Students accept hoax Not a question on 'metric time'

By ANNE FITZHENRY The Associated Press

TOLEDO, Ohio — When science teacher Dave Bourland told his students the nation was switching to "metric time" with 100-minute hours and 10-day weeks, he thought they would learn a lesson in how to question statements as right or wrong.

To his chagrin, none of them challenged him, and the school even got calls from parents asking when metric time would begin.

"They don't think," Bourland said Friday of his ninth-grade science students at Libbey High School. "That's the biggest thing educators are fighting against."

Bourland said he staged the hoax in an attempt to teach students how to use the scientific method of proving a statement wrong or right.

"If I say one thing, you should be able to prove to me that I'm wrong, just as I have to prove to you that I'm right," he said.

Under metric time, days would have 10 hours of daylight, minutes would have 100 seconds and the year would be reduced to 10 months, he told the class.

The numbers on a clock would be replaced by 70s, he said, and July and August would be dropped from the calendar.

No one asked where that time would go, he said.

"No one actually sat down with a pencil and tried to figure it out," Bourland said. "No one came up with the fact that it would not have worked."

"They said that some questions had crossed their mind, but they didn't ask the questions. And I wouldn't have had an answer."

He brought the one-week spoof to an end Wednesday.

"They were very positive. They liked it," he said. "They definitely learned a great deal from this. My philosophy is that education as a whole is simply dull and boring and I try to make my class exciting for my students — it's exciting when they learn something," Bourland said.

American captive slain Anti-Libyan groups in Lebanon may hold others

By JOHN M. GOSHKO The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials said Friday that despite the apparent murder of an American librarian in Lebanon they do not believe that the danger to other American hostages there has increased because of this week's raid on Libya.

The officials, while acknowledging that the chaos of the Lebanese civil war makes any prediction uncertain, noted that at least four of the missing Americans are believed held by an extremist Lebanese Shiite Moslem group hostile to Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, and that it would therefore seem illogical for their captors to harm them out of sympathy for Libya.

Unlike these four, Peter Kilburn, 60, a librarian at the American University in Beirut who disappeared in December 1984 and whose body was found Thursday, was thought to have been the prisoner of another of Lebanon's free-lance terrorist groups.

The officials, who have had much

PETER KILBURN With great-niece, Alicia Little sketched information about Kilburn than the other U.S. hostages, said it was possible that he had been held by a Libyan-controlled group.

hostages arose as President Reagan denied that the United States had staged the air strikes in hopes that Khadafy would be killed in the bombing of his command post in Tripoli.

"We weren't out to kill anybody," Reagan told reporters outside the White House as they shouted questions about a Washington Post report that Khadafy was a target of the attack. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Thursday that the administration hoped the raids might trigger an internal revolt against the Libyan leader, but other administration officials said that they didn't know Khadafy's whereabouts at the time and were not trying to kill him.

Intelligence sources said Friday that Khadafy remained in control of the Libyan government and that any internal rebellion had been put down. The sources said the long-range impact of Tuesday's raid could not be measured, as one put it, "We do not have a good handle on what is going on inside Libya."

The sources said they were especially interested in the Soviet Union's reaction to the raid. "The Soviets have not committed themselves, really, and we believe they want to distance themselves from what (Khadafy) may do in retaliation," one noted.

"Attempts to gauge whether Libyan calls for revenge might endanger the hostages in Lebanon are complicated by the fact that most Lebanese Shiites believe Khadafy was responsible for the 1978 disappearance of Imam Mousa Sadr, the leading Shiite religious figure in Lebanon. This has resulted in strong anti-Khadafy feeling among the Lebanese Shiites, but U.S. and diplomatic sources said that Libya nonetheless has been able to use its oil wealth to purchase the cooperation of some terrorist gangs in the Beirut area.

According to the officials, the U.S. belief is that various of these gangs abducted Kilburn and a William Buckley, a U.S. Embassy political officer whose death was reported last October but has not been confirmed. However, the officials stressed, it has never been clear whether the groups that seized

Discount cut to speed fall in other rates

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve Board said Friday it is cutting its discount rate to 6.5 percent, the lowest level for this key lending rate in eight years.

The move was expected to add further momentum to a dramatic plunge in other interest rates. It was the second time in six weeks the Fed has cut its discount rate, the interest it charges to make loans to financial institutions. A cut in the discount rate is the most dramatic signal the central bank can send that it intends to push interest rates lower.

Interest rates have already fallen sharply this year, reacting both to an easier monetary policy on the part of the Fed and to the dramatic plunge in world oil prices.

Wide anticipation of the latest cut helped spur huge rallies Wednesday in the stock and bond markets. The Fed's move, which will take effect on Monday, puts the discount rate at its lowest level since early 1978. A wide variety of other interest rates, including mortgage rates, are also at their lowest levels in eight years and economists predicted that the new discount rate cut, down from 7 percent, will send rates lower still.

The discount rate was 6 percent in early January 1978, with a rise to 6.5 percent in the middle of that month. The rate was up to 14 percent in 1981.

The Fed decision was made on a 4-1 vote with Fed Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker voting with the majority. Emmett Rice was the sole vote against the move. Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers, predicted that the nation's major banks would move quickly to cut their prime lending rate by one-half percentage point as well and he said that a variety of other rates would drop in coming weeks.

Tom Megan, an economist with Evans Economics, a Washington consulting firm, said he expected various consumer rates such as car loans to fall in the wake of the Fed action.

"The Fed is obviously concerned about getting the U.S. economy moving," he said. "While future prospects are bright, the current data does not show that the U.S. economy has picked up yet."

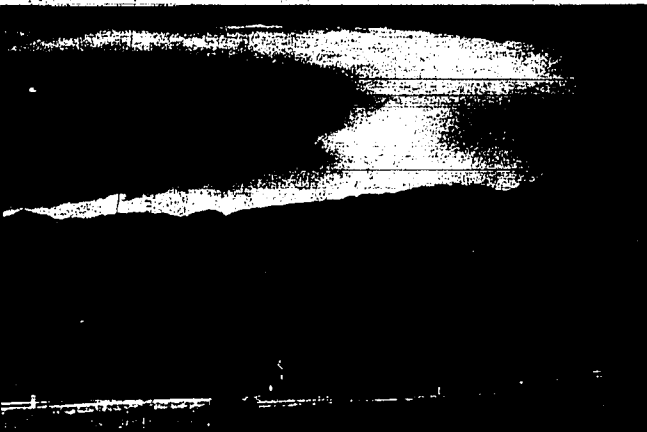

The Fed did not mention economic growth as one of its reasons for action. It chose instead to emphasize that a variety of market interest rates have already fallen, saying, "the action taken today is a technical change designed to place the discount rate in a more appropriate alignment with the prevailing level of market rates."

Both Sinai and Meegan said while they expected some further declines in interest rates, they are not likely to be as dramatic as what has already occurred.

In announcing the decision, the Fed said a cut in the discount rate "appears consistent with international interest rate considerations."

Japanese newspapers reported earlier that the Bank of Japan likely would cut its discount rate today if the U.S. Federal Reserve Board trimmed its comparable rate Friday.

Quoting sources, the Japanese news reports said that if the U.S. discount rate was cut, the central bank would most probably convene a special meeting of its policy board Saturday and implement a half percentage point reduction from its current rate of 4 percent. That would match a record low that prevailed from March 1978 to April 1979.

Titan rocket explodes on launch in California; spy satellite aboard

The Associated Press

YANDEBERG, AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — A Titan rocket believed carrying a secret spy satellite exploded in a huge orange cloud seconds after launch Friday.

It was the second such incident in eight months.

Fifty-eight people were treated for skin and eye irritation.

The feared loss of the spy satellite would hamper America's ability to monitor Soviet activities, with only one other such satellite in orbit, experts said.

A number of fires around the launch site were being battled more than five hours after the explosion, said base commander Maj. Gen. Jack L. Watkins.

Air Force officials would not say exactly what the orange cloud was. But schoolchildren were told to stay inside, and about 120 oil workers were evacuated from two drilling platforms in the Santa Barbara Channel. The National Park Service ordered the evacuation of rangers, campers and tourists from the offshore Channel Islands National Park.

Of the 58 people treated at the base hospital, three were admitted, the Air Force said in a statement.

Officials would not say if any civilians were treated.

All schools in Lompoc Unified School District were told after the explosion Friday to keep students inside, said Superintendent James E. Brown.

"That's the safest thing to do for now."

"This will create major problems in the photographic reconnaissance program, in our confidence in monitoring Soviet military activities at a critical time," said Paul Stares, a military space expert at the Brookings Institution in Washington.

The rocket, a Titan 34D, exploded after launch from the Western Space and Missile Center, said Maj. Ken St. John. "Damage was confined to the immediate launch area," he said.

"A great red-orange puff of smoke came up," said Victor A. Sanchez, who was working nearby. "It shook the whole ground."

St. John would not speculate about the booster's payload. An Air Force statement released in Washington said the payload was classified.

But it was almost certain the rocket was carrying a refurbished model of the KH-11 photographic reconnaissance satellite or a previously unknown satellite, said Stares and Jeffrey Richelson, a military reconnaissance expert at American University in Washington.

The KH-11 believed aboard was intended to be a test model but was refurbished after another Titan blew up after launch at Vandenberg on

Libyans say raid killed 37

By KEVIN COSTELLOE The Associated Press

TRIPOLI, Libya — Col. Moammar Khadafy's deputy said Friday that 37 people were killed and 83 were wounded in the U.S. air raids on Libya, which he called a "failure" because of the bad training of the "American pilots."

Maj. Abdelsalam Jaloud made the comments in the first news conference a high-ranking official has held with foreign correspondents since the raids Tuesday on the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Benghazi.

Jaloud's casualty figures were the first given by a Libyan official. Western diplomats said earlier that at least 100 people, and probably more, were killed in the raids.

Earlier, one of 400 Libyans, chanting, "We will destroy America!" surged into the streets outside a mosque for the funeral of 19 of the people killed in the raids.

There was no indication that Khadafy intended the service, marked by shouting and shouting among the people who heard a funeral oration in which the assistant chief of the general staff called for "liberty, justice and peace."

"Libyan Arab people, Arab nation — the time has come for us to raise the banners of Jihad... Let the world witness and condemn the official American terrorism led by Reagan — the arch-terrorist," Maj. Khwayyid al-Humaydi said at the burial service.

Jaloud, in the hour-long news conference, said he knew nothing about the raid, but he said that of an American, Peter Kilburn, and two Britons who had been kidnapped by terrorists over the past 18 months. Their bodies were found Thursday and the killers said they were slain in reprisal for the U.S. air raids.

"We don't know anything about these incidents," Jaloud said of the murders. "I cannot talk about anything I don't know about."

He said Tuesday's raids were a

Undercover drug probe leads to 8 arrests, heroin seizure

By JANE ROBISON Times-News writer

BURLEY — A six-month undercover investigation into heroin trafficking ended late Thursday night with the arrest of eight people in the Kootenai and Twin Falls areas and the seizure of $55,000 in high grade heroin, officials said.

Arrest warrants were issued for another three people, but no arrests had been made on Friday, officials said.

More than 50 officers from three counties and the state Department of Law Enforcement participated in the investigation and arrests in the largest drug bust in Burley's history, officials said.

While one suspect was armed with a .22-caliber pistol, and a .22-caliber rifle was found in the closet of one house, no shots were fired. All eight — seven men and one woman — were taken without resistance, police said.

Police said some of the eight people arrested were considered to be "major traffickers" in the area, but officials declined to identify which ones. Police are investigating whether three of the eight arrested are illegal aliens from Mexico.

In addition to seizing 39 grams of heroin, known as "black tar" heroin, officers also found one pound of marijuana and seized an unknown amount of U.S. currency and several vehicles believed to have been used for transporting the heroin, said Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal.

Among those arrested were three brothers — Arnaldo Guerrero, 28, of Oakley, Jorge Guerrero, 25, of Oakley and Juan Guerrero, 25, of Murtaugh.

Juan Guerrero was arrested without incident by Twin Falls sheriff's officers near Murtaugh on Thursday, officials said. The other two brothers were arrested at houses located halfway between Burley and Oakley, Crystal said.

Juan Guerrero was charged with delivery of a controlled substance and conspiracy to deliver in both Twin Falls and Cassia counties. Bond was set at $5,000. He was being held in Twin Falls County Jail.

Arnaldo and Jorge Guerrero each faced charges both in Twin Falls and Cassia counties with conspiracy to deliver. Bond was set at $15,000 each. They were being held in Cassia County Jail.

Also arrested were Natividad Cantu, 25, of Heburn, and his 23-year-old wife, Rosa. Cantu was charged with possession, a felony, and bond was set at $7,500. His wife was charged with a misdemeanor of being present in a location where drugs are used or distributed. She was released on Friday night.

Others arrested were Francisco Rendon, 39, of Burley; Reynaldo Martinez, 39, of Heburn; and Willie Saplen, 40, of Heburn. They were charged with delivery of a controlled substance, Crystal said. All were being held in Cassia County Jail.

Bond was set at $5,000 each for Rendon and Saplen, and $50,000 for Martinez. R. Kelley said an investigation is continuing.

High court rules for Simplot in jobless-benefits tax appeal

BOISE (AP) — In a bitterly divided 5-2 decision, the Idaho Supreme Court has struck down a state income tax Commission ruling that J.R. Simplot Co. must pay unemployment insurance tax for leaders at its potato cellars in four states.

The Idaho Department of Employment originally denied unemployment benefits to Alonzo Maldonado, Hazelton, who concurred with Simplot as a potato leader during the 1982-83 season. The department found that Maldonado had been an independent contractor, not a Simplot employee, and so did not warrant benefits.

