn heat off and leave the cake in the oven for 2 hours. Cool, then chill it.

Shaub sets out the ingredients for this cake early so they will be at room temperature when she is ready to mix them together.

Lamb

The remaining meat should weigh about 6 pounds.

ROTISSERIE STUFFED LAMB

- 1/2 cups chopped green onions, 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 4 cups bread crumbs, soft rather than dry
- 1/4 cup milk
- 1/2 tablespoons fresh mint, chopped

2 tablespoons lemon rind, finely chopped
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon ground pepper
4 garlic cloves, finely minced
1/2 cup olive oil
1 tablespoon lemon juice
First saute the green onions in the vegetable oil over medium heat until soft. Set aside.

In a large bowl, mix together the bread crumbs, milk, 3 tablespoons of the mint, lemon rind, salt, pepper and the green onions, including the oil they were cooked in. Stuff this into the pocket of the lamb and tie to keep it in.

Insert the rotisserie rod lengthwise through the center of the meat. Balance it and fasten it to the rod so it turns.

Mix together the garlic, olive oil, lemon juice and remaining mint. Place the rotisserie rod on the grill and cook meat over a low flame, basting with the seasoned oil mixture every 15 minutes or so.

Keep the cover on the cooking meat. It should take about an hour. Check for doneness with a meat thermometer. For rare the thermometer should read 140 degrees, for medium 160 degrees and 170 degrees for well-done.

You should allow the meat to sit for at least 10 minutes before carving.

Garlic is a natural with lamb, so don't be afraid to use lots. It gets milder and milder as it cooks. I use the tip of a sharp knife to make slits about every 1/2-inch or so in a leg of lamb or shoulder roast and insert slices of garlic cloves in each of them. Then I just salt and pepper and cook it as above on a rotisserie, and it's great.

The other favorite way of serving lamb at our house is braising the shanks. I think this must be a favorite of many people, because the shanks are so difficult to find. Keep after your meat department man to get some in for you.

You'll need about 2 shanks for each person. Make sure they are cut by the butcher, as they cook better. I also trim off as much fat as I can.

Then heat oil in a heavy kettle. Dust the shanks with seasoned flour and brown until golden. Remove the lamb and saute chopped onions and garlic in the oil until limp. Add a bay leaf, some broth or water, and put the lamb back in the pot. Cover and cook for at least 2 hours. I put in carrots and potatoes, but you could easily add rice toward the end of the cooking time.

I hope this gets you to try some of our delicious Idaho lamb right now during high season for it.

May your Easter be joyful! Happy Spring to all of you. Enjoy!

Tennessee Krogers supporting diet trend

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Would a major supermarket chain run the risk of losing sales by encouraging its customers to eat less?

In Nashville, Tenn., Kroger stores are doing just that and they say it has been great for business.

In January, Kroger stores were approached by Martin Katakah, professor of psychology and director of Vanderbilt University's Weight Management Program, and Burt Humell, president of a major wholesale food distributor in Nashville.

Katakah and Humell had an exciting idea. They wanted to put the city of Nashville on Katakah's new "Rotation Diet." Their problem was finding locations to weigh the thousands of Nashville residents who would participate.

"We had heard about Martin Katakah's Rotation Diet seminars," says Ross Thomas, Kroger's manager of advertising for the Nashville area, "and we knew that thousands of people had attended and hundreds had been turned away because there was not enough room. Interest being shown, our Kroger stores could perform a valuable public service by serving as Rotation Diet weigh-in stations. Losing sales never entered into our consideration of backing the program."

Why were Nashville residents taking an interest in this new diet? For one thing, the rotation in calorie intake is appealing to people who find it difficult to stick to a diet that is tied to a rigid calorie intake over many weeks.

The Rotation Diet allows the dieter to rotate from low-calorie to medium-calorie to high-calorie totals over the course of a cycle. Women consume 600 calories a day for three days, then 900 calories a day for four days, then 1,200 calories a day for seven days. Men use rotations of 1,200, 1,500 and 1,800 calories.

In addition, the Rotation Diet allows unlimited amounts of certain vegetables and three servings a day of a "safe fruit" to act as a pick-me-up or hunger stopper. The program also emphasizes exercise, especially walking.

After Kroger agreed to allow 21 of its Nashville stores to serve as weekend weigh-in stations, Katakah did some figuring. If 50,000 Nashvillians lost an average of two-thirds of a pound a day, they could easily lose a total of more than 1 million pounds over 12 weeks.

Early in February, Katakah appeared on Nashville radio and television shows and asked Nashvillians to join in and "Melt a Million."

On the weekend of Feb. 15, thousands of participants arrived at the Kroger supermarkets, where they were met by teams of volunteers handing out Rotation Diet instructions and weighing them on scales provided by the Health-O-Meter company.

Kroger also decided to do more than merely provide the weigh-in space to help its customers. On the shelves throughout the stores were signs pointing toward the vegetables, fruits and other items recommended by the Rotation Diet program. And when supplies of the diet booklets ran out, Kroger paid to have them reprinted.

By the end of the first weekend, more than 16,000 people had weighed in and joined Nashville's effort to "Melt a Million." The following week, the Nashville YMCAs joined the effort. The program continues until May, and it looks like Katakah's purchase price circled. Expires April 30, 1986.

dream of a slimmer Nashville may come true.

Are there other supermarkets in America that would like to sponsor "Melt a Million" in their cities? They can contact George Schmitzer, Director of Public Affairs, at Vanderbilt University, 134 Wesley Hall, Nashville, TN 37240.

Schmitzer has asked the Guinness Book of World Records to recognize a slimmer Nashville by establishing a category for "Communal Weight Loss." Nashville may hold the World's record for a while, but can you imagine what results a Rotation Diet weight-loss melt-out between New York and Los Angeles would bring?

