Protests against apartheid quiet

By LEE MITGANG

The Associated Press

Anti-apartheid protests marking the 18th anniversary of the assassination of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. drew generally small and peaceful crowds Friday, but demonstrators shouted obscenities at police, tore down nine symbolic shanties outside the Wisconsin Capitol.

Protest organizers, led by the New York-based American Committee on Africa, had billed Friday as "National Divestment Protest Day" to urge colleges and universities to divest holdings in companies dealing with South Africa.

Demonstrations were held at Johns Hopkins University, Penn State, University of Florida, University of Rochester, Cornell, Wellesley and other campuses. Most drew fewer than 100 participants.

"Obviously at different places the level of participation varies greatly. But we're definitely satisfied with the way things are going," said Josh Nessen, a spokesman for the American Committee on Africa.

In Madison, Wis., about 150 protesters marched to the University of Wisconsin campus to the Capitol and built the shanties. Later Friday about a dozen demonstrators locked arms and yanked at state security bolts, who loaded the old wooden doors and cardboard used to construct the shanties onto two pickup trucks.

"You fascists, you boozers," one demonstrator shouted. No arrests were reported.

Fewer than 40 people participated in a quiet teach-in at Columbia University, in contrast to that campus' massive demonstrations last spring.

At the University of Rochester, students planned to put up 10 shanties to demonstrate their opposition to apartheid.

About 30 students held a rally at Cornell University to protest the school's investments in companies with ties to South Africa, said school spokesman David Stewart.

Evans tosses out 'pork barrel'

Governor says veto will provide cushion, keep state out of red

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Gov. John Evans says the Idaho Legislature's final budget for next year would have pushed the state nearly $1 million into the red.

So Friday afternoon he vetoed a $5 million appropriation for construction at the colleges and universities. He said that will give the state a cushion of about $4 million in the state budget starting July 1, and perhaps avoid the need for another spending holdback.

While the governor killed the $5 million appropriation for the construction projects, he did not kill authorization for the work.

Public Works Director Brian Chase said the governor's action will have little impact on the projects. He said planning and design will continue, and the next Legislature will convene before much money needs to be spent.

The $5 million appropriation was dubbed the 'pork barrel' fund, and played a central role in passage of major education budgets in the last day of the legislative session.

The Republican leadership of the Legislature came up with a $27 million package of construction projects. It included $6.5 million for long-postponed maintenance and improvements at the colleges.

Later, $1.5 million was taken from the 'pork barrel' fund and placed into the public school support budget.

The final $5 million allocation for the colleges made it politically difficult for legislators from the college towns to oppose the higher education budget of $90.7 million, and the measure eventually cleared the Legislature.

But Evans said Friday latest budget estimates indicate the Legislature spent at least $98 million more than available revenue, and the Idaho Constitution forbids deficit spending.

Martin Peterson, the governor's budget director, said with numerous adjustments in the estimated revenue for the state budget year starting July 1, it appears Idaho will receive $605,020,000 in general tax revenue.

All spending approved by the Legislature would have added up to $605,978,000 without the governor's veto, Peterson said.

The Legislature started with a revenue estimate of just under $570 million, but approved a 1-cent increase in the state sales tax, which went into effect on Monday.

That will bring in an extra $61 million. Just under $8 million will be used to cover a carryover public school payment from the current budget, and $15 million was set aside for construction projects.

Peterson said with the veto of the $5,064,000 construction appropriation, the state could wind up with a $4,106,000 surplus.

The 1987 Legislature convenes Jan. 13, Evans said, which will provide enough time for lawmakers to come up with more money for the

Jobless rate holds steady

By MATT YANCEY

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The number of jobless Americans continued to hover around 8.4 million last month, the government reported Friday. That level kept the unemployment rate well above 7 percent and belied earlier indications of an "upturn" in the economy.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said the rate of civilian joblessness, adjusted for normal seasonal fluctuations, fell to 7.2 percent in March, a drop of only one-tenth of 1 percent from February and the same average unemployment level for all of 1985. A year ago, the March rate was 7.3 percent.

"The failure of unemployment to decline to its January level of 6.7 percent suggests that the economy has been weaker than earlier estimates," said Jerry Jasinski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers.

Private and government economists agreed that January's jobless rate of 6.7 percent, the lowest of Ronald Reagan's five-year presidency, was a statistical aberration in the wake of a rise to 7.3 and 7.2 percent rates of the last two months.

Robert Ortner, the Commerce Department's chief economist, called the March figures "disappointing," reflecting continuing weaknesses in broad areas of the economy such as manufacturing, with a loss of 40,000 jobs last month.

Area figures — A5

"This is the first broad general statistic we have for March and it doesn't show any signs yet that the economy has accelerated a great deal," Ortner said. "The overall economy has not been that strong, so it is not surprising that the unemployment rate has not come down very much."

Jasinski said seasonal adjustment problems in December and January employment figures had "tended to over-adjust for changes in the labor force, making those numbers look considerably better than they were."

However, Ortner, Jasinski and several other economists said they expect the rate of joblessness to again drop below 7 percent the second half of 1986 as lower interest rates, oil prices and the fallen dollar in relation to foreign currencies work their way through the U.S. economy.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, "This data reflects a smooth continuation of employment growth since June of 1985, and we expect a continued steady downward trend in the unemployment rate."

Speakes said the figures show "reasonably strong employment growth and continued success of the Reagan economic agenda in putting

Reward targets escapee

The Associated Press

BOISE — Relatives of slain Idaho Fish and Game Officer William Pogue are starting a reward fund for the capture of escaped killer Claude Dallas.

Movie next — A12

Pogue's daughter, Jodi Rupe of Boise, said Friday that the family hopes to sell 10 prints of wildlife paintings by Pogue for $100 each to raise a reward fund of $1,000. Members of the Idaho Peace Officers Association are expected to meet in Boise next week to talk about establishing a similar reward fund.

Meanwhile, the search for Dallas was scaled down in the high desert of northern Nevada on Friday.

"We have reason to believe he's left the area, at least Paradise Valley," said Lt. Richard Formy, Humboldt County Sheriff's Department.

"All the tips that we were getting aren't coming in anymore, and the scents are getting colder," Formy said. Sheriff's officers from Ada County, where Dallas escaped from the Idaho State Penitentiary on Sunday, and Owyhee County, Idaho, had gone home. That left the search to Humboldt County deputies and two officers from the Idaho prison.

Search teams early Friday followed up on tips by checking more houses in the Paradise Hill area, about 20 miles north of Winnemucca. But Formy said the manhunt wound down to a general search of the area later in the day.

Dallas, 36, a self-styled mountain man and expert in wilderness survival, was fleeing a 30-year prison term for the 1981 shooting deaths of

No word on presence of Soviet monitors

Nuclear test in Nevada set for Tuesday

By BARRY SCHWEID

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States plans to hold an underground nuclear weapons test in the Nevada desert next Tuesday, apparently without the presence of Soviet monitors invited by President Reagan to verify that the blast is within 1974 treaty limits.

However, a senior U.S. official said Reagan's three-week-old invitation to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev also extends to another U.S. test to be set off at the end of the month. "So far, we haven't heard from them," said the official, who spoke on condition of not being identified by name.

Next week's test, the second by the United States this year, will coincide with a farewell visit to the White House by former Soviet ambassador Anatoly G. Dobrynin, who was recalled last month in a Kremlin shakeup to take a major post in the central committee of the Communist party. Reagan and Secretary of State George P.

Shultz will sound him out on whether Gorbachev intends to hold a summit meeting here this summer and on the virtual stalemate in U.S.-Soviet negotiations to curb nuclear weapons.

"We would like to see that the Soviets are following up on the pledges Mr. Gorbachev and President Reagan made in Geneva — namely that they are going to start buckling down to the serious work in arms control and set a date for the summit," Kenneth L. Adelman, the director of the U.S. arms control and disarmament agency, said Friday.

Adelman stressed in an interview that the Soviet test had accepted Reagan's invitation to Gorbachev at their "fireside" meeting last November in the Swiss city. The Soviet delegation agreed then to a meeting in June, other U.S. officials said.

Since then, the administration has suggested late July also would be acceptable, while the Soviets have indicated they would rather hold off until toward the end of the year. The United States has not ruled out any date.

Referring to Dobrynin's visit, Bernard Kalb, the State Department spokesman, said, "I cannot speculate about what he might or might not be bringing."

Dobrynin was expected to arrive here from Moscow Friday evening. Besides seeing Reagan and Shultz, he will be the host at a reception next week for diplomats based here. He was assigned to Washington for 24 years and, as senior envoy, was dean of the diplomatic corps. A successor as Soviet ambassador has not been named.

U.S. officials refused to discuss the purpose of Tuesday's test. Stan Norris, a research associate with the Natural Resources Defense Council, a private environmental group, said the chances were 90 percent it was a "weapons effects" test known as Mighty Oak.

He said the idea would be to measure the impact of radiation on re-entry vehicles of the land-based MX missile and on the Trident II submarine missile.

The 1974 treaty set a ceiling of 150 kilotons — about 11 times the force of the U.S. atom bomb dropped on Hiroshima in World War II — for U.S. and Soviet underground test explosions.

TWA bomb suspect lingered in Athens

By KERIN HOPE

The Associated Press

ATHENS, Greece — The prime suspect in the TWA bombing in Athens, then to Rome and back, spent six hours in the Athens transit lounge and left on a flight to Beirut minutes before the crippled American jet made an emergency landing nearby, police said Friday.

Italian police have said the woman traveling under the name May Elias Mansur, is a known terrorist, but a senior Greek security officer said, "We were never alerted that she was a suspected terrorist."

According to our records, she hadn't been in Greece before. We're trying to trace passengers who might have noticed her in the Athens-bound flight" of same TWA jet Wednesday from Cairo, Nikos Kokkiriakis told The Associated Press.

The Boeing 727 flew from Cairo to Athens, then to Rome and back to Athens. Officials say the bomb exploded as the jet approached to Beirut minutes before the crippled American jet made an emergency landing nearby, police said Friday.

Four Americans were blown out of the plane 16 feet from the cockpit through a 9-by-3-foot hole made by the explosion.

Kokkiriakis said Miss Mansur left the TWA plane at Athens, entered the transit lounge immediately and boarded a Middle East Airlines flight six hours later that took off for Beirut minutes before Capt. Richard E.

The ap- plication also includes $3.2 million to complete funding for a new psychiatric wing at State Hospital South and $1.3 million to start pay- ing off bonds issued for a major reconstruction project at the state School for the Deaf and Blind at Gooding.

Evans said part of the budget calculation is based on a rough estimate of $2 million and a middle figure of $2.3 million was used to come up with the estimate that the Legislature overspent by $958,000.

Warehouse fire injures 14

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) An explosion rocked a sprawling warehouse near the San Francisco Bay on Friday, triggering a huge, smoky fire and causing millions of dollars in damage, officials said. At least 14 people were injured.

The cause of the explosion at the Bay View Industrial Park was not immediately known.

The warehouse, which covered a city block and sheltered a variety of small businesses, including a paint shop, photography lab and a carpentry shop, was destroyed by the blaze. The roof caved in and all but one wall crumbled, leaving a burning heap of rubble spilling a huge cloud of black and white smoke.

Dozens of people were inside the warehouse at the time of the blast, said Deputy Fire Chief Charles Cresci.

Firefighters will not enter the warehouse to look for bodies and clues to the cause of the blaze until this morning, Cresci said.

Tornadoes sweep Arkansas

By The Associated Press

Strong thunderstorms moved across the southern Plains on Friday in advance of a cold front, and at least two tornadoes were reported in Arkansas as well as several parts of the state.

Flash-flood warnings were posted in parts of north-central and northeast Texas, as well as in southeast Oklahoma.

A low-pressure system over southern Nebraska brought snow to parts of the Northwest and west central Plains.

By Friday, a late-season storm that hit Thursday dumped 12 inches of snow at Crawford, Neb., Sturgis, S.D., and Lusk, Wyo., with 9 inches reported at Laramie, Wyo., and 7 inches at Rapid City, S.D., Cheyenne, Wyo., Sidney and Chadron, Neb.

Jobs

Americans back to work in a steadily growing economy.

The Reagan administration has predicted that the average civilian unemployment rate for all of 1986 will be 6.6 percent.

"It would be a good idea to see the economy generating a very healthy number of new jobs by June," said Robert Westcott, senior economist for Wharton Economics, a Philadelphia-based forecasting firm.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics said total civilian employment in March climbed to 108,788,000, an increase of 227,000 over February but still below the all-time high of 109,955,000 people holding jobs in January.

The number of those officially listed as unemployed by the government declined 108,000 last month to 6,419,000.

These figures do not include so-called "discouraged workers," people unemployed for at least six months and who have given up looking for a job.

But, the BLS said, the ranks of those discouraged workers have dropped by 90,000 the first three months of this year — to 1,097,000, down from 1,187,000 the final quarter of 1985.

An alternative measure that includes the 1.7 million members of the Armed Services member of the United States as part of the total labor force put unemployment in March at 7.1 percent.

