Libya raid spurs reprisals, menaces summit

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House on Tuesday proclaimed U.S. air raids on Libya a success that "struck a blow against terrorism" — but the attacks were followed by a new incident of violence against an American — the shooting of an employee in the U.S. embassy in the African nation of Sudan.

The bombing raids may have put in jeopardy plans for a U.S.-Soviet summit meeting this summer. The Soviet Union called off a mid-May meeting at which arrangements for a summit were to have been made.

President Reagan, speaking before the Khartoum shooting, told some businessmen "the United States won't be a single engagement in the long battle against terrorism" and pledged to continue with more strikes if necessary.

"We would prefer not to have to repeat the events of last night," he told a group of business executives. But he said that would be up to Libyan leader Muammar Khadafi, whom he labeled an arch-terrorist.

"What is required is for Libya to end its pur-sult of terror for political goals," said Reagan. "The choice is theirs."

The State Department said the Khartoum embassy victim, whose identity and occupation were not disclosed, was hospitalized in serious condition with a gunshot wound to the head. He was initially identified as a diplomat, but the State Department said later that was wrong.

A spokeswoman, Anita Stockman, said U.S. officials did not know who was responsible and no group claimed responsibility. National Public Radio said an administration source said it was thought Libya was involved.

In Khartoum, about 200 demonstrators shouting "Down, down U.S.A.!" marched through the streets Tuesday protesting the U.S. air raids on Libya.

Last November, the State Department brought home some U.S. personnel and their families from Sudan because of the presence of Libyan terrorists in Khartoum. Americans were advised to stay out of the city.

Libya, in apparent retaliation for the air raid, fired at a U.S. Coast Guard installation on a tiny Mediterranean Island 175 miles off the Libyan coast.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the nighttime U.S. bombings "successfully accomplished" their twin objectives of damaging Khadafi's ability to perpetrate terrorism and showing him the United States would strike to punish him for past attacks on Americans and to pre-empt future ones.

An air and sea search was being made for an Air Force F-111 fighter-bomber and its two-man crew missing after the Monday night attack. The Pentagon identified the missing airmen as Capt. Fernando L. Ribas-Dominicci, 33, of Puerto Rico, the pilot; and Capt. Paul F. Lorence, 31, of San Francisco, the weapons system officer.

Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims said rescue planes continued to search over the water off Libya after dark Tuesday but had found "no evidence of survivors, no beepers, no strobes" to indicate where the lost plane went down.

He said the search-and-rescue operation was not drawing fire and no other U.S. forces were in the area.

Postal worker George Cridler removes mail, much of it tax returns, from mailboxes on Second Avenue West in Twin Falls. Cridler said the post office had to make three or four extra pickups on the street boxes Tuesday to keep up with the flood of federal and state tax returns being mailed ahead of the April 15 deadline. Nationwide, an estimated 10 million tax returns were filed on the last day.

Robbins steps out of contest for Congress

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — State Rep. Gary Robbins of Dietrich, the Republican congressional candidate who peddled beans and popcorn door-to-door across 2nd District last summer to support his campaign, announced Tuesday he is withdrawing from the race.

Having raised and spent about $20,000, most of it "bean money," Robbins said he isn't getting enough contributions to run his campaign right and wants to get out before he has to spend his own money. "I'm not going to spend my own money and go into debt for a political race,"

He said his grass-roots approach has worked well so far, but the next step would have been too expensive, he and his wife, Ina, said Tuesday. "What we found out is the 'bean man' has good identification and the image is out there, but in order to complete it, it costs money. If you have to spend your own money, you're not a good candidate," he said.

Jeri said converting the "bean man" image to name identification would take more money than Robbins is collecting.

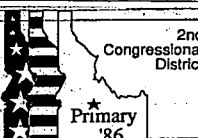

But, bowing out of the congressional primary does not spell the end of his 1986 political career. Robbins announced Tuesday that he will seek re-election to his current seat in the four-county district that includes Blaine, Camas, Gooding, and Finclove Counties.

He said he is not endorsing any of the other candidates in the race because it is not his decision. "I think that's the people's decision to make," he said. "I don't want somebody selecting my candidate... they'll just have to take a look."

He said his opponents had all worked hard and he didn't want to undercut that work. Robbins cited two main problems with his campaign: his "lack of political savvy, and the nature of the moderate Republicans who he says supported him.

"They're the silent majority; you really have to do something to get them mad to get them out. If I could have done something to get them out, I would have won the race."

Robbins said he was also too late in going through the Republican primary structure to gather support for his campaign. "The party structure is an important factor. I approached it (with the idea) create a candidacy and then go to the party. But Robbins said that by the time he approached the party leaders they were already tied to other candidates.

Reagan loses skirmish over Contra aid

By LAWRENCE L. KNUXTON
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan lost a key battle over aid to Nicaragua's Contra rebels Tuesday night. The House rebuffed a Republican bid to separate the aid proposal from a spending bill Reagan may choose to veto.

The House, in a near party-line 221-202 vote, rebuffed an attempt by furious Republican leaders to substitute new ground rules for ones imposed by the House Democratic leadership. The rules drafted by the Democratic majority on the House rules committee were then approved in a narrow 212-208 vote.

Republican leaders said the decision to tie the Contra aid plan to an unrelated $1.7 billion supplemental appropriations bill was a blatant political move designed to kill the aid program and leave the rebels with no U.S. support of any kind.

But Democrats said the GOP should be grateful for a second chance of obtaining aid for the anti-Sandinista guerrillas in light of their 222-210 defeat on the issue last month.

Only one Republican joined 220 Democrats to oppose Reagan's position. Twenty-seven Democrats and 175 Republicans supported the White House.

Earlier, President Reagan implored the House to approve $100 million for the rebels in Nicaragua, saying "Libyan leader" Muammar Khadafi has sent weapons and advisers there to "bring his war home to the United States."

As the House opened consideration of Reagan's request for military and other assistance for the rebels the president told a group of business executives that Khadafi "has bragged that he is helping the Nicaraguans because they fight America on its own ground."

In the moments before the vote, House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois said the decision by the House Democratic majority to link Contra aid to the money bill that President Reagan would like to veto is an example of "aren't-we-clever political trickery" that threatens to doom the aid plan.

"They have hounded the issue of contra-aid in the pork palace," Michel said in a derisive reference to the supplemental appropriations bill which Republican content is stuffed with unnecessary spending programs.

Twin Falls city pays county clerk $80, says matter closed

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls has paid $80 of the $945 charged by County Clerk Richard Pence for the Nov. 7 city election and its now, considering the matter closed, said city Finance Director Rick Thompson Tuesday.

The unpaid charges include a bill that requests payment to Pence for work the evening of election day, part of which he spent at a dinner unrelated to his election work.

"Pence asked the city to send $150 to his home for 15 hours he spent outside normal office hours working on the city election and $35 for mileage on his personal vehicle. The hours he worked include "Saturday and election day 5 p.m. to 8 p.m.," he wrote on a bill sent to the city in March to clarify earlier bills.

He said Tuesday that he had attended a Supreme Court dinner the evening of Nov. 5, election day. However, the total is $945 because he billed the city for only part of the time he actually worked, he said.

"That was an estimate of time," he said. "I didn't have a time clock. I don't run by time clocks, so I don't have any way of knowing the exact time."

He said he spent only half an hour at the 6 p.m. dinner, then worked to 10 p.m. on election day. "I worked for them from 5 to 10, which is five hours and only charged for three," he said.

Fifth District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt, when questioned, said he sat by Pence that evening. He remembers Pence eating dinner but leaving before the program was completed, he said. He estimated that Pence stayed until about 7:30 or 8 p.m.

"It was an important meeting, and Dick was gracious enough to attend, even though he had election responsibilities," Hurlbutt said. The dinner to discuss court delays was attended by elected judges and county clerks in the district.

Whether or not Pence attempted to charge the city for time he was at the dinner had no bearing on the city's decision, said City Manager Tom Courtney.

"We made the decision because he did not have a contract, and the work was part of his job duties," he said. He and Thompson decided to send the county $80 after the City Council discussed the bills in a closed meeting.

The check for $80 covers the cost of stationery and other supplies that were purchased by the county specifically for the election, Thompson said. The check is payable to the county.

The city paid none of the $185 Pence asked to be sent to his home and none of the $150 Pence asked to pay to maintenance worker Larry Haycock, who helped with the election.

The city also did not remit $420 charged in a third bill, payable to the county. The unpaid charges include $220 for the labor of three people and use of a truck and fork lift. He has maintained that the work is clearly in voting machines; $80 for two men four hours reprogramming two county employees during business hours and $120 for six hours of work by Pence said he and the County Board of Commissioners would discuss what step the county should take next.

Commissioners Ann Cover and Marvin Hempleman were at an out-of-town meeting Tuesday afternoon. The remaining commissioner, Judy Felton, said she wanted to see the bills and discuss the matter with the other commissioners before commenting.

At the core of the issue is whether Pence was performing his job duties when he helped with the city election. He has maintained that the work is clearly in voting machines; $80 for two men

Suspect not known until bombing, victim's spouse testifies

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Gary Sheets testified Tuesday he had never heard of Mark Hofmann before police made the Mormon documents dealer their chief suspect in the bombing deaths of Sheets' wife and a former business associate.

Sheets testified on the second day of a preliminary hearing before 5th Circuit Judge Paul Grant, who will determine whether Hofmann should stand trial on two counts of first-degree murder in the deaths of Kathleen Sheets and Steven Christensen.

Prosecutors contend Hofmann plotted the Oct. 15 murders because he feared Sheets and Christensen would expose an alleged scheme to sell fraudulent historical documents. Hofmann, who sold some 47 documents to the Mormon Church, also is charged with 30 counts of fraud, theft by deception and bomb-making.

Sheets, who police believe was the bomber's intended victim, was cross-examined by defense attorney Ronald Yenglich. Sheets said he and Christensen had discussed publishing a book based on a controversial 1830 letter Christensen had purchased from Hofmann for $40 and $50. "The white salamander" letter, which contradicts official versions of the Mormon Church's beginnings, is considered by historians to be one of

MARK W. HOFMANN
Listens to proceedings

Hofmann's most "exceptional" finds, although his authenticity since has been questioned.

Sheets said he and Christensen, both Mormon bishops, hired two historians and a research specialist to study the letter and paid them with funds from their corporation, J. Edgar Sheets and Associates. But Sheets said he did not know Hofmann and had little interest in Mormon historical documents. "I was not interested in that type of thing like eleven was," Sheets said. He expressed surprise when informed by Yenglich that Hofmann was a business associate of Brent Metcalfe, the researcher hired to help authenticate the letter.

That would shock me. I wasn't aware of it," he said. Yenglich also focused his questions on Sheets' relationship with Christensen in CFS Financial Corp., Sheets' financial services company. Christensen was a vice president until August 1985 when Sheets asked him to leave after they disagreed over whether the company could survive.

However, Sheets said his relationship with Christensen, who believed CFS would fail, remained cordial.

Sheets, CFS founder and president, said he knew little of the "Phoenix Committee," which he said apparently was formed by some CFS employees to work out the company's problems. He said he had heard Christensen refer to the committee, but was unsure whether it actually existed or was simply a term for some official company committee.

Christensen, 31, was among five top CFS officers for whom the company took out life insurance policies early in 1985, naming CFS the beneficiary. Sheets said CFS was paid $500,000 after Christensen's death, money that went into the firm's subsequent Chapter seven bankruptcy.

Sheets said he had a $5,000 policy on his 50-year-old wife.

Salt Lake County Sheriff's Detective Jerry Thompson identified a green and gray letterman's jacket as the one he took from a closet in Hofmann's home following the bombings.

On Monday, Bruce Passey identified Hofmann as the man in the green and gray letterman's jacket and carrying a package that he shared an elevator with in the downtown Justice Building shortly before the bomb that killed Christensen exploded on the sixth floor.

Thompson also identified pieces of wire, flashlight batteries and galvanized pipe taken from the scene of the bombing that killed Mrs. Sheets. He said the materials had been collected from the driveway of her home and from the victim's body during an autopsy.

He said the explosion caused wounds to her left arm, left shoulder and left side of her chest and stomach. Thompson said a purse was still looped about her arm when he arrived at 11:30 a.m. and found her lying by the southwest corner of the garage.

The detective said a piece of cardboard had the words "Mr. Gary" written on it in black marker.

Another witness, Aaron Teplick, 13, testified that he saw a gold-colored Toyota van near the Sheets home the night before Mrs. Sheets picked up a package in her driveway, touching off a pipe bomb.

Republican leaders on Saturday, Robbins filed for the place and name. Dan Watkins, R-Idaho Falls—Watkins has been better-financed than Robbins; using family money.

Idaho Falls radio broadcaster Mel Richardson won, followed by state Sen. "Chad" Chaudband, R-Idaho Falls.

Trailing Robbins and Watkins were Connie Hansen, wife of former 2nd District Rep. George Hansen, and Jerome attorney Dan Adams.

Days after recent critics of the Republican Party as being controlled by Mormons, Robbins made a strong straw poll showing in the heavily Mormon section of southeast Idaho, where he won 11 votes, just four less than Richardson, who is a bins' withdrawal would have, "I don't know where his supporters will go. . . We'll welcome them," she said.

Adamson said he was surprised Robbins was leaving the race. "He seemed like he was going to stick it to the very end," Adamson said, noting that Robbins had pushed his farm, background and might have support among farmers that could now fall to Adamson.

Richardson said Robbins' withdrawal might help his campaign. "I would certainly hope so. . . We were working on some of the same people in that area. . . I was a bit surprised. I really like Gary and I wish him well," in his race for his old seat. Richardson said he would welcome help from any Robbins supporters.

Robbins faces a challenge for his legislative seat from Eugene Sullivan, a Fairfield Democrat who Robbins beat by about 1,300 votes in 1984.

the area, despite Libyan reports of a terrorist attack. The Soviet Union, responding to the bombing raids, called off a planned meeting next month between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, casting doubt on plans for a second summit this year between the leaders of the two countries.

The White House called the Soviet decision "a mistake." Shultz and Shevardnadze have discussed other arrangements for Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's visit to the United States to meet with Reagan, a trip the two leaders agreed to last November but for which no date has been set.

Speakes said, "The Soviet decision shows where they stand on the important issue of international terrorism. It also says something about their commitment to work constructively on issues on the U.S. Soviet agenda, including arms reductions and regional crises."

Barely 15 hours after the bombing of targets in and around Tripoli and the western part of Benghazi, Libya, announced a retaliatory strike of its own against a U.S. telecommunications station on the tiny Mediterranean island of Lamposuda. "I was not interested in that type

The spokesman, Nicholas Sandifer, said a report from the island indicated the missiles landed in the water just off the island, causing no damage or casualties.

Speakes said the United States was still assessing the situation and he could not say what the response might be. He said there were 31 Coast Guard personnel at the long-range navigation site and that they had no weapons other than personal small arms.

separate from his duties as the elected county clerk and compared it to "free-lance" work. He asked that the city reimburse the county for work he did during business hours and that he be personally reimbursed for weekend and evening hours.

He made a verbal contract with the city in 1979 to help with elections when "three" county machines are used, because the county clerk is responsible for these rather complicated machines and the only qualified technician available for their programming and transport," he wrote in a letter to Thompson in February.

City officials have maintained they had no contract with Pence for the 1985 election.

