Big Aleutian quake spawns sea wave

The Associated Press

PALMER, Alaska — A major undersea earthquake shook the Aleutians on Wednesday, producing a series of tidal waves that struck the island chain, the Pacific Northwest and Hawaii and forced the evacuation of thousands of people.

Waves from the quake, which measured 7.7 on the Richter scale, reached heights of 10 feet in Hawaii, 2 feet in British Columbia, and 5.8 feet in Adak on the Aleutians, officials said.

A massive, destructive wave apparently did not materialize, and no injuries were immediately reported.

In the Aleutians, minor earthquake damage was reported at the Naval Air Station in Adak.

Coast Guard ships were ordered to sea in California, sirens sounded throughout Hawaii and police in Washington state patrolled neighborhoods with loudspeaker-equipped cars as authorities asked for evacuations.

Tsunami warnings were posted for the entire West Coast, Hawaii and Japan after the temblor, the largest of a flurry of quakes to strike near the far western Aleutians on Wednesday.

Two quakes preceded the powerful one, which was followed by at least three more strong temblors, measuring 5 to 6 on the Richter scale, said the Warning Center in a statement.

"Tsunamis, popularly but inaccurately called tidal waves, travel across seas at speeds up to 500 mph and gain size rapidly upon nearing land. Their height upon striking shore cannot be accurately predicted.

Residents of the Aleutians, a chain with 16 scattered villages that have a total population of about 8,500 people, were urged by the Warning Center to evacuate low-lying areas.

A series of waves washed ashore within two hours of the quake, including one measuring about 3 feet at Shemya, about 400 miles east of Adak, the Warning Center said.

The waves also prompted officials as far south as Oregon and Hawaii to urge evacuations for fear a tremendous wave might hit.

The wave size in Alaska did not rule out the possibility that a tremendous wave could hit the West Coast, said Carol Horne, an earthquake program coordinator for the California Office of Emergency Services.

"It could get bigger. It just depends," she said. "It may not generate anything further."

"It is hard to say what the effect will be in coastal areas in state," said Hawaii Civil Defense spokeswoman Barbara Henry.

Officials in British Columbia, Washington, Oregon and Hawaii recommended evacuation of all low-lying coastal areas and urged residents to stay tuned to their radios.

Coast Guard ships were ordered to sea from California ports in Long Beach and San Francisco.

"We have ordered them to get underway and ride it out," said Petty Officer Kevin Jones in Long Beach.

In Washington, traffic was restricted along much of the coast, • See WAVE on Page A2.

House rejects arms sale

By TIM AHERN The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House followed the Senate on Wednesday and voted 356-82 to reject President Reagan's plan to sell missiles to Saudi Arabia.

It was a strong vote that suggested enough strength to override a presidential veto in the House.

It would take 289 votes in the Democratic-controlled House to override Reagan's promised veto of the "disapproval resolution." The Senate voted 73-22 late Wednesday against the sale, six more votes than the 67 needed to override a veto.

Even though votes on veto override efforts frequently are closer than the original vote, House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., had acknowledged before the vote that he was "not all that confident" Reagan could win a veto fight in the House.

And the chief House opponent of the sale, Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., said: "I think when it comes down to the override, we'll have the votes to win. We're pretty close to having enough votes locked up."

However, both houses — not just one — would have to override Reagan's veto to block the sale, raising the likelihood that the final showdown on the issue will be fought in the Republican-controlled Senate where Reagan would have to sway only a handful of opposi-

Information on rate increase might have eased some ill feelings

Tempers flare, then cool at hearing on cable TV

By ANNETTE CARY Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Subscribers would have been happier paying increased King Videocable bills had they been supplied more information when the price hike was announced, said several cable subscribers near the conclusion of a Wednesday night hearing.

The hearing conducted by the city Cable Service Review Commission was interrupted several times halfway through the evening by angry subscribers, but tempers had cooled by the time the nearly two-hour hearing concluded.

Chris Talkington, manager of the local King Videocable, said a $2.25 monthly increase for basic service was started this spring mostly to cover the company's increased costs of providing existing service.

Only about 25 percent of the increase covered present and expected costs of adding new channels to the basic service, he said. Advertising that announced the rate increase stressed the additional channels.