Hot cross buns perfect for the season

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
The Associated Press

HOT CROSS BUNS

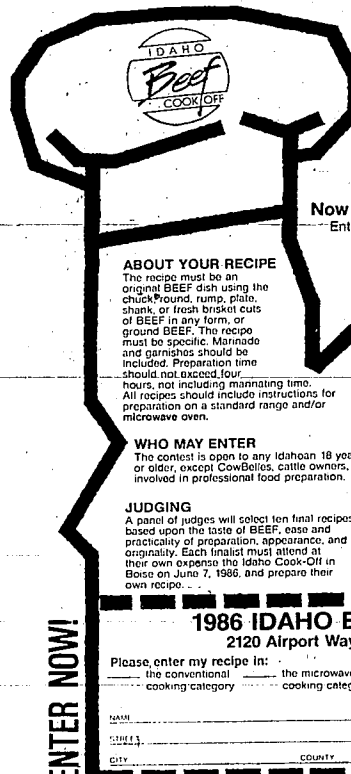

3½ cups (about) all-purpose flour
½ cup sugar
1 package dry yeast
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground nutmeg
2-3rds cup milk
½ cup butter, softened
3 large eggs
1 cup raisins
icing, see recipe

In a large electric mixer bowl stir together 1 cup of the flour, the sugar, yeast, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg.

In a small saucepan heat milk and butter to very warm (120 to 130 degrees); butter need not melt completely. At medium speed gradually beat milk mixture into flour mixture for 2 minutes. Add 2 whole eggs and 1 yolk (reserve white for glaze). Beat 1 minute. Gradually work in 2 more cups of the flour. Turn out onto a floured surface; knead in the raisins, using as much of the remaining flour as necessary to make a smooth and satiny dough — 5 to 8 minutes.
Place in a large greased bowl; tightly cover bowl with saran. Let rise in a warm place (about 80 degrees) until doubled — about 1½ hours. Punch down dough; form into 12 equal smooth balls, pinching dough together on bottoms. Place 2 inches apart on greased cookie sheet. Let rise in a warm place until nearly doubled, about 1 hour. Lightly brush with the remaining egg white; bake on a wire rack. Bake in center of oven preheated 375-degree oven until browned — about 15 to 20 minutes. Cool on a wire rack. Use icing to form a cross on each bun.

Makes 12 large buns.

ICING
In a small bowl measure ¾ cup confectioners' sugar and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Gradually beat in 2 to 3 teaspoons milk to make a smooth thick icing.

Careful pre-bloom pruning is important to plant growth

The best time to prune most trees and shrubs is in the spring just before new growth starts. Plants quickly heal pruning wounds and it is also easier to see where to make pruning cuts.

The two major exceptions to early spring pruning are flowering shrubs and "bleeder" trees. It is alright to prune flowering shrubs now, but you will prune off at least some of the flowers.

If you wait until just after they bloom the flowers will not be lost. Maples, birches and a few other trees tend to have excessive sap flow from pruning wounds, if pruned just before they leaf out. If pruned before or after this period, less sap will be lost.

The most important rule in pruning is to prune above a bud or branch. Stubs above a bud will die and become an invitation to insect or disease attack as well as being unsightly. Evergreens can be pruned at any point along the branch.

If you want to make a plant more bushy, prune just above a bud with two or three other buds below. With most plants three or more buds will grow into branches.

Allen Wilson Intermountain gardening

If you want to keep about the same number of branches but reduce plant size, prune just above a side branch which is smaller than the branch which you are pruning.

If you want to thin or reduce the number of branches, prune back to a main branch which is larger than the branch you are pruning. With some shrubs which have several main branches originating below the ground, this means removing the branch to the ground level.

With most ornamental plants the only pruning needed is to remove dead or broken branches. Some shade trees need to have extra branches removed or thinned out. When two branches cross or rub against each other, the weaker one is usually removed.

The strongest branches on trees are the ones with the greatest crook angle between trunk and main branch. Branches with narrow crotches are more likely to be damaged or broken by wind or snow. Most trees should be trained to have only main trunk or leader which grow upright. Extra leaders can be shortened or removed to favor the one which grows the straightest.

Fruit trees need yearly pruning to achieve maximum fruit production and to train branches which are within easy reach for harvesting. With mature fruit trees, the main job is to thin out or remove weak branches, especially those growing toward the center of the tree. This produces extra light for fruit on the lower-branches and inner part of the tree.

I have a leaflet on pruning which includes instructions on how to train young fruit trees and prune established fruit trees in addition to general pruning principles. If you would like a copy, send $1 and a stamped self-addressed envelope to Allen Wilson, P. O. Box 40, Rexburg, Idaho 83440. Ask for pruning leaflet.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College.

Southern garden offers special tour

By EARL ARONSON
The Associated Press

Brookgreen Gardens in South Carolina is a museum without walls where rice plantations once flourished on a 10,000-acre land grant from the King of England.

Avenues of lovely, huge live oak, some 225 years old, and magnolias lead to the sculpture garden, wildlife park and bird and animal refuges. Brookgreen Gardens owns 9,127 acres now, but leases 2,500 acres of beach front, across U.S. Highway 17 at Myrtle, to the State of South Carolina for Huntington State Park.

When the rice fields were flooded out, the owners began selling off parcels. Archer Huntington, a railroad fortune heir, and his sculptress wife, Anna Hyatt Huntington, founded Brookgreen Gardens in 1931, a year after they'd bought the property for a winter home. The only way to reach the area then was by water or along a sand road.

They enclosed the garden area with an open-work brick wall sprayed with cement to provide "a grey tone to harmonize with the Spanish moss trailing from the old trees," and to furnish niches for sculpture.

The American sculpture collection has 450 works by nearly 200 artists, including Mrs. Huntington, highly respected as a sculptor of animals.

The plant collection includes 2,000 taxa of native plants and selected exotics. There are fine specimens of Yucca, holly, bay trees, bald cypresses and palmettos. A dogwood garden is guarded by "Riders of the Dawn," a pair of horse-mounted men carved from two 40-ton blocks of Indiana limestone.

Sculptures are also fashioned from marble, granite, bronze and aluminum. Inscribed along the brick wall are lines or verses from many authors who favored nature.

The Huntingtons built a large raised pool with four sculptures on the site.

