Reagan issues a tough warning to terrorists

By W. DALE NELSON The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan warned "would-be" terrorists Tuesday night that history is littered with "the wreckage of regimes who made the mistake of underestimating the will of the American people."

The president's speech was delivered a few hours after the administration disclosed that it had considered, but decided against, expelling Libyans from the United States.

decence," he said. "Those who are tempted to do so should reflect on our national character, on our record of ill-fated history with the wreckage of regimes who made the mistake of underestimating the will of the American people, their love of freedom, and their national valor."

rebels seeking to overthrow the Nicaraguan government, Reagan said. "I hope every member of Congress will reflect on the fact that the Sandinistas have been training, supporting and directing as well as sheltering terrorists, and in this sense they are trying to build a Libya on our doorstep."

In a Voice of America interview, Shultz said some of the decisions taken by Reagan and his summit partners may not be announced although there probably will also be a joint statement at the end of the meeting.

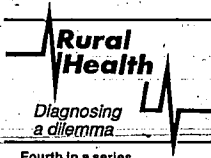

Small rural hospitals battling for survival

By JANE ROBISON Times-News writer

GOODING — "If the economy doesn't pick up, Gooding Hospital is liable to become a first aid station," said pharmacist Duane Johnson one Saturday.

For 23 years, Johnson has stood behind his counter full of relief dispensing advice and prescriptions. The owner of Johnson's Rexall Drug Store has seen his share of good times and bad. But this is the worst, he said.

"It's been serious since the packing-plant closed and the TB (tuberculosis) hospital closed," he said as he looked out the window. "This is just another little farming community. But if it doesn't get better, you're going to see a lot of mom and pop stores with boarded-up fronts."

Fourth in a series

The fight to survive is one many small, rural hospitals are taking up. The reasons for their financial woes are numerous and the solutions few.

Gooding Hospital has 70 employees and a yearly budget of $2.5 million. In 1984, 990 patients were admitted — about a 42 percent occupancy rate, according to the state Department of Health.

"All small hospitals are under the gun," Cutright said. "Not just locally, but statewide and nationally, the survival of hospitals with 100 beds or less operating in rural areas 'are in jeopardy,' said the American Hospital Association in a report issued last year."

Despite the AHA's ominous warnings, Bonnie Haines with the Idaho Hospital Association said predictions that "hospital for sale signs will soon dot the rural landscape may be premature."

While she conceded that many rural hospitals are having financial difficulties, she said none have closed altogether.

"Still, concern over the status of rural hospitals is not unwarranted." In Idaho, the closure of a small, rural hospital could mean that people needing hospital care would have to travel 100 miles over mountainous roads, sometimes impassable due to blizzards," Haines said.

Gooding Hospital is one of eight hospitals in the Magic Valley. Of those eight, five — Blaine County Hospital in Halley, Cassia Memorial in Rupert, Minidoka Hospital in Burley, St. Benedict's in Jerome, and Gooding — are considered rural hospitals.

Gooding Hospital also is one of the biggest three-month periods of deflation since 1954.

Normally, such a record would spur elation among those who fear inflation or terror among those who expect recession. But, because the drop was caused almost entirely by the global collapse in oil prices that has dominated worldwide economic currents since the beginning of the year, the price decrease was in part discounted as expected and probably temporary.

Economists were quick to point out that, without the oil factor — which has led to a price drop for all energy commodities of 16.9 percent since January — the equivalent of a 52.3 percent decline in an annual rate — consumer prices would have increased 0.3 percent in March.

That approximates the 4 percent annual inflation rate the economy has experienced in the past few years, which is believed by economists to be the current "underlying rate" of inflation.

"When we get to the end of the year, prices in a few months, we'll be back to the 4 percent rate," said Donald Rajatacz, director of the economic forecasting project at Georgia State University.

community. More and more of his customers are unable to pay their bills," he said. School enrollment is down. And rumors abound that the 49-bed Gooding County Hospital is about to go under.

"We always have those rumors," said Dr. Duane Cutright, the hospital's administrator. "We fight daily battles of trying to keep operating and cutting costs."

Gooding man believes hospital is necessary

By JANE ROBISON Times-News writer

GOODING — For the first time in his life Clifford Redfern lay flat on his back in Gooding County Memorial Hospital.

With his wife, Evelyn, at his side, Redfern, who underwent routine surgery, gave thumbs up to Gooding Hospital staying open.

"You bet it's necessary," said the Gooding resident of 54 years.

"That's why we're signing the petition to vote for a hospital taxing district, Mrs. Redfern added. "I think he's gotten excellent care here. It would be terrible if this hospital weren't here."

In the waiting room of Gooding Hospital, Mabel Brown sat between her husband and a friend, as her husband waited to see a specialist who drives from Boise once a month to treat patients in the Gooding area.

Mrs. Brown's comments on the necessity of a local hospital mirrored Mrs. Redfern's.

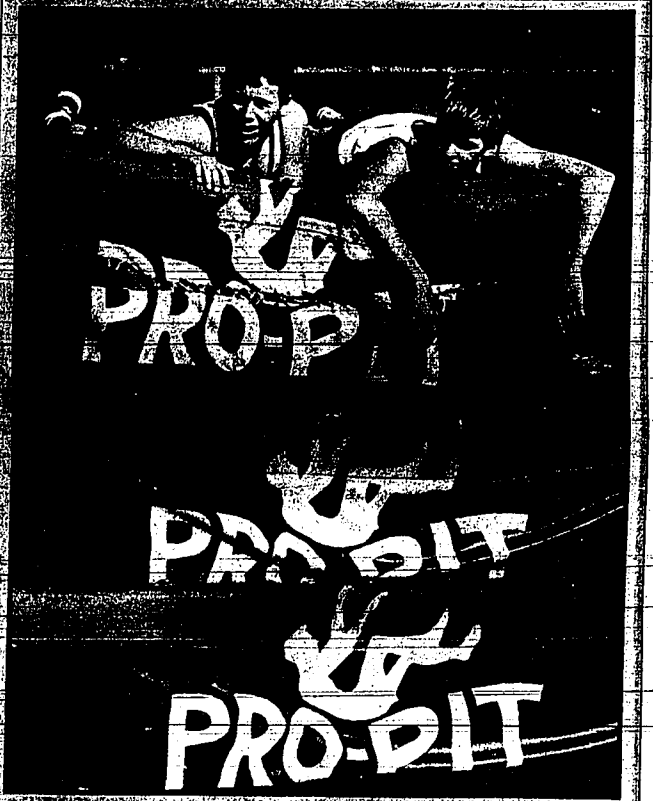

"Three of my six children were born in this hospital. We've lived here 51 years, and I think it's pretty important," Mrs. Brown said. "A couple of times it closed down (in the 1940s), but I think it would be fertile for the community. We'd have to drive to Boise for care."

Small hospitals in remote or rural areas perform a valuable service, residents in towns such as Gooding say.

But the vital signs of small hospitals are waning. And nagging questions are beginning to tug at the heart of rural health care — how necessary are small, rural hospitals and who gets hurt if they close.

Duane Cutright, administrator of Gooding County Memorial Hospital, said if Gooding ever did close, it would be a major burden on senior citizens.

Decline in consumer prices largest for quarter in decades

By OSWALD JOHNSTON Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Consumer prices fell 0.4 percent in March, marking the second decline in as many months and capping the largest three-month price decline in more than 30 years, the Department of Labor reported Tuesday.

At the same time, the Department of Commerce said March orders for manufactured durable goods, an important indicator of future economic expansion, fell a steep 2.5 percent, disappointing economists who had expected stronger growth this quarter.

However, in a positive sign for the economy, a Department of Labor report said real average weekly earnings increased 1.2 percent for the month, the best such increase since February 1984.

If unadjusted for seasonal changes, the consumer price index nationwide fell 0.5 percent in March, a figure that represents the average for cities across the country.

The astonishing free-fall in prices so far this year, putting inflation at a negative 1.9 percent annual rate during the January-March quarter,

TWA recruiters visit Twin Falls

By BOB FREUND Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The headquarters of Trans World Airlines is almost a continent away in New York. The nearest runway used regularly by TWA flights is at Salt Lake City's airport.

Nevertheless, a strike by the airline's flight attendants is attracting TWA recruiters to the Magic Valley and other small communities far off its regular routes.

The airline's largest airline tonight in Twin Falls will offer Magic Valley workers a chance to join the flight attendants. The pros could be stepping into a new career. They mainly will be stepping into the middle of a labor dispute.

On March 7, after 18 months of talks, TWA and the Independent Federation of Flight Attendants broke off negotiations towards a new labor contract. TWA Chairman Carl Icahn, who took over the debt-laden company last year, failed to wring work concessions from the flight attendants, despite earlier successes in winning new wage scales from pilots' and mechanics unions.

"Towards the end of last year, we saw a strike might be looming," says Sally McElwreath, director of corporate communications. TWA geared up its school for flight attendants and, by the time the picket signs appeared, the airline had 1,000 newly trained attendants available.

"We have now out on the (flight) line 2,200 new recruits."

Wind batters Ada, Boise counties

The Associated Press

BOISE — A severe storm ripped through Ada and Boise counties Tuesday evening, spawning high winds and possibly a tornado, leaving 10,000 people without electricity and downing up to 1,500 acres of trees in the Boise National Forest.

Two minor injuries were reported. A mobile home south of Idaho State Penitentiary was lifted into the air and tossed about 60 feet at 6:30 p.m., injuring Michael Yates, 33, and his girlfriend Carol Watrous, 25, who were inside at the time.

"The wind just tore it all to pieces, just like a tornado," F.R. Yates said. "Mike's back looks like he's been through a meat packer."

Michael Yates and Watrous were being treated at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center for cuts and bruises and released, a nursing supervisor said.

National Weather Service spokesman Gerry Burdwell said what is believed to be a tornado was detected on radar at Mountain Home Air Force Base about 6:30 p.m.

A tornado also may have struck the Lowman area about 5:15 p.m. when up to 1,500 acres of trees were blown down, said Burdwell and Boise County Deputy Chuck Richards.

Richards said U.S. Forest Service Ranger Charlie Vaughn estimated Tuesday night that up to 1,500 acres of trees were felled. An aerial assessment will be made today, Richards said.

The NWS staff also plans to inspect the storm on Page A2

Tough

Continued from Page A1 and moves by other European countries to curb trade with Libya and restrict the movements of diplomatic personnel. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said "These are the kinds of steps, this is the kind of cooperation that is essential if we're going to combat terrorism on an international basis."

But Speakes also said, "Quite frankly, though, more needs to be done."

President Reagan's chief spokesman declined to spell out what he meant by that. However, Speakes did say "There are additional steps that can and should be taken in concert with our allies, and we will be working with allies in the coming week, and we will take up these kind of issues at the economic summit in Tokyo from May 4-7."

While saying it was heartened the arrest of 14 Libyans in Britain and the move by a dozen European nations to restrict the size and activities of Libyan missions known as "People's Bureaus," the administration disclosed it had weighed ordering the estimated 2,000 to 3,000 Libyans out of this country.

"We have considered whether to send them home and have decided not to," John Whitehead, deputy secretary of state, said in an appearance before a pair of House Foreign Affairs subcommittees.

But in response to questions, Whitehead also said that FBI surveillance of Libyans in the United States was being stepped-up in the wake of last week's bombing raid on Libya. The rationale for that, he said, was concern over the possibility that some of the Libyans might carry out retaliatory terrorist raids at the behest of Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi.

Seminar

Continued from Page A1 flight attendants," says McElwreath. Another 800 of the 6,000 members of IFAA have signed picket lines, she says. However, to meet peak summer traffic flows, TWA will need another 2,000 attendants.

To the chagrin of the IFAA, the airline has mounted an aggressive — and apparently successful — recruiting campaign nationwide. TWA representatives are moving into some rarely visited areas, looking for fresh faces.

"They (seminar locations) tended not to be metropolitan, because there is a pool of people out there who are seldom touched," says McElwreath. Twin Falls is one of those places. Tonight's TWA session, which is free, is scheduled for 7 p.m. at the Best Western Canyon Springs Inn.

But the job seekers and the TWA recruiters will not be the only people attending. The flight attendants' union plans to make its presence known.

"Basically the union believes that the people who are applying for jobs with TWA need some information," says Linda Lord, a TWA stewardess from Ketchum and a union member.

At some seminars, the union has mounted informational picketing. At some, "We do infiltrate the meeting and ask 'very pointed questions,'" says Bruce Vogel, an IFAA coordinator in the Midwest.

Basic among the questions is whether the new recruits will have a job after any strike settlement. The union says they will be carried on job rolls and accrue seniority, but they may not be flying and getting paid.

"If we go back to work with an agreement that allows him (Leah) to do the expanding he wants... and he needs the people, then they will stay on," says Vogel. "On the other hand, he may not need them, in which case they would be furloughed."

McElwreath says TWA will stand behind its permanent hirings. "They will not lose their jobs; and the subject of further discussions will entail whether the other work force comes back and how they come back," she says.

If they are accepted, the prospective attendants attend 18 days of training, part of it in a safety course approved by the Federal Aviation Administration. The course is shorter than the previous standard, a 25-day course, McElwreath says.

The training costs the new attendant $2,500 with $250 payable immediately and the rest deducted from future paychecks, she says. Advertised pay scale starts at $1,007.50 monthly.

"And after 60 days, the flight attendant starts paying union dues and is represented by the IFAA."

Storm

Continued from Page A1 spect the area Wednesday to determine whether high winds or a tornado downed the trees, Birdwell said. Staff can determine what caused the damage by finding out whether the trees fell in one direction, or in many different directions, he said.

Don Shaw, owner of the South Fork Lodge in Lowman, said half the size of golf balls pelted the area, and trees covered Idaho Highway 21. Roofs were ripped off buildings, he said.

Idaho 21 was still passable, he said.

He said Boise County sheriff's deputies reported that a tornado had ripped through the area, but he didn't actually see a funnel cloud.

Richards said he lost radio contact with other deputies about 6:30 p.m. when electricity was restored there about 9:30 p.m., he said.

Residents of Idaho City and other parts of Boise County were among 10,000 Idaho Power customers without power Tuesday evening, said Idaho Power spokesman Larry Taylor.

Nine power poles were snapped near the Boise Airport in Ada County, where at least 500 people were expected to be without power until Wednesday.

Taylor said crews were trying to restore power to other parts of Ada and Boise counties.

In American Falls, in the biggest turnout in the city's history, voters approved forming a taxing district in a special election on April 10 by a 70 percent margin. Without it, Harms Memorial Hospital faced a loss of $240,000 in federal revenue-sharing funds and possible closure.

But Power County Commissioner Lois Bauer cautioned Gooding commissioners especially against taking similar action too hastily. Because the vote was ratified, the taxing district "becomes effective immediately, meaning the county no longer has responsibility for the hospital."

However, the hospital cannot Harman Holverson, an Emmet family physician and past president of the American Academy of Family Physicians.

Technology, for example, is too expensive for small hospitals to afford, said Holverson, who is a recognized expert on the status of rural health in Idaho.

In Emmett, an orthopedic surgeon likes to work with the latest in equipment called an image intensifier, which aids in hip surgery for elderly patients, said Holverson. But this piece of equipment costs between $50,000 to $100,000.

"We can't justify the cost unless we get the hips to operate, but we can't get the hips unless we have the equipment," said Holverson. "It's a vicious cycle."

Another Catch-22 is the way hospitals are reimbursed for indigents, said Holverson.

Record cold chills wide area

By The Associated Press

Unseasonably cold air surged over most of the eastern half of the nation Tuesday, and snow showers were scattered over the Great Lakes and the central Appalachians.

Only the southern Atlantic Coast states and the New England coast escaped the full effects of the cold weather that rolled out of Canada.

Record low temperatures were tied or broken Tuesday morning at three dozen cities from the Great Lakes to the central Gulf Coast region, and afternoon readings were tied or broken at 100 cities from the upper Ohio Valley and the central Appalachians.

Record lows were broken or tied in Alabama, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, Ohio and Wisconsin.

Freeze or frost warnings were posted across Lower Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, western Pennsylvania, western Maryland, West Virginia, western Virginia, Kentucky, middle and eastern Tennessee, northeastern Mississippi, northern and central Alabama, northeastern Georgia, and interior sections of the Carolinas.

Rain fell over much of the mid-Atlantic Coast states.

Elsewhere, scattered rain showers developed over the Rockies and the eastern Plateau region.

In a 1987 survey of Godding's patients—were Medicare patients, people 65 years of age and older. Cutright said generally, the hospital has between 40 to 50 percent of Medicare patients.

Closing small hospitals in isolated or remote areas would leave local residents, especially the elderly, in the lurch, Cutright said. It would increase their expenses in traveling to larger cities for care.

Yet keeping small hospitals open also is difficult when many residents routinely drive to regional medical centers in Twin Falls, Pocatello or Boise, for care.

While Mrs. Brown expressed support for Gooding, she also admitted that when she needed major back surgery last year, it was recommended she go to Boise. Gooding did not have the specialist, she said.

Fifteen miles east of Gooding, Gib Pierson owns and manages Grosse's Retail Drug Store in Shoshone. Transportation has not been as changed considerably in the 20-plus years that he opened his store.

"People don't mind driving to Twin Falls and paying $10 in gas to save 50 cents," Pierson said. While the roads are a "bearcat in the winter," he still sees a significant number of people leaving Shoshone for health care in Twin or Boise.

"People are coming with their feet," said Dick Schultz, a state health planner with the Department of Health. "They're going to regional medical centers because their small hospitals don't have what they need."

Currently, Idaho Health Systems Agency, a private, nonprofit planning group, is working on a report to evaluate the effectiveness of rural hospitals in the state and the alternatives if they are forced to close.

While the report is still in the planning stages, HISA stresses that community residents must eventually decide whether they want to support a hospital, said Mary Ann Sandtner, executive director of HISA.

Schultz echoed that philosophy. "Each community is going to have to make a commitment to support the hospital. Otherwise, it's going to fold," he said.

Added Schultz, "I don't care if they do close, as long as something is provided to stabilize an acutely ill individual. As rural hospitals think they're headed toward regionalization of medical care."

Clarification

TWIN FALLS — In a story in the Times-News Tuesday, Idaho Senate member Bill Sandt was quoted saying he would like to see sales tax exemptions removed to ensure more money is taken in by sales taxation.

Sandt told the Times-News on Tuesday that he wants all sales tax exemptions removed and said what he meant was that he will study sales tax exemptions to see if some can be eliminated.

Correction

In an article in Monday's Times-News on rural health, it was incorrectly reported that Dr. Keith Davis was recruited by Gooding County Memorial Hospital.

Davis, a family physician in Shoshone, was recruited by St. Benedict's Family Medical Center in Jerome.

The Times-News regrets the error.

Board, teachers far apart

POCATELLO (AP) — The Pocatello School District and teachers are trying to negotiate a new contract here. But after a marathon bargaining session Monday, both sides say they're millions of dollars apart.

Jack Thompson, chief negotiator for the board, said the board is offering $365,000 to the teachers for an increase that may include a 1 percent hike for all teachers and an increment raise for teachers not at the top of the salary schedule.

The distribution of that money would depend on how the salary schedule is structured, the board's negotiator said.

Relicensing bills in works

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both House and Senate are working on versions of legislation on the relicensing of hydroelectric generating projects — a subject of much interest to Idaho Power Co., which has five facilities up for relicensing in the next 15 years.

The House on Monday passed legislation removing a municipal preference from relicensing laws.

Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, called it a "fairness and consumer protection issue. Our goal should be to ensure that consumers have access to adequate supplies of electricity at fair rates," he said.

The 1920 Federal Power Act grants a municipal preference for new hydroelectric facilities, but is unclear whether that preference should continue during relicensing.

The House legislation eliminates the municipal preference during relicensing. Stallings said it will require that a license be awarded competitively to the party whose plan best serves the public interest.

Man, wife file innocent pleas

BOISE (AP) — A Garden City man and wife have pleaded innocent to federal charges of income tax evasion, and trial has been scheduled for June 4 here before U.S. District Judge Marion Callister.

Floyd L. Hart and Phyllis D. Hart are charged by the U.S. Justice Department with filing tax returns for 1979, 1980 and 1981 that understated their actual income and tax liability.

For the three years, the couple faces taxes of more than $11,000. The maximum penalty for each of the three criminal counts against the Haris is a fine of $100,000 and five years in prison.

ISU school put on probation

POCATELLO (AP) — The American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business has placed Idaho State University's College of Business on probation because of inadequate research activities, curriculum offerings and support staff.

ISU President Richard Bowen said Tuesday the association agreed not to completely lift accreditation of the university's graduate and undergraduate programs because it was satisfied with proposals to correct the deficiencies.

Dairymen eligible for training

BOISE (AP) — Northern Idaho silver miners laid off because of production cuts will be eligible for federal job retaining programs, the governor's office says.

Milk producers taking part in the dairy herd buyout program of the U.S. Department of Agriculture also will be eligible. Gov. John Evans said Tuesday some 315 farmers who participated in the buyout program will become eligible immediately for federal retraining and job location help.

Morgan looks ahead to flight

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — A Fresno native who has been designated NASA's next teacher in space said Tuesday that she hopes she will be aboard a space shuttle flight in 18 months to two years.

Barbara Morgan, a 24-year-old elementary school teacher from McCall, Idaho, expects the space shuttle to be grounded for another year to 18 months because of the Challenger explosion that killed seven astronauts.

As NASA's teacher in training, Mrs. Morgan said her primary goals are to raise the prestige of teaching, enhance science and mathematics teaching and raise public awareness of the space program.

The astronaut training she resumes in September is "grueling, mentally and physically exhausting but rewarding, just like teaching," she said. "We're still teaching. It's just that our classroom has enlarged."

Cause of dorm death unknown

POCATELLO (AP) — Authorities have not yet determined what caused the death of an Idaho State University student found dead in his dormitory room, but foul play has been ruled out, police said.

Follow-up students discovered the body of Joseph Thomas Knodig, 37, of Boise, on the bed in his room at the university's Garrison Hall on Monday.

A coroner's report indicated the man had been dead about one week, said Capt. Lynn Harris, Pocatello chief of detectives.

Ex-bookkeeper pleads guilty

BOISE (AP) — A former bookkeeper for Albertson's Inc. pleaded guilty Monday to 26 counts of grand theft by unauthorized control for embezzling nearly $70,000.

Fourth District Judge Gerald Schroeder accepted the pleas of Patricia Schieleftein, 30, and set sentencing for May 12, Ada County Deputy Prosecutor Monte Siles said.

Schieleftein, of Boise, faces a maximum penalty of 14 years in prison and a $5,000 fine on each count — a potential sentence of 364 years in prison and $130,000 in fines. There was no plea bargain, Siles said.

Deputy faces theft charges

BLACKFOOT (AP) — A former Blaine County sheriff's deputy, honored less than four months ago for his work against drug abuse, was scheduled to be arraigned today on charges of stealing cocaine seized during drug investigations.