However, an appeals examiner reversed that decision and Simplot appealed to the Industrial Commission, which upheld the examiner's ruling based on a referee's recommendation.

Simplot has contracted with about 10 teams of potato leaders in Idaho, Oregon, Nevada and Washington for the past 10 years to load potatoes from cellars in remote locations into trucks for transportation to processing plants.

Justice Allan Shepard, writing for the high court's majority in Friday's decision reversing the Industrial Commission, said it had given too much emphasis to a contract between Simplot and Maldonado that gave Simplot the right to end the agreement at any time without any liability other than to pay for work already performed.

Justice Robert Bakes agreed, citing a National Law Journal study that found two-thirds of U.S. jurisdictions have abandoned the doctrine that control over termination of employment is enough to constitute an employer-employee relationship.

But in dissent, Justice Stephen Bistline said the majority's decision ignored "considerable evidence" that Simplot stipulates not only the duration of leaders' employment, but exactly how the work should be done.

"Although Simplot denies control of the workers and even suggests that there is no evidence whatsoever to demonstrate control, the overwhelming weight of the evidence leads to an opposite conclusion," Bistline said.

Justice Robert Huntley Jr. also dissented from the majority, saying the court had endorsed a "sham" contract between Simplot and the independent leaders. Huntley said Maldonado clearly did not know what he was doing when he signed the contract, which effectively exempted Simplot from any responsibility to the leaders.

"Who are cuts through the facade of legalisms, we have a circumstance where a major Idaho employer is using a subterfuge to deny workers benefits to which the law entitles them," he said.

Kilburn and Buckley were controlled by Libya.

The group believed to hold the other four American hostages, the Islamic Jihad, wants to use them as bargaining chips to obtain the release of its members imprisoned in Kuwait for terrorist acts. The Islamic Jihad is understood to share the Shiite antipathy toward Libya, relying on Syria and Iran for support.

Although U.S. officials said privately Friday that there is a "presumption" that Kilburn is dead, the administration said it could not confirm this without "positive forensic identification." The officials said the body will be flown to an American military hospital in West Germany and checked against Kilburn's medical records, a process they estimated would take several days.

Relatives of the other U.S. hostages, briefed on the information available to the administration, said the air strike against Libya had left them fearful and uncertain.

Libya

Peggy Say, sister of Terry Anderson, 37, an Associated Press correspondent, kidnapped in March 1985, said on the "CBS Morning News" that she didn't believe Reagan had considered the hostages' plight before ordering the raid. "It was an act aimed against the raiders, not the hostages," she said.

John Jenco, brother of the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, 50, head of the Catholic Relief Services in Lebanon who disappeared in January 1985, said in a telephone interview from Joliet, Ill., that his family believes the administration is doing its best to free the hostages. But he added: "We knew the bombing of Libya would raise the possibility of retaliation—in our family, every phone call makes your heart go down right into your shoes."

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said Friday that the attack had been approved reluctantly, as a last resort, and indicated that it would not have been necessary if the European allies had cooperated in imposing economic sanctions against Libya.

If it falls before another satellite is launched, "we'll have no coverage whatsoever," Richelson said.

The Titan on Friday blew up about five seconds after liftoff, said an Air Force official in Washington who would not be periodically identified. About five seconds after the explosion, a self-destruct signal was sent by launch control to make sure the rocket did not reach any place where it could cause damage, he said.

Vandenberg, 130 miles northwest of Los Angeles, is where the Air Force tests new missiles such as the MX, and periodically launches ballistic missiles already in service, such as Titans and the Minuteman III, to test their reliability.

Military and civilian satellites are also launched there.

Vandenberg covers 98,400 acres and is the third-largest U.S. Air Force installation.

Honduras top of incursions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaraguan military officials have been holding secret talks with their Honduran counterparts for more than a year, and warned them of a planned strike last month against Nicaraguan rebels based in Honduras, NBC News reported Friday.

More than once in the past year, Nicaragua has advised the Hondurans of upcoming attacks on U.S.-backed rebels who are trying to overthrow Nicaragua's Sandinista government and are based in camps inside Honduras, said NBC, quoting unnamed sources. The warnings were to give Honduras time to get its troops out of the way.

French aviation pioneer dies

PARIS (AP) — French aviation pioneer Marcel Dassault, who made a fortune by designing and building some of the world's premier combat aircraft and executive jets, has died at age 94.

He entered the American Hospital of Paris on April 2 and died late Thursday night, hospital officials said. No cause of death was given.

Alaskan volcano erupts anew

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Pavlov Volcano erupted Friday for the second time this week, spitting ash 50,000 feet into the air and flooding a river with melted snow, but scientists said the remote peak on the Alaska Peninsula posed little danger.

"The winds are blowing so the ash will go out toward the Pacific Ocean," said Betsy Yount, a geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey.

'60 Minutes' meets Turner

NEW YORK (AP) — Ted Turner, who fell in his CBS takeover bid, which he profiled this Sunday on "60 Minutes," the CBS news magazine that Turner once blasted for doing "a hatchet job on just about everybody of importance."

"I still consider myself a bold adventurer," Turner tells "60 Minutes" correspondent Diane Sawyer by way of explaining his cooperation with the program and network.

How would Turner change "60 Minutes" if he were running the network? "I would try to increase the objectivity of it."

How would he change CBS' steamy serial "Dallas"? "I would try and make the people a little nicer."

Turner says he has little time to watch the program he criticizes. "My wife watches it for me," he says. "I think there's too much trash still on the network." (Wussler is executive vice president of Turner Broadcasting.)

Freeze branding permissible

WASHINGTON (AP) — The hot-iron branding of cows' faces will not be required of dairy farmers participating in the federal whole-head buyout program, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

Undersecretary Daniel G. Amstutz said the program has been amended to allow dairy farmers to choose the alternative of freeze branding, which uses extreme cold to mark an animal's skin.

Embattled college president to quit

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — North Idaho College President Barry Schuler, who was asked to give up his job in a vote by faculty and administrators last week, said he will step down Dec. 31.

"My resignation is based on the weariness of being a public figure and the necessity of such a position of being involved in controversies, along with it for you and your family," said Schuler, hired in 1968 as the college's fourth president.

"I'm almost eager to leave the limelight. I want a little rest and tranquility."

Last week, administrators voted 13-4, with one abstention, that Schuler be asked by the Board of Trustees to resign. The faculty voted 67-21 against Schuler with six abstaining.

"The problem with this stuff is that there's no guarantee of what you're injecting," said Merrill Kelley, supervisor of the Involuntary Services Bureau with the Department of Law Enforcement. "We're fortunate that there have been no fatal overdoses."

Because of the drug's potency, warnings were issued last month by the Minidoka County Sheriff's Department.

Crystal said local law enforcement officials believe most of the people using the high-powered drug are farm laborers 20 to 40 years old.

"We're hoping this will put heroin traffickers out of business for awhile," he said.

The loss Friday of another KH-11 would put America's ability to monitor Soviet troop movements, other military activities and compliance with nuclear treaties "in a very precarious position," Richelson said.

The newer, more sophisticated spy satellite, the KH-12, is too big to be launched on expendable rockets and can be put into orbit only by a space shuttle, Richelson said. The shuttle launched in January after the Challenger exploded, killing seven astronauts.

"It would appear that we have at present no means of putting any more photographic reconnaissance satellites into orbit until the shuttle is operating again," Richelson said, adding that the KH-11 in orbit has

Embattled college president to quit

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — North Idaho College President Barry Schuler, who was asked to give up his job in a vote by faculty and administrators last week, said he will step down Dec. 31.

"My resignation is based on the weariness of being a public figure and the necessity of such a position of being involved in controversies, along with it for you and your family," said Schuler, hired in 1968 as the college's fourth president.

"I'm almost eager to leave the limelight. I want a little rest and tranquility."

Last week, administrators voted 13-4, with one abstention, that Schuler be asked by the Board of Trustees to resign. The faculty voted 67-21 against Schuler with six abstaining.

Schuler, 54, said he decided to resign after meeting with the trustees Tuesday night. He said last week that he would not resign unless he was asked to by the trustees.

He said Thursday he was not pressured to resign.

Andrus files as primary election lists fill out

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press.

BOISE — Cecil D. Andrus, former interior secretary under Jimmy Carter, on Friday makes Idaho voters to return him to his old job as governor.

But even Andrus filed nominating petitions for Idaho's May 27 primary election, his Republican opponent, Lt. Gov. David Leroy, said it's time for a change after 16 years of Democrat governors. He promised "a new generation of leadership" to end the state's economic stagnation.

Friday at 5 p.m. was the deadline for filing the primary election, and 310 state, judicial and legislative hopefuls filed by closing time. Political parties still can appoint nominees to fill vacancies on the ballot.

There were a few late surprises. Ralph Glines, former Canyon County state legislator, notified election officials just before the deadline that he was not running for the Idaho Supreme Court against Chief Justice Charles Donaldson. That elected Donaldson to a new six-year term, because he has no other opposition and write-ins are not allowed on that ballot.

Justice Allan Shepard also was rejected to a new six-year term with no opposition, along with Donald L. Burnett Jr., Idaho Court of Appeals justice.

Mel Richardson, Idaho Falls broadcaster, joined the crowded field of Republicans seeking the 2nd District congressional nomination. The incumbent, Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, faces no primary opposition, and his staff aides quietly filed his nominating petitions Friday afternoon.

Just before the deadline, a supporter of Lyndon Larouche tried to file nominating petitions to give Stallings an opponent in the primary, but failed to come up with the necessary 500 certified signatures of registered voters.

Deputy Secretary of State Ben Ysuras refused to accept the 900 signatures and the candidate didn't qualify.

Lewiston bar owner J.R. "Dan" Tassie had the toughest route. He learned earlier Friday that his mailed nominating petitions apparently were lost in the mail.

He quickly gathered others, sent them to Boise by airplane and barely made the deadline.

Middleton coach and teacher Ron Kovick made the deadline by sending the last of 510 candidates to file. He's running for the GOP nomination for the seat now held by Rep. Elizabeth Allon, R-Nampa.

Chuck Lempestis, Post Falls attorney who was a political unknown when he started running for the GOP lieutenant governor nomination 20 months ago, stood at Leroy's shoulder Friday as Leroy made his announcement speeches.

State Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon is the only Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, after the death of former state senator Terry Reilly in an airplane crash last week.

Andrus, 53, was elected Idaho's first Democrat governor in 24 years in 1970, won re-election four years later and then gave up the post in 1977 when Carter picked him as Interior secretary.

Gov. John Evans succeeded Andrus as governor and was elected himself in 1978 and 1982. But after 10 years as governor, he's giving up the job this year for a U.S. Senate battle against Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho. Neither Symms nor Evans has primary opposition.

Leroy, 39, is a former county prosecutor, state attorney general and is ending a four-year term as lieutenant governor.

With a brass band playing, "Happy Days Are Here Again," Andrus turned in perhaps the most nominating petitions ever collected in for an Idaho campaign.

Campaign chief Larry Melerotto said, "We stopped counting at 15,000 signatures." Andrus aides taped them all together to form a long chain that stretched several hundred yards as volunteers carried them into the Statehouse.

A Leroy staffer said he turned in 4,745 signatures. Richardson said he turned in 2,126. Stallings' staff said he returned in about 1,850 signatures.

Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, has no primary opposition in Idaho's 1st District. Democrat Pete Bush planned to run against him, but was killed in the same crash that claimed Reilly's life.

Larouche supporter Joe Stewart, Boise, filed for the Democratic nomination Friday morning. Later in the day former Boundary County commissioner Bill Currie filed for the Democrat nomination.

He served as a Republican while on the county commission, but said Friday he's switched to the Democrats because he's a moderate and there are more moderates among the Democrats.

Richardson, general manager of KID-AM-FM in Idaho Falls, worked for the air until Friday. Because of federal "equal time" provisions, he won't do any more on-air work during the campaign, but will continue administrative work at the station, he said.

Other Republicans seeking the nomination are Connie Hansen, wife of George Hansen; Sen. Dane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls; Rep. J.F. "Chad" Chabband, R-Idaho Falls and Dan Adamson, Jerome.

Three Republican state officials had no opposition in either party. They were Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa, Attorney General Jim Jones and Jerry Evans, state schools chief.

Veteran state Auditor Joe Williams had no Democratic opposition, but Republicans Eric Fieldstad of Boise and Richard Williams of Shelley filed for the GOP nomination.

Bobbette Chapman of Boise and Rep. Lydia Justice Edwards, R-Donnely, will battle for the GOP state treasurer nomination, and seeking the Democratic nomination are Boise City Treasurer Kent Rock, and Shawn de Loyola, a senior deputy in the treasurer's office.

Another reported—Larouche supporter, Marvin J. Sawyer, Nampa, filed for the Democratic nomination for the seat now held by Rep. Mike Strasser, R-Nampa.

Rep. Linden Bateman, R-Idaho Falls, who dropped out of the lieutenant governor race last week, announced earlier he did not plan to run for the House seat he has held for 10 years. But he apparently changed his mind at the last minute, and Richardson's staff filed Bateman's nominating petitions Friday morning.

Another legislative veteran announced he won't run again. Sen. Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, who has served 20 years in the Idaho Senate, won't run. Rep. Myron Jones, R-Malad, filed for the seat, as did Dennis Hansen, Soda Springs. Two Democrats also are running for Budge's seat.

Reward fund passes $3,000

BOISE (AP) — A reward fund for information leading to the arrest of escaped killer Claude Dallas has topped $3,000, but authorities say they are no closer to determining his whereabouts.

