Fiery Khadafy calls for U.S. blood

By SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI
The Associated Press

TRIPOLI, Libya — "We will impose sovereignty on the Gulf of Sidra with our blood!" Moammar Khadafy shouted Friday to throngs dancing around an ox with "Reagan" written on it. When he finished his speech they killed the ox.

The Libyan leader gave his scorecard for the confrontation with the U.S. 6th Fleet in the gulf, which he called a Libyan ambush.

Libya: Three U.S. warplanes shot down.

U.S. Navy: One fishing boat attacked.

He also claimed one American missile had not exploded and said it would be given to the Soviet Union for inspection.

In Washington, a Pentagon spokesman denied comment on Khadafy's remarks: "We're not talking about Col. Khadafy and his crazy claims," said Navy Cmdr. Robert Prucha.

American officials said the Libyans fired at least six missiles soon after 6th Fleet vessels entered the gulf Monday and U.S. warplanes responded with attacks on Libyan patrol boats that sank at least two, and two raids on a shoreline missile base, with no damage to American aircraft.

Ships of the three-carrier Navy force that entered the gulf with the avowed purpose of asserting international navigation rights pulled out of the zone Thursday. Khadafy claims the gulf as national territory, but the United States insists it is international waters beyond the generally recognized 12-mile limit. The Pentagon said it ended the exercise several days early. The version Khadafy gave the crowd was that he sent a message to the 6th Fleet demanding its departure, and "they left in 72 hours."

Khadafy delivered his fiery message Friday evening from a balcony of his heavily fortified bunker in downtown Tripoli, shouting at the top of his lungs to thousands of people who intoned anti-American slogans and tormented the ox.

The cannons of two Soviet-built T-72 tanks pointed out on either side of Khadafy. After the 90-minute speech, meers of Khadafy's audience whirled around the black-and-white ox, waving their fists in the air. Someone slit its throat and others danced in the blood that gushed from the wound.

About 100 foreign journalists escorted to the site witnessed the spectacle.

"We will impose our sovereignty on the Gulf of Sidra with our blood!" Khadafy told the crowd, and issued a warning to Italy, Spain and other countries in which U.S. bases are located. "If this confrontation continues, Libya will attack the U.S. forces stationed in those foreign countries," Khadafy said. "We'll hit anywhere there is an American base."

He repeated Libya's initial claim of downing three American jets during the gulf incident.

Administration sees attacks on horizon

By DAVID HOFFMAN
The Washington Post

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — The Reagan administration expects Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy to "stir up" a terrorist attack by Palestinians against American targets in the weeks ahead and has put embassies and other offices around the globe, officials said Friday.

"I would suspect over the next several weeks he's going to try to create some kind of incident and say, 'See, I did tell you,'" said a senior White House official.

The official, who has access to U.S. intelligence information and spoke to reporters in an interview, said Khadafy was also expected to react to the contact in the Gulf of Sidra with a claim that he chased the 6th Fleet away.

"I think he's going to push this line for all hell — that he pushed us out of the Gulf of Sidra and he's the strong man and Radio Tripoli will be putting that out all over the Arab world, that he kicked us out," he added.

"He has to be brava, because he knows damn well what happened, and he got his fingers burned, but he was smart enough to pull back so he didn't get his face blown off," said the official, who accompanied President Reagan to California for the Easter holiday vacation.

The official's comments followed Reagan's assertion in a speech in New Orleans Thursday that the United States is aware of "intensive" preparations by the Libyan leader to hit American targets.

The remarks by the president and the senior official appeared to be part of an effort by the administration to prepare the American people for the possibility that Khadafy will strike back, and to warn Khadafy against doing so.

Reagan in the past has accused Khadafy of supporting the Abu Nidal terrorist group that allegedly carried out the Rome and Vienna airport attacks in December.

Khadafy will seek "to stir up, probably, Palestinians someplace where they are trained by Libya to take some action in some country," the White House

Lawmakers leave; session defended

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Republican legislative leaders say they feel the 1986 session did the best job it could in funding Idaho government, considering the money available.

More legislative stories — A3-4

After a round of narrow victories on light education budgets Friday afternoon, the 1986 session adjourned on its 82nd day — two-and-a-half weeks longer than lawmakers met a year earlier.

"We were able to provide an adequate budget at a most critical time to supply the needs of the state according to resources available," said House Speaker Tom Stivers, who served his fourth year as the House's chief officer.

"We did a good job of providing the critical services of the state with the revenue available," he said.

Added Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, R-Boise, "There will be some who wish we had spent a little more. But when it is all said and done, we performed reasonably."

But the Democratic minority, as might be expected, was less than

Education boost killed at the end

By QUANE KENYON

BOISE — A House coalition failed Friday to muster enough votes in a last-minute effort to pump more money into Idaho's major education budgets.

The tactic used by Rep. Mack Nelbauer, R-Paul, to keep the House from amending the higher education budget left several members complaining.

"I didn't come here to play games. You came here as a big boy. If you want to come ahead as a bawling baby, go ahead," he said.

The Senate on Thursday passed a public school appropriation of $314 million for public school support. It joined a budget of $90.7 million for higher education, leaving the House as the last battleground this session over budget matters.

Although legislative leaders acknowledged the money was less than the budgets educators say is needed to maintain current operations in public schools and the colleges.

House leaders insist next vote on Contra aid will be close

By TIM AHERN
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, fresh from a narrow Senate victory for his Nicaraguan rebel aid plan, faces another tough fight in trying to persuade the House to reverse its earlier rejection of the $100-million package, Democratic and Republican leaders said Friday.

"It's certainly not a foregone conclusion that we'll win when it comes back to us," said House Republican Leader Bob Michel of Illinois.

"The vote is going to be close again in the House," predicted Rep. Thomas F. Foley of Washington, third-ranking House Democrat.

Ortega responds — A2

Their assessments came a day after the Republican-controlled Senate voted 53-47 late Thursday to approve a modified version of Reagan's plan to aid U.S.-backed guerrillas fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

The package now returns to the Democratic-run House, which last week rejected a somewhat different package by a 222-210 margin.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., in a statement issued Friday, said, "Now it's time for the House to pass the president's program, too." He said, "There is danger in delaying our decision much longer."

The Reagan plan rejected by the House would have provided $70 million in military aid and $30 million in non-lethal aid for items like clothing and medicine. It would have replaced a $27 million non-lethal aid package which expires Monday.

The Senate-approved version says $25 million could be immediately spent for non-lethal assistance and so-called defensive weapons such as Stinger anti-aircraft missiles. The rest of the money couldn't be spent until at least 90 days later — in installments of $15 million every three months, and only if Reagan determined there was no likely chance to negotiate a peaceful settlement of the impasse.

The modified Reagan plan had been offered to the House shortly before the vote as a presidential promise, but it was not written into the House proposal.

The measure returning to the House would incorporate the changes in law.

Michel, in a telephone interview from his Peoria office, said, "I was happy to see it get through the Senate, although we all would have liked to see a wider margin."

While Michel said, "I sure hope we will win," he added that "It won't be any walk-away. I think the closeness of the votes in both chambers is really indicative of the way the country is split on this thing."

Bill easing property tax restraints OK'd

BOISE (AP) — Legislation aimed at easing the harsh restrictions on local government property taxing authority by at least allowing them to benefit from new growth has cleared the Idaho Legislature.

The Senate, by an overwhelming vote on Friday, sent the bill to Gov. John Evans as it cleared its calendar in preparation for final adjournment.

While the measure does not lift the 5 percent cap on annual increases in revenue generated by the property tax, it would allow increased tax collections in excess of that cap if they come from new growth in the taxable base, such as through construction or other development.

Local officials have sought to erode the property tax restraints even further, blaming the fallout from the 1985 tax revolt for the increasing inability of local governmental entities to cope with mounting financial demands. But the majority in the Legislature has repeatedly refused to take those steps.

In other action on tax issues as the session drew toward adjournment, the Senate gave final approval and sent to the governor bills:

• Up to $50 compensation for retailers to cover the cost of readjusting their cash registers to reflect the sales tax increase to 5 percent on Tuesday.

• Exempting from the penny increase in the sales tax rate purchases contracted for prior to March 1, benefiting primarily developers of the new convention center on Lake Coeur d'Alene, according to officials. The cost to the state will be about $230,000.

The Senate also gave final approval to an $11.7 million 1987 budget for the state Tax Commission that critics contended will limit state tax collections by more than $1 million next year because money was not provided for additional tax auditors.

The revision in the so-called 5 percent cap on property tax revenue growth was opposed only by Sen. Vearl Crystal, R-Lewisville, who complained that the move came too late to let some counties benefit from significant growth in recent years.

But backers of the bill said it would inject at least a little incentive back into local government policies to seek expansion of current businesses and new industry since they would be able to benefit financially from the development, allowing them to meet at least some of the needs for additional services and facilities.

"We have a chance to get our local units of government out of the anti-growth mode," said Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly. Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee Chairman Thane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls, who has blocked other measures intended to enhance and expand local taxing authority, said complete removal of the 5 percent cap would mean a $95 million tax increase.

But he called the provision to accommodate new growth an acceptable way to help local governments cope with increasing problems, aggravated by the impending loss of federal revenue sharing.

Voters will get chance to reduce Legislature

BOISE (AP) — Voters will decide this fall whether they want to reduce the size of the current 125-member state Legislature by at least 21.