City Attorney Shane Bengoechea said he believes Pence's work on the election was clearly related to his duties as county clerk. Idaho law gives the responsibility of acting as chief election official of each county to the respective county clerk, Bengoechea said.

"The Idaho Constitution prohibits county officials from charging for work related to their duties, he wrote in a memo to the council.

Pentagon says Libya raid damaged terrorist headquarters

By NORMAN BLACK
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Air Force and Navy bombers successfully attacked all five of their targets inside Libya, destroying planes and hangars and causing serious damage to the main headquarters of Libya's terrorist organization, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

Chief spokesman Robert Sims said no U.S. forces remained in the area, except for those involved in a search-and-rescue operation for a missing U.S. warplane. Sims denied reports on Libya radio asserting new American attacks.

The attack planes managed to achieve the element of surprise, but as they were completing their bombing runs many encountered stiff anti-aircraft fire and large numbers of surface-to-air missiles, Sims said.

The only apparent American casualties, he said, were the two crewmen aboard the missing Air Force F-111 bomber.

While the search for the two missing Air Force men, Sims acknowledged that time and darkness were reducing hopes for success. He said he did not know how long the search would continue.

The missing aircraft were identified as Capt. Fernando L. Ribas-Dominicci, 33, of Puerto Rico, the pilot; and Capt. Paul F. Lorence, 31, of San Francisco, the weapons systems officer.

Sims said their plane had been operating in an area in which large numbers of Libyan missiles were fired, but said the Pentagon was not prepared to say they had definitely been shot down.

Sims, in the first official comment on the search for the missing Air Force crew, said ships and planes from the 6th Fleet were expected to continue their search through the night Tuesday.

"The on-scene commander has responsibility for the search and he is continuing that search even though it is now dark," the spokesman said.

But the continuing efforts thus far have shown no evidence of survivors, no beepers, no strobes (lights).

Sims said the search was being concentrated in the Mediterranean off the coast of Tripoli and could well extend inside Libya's 12-mile territorial limit, if that appeared necessary.

He stressed, however, the Navy ships and planes conducting the search had not had any contact with Libyan forces since the late-night bombing raids early Tuesday, Tripoli time, nor had American forces mounted any additional bombing runs despite reports of explosions around Tripoli.

While stressing the Defense Department's damage assessment was very preliminary, Sims said the Pentagon had determined 3 to 5 Soviet-made IL-76 transport planes had been damaged during an attack on the military side of the Tripoli airport, and 5 to 12 Soviet-made MIG-23 fighters damaged during an attack on the Benina military airfield near Benghazi.

"The terrorist's nerve center which was discussed, the barracks at Al Azziziyah, suffered structural damage," Sims added. "We don't have a complete report on that."

The spokesman was asked repeatedly about the extent of damage caused to civilian homes and foreign embassies in Tripoli during the bombing raids. He declined to address the matter, saying the Pentagon simply did not have enough information to know whether American bombs caused the damage.

On Capitol Hill, Sen. Paul Simon D-Ill., emerging from a classified briefing for members of the Senate, said "no civilian neighborhoods were intentionally hit in the raids" but added, "Apparently there was some unintentional damage."

Sims accused the Libyans of engaging in a disinformation campaign, displaying a picture released by the Libyan government that supposedly showed parts of an American plane that had been shot down.

In reality, Sims said, the picture displayed portions of a spent booster rocket from a Soviet S-3 surface-to-air missile.

Sims, in offering the most extensive assessment of the attack to date, disclosed that Navy A-7 and F-4B jets had fired "dozens" of HARM and Shrike missiles at Libyan radar installations and missile batteries just before the Air Force F-111 bombers and Navy A-6 attack jets launched their bombing runs.

The spokesman declined to provide any assessment of the damage caused by those attacks on missile batteries. The A-7 and F-4B planes did not move over Libyan territory before firing those missiles and remained offshore at all times along with dozens of Navy fighters that formed a protective umbrella.

Sims said the attack had been carefully timed and coordinated. It began at 7 p.m. EST, or 2 a.m. Tripoli time, and ended by 7:12 p.m. EST, he said.

Military planners decided to augment the planes aboard two aircraft carriers with 18 Air Force F-111's because they wanted to hit all five targets simultaneously, the spokesman continued. Without the Air Force planes, he added, the Navy jets from the carriers Coral Sea and America would have been able to strike only two targets at a time.

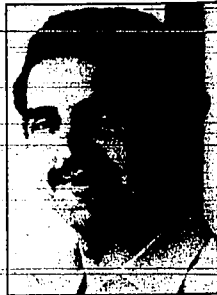

Pentagon officials said earlier in the day the two carriers did not have enough planes to mount all five assaults, while simultaneously launching the initial assault on missile batteries and providing the desired fighter cover.

Despite the attacks on the Libyan missile batteries, Sims said the Navy and Air Force planes encountered heavy resistance as they completed their bombing runs around Tripoli and Benghazi but very light anti-aircraft fire at the Benina air field outside Benghazi.

"And that was perhaps because the attackers were in and out so quickly," he added. "The success of the mission was due to the surprise, 6,300-mile round-trip route, electronic jamming, missile suppression, low-level attack tactics and the cover of night."

Although the anti-aircraft flak and missile firings increased as the American pilots departed Libya, the spokesman said it appeared the Libyans were unsure even then what had happened.

The spokesman refused to offer any reaction to a decision by the French government denying the Air Force bombers permission to fly over France on the way to the Mediterranean. As a result, the Air Force planes had to fly a 10-hour, 6,300-mile round-trip route.

Pilots believe Libyans caused some damage

ABOARD THE USS AMERICA (AP) — A pilot who took part in the strikes against Libya suggested Tuesday that some of the damage inflicted on the Tripoli area may have been from errant missiles fired by the Libyans themselves.

The pilot said "all kinds of weapons were fired at us" as the American planes went over the beach and said Air Force bombers appeared to be right on the targets.

Asked about damage to the French Embassy, the pilot said "it appeared to me that if there was collateral damage in Tripoli, it was done by Libyans themselves firing missiles straight up into the air which came down to the city."

The airman and the fleet commander, Adm. Frank Kelso, spoke to a pool of reporters aboard the America, one of two U.S. aircraft carriers that launched planes against Libya.

Kelso said the entire operation from the carrier-based planes took 2 1/2 hours, including flight time to and from Libya, and that the strikes themselves took 30 minutes.

Libya suggested that Libyans planes were not used to counter the American planes, but a bombardier-navigator offered his explanation.

"They were scared to death of us," he said.

Another pilot asked to describe the Libyan missile attack, said: "The people who saw missiles in Vietnam have told us you can't really describe what a missile looks like. You've got to see it. Now I'm going to argue saying that too."

Kelso said ships in the fleet were taking precautions against possible Libyan reprisals. Fighters were taking off at regular intervals to be in the air if needed for self-protection, he said.

Responding to a question, the admiral said the operation was carried out entirely by the American military without help from the Italians or other West European allies.

'Surgery' in Tripoli was only cosmetic

Reaction to America's attack on Libya Monday night is predictably mixed. There are those who say the action was long overdue, and there are others who say it was the wrong thing to do. History may ultimately be the judge of who's right.

There can be little argument that the motivation for the raid on Libyan targets by U.S. warplanes was understandable. The U.S. government and the U.S. military have been all but helpless to effectively deal with the increasing acts of terrorism aimed at Americans. Libya's Moammar Khadafy has been implicated in some of these acts, we are told. We could not stand idly by and let it continue.

A sense of rage was building up in the American psyche. Something had to be done to retaliate for Khadafy's crusade against the U.S. The question is, whether Monday's raid will reduce the threat of terrorism, or make it worse.

It's one thing to punish Khadafy for his support of terrorism against the West. It's another to make Libyan civilians pay for Khadafy's madness. From all indications, civilians were among the casualties of Monday's raid.

It could be argued that this is part of the cost of war. Innocent American civilians have died as a result of terrorist acts, so what does it matter if a few Libyan civilians die?

Unfortunately, civilians are too often the victims of war. It's nothing new. As long as there's war, civilians will be victims of it.

But the American public was told by Reagan administration officials Monday night that the operation against Libya was of a "surgical" nature. That is, only specific, strategic targets were to be hit. Targets connected with terrorist activities. That sounded fine. But apparently something went wrong. The surgery was botched and the U.S. attack spilled over onto the civilian population.

What effect this might have on unifying the fragmented Arab world against the U.S. remains to be seen. Our quarrel was with Khadafy, not innocent Libyan citizens.

That it happened is evidence that it's difficult to limit the effects of military action — not only the immediate effects, but the residual effects.

We agree that the fight against terrorism calls for drastic measures. Like it or not, this nation is involved in a war with state-sponsored terrorists and has been getting the worst of it. Libya received a dose of terror from the skies Monday night. Hopefully, someone learned a lesson from it. America will strike back, whether or not our allies support us.

That lesson may not be enough to deter further acts of terrorism, however. What we must realize is the nature of this conflict, and its roots in the long-standing religious and social hatreds of the Middle East.

The "surgery" performed Monday night was cosmetic, dealing only with the symptoms of this ancient conflict, not its cause. Unless some way is found to resolve the conflict between Israel and the Palestinians, between feuding Muslims and Christians, between haves and have-nots, this war will continue to escalate. More innocent civilians will die, and more members of our armed forces. Where will it lead? Where will it end?

America has used its might to punish Libya for its support of terrorism. We hope now that America will use its wisdom to work towards finding a cure for the disease ravaging the Middle East.

Oil price war destroys U.S. reserves

We are in the midst of an undeclared war waged by Middle East oil monopolists bent on eliminating competition from other exporters so that they can once again raise the price to new heights.

At the same time, the price war is permanently destroying significant portions of the American oil industry and our reserves by discouraging further investment in exploration — therefore limiting future production — and threatening our banking system. The price war is bound to derail our continuing efforts to make energy use more efficient.

S. Fred Singer

Together, these double blows against conservation in the oil field and among oil users will drastically increase our dependence on imported oil, raise dollar outflow and endanger national security.

What can America do?

Saudi Arabia's flooding of the oil market comes as no surprise; it has been threatened since at least 1980. But the Saudis are selling oil below their economic optimum price, when it's about $22 a barrel. This indicates clearly that they are "dumping" oil in order to squeeze out competition — a tactic that calls for countervailing duties under existing anti-dumping legislation.

A countervailing duty in the form of a variable import fee would bring the price from the lower world level to a stable reference level near $22 a barrel. By setting the reference price at this "correct" level for world oil, the variable import fee would not become a tax. Rather, it would go into operation only when excess oil production drove the price below $22. Whatever income the U.S. Treasury gained from the fee could be used to pay a tax dividend to American taxpayers or to buy oil for the strategic petroleum reserve while the price is low.

Conversely, if OPEC pushes the price above $22 a barrel by withholding production, we should sell oil from the strategic petroleum reserve, which was set up by law to protect us in case of a disruption in world oil supplies and a price jump. It now contains around 500 million barrels, the equivalent of more than 100 days of current imports. Our principle should be to buy low and sell high. Other oil-consuming countries would likely follow our example, because it is also in their interest to keep their internal price stable.

With the customs service in place, there is no need to set up a new bureaucracy to administer a variable import fee. As a matter of fact, a small import fee on oil — now 50 cents a barrel — has been in existence since the passage of the Internal Revenue Act of 1932.

Consumers benefit from lower oil prices only after a certain time lag, but they get hit immediately with higher prices at the pump when crude prices rise. Consumers therefore lose if the price moves up and down, and so does the economy as a whole. It is difficult for businesses and households to plan if the oil price can be manipulated by Saudi Arabia and the rest of the OPEC nations.

We are also seeing a weakening of the conservation effort that was instrumental in bringing down the price of oil in the first place. But the general public is not aware of how even a temporary dip in oil prices, lasting perhaps no more than a few weeks, can cripple U.S. oil production. The great majority of U.S. wells are "stripper wells" that produce fewer than 10 barrels per day.

Together these nearly half-million stripper wells produce almost 15 percent of all U.S. oil. Well closings increased to 15,000 in 1984, double the number of 1983. The price collapse is certain to hasten the premature abandonment of these marginal wells, which are very sensitive to price. Once plugged, they would not be reopened, even when the price recovered. Their oil would be permanently lost.

Alaskan production, now nearly 20 percent of the U.S. output, will go into normal decline after 1987. If investments in new fields are not made in a timely fashion, we will lose substantial U.S. output and become even more dependent on oil imports. Because of increased consumption and reduced domestic production, our import dependence is likely to double by the early 1990s — to about two-thirds of U.S. oil use. With production concentrated in the Middle East, the site of the world's largest oil reserves, we would again be in a squeeze when producers drive up the price.

In view of the clear and present danger to our national security, it is difficult to understand the objections that have been raised against a variable import fee. It would stabilize the price and be temporary; it would self-destruct when the world price recovered to the reference price. It would not hurt our neighbors, Mexico and Canada, because they receive a world price for their oil, whether we impose a fee or not.

Using his existing authority under the Trade Adjustment Act of 1962, President Reagan should invoke a variable import fee. President Gerald Ford actually did establish import fees, and President Jimmy Carter threatened to do so. Now that oil prices and OPEC are collapsing on Reagan's watch, it would be ironic if he were to miss the opportunity to finish the job.

Idaho property taxes to rise rapidly

Newly enacted legislation means that Idaho property taxes will be rising at a much faster rate than they have over the last seven years. It also means that cities and counties will have more money to provide local services.

The Legislature threw out the 5 percent limit on yearly increases in the total property tax revenue that a local unit of government can collect. It substituted a much more generous limit.

Now local governments will be able to raise their tax levies by 5 percent a year. There's a tremendous difference between this and the 5 percent limit on growth in tax revenue.

For example, say that a city has 5 percent growth in total "assessed value" of property, resulting from new construction and from inflation in the values of existing property.

Under the old limit, the city could collect 5 percent more total tax dollars. With a 5 percent growth in total assessed value, there would be zero increase in the tax levy.

With the new limit, the city will be able to collect 10 percent more total tax revenue. The 5 percent growth in assessed value adds 5 percent to revenue. In addition, the city can raise its tax levy by 5 percent.

If total assessed value in the state grows at a rate of 5 percent a year, the new limit means that total property tax revenue would grow twice as fast as in the past seven years. Of course the rate of growth will vary locally, depending on the rate of new construction in the area.

Total property taxes in Idaho have risen from $225 million a year to $314 million a year since the 1981 initiative was enacted in 1978. With the new law, total property tax collections are likely to reach $500 million a year within eight or 10 years.

Ken Robison

This means that the property tax is back as a growing source of revenue for schools, cities and counties. We can expect total property taxes to rise from $20 to $30 billion in Idaho in 1986.

Local governments don't have to take advantage of the full 5 percent in raising tax levies each year, but it is a reasonable bet that they will participate in the new law.

Gramm-Rudman budget cuts are reducing federal revenue sharing for cities and counties.

What the new law means to the property owner is also a real change. With the old law, taxes on individual properties have been essentially flat, unless there was a big increase in the "assessed value" assigned to your property by the county assessor. If new construction added 5 percent a year to total assessed value, there was zero increase in your tax.

Rather than remaining nearly unchanged from year to year, your property taxes are likely to rise at least 5 percent a year. There's a considerable difference between little or no increase each year and 5 percent each year.

If the assessed value of your property does not increase, you can expect your taxes to rise by 5 percent a year. Because of compounding, this would mean a 27.5 percent increase in five years and a 66 percent increase in 10 years.