"If there is one mistake we did make, it was trying to give (subscribers) something besides a rate increase," Talkington said.

Had the company been more "honest" about the reason of the price increase, customers would have better accepted the increase, said subscriber Kathryn Poppino.

Most of the 19 subscribers who testified at the meeting Wednesday complained that they had to pay

$2.25 for the additional channels, which they had not requested, did not want and in many cases did not receive. The city received 48 written complaints about cable service following the price increase.

The extra channels expand basic cable service from 13 to 19 channels, King Videocable has advertised. However, several at Wednesday's meeting, pointed out that one of the 19 channels primarily carries advertising and four others are duplicate network channels.

"The new channels are less than advertised," said Mike Redman, "I didn't discover anything on Discovery channel."

Subscriber Bill Von Bergen compared the extra channels to a grocery store refusing to sell a customer bread unless he bought cookies also.

Subscribers need a "cable ready" television, set or video cassette recorder to view the additional

Rain yields radioactivity in E. Idaho

The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Radioactivity from the Soviet nuclear accident has been recorded in Idaho Falls but at levels far below those that would pose a risk to health, according to a Department of Energy spokesman.

Panic in Ukraine — A9

Scientists at the Idaho Laboratory Facility in Idaho Falls recorded a reading of 62 picocuries of iodine 131 in rainwater later Tuesday, spokesman Peter Mygatt said.

"If it was much smarter than this, you would hardly be able to measure it," Mygatt said.

No radioactivity from the Soviet disaster has been detected at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory west of the city.

Leaders believe tax overhaul plan will sail through Senate

By JIM LUTHER The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate leaders on Wednesday predicted easy approval of a tax-overhaul plan, endorsed by President Reagan, that would affect the taxes of virtually every American — cutting rates while wiping out some deductions favored especially by middle-income families.

"There are strong indications this bill is going to sail through the Senate," said Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. It will pass easily, he added, because it is "true tax reform."

"The bill is going to pass" and in much the same form as it came out of the Finance Committee early Wednesday on a 20-9 vote, said the panel's chairman and the plan's chief author, Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore. He proclaimed it "a great victory for America — a bill you can truly defend."

The Reagan administration, which is sympathetic to most of the bill, signaled its concern about two high-profile provisions: elimination of the deduction for most individual Retirement Accounts and repeal of the traditional tax preference for capital gains.

However, Dole and Packwood said it will be difficult when the Senate begins debating the measure, probably in June, to amend it in ways that would cost money. An amendment seeking to retain current treatment of capital gains, for example, would have to include a provision for making up the estimated $220 billion that would cost over five years.

Even though repeal of the IRA deduction for workers covered by company pensions would hurt many families, Packwood said, most of them would still come out winners because of other parts of the bill.

That is the message he and other supporters will be trying to get across.

"There will be an extraordinary coalition of business, labor, women, the president, Jane and Jig who work at the shoe store.... that are going to be in favor of this bill," Packwood told reporters.

The bill, most of which would become effective in 1987, would cut individual taxes by about $98 billion over five years, with the reduction averaging 8.2 percent. The burden on corporations would increase by about $108 billion.

Packwood estimated that 80 per-

Cites accomplishments in Far East Reagan home from summit trip

By TOM RAUM The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A buoyant President Reagan returned home Wednesday after a 13-day Far East trip, saying U.S. talks with Western allies in Tokyo brought understandings which will make it "tougher from now on" for terrorists.

"It certainly is good to be back in the good old U.S.A.," Reagan told supporters and administration officials who greeted him and his wife Nancy on the White House South Lawn. Afterwards, the pair walked about the South Lawn under a brilliant sun, greeting the well-wishers.

Reagan and his wife arrived shortly before noon MDT following a 15-minute Marine One helicopter ride from Andrews Air Force Base in nearby Maryland.

The president said in his formal remarks, "Terrorism, as expected, was high on the agenda... I am more than pleased by the commitments made in Tokyo by our summit partners in this regard... We agreed that the time has come to move beyond words and rhetoric."