The Senate gave final approval on Friday to the proposed constitutional amendment that would cut the size of the state Senate from 42 to no more than 35 members and the House from 84 to no more than 70 members.

But in deciding whether to accept the reduction in the number of lawmakers, something incumbent legislators were confident had wide public support, voters will also have to decide if they want future statewide legislative district maps to allow districts that cut across county lines.

They rejected that concept in 1984 when it was submitted to a vote by itself.

The reapportionment amendment, among the final bills clearing the Senate this session, was prompted by the battle two years ago over legislative districts that resulted in imposition of a court-ordered plan.

adding 21 new legislators and creating unwieldy multicounty, multimember districts. The amendment bars those huge, so-called floater districts, and lawmakers contend that without them there is no way to draw a district map without cutting across county lines and still meet federal one-man-one-vote requirements.

But the county-line provision stirred the bulk of opposition to the proposal — as Democrats, echoing the arguments of Democratic Gov. John Evans and his predecessor Cecil Andrus during the 1984 campaign, called the attempt to slice up counties "particularly partisan."

They claimed that voters have little ability to identify with subdivisions like legislative districts or voting precincts but are proud of and identify strongly with the county they live in.

Lawmakers will continue to meet one year

BOISE (AP) — By a single vote, the Idaho House on Friday voted down a proposed constitutional amendment to return the Legislature to biennial sessions.

The House voted 55-28 for the proposal, which cleared the Senate earlier this session. The measure would change the two-thirds majority needed to approve proposed changes in the state Constitution. If the House had approved, the issue would have been put on the general election ballot in November.

Late in the day, just before adjourning the legislative session on its 82nd day, the House voted to reconsider the vote. But the second time around, the proposed amendment drew only 51 votes and lost by five. Debate centered on whether Idaho should return to the system used in neighboring states, with the Legislature meeting only once every two years.

Sponsors argued that Montana and Wyoming, two comparable neighboring states, get along fine with the Legislature meeting every two years. Opponents said that would require budgeting up to 30 months in advance, an increase in use of ever-changing federal funding levels.

The Idaho Legislature met biennially until starting annual sessions in 1969. There is no limit on the sessions or subject matter, and backers of the constitutional change argued that has produced soaring state budgets and redundant legislation. Rep. Vard Chatburn, R-Albion, said meeting every year only causes budgets to go up faster, creates "an enlarged volume of paper," and costs an extra $1.2 million in legislative operating expense.

Rep. Walter Little, R-New Plymouth, said he was convinced it was a "horrible mistake" when the state went to annual sessions; now he's certain it would be an equal mistake to return to biennial meetings.

Society was less complicated 17 years ago, Little said, with relatively low, stable budgets.

Federal funding sources "can change as quickly as the weather," Little said. "Can you predict what will happen two and a half years from now?" he asked.

Rep. Claud Judd, D-Orofino, said there are those in Montana pushing for annual sessions, feeling that "little people" don't have much of a chance in the biennial sessions.

Rep. Pete Black, D-Pocatello, noted that Montana and Wyoming have had a lot of revenue from coal and oil, which makes it easy to set budgets. Now that money from those sources is falling, he said, Idaho's neighboring states will find it harder to agree on a budget.

Black also suggested it would be a bad time to ask voters if they want to cut the Legislature, because many might be frustrated by the lack of accomplishment this session.

Here is the roll call vote by which the Idaho House on Friday defeated a proposed constitutional amendment on biennial sessions, 55-28. It takes 56 votes to pass constitutional amendments.

Loosened-up seatbelt measure sent to Evans

BOISE (AP) — Legislation intended to encourage the use of seatbelts but that backers admitted was watered down to one vote changed only a policy statement has been sent to Gov. John Evans.

The Senate gave final approval to the bill on a 30-12 vote Friday as sponsor Bruce Sweeney, D-Lewiston, argued that even in its watered-down state could increase seatbelt useage in Idaho by up to five times.

"I fought this idea as hard and as long as anybody," said Sen. Jerry Thorne, R-Nampa, "and then one day I got to thinking about it, and it occurred to me that the evidence of money, safety and life savings is overwhelming."

But the bill has been changed to the point that it will not qualify under U.S. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole's edict that states representing two-thirds of the nation's population must pass mandatory seatbelt laws to head off imposition of a requirement that new cars carry airbags.

Under the Idaho measure, no action could be taken against motorists for failing to wear a seatbelt unless the motorists were stopped and ultimately convicted of another traffic violation. The fine for not wearing a seatbelt would be $5.

Supporters of mandatory seatbelt legislation said that none of the laws passed by any of the more than a score of states that have taken action on seatbelts comply with the Dole edict, but they contended that in every case the point of the campaign — increased seatbelt useage — has occurred. States with about 64 percent of the nation's population have enacted some sort of seatbelt law, they said.

Backers of the bill, even in its diluted form, said a recent poll of Idaho residents showed two-to-one support for a seatbelt law, pointing out that fatalities of persons without seatbelts have occurred at speeds as slow as 12 miles and hour while 55 mph is the lowest speed at which a fatality has been recorded involving a person wearing a seatbelt.

But critics called the measure another case of federal blackmail.

"This is another one of those issues where the individual should make a decision for himself whether he should or shouldn't," Sen. Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, said.

Stivers insists he didn't hear remark

BOISE (AP) — House Speaker Tom Stivers says he didn't completely understand what Rep. Lyman Gene Winchester said in House debate Feb. 17, a remark that has touched off sharp criticism of both Winchester and the Legislature.

The House on Feb. 17 passed a bill forbidding public school teachers from advocating or endorsing homosexuality as an alternative life style. Sen. Terry Sversten, R-Cataldo, wouldn't let it come up for a vote in his Senate Education Committee.

During House debate on the bill, Winchester referred to two legislators as "queer lovers" for their opposition to the measure.

That day and in the next House session, several House members demanded that Winchester apologize for the remarks, which they said sullied the polite demeanor of the Legislature. Neither Stivers nor Winchester responded to the demands. Stivers has received a lot of criticism since then for his failure to call down Winchester. Winchester refused to back down, saying those who opposed the homosexual bill should be chastized for their failure to support good legislation.

In a post-session interview, Stivers said Friday because of other noise in the chamber when Winchester was debating, he did not hear the remark clearly. Winchester had completed his remarks and sat down before Stivers was advised what happened. "I couldn't ask him to get up and repeat what he said," said Stivers.

He said if he had clearly heard the Winchester remark at the time, he would have admonished the Kuna Republican against making personal remarks against other legislators.

He said he did not fail to take action against Winchester because he's a Republican. "It would have been tougher on him than a member of the minority party," said Stivers.

At least two people have announced campaigns against Winchester for the Republican nomination in the May primary election. And others ran newspaper ads, appealing for funds to be granted to any good candidate who ran against Winchester.

Blocks closing blamed on marketing budget

By The Times-News and The Associated Press

BURLEY — Blocks Inc., the pioneer clothing chain that grew into 17 stores in northern Utah and eastern Idaho, will close its remaining 11 stores — including one in Burley — following a going-out-of-business sale next week to liquidate the company's $6 million in merchandise, company officials announced Friday.

Sy Block, company president and son of the chain's founder, Nate Block, said the firm will begin advertising the sale Wednesday.

Greg Hendricks, manager of the Burley store, said that no definite date has been set when that store will officially close, but preparations have already begun.

"We'll run a sale starting next Thursday," he said,

"and whenever that is over, then we'll close."

Hendricks said that his store had its best year in its seven-year history in 1985. There was, however, a problem with meeting competitors' advertising budgets.

"Our advertising budget is smaller than most other companies," he said. "I spent most of my budget, but it still wasn't as much as other companies."

After he was notified of the company's folding a month ago, Hendricks said he discussed the situation with his employees. He felt that there would be little problem for them to find new jobs, he said.

Customer reaction has been mixed in Burley, but most have expressed disappointment over the closing.

"Most of them ask, 'Where am I going to shop now?'" said Hendricks. "This company was totally fair in dealing with its customers. That's the saddest thing of all."

Nearly 25,000 postcards announcing the private sale were to be sent out Friday or Saturday to customers of the 11 stores. More than 20,000 people in 29 states and a number of foreign countries have active accounts with Blocks, company officials said.

Details of the closure, announced three weeks ago, were firmed up in recent days, said Block, who bought five stores from his father in 1956 after joining the firm four years earlier. Hundreds of letters and telephone calls expressing sympathy and concern have been received since the announcement, he said.

The chain was founded in Focastello in 1914.

Blocks owns buildings in Focastello, Rigby, Preston and Logan, Utah. The company leases the Burley store building and those in Blackfoot, Idaho Falls, Rexburg, Soda Springs, Bountiful, Utah, and Brigham City, Utah.

About a year ago, Blocks officials decided they had to do something drastic with the business because "we weren't going anywhere," Block said.

It was determined the company would have to double or triple its advertising budget to compete with other large retailers; but that would necessitate stiff cuts.

"Perhaps we became a dinosaur and didn't want to change into a shark or alligator we would have had to become to survive," he said.

"It would be comfortable for me to blame the economic situation, but... we're the problem," he added. The chain was "born in its own," but its 35-year pattern of regular growth had stopped.

Blocks closed its Ogden, Utah, store in 1972, its two Salt Lake City stores in 1983 and 1984. Three stores in St. George.

