Libya frees bishop, opens base for tour

By JUAN-CARLOS GUMUCIO The Associated Press

TRIPOLI, Libya — Authorities have freed the head of the Roman Catholic church in Libya and the government has assured foreigners in the wake of the U.S. air raids that they will be safe, Western diplomats said Sunday.

Catholic sources confirmed that Bishop Giovanni Martinielli and a nun had been released in Benghazi, Libya's second city. They were detained by the Benghazi Peoples Committee two weeks ago without explanation.

Diplomatic sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Martinielli and the nun were released Saturday night in Benghazi and were expected to arrive in Tripoli today.

A government official, who also demanded anonymity, said three priests detained with Martinielli also had been freed, but that could not be independently confirmed.

The diplomats, reporting on meetings with the Foreign Ministry on Saturday, said they were satisfied with the government's assurance that foreigners would be safe and could leave if they wanted to.

More than 18,000 Westerners work in the oil and construction industries in Libya, including about 8,000 Italians and 5,000 Britons. An estimated 800 Americans remain in Libya despite U.S. government orders for them to leave.

Meanwhile, officials on Sunday allowed Western reporters to see parts of the Sidi Bilal naval installation, which U.S. warplanes heavily damaged during the raids early Tuesday on reputed terrorist targets.

It was the first tour by journalists to see damage to purely military targets hit in the attacks.

A West German teacher at Sidi Bilal described the bombing as "very accurate."

Reporters were not allowed inside a walled area that Libyan naval instructors indicated was an underwater training facility, and which Pentagon officials said was the main target of the attack against the seaside base, 10 miles west of Tripoli.

Reporters could see holes in the roofs of two buildings as well as many shattered windows within the walled area as their bus passed.

A half-dozen unshaven men, dressed in a mix of uniforms and civilian clothes, stood guard with automatic rifles at the gate.

Inside the base, reporters saw the remains of at least four buildings that had been flattened by direct hits Tuesday.

Libyan officials escorting reporters claimed the American fighter-bombers zered in on a naval base. See LIBYA on Page A2

Recruiting rural doctors

Federal program to provide doctors faces grim cutback

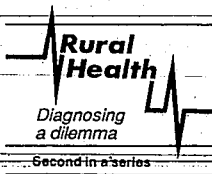

By JANE ROBISON Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Amid a strip of vacant, boarded-up buildings situated behind the corner drug store in Shoshone, Keith Davis, M.D., tacked his nameplate to the door.

For 1,205 arid square miles in Lincoln County and 3,436 people, the 30-year-old family physician is the only doctor.

"One problem with a solo doctor is that you can get really swamped," said the mild-mannered Davis, as he slung one leg over the other and cased back a little in a folding chair in his office. It is a Saturday morning, one of the few times he has to relax. Normally, he sees 30 patients a day.

Young Doc Davis practices in an office equipped as a clinic, but a clinic that's not exactly the epitome of health care. It's more like a comfortable, shiny, well-tuned '55 Chevy. He can do X-rays, set bones and handle minor Gooding County Memorial Hospital. He also is the product of Uncle Sam's prior commitment to rural health.

Davis is one of 10 doctors who were assigned to Idaho last year through National Health Service Corps, a federal program that for 13 years has tried to bridge the medical gap in isolated or impoverished areas. Nationally, the program placed 1,115 physicians in rural or impoverished areas in 1985.

Under the program, medical students received tuition scholarships for all or part of their schooling in return for a pledge to work in impoverished or rural areas after they graduated.

Participants say it is a great program that's the way out, and nothing is ready to take its place. As part of the federal budget-balancing effort of the Gramm-Rudman Act, only 150 NHSC scholarships will be offered this year, as compared to the 1,124 offered last year.

"It's a shame NHSC is dying," said Dr. William Povolony, a 28-year-old physician with the program. "It's the only way to get physicians to rural areas."

Povolony, a native of Ohio, is assigned to the Family Health Services, a migrant health clinic with offices in Twin Falls, Buhl and Burley.

Idaho qualified for the program partly because it has the lowest ratio of physicians to population in the nation, with 108 physicians per 100,000 population, according to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, which funds NHSC. The second lowest state was Mississippi, with 110 physicians per 100,000, followed by Wyoming and South Dakota.

Washington, D.C., on the other hand, had the highest ratio with 512 doctors for every 100,000 people.

To fill the void left by NHSC doctors, lawmakers are apparently relying on the trickle down theory of medicine supposedly caused by a surplus of young doctors.

Slain man's family condemns air raid

By JULIE AMPARANO The Associated Press

APTOS, Calif. — Family members of Peter Kilburn on Sunday condemned the U.S. raid on Libya and said the slain American hostage probably won't be the last person killed in retaliation for the attack.

"I don't think Peter will be the only one that will be sacrificed," Jeanne Repetto, Kilburn's sister-in-law, said in an interview.

Kilburn's body was discovered with those of two Britons in Lebanon's central mountains Thursday, along with a note saying they had been "executed" by the Arab Revolutionary Cells to avenge the attack against Libya earlier in the week.

"Mrs. Repetto compared the air raid to throwing a bomb out a window to kill a pest."

"By throwing the bomb out the window, we've blown out the window, breaking whatever protection we had, and now we have found that, instead, we hit a hornet's nest. I shudder to think about what will happen," said Mrs. Repetto, 56, of San Jose, Calif.

She and other relatives of Kilburn gathered at the home of Tim Kilburn, his nephew, to call upon the world to join them in a day of prayer April 25.

"As a nation, we need to build strength within ourselves to resist the temptation of violence, hatred and revenge," said a statement issued by the family.

Kilburn's body was flown from a U.S. air base in West Germany to Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington on Sunday and positively identified, said State Department spokesman Bruce Akerman. The remains were due in California on Tuesday, with a funeral scheduled April 30, the relatives said.

Kilburn, of San Francisco, was a librarian at the American University of Beirut for 20 years until he disappeared on Dec. 3, 1984.

Summit door open, but Gorbachev warns against 'poisoning' relations

By SUSAN J. SMITH The Associated Press

POTSDAM, East Germany — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Sunday he is willing to meet President Reagan this year if the United States changes policies he charged were poisoning relations between the superpowers.

Speaking to reporters at Potsdam, site of the 1945 Allied conference on Germany, Gorbachev said "the meeting (with Reagan) can take place if the United States realizes that it is necessary to take this path."

"But if (America) goes on acting as it is today, trying to poison the atmosphere, this will throw a shadow over any future meeting," the Soviet Communist Party chief said. "If (the summit) is to happen, a better atmosphere is necessary."

Gorbachev did not elaborate, but he appeared to be referring to last week's U.S. bombing raids on Libya and recent U.S. underground tests of nuclear weapons. On Friday, Gorbachev told the East German Communist Party congress those actions

MIKHAIL S. GORBACHEV 'Better atmosphere' needed

White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan said Sunday the United States expected Gorbachev to "live up to his word" and meet with Reagan this year.

The two men agreed at their Geneva summit in November to meet this year in the United States. No date has been set.

Regan, interviewed on the NBC television program "John McLaughlin: One on One," said he believed the meeting had been "postponed more than once." Gorbachev made his remarks in a response to a reporter's question.

The Soviet leader addressed reporters in the courtyard at Cecillienhof, a manor house where Soviet leader Joseph Stalin, President Harry Truman and Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Britain met in the summer of 1945 to decide the fate of postwar Germany.

Gorbachev was the first Soviet leader to visit the site since Stalin was there, East German officials said. They said other Soviets had not come for "political reasons" after Nikita Khrushchev denounced Stalin.

Dioxin dangers largely unknown

WASHINGTON — The House challenges President Reagan this week with a $1.7 billion money bill that would take away the president's authority to defer spending programs approved by Congress.

The bill would add about $1 billion to the public's tab this year with new spending on a variety of programs, including disaster relief for California and other flood-stricken areas. The bill would require $700 million for embassy security improvements to be paid from the Defense Department and foreign aid budgets.

James C. Miller III, the president's budget director, has called the fiscal 1987 supplemental appropriations bill too "hard-edged" with new spending. But the administration's threat of a veto appears to be spurred mostly by the bill's attempt to eliminate deferrals — the president's authority to postpone spending, sometimes indefinitely. See DIOXIN on Page A2

House money bill to end deferrals

By STEVEN KOMAROW The Associated Press

A 1993 Supreme Court decision outlawed the one-house veto, the mechanism Congress formerly used to dispose of deferrals if opposed. As a result, the president has nearly the equivalent of line-item veto power over certain types of spending programs.

The House bill attempts to override some of the current year's proposed deferrals, and prohibit future presidential deferrals, starting with the spending in the bill, which includes:

- $330 million for disaster relief.
 - $35.5 million for the Coast Guard.
 - $85 million for the Federal Aviation Administration.
 - $263 million for Veterans compensation and training programs.
 - $50 million for Ireland and Northern Ireland.
 - $340 million for the Internal Revenue Service.
 - $178.7 million for Micronesia.
 - $166.7 million to fight forest fires.
- House action on the spending bill. See CONGRESS on Page A2

S. Africa steals king's body

Los Angeles Times
BUMBANE, South Africa — The body of the late king of South Africa's 5 million Xhosa was stolen by government officials and hurriedly buried here Sunday to prevent his funeral from becoming a mass anti-apartheid rally.

Officials of the Xhosa tribal homeland of Transkei, defying court orders barring them from burying the king, seized the body of Chief Sabata Dalindyebo from a mortuary, brought it here to the royal seat of the Tembu land and buried it with the protection of more than 500 armed soldiers and policemen.

Reservoir bursts in Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — A reservoir holding nearly 5 billion cubic feet of water burst from its earthen embankment Sunday, and police said they feared 100 people were killed. The state radio said up to 20,000 families were left homeless.
The state-owned Sri Lanka Broadcasting Corp. said the flood was "a natural disaster, and not the work of Tamil separatist guerrillas." The reservoir was in northern Sri Lanka, where rebels of the Tamil minority have been fighting for a separate state.

Khadafy's son leaves hospital

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Col. Moammar Khadafy's 4-year-old son has left the hospital where he was treated for injuries suffered in the U.S. air raid, but his "3-year-old brother" remains hospitalized, "the boys' doctor said Sunday.
Dr. Ali Mugadimi took journalists to see Khadafy's son Kamis in a Tripoli children's hospital on Sunday. The boy's head was completely bandaged, and only his eyes were visible. He was hooked up to several monitors, a throat tube and an intravenous tube, and did not speak during the brief visit by journalists.

Mugadimi, a British-trained physician, declined to give the boy's medical condition. But the 3-year-old looked around and appeared alert.

Iran reports fierce fighting

TEHRAN, Iran (DPA) — Iran reported fierce battles on the Faw Peninsula near the Kuwaiti border Sunday and said its forces had so far killed at least 1,000 Iraqi soldiers.
A military communique also said three Iraqi brigades were being "annihilated" after they were surrounded on the Faw-Um Qasr road, opposite the Kuwaiti coast.
"Dozens of Iraqi prisoners have been taken behind the lines," the Iranian communique said. "Our Islamic combatants have set fire to dozens of Iraqi positions and shot down one helicopter."
Kabul Claims 300 Guerrillas Killed

300 Afghan rebels said killed

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — The Communist government in Afghanistan said Sunday its security forces had killed 300 Moslem guerrillas in fierce fighting and captured large amounts of weaponry and ammunition.

Radio Kabul, in a broadcast monitored in Islamabad, said the guerrillas suffered a major defeat in Pakika province, the scene of heavy fighting in recent weeks. Earlier reports by the official government radio claimed 700 guerrillas had been killed in fighting there.

U.S. to press allies at summit

Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — The United States is pressing its European allies for a new joint offensive against terrorism and plans to make the issue a central concern at next month's Tokyo summit of industrial democracies, President Reagan's chief of staff said Sunday.
In the wake of last week's U.S. air strike against Libya, White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan contended that other Western governments increasingly support the Reagan administration's tough approach on terrorism — even if some still object to military action.

Landmark playhouse reopens

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Searchlights crisscrossed the sky and stage lights illuminated "Arms and the Man," ending a dark era of the long-shuttered Pasadena Playhouse, historic training ground for the stars.
Richard Thomas of television's "The Waltons," John Rubinstein of "Crazy Like a Fox" and actresses Lisa Eichorn and Carol Sholey starred in the George Bernard Shaw classic Saturday night at the newly refurbished 700-seat theater.

Mayor tours tornado damage

SWEETWATER, Texas (AP) — Damage was estimated at up to $20 million Sunday in the wake of a pair of tornadoes that slashed through homes, killing one person and injuring 100, and Gov. Mark White toured the city to see what state aid was needed.

White said he probably will announce today whether the city should be declared a disaster area. He said he would contact the Texas Housing Authority to see if aid can be arranged for the homeless.

Anti-U.S. protestors arrested

LONDON (AP) — Protesters were held Sunday at seven U.S. and British bases to protest the U.S. air raid on Libya, and officials said a total of 154 protesters were arrested on charges ranging from spraying paint on a U.S. warplane to cutting base fences.

Anti-American demonstrations also were held Sunday in West Germany, Spain, and Belgium to protest Tuesday's pro-dowry raid on targets in the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Benghazi.
About 300 British Moslems marched peacefully to the U.S. Embassy in London to hand in a letter protesting the bombing.

Nuclear test in Nevada scheduled

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The third underground nuclear test in a month has been scheduled for Tuesday at the Nevada Test Site, a Department of Energy spokesman said Sunday.
The test, code-named Jefferson, will occur at 6:30 a.m. at the site 90 miles northwest of Las Vegas, said spokesman Jack Campbell. The explosion will have a yield of between 20 and 150 kilotons, he said.

Earlier this month, the Soviet Union announced it was ending an eight-month moratorium on nuclear testing because of continued U.S. tests. The Soviets accused the United States of putting military interests ahead of mankind's desire to end "nuclear madness."

The White House said the United States would continue nuclear testing because national security required it, but demonstrators protested the U.S. action.
The Soviet statement did not say when the government would resume underground nuclear tests, which are never announced.

Doctors

physician surplus will solve the problem, but rural areas have not done well in the physician surplus," said Dr. Kevin Fickenscher, president-elect of the National Rural Health Care Association. "Rural areas continue to have difficulty in attracting physicians."
Part of that difficulty is the result of human nature, said Fickenscher. More and more young doctors are marrying spouses with their own careers. And it is very hard for a rural area to support a spouse with a doctorate in economics, he said.
"A doctorate understands the problem, too."
"The biggest problem for rural health is the spouse," he said. "I think a physician can work anywhere. But if a doctor's wife isn't happy, he's not going to stay."

For Davis and his family, the transition from medical school in the rural urban East to practice in the West, he and his wife are from small towns in the West. He grew up near Albany, Ore., in a small town with a population a third the size of Spokane.
"My wife and I enjoyed D.C., but we never felt it was a place we wanted to live," said Davis.
Recruiting students from small towns may be one way to solve the shortage problem. In Ohio, for example, some small towns have recruited students from the area. Davis has nanced a student's medical education. The student is then under contract to go back and work in the area.

In Idaho, the state pays $25,000 per student for 19 students to attend medical school at the University of Washington, since the state does not have a medical school of its own.
However, there are no stipulations requiring Idaho students to return to the state and practice once they complete their medical training.
But the most viable solution to attracting doctors to small towns, at least for a few years, seemed to be the NIISC.
"I'm sure in a few years I'm going to move to some place where I can make more money," said Powell. "But he added, he was glad he went through the program. "This has definitely changed my perspective on how health care is delivered."

academy dormitories, the infirmary, and 15-17 posed for photographers and television crews as they read their lessons.
One student said all the cadets were Arabs—Said the Libyan information department escorts quickly added, "They are all Libyans."
Several cadets declined to answer questions, saying they spoke only Arabic. Technical books clearly visible in the classroom were written in English.
Five days after Tuesday's raid, bulldozers were still scooping up rubble, forming huge mounds of shattered concrete, twisted metal and burned wood. Notebooks and textbooks littered the compound's roads along with broken glass and sharpnel.

Hartwig Looft, an electronics technician from Stuttgart, West Germany, who said he had been working for the Libyans for the last 2½ years, said he heard a "big bang" and saw huge columns of smoke when the bombers struck.
"They were very accurate," Looft said.
Reporters also saw heavy damage to the academy's indoor swimming pool. There was no visible evidence of any permanent artillery or anti-aircraft defenses around the academy, which covered an area the size of about three football fields near the beach.

Dioxin

The abnormalities found in the Missouri study can be considered on potential signs of trouble, researchers said.
"They might go away in a few years, or they might develop into serious disease," said Dr. R. Gregory Evans, a co-author of the study and assistant professor of medicine at the St. Louis University School of Medicine. The other researchers were from the school, the Missouri health department and the federal Centers for Disease Control.
2,3,7,8-tetrachlorodibenzo-p-dioxin, often called 2,3,7,8-TCDD, is the most toxic dioxin on what this substance can do to humans. Studies of people exposed in industrial settings have associated it with a serious skin disorder called chloracne, harm to the liver and nerves, and other health problems. Animal studies suggest a link to cancer, but no proof has been found in humans.

of preventive medicine at the Upstate Medical Center of the State University of New York at Binghamton.
But recent studies of adults in the United States and Canada found dioxin levels in their fat tissue of around six parts per trillion to about 10 parts per trillion, he said. Nobody knows how hazardous such levels are, he said at a meeting of the American Chemical Society in New York.
He said some Vietnam veterans who said they were in areas sprayed with Agent Orange have shown fat concentrations at or below the United States average.
So without fat measurements, dioxin studies have probably misclassified people on their dioxin doses, and that may help explain why dioxin's health effects have been so hard to establish in people, Schechter said.

Congress

was scheduled last week, but was curtailed when House Republicans rebelled against Democratic attempts to attach to the measure aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua. House leaders decided to move ahead with the spending bill this week. Dole said, "The president's military budget and raise $12 billion more in taxes than Reagan proposed."
Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole has delayed full Senate consideration of the budget while he and other leaders meet with administration officials in hopes of a compromise.
The Senate could begin its budget debate this week. Dole said, "It is his attention to a House-passed version of legislation to weaken gun control."
The Senate earlier passed a bill to restrict restrictions on interstate sales of all guns, but the House voted to retain the current ban on interstate sales of pistols.
The House bill also would make it illegal to own, buy or sell machine guns manufactured after the bill became law. If the Senate accepts the House version, the bill would go to Reagan for his signature.
"The congressional work week will be cut short on Wednesday, as both houses plan to take off Thursday and Friday for the Jewish holiday of Passover."