Should the assessed value of your property go up, add the percentage increase in assessed value to the expected 5 percent levy increase. If your assessed value rises an average 2 percent a year, you can expect your property taxes to be up about 90 percent in 10 years. Who will pay the increasing property taxes? Homeowners will pay the largest share. Even though the 50 percent exemption was enacted by initiative in 1982, the share of total taxes paid by residential property owners in Idaho in 1984 was 50 percent. If that 50 percent it would have risen a lot more.

As of 1985, residential property accounted for $154 million in total taxes, 49 percent of the statewide total. Commercial and industrial property accounted for 29.4 percent, farm property for 12 percent, utility property for 6.3 percent, mining property for 1.6 percent and timber property for 1 percent.

Some residents, those in apartment buildings larger than four units, are treated as commercial property. They don't show up in the residential property total. If you consider all the property used as residences, it is well over half the total.

Idahoans voted for restraint on property taxes when they approved the 1981 initiative in 1978. The Legislature followed that mandate. It found the 1 percent limit unworkable, but approved the 5 percent limit on growth in total property tax revenue.

Now a new property limit has been approved, partly to help cities and counties with their revenue problems. The law still provides for restraint in property taxes, but much less restraint than under the old limit.

Will Idahoans find the new limit acceptable? It should work reasonably well for a few years. People may accept yearly property tax increases if they are happy with the quality of local services.

Letters/ 2nd District Congressional race prompts readers to express views

Adamson dedicated man

Dan Adamson fills the role of a truly dedicated candidate for Congress. Any young man that is so committed to running for a public office that would take a month off from his life to walk through the districts in his search for constituents, to list to their needs, and become acquainted with his neighbors without benefit of expensive television and radio advertising shows himself as a portrait of a dedicated candidate."

Dan has shown the timbre of his integrity in being his own man, not toeing to the voices of the Republican Central Committee. I'll be darned if the Republican Central Committee is going to tell me how to vote.

Straw voting is likened to the harvesting of wheat. The chaff straw cast aside and the grain gathered to feed the world.

What we need in Congress is a young man with a fresh, new approach to our country's needs. Someone that is willing to listen to the needs of the people he represents, someone that will vote his conscience instead of the continual "rubber stamp" — the "yes" that vote the party politics and position that are serving in Congress today.

I urge everyone to get out and vote in the primaries in May.
MRS. RAYMOND OLSEN
Twin Falls

Richardson has his vote

I had been tempted to disregard the straw poll of Republican candidates as being too remote from the electorate. But Mel Richardson's prodigious margin of victory gets me to consider what I'd asked some months ago.

"Who can beat Mel Richardson?" Most importantly to GOP interests, can even Richard Stallings, coached by Mel Morgan's slender pollsters, beat this articulate and personable man?

The Republican hierarchy knows that they must field a candidate in this critical election year who will complement the GOP slate, and would do well to have someone of Richardson's sagacious abilities.

In voting so convincingly for Richardson, they were also, I feel, voting to enhance the chances of Dave Leroy, Steve Symms, and other GOP candidates.

But why should the electorate buy this gambit? Well, because a vote for any other GOP candidate besides Mel Richardson could well be a vote to retain Richard Stallings in office.

Solutions at local level

There are over 7,000 reported cases of child abuse in the state of Idaho last year. If we want to reduce this devastating statistic, we must all educate ourselves about the problem and its causes. We must also seek solutions on the community level.

Child abuse is a national problem. Public policy-makers, business leaders and religious leaders are in particularly favorable positions to have a positive impact on reducing child abuse in Idaho. Public policy-makers can introduce and support needed legislation. Counseling programs can be established by employers and trained supervisors can spot those persons in the work place who may be dealing with an abusive home environment and help to direct them to the proper support systems. Religious leaders can learn to effectively counsel victims of abuse.

A statewide conference, "Reaching for the Rainbow — Idaho's Commitment To End Child Abuse," April 22-23, at Boise State University, hopes to attract these community and state leaders to discuss their ability to help solve these problems and to create plans for action.

As members of the board of directors of the Idaho Network for Children, one of the sponsors of this conference, we ask you, our community leaders to attend this important meeting.

Marcos return demanded

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — More than 4,000 supporters of Ferdinand E. Marcos marched to the U.S. Embassy on Tuesday and demanded the return of their leader, who urged them on from exile in Hawaii.

Demonstrators burned an American flag and shouted obscenities at two U.S. officials entering the embassy.

"The flame you have started shall spread," Marcos said in an interview with a Manila radio station. He exhorted loyalists to continue protests against President Corason Aquino's government and asked Filipinos to recognize his running mate in the Feb. 7 election as acting president.

Soviet missile fails in test

WASHINGTON (AP) — A recent test of the latest Soviet land-based missile failed and the rocket may have exploded, an administration source said Tuesday.

U.S. officials believe the Soviets will correct whatever problems led to the failure of the missile, which is designed to succeed the SS-18, said the source who agreed to talk on the condition of anonymity.

The new rocket, which like the SS-18 is liquid-fueled, is apparently designed to replace older missiles sometime in the 1990s, the source said.

Rocket-laden truck burns

TOKYO (AP) — A truck carrying a rocket-launching device on Tuesday exploded into flames about a mile from a U.S. Air Force base where fms from a rocket were found, police and base officials said.

There were no reports of injuries or damages.

The truck exploded about 8:40 p.m., Japanese police said. It was parked in a tea field near Yokota Air Base, 21 miles from Tokyo.

The truck contained five empty rocket-launching tubes, Lt. Jim Reagan of the base's public affairs office said, citing Japanese police reports.

No group has claimed responsibility for the explosion.

Cosmonauts aloft a month

MOSCOW (AP) — Two cosmonauts aboard the Soviet space station Mir have completed their first month in space and are nearly finished with their inspection of the station's machinery and other equipment, Radio Moscow reported Tuesday.

Cosmonauts Leonid Kizim and Vladimir Solovoy have prepared the loading area near the station's six docking ports, which can receive transport ships and cargo capsules, the official radio said.

Mir, which means peace, was designed to be permanently manned eventually.

Stalin's kin reaches Britain

LONDON (AP) — The American granddaughter of Josef Stalin saying she was glad of the experience but happy to be back in the West.

Her mother, Svetlana Alliluyeva, was not with her.

"I'm not sorry that I went. It was a really great experience for anybody," smiling, American-born Olga Peters told reporters who mobbed her as she arrived at London's Heathrow Airport on an Aeroflot flight from Moscow.

Miss Peters, 14, said she was looking forward to going back to the Quaker school near Cambridge from which her mother removed her in October 1964 when she suddenly returned to the Soviet Union.

French author Genet dies

PARIS (AP) — Jean Genet, whose poetry and plays were peopled by those he knew best — the drags of a society he neither forgave nor sought to change — died alone in a Paris hotel room Tuesday of throat cancer. He was 75.

"He had kept his living place secret from a world of dwindling but devoted admirers."

An anti-social writer, scarred by life's battles, Genet dragged anyone who dared take a look down into the sewer of French society.

Bomb damage angers Tripoli residents

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Taher Gubbia stared at the ruins of his three-story home, devastated in Tuesday's U.S. air strike, and muttered, "Those bloody Americans say they don't hit civilians."

"That's what you hear on the radio," said Gubbia, a professor and a Georgetown University graduate.

His home was one of the scores damaged in the Bin Ashur neighborhood in an air raid that President Reagan said was directed against military targets in an effort to stamp out terrorism.

Ambassador Eiji Tanaka of Japan, speaking to reporters while clearing damage to his home, speculated that the planes' target was the Central Security Organization headquarters behind the French Embassy, which was also damaged.

"I think they aimed at that," Tanaka said.

Libyans inspect damage to homes, autos caused by American planes in Tuesday raid

Instead, at least some of the bombs and rockets fell on an upper-class neighborhood, and Libyan government officials led foreign reporters on a tour to see the damage. Reporters were not immediately taken to any of the military targets identified by U.S. officials in Washington.

In the soft dawn light, the streets were strewn with smashed cars and huge chunks of concrete from what had once been homes. Power lines were down and water spurting from broken water mains.

The smell of eucalyptus was heavy in the air from branches scoured off during the pre-dawn 20-minute attack.

The bombs fell around 2 a.m., when most people were at home asleep.

Despite almost daily Libyan government warnings of an imminent attack, and boasts of suicide squads ready to defend the Libyan revolution, "there was no blackout and the lights of the capital remained on during the pre-dawn 20-minute attack."

Residents in Bin Ashur said many people fled in panic, racing about the streets in their nightclothes screaming for help.

"I was in my home with my wife and four children," said Gubbia, a professor of English at Tripoli's

Fatih University. "I just heard the cries of my children and I didn't know what to do."

He said he managed to get his family out and no one was hurt — a lucky break in a block where blood-soaked mattresses and pools of blood on the floor in some ruined buildings bore witness to the sudden devastation.

Khadafy girl dies in attack

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Moamar Khadafy's 15-month-old adopted daughter, was killed by American bombs that struck his headquarters compound early Tuesday and two of his young sons, were seriously wounded, doctors said.

Dr. Mohammad Muafa, director of pediatrics at Tripoli's Fataif University Hospital, said he was summoned to the Libyan leader's living quarters about an hour after the 2 a.m. raid and found the family, including Khadafy's wife, "in very bad terror."

He told an officially organized news conference that the little girl, Hana, died of a brain hemorrhage about two hours after she arrived.

Two children in the hospital's general wards lay in beds marked with the surname Khadafy. Muafa identified them as Col. Khadafy's sons Karmis, 3, and Seph al-Arap, 4, and said they were seriously wounded.

The doctor said Hana had been buried before nightfall.

Threats received

By The Associated Press

U.S. embassies in Poland and South Korea received bomb threats Tuesday, and there were demonstrations in Britain, West Germany and Austria as America's foes and many friends condemned the air raids against Libya.

Israel, Britain, Canada and Chad, where Libyan-backed rebels control the northern half of the country, supported the air raids on the Libyan capital of Tripoli, and the city of Benghazi, but the Soviet bloc, China and most of the NATO members joined the Arab world in denunciation.

Paul Smith, a spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in Warsaw, said the building was partially evacuated after a man telephoned to say a bomb had been planted there, but it was reopened when no explosives were found.

South Korea's Yonhap News Agency said a man speaking fluent English called the U.S. Embassy in Seoul and said six bombs had been placed in the compound.

LONDON (AP) — The foreign ministers of Iran, Syria and Libya, meeting in Tehran, Iran, called Tuesday for all Arab, Islamic and "peace-loving" countries to break political and economic relations with America, Tehran Radio reported.

The broadcast was monitored in London.

The three countries also deemed any assistance, concerted action and granting of facilities towards aggression, or support for aggression, as tantamount to participation in it, the communique said.

America has diplomatic relations with Syria, but not with Libya and Iran.

What's what

In silent surroundings, a diner typically takes 3.23 bites per minute. Put on slow music and the count goes to 3.83 bpm. With fast music it's 4.4 bpm. Whether a fast food emporium really could speed up the turnover by playing The Flight of the Bumble Bee, I do not know, but that's now the working theory.

Strait's triumphs sidetrack another sweep by Alabama

BUENA PARK, Calif. (AP) — Singer George Strait's two awards prevented another sweep by Alabama at the Academy of Country Music Awards, but the quartet won entertainer of the year and top vocal group for the fifth straight year.

Strait won the album of the year award Monday night and was named top male vocalist, an award he also won last year.

Alabama's two awards gave the group a record 14 "Hat" trophies. "It's probably more important than the first one, because we've outdone ourselves," Alabama member Jeff Cook said backstage at the end of the nationally televised show from Knott's Berry Farm.

Strait said he was stunned to win the top male vocalist again.

"I never expected this two years in a row," Strait said after "Does Ft. Worth Ever Cross Your Mind?" was named best album. "I really didn't think I was going to win, but I'll take it."

Ronnie Millsap's "Lost in the Fifties," a nostalgic mix of country and pop, was named song of the year. Earlier this year, Millsap won a best country male vocal Grammy for the same tune.

"I knew I loved it when I heard it," Millsap said of the song. "It's like a page out of my life when I was younger."

Millsap, who is blind, read Reba McEntire's name in Braille after opening the envelope for top female vocalist award.

"It's more nerve-racking, because once you win it you want another one," said Miss McEntire.

"Highwayman," performed by a country supergroup of Willie Nelson, Johnny Cash, Waylon Jennings and Kris Kristofferson, took single of the year honors.

Judy Rodman, whose song "Until I Met You" is climbing the country charts, took the award for best new female vocalist, saying "I feel sort of legitimate now."

Randy Travis, who sings the hit "1982," won best new male vocalist. "Once I get done singing, I'll feel better," Travis, 26, said backstage.

Wynona and Naomi Judd, the mother and daughter team The Judds, captured the top vocal duet trophy for the second consecutive year.

Video of the year was "Who's Gonna Fill Their Shoes?" by George Jones, who was not present at the ceremony.

The Top Rotten Award for top country motion picture went to "Sweet Dreams," a movie based on the life of the late country singer Patsy Cline. Jessica Lange, in the lead role, had been nominated for a best actress Oscar.

Award for outstanding career contribution to country music went to the "Queen of Country Music," Kitty Wells—best known for "Down Yonk Angel," and "Release Me."

In addition to the multiple ACM awards, Alabama was the first band to win the Nashville-based Country Music Association's entertainer-of-the-year award in 1982. They won it again in 1983 and 1984.

They also won Grammy Awards in 1983 and 1984, and have taken home five American Music Awards.

Since joining RCA records in 1980, Alabama has had 20 consecutive No. 1 country singles, including the rural anthems "Tennessee River," "Why Lady Why," "Feel So Right" and "Love in the First Degree."

Last month, Alabama became the first country act to earn eight consecutive platinum albums when their latest "Greatest Hits" LP, currently No. 1 on Billboard magazine's country charts, topped the million-sale mark.

The 2,800 members of the academy, mostly record industry workers, selected the winners by secret mail ballot.

The board previously announced winners in instrumental, nightclub, radio station and disc jockey categories.

Nightclub of the year was Billy

Bob's in Fort Worth, Texas. WAMZ in Louisville, Ky., was voted the best country station, and disc jockey Ed Edwards of WISN in Nashville was the best radio personality.

PG-13 Rating Introduced

A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is designated as "PG-13." Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for attendance of children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

The revised five-category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

G—General Audiences, all ages admitted.

PG—Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

PG-13—Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

R—Restricted, under-17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

X—No one under 17 admitted.

All films rated after July 1 will be given ratings under the new five-category system.

ACLU rips panel's pornography view

Shuttle

New smoke photos viewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The presidential commission on the Challenger accident has seen photographs that show smoke shooting straight out from a joint on the space shuttle's right booster rocket "as if there were no seal there at all," a source close to the panel said Tuesday.

He said the photographs also show that the crew cabin was blown intact well clear of the explosion and that the pictures show it tumbling as it fell to the ocean nine miles below.

"That flight was doomed from the moment that rocket lighted up," said the source, who declined to be identified. "The first puff of smoke is a great whoosh, with a lot of force, that shot straight out like a jet. That joint failed immediately on ignition."

"It really shook me," said the source. The cabin "was absolutely intact when it broke off. As it turned, every time, it caught the sun and you could see the rate of spin."

A federal safety investigator, Terry Armentrout, said last Friday that the nose section containing the cabin broke cleanly away from the rest of the spacecraft and remained intact until it struck the water. Another investigator said the crew probably died in the high gravity forces as the ship tore apart.