"We really have no new information," said Ada County Sheriff's Lt. Lonnie Sanborn. "The hotline is there, and we hope people who have information will use it."

Dallas escaped from the Boise State Penitentiary on Easter Sunday. He was serving a 30-year prison sentence for the shooting deaths of Fish and Game officers William Pogue and Conley Elms, who tried to arrest Dallas for poaching.

Idahoan wins scholarship

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — A Bonners Ferry High School senior has won a $10,000 scholarship for placing third in the American Legion National High School Oratory Contest.

Christopher Martin won the honor Friday with a talk on the U.S. Constitution, said American Legion spokesman Jeff Windholz. Four finalists competed in Tuscaloosa, he said.

Bank to clear old YMCA site

POCATELLO (AP) — Pocatello's Historic Preservation Commission board has voted unanimously to permit Idaho-Bank and Trust Co. to raze the old downtown YMCA building.

"Obviously, IB&T is pleased with the decision," Dick Clay, IB&T senior vice president, said following Wednesday's vote. "The bank intends to do all it can to preserve the memory of the Y and the role it played in Pocatello's development."

Approving IB&T's application to demolish the building came following a two-hour public hearing before the commission.

Chadband to pay phone bills

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Congressional candidate J.F. "Chad" Chadband, R-Idaho Falls, will repay the state for some of the cost of long-distance telephone calls made on a state credit card during a two-month period, an aide says.

Chadband's legislative credit-card telephone bill was $923.77 during January and February, with $720 originating from his Idaho Falls campaign office. Watkins' bill was $500, with $11 coming from his campaign office in Boise.

The itemized billing showed Chadband made 323 calls in January alone, totaling 1,676 minutes.

Chadband could not be reached for comment, but his campaign manager said Chadband planned to reimburse the state for any calls made from his Idaho Falls office. Chuck De Vore said calls from the Idaho Falls office were billed to the state by mistake.

Board sends financial plan to panel for study

MOSCOW (AP) — The Idaho Board of Education on Friday sent a controversial plan on how to deal with financial emergencies to a committee for further study.

The decision came after faculty representatives from the state's three universities and Lewis-Clark State College objected to the plan, fearing it would lead to attacks on academic freedom and tenure policies.

Charles McQuillen, the board's executive director, urged the board to approve the package as presented. However, board members had said earlier that adoption of the proposal would be postponed.

"The nature of the board's definition of financial emergency has contributed to both—the difficulty of establishing an emergency condition and to the four lawsuits filed over the issue and the character of those suits," McQuillen said.

"No right is absolute and yet the board's current definition can and has been construed to make the employment right absolute," he said.

The changes are needed, he said, to deal with continuing financial problems: accreditation problems, inadequate allocation of resources, and the threatened or pending litigation.

The board has declared financial emergencies in 1981, 1982 and 1983. A total of four suits have been filed over whether the emergencies were genuine.

Church papers went untested

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon Church paid Mark Hofmann $75,000 in cash or trade for historical documents without having qualified experts test their authenticity, the church's former archivist said Friday.

Donald Schmidt, now retired, testified regarding five documents he helped the church obtain from Hofmann when Schmidt was director of archives until late 1984.

Prosecutors contend the five documents are fakes.

Under cross-examination by defense counsel Bradley Rich, Schmidt said four of the five documents were examined visually by himself and Mormon historian Dean Jesse and others in the church's historical department.

But only one of the documents was subjected to scientific tests to determine authenticity, and none was examined by technically qualified experts, Schmidt said.

Schmidt testified on the fifth day of a preliminary hearing to determine whether Hofmann should stand trial on two counts of first-degree murder and 30 other counts of fraud, theft by deception and bomb-making.

Hofmann is accused of planting bombs that killed Steven Christensen, 31, and Kathleen Sheets, 50, last Oct. 15.

Prosecutors contend that Hofmann turned to murder to conceal an alleged scheme in which he sold fraudulent historical documents to the Mormon Church and private collectors.

On Friday afternoon, Willford Cardon testified that Hofmann asked him in September 1985 for a $250,000 loan for personal matters, claiming he had sold the pre-Revolutionary "Oath of a Free Man" document jointly to the Library of Congress and the American Antiquarian Society for $1.5 million.

The Mesa, Ariz., businessman said Hofmann originally had offered him part interest in a second copy of the document, which if it existed would be the oldest document printed in America.

Testimony in the hearing has shifted back and forth between Hofmann's sometimes complex dealings with the Mormon Church and his connection with "Mike Hansen."

Mount St. Helens spews more gas; not a hazard

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens spouted a plume of gas and ash for the third consecutive day Friday, but geologists said the plumes were part of the volcano's normal activity and posed no hazard.

Steve Brantley, a U.S. Geological Survey spokesman, said he was flying with two geologists Friday morning to take measurements of gas levels at the volcano. The plume was five minutes away from the southwest Washington mountain when the latest "degassing event" occurred about 11:25 a.m., he said.

A cauliflower-shaped plume, a dark mixture of ash, gas and steam, rose from the dome's top to about 6,000 feet above the volcano's 8,364-foot rim before dissipating five minutes later, he said.

"It was pretty spectacular," Brantley said.

Two geological survey crews were at the site when the plume was emitted — one on the crater floor about a mile north of the dome and another on the crater's northern edge, but neither was in danger, he said.

The crews were taking measurements of the rate of swelling around the dome's slope.

Brantley said the amount of gas above the dome, the rate of swelling around its flank and the level of earthquake activity in the area are studied by scientists trying to predict the likelihood of another major eruption.

Mount St. Helens had been inactive for nearly 10 months before it shot up a plume of ash and gas Wednesday.

Bouvia faces an appeal try

LOS ANGELES (AP) — County attorneys said Friday they will appeal to the California Supreme Court a decision permitting quadriplegic Elizabeth Bouvia to reject life-saving medical treatment.

"It's a far-reaching decision and we think the Supreme Court should be given a chance to review the case," said deputy county counsel Steve Carnevale.

Bouvia, 28, was born with cerebral palsy and has progressive arthritis that requires a constant infusion of narcotics to reduce pain.

The effect of the 2nd District Court of Appeal's decision granted Ms. Bouvia's request to have a nose-to-stomach tube removed, but the three-judge panel's decision also affirmed her contended right to reject any medical treatment, even food and water.

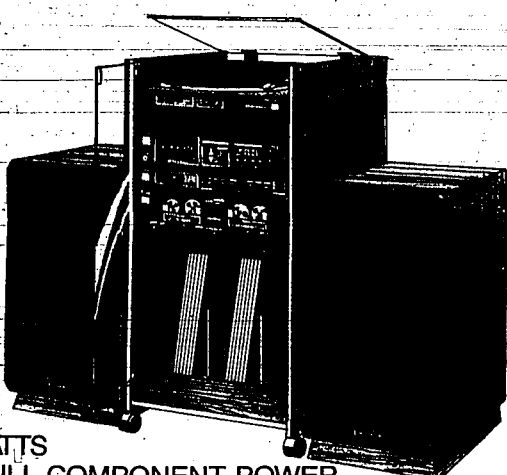

Carnevale said the decision to file a petition for hearing before the Supreme Court was made after consulting with doctors.

Apartheid protesters arrested

The Associated Press

More than 150 people opposed to apartheid were arrested Friday in a demonstration at the University of Texas, while 20 protesters were arrested for blocking the main entrance to Brandeis University, officials said.

The 150 protesters in Austin, Texas, were arrested by campus police for demonstrating on the university's West Mall, which school officials have declared off limits for such gatherings except with a permit between noon and 1 p.m.

Forty-four people were arrested at the same site last week and earlier this week. The school has not decided whether to charge any of those arrested.

FBI says 3 fake degrees used

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., voiced concern Friday over FBI allegations that three men with phony engineering degrees from a diploma mill worked in sensitive positions at two U.S. space centers.

"It disturbs me that NASA people were involved," Pepper told reporters, referring to a list of 72 federal employees or government contractors, including three who worked at the Houston and Cape Canaveral, Fla., space centers. The individuals were identified by the FBI as holding bogus academic credentials. Pepper released the list Friday.

Pepper made the comments at a news conference where he released a House subcommittee report on an estimated 200 federal employees who had bought phony degrees from three fictitious universities operated by Anthony J. Gerunzio out of post office boxes in Utah, Arizona and Missouri.

Gerunzio pleaded guilty in May 1985 to federal fraud and conspiracy charges and is serving a three-year sentence at the federal penitentiary at Terre Haute, Ind.

Preliminary shuttle case made

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA's preliminary conclusions and supportive documents on the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger were sent Friday to the investigative commission writing a final report for President Reagan.

"A great deal of the information has been released at public meetings. I'm not sure there are any surprises," said Hugh Harris, spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The documents, from Kennedy Space Center and Marshall Space Flight Center, Ala., were flown to NASA headquarters for the presidential commission headed by former Secretary of State William P. Rogers. The commission had set a Friday deadline for the files.

Family members and other sources reported that the remains of all astronauts have been identified. A small box of remains brought into port on Tuesday were those of Gregory Jarvis, his father told the Orlando Sentinel. Bruce Jarvis said he was notified Thursday.

Dole says '87 budget not ready

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said Friday that despite a week of talks with President Reagan and other White House officials he still wasn't ready to bring the fiscal 1987 budget plan to the floor.

"We'd like to have him saying good things about the budget," said Dole, 64, who said although the administration was trying to be helpful, it still wasn't moving significantly toward compromise.

Reagan objects to a bipartisan Senate Budget Committee plan, approved last month. The committee rejected many of the domestic spending cuts proposed by the president, instead voting to cut his military spending plans by $25 billion and increase taxes by $12 billion over his proposal.

FBI agent dies in 'copter fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — An FBI agent who was a member of the bureau's hostage rescue team fell to his death from a helicopter during a routine exercise Friday at the FBI's training facility in Quantico, Va., the agency announced.

James K. McCallister, 34, a 10-year veteran agent who was assigned to the Washington field office of the FBI, was participating in the training exercise about 10 a.m. when he slipped from a rope hanging from the helicopter and fell to the ground, the bureau said.

The helicopter was at an altitude of 40 to 60 feet when the incident occurred, the FBI said.

Panel: Havens for refugees are needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A State Department panel, fearing a return to the days when boat people were "pushed back into the sea" by their Asian neighbors, on Friday urged the United States and other Western countries to provide havens for many of the 154,000 refugees living in Indo-Chinese camps.

The panel said the United States should resume admitting some refugees who have no family ties in America or other special qualifications for entry and that other nations should take their shares as well.

The Reagan administration stopped processing applications from refugees without U.S. family ties in April 1982.

Former Iowa Gov. Robert D. Ray, chairman of the Indo-Chinese Refugee Panel appointed by the department, told a news conference that although the United States has welcomed 80,000 Asian refugees since 1975, it should take the lead in solving the problem.

But he said other countries should help, too, and mentioned West Germany, France and Japan as countries that had mounted worthwhile efforts at the height of the Asian exodus five or six years ago, but should be doing more now.

Ray said annual Asian refugee admissions to the United States are running close to the 4,500 permitted by law. He said he did not expect efforts to reduce the camp populations — or other changes recommended by the panel — to alter the numbers coming into the country.

The panel's overriding concern was internal pressure in Thailand and other Asian countries against granting "first asylum" to Vietnamese, Laotian and Khmer refugees.

The panel also said the United States should:

- Start processing more newcomers as immigrants rather than refugees.
- Mount a concerted campaign to hold Vietnam to promises to permit re-education camp inmates to come to the United States and to improve arrangements for the departure of Amerasians — mostly the offspring of Americans stationed in the country during the war.
- Support efforts to combat pirates who prey on refugees fleeing by boat.

Cyanide victim had spoken of suicide

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — A talented 17-year-old high school dropout who took a fatal drink of cyanide laced Kool-Aid on a live campus TV show had talked of suicide for weeks, and some of his friends even organized a mock "Last Supper" for him.

Andrew Hermann's friends said they believed his talk of death was simply part of his self-mocking sense of humor, even after he fell on the floor of the Hampshire College studio Wednesday.

Security guards discovered his lifeless body after the satirical comedy show, "Voice of the Top Two" was over.

"He had talked about suicide before," Edward D. Etheredge, assistant district attorney, said Friday. "He may have expressed a motive in the speech he gave that was clear to him, but would not make sense to an outsider."

Hermann's brother, Stephen, a Hampshire student and a producer of the show, described his younger brother as intelligent, talented with computers and graphics. He said Andrew had been bored with high school and had been troubled about other things, "no one else's business," he added.

Philip Jackson, another producer, said some of Hermann's friends gave him the "Last Supper" several weeks ago as a joke.

Barbara Surrell, the owner of a Belchertown restaurant where the boy worked part-time as a dishwasher, told the Daily Hampshire Gazette that he took time off from his job three weeks ago saying "he had something to do at the college."

Hermann dropped out of high school in February and planned to attend Hampshire in the fall.

Students said Hermann downed the mug of poisoned liquid on the show after a long, satirical speech attacking the administration of the college for its admissions policy and its handling of several disciplinary matters.

W. Randy Banneker, a student from Seattle who watched the show, said Hermann's complaints centered on his view that the 20-year-old private college with its experimental approach to a liberal arts education was becoming more traditional.

He described the speech as "gripping" and "inspired," but said it "weren't out of the ordinary" but said it would be naive to believe that the youth's dissatisfaction with the school led him to take his life.

Apartheid protesters arrested

The Associated Press

More than 160 people opposed to apartheid were arrested Friday in a demonstration at the University of Texas, while 20 protesters were arrested for blocking the main entrance to Brandeis University, officials said.