"Terrorists and those who support them — especially governments — have been put on notice," Reagan told a large crowd of White House aides, Cabinet members, and others who greeted him. A Marine band and a group of students from Martin Luther King Jr. Elementary School here were also on hand to welcome the president.

Reagan served notice to terrorists that "it is going to be tougher from now on."

Turning to the economic issues of the summit, Reagan said the seven participating nations arrived at "a new framework for strengthening effective coordination of international economic policy."

Reagan also said he was pleased with the outcome of meetings last week with members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, saying the sessions just prior to the opening of the economic summit "gave me a chance to bring their concerns to Tokyo. It also gave me a chance to confirm our ties with the industrious people of the Pacific rim."

Air Force One had landed at Elmendorf Air Force Base in Alaska just after 4 a.m. MDT for a 45-minute refueling stop en route to Andrews.

Wallace facing cuts

Levy hikes pass in 3 districts

By The Associated Press

Multimillion-dollar property tax increases to supplement local school budgets next year have won overwhelming approval in Coeur d'Alene and Idaho Falls, and Fruitland voters, considering a special levy increase for the first time, have given their solid backing to a smaller proposition.

But Wallace School District officials faced the prospect of major program cuts in the wake of narrow voter rejection of their request for another $300,000 in property tax revenues next year. All the propositions needed only a simple majority.

"We'll have a deep reduction in force, and it will be a tremendous curtailment on the educational program," Superintendent Frank Bertino said. It was the second levy-increase proposition to be rejected by voters in the depressed Silver Valley.

Kellogg voters turned down a request for $378,000 tax hike a week ago, and district officials have indicated they may submit another proposition this month, contending "We still have to get the money in some way."

Tuesday's levy election results marked only the latest round in voting on requests from scores of districts around the state for additional money to make up for diminishing federal funds and what many officials have called woefully inadequate support from the state Legislature.

Today, voters in Blackfoot will decide the fate of a $975,000 levy increase while those in Jerome have a $205,000 tax hike on the ballot and American Falls School District officials press for passage of a $498,000 levy hike for their system. Dozens of other districts have similar propositions before voters over the next seven weeks.

The tally of votes in Coeur d'Alene's $2.7 million levy was not completed until early Wednesday as the complex seven-issue ballot drew a record turnout of more than 11,300 people. But the unofficial totals showed all seven proposals passing with a combined favorable vote of over 66 percent.

Property owners were challenging results from one of the nine polling places, claiming 1,700 ballots were counted when only 1,400 voters entered the polls. But district officials indicated the overwhelming majority given to the package would likely not be affected by that challenge.

The combined levy package calls for money to underwrite libraries and related salaries, elementary physical education and music classes and salaries, extracurricular activities including sports, high school elective courses, middle school instruction programs and special courses, elementary school salaries and maintenance and supplies. It is expected to add about $87 to the annual tax bill for the average homeowner.

Fruitland voters approved a $285,000 tax increase by 29 votes. The final unofficial tally was 304 for the increase and 96 against it. The totals were nearly as close but the outcome was completely different in Wallace where the $490,000 level failed by a mere 44 votes. Some 665 voters opposed the increase while 621 supported it.

Group rates EchoHawk top lawmaker

BOISE (AP) — A sportsmen's coalition says its ranking of state legislators for the last two sessions puts Rep. Larry EchoHawk, D-Pocatello, at the top and Sen. Dane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls, at the bottom.

Jack Trueblood, spokesman for the 200-member Sportsmen's Political Action Committee, told a news conference here Wednesday that his organization ranked the 128 members of the 1985-86 Legislature according to their votes on bills considered important to sportsmen.

Watkins, chairman of the Senate Local Government Committee, received the lowest ranking of all the legislators. Trueblood said, voting the "right" way only once in the 1986 session, and twice in the 1985 meeting.

That gave him an overall ranking of 22 percent, Trueblood said. Sen. Reed Budge, R-Soda Springs, was next with an overall rating of 27 percent. Watkins is running for the Republican and District congressional nomination. Budge will step down at the end of the current term, after 20 years in the Idaho Legislature.

At the other end, Trueblood said EchoHawk voted the right way on every bill considered important to the coalition.