More than half of the new jobs created last month were absorbed by a 119,000 increase in the civilian labor force, the government said.

Petersen landed the bombed plane. Officials of Middle-East Airlines, the Lebanese national carrier, in Beirut would not confirm that Miss Mansur was aboard Flight 254 from Damascus on Wednesday.

A statement denying involvement in the bombing, purportedly signed by Miss Mansur, was distributed Friday to reporters in the north Lebanese city of Tripoli.

It said she "had nothing to do with" planting the bomb and would sue everyone "who falsely accused" her of it.

There was no way to determine whether the statement was authentic.

A Christian Beirut radio station, the Voice of Lebanon, said Miss Mansur had returned to Lebanon and was a member of the Revolutionary Brigades terrorist group.

The radio quoted unidentified sources as saying she is a Lebanese Christian, the widow of a Druse. Militiaman known as Abu Nizar who was killed last year in Lebanon's civil war. It said Mansur was her maiden name.

According to the radio, she divides most of her time between Moslem west Beirut and the village of Qbayat in the Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley of eastern Lebanon.

Little is known of the Revolutionary Brigades, but the radio said its main training camp is at Qbayat.

A group calling itself the Arab Revolutionary Cells claimed responsibility for planting the bomb. Palestinian sources familiar with terrorist operations said Thursday that was a new name used by Abu Nidal, the terrorist leader widely blamed for the Dec. 27 airport massacres at Rome and Vienna.

Various police reports say the woman is about 30 years old, with a slight limp.

Steve Heckscher, TWA spokesman in Athens, said "She is the prime suspect. That's the leading supposition."

He said the woman underwent a body search at the Cairo airport by an Egyptian policeman "as part of routine security measures" and her luggage was searched by Egyptian and TWA security.

New property tax bill called aid source

BOISE (AP) — Local units of government may get up to $10 million in new property tax revenue under legislation signed into law by Gov. John Evans Friday afternoon.

While it wasn't as much as would have been generated by a variety of other, local-option tax measures rejected by the 1986 Legislature, a city spokesman called it "an important first step" in the local government deal with financial problems.

The legislation removes the strict 5 percent limit on budget increases which went into effect after voters approved the 1 percent property tax initiative in 1978.

The law allows taxing districts to increase their levies by 5 percent. For areas with growth, that could mean extra revenue.

Harriet Walters of the Idaho Association of Counties, and Jim Weatherby, director of the Association of Idaho Cities, said the measure, based on an average 4 percent growth in counties with a lot of new construction, such as Kootenai and Blaine, will benefit the most, they said.

Also signed into law Friday afternoon by the governor were bills to:

- Change Idaho's "unitary" tax system on foreign and multinational corporations. But it will have no immediate impact on Idaho tax collections, because it doesn't go into effect until 1988.
- Require front seat passengers in motor vehicles to wear seat belts, effective July 1. It exempts vehicles over 8,000 pounds, farm vehicles, motorcycles and emergency vehicles.
- Extend the 4-cent per gallon state gas tax exemption for gasoline for another six years. Industry spokesmen said the exemption is necessary to encourage production of alcohol products from surplus farm produce.
- Set up a central system for recording liens on farm crops. Agricultural spokesmen halted the measure as an important step to help farmers qualify for operating loans secured by crops. The measure will cost about $620,000 to start, but officials expect most of the cost will be recovered in the future through fees for recording crop liens and answering queries about them.

Idaho has been requiring foreign and multinational corporations to report worldwide earnings for tax purposes. The state was under some pressure to change the law, with backers of the legislation arguing that many companies wouldn't consider expanding in Idaho unless the law were changed.

Idaho became the 23rd state to pass a mandatory seat belt law. Representatives of the Idaho Safety Restraint Coalition, law enforcement officers and the medical profession all attended the bill-signing ceremony.

Spokesmen for the coalition said states with similar laws in effect at the start of this year already have reported declines in fatalities.

Violators will cost drivers $5. Evans also signed a bill diverting up to 10 percent of Idaho's inheritance taxes into a fund to finance resource conservation and rangeland development.

Governor allows loan measure to become law

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Gov. John Evans said Friday there are a lot of problems with a bill approved by the Idaho Legislature, designed to encourage operating loans to farmers.

But on the hope that it will aid even a few hard-pressed farmers get operating loans this spring, Evans said he is allowing the measure to become law without his signature.

"I am most disappointed that this was the best the Legislature could do to address what I consider to be the number one problem facing the state," the governor said.

"If this bill does prove to be helpful in allowing even a few Idaho farmers to survive these most difficult economic times, then perhaps it will have been worthwhile," Evans said.

The measure gives a state tax exemption to the interest earned on farm operating loans up to $300,000. But it applies to all lenders, not just banks, causing Evans to earlier call it the "money lender bill, not a farm bill."

The proposal was one of several ideas advanced to the 1986 Legislature to help farmers.

Boating safety under parks department

BOISE (AP) — Gov. John Evans has signed into law controversial legislation transferring Idaho's safe boating program to the Parks and Recreation Department and raising the way boat registration fees are disbursed to the counties.

The bill, which drew severe criticism from some northern Idaho officials, calls for boat registration fees to be funneled to the state for redistribution to the counties based on boater preference.

Under the old law, administered by the Transportation Department, counties would keep the fees of boats registered with them, but officials have claimed that has diverted too much of the money away from water safety programs because counties with no waterways or lakes to patrol have been able to hold on to thousands of dollars for use on other programs.

The measure was among 30 House bills and 5 measures from the Senate signed into law by the governor Thursday afternoon. But the new distribution formula will not take effect until next year.

Under the boating safety program, it is unlawful to operate a boat in such a way as to endanger "the life or limb, or damage the property of any person." That includes driving so fast that a boat's wake damages docks, shoreline property or other areas.

Water skiing is banned at night. Boats pulling skiers must have a "competent observer" besides the operator. And in quiet phrase, the new law says people driving boats pulling water skiers shouldn't cause them to collide with other objects or people. It's okay to pull a water skier over a jumping ramp, though.

County sheriffs have control over regattas, races, marine events, tournaments or exhibitions. Sponsors must submit requests at least 30 days before the planned event to get a permit.

Among other new laws signed by the governor is one sponsored by Meridian businessman Rep. Boyd Hill. From now on, the state and other government units will have to pay their bills on time — or face penalties and interest.

The measure allows 45 days for payment of bills from the time an invoice is received.

Effective Thursday, candidates for Idaho district judge and for the Idaho Supreme Court will have to make reports on campaign contributions and spending — the same as other state candidates. But the bill makes no specific mention of the Idaho Court of Appeals. Justice Donald Burnett filed for re-election to that court last week.

As of July 1, it will be a crime to flee a police officer or attempt to elude an officer.

Sponsors of that legislation told legislators that it has not been a specific crime in the past to attempt to get away from a police officer.

The new law allows a driver's license to be suspended for fleeing or attempting to elude an officer.

Nampan bids for Forrey's House seat

NAMPA (AP) — W.O. "Bill" Taylor of Nampa, a former accountant, educator and businessman, has announced his candidacy for the District 13 legislative seat now held by Rep. Robert Forrey, R-Nampa.

Taylor said he will enter the Republican primary in District 13, a flatter district comprising Canyon, Owyhee, Elmore, Boise, Adams, Gem, Payette, Valley and Washington counties.

"Taylor, 53, said he believes that 'less government is better government,'" but he said his ideology differs greatly from that of Forrey, a conservative who took several controversial stands on education issues.

Taylor, who taught government and economics to high school seniors for 10 years in Texas, said he supports public education. He said Forrey's responsibility as a state representative was to "enact state laws and not to meddle in local school board and municipal government."

"Maybe Mr. Forrey should be running for a position on the local school board instead of the Legislature," Taylor said.

Taylor, who holds a master's degree in government education, said he "would be completely opposed to decreasing the qualifications of the state superintendent of public instruction," an unsuccessful bill that Forrey endorsed in the 1986 session.

Law shields hazardous cleanup units

BOISE (AP) — Idaho has a new "good samaritan" provision in state law, providing legal immunity for cleanup personnel attempting to deal with hazardous waste accidents.

The provision is part of new legislation on the transportation of hazardous waste signed into law by Gov. John Evans. Most of the new law goes into effect next year, but the "good samaritan" provision went into the lawbooks Thursday.

Attorney General Jim Jones said Friday the new law provides responsible protection from liability for emergency response teams that will allow them to take care of accidents with the potential of endangering public health and safety.

Jones said several private industry groups have formed hazardous materials response teams to help clean up spills on public highways. The Idaho Agricultural Chemicals Association has three such teams, he said.

Jones said because a lawsuit was filed last year against a team member involved in cleaning up an April 11 spill in Rupert, industry response teams have been reluctant to operate on Idaho highways.

Stivers bows out after 'proving I could do it'

The Associated Press

Retiring House Speaker Tom Stivers says he thinks 10 to 12 years should be long enough for anyone to serve in state government.

"You can't do what you need to do in the state of Idaho in 10 years or 12 years, I think you should get out and give someone else a chance," he said here Friday.

Stivers announced Thursday that after 12 years in the Idaho House of Representatives, the last four as the chamber's chief administrative officer, he won't run for re-election.

In the last two sessions, Stivers has become perhaps the most controversial of the 126 state lawmakers, leaving few doubt about his conservative political views.

But he said Friday he decided two years ago that his current term would be his last.

At a news conference held Friday afternoon, Gov. John Evans was asked to comment on the Stivers retirement.

While he said he and Stivers have had their differences over the years, Evans said, "He has represented his people well over the years."

"He has decided on his own to step aside, and I respect that decision," Evans described Stivers as "a long-time friend," and refused to criticize him. "He has decided to retire and we should respect his wishes," the governor said.

Stivers, 66, said he wanted more time to attend to personal interests, travel with his wife, Winnie, and to spend more time with his children and grandchildren.

"If you can't do what you need to do in the state of Idaho in 10 years... I think you should get out and give someone else a chance."

— House Speaker Tom Stivers

"I was spurred (to quit) two years ago," he said. "I nearly decided not to run then."

But he said he wanted to complete four years as speaker, since most previous speakers served in that position at least four years.

"I wanted to prove to them that I could do it," he said.

Stivers said he has nothing against Rep. Vard Chaburn, R-Abion, who recently announced his retirement after 30 years in the Legislature.

"But 10 years should be enough, maybe 12," he said.

He doesn't plan to retire from politics, and will "work with some" Republican candidates.

He said he's supporting Rep. J.F. "Chad" Chaband in the 2002 2nd District congressional race.

"Connie Hansen is going to be the determining factor. I kind of wish she wasn't in there, but has a right to be. I don't think she can quite cut it. I think Chad is the front runner," he said.

he said.

Stivers said he supports C.L. "Butch" Ott, of Caldwell, for lieutenant governor. But he won't endorse a Republican state representative, Jeff Stoker of Twin Falls, who already has filed for Stivers' seat.

Instead, he's backing a longtime political ally, Celia Folkings, 28, Buhl. "She's got good Republican background credentials," Stivers said.

He also backed her for appointment to the House seat surrendered last year by Larry Knigge of Filer, but Evans appointed Douglas Jones to the seat.

Stivers said he won't get into the selection of the next House speaker, but mentioned Republicans Steve Antone, Walter Little and Robert Geddes as possibilities.

He said the recently completed legislative session, 80 days in length, had little to do with his decision to quit. "You know I love a challenge as much as anything else. I'd love to pick up the shield again and just go right on."

He sees little change in the Republican domination of the Legislature.

"I don't see any dissolving of that strong support for the majority party. Certainly not in this area, and even more so in northern Idaho."

His term won't end until December, and Stivers said he plans to use his final months in office to continue examining the operations of state government. "We got a lot of agencies' attention and they're running scared," he said.

Magic Valley

Jobless rate rises slightly in March

The Associated Press and The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Unemployment in the Magic Valley and elsewhere worsened somewhat in March as some processing industries laid off workers and spring hirings fell short of expectations.

The jobless rate in Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding counties rose to a seasonally adjusted 6.1 percent, while the statewide count went to 6.2 percent. Both rates were up .2 percent from February, the Idaho Department of Employment reported Friday.

In the Magic Valley, slower-than-expected hirings of agricultural workers triggered the increase, said Lon McDonald, department labor force analyst at Twin Falls.