One of my guides was Hugh Vann, who supervised landscaping at the adjacent Litchfield Plantation and Country Club on Pawley's Island. He emphasized the secluded relaxation offered by Brookgreen to visitors, who number about 160,000 annually.

Vann, who studied horticulture at North Carolina State University, came to Pawley's Island in 1969 after serving as director of the North Carolina Nurserymen's association. Brookgreen was bright with tulips, white dogwoods and other flowers as we strolled along. Marsh grass now grows where rice, shipped to market along the intercoastal Waterways, once flourished. There are double-flowered cherry and buckeye trees. Something is in bloom virtually all year. There are Solomon's Seal, bloodroot, blue bonnet, daylilies, butter fennel, crape myrtles and bottle brush, plus numerous annuals for color.

There are small palms — borderline for the climate.

Energy aids give property values shot in arm

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Building assessed-based on a multiple of its annual revenues, conservation managers at the Los Angeles Medical complex successfully use energy equipment that improves revenues system and $800,000 per year after conservation equipment to increase can increase the sale price of a property values as well as cut building by many times the face value of the equipment.

When the complex was sold, the prevailing rate of return on commercial property was 10 percent.

Because a building's value is to the publication, net income was 10 percent.

Springtime chill

Inconstant April weather spells daffodil doom

By HENRY MITCHELL
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The late T.S. Eliot is well remembered for his line "April is the cruelest month," and I would add March, May and much of June.

What we loosely call spring, meaning the season in which plants grow vigorously and come to flower in a time of nice skies and warm airs, is partly imaginary.

In spring the gardener has the sharpest disappointments of the year, as a rule, especially in this capital (so favored as a gardening region, offering the best of both North and South).

We have our most terrible storms in spring, as far as the garden is concerned, and although we are wonderfully free from late frosts (compared with England, say) we still have what I call cold weather sometimes into the month of June.

As our daffodils begin to bloom in March, our hearts leap up, briefly, but they don't stay leapt up, for his too soon the maelstrom day that so excited us, blue sky, crocuses, snowdrops, scillas, early daffodils, temperature of 65 degrees, is followed by a hailstorm or a drop to 22 degrees and a flurry of snow or ice, and gray skies that look more somber than any sky of the winter.

Then the gardener sees his daffodils flat on the ground, and while they may straighten their stems and stand up once again by afternoon, their recovery does not last long, for at night a freeze once more lays them flat.

If this happens too many times (such seasons are mercifully quick to come again in winter), the daffodil is down for the count.

If we have temperature drops to 32 or below — we need to remember that early spring is invariably a variable — we always have warmer than usual days and colder than usual. Nothing would be more surprising than a spring of settled weather.

There is not much to be done about it. The flowers that bloom in variable weather have evolved over the eons to survive in variable

French polish techniques need practice

By ANDY LANG
The Associated Press

Q. — My grandfather always finished furniture with something he called French polishing. I know it had something to do with shellac. Can you tell me anything about it? I asked in several stores and they said they had a French polish that could be applied, but I am sure my grandfather did not use any completely made preparation, just shellac.

A. — French polishing was a method of finishing furniture used by wood finishers many years ago. Some oldtimers still use it. You are correct in saying only shellac was involved. But there are many variations of the technique and it depends on who is telling you about it. The most commonly used method calls for a rubbing pad saturated in shellac (some say it should be dipped first in boiled linseed oil) and then rubbing the furniture in a circular motion, as if you were making the figure eight. Do this until the pad begins to get dry, then dip it in the liquid again and continue the rubbing. French polishing is rather tricky and you may not get the hang of it the first or second time, so do a lot of practicing on scrap wood before you use the system seriously.

weather. A bloom here and there may be doomed, but in general there is nothing to worry about when a freeze "threatens" the crocus or daffodil or emerging tulip. They are born to this.

Some damage can be done, however, by the gardener's inept attempts to "protect" frost-threatened flowers.

I do not protect anything and have no trouble. In the fall, if I have a somewhat tender rose (happier, perhaps, in Norfolk, Va., than in Washington), I may give a 3-inch wad of hay once the ground freezes and weave a few evergreen branches among the rose twigs, but nothing more.

If it cannot survive with this reasonable effort, then it is too tender to be worth growing here. But the early spring flowers have languished for centuries without assistance from gardeners with blankets and bizarre notions.

This is a good time to give a bit of fertilizer to such things as irises, peonies and daylilies. I use a simple 5-10-5 formula (bags of fertilizer have the percentages of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash printed on them), a scant handful to the clump, or a rounded teaspoon per individual plant. Ideally this should be scratched lightly into the earth, but sometimes I just get it on the surface and leave it at that.

The simplest way to buy fertilizer in the city is to go to a farm store in the suburbs and get large bags of it. But some gardeners have no place to store bags of fertilizer, and they do well to buy little 5-pound boxes at hardware stores or garden centers, but the early spring flowers are sold at a higher rate than 50 or 100 pounds. Gardeners with a sixth of an acre or more should buy fertilizer in 50-pound bags at least, unless they enjoy throwing money away.

It is also a good idea to get a general idea what a bale of peat moss costs, then wait for a special sale and buy several bales. It is a great comfort to have a couple of extra bales, so that when you need it (as in planting rose bushes or similar projects) you have plenty of it right there and don't have to dash out and buy small bags of it at high cost.

When you get a new bale of peat moss, open the top and run the hose in it until water flows out. Repeat this, when you think of it, three or four times. Then when you need it, it will be damp and ready to use.

If you need the peat and the bale is perfectly dry, the thing to do is get the dry peat dug out into a bucket, fill the bucket with water and with your hands swirl it around until it is fully sodden. Then squeeze it dry, and it is ready to mix with the earth.

This is great trouble, especially if you're planting a number of things. If your bale is presoaked and ready for use, you will give thanks you thought ahead for a change.

Since I do not use sprays for aphids or beetles or ants or anything else in the garden, I cannot give much advice on that topic and leave you to your own devices.

Dust removal key to applying finish

By ANDY LANG
The Associated Press

When you have completed the sanding of your floor, don't even think about applying a new finish until you have done everything possible to be sure all dust has been removed from the room.