EchoHawk, a tribal attorney for Grangeville, Gail Bray of Boise and Mary Lou Reed of Coeur d'Alene at the top of the list with 93 percent ratings, with each downgraded only for their votes for predator control in the 1985 session.

Lowest-ranking senators, besides Watkins and Budge, were Sen. Atwell Parry, R-Melba, and Sen. Walter Yarbrough, R-Grand View, both with 34 percent.

Receiving 95 percent rankings in the House were Democrats Pete Black of Pocatello, Jeanne Givens and Coeur d'Alene and Dorothy McCann of Wallace.

Lowest-ranking House members for the two sessions were Rep. Myron Jones, R-Malad, 37 percent; Rep. Michael Simpson, R-Blackfoot, 40 percent; and Lee-Johnson, R-Boise, 40 percent. Rep. Mack Neuhair, R-Paul; Rep. Joan Wood, R-Rigby; and Rep. Dieter Bayer, R-Boise.

The Sport PAC survey ranked legislators on their votes on eight bills for the 1986 session. The first was HB171, which was vetoed by Gov. John Evans, which Trueblood said would have had "a terrific impact" on fish spawning beds. It would have allowed loggers more leeway on environmental damage while operating near waterways and watersheds.

Other bills—HB494, requiring that at least two members of the Fish and Game Commission must be farmers; HB462, calling for criminal penalties for anyone letting his or her dog chase or kill big game; HB463, increasing nonresident hunting and big game tag fees; and SB1233, allowing the Department of Health and Welfare to charge and collect pollution source permit fees.

Others were SB1266, increasing penalties for violations of environmental laws; SB1287, making it illegal to use anything but lead shot when hunting with a shotgun; SB1359, allowing Fish and Game to make agreements with landowners to restrict motor vehicles on habitat areas; and SB1404, setting aside a certain number of nonresident elk and deer tags for sale to nonresidents using licensed outfitters and guides.

Symms lauds action as 'true tax reform'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The tax change package that cleared the Senate Finance Committee late Tuesday night is "true tax reform," with the lowest tax rates in a half-century, Sen. Steve Symms says.

Symms said Wednesday he supported the proposal, from Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., in the Finance Committee.

"This is tax reform. It moves toward a more level playing field in taxation," Symms said.

Idaho's resource industries, agriculture, timber and mining, are protected with this bill," he said. The committee voted 11-9 for a late amendment sponsored by Symms which the Idahoan said will enhance exploration potential for the industry.

The proposal, which still has to go before the full Senate, repeals tax deductions for Individual Retirement Arrangements, IRAs, for people who have other pension plans.

Symms said the law still allows IRA deductions for small business people, farmers, waitresses, clerks and others not covered by pension plans. In addition, the interest on all current IRAs will be allowed to accrue without being subject to taxes.

The Packwood proposal also would wipe out the tax exemption for capital gains on sale of assets.

Under the proposal, Symms said 80 percent of all individuals will pay a top tax rate of no more than 15 percent. About 6 million low-income people will pay no income tax at all, he said.

Court action clears ranch for reopening

BOISE (AP) — Rev. Don Elliott, head minister at the Deliverance Ranch Academy, on Wednesday was named legal guardian of 11 juveniles, clearing the way for the academy to re-open today.

The academy, in a remote corner of southwestern Idaho, was closed last week when law enforcement officers raided and took 16 juveniles into custody. Police said they were looking into allegations of child abuse at the academy, which uses strict discipline and religion to handle wayward youth.

School President Robert Aldridge, a Boise attorney, filed the guardianship papers in Boise Wednesday, and Magistrate Patricia Young quickly granted Elliott custody of 11 youths.

Aldridge said as soon as authorization is gained from other parents, he expected the judge to name Elliott guardian of another three or four juveniles. Authorities also determined that a couple of the academy's students also were over age 18, Aldridge said.

School officials left Boise immediately after the court hearing for the three-hour drive to Deliverance Ranch, and school operations were expected to resume today, Aldridge said.

Students appeal fee hike

MOSCOW (AP) — Student representatives will appeal to University of Idaho officials today not to raise student fees supporting intercollegiate athletics.

Gino White, student body president, said he will attend the hearing to protest the proposed $9.50 fee increase being requested for the university's athletic programs. He also said he will ask for a $5 fee increase to support the student union operations, rather than the $4.50 being requested.