Carl Sells, who resigned as chief deputy last Friday as state officials began investigating the allegations, was free on his own recognizance pending his appearance in Magistrate Court in Blackfoot.

It was charged with grand theft of cocaine on Monday after a weekend investigation by the Department of Law Enforcement found two ounces of the drug, once counted for in the county's evidence inventory, Sheriff Roy Nelson said.

Estimated at $4,000 in value, part of the cocaine was missing from the county's evidence vault and part was missing from a recent drug arrest, Nelson said.

Works removal cause artist to suffer

BOISE (AP) — Boise State University officials have removed two drawings from a public art exhibit that depicts a Boise woman's perspective of child abuse — a move the artist laments to the "abuse she endured."

"He's telling me that instead of saying that this is censorship, that I should be grateful for a place to show my work," artist Paris Almond said. "This is what I have been told all my life as a victim, to be a good little girl, to not make waves, to submit, to acquiesce and be grateful."

The Invasion, a series of photographs, drawings and paintings by Ms. Almond, a victim of child abuse and later battery, focuses on her victimization and recovery, she said.

The drawings removed, The Green Lady and Jeremiah 29:11, are nudes that show no genitalia.

David Taylor, BSU vice president of student affairs, said it was his decision to take the works from the exhibit because they were "not appropriate" for a public hallway.

Editorial — A4

The exhibit formally opened Sunday on the second floor of the Student Union Building, after being put up Saturday.

"Because it is a public hallway and not an art gallery in the absolute sense of the word," the works were removed, Taylor said.

He said a variety of people pass through the hallway on their way to offices, the Ada Lounge and Ballroom, and they would have no choice but to pass by Almond's works.

"It's different from the art gallery, where one would go through by choice," Taylor said.

Almond said Monday that Taylor gave her the impression that he wanted to protect "regular people in society" from what a victim of abuse endures.

Almond said she felt Taylor underestimated the show's audience. In a guest book at the show's reception Sunday night, Almond said 83 people signed their names and gave positive comments about her work. The display, in conjunction with Victims' Rights Week this week, is to appear through May 5.

A candlelight vigil for crime victims was held on the steps of the Statehouse Monday.

"Many victims came up to me Sunday (at a reception of her show) to tell me those were their favorite works," Almond said.

Taylor said a meeting would be held today to review Ms. Almond's contract and discuss the agreement and the removal of the works with the staff members of the Student Union.

"I'm not sure what went into their reasoning," Taylor said of the staff members who organized Almond's exhibit.

World without abuse called possible

BOISE (AP) — Delegates to a conference on child abuse here have been urged to imagine a world in which there is no child abuse, no sexual crimes against children and no exploitation of children.

That world is possible, says David Cunningham, a director for the National Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse.

And with such a world, there would be time for parents and others to spend more time nurturing and caring for children, Cunningham said there would be fewer people in prison because they were abused as children, and because they abused their own children.

Cunningham was keynote speaker Tuesday at a Boise State University conference, "Reaching for the Rainbow — Idaho's Commitment to End Child Abuse."

Cunningham urged delegates to push for a "breakthrough" in awareness of child abuse problems, and how to end it.

The first step, he said, in a "prevention agenda" is a campaign to raise public awareness.

"Everyone needs to know that child abuse is a problem, it is a problem that must not be happening, and it can be stopped," Cunningham said.

A major tool is public service announcements, aimed at child abusers.

Cunningham said one highly effective PSA, developed by the National Ad Council, depicts a harried mother, facing a variety of problems and confronted with a screaming child.

Hundreds of interviews indicate parents remembered a key phrase from the announcement, "Take hold of yourself before you take hold of a child."

The goal of the conference is for business, government and religious organizations to establish ways to help eliminate child abuse, said Linda Hurlbut of the Junior League of Idaho, a sponsor of the program along with the Idaho Network for Children.

She said conference sponsors believe community awareness of child abuse problems, and involvement in defining local solutions, are essential in preventing abuse.

Workshops were scheduled on how legislation can deter child abuse, ways to alter public policy, current and future programs in businesses and churches dealing with child abuse, and the media's portrayal of child abuse and impact on its prevention.

Tribes lodge claim to use more water

FORT HALL (AP) — The Shoshone-Bannock tribes want more water. The land is scattered than twice as much Snake River irrigation water as they now use, but they say half the water eventually would drain back into the underground Snake River Aquifer.

Teams of federal, state and Indian negotiators are working on water right claims at a conference here. Southern Idaho irrigators also are represented.

A technical committee of parties to negotiations on the tribes' claim to present and future uses of Snake River aquifer water heard a detailed explanation of how the tribes arrived at their claim.

Under the Fort Bridger Treaty of the 1860s, creating the Fort Hall Indian Reservation, Indian leaders are claiming Snake River water rights. The tribes seek to establish their right to 493,000 acre-feet of water per year in addition to the 369,000 now being used.

The future claim is based on a study done by Stetson Engineers of San Francisco, according to Tribal Attorney Howard Funke. The reservation's 540,000 acres was divided into four climate zones based on elevation.

The lowest of these zones is the prime agricultural land already under cultivation, from the Cassia to the Teton. Potatoes, alfalfa and small grains are now being grown on 84,000 acres in that area.

As a future claim on 413,000 acre feet of water, the state found 14,800 additional acres could be irrigated with known quantities of surface water. The land is scattered from the south of Arbon Valley into the present agricultural area. The South Bannock Creek area holds another 30,000 acres of potential farmland which would be irrigated from ground water of unknown quantities.

Funke said domestic wells in the Bannock Creek area are pumping water from less than 150 feet. Projections are that 81,000 acre-feet of groundwater could irrigate the 30,000 acres of arable land there, an average of 2.7 acre-feet of water per acre.

Funke said the tribes' claim to a total of 863,000 acre-feet of water per year is based almost exclusively on agricultural use, since 99 percent of the reservation's water is used for farming.

He also noted that the Snake River Aquifer is stable, as shown by several hundred testing sites and historical data. He also said the analysis showed that 50 percent of water used in irrigation would return to the aquifer. If the entire 863,000 acre-feet of water claimed were actually used, at least 400,000 acre-feet would recharge the underground aquifer each year, Funke said.

The current negotiating process was mandated by the Idaho legislature as a way to avoid a lengthy and costly court battle. It is conducted under a memorandum of understanding between the tribes and the governor's office.

BSU should return works to exhibit

There may be some subtle distinction, but we fail to see what the difference is between an art display in a public hallway and one in an art gallery.

Nonetheless, that is the distinction being cited by Boise State University vice president David Taylor as his reason for removing two drawings on child abuse from an exhibit on that subject by Boise artist Paris Almond.

What's at stake here, in our view, are several important principles.

One is that once a contract is made to display an artist's work (which BSU apparently agreed to in conjunction with Victims-Rights Week), the school should not step in and censor the exhibit.

Another is the child abuse issue itself. Yes, it is an emotional, powerful subject, the understanding of which is growing. Almond, a victim of child abuse, apparently approaches the topic with a good deal of conviction.

Is BSU saying, by removing two of the works, that her interpretation is too strong for those of us who have not experienced this victimization?

A university, in our view, ought to be a special environment for academic expression. It should provide a wide forum in which scholars can express themselves, without hindrance.

In short, a university ought to encourage, not discourage, the expression of ideas. It has no higher function.

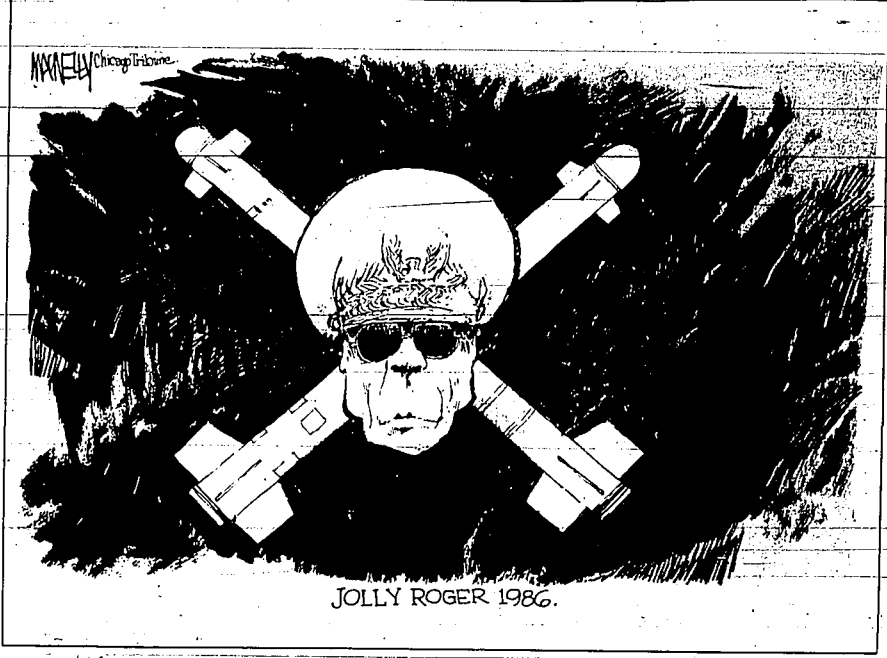

These principles are particularly true, we think, with respect to the arts. Like many other small-population states, Idaho does precious little to support the arts as it is. A state university environment should be one in which the arts are nurtured, not stifled.

Assuming the drawings in question are not pornographic or obscene and thus in violation of the law, what gives a university official the right to make the determination about what people should see and not see?

The argument that the display area is a "public hallway" and not an "art gallery" is a specious one. Both are in the university environment and in neither place does the art "intrude" on the privacy of unwilling viewers.

A person is not forced to look at a work of art; it is a voluntary act. People who are walking past the exhibit can determine for themselves how well Almond's drawings reflect the subject of child abuse.

But how can people make that judgment if BSU makes a decision to exclude some of the art? In our view, Almond's drawings should not have been taken down from the exhibit. They should be returned.

For some, the jitters linger on and on BOSTON — How quickly the war jitters subside. The Dow Jones goes up. The dog needs to be taken to the vet. There is laundry to be done. We swallow a couple of Manol tablets and hope that the worst of it will be a thousand canceled trips abroad.

But my own jitters have a much longer life span. I am not able to see the bombing of Tripoli as a one-night stand, a clean "surgical strike" against terrorism.

The New York Post headline keeps running through my head: "Take That, Qaddafi!" So do the street interviews with Americans who applaud "taking out" the "mad dog." I keep hearing the President — "If necessary we shall do it again" — and reading the polls that show Americans overwhelmingly favor this action even if it will increase terrorism, even if it will increase the risks of war.

There is more to all this than rage at Qaddafi, the terrorist it is safest to hate. There is also in our reaction a test for action, for hitting back, a palpable pleasure in shaking off the usual restraints, a sense of physical release in landing a good hard punch to the solar plexus, even if this punch kills another baby. And if our allies desert us, well, there is even something pleasurable about that, something American about hitching up our own pants and going it alone. Nobody can, tell us what to do.

I read that message and not just now, when it runs under the bombing of Tripoli, for which there was at least provocation and pretext. It is there, more dangerously, underlying the way this government has dealt, with Soviet proposals for arms control and with Central America.

The bombs of April may have dulled the echo of the "Mighty Oak," the whimsical name for the recent nuclear test. But this was the bomb that blew up the best chance we had in years for arms control.

The Soviet Union opened a window to us, declaring a moratorium on nuclear testing. They held it open for seven months and we slammed it shut. We decided to go it alone — choosing "Star Wars," the science-fiction notion of an impenetrable space shield, over a mutual test ban.

Now, imagining that we have the Soviets "on the run," the administration is considering breaking the terms of the last arms-control agreement, SALT II. How much more exciting it is to be free at last of restraints, to go for it — victory in the arms race — rather than negotiating an end to it.

What of Nicaragua, to which we export terror? On the silver anniversary of the Bay of Pigs, the White House wants to strut American stuff again, the stuff of power. It is as if the slow-boiling desire to act has finally bubbled up against the lid of self-restraint, even reason.

I know it is risky to link these three danger zones into one text, even loosely. There is much more popular support for our attack on Libya than there is for nuclear testing or for contra funding. The debate about Tripoli is between people who are alerted that we finally did something and people who wonder what good this something did. It is a debate about inaction and wrong action. Most Americans feel at least an edge of ambivalence.

But underneath these separate actions in the world runs one fixed idea about America's role and rights in the world: the President's picture of a weak post-Vietnam America. It is an image of an America reluctant to fight. An America restrained by world opinion, immobilized by the fear of another escalating war, cautious of its allies and enemies. A helpless giant, paralyzed, afraid of its own nuclear shadow.

The White House has purposely countered this "paralysis" with a swagger. Like some President Reagan, they issue approval for hostile feelings, offer the quickie catharsis, live in the now and worry about the consequences later. I'm okay, you're okay, and it's okay to carry a big stick — especially against a small country.

I am sure the President and his men see in this muscular policy the return of the mythical man, the American striding alone to High Noon in every remote spot. But I keep seeing Slim Pickens in "Dr. Strangelove" gleefully riding the bomb to Domsday. From the halls of Managua to the shores of Tripoli, it's worth a lingering case of the jitters.

Glad to escape the smog

I have read over and over and over about how our schools are underfunded and our school teachers underpaid. According to some aspiring politicians, school administrators and other experts in the field, most of the good, excellent and exceptional teachers have fled the state in near poverty because of the low pay scales in Idaho.

Now, if the above is true, what have we left in the way of teachers? I have several friends and a few relatives teaching school in Idaho. It causes me considerable pain, distress, and mental anguish to have these people branded, by the process of elimination, as something less than good, excellent or exceptional.

When Idaho increases its educational funding to be up to or above the national average (Heaven knows we don't want to be below the national average), those good, excellent and exceptional teachers who have fled the state will come flocking back. They will be glad to escape the smog of Los Angeles, the crime of Las Vegas or the high costs of Houston.

What happens then to my friends and relatives who have been struggling to survive in Idaho, some who even took summer jobs? I suppose the IEA will have to find them a job in Arkansas, New Jersey or wherever educational funding is below the national average.

Private schools became a popular way to avoid integration in the South. As parents withdrew their children from the public school sector, they also withdrew their ideas, support and willingness to pay taxes for public education.

Public schools suffered, and still more need a need to place their children in private schools. Some mothers I know worked solely for the purpose of earning tuition for their children's schools. The more affluent had the best schools, best teachers, best extracurricular activities and opportunities because they had the money to pay for it.

Isn't this a return to a society of classes — a way to keep everyone in their place? Let's not make this terrible mistake. Let's keep America a land of opportunity for all.

Since I have my typewriter out and am thinking about education, I'd like to say something to the teachers of the Magic Valley. Thank you! There are lots of parents out here who appreciate your hard work and commitment. You are a catalyst in the growth of the Magic Valley's most precious natural resource — our children.

Appreciation isn't enough though, and so I am voting for the override levy. It is a small price to pay for the development of so important a resource. I hope all will consider this, even if you have no children at home. We must realize that the education of our future leaders affects us all.

Wall built to keep ideas out

A few things for Mr. Jones to consider (castigation of Mr. Hoag, Times-News April 18). For your information, the Berlin Wall was built by the Soviet people to keep our capitalist in-fuence out, dope pushers, pimps, homos, speculators, liars and cheats to name a few. I would like to hear from some of you real vets that helped guard the freaks during WWII and remember the little saying: "I walked the plank from bank to bank, saluting each officer according to rank, obeying the orders that I receive, from the — that I relieve."

Our generation helped make this country what it is today Mr. Jones, we like it here, that's why we are here. It's phonies like Reagan, Weinberger, James Watt, Symms and many others like them that give it a bad image. Our stockades were full of these weirdos, yet today, low-and-behold, they are running the country.

Another misconception you and others have is that Siberia is such a bad place. How can it be so bad when it is on the same longitude and latitude as Alaska and Alaska is so beautiful? Wake up Mr. Jones, read between the lines and use a little common sense.

Also, we know very well that we can say God Bless America without going to prison. But let us hear you say "I'm not going to pay my taxes" and stay out. Again, I say to you and others like you, wake up. And wise up.

Surely Mr. Bengoechea doesn't think the section of the Idaho Code that speaks of those duties applies to city elections? The county has no responsibility for city elections. That's why city and county election laws are in two separate sections of the Code. If Mr. Bengoechea's reasoning is carried into other areas, Dick Pence would have duties as City Budget Officer, because the Code gives him the title of Chief Budget Officer of the county. Let's keep our government entities, and the duties their officials perform, separate, as the state constitution and the Idaho Code intend.

If the Code has not yet been amended to cover those gray areas that are created when there is joint city-county registration, then it should be.

If the City of Twin Falls had no contract with Dick Pence for the services he performed, then why did it not arrange to do that work with its own city employees and purchase its own voting equipment? The fact that it did not would seem to indicate, if not a contract, at least the presence of a gentleman's agreement or a memo of understanding.

The City seems to want a free lunch in this matter, and there is no such thing. Perhaps the City would like to go back to doing its own registration lists, too? And, with the poor voter turnout we usually have at city elections, the city could go back to paper ballots and all the extra hassle that involves, not to mention the additional expense.

Twin Falls is fortunate to have a county clerk who is not only dedicated to performing his own duties, but is willing to use his time and expertise to help a city that has no one on its staff who is adequately trained to pay my taxes.

Pay up, Twin Falls. It's a just and proper debt you owe.

Commission. The hearing concerns the electric utility's proposed 27.4 percent rate increase, which translates into $84.2 million.

Part of Idaho Power's rate request is to pay for the Valmy II coal-fired plant located in Nevada of which Idaho has myself and owner. The electricity produced by that plant for Idaho and will be sold to California at below cost rates. We will be asked to subsidize the California users.

I oppose the rate increase for several reasons. An increase of 27.4 percent will have a very adverse effect on those farmers who rely on pumping water for irrigation and on those on a fixed income who are just making ends meet as it is. I also object to the idea of subsidizing the consumptive habits of Californians or anyone else with either our money or our resources.

So I oppose this rate request by Idaho Power, but beyond that I am a bit angry that we've come to this point. It is my belief that if we had enacted an energy plan or policy for the state of Idaho as myself and many conservationists have been calling for since the early 70's we wouldn't be sitting here with Idaho Power asking for a big rate increase, rich and greedy speculators grabbing up every water right in the state for small hydro projects, and available hydro sites on existing dams going to produce energy for cities outside the state.

I have no sympathy for Idaho Power because over the years they've fought against an energy plan that included solid conservation, environmental and economic balance. Others responsible for our current situation have been the Republican dominated Idaho legislature, many of whom came from the Magic Valley, and finally the citizens and ratepayers who follow blindly and remain uninformed in the issues.

If the people want some say in their lives, they've got to stand up and say something. Speak out at the PUC hearings in Twin Falls next week. Put the button on all those no-issue Republicans and Democrats who are running to represent and lead you in this state. If you don't fight for what you want you'll get what you deserve.

Public schools to suffer

One of the truly inspired ideas that has developed from our Founding Fathers is that the best education be available to all people, regardless of race, religion or social position.

People such as Rep. J. F. Chadbond and others who wish to grant tax credits for private school tuition would destroy this precious right of all Americans. Mr. Chadbond has simply not checked the facts if he thinks private schools promote competition and in the southern U.S. where private schools proliferate, I have seen first hand what happens.

Titan loss affects security

WASHINGTON (AP) — The loss of an Air Force Titan 34D rocket last Friday will have a serious impact on national security and cause at least a six-month delay in efforts to launch heavy satellites into space, the Pentagon's chief spokesman said Tuesday.

Without the space shuttle or the Titan, the United States has no system capable of launching large photo reconnaissance and spy satellites into orbit, said Robert Sims.

"To say it's had a serious impact on national security, I'm willing to do," Sims said. "What the full impact will be remains to be seen."

He said the cause of the explosion was not yet known.

"We haven't ruled anything in or out," Sims said, adding that it would take at least six months to complete the investigation.

Way to ease impasse offered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget director James C. Miller III suggested Tuesday that the budget impasse between President Reagan and Congress could be eased by "correcting the books" to show that no tax increase is necessary to meet a required $144 billion deficit target.

"For those who say that everything is brought to a screeching halt because there's got to be a tax increase, and the president won't allow a tax increase, they're wrong," Miller told reporters invited to his office.

At the same time, Miller said Reagan flatly rejects a budget blueprint pending in the Republican-led Senate that would sharply pare the president's military spending request and ignore his opposition to a tax increase.

Capone vault drew viewers

CHICAGO (AP) — The opening of a sealed chamber linked to gangster "Scarface" Al Capone yielded no long-lost loot, but a producer of the live television documentary said Tuesday the show struck gold in the ratings.

"It's the highest rating ever in independent television," said Jack Devlin, director of creative services for Tribune Entertainment Co., which co-produced the two-hour syndicated show with the Los Angeles-based Westgate Group.

"This show did very, very well," said Terri Luke, promotion manager for suburban Northbrook-based A.C. Nielsen Co.

Monday's program recorded a 57.3 rating and a 73 share in Chicago, said Devlin and Ms. Luke.

In New York, the vault opening won a 33.2 rating and a 45 share, and in Los Angeles, a 45.6 rating and a 61 share, Ms. Luke said.

Florida executes veteran

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — A Vietnam veteran who said he was suffering from war-triggered stress when he stabbed two people to death was executed Tuesday in Florida's electric chair.

David Livingston, Funchess, 39, was strapped into the oaken chair 1 1/2 hours after the U.S. Supreme Court voted 7-2 against extending a five-hour stay it had issued earlier in the day. He was pronounced dead at 3:11 p.m. MST.

The execution was originally set for 7 a.m., but was stayed for five hours by a federal appellate court in Atlanta, before attorneys for Funchess gained the second temporary stay in Washington.

Funchess was the 50th person executed in the United States since the nation's high court reinstated the death penalty in 1976, and the third in eight days.

Disaster area tag sought

SWEETWATER, Texas (AP) — Gov. Mark White requested Tuesday that Nolan County be declared a major disaster area because of the tornado that hit Sweetwater, killing an elderly man and injuring as many as 100 people.

The request will be sent to President Reagan through the Federal Emergency Management Agency, White said in Austin.

White, who toured the area Sunday, said the latest estimates show 500 homes, 40 mobile homes and more than 50 businesses were damaged or destroyed.

Sanctuary trial continues

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Jurors deliberated for a third day Tuesday in the alien-smuggling conspiracy trial of 11 sanctuary activists, a day after the judge replaced the panel's bailiff for socializing with government agents.

Two priests, a minister, a nun and seven church lay workers are charged with — conspiracy to — smuggle Salvadorans and Guatemalans into the United States.

U.S. Judge Earl H. Carroll decided not to hold a special hearing into the propriety of the actions of the bailiff and government agents.

Aeroflot service to resume

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government cleared the way Tuesday for Aeroflot to resume service into the United States, ending a four-year ban on regular flights into the United States by the Soviet airline.