Evans also said further studies are needed to determine whether the differences between the test and control groups are really due to dioxin, in which had contaminated oil that was sprayed on a road in the mobile home park.
The study examined 154 people who lived in the park between 1971 and 1983, of whom half were exposed to the dioxin for longer than two years. It compared them to 155 people of similar ages and sex who lived in another mobile home park.
Earlier, another scientist said he believed previous studies may have overlooked dioxin hazards through incorrect assumptions about how much dioxin people had absorbed.
Until recently, researchers thought people were not usually exposed to dioxin except in special situations like industrial settings, so they used the general population as a standard for non-exposed people, said Dr. Arnold Schechter, professor

Today's weather

Think spring to extend warming trend

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding:
Mostly fair today. Lows 55 to 60. Warming trend continues with mostly sunny days and fair nights through Tuesday. Lows mainly in the 40s tonight. Highs mainly in the 70s today and mid 70s to mid 80s Tuesday.
Camas-Frairie, Halley and the Lower Wood River Valley:
Mostly fair today with lows near 30. Highs in the low to mid 60s.
Northern Utah and Nevada:
Utah: Warming trend continuing with mostly sunny days and fair nights through Tuesday. Lows mainly in the 40s tonight. Highs mainly in the 70s today and mid 70s to mid 80s Tuesday.
Nevada: Partly cloudy today with a chance of afternoon thundershowers in the southern portion. Conditions continue warm. Highs from the mid 70s in the northeast to low 80s central. Lows tonight mid 30s north to low 40s central.
Summary:
Cloudy skies were reported in the north Sunday while high thin cloud cover in varying amounts was reported over the rest of Idaho, the National Weather Service said.
Late afternoon temperatures ranged from the high 60s to the mid 70s. Wind across the southern portion of the state were mostly in the 10 to 15 mph range with lighter winds reported over the remainder of the Gem State.

The Forecast for 7 p.m. EST, Mon., April 21, '86
The high temperature reported in Idaho Sunday was 84 degrees at Lowell. The coolest spot was 15 degrees at Stanley.
The extended forecast for Wednesday through Friday in Southern Idaho calls for showers at times Wednesday and Thursday decreasing Friday. Highs in the low 60s Thursday and Friday. Lows in the low 30s to low 40s.
Elsewhere in the nation, temperatures ranged from a high of 99 degrees in Palm Springs, Calif., to the low reading of 22 degrees in Houston, Minn.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department failed to exert strong control over the operation of the Statue of Liberty, but charges of fiscal wrongdoing in the project have proved to be unfounded, an official says.

Preliminary findings of a government audit to be released Tuesday show the project's private fund-raisers failed to comply with various regulations that would have given the department more control over the project run by Lee Iacocca.

The Department of Interior gave away the store with very little control. They didn't exert strong control over the individuals who were leading the parade," said Rep. Bruce F. Vento, D-Minn.

Vento, chairman of the House subcommittee on national parks and recreation, requested a General Accounting Office investigation into the charges of wrongdoing leveled by a fired federal parks official.

But Vento said the findings by the GAO, an investigative arm of Congress, do not bear out allegations by Garnet Chapin, the former official, that the project was "in a total state of chaos."

Chapin had charged at a congressional hearing last year the statute's fund-raising foundation improperly documented finances, payrolls and fund-raising activities. He said some foundation members ran up lavish expense accounts, awarded contracts to themselves and virtually seized control of the renovations from federal officials in charge of the projects.

"I think there was more noise there than substance in terms of what was going on," Vento said of Chapin's charges.

The Statue of Liberty Ellis Island Foundation, chaired by Iacocca, missed some reporting deadlines for filing of documents in compliance with the agreement the foundation had with the Interior Department, Vento said.

"You're talking about rules and regulations and the bureaucracy and the laws and the way there was not timely compliance with things," Vento said. "This is the sort of bread and butter of what the report is going to address itself to, and the findings will be more helpful in that way than spectacular statements of wrongdoing."

Washington (AP) — Blacks tracked race relations in the Army since 1956, when he was drafted for a two-year hitch.

"Blacks proportionate to their numbers in the general society have achieved more positions of leadership in the armed forces than in any part of our society," he said in a telephone interview from his office in Evansville, Ind.

"This is not to say, however, that all forms of racial discrimination are absent in the military, but it is to say that it's probably less present there than it is in most other places."

The success of blacks in the armed forces, however, generally is not recognized by civilian black leaders, partly because they view military blacks as having "paid their dues in a white organization," Moskos said.

Sociologist claims blacks make best stride in military

WASHINGTON (AP) — Blacks have been more successful moving up the career ladder into leadership positions in the armed forces than any other major segment of U.S. society, according to a Northwestern University sociologist.

Although racial tensions still exist in the military, the services — notably the Army — have made greater strides toward equality than most of the civilian sector, says sociologist Charles C. Moskos, who specializes in the military.

"Today, one is more likely to hear racial jokes in a faculty club than in an officers' club. And in an officers' club one will surely see more blacks," Moskos wrote in an article published in the May issue of The Atlantic magazine.

Consumer groups ignore U.S. consumer week

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government agencies and businesses across the country are marking National Consumers Week, but the event is largely being ignored by consumer advocates who see nothing to celebrate.

President Reagan has formally proclaimed the observation of consumer week, starting today, to celebrate what he calls America's "bountiful marketplace" and bright outlook for the future.

The U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs has sought to drum up interest in the week, urging local agencies, schools, businesses, trade associations and others to participate. And the Society of Consumer Affairs Professionals in Business, the association of businessmen and women dealing with consumers, is holding its spring conference to observe the event.

But the major consumer organizations have chosen to sit it out.

Judicial sex bias found

NEW YORK (AP) — Bias against women in the New York state court system is so pervasive that they are often denied equal justice, a report by a special state task force has concluded.

The 23-member panel found that female lawyers were routinely demeaned by male judges and attorneys. The New York Times and the Daily News reported in Sunday editions.

The report also concluded, according to the Times, that the credibility of female witnesses was sometimes questioned because women are viewed by some judges as emotional and untrustworthy.

The panel said some judges did not understand the nature of family violence and blamed the victims for it. Some judges did not recognize a wife's contribution to a marriage and distributed property inequitably in divorce settlements, the panel found, while others treated as unimportant women's efforts to obtain and enforce child-support awards.

Bayou mishap kills 2nd child

HOUSTON (AP) — A second child has died out of six children who allegedly were thrown into a muddy bayou by their mother, and three of the children remained hospitalized Sunday in stable condition.

The children's mother, Juana Leija, 29, was in Harris County Jail after being charged with one count of murder and two counts of attempted murder, a jail spokeswoman said Sunday. Bond was set at $30,000, homicide detective M.G. Walicki said.

Authorities refused to comment on whether additional charges would be brought following the second death.

Juana Dimas Leija, 7, died at Ben Taub Hospital on Saturday after being transferred from St. Joseph Hospital, said Ben Taub spokeswoman Noli Castaneda.

Mount St. Helens emits plume

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A small plume of steam spurted from Mount St. Helens early Sunday in the fifth straight day of activity at the volcano in southwestern Washington state.

There was no gritty volcanic ash in the steam that rose from the 8,664-foot crater, but flights in the area of the volcano were temporarily prohibited below 17,000 feet, said Federal Aviation Administration duty officer Mike O'Connor in Seattle.

Nixon to address AP luncheon

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Richard M. Nixon, who has written five books since resigning the presidency a dozen years ago, will address the annual luncheon of The Associated Press today, opening day of the convention of The American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Foreign affairs has been Nixon's specialty as an author, lecturer and, on occasion, adviser to his presidential successors. Four of his books are on foreign policy and one of memoirs. His latest book is titled "No More Victims."

Nixon, who left the White House in the face of impeachment charges stemming from the Watergate scandal, is the only U.S. president ever to resign.

In addition to the former Republican president, the publishers' annual convention will hear from speakers including New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, a Democrat ranked among the prospects for presidential nomination in 1988; Thomas J. Peters, co-author of "In Search of Excellence"; and Alan B. Shepard, the former astronaut who was the first American in space.

Hale House to get federal aid

NEW YORK (AP) — Hale House, a nationally known center run by "Mother" Clara Hale to treat infants born to drug-addicted mothers, will receive $1.1 million in federal funds for expansion, two lawmakers announced Sunday.

"Hale House could double in size thanks to these funds," said U.S. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., who announced the funding with Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y.

Hale House, which was opened in 1969 in Harlem by 69-year-old Mrs. Hale, now has facilities to handle only a few dozen infants. D'Amato said the new funds will be used to renovate a new building given to Mrs. Hale by the city.

Mrs. Hale and her program attracted national attention last year when President Reagan invited her to the White House in recognition of her efforts.

S. Africa steals king's body

Los Angeles Times
BUMBANE, South Africa — The body of the late King of South Africa's 5 million Xhosa was stolen by government officials and hurriedly buried here Sunday to prevent his funeral from becoming a mass anti-apartheid rally.
 Officials of the Xhosa tribal homeland of Transkei, defying court orders barring them from burying the king, seized the body of Chief Sabata Dalindyebo from a mortuary, buried it here in the royal sect of the Tembu clan and buried it with the protection of more than 500 armed soldiers and policemen.

Reservoir bursts in Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — A reservoir holding nearly 5 billion cubic feet of water burst from its earthen embankment Sunday, and police said they feared 100 people were killed. The state radio said up to 20,000 families were left homeless.
 The state-owned Sri Lanka Broadcasting Corp. said the flood was "a natural disaster and not the work of Tamil separatist guerrillas." The reservoir was in northeastern Sri Lanka, where rebels of the Tamil minority have been fighting for a separate state.

Khadafi's son leaves hospital

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Col. Moammar Khadafi's 4-year-old son has left the hospital where he was treated for injuries suffered in the U.S. air raid, but his 3-year-old brother remains hospitalized, the boys' doctor said Sunday.
 Dr. Ali Maguidim took journalists to see Khadafi's son Kamis in a Tripoli children's hospital on Sunday. The boy's head was completely bandaged, and only his eyes were visible. He was hooked up to several monitors, a throat tube and an intravenous tube, and did not speak during the brief visit by journalists.
 Maguidim, a British-trained physician, declined to give the boy's medical condition. But the 3-year-old looked around and appeared alert.

Iran reports fierce fighting

TEHRAN, Iran (DPA) — Iran reported fierce battles on the Faw Peninsula near the Kuwaiti border Sunday and said its forces had so far killed at least 1,000 Iraqi soldiers.
 A military communique also said three Iraqi brigades were being "annihilated" after they were surrounded on the Faw-Um Qasr road, opposite the Kuwaiti coast.
 "Dozens of Iraqi prisoners have been taken behind the lines," the Iranian communique said. "Our Islamic combatants have so far killed dozens of Iraqi positions and destroyed one helicopter."
 Kabul Claims 300 Guerrillas Killed

300 Afghan rebels said killed

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — The Communist government in Afghanistan said Sunday its security forces had killed 300 Moslem guerrillas in fierce fighting and captured large amounts of weaponry and ammunition.

 Radio Kabul, in a broadcast monitored in Islamabad, said the guerrillas suffered a major defeat in Pakta province, the scene of heavy fighting in recent weeks. Earlier reports by the official government radio claimed 700 guerrillas had been killed in fighting there.

U.S. to press allies at summit

Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — The United States is pressing its European allies for a new joint offensive against terrorism and plans to make the issue a central concern at next month's Tokyo summit of industrial democracies, President Reagan's chief of staff said Sunday.
 In the wake of last week's U.S. air strike against Libya, White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan contended that other Western governments increasingly support the Reagan administration's tough approach on terrorism — even if some still object to military action.

Mayor tours tornado damage

SWEETWATER, Texas (AP) — Damage was estimated at up to $20 million Sunday in the wake of a pair of tornadoes that slashed through homes, injured one person and injured 100, and Gov. Mark White toured the city to see what state aid was needed.
 White said he probably will announce today whether the city should be declared a disaster area. He said he would contact the Texas Housing Authority to see if aid can be arranged for the homeless.
 Anti-American demonstrations also were held Sunday in West Germany, Spain, and Belgium to protest Tuesday's pre-dawn raid on targets in the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Benghazi.

Anti-U.S. protesters arrested

LONDON (AP) — Protests were held Sunday at seven U.S. and British bases to protest the U.S. air raid on Libya, and officials said a total of 154 protesters were arrested on charges ranging from spraying paint on a U.S. warplane to cutting base fences.
 Anti-American demonstrations also were held Sunday in West Germany, Spain, and Belgium to protest Tuesday's pre-dawn raid on targets in the Libyan cities of Tripoli and Benghazi.
 About 500 British Muslims marched peacefully in the U.S. Embassy in London to hand in a letter protesting the bombing.

Nuclear test in Nevada scheduled

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The third underground nuclear test in a month has been scheduled for Tuesday at the Nevada Test Site, a Department of Energy spokesman said Sunday.
 The code-named Jefferson will occur at 6:30 a.m. at the site 90 miles northwest of Las Vegas, said spokesman Jack Campbell. The explosion will have a yield of between 20 and 150 kilotons, he said.
 Earlier this month, the Soviet Union announced it was ending an eight-month moratorium on nuclear testing because of continued U.S. tests. The Soviets accused the United States of putting military interests ahead of mankind's desire to end "nuclear madness."

The White House said the United States would continue nuclear testing because national security required it, but demonstrators protested the U.S. action.
 The Soviet statement did not say when the government would resume underground nuclear tests, which are never announced.

Doctors

 physician surplus will solve the problem, but rural areas have not done well in the physician surplus," said Dr. Kevin Fickenscher, president-elect of the National Rural Health Care Association. "Rural areas continue to have difficulty in attracting physicians."
 Part of that difficulty is the result of human nature, said Fickenscher. More and more young doctors are marrying spouses who are not doing careers, and it is very hard for a rural area to support a spouse with a doctorate in economics, he said.
 Davis understands the problem, too.
 "The biggest problem for rural health is the spouse," he said. "I think a physician can work anywhere. But if a doctor's wife isn't happy, he's not going to stay."
 For Davis and his family, the transition from medical school in the urban East to practice in the rural West was not a hard transition. He and his wife are from small towns in the West. He grew up near Albany, Ore., in a small town with a population a third the size of Shoshone.
 "My wife and I enjoyed D.C., but we never felt it was a place we wanted to live," said Davis.
 Recruiting students from small towns may be one way to solve the shortage problem. In Ohio, for example, some small towns have financed a student's medical education. The student is then under contract to go back and work in the area.

In Idaho, the chief state physician for 19 students to attend medical school at the University of Washington, since the state does not have a medical school of its own. However, there are no stipulations requiring Idaho students to return to the state and practice once they complete their medical training.
 But the most visible solution to attracting doctors to small towns, at least for a few years, seemed to be the NHS.
 "I'm sure in a few years I'm going to move to some place where I can make more money," said Povolyon, who added he was glad he "went through the program." "This has definitely changed my perspective on how health care is delivered."

 academy dormitories, the infirmary, baggage hall and several offices.
 They said the air raid killed two naval cadets and injured 15, but that most of the estimated 300 cadets had been evacuated because a strike was expected.
 "We had no air defense here," said an officer who identified himself as the academy's commander for the past seven years. The officer, who refused to give his name or rank, said he had no idea of the damage inflicted on the walled area, where Libyans are believed to receive training in chemical demolition and commando operations. He would not say what kind of activity went on in the walled area.

In academy classrooms, cadets aged 15-17 posed for photographers and television crews as they read their lessons.
 One student said all the cadets were Arabs. One of the Libyan information department escorts quickly added, "They are all Libyans."
 Several cadets declined to answer questions, saying they spoke only Arabic. Technical books clearly visible in the classroom were written in English.
 Five days after Tuesday's raid, bulldozers were still scooping rubble, forming huge mounds of shattered concrete, twisted metal and burned wood. Notebooks and textbooks littered the compound's roads along with broken glass and shrapnel.
 Hartwig Looft, an electronics teacher from Stuttgart, West Germany, who said he had been working for the Libyans for the last 2 1/2 years, said he heard a "big bang," and saw huge columns of smoke when the bombers struck.
 "They were very accurate," Looft said.
 Reporters also saw heavy damage to the academy's indoor swimming pool. There was no visible evidence of any permanent artillery or anti-aircraft defenses around the academy, which covered an area the size of about three football fields near the beach.

Dioxin

 mune system abnormalities — but no higher disease rates — than did a similar group living elsewhere.
 And another scientist suggested previous research may have underestimated dioxin's effect on people, in part because scientists failed to appreciate how pervasive the contamination is.
 Dioxin, an industrial by-product and herbicide contaminant, takes the form of a white powder. Researchers were talking about the most hazardous — 2,3,7,8-tetrachlorodibenzo-p-dioxin, often called 2,3,7,8-TCDD.
 Researchers disagree on what this substance can do to humans. Studies of contaminated demolition and commando operations have associated it with a serious skin disorder called chloracne, harm to the liver and nerves, and some other problems. Animal studies suggest a link to cancer, but no proof has been found in humans.

The abnormalities found in the Missouri study can be considered only potential signs of trouble, researchers said.
 "They might go away in a few years, or they might develop into serious disease," said Dr. R. Gregory Evans, a co-author of the study and assistant professor of medicine at the St. Louis University School of Medicine. The other researchers were from the school's health department and the federal Centers for Disease Control.
 Evans also said further studies are needed to determine whether the differences between the test and control groups are really due to dioxin, which had contaminated oil that was sprayed on a road in the mobile home park.
 The study examined 154 people who lived in the park between 1971 and 1983 of whom half were exposed to the dioxin for longer than two years. It compared them to 155 people of similar ages and sex who lived in another mobile home park.
 Evans said that scientists had believed previous studies may have overlooked dioxin hazards through incorrect assumptions about how much dioxin people had absorbed.
 Until recently, researchers thought people were not usually exposed to dioxin except in special situations like industrial settings, so they used the general population as a standard for non-exposed people, said Dr. Arnold Schecter, professor

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole has delayed full Senate consideration of the budget while he and other leaders meet with administration officials in hopes of a compromise.
 The Senate could begin its budget debate this week, Dole said, or turn its attention to a House-passed version of legislation to weaken gun control.
 The Senate earlier passed a bill to loosen restrictions on interstate sales of all guns, but the House voted to retain the ban on interstate sales of pistols.
 The House bill also would make it illegal to own, buy or sell machine guns manufactured after the bill became law. If the Senate accepts the House version, the bill would go to Reagan for his signature.
 The congressional work week will be cut short on Wednesday, as both houses plan to take off Thursday and Friday for the Jewish holiday of Passover.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department failed to exert strong control over the restoration of the Statue of Liberty, but charges of fiscal wrongdoing in the project have proved to be unfounded, an official says.

Preliminary findings of a government audit to be released Tuesday show the project's private fund-raisers failed to comply with various regulations that would have given the department more control over the project run by Lee Iacocca.

"The Department of Interior gave away the store with very little control. They didn't exert strong control over the individuals who were leading the parade," said Rep. Bruce F. Vento, D-Minn.

Vento, chairman of the House subcommittee on National parks and recreation, requested a General Accounting Office investigation into the charges of wrongdoing leveled by a fired federal parks official.

But Vento said the findings by the GAO, an investigative arm of Congress, do not bear out allegations by Garnet Chapin, the former official, that the project was "in a total state of chaos."

Chapin had charged at a congressional hearing last year the statue's fund-raising foundation improperly documented finances, payrolls and fund-raising activities. He said some foundation members ran up lavish expense accounts, awarded contracts to themselves and virtually seized control of the renovations from federal officials in charge of the projects.

"I think there was more noise there than substance in terms of what was going on," Vento said of Chapin's charges.

The Statue of Liberty Ellis Island Foundation chaired by Iacocca missed some reporting deadlines for filing of documents in compliance with the agreement the foundation had with the Interior Department, Vento said.

"You're talking about rules and regulations and the bureaucracy and the laws and the way there was not timely compliance with things," Vento said. "This is the sort of bread-and-butter of what the report is going to address itself to, and the findings will be more helpful in that way than spectacular statements of wrongdoing."

Consumer groups ignore U.S. consumer week

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government agencies and businesses across the country are marking National Consumers Week, but the event is largely being ignored by consumer advocates who see nothing to celebrate.