But board members also limited the amount of the increases. At the University, that limit is $15 a semester. Originally, the administration had requested $18 in increases, but have since trimmed their request.

Intercollegiate athletics is requesting an additional $9.50 from each student, which will generate approximately $120,000 for the program, according to athletic director Willard S. Belknap.

This is the first time that raising the student activity fee will be up to the president of each higher education institution in Idaho. The Idaho Board of Education delegated that authority to the presidents at its meeting here last month.

Transfer of hospital must be put to vote

Members of the Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners must think voters have short memories.

Two months ago, Commissioner Amey Cover told The Times-News that voters would be given the opportunity to decide whether or not ownership of county-owned Magic Valley Regional Medical Center should be transferred to a non-profit corporation.

The promise was made because of concerns that county residents, the owners of the hospital, might be bypassed should the county commissioners decide to turn the hospital over to a private corporation in an attempt to make it more competitive.

The county was given the power to do that through passage of a bill during the last session of the state Legislature — a bill written and promoted by MVRMC and Twin Falls County officials.

The legislation came about because Idaho law prohibited the lease or sale of a county-owned hospital without an election.

A month ago, MVRMC Administrator John Bingham told The Times-News that before the legislation is utilized the county commissioners would hold public hearings.

Now, however, there is some question as to whether county residents will be given a chance to comment on the idea of turning MVRMC over to a private corporation, much less vote on it.

County Commissioner Judy Felton has announced that an 11-member panel will be appointed by the commissioners to determine whether the county hospital should be transferred away from county control. The commissioners have not made "a definite decision" on whether to conduct hearings, Felton said.

In two months we've come a long way from what Cover said to what Felton is saying, and the public is being left in the dust.

The entire process has disturbed many people in Twin Falls County, and this latest development is disturbing. We are not comfortable with the idea of a hand-picked panel invariably acting in the best interests of county residents.

Slowly, but surely, the public is being removed from the process of deciding what happens to public property.

We strongly believe that not only must public hearings be held on whether MVRMC is transferred to private ownership, the question must be put to a vote of the people.

Highland Avenue not a fun roller coaster ride

Open letter to the city manager: If you want a roller coaster ride, just take a ride up and down Highland Avenue. You can get your jolly's quick.

I would say it has been in need of a fixing job for at least 10 years. But to the best just a patch job here and there. With all the business along there, including the school buses, it should be fixed. What we don't need is a high priced city manager with a helper.

What we do need is just a mayor with a good working council behind him.

Please fix Highland Avenue to be a decent road. Please!

'An eye for an eye' just perpetuates war, killing

I don't understand why you, Cindy Cavness, and people like you, think that "an eye for an eye" is the solution to world peace. It's really thought that killing innocent people can be justified by killing more innocent people? Where do you think it will end?

As much as anyone, you understand the hurt in losing three loved ones in one accident due to a terrorist bomb. But I can also understand the hurt in losing one due to an American bomb. And the idea that "we paid 'em back" would hardly seem to ease the pain. So far it hasn't stopped the killing either.

You say Khadafi is "a lunatic who surrounds himself with innocents and a coward who hides in children's shaddows and behind women's skirts." Are we going to kill all the women and children who are in the way to get to him? That sounds like a real peaceful solution.