The 165 protesters in Austin, Texas, were arrested by campus police for demonstrating on the university's West Mall, which school officials have declared off limits for such gatherings except with a permit between noon and 1 p.m.

Forty-four people were arrested at the same site last week and earlier this week. The school has not decided whether to charge any of those arrested.

FBI says 3 fake degrees used

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., voiced concern Friday over FBI allegations that three men with phony engineering degrees from a diploma mill worked in sensitive positions at two U.S. space centers.

"It disturbs me that NASA people were involved," Pepper told reporters, referring to a list of 72 federal employees or government contractors, including three who worked at the Houston and Cape Canaveral, Fla., space centers. The individuals were identified by the FBI as holding bogus academic credentials. Pepper released the list Friday.

Pepper made the comments at a news conference where he released a House subcommittee report on an estimated 200 federal employees who had bought phony degrees from three fictitious universities operated by Anthony J. Geruntino out of post office boxes in Utah, Arizona and Missouri.

Geruntino pleaded guilty in May 1985 to federal fraud and conspiracy charges and is serving a three-year sentence at the federal penitentiary at Terre Haute, Ind.

Preliminary shuttle case made

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA's preliminary conclusions and supportive documents on the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger were sent Friday to the investigative commission writing a final report for President Reagan.

"A great deal of the information has been released at public meetings. I'm not sure there are any surprises," said Hugh Harris, spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The documents from Kennedy Space Center and Marshall Space Flight Center, Ala., were flown to NASA headquarters for the presidential commission headed by former Secretary of State William P. Rogers. The commission had set a Friday deadline for the files.

Family members and other sources reported that the remains of all astronauts have been identified. A small box of remains brought into port on Tuesday were those of Gregory Jarvis, his father told the Orlando Sentinel. Bruce Jarvis said he was notified Thursday.

Dole says '87 budget not ready

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole said Friday that, despite a week of talks with President Reagan and other White House officials he still wasn't ready to bring the fiscal 1987 budget plan to the floor.

"I'd like to have him saying good things about the budget," said Dole, R-Kan. But he said although the administration was trying to be helpful, it still wasn't moving significantly toward compromise.

Reagan objects to a bipartisan Senate Budget Committee plan, approved last month. The committee rejected many of the domestic spending cuts proposed by the president, instead voting to cut his military spending plans by $25 billion and increase taxes by $12 billion over his proposal.

FBI agent dies in 'copter fall

WASHINGTON (AP) — An FBI agent who was a member of the bureau's hostage rescue team fell to his death from a helicopter during a routine exercise Friday at the FBI's training facility in Quantico, Va., the agency announced.

James K. McAllister, 34, a 10-year veteran agent who was assigned to the Washington field office of the FBI, was participating in the training exercise about 10 a.m. when he slipped from a rope hanging from the helicopter and fell to the ground, the bureau said.

The helicopter was at an altitude of 40 to 60 feet when the incident occurred, the FBI said.

Panel: Havens for refugees are needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A State Department panel, fearing a return to the days when boat people were 'pushed back into the sea' by their Asian neighbors, on Friday urged the United States and other Western countries to provide haven for many of the 154,000 refugees living in 12-dochinese camps.

The panel said the United States should resume admitting some refugees who have no family ties in America or other special qualifications for entry and that other nations should take their share as well. The Reagan administration stopped processing applications from refugees without U.S. family ties in April 1982.

Former Iowa Gov. Robert D. Ray, chairman of the Indo-Chinese Refugee Panel appointed by the department, told a news conference that although the United States has welcomed 800,000 Asian refugees since 1975, it should take the lead in solving the problem.

But he said other countries should help, too, and mentioned West Germany, France and Japan as countries that had mounted worthwhile efforts at the height of the Asian exodus five or six years ago, but should be doing more now.

Ray said annual Asian refugee admissions to the United States are running close to the 43,500 permitted by law. He said he did not expect efforts to reduce the camp populations — or other changes recommended by the panel — to alter the numbers coming into the country.

The panel's overriding concern was internal pressure in Thailand and other Asian countries against granting "first asylum" to Vietnamese, Laotian and Khmer refugees.

The panel also said the United States should:

- Start processing more newcomers as immigrants rather than refugees.
- Mount a concerted campaign to hold Vietnam to promises to permit re-education camp inmates to come to the United States and to improve arrangements for the departure of Amerasians — mostly the offspring of Americans stationed in the country during the war.
- Support efforts to combat pirates who prey on refugees fleeing by boat.

Cyanide victim had spoken of suicide

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — A talented 17-year-old high school dropout who took a fatal drink of cyanide laced Kool-Aid on a live campus TV show had talked of suicide for weeks, and some of his friends even organized a mock "Last Supper" for him.

Andrew Herrmann's friends said they believed his talk of death was simply part of his self-mocking sense of humor, even after he fell on the floor of the Hampshire College studio Wednesday.

Security guards discovered his lifeless body after the satirical comedy show, "voice of the Top Two" was over.

"He had talked about suicide before," Edward D. Etheredge, assistant district attorney, said Friday. "He may have expressed a motive in the speech he gave that was clear to him, but would not make sense to an outsider."

Herrmann's brother, Stephen, a Hampshire student and a producer of the show, described his younger brother as intelligent, talented with computers and graphics. He said Andrew had been bored with high school and had been troubled about other things, "no one else's business," he added.

Philip Jackson, another producer, said some of Herrmann's friends gave him the "Last Supper" several weeks ago as a joke.

Barbara Surrall, the owner of a Belchertown restaurant where the boy worked part-time as a dishwasher, told the Daily Hampshire Gazette that he took time off from his job three weeks ago saying "he had something to do at the college."

Herrmann dropped out of high school in February and planned to attend Hampshire in the fall.

Students said Herrmann downed the mug of poisoned liquid on the show last night, satirical speech attacking the administration of the college for its admissions policy and its handling of several disciplinary matters.

W. Randy Bannecker, a student from Seattle who watched the show, said Herrmann's complaints centered on his view that the 20-year-old private college with its experimental approach to a liberal arts education was becoming more traditional.

He described the speech as "gripes about the administration that weren't out of the ordinary" but said it would be naive to believe that the youth's dissatisfaction with the school led him to take his life.

Bishop to ordain two deacons Monday

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Robert Sasse and Lloyd LeClair will be ordained to the diaconate by the Rev. Sylvester W. Treinen, the bishop of the Catholic Church in Idaho, at 7:30 p.m. Monday in St. Edwards Church.

It will be the culmination of four years of study by the two, and a big step for them. It is a lifetime commitment.

As to why he decided to become a deacon, Sasse says, besides his being retired and having time to devote to it, "the good Lord has been good to me, and I could never repay. This is a way to give some of it back."

"And St. Edwards is a large parish, and it's a real chore for one priest — or even two priests, to try to get all the things done that have to be done. They need some help."

Lloyd LeClair says he graduated from Gonzaga University, "and, after I came back here to Twin Falls, I always felt like there should be something in the church that I could do more than I was doing, and of course, it took a long time to let.

"I was sitting around waiting for about 30 years, and the church opened the door again. That's what I had in mind — getting involved and helping other people and doing something, and this opportunity presented itself, and I grabbed it."

"We helped each other through. We were friends even before, and have become better friends since the Vatican II, and he says his wife Evelyn, and Sasse' wife Peg were very supportive and went with them to many of the training sessions."

Sasse and LeClair will be the first to be ordained to the diaconate in Twin Falls, although there has been a deacon serving the Twin Falls parish since 1984. The Rev. John McKinley Jr. was ordained in Wallace, Idaho in 1983.

The origin of deacons, McKinley explains, "was during the time right after the resurrection of Christ. Everyone (the early Christians) brought all of their goods and all of their belongings. Some of them sold their farms or their vineyards or whatever, and brought whatever they needed. Monday night, the church explains, will be performed during a regular mass.

Fr. Dodds, pastor of St. Edward's Church, says, "I really do welcome their commitment, and welcome their service, and are very glad and very happy they have taken this step. I think any parish would look forward to receiving their service."

Their duties will vary a lot, he says, according to their own commitments and schedules. "A deacon, by right, baptizes, can preach, can officiate at weddings and funerals."

"He cannot annoint the dying. He cannot hear confessions. He cannot say mass."

A reception will follow the ordination at the Parish Hall.

LDS leaders support national prayer day

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — President Reagan's recent proclamation making May 1 a national day of prayer has won the support of Mormon Church leaders.

In a statement released Friday, the First Presidency of 6 million-member Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints encouraged Mormons to participate in the event.

The statement was signed by President Ezra Taft Benson and his counselors, Gordon B. Hinckley and Thomas S. Monson.

"We endorse (the) proclamation and encourage our individual members and our congregations throughout the nation to join in a prayerful petition to our Heavenly Father, giving thanks for all that He does for us, seeking His guidance and inspiration in the conduct of our lives, and asking for the blessing of peace in a troubled world," the church leaders said.

"Also, while we enthusiastically support the proclamation, let us not limit our supplications to a

"May we all, regardless of any particular religious affiliation, express daily gratitude to the Father of us all," the statement said.

Mormon-temple dispute subject of public hearing

LAKE OSWEGO, Ore. (AP) — A disputed $13.5 million temple project for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will be the subject of a public hearing scheduled for May 6.

The Oregon Land Use Board of Appeals has asked the city for more information on the City Center project, which would include a site east of Interstate 5 in this Portland suburb.

The council's action was appealed to the board by Lake Oswego residents Wilma McNulty and Linda Simpson, who argued that the temple's design would disrupt the area. The design includes 170-foot stainless steel spires and illuminated white marble walls.

The board sent the matter back to the council, asking for more details about the city's design standards.

At a meeting Tuesday, the council discussed what procedure the city should follow in responding to the board. The council decided to hold a hearing at which ambiguities in the building-design code would be discussed. Mayor William E. Young said there would be no discussion about the temple itself at that hearing.

The council then plans to hold another meeting to discuss how the building-design standards apply to the proposed temple. Only those who have spoken at past hearings will be allowed to testify, Young said.

Tuesday's meeting filled the Lake Oswego High School gymnasium with supporters of the temple plan.

Christian leaders criticize bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several Christian church leaders are criticizing the U.S. bombing raid on Libya, saying the attack will only lead to further acts of violence.

Their comments, made Thursday, put them at odds with the opinion polls and with some Jewish leaders, who praised Monday's assault.

The bombing was "both morally questionable and fundamentally imprudent," said the Rev. Avery Post, president of the 1.7-million-member United Church of Christ. He also said the attack "assumes that the only effective response to terror is more terror. As a Christian, that is a proposition I cannot accept."

The Rev. Edmund Lee Brown, the presiding bishop of the 2.8-million-member Episcopal Church, declined to condemn the attack, but called it "a serious, unilateral action with grave consequences."

Liberation-theology priest praises stance

RIO-DE-JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The Rev. Leonardo Boff, a Roman Catholic priest who had been often silenced by the Vatican for his espousal of "liberation theology," on Wednesday praised the church's new statement on the issue and the pope who had published it for his views.

"It is a document that supports all of those involved in the struggle for people's liberation from misery and we can now say that we have a liberation theology pope — John Paul II," the 47-year-old friar said at a press conference in Rio.

Boff referred to "Instruction on Christian Freedom and Liberation," which was released by the Vatican two weeks ago, announcing the church's determination "to respond to the reality of contemporary man as he endures oppression and yearns for freedom."

Only 20 months ago, the Vatican issued a document that expressed concern about liberation theology, saying it might pollute Catholicism with concepts borrowed from Marxism. The theology, which details about the city's design standards.

At a meeting Tuesday, the council discussed what procedure the city should follow in responding to the board. The council decided to hold a hearing at which ambiguities in the building-design code would be discussed. Mayor William E. Young said there would be no discussion about the temple itself at that hearing.

The council then plans to hold another meeting to discuss how the building-design standards apply to the proposed temple. Only those who have spoken at past hearings will be allowed to testify, Young said.

Lutheran churches united

MINNEAPOLIS — The American Lutheran Church joined the Lutheran Church in America and the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches in a process to create a new Lutheran church.

In addition, a representative transitional team has been formed to implement policies agreed upon by the three churches, the church said in a news release.

Jail lawsuit picks county's pocket

But lawyer says facility is now safer as a result

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A lawsuit filed Oct. 22 over the Twin Falls County jail has cost the county more than $39,888 — and the bills keep coming.

Commissioner Judy Felton said county taxpayers will end up paying the lawsuit-related costs for jail improvements, attorney's fees and, mostly, to board county inmates in other jails.

But attorney Greg Fuller, who filed the action on behalf of inmates who claimed the 74-year-old jail was inadequate and unsafe, said the jail is safer now because of the lawsuit. "If this was all we accomplished, we accomplished something," Fuller said.

In an agreement reached Feb. 11 over the lawsuit, the county admitted to problems and agreed to implement a number of improvements at the jail, located in the Courthouse.

"The most expensive item to date has been the boarding of county inmates in other county jails to comply with a 30-inmate limit at the Twin Falls County jail.

During March $16,449 was spent to transport and house county inmates in other jails, at a cost of $29-$24 a day per inmate, Sheriff Jim Munn said. Between Feb. 11-28, it cost $6,799 to house inmates elsewhere.

Prior to the lawsuit, Twin Falls County inmates were held in other jails because of lack of space and segregation requirements. The court-ordered limit, however, resulted in at least a dozen additional inmates being transported.