A two-ton section of the booster, containing the portion of the suspect joint, was fished from the Atlantic this week and returned to the Kennedy Space Center on Tuesday morning. It had a jagged two-foot hole, described "as if someone had taken a bite out of it," and showed evidence of burning.

The source said investigators may never know the exact cause of the failure "the Challenger flight and that it may have been a combination of any of four chief suspects.

Those are that a pressure test during assembly may have pushed O-ring seals out of position, that ice in the days before the launch had a similar effect; that holes in sealing putty, inside the rocket segments and the surrounding steel casing. The Navy said the hole measured 15-by-28 inches.

The Stena Workhorse recovered the piece Sunday, hoisting it from 500 feet down on the floor of the Atlantic Ocean.

The presidential shuttle commission said Monday its recovery was of "critical interest" to its investigation of the accident.

Commission member Eugene Covert and members of the commission staff were among those who examined the piece Tuesday.

Possible remains located

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Divers combing the wreckage of Challenger's cryogenic tank have found more possible remains Tuesday.

Radio traffic from the news organizations said the USS Plover, a Coast Guard cutter, "Tom O'Malley" was earlier by ships in the search area. It is believed to indicate the discovery of a tank.

NASA declined comment on astronaut claims out of deference to the families.

Medical experts seeking to determine precisely what caused the Challenger explosion Tuesday examined a two-ton piece of rocket wreckage containing part of the joint that failed and triggered the accident.

As the scorched 11-foot-by-20-foot chunk was unloaded from the salvage ship Stena Workhorse, observers could see a large hole burned through the joint between rocket segments and the surrounding steel casing. The Navy said the hole measured 15-by-28 inches.

The Stena Workhorse recovered the piece Sunday, hoisting it from 500 feet down on the floor of the Atlantic Ocean.

The presidential shuttle commission said Monday its recovery was of "critical interest" to its investigation of the accident.

Commission member Eugene Covert and members of the commission staff were among those who examined the piece Tuesday.

Crop irradiation OK'd to combat insect pests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government on Tuesday approved the use of low-level radiation to kill insects on fresh fruits and vegetables, but said consumers must be told the process was used.

Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen said he had signed final regulations authorizing the expanded use of radiation, which he called "a new technology that can produce benefits to consumers."

He said irradiation could reduce the use of pesticides and inhibit maturation and sprouting, thus extending shelf life and possibly making some foods more available or less expensive.

The Food and Drug Administration said years of research have shown irradiation of food to be safe. It does not make food radioactive, does not significantly change nutritional values and causes no changes in food beyond those that might occur through cooking, freezing or canning, the agency said.

"Some consumers may prefer one taste to another, but the differences do not affect safety," the FDA said.

That position is contested by some consumer groups which say the safety of irradiated food remains an open question.

The regulation takes effect upon publication in the Federal Register, expected on Wednesday or Thursday, the department said.

The radiation allowed on fresh fruits and vegetables would be up to 1 kilogray, or 100,000 rads. That is the equivalent of more than 3 million chest X-rays, but still is considered low by radiation standards.

At least 100 times more radiation would be needed to adequately kill bacteria and fungi, the FDA said.

In approving the fruit and vegetable radiation use, Bowen also approved an increase in the amount of radiation that can be used on dried herbs and spices. That level has been 10 kilogray; it now will be 30 kilogray.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Attorney General's Commission on Pornography is preparing to recommend steps against hard- and soft-core pornographic material that are so harsh they would risk turning America to "the sexual dark ages," the American Civil Liberties Union declared Tuesday.

Commission draft documents urge law enforcement crackdowns that would put an end to production of all X-rated films, R-rated horror films and possibly other popular films with sexual themes, ACLU legislative counsel Barry Lynn said at a news conference.

Another draft recommendation urges federal regulators to ban the showing on cable television of the types of material contained in R-rated movies depicting nudity, he said.

Lynn based his assertions on thousands of pages of internal documents the commission released in the past week. The panel disclosed its drafts and working papers only after being sued by the ACLU, which agreed to drop its suit in return for release of the materials.

Commission officials could not be reached by telephone for immediate comment Tuesday, but they have said in the past that internal draft documents have yet to get final approval and are subject to change. The panel will hold its final meeting in late April and issue a final report in June.

The ACLU predicted the 11-member commission will recommend that the Justice Department set up a "computer information system on the pornography industry that state and local police could use to investigate obscenity."

In addition, it said, the panel will say that federal regulators should stamp out dial-a-porn telephone services.

"It is little wonder that the commission tried to withhold these documents," said Lynn. "They are riddled with factual errors, preposterous legal theories, undocumented allegations and unwarranted hysterics about the effects of sexually explicit material on viewers and readers."

"This is not so much an examination of the phenomenon of pornography that the commission has been engaged in as it is a road map for returning America to the sexual dark ages where people are afraid to produce any sexually oriented material," said Lynn.

The panel's draft report urges the Federal Communications Commission to impose sanctions against cable and satellite systems that transmit indecent programs, "seemingly synonymous in the drafters' minds with R-rated fare," said Lynn.

The cable industry and other groups, including the ACLU, have encouraged parental control on cable access for children through the use of lockboxes and scrambled signals. But the commission's draft report criticizes the devices, noting instances in which the R-rated material has slipped through into viewers' homes due to technical problems.

According to one draft recommendation, on pornographic magazines, Congress should amend the federal obscenity laws to eliminate the necessity of proving sexually oriented material such as magazines actually crossed state lines. The draft compares the proposed change to federal laws involving labor union extortion and firearms laws.

Another draft recommendation is that state and local authorities prosecute producers of pornography under existing law, including those prohibiting pandering and other sex offenses.

Lynn said the proposal "seeks to make portrayals of sexual activity, whether obscene or not, a forbidden enterprise for filmmakers." He called it "an effort to end production of all X-rated films and perhaps many other popular films with sexual themes."

Citizens' protest delays school board action

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome School Board members faced up to an unpopular decision Monday night when more than 100 citizens protested a plan to reduce the High School athletic director's position to part-time.

William Hart, a former Jerome resident and now magistrate judge in Lincoln County, appeared as spokesman for the large delegation and voiced a dramatic appeal for the board's reconsideration of the action.

Hart accused the School Board of de-emphasizing athletic programs for the past several years by making financial cuts and paying its coaching staff sub-par salaries. Hart said that many in the community feel the School Board has a closed-door policy and fails to make the public welcome at its meetings.

"After adjourning from the Junior High School auditorium to the board room to complete the meeting agenda, board members voted to delay a decision on the appeal until later in the week. A special meeting will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday for further consideration of citizen comments.

Hart told the board that Jon Jund, as full-time athletic director, has accomplished much for the school, students and community in the way of bringing many district and state athletic events to Jerome. He said Jund has developed outstanding programs on a budget well below that of several other schools of equal size in Magic Valley.

Members of the audience, including many Jerome High School Booster Club members, parents, teachers and students, applauded Hart's remarks.

School Board Chair Nancy Churchill opened the board meeting with the agenda item covering extra-curricular activities and athletic director issues. She told the audience that at the last board meeting trustees made the decision to change the athletic director position beginning next fall. Jund, she said, is not being dropped from the staff, as some rumors had indicated, but is being asked to teach three academic classes per day and continue as part-time athletic director.

"We are not deleting any program or extra-curricular activities," she assured the audience. "We are trying to reduce the fund deficit in the district and at the same time cover all of our programs, including athletics, drama, speech and others."

"The state Board of Education has ordered the addition of health classes next year in the core curriculum requirements and we have to make allowances for this," she explained.

Hart, whose son attends Jerome High School, said if Jund were required to divide his time between classroom and athletic duties, the schools could revert to a time when there were no winning teams, low school and community morale and many students who lacked the incentive to complete high school.

Jerome benefited from the winning teams and outstanding athletic accomplishments of the school, he said.

Weather, insulation help defray utility bills

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — There is some good news in the Jerome School District's budget report this month and it's all because of the weather, Superintendent Richard Kuglar reported Monday night.

Kuglar told the School Board that temperatures during the past two months have reduced electrical bills by about $10,000 and gas heating bills by about $15,000, compared to those of the past couple of years, and will probably save about $20,000 of projected budget expenses. The weather and some conservation measures the district has taken in insulating buildings are paying positive dividends, he said.

However, Kuglar said, the district will still be between $80,000 and $100,000 short of cash this year. Money just isn't coming in as it should be, Kuglar said.

Classroom enrollment has dropped by 18 students in the past two months, mostly in the elementary schools. Kuglar said this will probably offset the lower utility costs, because of decreased attendance.

The district is working hard to pay off a deficit that has been adding to its financial problems the past few years. A savings of about $100,000 per year for the coming four years could wipe out the deficit, the superintendent said.

The board delayed a final vote on a proposed $195,000 supplemental tax levy after a district patron, Jack Allison, asked that the figure be increased by another $30,000 to better fund needed school programs. Allison, a booster organization member, told the board that concerned citizens would help sell the tax override proposition.

The override levy election is scheduled for May 8, from noon to 8 p.m., in the Junior high school and at the Bill Emerson residence.

Magic Valley will spawn Larouche candidate — supporter

Ellen Workinger stops with her daughter Megan to talk to National Democratic Policy Committee organizer Bill Jennings

Won't be a 'half-baked' budget cutter

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A supporter of Lyndon Larouche who stood in front of the Twin Falls post office Tuesday to pass out literature said he expects a Larouche legislative candidate will soon surface in the Magic Valley.

But Bill Jennings, who said he is from the Larouche organization's Seattle office, would not reveal the name of the Magic Valley Larouche candidate.

"We like Idaho. In fact, we think Idaho has one of the best congressional delegations in the country," Jennings said. "But as Larouche said, even the best of them are half-baked and have to be thoroughly roasted ... they tend to be of the Gramm-Rudman (federal deficit reduction act) set of mind on economics," he said.

Jennings said he and other Larouche Democrats oppose the across-the-board budget cuts mandated in the Gramm-Rudman Act.

"It's indiscriminate cuts in things that are essential," he said. While defense spending will be cut by $50 billion, farm price supports will be cut, Gramm-Rudman cuts will not put a nick in the $220 billion paid each year to international bankers in interest payments. The banking community is a frequent target of Larouche attacks.

Larouche is a frequent fringe presidential candidate and leader of the National Democratic Policy Committee, a sometimes conservative, sometimes liberal political action committee that a spokesman for the Democratic National Committee has been quoted as saying is not affiliated with the mainstream Democratic party.

Larouche has said the Queen of England is involved in the drug trade, the Holocaust was fiction, and the United States is headed for economic collapse.

A Third World debt crisis predicted by Larouche, an AIDS epidemic, and unchecked international drug trading are the three ills of society on which Larouche focuses most of his attention.

To slow the fall of Third World economies, Larouche supports a program to encourage industrial development at home and abroad and the issuance of low-interest, long-term credit.

"We're talking about an economic mobilization of the quality of the Roosevelt mobilization after World War II," Jennings said.

The spread of AIDS could be checked by mandatory screening of the entire population for AIDS, quarantining AIDS carriers, and by giving researchers an "open checkbook" to pay for research toward a cure, said Jennings.

Around the United States and in Idaho, Larouche supporters introduced legislation to crack down on the laundering of drug money by stiffening fines and jail sentences for banks and bankers caught moving it.

"Legal drug sale profits" into legitimate channels. In the Idaho Legislature, Rep. Noy Brackett, R-Twin Falls, carried the measure for the Larouche organization.

Starting at around 11:30 Tuesday morning, Jennings and another man, named Ned Norris, stood and sat near their table on the sidewalk, collecting postal patrons and asking

Soil conservation funding approved

By KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It only took a few minutes for the Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners to approve funding for the three soil conservation districts operating in Twin Falls County.

"We've always felt it's a good program," said Commissioner Ann Cover, after the brief Monday afternoon meeting.

The commissioners approved $25,000 for each of the three districts: Balanced Rock, Snake River and Twin Falls.

Cover said the county also provides office space for the Twin Falls and Snake River Soil Conservation districts.

County money, Commissioner Marvin Hempleman explained, is usually matched by a 2:1 grant from the state. Over the past few years, however, the state's additions have grown smaller, he added.

Soil conservation districts are the local agencies which work with individual farmers to promote soil-conserving farm practices. In addition to information about new techniques, the districts offer cost-sharing programs for farmers who undertake conservation measures.

The U.S. Soil Conservation Service, a federal agency, provides technical information and assistance to the local districts.

The soil conservation districts try to promote what Brian Olmstead of the Snake River Soil Conservation District called "total land treatment." They work with farmers to control soil erosion through modifying the way they apply water at the top of their field to control erosion. They also promote end-of-field techniques, such as setting ponds to trap sediment running off their land.

The districts have been particularly active in the Twin Falls area in conjunction with state and federally sponsored clean water programs such as the Rock Creek Rural Clean Water Program. Similar clean water programs are active or in the planning stages on Deep Creek and Cedar Draw as well, according to Gary Grindstaff of the Balanced Rock Soil Conservation District.

Tom Kunkel represented the Twin Falls Soil Conservation District at the meeting.

With few industries in the Magic Valley, officials of the state Division of Environment say that agricultural runoff is the primary pollution problem in many area streams.

In spite of the benefits, Idaho's tight farm economy is making it harder for farmers to experiment with soil conservation practices. Olmstead and Grindstaff said.

City may provide street sweeping

Council eyes new service fee, deposit

By ANNETTE GARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council is considering charging residents a new service fee and a new refundable deposit.

The city could cover its street sweeping costs by adding 35-40 cents to residents' monthly water and sewerage service bills, said City Manager Tom Courtney at a council work session Monday. The exact amount would depend on how fast the city wanted to pay off an $81,916 street sweeper delivered last month.

The 1985 council was in favor of the charge as a way to raise additional money outside the limits of state-imposed property tax lids. However, the 1986 council has yet to make a decision on the matter.

The 1985 council had considered contracting street sweeping to a private firm, such as Parks and Sons which now handles garbage collection for the city.

Courtney said the city can provide the service for less money than a private company can. The service costs only $45,000-$60,000 annually to perform, leaving little leeway for a private company to build-in profit, he said.

The council took no action, but is expected to consider the matter at its next meeting, April 21.

The council will also consider then a new refundable deposit to ensure sewer tap inspections.

"The city has had difficulties with residents taking out permits to tap into the city sewer system and then not arranging for an inspection," said Courtney Monday. If the tap is installed wrong, as often happens, it causes long-term maintenance problems for the city, he said.

The proposed deposit of $50 would be collected when a permit is applied for and refunded when city inspectors approve the tap to ensure compliance with city regulations. The deposit would not be charged for new subdivisions where taps are already run to the property line.

In other council business Monday, Councilwoman Mary McCluskey reported that the Christmas Tree Committee she led in 1985 had collected $3,353 in donations for lighting the park and presenting holiday programs.

The committee spent a total of $9,668 for the project, leaving $5,703 for the city to pay. The City Council agreed earlier to spend as much as $15,000 for the project.

Most businesses gave the city reduced rates, McCluskey said. The committee spent $4,964 for lights and plugs, she said. Another $3,311 was spent for electrical supplies. Some $658 was spent for radio advertisements and $123 for printing posters.

Trees will be lighted again next year, she said. And in the meantime, residents will be able to use the electrical outlets installed in City Park. The city will turn them on for group events such as the Western Days barbecue, she said.