President Reagan has formally proclaimed the observation of consumer week, starting today, to celebrate what he calls America's "bountiful marketplace" and bright outlook for the future.

The U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs has sought to drum up interest in the week, urging local agencies, schools, businesses, trade associations and others to participate. And the Society of Consumer Affairs Professionals in Business, the association of businessmen and women dealing with consumers, is holding its spring conference to observe the event.

But the major consumer organizations have chosen to sit it out.

"I don't think there's a whole lot to celebrate," said Joan Claybrook, head of Public Citizen, the Ralph Nader-led consumer umbrella organization.

Indeed, in past years, Claybrook's group has denounced the event — this is Reagan's fifth annual consumer week proclamation.

Sociologist claims blacks make best stride in military

WASHINGTON (AP) — Blacks have been more successful moving up the career ladder into leadership positions in the armed forces than in any other major segment of U.S. society, according to a Northwestern University sociologist.

Although racial tensions still exist in the military — the services notably the Army — have made greater strides toward equality than most of the civilian sector, says sociologist Charles C. Moskos, who specializes in the military.

tracked race relations in the Army since 1956, when he was drafted for a two-year hitch.

"Blacks proportionate to their numbers in the general society have achieved more positions of leadership in the armed forces than in any part of our society," he said in a telephone interview from his office in Evanston, Ill.

"This is not to say, however, that all forms of racial discrimination are absent in the military, but it is to say that it's probably less present there than it is in most other places."

"Today, one is more likely to hear racial jokes in a faculty club than in an officers' club. And in an officers' club one will surely see more blacks," Moskos wrote in an article published in the May issue of The Atlantic magazine.

Moskos, who is white, says he has the success of blacks in the armed forces, however, generally is not recognized by civilian black leaders, partly because they view military blacks as having "paid their dues in a white organization," Moskos said.

Judicial sex bias found

NEW YORK (AP) — Bias against women in the New York state court system is so pervasive that they are often denied equal justice, a report by a special state task force has concluded.

The 23-member panel found that female lawyers were routinely demeaned by male judges and attorneys. The New York Times and the Daily News reported in Sunday editions.

The report also concluded, according to the Times, that the credibility of female witnesses was sometimes questioned because women are viewed by some judges as emotional and untrustworthy.

The panel said some judges did not understand the nature of family violence and blamed the victims for it.

Some judges did not recognize a wife's contribution to a marriage and distributed property inequitably in divorce settlements, the panel found, while others treated as unimportant women's efforts to obtain, and enforce child-support awards.

Prisoners' petitions must be considered

Thousands of prisoners, in institutions across the country, file petitions in federal court each year claiming that they have been incarcerated in violation of their constitutional rights.

Most of these petitions seeking a writ of habeas corpus are filed after the prisoner has been convicted in state court and has exhausted all his appeals through the state system. In many states, hard-working and honest judges resent having federal courts second-guessing their cases and occasionally deciding that a federal statute or constitutional guarantee has been incorrectly applied.

Some federal judges are also unhappy about the increased workload these petitions create. And some prisoners abuse the process by filing multiple and continuous petitions (a few have filed hundreds during their years in prison), many of which are frivolous.

The administration has been trying for five years to limit the rights of state prisoners to seek these writs. In the last Congress, a bill was passed by the Senate, but not the House. Last year the bill was reintroduced, and the Senate Judiciary Committee has held hearings and markup sessions. However, opposition to the proposal has grown, and Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, the bill's sponsor, has managed by a parliamentary maneuver to circumvent the committee and bring the bill to the floor, where it could come up at any time.

It's a bad bill.

Yes, these petitions may bother some state judges, but occasionally a state court, even one that has fully and fairly considered a case, makes a mistake about a federal statute or a constitutional right. Review by federal courts should not be taken as a personal insult by any state judge. Yes, petitions do cause some extra work in the federal system and are occasionally abused by petitioners.

But while the numbers of petitions filed has increased steadily in the past two decades, so have the number of other cases. Habeas corpus petitions as a percentage of all civil cases filed in federal courts remain at about 3.6 percent. Almost all are dismissed without further action after the papers are reviewed. Of 8,335 petitions filed in the year ending June 1984, for example, only 139 proceeded to trial.

And while it may be a burden to wade through these often handwritten and wandering petitions, most judges and their law clerks take their responsibilities seriously, because a prisoner's liberty, and sometimes his life, is at stake.

In these circumstances, it cannot be said that correcting even a single injustice — let alone dozens every year — is not worth the paper work.

Symms, Evans race for Senate, dollars

BOISE — Although Idaho's economy is generally stagnant, it's getting a boost from a new industry: the U.S. Senate race between Republican Steve Symms and Democrat John Evans.

And there are signs it's a growth industry that could generate up to $5 million, a sum that would make it the most expensive political campaign in Idaho history.

Neither Symms nor Evans has primary election opposition and the general election still is seven months away. Yet, between them, the candidates have spent more than $1 million already — much of that gearing up for the major spending later. Symms, through 1985 and the end of March, spent $642,458 and had another $1.1 million in the bank. Evans spent $364,767 last year and in the first three months of this year, and has a balance of another $302,500.

Between them, the candidates threaten to dwarf the spending in what has been Idaho's most expensive election battle to date. That was the $3.5 million spent six years ago when Symms, with $1.2 million, and Democrat Frank Church, $1.8 million, battled for the Senate.

Symms already has raised about as much money as he received for the entire 1980 campaign.

But Phil Reberger, press spokesman for Symms, said the money doesn't just pour in. "It never comes easy," he said. "There is a lot of time and effort going into it. And that time and effort is paying off."

Symms' total doesn't reflect his latest fund-raiser, a $25-per-plate event in Boise that featured Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole and attracted about 300. On April 26, Symms will turn 48 and celebrate the event with an "announcement party" in rural Ada County.

Evans also is keeping up a busy round of fund-raisers. He will be in Chicago today for a Democratic Party fund-raiser for a number of Senate candidates. The next day, Texas Gov. Mark White will be best for an Evans fund-raiser in Dallas.

Both candidates have a lot of people on campaign payrolls. Other industries also benefit — from sheepmen and fruit growers to travel agents, advertising agencies and printing companies.

Symms was first elected in 1972 with an apple-munching campaign with the theme of "Take a Bite Out of Washington."

He's still using apples. His latest report shows five bulk purchases of apples for more than $400 from the Symms family farm at Sunnyslope in Canyon County.

Symms reported paying more than $105,000 to a single campaign consultant, DCM Group of Alexandria, Va., which consolidates a number of services such as polling, public relations and media advertising.

He also paid $240 to the Idaho Wool Growers Association for sheep pelts, usually given to visiting dignitaries. Evans this past week launched his television commercials, stressing his

SEN. STEVE SYMMS May raise $3 million

GOV. JOHN EVANS Aiming for $2 million long background and record of service in the state.

It takes a while to get through the list of contributors. Symms has reported more than 10,000 contributions and Evans lists 5,681 individuals, including 2,500 from Idaho.

The reports also show that Evans, in his 10th year as Idaho governor, has a built-in source of contributions, the state work force. His report shows contributions from the directors or top administrators in the Department of Health and Welfare, Labor and Industrial Services, Law Enforcement, Financial Management, Agriculture, Commerce, Office of Aging and Administration.

Evans' press secretary Jean McNeill said the governor's fund-raising effort is about on schedule, and the campaign isn't worried about Symms' dollar advantage.

Evans hopes to collect about $2 million. Reberger said Symms could collect up to $3 million, but will seek to raise the amount necessary to win the election.

"I think you can reach the point of diminishing returns, where you can't effectively spend more money," said McNeill. She said the governor hopes to have volunteers doing some of the work Symms is paying to have done. Reberger said it's more important to spend money wisely. He said it's possible to raise huge amounts for a campaign, but spend so much raising the money that what's left has little impact. "We're always trying to be alert to spending our money wisely," he said.

Khadafy: a dark result of wealth transfer during the 1970s

You could put Moammar Khadafy on a couch and, with a sufficient number of examining psychiatrists, prove that he is almost anything — mad dog, sinister maniac, romantic pan-Arabist, Libyan patriot, adolescent jerk. Anyway, we tend to view him as a rather singular personality and a monstrously anomalous political figure who justifies mobilization of the military force and public outrage of a great nation. The truth probably is that both history and Freud would regard the colonel as an uninteresting nobody but for a circumstance that has nothing to do with Khadafy's mind or personality. Actually, Khadafy is a rather common and normally harmless human specimen.

Robert Reno

What has made him a person of such consequence is that he controls a significant share of the world's known oil reserves. And in a country as underpopulated as Libya, this has meant that there are huge and surplus revenues available to keep his population happy and supportive while at the same time making foreign mischief beyond all proportion to Libya's size or military importance. Khadafy is an example of the worst that can happen when huge transfers of wealth from the developed nations suddenly enrich oil exporting states with vulnerable and immature political systems, easily managed populations and residual grievances against the industrial West. As Jimmy Carter could tell you, Iran is another. The miracle, of course, has been that there haven't been more Khadafys produced by the rise in oil prices that took place in the 1970s. Libya under Khadafy is but a manageable version of the problem President Ronald Reagan would face if he had to deal with, say, Saudi Arabia under a Khadafy. And this, of course, is the all too often forgotten reason why it is dangerous to support that the consequences of the rise and fall of oil prices are purely economic. A Khadafy who is dangerous when oil is $10 a barrel is much more dangerous, far better financed and infinitely more immune to Western pressure when oil is $30 a barrel. Maybe George Bush should have thought about this when he started talking about the need to keep oil prices from falling too fast. And maybe people who talk about free markets and letting oil find its own price should consider more carefully the extra price the West must pay in putting up with Khadafy. Until the United States recognizes that lower world oil prices and reduced dependence on imported oil are vital to its political interests. It is likely to spend the rest of this century dealing with situations such as the one that just provoked Reagan into a violent response that, however popular at home, has not struck at the fundamental problem any more than it has tamed Khadafy's ardor for violent provocation. What's needed, clearly, is a federal policy that recognizes that as the world's largest oil consumer, the United States has enormous power to affect world oil prices and to prevent future scarcities. A more activist and balanced federal energy policy, including new taxes if necessary, could seize the price initiative from OPEC and prevent it from engineering future domestic scarcities that could drive oil back to $30 a barrel and leave the Khadafys of this world better financed than ever. Robert Reno writes for Newsday.

After some 200 years of democracy, some of us don't like it

Perhaps it was naive, maybe it was my "liberal" college education, but I have long assumed that we enjoy life in a democracy in the United States. Lately, some people have been saying that we don't. That thought's been expressed in letters to us and in some of the far-right political tracts we receive in the mail. Some of our state legislators have also shared this belief with us — the U.S. Constitution created a republic, in which citizens elect their representatives and send them off to the hallowed halls of Congress. The basic principle applies on state and local levels. That's true. The Constitution, in Article V, does call for a republican form of government. But it doesn't mean that only Republicans are to be elected, nor does it call for the voters to give those elected representatives a blank check to do whatever they feel like doing once they're sworn in. The Republican Party as it's known today didn't even exist until 1854 — 62 years after the Democratic-Republican Party supported Thomas Jefferson for president, emphasizing its anti-monarchist sentiments. Democracy is government by the people, and for the people. It's also the system of government we've employed for the past 200 years or so and is considered by many to be a model for the rest of the world. It can easily function in a republic. In a democracy, the majority rules — not the majority in the chambers of government, the majority of the people who put them there. "Mob rule" is the term often used by radical rightists to describe the democracy. They seem to feel the "mob" should be ruled by an elite coterie of ultra-conservatives. How this differs in effect from the monarchy that American colonists rebelled against and the aristocracy that the French people overthrew, I'm not sure. There are differing views in the land on what our form of government should be. Some critics of U.S. democracy seem to assume that only their candidate, antagonized by the electorate and answerable to no one but their God and their individual consciences. They like the idea of "majority rule," providing that majority is comprised of mosabacked Republicans. Others seem to prefer as little government as possible. It's not clear, however, what would replace it. As one recent letter writer put it: "... government is a natural enemy of free people." The trouble with these sentiments on freedom is that those expressing them seem to favor freedom to do whatever they choose to do, while limiting the freedoms of people they disagree with, such as the freedom of speech. The same letter writer favorably quoted a tax protestor as saying, "... people are good and moral and dedicated." But who determines morality? Our appointed representatives? Fundamentalist ministers? Advocates of free enterprise? How would morality be enforced in a nation of 240 million people? It's interesting to note that often the same people who are reinterpret American and world history for us are trying to cram their own view of the Bible down our throats, telling us what the prophecies really meant (the end of the world is at hand), and who the Israelites really were (white people). If the history books, more moderate religions or the news media tend to look at things differently, they're wrong. Not only wrong, they're in a conspiracy to mislead. While some of us might see the toppling of Marcos in the Philippines as a triumph for democracy, others view it as a victory for mob rule. Marcos may have had big faults, he may have been a tyrant and a thief, but at least he was anti-communist. It seems strange, after some 200 years of democracy, that some of us don't like living in one. Theories and terms are being tossed around these days to suit whatever purpose is needed. The reason given is "information" — the result is confusion. The foremost enemy of freedom in the world today calls itself the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Freedom there is unknown to anyone outside the ruling party structure. There is no democracy. I don't think it differs much from the America that some defenders of the republic would create if they were in control. Mike Sullivan is city editor of The Times-News.

Singer awarded court costs

CHALLIS (AP) — Singer Carol King Sorenson and her husband will receive $3,695.54 in costs they accumulated in defending themselves to a lawsuit brought by Custer County, a judge has ruled.

The suit, which the county filed in 1984, sought to have the portion of Robinson Bar Road that passes through the Sorensons' ranch south of this central Idaho community declared a public road.

However, 7th District Judge Arnold Beebe ruled against the county's claim on Oct. 31, 1985, stating that the county's abandonment of the road in 1939 was legal and gave title of the road to adjacent property owners.

The Sorensons' attorney, Steve Millemann, said he was pleased with the ruling on Friday.

"Overall, we're satisfied with the decision and feel it's a reasonable award for cost," Millemann said.

The award did not include attorney's fees. A separate motion filed by Millemann for recovery of approximately $50,000 in attorney's fees was denied by Beebe earlier.

Custer County Commission Chairman Ivan Taylor said he was satisfied with the amount of the costs awarded the Sorensons.

"The court considered all the angles in awarding the settlement," Taylor said. "We were pleased with the amount as far as I'm concerned."

Appeals of Beebe's Oct. 31 decision declaring Robinson Bar Road private have been filed by Thurlow-H. and Dorothy French and David H. and Helen B. Schoonen. Motions filed by attorneys for the two parties, asking Beebe to certify his decision on the public road issue for appeal, are scheduled to be heard by the judge today in Challis.

Meanwhile, a Dec. 1 federal court date has been set in Boise before U.S. District Judge Marion Callister for Ms. Sorenson's pending civil rights suit against Custer County.

She alleges in the suit that her civil rights were violated when the county declared Robinson Bar Road a public road in 1981 without granting her a chance to protest under due process of law.

Iacocca close to rival Bush in Utah survey

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Lee Iacocca, considered the architect of the Chrysler Corp.'s financial comeback and rumored as a possible 1988 White House candidate, finished a strong second to Vice President George Bush in a recent poll of usually staunchly Republican Utahns.

Utah gave President Reagan his biggest state victory margins in the 1980 and 1984 elections. It has an all-Republican congressional delegation, GOP governor and Republican-controlled Legislature.

But in a copyright poll published in Sunday's edition of the Salt Lake Tribune, Republican Bush held only an 8-percent edge over Democrat Iacocca when the two were pitted in a possible presidential election showdown.

Bush garnered 49 percent to Iacocca's 41 percent, with 10 percent undecided. The poll has a margin for error of 4 percent.

Bush did better against Colorado Sen. Gary Hart, defeating the man some people see as a top candidate for the Democratic nomination 53-39, with 8 percent undecided.

In a GOP primary matchup, Bush defeated New York Rep. Jack Kemp by nearly a three-to-one margin.

The poll was based on telephone interviews conducted by Bartley and Haslacher of 60 Utahns statewide.

Woman dies in rollover near Nampa Federal agents seize ranch in Teton County in drug case

NAMPA (AP) — A Boise woman was killed in a one-car rollover on Interstate 84 near Nampa early Saturday, an Idaho State Police dispatcher said.

Police said Margaret Ann Bauder, 36, was traveling west on I-84 when she lost control of her car, went off the shoulder of the freeway and was thrown out of the car as it rolled.

Canyon County Coroner Dale Halle said Ms. Bauder died immediately of a massive skull fracture and a broken neck. She was not wearing a seatbelt, Halle said.

DRIGGS (AP) — Federal agents, acting a warrant alleging that the land may have been purchased with money from illegal drug sales, have seized a 100-acre ranch in Teton County, says Assistant U.S. Attorney Dan Hawley.

Hawley said U.S. Marshals conducted the seizure at the same time similar procedures were launched in Arizona on property owned by Peter Joseph Estay, 36, of Scottsdale, Ariz.

Also seized at the ranch, about 8 miles west of Driggs, were 31 horses and foals, a dog, numerous vehicles, several pieces of farm equipment, and household furnishings, Hawley said.

Jim Lacey, assistant U.S. attorney in Phoenix, Ariz., said Estay was arraigned Monday on a complaint charging him with distribution of cocaine. He is being held without bond following a detention hearing.

Lacey, who also is with the federal Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force, said Estay's arrest is part of a larger operation. Also charged with Estay was an unidentified Columbian citizen, he said.

Testimony given at the detention hearing indicated Estay bought the Teton County ranch in 1980 and used it to raise horses, Lacey said.

What's what

A proverb out of the Middle East translates roughly: "Don't let old age be the winter of your life. Let it be the harvest."

Thailand's Bangkok has 5.5 million people and no sewage system. You know Bangkok -- it's the city that's sinking four inches a year. Ino city. It's sinking into clay.

Ever seen a three-toed sloth in a zoo? Neither have I. The animal can't be kept in a zoo. It learns to eat only those leaves its mother eats in the wild. Without that specific nourishment, it dies, no matter how well fed otherwise.

WRINKLES

Q. Why do you get wrinkles on your face as you age, but not so much elsewhere on your body?

A. Because your face is the only place where muscles are connected directly to the skin.

Q. What's the most lethal creature in the jungle?
A. The mosquito.

Q. Isn't there wild mink in every state?
A. Every state except Arizona. No, sir, I don't know why Arizona is the exception in this mink matter.

LOVE AND WAR

Item No. 3927-C in our Love and War man's file details part of the law in medieval England against illicit romantic affairs. A widow caught in the physical act could be fined 20 shillings, but a young unmarried woman so apprehended was only liable for 10 shillings.

The households with the youngsters nationwide are the households with the dogs, mostly. But some households without youngsters have dogs, too. So it has come to this, finally: American households with dogs outnumber households with youngsters.

One authority who says a man's muscles produce enough heat to boil a quart of water an hour. His muscles maybe.