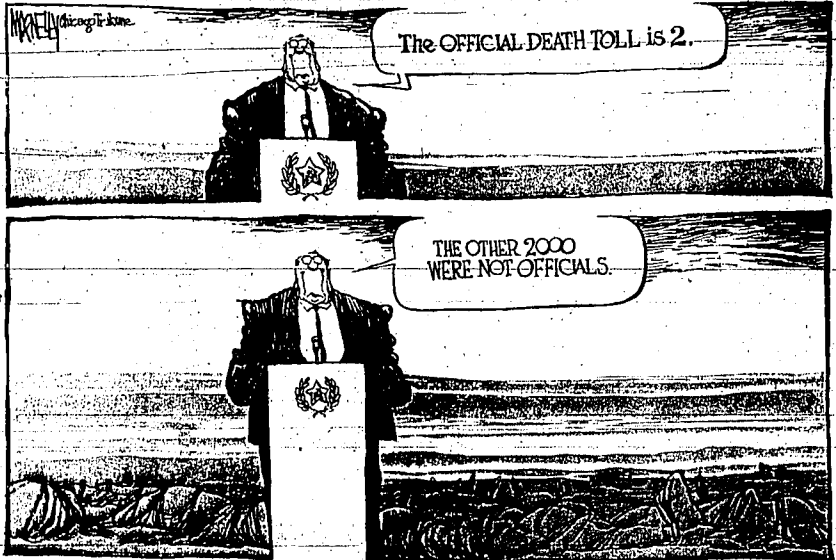

And the way you so carelessly throw around phrases like "the loss of a few lives" and "better two than two thousand" is an example of how much respect you must have for human life. Would you still feel the same way if it had been your fiancée, who you say is serving in the United States Army, that had failed to return from this mission?

And no, I would not rather see a city block destroyed than an entire country. I would rather not see either one.

To say that our heads of state were put in their positions by God is foolish. God can no more be blamed for that than he can for Marcos being where he is. We were put on this earth by God to live and learn. And if we make mistakes it is up to us to change things to make them right.

God is here for us when we need him to help us cope with what sometimes seems to be impossible. Just as he will be there to help the people of the Soviet Union to cope with their recent disaster.

Soviet secrecy stalls arms control tries

Ernest Conine

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, commenting on the Soviet failure to provide its neighbors with full and timely information on the nuclear accident at Chernobyl, said that the attempted cover-up demonstrates the importance of strict verification clauses in arms control agreements with Moscow.

The connection may not be immediately apparent to everyone, but the lady is right.

One result of Soviet behavior during the past week is likely to be greater European skepticism toward Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's recent initiatives on subjects ranging from nuclear test bans to the outlawing of chemical and biological arms.

Disident Andrei D. Sakharov, a physicist who was once a leading figure in the Soviet nuclear weapons complex, has tried to make the point that the closed nature of the Soviet society is not just an affront to democratic values, but a major barrier to genuine progress in arms control as well.

To the degree that Soviet secrecy prevents outsiders from getting reliable information on the direction and pace of Soviet weapons programs, the United States and other western nations are inclined to accept worst-case analyses and to design their own programs accordingly. That helps fuel the ongoing competition in both nuclear and conventional arms.

The Russian compulsion toward secrecy did not begin with the communists; it goes back hundreds of years. In modern times it takes the form of tight restraints on news available to the outside world and to the Soviet people themselves.

Airline accidents are not usually reported unless foreigners are killed. An earthquake in Mexico gets far more coverage than an earthquake in the Soviet Union. A nuclear catastrophe that occurred in 1957 has still not been officially acknowledged.

Gorbachev has talked a good game about the need for a freer flow of information. But when disaster struck the reactor at Chernobyl, he failed the test.

Western experts think that they now know that the problem with the reactor began on a Friday and became steadily more serious over the weekend. But there was no mention in the Soviet media and no word to neighboring countries, until Sweden raised questions Monday about extraordinarily high radioactivity.

The Soviet behavior goes far beyond the cover-up syndrome that is common among bureaucrats everywhere — and was much in evidence in the wake of the United States' own Three Mile Island incident. The highest levels of the Kremlin were obviously involved in the attempted news blackout on Chernobyl.

Even when the Soviets grudgingly confirmed that something was amiss, the first Tass story ran only one paragraph, followed by a lengthy account of nuclear accidents in America. A week after the dangerous release of radioactivity began, the Soviet government still had not explained the extent and nature of the disaster to the world or to its own people.

What we know has been pieced together from amateur radio transmissions, telephone conversations and, most important, surveillance by satellites and the monitoring of radioactivity by neighboring countries.

The picture that emerges is of an explosion, a reactor core meltdown, a hard-to-extinguish fire in the graphite moderator and a release of radioactivity.

Last week Soviet diplomats began to strike poses of injured innocence. While admitting two dead and a couple of hundred injured, at a time when some Western experts were predicting casualties numbering in the thousands, they suggested that a conspiracy was under way to exaggerate the seriousness of the accident.