This means an extra careful vacuuming even though your sanding machine had a dust bag attached to it. And, after the vacuuming, pick up residual dust with a tack cloth dampened in a little turpentine or denatured alcohol.

Presumably you will have decided ahead of time which kind of finish will be applied to the floor. Not too many years ago, you made a choice from three or four finishes. Today, there are literally dozens of them. One of the most popular in recent years is a synthetic, the one known as polyurethane varnish.

More readers write in about polyurethane varnish than any other, simply because it is comparatively new. It also is the most expensive. But it produces a hard, clear surface of great durability. It is greatly resistant to water and spilled chemicals. Its adherents say it is impervious to chipping or cracking, but a few who have used it say it can be scratched and that any scratches are difficult to patch.

Regular varnish has been used for floors for many years and is still a big favorite. It costs less than polyurethane and is also very durable. A varnish finish usually dries to a high gloss, but if you use the type that isn't glossy enough to suit you, it can be rubbed to produce the shine you want.

Lacquer is another high-gloss product that dries to an eye-catching finish. It dries very quickly, which is both an advantage and a disadvantage. Its quick-drying qualities enable several coats to be applied in a single day, but those same qualities call for a speedy application and resistance to the temptation to go back and touch-up a mottled spot.

Shellac also is fast-drying and is easier to apply than lacquer. It is very hard when dry and was a favorite in bowling lanes for many years.

Duke, Louisville made semifinals favorites

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Duke is a two-point favorite among Nevada sports books to beat Kansas in their semifinal game and go on to win the NCAA tournament.

Ever-cautious, though, some oddsmakers are saying that the final outcome of the Final Four may be too close to call.

"Everyone seems to think Duke is the best team," said Sonny Reizer of the Castaways Race and Sports Book. "I personally think they'll have a very tough time with Kansas. I think Kansas will be playing Louisville" in the final.

Saturday's semifinals in Dallas match Duke against Kansas and Louisville against LSU, with the two winners playing for the national championship Monday night.

Las Vegas oddsmakers have established Louisville a 5/2-point favorite to beat LSU.

"Louisville impresses me the most," said Mel Exber of the Las Vegas Club. "They're playing real good, they peaked at the right time and they've got a pretty good winning streak going."

Exber has established Duke and Louisville as 8-5 favorites to win it all, with Kansas listed at 5-2 and LSU at 8-1 to win the title.

Vic Salerno, president of the Nevada Race and Sports Book Association and head of every month," Vaccaro said. "The final hand (money bet) for the three weeks during the basketball playoffs probably surpasses what you do on a (college) bowl game weekend."

Vaccaro predicted that by the time the championship is decided, the legal handle on the final three-week of college basketball may reach $20 million.

Oddsmakers say more than $40 million was bet on Super Bowl XX, between the Chicago Bears and the New England Patriots.

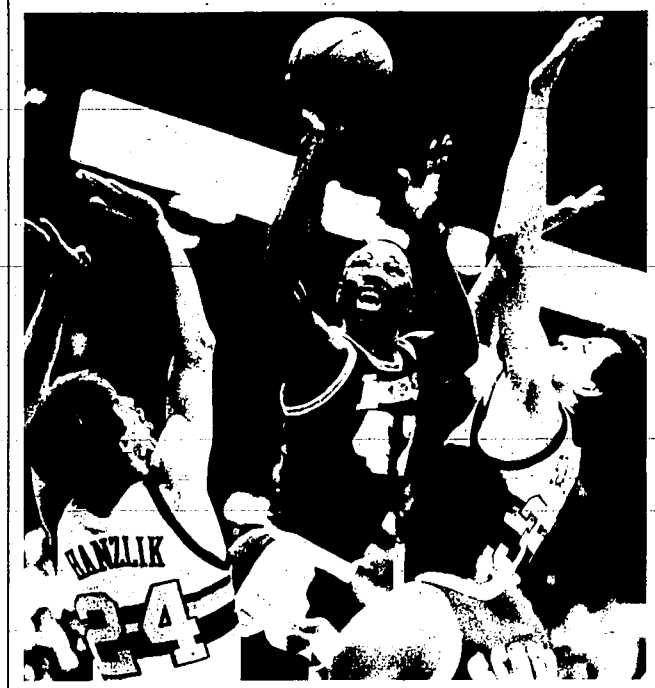

"Every year the Final Four betting seems to get bigger and bigger," Reizer said. "This year you've got three outstanding teams out of the four. And LSU is no slouch. You can throw a blot at every three as to their overall ability. Duke has shown great power throughout the season but I don't think they've played up to their potential. And Louisville has been superb the last 15 games."

Vaccaro picked Louisville.

"My personal feeling is that Duke is the best team in the country but Louisville is playing better right now than any team in the country," Vaccaro said.

"It's like tossing a coin," Reizer said of picking a favorite. "And I'm tossing it toward Kansas."

Lakers end jinx at Denver

DENVER (AP) — James Worthy scored 11 of his 30 points in the final seven minutes Tuesday night as the Los Angeles Lakers defeated Denver 121-115 to end the Nuggets' three-game winning streak over the defending NBA champions.

The Lakers have won 13 of their last 14 games, improving their record to 56-17, second only to Boston's 58-13. Denver fell 1½ games behind idle Houston in the battle for the Midwest Division lead.

The Nuggets won the season series from the Lakers 3-2, the only team besides Boston to claim that distinction.

Los Angeles led the entire final three quarters, building its advantage to 81-66 early in the third 8-0 streak early in the fourth period to close within 102-96 and trailing 111-108 with 4:02 remaining.

But Magic Johnson, who had 19 assists, scored on a drive and the Lakers were able to stave off the Nuggets' charge.

Hawks 97, Cavaliers 91

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Dominique Wilkins scored 34 of his 36 points in the first three quarters as the Atlanta Hawks defeated the Cleveland Cavaliers 97-91 in an NBA game Tuesday night.

Wilkins scored 22 points as the Hawks took a 51-40 halftime lead and added 12 in the third period as Atlanta took a 79-67 advantage into the final quarter. Wilkins, the league's second-leading scorer with a 29.6 average, had missed Atlanta's previous game because of food poisoning.