"Boarding costs are dependent on the fluctuating jail population, which is on the rise — between April 1-15, 1985, the county averaged 40 inmates a day. The average was 55 prisoners during the same time this year, Munn said.

On the average, about 21 inmates a day were housed in other jails last month. So far this month, the daily average is 24 inmates.

A further complication is the county's own overcrowding of the State Penitentiary's cap on the problems. Because of the cap, four inmates sentenced to prison had to be held several days by Twin Falls County, at a total cost of $80 per day, Munn said. The county is not reimbursed by the state.

And there are other costs.

The cost of implementing several improvements at the jail is $3,076 to date, Munn said. The county has saved money by using its own staff to do the work.

The improvements include the addition of a third meal, removal of bunks and installation of emergency and regular lighting and a new fire exit.

There's more work ahead, because the county also agreed to improve the lock and door systems and add smoke detectors and fans.

Attorney fees have been another expense.

A 5th District Court judge last month ordered the county to pay Fuller $7,356 in fees and costs for the lawsuit. Fuller claimed among other things that his clients couldn't afford to pay him.

Felton said the county had wanted to appeal the ruling on the fees, but not because it didn't want to spend any more money. The county has already racked up a $6,215 bill from private attorney Lloyd Webb for defending the county in the lawsuit. The Twin Falls County prosecutor's office couldn't be used because there was a potential conflict if the case went to trial, Felton said.

Ironically, prophesies of such costs related to the old jail were foretold last year by county officials proposing a $6.2 million bond to finance a new jail. The bond issue decisively failed last March.

"It was one of those things we feared, and it came to pass," Munn said.

The expenditures related to the lawsuit are chipping away at the county budget.

About half of the sheriff's office operating budget of $227,900 — which excludes salaries — was spent at the end of March, Munn said. In that budget, about $3,500 had been designated to board inmates. But as of March 19, about $18,948 had been expended, Felton said.

If the spending trend continues, the county will have to seek permission of a District Court judge to amend the sheriff's and overall county budget to reflect the lawsuit-related costs now taken from the county's general reserve budget will have to be made up next year.

Potato plant due to reopen

The Associated Press

GLENN'S FERRY — After being closed for a year, the old Redi-Spuds potato processing plant in Glenns Ferry is undergoing a $2.5 million renovation and will reopen April 23 under its original owner, Magic West Inc. of Rupert.

Company Vice President Bill Schow said one of the plant's two production lines will begin operation April 23, with the second expected to start up in mid-May.

At peak production, the company will employ 65 people, Schow said. Thirty-five people have been hired to refurbish the plant, and most will remain when production begins, he said.

The plant will produce dehydrated and individually quick-frozen potatoes to use for ingredients in packaged foods, Schow said. Restaurant and food-service companies also will use the products.

The impact on potato farmers will be indirect because potatoes will be purchased from packers and processors, not directly from farmers. "We will use potatoes, but we won't be the first user," Schow said.

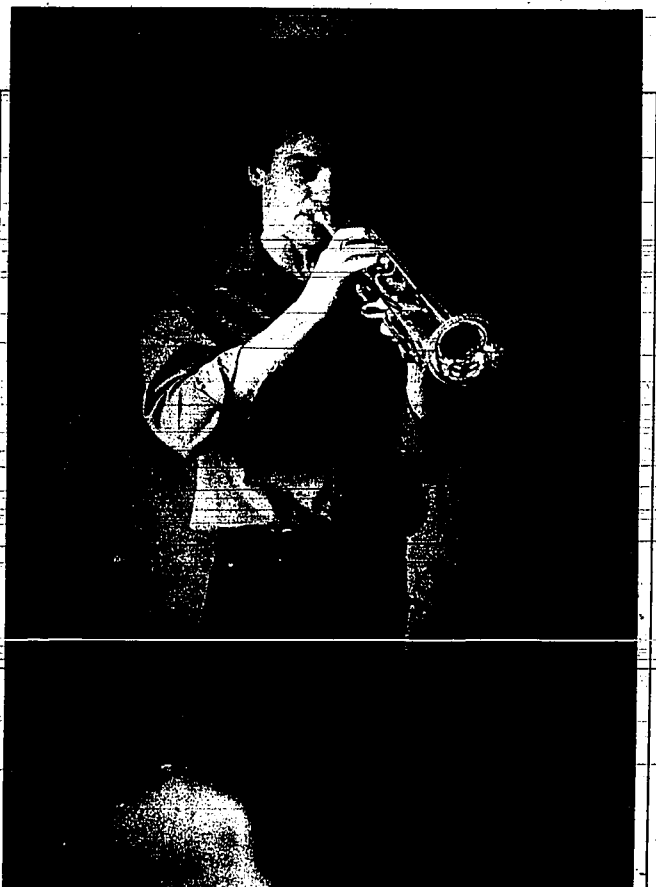

The products will be sold domestically, though Schow said the export market would be explored later.

The renovation is being financed by a combination of private funds, a low-interest loan from the city of Glenns Ferry and a loan insured by the Small Business Administration.

The plant, Magic West will use has had a checkered history that includes a closure and a bankruptcy.

Schow said Magic West built the processing plant in 1974, but closed it in 1979 after several years of depressed market conditions. In 1980, Magic West leased the plant to Redi-Spuds of America, which began production in 1981 and specialized in fresh-potato products.

Redi-Spuds closed in the spring of 1985 and later filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code. The company never reopened the plant, and Magic West took back the property, Schow said.

Surplus of power, faltering economy hurt rate-hike bid

By KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "Our timing couldn't be worse," says Idaho Power rates manager Larry Crowley of Idaho Power's request earlier this year for a 27.4-percent rate increase.

Just how bad that timing was has become apparent over the past few weeks.

On April 3, just three weeks before the Public Utilities Commission will reconvene its hearings in Twin Falls on the proposed rate increase, the staff of the PUC announced that it had analyzed the company's figures and was recommending a rate decrease — not increase — for the utility.

Instead of the $84.2 million hike requested by the company, staff members at the IPUC recommended cutting the company's rates by $2.6 million.

While the staff opinion is a recommendation only, and not a decision by the PUC's commissioners, it is not an encouraging signal for Idaho Power.

With the state's economy faltering, Idaho Power's request for a hefty rate hike has been anything but popular since it was announced last September. And, with the state now enjoying a power surplus, the company's recently completed Valmy II coal-fired power plant has been labeled as an expensive mistake by many critics.

Added to this, the PUC staff's analysis gives even more weight to the complaints consumer groups, citizen's groups and the state attorney general's office have been making for the past several months. "Everything catches up with you," Crowley said of the company's decision to ask for a rate increase in 1985. "The last time we filed a general rate increase was December 1981," he said.

Since then, the company has been faced with steadily increasing payments to producers of cogenerated power and the costs of providing service and hookups to some 12,000 new customers, Crowley explained. "We do not have the rates in place to cover the costs of new generation and new distribution to customers," he said.

Crowley said that the company's $154 million investment in the Valmy II plant, Idaho Power shares the 500-ing to screen them as they're filed, LaVelle said.

Anywhere from 500 to 2,000 mining claims are filed each month with the BLM, he said. The agency manages the subsurface mineral rights on all federal lands in the state, including those beneath national forest lands.

To date, LaVelle said, 3,300 claims have been filed with the agency in 1986. Of that number 2,199 have already been screened, to make sure they are not on protected lands.

Of the more than 2,000 which have been reviewed, 31 have been declared null and void because they were located on closed lands, LaVelle said.

In all, the BLM has more than 11 million claims on file.

Invalid mining claims not an Idaho problem

TWIN FALLS — A report by the General Accounting Office has turned up several thousand mining claims in Nevada and Colorado issued by the U.S. Department of Interior on national park land, wilderness and other areas that are supposed to be closed to mining.

But Bureau of Land Management officials in Boise say they have not found similar problems in Idaho.

"We looked into it and we've pretty well concluded we're in good shape," said Bill LaVelle, deputy state director for minerals with the BLM in Boise.

Business hears artful proposal of marriage

By ANNETTE CARY

TWIN FALLS — Business and the arts make a beautiful marriage, Frederick Norman, executive director of the Morrison Center for the Performing Arts in Boise, told a crowd of more than 100 business people and arts supporters Friday.

Art not only makes good sense but it makes good profits, in every sense of the word, Norman said at a lunch sponsored by the Twin Falls Renaissance Academy of the Arts.

He remembers when the Shakespearean Theater was started in Ashland, Ore., with a discussion over a cup of coffee and $300, he said. Four years later the theater netted its first profit of $100. Today it generates millions of dollars in the community, proving true the business maxim that "money circulates money," he said.

"You should see how the Boise business community uses the Morrison Center," said Pat Henderson, its administrator-coordinator. "People don't want to come from a big city to a place like Boise, because they're afraid of what they lose."

However, since the $16-million

Board opposes procurement proposal

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Region IV Development Association Board is calling on the Idaho congressional delegation to help block passage of a proposal that could make government contracts all but impossible for local businesses to land.

The Office of Management and Budget has asked Congress to more than halve the amount of time businesses have to submit bids by passing a modification to the federal procurement system called the Simplified Competitive Acquisition Technique, or SCAT, says Region IV Economic Development Planner Carleen Pierce.

SCAT would simplify bidding for the federal government, since fewer businesses would respond, Pierce says. Bidding would be difficult for first-time contractors and businesses too small to have staff members who work solely with the government project or computers on-line with the federal government.

Now the federal procurement system, which advertises for goods worth $165 billion annually, is drastically under-used by Magic Valley businesses, says Region IV Director Joseph Herring.

Herring's office has been working on educational programs to help small businesses sophisticated enough to bid nationally.

Now businesses have 15 days to request information after notice is given of the government's need for a product in the federal publication Commerce Business Daily. The bid deadline is 30 days later.

New requirements would limit the deadline for requesting information to five days after the publication is printed, giving large companies that receive bid information by computer, rather than through the mail, a distinct advantage, Pierce says.

Businesses would then have only 15 days to submit a bid.

"We need not less time, but more lead time," says Region IV Board member Art Van Pelt, City Councilman Erik Andersen. The three times his company, Curl Manufacturing, has solicited bid information, it has had difficulty preparing a bid in the time now allotted.

Thursday the Region IV Board adopted a resolution asking that the Idaho congressional delegation defend small businesses against SCAT.

The resolution maintains that SCAT would result in Idaho businesses receiving bid information after the bid opening date and would benefit the previous prime contractor for a product, rather than small business contractors.

It also holds that SCAT would not solve the real cause behind government procurement problems, particularly in military procurement parts. Previous contractors retain specifications of the parts, rather than making them available for competitive bidding, Pierce says.

The Region IV Development Association plans a federal procurement workshop. Local businesses late this summer, Herring says, the program will emphasize selling Idaho food products to the Defense Department, which buys an astounding amount of food, Herring says. A single aircraft carrier uses 35,000 dozen eggs to feed its 5,000 military workers in a single three- or four-month passage, he says.

 megawatt, coal-fired power plant in Nevada with Sierra Pacific Resources, a Nevada-based utility. The plant accounts for $27.4 million of the company's rate hike request.

"Valmy II is the obvious big-ticket item," Crowley said. "In 1979 we went to the commission (the PUC) requesting information on plants. At the time, we were seeing 7- to 8-percent growth a year," and power projections predicted the company would need to meet demands by the year 1985.

"Growth has slowed since then, as Idaho's muddled through a long-lasting recession. Coupled with this has been a flood of surplus energy from the state's explosive small hydropower industry. Federal law requires the utility to buy electricity at set rates from licensed, privately owned small power sites and other generators at set rates.

In 1980, Crowley said, "I don't think anyone had any idea of the magnitude of response we would have to cogeneration."

"Ratepayers sure didn't have much to do with it," he said of the company's decision to go ahead with the plant. Instead of making customers pay for the investment, Jones said he hopes the new hydroelectric stockholders should bear the added costs of the Valmy plant.

The PUC has taken a similar line. Staff witness Stephanie Miller has recommended that one-third of the company's investment in Valmy II be excluded from the rate base — a move that would trim several million dollars from the rate hike.

Miller said, in a PUC news release: "The company's new hydroelectric need its 125-megawatt share of Valmy II before the plant was completed, but presented no evidence to show it considered any course of action but completing the plant and putting it in (the) rate base so it could earn a return on it."

Jones has also raised this point and suggested that the company should have sought independent advice and analysis before pushing ahead.

Resources, which needed the power to meet its needs.

As for the suggestion that the company should have predicted that the power plant was necessary, Crowley said "I think you're really asking too much. A company makes a decision and 10 years later you come back and say 'Oh, bad decision, guys.' If you don't plan ahead and have enough and you're short, you're really in trouble."

In addition to major disagreements over the costs of the Valmy II plant, some other key discrepancies between Idaho Power's analysis and the PUC staff's analysis include:

- PUC staff recommendations that the company's return on common stock be reduced from 15 to 12.5 percent — a move that would reduce revenue requirements by $25 million.
- PUC staff comparison runs which estimate the utility's average power supply costs at $29.5 million less than Idaho Power's calculations.
- Excluding $17 million of the company's investment in the coal-fired Boardman Power Plant in Oregon.

"We wouldn't go ahead with the project if we were making the decision today," Crowley admitted.

But while the company believes it pursued the Valmy plant in good faith, some board members of the PUC staff have suggested that all or part of the company's investment in the plant be excluded from the rate base.

"I think the real question is are they (the shareholders) going to take some of the risk," said Jones.

Crowley disagreed with Jones and the PUC staff. "If they could have halted construction on the plant once it became apparent that it was no longer needed...

"There are no options like that," he said. "The only option is to let the ratepayers pay for it. The ratepayers are the ones who are going to be paying for it."