CAPI won't endorse candidates until filings

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Hanging fire until after legislative candidates have announced their campaigns, the local political action committee called Citizens for a Progressive Idaho will not issue endorsements until after the filing deadline on Friday.

L. James Koutnik, who hosts KLIX radio's "Party Line" talk show and is a member of the group, said Monday the group of Twin Falls business and public leaders expect to have a number of candidates to choose from. "We should have somebody in every race where there's room for improvement," he said.

Meanwhile, Koutnik said, the group's leadership is up in the air. Mayor Doug Vollmer and local businessman Dick Stowell are co-chairmen of the group, as previously announced by Marc Peperzak, a past spokesman for the group.

"I had not finally agreed to be on that committee as co-chairman. I am not on any committee at this time; I don't like the idea of just shooting from the hip at these legislators. I could work with all of them," Vollmer said Monday.

Stowell said he will be doing "leg-work" for the group, but does not have time to be chairman.

"They're just being modest," Koutnik joked, and then said leadership of the group is being passed around from member to member.

He said the group's goals are still the election of candidates who he decides will foster economic growth and the defeat of incumbents who have stood in the way. "We need to clean out the G-d-neanderthals we have, the damage they have done is incredible," Koutnik said. "We're in one hell of an economic depression right now."

Among the programs that should be better funded is the state Department of Commerce, which Republicans have blocked funding for because it is a brain-child of Governor John Evans, said Koutnik.

The group will file a political action group with the Idaho secretary of state as soon as members start collecting and spending money, which they expect to do soon, said Koutnik.

Two injured in one-car rollover

HOLLISTER — Two Twin Falls residents were injured early Tuesday morning in a one-car rollover in front of the LDS Church in Hollister.

Twin Falls County sheriff's officers said the driver, Stacy A. Lingnaw, 18, and a passenger, Wendy Ward, 20, were taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center by ambulance. Lingnaw was cited for driving without a license.

Officers said the vehicle was traveling north on U.S. Highway 93, at about 2:45 a.m., when it went off the east shoulder of the roadway. The vehicle traveled with the right wheels off the pavement and, as the driver over-corrected, went into sideways skid and overturned.

Officers said there were no brake marks. Lingnaw said a deer, or other animal, ran across the highway in the path of her vehicle.

Lingnaw was listed in fair condition Tuesday night. Hospital attendants said apparently Ward was treated and released.

Motel gets worthless checks

TWIN FALLS — Owners of the Monterey Hotel in Twin Falls asked police Monday to help them locate a guest who allegedly left the business with no-account checks totaling $437.

Owners of the motel said the man was a regular customer and they cashed three $40 checks for him. When he left, he paid for his room, telephone calls and other charges with another check.

The man was a guest at the motel from Feb. 28 through March 6.

As of Monday, the check had not been made good. The last check, along with those issued for $40 cash in cash during the man's stay, were all returned marked "account closed," police reported. They were written on a Livingston, Mont., bank, reports showed.

The report is under investigation.

SkyWest to fly to Yellowstone

ST. GEORGE, Utah — SkyWest Airlines will begin scheduled air service between West Yellowstone, Mont., and Salt Lake City on June 1, company officials have announced. West Yellowstone is located just west of Yellowstone National Park.

The airline will offer two round-trip flights daily — one non-stop and one with an intermediate stop in Pocatello, said SkyWest spokesman Dan Rymer.

The new service expands SkyWest's route system to 31 cities in seven states.

SkyWest serves Twin Falls, Pocatello and Idaho Falls in southern Idaho.

Rate setting sparks power interest

BOISE (AP) — The final decision on rate-regulation rules for independent producers has apparently revived interest in construction of private generating facilities, including one near Kimberly, Idaho Power Co. officials say.

Since the Public Utilities Commission decision last month, Idaho Power spokesman Larry Taylor said the company has received inquiries from a Utah corporation and several other interests about contracts for the purchase of power from their proposed generating facilities.

Taylor said Bonneville Pacific has requested a power sales contract with Idaho Power for a 2,900-kilowatt hydro plant on the Low Line irrigation canal near Kimberly, some 1.4 miles west of an existing small hydroproject.

"Several other potential developers have made preliminary contacts with Idaho Power regarding their projects," Taylor said in a statement.

Under federal law, publicly owned regulated utilities must purchase power generated by independent producers but the states set the rates the utilities must pay for that power, and last month the PUC agreed to permanently reduce the rate Idaho Power must pay to 4.1 cents a kilowatt on long-term contracts signed this year and 4.7 cents a kilowatt on long-term contracts signed next year and after that. Although about 30 percent less than what the commission had ordered Idaho Power to pay several years ago, the amount remained well above the 1.4 cents the utility had requested.

To date, Idaho Power has contracts for power from 46 cogenerators capable of producing over 22,000 kilowatts, Taylor said. That exceeds the combined capacity of the utility's smaller units at Twin Falls, Shoshone Falls, Clear Lake, Upper Malad, Lower Malad, Thousand Springs, Swan Falls and Cascade, he said.

"You will tell us you don't have the money, but we expect you to find that money. We are looking to you to find the means of continuing the programs that will give our youth the chance to be the first-class citizens they are now," Hart said.

Board Trustee Jim Cobble thanked the citizens for attending, saying it was the first time in the five years he has been on the School Board that so many citizens have expressed support for something involving the schools.

"We get input from the community again and again asking us to save money and to make cuts. We have to represent the people of the district."

"This is the first time we have had this kind of support for continuing programs. We are pro-education and pro-extra-curricular activities, but we have to consider the input we are getting from the parents of the district," he said. "Until now it has all been for cutting costs."

Bills

Continued from Page B1 Kugler said he understands the need for additional time to consider the amount of the levy, but hopes the election would not be delayed and combined with the trustee election, which was approved for May 20.

Board Chair Nancy Churchman, who holds one of two trustee positions to be filled in the election, announced she will not be running for re-election. Alvin Chojnacky, who holds the other expiring term, said he will seek re-election.

Other matters the board: accepted a bid from First Interstate Bank for tax anticipation notices in the amount of $400,000, at an interest rate of 5.58 percent.

unanimously adopted a new graduation policy, requiring at least 44 credits, or two more than the state requirement.

The 44 credits will be required for a college preparatory diploma, academic diploma or a general diploma. A "C" grade is also required in college preparatory and academic diplomas, but not for the general diploma.

Larouche

Jennings said Tuesday he has been working to recruit members and candidates for the Larouche Democrats in Boise, Nampa, and now in Twin Falls.

His table on the sidewalk was hung with placards criticizing the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction balancing act, supporting the proposed laser defense system known as "Star Wars," urging a shutdown of the gay rights movement, and supporting the bombing of Libya.

One of the books on his table was titled, "Treason in America" and purported to tell of traitors from Aaron Burr to Sun Valley founder Avereil Harlman.

The book tells how a cabal of financial institutions controlled by wealthy families such as the Harrmans and Rockefeller have undermined the United States, said Jennings.

Larouche's name is not new to Idaho politics. His drug money laundering bill circulated in the Statehouse this winter, and last fall, a Larouche organization called the Schiller Institute flew Brackett to Rome, Italy, for a week to attend an institute conference on economic and other matters of concern to Larouche.

Pair's arguments act as wet blanket

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I fight and argue all the time, but we never settle anything.

He clams up because he's afraid if he really got mad, he will blow up, so he tells me to drop the subject and he won't let me talk anymore.

When I drop it, a lot of resentment builds up, and the next time we fight, I bring up the last one which wasn't settled.

The big problem is that this causes problems in the bedroom. I for one cannot get intimate and loving when things are bothering me from our last fight. I have tried to tell him this, but he says stored-up resentment has nothing to do with intimate relations.

Don't say, "Go to a counselor." We have been to two — one for three years. It hasn't helped. We can't get a divorce either, as we are bound by God's word. Besides, we have no grounds for one. We have one child. What should we do?

— RESENTMENT IN OKLAHOMA
DEAR RESENTMENT: Your husband is wrong. Stored-up resentment has EVERYTHING to do with intimate relations.

If two counselors have failed to explain this, you need a third, because that is the root of your problem. And in order to resolve it, it's imperative that a professional counselor teach you how to settle an argument and let go of the resentment, so it doesn't surface in the bedroom.

DEAR ABBY: As a licensed hairstylist, I have been asked the same two questions at least once a day for the last 25 years, so maybe if you answer them in your column, people will quit asking.

Question No. 1: "What do you charge for just a little trim?" First of all, the client pays for the barber's expertise — not for the amount of hair that is cut off one swept up. Also, a "little trim" usually requires some styling, shaping, thinning and cutting, so the price is the same as a regular haircut.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Question No. 2: "How much do you charge — for children?" — For some strange reason, most people seem to think that a child's haircut should cost half as much as an adult's.

Actually it should cost twice as much, because it takes twice as long to give a child a proper haircut, and it's twice as much work, (I personally feel as though I've wrestled 10 rounds with a gorilla after cutting a child's hair.)

Please print this: I'd like to frame it and hang it in my study.

DEAR JACQUES: Here it is, for those clients who expect you to trim (or shave) your prices.

DEAR ABBY: I read you dally in Korea and need some motherly advice. I am a young woman who became engaged five months ago. The problem is that I am in the military in Korea and my fiancé (also in the military) is stationed far away.

Being so far from my fiancé, I needed someone to spend some time with, so I met this other guy (also in the military, but he is stationed here), and we eventually fell in love. The truth is, I love them both and don't want to hurt either one. They both want to marry me. I am in a very confused state. Please tell me what to do.

— ONE MAN TOO MANY
DEAR TOO MANY: Since you can't decide which man to marry, don't marry either one. If you were really in love with your fiancé, you would have been too emotionally committed to him to have "needed" another guy to spend time with. Infatuation? Yes, ma'am. Love? No, sir!

Purple Heart awarded 41 years late

BETHEHEM, Pa. (AP) — Harlan Hinkle, 61, has received his Purple Heart — about 41 years late.

Bethlehem attorney Joseph Leeson, a retired reserve officer who helped Hinkle apply for the medal, presented it to him recently.

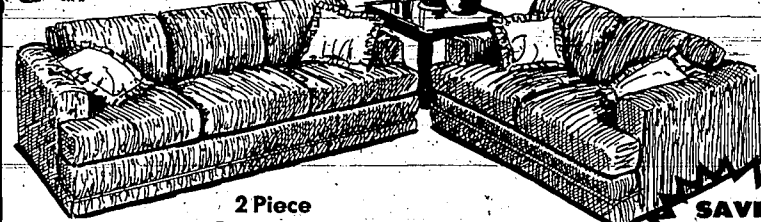

While serving on the aircraft carrier USS San Jacinto as an aviation metalsmith 3rd class during the battle of Okinawa, on April 6, 1945, Hinkle was topside when a Japanese kamikaze plane crashed near him, displaying him with shrapnel, and during the battle more than 300 Japanese planes were shot down and two attacked the carrier he was on. Luckily, his wounds were not too serious. Before he received first aid, Hinkle grabbed a piece of the plane's fuselage, more than a foot long, for a souvenir.

This memento was enough for Hinkle, and he never bothered to apply for the Purple Heart he deserved, until now.

IEA predicts state schools heading for fiscal 'emergency'

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho Legislature used "sleight of hand" in promoting its public school financing bill this year, the Idaho Education Association says.

As a result, school districts are headed toward a "financial emergency" this fall, the IEA predicted Tuesday, with many districts forced to ask local patrons to pay higher property taxes to operate schools.

One of those requests was to be decided Tuesday in Fremont County, where voters were being asked to approve $375,000 in two supplemental levies.

Fremont voters were to decide a school request for $200,000 for plant operations, up $50,000 from last year. A second, separate request is for $115,000 to supplement available revenue for teacher salaries and classroom courses.

Together, officials say the levies could add $2.50 per year for each $100,000 of assessed property value.

And at Coeur d'Alene, Jerry Evans, state superintendent of public instruction, also said school districts probably won't get much more than $1.5 million in "new" money next fall.

"That leaves $1.5 million statewide for school boards to decide how to spend," Evans said.

The officials said the Legislature put up $12 million extra for school operations, but it was closer to $10 million when built-in expenses such as Social Security are considered.

Of that amount, the Legislature decreed that most of it should go to textbooks, paper and other supplies, leaving little for teacher salaries and other increased operating expense, the IEA officials said.

IEA officials told a news conference in Boise on Tuesday that because of the way the Legislature came up with its public school appropriation, many districts actually will get less in state funding for public schools next fall than they are getting this year.

Executive Director Don Roille said after the IEA took a close look at the Legislature's action on education funding this year, "We found to our chagrin that we are in serious trouble."

He said local school boards will be "under the gun" on spending decisions, because there simply is not enough money to meet normal operating expenses and cover the built-in costs such as step increases and other pay increases for teachers.

Legislators were advised when considering the public school bill that it allowed a $171 increase per support unit, from $28,680 to $29,151.

But IEA President Joyce Raasch said that was "sleight-of-hand" calculation, and the Legislature conveniently ignored the fact that local districts got a $250 decrease per unit this year because state endowment earnings were down.

The Legislature also declared that $389 per unit should be allocated for textbooks, supplies and other school materials, and not for salary increases.

If the Legislature's mandate is followed, Raasch said, "the actual state support for public schools will fall by an average of $168 per support unit."

She said the short-term solution to funding problems is override levies.

Ex-Idaho family sues over illness

POCATELLO (AP) — A former Idaho family has sued Idaho Power Co. for $6.4 million in damages, alleging leaks of a compound linked to cancer from a transformer near their inkom home caused cancer, birth defects and miscarriages in family members.

The suit, filed in 6th District Court in Pocatello, claimed the Paul Lish family was effectively victimized by the alleged leaks of polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCBs, from a utility substation adjacent to the eight-acre tract they lived on and farmed between 1978 and 1984.

Pocatello teacher calls IEA finance declaration 'waste of dues dollars'

POCATELLO (AP) — The president of the Pocatello Teachers Association is calling a statewide teacher organization's recent declaration of an emergency in school financing a "waste of time and a waste of my dues dollars."

Ray Sweigert said the declaration, adopted by the Idaho Education Association at its weekend conference, is meaningless and intended "not to offend people" at a time when public schools around the state are trying to just hold their own against what he called another woefully inadequate state financial allocation.

"They're still pushing words, not actions. They've tried rallies, letters, postcards, pleading and begging. They've done the gammut of polite things," Sweigert said. "From what I've seen of the teachers they don't have the gumption to take any kind of action."

Sweigert, who as a convention delegate had unsuccessfully pressed for stronger action in the form of a strike vote next year, said the election does not change the composition of the state Legislature, also indicated the Pocatello union group may not support its school district's proposed $766,000 levy increase election because it includes no money for teacher salary hikes.

The organization's executive committee was scheduled to decide whether to support the April 29 levy election later this week, but Sweigert said the levy amount appeared to only be another indication that the district expected its teachers to shoulder the bulk of the financial burden created by inadequate state support.

"I think there is a good chance that the teachers will make a difference," he said. "We can't keep dealing teachers less and less."

"Teachers know how to read the newspaper and magazines. Nothing's stopping those 100 teachers in Boise from looking somewhere else," he said in an apparent reference to interviews in the area by Washington State school officials who are looking for teachers. He also pointed out that in Idaho Falls, as well, the personnel director could find only two university graduates "who would even talk to him" about coming back to Idaho.

Boat suit still aground

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Negotiations to settle a lawsuit involving Kootenai County's outlawed boater fee have stalled.