Aeroflot could begin serving New York and Washington, with intermediate stops in Europe or Canada, effective immediately, the Transportation Department said in a statement.

On Jan. 5, 1982, the U.S. government withdrew the Soviet airline's operating privileges in the United States after Soviet forces invaded Afghanistan.

Democrats squelch response to study

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House Judiciary subcommittee session erupted in controversy Tuesday when a majority of Democrats refused to let the staff director of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights respond to a report accusing the agency of mismanagement.

In a meeting that became more contentious the longer it continued, staff director J. Al Latham Jr. was only permitted to submit a written statement for the record.

Latham had been designated by Commission Chairman Clarence M. Pendleton Jr. to respond to the General Accounting Office study.

Rep. F. James Sensenbrenner Jr., of Wisconsin, ranking Republican on the subcommittee, called the session "patently unfair" because Chairman Don Edwards, D-Calif., refused to let Latham testify.

Edwards said he didn't want an "undertaking" speaking for the commissioners.

And, as often happens at the commission's own meetings, Pendleton and Vice Chairman Morris B. Abram squabbled with commission member Mary Frances Berry over civil rights policies and the report. All three were present.

The hearing was called to hear commissioners' response to last month's report by Congress' investigative arm, in which the GAO said the agency mishandled personnel and finances.

Abram said the report stemmed from a desire to discredit the agency and its anti-inflation policies, unpopular with some members of Congress.

He labeled the GAO study an "inquisition" undertaken "because our ideas are unacceptable" — a reference to the commission's majority stand against race-and-sex-based hiring and promotion quotas.

Pendleton called the GAO report "unfair, inaccurate and incomplete" because the GAO was ordered by Edwards and three other requesting congressmen not to permit a commission response in the report.

Latham's statement, as submitted for the record, included these comments:

"The commission, which was reconstituted in January 1984 with a conservative majority, has relied to a much lesser extent on temporary, consultant and political appointments than did the previous commission. The audit said the number of such appointees jumped from 33 in fiscal 1983 to 197 in fiscal 1985.

Commissioners are exempt from the federal law governing acceptance by government officials of travel expenses from outside sources. The GAO said some payments received by commissioners from such sources were improper.

The commission has fully accounted for $421,000 it was permitted to shift from other budget activities in connection with a housing discrimination hearing in 1985. The GAO said it could not determine where all the money went.

Edwards, in refusing to let Latham read his statement, said "If we invite people responsible for running agencies and the chairman insists on sending employees, we wouldn't have much oversight."

But Pendleton insisted, "I am not the day-to-day manager of the agency. I am not responsible for its work."

After Berry read a statement that agreed with specific points of the audit, Sensenbrenner said it was "patently unfair that Commissioner Berry — rebuts testimony — that — Mr. Latham never had a chance to give.

President seeks end to oil tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan urged Tuesday that Congress repeal the windfall profits tax on America's oil industry, which has been shaken by volatile prices and a worldwide production glut.

Reagan, in meetings with oil state congressmen and governors, also underscored his support for deregulation of natural gas, and promised he would review measures designed to help marginal production wells, also known as stripper wells, which produce 10 barrels a day or less.

"While the president remains concerned about our energy security, he reaffirmed his belief that lower energy prices are of great overall benefit to the American economy," presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said.

Repeal of the windfall profits tax would have "little practical impact, either on the Treasury or on the industry, since the tax is producing little or no revenue now."

However, the move would have political implications in energy-producing states, particularly Texas, a major battleground in the presidential race and a producer of about one-third of the nation's domestic oil supply.

Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., said the tax — which would kick in again if oil prices increase — "unintentionally discourages people from taking risks that go with exploration for oil and gas."

"Now, while the price is down (it's) a good opportunity for us to clear away some of the underbrush that would otherwise serve as a disincentive to the kind of investment we're going to have to have ...," Cheney added.

Rep. Bill Archer, R-Texas, said the tax, while producing no revenue, "places a very large administrative burden on the industry, a cost which could be used to develop and find more energy."

As a candidate in 1980, Reagan had opposed the windfall profits tax, but as president he had not worked for its repeal.

Tomahawk warhead explosion destroys target plane

Court draws rules for police seizures

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police do not need to provide special proof before winning court permission to seize allegedly obscene materials, the Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

By a 6-3 vote, the court said the same standards apply when police seek court warrants to seize allegedly obscene films or books as when police seek to seize illegal drugs or weapons.

In other action, the court:

- Ruled that an Alabama Supreme Court judge, Eric Embry, should have disqualified himself from reviewing a $5 million award against an insurance company because he had a personal stake in penalizing the company. Embry retired from the state's highest court in September, citing health reasons.
- Made it more difficult for professional groups to avoid paying federal taxes on profits they earn by selling advertisements in their journals. The court said the American College of Physicians, which is generally tax-exempt, must pay taxes on profits earned from ads in its Annals of Internal Medicine, a monthly medical journal.

- Ruled in a case from Washington state that low-income parents are not excused from a law providing that parent tax returns can be turned to help meet court-ordered child support payments.
- Heard arguments in a Florida case in which the justices are expected to rule by July whether the Constitution prohibits executions of condemned murderers who lose their sanity after trial. Also at issue is the validity of Florida's procedures for judging the mental competency of its death row inmates.
- The court's ruling in the obscenity case means videocassettes seized from a store in DePew, N.Y., in 1983 may be used as evidence in an obscenity prosecution.
- A sheriff's deputy took the sexually explicit films from Network Video, a store owned by P.J. Video Inc. The store owners were charged with violating the state's obscenity law but the New York Court of Appeals threw out the prosecution.

The state court said affidavits used to obtain a court warrant authorizing the seizure of the cassettes described numerous sex acts in the films but did not establish "probable cause" to believe the films were obscene.

Waiting for the high court Tuesday, Justice William H. Rehnquist said the state court, without saying so specifically, required police officers to meet some higher standard of proving probable cause in cases of alleged obscenity.

"We have never held or said that such a higher standard is required by the First Amendment," Rehnquist said.

The Constitution's First Amendment guarantees freedom of speech and freedom of expression, but obscene materials are not constitutionally protected.

Obscenity is a legal term and cannot be applied to all sexually explicit material. The Supreme Court since 1973 has defined obscenity as a work that appeals to a morbid interest in sex with patently offensive depictions or descriptions of sexual conduct, and one that, on the whole, has no serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value.

About the New York case, Rehnquist said, "We think it clear... that the warrant was supported by probable cause to believe that the five films at issue were obscene."

He was joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, and Justices Byron R. White, Harry A. Blackmun, Lewis F. Powell and Sandra Day O'Connor.

Justices Thurgood Marshall, William J. Brennan and John Paul Stevens dissented.

Vaccine sales given OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department Tuesday gave a clean bill of health to a genetically altered swine vaccine and said its manufacturer would resume sales of the drug immediately.

The department, which had suspended sales of the vaccine on April 8, said it had completed an environmental assessment of the product, designed to prevent the deadly animal disease pseudorabies, and found it to be safe and effective.

"The environmental assessment documents the safety of this product and the extensive review that preceded its release to producers trying to protect their swine from pseudorabies," said Dr. David Espeseth, who oversees veterinary drug licensing for the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

Cruise missile destroys target in test

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States successfully tested one of its Tomahawk cruise missiles in a new attack mode early this month by exploding it in mid-flight as it passed over a target plane protected by a revetment, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

The missile, fired from a submarine and carrying a 1,000-pound conventional "Bullpup" warhead, traveled 474 miles across the Pacific Ocean to the target on San Clemente Island off the California coast, said Bob Holsapple, spokesman for the Pentagon's cruise missile office.

The Tomahawk was traveling at roughly 600 miles per hour—at an altitude "well below" 100 feet, when it exploded and destroyed the target plane, Holsapple added.

"The results were much better than expected," the spokesman added.

The Tomahawk, which the Navy began deploying in 1983, can be equipped with either conventional or nuclear warheads.

Holsapple discussed the April 1 test after Robert Sims, the Pentagon's chief spokesman, released video- and still pictures of the experiment.

Sims also disclosed that in the course of an exercise now underway in the eastern Caribbean, Navy and Air Force units had successfully fired six Harpoon anti-ship missiles at an old boat hull floating off the coast of Puerto Rico.

The exercise was unusual in that six of the expensive missiles were tested at once, the Navy added.

The Tomahawk, built by the General Dynamics Corp. at a cost of roughly $2 million each, can be used to attack targets on land or the water. The Tomahawk is a 19-foot, unmanned jet with short, stubby wings and tail fins designed to follow the terrain and hug the ground to escape radar detection. The conventional land-attack version has a range of roughly 700 miles.

"According to Holsapple, the Pentagon conducted a static test of the Bullpup warhead about 2½ years ago to determine its effectiveness when exploded above targets on the ground. When the Tomahawk was first developed, he added, the idea of using it to carry such a warhead was not explored.

By using such a warhead and modifying the Tomahawk's internal computer guidance system, however, the cruise missile can now be used against targets parked behind walls of dirt or concrete, known as revetments.

Soviet spy admits affair with agent

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A confessed Soviet spy who has admitted a love affair with former FBI agent Richard W. Miller testified Tuesday she was sexually involved with another agent years before she met Miller, but insisted she didn't try to help the Soviet Union through the affair.

Svetlana Ogorodnikov, a divorcee witness, choked back tears as she testified she had a sexual affair with John Hunt, an FBI agent, she met in 1980. She said she answered questions for him and provided him with information about the Soviet community but indicated her motive was personal, not political.

"He asked me like a friend and I answer him like a friend," she said. "He lie. Most of this information he got from other people. I answered his questions, yes, but he lie."

Hunt has denied that he had any sexual involvement with Mrs. Ogorodnikov but said that he cultivated her as an informant for two years.

Miller, the only FBI agent ever tried on espionage charges, is accused of giving her classified documents in exchange for promises of $65,000 in gold and cash. He is being retried after a jury deadlocked last November.

Mrs. Ogorodnikov never testified at her own trial and was not called as a witness at Miller's first trial.

Sale of guru's guns benefits Oregon city

THE DALLES, Ore. (AP) — Antelope, the tiny central Oregon town once controlled by followers of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, will benefit from the sale of guns formerly used by the guru's police force.

Mayor Jean Opray received a check for $3,028 from Wasco County Sheriff Arthur Labrousse Jr. on Monday. The money is from the sale of six guns and other police equipment used by the disbanded "peace force" that once patrolled the City of Rajneesh, as Antelope was once called.

The money likely will be used for public works projects, Opray said.

Opray was appointed mayor last fall after members of the Rajneesh City Council resigned and the town's original name was restored. The Rajneesh followers left the town and their nearby city-commune of Rajneeshpuram after Rajneesh pleaded guilty to federal immigration-law violations and left the country. He's reported to be in Uruguay.

Opray said she supports a measure on the June 24 ballot to reincorporate the 85-year-old town.

"I think it would be a good beginning," she said, adding that she didn't expect the Rajneesh Investment Corp., which still owns much of the property in the area, to challenge the reincorporation.

"I really don't think that they have that much of an interest in it anymore," she said.

Safety officials gain access to launches

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Air Force officials have agreed to work more closely with civilian emergency workers, including letting them monitor future rocket launches, in the wake of the explosion of a Titan missile.

Vandenberg officials agreed Monday to install a hotline for the exclusive use of civilian safety officials and to allow a Santa Barbara County official to monitor launches from the launch-pad command post, said Air Force Lt. Col. Alex Abela.

Launches at the base, about 170 miles northwest of Los Angeles, usually are classified. However, concern for public safety in nearby Lompoc was raised last Friday when a $64 million Titan 34D exploded five seconds into launch. A top-secret spy satellite is believed to have been lost in the blast.

Highly corrosive unburned liquid rocket fuel formed an orange-and-white cloud that reached about 10,000 feet before drifting across the southeast section of the base and then out to sea.

No one was seriously injured, but 74 people, mostly military personnel, were examined at the base hospital after complaining of eye and skin irritation.

About 15 city, county and state officials met with Maj. Gen. Jack L. Watkins, 1st Strategic Aerospace Division commander, to express their desire for a hotline and clarify methods to notify the public, Abela said.

Lompoc and Santa Barbara sheriff's officials said they received no immediate information from Vandenberg about dangers posed by the cloud and had to judge for themselves how to respond.

Police, fire and California Highway Patrol officials also had difficulty getting calls through to Vandenberg because reporters and worried civilians jammed telephone lines, Abela said.

"We are at the mercy of the base," said Sheriff's Sgt. Dale Schade. "But I believe in their integrity and their commitment to the safety of the community."

Schade said a factor complicating his decision to evacuate about 75 people from Jalama Beach County Park downwind from the base was his uncertainty about wind direction after the mishap. He said he didn't want to move the evacuees into an area that might get hit by the toxic chemicals.

After the explosion, the Air Force would say only that the payload was classified, but several independent military space experts said it was almost certainly a K11-11 spy satellite.

The explosion was the second failure in a row for a Titan 34D at Vandenberg. The Air Force destroyed the first failed Titan two minutes into an Aug. 28 launch.

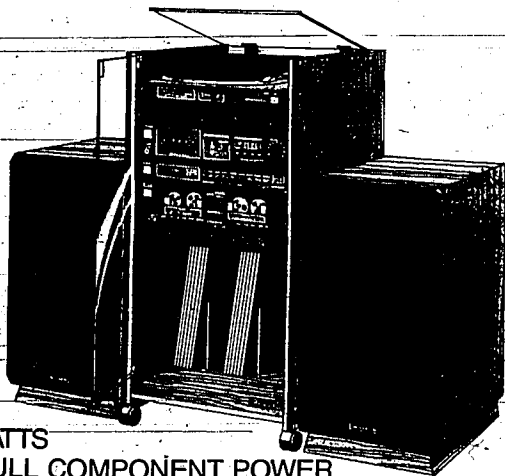

An investigation of the blast by an Air Force board, including 18 civilian, military and NASA aerospace experts, will remain secret, said Larry Hannon, a spokesman at the Air Force Space Division in Los Angeles.

L.M. Boyd What's what

Q. Is there any real aphrodisiac? A. One, maybe. Male animals that browse on a tree called the "Corynantho johimbe" in the Cameroons are said to become rambunctiously sexy. So from that tree scientists have produced a drug they call "johimbine hydrochloride." When they sought humans to test it, so many volunteered they had to stop taking applications.

How much did the tooth fairy pay you per pillowed molar when you were a child? About 12 cents was average at the turn of the century. During World War II, it went up to 25 cents. By the 1960s, it was 50 cents or more. And $1 is today's rate.

A boomerang expert says that original hunting weapon was never thrown seriously at any game except birds.

FIRST AND LAST
Q. What U.S. city in the 1940s was known as "First in Shoes, First in Booze, and Last in the American League?"

A. St. Louis.

You can get some idea of what the money is worth by what the older citizens do with it. Those over 65 used to save about 15 percent of whatever new money came in. But in the last decade, they've been spending all of it, almost.

Q. In all the Olympic opening professions, the team from Greece leads: Whose team always trails?
A. The host country's.

SUCCESS
Among highly successful men, one out of 10 says his fortunate condition is due to his family's connections.

Most such men, though, credit "hard work" and "ambition." Those two factors alone may not make you rich. But they're evidently the most important keys. Ambition, I gather, is synonymous with "wanting to win" — which Vince Lombardi called "the only thing."

Well-diggers of old — those who dug to the bottom by hand — could see what others couldn't see: stars in the sky during daytime.

Q. Did the great French writer Voltaire walk with a cane?
A. At every opportunity. He owned 80.

Q. How many people die annually of snake bites?
A. A dozen, average.

Utahns get a big bang out of playing combat in The Game

Author's note: When I was 7, we played a game involving toy pistols and a plastic combat helmet and many, many fingers pointed at opponents. You pointed your finger, cocked your thumb, then said "Bang! You're dead!" and the other was supposed to fall down. Sometimes, if I was lucky, I got to wear the helmet. If I was really lucky, I didn't get killed too soon. It was really, really lucky. I got killed where everyone could see me and then I could die gloriously.

By CHARLES TRENTZELMAN
The Associated Press

MORGAN, Utah — The game was "Rambo."
Two men volunteered to run for their lives, and the other 14 got to go after them.
The two were given a head start, and they walked a ways, then darted into the bush. A horn blew, and the others fanned out.

Silence.
The two could be seen off in the distance, darting from one side of the clearing to the other, making the searchers shift tactics. Pretty soon everyone was buried in the bush and nothing could be heard but an occasional twig snapping.

Then, suddenly, a valley of soft "pop-pop" sounds.
Men ran, guns at the ready. They scanned the bush line for signs of the enemy. More popping sounds.
When the two men finally came out, their hands were raised, clothes smeared with "blood."
Dead.

Welcome to "The Ultimate Game," as the game's sponsor modestly calls his company.
In a clearing by the railroad tracks just west of Devil's Slide, men dressed in fatigues, their faces painted with camouflage, were taking turns hunting each other down and blowing each other away.

"Once you get some of your adrenaline out of the way," said one Vietnam veteran, "it's a lot of fun."
C. Ted Rose, Provo, is the sponsor of the Game. For $20, he said, you rent a pistol, a pair of goggles, and the right to play the Game all day. He throws in the first two tubes of ammunition (10 rounds each) and one CO2 cartridge, to get you started.

It's a sport for the whole family, he said. "We had a mother and daughter come out. We've had Boy Scouts come out. Good Mormon people, and they have a blast."

The Game is a variant of the old childhood game, Rose admits, but with differences.
For one, they play in country that simulates a real combat situation. In this case, for example, lots of thick brush was making life difficult for everyone.

For another, he said, they use real guns.
Actually, what they use is air guns, powered by carbon dioxide, that shoot little plastic balls filled with colored liquid soap. Red soap.

When one of those whizzes past your nose, he said, it wakes you up good.

The bullets are billed as harmless and usually do little more than sting. One man got hit at close range on his lip, though, and it drew blood. Another man showed several small, nickel-sized round scars where he'd gotten hit in the past.

So everyone dresses head to toe and puts a scarf around their neck. Eye goggles are mandatory.
And then there is the intensity of it, Rose said.

"It's a lot different than when you're standing watching," he said. As soon as that horn blows and you're standing there with a gun in your hand, everything changes.

"We get these cops here," he said, "and they're real macho, real macho. And I've seen them trying to load their guns and they're shaking so bad they spill their ammo all over. And it's not because they're scared, but because they can't handle the adrenaline rush. They're not used to it."

It's a good, fun game, he said. There are never any fights, and everyone has a good time.

"It gets all your aggressions out," he said. "I'm glad they have been able to help those children who were afraid."

He said 20 of 364 students had been officially withdrawn from his school, but he had no concrete attendance figures for Tuesday. Six weeks remain on the current term.

Also Tuesday, attorney David Rossetol, who represents parents opposed to Ryan's presence in the classroom, filed a notice of appeal asking Clinton Circuit Judge Jack R. O'Neill to stay the order returning Ryan to class.

Leicht said the alternative school was "not a protest" but "a very positive action." He said the children will get more personal attention at the new school, which has two teachers, and the atmosphere will be more conducive to learning.

The cost and trouble "is not much," said Leicht, "if you weigh that against your kid contracting AIDS and possibly dying."

The two instructors at the school have not been identified and reporters were not permitted inside the building. The firm, Floyd Marshall American Legion Post, located between an auto parts store and a pizza restaurant.

Joe DiLaura of the state Department of Education said "nothing under state law prevented the parents from starting their school, as long as they receive equivalent instruction to what they would receive in the public schools."

"We do not have any authority under the law to monitor the program," said DiLaura, adding that it was up to local officials to make sure attendance laws are followed.

DiLaura said teachers at his school have been helping the two instructors by providing information on programs that would be taught over the next six weeks. "We'll provide them with as much help as possible without serving as a tutorial for them," he said.

Wearing goggles, scarves and camouflage attire, a squad of players is ready to start play.

than any glass of scotch you'll ever have," he said. "The adrenaline rush, that's why you do it."

Stevenson is a construction supervisor in real life, but in his past he used to play these games for real.

He was in the U.S. Navy during the Vietnam War and talks about river patrols, air drops into enemy country, things like that.

"The way to do it," he advised a couple of first-timers, "is to sit back, let it happen, and then make it happen."

But there weren't just military types. It is a sport for women, too.

Whitely Clifton, North Ogden, said she works as a secretary. She has been playing the Game for a year now.

"My brother came home and I saw these holes on him and I said, 'What are you doing?' and he said, 'Playing war.'"

"And he told me about it and it sounded fun! And he said girls can't play, but I said the heck with that and called up Ted (Rose) and he signed me up. You get up here and forget about everything at home," she said.

The combat was not without its unusual moments. One man got shot in the chest and, in a twist on the old story, pulled a tin of chewing tobacco out of the pocket where he'd been hit.

"It saved my life," he said with a smile, but the rules said he was dead anyway.

During a break, two men decided to play "shoot-out," standing 10 paces apart and drawing. They both got killed, a couple of times, and everyone laughed.

Rose said he runs the Game full time, has for a year now.

On weekends, he does it for anyone who wants to play. Weekdays, he does the same thing, but for police agencies.

He provides training, he said, taking any role the police need.

"I can provide terrorists, drug runners," he said. "Anything they want."

Kurt Van Kampen, 16, Layton, said he's trying to organize students at Layton High to go to a game. He said he has about 35 interested.

"They got all cocky and said they want to take these guys (the regular players) on, and I said 35 of you, against 10 of my (regular combat) friends? All right!"

The combat follows simple lines. Rose sets out two flags and divides the players into two teams. There were only 18 players Saturday, including two women, so the teams were small.

"When we get 40 guys here it really gets wild," Rose said.

The goal? Catch the other guys' flag. Simple enough.

When they got tired of that, they played Rambo. When that was over, they played "Assassin."

They broke into four teams of four, each team hunting the other three.

Lynn Stevenson was one of the first casualties, a surprise because he is usually one of the winners. He got caught in an ambush, he said.

It went on and on, as men and women skulked through the brush, only occasionally "killing" a foe by firing them, men with red soap on them dribbled into the clearing and headed for the trucks.

All in all, a fun day, they said.

"I got shot in the head, jumped in a pile of ants," one man summarized, "but other than that I'm fine."

Kurt Van Kampen, 16, Layton, Utah, paints his face.

Fearing AIDS, parents set up alternative school

RUSSIAVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Twenty-one youngsters whose parents don't want them in class with AIDS victim Ryan White began attending an alternative school Tuesday in a former American Legion hall.

"The presence of Ryan makes me very nervous," said Chad Gabbard, 12, a seventh-grader who said he had two classes with Ryan at Western Middle School.

"I'm afraid if I go to (public) school — they don't know much about AIDS — I might get it," said Jennifer Byers, whose father, Charles, is one of the alternative program's organizers.