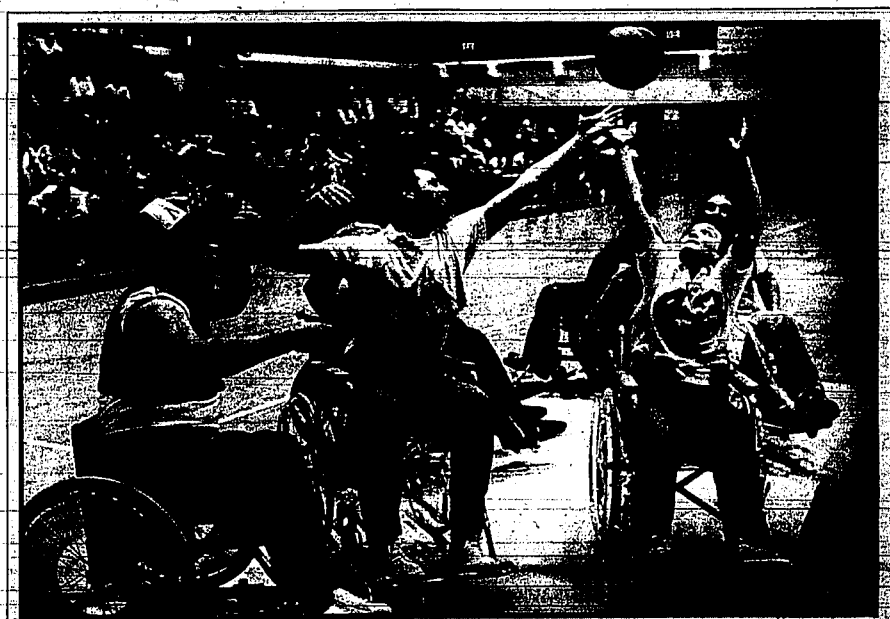

"The unusually good weather in March usually accelerates spring hiring, but this year that was not the case," he said. Although other areas, such as service and construction, business are taking on workers, the farm sector remains weak, McDonald said.

The department estimates that 2,240 workers do not have jobs and 33,200 are employed. The estimates are based on Gooding figures.

Compared to last year at this time, service businesses, the construction industry and non-durable goods manufacturers continue to perform well. Wholesale trade, government and finance have weakened, McDonald said.

The agency's Magic Valley figure for February had been revised upward 1 percent after it was released last month, he said.

Statewide layoffs in sugar refining and mining moved the

Norberg refutes critical petition

By BOB FREUND Times-News writer

BOISE — Bill Norberg, director of the Idaho office of the Farmers Home Administration, Friday described a call for his resignation as "rebellious" and said his agency is doing its best to get planting money to farmers.

The Western Borrowers Association, headquartered in Shoshone, on Thursday urged Norberg's resignation in letters to Idaho's congressmen and to Gov. John Evans. The group enclosed a petition with more than 300 names and alleged the FmHA official has taken a "no" approach to making loans.

However, Norberg said Friday he has not been confronted with the petitions and learned about them through press reports.

"Those allegations in there, as I perceive them, are so nebulous that they're difficult to respond to," he said in a phone interview.

"I'm very sympathetic to the needs of farmers out there, and we're doing our damndest to get them the money to them," Norberg said.

In the letter, Western Borrowers President Galen Guthrie leveled a number of general charges, ranging from Norberg's "lack of capability" to the needs of borrowers of FmHA to inadequate office hours for serving potential borrowers.

"We've provided overtime and we've provided contracted people out there in the field and we've provided additional people when we've had the authority to hire them," Norberg said. The Idaho FmHA has been authorized to spend $18,000 in overtime pay to help speed up loan

2nd round of conservation bids readied

By BOB FREUND Times-News writer

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Department of Agriculture will field a second, one-month bidding program to place more acres under conservation protection, the program's chief administrator said Friday.

Farmers will be able to lodge bids even if they currently are growing crops on marginal land, said Jack Webb, a top conservation official in the U.S. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, which fields the program.

Under the program, farmers agree to take land out of production for 10 years at an annual price, stated in a bid. If the bid is accepted, the land is planted with a protective crop or grass and the government pays the annual rent.

The second bidding period follows what Secretary of Agriculture Richard Lyng termed a "disappointing" round because of high land bids by farmers. The government accepted less than one-fifth of the land offered, according to ASCS figures.

In Idaho, only 9,345 acres of land in 45 farms was taken out of production, 4.6 percent of the total 201,000 acres put forward.

In a telephone interview, Webb said Friday that farmers growing crops on the land will be able to join the program if their bids are accepted. However, the government will give them retro payments in 1986 only if they destroy their plantings. If they harvest the crop, they will have to wait until 1987 to collect payments, he said.

ASCS officials expect the second round to bring in many producers of winter crops, who had already planted by the time the program was announced, Webb said.

However, "It does not mean the same bidding level (accepted by the government) will be the cutoff for the second round," Webb said. The bidding period will begin May 5 and extend to May 30, he said.

Webb also reacted to charges of unfairness in the bids accepted for the first round. The conservation program was criticized earlier this week by Idaho legislators because of the small numbers of contracts awarded and because of the low bid awards in the state. The average bid accepted in Idaho was an annual rental of $33.16 an acre.

However, in some Midwestern states, the federal government will pay more than $60 an acre, protested Reps. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, and Larry Craig, R-Idaho.

Webb said Friday that the government accepted lower bids in Idaho and other Western states to spread the program nationwide and to protect land rental markets. Geographic bidding pools in the states had separate bid limits.

"Had there been a (single), national pool and eyebid bidding against each other, then all of the accepted acres would have fallen into sections of the country where the cost of production is cheapest," he said.

Higher government payments in Idaho also could have damaged the state's rental market for farmland, Webb said. In the Midwest, where land values are much higher, government rent payments also could be higher without threatening the market.

Buhl High principal steps down

By KATHY SURELY Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Dale Thornsberry said Friday he is resigning from his position as principal of Buhl High School because of "instability" in the education system in Idaho and the Buhl School District.

Thornsberry's announcement came less than two months after the Buhl School Board made a controversial decision not to renew the contracts of Thornsberry and Popplewell Elementary School principal Lawrence LaRue. Following a public show of support for the principals, the board then reversed its decision and renewed both men's contracts.

"I am leaving for professional growth and an opportunity to work in another phase of education," Thornsberry said Friday.

He said he had accepted a job with the Idaho High School Interscholastic Activity Association as assistant to the executive director. The association's office, located in Boise, oversees the sports, speech arts and music activities of high schools in Idaho.

Thornsberry's duties will include working with high schools to set up and run tournaments throughout the state.

Although the job represents a promotion for Thornsberry, it also means a relocation for his family. But, he said, after 11 years as principal at Buhl High School, he sees an increasing lack of stability in the education system.

"The current instability affects the teachers and students as well as

Anti-tax lecturer brands government 'criminal'

By KENNETH A. BROWN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — America's current tax structure is illegal and the U.S. government is a "criminal government," anti-tax lecturer and author M.J. "Red" Beckman told an audience of about 60 persons at the Holiday Inn in Twin Falls Thursday night.

A self-proclaimed tax protester from Billings-Mont., Beckman has traveled throughout the U.S. pushing his views and a collection of books, pamphlets, audio cassettes, and videotapes espousing his anti-tax and anti-government beliefs.

Beckman began his talk by telling the audience "I have reason to believe that I am the number one enemy of the IRS in the country."

"I am a tax protester and I am proud of being a tax protester," he added.

Beckman described the Internal Revenue Service as the U.S. counterpart of the "Nazis, Gestapo and the Russian KGB. Following a

11 bidders vie for job at fair site

By BOB FREUND Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Eleven companies from the Twin Falls-Jerome area submitted bids on Friday for the construction of a new merchants building at the Twin Falls County Fair.

The bids were opened by County Clerk Dick Pence in the office of the Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners, while several representatives from the companies looked on.

The commissioners will award the job next Friday at 2 p.m. After the bids are reviewed by the Fair Board and an architect, Russ Iveloff, who designed the proposed 10,000-square-foot concrete block building.

After the bids were opened, the apparent low bidder was Otis Hall Construction Co., with a bid of $107,500. Of the 11 companies, only one bid was rejected, because it failed to meet specifications.

Commission Chairman Ann Cover said the bids were higher than they hoped. The average bid was about $124,000.

An adjustor from the county's insurance company estimated the replacement of the old building at about $95,000. County officials said they probably would negotiate with the company awarded the job after they knew exactly how much it would cost to replace the building.

The old building collapsed under the weight of snow last Dec. 7. The county Fair Board voted earlier this month to construct the new building, which will double as a multi-purpose facility — near the main gate and not at the site of the old building.

Officials claim tests show safety

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The success of two tests at Experimental Breeder Reactor II demonstrated the inherent safety of metal-fueled, sodium-cooled reactors, Argonne officials said.

Temperatures of the sodium coolant and the metal fuel remained well within safe limits and EBR II shut down by natural processes, officials said.

For both experiments Thursday, Argonne National Laboratory West's 22-year-old reactor — the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory — was pushed beyond normal limits.

It went from 100 percent power to nearly zero in the loss-of-coolant-without-steam test in the morning. Five hours later it was brought back up to full power and the process repeated in a loss-of-heat-sink test in which power to the secondary cooling system was turned off.

"That is very fast for any nuclear power plant," said Peter Planchon, EBR II plant and reactor analysis manager. "It took some very capable operators to do that."

The reactor automatically shut down in both tests due to heat expansion and gravity from inherent characteristics of metal-fueled, sodium-cooled reactors.

"For a similar loss of coolant in light water reactors used in U.S. commercial plants, instrumented systems or operators would have to actively shut down the reactor. Otherwise the reactor would be heavily damaged causing a major accident," the officials said.

The passive safety characteristics and other advantages of the breeder reactor design were showcased throughout the day by Argonne nuclear industry representatives to an audience of nuclear experts from around the world.

The message was that metal-fueled, sodium-cooled reactors are passively safe, less costly and can lift the United States out of the nuclear doldrums and put it in the lead worldwide once again.

"What we've seen is a leap in the portfolio of our energy programs," said Alan Schriesheim, Argonne National Laboratory director.

The reactor design is the basis for the Integral Fast Reactor program, developed by Argonne. It combines the inherent safety features with on-site reprocessing and waste disposal facilities in a small, compact breeder system, the officials said.

Teachernaut Morgan feels mixed emotions

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Barbara Radding — Morgan, the backup teachernaut for Christa McAuliffe who was killed in the Jan. 28 explosion of the space shuttle Challenger, said she gets scared at the prospect of flying in outer space.

"But more than that," she said, "I get excited about it. We were aware of the risks. We were told over and over again. You weigh the risks and decide whether to go ahead."

Mrs. Morgan, who teaches third and fourth grades in McCall, Idaho, said, "I'm looking forward to seeing the Earth from another perspective."

"We had a terrible accident and I feel really badly about it, but our space program must go on," she said at a news conference.

Mrs. Morgan, 34, was in San Antonio for a speech at Trinity University.

The teacher said she has been asked many times how she can remain confident in the space program.

"The answer is I'm trained with these people at the Johnson Space Center. They are very competent people," she said.

Mrs. Morgan said she hopes to fly on the space shuttle within two years.

She said she worked with Mrs. McAuliffe on the lesson plans that were to be used in outer space classroom sessions on the ill-fated mission.

"They were good lessons and there are many reasons they should be taught from space," she said.

"As far as my goals for the teacher in space program — people see astronauts on TV and want to be astronauts. I was hoping people would see a teacher in space and want to be a teacher," Mrs. Morgan said.

The teacher said her students were very disturbed about the shuttle explosion, which killed six astronauts. In addition to Mrs. McAuliffe.

"They asked a lot of questions about the accident but they went on from there. The students see their future in space," she said.

Vollmer plans speech before Burley crowd to open today

BOISE — A special firewood area will open today, approximately two miles north of Idaho City.

Boise National Forest Supervisor Jack Lavin says the main reason for opening this area prior to May 1, the general firewood season opening, is to remove slash from the Lager Beer Timber Sale Area. The sale was harvested last December.

The pine engraver beetle, which inhabits slash and will move to surrounding live trees if the slash is not removed soon. Firewood users need only to be concerned about this beetle if they have ponderosa pine in their yards. The pine engraver beetle could move from the firewood gathered in this special firewood area to ponderosa pine in local yards. This beetle does not affect other trees.

The permits for this special area are a minimum of four cords for $10. Additional cords will cost $2.50 per cord, up to a maximum of 10 cords. The special firewood permit is good until May 1, when it becomes a general charge. Firewood permit applications are accepted at the Boise area forest office. Office hours are Monday through Friday, 7:30-11:30 a.m. and 12:30-4:30 p.m. Signs for the cutting area are posted along Highway 21.

Roads into the area are snow free and the firewood gatherers need not fear getting stuck, the Forest Service said in a news release.

BURLEY — Twin Falls Mayor Doug Vollmer will share the podium with Karl Tueller of the Idaho Department of Commerce at the Burley Area Chamber of Commerce's monthly meeting April 14.

The month-long meeting at the Burley Elks Club is directed at "Economic development for small communities."

Vollmer serves as Burley's representative on the Idaho Department of Commerce Advisory Board. A businessman and served as president of the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce 2 1/2 years prior to his appointment as mayor in January 1986, will discuss regional economic problems.

Karl Tueller is deputy director of the Idaho Department of Commerce and has an extensive background in public sector management in economic development. He is currently responsible for coordinating the department's major divisions: Development, International Trade, Community Development and Travel Promotion.

Vollmer will discuss the economic status of the region and the role of the Department of Commerce Advisory Board. He will also discuss the status of Idaho's Department of Commerce.