Speakers suggest farming strategy

Lack of sales, market instinct still problem

By TWIN FALLS —

The American farm machine has been driving in a buyer's market for the past few years.

Farmers have been looking ahead through the windshield, concentrating on higher yields and, in some cases, bigger fields of crops. They've watched supplies of crops grow.

Analysis

"They may be looking in the wrong direction, some experts suggest. They should turn around in the driver's seat and check the rear window to see who is chasing them to buy their crops, speakers at the Agricultural Economic Development Day said this week.

The day-long conference sponsored by the Magic Valley Agricultural Institute was held at the College of Southern Idaho. It focused on marketing what is produced and producing what is marketable.

But farmers must start discovering what the market needs instead of assuming the rest of the world automatically will need U.S. food and fiber, the speakers said.

Neil Meyer, a University of Idaho agricultural economist, said individual farmers now must start making decisions based on the demand for crops.

"Put as much effort into marketing as you do in growing," Meyer said. Buyers no longer are chasing the American production machine. "We're not the only sellers in town," he said. "I think we've got to change strategies."

So did David G. Porter, director of the Idaho Department of Commerce. He is more blunt — probably infuriating to some farmers — about the changes that are occurring.

"In sectors such as agriculture, there is a strong tendency to assign intrinsic value to the product," he said. "We think of it like a hungry person.

"Unfortunately, a buyer doesn't look at a potato that way. Buyers look at a potato as they look at any other economic product. And, if there is no demand, it's no good," Porter said. "If you don't have a buyer, you don't have anything that has value."

Kamal Hyder conducts an afternoon seminar on developing foreign markets for Idaho products at CSI Thursday.

Most farm products, of course, have value. Porter's point is that the potato's value depends on its economic appeal, not solely on the fact that it's a nutritious, Idaho product.

Surpluses have diminished that economic appeal, because world buyers can go elsewhere and buy at a lower price.

"In agriculture as a group... we have assumed that everybody should buy our products and, if they don't, there's something wrong with them," Porter said. That attitude — which he branded as arrogant — worked in the 1950s when the U.S. was the world's breadbasket. It doesn't work now, "when other nations have crops to sell, Porter said.

But that doesn't mean the U.S. can't succeed in the selling game. Agriculture now should stop producing on its own terms and start looking for opportunities, he said.

"You approach the issue by asking people what they want," Porter said. The Simplot potato empire grew by finding a need, dehydrated potatoes for soldier's rations during World War II, he observed.

The Idaho Agricultural World Trade Center, which is proposed for the College of Southern Idaho, is a step in helping farmers to seek out and find markets for their products, he added.

Porter said agriculture could well diverge into two major types. Large farms growing bulk commodities and small farms raising specialized crops for specific markets.

Speakers later in the Agricultural Economic Development Day homed in on practical alternatives for Magic Valley farmers. CSI faculty and guests talked about alternative crops and foreign markets for southern Idaho products. They looked at business skills and production considerations, such as raising low-carbure beef and using new tillage methods.

City files request against Stoker

Order would bar office on Addison

By TWIN FALLS —

The city of Twin Falls is seeking a court order barring Rep. Jeff Stoker, R-Twin Falls, from using a house on Addison Avenue as a law office any longer, claiming he is violating zoning regulations.

The city asked for the restraining order in a civil action filed Thursday in 5th District Court by City Attorney Shane Bengoechea.

Stoker moved his office into the house at 733 Addison Ave. earlier this month. Three months earlier, the City Council turned down a request made by Stoker, along with nearby homeowners, to rezone the area for professional use and allow offices to locate there.

Stoker said Friday that he had not seen the city's claim against him, but had "anticipated it."

The city alleges in the claim that the Addison Avenue building is zoned for low-density residential use which excludes professional offices. Yet, Stoker "knowingly and unlawfully" is using the building as an office in violation of city zoning regulations, the city alleges.

Because of the improper use, there have been violations of the Uniform Building Code adopted by the city, the claim states. The building lacks an access for the handicapped, two exits from the basement, a floor landing on both sides of the entrance door and a proper ceiling-firm assembly for fire safety, the claim states. Other violations include insufficient floor support for an office load and changes in use of the building without an occupancy permit, the city alleges.

The city also states it could suffer "immediate and irreparable injury, loss or damage" by enforcing its laws and regulations if Stoker is not immediately restrained from his "willful and intentional act."

Stoker's action could set a precedent for others to violate city zoning laws, resulting in a "catastrophe" in zoning enforcement, Bengoechea said. There also is potential damage to the neighborhood from an office operation in a residential area, he added.

Rather than file criminal charges against Stoker, he decided it was more important now to immediately stop the office use through the civil action, Bengoechea said. The city still could file misdemeanor charges but will wait for the outcome of the civil action, he said.

At the city's request, a "show cause hearing" will be held on April 14, Bengoechea said. At the hearing, Stoker will be asked to present evidence on why the court shouldn't issue an injunction halting his use of the building as a law office.

The city also requested from the court a permanent injunction, upon a trial, to prohibit Stoker's use of the building as an office.

The city's filing is the latest action in zoning disputes between Stoker and the city that stretch back to 1984. The suit filed on Thursday brings the total number of suits between Stoker and the city to three. Stoker has filed two and the city has filed one.

Stoker said a suit he previously filed against the city over the zoning of the house probably will determine the outcome of the city's claim. His suit, in which he claims the city zoning laws are invalid, among other items, is "far ahead" in the court process, Stoker added. His action process, Stoker said, is a request for summary judgment in his favor.

Bengoechea disagreed that Stoker's lawsuit would have any bearing on the city's claim. If the court determines the city ordinance was invalid as Stoker argued, the house still would be zoned for low-density residential use under the old

Meehl orders county to pay indigent hospital bill

By PAT MARCANTONIO

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County is responsible for paying a $12,639 hospital bill for a man who attempted suicide last year, a 5th District Court judge ruled Thursday.

The state medical indigency law made no exceptions about self-inflicted wounds, Judge Daniel Meehl determined.

St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise had asked Twin Falls County to pay the bill for the treatment of Russell Barth from March 12, 1984, to April 1984. Barth had been transferred from Magic Valley Regional Medical Center with a gunshot wound to the head, according to the Boise hospital.

The county admitted Barth was indigent and a county resident and that the hospital followed the proper procedures in making its claim for payment.

However, the county commissioners refused to pay the bill because they believed the state law didn't apply to self-inflicted wounds.

The hospital appealed to the court after the county's rejection of its initial request and again after an appeal hearing.

Lloyd Webb, who represented the county, argued at a March 17 court hearing that Barth had created the need for hospitalization by attempting suicide. But the hospital attorney claimed there was no exception to the indigent law about self-inflicted wounds.

In his ruling, Meehl sided with the hospital.

The county's argument that Barth created the need for medical aid by attempting to kill himself "ignored the fact, he clearly needed hospitalization at the time he was hospitalized, unlike the patient who chooses voluntary surgery," Meehl ruled.

The hospital had argued it was required by law to treat indigents and deserved payment, no matter how the person's need for treatment was reached.

The purpose of the medical indigency legislation, Meehl wrote, was to make sure the medical providers were paid and "not to reward indigents." If the hospitals weren't paid, but still required to treat indigents, then "the staggering cost of medical treatment and insurance would jump even further for the rest of us."

County Board Chairman Ann

Cover said Friday the commissioners had not received a copy of the ruling.

The $12,639 bill will not be covered by the catastrophic indigent medical program in which the county participates because the incident occurred before the program was started.

Under the program, the county pays the first $10,000 of a "catastrophic" or large medical indigent bill and the program pays the remainder.

In this case, the bill from St. Alphonsus hospital probably will be paid from the county's welfare fund.

Filed for bankruptcy in 1985

Minidoka farmer takes his own life

PAUL — A former farmer of the year in Minidoka County who last year filed for bankruptcy was found dead in his home on Friday morning in an apparent self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head, the Minidoka County Sheriff's office said.

Lloyd L. Patterson, 55, was found about 10 a.m. by a family member, according to a press release issued by the Minidoka County Sheriff's office.

Minidoka County coroner John Frey said Patterson's death was still under investigation, although he said it was an "apparent self-inflicted wound from a rifle."

"It about made me sick when I heard it. It could have happened to anyone."

Patterson's wife, Charlene, was in the hospital at the time of the incident. Officials said she checked into Minidoka Memorial Hospital on Thursday, underwent routine surgery Friday morning and was listed in good condition.

Patterson was president of Patterson Farms of Idaho, Inc., which filed for a Chapter 11 bankruptcy on May 16, 1985.

At the time, court records showed he owed $1.1 million in secured debt and $80,993 in unsecured debt. He also owed almost $136,000 in federal, state and other taxes, court records showed.

In the bankruptcy filing, Patterson listed $3.2 million in personal property and $10.3 million in real property. He also listed a debt of $158,188 to J.R. Simplot for fertilizer and farm chemicals.

The Minidoka farmer, who reportedly owned around 3,000 acres of land spread across several counties, was named farmer of the year in 1965. In 1984, he received the outstanding Potato Grower Award from Ore-Ida, and in 1985, he received Water Guardian Award of the year.

Patterson was a member of the Beet Growers Association, the Potato Growers of Idaho, and he was a board member of the Amalgamated Sugar Co.

He is survived by his wife; three sons, Ken, Russell and Mike Patterson, all of Paul; one daughter, Kelli Straubhaar of Heyburn; and nine grandchildren.