Byers and Dean Leicht established the Russiaville Home Study School for sixth- and seventh-grade pupils after a judge dissolved an injunction on April 10 and allowed Ryan to return to the seventh grade.

Ryan, who contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome through blood products used to treat his hemophilia, is from Kokomo but is assigned to Western Middle School in rural Russiaville.

Health officials have said repeatedly that AIDS cannot be transmitted through casual contact, but some parents believe there is no guarantee against that.

Things were normal Tuesday at Western Middle School, said Principal Ronald Colby. "I'm sure there's some psychological or emotional thing for some of the kids because they may have a friend who is no longer in the school," he said. "I feel a lot of compassion for those people," Colby said. "I know some of those kids. And they're afraid of the AIDS virus. I'm glad they have been able to help those children who were afraid."

He said 20 of 364 students had been officially withdrawn from his school, but he had no concrete attendance figures for Tuesday. Six weeks remain on the current term.

Also Tuesday, attorney David Rossetol, who represents parents opposed to Ryan's presence in the classroom, filed a notice of appeal asking Clinton Circuit Judge Jack R. O'Neill to stay the order returning Ryan to class.

Leicht said the alternative school was "not a protest" but "a very positive action." He said the children will get more personal attention at the new school, which has two teachers, and the atmosphere will be more conducive to learning.

The cost and trouble "is not much," said Leicht, "if you weigh that against your kid contracting AIDS and possibly dying."

The two instructors at the school have not been identified and reporters were not permitted inside the building. The firm, Floyd Marshall American Legion Post, located between an auto parts store and a pizza restaurant.

Joe DiLaura of the state Department of Education said "nothing under state law prevented the parents from starting their school, as long as they receive equivalent instruction to what they would receive in the public schools."

"We do not have any authority under the law to monitor the program," said DiLaura, adding that it was up to local officials to make sure attendance laws are followed.

DiLaura said teachers at his school have been helping the two instructors by providing information on programs that would be taught over the next six weeks. "We'll provide them with as much help as possible without serving as a tutorial for them," he said.

"We're just interested in the kids' education and well being," he said.

Ryan spent one day at school on Feb. 21 after a county health officer certified him "healthy" enough to return to school, ending a legal fight that began last summer when Western Schools Superintendent J.O. Smith said he would not allow the boy back in school.

But a temporary restraining order sought by the parents was issued later that day, keeping Ryan from attending until O'Neill overturned it.

AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, is an affliction in which a virus attacks the body's immune system, leaving victims susceptible to a wide variety of infections and cancers.

As of Monday, it had struck 19,816 people in the United States and claimed 10,408 lives, according to the government's Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

Tombs of parents of emperor found

PEKING (AP) — The tombs of the parents of China's first emperor have been located near the ancient capital of Han in Shaanxi Province, an official press report said Tuesday.

The parents of Qin Shihuang, who lived from 259 to 210 B.C., were buried about six miles from their son's tomb, the official English language China Daily reported.

The discovery was made in February when archaeologists were surveying the area, which is rich in cultural relics dating back more than 2,000 years.

Pottery, iron and bronze implements already unearthed bear inscriptions with the same handwriting as items found near Emperor Qin's tomb, which has not been excavated.

The parents' burial place was described in historical accounts, but its exact whereabouts was not known.

Nevada nuclear test brings protests, arrest of 3

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A nuclear weapon nearly 12 times as powerful as the Hiroshima bomb was detonated in the Nevada desert Tuesday.

The test sparked condemnation from Soviet leaders and President Reagan's invitation to witness the blast.

Three anti-nuclear protesters were arrested and the Greenpeace organization claimed four others were on the site at the time of detonation.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said continued U.S. testing ruins chances for a disarmament agreement.

Washington took the road of the actual disarmament, the Geneva arrangements, resorting to actions that complicate still more the tense situation in the world arena," Tass said. "The nuclear explosions in Nevada dash the unique chance to set a real beginning to the disarmament process."

The White House has said continued U.S. testing is necessary to keep pace with previous Soviet nuclear tests.

Last month, Tass scorned an invitation by Reagan to allow Soviet scientists to witness the blast, code-named Jefferson.

The test was conducted at the bottom of a 2,000-foot shaft drilled in the desert 104 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

Chris West, a Department of Energy spokesman who was 33 miles from ground zero, said television cameras showed substantial ground motion. The National Earthquake Information Center in Boulder, Colo., said it measured 5.3 on the Richter scale of ground motion.

group Greenpeace, said demonstrators from Boulder entered the 1,350-square mile desert site overnight. West said no protesters were seen near ground zero.

West said 29 protesters showed up at the gates to the test site and three were arrested for trespassing.

It was the third announced U.S. test in a month and the 10th announced since the Soviets began a unilateral test moratorium Aug. 6. The Soviets have since announced they are ending that moratorium.

The test was expected to demonstrate the accuracy of a system for measuring the ex-positive force of nuclear tests. The last announced U.S. test was Mighty Oak on April 10. About 100 anti-nuclear activists were arrested prior to that test, including 14 people who snuck onto the desert site.

For security reasons, not all tests are announced.

Many larger nuclear tests are announced in advance to warn people outside the test site that they may feel small tremors. Las Vegas police said there were no reports from the public of any earth movement.

Solvent traces found in water

HILL AIR FORCE BASE, Utah (AP) — Traces of a chemical solvent formerly used at Hill Air Force Base have been found in groundwater on private property next to the base, a spokesman said.

The solvent poses no immediate health threat to residents, all but one of who have municipal water service, said base spokesman Ernie Shannon. Spring water used by one resident was tested and found to present no hazard, he said.

The chemical, trichloroethylene, apparently was buried in a disposal pit on-base before 1970, when its use was discontinued, Shannon said.

Evidence of forgery in papers

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A manuscript expert testified Tuesday he found evidence of forgery in about a dozen historical documents linked to Mark Hofmann, including paper clip marks where they were hung to dry.

Kenneth Rendell, among those who determined the forgery of the purported Adolf Hitler diaries in 1984, said the Hofmann documents showed evidence of chemical treatment and forged signatures.

Rendell said he based his conclusion on a cursory handwriting analysis and an examination of the documents under ultraviolet light.

"You could clearly see a chemical of some type. I've never seen anything like it before," Rendell said.

Rendell testified in a 5th Circuit Court preliminary hearing to determine whether Hofmann should stand trial on two counts of first-degree murder and 30 other counts of fraud, theft by deception and bomb making.

The 31-year-old former Mormon missionary is accused of planting bombs that killed Steven Christensen, 31, and Whisen Sheets, 50, last Oct. 15 in what prosecutors contend was an effort to conceal a plot to sell allegedly fraudulent historical documents.

Rendell, a buyer and seller of old documents, said he has testified in more than 50 universities on ways to determine whether a historical paper has been forged.

He said Hofmann documents shown him by police carried signs of signature forgery, changed dates, unusual ink blotting, chemical treatment and unusual paper texture.

Rendell said all but two of the documents displayed a bright blue tint when examined under ultraviolet light. He said he never before had seen a group of documents all with the same tint, he said in some cases, under the ultraviolet light, he could see paper clip marks where the documents apparently had been hung to dry after being chemically treated.

Rendell said he spent about a day examining the documents last February when investigators brought them to his Newton, Mass., office. However, he stressed that his examination was not thorough enough to definitively determine whether the documents were indeed forged.

"I examined them the same way I would examine documents on a commercial basis. If I saw these same things in a document someone brought to me, I would not buy it," Rendell said.

Hands' office opens in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah office of Hands-Across-America opened Tuesday to offer information on, and coordinate local involvement in the May 25 campaign to have 6 million Americans join hands from Los Angeles to New York City.

Funds raised by the project will go to fight hunger and aid America's homeless, organizers say.

Coca Cola, J.C. Penney Co., Utah Safeway stores and other businesses and church leaders in supporting the national endeavor, said Hands-Across-America spokesman Steve Johnson.

The Salt Lake City offices of Utahns Against Hunger were designated as local headquarters for the effort, said Johnson, UAH director.

State school wages knocked

Teachers think Legislature's wage freeze an unfair choice

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Idaho's economy and the wage freeze for state employees imposed by the Legislature is taking a toll at the Idaho State School for the Deaf and Blind in Gooding.

School Superintendent Keith Tolzin said Tuesday about 20 percent of his teaching staff will leave this year and the number of teachers applying for jobs at the school is smaller than usual. About 20 applications have been received this spring which is "a very small pool to select from," he said.

Three state school teachers who had not signed contracts for the 1985-87 school year held a press conference Tuesday and said the wage freeze imposed by the Legislature is 'The policies are inconsistent, and it affects our pay as well as the way we feel about our work.'

—Lisette Seavoi

a basic reason for their decision to seek employment elsewhere.

Unlike public school teachers, the teachers at the state school work for the Idaho Board of Education and their wages and regulations are controlled by the Legislature.

Lisette Seavoi, first-grade teacher at the school for the blind, said this designation means some public school rules such as certification requirements apply, while other public teacher rights like contract negotiations do not apply to state school personnel.

"The policies are inconsistent, and it affects our pay as well as the way we feel about our work," she said.

Linda Jones, third-year teacher in the elementary school for the deaf, agreed that frozen wages are a problem. However, she also said she's seeking another position because she does not like living in Gooding due to the lack of a "social life" in the small community.

Lisa Foust, a second-year computer science teacher for both the deaf and blind students, said there were two reasons she did not sign her contract before the April 15 deadline: wages and the inability of losing her teaching certificate. She said Tolzin had advised her if she signed a contract and then resigned to accept another job she could be charged with breach of contract and face the loss of her teaching certificate.

Tolzin agrees that he has told teachers he would look at the breach of contract laws and said his primary concern is to maintain an "appropriate program" at the school.

He said he respects a teacher's right to seek a better-paying job, but said a contract is "a two-way agreement that we must honor and expect them to honor."

He said the high turnover rate is probably due to a number of factors, with the economy and wages being on top of the list. The teachers said they need someone to lobby for them and look after their interests in the Legislature because they are not entitled to teacher association negotiations, as are public school teachers.

This is the first wage freeze for state school teachers, while other state employees' wages have been frozen for two years, Tolzin said. Starting salary for a first-year teacher with a bachelor's degree, teacher certification and an endorsement for exceptional children is $15,428, Tolzin said.

He also said those teachers who have not yet signed contracts may ask to be re-employed with the school and will be considered along with the other applicants.

Hopefuls file in county bids

Hempleman eyes re-election, Arrington and Fraley face off

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Incumbents and political newcomers have filed candidacy petitions for Twin Falls County offices.

The deadline for filing the petitions for the May 27 primary was Friday.

Among those who responded was Republican Marvin Hempleman, seeking re-election to the Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners, Hempleman, dairy farmer, represents District 2.

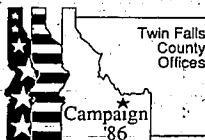

Hempleman has no challenger in the primary, but will face Twin Falls businessman Curtis Smith, a Democrat, in the general election. Smith has never held a public office.

The race for the District 3 commission seat will be won or lost in the primary as only two Republicans have filed petitions.

Ken Arrington, a retired farmer, and Twin Falls businessman Jim Fraley are vying for the GOP nomination. Arrington was the first time either of the men has sought public office.

Board Chairman Ann Cover, who now holds the job, announced she would not seek another term. A former county employee will run against County Clerk Dick Pence, a Republican first elected to the office in 1977.

Ces Robinsan, a Twin Falls Democrat, filed a petition to seek her party's nomination for the clerk's job. Robinsan worked in the Twin Falls County clerk, recorder, and auditor's offices for more than 30 years.

Pence and Robinsan have no opponents in the primary.

In a race for the treasurer's office, Filer Highway District Board Chairman Tom Lancaster filed a petition for the Democratic nomination. County employee Bonnie Bruning also announced her intention to run for the GOP nomination.

The race for coroner also will be won or lost in the primary. Two Republicans are the only candidates. Incumbent Jerry Kurz of Buhl, who was appointed to the job on Feb. 6, and Twin Falls public officer Carl Edwards have filed petitions for the GOP nomination. Edwards' father, who was county coroner for several years.

The only county incumbent without a challenge from Democrat or Republican is Assessor Dorothy Hamby, a Republican.

County officials said the names on the candidacy petitions have been verified as registered voters.

Anthony changes parties, will strive to beat Anderson

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Four-time Democratic candidate George Anthony of Filer has changed horses and is hoping this year to ride in Republican silks to a win in the primary against state Sen. Larry Anderson.

Anthony's most recent contest was the 1982 2nd Congressional District Democratic primary, in which he ran unsuccessfully as the more liberal candidate against Rep. Sidney Stings, D-Idaho.

Now he is challenging Anderson in the Republican primary for the District 25 Senate electoral seat.

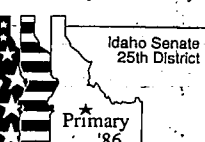

The owner of a farm in Filer and The Electronic Office Computer stores in Buhl and in the Payson Mall in Twin Falls, Anthony said he switched parties because, although he could count on 35-40 percent of the vote as a Democrat, it didn't pay to run as a Democrat in the heavily Republican Magic Valley.

"The people of Southern Idaho have determined that the one-party system serves them best," he said. "I will stress a non-partisan approach, appealing to moderates of both parties. Anthony would not say which party's candidates he is supporting in the general elections. "I had best be neutral insofar as any other races are concerned," he said.

The former Filer Democratic precinct committeeman said the Republican majority in the Legislature this year led to one of the more secretly conducted sessions in years, with many debates held in closed caucuses. "That was the worst example of democracy in action I've seen in a long time," he said.

Pay scales for alien farmworkers challenged

The Associated Press

RUPERT — The U.S. Labor Department and a Texas-based migrant aid group are contesting operations of Idaho's new H-2 program that has imported about 800 legal aliens this spring to work on farms in the southern part of the state.

George Carr, president of the Snake River Farmers Association and founder of Idaho's H-2 program, said the claims of inadequate wages and discriminatory experience requirements are unjustified.

"The workers are relieved that they don't have to look over their shoulder for the Border Patrol,"

Grant said. "The farmers think that even though there is some added expense with the program, their workers are generating more productivity."

Under the program, which has placed migrant workers in farming operations from Rexburg to Glenns Ferry, the basic wage is $3.50 an hour, with a piece rate of 10 cents per hour for moving irrigation pipe.

But the Labor Department has proposed forcing about a 30-percent increase in wages, contending the current rates are too low and are undermining the domestic workforce. And the Texas Rural Legal Association has filed suit challenging a 30-day experience requirement as discriminatory. Both actions are still pending.

Grant argued that the current wage rates are viewed as fair by both sides, claiming the federal calculations overstate the average wage being paid for similar work in the area.

He also pointed out that in trying to fill 1,300 farm labor slots this spring, advertisements in nine newspapers and fillings with 13 state Job Service offices yielded responses from only 80 domestic workers and half of them failed to report for work.

"It's hard to get past the conclusion that it's beneath the dignity of most American workers to move sprinkler pipe," he said. "It's ludicrous to say we're depressing local wages by bringing aliens into the area."

LISA FOUST Fears loss of her certificate

He said the piece rate could average $5 an hour for a good worker, claiming that if the wage rate were increased, many of the migrants would be making more than the wages being paid for comparable work in the region.

As for the experience requirement, Grant contended it was important because the migrants are expected to work without supervision, and in the case of moving pipes inexperienced workers run the risk of electrical shock when working around power lines.

Council acts on cable complaints, misdemeanor caseload

Panel appointed to hear grievances of cable customers

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council appointed a commission Monday to hear complaints regarding cable television service, but several council members said they would like the city to stop mediating complaints after current ones are resolved.

The Federal Communications Commission encourages cities to provide such a service, but does not require it, said Ron Parver, supervisory attorney for the FCC in Washington, D.C.

"No, we don't like it, but it's up to the city," said Parver, about council members plans to disband the commission. "The viewers can be caught in a bind."

A previous council passed a resolution in 1982 creating a Cable Service Review Commission to mediate cable subscriber complaints. The resolution was signed by former mayor Chris Talkington, who has since joined King Videocable as local manager.

When the resolution was passed, the city was receiving complaints about the way the local cable company was being run and management's lack of response to complaints, said Councilman Gale Kleinkopf. The problems stopped when Talkington took over the company, he said.

Although the review commission has no authority over the company, the firm and subscribers had generally accepted the commission's decision when he served on it, Kleinkopf said.

The council-appointed Mayor Doug Vollmer and council members Mary McClusky and Jim Vickers to the commission. Councilman Htek Carr will serve as alternate. Vollmer had not appointed the commission at the beginning of the year, in keeping with his policy to only name commissions if they are needed with current business.

Vickers agreed to serve because the city's resolution calling for the mediation process is still on the books, but he said he would like city staff to prepare the paperwork necessary to throw out the resolution. Anyone wishing to be heard by the commission will have to submit their case before it is disbanded, he said.

Carr said he was concerned that "it is none of our business" to become involved with complaints against a private business.

And Vollmer said he would like the city to stay away from rate complaints.

The city has received complaints about King Videocable's recent rate change, Bengoechea said. • See CABLE on Page B2

Bengoechea's load heavy, firm's help needed to proceed

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city of Twin Falls will begin turning its misdemeanor prosecution caseload over to the local firm of May, May, Sudweeks, Shinduring, Stubbs and Mitchell this week.

City Attorney Shane Bengoechea said the firm submitted a bid for the maximum amount the city had to spend, but that he chose the firm anyway because of the experience its legal staff had to offer.

Six legal offices submitted applications.

Members of the City Police Department were also confident they could work well with the firm of May and May, Bengoechea said.

The firm has proposed assigning its associate, Thomas Kershaw, 31, to handle city misdemeanor prosecution. Kershaw worked on a similar basis for a number of Provo, Utah, as a law school intern.

The firm has offered to back him up with a paralegal, Bengoechea said. In addition, the firm's word processing and secretarial staff will do the related clerical work.

Bengoechea said his decision to contract with May and May was also influenced by the experienced staff members that would be available to support Kershaw. Attorney Jim May has served as county prosecutor, and attorney Jon Shinduring has extensive experience in criminal defense, according to the application the firm submitted.

The firm has also included an offer of telephone conferences between Bengoechea and May or Shinduring on other criminal work still being handled by the city and consultation on tort claims.

The work will cost the city $1,500 per month, the amount the council budgeted. Money for the contracted work will come from money budgeted to pay liability insurance premiums before the city's self-insurance was cancelled. Bengoechea will handle liability claims against the city.

Bengoechea asked for additional help because of his duties associated with the city's self-insurance policy, new state restitution laws and new Twin Falls County prosecution policies, all of which create more work for the city's Legal Department.

The contracted legal help is only a temporary measure in force until the next budget year begins in October. The City Council will make a decision on how extra legal work should be handled in the future when the 1987 budget is set.

Sun Valley conducts first reading in move to annex ranch

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Another move in what may develop into a chess game of legal requirements and time for the annexation of property covered by both Sun Valley and Ketchum was made by the Sun Valley City Council Tuesday.

The council gave the first of three required readings to an ordinance to annex the 700-acre Lane Ranch reading today. "You are not annexing property today," Sun Valley's move comes after Ketchum set a date last week for its Planning and Zoning Commission to hold a public hearing on the potential zoning of the property on May 12, one week before the Sun Valley council voted on its hearing for the same purpose.

The two cities may decide today whether they will take the game of one-upmanship to a checkmate.

Tuesday, Sun Valley officials also took a wait-and-see attitude towards the issue.

"It sounds like all we want to do is get (the annexation process) started," said Councilman Steve Lubet.

Councilman Joe Humphrey said the city should approach the annexation from the standpoint of what benefits it has for the city.

Lane Ranch developers, CASCEA

Partners from New York, approached Sun Valley with the annexation proposal, one way to initiate annexations in Idaho.

Because the ranch's property is adjacent to the Sun Valley city limits, the city can easily make the addition.

Ketchum's position is different, however, with two large pieces of property between it and the Lane Ranch property.

County officials attend seminar

BOISE — Several Magic Valley county officials attended a seminar today sponsored by the Idaho Association of Counties. A workshop on county liability insurance is scheduled Thursday.

All today's meeting county officials will review the 1996 legislative session. One of the presenters is association Director Chuck Hinton. A discussion of current legal issues/acting counties will follow.

The seminar will end with a presentation on employment relations/personnel procedures, conducted by association attorney Roger Madsen.

County liability issues will be the topic of a Thursday workshop sponsored by the Idaho County Risk Management Program, the self-insurance pool created last year by the association.

Three men charged in drug case

TWIN FALLS — Three Twin Falls men were arrested in 301 District Magistrate Court Tuesday on charges of delivery of controlled substances, including cocaine and marijuana allegedly sold to undercover agencies during the previous three months.

Twin Falls city police officers arrested Ritchie Alvarado, 24, Tuesday morning and Stephen Parker Dodge, 38, and Daniel Walter Lively, 23, late Monday in Twin Falls.

Twin Falls Director of Public Safety Tim Qualls said Lively is charged with two counts of delivery of cocaine and one count of delivery of marijuana. Love faces one delictor cocaine count, and Dodge is alleged to have sold cocaine to two undercover agencies.

All three were granted public defender services when they appeared in court Tuesday. Dodge was released on $5,000 bond, while Lively was being held in lieu of a total of $1,500 bond on the three counts and Love was held under $1,500 bond.

He then went to work as a draftsman at Globe Feed & Seed until his health failed.

Anthony

Anthony said he will stress better funding of the Department of Commerce, more businesses could be lured to Idaho and local chambers of commerce could be better coordinated in their attempts to spur business growth, he said.

"Everybody seems to go out on their own. I don't think this is shown to work too well," said the 62-year-old Filaret.

Anthony said that if he is elected to head Idaho's bankers to try to help rural communities afloat. The plan is also backed by the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation.

Anthony said he will, if elected, "Somehow make sure CSI continues to provide the community services it has. In general, funding has to be found for education."

Business groups have supported increased funding for education in the past and ought to do so again, because the educational system helps to recruit new business to the state, he said.

There is much resistance to tax increases, he said. "My impression is voters don't want taxes increased, period," he said.

But if taxes are to be increased to pay for more school funding or for the Department of Commerce, the sales tax should be the last one to raise, Anthony said. Low income people pay that tax on a higher percentage of their income than do high income people. Overall, Idaho's tax structure is well-balanced, he said.

As a physicist with master's and bachelor's degrees from Washington State University, Anthony said his past experience with the Department of Energy and the Pentagon tells him the state could pursue contracts with the federal government for research at the universities and at CSI.

Anthony said he will be a better representative than Anderson, because "Larry Anderson has no experience in anything except what people like to relate to as the public trough." Anderson is a campground owner and was once on the staff of former congressman George Hansen.

Mother burdened by guilt about stealing after son's death

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago my 2-year-old son died in a tragic way. His death was a great shock to me. I expected to go through the normal grieving process, and I did. However, something unexpected happened. I started to steal. I had no use for anything I took, but I was helpless to stop. Even more disturbing, I stole from people I love and am very close to. This started soon after the death of my son and stopped a few months ago.