Q. What North American city has the most Portuguese?
A. Toronto.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There can be a considerable number of upsels possible during the early part of the day. In the evening, one needs to have facts and figures correct to alleviate confusion.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You want to expand your activities, but may have to take a different course than you had planned, but follow through.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Some financial problem may arise in the morning, but handle it wisely and all will be well. Don't go off on tangents.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Don't let a partner upset you in the morning. Later, you have better rapport with your mate.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You may have to make some changes in your plans for the day in order to get better results.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Your position may change where financial affairs are concerned, so use care in handling them. Take care of your health.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): You feel like making radical changes in the morning, but this would not be beneficial. Contact one who is influential.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): You find it difficult to solve some problem in the morning, so put it aside for awhile. Matters at home are rather confusing.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Steer clear of a new acquaintance who could cause you a great deal of trouble in the morning, but could later be helpful.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Try not to do anything that could irk a bigwig in any way, and tonight be careful in any monetary dealings.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Steer clear of a new contact in the morning who is very talkative and could be self-serving. Get more rest.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Don't commit yourself to anything of a serious nature today since you have a private worry that bothers you.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): An associate could put you through the wringer if you are not careful. Be very alert while out driving.

MOSCOW (AP) — Pianist Vladimir Horowitz played his first formal concert on a Soviet stage in six decades on Sunday, drawing thunderous ovations from music lovers who have revered his virtuosity despite a self-imposed exile from his homeland.

Horowitz, 81, took six curtain calls during an eight-minute standing ovation in the Grand Hall of the Tchaikovsky Conservatory, a stage where the greatest Soviet artists have performed.

The 1,800-seat hall overflowed with Soviet officials, musical luminaries, about 400 lucky ticket-buyers and hundreds of students who surged in after bursting through a phalanx of police guards. The pockets of some "music" students bulged with tape recorders.

Among the Soviet celebrities were composers Alfred Schnittke, Viktor Shkrennikov, Rodion Shchedrin and Ivan Kozlovsky.

Diplomats said the highest-ranking Soviet official present was Georgi A. Ivanov, deputy minister of culture. The wife of Foreign Minister Edward A. Shevardnadze also attended.

During the intermission and after the two-hour concert, knots of people stood rhapsodizing about Horowitz' performance.

"His music is disembodied, just his beauty floating through the air," said Sergei Polunskiy, who studied piano with Horowitz' late sister, Regina.

"You can't sense his age at all,"

Pianist Vladimir Horowitz prepares to strike the keyboard Sunday for his first Soviet concert in 61 years

Schnittke said, "He plays with total freedom, but at the same time with great control."

Horowitz was born in the Ukraine in 1904 but left the country 21 years later, when he decided not to return from a tour of Europe and the United States. He lives in the United States.

Horowitz' family property in the Soviet Union was confiscated and he vowed never to return.

However, he agreed to come back for two concerts — one in Moscow and one in Leningrad April 27 — under the U.S.-Soviet cultural exchange renewed in November at the Geneva superpower summit.

When Horowitz walked on stage to begin the concert, which was telecast for broadcast in the United States, he was greeted by a standing ovation that lasted nearly two minutes.

He began tentatively with three Scarlatti sonatas and then warmed up with Mozart's Sonata in C major, K. 330, tossing off the last few notes with a flick of his left wrist and a triumphant smile.

Horowitz then played two Rachmaninoff preludes and two etudes by Scriabin. Several members of the audience brought bouquets to the stage as he took a curtain call for the intermission.

The second half began with a Schubert-impromptu, a Schubert-Liszt waltz and Liszt's "Sonetto del Petrarca." Horowitz also played two Chopin mazurkas and his Polonaise in A-flat major, Op. 53.

After the program, the crowd erupted with shouts of "bravo!" and more cheers. Horowitz flashed three fingers indicating he would play three encores.

For eight minutes, Horowitz kept returning to bask in the applause, but declined to play more. "Domoi, domoi (go home, go home)," he said.

At a reception later at the official residence of U.S. Ambassador Arthur Hartman, Horowitz said he thought he played well and described the audience response as "very good."

"They are very sweet to me here," he said.

Spaghetti war erupts at Roman McDonald's

ROME (AP) — Opponents of the Americanization of the Italian diet on Sunday decided to fight food with food.

They dished out spaghetti yards away from Rome's first McDonald's restaurant, which recently opened on the edge of the Eternal City's most famous piazza. The restaurant has prompted protests from those who don't like the crowds lining up outside each day even before it opens.

Ken Rossberg, owner of a replica of Capt. Bligh's famous ship, has scuttled plans to sail from Vancouver on May 4 on a world cruise with modern-day sailors paying to bring back the 18th century.

"The Coast Guard has said no," the 26-year-old Australian said Saturday. "They say we must meet the specifications for a modern passenger ship, which of course we can't do."

Critics in Mayor Nicola Signorillo's government have suggested that the McDonald's be closed in exchange for quickly cutting through Rome's red tape to give the fast-food chain two locations in the heart of the historic city center. But participants in Sunday's spaghetti protest said they don't want any American-style fast food in the Italian capital.

Red tape scuttles Bounty world cruise

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Once again the Bounty is left half her crew, but this time it's red tape, not mutiny, that's rocking the boat.

Former president dedicates home for homeless

CHICAGO (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter has dedicated a rehabilitated home in the Uptown neighborhood as part of an effort to jar the conscience of the nation through rebuilding projects in inner-city tenements.

Carter has been working with Habitat for Humanity, a Christian, not-for-profit organization that builds and rehabilitates housing for the homeless.

Carter said at Saturday's dedication that his two previous ventures to work on Habitat-sponsored missions, rebuilding decrepit New York tenements, had prompted an "increased awareness of the poor" in U.S. cities.

"The entire world is more aware after seeing a former president and first lady involved in manual labor," he said.

Bankruptcy filing helps secure actor's land buy

HONOLULU (AP) — Actor Sylvester Stallone may have a more secure hold on a 5.5-acre parcel of beachfront on the island of Kauai as a result of the seller's bankruptcy filing.

Kaonohi Ohana Ltd. sold the land to Stallone in 1983 for $1.75 million and rejected a $1.4 million bid offered by another buyer.

That buyer, Nancy Sutherland, sued the company, claiming that she had a valid sales contract for the land purchase. A federal judge rejected her claim, but his decision was overturned by a federal appeals court.

Since then, Kaonohi Ohana has filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code, enabling the company to cancel the disputed sales contract with Sutherland.

Stallone has so far paid $1.3 million of the purchase price, said Boyce Brown, attorney for Kaonohi Ohana.

Hitler's birthday marked by arrests

ELENSBURG, West Germany (AP) — Police and anti-Nazi protesters clashed with more than 200 right-wing extremists who gathered in this northern town to celebrate Adolf Hitler's birthday, police said Sunday.

Police arrested 44 of the extremists — called "skinheads" because they generally shave their heads — after the clashes late Saturday and early Sunday. Four anti-Nazi protesters were also arrested for allegedly beating a "skinhead."

Police rounded up more than 200 "skinheads" and put them on trains out of town, some under police guard.

The "skinheads" are gangs of mostly young, right-wing extremists who are opposed to foreign workers and left-wing policies.

Hitler was born April 20, 1889, in Braunau, Austria.

Former ambassador among island investors

MIAMI (AP) — Investors in a project to develop a prime piece of city real estate on a Biscayne Bay island include former United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, a Spanish prince, and friends and supporters of the mayor.

The 12-member group wants to rent Watson Island and turn it into a $130 million stop for tourists, businesspeople and boating enthusiasts with a hotel, shops, restaurants, a marina and facilities for boat shows. The island is connected to downtown Miami and to Miami Beach by a causeway.

Mayor Xavier Suarez won't be voting Tuesday when the lease proposal goes before the City Commission because of the number of his friends and backers who are involved in the project.

Among the other investors are Prince Alfonso von Hohenzollern-Sulzbach of the Marbella Club of Spain, Dutch shipyard-owner F.P. Heesen, Spanish businessman Andre Parlane, Venezuelan builder-banker Umberto Petreica, and Madrid banker Gonzalo Zalaco.

PG-13 Rating Introduced

A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is designated as "PG-13. Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for attendance of children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children."

The revised five-category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

● All General Audiences, all ages admitted.

● PG: Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

● PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

● R: Restricted, under-17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

● X: No one under 17 admitted. All films rated after July 1 will be given ratings under the new five-category system.

U.S. plane reported recovered

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — The United Arab Emirates' state-run newspaper Al-Iktihad reported Sunday that Libya pulled the wreckage of a U.S. F-111 warplane from the Mediterranean.

Attributed the report to unidentified Libyan sources. A raid on Western diplomatic sources, who insisted on anonymity, dismissed the account as unverifiable.

The United States has said that an F-111 fighter-bomber that took part in the U.S. air raid on Libya last Tuesday failed to return. The Pentagon declared the two crewmen killed in action.

British bases open for U.S. use

Los Angeles Times
LONDON — Foreign Secretary Geoffrey Howe refused Sunday to rule out the possibility of U.S. aircraft launching another air strike against Libya from bases in Britain. Asked during a nationally televised hour-long interview if Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government would consent to the use of British bases again, Howe replied, "That cannot be absolutely excluded in the nature of the world in which we live."

Radicals block OPEC accord

GENEVA (AP) — Hardline OPEC members Iran, Libya and Algeria held out Sunday against a proposal to cut the cartel's oil production only slightly this summer, insisting that deep cuts were needed to shock the oil market out of its price slump.

Ministers of the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries met formally for less than an hour Sunday. Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, Saudi Arabia's oil minister, said later they were "a long, long way" from a comprehensive agreement.

Sudan evacuation nearly done

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — The evacuation of non-essential U.S. diplomats and their families from Sudan has been nearly completed, with the scheduled departure of 124 Americans, a U.S. Embassy official said Sunday.

"Most of the officials who are supposed to leave have already gone," said the official, who spoke with the condition that he not be identified.

He said 238 Americans have left Sudan since the attempted assassination Tuesday of communications specialist William Calkins. Gunmen shot him as he drove past a cafe near Libya's diplomatic mission in a Khartoum suburb.

Aquino urges talks with communists

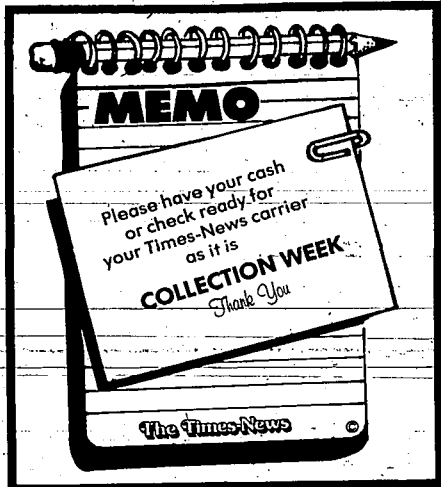

The Washington Post

MANILA — President Corason Aquino, stepping up efforts for reconciliation with the country's armed communist insurgents, dictated Sunday that she does not expect rebel leaders to respond sincerely to her call for a negotiated peace, but she said she is "willing to take the gamble to avoid any further waste of life."

Her statement followed two major highway ambushes Friday and Saturday in which guerrillas killed a total of 35 soldiers, according to the state-run Philippine News Agency. In both cases, the government was reported to have launched large operations in retaliation.

In her second major policy speech since coming to power in a popularly backed military revolt in February, Aquino appealed to the communists to recognize that with president Ferdinand Marcos gone, they no longer enjoy an advantage over government in the people's eyes. Sunday's speech reiterated key points raised in a March 22 address by Aquino at the Philippines Military Academy in which she warned that a "reformed and reinvigorated" armed forces would pursue those failing to answer her call for national reconciliation.

In her remarks Sunday, Aquino of the Philippines said she is "willing to take the gamble to avoid any further waste of life." She did not use the word "surrender," but that is clearly what she is asking for. Officials said they hoped insurgents would turn in their arms, in return for which they would get amnesty and be reintegrated into society. The communist New People's Army is estimated to have about 15,000 armed guerrillas in the field and many times that number of sympathizers. Bringing the insurgency under control is viewed by the Aquino government as one of its most important tasks. Government forces have ceased most offensive operations since the change of government, but the communists continue to attack in some areas, officials say. On Friday, an insurgent land mine and ambush killed 21 soldiers in Albay Province, 200 miles southeast of Manila.

Castro castigates Reagan

HAVANA (AP) — President Fidel Castro marked the 25th anniversary of Cuba's Bay Pigs victory with a bitter personal attack this weekend on President Reagan and a pledge to combat laziness and corruption in Cuban society.

Castro told a gathering at a local theater Saturday night that the U.S. air attack on Libya last week was comparable to the bombings of European capitals by Adolph Hitler during World War II.

In what appeared to be Castro's harshest attack to date on Reagan, he called the U.S. attack "brutal, shameful, criminal and terrorist," and said Reagan "is as unscrupulous, unjust, inhuman and irresponsible as Hitler."

The statement drew sustained applause from the invitation-only audience, which included families of victims of the U.S.-backed invasion by Cuban exiles at the Bay of Pigs on April 17, 1961.

Castro spent the first hour and 45 minutes of his speech recounting the Bay of Pigs invasion, but his principal message came during the final hour of his appearance when he spoke about the U.S. attack on Libya and shortcomings in Cuban society.

Dollar hits postwar low against yen

TOKYO (AP) — The U.S. dollar hit a postwar low against the Japanese yen Monday on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange market, opening at 172.35 yen to the dollar and dropping to the 172-yen level in morning trading.

Traders said the surge of the yen generally reflected similar trends in overseas exchange markets and recent unease about prospects for the U.S. economy.

The Bank of Japan reportedly has intervened several times in recent weeks to keep the yen near the 180-to-the-dollar level. It was not clear if the central bank took steps Monday to prop up the faltering dollar, which was being quoted at 172.65 yen in mid-morning trading.

Last September, the finance ministers of the United States, Japan, Britain, France and West Germany met in New York and agreed to cooperate in correcting what was perceived as an overvalued dollar. The dollar has since dropped nearly 30 percent in value against the yen.

The Japanese government has supported the yen's appreciation, which makes it harder for Japanese companies to export goods, imports to Japan, and should help correct Japan's politically sensitive trade surpluses.

However, Tokyo also has begun to show concern about small and medium-sized firms hit hard by the yen's appreciation and has indicated that it would like to see the exchange rate stay at around the 180-gen level.

Basking in the sun without a sunscreen leads to premature aging of the skin and, frequently, skin cancer

Sunlight safety

Doctor calls Magic Valley a high risk area for skin cancer

By JOAN BEAN

Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Overexposure to the sun's ultraviolet light causes wrinkles and skin cancer. But how much exposure is too much? Twin Falls dermatologist Dr. Thad Scholes says, "I don't think anyone can qualify what is an absolutely safe amount, and which point you're putting yourself at risk to develop skin cancer. To some degree, it depends on the natural coloring of your skin — the lighter you are, the worse off you are."

He says he thinks fair-skinned people with light-colored hair and eyes should wear 15-20 sunscreen throughout the summer, on a daily basis. And children are no exception.

"I advise," he says, "when I see mothers with red-headed babies, that are out watching Daddy play softball or something like that, in the sun. Kids get sunburn too."

Scholes says studies done at major medical centers have estimated, if biopsies were done of the sun-exposed skin of young people living in this part of the country, by age 12 evidence could be found of damage to the elastic fibers.

When he is talking to teenage girls, Scholes tells them to notice female relatives in their 50s, who have been working on a farm through the years, along with their husbands. He tells the girls to "take a glance at the deep lines they have in their skin. That's the sort of thing you're generating by constant exposure (to the sun)."

"Another example he gives is the skin on the back of a fair-skinned farmer's neck. The deep lines, with little triangles between the lines, called 'farmer's neck,' that can happen to other parts of the skin too."

He says a tan is the skin's response to the sun's rays. Rays trigger the production of melanin, the pigment that gives the skin its color.

Scholes does not, however, advocate never going out in the sun. "I golf, I hunt and I fish," he says, "but I do it with 15 sunscreen, and I even get a better tan than I ever did before. I started using sunscreen, because I used to burn and peel all the time, and now I don't."

He says when sunscreen is worn, a hat is "superfluous." People fishing recreatively on the lake, reflected by the water. On a smooth green, it is estimated 50 percent of the harmful rays will bounce back up — so a hat isn't that protective.

When a sunburn does occur, he says the first thing a person should do — unless there is a medical reason not to — is to take two aspirin four times a day, for at least a couple of days. "Not only will it relieve pain, but aspirin does to some degree inhibit the inflammatory response in the skin, so it keeps things to a minimum," he says.

Cold compresses are also helpful, and if there is blistering, he prescribes a cortisone ointment.

"If they can't track down a doctor, they should use a prescription for it, they can use hydrocortisone or one of those over-the-counter products," he says.

There has been a significant amount of damage on the skin, the regenerative layer is in some degree by an enzyme most of the DNA in the skin is damaged beyond repair, and you have an abnormal cell. And that abnormal cell has the potential to keep dividing and producing more abnormal cells, leading to skin cancer.

The Magic Valley is a high-risk area for skin cancer. Because of our altitude, the atmosphere is thinner, allowing more of the sun's damaging rays to come through. "We're not cursed or cursed — take your pick — with a lot of air pollution, which also sometimes acts as a screen, and we have a population that is pretty well geared to working outdoors and playing outdoors," Scholes says.

The national statistics of a 98 percent cure rate for non-melanoma skin cancers (basal cell carcinomas and squamous cell carcinomas) is encouraging, but people do grow them on places like the ends of their noses, which is disfiguring. "I don't care who removed the skin cancer from the end of your nose — the end result is going to be extremely noticeable — no matter who it is," he says. "Sunshine is like a lot of things in life — a little bit is good for you, and a lot of it is not."

Self detection key to curable male cancer

By RICHARD D. STEWART, M.D.
Los Angeles Times

Cancer in young men is relatively rare. The most commonly encountered is the cancer of the testes which accounts for 5,000 new cases each year in men between the ages of 29 and 35, according to the American Cancer Society.

ACS estimates that 500 people died of cancer of the testes in 1985. When testicular cancer is detected early the cure rate approaches 96 percent, one of the highest for any cancer. Even when the cancer is far advanced, survival rates of up to 75 percent can be achieved.

As mentioned, the key to the highest cure rate is early detection. The cancer is rare except in males 15 to 34 years of age, according to American Cancer Society statistics.

An undescended testicle, called cryptorchidism, is the most significant risk factor. Even if the testicle is moved down to its normal position, the excess risk of cancer remains. This suggests that the cancer potential develops during fetal life rather than after birth.

A history of mumps involving the testes or a hernia of the groin may also increase the risk. When the cancer begins to grow it has no symptoms. At this early stage, only those who are practicing a program of regular self-examination can detect the painless mass or nodules in the testis.

With continued, undetected growth of the cancer the patient experiences a sensation of heaviness or vague discomfort in the scrotal area. Were the patient to examine himself, he would discover that one testicle was firmer and harder to the touch than the other — or that a definite lump was present.

From age 14 until 35 a man should make a monthly examination of each testis a normal routine. The best time to conduct the exam is following a bath or shower when the scrotal skin covering the testes is relaxed. Each testis is examined separately by gently rolling it between the thumb and the first two fingers of one hand while the fingers of the other support it.

Normal testes are about 1 3/4 inches in length and are spongy to the touch. There is a cord-like structure on the back side of each, the epididymis, the small organ that stores and transports sperm.

During the exam, which takes only a minute or so, one should note the size, shape and consistency of each testis. Any deviation from the normal anatomy such as a firm area or a lump on the front or side of one testis should be promptly reported to one's physician. This does not always mean cancer. The abnormality may be due to a non-cancerous cyst, but it could be the first sign of a true cancer.