Robbins fends off rumor of quitting in 2nd District

The Associated Press

BOISE — State Rep. Gary Robbins, R-District 15, is trying to quash a rumor he said has been circulating that he would drop out of the GOP primary race in Idaho's 2nd Congressional District.

Robbins said Friday at a Boise news conference that he has been encouraged to leave the crowded primary field in favor of a race against Lt. Gov. David Larey for the party's nomination for governor.

"There's no way in hell I'd enter that race at this stage," Robbins said, adding that he not only plans to stay in the congressional primary, "I expect to win."

"I can't see anybody beating me in Magic Valley and Boise, and I should pick up some votes in the other areas," he said.

Robbins is among six candidates vying for the right to challenge Democratic Rep. Richard Stallings in November. Four of the other five are from eastern Idaho.

Earlier this week, Robbins blasted the state's Republican Party leadership as being ultraconservative and dominated by Mormons.

"But he backed away from that stand somewhat on Friday, saying some of the party's county central committees, not the state Central Committee, were out of touch with the people."

Stivers insists he didn't hear remark

BOISE (AP) — House Speaker Tom Stivers says he didn't completely understand what Rep. Lyman Gene Winchester said in House debate Feb. 17, a remark that has touched off sharp criticism of both Winchester and the Legislature.

The House on Feb. 17 passed a bill forbidding public school teachers from advocating or endorsing homosexuality as an alternative life style. Sen. Terry Sversten, R-Cataldo, wouldn't let it come up for a vote in his Senate Education Committee.

During House debate on the bill, Winchester referred to two legislators as "queer lovers" for their opposition to the measure.

That day and in the next House session, several House members demanded that Winchester apologize for the remarks, which they said sullied the polite demeanor of the Legislature. Neither Stivers nor Winchester responded to the demands.

Stivers has received a lot of criticism since then for his failure to call down Winchester. Winchester refused to back down, saying those who opposed the homosexual bill should be chastized for their failure to support good legislation.

In a post-session interview, Stivers said Friday because of other noise in the chamber when Winchester was debating, he did not hear the remark clearly. Winchester had completed his remarks and sat down before Stivers was advised what happened.

He said if he had clearly heard the Winchester remark at the time, he would have admonished the Kuna Republican against making personal remarks against other legislators.

He said he did not fail to take action against Winchester because he's a Republican.

"I would have been tougher on him than a member of the minority party," said Stivers.

At least two people have announced campaigns against Winchester for the Republican nomination in the May primary election. And others ran newspaper ads, appealing for funds to be granted to any good candidate who ran against Winchester.

Blocks closing blamed on marketing budget

By The Times-News and The Associated Press

BURLEY — Blocks Inc., the pioneer clothing chain that grew into 17 stores in northern Utah and eastern Idaho, will close its remaining 11 stores — including one in Burley — following a going-out-of-business sale next week to liquidate the company's $8 million in merchandise, company officials announced Friday.

Sy Block, company president and son of the chain's late founder, Nate Block, said the firm will begin advertising the sale Wednesday.

Greg Hendricks, manager of the Burley store, said the decision to liquidate has been set when that store will officially close, but preparations have already begun. "We'll run a sale starting next Thursday," he said.

"and whenever that is over, then we'll close." Hendricks said that his store had its best year in its seven-year history in 1985. There was, however, a problem with meeting competitors' advertising budgets.

"Our advertising budget is smaller than most other companies," he said. "I spent most of my budget, but it still wasn't as much as other companies."

After he was notified of the company's folding a month ago, Hendricks said he discussed the situation with his employees. He felt that there would be little problem for them to find new jobs, he said.

Customer reaction has been mixed in Burley, but most have expressed disappointment over the closing.

"Most of them ask, 'Where am I going to shop now?'" said Hendricks. "The company was totally fair in dealing with its customers. That's the saddest thing of all."

Nearly 25,000 postcards announcing the private sale were to be sent out Friday or Saturday to customers of the 11 stores. More than 20,000 people in 29 states and a number of foreign countries have active accounts with Blocks, company officials said.

Details of the closure, announced three weeks ago, were firmed up in recent days, said Block, who bought five stores from his father in 1956 after joining the firm four years earlier. Hundreds of letters and telephone calls expressing sympathy and concern have been received since the announcement, he said.

The chain was founded in Pocatello in 1914.

Blocks owns buildings in Pocatello, Rigby, Preston and Logan, Utah. The company leases the Burley store building and those in Blackfoot, Idaho Falls, Rexburg, Soda Springs, Bountiful, Utah, and Brigham City, Utah.

About a year ago, Blocks officials decided they had to do something drastic with the business because "we weren't going anywhere," Block said.

It was determined the company would have to double or triple its advertising budget to compete with other large retailers, but that would necessitate staff cuts.

"Perhaps we became a dinosaur and didn't want to change into a shark or alligator we would have had to become to survive," he said.

"It would be comfortable for me to blame the economic situation, but . . . we're the problem," he added. The chain was "holding its own," but its 35-year pattern of regular growth had stopped.

Blocks closed its Burley store in 1972, its two Salt Lake City stores in 1983 and 1984. Three stores in St. George.

Speakers suggest farming strategy

Lack of sales, market instinct still problem

By BOB FREUND Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The American farm machine has been driving in a buyer's market for the past few years.

Farmers have been looking ahead through the windshield, concentrating on higher yields in, in some cases, bigger fields of crops. They've watched supplies of crops grow.

Analysis

They may be looking in the wrong direction, some experts suggest. They should turn around in the driver's seat and check the rear window to see who is chasing them to buy their crops, speakers at the Agricultural Economic Development Day said this week.

The day-long conference sponsored by the Magic Valley Agricultural Institute was held at the College of Southern Idaho. It focused on marketing what is produced and producing what is marketable.

But farmers must start discovering how to sell their products instead of assuming the rest of the world automatically will need U.S. food and fiber, the speakers said.

Nell Meyer, a University of Idaho agricultural economist, said individual farmers now must start making decisions based on the demand for crops.

"Put as much effort into marketing as you do growing," Meyer said. Buyers no longer are chasing the American production machine. "We're not the only sellers in town." "I think we've got to change strategies."

So, said O. Porter, director of the Idaho Department of Commerce. He is more blunt — probably infuriating to some farmers — about the changes that are occurring.

"In sectors such as agriculture, there is a strong tendency to assign intrinsic value to the product," he said. "We think of it like a hungry person."

"Unfortunately, a buyer doesn't

Kamal Hyder conducts an afternoon seminar on developing foreign markets for Idaho products at CSI Thursday

look at a potato that way. Buyers look at a potato as they look at any other economic product. And, if there is no demand, it's no good," Porter said. "If you don't have a buyer, you don't have anything that has value."

Most farm products, of course, have value. Porter's point is that the potato's value depends on its economic appeal, not solely on the fact that it's a nutritious, Idaho product.

Surpluses have diminished that economic appeal, because world buyers can go elsewhere and buy at a lower price.

"In agriculture as a group . . . we have assumed that everybody should buy our products and, if they don't, there's something wrong with them," Porter said. That attitude — which he branded as arrogant — worked in the 1960s when the U.S. was the world's breadbasket. "It doesn't work now," then other nations have crops to sell. Porter said. "But that doesn't mean the U.S. can't succeed in the selling game. Agriculture now should stop produc-

City files request against Stoker

Order would bar office on Addison

By PAT MARCANTONIO Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls is seeking a court order barring Rep. Jeff Stoker, R-Twin Falls, from using a house on Addison Avenue as a law office any longer, claiming he is violating zoning regulations.

The city asked for the restraining order in a civil action filed Thursday in 6th District Court by City Attorney Shane Bengoechea.

Stoker moved his office into the house at 733 Addison Ave. earlier this month. Three months earlier, the City Council turned down a request made by Stoker, along with nearby homeowners, to rezone the area for professional use and allow offices to locate there.

Stoker said Friday that he had not standing on both sides of the entrance door and a proper ceiling-flo assembly for fire safety, the claim states. Other violations include insufficient floor support for an office load and regulation use of the building without an occupancy permit, the city alleges.

The city also alleges it could suffer "immediate and irreparable injury, loss or damage" in enforcing its laws and regulations against Stoker, not immediately restrained from his "willful and intentional act."

Stoker's action could set a precedent for others to violate city zoning laws, resulting in a "catastrophe" in zoning enforcement, Bengoechea said. There also is potential damage to the neighborhood from an office operation in a residential area, he added.

Rather than file criminal charges against Stoker, he decided it was more important now to immediately stop the office use through the civil injunction, Bengoechea said. The civil injunction would bar Stoker from charges but will wait for the outcome of the civil action, he said.

At the city's request, a "show cause hearing" will be held on April 14, Bengoechea said. At the hearing, Stoker will be asked to present evidence on why the court shouldn't issue an injunction halting his use of the building as a professional office.

The city also requested from the court a permanent injunction, upon a trial, to prohibit Stoker's use of the building as an office.

The city's filing is the latest action in zoning disputes between Stoker and the city that stretch back to 1984. The suit filed on Thursday brings the total number of suits between Stoker and the city to three: Stoker has filed two and the city has filed one.

Stoker said a suit he previously filed against the city over the zoning of the house probably will determine issues raised in the city's claim. His suit, in which he claims the city zoning laws are invalid, among other items, is "in" ahead in the court process, Stoker added. His action now is pending on a request for summary judgment in his favor.