The death of my son and the terrible guilt I felt over stealing nearly drove me to suicide twice.

I want very much to return the

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

I need some answers. I've never stolen anything in my life before this. Why did I steal? — especially from people I'm close to? The guilt and confusion are weighing me down. Please help me. I want to make everything better, but I don't know how.

—CONFUSED AND GUILTY

DEAR CONFUSED: Your confusion is a real (transitory) kleptomania, was triggered by your tragic loss. You unconsciously tried to compensate for your loss by taking from others because something had been taken from you.

You stole from those close to you because you unconsciously envied and resented them for not having had to suffer the way you did.

You need more help than I can give you in a letter. You seem to be a fine and decent person who was temporarily destabilized by a terrible loss. It was sick behavior, and sickness is no crime.

Forgive yourself, my friend. Please see a therapist and a clergyman — if you have one. You need — absolute — and — counseling. Write again soon and let me know how you are doing. I care.

DEAR ABBY: In defense of mules and jackasses: If a mule or jackass gets loose in a barn and gets into the feed, he will eat only as much as he needs, then quit. A horse will eat until he's so overfed that he's sick.

You can hitch a mule or jackass to an oversized load and he will pull his maximum, then quit before he overexerts himself. A horse will push himself to the point of physical exhaustion because he doesn't have sense enough to quit.

If anyone tells you that you have the brains of a jackass, take it as a compliment, but if you're told you have "horse sense," it's an insult.

— WEP IN MINNESOTA

DEAR WEP: You could have fooled me. I always thought that horse sense could be found in a stable mind, and at the racetrack I've wondered if the jackasses were running or betting.

Expert: Computers help women

WASHINGTON (AP) — The computer age has not forced women out of low-paying clerical jobs but rather has pushed them upward into managerial and professional positions, a computer industry analyst said Tuesday.

While acknowledging a slowdown in the number of clerical and administrative support jobs — those jobs traditionally held by women — since the information era took hold, Paul Strassman said that slowdown "is actually a massive movement by women to upgrade their social and economic status."

"To pick on computers as a simple explanation is not warranted by the facts," Strassman told a news conference. "It is just too simplistic."

Last fall, the National Association of Working Women said women were "hidden victims" of economic change and office automation, losing their clerical jobs to machines.

Strassman, a recently retired Xerox Corp. vice president, analyzed Labor Department statistics on behalf of the Computer and Business Equipment Manufacturers Association, which sought to refute the NAWW charge.

He said 639,000 new administrative support and clerical jobs were created since 1980 despite computerization.

He noted that women in administrative support and clerical jobs, as a total share of women's jobs, dropped from 54.7 percent in 1958 to 42.6 percent in 1985. But women were "upgrading their opportunities" in other fields: Women went from holding 3.1 percent of executive, administrative and managerial jobs to 13.3 percent, and from 36.2 percent to 44 percent of professional, technical and sales jobs.

"What has happened is precisely what you would want to happen," he said. "You want to upgrade, you want to upscale people, and this is what has been happening."

John Willoughby, a former consultant to the working women's groups and now an American University professor, said he was "skeptical of this notion that there's been an upgrading of clerical workers."

He said the upward migration cited by Strassman was due to "young women with college credentials," not clericals switching jobs.

Honesty, humor important in being a mom, say winners

NEW YORK (AP) — Friendship, honesty, respect and a sense of humor are the most important qualities a mother and her children can share, winners of the 1986 Outstanding Mother's Award said Tuesday.

Beatrice Coleman, president and chief executive officer of Maldenform Inc.; dancer Carmen De Lavallade; opera star Marilyn Horne; television correspondents Judy Licht and Marjorie Margulies; golf champion Nancy Lopez; sex therapist Ruth Westheimer; and Uli Derickson, the TWA flight attendant who played a heroic role in last summer's Beirut hijacking.

"If your children, when they become adults, are your friends, you've done a good job," said actress Janet Leigh, renowned for her shower scene in the movie "Psycho," and mother of two daughters, including actress Jamie-Lee Curtis.

Derickson said that when her son asks her to play with him she doesn't "put him off." "I think, 'You almost lost him and he almost lost you,'" she said. "I'm much more aware of spending my time with him."

Leigh was chosen for the eighth annual award by the National Mother's Day Committee for the example she has set in combining career and parenting.

She was joined by Olympic gold medal winner Valerie Brisco-Hooks; and Uli Derickson, the TWA flight attendant who played a heroic role in last summer's Beirut hijacking.

Women's economic health still in the doldrums

LOS ANGELES — Women have failed to gain economic ground on men since 1959 because while their incomes rose more quickly, they assumed heavier financial burdens and lost leisure time, according to a new study.

1979, Fuchs found when he analyzed statistics from the U.S. Census Bureau and other federal surveys for 1959-83.

"But these gains have been offset by other factors which contribute to economic well-being," he added. "One is that women in comparison to men have less leisure now because working women still do most housework and care for children."

Another is that "a smaller percentage of women are married and able to share in the higher earnings of men," so they receive a heavier financial burden for themselves, Fuchs said.

The studies by Fuchs and Smith suggest that further improvement in women's economic health requires solutions to the breakup of the American family, not changes in the labor market, where their opportunities "are expanding very rapidly," Smith said.

New groups says divorce laws unfair to men

SEATTLE (AP) — The nastiness of divorce is only perpetuated by divorce laws, which are unfair to men and made worse by biased judges, the founder of Husbands Against Dirty Divorce said at a Monday news conference.

"It affects all society," Joseph Karl, who is going through a second divorce, said of divorce laws and judges who favor "vindictive" ex-wives.

"All men are asking for is equality. It is time men took a page out of the book women and minorities wrote. We need to unite and be heard," said Karl.

Besides Karl, a woman, Carol Nelson of Edmonds, addressed the news conference. She said she and her ex-husband had worked out an agreement so their three children would suffer as little as possible, but that in many cases the ex-wife holds the power in a relationship because she is given preferential treatment by courts.

Flee wave of murder

Americans leave Moslem Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Ten Americans and several Europeans left Moslem west Beirut in a heavily guarded convoy at dawn Tuesday to escape a new wave of kidnapping and murder that followed the U.S. air raids on Libya.

The flight of foreigners has stripped the faculties of the American University of Beirut and other Western-run institutions that have been an integral part of Lebanese life for decades.

An armed escort provided by Druse militia chief Wajid Jumblatt, who is no friend of the United States but called the killing of kidnapped Westerners a "barbaric retaliation" for the raids.

Druse militiamen carrying Soviet-made AK-47 assault rifles rode with the convoy that took the evacuees across the war-torn eastern section of the city into Christian east Beirut.

Jumblatt opposed the U.S. peacekeeping effort of 1983, during which 61 "fleet" warships shelled Druse-controlled mountain areas. He agreed to provide protection Tuesday because he was outraged by the murders of a kidnapped American librarian and two British teachers, whose bodies were found last Thursday.

John McCarthy, a 36-year-old British television cameraman, was kidnapped later Thursday.

The conservative Beirut newspaper Al-Naba published an interview Tuesday that quoted Jumblatt as condemning "this barbaric retaliation" for the U.S. raids April 15 on Tripoli and Benghazi.

McCarthy quoted him as saying, in response to a question about lawlessness in west Beirut: "I shall exercise my responsibility and do my best, in cooperation with Mr. Borri, to stop a disaster from befalling us all."

Jumblatt and Nabih Berri, leader of the Shiite Moslem militia Amal, are allies in the 11-year-old civil war with Lebanese Christians, have said often that violence against foreigners eventually would force Western schools and universities in west Beirut to close.

The convoy rolled out on west Beirut's seaside J'n Mreissah boulevard at first light, escorted by six jeepsloads of riot police in red berets.

Bearded Druse gunmen raced around the moving convoy in 12 cars with AK-47s thrust through open doors and windows, horns honking incessantly.

Moslem and Christian snipers stopped shooting when the convoy reached the no-man's land at the Museum crossing in the center of Beirut.

Jumblatt's men stopped there and the convoy sped off through the 500-yard free-fire zone to the Christian sector with the six police jeeps in escort.

The convoy went to the U.S. Embassy compound in the Christian suburb of Aoukar, 12 miles north of Beirut.

At least three evacuees were professors at the American University. Another worked at the French-run College Protestant Francis, one at the American International College and one at the Rashideen International Language Center, a private institute.

Philip Grant of Santa Barbara, Calif., was a political science professor at the university.

Soviets claim U.S. lost 5 planes in raid

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet official said Tuesday that five U.S. planes were lost or damaged in last week's raids against Libya and that Pentagon officials were withholding the information.

Vladimir Lomeiko, chief of the Foreign Ministry press department, also told a news conference that Moscow would study carefully President Reagan's announcement that the United States will dismantle two U.S. nuclear submarines to keep within SALT II limitations.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Col. Marvin L. Braman repeated Tuesday that the United States lost one plane during the April 15 Libyan raids, an F-111 bomber with two crewmen. He said the Soviet claim that five planes were lost or damaged was "total and utter nonsense."

The F-111 may have been downed by Libyan anti-aircraft fire. A newspaper in Libyan Arab Emirates, the state-run Al-Ithad, has quoted Libyan sources as saying the wreckage was pulled from the Mediterranean and airlifted to the Soviet Union.

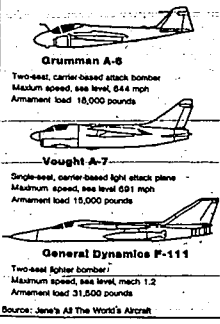

The Pentagon said five F-111s and two A-6 attack jets did not drop any bombs due to mechanical or other problems which were not explained.

Lomeiko said the U.S. announcement that just one plane was lost was untrue.

"Many more aircraft were damaged and destroyed and the American air force sustained greater losses than were reported," he said.

Lomeiko said his information came from Soviet and "various" sources, not leaked. He said the information showed five aircraft lost or damaged.

bases. He did not say whether the Soviets have the F-111 wreckage.

Lomeiko said, "As far as details as to what aircraft were shot, what aircraft were damaged, I don't think it is relevant to go into all this because this should be the headache of the air force of the United States. Anyway, we are speaking about considerable damage, which was rejected by the American side."

The press official said of Reagan's Monday announcement about dismantling two U.S. nuclear submarines, "We will weigh this carefully."

The U.S. Senate never ratified SALT II, but both sides have said they will observe it.

Lomeiko indicated that the U.S. announcement might be a positive move and said the Soviet Union is for continuing the treaty.

Asked if the Soviets were satisfied that America will stay within treaty limits, Lomeiko said that remained to be seen.

"In the past there were declarations which did not coincide with actions. Don't put the cart before the horse," he said.

At the conference, Lomeiko was asked when Soviet negotiators expected to submit details of their latest proposal for reducing conventional troops and weapons in Europe. Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced a new initiative in a speech at the East German Communist Party Congress in Berlin.

Political differences bar to normal trading links

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite huge grain sales over the years, the Soviet Union and the United States cannot expect to be normal trading partners until some major political differences are settled, a Soviet official said Tuesday.

Albert Melnikov, deputy trade counselor at the Soviet Embassy here, raised old complaints that the United States discriminates against the Soviet Union by withholding most-favored-nation recognition; by periodically imposing embargoes and by generally treating his country like a second-rate trade partner.

"So long as these obstacles exist, there will be no normal development of Soviet-U.S. trade and economic ties on a large scale," Melnikov told a meeting of the Newspaper Farm Editors of America.

"This is regrettable, but we are not going to beg the United States for anything," he said. "We're not competing with you in the world market or in the United States itself, in this respect."

Melnikov said the present trade situation is a one-way street, with the Soviet Union importing 10 to 12 times the value of products sold to the United States.

As other Soviet officials have done, Melnikov complained of some quality problems with U.S. grain shipments, also noting that a lag Moscow's purchases of U.S. wheat involved "a gap between your price and prices which are proposed by others." The problem is in the gap.

Melnikov shared a panel with representatives from the European Community, Australia, Canada and New Zealand.

Philippine rebellion worse

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, who led the revolt that caused deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos to flee, said Tuesday that military supports a political solution to the communist rebellion.

Marcos, who now lives in Hawaii, claimed in a videotaped interview released Monday that he wants to drive President Corason Aquino from office within a month. He accused her and members of her cabinet of sympathizing with the rebels.

Enrile said rebel attacks had become less frequent, but more intense, since Marcos left the country Feb. 26 and Mrs. Aquino took over.

The agency began soon after Marcos became president in 1985.

In stating that the military agrees with Mrs. Aquino's desire for a negotiated solution, Enrile said Marcos "was dreaming" when he claimed recently that military means had declined since she assumed office.

He said Marcos and some former government officials were predicting her government would fall because her course undermined the hopes of a comeback.

In other developments: A presidential commission trying to recover billions of dollars Marcos and his associates allegedly stole from the Philippines in the assets of two Manila newspapers that had supported him.

A human rights agency investigating the disappearance of about 900 political activists under Marcos dug up the remains of four people at a site that may have been a dumping ground for torture victims.

Enrile said the insurgency "has not (been) any worse than it was" despite reports of several battles with soldiers in the past few days.

"The frequency of encounters has lessened but the intensity is somewhat heightened," he told a news conference.

According to figures given by the military and the official Philippine News Agency, 102 people have been killed in rebel-related violence in three provinces since Friday.

The total includes 43 rebels, 31 soldiers and a civilian reported killed in a series of gunbattles in Enrile's home province of Cagayan. Ten of the insurgents were killed in an encounter Tuesday, the reports said.

Bomb falls dozens

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — South African-backed rebels in Mozambique claimed responsibility Tuesday for a car bomb in the capital of Maputo that injured dozens of people.

The rebels also claimed their attacks between April 13 and April 17 killed more than 1,000 Mozambican, Zimbabwean and Tanzanian troops. Neither of the claims could be verified.

Women's economic health still in the doldrums

LOS ANGELES — Women have failed to gain economic ground on men since 1959 because while their incomes rose more quickly, they assumed heavier financial burdens and lost leisure time, according to a new study.

"Despite large structural changes in the economy and major anti-discrimination legislation, the economic well-being of women in comparison with that of men did not improve between 1959 and 1983," Stanford University economist Victor R. Fuchs wrote in Friday's issue of the Journal Science.

White women still lag far behind men in average annual income and hourly wages, they narrowed the gap by going to work in increasing numbers and earning wages that rose more quickly than men's since 1979, Fuchs found when he analyzed statistics from the U.S. Census Bureau and other federal surveys for 1959-83.

In a previous study, Fuchs calculated that employed women made 62 cents for every dollar men earned in 1959, about 64 cents in 1979 and an estimated 69 cents in 1983, he said during a telephone interview from Stanford.

Yet Fuchs' new study found virtually no change since 1959 for what he called women's average "effective" income per hour of work, a statistical measure of economic well-being that reflects a person's ability to get goods, services and leisure time.

"Women have made significant gains in the labor market — working more, more occupations open to them and, since 1979, gains in hourly earnings relative to men," Fuchs said.

"But these gains have been offset by other factors which contribute to economic well-being," he added. "One is that women in comparison to men have less leisure time because working women still do most housework and care for children."

Another is that "a smaller percentage of women are married and able to share in the higher earnings of men," so they bear a heavier financial burden for themselves, Fuchs said.

And women have more financial responsibilities for children today than in 1959 because a higher percentage of mothers are unwed or divorced, he added.

"The net result is certainly no improvement for women economically over the last 25 years," Fuchs said. "Everything that I said goes double for blacks. Black women made much greater advances in the labor market than white women, but many more of them are not married and have financial responsibilities for children."

Fuchs emphasized that his study didn't examine possible increases in women's independence, feelings of self-worth and other psychological factors.

A study published in July by economist James P. Smith of the Rand Corp. found women's economic well-being had increased sharply since 1920 when income gains and loss of leisure were considered.

But Smith said his study doesn't necessarily contradict Fuchs' findings, because Fuchs also considered how women's economic health could be hindered by the increasing percentage of women supporting themselves and their children.

The studies by Fuchs and Smith suggest that further improvements in women's economic health require solutions to the breakup of the American family, not changes in the labor market, where their opportunities "are expanding very rapidly," Smith said.

Other observers believe that to boost women's economic well-being requires stronger affirmative action programs, changes in the way wages are determined, and large increases in paid maternity leaves and subsidized day care, Fuchs wrote in his study.

He didn't take a stance on such issues, but said policies aimed at helping women economically "must be examined not only for their effects on women in the market and at home, but also for their effects on children and society as a whole."

New groups says divorce laws unfair to men

SEATTLE (AP) — The nastiness of divorce is only perpetuated by divorce laws, which are unfair to men and made worse by biased judges, the founder of husbands Against Dirty Divorce said at a Monday news conference.

"It affects all society," Joseph Karl, who is going through a second divorce, said of divorce laws and judges who favor "vindictive" ex-wives.

"All men are asking for is equality. It is the men look a page out of the book women and minorities wrote. We need to unite and be heard," said Karl.

He said the turmoil caused in divorce courts, where the woman is usually treated as the victim, often is damaging to children as well as the fathers, who may be denied visitation rights for failure to make child support payments.

Karl said that "victimized-as-well" said Karl, adding that many cases of child abduction could have been avoided if men had received fair treatment in courts.

He said HADD would provide an umbrella organization for "men — and women — who want to do something about the emotional and economic rape now sanctioned by the divorce courts."

Karl did not provide specifics on how the organization might attempt to change laws, but did say a list had been started; judges considered unfair toward men.

Karl said that organization had no immediate plans to work against re-election of the judges, and some members of HADD said releasing the names of the judges was premature, since the list was not complete.

Besides Karl, a woman, Carol Nelson of Edmonds, addressed the news conference.

She said she and her ex-husband had worked out an agreement so their three children would suffer as little as possible, but that in many cases the ex-wife holds the power in a relationship, because she is given preferential treatment by courts.

The result, she said, has been a breakdown in relations between men and women. "We've lost basic respect between each other," she said.

She said she and her ex-husband had worked out an agreement so their three children would suffer as little as possible, but that in many cases the ex-wife holds the power in a relationship, because she is given preferential treatment by courts.

The result, she said, has been a breakdown in relations between men and women. "We've lost basic respect between each other," she said.

Religion comes back to university campus

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Religion is making a strong comeback on the University of Arizona campus. Increasing numbers of UA students are becoming interested in religious services, according to directors and ministers of several religious organizations that serve the campus.

"Students are finding that it's still OK to practice your religion and be cool," said Terry Seidemann, director of the United Grange No. 151.

And the religious activity is vastly different from that of the 1960s and early to mid-1970s.

"Now it is a much more personal religion. Students are looking for spiritual enrichment; call it a spiritual nautilus," said the Rev. Thomas DeMann, director of the Newman Catholic Student Center.

"In the '60s it was 'Prove to me that religion has a value.' In the '80s it's 'Give me a good sermon,'" he said.

"They are saying, 'If there is something there that really nourishes me I'm satisfied,'" he said.

The Rev. Herb Schmidt, director of the Lutheran Campus Ministry, added: "The '90s were spiritually bankrupt. Very few students wanted to be involved in spiritual study and prayer groups. They were more concerned with the issue of social justice."

ISU offers van to campus

TWIN FALLS — Idaho State University students interested in commuting to the Pocatello campus for classes this summer are urged to call the ISU Resident Center, 734-4478 or 236-2556.

If interest is sufficient, ISU will offer a commuter van service between June 16 and Aug. 7. Summer classes meet Monday through Thursday.

Marjorie Slotten, resident center coordinator, said: "The commuter van running to Pocatello from Burley this summer proved to be an excellent resource for students who were unable to move to Pocatello. If enough students commit to using the van this summer, we will arrange for a driver and scheduling through the ISU Motor Pool."

Flee wave of murder Americans leave Moslem Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Ten Americans and several Europeans fled from west Beirut in a heavily guarded convoy at dawn Tuesday to escape a new plague of kidnapping and murder that followed the U.S. air raids on Libya.

The flight of foreigners has stripped the faculties of the American University of Beirut and other Western-run institutions that have been an integral part of Lebanese life for decades. An armed guard was provided by Druse militia chieftain Walid Jumblati, who is no friend of the United States but called the killing of kidnapping Westerners a "barbaric retaliation" for the raids.

Druse militiamen carrying Soviet-made AK-47 assault rifles rode with the convoy that took the evacuees across the war-torn city's sectarian dividing line into Christian east Beirut.

Jumblati opposed the U.S. peacekeeping effort of 1983, during which 60 U.S. Marines were killed in Druse-controlled mountain areas. He agreed to provide protection Tuesday because he was outraged by the murders of a kidnapped American librarian and two British teachers, whose bodies were found last Thursday.

John McCarthy, a 30-year-old British television cameraman, was kidnapped last Thursday. The conservative Beirut newspaper Al-Anwar published an interview Tuesday that quoted Jumblati as condemning "this barbaric retaliation" for the U.S. raids April 15 on Tripoli and Benghazi.

It quoted him as saying, in response to a question about lawlessness in west Beirut: "I shall exercise my responsibility and do my best, in cooperation with Mr. Barri, to stop a disaster from befalling us all."

Jumblati and Nabih Berri, leader of the Shiite Moslem militia Amal, are allies in the 11-year-old civil war with Lebanese Christians. He said often that violence against foreigners eventually would force Western schools and universities in west Beirut to close.

The convoy rolled out on west Beirut's seaside Jim Treissah boulevard at first light, escorted by six jeeps of riot police in berets.

Bearded Druse gunmen raced around the moving convoy in 12 cars with AK-47s thrust through open doors and windows, horns honking incessantly.

Moslem and Christian snipers stopped shooting when the convoy reached the no-man's land at the Museum crossing in the center of Beirut.

Jumblati's men stopped there and the convoy sped off through the 500-yard free-fire zone to the Christian sector with the six police jeeps in escort.

The convoy went to the U.S. Embassy compound in the Christian suburb of Aukar, 12 miles north of Beirut.

At least three evacuees were professors at the American University. Another worked at the French-run College Protestant Francaise, one at the American International College and one at the Rashidien International Language Center, a private institute.

Philip Grant of Santa Barbara, Calif., was a political science professor at the university.

Soviets claim U.S. lost 5 planes in raid

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet official said Tuesday that five U.S. planes were lost or damaged in last week's raids against Libya and that Pentagon officials were withholding the information.

Vladimir Lomelko, chief of the Foreign Ministry press department, also told a news conference that Moscow would study carefully President Reagan's announcement that the United States will dismantle two U.S. nuclear submarines to keep within SALT II limitations.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Col. Marvin L. Braman repeated Tuesday that the United States lost one plane during the April 15 Libyan raids; an F-111 bomber with two crewmen. He said the Soviet claim was "total and utter nonsense."