Crowley said the company's position was further complicated by the fact that it was building the plant as a joint venture with Sierra Pacific

The first day of the PUC's hearings in Twin Falls will be April 20. The hearing will begin at 10:30 a.m.

Additional hearings will be held throughout the week. Hearings are also scheduled for Boise after the Twin Falls hearings are completed.

The PUC's decision may not be the last word on the rate increase. Jones said his office may appeal the rate case to the state Supreme Court if he feels the PUC's final decision is excessive.

Park-use insurance rules tightened

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls is tightening its liability insurance requirements for groups that use municipal parks, says Parks and Recreation Director Chad Browning.

Officials have been watching liability potential in all departments closely since the city's coverage was canceled in January, forcing the city to begin a self-insurance program. As of late this week, no claims had yet been filed against the city.

Groups that plan high-risk, organized activities in city parks will be required to carry their liability insurance policy down to City Hall for an evaluation of city coverage before their events are held, and they may be required to have the city included as an addendee, Browning said.

Activities such as a state-meet-in-spectator for 10 years prior to the discontinuation of that program. He then began work at Laird's Meat Processing Co. in Jerome.

He was a member of the Friday Night Men's Bowling League, the Mixed Bowlers Association, the Cretaceous Rifle Association, the Magic Valley Rifle and Horse Association, the Butlins and the Squares Square Group, and also served as a volunteer at the Fair of the Fair-View Church. While living in Filer, he was a member of the Kiwanis Club and had been a member of the Youthmasters in Twin Falls.

Councilman Erik Anderson says he would like to include private schools and day-care centers that daily use city parks for recess or recreation periods in the new insurance requirements.

Browning also wants to begin requiring the parents of children who participate in city sports programs to sign waivers releasing the city and volunteer coaches from liability, he says.

Jail

 year through property taxes.

The county will be able to levy taxes under a restriction of the 1-Percent Initiative, because court-ordered costs, such as Fuller's fees, are exempt, Felton said.

Despite the costs, Fuller said, "A lot of good came out of it (the lawsuit)." He said that the improved jail conditions may prevent even costlier lawsuits against the county, said Fuller, who seeks damages in his claim against the county.

The problems at the old jail never will be completely solved, Fuller said. The lawsuit forced the county to hold another bond issue election to build a new jail if the bond issue falls, the county will have to find assets to do the job, he added.

Munn said he does feel better about the reduced population in the jail but there are other costly aspects of the lawsuit, he added.

He and his staff daily juggle inmates between other jails and Twin Falls County, Munn said. Fortunately, he's had help from sheriffs in Cassia, Gooding, Blaine, Jerome and Blaine counties.

"They have reached out and really helped us. If they won't, I don't know what we would do," he said.

He fears those jails may run out of space for Twin Falls County inmates, he added.

"County Public Defender Mike Wende also is feeling the impacts of the lawsuit, Wood travels at least once a week during weekends or after work to other jails to visit clients.

He isn't compensated for his overtime because he is on salary. But the county pays mileage, which he has been attempting to limit by consolidating trips and using telephone interviews, he said.

What will hurt his budget is the cost of paying experts to travel to other jails for mental evaluations, for example, Wood said. "It will drain on what limited funds we have."

The improvements at the jail have helped, but they just are a "patch job," he added.

Mining

 100,000 mining claims on file in Idaho.

"For a while, LaVelle admitted, there was a period of time that we were not filing claims. Checking claim locations for possible conflicts was 'put on a back burner' at that time, he said.

For those not checked, however, "those kinds of things eventually get shaken out," LaVelle said.

"Three-fourths of our claims are on Forest Service lands in the state. They have a lot more people on the ground. As a routine thing they (claims on closed lands) are getting flagged," he said.

According to an article in the New York Times, the GAO report noted that the Department of Interior did not screen mining claims on five of its 10 Western states where mining activities were highest. The five states, according to the article, were California, Colorado, Nevada, Oregon, and Wyoming.

The Times article also said the GAO estimated that there were nearly 4,500 claims in Colorado and Nevada alone which had been issued on unprotected lands.

Arts

 center was completed two years ago, companies bring new and exciting artists and performers to the center and ask staff there to discuss the ways the arts are thriving in Idaho, Henderson said.

Then PSA Airline was considering Boise, the Morrison Center was the first part of Boise's executives were shown, she said. And the center was instrumental in bringing the 1985 National Governors' Council to Boise, Norman said he believes.

"But beyond the good business sense, arts and culture are important to support them, Norman said.

"Arts are the cathedral of the spirit," he said. When people think of the ancient Greeks today, it is the names of the philosophers, artists and playwright, not those who made the most money, that come to mind.

"That's what it should be," Norman said. "You make the money to make life better."

He called Twin Falls a primary area that nurtures art in the state. People here know that people working together make arts strong, he said.

Henderson credits the Fine Arts Auditorium at the College of Southern Idaho, built with donations, with sparking the Morrison Center.

Two bond issues to raise the money for the Boise center failed before the successful fund-raising drive to build the center was launched. In 1977, the Mountain States Tumor Institute asked Velma Morrison for help raising money for a linear accelerator. Morrison is the widow of Boise construction magnate Harry W. Morrison.

She and the Boise arts community organized a production of "Shenandoah," which toured the state.

Performers found the Twin Falls Fine Arts Auditorium "gorgeous," she said. "It turned our way of thinking around."

"Supporters of what was to become the Morrison Center then turned to private donations to raise the money that eventually built and now supports the center. "It took a marriage of art and business to do that," she said.

Agency seeks grant applications

BOISE — The Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation is accepting applications for two grant programs for the development of park and recreation facilities.

The first is intended to benefit facilities for recreation activities for users. Under the state recreational vehicle grant program, projects such as dump stations and improvements to public campgrounds will be funded by a $3.50 fee attached to each vehicle registration.

Cities, counties, highway and recreation districts, as well as state agencies can apply for the grants.

Individual recreational vehicle users are encouraged to suggest appropriate projects and work with these agencies to ensure that projects meet their needs.

Applications are also being taken by the IDPR for federal Land and Water Conservation Fund grants. Matching grants are available from the federal program for projects such as swimming pools, neighborhood and community parks, bicycle paths, picnic facilities and public recreation developments.

The LWCF grants are funded through federal offshore oil drilling leases. More than $36 million in recreation improvement projects has been spent in Idaho since the program began in 1965. Cities, counties, state agencies, recreation and school districts are eligible for the federal program.

For further information and applications, interested persons should contact the department. The address is: Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation, Statehouse Mall, Boise 83720.

The deadline for receiving grant applications is April 30.

Two-hour rehearsal leaves them weeping

Horowitz effort floors Moscow crowd

MOSCOW (AP) — Pianist Vladimir Horowitz returned to the Moscow stage Friday for the first time in 61 years and overwhelmed Soviet music lovers with a virtuoso display that left his audience weeping and cheering with joy.

It was only a rehearsal.

Hundreds of officials and celebrities who had tickets and dozens of students and music lovers who didn't jammed the Great Hall of Moscow's conservatory to watch what was billed as an open rehearsal for Horowitz's first concert in Moscow on Sunday.

What they got was a two-hour performance; the hour-long program for Sunday, some clowning, and three encores that sent the 1,600 spectators wild.

VLADIMIR HOROWITZ
Returns to his native Russia

"There are no words, no words, to describe this," beamed Boris Berlin, a 30-year-old piano teacher who remembers hearing Horowitz play before the pianist left his homeland in 1925.

Horowitz vowed never to return, but he agreed to come back for two concerts in Moscow and Leningrad after a U.S.-Soviet cultural exchange agreement was signed at the Geneva summit last November.

Ticket-holders could barely squeeze into the conservatory's entrance through the crowd. Then, music students and others who had charmed "Pustite studentii" (let the students in), exploded through the three doors of the main entrance, a human river the uniformed police on hand were unable to stop.

Jammed into the large balconies of the Great Hall, the audience roared "hurrah," as their 81-year-old idol walked on to the stage.

Because it was a rehearsal, there were a few hitches at first.

Horowitz's wife Wanda, the daughter of Arturo Toscanini, was unhappy with the position of the pianist's Steinway on the conservatory stage.

Etudes in C sharp minor and D sharp minor, he had visibly warmed to his task. And the crowd was alive.

"This is a miracle," said violinist Viktor Peginov, who said he had studied with Horowitz's late sister, Regina, in the Ukrainian town of Kharkov. "After this concert, I can die happy."

Overwhelmed by the second half of the program — Schubert, Liszt and Chopin — the crowd gave Horowitz a standing ovation that would not stop.

The pianist, laughing and clowning with the audience and with a film crew on stage, returned to his Steinway, holding up three fingers.

Without a word, he sat down.

What the audience then got was a fragment of from Schubert's "Kinderszenen," a virtuoso piece by Moszkowski and a Rachmaninov polka, all executed with the fine touch and rich texture of sound that have earned Horowitz acclaim for decades throughout the world.

More burrs and ovations. This time, Horowitz returned to the piano only to "snip it lid" over the keys, then went backstage.

But some 600 young fans didn't quit. They waited outside the conservatory for almost 45 minutes to cheer Horowitz and his wife when they emerged. The couple's black limousine barely squeezed through the joyous crowd.

"I think he (Horowitz) will remember this concert until the end of his life," said composer Sergel Chobolov, one of the dozens who got in without a ticket.

"And we will too."

Untimely trip finished

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — A 12-year-old newspaper carrier who won a 10-day trip to Spain was relieved to return home after witnessing anti-American demonstrations in Madrid, his mother says.

Jason Underwood was staying at a hotel in the Spanish capital one block from the U.S. Embassy, target of demonstrators protesting the U.S. bombing of Libya.

"People were throwing rocks and spray-bottles, carrying signs and spray-painting Reagan is an assassin" on the walls," Jason said.

"I wasn't nervous," he added, "but some of the people with rooms on the front side of the hotel, where they were throwing rocks, were pretty scared."

His mother, Judy, said though that "he was really relieved to get back home" Thursday.

The Sierra Middle School seventh-grader won the trip as part of a promotion for Riverside Press-Enterprise newspaper carriers.

Guild makes three awards

NEW YORK (AP) — A French horn player, a flutist and a violinist shared first place honors in the Concert Artists Guild's 35th annual competition.

The 400 entrants from around the world were winnowed to 10 finalists who performed over eight hours Thursday at the Carnegie Recital Hall, said guild spokeswoman Ellen Winners.

Winners were Marie-Louise Neunecker, a French horn player from Erbes-Budenheim, West Germany, who is a principal hornist in the Bomberger Symphony; Marina Piccinini, a flutist from Madison, Wis., who studies at the Juillard School of Music in New York City; and Maria Bachmann, a violinist from Chester, Pa., who studies at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia.

Each was awarded $2,500 cash, a fully sponsored Town Hall recital and several years of free management services, Ms. Hightstein said.

Twins found guilty in derailment case

MEDIA, Pa. (AP) — A prosecutor says she'll seek long sentences in a juvenile home for twin 15-year-old boys convicted of causing a trolley derailment that injured 57 people, including one who became a paraplegic.

"It was suggested by defense counsel that the juveniles' conduct was simply child's play," said Delaware County Assistant District Attorney Jean Marie Cella. But the verdict Thursday showed Judge John V. Diggins agreed "their conduct was egregious," she said.

The boys were found guilty of 57 counts of aggravated assault and one count each of causing a catastrophe and conspiracy.

Large rocks and concrete slabs were placed on railroad tracks Dec. 11, causing the Norristown High-Speed Line trolley to derail. A southbound trolley then hit the derailed unit.

University sentimentality overcomes imagemaking

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Sentiment has won out over image-polishing, so the new name for the University of Rochester will be the University of Rochester, officials said Friday.

Controversy over plans to change the 136-year-old name has been brewing for several months in this upstate New York city, with student groups forming to fight it and alumni writing in with such comments as, "Don't march my degree into oblivion."

"We have a major image jump to make," said university President Dennis O'Brien, who had favored a name change but never said what he thought the new name should be.

"I feel a moral compulsion to try and make this institution better known," he said.

But school officials, who asked not to be identified, said Friday that his compulsion stops short of adopting a new name.

They said O'Brien will officially announce the university's plans to keep its name Friday afternoon in a speech to students and faculty.

Gorbachev proposes conventional cuts

BERLIN (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Friday proposed reductions in conventional military forces and tactical nuclear weapons in Europe from the Atlantic to the Ural Mountains.

Speaking to the East German Communist Party congress in East Berlin, Gorbachev also criticized nuclear policies on Libya; Nicaragua and nuclear-weapons testing. He said East-West relations have suffered as a result.

"One can imagine... what would happen to humanity if the Soviet Union acted as the Americans do in the international arena," the Soviet Communist Party chairman said.

Gorbachev said he was proposing an East-West agreement on "meaningful" cuts in the ground and tactical air forces of European countries, as well as in U.S. and Canadian forces deployed on the continent.

He said troop units would be disbanded and their arms either destroyed or returned to their home countries. His offer, Gorbachev said, would affect both conventional forces and tactical nuclear weapons, which include mines, artillery and other short-range arms.

He added that the agreement could be verified through unspecified "technical means" and by on-site inspection.

Gorbachev said the area covered by his proposal "must obviously embrace the territory of all of Europe, from the Atlantic to the Urals," a mountain range in the Soviet Union that forms a natural boundary between the country's European and Asian regions.

Gorbachev did not give details of this proposal, and Western diplomats in East Berlin said the package at first glance appeared to lack substance.