Bengoechea disagreed that Stoker's lawsuit would have any bearing on the city's claim. The court determines the city ordinance was invalid as Stoker argued, the house still would be zoned for low-density residential use under the old

Meehl orders county to pay indigent hospital bill

By PAT MARCANTONIO Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County is responsible for paying a $12,639 hospital bill for a man who attempted suicide last year, a 5th District Court judge ruled Thursday.

The state medical indigency law made no exceptions about self-inflicted wounds, Judge Daniel Meehl determined.

St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise had asked Twin Falls County to pay the bill for the treatment of Russell Barth from March 12, 1984, to April 1984. Barth had been transferred from Magic Valley Regional Medical Center with a gunshot wound to the head, according to the Boise hospital.

The county admitted Barth was indigent and a county resident and that the hospital followed the proper procedures in making its claim for payment.

However, the county commissioners refused to pay the bill because they believed the state law didn't apply to self-inflicted wounds. The hospital appealed to the court after the county's rejection of its initial request and again after an appeal hearing.

Lloyd Webb, who represented the county, argued at a March 17 court hearing that Barth had created the need for hospitalization by attempting suicide. But the hospital attorney claimed there was no exception to the indigent law about self-inflicted wounds.

In his ruling, Meehl sided with the hospital.

The county's argument that Barth created the need for medical aid by attempting to kill himself "ignored the fact, he clearly needed hospitalization at the time he was hospitalized, unlike the patient who chooses voluntary surgery," Meehl ruled.

The hospital had argued it was required by law to treat indigents and deserved payment, no matter how the person's need for treatment was reached.

The purpose of the medical indigency legislation, Meehl wrote, was to make sure the medical providers were paid and "not to reward indigents." If the hospitals weren't paid, but still required to treat indigents, then "the staggering cost of medical treatment and insurance would jump even further for the rest of us."

County Board Chairman Ann

Cover said Friday the commissioners had not received a copy of the ruling.

The $12,639 bill will not be covered by the catastrophic indigent medical program in which the county participates because the incident occurred before the program was started.

Under the program, the county pays the first $10,000 of a "catastrophic" or large medical indigent bill and the program pays the remainder.

In this case, the bill from St. Alphonsus hospital probably will be paid from the county's welfare fund.

Filed for bankruptcy in 1985

Minidoka farmer takes his own life

PAUL — A former farmer of the year in Minidoka County who last week filed for bankruptcy was found dead in his home on Friday morning of an apparent self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head, the Minidoka County Sheriff's office said.

Lloyd Patterson was found about 10 a.m. by a family member, according to a press release issued by the Minidoka County Sheriff's office.

Minidoka County Coroner John Fisher said Patterson's death was still under investigation, although he said it was an "apparent self-inflicted wound from a rifle."

"Everybody liked him. He and his family — they're just outstanding people," said Tom Miller, executive director of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service. "It about made me sick when I heard it. It could have happened to anyone."

Patterson's wife, Charlene, was in the hospital at the time of the incident. Officials said she checked into Minidoka Memorial Hospital on Thursday, underwent routine surgery Friday morning and was listed in good condition.

Patterson was president of Patterson Farms of Idaho, Inc., which filed for a Chapter 11 bankruptcy on May 16, 1985.

At the time, court records showed he owed $10.1 million in secured debt and $50,995 in unsecured debt. He also owed almost $136,000 in federal, state and other taxes, court records showed.

In the bankruptcy filing, Patterson listed $3.2 million in personal property and $10.3 million in real property. He also listed a debt of $158,188 to J.R. Simplot for fertilizer and farm chemicals.

The Minidoka farmer, who reportedly owned around 3,000 acres of land spread across several counties, was named farmer of the year in 1965. In 1984, he received the outstanding Potato Grower Award from Ore-Ida, and in 1985, he received Water-Guardian Award of the year.

Patterson was a member of the Beet Growers Association, the Potato Growers of Idaho, and he was a board member of the Amalgamated Sugar Co.

He is survived by his wife; three sons, Ken, Russell and Mike Patterson, all of Paul; one daughter, Kelli Straubhaar of Heyburn; and nine grandchildren.

Robbins fends off rumor of quitting in 2nd District

The Associated Press

BOISE — State Rep. Gary Robbins, R-Dietrich, is trying to quash a rumor he said has been circulating that he would drop out of the GOP primary race in Idaho's 2nd Congressional District.

Robbins said Friday at a Boise news conference that he has been encouraged to leave the crowded primary field in favor of a race against Lt. Gov. David Leroy for the party's nomination for governor.

"There's no way in hell I'd enter that race at this stage," Robbins said, adding that he not only plans to stay in the congressional primary, "I expect to win."

"I can't see anybody beating me in Magic Valley and Boise, and I should pick up some votes in the other areas," he said.

Robbins is among six candidates vying for the right to challenge Democratic Rep. Richard Stalling in November. Four of the other five are from eastern Idaho.

Earlier this week, Robbins blasted the state's Republican Party leadership as being ultraconservative and dominated by Mormons.

But he backed away from that stand somewhat on Friday, saying some of the party's county central committees, not the state Central Committee, were out of touch with the people.

Blocks

Anthony, Arco and Clearfield, Utah, were closed last year.

Employees at the Arco store have all relocated successfully and a clothing store has opened in its vacated location, Block said, adding that his greatest concern is the future employment of the company's 150 workers.

Many employees whose spouses are about to retire have indicated they will not look for new jobs, others have landed jobs in non-retail professions and several have been hired by retail operations across the country, he said.

In January and February, store officials tried to restructure the business but decided against keeping only one store open, closing only the smaller stores and other alternatives.

"I think we were busy making a McDonald's out of a French restaurant," Block remarked. "We spent many hours considering all the various options. It was our opinion that probably wouldn't work for us."

"It was finally decided that it was better to go out as a class act while the retailing operation was still ahead, he said, adding that he plans to "take a month off and do nothing" after the business and buildings are liquidated.

zoning law, he said. As a result, Stoker still would be in violation of zoning laws, Bengoechea said.

Stoker has maintained that the city didn't follow correct procedures when zoning zoning office was amended and updated, rendering the applicable zoning ordinance invalid.

He is using the same defense, in part, in an earlier suit. Before the zoning conflict on his property, Stoker had filed suit against the city over zoning on his home in the city's area of impact, a band of land around the city over which it has zoning authority.

In its lawsuit against Stoker, the city has requested attorney fees, costs of the suit and any other relief deemed proper by the court.

TWIN FALLS

A preliminary hearing is scheduled Monday for a former Twin Falls woman accused of molesting three children during a sex game called "Truth and Dare."

The woman's former live-in companion, 25-year-old Dennis Eugene Abbott, also is accused of participating in the "games." Abbott pleaded innocent Monday in 5th District Court to three counts of lewd conduct with minors under 16 years old.

Barbara Montague, also known as Barbara Abbott, was charged Friday in 5th District Magistrate Court with three felony counts of lewd conduct.

Montague, no age available, is accused of sexually molesting two boys and forcing a minor girl to touch her between June 1, 1984, and July 31, 1984, according to a complaint filed with the court. The incidents took place during a game with the children called "Truth and Dare," according to a probable cause statement filed with the court.

Abbott also is accused of sexually molesting the children between June 1, 1984, and July 31, 1984, according to a complaint filed against him. He allegedly forced the children to have sexual contact with each other, the complaint also stated.

Montague, who is represented by a public defender, is being held in custody of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's office in lieu of a $25,000 bond.

Abbott was released on his own recognizance after his arrest earlier this month.

Smashed fair benches fixed by lodge crew

FILED — Thanks to three members of the Twin Falls Moose Lodge, several benches smashed by a windstorm at the Twin Falls County Fair are as good as new.

Lew Hoffman, Ralph Clark and Everett Glenn of Twin Falls completed their work Wednesday. For more than 50 hours over a two-week period of time, the men repaired and rebuilt more than 25 park benches and tables used at the fair.

The benches had been stored for the winter in a merchants building. When the roof of the building collapsed Dec. 1 under the weight of snow, the benches were broken along with several picnic tables and county vehicles.

When the Moose Lodge members decided to repair the benches as a community service project, said Hoffman, the organization's civic affairs chairman.

When the weather cooperated, the lodge repaired and rebuilt the benches from new materials or scraps from the old ones, he added. The three are retired, and Glenn is a retired construction carpenter, Hoffman said.

Fair Manager Tom Shouse said he appreciated the efforts of the Moose Lodge members.

Shouse said he was not sure if the cost of repairing benches or the pile-up of scrap material would be covered by insurance. Although the repair work was done by the volunteers and fair workers, the county did have to buy some new materials for the replacements.

Conservation loans offered

BOISE — The Idaho Department of Water Resources is offering low interest loans to help businesses, individuals and farmers fund energy conservation projects.

Loans are available at a seven percent interest rate in amounts ranging from $1,000 to $200,000, said IDWR Director A. Kenneth Dunn.

Projects which may be eligible include waste heat recovery systems, weatherization, cogeneration facilities, heating, ventilation or air conditioning retrofits or replacements, and biomass production, combustion or gasification.

Farmers and ranchers interested in solar, space, or water heating, solar or geothermal crop drying, irrigation system energy conservation, methane gas production, or other projects which displace conventional energy sources may also be eligible for the low interest loans.

The loan program is designed to help the agricultural and business communities undertake conservation measures that will reduce energy consumption, Dunn said in a news release.