When a cancer is detected, it should be removed before it has time to spread throughout the body. The key to cure is to catch it while it is small, and painless before it has time to spread throughout the body. The key to that is monthly self-examination.

Richard D. Stewart, M.D., is an internist and clinical professor of internal medicine at the Medical College of Wisconsin in Milwaukee.

Quick takes

AIDS drugs to get hospital tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Experimental drugs that show promise against the deadly disease AIDS will be tested on patients at 10 hospitals starting this summer, officials said Wednesday. "We are very well into clinical trials with a number of drugs," and expanded testing will begin this summer under a $20 million, one-year program, Ian Macdonald, assistant secretary of health and human services, told a Senate hearing Monday. As many as 275 AIDS patients eventually will be given experimental drug therapy at the hospitals, which will soon be chosen by the Public Health Service, Macdonald said.

Swallowing Bloomie's diet book

Here's further proof that weight isn't just what you eat but what you're willing to swallow. The latest from dietland is Laura Stein's creation, "The Bloomingdale's EAT Healthy Diet" (St. Martin's Press, $15.95). But don't think this book is simply glib and glamorous in its name. It actually contains a diet of advice. Among the sage thoughts that have inspired the likes of Erica Jong, who is said to have lost 12 pounds; 1) don't drink food — drink water; 2) cut down on fats; 3) eat more vegetables; 4) say goodbye to sugar; 5) exercise — you can't make it without it.

Until publication of the book, the program has been marketed for $275 in Manhattan classes. It takes its name from the fact that 30 Bloomie's excess lost a total of 500 pounds.

The popped art of corn snacking

In terms of nutrition, popcorn is nothing to pan. It's an excellent snack food because it is high in fiber and low in calories. A 3-ounce bowl of unsalted, unbuttered popcorn contains about 276 calories. One cup of regular microwave popcorn contains about 70 calories. That same cup of popcorn contains 129 milligrams of sodium. And the salt in Washington, D.C., actually contains a diet of advice. Among the sage thoughts that have inspired the likes of Erica Jong, who is said to have lost 12 pounds; 1) don't drink food — drink water; 2) cut down on fats; 3) eat more vegetables; 4) say goodbye to sugar; 5) exercise — you can't make it without it.

Runner, keep eyes on the birdies

Pity the poor runner who has been dive-bombed by a feathered fiend. Not only can birds cause injury to head and dignity, they show little remorse afterward and may even return for another peck. To aid in our sympathy for such an event is not easy to come by, since most people don't believe it. For the bird-throwing runner, proof (if not help) has arrived through the New England Journal of Medicine. Thomas Elsner wrote that he, the overwhining winner, was hit by a bill in the clavus. His solution? Elsner decided to affix two large fake eyes to the back of his cap. The attacks ceased.

Let there be laser light therapy

Another new use for lasers, which are turning out to be more versatile for medicine than for war. A new technique using endoscopic laser therapy to relieve malignant obstructions of the esophagus offers significant and safe relief, according to a report from Boston University School of Medicine in the April Archives of Surgery. In a controlled study, the new technique offered rapid relief of therapy "without sacrificing safety," said Joseph J. Pietrafitta, M.D., and Richard M. Dwyer, M.D. This is particularly good for surgery-bound patients who are nutritionally depleted, as a result of the obstructions. They can have their obstructions relieved within 48 to 72 hours, allowing them to eat before further surgery so that any nutritional problems can be avoided. The researchers concluded that such "endoscopic" laser therapy is efficient and cost-effective. And it will leave world peace intact.

Organ donor week raises money issues

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration is launching Organ Tissue Donor Awareness Week with lots of fanfare but minus the $21 million a federal task force says is needed to ensure successful transplants for the elderly poor.

The week formally starts today with ceremonies and a "Presidential program" in which 1.5 million Boy Scouts will try to heighten public awareness of the need for organ donors.

Dr. Otis R. Bowen, secretary of health and human services, will hand out awards. A country music band from Indiana that raises money for transplant patients will perform.

"Americans are a caring and giving people, so it is fitting that we as a nation should encourage organ and tissue donation and increase public awareness of the possibilities and the need," Reagan said in his proclamation.

But missing in advance publicity for "awareness weeks" are more specific examples of administration policies toward organ transplants — policies shaped by the budget deficit and by fears of how many billions of dollars it would take to provide organs to everyone who needs them.

The Health Insurance Corp. of America says it costs $200,000 to $250,000 per patient for a liver transplant, while a heart transplant can cost $100,000 to $150,000.

Critics, most notably Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., who authored the 1984 National Organ Transplant Act, say the administration philosophy goes beyond budget concerns to a more fundamental opposition to any federal role in transplant procedures.

"There is hardly any area of public policy where the administration has been more hypocritical and less helpful than with transplants," Gore said. "They have tried to appear to be supportive, but they have gutted the efforts... to establish a national policy that makes sense."

Congress last year appropriated $3 million for federal programs to assist organ transplant recipients. Asked Congress to take back $2.47 million, saying it wasn't wanted. Another $129,000 was cut by the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law.

The cutbacks would leave the 1988 organ transplant budget at $400,000.

Donor hearts scarce

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Hearts for transplants will always be in short supply, keeping the procedure relatively rare and preventing many hospitals from gaining the experience necessary to perform them well, a researcher says.

As many as 15,000 Americans could benefit each year from heart transplants, but only 400 to 1,100 donor hearts will be available annually for the foreseeable future, said a study in the April 11 Journal of the American Medical Association.

"There really is a limit to how much heart transplantation is ever going to go on," said lead researcher Roger W. Evans, a medical sociologist with Battelle Human Affairs Research Centers in Seattle.

"Many people have the misconception that this will become as common as cardiac bypass surgery," he said in a telephone interview Wednesday, but the heart transplant will always be a "relatively unusual procedure."

Part of the problem is the restrictions on donor hearts are tougher than for other organs, the study said.

Generally-accepted standards are that hearts must come from men younger than 35 or women younger than 40 who have had no heart disease, no heart injury, no drugs administered into their hearts during efforts to revive them, and no evidence of cancer or infection in the body.

Time also is critical. Hearts remain suitable for transplant only three to four hours outside the donor's body, the study said.

Although polls show people generally support organ transplantation, they are less than enthusiastic about donating organs, the researchers said.

Also, some developments that help society as a whole — laws requiring the use of seat belts and child-restraint seats, the 55-mph speed limit, drunken driving laws, handgun laws, motorcycle helmet laws and better trauma care — reduce donor supply, the researchers said.

Yet more than 70 medical centers are doing heart transplants and within five years, the number will probably increase to 110, the researchers said.

Looking good

Gaulier: Heavy Russian accent

Jean-Paul Gaulier, Paris' experimental enfant terrible, packages his latest collection in Russian trappings. His vision is one of tough chic with steel-toed boots.

No shy guy, Gaulier decorates fall's alibouettes with his own baby picture (on a tri-colored wool knit dress) and his name spelled out in Cyrillic letters (down the sleeve of a leather motorcycle suit). His patchwork collage clothes are reminiscent of postwar political posters.

Country is cool with Kenzo, too

Country has gotten cool. Again. It's all over the Fiorucci stores in Italy, and now it's all over Paris. Kenzo not only closed his show with a Dolly Parton song, but dedicated nearly half his collection to cowgirls.

Not that any of it has an ounce of authenticity, but for creative inspiration it's a bad. Kenzo envisions country with the flash of rhinestones and the dash of leather fringe all spangled onto a short plaid jacket with an equally short frounce skirt. More sedate versions rely on longer hemlines and corduroy.

Superwomen: Chart own course in life

• Do you feel guilty if you don't take care of everybody else's needs? (And guilty if you do take care of your own?)
 • Are you always at the beck and call of the people around you?
 • Do you have trouble saying "no" when you want to?
 • Do you have to be absolutely desperate before you can ask for help?

Jo Ann Larsen
 when you want to?

If so, you may be what author Margoric Shaevitx terms a Superwoman: a woman who is juggling to fill multiple roles — caregiver, volunteer, worker, homemaker, wife, mother — and struggling to achieve them perfectly. And one of your major complaints may be that your life feels chaotic and out of control. There is too much to do and never enough time to do it.

All this strikes uncomfortably close to home, don't despair, says Shaevitx, author of "The Superwoman Syndrome." There are things you can do to step out of the Superwoman role and to bring your life back into control. Here are some examples:

CHANGE YOUR "DO IT" APPROACH FOR EVERYTHING. Whether at home or at work, Superwomen tend to do a lot, says Shaevitx. They do it themselves rather than ask for help or delegate or pay someone to do it for them. "Unintentionally, they also set all kinds of precedents for the people around them not to help because they do it all."

To get away from being the one-woman band for everything you're involved with, says Shaevitx, use the anti-doing-it formula. Ask yourself questions like:

- Does this really need to be done?
 - Can someone else do it? Who?
 - Do I want to do it? Why?
 - What is the worst thing that will happen if it doesn't get done?
 - If I choose to do it, who can help?
 - Can I pay someone else to do it? How much?
 - How much time will I save if I hire or ask someone else to do it?
- LEARN TO SAY "NO." Because of their orientation to always responding to others' needs (while ignoring their own), Superwomen often feel they can't say no to others, even when they want to, and even when they think it is appropriate.
- You do have a right to say "no," stresses Shaevitx. So, to get control of your responses (and your life), make a decision rule not to respond immediately to requests. Give yourself some time to think about whether you really want to say yes.
- If you're ambivalent about the request, ask yourself, "What's the worst thing that will happen if I say 'no'?" (In many instances, the worst thing is that the other person will request someone else to do what you were being asked to do.) Chances the other person will be annoyed, probably smaller than you think, but if you do encounter anger, remember that you've faced it before and survived.

PAY ATTENTION TO YOUR OWN NEEDS. To say "no" comfortably, you'll also have to give yourself permission to put your needs on a par with those of other people. Says Shaevitx, "Superwomen ignore their own needs in favor of meeting the momentary needs even of mere acquaintances. They have no limit for what they will do for you, yet they do the minimum for themselves."

If you do chronically deny your needs, you stand a good chance of becoming a martyr, feeling resentful, powerless and cheated, Shaevitx says. And when you're experiencing feelings like that, you simply can't be emotionally available to those you love. So, for everyone's sake, she urges, take care of yourself by including yourself on the list of people for whom you care so well.

At a start, make room for the following in your busy schedule:

- Plan a two- or three-hour block of time during the week for personal care.
- Commit to an exercise program.
- Take time to relax.
- Build some open time into your schedule to respond to things you consider important.

PLAN YOUR TIME. Superwomen often don't value their time. But, you had better manage your time — it's all you have, says Shaevitx. Besides, she stresses, unless you manage your time, you can't control your life. So, to take charge of your life, you may want to try these steps:

- Set goals for yourself. "If you don't know what your goal is, even for a day," says Shaevitx, "you can't easily become interrupted, overwhelmed, overcommitted, and disorganized."
- Get a week-at-a-glance calendar that fits in your purse or briefcase and carry it with you at all times. Once a week set aside at least a half-hour of overall planning time for yourself and, while you're scheduling activities, keep in mind two questions: Why am I doing this particular activity? and Is this activity necessary or important?
- Develop a daily to-do list that relates to your goals, errands and projects.
- Create periods of uninterrupted time to accomplish the important things on your schedule.
- Separate important details from unimportant ones and give your attention to those that are important. (Superwomen have a tendency to give all details in their lives the same focus.)
- Give time first on your schedule to those you love and those who matter most in your life.

Psychiatric hospital to treat adolescents

BOISE (AP) — The first psychiatric hospital in Idaho to focus exclusively on adolescent problems has opened in Boise.

Northwest Passages Adolescent Hospital will specialize in care for 12- to 18-year-olds. The 34-bed private facility offers treatment for emotional disorders, substance abuse, depression, eating disorders, said Darlene Schrickel, chief administrator.

Treatment at the hospital costs $280 per day, Ms. Schrickel said. But fees for preliminary assessment examinations may be waived in certain situations.

"We need to meet the needs of young people and their concerned families," she said. "We wouldn't think of turning a patient away."

Dr. Steven Thurber, the psychologist who will oversee individual treatment programs at the hospital, said children need to learn about substance abuse earlier than they do. "There does seem to be a trend nationwide toward hospitalization of children earlier in life," he said.

The hospital will strive to keep patients busy with training for occupational skills, education and psychological therapy, Thurber said. Trained staff will outnumber patients at the hospital by 3 to 1.

Half those tested fail hearing exam in S. Idaho

POCATELLO (AP) — Just over half the adults and one in 10 children checked in a southern Idaho program to identify hearing problems failed the hearing test, according to the Idaho State University speech pathology and audiology department.

But Tom Longhurst, head of the department and coordinator of the Rural Speech and Hearing Outreach Program, was not surprised by the testing results "because we expect those who felt they may have a problem were the most likely to be tested."

From March through December last year, the program underwritten by a $75,000 grant from Mountain Bell Telephone Co., checked nearly 2,100 adults and 2,700 children for hearing problems and found 50.1 percent of the adults and 9.9 percent of the children had potential deficiencies.

Just over 2,000 children were screened for speech and language problems, and 17.4 percent were found to have potential problems, Longhurst said.

Transplants

children under 18 are not covered by Medicare. For adults, the procedure is considered experimental and not covered, although 80 percent of private insurers cover them.

And the administration has taken no position on a federal task force recommendation last fall that the Medicare program pay for use by the elderly poor that can spell the difference between success and failure of organ transplants.

The task force recommended that the Public Health Service buy immunosuppressive drugs in bulk, at a cost estimated at between $21.1 million and $47.9 million over two years, and distribute them to transplant centers for use by Medicare patients. Medicare covers the elderly and disabled, as well as virtually all kidney failure patients.

The department said Friday it has taken no formal position on the recommendation. But Gore said the recommendation is almost identical to a provision almost enacted by Congress in 1984, but finally killed through administration opposition.

"The administration fought to the end against reimbursement of cyclosporine on grounds that it was a question best left to the deliberation of the task force," Gore said. "Then, when their task force came to precisely the same conclusion we did a year earlier, they decided to ignore their task force's advice as well."

In fact, the administration opposed creation of the Task Force on Organ Transplantation, saying the private sector should handle the issue. But former Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret Heckler made appointments to the group after Congress mandated it.

The task force said in an Oct. 25 report that while Medicare covers kidney and bone marrow transplants and a few other procedures, it does not pay for essential lifelong after-care special drugs that suppress the body's immune system and keep the body from rejecting the transplanted organ.

The most successful drug is cyclosporine, credited by many with transforming organ transplants from risky experiments to almost routine procedures. The drug has doubled success rates in some types of transplants. But cyclosporine costs between $4,000 and $5,000 a year per patient, the task force says. Medicare does not pay for the drugs after a patient leaves the hospital.

The American Society of Transplant Surgeons has said that in about 15 percent of kidney transplant cases and about 50 percent of other transplants, surgeons' decision on whether to perform a transplant is based in part on the patient's ability to pay for cyclosporine.

There is no finish line

Sooner or later, the serious runner goes through a very personal experience that is unknown to most people. Some call it euphoria, others say it's a flash of joy or a sense of floating as you run. While the experience is unique for each individual, it is a milestone because when it happens, you break through a barrier that separates you from casual runners. From that point on, there is no finish line. You run for your life!

The chiropractors at the Fox Chiropractic Clinic understand that feeling. The demand for our services has been so great that we have had to run to keep up with it. For us there is no finish line either. We will never stop trying to deliver the best chiropractic health care to you so that your health and life expression improve every year.

Beating the competition is relatively easy

But being better today than you were yesterday is a never-ending commitment. The doctors at the Fox Chiropractic Clinic appreciate the trust so many of you have placed in us. We are committed to constantly upgrading our level of service to the community. Thank you for your trust.

Caesarean birth class offered

TWIN FALLS — A caesarean birth class for expectant parents or for those who have recently experienced a caesarean birth will be held at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center today from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Irene E. Oliver Women's Health Center conference room located on the second floor.

Through discussion and a slide presentation, this single class explores the medical indications for a caesarean birth, hospital procedures, delivery and recovery.

The fee is $5 and participants must pre-register by calling the Women's Health Center at 737-2900, Monday through Friday between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Monthly CPR courses to begin

TWIN FALLS — Monthly cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) courses will be offered to the public beginning this month at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. The two-class course will be held from 6:30 to 10 p.m. in the Fifth Floor Conference Room on April 22 and 24.

The fee is $10 per person and participants must attend both sessions unless they are re-certifying. For re-certification, attendance at only the second session is required and the fee is $5.

Class size is limited; pre-registration is required. Call 737-2000 weekdays between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. and ask for Educational Services.

'Rites of Spring' fun run April 26

KETCHUM — A "Rites of Spring" 5-kilometer fun run will be held at 10 a.m. April 26 at the Sixth Street Gym, 6th and Leadville in Ketchum. Final registration will begin at 9 a.m. and a pre-race stretch session will be held at 9:30 a.m. at the gym.

Early entry fee is $6; day-of-the-race entry fee is $8. For more information, call 726-7246.

Childbirth refresher class set

TWIN FALLS — A prepared childbirth refresher class for persons who have previously taken a prepared childbirth course will be held at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center April 22 from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Women's Health Center Conference Room located on the second floor.

Childbirth preparation and medical center procedures will be reviewed. A film, a discussion on sibling adjustment and a tour of the labor/delivery unit will be included.

The fee is $5 and participants must pre-register by calling the Women's Health Center at 737-2900 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Ferrell speaks on anger release

TWIN FALLS — "Say Goodbye to Anger" will be the topic of this month's Creating A New Life for You Support Group, sponsored by the Center for New Directions at the College of Southern Idaho.

The meeting will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. April 28 in room 105 of the Shields Building.

CSI counselor Ann Ferrell will be the guest speaker and will discuss ways of dealing with the letting go of anger within current and past relationships.

There is no charge for attending. For more information call the Center for New Directions at 733-9554, ext. 361.

Computer aids sex

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Too shy to tell an analyst about your sexual problems? Try talking to a computer instead.

A computer program developed by researchers at Carnegie-Mellon University will listen to your woes, identify the source of the problem and even suggest treatment — all without a blush.

"Research shows people are more likely to talk about embarrassing kinds of things to a computer than to a person," said Dr. David Serfaty-Schreiber, one of the researchers.

Average dioxin levels make breast milk risky

NEW YORK (AP) — In one year, many breast-fed infants in the United States may consume 18 times more of the toxic chemical dioxin than federal scientists recommend for a lifetime, a researcher estimated Wednesday.

That projection for breast milk is calculated from an average level of dioxin found in human fat in the United States — and based on studies of breast milk itself may begin this year, said Dr. Arnold Schechter, professor of preventive medicine at the Upstate Medical Center of the State University of New York.

"We've got something that's a potential human health problem," Schechter said in an interview. "I say 'potential' because we don't know if there's a threshold" below which no harm occurs, or if the projected amount is above or below such a threshold, he said.

Schechter's projection focused on dioxin's most hazardous form, called 2,3,7,8-TCDD. Its effect on humans is being debated by scientists, but it has been associated in industrial studies with liver damage, a serious skin disease called chloracne and a number of other problems. Animal studies suggest a link to cancer.

Schechter spoke at a meeting of the American Chemical Society.

He said the federal recommendation he cited for lifetime intake was from the Centers for Disease Control, calculated to give an individual a one-in-a-million risk of cancer from the chemical. It is based on intake of dioxin per unit of body weight, he said.