One Western diplomat said that although Gorbachev has previously proposed on-site verification, Soviet bloc negotiators have consistently opposed the idea at the East-West troop-reduction talks in Vienna.

The United States has rejected proposals that would require it to remove its conventional arms from Europe.

In Bonn, the West German capital, chief government spokesman Friedhelm Ost welcomed Gorbachev's offer on conventional forces but called on him to "get specific."

Gorbachev said his offer on conventional arms responded to Western concerns that if nuclear weapons were dismantled in Europe, NATO member nations would still be threatened by the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact's conventional military might.

Gorbachev also said the Soviet Union would be making new offers on chemical weapons reductions "in the next days." He said he stood by earlier proposals for abolition of nuclear missiles by the year 2000.

OPEC negotiations remain deadlocked

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC's effort to negotiate an end to the oil price slump remained deadlocked Friday, and some officials said the cartel was likely to delay cutting its production at least until the summer.

After four days of fruitless discussions — mirroring the futility of their marathon conference last month — the OPEC leaders had agreed only to take another stab at a solution today.

Oil ministers from the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries held only a morning session, in which they decided to ask their technical advisers for new recommendations — the key issue of cutting oil production.

Rilwanu Lukman, the oil minister of Nigeria, told reporters afterward that the best OPEC could hope for was to reach agreement on production controls for the summer and fall quarters.

"We can't do much with the (spring) quarter," he said.

When the conference opened on Tuesday, the ministers said they would seek agreement on production cuts for the April-June quarter. The idea was to bring oil supplies closer into line with demand, thus boosting prices from their current levels of between $11 and $15 a barrel.

But the ministers could not agree on a way to divide the cuts for this quarter. So instead, they attempted to devise a system of sharing production limits for the second half of the year.

Ortega claims Reagan out to sink Sandinistas

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega says Nicaragua wants peace with the United States, but he believes President Reagan has decided to destroy the Sandinista regime by military means.

He accused Reagan of "blackmail policy" in supporting Contra rebels who are fighting his government.

"I see no reason to maintain a policy of confrontation," Ortega said in an interview with The Associated Press. "Nicaragua is willing to overcome this situation, but the United States must stop its policy of aggression."

Ortega gave the interview late Wednesday night in an office at his official residence, dressed in a black army T-shirt and fatigue pants. The 40-year-old leader focused his remarks on relations with the superpower to the north.

The fact that Congress is debating Reagan's plan to give $100 million in aid to the rebels shows a "lack of respect" by the United States for another sovereign nation, he said.

"Regardless of the vote's outcome, there is a political decision to destroy our revolution, the attitude of the U.S. Congress does not fall within the framework of relations between states... whether they approve 10, 30 or a 100 million dollars. This is a blackmail policy. They are committed to a military solution."

The Senate has approved the aid for the Contras, most of whom operate from bases in southern Honduras near the Nicaraguan border, but the issue remains unresolved in the House of Representatives.

American enclaves targeted

The Associated Press

U.S. installations in at least seven countries were the targets of anti-American demonstrations or bomb threats Friday in the fourth day of protests against the American air raids on Libya.

Bomb threats also delayed two Delta Air Lines flights in Canada and the British National Union of Journalists sent condolences to Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy. These were among the protest actions.

A U.S. Embassy cultural center in the Argentine capital, Buenos Aires, was evacuated after a person telephoned that a bomb had been placed in the building. An embassy official said police searched the Abraham Lincoln Center and found no explosives.

Officials in the Dominican Republic reported one student was shot and 20 were arrested when police firing tear gas blocked more than 1,000 demonstrators trying to march on the U.S. Embassy in Santo Domingo, the capital.

Some 4,000 people gathered in downtown Vienna, Austria, and marched to the U.S. Embassy where an effigy of President Reagan was burned. About 500 police guarded the embassy compound and the demonstration ended peacefully.

Three women who poured what they said was human blood on the steps of the U.S. Consulate in Toronto were arrested and charged with mischief.

Most of the personnel at the U.S. Embassy in Manila were sent home when about 400 Muslim Filipinos demonstrated in one lane of the boulevard in front of the building.

Vietnamese call off talks

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach said Friday that talks on U.S. soldiers missing in the Vietnam War have been called off for as long as the United States continues its "inhuman attack on Laos."

Thach, in New Delhi to attend a meeting of foreign ministers of the non-aligned nations, told a news conference that talks with the United States on returning the bodies of missing American soldiers "are a humanitarian issue."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb said the Vietnamese notified U.S. authorities in Bangkok that "the current situation is not favorable for the conduct of a technical meeting at this time. The rescheduling of this meeting will be later agreed upon between the two sides."

Champion Michael Spinks showed up at a Wednesday press conference which his opponent, Larry Holmes, boycotted

Spinks faces test in defense against a favored Holmes

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Michael Spinks will be in a position of having to prove himself again Saturday night when he defends the International Boxing Federation heavyweight title against Larry Holmes, who will be a challenger for the first time in eight years.

Spinks became the first light heavyweight champion to win a heavyweight title when he scored a 15-round unanimous decision over Holmes here last Sept. 21.

But he didn't convince the odds-makers that he could do it again.

"I'm the defending champion, but I'm still the underdog," Spinks said.

Holmes was a 7½-3 favorite to win the scheduled 15-round bout at a 9,000-seat indoor arena at the Las Vegas Hilton. The fight will be televised live by HBO and begin about 7:30 p.m. PST.

The 26-year-old Holmes has predicted he will score a seventh-round knockout. In the opinion of a man once trained both fighters, a knockout might be the only way Holmes can win.

"I don't know if Larry has enough of his former skill left to win on points," said Eddie Futch, who works with each fighter for 12 bouts, leaving both before the Sept. 21 match.

Holmes tasted defeat for the first time after 48 victories, 21 of them in title fights dating back to 1978, when two judges scored the final round for Spinks, giving him one-point margins. The other judge favored Spinks by three points.

Holmes criticized judging in Nevada, to the point that the State Athletic Commission demanded and got a public apology.

Spinks has played the role of underdog in a relaxed, confident manner, while Holmes has worn the mantle of challenger as if it were a hair shirt.

"I'm mad every day now," Holmes said at news conference here April 9.

'All he did was run, run, run in the fight. You might see me walking into Michael with my hands down just to see what he's got.'

— Larry Holmes

'If he does, I'll give him double whiplash.'

— Michael Spinks

"All he did was run, run, run in the fight," Holmes said. "You might see me walking into Michael with my hands down just to see what he's got."

"If he does, I'll give him double whiplash," said the 29-year-old Spinks.

"Larry can't get desperate because this guy's dangerous. Futch said 'I don't believe Michael brought his full power into play the first time because he didn't know what to expect being in there with a full-fledged heavyweight.'"

Spinks scored 19 knockouts in winning all 27 of his fights as a light heavyweight, 11 of them title matches. Holmes has won 34 fights inside the limit.

Tigers take title

Burley's Brad Church skys the ball off the fairway in a playoff for individual first place against Marali Valley's Chet Davids

Jerome nips Burley on home course on strength of Davids' medalist play

JEROME — Chet Davids of Marsh Valley nipped Burley's Brad Church on the second extra hole for medalist honors and the homebased Jerome Tigers claimed the team title in the annual Jerome Golf Invitational Friday.

Davids, one of the top challengers for the state amateur title at Warm Springs last summer, won the playoff with a par when Church came up with a bogey. The two shared 75 at the end of regulation play.

Just moments earlier, Jerome's Cam Hirst, rated a top medalist contender because he was on his home course, three-putted the 18th for a stroke short of making the playoff.

"I didn't feel I played very well on the front nine," said Davids. "I bogeyed 13 and 17 on the back but I felt I hit the ball better."

Hirst, obviously, was thinking of winning it outright when he went for a 10-foot birdie putt on the 18th.

"It was a little strong and rolled by about three feet and I just missed it coming back," he said.

Jerome won the team title by five strokes — 327-332 — over Burley, the meet being perhaps a preview of the state finals slated for Boise next month in the B division.

"When we don't feel we can win it, we won't hold it," laughed winning Coach Dale Mowrer when asked if the first place trophy made him feel an ungracious host.

Scoring was higher than usual due to a biting wind of about 20 miles per hour.

Bob Brodette, American Falls coach who learned his golf on this course 30 years ago, noted "we just had too many out-of-bounds. The wind made it hard to play today."

Team scoring — 1. Jerome 327, 2. American Falls 334, 4. Weiser 340, 5. Valliue 354, 6. Marsh Valley 364, 7. Preston 372, 8. Hiler 397, 9. Buhl 398, 10. Snake River 414, 11. Ketchum/Sun Valley 444

Individuals — 1. Chet Davids, Marsh Valley, 75; 2. Brad Church, Burley, 75 (Davids won playoff); 3. Cam Hirst, Jerome, 76; 4. Jeff Thomas, Weiser, 76; 5. Greg Farden, Valliue, 78; 6. Tim Peterson, Jerome, and Dean Metzger, Gooding, 81.

Brodhead admits to radio ploy

LSU athletic director also implicates coach in eavesdropping case

By DAVID MCCORMICK
The Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La. — Louisiana State University Athletic Director Bob Brodhead pleaded guilty Friday to conspiring to electronically eavesdrop on NCAA investigators, and said basketball coach Dale Brown was in on the plan.

Brodhead was sentenced to 200 hours of community service work and fined the maximum $1,000 by U.S. District Judge John Parker, who scolded Brodhead for betraying his position of trust.

"Obeying the law — or to put it another way, playing by the rules-of-the-game — is the minimum to be expected of a person in your position," Parker said. "Obviously, you have set a wrong example for our young people."

Brodhead said he has "no intention of resigning." The LSU Athletic Council is scheduled to meet Monday to recommend whether any action should be taken against him.

The federal charge of conspiring to intercept radio communications, filed Tuesday, ended months of bargaining with federal prosecutors.

"There have been extensive public negotiations in this case," Assistant U.S. Attorney Stan Lemelle told Parker before sentencing.

'I was aware this procedure was questionable, but decided that I would do it to protect our athletes and the university.'

— LSU's Bob Brodhead

For the first time since FBI agents seized hidden microphones from his desk last Oct. 27, Brodhead admitted he had intended to listen in on NCAA investigators' interviews of LSU players.

"I was aware that this procedure was questionable, but decided that I would do it to protect our athletes and the university," Brodhead said at a news conference following his court appearance.

Brodhead said he discussed his plans in advance with Brown, who put Brodhead in touch with a private investigator, Richard Barrios. Barrios got Brodhead in contact with George Davis, who Brodhead said agreed to install the equipment for around $400.

Davis, an FBI informant, alerted agents who watched as Brodhead and Davis entered the LSU athletic offices and planted the bugs the night before NCAA officials were to question students there.

"The NCAA" has been investigating — LSU — athletic recruiting practices for almost four years.

Brown, who testified before a federal grand jury but was not charged, could not be reached for comment.

Immediately after the bugs were seized, Brodhead issued a statement saying he had planted them in an attempt to catch a member of his staff who had been leaking information to reporters. He said after the sentencing that while that had been his original purpose, he decided to use the equipment also to listen in on the NCAA, which prohibits tape recording or transcripts of player interviews.

"I was 49, told the judge it was the first time in his life he had broken the law. 'I stand before you truly sorry,' he said.

Parker could have sentenced him to six months in prison, but said he believed Brodhead had learned his lesson.

The Athletic Council — a panel representing students, faculty, alumni and athletic officials — will recommend to the LSU Board whether any action should be taken against Brodhead.

"I'm going into the meeting with no leaning," said Bill Seay, its chairman.

Brodhead said he did not expect the council to try to have him fired.

"I feel very strongly that my record at LSU will be defense enough," said Brodhead, who left the Miami Dolphins management to join LSU in 1981.

Brodhead said his team advanced last season to the NCAA Final Four championship playoffs, the baseball team is ranked No. 1 in the nation and the football team represented the Southeastern Conference in the Sugar Bowl in 1985.

Brodhead said the bugging incident apparently had no effect on the continuing NCAA probe.

"I have met with them subsequently, and I have seen no animosity," he said.

Expert sure amateur rules in Olympics will be dumped

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — The world's top track and field official said Saturday the amateur principle that has ruled the Olympic Games for nearly a century will almost certainly disappear by the 1988 Games in Calgary and Seoul.

Primo Nebiolo of Italy, president of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, said in an interview with The Associated Press that he had no doubt next week's gathering of the world's 161 national Olympic Committees will endorse a new Athletes' Code intended to remove once and for all the traditional Olympic distinction between professionals and amateurs.

The new code, unanimously approved last year by the IOC Executive Board, is one of the main items for discussion by the Association of National Olympic Committees.

Nebiolo said if ANOC approves the change as expected, it would become a permanent part of the Olympic Charter following its formal adoption by the 1988 session of the full IOC in Lausanne, Switzerland, in October.

The IOC's secretary general,

Raymond Gagner of Switzerland, also said the proposed change was inevitable and necessary "to bring the Olympic Games into line with realities that everyone has taken for granted for years, namely that top athletes expect and receive payments."

Both Nebiolo and Gagner said opposition could be expected from only three of the 29 Olympic sports federations — those ruling soccer, tennis and ice hockey.

The two officials, interviewed separately on the eve of the ANOC meeting, said the three federations are largely dominated by major professional events

Redskins loosen reins

Theismann wins OK to shop around for jobs

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said Friday that quarterback Joe Theismann, given permission to try and find a job with another NFL team, is likely to be back with the Redskins next season.

"I think it's only a remote thing he won't be," Gibbs said of his quarterback, still recovering from a badly broken ankle sustained in a game against the New York Giants Nov. 18.