Arrangements to attend can be made by calling 678-7230. The public is invited.

CSI computer classes open

TWIN FALLS — Two computer classes have been scheduled this month by the College of Southern Idaho Continuing Education Department.

Word Star Word Processing begins April 10 and will meet from 6-9 p.m. Mondays in Vo-Tech Building 144 for five sessions.

Students will learn to prepare, rearrange and edit letters, formatted pages, tables and reports on an IBM computer. The fee is $47.50 and the enrollment will be limited.

Savage sale closes a door on ranch past

TWIN FALLS — A portion of Magic Valley history was sold off Friday morning at a sheriff's sale on the steps of the Twin Falls County Courthouse.

W.B. Savage Ranches, Inc., one of the oldest ranching operations in the Magic Valley, was sold to the Twin Falls Bank and Trust Company for $1,641,405. The ranching operation had accumulated $1,625,237 in debts and legal fees.

Most of the land which made up the ranch originally belonged to Utah Construction Company, which raised horses for construction work and cattle, said Fred Decker, attorney for the Savages.

The U.C. holdings, Decker said, originally extended from Elkton, Nev., to Monticello, Utah and up to the Snake River. W.B. Savage, he said, bought the original lands for his ranching operation near Kimberly in the 1930s.

While it was not the biggest ranch in the Magic Valley, it was "one of the earlier ranches" to use deep well irrigation in the Kimberly and Hansen areas. "At that time it was a real gamble," Decker said of the deep well irrigation.

"There were no members of the Savage family at the sale."

the parents. There seems to be some movement to dismantle the education system," he said. "It is currently being tested and examined closely. I hope it can survive the test because we need a public education system."

Instability was also a factor in Thornberry's decision to seek work outside the district, he said.

"I feel that the board basically gave me a vote of no confidence," the principal said. He said he feels there was no "justifiable reason" for the board's first decision not to renew his contract and its subsequent reversal.

Students of for the 1986-87 school year have resulted "in cutbacks in programs and the teaching staff in the district."

Gus Spiroulous, district superintendent, said he foresaw no difficulty in finding a replacement for Thornberry despite the current "crucial times" for Idaho schools.

"We received better than 50 applications and inquiries for the middle school principal's position last year," Spiroulous said. "Thornberry has done an outstanding job and we wish him well. I foresee no problem however, in finding a replacement."

Eckert, president of Friends of 412, a community organization formed out of concern for the district's financial situation, said he wished Thornberry well in his new position.

"I wish him luck in his new endeavors," said Eckert. "I hope Mr. Thornberry's replacement is a capable administrator who can work effectively and cohesively with the teachers of the community and above all, the superintendent and the board in addressing our current economic problems."

round of spontaneous applause from the audience, Beckman said the IRS has done "all kinds of criminal things against the people."

Beckman has written and co-written a number of anti-tax books including "The Law That Never Was" and "Do Unto IRS As They Would Do Unto You."

"The Law That Never Was," written by Beckman and Bill Benson, of South Holland, Ill., claims to prove that the 16th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and the personal income tax are unconstitutional.

"It will be the most important work published in this century," according to promotional literature passed out at the meeting.

Beckman said he was "recruited" into the IRS by the agency audit in the early 1970s. While most persons facing an audit are nervous, Beckman said that if the IRS announced they were going to audit his business, he would be "grilled" as he could be. "Boy I'm going to have some fun," he explained later that he would have fun at an audit because he is a public citizen and the "boss" of public servants such as IRS agents.

"Anyone who tells you 'I work for the government' is committing treason," Beckman said, because they are supposed to work for the people.

Although he did not explain it in great detail, Beckman said the 5th and 16th amendments provide ways for a citizen to legally avoid turning over documents and financial records to control the education system. "The key is to know how to use the law, Beckman said. 'They (the IRS) take advantage of what we don't know,' he said.

Beckman admitted that when he was first audited he "was as dumb as a post." He blamed his stupidity on public schools, saying, "I was a victim of government schools."

I know why the U.S. government tries to control the education system. If they can control the minds of the people then they can keep 95 percent of the people believing that when they defend the government they are defending the United States," Beckman said.

"The government and the United States are two different things," he said.

The IRS, the government and public schools were just a few of the things Beckman said he doesn't like. Others include: the news-media, "monstrous" religious groups, and

The Idaho rate was still better than the national statistic, which stood at 7.2 percent. About 28,800 Idaho workers were off the job last month, 800 more than in February. That is the average jobless rate expanded slightly. However, compared to a year ago, 2,000 more Idahoans had jobs.

The rise in the unemployment rate tended to underscore state projections that the average jobless rate for 1986 will top last year's 6.4 percent average.

"We provide people all the administrative rights we can give them," he said.

Local borrowers may be discouraged because local district directors, who make the decisions on loans, may be upset they could not obtain FmHA financing, Norberg said.

"There may be some real gripes. But, unless they want to get specific about it, I can't do anything about it," he said. "I've told these people time and time again to local area field offices. I want to know about them and I want to correct them."

Guthrie and Norberg have been on opposite sides of FmHA issues before. Guthrie is an advocate for FmHA borrowers, as well as head of the borrowers association.

Norberg said Friday his job is to protect the government's interests and to ensure the national policies and laws are followed. Local supervisors and district directors handle individual loans, he said.

The borrowers group also has not brought complaints to his superiors or possibly in writing, he said. Such as the Inspector General's Office of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Norberg said.

The Western Borrowers Association represents close to the farm and rural families in the Magic Valley, upper Snake River Valley and the Marsh Valley in southeastern Idaho.

Population tops 240 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are now more than 240 million Americans, the most in the nation's history.
Updated Census Bureau figures — not yet made public by the agency — indicate that the U.S. population reached 240,123,000 as of Nov. 1, according to Population Today, a publication of the private Population Reference Bureau.
Counted at 226,545,805 in the 1980 Census, earlier estimates had indicated the country would top 240 million last January.
But the Census Bureau adjusted its estimates last fall to include an estimated 200,000 annual illegal immigrants, and an estimated emigration of 160,000 annually. Neither had been included in past estimates and the change speeded the growth rate somewhat.

Debt tops $2 trillion mark

WASHINGTON (AP) — The national debt, which has doubled in the past five years, passed the $2 trillion milestone for the first time in history this week, the government said Friday.
The level was surpassed sometime Thursday. By the end of the day, the total debt owed by the government stood at $2,008,201,000,000, according to a summary of the nation's finances released each week by the Treasury Department.
The size of the debt — the result of an accumulation of deficits of deficit spending — came as no surprise to government officials, who anticipate that it will go even higher.
Thursday's level was $70 billion below the current debt limit set by Congress last Dec. 12 of $2,078,700,000,000.

U.S.-Soviet exchanges set up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two of the most important scientific organizations in the United States and the Soviet Union announced Friday they have signed a new cooperative agreement for bilateral meetings and exchanges of scientists.
The two-year agreement between the U.S.-National Academy of Sciences and the Soviet Academy of Sciences restores provisions of previous accords that were suspended by the Americans to protest alleged treatment of Soviet dissidents, and adds new programs.
The new agreement calls for meeting at least once yearly to discuss problems and opportunities in continuing cooperation and opens the door for more involvement by scientists from both countries.
Under the new accord, no limit is placed on invitations from individual scientists to colleagues in the other country.

Measles outbreak grows worse

LYNDHURST, N.J. (AP) — State officials faced with the nation's worst measles epidemic in at least three years urged health officers Friday to step up vaccinations of young children, warning that some could die if the disease continues its rapid spread.
More than 500 cases of rubella, or seven-day measles, have been reported in northern New Jersey since Nov. 15. State health officials Thursday declared a health emergency in seven counties.
The majority of victims are pre-school children, officials have said.
Of 70 hospitalized patients, 30 have developed pneumonia and one is suffering from encephalitis, a swelling of the brain, said Dr. William Parkin, an epidemiologist with the state Health Department.

Marcos says U.S. aided rebels

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos says the United States aided rebel military forces against him in the final hours of his regime, with Americans retreating and rearming helicopters that attacked his presidential palace.
In an interview on Friday night's broadcast of ABC's "Nightline," Marcos also denied stealing or misappropriating money from his country, said he still considered himself president of the Philippines, and defended his wife's collection of 3,000 pairs of shoes.
In the "Nightline" interview, Marcos said Philippines air force planes supposed to be used in the defense of his government were grounded at Clark Air Base, and that Americans were refueling rebel aircraft there.
Marcos repeated an allegation that the United States threatened to send in Marines if he escalated attacks on the rebel forces.
Last week in a taped message to the Filipino people, he made a similar assertion, which was called "absurd" by the U.S. State Department.

Leaks threat to nation, senator claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. David Durenberger said a recent leak of information by the Central Intelligence Agency action to undermine Libyan strongman Moammar Khadafi "can lead to increased Libyan terrorism against Americans and U.S. interests."
Durenberger said a recent leak of information by the Central Intelligence Agency action to undermine Libyan strongman Moammar Khadafi "can lead to increased Libyan terrorism against Americans and U.S. interests."
The problem of leaks is real and it stands as a threat to national security just as serious as spying against our government by a foreign power," Durenberger, R-Minn., said in remarks prepared for the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations. Copies of the speech were released in Washington.

Republicans took control of the White House and the Senate in 1981, "overt use of top-secret information on Soviet treaty compliance has increased substantially."
He recalled — Nov. 6, 1985, syndicated newspaper column citing alleged difficulties in monitoring compliance with arms-control agreements. That disclosure served the interest of one administration over another, as President Reagan prepared for talks with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, Durenberger said.
The overt use of leaks to discredit the verification process has no legitimate place in this crucial national debate" over arms control, he contended.
Presidential spokesman Michael Quest said Durenberger has made similar comments in the past, and "I don't think you should anticipate any comment from the White House on that."

Scientists say latest arms menace stability

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is developing an arsenal of nuclear weapons that will give it "first strike" capability and could undermine superpower stability by threatening the Soviet Union, according to a private study released Friday.
The study was done by the Union of Concerned Scientists, a private group which has in past years criticized Reagan administration policies on arms control and national security.
The study cited two weapons — either entering the U.S. arsenal or under development, including the Trident 2 missile for submarine-launched weapons and sea-launched cruise missiles.
Because the weapons are more accurate or more difficult to detect than the ones they are replacing, the U.S. ability to launch a first strike successfully is increasing, the UCS study said.

Both superpowers now rely on a policy of deterrence, which holds that each side is deterred from attack because the other side can't knock out enough weapons in a nuclear strike to escape a devastating counterattack.
Thus, according to most arms control specialists, actions which raise the specter of a "first strike" worry the other side and heighten tensions.
The Reagan administration has argued that the new weapons are needed to offset updated Soviet weapons and will contribute to stability because they will make the U.S. arsenal more secure from a Soviet first strike.
Rather than building weapons that will worry the Soviets, the UCS study said, the United States should construct an arsenal of "second strike" weapons that would be useful only for retaliatory purposes and would not have the military capacity to inflict a first strike.

The most important factor in the growth of leaks, the senator said, "is a pervasive attitude in some quarters in Washington that allows the long-term national interest to be subjugated to the opportunity for short-term political gain."
Durenberger said, "Every administration has faced the problem of leaks, but none so much as this one." Specifically, he said, since

Visa for Svetlana's daughter

LONDON (AP) — The British government issued a visa Friday to Josef Stalin's teen-age granddaughter to permit her to return to the West 16 months after being taken to the Soviet Union by her mother.

Svetlana Alliluyeva, mother of the American-born Olga Peters, took the 14-year-old girl to the Soviet Union in November 1984, apparently against her will. Miss Alliluyeva, 60, denounced life in the United States and said she wanted to live in the country of her birth.

There was no immediate word from Soviet officials on whether Miss Peters would be allowed to leave. But British officials said they believe she has a Soviet exit visa and will arrive in time to be ready for the new school term which starts April 16.

Gorbachev looks for summit

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said in a meeting Friday with two U.S. congressmen that he definitely wants a second summit with President Reagan—but left unclear when it might occur, the congressmen said.

Reps. Dante B. Fascell, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and William Broomfield, the committee's ranking minority member, met with Gorbachev in the Kremlin for nearly three hours.

The congressmen, speaking at a news conference before leaving Moscow, said they tried to pin Gorbachev down on what he wants from a summit, but that his response was unclear.

"He said that he's still interested, he still wants to go, that he feels confident we can get there, and that he would like something substantive out of it," said Fascell, a Florida Democrat.

Blacks die in new violence

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — A consular official from the Ciskei black homeland and a black woman were shot dead Friday and four more blacks were killed in attacks by other blacks, police said.

Also on Friday, the home of leading black South African businessman Sam Molsengane was gutted in a pre-dawn firebomb attack, nine days after his wife was arrested for leading a protest over police detention of black youths.

Three other homes were damaged in similar raids in the same community.

Police headquarters said Maetzuzell Jacobs, Ciskei's consul general in the central city of Bloemfontein, and a black woman were found dead near Allwal North, on the road to Ciskei on the Indian Ocean coast. Their car was missing.