His calculation assumed the baby is breast-fed for one year and weighs an average of 11 pounds over that time.

THE HUMAN BODY IS A COMPUTER

Clinical Kinesiology is a science that recognizes the human body as a bio-computer and that the body functions very much like an electronic computer.

A doctor skilled in Clinical Kinesiology can very efficiently diagnosis and treat a variety of conditions. Many conditions, which remain illusive or resistant to other forms of diagnosis and treatment will respond to Clinical Kinesiology.

Clinical Kinesiology utilizes a system of manual muscle testing and hand modes to determine areas of malfunction in the human body. This testing informs the doctor as to what type of treatment is needed to restore normal function and normal health.

By using Clinical Kinesiology Dr. Williams can accurately determine a patient's needs and help them enjoy good health.

Council to discuss 'defects' in zoning laws

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council will consider correcting its planning and zoning ordinances at tonight's meeting, even though council and staff members maintain the codes are not defective.

City Attorney Shane Bengoechea is recommending the changes after 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt allowed state Rep. Jeff Stoker, R-Twin Falls, to keep his legal office open in a residential zone after the City Council refused to rezone the area to allow professional use. Hurlbutt says there is substantial question whether Twin Falls has a valid zoning ordinance.

Stoker has sued the city over its refusal to rezone the section of Addison Avenue, saying the city did not follow correct legal procedures when updating the 1979 master zoning plan.

Residents cannot be held to zoning laws that were never properly published and were not available for public inspection, he says. Discrepancies between titles of maps and zoning plans have also been found.

The city has admitted that there were some irregularities in past procedures, but maintains they were too minor to invalidate the city's zoning restrictions.

By amending the planning and zoning ordinance to correct what city officials are calling "alleged defects," the city is not admitting there are major problems, Bengoechea says.

The exact changes the council will consider were not available when City Hall closed for the weekend Friday.

The council will also hold a public hearing on a request that it vacate public right-of-way for the First Federal Savings and Loan Association. First Federal has asked the city to deed over 125 feet of alley in the 100 block of 4th Avenue North for its new building.

The alley is only 15 feet wide and intersects another alley running the full length of the block. The savings and loan association owns the land on both the 4th Avenue North and 3rd Avenue North side of the alley under consideration.

The financial institution would not construct a building on the alley property, says Sun Valley architect Jim McLaughlin. Instead the area would be used for parking to allow sensible and efficient traffic circulation around the building, according to a letter from First Federal Savings and Loan officials.

The City Planning and Zoning Commission is recommending that the council approve First Federal's request.

Other items on the council agenda for the 7 p.m. meeting at City Hall include the following:

- The council will consider appointments to the Cablevision Service Review Commission. The commission will be called to handle complaints lodged with the city following changes in service and service fees by King Videocable.
- A reimbursable sewer tap inspection fee is scheduled for discussion. City Engineer Gary Young proposes collecting $50 when developers receive permits to tap onto the city sewer collection lines. The money would be refunded when the tap is inspected.

The fee would act as an incentive for developers to have their taps inspected, Young says. If taps are not installed correctly and developers do not arrange for an inspection, the city would discover until damage has been caused to adjoining properties.

The council is also scheduled to review the procedure for public right-of-way permits. Inspections were handled by the engineering department before October, but the city now contracts most of the city surveying and public works inspection.

Almost 200 students from eight states attended the Saturday seminar.

Martial-arts master gives tips, philosophy

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The sounds of the martial arts are distinctive. There's the whoosh of the gi — the traditional uniform — as arms and legs swing through the air with purpose.

Flesh grunts as bare feet hit the floor or arms slap arms in swift movements.

And, of course, there are those familiar, crisp yells that let one know this is not tennis.

Whooshes, grunts and yells filled the National Guard Armory Saturday as almost 200 students and instructors of the International Kokondo Association gathered to learn from association founder and martial-arts master Paul Arel.

Arel, headquartered in Connecticut, developed the association's training system, which uses the ancient techniques of Jujitsu and karate, said Brian Combo of Idaho Falls, a coordinator of the seminar attended by students from eight states.

Arel, who started martial-arts training 35 years ago, said his discipline doesn't stress competition. That way, there aren't losers or winners, and people develop equally.

Competition tends to dilute the techniques and their effectiveness, Arel added.

There are contests within the association, but the attitude of students is different than in other martial-arts matches, Arel said. Instead of focusing on trophies, his students enter with the philosophy, "I'll give it my best shot."

By nature of its emphasis on self-defense, the training provides students self-confidence, Arel said.

"The guy who is insecure will try to start a fight," he added.

Students are taught to be courteous and avoid conflict.

"If you are in a fight you have instigated even a little bit, you may lose because of it," he told the students. "I believe firmly that the good guys should win. I still believe in the Lone

Experts can't pinpoint risks of radon gas

By KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Indoor radon gas levels have become a difficult problem for both homeowners and state health officials in Idaho.

While a statewide survey has found concentrations of the colorless, odorless, radioactive gas at more than twice the federally recommended guidelines in some Idaho homes, there is some question as to the actual health risks involved.

Should anyone be concerned about radon levels above the 4-pipecuries-per-liter federal guideline?

"I really can't answer that," said Robert Funderburg, manager of the Radiation Control Section of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

Although research has suggested that high levels of radon may pose a health hazard, Funderburg said that when it comes to determining how concerned one should be about high radon levels or deciding how much money one should spend on reducing radon levels in a home, the decision is "up to the individual homeowner."

lended exposure to a radon gas concentration of 4 pCi increases a person's risk of getting lung cancer by an amount equivalent to smoking an extra cigarette a day, Funderburg said.

While that prediction is "based on good strong statistics," he added that if the statistics were correct, "We should be seeing some elevated cancer rates."

Because those elevated rates have not materialized, Funderburg said, there is still some uncertainty as to the actual health risks posed by the radon levels found in some Idaho homes.

"While we can get some elevated without hurting health, my job is to make sure radon exposure in the state is as low as possible," Funderburg said. "I'm caught somewhere between the two extremes," he added.

Radon is a naturally occurring radioactive gas. Colorless, odorless, and tasteless, the gas is produced by the decay of radium in the uranium decay series. Both elements occur naturally as trace elements in Idaho soils and groundwater. On average, Federal studies predict that ex-

Kimberly sets April 29 as override levy date

By MICHAEL VANAUDELN
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — Disappointed with the lack of state funding for education from the Legislature, the Kimberly School Board has set April 29 as the date for a $120,000 override levy.

Board members said Thursday the override funds would enable the school district to run efficiently next year.

Last year's $95,000 levy, which expires June 30, was approved by 78 percent of the district's voters.

Despite this year's increase in the levy amount, property taxpayers will actually be paying less than last year, said Superintendent Richard Bauscher. A typical homeowner with $50,000 of assessed property value would pay $32.15 for the year, a $1.75 less than last year's $34.90.

The money will be used to improve the maintenance of the school district. Bauscher plans to use the money to meet state building safety recommendations, which includes repairing or replacing two building roofs.

He also said desks, tables, chairs and equipment are needed for an additional second-grade classroom. Currently, each second-grade classroom has 31 students; adding the new class would reduce the load to 23 students per classroom, he said.

The money would also be used for replacing stairs and the entrance, stalling solid building walls to replace curtain-divided classrooms, • See KIMBERLY on Page C2

After doing without, Jerome obtains insurance coverage

By INA HADAM
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The city of Jerome finally has liability insurance after doing without it since January.

Mayor Ralph Peters said the city received a one-year binder last Tuesday from PENCO, with Hartford as reinsurer.

Peters said the insurance was obtained through Prescott Craig Insurance Agency. The city had expected to be covered through the city's comprehensive general liability insurance pool being organized through the Idaho Association of Cities. However, after that effort failed in March, the city began looking for its own policy.

The city has been operating on a limited basis since the first of the year, with limited coverage available only for the police and fire departments since the first of the year.

The bill for the total insurance package will be $66,170, which is an increase over last year's rate by nearly $40,000. The council, anticipating a large increase in insurance costs, had budgeted $72,000 for the year, so the increase is not unexpected, he said.

However, Peters said they have not yet received a bill for the fire and police coverage the city has had and may not have enough in the budget to cover that expense.

No trailers necessary at this car show; winners drive away

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Owners of many award-winning cars in the 10th anniversary Magic Valley Early Iron Rod and Custom show at the College of Southern Idaho this weekend proved you can drive a vehicle and still take home the show trophies.

Included among those who enjoy their expensive and demanding hobbies were three trophy winners who say they not only drove their cars to the Twin Falls show, but drive them on many other occasions. When the show doors closed Sunday evening, there were no trailers waiting to load the overall "People's Choice" winner, a 1936 Hupmobile owned by Marvin Rice of Pocatello.

Tim Moore and Jerry Bolander, both of Boise, also took to the highways with their '36 coupe, and trophies for Best of Show were in the special 1934 Ford class, a feature of this year's car show. Moore's 1934 coupe won the show sweepstakes award and Bolander was awarded the Best of Show trophy.

The weekend event, dubbed the Best of Boise 10 years by show committees and fans, attracted an estimated 10,000 persons during the two days.

Rice's unique Hupmobile, a 1936 Victoria model, walked away with a total of six awards, including first place in the street-complexe campground scene built around his 1936 Honda motorcycle and trailer.

The 1986 show honored the 1934 Ford, with a center-island display in the CSI Expo building featuring a show of officials' said "were outstanding examples of the car that was popular during the "gangbuster" era of the 1930s.

Engineering, Kim Mason of Twin Falls for his 1940 Willy's Coupe; Best Engine, Greg Fairchild of Burley, a 1976 Camaro, and Best Display, Walk Midway, with a 1934 Ford coupe.

Best of Show trophies went to Best of Show, Best Interior and Best in National Street Rod Association competition. Winners who received special recognition in the awards presentation Sunday afternoon trophy.

The weekend event, dubbed the Best of Boise with a 1955 Bel Aire, tudor; Best ple of every model Ford Motor Co. made that year with one exception.

Tim Moore's '34 three-window coupe was one of many among the 150 select cars on display that had not been shown before in Twin Falls. The bright orange-red custom car, with colorful paint design on the body, made its award-winning debut in March at the Boise Roadster show and its equally successful second appearance in Twin Falls this weekend.

Rice acquired the car a year ago and has been working with it since that time. • See CARS on Page C2

Glenns Ferry council puts zoning variances, permits on hold for now

By CAROLYN DILWORTH
Times-News correspondent

GLENN'S FERRY — The Glenns Ferry City Council approved on Thursday a moratorium on all zoning variances and conditional use permits until the city's new zoning plan is approved.

Council members said it's difficult to give variances or conditional use permits without a full knowledge of what is in the new zoning proposal.

The plan is currently being reviewed by the Planning and Zoning Commission and needs a public hearing and the approval of the council before it can be put into effect. The date for presentation of the new zoning plan has not been set.

Other business:

- Chamber of Commerce President Jim McCaffery, who represented both the chamber and the Glenns Ferry Merchants Committee, asked the council to issue a proclamation declaring 1986 the centennial anniversary for the founding of the city of Glenns Ferry.
- McCaffery also requested a council member work with his group to keep the council aware of the activities being planned for the celebration.
- Councilwoman Jessie Flemming said she would be the council's liaison with the chamber.

Various committees are now being formed to select dates and plan activities, McCaffery said.

- The council agreed to form a joint board with the Eastern Elmore County Recreation District so the local recreation district can buy insurance coverage at a lower rate.
- Mayor David Messery urged the city to force the survey law which requires anyone under 18 be off the streets by 10 p.m. Monday through Friday and midnight on weekends.
- Recent accidents, burglaries, and vandalism involving juveniles indicate the curfew is not being enforced, he said.

Students sit in as legislators, tackle issues

BOISE (AP) — Mandatory seat belts, protection for abused children, organ donations, welfare and voting rights were among the issues tackled by 247 Idaho high school students during a week-long legislative session that ended Saturday in Boise.

Students from 47 high schools participated in the 50th Annual YMAA Youth Legislature at the Statehouse. The students received three days of practice working as legislators, state Supreme Court justices, reporters, lobbyists and legislative officials.

Among the legislation passed:

- A petition to Congress to enact legislation protecting abused children by allowing them to testify in court through video cameras or similar means.
- A bill requiring hospitals to develop procedures on informing next of kin about the opportunity to donate organs of deceased relatives.
- A bill requiring motorcycleists to wear helmets.
- A bill requiring recipients of unemployment benefits in good health to work for minimum wages.

- A bill requiring recipients of the equivalent of their state welfare benefits.
- A bill establishing a system of state licensing for children's day-care centers and services.
- A bill requiring mandatory use of seat belts by all passengers and operators of motor vehicles.

Sheared wheel causes wreck on 93

TWIN FALLS — A pair of trucks were sheared from a moving truck on U.S. Highway 93 early Saturday morning and resulted in injuries to a Montana motorist.

Twin Falls County sheriff's officers said Michael James Weck, 28, of Great Falls, Mont., was hospitalized after his vehicle struck a fire in the north-bound lane of U.S. 93, 7.5 miles north of Jackpot, Nev. at about 3 a.m.

Investigating county officers said the truck, owned and driven by Thomas J. Zitek of David City, Neb., lost two wheels from its trailer as it was traveling just north of the Idaho-Nevada state line. As soon as Zitek realized what had happened, he went back to check for the wheels.

In the meantime, officers said, Weck's 1977 pickup truck collided with one of the wheels, which had come to rest on the highway. The second wheel and tire rolled from the roadway into sagebrush at the side of the highway. Officers said another motorist who managed to miss the wheel in the darkness had pulled over and was on his way to remove the wheel from the highway when the accident occurred.

Weck told officers he saw the truck wheel in his lane of traffic and swerved to miss it, but lost control of the car as the front wheel of his vehicle struck it.

The pickup went off the east side of the highway and rolled over three times, coming to rest on its wheels at the side of the road. It was demolished and Weck was transported to 10 Magic Valley Regional Medical Center by Jackpot ambulance. He was released following treatment of injuries.

Jewels discovered taken from home

TWIN FALLS — Burglars removed jewelry valued at $1,250 from a Twin Falls home sometime last week, city police reported Sunday.

Roxanne McQueen of 328 5th Ave. W. told police someone entered her home sometime after last Monday and prior to 4:50 p.m. Friday. Officers said there appeared to be no force used to gain entry.

The stolen items that rings and other items were taken from a bedroom and that she did not discover the loss until Friday afternoon. Nothing else in the house was disturbed.

adding student lockers to accommodate higher student enrollment, which increased 3.5 percent this year, and to purchase a new school bus.

Bauscher said that weekly repairs on the buses are becoming more costly. The district bus fleet had not been updated for six years until a mini-bus was bought this year. All of the 66-passenger buses have traveled over 65,000 miles with one having logged over 125,000 miles, he said.

In other action:

- The board sent a letter to the Kimberly City Council requesting that the library be built along Main Street on the east side of the elementary school. Despite increased police patrol monitoring the area, the board has been concerned with safety problems in the area with students walking to school on the busy road.
- Bauscher reported on bills passed by this year's Legislature affecting the Kimberly school district. He said that with the approved state budget for education, the Kimberly school district would get a 1.3 increase in funding from state funds. But with the district losing $14,000 in state funds that they were promised this year, the increase of state funds will be $1,350, he said.

The board considered all approved teacher contracts for the next school year. There will be one opening for a full-time music teacher next year. Bauscher plans to attend area teacher conferences to recruit a music teacher due to the small number of certified music teachers.

Radon

granitic rocks in the state contain higher levels of the radioactive elements than other rock types.

The radon gas tends to permeate small cracks in fissures in the earth's surface or other building built above these cracks or fissures, it can act as a trap for the gas, dramatically increasing concentrations.

Radon is equivalent to the unit quantity of radon that in radioactive equilibrium contains one trillionth of a gram of radium.

While attention has focused on radon in homes and schools, however, tests found average radon concentrations of 8.8 and 8.5 p.c.l., respectively. Funderburg said that the state's initial study "suggests that Idaho does not have extremely high levels of radon."

"We don't even come close to matching what we've heard about in other states," he said.

According to the Department of Health and Welfare's study of 400 Idaho homes, 71 percent of the homes fell below 4 p.c.l. and 15 percent were between 4 and 8 p.c.l. The remaining 14 percent were above 8 p.c.l. The state average according to a release from the DHW was 3.9 p.c.l.

While only three of the 11 homes tested in Twin Falls county had radon levels above 4 p.c.l., nearby Blaine County reported the highest levels in the state, with 65 percent of the tested homes above 4 p.c.l.

The average reading in Blaine County was 8.8. Test values, however, ranged all the way from 0.4 to 42, and Funderburg said that county residents should not assume they have a problem because of the high average readings.

For homes and buildings with abnormally high readings, Funderburg said, there ideally should be something done at each house. But the question, he said, is how much one should spend to correct it.

"Everything is a guideline," he said of the recommended radon levels. "We're looking at 4 (for a guideline), but that doesn't mean it's a problem (levels above 4). No body really knows what would be a good guideline."

There are a number of options available to homeowners who find they have a radon problem. According to the EPA's "A Citizen's Guide to Radon," possible ways of reducing exposure to radon include such temporary measures as sealing basements and other areas of high radon concentration, opening windows and operating Ranger. We are the good guys."

Yet, the master added, "There are situations when you don't have to walk to get hit." If someone tells you he is going to "knock your head off," he is advised not lingering to see how it's accomplished.

To avoid legal consequences, however, you shouldn't "make a new door" with the body of a person who isn't threatening you, Arel said.

It was easy to see Arel indeed was considered a master at the seminar. "I'd give it to the shores and plan to drive it to the 1986 Expo (in Vancouver, British Columbia) this summer and to some major car shows. It's a driver as well as a show car."

Bolander's pride and joy also took first in the 1934 Ford class. It is a tudor blue pearl sedan with blue interior. The car has traveled 35,000 miles since a total rebuilding project was completed in 1976. Like Madry and Rice, Bolander enjoys the driving as well as the restoration work and showing.

The car has 12 coats of black paint under nine coats of blue pearl, three coats of clearcoat and one of urethane. The car has won awards in Boise, Salt Lake City and Twin Falls since Bolander acquired it in 1978.

"I did most of the work myself with some help from friends," he said. "I'm not good at the paint and upholstery."

Rice likes to hook a camp trailer on his unique brand wine-colored Hupmobile and set up in campgrounds when he travels to shows or when vacationing.

"I do attract a lot of attention that way," he said. "Most people don't even know what a Hupmobile is."

There were 150 cars in the anniversary show competing for trophies and special awards in 68 classes. The oldest car on display was a 1906 Maxwell, owned and shown by Russell and Opal Howell of Jerome. The biggest was a chrome laden Freightliner transport truck owned by Steve Wolters of Kimberly.

After winning the trophy for Outstanding Truck and much attention from fans, the truck will go back on the highway today as a working vehicle.

Becker-Flandro

GOODING — Judge and Mrs. Phillip Becker, Gooding, announce the engagement of their daughter, Debbie, to Jerry Flandro, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Flandro, Pocatello.

Becker is a graduate of Gooding High School and Boise State University where she earned her master's degree in business. She is a production control supervisor at Hewlett Packard's Boise division.

Flandro, a graduate of Pocatello High School and Stanford University with a master's degree in industrial engineering, is materials manager of the Disc Memory division of Hewlett Packard in Boise.

A June 28 wedding is planned at Sun Valley.