Bayview Marina owner Wally Wright said Monday talks he conducted with two members of the county's Waterways Committee ended last week without settlement of the civil suit. Wright declined to name the county officials.

Wright said he offered to drop the suit if Kootenai County commissioners agreed to pay legal fees and refund $10,000 the county collected in boater fees. The commission refused the offer, he said.

Commission chairman Glenn Jackson said Wright represents "a small group that appears to be opposed to improvement of recreational facilities."

The $10 fee was to have been used for construction and maintenance of boating facilities in the county. County officials decided in February not to appeal a ruling by 1st District Magistrate Neil Waller that the fee is unconstitutional.

Wright challenged the fee after he received a citation for refusing to purchase a boat sticker. He and two other boaters filed a class action suit against the county.

Gillespie takes over state HUD office

BOISE (AP) — A top official of the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Portland, Ore., office has been named to oversee HUD operations for Idaho.

Gary Gillespie, 48, assumes responsibility for federal housing programs in the state after a lengthy search for a new Idaho director following the resignation last June of Richard Hensley.

Gillespie has been with HUD since 1971, serving as a regional economist in Portland and Oregon and Idaho operations and then as deputy manager and acting manager for HUD programs in Portland.

Watkins, Adamson, Cenarrusa file

BOISE (AP) — State Sen. Dan Watkins of Idaho Falls and Dan Adamson of Jerome on Tuesday became the first candidates to file for the Republican 2nd District congressional nomination.

Watkins, an eight-term veteran of the Idaho Senate, called himself the "taxpayers' friend" as he filed, and said he picked the federal income tax filing deadline on purpose for his filing date.

Watkins said he has worked hard as chairman of the Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee to prevent unnecessary tax increases.

The incumbent, Democrat Richard Stallings, so far has no opposition in the May 27 primary election.

Adamson, former Jerome County prosecutor, officially launched his second bid for the GOP nomination. He narrowly lost two years ago to veteran George Hansen, who lost in the general election to Stallings.

Also filing Tuesday was Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa, almost 19 years after he resigned as House speaker to accept appointment to the position, Cenarrusa, 68, a Blaine County farmer and sheepman, will be seeking his sixth term. So far he has no opposition.

Late returns come rolling in

BOISE (AP) — With a third of the state's income taxpayers waiting until the last minute to file, the Idaho Tax Commission joined Tuesday in the flood of late filings.

Tens of thousands of state taxpayers battled sometimes heavy local traffic to reach post offices to drop of their returns in the final hours before the midnight deadline, and state budget analysts said receipts had to be strong if the state was to meet its spending forecast for the current revenue year.

Some 100,000 refunds averaging $130 each were issued by the state in advance of the final filing crunch, Miller said. Errors or improperly filed returns have delayed some of them, he added.

Idahoans for Reagan in wake of Libya raid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both Idaho's Republican senators say they support President Reagan's decision to attack selected targets in Libya on Monday in an effort to end that country's terrorism.

Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, called it a "measured and appropriate attack on military and terrorist facilities."

Sen. James McClure likened it to early in the 19th century, when the United States Navy was used to deal with Barbary Coast pirates, in the same area of the world.

"The difficult task we have today is dealing with urban terrorism in a modern society, against an organized foe who will kill innocent people to achieve ends which he and she alone defines," said McClure.

"It's a very tough problem" but I feel the president was entirely right in this case, where we had very clear proof of who did it, who caused the death of Americans, and who was attacking innocent civilian populations indiscriminately as well.

"A tough action, but I think one that was needed," said McClure.

Sen. Steve Symms said he fully supported the president's action.

"Our commander-in-chief made a well-informed, important decision last night when he ordered the bombing of terrorist targets in Libya," Symms said. "Khadafi's insatiable thirst for American blood could not go unanswered. The president responded as he had to and I completely support him."

Stallings said, "The president had no choice but to respond militarily in light of evidence linking Khadafi to the reprehensible terrorist attack in Berlin and to planned acts of violence."

Stallings said if America's allies had gone along with the effort for economic sanctions, the attack would not have been necessary.

"I am under no illusion that this attack will end terrorism. But from now on, Khadafi and his gang of cowards will appreciate the high, hopefully prohibitive, costs of further acts of violence," Stallings said.

House members filing for re-election included Richard Adams, D-Grangeville; Albert M. Johnson, D-Pocatello; Pete Black, D-Pocatello; Glenn Hoagland, R-Mountain Home; Raymond Parks, R-Blackfoot; and Mack Nelbauer, R-Paul.

Former House member Gordon Hollifield of Jerome filed for the Senate seat now held by Sen. Larry Anderson, R-Twin Falls. Hollifield is a Republican.

Arthur Beal, Oja, filed for the Democratic nomination for the seat surrendered by Sen. David Little, R-Emmett; Lee Knowles, Coeur d'Alene, filed for the seat now held by Rep. Dean Haegenson, R-Coeur d'Alene.

Mrs. Chapman's husband, state of Idaho.

Appealing in the spring are lighter meals, such as (from left) Artichokes and Halibut, Pan-Grilled Halibut and Rice with Spicy Sauce, and Artichokes and Rice Accompaniment

Artichokes in their prime for spring meals

Spring is here. Days last longer and the rich and hearty meals of winter lose their appeal. Foods that are light, easy and healthy renew spring's promise.

Choose basic ingredients that are low in calories and high in nutrition. They should offer a wide range of meal planning possibilities. And preparing food using a minimum of added fat is one of the first steps to lighter, healthier eating.

Seafood has come into its own as the protein choice for the health-conscious consumer. Halibut, a lean and tender white-fleshed fish, has an appealingly delicate flavor. It can be baked, steamed, poached or sautéed with minimum added fat in non-stick cookware. It is the ideal solution to reducing fats without sacrificing taste, appearance or ease of preparation.

Artichokes, available year-round, are at their peak in the spring months. Wonderful as finger food with a dip, artichokes can also be cooked in a variety of ways as shown here.

Rice, one of the world's most versatile and popular foods, is an excellent source of complex carbohydrates. Since ½ cup cooked rice contains 82 calories, it is a perfect choice for today's lighter food trends. The easy-to-follow cooking chart explains types of rice and methods of cooking.

Give your spring meal planning a flair by looking at new equipment and cooking techniques and by taking a fresh look at some traditional foods.

ARTICHOKES AND HALIBUT
 (Microwave method*)

2 medium artichokes
 2 tablespoons olive oil

1 teaspoon each thyme leaves, crushed and salt.
 1 clove garlic, minced
 2 (6 ounces each) halibut steaks, thawed if necessary
 1 cup each vertically sliced red pepper and julienned zucchini
 Bend back outer petals of artichokes until petals snap off easily. Discard outer petals and fuzzy centers; discard slice artichokes vertically. Arrange artichokes with seasoning mixture

1 teaspoon each thyme leaves, crushed
 Microwave, covered at medium-high (70 percent) 3 minutes. Arrange halibut and remaining vegetables in microwave-safe dish. Brush with remaining seasoning mixture. Microwave, covered at high (100 percent) 5 to 8 minutes longer. Let stand, covered, 2 minutes. Makes 2 servings.

*Recipe developed for 600 to 700 watt microwave oven.

FESTIVE HALIBUT SALAD

3½ cups cooked rice, cooled
 1 cup diagonally sliced celery
 1 cup diagonally sliced green onions
 1 red pepper, seeded and cut into ½ inch squares
 1 teaspoon chicken bouillon granules
 ½ teaspoon dill weed
 ¼ cup water
 ¼ cup mayonnaise

Salt and coarsely ground black pepper
 1 pound halibut, thawed if necessary, boned, skinned, sliced diagonally and poached
 2 prepared artichokes*

Pellets
 Combine rice, celery, onions and red pepper. In small saucepan combine bouillon, dill weed and water; bring to boil. Cool; gradually stir into mayonnaise. Pour over rice mixture; toss lightly but thoroughly. Season with salt and pepper if desired. Chill. Arrange halibut, artichokes and rice mixture on individual lettuce-lined plates. Makes 6 servings.

*To poach halibut: Pour water to a depth of 1 inch in a large skillet; salt and season to taste. Bring mixture to boil. Add halibut slices and return to boil. Simmer, covered, about 10 minutes per inch of thickness of halibut.

Food fests honor eels to zucchinis

By MARK FRITZ
 The Associated Press

You can launch a rocket-powered squash in New Hampshire, skin an eel in North Carolina, stalk asparagus in Michigan and even get a date in California.

Food festivals, where towns honor everything from artichokes to zucchinis, are typically American tribute to the local produce, says a woman who took a gastronomic gander at 58 such fests.

"They do have some food festivals in Europe, but I don't think they have them quite like over here," said Alice M. Geffen, co-author of a new book called "Food Festival."

Ms. Geffen said she and co-author Carole Bergie spent three years visiting the festivals, sipping garlic ice cream, watching crawfish races and warily sampling bluefish mosey.

"We went to every single one and we ate everything there and then we went home and tested all the recipes," she said Tuesday in an interview from her home on

New York's Long Island. She said the oddest festival she encountered was the "Strange Seafood Exhibition," held every August in Beaufort, N.C. Visitors help their plates with smoked eel, octopus salad, dog clams and such ocean-going weaponry as triggerfish and sturgeon.

"We had tea made from sea lettuce and a lot of other strange things, some of which we weren't too crazy about," she said.

It doesn't take a keen sense of smell to tell what's being celebrated in the northern California town of Gilroy in late July, when the Gilroy Garlic Festival is held.

"The garlic wine was lousy but the garlic ice cream was good," she said.

The authors say California's Coachella Valley is the only region in the Western Hemisphere where dates are grown.

The Date Festival in India, which adopts a Middle East flavor and even features camel races, draws 175,000 visitors a year.

The festivals tend to feature a "wild array" of contests, but the strangest was the crawfish races.

Try quiche for less perfect asparagus

The best part of travel? Coming home!

There really is no better place, I think travel gives us the advantage of truly appreciating where we live.

We go to the other side, where in the brochures and posters it's always greener (it rains more, too). We long for the white beaches and balmy days away from chores and wind and want the exotic in settings and food. Yep, there are great places, great food and great sights.

But soon your feet are weary, and you realize you wore the wrong shoes. (The Great Wall of China has a greater incline than Exhibition ski run at Sun Valley.)

The food is exotic. (You memorize

Nancy Joy Jones
 Valley cooking

the Chinese characteristics for braised dog meat and, when in doubt, order fried peanuts.)

You get tired of always having every question you ask take two minutes of dialogue in the native tongue, then when the answer comes back a simple "yes," you realize you can't remember what you asked!

I wouldn't have traded any of our trips and experiences if for no other reason than to know beyond a doubt we live in one of the greatest spots on this sphere.

Give me another month or so and I'll be rarin' to go on another trip, but for now I am going to enjoy springtime in our vast valley.

I realize the full implications of that. It means living a loose schedule. When the day is balmy, grab the rake and shovel quick, because tomorrow you can clean the attic while the late winter splits her dying vengeance at us.

It means tying your dog up on a fencepost close to "your chosen bed of asparagus so others don't trespass on your domain. I've often wondered whether the most violent property rights issues in Magic Valley were in the spring over the wild asparagus or in the fall over the wild pheasant?

We all know what to do with the asparagus we get that is young and tender, but if you want a recipe that is good for those less-than-perfect pieces, try this asparagus quiche. You'll need a 9-inch pie pan or flan or quiche pan.

TWIN FALLS — Turid Gardner changed careers two years ago and has had no regrets.

Previously, she worked in accounting and as a sales representative.

In her new career, she is able to enjoy knitting, crocheting and experiment with new recipes. She is now a full-time mother and homemaker.

"I just look at homemaking as a different kind of a career, and I feel it's a real privilege in this day and age, to be able to be a homemaker full-time. It's a luxury, I feel, and I appreciated it," she said.

Her career in motherhood began six months ago when she and her husband, Douglass, adopted a baby boy named Paul Robert.

"It's just a different life. It's a big adjustment after 12 years of marriage—to all-of-a-sudden have a child," she said. "It's definitely a change for the better. We've wanted a child for a long time."

She made an even bigger adjustment almost 13 years ago, coming to this country from Norway. She had been training to become a translator and needed more English classes to become certified. So, she was able to find what she required at the University of Utah.

It was there she met and married Douglass.

And, although there are no employment opportunities for a Norwegian translator in the Intermountain area, she has been able to utilize this skill in church work.

Douglass learned to speak Norwegian while on a church mission in Norway for two years. They communicate to each other in both languages.

When they talk to little Paul, she speaks Norwegian and Douglass speaks English.

"I'm pretty sure Paul will not speak Norwegian, but at least he will be able to understand it, so that if we went to Norway for any length of time, he could pick it up easily enough," she said.

Asparagus

 to 4-pound cut-up asparagus (about 1 cup to 1 1/2 cups)
 1/2 cup green onions, chopped
 1 clove garlic, minced
 1/4 teaspoon grated lemon peel, optional
 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 4 eggs
 1/2 cups half and half or light cream
 1/2 cup Swiss cheese, shredded
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper or 2 drops hot pepper sauce
 First make a pastry by combining the flour and salt in a medium-sized bowl. Cut in the shortening using a pastry blender or knives until mix is like coarse crumbs. Sprinkle over the first 1/2 cup of Swiss cheese and carefully stir. Gradually add the water, 1 tablespoon at a time, stirring well after each addition. Add just enough to make mixture hold together in a ball.

 Roll out a rolling surface and lightly pin. Roll dough in a circle that is 2 inches larger than the bottom of your pan. Put pastry in pan and flute edges of pastry.
 Cover with a clear plastic wrap and refrigerate at least 20 minutes. You could do this step in the morning and finish it in the evening for dinner.
 When ready to finish, preheat oven to 425 degrees.
 In a large skillet heat the oil over medium-high setting. Add the asparagus, green onions, garlic, lemon peel and tomato juice. Cook for 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat.

In a large bowl, beat the eggs with a wire whisk, then stir in the half and half, remaining 1/2 cup of cheese, salt and pepper and the asparagus mixture. Pour into the prepared pastry shell.
 Bake for 15 minutes then reduce oven temperature to 325 degrees and bake about 35 more minutes or until set.
 Let this stand for a few minutes before serving.
 A couple of years ago we were visiting for a few spring days in Cologne, Germany. Our host for dinner carefully explained that there were five seasons in their calendar: the usual four plus asparagus season. I then realized there were "nuts" like some of us all over the world.
 Their menus all had one super ad-dillon, and it's one I think we can adapt even though their asparagus was different than ours. (It was fat and white and so very tender).

 They used very thin slices of ham and rolled each cooked stalk of asparagus in a slice. I've done the same, only used three cooked thinner stalks.
 You can serve this as an appetizer, a luncheon or dinner entrée or depending on how you feel about this vegetable, for a dessert.
 You can sprinkle grated cheese or put slices of cheese on top and broil; you could spoon some hollandaise sauce or some of the great seasoned mustards on top. Do what you like and what you know your family will like. Look in your cupboard and refrigerator for other possible toppings. However, it is just grand plain!

If you are planning on freezing some of the bounty for later, here are a few hints. First, don't be a pig. There is enough for all of us, unless you think you have to put up enough to feed a small army. If you have a small army, only give it to them once or twice, not every week.
 Plan on freezing it the same day you pick it. You should do it within three or four hours of picking, so have everything handy before you go on foray.
 Clean the pieces by running under cold water to remove grit and divide by thickness. Cut lengths to fit your containers.
 You should cook asparagus in aenameled stainless steel. Use a couple of layers of cheesecloth and lower the asparagus onto a rack that is over 2 or 3 inches of boiling water so it gets steamed. Cover and time 4 minutes for small stalks and 5 for larger.