Experts join in crash probe

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Foreign experts arrived Friday to help identify some of the 166 victims of Mexico's worst air disaster, and Mexican officials awaited more information about a claim in Lebanon that a "suicide martyr" caused the crash.

In Beirut, a statement delivered to news agencies claimed responsibility for the crash in the name of the Arab Revolutionary Brigades and the Egyptian Revolutionaries, saying it was the work of a "suicide martyr."

The note said the plane was sabotaged to retaliate for last week's U.S. military action against Libya.

The body of a second American, 51-year-old teacher Debra Roth of Cleveland, was identified by the government's Forensic Medical Service, U.S. Embassy spokesman Vince Hovance said.

Authorities earlier identified Peter Rivaud, 5, an American citizen who lived in Mexico City.

Nine Americans were aboard Mexicana's Flight 940 when the Boeing 727 crashed Monday 50 miles northwest of Mexico City, 15 minutes after taking off for Los Angeles. All aboard were killed.

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The Contadora group will press the five Central American countries to agree on a timetable to sign a peace pact during its meeting here today, according to Colombian Foreign Minister Augusto Ramirez.

Expected to attend the weekend conference are the foreign ministers of 13 Latin American countries.

Ramirez, speaking with reporters on his arrival in Panama City Friday, said Nicaragua, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Costa Rica would be asked to issue "unilateral declarations of mutual non-aggression."

The ministers also "must set a calendar for the signing of the treaty and, furthermore, guarantee the start of the procedures for national reconciliation in the Central American countries," he said.

Key topics on the agenda are expected to be the Reagan administration's request for congressional approval of $100 million in aid to Nicaraguan rebels and the reported incursion of Nicaraguan troops into Honduras last week.

Ramirez said the Contadora meeting comes "at a critical moment as tensions in Central America grow more serious."

The Contadora group of Panama, Venezuela, Colombia and Mexico was formed at a meeting in January 1983 on Panama's Contadora Island in an effort to end the Central American conflicts. A support group of Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay and Peru was established last year.

Foreign ministers of those eight countries and the five Central American nations were invited to the meeting here.

Nicaraguan rebels battling their country's left-wing Sandinista government have bases in Honduras and Costa Rica, and the United States accuses Nicaragua of aiding the leftist guerrillas fighting the U.S.-backed government in El Salvador.

Left-wing rebels also have been active in Guatemala for years.

Panamanian Foreign Minister Jorge Abadía Arias said recently that the Contadora group offers an appropriate stage for easing tensions between Nicaragua and the United States.

What's what

Q. You know those cows that wander through the streets in India? Do they have owners?
A. Most do. When the cows go dry the owners turn them loose to scrounge for themselves. But they always go back home again. And when they come fresh, the owners tie them up.

Q. What are "Waterloo teeth"?
A. Teeth extracted after the Battle of Waterloo from the bodies of dead soldiers. They were filled into dentures. Was a matter of some pride among wearers that they were the real teeth from once healthy young men.

INJURIES
Three-fourths of all athletic injuries occur during nine kinds of activity. Can you name them? Football, true. And basketball. Plus skiing, soccer, tennis, running, gymnastics and figure skating. That's eight. The ninth: dancing.

A tree with Spanish moss in its branches is well served by said moss. It isn't a parasite. It draws its nourishment from the air—By catching the rain and letting it drip slowly down to the tree roots, Spanish moss helps the tree, in fact.

Q. Is it true the rats are the first to know the ship is sinking?
A. They ought to. They live in the first-to-flood bilges.

SIBERIA
Q. Is Siberia as big as the contiguous United States?
A. About half as big.

Q. What was the first horror movie filmed in this country?
A. "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." In 1908.

"This is the last of earth. I am content." So said John Quincy Adams, sixth U.S. president, just before he died.

Gregory Peck will mark 70th birthday quietly, with family

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Facing his 70th birthday on Saturday, Gregory Peck reflects, "Even though it's a biblical number, I don't feel any different."

At three score and 10, the Oscar-winning actor remains little changed. The figure of Lincoln in the face as if carved in granite, voice mellow and reassuring.

He laughs at age: "When Tony Quinn passed the 70 mark last year, I sent him a telegram saying the (biblical) age is now four score and 10. And I subscribe to that myself."

Peck will celebrate the event in characteristic style: a quiet, family gathering at his Holmby Hills home. "Yes, we'll have a cake," he said, "but we might need to have someone standing by with a fire extinguisher."

Two favorite projects occupy Peck these days. One is a remake of "Dodsworth," a 1936 Walter Huston film based on the Sinclair Lewis novel.

"I hesitate to mention it because people say: 'Are you still working on that?'" he said. "It's true I have been trying to get it done for years, but I think we're on the right track now."

"The Producers Circle Company of New York is having a screenplay written, and we're putting the story back in the Roaring Twenties, which is how Sinclair Lewis wrote it. The Dodsworth movie placed the time in 1936 because it wasn't that much distant from 1927. We'll be able to have a livelier background of the Paris of Josephine Baker, Charles Lindbergh, the black bottom and the jazz club."

"You can't do a carbon copy of the original. Audiences' perceptions have changed, and we can be more candid. Films were much more conservative and puritanical in 1936."

The other Peck project is audio cassettes of the New Testament.

"My son, Stephen, and I did it as a 'castage' industry — entirely on spec," he said. "I took 14 months to record — it's a couple of million words, you know. Stephen, who is a documentary filmmaker, editor and sound expert, and I did it all in my log cabin high atop the original building back in the 1920s when it was a shooting lodge. The acoustics turned out to be marvelous."

The 16-cassette set, based on the King James version, was first taken by the Schuller Ministry of Anaheim, Calif., then the Sears catalogue. Peck recently returned from a publicity tour to St. Louis, Dallas and Richmond, Va., for Walden-Books, which is placing the set in 1,000 book stores.

"The response has been amazing," Peck said happily. "Recently I was returning from Palm Springs in rather slow traffic — I found myself riding alongside one of those huge, stainless steel 18-wheelers. I was sitting on the passenger side, and I looked up about eight feet and saw the truck driver smiling at me."

"He yelled, 'Hey, Greg, I've been listening to you read the New Testament all the way from Trenton.' He gave me the thumbs-up sign, and I told my wife Veronique, 'That's the best review I've ever gotten.'"

He was born Eldred Gregory Peck in La Jolla, Calif., crewed at the University of California at Berkeley and embarked on a stage career in New York. Coming to films during World War II, he immediately became a top leading man, his strong presence dominating the screen in any genre, from Westerns ("Duel in the Sun") to dramas ("Spellbound") to romantic comedies ("Roman Holiday").

The Oscar came for "To Kill a Mockingbird" in 1962, and he has led a drive to modernize the remained a stalwart figure in films stodgy organization.

as well as civic affairs — during his 1967-1970 presidency of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Told off-color jokes

Seniors give hook to vaudevillian, 72

EGG HARBOR TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — A former vaudeville performer has been banned from a lunch program for senior citizens because she irritated people with off-color jokes and a "bump-and-grind" dance routine, the program's director said Friday.

Agnes Lauria, 72, was first banned in November because of her antics, and on Thursday, the five-member council of the Egg Harbor Township Civic Center voted to continue the ban, said Adrienne Landgraf, the director of the nutrition project.

"She would mimic people, older people with disabilities, and she would use abusive language and obscene gestures," said Ms. Landgraf.

Prior to the vote, Lauria appeared before the panel and denied her behavior was offensive, saying she was thrown out of the center because people were jealous of her show business background.

Lauria is proud to show off a playbill that advertised her act as "A Bundle of Dynamite with a Cyclone of Songs."

She said she played the Palace Theater in New York City three times during her career. "They used to say if you played the Palace once you were a star," she said.

During the hearing, Thelma Emper, director of the township's

Senior Citizen Outreach Services, testified on Lauria's behalf, saying she helped disabled people at the center and would take them shopping.

"But Landgraf said the elderly trouper would also break into songs, tell dirty jokes and 'bump and grind' were part of her routine."

She angered so many of the participants at the senior center that some people threatened to walk out, said Landgraf.

"I admire the woman's feistiness. We tried to channel it," she said.

The county's nutrition program has offered to take Lauria to another senior center, five miles from her home in Mckees City, but she has refused, Landgraf said. The center here serves 80 to 100 people daily.

Following her ouster in November, Lauria complained to the state public advocate's office which sent a representative to the hearing.

"It seems there are two sides to the story, one has it she is simply an enthusiastic part of the program, another is that she is an obnoxious lady who sang and danced when everybody had stopped," said John Gleason, spokesman for the state agency.

None of the council members would discuss the vote.

Soviet girl recounts U.S. visit

MOSCOW (AP) — Katerina Lychnova, the 11-year-old Soviet girl who made a whirlwind tour of the United States, said Friday she was pleased with the celebrity she attained — disappointed with the food and frightened by the movie "Rocky IV."

Her trip, sponsored by the private San Francisco group Children as Peacemakers, was patterned after the 1933 trip to the Soviet Union by Samantha Smith of Manchester, Maine, who died in an airplane crash last summer.

Katerina, or Katya for short, returned to Moscow on Thursday after 12 days in the United States and a trip to Mexico City.

At a news conference Friday, Katya said the things that impressed her the most about the United States were "my" new American friends, "who accompanied her during her trip."

Asked how she liked American food, Katya said food in private homes was good but in restaurants "it has a real chemical taste to it."

At her meeting with President Reagan, she said: "I presented him with a toy on behalf of Soviet children — a big globe with a representation of white doves. Children can't creep around as long as nuclear weapons remain on earth ... The president replied that he was no longer a child but was dreaming of peace, too."

During her trip, Katya saw the movie "Rocky IV." She said she didn't like the way Soviet people were portrayed in the film, in which the hero fights a huge, villainous Russian boxer.

"I'd like to see that the Soviet Union and the Soviet people could be shown in that way ... It frightened me and upset me. I have never seen so much violence," she said, adding that she cried afterward.

But Katya also said that it was amazing and pleasant that strangers in the streets of Chicago, New York, Los Angeles, Houston and Washington recognized and welcomed me and gave presents to me."

Publishing partners will split holdings

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Whittle and Phillip Moffitt, whose publishing empire includes Esquire magazine, have agreed to separate as business partners.

Whittle and Moffitt, who is editor-in-chief of Esquire, said in an interview published in Friday's New York Times that they had agreed to divide their holdings in the 13-30 Corp., their specialty magazine publishing company.

A complex series of buyouts is scheduled for completion May 28. Whittle will become chief executive officer and a general partner of Whittle Communications, a reincarnation of 13-30. The group will include specialty magazines, sampling and newsletter services and "information content" services, frequently changed billboards in locations ranging from school corridors to doctors' offices.

Benson: Use Book of Mormon as basis

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Book of Mormon should be used as the basis for church instruction and in dealing with critics of the faith, Mormon Church President Ezra Taft Benson said Friday.

Benson, speaking on the eve of the 156th Annual General Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, sounded what likely will be a major theme of the two-day gathering.

Quoting church founder Joseph Smith, Benson described the Book of Mormon as "the most correct of any book on earth, and the keystone of our religion."

The book purports to be a history of ancient peoples in the Americas who are visited by Jesus Christ. Smith said he translated the book from plates of gold given him by an angel in upstate New York.

The book, one of four volumes of Mormon scripture including the Bible, brings people closer to Christ in two ways, Benson told the church's regional representatives at the Church Office Building.

"First, it tells in a plain manner of Christ and his gospel," he said. "Second, the Book of Mormon exposes the enemies of Christ" and "fortifies the humble followers of Christ against the evil designs, strategies and doctrines" of those enemies.

The book should be used "as a basis of our teaching" and "in handling objections to the church," Benson said.

The 86-year-old Benson, who has been the 13th president of the church for five months, said virtually all objections to the faith "hinge on whether Joseph Smith and his successors were and are prophets of God receiving divine revelation."

He said that since Smith claimed to have translated the book through divine revelation "whether or not we have modern prophets and revelation really depends on whether the Book of Mormon is true."

Benson said determining its authenticity could be accomplished by reading the book, pondering its message and then prayerfully asking God if it is true.

Snow slide delays highway opening

BOISE (AP) — The State Department normally closed through the winter months. A department spokesman said a Highway 21 from Lowman to Stanley slide 150 feet long and 40 feet deep was so filled with rocks and debris that work on clearing the road had to be suspended.

Officials said Friday that it could be as late as Tuesday before crews would continue to work on the slide over the mountain highway cleared, officials said.

Debris to go through Nebraska

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Radioactive material from the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant will be shipped through Nebraska this summer on its way to a federal laboratory in Idaho, said an official studying the Three Mile Island debris.

The Union Pacific Railroad will carry a single, 30-ton steel cask atop a railroad car through Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and Wyoming before stopping at a U.S. Department of Energy lab in Idaho Falls, a manager for the Three Mile Island program in Idaho Falls.