Riggin-Heller

TWIN FALLS — First Sgt. (ret.) and Mrs. Ralph F. Riggen, Twin Falls, formerly of Halley, announce the engagement of their daughter, Pamela K., to Gregg L. Heller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. Heller, Twin Falls.

Riggen, a 1979 graduate of Wood River High School at Halley, attended CSI and is employed at the Same Day Service Center at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Heller, who graduated in 1980 from Twin Falls High School, also attended CSI and works with Emergency Transport ambulance service at MVRMC.

The couple plans an Aug. 16 wedding at Immanuel Lutheran Church in Twin Falls.

Operation Dear Abby off to Guantanamo Bay

DEAR ABBY: Your Operation Dear Abby was a wonderful morale booster for lonely and homesick Marines in Japan.

It let thousands of U.S. Marines know that Americans back home really care about them. It also gave some stateside people an opportunity to learn something about military life overseas.

Abby, we here in Guantanamo Bay Naval Base wish that you would extend Operation Dear Abby to us. We are an extremely isolated installation in the Caribbean, and would love to hear from people in the states.

Our base is the oldest American post on foreign soil, and the only U.S. base in a communist nation.

There are a lot of lonely Marines and sailors here. We have women here, too, the majority of whom are in the Navy.

Anyone wishing to correspond with a service person can address letters to me. I promise to see that the letters will get into the hands of someone who wants a pen pal. Mail from "home" keeps us going.

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

Thanks in advance from all of us stationed here.

DEAR STEVE: You asked for it! (The Marines on Okinawa received more than 30,000 letters!)

OK, Steve, you are now included in Operation Dear Abby. Prepare to hear from boys, girls, men, women, moms, pops and grandparents. The nicest people in the world read Dear Abby.

DEAR ABBY: Can you stand one more letter about European eating practices?

Eighteen years ago, on the plane home from our first visit to Europe, I asked our 10-year-old son if he had learned anything in the three months we had spent traveling around Europe. He thought for a minute, then said, "Well, I learned that there are a lot of different ways to flush a toilet."

Then I asked him if he'd also learned that one way of flushing a toilet was just as good as another, and he said, "Sure, they all get the job done." So I told him that he had indeed learned something of value.

To those who think the American way of doing things is the best and/or the only way, I say: "Please don't be an Ugly American. When you travel abroad, keep an open mind, and if you still don't think the way they 'flush their toilets' is as efficient as ours, please keep your opinions to yourself and don't insult or ridicule them. It will make life much more pleasant for us all when we follow in your footsteps."

—LAROQUE DUBOSE, PHOENIX

was good at age 10. But then, he had a good teacher. Congratulations.

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Two-Tone in North Carolina" — the black woman who had a mastectomy and was fitted with a pink or rose-colored prosthesis. She said she felt "funny," and asked if any manufacturer made artificial breasts for black women.

Well, I can tell her they do. I'm a white woman who also had a mastectomy. The place I bought my prosthesis didn't have a white one in my size, so they gave me a black one to wear until a white one came in. It sure looked funny, but it got the job done. I wore it for three weeks and my husband cracked up every time he saw it. Sign me...

—CHOCOLATE AND VANILLA
DEAR C. AND V.: The letter from "Two-Tone" brought me mail from prosthesis manufacturers, distributors, fitters, users — and friends of users. All informed me that prostheses come in a variety of colors — just like people.

NOTICE OF EMERGENCY RULE-MAKING AND INTENDED REGULAR RULE-MAKING

In compliance with Sections 67-5203(b) and 67-5203(c), Idaho Code, it is hereby given that the Division of Welfare, Department of Health and Welfare, State of Idaho, has undertaken emergency rule-making...

Emergency rule-making is necessary because the failure to implement these provisions would result in fewer benefits than Food Stamp households are entitled to receive effective March 27, 1986.

The rules, which were adopted by emergency procedures on the 24th day of March, will be effective on the 27th day of March, and will expire at the end of one hundred twenty (120) days on the 24th day of July, 1986.

The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the emergency contained in Docket No. 0304-86033:

1. Consideration of self-employment income is amended to require that a farmer's self-employment income which exceeds the amount of his or her countable earned or unearned household income for arriving at the Food Stamp allotment calculation.

2. An annotation of "A" through "L" is removed from the section entitled "Verification of Eligible-Alien Status to correct this section as this section does not currently comply with the federal regulation.

3. An annotation of "A" through "L" is removed from the section entitled "Verification of Eligible-Alien Status to correct this section as this section does not currently comply with the federal regulation.

NOTICE OF EMERGENCY RULE-MAKING AND NOTICE OF INTENT TO REGULAR RULE-MAKING

In compliance with Sections 67-5203(a) and 67-5203(b), Idaho Code, the Department of Health and Welfare, State of Idaho, has undertaken emergency procedures for rule-making under the provisions of the Food Stamp Act of 1985. The emergency rule-making is necessary because the failure to implement these provisions would result in fewer benefits than Food Stamp households are entitled to receive effective March 27, 1988. A subsequent federal compliance lawsuit would result in losses to the State as underpayments would have to be restored in the form of lost benefits for affected households were this not implemented. The emergency changes are required by the Food Security Act of 1985.

The rules, which were adopted by emergency procedure on March 24, 1988, and filed by the undersigned on the 24th day of March, will be effective on the 27th day of March, and will expire at the end of one hundred twenty (120) days on the 24th of July, 1988.

The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the emergency contained in Docket Number 0304-8603:

1. Consideration of self-employment income is amended to require that a farmer's self-employment costs which exceed the amount of any other countable earned or unearned household income for arriving at the Food Stamp allotment calculation.

2. An annotation of "A" through "L" is removed from the section entitled "through" of Eligible Adult Status to correct this section as this section does not currently comply with the federal regulation. In addition, notice is also given, in compliance with Section 67-5203(a)(1), Idaho Code, that the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, Division of Welfare, has also initiated rule-making under Docket Number 0304-8603, prior to adoption of these emergency rules as permanent rules.

3. An annotation of "A" through "L" is removed from the section entitled "through" of Eligible Adult Status to correct this section as this section does not currently comply with the federal regulation. Within the time limits set forth in the proposed rules, any person can review the proposed rules in the DHW Administrative Procedure Section or in any of the regional administrative offices of the Department. Copies of the proposed rules will be made available upon written request specifying the docket number cited above.

4. Provisions for public hearings are waived, as required by Section 67-5203, Idaho Code, since the Department has no discretion as to the substantial requirements of the proposed amendments to the Food Stamp Act of 1985. The amendments to Food Stamp rules in the definition, self-employment, and special household sections of the Food Stamp Act of 1985.

DATED this 24th day of March, 1988.

4. Provisions for public hearings are waived, as required by Section 67-5203, Idaho Code, since the Department has no discretion as to the substantial requirements of the proposed amendments to the Food Stamp Act of 1985. The amendments to Food Stamp rules in the definition, self-employment, and special household sections of the Food Stamp Act of 1985.

DATED this 24th day of March, 1988.
Andrew W. Cover
Administrative Procedure Section, Division of Management Services, Department of Health and Welfare, 450 State Street, 9th Floor, Boise, Idaho 83720-9990
PUBLISH: Mondays, April 7, 14, and 21, 1988.

STATE OF IDAHO DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
In the Matter of the Proposed Rules and Regulations Concerning the Sale and Labeling of Gasoline Which Contains Alcohol.
NOTICE OF INTENT TO REGULAR RULE-MAKING
PLEASE TAKE NOTICE, that the undersigned proposes rules and regulations under the provisions of the Food Stamp Act of 1985. The emergency rule-making is necessary because the failure to implement these provisions would result in fewer benefits than Food Stamp households are entitled to receive effective March 27, 1988. A subsequent federal compliance lawsuit would result in losses to the State as underpayments would have to be restored in the form of lost benefits for affected households were this not implemented. The emergency changes are required by the Food Security Act of 1985.

The rules, which were adopted by emergency procedure on March 24, 1988, and filed by the undersigned on the 24th day of March, will be effective on the 27th day of March, and will expire at the end of one hundred twenty (120) days on the 24th of July, 1988.

The following is a descriptive summary of the substance of the emergency contained in Docket Number 0304-8603:

1. Consideration of self-employment income is amended to require that a farmer's self-employment costs which exceed the amount of any other countable earned or unearned household income for arriving at the Food Stamp allotment calculation.

2. An annotation of "A" through "L" is removed from the section entitled "through" of Eligible Adult Status to correct this section as this section does not currently comply with the federal regulation. Within the time limits set forth in the proposed rules, any person can review the proposed rules in the DHW Administrative Procedure Section or in any of the regional administrative offices of the Department. Copies of the proposed rules will be made available upon written request specifying the docket number cited above.

3. An annotation of "A" through "L" is removed from the section entitled "through" of Eligible Adult Status to correct this section as this section does not currently comply with the federal regulation. Within the time limits set forth in the proposed rules, any person can review the proposed rules in the DHW Administrative Procedure Section or in any of the regional administrative offices of the Department. Copies of the proposed rules will be made available upon written request specifying the docket number cited above.

Embittered Holmes says goodbye

By HAL BOCK
The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — There had never been tears before. Not when he was a pre-fighter, earning purses so small they barely met expenses, not when he won the heavyweight title from Ken Norton; not when he knocked out the legendary Muhammad Ali in the midst of a 7½-year reign, second only to Joe Louis. Not even when he lost the crown to Michael Spinks six months ago.

But Saturday night, in the antiseptic setting of a hospital emergency room, surrounded by medical personnel who were encasing his broken right thumb in a metal splint, Larry Holmes finally cried.

They were bitter tears, tears that mourned what might have been after Holmes lost a narrow split decision in his rematch with Spinks for the International Boxing Federation crown. "It worked so hard," Holmes said later. "It hurt because I worked 11 weeks and sacrificed so much for this. It was the first time I ever cried and it was because I didn't get a fair shake."

He would have to knock out Spinks. He tried gallantly but he said that when the fight went the distance, he was resigned to losing and felt no particular anger. "How can you be angry when you expect what's going to happen?" he asked. "You just don't want it to happen."

But he certainly was sad and the emotion spilled over. Later, in his hotel suite, surrounded by friends and newsmen, Holmes sat impassively in a chair, beads of perspiration dotting his forehead. He spoke softly, measuring his words, not wanting to offend yet not quite knowing how to avoid it.

(Promoter) Don King said two days ago that I shouldn't talk about the judges if I lose, that I should be nice," Holmes said. "All I want is to get it if I win. If I win, give it to me. Tonight showed I've been telling the truth. I had to see HOLMES on Page D2

Inner demons wouldn't let Holmes enjoy own success

By DAN LANGENDORF

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — The public workout got off to a pleasant start. Larry Holmes came out smiling as he danced and shadow boxed in time to Stevie Wonder's latest hit.

He took a short break when James Brown's Living in America finished. He stood in his corner and raised his voice to address the crowd at the Las Vegas Hilton, where he was training for Saturday's rematch with Michael Spinks.

"The reason why I've been having closed workouts is because I got to concentrate on what I got to do," Holmes said. "Sometimes people take away from you. It's nothing about you people. I got to take care of me."

Holmes introduced his wife and two of his children. It was a nice touch, considering the crowd was mostly schoolteachers.

But several minutes later, Holmes was not the madman. He and Dick Young, the fiery columnist for the New York Post, got into a shouting match. Holmes started it with an off-handed remark about Young, but Young countered and kept it alive. Young eventually was carried out by two bodyguards.

For the rest of the workout,

Holmes seemed to be in a good mood. "What you're seeing today," he said, "is a man who is a critic, comedian, teacher, boxer, father, and children with the media, race and children with the seriousness of a Baptist preacher in the delivery of his dialogue."

Holmes has been in this quick-tempered state since suffering his first loss and relinquishing his International Boxing Federation heavyweight championship title to Spinks last September. He has maliciously slandered the Rocky Marciano family and viciously criticized the Nevada State Athletic Commission.

People charmed by Holmes at the start of his workout eyed him suspiciously at its end. Some even asked, "What happened to Larry Holmes?" "I don't know if you can call it resentment," said attorney Charles Spaziani, an adviser to Holmes. "It's more like disappointment. Disappointment is caused by a lot of things. But, like I've said, it's hard for anybody to follow Ali, who was a legend. Larry was not going to get the full recognition he deserved. I don't care who it was — Jack Dempsey wouldn't have gotten the recognition he was given with the way people think of him."

Holmes defended his title 17 times in 7½ years. Only Joe Louis held the heavyweight championship longer. Holmes defeated Mike Weaver, Earnie Shavers, Ali, Trevor Berbick, Leon Spinks, Gerry Cooney, Tim Witherspoon and never ducked a top-ranked challenger. "But when Spinks won the championship, something snapped in Holmes. He appeared not to know how to take defeat, and after losing to Spinks he told Marciano's family that Rocky couldn't have carried his jockstrap. He recently said that the judges 'must have been drunk' when they scored the Spinks fight."

"This big boulder, this big rock was thrown at his glass house, and it came tumbling down," Spinks said. "He was Humpty Dumpty. And he had a great fall. All his King's horsemen and all his King's men couldn't put him back together again. He's left like that, wondering what happened."

"Let me be frank with you," Holmes said. "I don't know if you can call it resentment," said attorney Charles Spaziani, an adviser to Holmes. "It's more like disappointment. NBA playoffs

Jordan scores 63 points, but Bulls fall to Celtics

By HOWARD ULMAN
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Boston's NBA playoff series with Chicago has turned into the Michael Jordan Show. Unfortunately for the Bulls, it could be headed for a very short run.

Jordan set a single-game NBA playoff record with 63 points in their best-of-five series.

"They can have the records as long as we get the wins," said Jerry Sichting, who had two of Boston's five baskets in the second overtime. "Including the one that put Boston ahead to stay with 51 seconds to play — and assisted on another."

"I'm not worried about the points," Jordan said. "I'd give all the points back if we could win."

The Bulls' last chance to do that could come Tuesday night when Boston can clinch the series in Chicago.

Junk the Celtics know that we're real," Chicago Coach Stan Albeck said. "We're going to throw more at them. We're absolutely not going to cave in."

More NBA — D2

Jordan, who had 49 points in Thursday night's opening loss; broke the record of 61 points set by Elgin Baylor of the Los Angeles Lakers in Boston on April 14, 1962. The overtime record was 50 points by Boston's Bob Cousy in a four-overtime game on March 21, 1953.

"We rely on him," Albeck said. "His two performances were the two best in NBA history."

"It was just an awesome display of basketball," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said of the game. "I'm glad that I wasn't at home or I would have torn the couch apart. I was watching the game and all I could see was this giant Jordan and everyone else is sort of in the background."

Jordan, who missed 64 regular-season games with a broken bone in his left foot, sent the game into overtime by hitting two free throws with no time remaining in regulation.

to make the score 116-116. But with three seconds left in the first overtime, his 15-foot shot from the left was too far, leaving the score tied 125-125 going into the second extra session.

With Chicago trailing 133-131, Jordan had a chance to tie the game, but he missed a jumper from the foul line with 39 seconds to play.

"It felt good," Jordan said. "I was wide open and had a good shot."

"I was not really conscious of Michael's points," Chicago guard Kyle Macy said. "We all sensed that he was in the groove and we kept feeding him the ball."

But Sichting, who finished with eight points, made the decisive shots in the second overtime.

"I haven't had a chance to play in so many big games until now," said Sichting, obtained from Indiana before this season. "This is what everybody who hasn't been in the playoffs wants to do, get in this situation and see how they react."

He said Boston was trying to set up Kevin McHale inside, but McHale converged on him so McHale passed the ball back out and the Celtics found the open man. "We, as a team, played well," Jordan said. "They just got the breaks at the right time."

Boston had built its 133-131 lead on four long baskets. Larry Bird, who led Boston with 36 points, hit one from the foul line with 3:56 to go, but Orlando Woolridge's bank shot for Chicago tied the game 127-127.

Then Sichting sank a basket from the top of the key with 3:07 remaining. Danny Ainge connected from the left corner on a pass from Sichting with 2:01 left, making the score 131-127 before Jordan made a 15-footer from the right and an eight-footer as he drove into the lane to tie the game with 1:12 to play.

But Sichting hit again from the top of the key with 51 seconds remaining to give Boston the lead for good.

After Jordan's miss, Robert Parish made a short jumper with nine seconds left, giving Boston a four-point lead. Woolridge missed a three-point attempt with four seconds to play. McHale had 27 points and Ainge 24 for Boston, which tied an NBA record of 33 consecutive home victories in a single season, including the playoffs. It was set by the Minneapolis Lakers in 1949-50.

In 53 minutes, Jordan made 22 of 41 field-goal attempts and 19 of 21 free throws. He also had six assists and five rebounds.

He scored 17 points in the first period, six in the second, 13 in the third and 18 in the fourth for a total of 64 in regulation play. He had five in the first overtime and four in the second.

Woolridge, with 24 points, and Charles Oakley, with 10 were the only other Bulls to score in double figures.

Bird had 12 rebounds, including one with two seconds left after Jordan's miss in the first overtime. Boston called timeouts to set up a play, but Bird's desperation three-point shot at the buzzer went long.

A tip-in by Dave Corzine had given Chicago a 125-123 lead, but a driving three-point attempt with four se-

Records in jeopardy in Boston Marathon

BOSTON (AP) — The consistency of Rob de Castella's mystique of first-time marathoner Arturo Barrios and a bid by Ingrid Kristiansen to become the first woman to break the 2-hour, 30-minute barrier have combined to make today's money-enriched Boston Marathon an intriguing race.

De Castella, the mustached, 29-year-old strength runner, is favored to become the first Australian to capture the storied race since its inception in 1897.

Since beginning his marathon career in 1979, de Castella has been a model of consistency.

Between December 1981 and August 1983, he was undefeated in four prestigious marathons — the Fukuoka International in Japan, the British Commonwealth Games at Brisbane, Australia, the Rotterdam Marathon and the World Track and Field Championships.

The Eagles will host their first North Idaho College at the Valley Community College in the week, were originally scheduled to play Ricks here on April 12. That two-game set was rained out.

CSI nine opens league vs. Ricks today

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho's rain-delayed Northern Division Region 18 baseball opener will be played this afternoon at Frontier Field.

The Eagles, 22-8 following a four-game sweep in Utah over the weekend, will host Ricks today in a doubleheader scheduled for 1 p.m. Ricks, 7-11, lost two non-conference games at the beginning of the season to CSI.

Eagles win big — D4

CSI assistant Coach Jim Dawson said CSI would start freshman right-hander Jason Adkins against the Vikings in the first game. Adkins, 6-1, has been the mainstay of CSI's starting pitching so far this season. Dawson said either freshman right-hander David Carter (3-1) or sophomore right-hander Vic Valdez (4-5) would be on the mound in the second game.

Ricks Coach Val Dalling said he would send freshman left-hander Jeff Royler (1-1) to the mound for the first game. He said he has not decided who will pitch the nightcap for Ricks.

The Eagles, who at times have struggled with the bat this season, have come on strong at the plate in the last two weeks; their latest statistics show four different players hitting over .400 while sophomore infielder Kevin Lathrop has belted eight home runs so far this spring.

Ricks' offensive leader is sophomore outfielder Sean Stanton, who carries a .400 average. Freshman shortstop Mike Webb is Ricks' No. 2 hitter with a .358 average. CSI has dominated the series against Ricks, which is the Eagles' oldest rivalry. The Vikings' last victory came here last year in a doubleheader split.