Information and loans are available at any First Interstate Bank in Idaho. Loans must be repaid within 5 years. Funding for the program has come from the U.S. Department of Energy through monies collected from oil overcharge cases.

For more information or an application form, call the toll free Idaho Energy Information Hotline at 1-800-334-7282.

Slater evidence is sparing

JEROME — Police in Jerome are continuing the investigation of a double shooting last October, in which Jerome County Prosecutor Mark Gause has stated there is insufficient evidence to file a charge.

Gause, critical of the police investigation, said he and Marc Haws of the Attorney General's office agree there is not enough evidence to support a charge. Gause said unless some major new evidence is produced there will be no criminal charge in the deaths of John and Pauline Slater. Both died in their mobile home in Jerome last October of gunshot wounds in the heads.

Sgt. Lonny Meadows of the Jerome Police Department said this week that the investigation is still underway and that he is looking for additional evidence and information.

He said he takes exception to Gause's position that there will be no charges filed, and while there may not have been enough evidence originally, the investigation has not been concluded. Meadows declined to say if he had uncovered any new evidence during the recent weeks.

Tourism shades Sea of Galilee fishing

By NICOLAS B. TAFTRO
The Associated Press

ON THE SEA OF GALILEE, Israel — Like fishermen in Jesus' time, Capt. Menachem Lev casts his nets in the Sea of Galilee and has a healthy respect for the fish that will roll the waves. But he fishes for a different kind of fish.

But fishing is a dying profession on the lake where Jesus recruited fishermen to be his disciples. It has lost out to fish farming and the more profitable tourism trade.

Menachem Lev likes to go out, even in the daytime, and be sure to come back loaded with fish. The net was pulled by hand, but they caught more fish," said Lev, who now fishes mostly at night and relies on advanced technology to help him find fish.

"The problem is that there are more tourists than fish," said Mendel Nun, a 68-year-old community member who spent 20 years fishing the sea and is a leading authority on the history of the lake. Every year the lake is restocked with mullet from Mediterranean tributaries and silver carp from the Yellow River in China, he said.

"The Book of Luke records that in Jesus' time there was a plentiful supply of fish in the lake. After a night of fruitless fishing, Jesus told his disciples to toss out their nets once again.

"When they had done so, they caught such a large number of fish that their nets began to break."

"So they signaled their partners in the other boat to come and help them and they came and filled both boats so full they began to sink," says Lev.

But in a sign of the changing times, the kibbutz sold one of its two fishing boats and bought a share of the cruise line that operates eight tourist boats.

Until the 1950s, Nun said, Arab fishermen used hand-thrown nets and techniques that date back to Jesus' time.

In February, Nun and other archaeologists excavated a 2,000-year-old fishing boat at the nearby Kibbutz Glosnar, a discovery that should give scientists the "first accurate information about the sort of boat used by Jesus' fishermen-disciples."

Matthew 14:24-32 recounts how Jesus, walking across the waves, rescued his disciples and averted a sudden storm that threatened to swamp their boat as they were crossing the lake, which is five miles wide and 13 miles long.

The deceptive weather comes as no surprise to Lev. "It can be dangerous. You need experience to navigate here in the wind," he said, recalling a storm two years ago that lasted for 75 mph.

Today, multi-deck power launches ferry Easter pilgrims across the lake to sites where Jesus carried out his ministry.

These include Capernaum, where there are remains of a house which tradition says belonged to Peter, and Tabgha, where after his Resurrection, Jesus told his disciples where to find fish after they had returned with empty nets, recounted in John 21:1-14.

Procession of thousands retraces path Christ walked to crucifixion

JERUSALEM (AP) — Thousands of pilgrims tread the cobblestones of the Via Dolorosa on Good Friday, retracing Christ's path to crucifixion. Among the faithful were 140 fishermen who walked for six days through the Judean desert.

Police cordoned off the 1,000-yard route, now lined with shops, to clear the way for Franciscan monks in brown robes who led the official procession by the Roman Catholic Patriarchate.

Groups of pilgrims carried heavy wooden crosses on their shoulders, under a bright sun that was unusually hot for March, to help recreate the biblical story.

Pilgrims stopped for devotions at the 14 Stations of the Cross marking events that occurred during Jesus' walk.

The procession ended at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, built by the Crusaders, which encompasses the hill of Calvary and the marble-encased mausoleum built over the traditional site of Christ's tomb.

For the Irish group, the procession marked the end of a 125-mile trek which started in Nazareth, where Jesus spent his childhood.

"We feel great and on top of the world," said Owen Rice of Dundalk. "Walking the Via Dolorosa takes me back to the time of the Lord."

Rice said the purpose of the walk from Nazareth to Tiberias on the shore of the Sea of Galilee and through the Judean desert to Jerusalem was to raise money for Irish charities. He said $300,000 had been collected in Ireland so far.

Tony Doyle, another member of the group, said he "felt closer to my religion walking through the desert" because of the commercialism in Jerusalem's Old City.

Groups of Israeli border policemen carrying assault rifles stood outside the walls of the Old City, which is populated mainly by Palestinians, but few were seen along the procession route.

Christians ask for help

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Leaders of the main Christian militia asked the Arab League and the United States on Friday to intervene against Syria, which they called a "terrorist country" engaged in the massacre of Christians.

Twelve people, including two Lebanese army soldiers, were reported killed and 27 wounded in day-long bombardments of the Christian heartland Thursday from Syrian-controlled mountain peaks in central and eastern Lebanon.

More fighting was reported Friday, but police said it was less intense. Shells fell on 34 towns and villages Thursday.

Three armor-piercing rockets were fired Friday at the former U.S. consulate in Moslem west Beirut in apparent retaliation for the U.S. Navy's confrontation with Libya in the Gulf of Sidra earlier this week.

Evidence against Waldheim lacking

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A West German prosecutor and Nazi hunter was quoted Friday as saying he had no evidence to support allegations that former U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim was involved in Nazi war crimes.

The World Jewish Congress has said documents from World War II archives indicate Waldheim was a member of the Nazi SA, or storm troopers, and played a role in atrocities against partisans and civilians while he was a German army officer in the Balkans and Greece.

Waldheim, who was U.N. secretary-general from 1972-82, has denied the allegations.

Striking Filipinos stone bus carrying U.S. servicemen

CLARK AIR BASE, Philippines (AP) — Striking Filipino workers barricading this U.S. base stoned a bus carrying Americans to work Friday. Talks between U.S. officials and strike leaders failed to reach agreement to lift the barricade or end the week-old strike.

No one was injured in the stoning. Clark officials said it occurred when a U.S. Air Force bus traveling from Angeles City outside Clark to nearby Camp O'Donnell air station passed the pickets at Clark.

The strike began March 21 over union demands for greater severance pay for workers who quit. It involves 22,000 Filipino workers at Clark, Subic Naval Base, 30 miles southwest of Clark, and six smaller

U.S. installations. Subic commander Rear Adm. Edwin Kohn, the highest U.S. military officer in the country, and union president Roberto Flores met Friday in a Philippine military camp outside Subic. Their talks centered on the issue of dismantling rock and log barricades set up by the strikers at the gates to Clark and Subic.

26 states challenging rules on welfare errors

Idaho among those suing government

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-six states — including Idaho — the District of Columbia and three California counties sued the federal government Friday to block proposed regulations that would impose $200 million in penalties in connection with two major welfare programs.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court here, is the latest action in an on-going fight between the states and the federal government on reducing errors in the two basic programs — Aid to Families with Dependent Children, or AFDC, and Medicaid.

What was intended by Congress as a "quality control" system to encourage states to reduce program errors "has become an illogical and cumbersome process that neither produces quality nor reduces errors," Sidney Johnson, executive director of the American Public Welfare Association, said in a statement.

The regulations challenged in the lawsuit authorize penalties based on federal calculations of the percentage of funds spent in the programs on ineligible persons, or on overpayment of benefits.

The penalties are based on 1980 Health and Human Services Department regulations carrying out the Michel amendment, named for House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., which required each state to bring its error rates for the federal-state AFDC and Medicaid programs to 4 percent in 1983. The regulations required each state to progress one-third of the way toward that goal in fiscal year 1981, another third in 1982 and reach the goal by 1983.

Error rates measure overpayments to beneficiaries and payments to ineligible persons.

Attorney Charles A. Miller said, "States have consistently opposed this penalty approach because the federal calculations do not fairly or accurately measure actual misspending, because some mistakes are unavoidable in the AFDC and Medicaid programs, and because much of the responsibility for spending mistakes belongs to the federal government, which mandates highly complex program requirements and then constantly changes them."

Volcano continues belching

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Augustine Volcano spewed ash and gases for a second day Friday as health alerts continued throughout south-central Alaska, gritty dust grounded airplanes, and windborne debris spread as far as 600 miles to the north.

The ash from Friday's periodic blasts, part of the 4,025-foot peak's first eruption in 10 years, was expected to circle the Earth several times before settling out of the atmosphere, but no appreciable effect on climate was foreseen.

Since Thursday, the mountain and the remote uninhabited island upon which it sits have shaken with a series of gaseous blasts that sent ash rocketing 10,000 feet skyward in about 30 seconds, with debris eventually reaching more than nine miles into the air.

"That's what we expect to continue for several more days — periodic bursts of ash," said Betsy Young, a U.S. Geological Survey volcano expert. "In between the ash bursts, there is still a plume, but it's mostly gases and very fine ash."