He said the cask will carry about 3½ tons of radioactive debris. The shipment will be the first of 40 over the next two years from the plant near Harrisburg, Pa.

The material, to be shipped starting about June 6, will be studied and then stored at the Idaho Falls lab until moved to a permanent, as yet undetermined Energy Department storage site, Young said.

Young said the debris to be shipped will include nuclear rods and other materials that melted and then solidified during the March 28, 1979, accident at Three Mile Island. The incident is considered the nation's worst commercial nuclear power accident.

Ramses II exhibit a hit, say officials

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Egypt's Ramses II exhibit, shown at Brigham Young University during its three-month American debut, has been a financial, educational and cultural success, officials say.

By Thursday, the exhibit had attracted its 500,000th visitor, with the count expected to rise by 20,000 before the doors close for the last time at midnight Saturday.

"It has obviously, in every way, exceeded our highest and most ambitious hopes, both in terms of the number of people who came and the tremendous response and reaction we've had from the Egyptians," said BYU president Jeffrey R. Holland.

Because of the response to Ramses and its financial success, Utah tourism and business leaders are talking of more exhibits and pledging support to the university.

"It's clear to me that with the success of Ramses II, the Egyptians want to do more," Holland said. "They have been as excited with the success of this as we have been, and want to talk to us about future exhibits."

Fred Ball, president of the Salt Lake City Chamber of Commerce, said in addition to the direct financial impact the exhibit has had on the area, the state probably has gained $1 million worth of free advertising and public relations.

The exhibit gave Utah "an exclusive air that can do nothing but say to people that we have something special here," he said.

No figures have been compiled on the exhibit's financial impact on businesses in Utah County, but Steve Densley, executive director of the Provo-Orem Chamber of Commerce, said local merchants have benefited.

CBS looks at movie project about killer Claude Dallas

BOISE (AP) — While law enforcement officers comb the northern Nevada wilderness in search of escaped killer Claude Dallas, a Hollywood producer is busy putting together a TV movie project about the elusive trapper and self-styled mountain man.

The proposed film will be based on "Outlaw," the first of two books written about Dallas, who fled from the Idaho State Penitentiary last Sunday. He was serving a 30-year prison term for the 1981 shooting deaths of two Idaho game wardens who were attempting to arrest him for poaching.

Jeff Long, author of the book released early last year, said in a telephone interview that CBS is expected to make a final decision in the next couple of weeks on whether to proceed with the project.

Dallas, 36, was captured after a gunfight in the northern Nevada desert in 1982. He had been on the run for 16 months since the shootings, the subject of a massive nationwide manhunt.

Dallas was charged with first-degree murder in the deaths of Fish and Game officers William Pogue and Conley Elms, but was found guilty of the lesser charge of voluntary manslaughter after defense arguments that the killings were in self-defense.

Gwen Edelman, Long's New York-based literary agent, said, "We're expecting it (the movie) to go through." She said shooting of the film could begin as early as June 1, with a broadcast date of "perhaps early fall."

Jerry London, who directed the "Shogun" television mini-series, will be both executive producer and director of the Dallas film.

Tony Krantz of Creative Artists Agency, Los Angeles, which represents London, confirmed Thursday that the film will be based on Long's work. He would say only that the movie "is in the development stages," refusing to discuss where the movie would be filmed or other aspects of the project.

Long also said it was his understanding that Pierce Brosnan, television's "Remington Steele," has said he would play the role of Dallas in the movie.

John Gay, who was commissioned to write the screenplay, said Thursday that the script was written to "let the audience decide if he (Dallas) is a hero or a villain." Gay also wrote the screenplay for the TV mini-series "Fatal Vision."

Jack Olsen, author of "Give a Boy a Gun," the second book on Dallas, said he had reservations about the proposed film.

"Outlaw" is essentially mythology, and for the movie people, mythology sells better than the truth," Olsen said.

Outlook much rosier for NL West

Editor's note: This is the third in a four-part series previewing the prospect of the major league baseball divisions this season.

By JOHN NELSON
The Associated Press

The pendulum of power in the National League is swinging back toward the West, and this division could provide baseball with one of its best pennant races in 1986.

"It's really changed," says Tom Lasorda, manager of the defending division champion Los Angeles Dodgers. "I believe each club in the division has improved. I definitely think it's stronger and more exciting."

With this added pressure from below, the job of repeating will be made doubly tough on the Dodgers. In fact, no team has repeated in the West since the Dodgers in 1977 and '78.

PETE ROSE
Big improvement

And it's not likely to happen this season. Despite having one of the best pitching staffs in baseball, the Dodgers will fall to Pete Rose's Cincinnati Reds, perhaps the most improved team in the division.

Last year, the Reds finished with a 74-86 record, but the Dodgers are getting the gap to four games late in the season. They were followed, in order, by Houston, San Diego, Atlanta and San Francisco.

This time the division will look more like this:

Cincinnati Reds
"I have too much respect for Tom Lasorda. I've got too much respect for Chuck Tanner (in Atlanta). I don't want to go out on a limb," Rose says. "But I'll be very disappointed if we don't win the West."

To that end, the Reds took aim at improving some serious pitching deficiencies during the offseason.

Lane Monroe, chief of the race and head coach of the Sun Valley ski team, Monroe placed by the West Germans, this time finishing 66 of a second behind Anette Gersch. Katrin Stolz, Gersch's teammate and Thursday's Super G winner, followed Madsen in third place.

U.S. women skiers earn six of top 10 NorAm slots

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — Members of the United States Women's Alpine Ski Team continued their strong showing Friday afternoon as the first events ended in the 1986 North American Trophy Series Finals.

Six American women, led by Beth Madsen, were among the top 10 in a field of 78 competitors. Madsen, a 21-year-old from Aspen, Colo., flashed down the slopes in 1:12.57 to repeat Thursday's second-place showing in the women's super giant slalom event. For the second consecutive day, Madsen repeated a sweep of the first two places by the West Germans, this time finishing 66 of a second behind Anette Gersch. Katrin Stolz, Gersch's teammate and Thursday's Super G winner, followed Madsen in third place.

Candace Stewart, who led the Cup in the international amateur-ski racing, hierarchy, is the first major international race at Sun Valley since the World Cup races 11 years ago. According to Harold Schoonhaar, Alpine Director for the U.S. team, the next one may come much sooner. "I'm glad to see Sun Valley back in it. They've been absent for a few years. I hope it's a step toward the big race. The United States is desperately looking for another alpine event — this may be the one."

The annual calendar of events to score for the Nor-Am is determined by the United States Ski Association and the Canadian Ski Association after consultation with the National Ski Teams. It is designed to meet the developmental needs of all parties concerned and seeks to schedule events when both the ski teams and provincial racers can be best represented. Even so, it's sometimes difficult to gather all of the world's best.

on his next attempt and failed to finish. Two other Vermont skiers, Michael Frost and Thursday's winner, Felix McGrath, turned in good second runs to become the only Americans to crack the first ten finishing sixth and eighth, respectively.

"The conditions couldn't be much better," said Shaw. "With the snow loosening up, it's probably an advantage to run in the world's best."

"Some aren't here because of injuries," said Corby Dibble, president of the Sun Valley Ski Club. "And a lot of these kids are so tired they've been racing for five weeks straight." These factors account for the absence of several members of the U.S. Women's 'A' team.

The men and women swap courses and events today beginning at 10 a.m. with the first run in the women's giant slalom on Warm Springs. The men run Super G and Grahawk starting at 10:30 a.m. Women's action resumes at 1 p.m. in the giant slalom.

In brief

Lyle takes 5-shot lead
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Sandy Lyle of Scotland, the British Open champion, used his massive strength to set up an 8-under-par 64 that propelled him with a 5-stroke lead Friday after the second round of the $500,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament. Jim Simons managed a 3-under-par 69 in the mild, hazy weather and held second at 139. Lyle's 5-shot lead represented the largest 36-hole margin in more than a year in the PGA Tour, since Galvin-Peete led by the same spread in last year's Phoenix Open.

Coeur d'Alene coach quits
COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Jim Clements, head football coach at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho for just one season, has accepted the head football coaching job at Pullman, Wash., succeeding the retired Ray Hobbs. Clements confirmed Thursday that he had accepted the job as head football and track coach. He applied for the position less than a year after moving from Coeur d'Alene from West Valley of Spokane, Wash. He led Coeur d'Alene to the Idaho Class A-1 championship last fall. Coeur d'Alene has scheduled a May override levy, which if it fails could lead to the elimination of all extracurricular activities and 40 teaching positions.

Player grievances filed
NEW YORK (AP) — The Major League Players Association confirmed Friday that it had filed a grievance to challenge the action taken against 21 players by baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth for their involvement with drugs. Although all of the players have agreed to abide by Ueberroth's ruling, in 11 cases to avoid suspension, the union "obviously has the right to file a grievance in its own name with respect to certain things," said Don Fehr, executive director of the players' union. All 21 players named by Ueberroth are required to undergo random drug testing for the rest of their careers, and 11 were also ordered to donate a percentage of their salaries to drug rehabilitation programs and to contribute a set number of hours of community service relating to fighting drug abuse.

Inkster, Bradley tied
RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Juli Inkster shot a steady 1-under-par 71 Friday to tie the Est. Bradley for the lead after the second round of the LPGA's Nabisco Dinah Shore. The 23-year-old Inkster, the tour's Rookie of the Year in 1984 and a playoff winner over Bradley in the Dinah Shore that same year, had opened the tournament with a 69. Bradley, the first day's leader with a 68, matched par-72 at Mission Hills Country Club for the second round.

Filer's Crown signs with UI

By The Times-News
MOSCOW — Filer High School senior Steve Crown has signed a national letter-of-intent to play football at the University of Idaho.

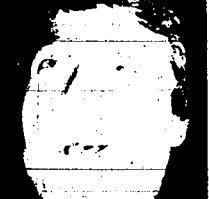

Filer, a first-team Idaho Statesman all-state offensive tackle last season, will receive a full-ride scholarship. "I really liked the school plus they offered me a really good deal on a scholarship," said Crown. "They said they might possibly reshield me my first year, but other than that plan on playing me at defensive tackle." Crown, who won a state Class A-3 wrestling championship this winter with a 30-0 record, had been considering attending Snow College before being contacted by Idaho. Crown had also been recruited by Boise State. While Idaho has no wrestling program, the 6-foot-3, 250-pound Crown will also compete for UI in track in field in the shot put and discus. He went to the state meet in the shot put in 1985. His career best throw is 45 feet, 11 inches.

Idaho also announced Friday that Mike Swindell of Boise's Capital High has accepted an appointment to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point and will not play football for the Vandals. Swindell had signed a national letter of intent with the Vandals. The military academies are not bound by letters of intent, allowing Swindell to play at Army, said UI offensive coordinator Bill Diedrick. "In one aspect we're disappointed, but yet we're happy for the kid," Diedrick said. Swindell, a 6-foot-2, 215-pound linebacker, was named all-state and all-league and was selected the National Scholar-Athlete of the year.

Long, long leap
Meridian's Jim Walto soars to 23 feet, 10 1/2 inches to win the long jump in a dual track meet between the Warriors and Twin Falls Friday at Bruin Stadium. Meridian handed the Bruins their first defeat of the season in both the boys' and girls' divisions. See story on Page B2.

Blatnick meets cancer a second round

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Jeff Blatnick, who tearfully exclaimed "I'm one happy dude" after overcoming Hodgkin's disease to win an Olympic wrestling gold medal in 1984, said Friday he is once again battling cancer. Blatnick said he underwent chemotherapy from last September to February after a biopsy revealed that a growth near his groin was cancerous. "I took the whole thing as a challenge," he said. "That's all cancer is — it's just another adjustment in my life." The 28-year-old Blatnick said he received his last chemotherapy injection at a Schenectady hospital on Feb. 14 — "on Valentine's Day. I he is now thinking of trying to resume his wrestling career."

JEFF BLATNICK
Olympic gold medalist

According to Blatnick, a CAT scan performed last week revealed that the growth he discovered in September had decreased in size since the chemotherapy began. Another CAT scan is planned in the next four to six months. If that one reveals no increase in the growth, Blatnick said he would consider the cancer in remission. "I really do feel good," he said. "And I'm noticing a definite improvement in my energy levels. My appetite and my fluid levels have greatly increased too." Blatnick, who is from Niskayuna, N.Y., has not wrestled competitively since the Olympics, when he captured the super-heavyweight Greco-Roman gold medal in Los Angeles. An interview immediately after the championship match, in which an ecstatic Blatnick became too choked with tears to talk, was one of the United States team's emotional highlights. Few people knew at the time that Blatnick had undergone radiation treatment and two operations after Hodgkin's disease was discovered in his neck in 1982. He said he was initially depressed when notified last September that the biopsy revealed the cancer had returned. "I cried when I hung up the phone," he said. Since the 1984 Games, Blatnick said he had been on the road virtually non-stop, conducting wrestling clinics and speaking at banquets.

Guerrero will be out at least three months

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The ruptured tendon in Pedro Guerrero's left knee was surgically reattached Tuesday and the slugger who paced the Los Angeles Dodgers to the National League West pennant in 1985 began a recuperation of about three months.