After Cliff Levingston put the Hawks ahead 81-67 with a basket off a rebound, Cleveland scored 16 straight points, cutting its deficit to 81-77 with 8:20 remaining.

Wilkins then made two free throws and Randy Wittman, who scored 10 points, and Johnny Davis hit jump shots to open the lead to 87-77 with 6:04 to play. The Hawks maintained at least a six-point lead the rest of the way to hand Cleveland its seventh defeat in the last eight games.

Mel Turpin led Cleveland with 26 points and B. Free added 23.

Bulls 111, Knicks 98

CHICAGO (AP) — Orlando Woolridge scored 20 points and Gene Banks added 20 and Michael Jordan had 19 Tuesday night, leading Chicago to a 111-98 victory over the New York Knicks that snapped the Bulls' five-game losing streak.

The triumph lifted the Bulls into a tie with the Indiana Pacers for first place in the race for the final playoff berth in the Eastern Conference. Cleveland lost to Atlanta 97-91.

The Bulls, who had a 14-4 run late in the first half, put together a 14-6 spurt at the start of the second half to take a 66-55 lead. Several times the Knicks, led by Ken Bannister, Darrill Walker and Fred Coffield, chopped the lead to six points but could get no closer.

A three-point goal by Kyle Macy early in the fourth quarter gave the Bulls an 85-72 lead, and they closed the rest of the way.

Bucks 118, Nets 105

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Craig Hodges scored 24 points and Sidney Moncrief added 22 to lead the Milwaukee Bucks to their fifth consecutive triumph, a 118-105 NBA victory over the New Jersey Nets on Tuesday night.

The Bucks took control of the game at the beginning of the fourth quarter when they outscored the Nets 10-5 for an 86-81 lead with 6:54 remaining on a long jumper by Hodges. A jump shot by Rickey Pierce gave them a 94-85 lead with 6:12 left.

Albert King's jumper with 4:08 left cut the Bucks' lead to 99-93 but Milwaukee outscored the Nets 5-2 for a 104-95 lead on Alton Lister's short jumper with three minutes remaining.

Revenge motivates Kansas

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Kansas University forward Ron Kellogg is looking for a little bit of revenge Saturday when the No. 2 Jayhawks meet top-ranked Duke at Dallas in a semifinal game of the NCAA tournament.

Duke's 92-86 victory over Kansas in the final of the Big Apple NIT Tournament in New York at the start of the season is like a bad dream the 6-foot-5 senior from Omaha can't forget.

"Coach (Larry) Brown won't let me. He reminds me all the time," said Kellogg, who scored 20 points in the loss.

My man — (David) Henderson — scored 30 on me. That's the most anybody's ever scored on me," Henderson, who was making his first start, hit 12 of 14 field goal attempts in the game.

"It's kind of like revenge," he said of the Final Four rematch Saturday.

"They beat us the first time and we remember that. They do have a great team. They're quick and have excellent shooters," Kellogg said.

Kellogg has been somewhat hampered by a sore foot throughout the NCAA tournament but scored 12 points Sunday in Kansas' victory over North Carolina State in the NCAA Midwest Regional championship game in Kansas City.

"I'm not 100 percent, but it's OK," he said of the foot. I just do the best I can when I'm out there."

Greg Dreljng, KU's 7-1 senior center, also has unhappy memories of the first meeting with Duke.

LSU coach mellowing out

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Louisiana State Coach Dale Brown made up his mind early this season not to worry about NCAA investigators. Rival coaches, lost players or lost games.

Now, all he has to worry about is winning the national championship.

Brown figures his new mellow attitude is a key to the Tigers' comeback rise from 22-11 obscurity to the Final Four.

"I know that a coach's attitude is reflected in the team," Brown said. "I've enjoyed this season more than any other. I'm not tired. I'm having more fun."

A marked change from the Brown of the past. Based on a three-year NCAA recruiting probe, the in-house bugging of the LSU athletic director's office and the loss of a freshman, superstar Tito Horford to Miami, Brown began the season in a rage, cursing NCAA investigators from the pages of Sports Illustrated, and threatening to quit any day.

Later, before those troubles, Brown was famous for temper tantrums directed at referees, other coaches, their players and even his own team.

All that changed this year. He still screams over the occasional disputed foul, but five minutes after the game he's absolutely serene.

"I'm not trying to prove anything to anybody. Just do my best," he said. Kellogg is really helping me."

Brown's serenity held through the worst series of setbacks in recent Tiger history. Off to a 13-0 start, he lost 7-point center Zoran Jovanovich to a knee injury, then team captain and scoring leader Nikita Wilson flunked out.

Just as Wilson was lost, star forward John Williams and another player were hospitalized during an outbreak of chicken pox that precipitated the loss of three games in five days at the start of February.

"They had more adversity than any other group I've ever gone through," Brown said. "Every week, we suffered another disaster. But they never got tired or gave up. They kept their sense of humor."

He continued to smile.

To mold former reserves like Don Stadden, Ricky Blanton and Anthony Johnson into starters, he practiced motivation as never before. Just before the team's first NCAA tournament game against Purdue, Brown held a team meeting to talk about how LSU's season was like his own struggle against the odds.

"His players responded during the tournament with their best performance of the year."

"The philosophy I had been preaching to them, it's like they turned around with a megaphone and put it back to me."

Derrick Taylor, a guard who has been with Brown for five years, says the change in the coach transformed the entire team.

"It's the only reason we're winning now," Taylor said. "When I was 0-7 against Kentucky, he said 'Don't worry about it, man. Just keep taking your shots.' That has to mean a lot to a player."

Now 26-11, LSU meets seventh-ranked Louisville in Dallas on Saturday.

Brown says he often wonders what might have happened if he had kept Horford and Wilson, if Williams had avoided illness.

"Maybe we would have gone 35-0. Owners have vet to say they've been eliminated in the first round. I really don't know."