In Kenai, an eighth of an inch of volcanic dust covered the ground. The air was heavy with the stench of sulfur and visibility was less than a mile.

The Kenai airport closed Friday morning because of the ash buildup, said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Paul Steucke.

Most flights were canceled Thursday to and from Anchorage International Airport, but a half-dozen airliners made it in Friday morning, airport officials said.

U.S. may expand beyond treaty limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arms control director Kenneth L. Adelman says the Reagan administration is considering an expansion of the U.S. nuclear submarine fleet beyond treaty limits or launching other weapons programs as a response to alleged Soviet violations.

He also said in an interview Thursday that the United States must keep testing nuclear weapons to make sure they are "safe and reliable."

Adelman hinted the testing in the Nevada desert was designed to develop new types of nuclear warheads, but he refused to provide any details.

"I don't believe that the arms control process can exist as long as the Soviets have a pattern of violations," he said.

Adelman, director of the U.S.

Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, accused the Soviets of flouting a number of agreements with the United States, including the 1972 and 1979 SALT treaties that placed ceilings on certain types of nuclear weapons and the 1974 accord limiting underground blasts to 150 kilotons.

An underground U.S. test was held last Saturday and preparations "apparently are under way for additional blasts."

"We rely on nuclear weapons for our ultimate security. As long as we continue to do that, we have to make sure that the safety and reliability of nuclear weapons is as high as we can make them," Adelman said.

The Soviets are in the eighth month of a self-imposed test moratorium. They have invited the United States to resume negotiations to ban all underground tests — the only kind now permitted.

Instead, President Reagan has invited Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to send inspectors to the Nevada test site, where they could use new technology to determine whether the United States was operating within the 150-kiloton limit.

"Thus far, we have not seen any indication of interest in visiting the test site," Adelman said.

"We hope they will come and take advantage of the new technology."

He would not be specific about the U.S. test program, but said that over the years "new devices" for new kinds of weapons were tested and that the administration was determined to proceed with the single-warhead Midgetman missile.

By DICK JOYCE
The Associated Press

DALLAS — Stars aside, today's NCAA Tournament semifinal showdown between No. 1 Duke and No. 2 Kansas would seem to hinge on opposing journeyman centers Jay Bilas and Greg Drelling.

Duke, 35-2, has built a 29-game winning streak despite the rap that it lacks a legitimate center. It is a team of veterans, led by All-American guard Johnny Dawkins, who have found ways to win.

"People say, 'We can beat Duke, they don't have height,'" Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said Friday. "But actually beating us has been a problem. We just show up and pay attention to detail."

Kansas, 35-3, also is on a roll, carrying a 16-game winning streak into the second game of Saturday's semifinal. No. 7 Louisville, 30-7, faces unranked Louisiana State, 26-11, in the 1:42 p.m. MST opener at Reunion Arena.

The Jayhawks got a boost Friday when 6-5 forward Ron Kelloug, their No. 2 scorer who had been hampered by a strained arch in his left foot, practiced and show no difficulty in running. It was his first running since Sunday's Midwest Regional championship game.

Danny Manning, a 6-foot-11 sophomore forward, is the star of the Kansas team because of his all-around ability, but Drelling, a 7-1, 250-pound senior, could be the key.

"We cannot beat Duke if he plays 16 minutes and fouls out," Kansas Coach Larry Brown said. "Greg is going to have to be part of the game."

Drelling has been plagued by foul trouble throughout his career, including Duke's 92-86 triumph over the Jayhawks for the Big Apple National Invitation Tournament title in December. He played only 16 minutes before fouling out with 12 points and 11 rebounds.

Bilas, Duke's 6-8, 225-pound center is the least regarded of Duke's starters. He has the task of playing Drelling. Danny Ferry, a 6-10 freshman who played against Drelling in the first meeting when Bilas was injured, will come off the bench.

Drelling had 19 points and 12 rebounds in the Jayhawks' 75-67 Midwest Regional win over North Carolina State. He averages 11.7 points and 6.7 rebounds.

"Kansas has a much taller lineup," said Dawkins, a 6-2 senior who leads the Blue Devils in scoring with a 20-point average, "but I think people put too much emphasis on height. It has haunted us since we've been here. Height doesn't have much to do with matchups."

Drelling said, "I don't go out to avoid foul trouble. I will need to establish a physical type of game early on. If you start out passive and then get more physical, the officials are more likely to call it."

He admitted that Ferry was a problem for him in their first meeting because of his ability to move quickly outside and shoot the jumper.

"Bilas plays a little closer to the basket and he likes to bang," Drelling said. "That's my kind of game."

"Drelling's got good offensive moves, so it's going to take a good effort on my part," said Bilas, who averages 6.9 points and 4.9 rebounds. Krzyzewski says the Blue Devils are ready.

"We've also been fortunate to find a lot of different ways to win," he said. "When our shooting is off, as it has been in the NCAA's, our rebounding has been strong."

backcourtmen Tommy Amaker and Dawkins, also has been a key to the Atlantic Coast Conference championship success. The Blue Devils have forced 19 turnovers a game.

"Duke is probably the best defensive team in the country in terms of consistent pressure," Brown said.

Either Dawkins, 6-8 forward Mark Alanie (17.4 points) or 6-5 forward David Henderson (14.2), all seniors, have been Duke's scoring leader this season, accounting for 63 percent of the Blue Devils' points.

Henderson took advantage of Drelling's absence in the first meeting and scored 30 points.

Manning, criticized for his lack of aggressiveness earlier this season, won the Big Eight Conference's regular-season and tournament MVP awards and was chosen the

Fast start for CSI cowboys

Eddie Clements of Southern Utah State College falls off a bronc during the bareback riding event Friday night

Eagles lead four events through first go at invitational rodeo

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The hometown club claimed the lead in calf roping with a time of 11.5 seconds and Battle Mountain's Norcutt brothers, Frank and Wayne, picked up first in team roping with an 11-second flat showing.

Team scores won't be available until this evening; however, nearly 200 individual entrants from ten Rocky Mountain region teams are taking part. Schools participating include Southern Utah State College, Boise State University, Weber State College, Idaho State University, Ricks College, Utah Technical College, Brigham Young University, Utah State University and as well as CSI.

The Eagles' Nevada contingent came through in style as Kindel Mason, out of Fallon, led in calf roping with a time of 11.5 seconds and Battle Mountain's Norcutt brothers, Frank and Wayne, picked up first in team roping with an 11-second flat showing.

Other CSI Rodeo team members setting the pace through the first session were Joe Eisner in saddle bronc riding and rodeo queen Joni James, a Jerome product, in the barrel racing event.

CSI Coach Shawn Davis produced the only four entrants able to stay aboard their mounts in the saddle bronc competition as Bill Head, Brian Tubbs and Frank Norcutt all trained teammate Eisner.

The bull riding featured a number of bulls billed as possibly the toughest seen in this area. That claim seemed to hold water as only Utah Tech's Wade Ryan lasted out the eight-second count. Action resumes in the second performance scheduled for 2 p.m. today in the CSI Expo Center. The two-day rodeo winds up with tonight's 8 p.m. finals.

EDDIE SUTTON
1st year at Kentucky

Sutton coach of year

Ex-CSI mentor

DALLAS (AP) — University of Kentucky Coach Eddie Sutton, who organized the College of Southern Idaho's men's basketball program and coached its first three teams, was named the Associated Press College Basketball Coach of the Year on Friday.

He beat Dick Versace of Bradley by three votes in the closest balloting in the history of the award. Mike Krzyzewski of Duke was third, five votes behind, followed by Lou Carrusocca of St. John's and Dean Smith of North Carolina.

Sutton also was named coach of the year in 1978 when he was at Arkansas and thus became the first coach to earn the AP award at two different schools. That year, Sutton's team was eliminated in the Final Four by Kentucky. This year, his Kentucky team missed reaching the Final Four when it lost by two points to Louisiana State in the Southeast Regional finals.

"I'm deeply honored," Sutton said. "It is a year when there were so many great coaching jobs. There were many who were more deserving, but none who would appreciate it more than I do."

Sutton said his first season at Kentucky had been the most enjoyable of his 29-year coaching career.

"When you have a season like we did, good things have to happen for you. Our team listened to the coaches, played hard all season and believed it could beat anybody."

Sutton was coaching high school basketball in Tulsa, Okla., when he was hired by CSI President James Taylor in 1966.

Lemon's stars at CSI

Benefit set Monday

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Former Harlem Globetrotters basketball star Meadowlark Lemon and his newly formed basketball team, the Shooting Stars, will perform Monday night at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium.

The benefit game is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

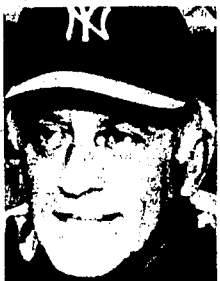

Lemon, who has been performing on basketball courts for more than 25 years, will appear in the game along with long-time sidekick Curly Neal and their regular and supporting teams. The evening's events will also include a halftime stand-dunk contest between members of the Shooting Stars and CSI faculty and students, including freshman forward Joey Johnson, who became known for his leaping ability and his slam dunks during the just-ended college basketball season.

Ticket prices are $5 for adults and $4 for children aged 12 and under and are available at Danny D's Waterbeds, Newton's, the Christian Book Store in Twin Falls and at the door prior to game time. Part of the proceeds of gate receipts will go to the CSI athletic department.