PEDRO GUERRERO
Not career-threatening

Guerrero, 29, who had two other serious leg injuries in his career, tore up the knee on Thursday while sliding into third base during the Dodgers' 8-5 loss to the Atlanta Braves in an exhibition game at Vero Beach, Fla.

"Everything went as planned," said Dr. Frank Jobe, who performed the surgery at Centinela Hospital Medical Center in Inglewood. "The area was drained at both ends — the kneecap and the shinbone."

Jobe said Guerrero would be hospitalized about three days and would wear a hinged brace for about six weeks. Physical therapy to keep other leg muscles active would begin immediately, he said.

The patella tendon injury is the same one suffered by Guerrero in 1969-70 pro basketball season by Wilf Chamberlain of the Los Angeles Lakers. After surgery, also performed by Jobe, Chamberlain missed 70 games but came back strong at every position in 1972 the Lakers with Chamberlain won their first NBA championship.

Jobe said the injury is considered serious, but not necessarily career-threatening.

Guerrero said Thursday on the flight back to Los Angeles that he is trying to put such thoughts out of his mind. "I don't want to go crazy now. When I broke my ankle, I thought I was out for good. I don't want to think that way. I'm a baseball player and they come back."

Bucs dump big-ticket item Thompson

By The Associated Press

The Pittsburgh Pirates committed to youth-and-to-cutting-costs unloaded three veterans on Friday, trading first baseman Jason Thompson to Montreal and waiving outfielder Sixto Lezcano and shortstop Johnnie LeMaster.

JASON THOMPSON
Deal to Expos

Rudy Law, Al Holland and Pat Sheridan also found new homes as major-league teams continued to trim their rosters to 24 players — the number that clubs have agreed to carry.

Law, waived by the Chicago White Sox this week, was signed by the World Series champion Kansas City Royals. Sheridan, who had been cut by the Royals, signed a minor-league contract with Detroit. Holland, signed by the New York Yankees as a free agent in the off-season, was sent to the minors.

Thompson, 31, has had three straight off-years since 1982, when he batted .284 with 21 home runs and 101 runs batted in for Pittsburgh.

He is in the fourth year of a five-year, $1 million-a-year contract signed after that big season. Pittsburgh general manager Syd Thrift said this week that the Pirates were willing to pay as much as $400,000 of Thompson's salary to a team accepting him in a trade.

Thompson, who hit 20 or more home runs for four straight seasons with Detroit in the late 1970s, was traded to California in 1980 and sent to Pittsburgh in 1981.

Last year, Thompson batted .241 with 61 RBI and a career-low 12 homers. Thompson suffered from problems related to a left hamstring pulled in May 1985 and played sparingly late in the season before undergoing arthroscopic surgery on his right knee Sept. 26.

This spring, Thompson hit .349, but had only one home run and seven RBI in 43 at-bats.

"He has an RBI history and he'll give us the hammer we've been looking for," Montreal General Manager Murray Cook said of Thompson, who has a career batting average of .282 with 288 homers and 778 RBI in 10 seasons.

"I checked with the Pirates' doctor and our doctors, and he's been given a clean bill of health," Cook said.

While the Pirates got rid of Thompson's big salary, the decisions to release Lezcano and LeMaster will be costly. LeMaster has two years remaining on a guaranteed contract worth $700,000 and Lezcano's contract, in its second and final year, is worth $400,000.

LeMaster, 31, is one of the major-league top defensive shortstops but a weak hitter. He played for three last-place teams in 1985 — the Pirates, San Francisco Giants and Cleveland Indians — and batted a cumulative .128 with one home run and eight RBI.

Lezcano, 32, hit .276 in 11 spring games, with no home runs and four RBI. He was hitting .346 in 11 spring games, with no home runs and eight RBI after batting only .207 in 12 World Series to getting released is a shock."

Lezcano, a 12-year veteran, had his best season in 1979, when he hit .321 with 28 homers and 101 RBI for the Milwaukee Brewers.

Law batted .259 with four homers, 30 RBI and 29 stolen bases in 1985 for the White Sox. This spring, he hit .382 with one homer, seven RBI and two stolen bases.

Law, 29, has a career average of .272 average with 214 stolen bases, including a White Sox record of 77 in 1983.

Sheridan will begin the season at Class AAA Nashville, but Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson said he would try to bring Sheridan to the majors within a month or so.

"I need somebody that can field, throw and run, and Sheridan can do that for me," said Anderson, who wants someone who can back up Gibson in right. "I don't care if Sheridan hits or not. He don't have to hit for me. I've got plenty of other people who can hit."

Sheridan, 28, batted .226 with three homers and 17 RBI in a part-time role for Kansas City last season.

Sheridan hit two home runs to help the Royals come back to beat the Toronto Blue Jays in seven games in the American League playoffs. He had four hits, including two doubles, as Kansas City beat St. Louis in seven games in the World Series.

"I think I've done well," Sheridan said. "To go from batting fifth in the World Series to getting released is a shock."

Reds' Browning holds off Cardinal ace Tudor

By The Associated Press

In a meeting of 20-game winners from last season, the Cincinnati Reds rode the strong pitching of Tom Browning and two runs batted in apiece from Tony Perez and Bo Diaz to a 7-4 exhibition baseball victory over the St. Louis Cardinals and Joe Tudor.

Browning, who was 20-0 last year as a rookie, allowed six hits over seven innings. He lost a shutout in the seventh on Jerry White's two-run double. White also had an RBI single in the ninth.

The Reds scored four runs in the first inning of Tudor, who was 21-8 last season. Singles by Eric Davis, Buddy Bell and Dave Parker produced runs in the first inning, followed by RBI single and Diaz added a sacrifice fly.

Perez took third on Diaz's fly ball and came home when catcher Mike Heath threw wildly for an error.

Doubles by Perez and Dave Conception of reliever Rich Buonananno made it 5-0 in the third. The Reds added a pair of runs in the eighth on Perez's RBI double and Diaz's single.

Elschworth on Friday, there were three shutouts: Kansas City blanked Pittsburgh 6-0, Boston romped past Houston 9-0, and the Chicago Cubs routed Cleveland 10-0.

Also, it was Baltimore 3, Minnesota 2; Philadelphia 7, New York Mets; Texas 8, Atlanta 4, and the Chicago White Sox 3, Detroit 1.

"In night games, it was California at Los Angeles and Montreal playing Montreal in Vancouver, British Columbia.

Phillies 7, Mets 5
Gary Redus hit two triples led a 18-11 attack that paced the Philadelphia Phillies over the New York Mets.

The Phillies broke a 1-1 tie in the fifth on an RBI grounder by Milt Thompson, a run-scoring single by Joan Samuel and Tom Hayes' RBI single. Philadelphia scored twice in the sixth on Redus' second triple, Thompson's single and a sacrifice fly by Mike Schmidt.

Mets starter Ron Darling, who had won his first three spring decisions, took his first loss. Darling gave up six runs on nine hits in six innings.

Royals 6, Pirates 0
"Jim Sundberg had three hits, including a two-out double that broke a scoreless tie in the sixth. Charlie Leibrandt and Steve Farr limited the Pittsburgh Pirates to seven singles, with Leibrandt pitching seven innings, giving up six hits, walking none and striking out one."

each drove in a pair of runs in the Royals' four-run eighth.

Red Sox 3, Astros 0
Boston ace Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd allowed the Astros only three hits in seven innings. Boyd surrendered first-inning singles to Eric Bullock and Denny Walling, but struck out two. He also had two hits and a seventh-inning RBI in Boston's 13th attack. After the first inning, Boyd faced the minimum 18 Astros over the next six innings.

Cubs 10, Indians 0
Shawon Dunston singled and doubled and severed the Cubs' three-run homer, giving him four RBI for Chicago. Brian Dayet, Keith Moreland, 2-2, and Bob Derriter each had two hits.

Ray Fountenot pitched five scoreless innings, surrendering four hits, striking out three and walking two. Dick Ruthven followed Fountenot with three scoreless innings, and Jay Baller retired the side in order in the ninth.

Twins 2, Orioles 3
Lee Lacy's leadoff home run in the top of the ninth won the game. Lacy hit reliever Ramon Romero's first pitch over the wall in left-center field for his second homer of the spring.

Minnesota 7, Greg Gagne had a solo homer in the eighth to tie the game 2-2.

Baltimore starter Mike Boddicker allowed five hits and one run in six innings. Ric Hemm in seven innings with the victory while Don Aase set down the Twins in order in the ninth to earn a save.

Rangers 8, Braves 4
Pete O'Brien hit two home runs and rookie Ed Correa pitched six innings of two-hit ball for Texas. O'Brien hit a two-run shot off David Palmer, 4-0 in spring play, in the fifth inning and got a solo homer in the eighth inning in the eighth inning. Correa allowed just one run.

The game featured a confrontation between brothers when Rick Mahler of the Braves batted against Mickey Mahler of the Rangers in the eighth inning. Rick Mahler fited out to right field.

White Sox 3, Tigers 1
Richard Dotson, coming back from shoulder problems, allowed one run and four hits in seven innings, while John Cangelosi scored one run and drove in another for Chicago. Cangelosi is a non-roster player who earlier Friday was told he would be the club's starting center fielder. Cangelosi is batting .332 and has stolen 18 bases in 18 attempts.

Gretzky breaks his own NHL single-season scoring record

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Wayne Gretzky of the Edmonton Oilers broke his own NHL record in a single season with his 50th goal of the night and 161st assist of the season at 7:10 of the second period against the Calgary Flames Friday night.

Gretzky set Jarl Kurri for his second goal of the night on a play almost identical to one at 17:44 of the first period on which the Oilers' center led the points mark.

Gretzky dug the puck out of the corner and flipped the pass across to Kurri at the edge of the crease for an easy goal and his 213th point of the season.

Earlier, Gretzky found Kurri parked at the edge of the goalcrease on a power play. Gretzky weaved through the net, as Calgary goaltender Mike Vernon moved over to cut off the angle. Kurri was left wide open for Gretzky's soft pass. It was Kurri's 66th goal of the season.

Journeyman coach Foster takes a long shot: Northwestern

CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Foster was named head basketball coach at Northwestern University on Friday and said he was confident of leading the struggling Wildcats to a winning season.

"I have not set any goals as far as wins and losses," Foster said at a news conference. Foster, 55, has posted 20 victory seasons at four Division-I schools, and has a career record of 413-268 in 26 seasons. He left South Carolina after compiling a 12-16 mark last season. Reviving Northwestern's program in the Big Ten Conference could be tough. "When you recruit, you look for quickness and talent," Foster said.

"We are hopeful we can recruit a player who can help us now." Foster began his college coaching career at Bloomsburg (Pa.) State in 1950. He then moved to Rutgers, where he posted six straight winning seasons and earned two National Intervention Tournament bids. Foster then went to Utah in 1972 and jumped to Duke three years later, reaching the NCAA Final Four in 1976, before losing to Kentucky in the championship game.

Falk was fired March 14 after eight seasons at Northwestern. His career mark is 76-146 overall, 30-114 in conference play. Northwestern was 0-20 and 2-16, respectively, last season and finished in the Big Ten cellar for the second straight year.

College basketball

"I think I'm capable of winning or I wouldn't be here," said Foster, who replaced Rich Falk.

NFL players won't stike over testing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mark Murphy, the vice president of the National Football League Players Association, said on Friday that the players would not strike even if Commissioner Pete Rozelle implements a mandatory drug testing program for this season.

Pro football

"The players would not strike," Murphy said. "We couldn't even strike if we wanted to, according to the terms of the collective bargaining agreement. But we will urge the players not to submit to any drug test not approved by the NFLPA."

Last month, at the NFL meetings in Rancho Mirage, Calif., Rozelle challenged the NFLPA to approve his plan for mandatory random drug testing or have it imposed unilaterally.

The NFLPA responded by unveiling its own plan to combat drugs. The program calls for stiffer penalties for repeat offenders and random testing of players who test positive for illegal drugs during pre-season medical exams.

White-Rozeelle and several league officials have blasted the proposed plan, Murphy said the union would not, under any condition, accept mandatory spot-checks of its players.

"The players feel that the union has taken on the responsibility for battling drugs with the program we devised," Murphy said. "It's a major step, and a workable program."

Currently, the collective bargaining agreement allows drug-testing at the opening of training camp and for "reasonable cause" during the season.

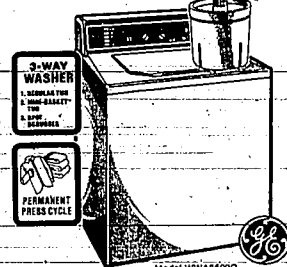

The proposed plan, unveiled March 19, will be presented to the league's 28 player representatives at an April 22 meeting in Hawaii.

Allstate increases premiums

DENVER — Allstate Insurance Co. has announced a 7.5 percent average increase in automobile insurance rates for Idaho policyholders. The higher premiums, which went into effect late last month, reflect larger costs. Claims payments are continuing to rise, the company said.