The two teams are scheduled to meet again in Rexburg on Tuesday, April 29.

At stake for the Northern Division champion is the right to host the Region 18 playoffs, in which the No. 1 team from the north will play the runner-up from the south, while the No. 1 team from the south will face the No. 2 team from the north.

CSI won last year's playoffs in Orem, Utah. Dawson said Tuesday's scheduled non-conference doubleheader against Snow College at Frontier Field has been canceled. The Eagles already have six games scheduled this week.

NL: Luckless Cubs run short of light

CHICAGO (AP) — First the Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates put on a slugfest, then they played a pitching duel, and then it was a defensive struggle and the end managers Jim Frey and Jim Leyland expressed admiration for their teams.

"They battled their butts off," said Leyland of his Pirates, after the game was called on account of darkness after the 13th inning at Wrigley Field on Sunday with the score tied 8-8.

"I'm proud of them," said Leyland, even though his team failed to score after the seventh inning and got just two harmless singles over the final six innings. "They played awful hard."

Chicago Manager Jim Frey had to be pleased after the Chicago bats came alive for the second consecutive game, stroking 15 hits, including a 5-for-5 performance by Davey Lopes. But it took three runs in the bottom of the ninth, two coming on Keith Moreland's first homer, to tie the score.

"Of course we're disappointed that we couldn't have won the game," said Frey. "But I feel a lot better about what happened on the field today than what could have happened."

The Pirates rapped 11 hits for eight runs in the first seven innings, then were silent against five Chicago relief pitchers.

The Cubs got five runs in the first four innings, then were held hitless for 4 2/3 innings in the middle of the game, before their ninth inning uprising.

Pittsburgh had two men on with one out in the 13th when pinch-hitter Mike Diaz lashed a single to the hole, but shortstop Shawon Dunston knocked the ball down to prevent a run from scoring.

"There was no way I was going to let that one go through me," he said. Chicago had to use starter Rick Sutcliffe in the final two innings, and Frey said Sutcliffe will not start Tuesday against St. Louis.

The Pirates loaded the bases in the 13th off Sutcliffe, who was making his first relief appearance since Aug. 31, 1983. Mike Brown singled and advanced on a groundout. Sutcliffe then intentionally walked Jim Morrison before Diaz singled to load the bases with one out.

But Bill Almon popped up and R.J. Reynolds struck out to end the threat.

Chicago could not score in the bottom of the 13th and the umpires called the game at 5:13 p.m. MST after 4 hours and 48 minutes of play. The game will be resumed Aug. 11. The Cubs loaded the bases in the bottom of the 11th off Ceciliano Lopez, who had a triple and a double, led off with a single. Two out. Pater, Moreland and Leon Durham both walked, but Guante struck out pinch-hitter Manny Trillo to end the threat.

The Cubs trailed 6-5 going into the ninth and began their game-tying rally when Thad Bosley tripled, the first Chicago hit since the fourth inning. Lopes followed with an RBI double and Moreland's two-out, two-run homer off Jim Winn tied the game 8-8.

Sid Bream and Steve Kemp hit consecutive homers in a four-run fourth inning for Pittsburgh.

The Pirates hit successive homers for the second straight game, including an inside-the-park drive by Kemp.

Montreal 2 St. Louis 0

MONTREAL (AP) — Tim Wallach had the best scores in the eighth inning with a two-out, RBI double of the third-base gap and Vance Law added a run-scoring single Sunday as the Montreal Expos beat the St. Louis Cardinals 2-0.

Sox ruffed up 2-2, scattered eight hits and outduelled Rick Horton to help Montreal avert a St. Louis sweep of the three-game series. Tibbs struck out five and walked none.

With one out in the Montreal eighth, Jim Wolfhard doubled. Pinch-runner Herm Winningham took third on Mitch Webster's groundout and then scored on Wallach's hard grounder that skimmed off third base and rolled into the left-field corner. Law got his RBI single off reliever Jeff Lahti.

San Francisco 4 San Diego 0

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Left-hander Vida Blue became the 85th major-league pitcher to win 200 games and the San Francisco Giants blanked the San Diego Padres 4-0 Sunday for a sweep of their four-game series.

Blue, who went the first five innings yielding five hits. He left the game with a slight hamstring pull and reliever Jeff Robinson held San Diego hitless the rest of the way for his first save.

Blue raised his career record to 209-153, including an 11-1 mark against San Diego.

The Giants won despite getting only three hits off three San Diego pitchers. San Francisco scored four unearned runs in the fourth off starter Dave Dravecky, who gave up three hits, including a two-run homer by Chill Davis.

Houston 6 Cincinnati 4

CINCINNATI (AP) — Phil Garner and Alan Ashby slammed fourth-inning homers to propel Houston to a

A's, M's set record for K's

SEATTLE (AP) — Jose Rijo didn't have his best fastball, but he had a record-setting slider.

Rijo struck out 16 Seattle batters—as the Oakland Athletics and the Mariners combined—for a major-league record 30 strikeouts.

"I don't have my good fastball," said the 20-year-old right-hander. "But I have a very good slider. I had very good control of my fastball and slider."

Rijo shattered the Oakland team record for strikeouts in a nine-inning game. The previous high was 13 by Vida Blue. Oakland reliever Bill Moonenham struck out two, while four Seattle pitchers teamed to fan 12.

Dave Kingman homered twice and drove in five runs.

Rijo said the most important factor in the game was his ability to spot his pitches.

"I was moving the ball in and out and I turned the ball over real well," he said.

When told that he had helped to break the major-league record, Rijo smiled and said he was pleased because, "I'm a strikeout pitcher, that's what I'm known for."

Rijo, 1-0, left the game after giving up a single and walk to start the ninth. He went into the inning with a chance to tie the mark of most strikeouts in a game of 19.

The previous modern record for most strikeouts was 28, set in a Cincinnati-San Diego game on Sept. 15, 1972.

AL: Yankees overhaul Milwaukee in 10th inning

MILWAUKEE (AP) — As the top reliever on the New York Yankees pitching staff, Dave Righetti's primary role is to record saves and not get involved in a decision.

But for the second straight day, Righetti failed to hold the lead Sunday against a young Milwaukee ballclub that refused to quit.

On Saturday, Righetti gave up a two-run homer to Rob Deer to tie the score in the eighth inning and the Yankees eventually lost in the 11th, 4-3. On Sunday, Righetti gave up a pair of two-out singles in the ninth inning that allowed the Brewers to tie the score 4-4 before Yankees got an unearned run in the 10th to win 5-4.

Righetti had no visions of deja-vu after giving up the tying run for the second straight game.

"I never do," he said. "If you give up, you walk home with a loss. It was not in the cards to give up."

Yankees Manager Lou Piniella said Righetti "didn't feel very comfortable" when he was shut down in the 10th when he had 1-0.

"You've got to give the Brewers credit, they keep coming back at you. The Brewers are tough, but we're certainly not struggling," he said.

Said Brewers Manager George Bamberger: "I feel good about the way they played. They gave a super effort. They fought back but came up short. There's just something about this crew that I like."

Mike Easler followed with a grounder that first baseman Robin Yount fielded, but threw past Clear covering the bag for an error. Clear picked up the ball in foul territory but Winfield crossed the plate as Clear threw wildly to the plate.

Righetti, 2-0, who gave up Ernest Riles' tying RBI single with two outs in the ninth, worked the final two innings. The Yankees broke a three-game losing streak.

New York starter Joe Niekro took a two-hitter and a 4-1 lead into the eighth, but left after leadoff singles by Billy Jo Robinson and Riles and one-out, run-scoring singles by Jim Gantner. Reliever Brian Fisher gave up an RBI single to Paul Molitor with two outs in the eighth that made it 4-3.

In the ninth, Righetti struck out Cecil Cooper and Robin Yount before Robinson singled. Pinch-runner Mike Felder stole second and then scored on Riles' single to right.

California 8 Minnesota 5

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Brian Downing's three-run homer with one-out in the ninth inning capped a dramatic rally Sunday as the California Angels beat the Minnesota Twins 8-5.

Tom Brunansky's one-out home run in the ninth inning lifted the Twins into a 5-4 lead. Brunansky, a former Angel, hit his fourth homer of season off reliever Terry Foster.

But California tied the game in the bottom of the inning on an RBI single by Wally Joyner, then won it when Downing sent a Ron Davis pitch into the left field stands for his fourth home run of the season.

Foster, 1-4, picked up the win and Davis, 1-1, was the loser.

The Angels had tied it 4-4 with three runs in the bottom of the eighth. Minnesota starter Bert Blyleven was protecting a 4-1 lead but departed after Joyner's one-out single was followed by Doug DeCinces' second homer.

Davis' first pitch hit Downing. Reggie Jackson's double and an intentional walk of Rob Wilong loaded the bases. Davis struck out Dick Schofield, but while facing pinch-hitter Jerry Narron unleashed a wild pitch that allowed Downing to score.

Boston 6 Chicago 2

scattered five hits in seven innings and earned his first major-league victory in nearly two years Sunday as the Boston Red Sox completed a three-game series sweep with a 6-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Marty Barrett led a 13-hit Boston attack by going 3-for-3, scoring twice and driving in another run. The Red Sox ruffed up Floyd Bannister, 1-2, and three relievers.

Baltimore 6 Texas 1

BALTIMORE (AP) — Eddie Murray continued his weekend assault on Texas pitching with a two-run homer and a single, leading the Baltimore Orioles to a 6-1 victory over the Rangers Sunday.

Storm Davis pitched a four-hitter and extended his career record against Texas to 9-0. Davis, 1-0, struck out five and walked none.

Jim Dwyer also homered for the Orioles as Texas lost in Baltimore for the 21st time in 27 games since the start of the 1981 season.

After going 3-for-32 without a home run or an RBI in his first eight games, Murray had two hits, including a homer, in the second game of a doubleheader in Toronto, on Thursday.

In three weekend games against Texas, Murray was 7-for-12 with seven RBI, two homers, and five runs scored.

Kansas City 6 Toronto 4

TORONTO (AP) — Frank White's three-run homer highlighted a four-run seventh inning Sunday that carried the Kansas City Royals to a 6-4 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

With the score tied 2-2, Jamie Quirk started the Kansas City seventh against reliever Dennis Lamp, 0-1, with an infield single. Quirk took second on a sacrifice by Buddy Balazans and scored on Willie Wilson's one-out single.

Wilson took second on the throw to the plate, and George Brett was intentionally walked. White then connected for his first home run of the season.

Oakland 9 Seattle 3

SEATTLE (AP) — Moose Haas allowed two hits in seven innings and Dwayne Murphy, Jose Canseco and Tony Phillips rapped three hits apiece Sunday, leading the Oakland Athletics to a 9-3 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Haas, acquired by Oakland shortly before the season started, raised his record to 3-0. Haas gave up one run, struck out five and walked two. Reliever Keith Atherton gave up two Seattle runs on three hits in the final two innings.

The Athletics raked Seattle starter Matt Young, 2-1, and three relievers for 15 hits. Murphy drove in three runs, Canseco knuckled in two and Phillips scored three times.

Bruin netters win again

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls High School tennis team continued to cut a swath through Gem State Conference competition on Saturday, defeating Skyline 9-3 in a dual match.

The Bruins have now beaten every GSC opponent they have faced except Pocatello. Twin Falls split 6-6 with defending GSC champ Idaho Falls and with Highland.

Saturday's victory included a sweep on the boys' singles, with victories by Chris Sacco, Clint Carter and Zack Sinclair, as well as two wins each in boys' doubles and mixed doubles.

Dantley out of playoffs

BOUNTIFUL, Utah (AP) — High-scoring Utah Jazz forward Adrian Dantley was omitted Sunday to Lakeview Hospital with back spasms and team officials said he would probably miss the remainder of the squad's NBA playoff series against the Dallas Mavericks.

Dantley missed the first two games in Dallas on Friday and Sunday.

Jazz spokesman Bill Krefeldt said Dantley was taken to the hospital Sunday to undergo treatment, including intermittent traction.

"The feeling is that since he had not responded to further treatments, that total bed rest and traction and moist heat, muscle stimulation and medication would enhance recovery from his back spasms," Krefeldt said.

U.S. icers eliminated

MOSCOW (AP) — Spurred Brent Sutter's two goals, Team Canada downed the United States 4-2 at the World Ice Hockey Championships Sunday, advancing to the four-team playoffs and knocking the Americans out of medal contention.

In a later game Sunday, the Soviet Union defeated Czechoslovakia 4-2. The loss by the Czechs put the Canadians in the playoffs. The Soviet Union, Sweden and Finland had qualified earlier for the playoffs starting Wednesday.

Zoeller captures Heritage

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller went leaping in the air when a 72nd hole birdie found the cup and made him a 1-stroke winner Sunday in the Sea Pines Heritage Classic.

Zoeller, who blew a 2-shot lead with a double bogey on the first hole, capped his comeback with the 12-13 foot birdie putt under the shadow of the red-and-white striped clubhouse.

That got him back to par 71 for the struggling leader, lifted him out of a multiple-man tie for the top and provided him with his second victory of the season.

Zoeller, bad back and all, took a skipping step as the ball near the hole, then went airborne as it dropped in.

"It completed a 72-hole total of 276, 8 under par on the Harbour Town Golf Links and left Australian Greg Norman, Chip Beck and Roger Maltbie waiting for the trophy that suddenly became unnecessary."

Bees waive Mike Norris

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Pitcher Mike Norris has been kicked off the San Jose Bees, which he and some other players with previous drug problems had been hoping to use as a springboard back to the major leagues.

Bees president and manager Harry Steve released Norris after the pitcher showed up late at Municipal Stadium for a California League game Friday night with Palm Springs. Since Norris joined the team on March 7, he missed two practices and a game a week ago.

Norris, 31, had no comment about his dismissal.

"I can't be a baby sitter. People try to help people, but you've got to help yourself when it comes right down to it," said Steve, who also had hired former major leaguers Steve Howe, Ken Itzell and Darryl Scotters.

Garagiola sues Stan Musial

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Hall of Famer Stan Musial denied any wrongdoing Friday in response to a lawsuit filed against him by his former St. Louis Cardinals teammate Joe Garagiola concerning a bowling alley they own jointly.

The Garagiolas own a one-third interest in the south St. Louis bowling alley. They claim Richard Musial and John Garagnani each received payments of $750 a month between January 1982 and November 1985 without their knowledge.

Last year, the boards of directors of Red Bird Bowling Lanes and Red Bird Concessions voted to hire the SM&B Management Co. to manage the bowling alley and concessions for a return of 5 percent of gross sales.

The suit said SM&B is controlled by Richard Musial and John Garagnani and performed no services for the payments.

Minico girls win four

IDAHO FALLS — Minico's girls' won four events, while the Spartans' Jason Duncan took the discus and Gending State's Brian Patterson captured the high jump at the Tiger-Grizzly Invitational track meet here Saturday.

The Minico girls rolled up a victory in the 800-meter relay, setting a meet record of 1 minute, 48.1 seconds in the process. They also tied a meet record of 4:08.5 in winning the 1,600 relay.

Spartan senior Idalia Casiano took the 400 in 1:09.1, while teammate Jana Leavitt won the 200 in 27.51.

Duncan took first place in the discus with a toss of 152 feet, 1 inch, while Patterson won the high jump with a leap of 6-2.

Minico also picked up second places from Orala Casiano in the 800 (2:29.6), Christy Hood in the 1600 (5:58) and Allison Andrew in the high jump (5-2). Spartan senior Scott Halverson finished second in both the high and low hurdles with times of 15.5 and 40.56, respectively.

Head took fourth place in the 3,200 with a time of 12:55.2, while Lisa Senecal was fourth in the 100 in 13.5. The Minico boys' 800 relay team finished fourth in 1:38.6.

The meet involved more than two dozen teams from throughout southern Idaho, Wyoming and Montana.

Soccer clinics scheduled

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Youth Soccer League will conduct clinics for referees Tuesday and Thursday nights.

The sessions are scheduled for the Twin Falls YFCA at 7 p.m., and will last until about 9:30.

Those attending the classes need to obtain some material prior to the sessions. Anyone planning to attend should phone Tim Jacobson today, if possible, Tuesday.

Jacobson can be reached at 733-1491 or 734-5700.

The officials' clinics are open to the public.

Surprising Toronto evens NHL series

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Moments after recording his first NHL playoff shutout, Toronto Maple Leafs goalie Ken Wreggett chose to heap praise on his teammates for his standout performance.

"Everyone was just great out there," Wreggett said following Toronto's 3-0 triumph Sunday night over the St. Louis Blues. "The defensemen were clearing people out in front, so there weren't many second and third shots I had to stop. And the forwards were coming back and breaking out of our zone well."

Wreggett said the thought of a shutout was not on his mind until there were only about five minutes left.

"That's when I started to think it would be nice, but it's the win that's most important and this was the biggest that we've had all year," he said of a victory that squared the Norris Division playoff final at one game each. "Now it's a best-of-five series."

Maple Leafs Coach Dan Maloney agreed, labeling Toronto's victory — engineered by goals from Peter Hnilek, Tom Ferguson and Borje Salming — more important than Wreggett's shutout.

"The fans got it rocking pretty good," Maloney said of the din created by more than 17,000 pro-St. Louis fans. "Now we go back to Toronto, and I know our fans will be up and ready for us."

Blues Coach Jacques Demers said his team's lethargy may have been as responsible for the outcome as Toronto's spirited play.

"They played better than we did tonight. We were flat," Demers said. "It's a minor setback, but the series is far from over."

Edmonton 6 Calgary 5

EDMONTON (AP) — Glenn Anderson scored at 1:04 of overtime to give the Edmonton Oilers a 6-5 decision over the Calgary Flames Sunday night to deadlock their NHL Smythe Division finals at one victory apiece.

Anderson took a short pass from Dave Lumley, cut to the front of the net and pushed a backhand shot into the corner.

Games 3 and 4 of the best-of-seven series will be played in Calgary Tuesday and Thursday nights.

"Welcome to the ice by a noisy standing ovation, the Oilers came out hitting with Edmonton's Mark Messier rammaling Calgary's Paul Reinhart into the end boards in the first 15 seconds.

CSI hits six homers as Eagles whip Snow

By The Times-News

College baseball

EPHRAIM, Utah — The College of Southern Idaho slammed six home runs in the first game of a doubleheader against Snow College en route to an 11-1 victory and a sweep of the Badgers here Saturday.

Later the Eagles beat Snow 5-1 to complete the non-conference twin-killing.

The victories improved the Eagles' season record to 22-8 pending Monday's Northern Division Region 1B opener against Ricks College in Twin Falls.

The six round-trippers were not a school record, according to assistant Coach Jim Dawson. At least two previous CSI teams had more than six homers in a game.

Kevin Loftus hit two of those homers — his seventh and eighth of the season — while Kirk Slater, Shawn Whalen, Greg Adelsbach and Wally Edwards hit one apiece. For the game, CSI had eight extra-base hits.

In the ninthcap, CSI pushed across two runs in the first inning on a walk and a stolen base by Slater, a single by Shawn Whalen, an error and a two-out single by Cory Russell. That was all the offense freshman right-hander Cory Schroeder and sophomore relief specialist Bobby Edwards would need, scattering eight hits between them.

CSI added three more runs in the fourth, two of them scoring on Tom Holinger's single.

On Friday night, the Eagles swept their two-game series from the College of Eastern Utah by beating CEU 11-5.