The benefit is being sponsored locally by KMVT-TV.

The Shooting Stars are made up of former college and professional players who are, like Lemon, adept at trick shots and known for their basketball-handling prowess.

The group's current tour, which began earlier this month, is part of a youth fund awareness campaign organized by Lemon and his associates, who include former Louisiana State University and New Orleans Jazz star Pete Maravich.

PHIL NIEKRO

Yanks fire Niekro, ship Baylor to Sox

FT. LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The New York Yankees requested waivers on 300-game winner Phil Niekro for the purpose of giving the veteran pitcher his unconditional release, the team announced Friday.

The Yankees also sent designated hitter Don Baylor to the Boston Red Sox Friday for designated hitter Mike Easler.

Niekro, who will turn 47 on April 1, was not on the Yankee roster and had been in camp trying to earn a job. But the knuckleballer was ineffective in four exhibition games, going 1-1 with a 5.40 earned-run average. He had allowed 14 hits in 13 1/3 innings.

Niekro signed with the Yankees as a free agent prior to the 1984 season and went 16-8 in his first year with the team.

Niekro didn't have a guaranteed contract with the Yankees this season. He was to receive $350,000 if he made the Yankees' Opening Day roster and a $50,000 bonus if he pitched at least 175 innings.

If Niekro had remained on the roster another day, the Yankees would have had to pay him the initial $350,000. The Yankees asked Niekro on Friday for permission to delay their decision for 10 days, but Niekro refused.

"I think they knew pretty much when I came down here I was not going to make the ballclub," Niekro said after being waived. "That's why there was no guarantee in there (his contract)."

"The age factor had something to do with it, they said. They didn't call me any good reasons," he said. "I think I could have gone scoreless in 25 and not made the ballclub. I just don't understand why the birthday comes into effect. Evidently, production doesn't."

First-year Manager Lou Piniella indicated he also had some input in the decision.

"To be fair to the front office, this wasn't strictly a front-office decision," Piniella said. "We've had some young people who have pitched well, and Britt Burns getting hurt didn't help. We needed another left-hander."

The 35-year-old Easler, a left-handed hitter, hit .252 for Boston last season with 16 homers and 74 RBI and had three of the Red Sox' 10 homers this spring, including one Friday off National League Cy

Meridian, Nampa go atop Mini-Cassia

By LARRY HOWEY
Times-News Staff Writer

Meridian and Nampa arrived at the semifinals of the Mini-Cassia Easter Baseball Tournament in undefeated style Friday.

Meridian hammered Minico 9-3 and Madison 20-10 while Nampa had it a little harder, dropping Burley 10-0 in five innings of the opener and then going into an extra inning before beating Twin Falls 8-6. Minico and Twin Falls posted the other wins of the day, the Spartans edging Madison 5-4 and the Bruins beating the young Burley Bobcats 20-4.

Action resumes on two fronts this morning with Minico meeting the Bobcats at Burley and Twin Falls going against Madison in Rupert, both starting at 10 a.m. The winners will advance against the undefeated teams at 1 p.m. and the two survivors will play for the championship at 4 p.m. at the Burley field.

Minico jumped on Madison 5-0 in the first two innings and Alfie Aragon just made it stand up for the 5-4 decision. The Spartans collected four runs in the first when Jesse Beltman, Jesse Bransen and Kevin Condie walked and Kent Schow and Marty Carter came up with base hits. Consecutive hits by Schow, Carter and Bransen provided the winner in the second.

Madison replied with all four runs in the third, Steve Young highlighting the outburst with a two-run homer. But Aragon slammed the door after that. In the second game, Meridian put together a pair of four-run innings to close out the Spartans. Three walks, a single by Bill Scott and Jim Straw's triple provided the second-inning flurry and a walk, a baseball by Jolley and two-baggers from Mike Negrette and Bob Dunch highlighted the second.

A throwing error let Minico break the shutout in the sixth. At Burley, Nampa, benefitting from a couple of dropped flies in the outfield, hammered the Bobcats to seven runs in the second inning to obliterate that game.

Todd Durbin's two-run single sent the Bulldogs off to a 2-0 lead. Then in the second, Roland Gamill and Shad Roe opened with doubles. Walks to Bill Smith and Durbin sandwiched around singles by Jess Torres and Marcus Delapaz before all the runners scored when Ed Castledine's fly ball was dropped.

Another misplayed outfield fly carried Nampa to the extra-inning win over Twin Falls. After the Bulldogs took a 2-0 lead, a 3-2 deficit put the game into overtime with two runs in the seventh, Nampa immediately filled the bases in the eighth with a walk to Anthony Negrette, a single by Delapaz and a bunt hit by Durbin. ### It's USC vs. Texas in final LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Four-time All-American Cheryl Miller surpassed the 3,000-point mark in career scoring Friday night in leading third-ranked Southern California to an 83-59 victory over Tennessee for a berth in the championship game of the NCAA Division I women's basketball tournament.

Southern California will seek its third title in four years Sunday night against unbeaten and top-ranked Texas, a 90-85 winner over Western Kentucky in the other semifinal. Miller finished with 17 points to increase her career total to 3,002. She also had 10 rebounds and five assists for Southern Cal, 3-4.

The doubleheader at Lexington's Rupp Arena drew 9,894, a record for a women's national semifinal, topping the mark of 8,866 set in 1983 at Norfolk, Va.

In the earlier game, freshman Clarissa Davis scored 32 points and Fran Harris added 20 as the Longhorns downed Western Kentucky. Texas squandered a 13-point first-half lead, allowing Western Kentucky to tie the game with 10 early in the second half. Davis then hit a jumper with 16:56 to go, and Texas began to pull away.

Jackson kicked off team

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Bo Jackson, the 1985 Heisman Trophy winner, ended his baseball career at Auburn University after an "inadvertent rules violation" when he accepted an airplane ride from the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, school athletic officials said Friday.

Jackson, whose speed and strength have made him a possible first-round pick as a power-hitting baseball player as well as a pro football talkback, flew on a plane provided by the National Football League club Tampa for a physical examination last Tuesday.

The Bucs have No. 1 pick in the NFL draft April 29, and Jackson is regarded as the top prospect. The United States Football League club Tampa has territorial draft rights to Jackson belonging to the Birmingham Stallions. The major league baseball draft is in early June.

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Kansas City relief pitchers Joe Beckwith and Mike Jones and outfielder Pat Sheridan were given their unconditional release Friday after the Royals could find no team interested in making a trade.

Beckwith and Sheridan had poor springs, but the players were cut because they did not fit into the overall plans of the Royals, a team spokesman said.

The release of Sheridan means Darryl Motley will be the fulltime right fielder, Schuerholz said. Sheridan and Motley had platooned last season.

outstanding player of the Midwest Regional.

In the first meeting against Duke, Manning broke loose in the second half and finished with 24 points.

He averages 17.1 points and 6.3 rebounds and leads the team in steals with 15. Kellogg averaged 15.5 points, 6-6 guard Calvin Thompson 13.4 and Drelling 11.7.

Cedric Hunter is the Jayhawks point guard.

"They have the most outstanding starting five in the tournament, five very complementary players," Krzyzewski said. "They are the most explosive team in the tournament. Kellogg, Thompson or Manning is capable of having a 30-point night."

Young Award winner Dwight Gooden of the New York Mets. The Yankees plan to platoon him at DH with Gary Roenicke, but he will be playing in Yankee Stadium, which favors left-handed hitters.

Baylor, 36, hit .231 in 142 games for the Yankees last season, but hit .220 in 1985. He has 19 home runs and 91 runs. Gorman said that Baylor, who had balked earlier at a trade to the White Sox, will play regularly in Fenway Park, where the left fielder is in his fourth year.

"We feel we're more balanced now," said Boston General Manager Lou Gorman. "I've known Don Baylor for many, many years. He's a great guy, an outstanding player and a leader on the field. Of course, you don't find many people like Mike Easter. But Baylor is very much like him in ability."

CSI two-times CEU with pitching, bats

College baseball

TWIN FALLS — Accustomed as they are to winning by big margins at Frontier Field, the College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles got the experience of protecting a lead on Friday.

CSI swept a non-conference doubleheader from the College of Eastern Utah, 7-3 and 8-5, but it had to rely on late-inning pitching and defense to do it.

"I was pleased," said CSI manager Jim Walker. "Sophomore right-hander Vic (Valdez) pitched himself out of trouble in the first game and we made the plays defensively when we needed to in the second. Their pitching gave us a lot of problems, though. We do a pretty good job of hitting people who throw heat, but the pitchers who throw other the other stuff are tough on us sometimes."

The two teams will conclude their weekend series today at 11 a.m. at Frontier Field.

In the first game, the Eagles got under par on the tourists' home court as their pitching gave CSI right-hander Wayne Arroyo, who limited them to two runs on five hits through five innings and left the game with it tied 3-3. But a wild streak by his reliever, Darren Evans, started CSI on a five-run outburst in the sixth inning that put the game away. The Eagles didn't get a hit in that frame, as Evans walked five batters.

Valdez got himself in trouble in the second inning by giving up a two-run home run to Sean Hackford and appeared on the verge of allowing CEU a big inning in the fifth after his wild pitch scored the visitors' third run of the day. But he got out of the frame without further damage and retired the last seven batters in faced.