The F-111 may have been downed by Libyan anti-aircraft fire. A newspaper in the United Arab Emirates, the state-run Al-Itihad, has quoted Libyan sources as saying the wreckage was pulled from the Mediterranean and airlifted to the Soviet Union.

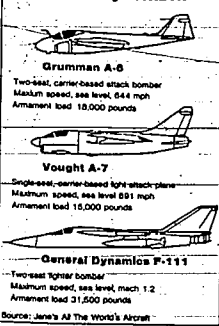

The Pentagon said five F-111s and two A-6 anti-aircraft fire. A newspaper in the United Arab Emirates, the state-run Al-Itihad, has quoted Libyan sources as saying the wreckage was pulled from the Mediterranean and airlifted to the Soviet Union.

Lomelko said the U.S. announcement that just one plane was lost was untrue.

"Many more aircraft were damaged and destroyed and the American air force sustained greater losses than were reported," he said.

Lomelko said his information came from Soviet and "various" sources not identified. He said the information showed five aircraft lost or damaged.

bases. He did not say whether the Soviets have the F-111 wreckage.

Lomelko said, "As far as details as to what aircraft were shot, what aircraft were damaged, I don't think it is relevant to go into all this because this should be the headache of the air force of the United States. Anyway, we are speaking about considerable damage, which was reflected by the American side."

The press official said Reagan's Monday announcement about dismantling two U.S. nuclear submarines, "We will weigh this carefully."

The United States and the Soviet Union have accused each other of violating SALT II, the second phase of a Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty to limit antiballistic missiles and also to limit nuclear offensive weapons.

The U.S. Senate never ratified SALT II, but both sides have said they will observe it.

Lomelko indicated that the U.S. announcement might be a positive move and said the Soviet Union is for continuing the treaty.

"Asked if the Soviets were satisfied that America will stay within treaty limits, Lomelko said that remained to be seen.

"In the past there were declarations which did not coincide with actions. Don't put the cart before the horse," he said.

At the conference, Lomelko was asked when Soviet negotiators expected to submit details of their latest proposal for reducing conventional troops and weapons in Europe. Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev announced a new initiative in a speech at the East German Communist Party Congress in Berlin.

Political differences bar to normal trading links

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite huge grain sales over the years, the Soviet Union and the United States cannot appear to be normal trading partners until some major political differences are settled, a Soviet official said Tuesday.

Albert Melnikov, deputy trade counselor at the Soviet Embassy here, raised old complaints that the United States discriminates against the Soviet market or in the United States itself, in this respect, by periodically imposing embargoes and by generally treating his country like a second-rate trade partner.

"So long as these obstacles exist, there will be no normal development of Soviet-U.S. trade and economic ties on a large scale," Melnikov told a meeting of the Newspaper-Parm-Editors of America.

"This is regrettable, but we are not going to beg the United States for anything," he said. "We're not competing with you in the world market or in the United States itself, in this respect."

Melnikov said the present trade situation is a one-way street, with the Soviet Union importing 10 to 12 times the value of products sold to the United States.

As other Soviet officials have done, Melnikov complained of some quality problems with U.S. grain shipments, also noting that a lag Moscow's purchases of U.S. wheat involved a gap between your price and prices which are proposed by others. . . . The problem is in the gap."

Melnikov shared a panel with representatives from the European Community, Australia, Canada and New Zealand.

Philippine rebellion no worse

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, who led the revolt, deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos to flee, said Tuesday the military supports a political solution to the communist rebellion.

Enrile said he now lives in Hawaii, claimed in a videotaped interview released Monday that the insurgents would drive President Corazon Aquino from office within a month. He accused her and members of her Cabinet of sympathizing with the rebels.

Enrile said rebel attacks had become less frequent, but more intense, since Marcos left the country Feb. 26 and Mrs. Aquino took over. The insurgency began soon after Marcos became president in 1965.

In stating that the military agrees with Mrs. Aquino's desire for a negotiated solution, Enrile said Marcos "was dreaming" when he claimed recently that military morale had declined since she assumed office.

He said Marcos and some former government officials were mediating her government would fall because they want to undermine it in hopes of a comeback.

In other developments: A presidential commission trying to recover billions of dollars Marcos and his associates allegedly stole from the Philippines froze the assets of two Manila newspapers that had supported him.

A human rights agency investigating the disappearance of about 900 political activists under Marcos dug-up the remains of four people at a site that may have been a dumping ground for torture victims.

Enrile said the insurgency "has not (been) any worse than it was" despite reports of several battles with soldiers in the past few days.

"The frequency of encounters has lessened but the intensity is somewhat heightened," he told a news conference.

According to figures given by the military and the official Philippine News Agency, 102 people have been killed in rebel-related violence in three provinces since Friday.

The total includes 33 rebels, 31 soldiers and a civilian reported killed in a series of gunbattles in Enrile's home province of Cavendish. Ten of the insurgents were killed in an encounter Tuesday, the reports said.

Bomb falls dozens

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — South African-backed rebels in Mozambique claimed responsibility Tuesday for a car bomb in the capital of Maputo that injured dozens of people.

The rebels also claimed their attacks between April 13 and April 17 killed more than 1,000 Mozambican, Zimbabwean and Canadian troops. Neither of the claims could be verified.

Libyans walk around wreckage of Boeing 727 destroyed in attack on the Benghazi airport

Reporters see some damage from raid but not all viewed TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Foreign reporters have been shown shattered houses, wrecked mess halls and devastated schools as evidence of last week's U.S. air raid, but they have been kept from viewing sensitive military targets.

Libyan authorities have taken reporters to five areas containing the air raid targets identified by the Pentagon. President Reagan called the April 15 strikes on Tripoli, the capital, and Benghazi, this North African nation's second-largest city, a blow against terrorism.

Reporters also saw scores of damaged houses in a well-to-do neighborhood in central Tripoli, which the Pentagon did not identify as a target. U.S. officials claimed the damage there was caused by misfired Libyan missiles or bombs jetted from a U.S. F-111 bomber believed shot down in the attack.

Maj. Abdul Salam Jalloud, Col. Moammar Khadafi's deputy, told reporters Friday that 37 people, most of them civilians, were killed in the attack. An official told reporters touring Benghazi on Monday that 24 civilians died in the raid there.

Foreign diplomats estimated 100 or more people were killed, but neither the Libyan officials' figures nor the diplomats' estimate could be verified. Nineteen victims were buried in Tripoli last week at a public ceremony, witnessed by foreign reporters, and Libya's official news media carried accounts of funerals in Benghazi.

While Libyans have taken pains to dramatize the suffering of civilians, reporters have been unable to assess the damage to sensitive military targets such as the commando diving school at the Sidi Bilal naval base 10 miles west of the capital.

At Sidi Bilal, Libyan authorities showed reporters a naval-academy dormitory shattered by a direct hit as well as the ruins of an officers' club, swimming pool and mess hall.

Reporters were not taken to a walled compound which Libyan officers indicated contained the diving school. Journalists could see broken windows and damaged roofs behind the wall, indicating that at least some bombs and rockets hit.

One West German who works at the base told reporters he heard three large explosions which appeared to have come from inside the compound area.

However, the Libyans were fairly quick to show reporters damage at one sensitive target — Khadafi's headquarters in the Bab al-Azzizyah military barracks of Tripoli.

Khadafi's two-story blue-and-white stone house was in shambles, its facade ripped away, its walls pocked with hundreds of shell fragments, its ceilings collapsed.

Huge mounds of rubble — broken furniture, bits of plaster, chunks of metal — filled the rooms and stairwells.

In Benghazi, which reporters visited Monday, evidence of damage at the airport was still visible: A small bomb crater could be seen in the taxi area of the runway near the remains of a Libyan Arab Airlines Boeing 727 and a Fokker F-27 used for domestic flights.

Britain rounds up 21 Libyans to be expelled for activities

LONDON (AP) — Britain rounded up 21 Libyans Tuesday and said it would expel them for "revolutionary activities."

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said her government was considering further actions against Libya, but not economic sanctions.

The only detainee whose name was announced was Adel Masoud, 23, an airline pilot trainee who threatened to form an anti-U.S. suicide squad a month ago during the U.S.-Libya confrontation in the Mediterranean.

The 21, all university students except for Masoud, were among 7,500 Libyans living in Britain and were picked up in early morning raids around the country, the Home Office said. They were to be deported soon.

The swift British action is based on a Common Market decision announced Monday to restrict Libyan activities around Europe.

No immediate reaction came from Libya. But in Moscow, the official Soviet news agency Tass said London had joined a "vicious anti-Libyan campaign." Tass said was launched by Washington. Tass said "accusations of Libyan involvement in revolutionary activity were a pretext for the arrests and deportations."

Home Secretary Douglas Hurd, whose jurisdiction includes the police, said the authorities had made certain that the 21 Libyans training here as pilots or aircraft technicians were not in a position to commit acts of terror.

Except for the trainee pilot, all the Libyans were students at universities in Scotland, Wales and England, including five in London, the Home Office said.

Mrs. Thatcher told the House of Commons she would have liked the Common Market to take more sweeping measures against Libya and she revealed that Britain has opposed selling European food surpluses to Libya at cut prices.

But the prime minister rejected a call for economic sanctions by Neel Kinnock, leader of the opposition Labor Party.

Kinnock said economic measures would be more effective against Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi and "less lethal to his people" than U.S. air raids.

"Unless the rest of our (European) community partners agree with us, there is nothing we can do alone," he said of economic sanctions.

Under a Common Market decision to bar any expelled Libyan from entering any member country, the deportation bans the 21 Libyans from all 12 Common Market nations.

The Home Office said their names would be circulated as undesirable around Europe.

The decision to expel them "was taken in the light of information about their active involvement in Libyan student revolutionary activity in the United Kingdom," the Home Office announced. It said deporting them "would be conducive to the public good in the interests of national security."

Soviet vessel reaches Tripoli

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — A Soviet naval vessel appeared in Tripoli harbor Tuesday in the first military demonstration of Moscow's support of Libya since the U.S. air raid on Tripoli and Benghazi last week.

Its name could not be determined by reporters confined to a hotel, about a quarter mile from the harbor, but the vessel clearly was flying the red Soviet flag as it lay in the eastern reaches of the port.

After the U.S. air raid, Moscow said it reserved the right to maintain military links with Libya, and the Soviet ambassador was reported to have met repeatedly with the Libyan leader, Col. Moammar Khadafi.

The Soviet vessel would have had to pass through surveillance by the U.S. 6th Fleet, which is believed to be keeping watch on Libya from afar in the Mediterranean Sea.

U.S. owes something, British politicians say

LONDON (AP) — The chairman of the governing Conservative Party said Tuesday Britain's support for U.S. bombing of Libya cost votes and that President Reagan owed the government favors in return, including streamlining extradition of IRA guerrillas from the United States.

"I hope they (Americans) recognize this action has caused us some political difficulties in the short run," said Norman Tebbit, chairman of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party and a Cabinet minister without portfolio.

"I am sure that virtue is its own reward. I hope it comes in this life rather than the next."

Tebbit, probably Mrs. Thatcher's closest political aide, spoke at a luncheon of the Association of American Correspondents. His comments appeared to mark the informal presentation of a bill to the Reagan administration for the political hammering Mrs. Thatcher has taken and the adverse opinion poll reactions since the April 15 raid.

Reagan said he had proof that Libya backed terrorism against Americans.

The bombing attack, popular in the United States and opposed as futile and dangerous by every West European ally except Britain, was launched partly from British bases.

Government officials have acknowledged privately that they were taken aback by the degree of opposition here to official support for the raid. Opinion polls indicated two-thirds of Britons opposed the move. All the opposition parties have lambasted the government.

Asked what the British government wanted in return, Tebbit referred to extradition legislation and also urged a softening of the U.S. position in quarrels over European Common Market farm production and attempts to apply U.S. laws outside the United States.

Legislation before the U.S. Congress would stop guerrillas of the outlawed Irish Republican Army from finding refuge in America on grounds their offenses were politically motivated.

A secret to quick yet sophisticated cuisine is adding premium cognac and liqueurs to make even everyday economical meals into special fare.

Whether you find yourself entertaining guests or just want a midweek celebration for your family, we suggest the following:

Start by using your good china, a few fresh flowers and special linens to dress your table for the occasion. Next prepare the Brochettes Dijon Flambe. Flambéing is a very impressive entertaining tool; it turns ordinary foods into extraordinary fare, and you'll be amazed at how simple it is to do.

To accompany this entree, serve the brochettes over rice and make this distinctive Carrot Puree. For dessert, serve Chilled Pears Cafe for a finale to a meal that is sure to be remembered and appreciated.

Flambe (pronounced flam-bay) is a French word for the flaming of food with a liqueur during preparation or when brought to the table for serving.

It's a splendid effect that will make any meal impressive. The alcohol evaporates during flaming, leaving the food with just the subtle flavor of the cognac or liqueur without the calories of alcohol. Try one of these easy techniques:

The French have inspired such dishes as (l to r): Brochette Dijon Flambe, Chilled Pears Cafe and Carrot Puree light with a match. Never pour li-•flaming dish.

• Combine the cognac or liqueur with a sauce, then light the sauce and spoon over the main dish or • Soak a sugar cube with cognac or liqueur and light. Place on top of main dish or dessert.

A long stick match is a helpful tool to use when flambéing.

BROCHETTE DIJON FLAMBE

1 teaspoon dried thyme
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 cup Drambuie
1 cup dijon mustard
2 tablespoons honey
2 pounds lamb or chicken, cut into 1 1/2 inch cubes
Salt and pepper
4 tablespoons Drambuie

In a saucepan, combine garlic, thyme, lemon juice and Drambuie. Cook over medium heat for about 10 minutes until reduced slightly. Stir in mustard and honey and simmer for a few minutes. Sprinkle lamb with salt and pepper and toss with mustard mixture. Thread on skewers and grill or broil 8-10 minutes on each side. Flambe by heating 4 tablespoons of Drambuie until warm. Light Drambuie and pour over brochettes. Makes 6 servings.

CARROT PUREE
2 pounds carrots
1 orange, sliced
1/4 cup sugar
3 tablespoons butter
1/4 cup Courvoisier Cognac chopped parsley

Peel and slice carrots. In a medium saucepan, add carrots, orange slices, sugar and enough water to cover. Bring to boil and cook until tender, 20-30 minutes. Remove carrots, reserving liquid for later. Put carrots in food processor or blender with butter and puree. Add Courvoisier and enough reserved liquid until creamy. Season with salt and pepper and garnish with chopped parsley. Makes 6 servings.

During Passover, experimentation with Jewish cuisine is ideal

Since Thursday with its full moon is the start of the Jewish holiday of Passover, an insight or two into Jewish cuisine. If the closest you've ever come to the realm of Jewish cooking was the movie "Fiddler on the Roof," then you are really in for a treat. Did you know that many of the foods in your supermarket have a special status? This sign is either a K or a U in a circle printed somewhere on the container, and it means the food is "kosher." In my dictionary, kosher is defined as sanctioned by Jewish law; especially, designating food that may be eaten as ritually clean.

A manufacturer just can't put the kosher insignia on his product. He first has to put in a formal request and then fill out a form that describes his processes. Then, if he passes that step, he will be visited by an inspection team or a rabbi who will very carefully check the operation before he gives it the approved mark.

In his inspection, the rabbi checks that no forbidden foods are processed in the plant, used in the processing or even as ingredients in the cleaning materials.

The strictness and details of the dietary laws are very intricate and are really for a scholar.

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

Here, I will take the easy way out and simply provide you with a couple of delicious recipes that are served during Passover. Some Jewish households change all the household dishes for Passover and make sure that certain ingredients are never mixed or served at the same meal.

One ingredient you'll find used over and over for Passover is potato starch, and lots of potatoes are used. Many of the recipes don't use dairy or meat products and are called pareve recipes. Also, most grains and flours are not to be used during this holiday, so matzo meal or cake meal is available in most grocery stores for this special time.

One recipe given me by a Jewish friend is Passover Apple Cake. It calls for an 8- or 9-inch square baking pan. You must use cake meal or matzo meal and potato starch to make it authentic.

PASSOVER APPLE CAKE Filling:
4 large apples, peeled, cored and halved
1/2 cup sugar (or to taste)
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon potato starch
Batter:
3 eggs
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup oil
1/2 cup cake meal
1/2 cup potato starch
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 cup orange or lemon juice
Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Slice the apples by hand or in a processor and mix with the remaining filling ingredients.

Using an electric mixer, beat the eggs and sugar until light-colored. Slowly add the oil as you keep beating. Add the cake meal, 1/4 cup of potato starch and the cinnamon and mix very well. Drizzle the juice over the batter as you finish adding the dry ingredients. Let this batter stand for a few minutes and it will get a bit thicker.

Grease the pan and pour half the batter into it. Cover this layer with the apples and then spread the remaining batter over the top.

Bake for 45 to 50 minutes or until nicely browned. It does not freeze well.

Here is another recipe from my friend, however because of the mix of ingredients, I don't think it's a true Passover recipe. But it is a good example of Jewish cooking and one your family might really like. This is not, I repeat not, a diet recipe by any stretch of the imagination!

Take advantage of asparagus season

Here are more great ways to enjoy it:

Most asparagus butts probably don't know or even care that the ancient Greeks used the word "asparagus" to refer to all tender shoots picked at a certain white very young. All that matters to asparagus lovers is that the fresh season is upon us, a six-week stretch when they can't get enough of the "aristocrat of vegetables."

To most consumers, a typical asparagus stalk picked out in a supermarket ranges from 7 to 10 inches in length. However, left unpicked, certain strains of asparagus can grow from 6 to 10 feet high.

The asparagus season is a true sign of spring. It's an all-edible product with very little waste. Here's just a few of the ways asparagus can be used.

ORIENTAL BEEF AND ASPARAGUS
1/2 pounds round steak, 1/2-inch thick
1/4 cup soy sauce
1/2 teaspoons sugar
3 tablespoons sherry or water
2 pounds fresh asparagus, cut into 1-inch pieces
1 cup vegetable oil
8 ounces fresh mushrooms, sliced or 1 8-ounce can mushroom slices, drained
Remove fat from meat. Cutting across grain, slice meat into thin 2-inch strips. Meat may be semi-frozen for easy slicing. Mix soy sauce, sugar and sherry with meat, stirring well to coat all pieces. Set aside. Cook fresh asparagus in boiling water 4 minutes or until crisp-tender; drain. Heat 2 tablespoons of the oil in a large skillet over medium high heat. Add asparagus and mushrooms and stir-fry for 2 minutes; remove from skillet. Heat remaining oil in skillet. Add drained meat and stir-fry until meat is cooked but still juicy. Add asparagus, mushrooms and drained marinade; stir-fry entire mixture for another 2 minutes or until hot. Serve immediately. Makes six servings.

The Magic Valley is full of country roads along which wild asparagus grows; try using it with oriental beef

ASPARAGUS WITH TANGY SAUCE
1 1/2 pounds fresh asparagus
1/2 cup dairy sour cream
1/2 cup mayonnaise
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
Cook asparagus in boiling water until tender; drain. Place in serving dish. While cooking asparagus, combine remaining ingredients in small saucepan. Heat over low heat, stirring frequently until thoroughly heated. Pour over hot asparagus or serve as a sauce in a dish. Garnish with chopped pimiento if desired. Makes six servings.

MARINATED ASPARAGUS SALAD
2 cups cooked asparagus pieces
1 small red onion, thinly sliced
1 or 2 tomatoes, chopped
Salt and pepper to taste

ITALIAN SALAD DRESSING
Combine all ingredients with enough salad dressing to moisten well. Stir gently. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Stir again before serving. Makes about six servings.

2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted

Sun Valley faithful observe holiday with special foods

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY - Although there is no synagogue or rabbi in the Sun Valley area, Naomi Fine will observe the beginning of Passover tonight together with a small group of Jewish members of her faith. The traditional Jewish meal will be eaten at the Knendery Restaurant in Ketchum.

The traditional week-long holiday, she said, starts with a big feast the night before Passover which commemorates the freedom of the Jews from bondage in Egypt.

When Fine moved to Sun Valley from Las Vegas about 10 years ago, she invited other Jewish residents to join her in celebrating the religion's major holidays. She discovered Helen Goldberg had been doing the same thing for 30 years.

"Helen and I became good friends, and I realized we were doing this together," she said. The women decided to pool their efforts and hold the feast in a local restaurant. This also did away with a streache-dishwashing chore.

Fine and others are doing most of the cooking for the feast. They will not use bread or cake flour and none of the food can be leavened.

The traditional meal consists of a potato dish, other vegetables and salad, chicken soup with matzo ball dumplings and chicken or brisket. Dessert is usually macaroons or sponge cake, made with matzo meal, instead of flour.

"You give up bread, and you give up sweets. It's sort of like Lent," she said.

She uses the recipe on the box of matzo meal to make the matzo balls, or dumplings, for the soup. She suggests adding to the recipe a little extra black pepper and chopped parsley, for more flavor, and about a quarter of an teaspoon of baking powder. Put a little oil or water on hands before forming dumplings to prevent dough from sticking, she said.

Roasted chicken will be the main course. Fine usually prepares two.

ROASTED CHICKEN
Heat oven to 400 degrees. Coat bird with a tiny bit of vegetable oil to render the skin and make the fat drop off faster, so there is not much left on the chicken. Rub chicken all over and on the inside, beginning with salt and pepper and then with a little bit of olive oil. Sprinkle with basil, thyme and savory. There are no set amounts of these ingredients. Place in pan uncovered, breast side down. Cooked in this position, it will not use bread or cake flour and none of the food can be leavened. The traditional meal consists of a potato dish, other vegetables and salad, chicken soup with matzo ball dumplings and chicken or brisket. Dessert is usually macaroons or

Lobster Pernod gains in global popularity

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
The Associated Press

Sharon Oliver, a friend of mine who is still under 30, has switched careers. Born, bred and educated in Utah, she became a successful travel agent in California. But a year or so ago she came to New York City to try another field—cooking.

Now Sharon, just graduated from The New York Restaurant School, has begun to free-lance. As a starter, she has been developing recipes.

"When I told her I was looking for a dish that could rival Lobster Newburg, I was famous since turn-of-the-century Delmonico days—she took on the challenge.

Recently Sharon arrived—in my kitchen around noontime. In the order she produced Lobster Pernod, the most elegant of dishes. Modeled on Lobster Newburg, it has few ingredients and is made quickly. Served with wide noodles, it makes a grand and glorious main course for a "celebration dinner" for two.

LOBSTER PERNOD
3 frozen South African rock lobster tails (each about 4 ounces)

- 1 tablespoon butter
- Write part of a scallion, finely chopped
- 2 tablespoons Pernod
- 1/2 cup chicken broth
- 2-3rd cup heavy cream
- Salt and pepper to taste
- Scallion greens, thinly sliced

Thin lobster tails. With a kitchen scissors cut along each side of the soft underside membrane and remove it. Pull the meat carefully from the hard shell and cut it crosswise along the natural divisions.