 As soon as you get it out, put it in cold running water (or ice water) to set it up. One rule of thumb is to leave it in the cold for as long as it was in the steam. Drain on a screen or towels.
 Pack in containers, seal and freeze immediately.
 Now you can enjoy it for the next year, until you again arm yourself with a suitable weapon and go hunting. In case, you never could understand your husband's hunting trips, this is a similar experience, so enjoy!

 "I feel it's an advantage for a child to be bilingual. I think they learn faster in school."
 Paul will probably have need for his mother's "mother's tongue," because his parents go to Norway every couple of years and her family comes here often.
 The Gardners enjoy eating Norwegian and typical American dishes. "Douglass prefers American country cooking, with the rolls and the ham, and the roasts," she says. But they include Italian and Mexican food in their diet and eat some Norwegian food, like goat cheese sandwiches every day.
 An open-faced sandwich is a typical Norwegian breakfast, she said.
 The following are a couple of recipes for dishes her mother prepared while she lived at home in Norway.

FRUIT SOUP (FRUKTSUPPE)
 1/2 cup minute tapioca
 1 cup raisins, light or dark
 1 cup pitted prunes
 1 cup diced dried apricots or peaches
 1 stick cinnamon
 6 cups hot water
 4 cups apple juice
 Sugar, if needed, to taste
 In a large saucepan, combine the tapioca, raisins, prunes, apricots or peaches, cinnamon stick and water. Heat to boiling. Blend ingredients. Simmer until tapioca is transparent, about 1/2 hour. The soup will be thickened and clear. Add apple juice, taste, and if desired, add sugar. Serve hot or cold. Serves eight.

"In the summertime, my mother used to serve it a lot, before the main course, cold, as an appetizer. It's a refresher," she said.
 The next recipe, she said, is a light one for the warm weather...

BAKED COD
 1 1/2 pounds fresh or frozen cod fillet
 1 tablespoon butter
 2 teaspoons salt
 1 teaspoon ground white pepper
 4 or 5 sliced tomatoes
 2 cups of either baby Swiss cheese or Jarlsberg cheese, grated
 1/2 cup whipping cream
 If fish is frozen, thaw. If fresh, remove skin-and-bones-and-fillet-it. Use paper towels to wipe fish dry. Pre-heat oven to 370 degrees. Grease bottom of a 13x9-inch baking dish. Arrange the dry fish in dish. Sprinkle with salt and white pepper. Top with tomato slices. Cover fish completely with tomatoes. Sprinkle the cheese and pour whipping cream over top. Bake for 25 minutes until the fish flakes. Serves four.

 At the International Zucchini Festival in Harrisville, N.H., one can compete in the Most Peaceful Use of a Vegetable contest and gather around Zuke Central to launch rocket-powered vegetables while signs warn "No Cukes."
 Getting ready for the festivals is a feat itself, said Sherri Craichy, a city commissioner in La Belle, Fla., where folks are still recovering from February's Swamp Cabbage Festival.
 "People were kind of gearing up all over town, getting cabbage ready, having parties," she said. "The theme is always swamp cabbage. People come from far and wide to see it."
 Although most festivals are one-day fests, they often play a big part in the local economy.
 "It has a tremendous impact," said Carl Simon, president of the Crawfish Festival Merchants Association in Breaux Bridge. "We get in excess of 100,000 people from all over the world."
 Louisiana has the most festivals listed in the book at seven, while Michigan, Virginia and California are second with four each.

U.S. bureau embargoes uncertified Italian wine imports

Tainted wine scandal unlikely to reach U.S., importers say

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Fears by American consumers about tainted Italian wines may have "tragic" consequences for the industry, even though contaminated wine is unlikely to enter this country, importers said Friday.

It might be capitalized as a major disaster for importers, said Tom O'Neill, executive director of the National Association of Beverage Importers, which represents 120 companies.

Since early March, 22 people in Italy have died after drinking cheap, methanol-laced wine.

The federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said Thursday it will embargo imports of Italian wines that lack certificates indicating they are not laced with methanol. It stressed that no tainted wines have been found here.

To this point, however, the Italian government has not been able to give us any real assurance that none has been exported to the United States," said the director, Stephen E. Higgins. "We are taking all steps to guarantee the safety of the American consumer."

Higgins said the bureau would continue testing Italian wine, and importers and wholesalers have been asked to send samples of Italian wine to laboratories for analysis.

Higgins called the steps precautionary, and said that further steps would be taken if necessary.

Mike Paparella of the Italian Trade Commission said the controversy had been blown out of proportion.

"The types of wine involved would never be exported," he said.

"This is a scandal of national proportion in Italy, but as far as the U.S. goes, the story is overdone," he said. "Basically, all this will do is cost U.S. and Italian workers millions of dollars."

On Friday, the Italian Health Ministry said more than 300 wines, which were not publicly identified, have been found to contain illegal amounts of methanol. Small quantities of methanol are allowed in wines to increase alcoholic content, but large quantities can cause coma, blindness and death.

The Italian government had previously released a list of 60 suspected wines, but none of the names are well known in the United States, said Geoffrey Giovanetti, managing director of the Wine & Spirits Shippers Association.

"To my knowledge, none of the companies on the list are supplying products to our members, and I'd draw a further conclusion that none are supplying products on the U.S. market," said Giovanetti, whose organization arranges imports of alcoholic beverages for 325 companies around the United States.

The scandal has crippled Italy's $1 billion wine-export business.

Safeway Stores, based in Oakland, Calif., ordered Italian wines pulled from store shelves on Thursday, and scattered supermarkets elsewhere were reported doing the same. The Washington State Liquor Control Board also ordered all Italian wines pulled from shelves.

"I think it will create a consumer caution in buying anything that came out of Italy, which is tragic because it seems the problems will soon produce, seems to have no relevance on products imported to the United States," Giovanetti said.

Industry figures show that slightly over half of table wine imported into the United States comes from Italy.

About 40 percent of the Italian wine is imported by Villa Bandi, based in Old Bridgeville, N.Y., which imports 11-tune wine. The company released a statement saying there have been no methanol problems associated with its wines.

"We don't think an entire industry should be persecuted, but it's happened," said Carmel Joseph Tintle, the president of the company. "People will come to realize that the wine they have been enjoying for years is fine. Then the industry will regain the market it has had."

Beverage industry focuses on tampering

Los Angeles Times

Hoping to prevent the product tampering that riddled the drug industry earlier this year, the publishers of a wine newsletter are sponsoring a conference on how the alcoholic beverage industry can circumvent similar problems.

The event, scheduled for April 22 at Georgia Washington University in Washington, will discuss the likelihood of terrorism or extortion hitting wine, beer or spirit manufacturers. This segment of the beverage industry is particularly vulnerable to tampering, according to the Wine Industry News, the event sponsor.

Not only must the companies involved with these products prepare for the "terrorist, fanatic or lunatic," but must also be leery of social activists, who "often" calls for limiting or outlawing sales of alcohol beverages, a flyer for the conference states.

Conferees will hear presentations on preventing and detecting contamination along with dealing with the media and the public once a problem is isolated.

Wine Industry News, in its promotional material, states that anti-fraud "terror" groups are of particular concern.

but or until halibut flakes when tested with a fork. Chill.

**Prepare artichokes according to directions for Artichokes and Halibut, substituting 1 tablespoon vegetable oil and 1/4 teaspoon salt for the seasoning mixture of bread seasonings. Microwave as above, or steam, covered, 10 minutes over gently boiling water. Chill.

ARTICHOKE AND RICE ACCOMPANIMENT

(Microwave method)

- 1 cup sliced mushrooms
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 1 cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese
- 2 tablespoons thinly sliced green onions
- 1/4 teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 3 cups cooked rice, cooked in chicken broth
- 4 medium prepared and cooked artichokes
- 1 microcok mushrooms and butter at high (100 percent) 1 to 2 minutes. Gently stir mushrooms, cheese, green onions and seasonings into cooked rice. Remove center petals and fuzzy centers of artichokes with rice mixture. Microcok at high (100 percent) 8 to 12 minutes or bake at 350 degrees 15 to 20 minutes until thoroughly heated. Makes 4 servings.

Recipe developed for 600-700 watt microwaves

**To prepare artichokes: Pull off lower outer petals of artichoke; snip off tips of remaining petals; cut off top third of artichokes and stems. Stand prepared artichokes in pot with 3 cups boiling water seasoned with 1 tablespoon each olive oil and wine vinegar, 1 clove crushed garlic, 1 bay leaf, 12 peppercorns and 1 teaspoon salt. Cover and boil gently about 30 minutes or until petal near center pulls out easily. Drain.

PAN-GRILLED HALIBUT AND RICE WITH SPIC SAUCE

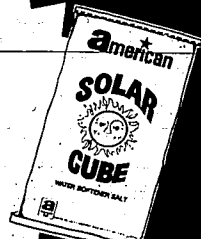

- 1 onion, sliced and separated into rings
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 2 to 3 tablespoons olive oil, divided
- Flour
- 1/2 cup each chicken broth and milk
- 1/2 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
- 1 can (4 ounces) green chiles, drained and chopped
- 3 to 4 dashes bottled hot pepper sauce
- Salt
- 4 cups hot cooked rice
- 6-8 ounces (each) halibut steaks, thawed if necessary
- 1 tomato, peeled and cut into chunks
- Fresh cilantro

Cook onion and garlic in 1 tablespoon oil until softened; blend in 2 tablespoons flour. Add chicken broth and milk; cook and stir until slightly thickened. Simmer 5 minutes. Add chiles, green chiles, pepper sauce and salt to taste; cook and stir until cheese melts. Keep sauce warm. Sprinkle fish lightly with flour and salt. Heat 1 tablespoon oil in large skillet with nonstick surface. Add halibut in single layer without crowding and cook over medium-high heat about 8 minutes or until golden brown on both sides and fish flakes when tested with a fork. Keep warm in oven. Repeat with remaining halibut. Arrange halibut steaks and rice on platter. Stir tomato into sauce; drizzle sauce over rice and halibut. Garnish with cilantro. Pass remaining sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Retailer can help refunders by reporting repeat complaints

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Dear Martin — I work as a cashier in a chair-mat store, and we distribute manufacturers' refund forms to customers who purchase the appropriate products. I am in charge of keeping the forms updated and making sure all the cashiers have an ample supply.

One problem is this: Customers wait six to eight weeks to receive their refunds from the manufacturers, and when the refunds don't come in, they call my company to complain. Some of them even ask my company to pay the refund.

I explain to these customers that the refunds and rebates come from the manufacturer, not from us, and tell them to call the manufacturer. Is there anything else we can do? Jane DeBuono, Walgreens, Boca Raton, Fla.

Dear Jane — You can keep a record of which brands or manufacturers have the "most" complaints concerning refunds. Then, every month or two, you can let your company's buyers know which manufacturers are giving your customers the most problems.

You can also post a sign in your store giving customers advice on pending for refunds and rebates. An instance, even though the mail-in form says the refund will arrive in four to eight weeks, you can let them know that the wait can actually take up to 12 months. Patience is required.

Suggest that your customers seal the envelope, they should check to make sure they have followed the instructions and included all the required proofs of purchase. Well-sealed envelopes usually have fewer problems.

Finally, your bulletin-board notice can tell customers that even though your company is not legally responsible for manufacturers' refunds and rebates, you are interested in hearing from those who do not receive them.

This kind of concerned participation by retailers will go a long way toward influencing manufacturers to pay more attention to the fulfillment of their promotional offers.

Of course, there are some situations in which the retailer should take some responsibility for a manufacturer's refund. Michelle Hillon of Boise, Idaho, wrote that Buttery Food and Drug inadvertently advertised and gave out refund forms for the Black & Decker Dustbuster several weeks before the refund offer was to start. She promptly sent for the refund and when her refund request was rejected, she went back to Buttery and explained the problem. Buttery paid the refund.

"I wrote Buttery a thank you letter," says Michelle, "for taking care of this situation when a big company, like Black & Decker, could not be bothered."

This week's Smart Shopping Award goes to Alleen Swiccood of Lexington, N.C.: "While shopping at Orange Juice on sale for 69 cents. In my coupon wallet, I found a 20-cent Citrus Hill coupon, which brought the cost down to just 49 cents. But my savings were not over. When I got home and unloaded my shopping bag, I noticed a Citrus Hill $1 refund form printed on the outside of the bag! How's that for saving money?"

Dear SOS: I need help. I have not been able to make a tasty meat loaf. Please find one for me. —FAITHFUL

FAITHFUL
Dear Faithful: A great meat loaf comes from 72 Market Street, a restaurant in Venice, Calif. We happen to have the recipe for this exquisite meat loaf, which, says chef Leonard Schwartz, was a result of years of experimentation, not just experiment. The loaf is served with spinach and mashed potatoes.

MEAT LOAF 72 MARKET STREET

- 3-4 cup minced onion
- 3-4 cup minced green onion
- 1-2 cup minced celery
- 1-2 cup minced carrot
- 1-4 cup minced green pepper
- 1-4 cup minced sweet red pepper
- 2 teaspoons minced garlic
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1-4 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1 teaspoon black pepper
- 1-2 teaspoon white pepper
- 1-2 teaspoon ground cumin
- 1-2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 1-2 cup half and half
- 1-2 cup catsup
- 1 1/2 pounds lean ground beef
- 1/2 pound lean ground pork
- 3 eggs, beaten
- 1/4 cup dry bread crumbs
- Sauce

Saute onion, green onion, celery, carrot, green pepper, red pepper and garlic in butter until vegetables are soft and liquid is absorbed. Cool and reserve.

Combine salt, cayenne, black pepper, white pepper, cumin and nutmeg and add to vegetable mix. Stir in half and half, catsup, beef, pork, eggs and bread crumbs. Mix well.

Form into loaf and place on greased baking sheet or 9- by 5-inch loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees 45 to 50 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes before slicing. Pour off excess fat. Slice and serve with Gravy. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

These are among the findings published in the "Fast Food Eating Guide" by the Washington-based of health advocacy organization Center for Science in the Public Interest. In an attempt to educate patrons of fast-food eateries, the organization has compiled the calorie, fat, sodium and sugar content of foods served by 13 such purveyors. Based on the National Academy of Science's recommended daily intake of no more than 1,100 to 3,300 mg of sodium, and the CSPI's suggested fat intake of no more than 10 to 15 teaspoons per day, the chart also offers a "gloom" rating for each food. Blackberry-Filled Tarts could star at a bridal shower with a 'Bakers Dozen' theme

Blackberry tarts luscious

Spring-brings-out-the-hope-in-people That must be why so many nappy events occur when the flowers are blooming and the air is warm. Mother's Day, Father's Day, graduations and, most joyous of all, weddings, are all heart-warming spring occasions for entertaining friends and family.

Give a lucky bride a theme shower. For a domestic woman, a "Bakers Dozen" theme could completely outfit her kitchen with everything she needs for home baking from measuring spoons and mixing bowls to baking tins and electric mixers. For refreshments, ask guests to bring home-baked favorites with their matching recipes on file cards to give the bride. She can start her married life with her own treasure trove of recipes complete with memories.