Last month, Gibbs asked Theismann, who turns 37 on Sept. 9, if he would be comfortable as a backup with the Redskins if he can't beat out 25-year-old Jay Schroeder. Schroeder took over when Theismann was hurt and led Washington to five wins in their last six games and a 10-6 record.

"I evaluated him well and I was candid with him what I thought his chances were," Gibbs said Friday at a meeting of head coaches from the NFC East. "I asked him if he wanted to retire — he's been the MVP of the league and played in two Super Bowls — and he said no. And I told him he could explore other possibilities if he wanted."

Since then, however, two of the teams that were interested in Theismann, Atlanta and the Los Angeles Rams, have picked up veteran quarterbacks. The Falcons obtained Turk Schonert, from the Cincinnati Bengals, and the Rams signed Steve Bartkowski as a free agent.

Gibbs said he had assured Theismann that he'd have a chance to compete with Schroeder for the starting quarterback job, although he indicated Schroeder had a head start. He also said that although Theismann won't be ready for next month's mini-camp by the opening of training camp this summer.

"The doctor tells me his recovery is absolutely remarkable," Gibbs said.

NL: Heath leads Cards over Expos, 4-2

MONTREAL (AP) — Mike Heath drove in three runs with a two-run homer and a double and John Tudor became baseball's first three-game winner as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Montreal Expos 4-2 Friday.

Tudor allowed seven hits, struck out four and walked two before leaving with two outs in the ninth after Tim Wallach's double drove home Andre Dawson with Montreal's second run. Todd Worrell got the final out of the ninth.

The Expos took a 1-0 lead in the first on Dawson's second homer in two days.

Morrison Friday to lead Rick Rhoden and the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 4-0 victory, spilling the Chicago Cubs' home opener.

Rick Sutcliffe, the 1984 Cy Young winner, was the victim and suffered his third straight loss, Rhoden, who has asked to be traded, raised his record to 2-0 but needed seventh inning help.

R. J. Reynolds opened the third with a single and Joe Orsulak scribbled him to second, Johnny Ray grounded out but Sid Bream walked before Brown doubled to center, scoring both runners.

because of the home-run pitch. Rhoden, who pitched for a National League-high 30 homers last season, Soto permitted a solo homer in the first by Phil Garner, his third.

Darling, who gave up four hits in seven innings, beat Steve Carlton, 0-2, who allowed five hits and struck out 10 over 6 and 2/3 innings. But Carlton, trying to win his first game since last May 20, could not overcome his eight walks, four that came in a three-run first inning.

Braves 6, Dodgers 3

ATLANTA (AP) — Dale Murphy and Bob Horner each belted two-run homers to lift the Atlanta Braves over the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-3 Friday night.

It was the fourth loss in a row for the Dodgers, but ended their string of 10 consecutive one-run decisions since the season opened.

Murphy drilled his third homer of the year to right-center in the first inning off Fernando Valenzuela after Rafael Ramirez had beaten out a single to shortstop.

Sudden hero Bradley leads a Bullets rally to down 76ers, 95-94

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bradley Bradley was the improbable hero of an even more improbable comeback Friday night.

Bradley, statistically the worst shooter (34.9 percent) in the NBA this season, banked in a 25-foot shot at the buzzer, capping an 18-0 Washington rally that gave the Bullets a 95-94 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers in the opening game of their first-round playoff series.

"I practice three-pointers a lot and I sure paid off," said Bradley, who hit another three-pointer as the Bullets rallied from a 94-77 deficit in the last 3 1/2 minutes. "I just spun around and shot it. When it left my hand, I thought it was going in. I was really happy because I knew that was it."

NBA playoffs

Blackman was scoreless until he went on a tear with 5-25 free-throw shooting in the first half of the Mavericks' last 16 points.

He scored eight points in the third quarter and made Dallas' first field goal in the fourth period.

He scored eight points in the third quarter and made Dallas' first field goal in the fourth period.

Utah, playing without leading scorer Adrian Dantley, who is out with back spasms, was paced by rookie Karl Malone with 21 points and Bobby Hansen with 15.

The rally appeared destined to fall short in the final seconds when, with the 76ers leading 94-92, Terry Catledge grabbed an offensive rebound with seven seconds to go to allow Philadelphia to maintain possession.

Julius Erving was fouled with three seconds left. But he missed three free throws, the last after a Washington lane violation gave him another chance.

The 76ers gave the Bullets the opportunity to win by committing five turnovers and missing their last five free throws down the stretch. The poor shooting and ball-handling negated a 24-6 Philadelphia advantage in offensive rebounds.

Bucks 119, Nets 107

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Craig Hodges scored 22 of his 25 points in the first half and Paul Pressey scored 15 of his 17 points in the second half as Milwaukee defeated the New Jersey Nets 119-107 in the opening game of a first-round NBA playoff series Friday.

The Bucks opened the fourth quarter with a 10-2 streak to go ahead 96-86 with 8:05 left on two foul shots by Pressey.

The Nets never got closer than five points after that as the Bucks' defense forced crucial New Jersey turnovers.

Mavericks 101, Jazz 93

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas guard Rolando Blackman took charge late in the second quarter and scored 25 points Friday night to carry the Mavericks to a 101-93 victory over the Utah Jazz in the opener of their best-of-5 NBA playoff series.

The Bucks opened the fourth quarter with a 10-2 streak to go ahead 96-86 with 8:05 left on two foul shots by Pressey.

The Nets never got closer than five points after that as the Bucks' defense forced crucial New Jersey turnovers.

The Bucks and Nets were tied 58-58 at intermission.

The underdog Nets opened the third period with a 10-5 surge to take a 68-63 lead with 9:01 left. But the Bucks, using their point transition game, came back to build an 87-76 lead with 3:25 left. Enter an 8-0 spur as Milwaukee went into the fourth quarter leading 88-84 on a three-point jump shot by Pressey.

AL: Leonard powers KC past Jays, 6-4

TORONTO (AP) — Right-hander Dennis Leonard continued his remarkable comeback with his second straight victory and Rudy Law drove in a pair of runs to spark the Kansas City Royals to a 6-4 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays on Friday night.

Leonard, facing the Blue Jays for the second time in as many starts in his comeback season from a severe knee injury, struck out five and walked one while allowing two hits in seven innings as he improved his record to 4-0.

Riles' one-out single in the eighth inning off New York reliever Bob Shirley drove in the winning run as the Milwaukee Brewers snapped a five-game losing streak with a 6-5 comeback victory over the Yankees Friday night.

Red Sox 2, White Sox 1

BOSTON (AP) — Bruce Hurst outdueled veteran Tom Seaver with a three-hitter and the Boston Red Sox edged the Chicago White Sox 2-1 Friday night on consecutive doubles by Tony Armas and Rich Gedman in the seventh inning.

Hurst, 1-1, struck out 11, tying his career high, and walked three in avenging a 3-1 loss to Seaver in Chicago on April 12.

Tigers 6, Indians 1

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit's Lance Parrish drove in four runs with a homer and a single to back the sixth-pitching of Frank Tanana as the Tigers beat the Cleveland Indians 6-1 Friday night.

Tanana, 1-1, retired nine batters in succession after walking Brook

Jacoby with one gone in the Cleveland fourth. Tanana struck out five and walked one.

Selloff leaves market mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices fell widely mixed Friday after a late selloff in the market ending a string of four consecutive gains for the market.

News of the Federal Reserve's reduction of its discount rate did not come until after the close of trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 14.63 to 1,840.40, cutting its gain for the week to 50.22 points.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 153.64 million shares, against 161.40 million Thursday.

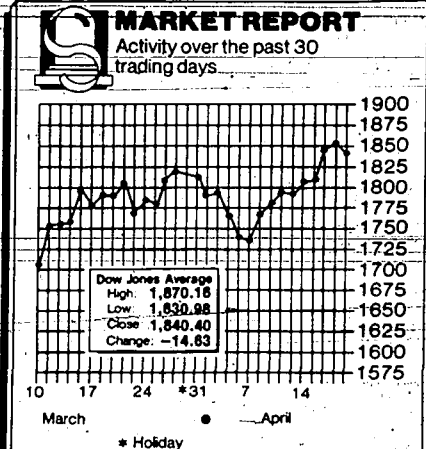

Analysts said traders were proceeding cautiously on the final day of trading for some stocks on a program trading index futures contracts and individual stocks has helped produce some sharp swings in the market on expiration days in the past.

This time around, blue-chip issues took a quick dive in the last few minutes of trading while the rest of the market held steady.

Observers saw some potential benefit for the market in news that Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries ministers had made a preliminary agreement on an agreement on a plan to shore up oil prices.

Crude oil futures for May delivery settled at $11.92 a barrel, up 9 cents from Thursday on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The Fed's action in cutting the discount rate from 7 to 6.5 percent, an effective Monday, promises to be a prime topic of attention when the markets reopen next week.

With all its favorable implications, some analysts have argued that the move will be greeted with only a muted response at best because it has been so widely anticipated.

Polard, which posted a first-quarter profit against a loss in the comparable period last year, gained 3 1/4 to 62 1/4.

Harris Graphics climbed 3 1/2 to 23 1/2. The company received an unsolicited $31-a-share takeover bid from AM International.

National Gypsum, subject of a bidding war between Wickes Corp. and an investor group led by National Gypsum's management, jumped 6 1/2 to 68 1/2.

Burroughs dropped 3 1/2 to 62 1/2 on the company's report late Thursday of a sharp decline in first-quarter earnings.

Xerox fell 3/4 to 60 1/2 on top of a 4 1/2-point slide Thursday, when the company posted lower quarterly profits.

A variety of issues rose as investors continued to search out beneficiaries of a developing trend toward vacations in this country rather than foreign travel. National Convenience Stores rose 1 1/2 to 13 1/2; Southland Corp. 1 1/2 to 52 1/2; Pandora 1 1/2 to 17 1/2; and Pillsbury, operator of Burger King restaurants, 1/2 to 79 1/2.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 10 to 9 in the overall tally on the Big Board, the exchange's composite index dropped 22 to 139.87.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in these stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 179.40 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials lost 63 to 268.77, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 65 to 242.39.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market edged up to 390.06. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 273.77, up 0.5.

Personal income, spending show slight gains in March

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government subsidy payments for Americans' personal income rose a

0.3 percent in March, half of the February rate, while growth in consumer spending also edged up in March. Economists said the Commerce Department report was further evidence of sluggish economic growth, although many said they detected evidence in the numbers that stronger growth was on the horizon. The March income increase was down from a 0.4 percent gain in February, but the government said income growth would have been 0.3

percent last month without an unusually large decline in government benefits. The 0.3 percent rise in spending February rate while growth in consumer spending also edged up in March. Consumer demand has been weak all year, primarily because of a slump in auto sales.

Some analysts argued that both the income gain and the spending increase were actually stronger than they appeared because inflation was running at such a low rate during this period.

The report on March consumer spending said purchases of durable goods — items expected to last three or more years — plunged at an annual rate of $9.6 billion, the second big monthly decline, reflecting the drop in auto sales.

Sales of nondurable goods rose at a fast annual rate of $18.6 billion, providing the strength to push total spending up.

On the income side, wages and salaries rose at an annual rate of $9.6 billion in March, an improvement over a $6.9 billion February increase as manufacturers' payrolls grew.

Personal earnings on interest fell $1 billion in March, reflecting the sharp declines in interest rates that have been occurring this year.

Farm incomes declined $7.5 billion in March because of a big drop in government subsidy payments. Excluding subsidy payments, farm incomes declined $1.7 billion last month and $2.9 billion in February.

Disposable, or after-tax, personal income rose 0.3 percent in March following a 0.5 percent February increase.

The personal savings rate, savings as a percent of disposable income, edged down to 4.2 percent from 4.3 percent in February.

Grain futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures prices were mixed at the close Friday on the close of trading. All the prices of wheat were 1/4 cent lower to 1/2 cent higher with the contract for delivery May at $2.35 a bushel, down 1/4 cent from 1/4 cent higher with May delivery.

Especially when Westland Motor can make you a great deal like this! 1986 Pontiac Sunbird $279 DOWN. Per Mo.* $172.48. Stock #6P79. Bright blue metallic Sunbird Sport Coupe. Put yourself in West's chair with the objective of winning as many tricks as possible in a duplicate game. Cover the East and South cards and decide what to play after your king of diamonds has held the first trick.

On West's diamond king, dummy plays the five and East, the four, and South drops the jack. What next for West?

If you believe South's jack of diamonds, you will probably shift to a club, and you're in for a poor duplicate score. South ruffs and draws trumps, and your side gets only the two top diamonds, East missing his diamond ruff.

How can West tell that South's diamond jack is a false-card? If the diamond jack were a true singleton, East would then have been dealt the 10-6-4-3-2 of diamonds. Surely, with that holding, any East would find it easy to play the deuce. If South's diamond jack is not a true card, there's only one player at the table he's trying to deceive and that player is West. West should continue with the ace of diamonds and then lead a third round when East concedes a doubton holding by playing his deuce. East gets his diamond ruff and South is held to only 10 tricks for the second duplicate score.

Vulnerable: Both. Dealer: East. The bidding: East South West North Pass 1♥ Pass 3♥ Pass 4♥ All pass

Opening lead: Diamond king

BID WITH THE ACES

South holds: ♦ J 5 3 ... ♠ A K 8 ... ♣ J 10 7 6 5 3

North South ... ♦ 3 3 ... ♠ 10 2 ... ♣ K

ANSWER: Four spades. Only three trumps, but this hand has become much stronger after North's three-diamond bid.