In a 10-inch skillet melt butter over high heat, quickly add all the lobster and cook, tossing carefully until firm—about 3 minutes. Drain on paper toweling. With skillet off heat, toss in the finely chopped scallion and the Pernod. Return to moderate heat and stir in chicken broth and cream; reduce by boiling gently until sauce coats the back of a metal spoon—8 to 10 minutes. If sauce is thicker than desired, add more broth—if thinner, add more cream. Stir in lobster, salt and pepper, and heat briefly. Serve at once. Garnish with thinly sliced scallion greens.

Makes 2 large servings.

Kugels

- 1/2 cup milk
- 1 pound cottage cheese
- 1 cup sour cream
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup dried apples or apricots, diced
- 1 cube butter, melted
- 5 or 6 eggs, beaten slightly
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup cornflakes
- 1 cup butter, melted
- 1 cup brown sugar

Butter an oblong baking dish about 9x11 inches, or use any similar pan you have on hand. Preheat the oven to 350 degrees.

Cook the noodles in boiling, salted water and drain. Then rinse under cold running water.

In a small bowl, blend the cream cheese and milk. In a large bowl put the noodles, the cream cheese and milk mixture, the cottage cheese, the sour cream, the sugar, the dried fruit, the first cube of melted butter, the eggs and the vanilla.

Mix everything carefully and pour into baking dish.

Crumble the cornflakes and add the other butter and brown sugar and mix well. Sprinkle this as a topping over the noodles. Bake for 35 to 40 minutes.

It really is delicious. There is another variation on it you might like to try; it makes a great lunch dish.

- TOMATO MUSHROOM KUGEL
- 12 ounces broad noodles
 - 1 clove garlic, minced
 - 1 large onion, chopped
 - 1 green pepper, chopped
 - 1 large stalk celery, sliced fairly thin
 - 2 tablespoons oil
 - 11-ounce can of tomato mushroom sauce for a can of condensed mushroom soup if you can't find the sauce
 - Salt and pepper to taste
- Use a 9x11-inch buttered baking dish. Preheat oven to 350 degrees.
- Heat oil in a frying pan and saute vegetables about 5 minutes. Add them to the noodles and the can of soup or sauce. Mix well.
- Pour into the baking dish and bake 50 to 60 minutes.

I hope you enjoyed this little trip into Jewish cooking. Next week we will look at Mexican cooking in honor of Cinco de Mayo, the national Mexican holiday.

Enjoy!

hurry. Unstuffed, it bakes at 400 degrees for one hour. Or, the oven may be set at 400 degrees for 1 1/2 hours and reduced to 350 degrees for 1 1/2 hours.

"It comes out very crispy, very juicy and very good," she said. Fine uses the chicken grease for the following potato dish, which can be used for Passover.

POTATO KUGEL

- 2 onions
- About 1 cup of matzo meal (or bread or cracker crumbs if not observing Passover)
- Salt and pepper, to taste
- Grate potatoes and onions, or put through processor until they are the consistency of hash browns. Form into little cakes and fry a few minutes on each side. Just as-for hash browns. Or, put the whole mixture into a pie dish, which has been greased with fat from the chicken. Put a little of this fat over the top. Place in oven with the chicken for the last half hour of cooking. Slice it like a pie. Serves six.

"My mother used to make it when she made roast beef sometimes, and just used some of the grease with it. When you do it like that, it has the consistency of a potato stuffing. It is good," she said.

Fine said anyone interested in attending tonight's Passover dinner should call her at 622-8660, Helen Goldberg at 726-3763, or Carlyn Ring at 622-5125.

Chefs join to fight cancer

Californian gourmets show how food can be tasty, healthful

By ROSE DOSTI
Los Angeles Times

Health institutions traditionally have remained aloof from the recreational activities of public life. And the American Cancer Society has been no exception.

Not anymore. More health organizations are beginning to see the value of infiltrating a segment of society that patronizes the world of restaurants, follows a premier-fashion trend and preoccupies itself with affluence.

The American Heart Association successfully has filtered into the mass restaurant scene by designating dishes on menus which meet its guidelines for good heart health, but the effect upon public health has not been as spectacular as the group might wish.

The Kidney Foundation has also made use of famous chefs to promote its cause.

Countless other health societies have solicited the assistance of chefs and restaurants to help raise funds. Cake bakes and cook-offs also have been instruments of help.

So it was no surprise recently to find 12 of California's top chefs participating in the launching of the fifth annual Cancer Awareness Week at the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles.

They were demonstrating to the media how food that tastes good also can be good for you; that by following guidelines set forth by the cancer society of increasing foods high in fiber, vitamins A and C, and decreasing fat intake, the public can do for itself what no cancer cure can do: prevent the killer disease from occurring at all.

Latest research indicates that the risk of cancer can be reduced by eating certain kinds and amounts of food. The dietary recommendations of the cancer society are as follows:

- Cut total fat intake. Limit fat added to foods; limit cooked meat, fish or poultry to six ounces a day, and use only low-fat or nonfat dairy products instead of whole-milk products.

- Eat more high-fiber foods. Cereal, bread or flour should be whole-grain or part whole-grain.

Choose higher-fiber foods, such as whole fruit rather than juice; eat beans, peas or lentils.

- Include foods rich in Vitamins A and C in your diet. Include two to three daily servings of dark-green and deep-yellow fruits and vegetables and Vitamin C-rich fruits and vegetables.

- Include cruciferous vegetables in your diet. Cruciferous vegetables include broccoli, Brussels sprouts, cabbage, cauliflower, kohlrabi, rutabaga and turnip.

- Limit consumption of alcoholic beverages to no more than one to two drinks per day, counting one drink as 1 1/2 ounces hard liquor, 4 ounces of wine or 12 ounces of beer.

- Limit consumption of salt-cured, smoked and nitrite-cured foods. Avoid luncheon meats, hams, bacon and sausages, pickles and pickled foods, barbecued or smoked foods.

- Include three servings of calcium-rich foods, such as low-fat or nonfat milk and yogurt, low-fat cheeses, tofu, broccoli, bok choy, collard, dandelion, kale, mustard and turnip greens.

- Limit the amount of sugar added to one teaspoon per serving and salt to 1/4 teaspoon per serving.

GRAPEFRUIT AND BLOOD ORANGE SALAD

- 6 blood oranges
- 2 ruby grapefruit
- 2 small heads radicchio or bitter green lettuce
- Vinaigrette

- Peel 4 blood oranges and slice thinly into rounds, reserving remaining 2 oranges for juice. Peel and section grapefruit. Line plates with radicchio. Arrange orange and grapefruit over radicchio. Chill. Pour Vinaigrette over salad when ready to serve. Makes 4 servings.

Vinaigrette

- 2 tablespoons blood orange juice
- 2 teaspoons sweet balsamic vinegar
- Dash Champagne vinegar
- Squeeze of lemon
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- Dash ground black pepper
- 2 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil
- Combine orange juice, balsamic vinegar, Champagne vinegar, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Let stand 10 minutes, then stir in oil.

It pays to check seed packs for 'days to maturity' rating

The "days to maturity" ratings in catalogs and on seed packets is a good guide for vegetable variety selection.

Not all seedpackets or catalogs have these ratings, but it pays to look for them, especially for long season vegetables such as tomatoes, peppers, corn, melons and winter squash.

Days to maturity is the number of days required from the time seeds or plants are placed in the ground until the first harvest, under optimum growing conditions. For vegetables normally planted from started plants, such as tomatoes and peppers, the period is calculated from transplanting date.

In cooler growing conditions are not optimum for warm weather vegetables in the Magic Valley, it usually takes from one to three weeks longer than the rated maturity.

Another important consideration is the length of harvest period. We normally want to harvest tomatoes for several weeks before frost kills the plants, leaving a lot of fruit to eat.

On the other hand, a week to 10 days is usually long enough to harvest the whole crop of sweet corn.

Considering all these factors, a rating of 70 days or less is best for tomatoes, peppers and eggplant. With melons a rating of 80 days or less is needed. Eighty-five days is the practical maximum for sweet corn. Winter squash with ratings of more than 90 days do not produce much ripe fruit in the Magic Valley.

In higher elevations with shorter growing seasons, subtract 5 or 10 days from these ratings. Areas like Sun Valley are usually not successful with any long season, tender vegetable unless some kind of growing structure or frost protection is provided.

With any of the above vegetables, it is not wise to buy an unknown variety without a days to maturity rating. More than half of the varieties have ratings higher than those listed above. For example, I saw an interesting large fruited tomato on a local seed rack which had no rating. When I found the rating in a catalog, it was 90 days. After adding another 20 days for our colder climate, it probably would not even have matured one ripe fruit in Rexburg with a growing season just over 100 days.

With cold hardy vegetables such as root and leaf vegetables, almost any variety will mature in our climate. Of course some are better adapted than others. Radishes, carrots, lettuce, spinach and most of the cabbage family can be planted almost any time now. They can withstand frosts down to the mid-20s.

I have a list of vegetables which have proven to be well adapted in the Ricks College Research and Demonstration Garden. This list includes brief planting instructions and sources for hard-to-find varieties. If you would like a copy, send $1 and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Allen Wilson, P.O. Box 40, Rexburg, Idaho 83440.

A portable heater will cut varnishing time

By ANDY LANG

Q — I plan to do some varnishing. The varnish I have used a couple of months ago, and I have kept it in an airtight container. I assume it will be all right. In the meantime, I have heard the drying time of varnish can be cut down if you first warm the furniture with a portable heater. Is this so?

A. — Yes, but I don't generally recommend it. However, you can do it if you are extra careful about keeping the varnish away from the portable heater.

Among paint choice criteria are its color, durability and finish

By ANDY LANG
The Associated Press

Planning to paint a room in your house? Give some thought now to the kind of paint you want to use and the color of it.

The kind of paint will determine whether the finished appearance will be glossy, semi-glossy, flat or whatever. It will also play a part in the ease of application and the durability of the product. The color of the paint will determine the mood of the room and serve as the decorating base.

These things are important, but not the only factors affecting the result. Surface preparation is vital, as is the quality of the paint. If you pick up a roller or brush and start the job without preparing the surface properly, you will regret it either immediately or within a few months. And, since you are putting in your own labor, it is false economy to buy cheap paint merely to save a few dollars.

Latex paints are the big sellers among do-it-yourselfers. They make it easier to clean up and they have very little odor. Latexes now come in high glosses, semi-glosses and flats. A high gloss paint is extra washable, resists moisture and wears very well, which is why it is used so much in kitchen and bathrooms. Flat paints are easier on the eyes and thus preferred for living rooms and bedrooms.

It is usually impractical to remove everything from a room before it is painted. But you can at least remove the light pieces. The heavy objects can be moved to the center of the room; then cover them and the floors with paper or plastic dropleths or whatever else you have on hand that will do the job. You will get a neater ceiling result if you lower the base of the ceiling fixture a little and take off all switch plates, doorknobs, etc.

Preparing the surface means removing dust and grime, scraping off any loose paint, patching cracks and holes, and sealing the patches, and dulling all glossy areas. In short, don't just go ahead and paint, which is a common fault because the do-it-yourselfer too often is impatient to begin the project.

Just as latex paint has become the darling of home owners, so has the paint roller. It covers large surfaces a lot more easily than does a brush, although a brush is usually necessary for detail work and is especially important when working in corners and for edging.

Whether you are using a brush or a roller, always remember to paint from a dry area into a wet one. An extension handle on a roller makes it possible to do most ceilings while standing on the floor, although some people are set against such a handle on the grounds it gives them a stiff neck. You can avoid this possibility if you remember to paint the part of the ceiling ahead of you rather than painting directly overhead. When painting the ceiling or the walls, do not overload a roller and do not apply heavy pressure when using it.

Colors do things to a room. Yellow, reds and oranges are the so-called "warm" colors, green and blues the "cool" colors. Too much red can overwhelm a room and make it appear smaller. Blue has a calming effect, green is restful, yellow is cheerful. Generally, light colors make a small room seem larger. Obstructions in a room, including radiators, can be made to look less conspicuous by painting them the same color as the rest of the room.

Using special rollers can give you special effects in an informal room. Another way to do this is by dragging or swirling such things as brushes, sponges, whisk brooms, towels or even rags across the newly-applied wet paint.

By EUGENE L. MEYER
The Washington Post

WANGO, Md. — In this obscure corner of the Delmarva peninsula, where chicken farms are everywhere and processing plants are automated, a handful of men take special pains to "make a nice killing."

In their view, the chickens and turkeys they hand-kill at a rate of 1,800 and 350 an hour, respectively, should feel the same.

"God want you don't make ... pain for any animal," said one of the men. "Kill him nicely."

Their locks and curls protruding from under constant work-type hard hats, their black garments hidden under blood-stained white coats, they are the six Hasidic "killing rabbis," or shochets, of Jarmco, Maryland's only kosher poultry plant, where birds are processed under rabbinical supervision to ensure that all Jewish dietary laws are observed.

Three more rabbis, known as mashgiachs, supervise the salting and disemboweling of the birds. A chief rabbi oversees the kosher operation and, after work, acts as spiritual leader and Old Testament teacher to the group.

"My understanding is there's levels of kosher kill," said plant manager Jack Nelson, 53, who used to work for Delmarva chicken king Frank Perdue and is not Jewish. "Supposedly, we're a high-level-of-kosher kill."

The rabbis work side by side with 125 local residents, mostly women, who carry up to 100 chickens, turkeys, eviscerators, cutters and deboners. Because of the ritualistic hand-killing, the pace is slower than at non-kosher plants.

"That's why I stay," said one 52-year-old woman who commutes almost 80 miles each day from Pocomoke City, Md., farther down the shore. "It's slow work."

The 10 bearded rabbis commute for four hours by van from Brandywine's Borough Park, arriving Sunday night and leaving Thursday after work, in time to be home for the Jewish Sabbath, which begins Friday at sundown. Here, they live in a small trailer park.

They sleep in three trailers and worship and cook in one. In the middle of the courtyard is a single picnic table. There is no radio or television, by design.

"You see things you are not allowed to see," explained Ahrom Herskowitz, 27, who supervises the salting of the birds. "Make the process very wild."

What also makes men "very wild," the rabbi explains, is blood in the bird. That is why the poultry is salted and soaked to drain the blood. "You eat wild-animals, the men get also wild," he said.

The rabbis are demonstrably not wild, although an empty bottle of gin was lying in the kitchen sink on a recent visit. One of the rabbis, a scribe, spends his spare time writing Hebrew letters on cowhide with a turkey quill and ink.

The rabbis seem to like plant boss Nelson, who is originally from South Dakota. "Jack, come, take a sit," one said to him.

from Israel. Among themselves, they speak Hebrew and Yiddish. Despite years spent in this country, their knowledge of English is limited.

If their accents seem out of place on the rural Eastern Shore, they say they feel at home here nonetheless. "I don't miss" city life, said Herskowitz. "I like more here the country. It's very quiet. You have here lot of people who like quiet-to live. Eight o'clock here, you don't see nothing."

As a rule, they don't wander far from Wango, said Mendy Kahan, at 25 the youngest rabbi. Occasionally they go into Salisbury, the county seat eight miles from here, Kahan said. "To buy something, food-like" or for the city's "little zoo ... a little fresh air ... to sit in park ... to make a kosher ring around Salisbury."

On one Salisbury outing, the Hasidic rabbis visited Rabbi Maurice Schwartz, who presides over the city's Beth Israel Congregation of 140 families. And Schwartz was recuperating, traveling to the plant when they needed a "Talmud" to make a minyana—the number required to hold a worship service.

The men say it is hard being away from their families. "For money you do a lot of things," said Herskowitz. "We have to bring home at least a dollar, you know?"

The daily routine is simple and unchanging. The men rise around 5, then wash into a mikveh, or ritual bath; half-milk what was once a garage for trucks belonging to the prior owners, Chesapeake Poultry.

They pray for an hour, begin work at 7 and usually continue until 4. They pray, Chief Rabbi Samuel Gander, 55, gives a lesson about a forthcoming holiday or the Talmud, a collection of Jewish religious and civil laws. Then the men pray and go to sleep.

The chickens they kill are hatched locally, in nearby Seaford, Del. The turkeys, which are processed on Wednesdays, come from North Carolina.

Each day a tractor-trailer full of processed poultry leaves the plant for New York City, where the birds are distributed under the brand name of Norwich Kosher. With a few exceptions for observant Salisbury Jews, Jarmco does not sell locally.

Kosher birds, the rabbis say, are cleaner, healthier and tastier than their non-kosher counterparts. The process begins in what is called the killing room.

Here, the live bird is passed by one local worker to another who places it on a metal slaughtering table. After a rabbi, while saying a silent prayer, kills the bird, a third local man places it on an assembly-line hook.

The birds are killed with razor-sharp knives that slit their throats, after a nerve has been cut to lessen the pain. Three rabbis work at a and paprika, with a smear spatula spread over chicken. Tuck windups back akimbo fashion, tie legs together. Roast in a buttered shallow pan in a 325-degree oven, a rabbi, while saying a silent prayer, about 1 hour. Cut into serving pieces with kitchen scissors. Makes 4 servings.

Note: Shake the pan once or twice during the first hour of roasting to prevent the chicken from sticking.

time, in individual cubicles. After a while, three other rabbis relieve them on the line.

The dead birds are then denuded, the feathers plucked by machines. Still on hooks, the birds are moved to the eviscerating line, where the organs are removed and the fowl are inspected for U.S. Department of Agriculture requirements and then by the rabbis for blood and disease. Any deformity—such as a hole in the intestines or a tumor—makes the bird non-kosher. Those that are still edible are silver-tagged by Rabbi Gander for sale.

The birds are then soaked in water, salted under rabbinical supervision and hung out to dry for 30 minutes. Then they are placed in water with ice to lower their temperature before they are packed in wooden crates and trucked to New York, said Nelson.

The company president is Bernie Ackerman, whose office is in lower Manhattan. Nelson and Ackerman communicate often by phone. "Let me get you six tubs of breast," Nelson told him the other day. "I'll work it out."

The normally smooth operation of the kosher processing plant was momentarily put in jeopardy that day when a "killing rabbi" came to the front office to say that he had to go home before the week was over because his father-in-law was sick.

"How you gonna go-home? Fly?" Nelson asked. "I don't think so. You have chickens to kill tomorrow." Nelson said two rabbis could not do the work of three, and he called in the chief rabbi to solve the problem.

"Are we going to kill chickens tomorrow?" Nelson asked. After some discussion between the two rabbis, the younger one agreed to stay.

"All right, yeah," the chief rabbi said. "Killing tomorrow."

Kroger's packaging gives cows due credit

More food containers should indicate sources

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Dear Martin — Judging by the design of most milk cartons, you would never know that milk comes from cows. I recently noticed with approval, however, that the milk carton used by Kroger not only has a cow on it, it also has a barn!

I wrote Kroger a letter of congratulations. Kroger sent me a lovely letter and a coupon for a free package of Kroger cottage cheese. (This carton also has a cow on it.)

The Kroger cows pictured on the cartons do not have udders, but that's another matter. — Sheldon Vanauken, Roanoke, Va.

Dear Sheldon — Thanks for writing. There's something to be said for food packages that show where it all begins.

Dear Martin — I have a gripe, and I've been fuming about it for many months. I have complained to the company, but they have not packed me with coupons for a free product. But I have had it!

My problem is shortening cans. The new ones made out of cardboard. If there is so much as a light dent in the lid, it is all but impossible to open the can, because the rim is so soft.

My husband thought the problem might be the way I was trying to open the cans. So on three different occasions he tried to do it himself — and wound up using a pair of pliers!

My complaints to the companies bring responses such as "No one else has complained" or "It's the best solution." I say baloney. The manufacturers just want to save a little money.

Can anything be done about this? — Lo Greenjack, Altadena, Cal.

Dear Lo — This is the column to write to when you have a problem with a product. I am now testing these containers and would an-preciate hearing from other readers who have experienced problems with shortening containers. Please write to me at this newspaper.

Dear Martin — A few weeks ago, I purchased some crackers and found a foreign object inside the package. I sent the object to the company, along with the top of the box showing the dating code.

I heard nothing from the company, so today I tried calling them. This

Irradiated foods slow to hit market

By CAROLE SUGARMAN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — If the government's final approval last week of low-level irradiation for fruits and vegetables has your eyeing the produce shelves for your first irradiated orange, you may be looking for a long wait. The fact is that most of the produce industry is far from ready to use it.

"I think we're years away from any applications," said Wayne Crain, manager of production, El Paso, Texas, of the Florida Fruit and Vegetable Association. "The proclamation of the regulators is ahead of the research."

There are too many "unknowns," said Crain. Controversy over this technology—a substitute for chemical fumigants and pesticides using gamma or X-rays that at the approved levels will kill insects and destroy spoilage—has centered on the safety issue. However, there are many unresolved questions about commercial application, including appropriate dosage levels, handling and shipping procedures, marketing tactics, costs and consumer acceptance, say industry spokesmen.

For the most part, the produce industry doesn't want to be "the guinea pigs," said Sharon Bomer, chairman of the Coalition for Food Irradiation and director of government relations for the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association. In addition, in the midst of a national health conscious binge over produce, "they don't want to hurt the fresh image" that the industry has established, she said.

Food and Drug Administration spokesman Jim Greene said that it is the agency's job to pass the regulation, and up to the industry to do the practical research for commercialization.

There is still research that must be done, Bomer said. She noted that there are about 10 produce items where the findings on shelf life, taste, aroma and appearance after irradiation have been inconsistent.

Varieties within a specific category—such as valencias and navel oranges—vary in terms of reaction to irradiation and there needs to be more research done on cooking irradiation with different shipping temperatures, Bomer said.

Glenns Ferry boys keep on winning

By SCOTT TUDEHOPE
Times-News writer

WENDELL — Ada Rivera cleaned up in the sprints while the Glenns boys cashed in on the hurdles as the Pilots swept another track meet, this time at the expense of other members of the Canyon Conference here Tuesday.

The performance of the three-time defending District 4 Class A-3 champion Glenns Ferry wasn't surprising, but the Pilots' victory was an eye-opener coming against the 1985 district champion Wendell and tough competition from Declo and Gooding.

More surprising still was the margin of victory. The Glenns Ferry boys rolled up 161 points to 113½ for second-place Wendell. Declo trailed with 93, while Declo had 68, Valley 48, Kimberly 41 and Filer 33½.

On the girls' side, the Pilots prevailed 139½ to 104½ over second-place Declo. Wendell had 84 points, followed by Gooding with 64, Filer with 63, Kimberly with 38 and Valley with 23.

Altogether, the Pilots took six of eight relays, beginning with a sweep of the 800 meters and culminating in the boys' medley. They nearly won the last event of the afternoon as well — the boys' 1600 meters — but Valley's anchor recaptured the lead and broke the tape instead.