Blackberry-Filled Tarts will be a star among the baked treats. A double batch will ensure plenty since these jewel-like treats will disappear in seconds when guests taste the delicately spiced filling and tender crust.

Oregon canned fruits are a good starting point for recipes that begin at breakfast and finish whenever the last guests go home at midnight. Over 15 different fruits and berries, picked at their peak of ripeness are processed under strict conditions to deliver a product known for its quality. Present the bride a perfect gift: a set of tart tins, a clutch of wooden mixing spoons and a good selection of fruit. Arrange them in a pretty basket or mixing bowl, wrap up in a cherry dish towel. It is gift that's brimming with good taste.

Hybrid seed costs more, but end product worth it

In selecting plants and seeds for your garden, hybrid varieties offer some definite advantages. The biggest advantage is extra vigor. Vigor means higher yields, faster growth and sometimes larger plants. Because of the way hybrids are produced, it usually means greater uniformity from plant to plant. Since hybrid varieties are usually of more recent development, they often carry more resistance to diseases and insects, too.

Hybrids are produced by cross-pollinating two unrelated parents. But the real work in developing hybrid varieties comes in the selection and development of the parents. Professional plant breeders may spend five or more years selecting, testing and improving the parents. Hundreds of plants may be tested until the choice is narrowed down to the two which make the best combination for the hybrid variety.

Hybrid seed production is also more expensive. Self-pollination must be prevented. Most plants have both male and female sex organs in the same flower. With some hybrid flowers, each flower of the female parent must be individually opened by hand and the anther or male part of the flower removed. Then the pollen from the male parent is gathered and applied using a brush.

Sweet corn was the first vegetable to be hybridized. Corn has separate male and female flowers. The ears are formed from the female flowers and the tassels in the top of the plant have the stamens or male flowers. It is a simpler process to cut the tassels off before the pollen is ripe. The male parent is planted beside the female parent to provide the pollen.

In many other vegetables a male sterile character

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

has been found which eliminates the need for removing the male part of the flowers.

Because of the extra time and work involved in developing and producing hybrids, the seed or plant cost is often much more. However, in most cases, the additional yield, vigor or uniformity is well worth the cost. For example, an additional cost of 50 cents for a package of hybrid tomato seed may result in a half bushel of extra tomatoes worth several dollars.

The advantages with hybrid flowers is greater uniformity and more prolific flowering.

One disadvantage with hybrids is that seed saved from them is very diverse and of undependable quality. Therefore, if you want to save your own seed, do not plant hybrids.

I have a list of both hybrid and nonhybrid vegetables which have proven adaptability in the Intermountain area. Includes with the list are some planting instructions for each kind of vegetable, and a list of sources for hard-to-find varieties.

If you would like a copy, send $1 and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Allen Wilson, P.O. Box 40, Rexburg, Idaho 83440. Ask for vegetable list.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at RLCCs College.

Preserving plants of the past at Jefferson's Monticello

The Washington State Horticultural Society is sponsoring a series of sales which will begin probably in the fall of 1987. You might also keep in mind Jefferson's Monticello. Jefferson was a generous man, and he often shared his plants with others. He was a national leader in the preservation of old varieties. He said of the so-called "latifolia" apple that it was the "juiciest I ever tasted," but efforts to locate this old variety have been unavailing. Probably an apple of great distinction would not have died out completely, and my guess is that Jefferson discovered it will not be quite as common as "Carroll" (person notwithstanding) if it is ever found. As for the fig, a fully ripe fig of any commercial variety is likely to seem miraculous, and 45 years ago before the first fig I have ever tasted. Of the place became quite the tourist cherry, Jefferson said, "No other attraction it is now) I used to swap figs from the bushes at Monticello occasionally and do not recall anything very special about them. But then you take the "Newtown Pippin" apple; one of the varieties that will be sold. This was always called the "Alabama Pippin" in Virginia, though now it is considered identical with the "Newtown," an 18th-century, Yankee variety. It is certainly a superior apple, and you might think it would have remained in heavy commercial production, but it has not.

They still grow it here and there, and sometimes I have made trips to Charlottesville in October to buy it. It is also available from some commercial nursery sources.

But I think you could say it is a bypassed apple variety, and hardly a significant occupant of modern apple orchards.

Aids extend growing season

Growing vegetables outdoors year round is possible, even in cold-winter climates, when you extend your growing season with a cloche, cold frame or greenhouse. With one such unit you just might be able to wipe fresh vegetables off your grocery list next winter, say the editors of Better Homes and Gardens Garden Ideas.

Using everything from ancient ceremonial rain dances to modern cloud seeders, human beings have been trying to control the weather for centuries. It's easier to join forces with Mother Nature, using methods that maximize the sun and rain you get.

With proper placement of your garden, you can overcome unpredictable changes in the weather. For example, cool air tends to flow toward lower elevations, while warm air rises. To compensate for these natural temperature variations, locate your garden on high ground so tender plants won't suffer from cold air settling in pockets in the ground. Because good drainage is essential, too, a level site is best.

Keep in mind that a slope facing south is warmer than a northern slope because it receives more direct sunlight. In the spring, snow will melt sooner and soil will warm more quickly with a southern exposure.

The secret to getting an early start in your spring vegetable garden is to trap sun and moisture to encourage vigorous plant growth. Methods have evolved far beyond placing empty milk cartons and coffee cans over tender vegetable seedlings to more sophisticated plant covers, such as cloches, cold frames and greenhouses.

In gardening terminology, a cloche is any transparent structure designed to give crops a head start in early spring and to prolong harvests later into the fall. Used in early spring, a cloche can give you a three-to-six-week jump on the growing season. In the fall, it can often extend harvest of cool-weather crops through the winter.

Whether your season starter is as simple as a single plant cone or as advanced as a cold frame, the idea is having healthy, young vegetable plants while snow clings to the ground is exciting.

With good protection provided by a cloche, some cold-hardy crops, such as kale, Swiss chard, mustard, leeks and spinach, can be grown almost any time of the year.

The cones are 30 inches wide at the base and have a small hole at the top for air circulation. As the warm air within the cone heats up, it rises to the top of the structure where it condenses on the fiberglass walls. If the air inside the cone gets too warm, it can escape through the top.

Fans, experts debate status of 1986 Celtics

By HOWARD ULMAN
The Associated Press

BOSTON — The Boston Celtics may be the best team in NBA history. Unfortunately for fans fond of rankings and disdainful of unsettled debates, there's probably no way to tell.

Changing conditions in different eras make it tough to say which of the best is better than the rest. "They should be considered" among the greatest NBA clubs, Portland Coach Jack Ramsay said Tuesday of the Celtics. "I think it's very difficult to determine what team is best. Different levels of competition enter into the picture."

"I really don't compare ex-players and prior teams," said Los Angeles Lakers General Manager Jerry West. "It has no validity at all."

Former NBA great Wilt Chamberlain said tougher competition when the league had fewer teams and numerous critical injuries this season strengthen arguments against claims that this year's Celtics are the best team ever.

"It's nice that people want to compare, but I think you can't compare," he said. Boston's 67-15 record this season was the fourth best in NBA history. West played for the Lakers in 1971-72 when they were 69-13, the NBA's best mark. Ramsay was general manager of the Philadelphia 76ers in 1966-67, when they were 68-13, the second top record. Chamberlain played for both clubs.

"The league is totally different now than when we were playing," said Chamberlain, whose 14-year career ended in 1972-73. "You have 23 teams compared to 1966-67 when you had 10. The concentration (of talent) was a great deal stronger."

"When I was playing in the Eastern Division (in 1959-60) with Syracuse, New York, Boston and Philadelphia, which was a very strong division, we had to play each other 13 times a year," he added. "Who are the Celtics playing now? The Lakers once or twice?" He said, however, he considered Boston "by far the best team in the country this year."

The Celtics' path also was smoothed out by a rash of injuries that struck many teams, particularly their Atlantic Division foes. Philadelphia lost guard Andrew Toney for most of the season. Washington spent a good portion of it without center Jeff Rutland, New Jersey went through the latter part with center Darryl Dawkins on the sidelines and New York was decimated by injuries to Bernard King

Bill Cartwright, Patrick Ewing, Pat Cummings and others.

"It's pretty hard for Boston to think they would have had that kind of record if all those teams were healthy," Chamberlain said. "Too many guys were hurt this year for it to be a year to compare teams."

Chicago star Michael Jordan also was sidelined for most of the season. But he's back and will lead the Bulls into Boston Thursday night for the first game of the best-of-five opening playoff round.

"I don't think they can beat Boston," said Ramsay, whose team put the only blemish on the Celtics' 40-1 home record this season, the best in NBA history. "We match up with the Celtics pretty well when we have all our players."

McHale, with Bill Walton in reserve, is outstanding, but may not be the best in league history. "That Philadelphia team (in 1966-67) was extremely strong (physically)," he said. "Chamberlain, Luke Jackson, Chet Walker, Billy Cunningham, a very formidable front line, and I don't know that Boston's front line can match that."

Individual skill, though, isn't everything. "All great teams have more than talent," West said. "I think that's the least factor sometimes. They (the Celtics) are unselfish. They have got direction and leadership in a coach (K.C. Jones)."

Chamberlain knows discussions about the greatest basketball team may be infeasible, but they can lose their steam awfully quickly.

Murtaugh outlasts a late Oakley rush

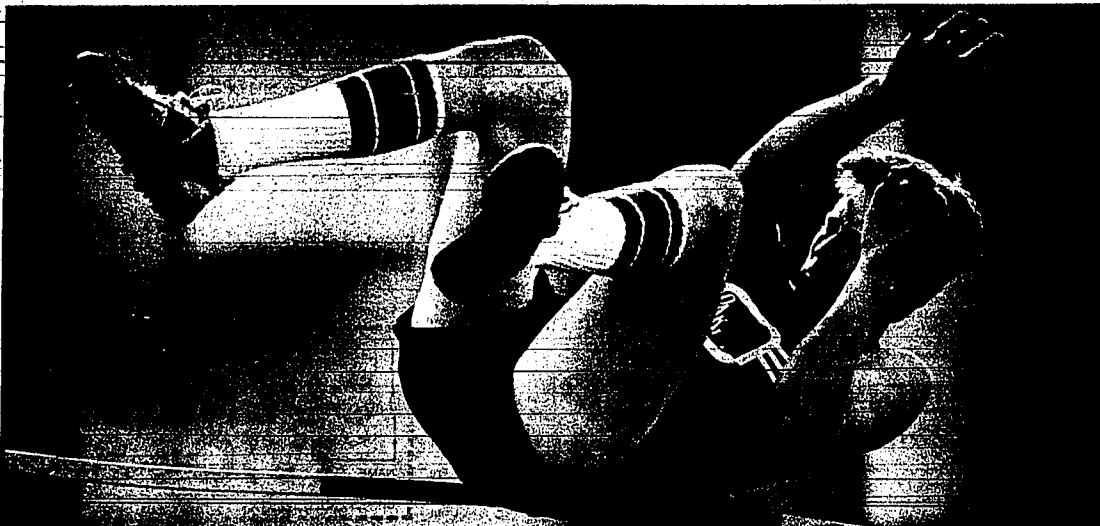

By RON GATES
Times News Writer

MURTAUGH — In a Magic Valley Conference meet Tuesday that saw just four teams in competition, the Murtaugh boys pulled off a surprise while the strong Half River girls romped to an easy victory.

Showing surprising speed on the track, including a sweep of the hurdles, and firsts in two of four relay events, the Red-Devil boys fought off a strong Oakley challenge in the final event of the day — the mile relay — to come away with a three-point win.

Juniors Lorace Kempton and Mammie Williams led the Trojan parade. Kempton captured a first in the 200 and anchored three winning relays, while Williams took firsts in the 110-meter hurdles and the open 800, all as running on a pace of relay teams.

Wolfpack's Washburn chooses NBA draft

The Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — Chris Washburn, North Carolina State's 6-foot-11 sophomore center, will give up his final two years of college eligibility to enter the National Basketball Association hardship draft, Wolfpack basketball Coach Jim Valvano said Tuesday.

"I spoke Monday night with ... Chris' mother, and again this morning," Valvano said, "and Mrs. Washburn indicated his intention is to bypass his last two years of college and turn professional."

Washburn, a Hickory, N.C., native, led the Wolfpack in scoring last season with an average of 17.8 points per game and 6.7 rebounds.

An underclassman may put his name up for the NBA draft anytime before May 31. Washburn was suspended from the team after being charged with stealing a stereo from the dormitory room of a fellow student. He was convicted on misdemeanor charges, stemming from the theft and was sentenced to 30 hours of community service, a $1,000 fine and counseling.

Ex-Laker Baylor rejoins NBA ranks in Clippers' office

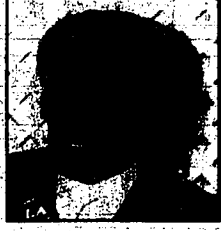

By JOHN NAEDEL
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Hall of Famer Elgin Baylor is returning to the NBA as the director of basketball operations for the Los Angeles Clippers, it was announced Tuesday.

The former Los Angeles Lakers great, who has been out of basketball since 1979, replaces Carl Seese, the general manager of the Clippers since they moved north from San Diego nearly two years ago.

Baylor will deal only with the basketball side of the Clippers' operation, according to Alvin Rothenberg, the team's president, who said he will soon name a director of business affairs to be in charge of all non-basketball matters in the front office.

It also was announced at a news conference at the Los Angeles Sports Arena that Don Chaney, who succeeded Jimmy Nyam as the Clippers' head coach late in the 1984-85 season, will return for the 1986-87 campaign.

ELGIN BAYLOR
Director of operations

"I always thought I'd get back in basketball," Baylor said. "It was just a matter of time. I was happy with what I was doing. Basketball's always been my first love. I think I'm a good judge of talent. I don't know why I'm here."

Baylor played in the NBA for 14 seasons and is regarded as one of the greatest forwards ever to play the game. The NBA's seventh all-time leading scorer, he averaged 27.4 points per game as a professional.

Bolt, like Nicklaus, toughens with age

NEW YORK (AP) — Just as middle-aged golfers all over the world were feeling good about 46-year-old Jack Nicklaus winning his sixth Masters, along comes Tommy Bolt to put the event in perspective.

"They, not a single member of our seniors tour made the cut," Bolt said Tuesday.

Nicklaus and Lee Trevino, also 46, were the oldest golfers to play the last two rounds at the Augusta National Golf Club course.

"What happened to Nicklaus was that eagle on the 15th hole. It got his adrenaline flowing. You could see it coming, right out on his forehead," said Bolt.

"Our guys didn't do too well at

Professional golf

Augusta because they couldn't compete on the long course and those silk greens," Bolt said of the 50-and-over golfers.

The seniors tour, which has grown courses shorter than those on the PGA Tour.

Nicklaus and Trevino will be eligible for the seniors in four years.

"I think they'll make great additions," said Bolt, "but they won't find me playing when they get there."

Not that he is thinking of retirement at age 70 — his listed 68 is "ret stage age," he explained.

"Corporate outings, that's what I'm doing," Bolt said. "I'm doing it some now. I play only five or six seniors tournaments a year."

Bolt, who helped pioneer the seniors' competition as an income-producing activity for "100-year-olds" who leave the PGA Tour, plans to devote more time to those one-day events which companies use to combine business with pleasure and enhance their customer and employee relations.

"You fly in, meet some people, talk about a couple of holes with the bosses and their best customers and then fly out again. But, it's not as busy as it sounds."

Bolt's fee for these outings is $7,000.