Brown, 50, says this Tiger squad is the smartest he ever coached, and the only one he has allowed to call themselves "the team." The team is also more strongly motivated, he said, than the one he led to the Final Four in 1981, when LSU lost to Indiana in the opening game.

"I think I wanted the national championship more than the team in 1981. This time the team wants it. I think they've lifted me and carried me this season."

True to his new form, he says the one thing he wants to do differently this tournament is "try to enjoy myself more."

Brown's adversity may not be behind him entirely. The NCAA probe is continuing, and federal prosecutors have yet to say whether they will file charges over Athletic Director Bob Brodhead bugging his own office in an alleged attempt to cavestop on NCAA investigators.

But he says all this is far from his mind.

"It's like there's an electricity between us now," he said. "There's something you can feel. It's not know if it's magic or ESP, but it really feels good."

House backs lead shot, outfitters

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Idaho hunters might be caught in the middle of a state-federal struggle over using lead shot next fall — with the result that they can't legally hunt with either lead or steel shot.

The House on Tuesday completed action on a resolution opposing federal efforts to ban the use of lead shot.

Sandpoint Democrat James Stoicheff warned House members that they could be placing hunters in an impossible position, unable to comply with both federal and state laws.

The resolution opposes the imposition of lead shot regulations "until or unless a proven, documented problem is determined to exist with lead shot."

The resolution, which is non-binding, urges the Department of the Interior and the Idaho legislative delegation to come up with a solution.

Nine counties in Idaho are among those where the use of lead shot is to be banned in the hunting of migratory waterfowl.

Also passed with minimum debate was legislation setting aside thousands of nonresident deer and elk permits for people who have signed contracts with licensed outfitters and guides.

The legislation is designed to help the state's outfitters and guides industry. It will not increase the quota of nonresident game tags allowed, but will decree that 25 percent of the 9,000 nonresident tags for each species will go to out-of-staters who have signed up with a licensed guide.

If the nonresident tags are claimed by July 1 under that process, they would be released for sale to any nonresident.

That measure also goes to the governor.

Theismann is valuable commodity if his leg responds to treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs says he's been getting plenty of phone calls from National Football League teams interested in obtaining a healthy Joe Theismann.

Theismann, 36, the most productive quarterback in Redskins history, broke his leg Nov. 18 when he was sacked in a game against the New York Giants. He has vowed that he would return and fight for the starting spot against Jay Schroeder, who led the Redskins to five victories in six games.

But Theismann proves he can once again compete in the NFL, all trade talk is moot, according to Gibbs.

"I don't think any of those teams interested in Joe want to do anything now," Gibbs said Monday. "No one knows if he can play yet."

If Theismann proves healthy but can't beat out Schroeder, then Gibbs said he would trade the veteran if he couldn't handle the job on the bench.

"There's only one thing Joe has ever considered since he broke his leg," said Gibbs. "That's playing and starting. To be honest, I don't think he could take being anything but a starter."

Theismann admitted at a luncheon in Norfolk, Va. that his future with the Redskins may be over.

"You'd have to be stupid not to read the handwriting on the wall," Theismann told an audience at the Norfolk Sports Club Monday, according to a story in Tuesday morning's Washington Times. "When a team gives you permission to talk to other teams to work out a deal, they're not exactly saying, 'We want you to be our quarterback.'"

Theismann said he thought his chances of returning as a Redskin were about "a three" on a scale of 10 to the Times said.

Should Theismann be placed on the trading block, Gibbs said he would not come cheap.

"We'd expect to get a high pick for him," Gibbs said. "That's what we deserve, considering he's been the NFL's most valuable player and led us to two Super Bowls."

Gibbs said three teams have showed more than a passing interest in Theismann, but added, "Until Joe gets healthy, any talk about trading him is like putting the cart before the horse."

Theismann's rehabilitation is progressing "way ahead of schedule," according to Gibbs, who said Theismann is already playing racketball. Gibbs aimed that while Theismann's doctor might think differently, the quarterback told Gibbs that he felt like he could be ready to compete "in a matter of weeks."

"I want to get my leg ready," the quarterback said, "and when someone calls me and says 'Joe, come on out here for a workout,' I'll go. Maybe even the Redskins will want me back. People are a little reluctant right now. They say 'Joe, it says he's ready to play football, but let's wait and see how his leg comes along.'"

Before he went down with the first major injury of his career, Theismann had been the Redskins' starting quarterback in every game since 1978. However, he was in the midst of what he called the "worst season" of his career.

Berry would go hardship for No. 1 pick guarantee

NEW YORK (AP) — Pro basketball can have 6-foot-8 Walter Berry right now. All he needs to forfeit his final year of eligibility at St. John's is the guarantee of being a No. 1 pick by the National Basketball Association...

Although he has played only two seasons at St. John's, Berry is just 15 credits short of a degree in athletic administration. He spent a year at San Jacinto Junior College after the NCAA rejected credits earned in a high school equivalency program at St. John's.

Wyoming, Ohio State conclude NIT

NEW YORK (AP) — Eldon Miller, recruiting for Northern Iowa by telephone while coaching Ohio State to the championship game of the 43rd National Invitation Tournament, says that beating Wyoming in Wednesday night's final "would be a great way to end my career as a Big Five."

Ohio State, 18-14, and Wyoming, 20-11, have met only one other time in basketball — on January 5, 1945, with the Buckeyes winning 42-36. On Monday night's semifinals at Madison Square Garden, both teams took advantage of smaller opponents...

We will have to do some shooting from the perimeter. It will be important to keep Sellers away from the inside on offense and I hope we can stay away from him when he's on defense. Miller agreed that the game will be aggressively played, but he said the Big Ten has a reputation for toughness is overblown.

"Dembo sprained his ankle in November and didn't play well in December," Brandenburg said. "Then he sprained it again in January and couldn't push off laterally until February. But since then, he's shot unbelievably well from the perimeter and has been our most consistent player."

Sampson to miss only two games for Rockets

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Houston center Ralph Sampson, injured in a frightening fall at Boston Garden, suffered a severe bruise to his back and is not expected to play the next two games, a spokesman for the NBA team said Tuesday.