Glenns Ferry's boys, who have long labored in the shadow of the school's girls' teams, served notice two weeks ago that they would be a contender for the district honors at well, beating runner-up Declo by a whopping 88 points at the Monté Andrus Memorial meet in Hazelton. Wendell and Gooding didn't participate in that meet, but the Pilots' margin of victory was hardly less convincing here Tuesday.

The boys swept the distance events and won the discus, with senior Mark Carpenter beating Gooding's Sven Swenson and Todd Kimmes with a toss of 132 feet, 1 inch.

"Our girls haven't lost a regular track meet in 5½ years," explained Glenns Ferry girls' Coach Ken Fast of the Pilots' sweep. "Winning is contagious. The seniors pass it on to the freshmen — it's really neat."

On the girls' side, Rivera was a full two weeks ago a second ahead of her competition with a 10.5-second run in the 100, then won the 200 with a time of 27.6 seconds. The only other double first-place winner was Filer's Sandra Garey, who set a personal best in the 1,600 meters at 5:59, and earlier won the 800, staving off a late rally by Gooding's Lisa Graves.

All seven Canyon Conference teams will joined by track teams from several of the Magic Valley's Class A-4 schools at the Bulldog Invitational in Kimberly on Saturday. That meet, and the Declo Invitational which follows on May 3, should be previews of next month's District 4 championships.

The seven Canyon Conference schools will get together again on May 9 in Kimberly to determine a league champion.

CSI coach seeks more JC qualifiers

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Although the College of Southern Idaho track team has no further competition scheduled until next week's Region 18 championships in Rexburg, Coach Rick Neill says he will try to find a meet this weekend for several of his athletes who just missed qualifying last weekend for the National Junior College Athletic Association outdoor championships.

College track

Neill, who had three of his athletes qualify for nationals at last weekend's Bob Gibb Invitational in Boise, is particularly anxious to get sophomore Julie Cupp a last shot at qualifying for nationals in the heptathlon. Cupp missed qualifying with her performance at the Gibb Invitational by just a dozen points. No heptathlon is run at the Region 18 championships. "The way our schedule is set up, the Gibb is about the last chance for us," says Neill. "I've tried to get the other (Region 18 track) coaches to consider running the heptathlon at Regionals, but they won't do it."

Cupp finished sixth in the Gibb Invitational heptathlon with 4,080 points. Several of Neill's athletes, including freshman Joey Johnson who went 7-0 in his first collegiate high jump two weeks ago, should be able to qualify for nationals, at the regional meet, according to the coach.

The Gibb Invitational yielded a number of personal-best performances for CSI. Three of these athletes, sophomore middle distance runner DeVoe Whaley, freshman triple jumper Jessica Tolliver and freshman heptathlete Jennifer Whelan, were qualified for the National Junior College Athletic Association outdoor championship with their performances in the meet.

All of the CSI men had 11 season-best performances and eight personal records, while the Eagles' women had 18 season bests and 10 personal records. In addition to Whaley, who covered the 800 meters in 1:52.18 second to finish in third place in the meet, the Eagles' men set a 31-26 mark from sophomore John Raveling in the 10,000-meter run, good for fifth place; a 48:41.40 mark from sophomore Bennie Hicks, good for third place; a 4:58 high jump

Celtics shut down Jordan, advance

CHICAGO (AP) — Kevin McHale scored 31 points and the Boston Celtics shut down high-scoring Michael Jordan as the Celtics hammered the Chicago Bulls 122-104 Tuesday night for a three-game sweep of their NBA playoff series. Jordan, who had scored 49 and 63 points in the two previous games, was held to 19 points before fouling out to a standing ovation with 5:24 remaining.

Boston never trailed in the game and was up 66-52 at the half. The Bulls cut it to 72-61, but any hopes of upsetting the Celtics were snuffed by a 15-0 run by Boston in the third quarter as the Celtics mounted an 87-61 lead.

Danny Ainge finished with 20 points for the Celtics. Larry Bird added 19, Dennis Johnson 16 and Robert Parish 15. John Paxson led Chicago with 25 points. Dave Corbin had 22 and Orlando Woolridge added 14.

The Celtics broke out to a 12-4 lead, with McHale scoring six of his points and controlling play throughout the first half.

McHale scored 13 points in the first quarter and had 23 by the end of the half, which saw the Celtics in front 66-52.

The Bulls only two points and didn't score a field goal until 2:44 remained in the half. But he came up with eight m?Y points in the half ended.

Jordan who helped pack the stadium with a crowd of 18,968. Corbin and Woolridge did all the scoring for Chicago in the first quarter, that ended with the Celtics ahead 33-23.

Jordan scored 14 points in the first quarter but none in the second and left the game with 4:21 remaining in

The first half after picking up his fourth personal foul. The Celtics held a 1-1 lead at that point. With Johnson, who did a fine job in guarding Jordan, and Bird hitting, the Celtics gradually moved into their 14-point halftime advantage.

Milwaukee 118 New Jersey 113

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Terry Cummings scored 23 points and Paul Pressey 22 and each made a key laydown the stretch as the Milwaukee Bucks rallied from an 18-point halftime deficit to beat the New Jersey Nets 118-113 and complete a three-game sweep of their NBA playoff series Tuesday night.

The Bucks, who allowed the Nets a team-record 73 points in the first half, held New Jersey to 40 in the last two periods. Milwaukee had to play the last 14 minutes without all-star guard Sidney Moncrief, who strained his left foot.

The Bucks will play the winner of the Washington-Philadelphia series in the second round of the playoffs. The Bucks got as close as one point on six occasions in the fourth period before Pressey stole a pass from New Jersey's Otis Birdsong, drove for a layup and, after drawing a foul, sank the free throw for a 112-110 lead.

Two New Jersey free throws tied the score before Cummings gave Milwaukee the lead for good on a baseline jumper with 52 seconds left. The Nets missed three of four free throws in the final minute, ruining any chance for a comeback.

Birdsong paced the Nets with 28 points and Buck Williams had 25. Alton Lister had eight of his 18 points in the fourth quarter for Milwaukee.

Birdsong and Williams scored 18 apiece in the first half as the Nets broke their previous first-half playoff record of 69 set in 1972 against Philadelphia and tied against the 76ers in 1984.

Nets center Darryl Dawkins wasn't in uniform after playing 17 minutes in Game 2, Sunday's apiece in the third quarter as he was suffering a back injury Feb. 4.

Philadelphia 91 Chicago 86

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Sedale Threatford scored eight points and Julius Erving and Bobby Jones added six apiece during a 26-0 Philadelphia streak that began late in the third quarter as the 76ers overcame a 13-point deficit and defeated the Washington Bullets 91-86 Tuesday night.

The victory gave Philadelphia a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five NBA playoff series, which resumes at the Capital Centre Thursday night.

Washington, which scored the final 18 points to win the opening game of the series, pulled to within 89-86 with 16 seconds remaining following a seven-point streak, five of them by Gus Williams, who finished with 30 points.

But Erving, whose two missed free throws with three seconds remaining aided the Bullets in their first-game rally, sank two from the foul line this time with 11 seconds left to blunt the Washington comeback.

The 76ers, who were 0-3 at the Capital Centre during the regular season, trailed 67-54 before launching a comeback with 5:21 remaining in the third quarter and pulled to within 71-56 at the end of the period.

The rally continued into the fourth quarter, with Threatford scoring six points and Erving four during a 14-2 spurt which gave the 76ers an 80-73 lead from the field and canned 22 of 30 free throws.

Erving finished with 22 points, Maurice Cheeks had 21 for Philadelphia and Threatford added 16. Charles Barkley, who had 53 points in the first two games, scored seven in the third quarter as well.

Jeff Malone was runner-up to Williams in the Washington scoring with 13 points.

Detroit 106 Atlanta 97

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Detroit Coach Chuck Daly knew his Pistons were going to have to play some defense if they were to remain alive in the first round of the NBA playoffs.

He also knew the Pistons were going to have to get Kelly Tripucka more involved in the offense.

The Pistons did both Tuesday night and rolled to a surprisingly easy 106-97 victory over the Hawks.

Tripucka scored 13 of his game-high 33 points in the first quarter and led a pressing defense as the Pistons never trailed.

"You can never feel comfortable knowing their offensive capabilities," Daly said. "You must do it on your own terms. It was a little bit of a surprise because the first two games were such offensive shows."

"The question is whether we can come back with the same dedication on Friday."

The Hawks, who trailed by as many as 18, lead the best-of-five series 2-1. The fourth game is scheduled for Friday night in the Silverdome and Game 5, if needed, will be played in Atlanta on Sunday.

The game was tied just once, 18-18, with 3:50 remaining in the first quarter. Tripucka then scored 10 of Detroit's next 13 points as the Pistons jumped in front 31-22 and never looked back.

Tripucka said he felt he wasn't used enough in the first two games when he averaged only 15.8 points.

"I feel, personally, that was one of the problems," Tripucka said. "I was aware I was capable of doing more. But that's not my job. I just listen to the boss."

Atlanta worked it down to within six points four times in the second quarter but each time the Pistons went on another run: Detroit took a 49-47 lead at halftime.

"They changed their defense somewhat," said Dominique Wilkins, the dynamic Atlanta forward who destroyed the Pistons with 50 points in the second game Saturday. "We're not going to panic. We're still a game away."

With Tripucka and Earl Cureton taking turns defending him, Wilkins was held to 21 points, only seven in the second half.

Surprising Leafs go up 2-1

TORONTO (AP) — Rookie left wing Wendell Clark touched off a late three-goal Toronto surge that has given the Maple Leafs the upper hand in their NHL playoff Division final against the St. Louis Blues.

"Russ (Courtnall) threw the puck across and it was a little too far ahead of me so I skated on past the net," Clark said of his winning goal at 13:49 of the third period in a 5-2 victory Tuesday night.

The goaltender was a little slow coming across and I was able to sneak it in on the other side (while shooting the puck from a stance behind the goal line).

"Getting that go-ahead goal really got the guys going. And the crowd really got behind us. That really helps."

Toronto leads the best-of-seven series 2-1, with Game 4 to be played here Thursday night.

"Wendel has been lifting us out of tight situations all year," Maple Leaf coach Dan Maloney said. "He's done it again."

Rick Vaive and Courtnall also scored as the Maple Leafs completed a one-minute, 42-second outburst that swept up the game for the underdog Toronto team.

A group of St. Louis players surrounded referee Bryan Lewis as time expired to voice their disapproval of a quick whistle by Lewis early in the third period that caused an apparent third St. Louis goal to be disallowed.

Doug Wickenshief shoved the puck into the Leaf net a split second after the whistle. On a less controversial call earlier in the game, Greg Paslawski had shoved the puck into the Leaf net and Lewis also ruled against the Blues.

"We can argue until we're blue in the face but it's not going to do any good now," St. Louis forward Bernie Federko said.

"The whistle was a little disappointing. We came in here to win some games, and we played well. We just didn't get any breaks."

"They say a coach is not supposed to criticize the referee, but a coach has to wonder," St. Louis Coach Jacques Demers said.

"Something in the last three years (about Lewis). When we run into him we've been very cautious (about what to expect)."

The game was tied 1-1 after one period on goals by Doug Gilmour for St. Louis and Vaive for Toronto, Greg Paslawski put the Blues on top with the only goal of the second period, then Toronto's Tom Fergus tied it 2-2 with a power-play goal 40 seconds into the third period.

Clark, at top speed, took a rink-wide pass from Courtnall, continued behind the St. Louis net and reached from behind the goal line to tuck the puck behind Blues goaltender Rick Wamsley at 13:49 of the third period to give the Maple Leafs their first lead of the night.

Vaive beat Wamsley from 20 feet to make it 4-2 at 15:15, and Courtnall tied another Maple Leaf goal at 15:31, picking a top corner of the net behind Wamsley on a clear shot after defenseman Rob Ramage had fallen.

Ken Wregget was the winning goaltender. The Blues outshot the Maple Leafs 27-25.

Calgary 3 Edmonton 2

EDMONTON (AP) — Joel Otto scored at 7:32 of the third period to give the Calgary Flames a 3-2 win over the Edmonton Oilers Tuesday night and a 2-1 lead in their NHL playoff series here Tuesday.

AL: Sizzling Yanks brawl with Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — New York rookie Bob Tewksbury, making his first major league start, allowed three hits over 7 1/2 innings as the Yankees beat the Kansas City Royals 5-1 Tuesday night in a game interrupted by an eighth-inning brawl.

Tewksbury, 2-1, had three strikeouts and only one walk in pitching the Yankees to their ninth victory in 13 games, their best start since 1976.

The right-hander was leading 5-1 with one out in the Royals' eighth. George Orta, following an RBI triple, was on third when Tewksbury hit Willie Wilson on the right elbow.

Wilson, waving his arms as if to ask "why me?", walked toward the mound, but was intercepted by Yankees catcher Ron Hassey. Wilson and Hassey jawed for a moment, then began pushing and shoving, and the infield suddenly was a mass of Yankees and Royals.

Order quickly was restored and Wilson was the only player ejected. Reliever Dave Righetti, came in for Tewksbury, who had appeared to be faltering. A Royals spokesman, Dean Vozick said "Tewksbury has a torn finger nail on the index finger of his right hand."

Ricky Henderson, who reached base five times in the Yankees' 2-1 victory over the Royals Monday night, had a single and a triple and scored twice. Henderson bunted safely in the first inning, stole second, reached third on a groundout and scored on Don Mattingly's single.

In the fourth, Ron Hassey walked and advanced to second when Mike Easter walked, then scored on Willie Randolph's RBI single.

Henderson triple leading off the fifth and came home on Ken Griffey's sacrifice fly.

The Yankees made it 5-0 in the eighth when Mattingly led off with a single and one out later advanced to third on Dave Winfield's single. Pinch-hitter Gary Roenicke singled to score Mattingly and send Winfield to third. Winfield scored on Mike Paglarulo's sacrifice fly.

Minnesota 7 Seattle 1

SEATTLE (AP) — Mark Salas hit a bases-loaded triple in the seventh inning and a home run in the ninth as the Minnesota Twins defeated Seattle 7-1 Tuesday night.

Pinch-hitter Gary Roenicke singled to score Mattingly and send Winfield to third. Winfield scored on Mike Paglarulo's sacrifice fly.

Seattle starter Mike Morgan, 1-1, retired the first 15 hitters before yielding a single to Salas in the sixth.

Kirby Puckett opened the seventh

California 5 Oakland 1

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Doug DeCinces' two-run homer and solo shot by Dick Schofield and Wally Joyner backed Kirk McCaskill's two-hitter as the California Angels defeated the Oakland A's 5-1 on Tuesday night.

McCaskill, 2-1, allowed only Alfredo Griffin's single in the third and Mickey Vernon's RBI double in the sixth in going the route for the first time this season. M% walked five and struck out 12, setting a career high.

Texas 10 Toronto 1

TORONTO (AP) — Gary Ward drove in four runs with a single and a home run and Pete Incaviglia, Steve Buechele and Pete O'Brien also homered to power the Texas Rangers to a 10-1 rout over the Toronto Blue Jays on Tuesday night.

Rookie right-hander Bobby Witt overcame a bout of wildness to check the Blue Jays on three hits over six innings and pick up his first major-league victory in his first start of the season. Witt struck out five, walked four and improved his record to 1-0. Mickey Mahler finished for the Rangers, allowing one hit to earn his first save.

Boston 6 Detroit 4

BOSTON (AP) — Don Baylor, Rich Gedman and Tony Armas homered off Jack Morris in the first five innings to power the Boston Red Sox to a 6-4 victory over the Detroit Tigers Tuesday night.

It was a doubly costly loss for Detroit as right fielder Kirk Gibson after severely sprained his left ankle and will be sidelined for four to six weeks.

Morris, 2-2, had given up four homers in Detroit's 65 opening-day victory over Boston. Winner Roger Clemens, 3-0, struck out 10 Tigers before leaving with two outs in the seventh.

Baylor gave the Red Sox the lead for good with his fourth homer of the season, a two-run blast in the third inning after Wade Boggs singled. It made the score 3-2.

Boston ripped Morris for two more runs in the fourth on Gedman's leadoff homer, his second, and Boggs' double that drove in Dwight Evans. Evans had waxed, stolen second and gone to third when catcher Lance Parrish threw the ball into center field.

Armas, who totaled 102 homers over the past three seasons, hit his first major-league homer in the sixth, giving Detroit a 6-2 lead. Dave Collins singled in Detroit's final run in the seventh.

The Red Sox opened the scoring out with an unearned run in the first.

Boggs doubled, went to third on a wild pitch and scored when third baseman Darnell Coles booted Jim Rice's hard grounder for an error.

Detroit took its only lead in the third when Mike Laga led off with a single and Coles hammered his second homer. Laga also homered in the ninth.

Gibson, seventh in AL batting, led off the second inning with a walk. With a 2-1 count on Parrish, Gibson got back to first base in time to beat Clemens' pickoff attempt. He hurt his ankle as his left foot landed on top of the base.

Chicago 5 Milwaukee 4

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Harold Baines hit a three-run homer with two outs in the seventh inning Tuesday to lift the Chicago White Sox to a 5-4 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

The victory snapped a four-game losing streak for the White Sox.

Baines' homer came off reliever Danny Darwin, who allowed 34 homers last season to tie for the AL lead.

Darwin, 1-1, relieved Brewers' rookie starter Juan Nieves, who struck out eight White Sox batters and gave up six hits in 6 1/3 innings of the game with runners at first and second and one out and the Brewers leading 4-2.

Darwin got Wayne Tolleson to fly out. Then Baines hit his second home run of the season to tie.

The White Sox scored the first run in the seventh when Tim Luetjens doubled, went to third on Rodney Craig's pinch hit ground out and scored as Paul Molitor threw in the dirt to first after fielder's voel Skipper's liner down the third-base line.

Juan Agosto relieved Chicago starter Joel Davis, 1-0, in the ninth after Billy Joe Robinson opened the inning with a single. Agosto tried to pick off pinch-runner Mike Felder, but threw the ball down the right-field line allowing Felder to advance to third.

Ernest Riles flew out. Bob James replaced Agosto and struck out pinch-hitter Paul Housholder and Jim Gantner to earn his first save.

Baltimore 5 Cleveland 2

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cal Ripken and Larry Sheets homered off Phil Niekro and Ken Dixon scattered seven hits over 8 1/2 innings in near-freezing temperatures Tuesday night as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Cleveland Indians 5-2.

The right-handed Dixon, 2-0, struggled off a game-time temperature of 33 degrees to strike out seven and walk one. Don Asse came in in the ninth to earn his fourth save.

NL: Chicago rallies to shade Cardinals

CHICAGO (AP) — The slumping Chicago Cubs got a boost by their bottom of the ninth victory over St. Louis on Tuesday. And while Steve Trout didn't get a win for his outstanding pitching, he was happy about the change in his team's fortune.

"This can be a game that can pick a team up," said Trout, who shut out the Cards for 6 1/2 innings before Clint Hurdle's pinch-hit triple off reliever Jay Balier tied the score.

"The No. 1 thing is we bounced back after they tied it," Chicago Manager Jim Frey said. "After Ryan Sandberg's ninth-inning sacrifice fly gave the Cubs only their third win in 10 games this season. "We could have gone into a shell."

Frey's reliever, John Tudor, whose 14-game regular-season winning streak was kept intact when the Cards scored, and walked Bob Dernier to start the bottom of the inning. Dernier pitched 1 1/2 innings and passed ball by catcher Mike Heath.

Todd Worrell then relieved, Trillo bunted, but Dernier beat Heath's throw to third. Pinch-hitter Thad Bosley was intensely walked after Dernier was forced at the plate on Dave Lopes' grounder to short. Sandberg then lifted a fly to center and Trillo easily beat Willie McGee's throw home.

Frey said he sent Bosley up to hit for hot-hitting Shawon-Dunston to force St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog to make a move.

"I figured they might walk Bosley," said Frey. "Walking Bosley, I knew we had a chance to get Sandberg up there with less than two outs."

Worrell is more of a power pitcher and I was just trying to get the ball in the air and get the run in," said Sandberg, whose triple ignited a two-run Chicago rally in the eighth.

Houston 3 Atlanta 2

ATLANTA (AP) — Alan Ashby's leadoff homer in the ninth inning gave the Houston Astros a 3-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves Tuesday night.

Ashby hit a 2-2 pitch from reliever Duane Ward, 0-1, over the right field fence to cap a late rally that helped the Astros overcome a 2-0 deficit with two runs in the seventh. It was Ashby's third homer of the season.

The victory went to Charles Kerfeld, 2-0, who blanked the Braves over the last three innings.

The Astros gained a 2-2 tie in the seventh on a two-run double by Craig Reyn01 sV Jose Cruz opened the inning with a walk and Glenn Davis and Kevin Bass followed with bloop singles to load the bases against David Palmer, who had yielded only one hit in the first six innings.

After Ashby popped out, Reynolds doubled down the right field line to chase Palmer.

Reliever Paul Assenmacher then finished the game. Palmer walked Bill Doran intentionally to load the bases and struck out Terry Puhl to end the inning.

Palmer retired the first nine batters before Dagan lined a single to center to start the fourth.

New York 7 Pittsburgh 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Oleda pitched a four-hitter through seven innings in his first National League start, and Keith Hernandez and Gary Carter each drove in a pair of runs in New York's 7-1, rain-drenched romp over the Pittsburgh Pirates Tuesday night, giving the Mets five straight victories.

Ray Knight hit his second homer in two days for the Mets, who wound up a 5-1 home stand with three straight victories over Philadelphia and a sweep of the two-game series against Pittsburgh. The Pirates have lost two in a row after winning five straight.

Montreal 8 Philadelphia 2

MONTREAL (AP) — Andre Dawson hit a two-run homer in his last four games and Tim Lincecum added a solo shot as the Montreal Expos beat Philadelphia 8-2 Tuesday, sending the Phillies to their fifth straight loss.

Dawson, who sat out Sunday's game, hit his homer in the third to tie the game at 2-2 and set the stage for a three-run fourth that broke the game open. That gave Andy McCaskill the win in his first start of the season.

Hubble Brooks led off the fourth with a double and was doubled home by Wallace, who moved to third when Luis Aguayo booted Vance Law's ground ball, and scored on Tim Raines' single to right.

San Francisco 10 Los Angeles 3

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco scored seven runs before the first out was recorded in the first inning, with Chili Davis' two-run double sparking the rally as the San Francisco Giants streaked to their sixth straight win here Tuesday night, 10-3 over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Chris Brown led first-place San Francisco's 11-hit attack with four hits and scored three runs. Davis drove in three runs.

The last time the Giants, 10-4, were in first place this late in the season was Aug. 13, 1978.

record of 4,200 points was set by former CSI star Macie Malar, who won the long jump in the GIB Invitational competing for Boise State.

Other CSI performances at the GIB Invitational included a fifth to get her to the outdoor nationals next month in Odessa, Texas, as was Whelan's 4,551 points in the heptathlon, a school record. That