"The overall premium adjustment is the result of continued upward pressures on costs of items for which automobile insurance premiums pay, such as automobile repair parts, physicians' fees, hospital rooms and medical care generally," the statement said.

"The actual changes in premiums for individual policyholders will vary according to their locations, types of autos, driving records and insurance coverages.

Business conference May 13

BOISE — Small business owners in Idaho are being invited to participate in a White House Conference on Small Business May 13 in the Red Lion Riverside Inn at Boise.

Participants at the meeting, the second in Idaho, will discuss issues affecting small businesses and will elect delegates to a national conference scheduled in August.

Delegates at the national meeting in 1986 proposed about 60 recommendations, two-thirds of which subsequently were adopted by Congress or the president, said Karl Tueller, deputy director of the Idaho Department of Commerce.

Topics at the upcoming Idaho meeting will include economic policy, regulation and paperwork, payroll costs, international trade, the future of an agency for small business and others.

More information and registration are available by contacting the Idaho office of the U.S. Small Business Administration in Boise.

Walters receives scholarship

TWIN FALLS — Gina Walters, Jerome, has been awarded the Professional Secretaries International $200 scholarship by the organization's local chapter.

The scholarship is given annually to a student who is planning a secretarial career and is planning to attend the College of Southern Idaho during the coming year.

Walters is completing her one-year certificate in secretarial work with shorthand and is planning to major in word information processing next year.

She is the daughter of Riley and Ruth Walters, Jerome.

Sunshine sets stock dividend

DALLAS — Sunshine Mining Co. has announced a first quarter dividend of its cumulative redeemable preferred stock.

Shareholders will receive .0614 share of common stock for each share of preferred stock owned, company officials said.

The dividend is payable now to holders of record as of March-13. Although it had been declared, the exact amount of the dividend had to be computed.

Land law meeting in Missoula

MISSOULA, Mont. — The Public Land Law Review of the University of Montana School of Law will sponsor its eighth annual Public Land Law Conference on April 11, at the Village Red Lion Motor Inn, Missoula.

This year's conference is held in cooperation with the Federal Cartridge Corporation, the Student Division of the American Bar Association and the University of Montana Student Bar Association. Entitled "Water Quality & Conservation in the '80s," the conference will create a forum for issues in state and federal water law.

Admission to the conference, which includes lunch and a conference packet, is $75 for attorneys and $30 for the general public. Six CLE credits are available to attorneys.

The conference begins at 8 a.m. and concludes at 5 p.m. A no-host reception will follow the conference. Call the Public Land Law Review office (243-6568) for further information.

Selloff deals Dow record loss

By CHET CURRIER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market sold off sharply again Friday, leaving the Dow Jones Industrial average with its biggest weekly point loss ever.

Analysis said concern that oil prices and interest rates may have bottomed out and started climbing again helped prompt a rush to sell stocks.

They also said the futures-related selling in the week continued.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 27.18 to 1,739.22, bringing its loss for the week to 82.50 points. "That exceeded the previous record weekly decline of 59.08 points set Oct. 16-20, 1976, in the midst of what came to be called "the October massacre" on Wall Street.

But in percentage terms, the average's 1.53 percent loss for the week was nowhere near a record.

Friday's volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 147.27 million shares, against 148.23 million in the previous session.

Sharp selloffs in the market Tuesday, Thursday and again on Friday were attributed in large measure to selling by program traders engaged in multiple transactions involving index futures contracts and individual stocks.

However, analysts also said the general market was weighed down by rising oil prices and interest rates.

Early this week, crude oil futures on the New York Mercantile Exchange slid below $10 a barrel. By Friday's close, the contract for May delivery rebounded to $12.74.

Prices of long-term government bonds, after a brief rally early in the day, also lost more ground.

In the economic news, the government reported that the civilian unemployment rate dropped one-tenth of a percentage point, to 7.2 percent, in March. This was taken as a sign that the pace of economic growth remained sluggish.

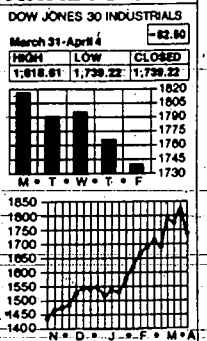

Friday's point-plus losers among the blue chips included Merck, down 6 1/4%; International Paper, down 2 1/4%; and General Electric, down 1 1/2%.

Business Machines, down 1 1/4% at 148 1/2.

American Express fell 2% to 6 1/2% following word that losses in the market are expected to reduce the company's earnings for the first quarter. Despite that situation, the company said it expected to report record net income for the period.

Airline issues slumped as investors showed worry that losses in the market would reduce the industry's benefit. United Airlines dropped 1 1/4% to 53 3/4, AMR 1 to 53 3/4, and Delta 3/4 to 43 3/4.

MARKET ANALYSIS

Idaho building surge continues in February

BOISE — Idaho showed a substantial boost in construction during February, with both homebuilding and nonresidential projects continuing a fast pace begun in January.

Building permits for new dwelling units went up 14.3 percent, and the value of the permits rose 11.3 percent to $8.8 million compared to February 1985, First Security Bank of Idaho reported in its monthly construction survey.

Nonresidential construction also turned up, more than doubling the month's total for February 1985 at almost $6.2 million.

Activity in alterations and repairs accounted for 3.5 percent of the total but still accounted for $5.3 million, First Security reported.

The first two months of the year easily have outpaced the same period in 1985. Total construction for the first two months of the year was calculated at $42.3 million, up 45.1 percent.

"Presidential" building showed the highest percentage gain at 243 percent. Residential construction rose 10.3 percent. To date, permits for 320 new dwelling units have been issued in the 56 major cities and counties surveyed by First Security, according to the report.

"Sharply lower financing costs have accelerated the anticipated pace of construction so far this year," said Kelly K. Matthews, First Security economist.

"The abrupt decline in mortgage and bond rates is tied closely to the oil price plunge," he said. "Future prices may stabilize near current levels, Matthews suggested.

Some charitable deductions passed by

Even if you don't itemize your charitable deductions (Schedule A, Form 1040), the tax law permits you to take a limited deduction on your 1985 return of 50 percent of your contributions.

Second in a series

"And whether or not you itemize, you'll want to claim every charitable contribution to which you're entitled," stresses E.J. Warach, a top editor of Practical Tax.

Here's a list of often-overlooked charitable deductions:

1. Amounts you pay over and above regular membership dues to charitable organizations — say, for a sustaining donor or life membership — generally are deductible.
2. Regular dues to charitable organizations may be deductible if your membership privileges are merely nominal and you aren't entitled to any special services.
3. Dues you pay to a social club may be partly deductible as a charitable contribution if some of the dues are earmarked by the club for certain charities. You take the deduction either in the year the club turns over the funds to charity or, if the club treasurer is a collection agent for the charity, in the year you pay your dues.

night rendering volunteer services.

"The only pocket expenses you incur on an official convention are a charity-sponsored devotional are deductible.

*8. Now, suppose you make a non-cash gift to charity. It could be an antique, or even a car. Here's how you handle your donation on your return? The answer: How much is the property worth?

*9. Gifts of less than $500: You should get and keep a receipt from the charity showing where and when you made the donation, and a description of the property you gave. A receipt isn't required where it's impractical to obtain one. Whether or not you have a receipt, you should also keep a written record for each item of property showing its fair market value at the time of the gift and how you arrive at the estimate of appraisal. Your record should also include a description of the charity's use of the property.

You claim your deduction for a gift of less than $500 on Schedule A, Form 1040. You need not describe the gift in an attached statement.

*10. Gifts in excess of $500, but less than $5,000: You're required to obtain a receipt and keep the same sort of records needed for an under $500 gift. In addition, you must also keep a written record showing: a) when and how you acquired the property (purchase or gift), and b) how much the property cost.

You claim the deduction on Schedule A, and are required to supply details about your gift on Form 8283, which must be filed with your return.

*11. Gifts in excess of $5,000 (if closely held stock): You need them in all elements of proof for smaller contributions, plus a formal appraisal of the property's fair market value at the time of the gift. You must also file Form 8283 with your tax return for the year in which you claim a deduction for the gift. Special requirements: Page 2 of Form 8283 must be completed. This page consists of a signed acknowledgment from the charity that it received the gift; a detailed description — completed by you — of the property; and a signed certification of the appraiser.

Manned caboose nears end of track

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - The little red caboose may have a permanent place in the hearts and minds of generations of Americans...

The workers who monitor trains progress from cabooses say such railroads companies say there is longer a place for it in the real world of business.

The Nebraska is one of five states - the others are New Mexico, Montana, Oregon and Virginia - that require a manned caboose on some trains.

In the current session of the nation's only non-partisan, one-house legislature, the state's major railroads are pressing to have the law - which mandates cabooses on trains 1,000 feet long and longer - repealed.

Opposing repeal, along with railroad workers, are the state's fire marshal and the organization representing the state's myriad volunteer firefighters.

The Legislature gave the repeal bill initial approval last week, but it will survive two more votes before it can be passed and sent to Gov. Ben Rayburn.

The three major railroads operating in Nebraska say studies show that the caboose has outlived its usefulness, that it doesn't provide a significant safety factor and that maintaining it costs millions of dollars annually.

"It's not a safety issue," Union Pacific Railroad Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Drew Lewis said Tuesday, his first day on the job.

Lewis, 173, secretary of transportation from 1981 to 1983, said the issue was an economic one and called the law "repressive."

"Joe McCartney, a spokesman for the Union Pacific in Omaha, estimated that cabooses cost the Union Pacific and Burlington Northern about $6 million a year.

"The three railroads have a bit of clout in the state, part of the busiest railroad corridor in the nation."

In 1985, the Union Pacific Railroad, Nebraska's largest private employer, employed 6,800 people with an annual payroll of $248 million.

"The fact that the other states don't require a caboose doesn't make them right," says Ray Lewis, the soft-spoken lobbyist for the UTU.

"The conductor doesn't see a fire starting on the right of way, if a conductor doesn't see the crossing is blocked, and there is an emergency, if the conductor doesn't see the track being torn up, it isn't going to be seen until something awful happens ... and a lot of awful things can happen before that."

The conductor, Linebeber says, monitors the train's activity. He looks for problems that the engineer can't see. He keeps the engineer informed by radio. A train more than a mile in length can block two-country road crossings. Farmers and ranchers often complain of delays in moving livestock and crops.

McCortney said studies by a presidential commission and by federal agencies have shown that cabooses provide no significant safety factor.

Asked to comment on incidents cited by Linebeber, McCortney said, "Some of these stories are interesting and that's about it. I can tell you that we have had accidents where people ran into cars just ahead of the caboose and no one noticed it."

McCortney said the unions "negotiated away" requirements for cabooses and have begun going to state legislatures to have them mandated by law.

The railroads say that monitoring devices can provide sufficient safety on freight trains. Such devices raise the air pressure in brakes, tell the engineer when the train is moving and provide other information.

Linebeber says the railroad "just isn't telling the truth when they say they have these sophisticated telemetry devices ... they don't have them and they can't install them, as a practical matter, and make them work."

"The real issue is money," Linebeber said. "The railroads want to get rid of the thousands of jobs that are involved with the cabooses."

"They want to dump the jobs, they don't care about safety and they have never shown anybody where the jobs are going to go," said Sen. James Pappas of North Platte, a major railroading town.

State Sen. Sandra Scofield, whose district is in the heart of railroad country, has proposed an amendment that would allow the state's Public Service Commission to require cabooses if an investigation shows a clear need based on safety considerations.

The railroad opposes the amendment. Linebeber contends their opposition proves "that they don't want their safety record to be an issue ... because their records show they need cabooses."

First Security reaches subsidiary-sale accord

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - First Security Corp. has agreed in principle to sell its mortgage banking subsidiary to Crossland Savings of New York.

First Security Realty Services and First Security Realty Services (West), wholly owned First Security Corp. mortgage origination and servicing subsidiaries, headquartered in Salt Lake City and Portland, Ore., respectively, operate in 10 states.

Spencer Eccles, First Security president, said Thursday "the decision to sell our mortgage subsidiaries at this time when the market for mortgage companies is strong complements and strengthens First Security's long-standing Interstate expansion strategy."

"Although our mortgage banking subsidiaries were originally acquired as a vehicle for interstate growth, a recent Supreme Court decision and changes in banking legislation in several western states permitted First Security to shift its expansion strategy from mortgage banking to one of acquiring western commercial banks," he said.

The sale is subject to preparation of a definitive agreement and approval by boards of First Security and Crossland.

THE ACES BOBBY WOLFF

Men are more like the time they live in than they are like their fathers. All Inn-Att-Talk.

Not too long ago, all bids of four no-trump were regarded as Blackwood... Against five clubs by West, North-South can manage only three tricks...

East won the club ace and shifted to a diamond, daring Gloria to finesse... She refused the finesse and won the ace instead...

Send bridge questions to The Aces, P.O. Box 12383, Dallas, Texas 75215, with self-addressed stamped envelope, please.