A half hour later, he was in an ambulance on his way to a hospital. Four hours after the mishap, Sampson walked out of Massachusetts General Hospital, saying, "I feel pretty good. We'll take a couple of days and get the stiffness out, get the soreness out. X-rays on his head, neck and back showed no fractures."

Texas football faces probe

DALLAS (AP) — University of Texas boosters and sports agents have given Longhorn football players cash, liquor, meals, free dental and legal services, and other perks in exchange for donations of the NCAA extra-benefit rules, according to a published report.

The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story in its Wednesday edition that former players said boosters and agents, whom they usually met through coaches, routinely approached players with offers of cash and favors from the day they first walked onto the practice field.

room, to my room, shaking my hand and giving me a bill (money). Then at the end of the year, they'd call me — guys in business suits with briefcases — and I'd say my name in a restaurant. At 11 o'clock at night, in a restaurant, I'd see me. Head football coach Fred Akers said he was not aware that his players had received any benefits beyond the tuition, room, board and books provided by their athletic scholarships.

In interviews with 28 former Texas players, whose careers spanned a period from 1978 to 1985, 11 said they accepted such payments from boosters in some amounting to more than $10,000 — while they were playing football at Texas.

"My senior year I just got hotter and hotter," said Tony Degrafe, a standout defensive tackle from 1982 to 1984 and winner of the 1983 Vince Lombardi Award as the nation's outstanding college lineman. "From alumni walking up to me in the locker room, to my room, shaking my hand and giving me a bill (money). Then at the end of the year, they'd call me — guys in business suits with briefcases — and I'd say my name in a restaurant. At 11 o'clock at night, in a restaurant, I'd see me."

Pete called PGA super star

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Aron Palmer, Jack Nicklaus. Tom Watson. For the past 25 years golf has had a dominating player who has aroused its fans. No wonder much has been written in recent years about the decline of the game's great take-over. First the flamboyant Spaniard, Seve Ballesteros, already assumed the No. 1 spot? What category and is second in the other.

In that period, he also won the 1984 Vardon Trophy for the lowest average score for the season, the first back to do so. He won the 1983 Ben Hogan Award for overcoming a serious illness or injury, in Peete's case a crooked left arm that resulted from a childhood accident.

Peete is no longer young, and second, he has yet to win one of the game's Big Four events, the Masters, the United States and British opens and the PGA. Peete has answers for both. "I'm not so late, I've never played the all that much competitive golf, so I'm a young 42. I'm still enjoying about the game. I'm still learning," said Peete, who didn't hold a golf club in his hand until he was in his 20s and didn't join the PGA until he was in his 30s. His rage-to-riches saga includes a stint as a traveling peddler to itinerant farm workers.

He has a deserved reputation as the most accurate player in the game. He has led the tour in driving accuracy the last five years, led in greens in regulation three of the last five and this season leads in one category and is second in the other. Last week he ran away from the field in New Orleans, becoming the first double winner on the tour this season. He also is the top money winner with $230,598 and has the best scoring average, 69.48. Peete also is the defending champion and pre-tournament favorite in this week's 48-hole Tourney Tournament Players Championship. Still, Peete generally is overlooked as a dominate player. "I don't know why," Beman said. "The record's there for all to read." Two reasons seem evident. First, Peete also is the defending champion and pre-tournament favorite in this week's 48-hole Tourney Tournament Players Championship.

ABC shakeup marks turn to traditional

SCIC names all-star teams

Just less than half of the starters for the Southeast Idaho Conference member schools were named to all-league basketball lineups by coaches this week. The coaches picked 12 all-league for both boys and girls in the five-school alignment.

Steve Jensen, who guided Burley to the runner-up spot in the state A-2 playoffs, was named coach of the year for boys. The all-league selections included:

Boys
Torrey Sheets and Mike Welch, Jerome; Moury Toy and Todd Miles, Mountain Home; Scott Melling, Shanon Newcomb, Mike Mai and Brad Church, all Burley; Tom McCracken, Wood River, and Kyle Wilson, Lyle Peterson and Alan Thomsberry, all Buhl.

Bruins host triangular today

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Bruins will entertain Bonneville and Idaho Falls in a triangular track meet at 3 p.m. today at Bruin Stadium.

"Since it's spring break, we're not sure what to expect. Our own troops are rather thin," said Twin Falls Coach Duane Stands. Stands said this would be the Bruins' first look at either team and he didn't know what to expect. "I know Idaho Falls had a good individual in cross country last fall" but added the rest of the matchups would have to await race time.

Field events and the 200-meter runs will begin at 3 p.m. and the other running events, starting with the high hurdles, will begin about 3:30 p.m.

Area bowlers dominate singles

BLACKFOOT — Magic Valley bowlers continued to dominate the singles handicap competition in the Idaho state men's bowling tournament, being conducted in Blackfoot.

Darrin Rhoad of Twin Falls scored a 785 to replace Steve Allison of Jerome (763) as the single handicap leader with Rocky Bennett of Hazelton at 757; Brian Oswald, Idaho Falls; 747 and Gene Kober, Burley, and Dale Fale, Pocatello, tied at 739.

Dallas Brown of Filer teamed with Les Harding of Blackfoot to remain the double handicap leader at 1,434 while Ernie Bradburn and Steve Studer, Burley, were third at 1,428. Other leaders include team handicap, Mustache Ridgers of Blackfoot 3,530; scratch team, Pro-Am Classic of Boise, 3,121; all-event handicap, Roy Ellis, Pocatello, 2,122; all events scratch, Kent Wilcox, Idaho Falls, 2,059, and scratch handicap, Kent Wilcox and Jack Keeton, Idaho Falls, 1,426.

Biggs' collarbone broken

WEST PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — A New York City physician examined heavyweight fighter Tyrell Biggs on Tuesday and confirmed the Olympic gold medalist suffered a broken right collarbone in his fight last weekend, a specialist in shoulder injuries, said Biggs suffered a clean break of collarbone and probably will begin conditioning in three weeks, according to Kathy Duva, spokeswoman for Main Events Inc. The doctor said the Philadelphia fighter could start training in six weeks and should probably be able to fight again in June or July, she said.

Biggs, the Olympic super heavyweight champion, broke the collarbone in the second round of his bout against Jeff Sims. He fought the remaining eight rounds with one hand, winning a unanimous decision for his ninth straight victory.

A Las Vegas, Nev., physician examined Biggs after the fight and diagnosed the break.

Giants to start rookie

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Will Clark, who never has played a day in organized baseball above the Class A level, will start at first base for the San Francisco Giants open the 1986 season.

Clark, 22, who has played 68 games as a professional in one of the youngsters San Francisco is counting on to turn around what was the worst team in the big leagues last season, losing 100 games for the first time in franchise history.

Clark is batting near the .350 mark for the exhibition season, is leading the team in home runs with four and is second in RBIs with 13. His figures compare well with those of the team's first baseman, who is hitting well under .200 with no home runs and just two RBIs.

Clark will add much-needed left-handed power to the Giants' batting order, especially at windy Candlestick Park, which favors lefties.

Doobs wins judo crown

EMMETT — Wiley Doobs and Tadashi Tamura gave the Twin Falls Judo and CSI Judo clubs the one-two finishers in the grand championships at the Emmett judo tournament over the weekend.

Doobs took first place in the black belt middleweight division while Tamura was the top lightweight.

Joining them in class championships were Mitchell Martin, first, boys 9-10 middleweight; Doug Larsen, senior white belt light weight, and Stacy Griffin, senior white belt heavy weight.

Coaching seconds were Jason Kerbs in the 13-14 heavyweight, and Mike Kistler, 13-14 lightweight. Thirds went to Deanna Gomez, junior girls lightweight; Bruce Verstraete, senior white belt heavyweight, and Wally Walcroft, black belt heavyweight. Dewayne Jensen was fourth in the senior black belt heavyweight division. Last year's first.

The teams will co-host the annual Twin Falls tournament, beginning at 11 a.m. April 12 at the CSI gymnasium.

Navratilova named to net team

NEW YORK (AP) — Martina Navratilova, who hasn't returned to her native Czechoslovakia since defecting in 1975, officially was named on Tuesday to the U.S. tennis team for the Federation Cup to be played in Prague July 21-27.

Navratilova has been on the U.S. team since 1982, a year after she became an American citizen, posting 5-0 records in both singles and doubles. The Federation Cup is the women's equivalent of the Davis Cup for men, but matches are played in one week rather than over the period of a year.

A year ago, Navratilova was denied a visa to return to Prague to see her family and "just to go back and get over the shock of being away for 10 years."

The U.S. team said in a statement that visa applications were being sent to the Czech Embassy in Washington. An embassy spokesman, who said last week that the applications would be forwarded to Czechoslovakia for action, said they had not been received as of Tuesday morning.

CBA welcomes John Drew

NEW YORK (AP) — John Drew, who was barred from the NBA for life under the league's drug policy, was named on Tuesday the newcomer of the year in the Continental Basketball Association.

Drew, who plays for the Wyoming Wildcaters, averaged 25.9 points a game after an 11-year NBA career in which he averaged 20.7 points. CBA rules define a newcomer who has played pro ball before but is new to the CBA.

The second- and third-place finishers also were also former NBA players — Butch Carter of the Cincinnati Slammers and Brook Steppe of the Baltimore Lightning.

Drew was banned from the NBA when he applied for drug treatment for a third time. The ban is for life although the banned player has the option of applying for reinstatement after two years.

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC's removal of Joe Namath and O.J. Simpson from Monday Night Football stemmed in part from a desire to return the network's prime sports attraction to the traditional two men-in-the-booth, sources said Tuesday.

ABC itself remained officially silent on the changes, although network sources confirmed again that Al Michaels would be the play-by-play man on the NFL's Monday night game next season and Frank Gifford might move from play-by-play duties to analyst.

That would leave Simpson and Namath out. Simpson has been offered the job as college football analyst left vacant by the dismissal of Frank Broyles, another victim of the shakeup. But Namath has been released, with ABC swallowing the second year of a contract estimated at $850,000 a year. None of the principals was decided that they asked themselves, "who are our two best men to do the show?" They've decided the two best people are Al and Frank. What they're trying to do now is work it out with Frank.

Monday Night Football, which began in 1970, was the first NFL broadcast to employ three analysts. The first team was Keth Jackson on play-by-play with Howard Cosell adding his acerbic commentary and Don Meredith adding levity.

After one season, Gifford replaced Jackson, who moved to the college telecasts. The Gifford-Cosell-Meredith team remained the basic unit for most of the next dozen years, although Fred Williams and Alex Karras each had a short stint in place of Meredith. Then Simpson replaced Meredith for the 1983 season and Namath replaced Cosell when he left the show after the 1984 season. Cosell has since been extremely critical of the network, particularly the "jockocracy" that gave the prime announcing jobs to ex-athletes.

Cosell had no comment Tuesday on a change that would put Michaels, a professional announcer, in the principal Monday night slot. "They're doing what they think is right," he said.

Michaels is considered ABC's top play-by-play man and does their prime-time and Sunday afternoon baseball telecasts.

The NFL contract with the three networks expires after this season. There has been some speculation in the industry that unless ABC makes a profit on pro football this year, the network will consider dropping prime-time NFL coverage, opting instead to bid for Sunday afternoon coverage along with CBS and NBC.

Budd participates in Commonwealth games

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — A British citizen two years ago to sidestep the international sports boycott against South Africa.

Last season, her second on the international track circuit, she smashed the world 5,000 meters record and on Sunday retained her world cross country title in Switzerland.

Although the England team for the Commonwealth Games — comprising 3,200 athletes from 45 countries — has not yet been selected, Budd is expected to take part.

While she has done much of her training in South Africa, she recently bought a house in southern England fulfilling a Commonwealth Games requirement that athletes wishing to represent a particular country must have an official residence there.

Last summer Budd was at the center of a controversial incident at Edinburgh's Meadowbank Stadium — the same site for the Commonwealth Games track and field events in four months time.