For reasons of their own some Westerners played down the seriousness of the accident. For example, the Atomic Industrial Forum, a U.S. nuclear industry group that tries to discourage speculation that nuclear power is inherently dangerous, allowed as how the Chernobyl incident might not be as bad as advertised.

It could be true. But if the Soviet authorities wanted to calm jittery neighbors and disprove "exaggerated" reports, they had only to invite outside experts in or, at the minimum, to release precise information on what had happened. A full week after radioactivity began spewing into the air over the Ukraine, they had not done it.

The strongest reaction has not come from Cold Warriors in Washington, but from concerned European governments.

Communist Poland did not start giving hotline to kids and banning sales of certain dairy products because of something they heard on the Voice of America, but because their own monitoring stations reported radioactivity levels up to 500 times normal. The Scandinavian countries slapped restraints on food imports from the Soviet Union. The West Germans demanded that all reactors of the Chernobyl type be shut down. European governments collectively demanded scientific information that would enable them to safeguard the health of their populations.

All that happened against a background of Gorbachev assurances that the Soviet Union will be prepared to allow on-site inspections to guarantee compliance with new arms control agreements. Up to now, a lot of people have preferred not to use the strings attached to such offers. For example, Soviet negotiators announced last month that Moscow was prepared to allow foreign inspectors to watch the destruction not only of chemical arms but also of declared production facilities. But of course facilities that the Soviets did not choose to declare would not be subject to inspection.

Similarly, in the negotiations on reductions of troops in Central Europe, Gorbachev has said that he would allow on-site inspection "if necessary" to verify compliance of withdrawals. But what is necessary?

The Soviet leader has gotten a lot of mileage from his clear test ban proposal. But he has rebuffed President Reagan's proposal to reopen discussions on verification rules.

Does anybody really believe that a government that blatantly ignores the right of outsiders to know the details about a civilian reactor accident will allow foreigners free rein to investigate suspected violations of arms control agreements?

Ernest Conine writes for The Los Angeles Times.

Cuomo speaks rhetoric of 'virtucrats'

George Will

He said: "Over the last six years, the denial of compassion has been made both respectable and comfortable." His message was: Those who elected and re-elected Reagan endorsed not just mistaken policies but moral callousness. As a Mondale voter told CBS the day after the 1984 election, the "country isn't good enough" to choose Mondale.

Now, someone who says, as Cuomo does, that Reagan policies are causing the middle class to "shrink" and its dreams to "wither" does not worry about nuances. Still, do Democrats really think that gut-mangling and moral blackmail are the ingredients of successful electoral appeals? (On election eve Mondale complained that Republicans never used the word "decent," and he said: "I would rather lose an election about decency than win one about self-interest.") There is a recipe for a disaster: Suggest that it is indecent to disagree with you. It ought to be possible for a man of Cuomo's intelligence to call attention to problems without, in the process, seeming to disparage the public's moral sensibilities and to celebrate his own.

From the left and the right we are being bombarded by the rhetoric of people who Joseph Epstein calls "virtucrats." They are people who, no matter what else they say, always say "I'm fundamentally a damn fine person." Epstein, editor of The American Scholar, says the virtucrat is "a modern Diogenes who, in search of one good man, knocked off after turning his lantern on himself." Epstein says that "anti-war" and "pro-life" are labels of virtucrat self-advertising, announcing that the holder of the particular political views is large-hearted and great-souled (and obviously is opposed by people who are not just wrong, they are next door to depraved. Today the right wing has its share of virtrucrats of the "when Jesus returns he will register Republican" sort. But Epstein says virtucrats are found more frequently on the left. People on the left, he says, seem to need to feel they are goodhearted, whereas conservatives are content to feel they are obviously correct. Disagree with a conservative and he will call you dense. Disagree with a liberal and he will call you selfish, insensitive and uncompassionate. Virtucrats decerate their Volvos with bumper stickers that say "you can't hug a kid with nuclear arms," a "ought the policy connotations of which are unclear, but which clearly says: The driver of this car is an admirably caring person. Thank you wish such people would go away."

MARIO CUOMO In Compassionate Minority

LaRouche successes in Illinois fluke, Democrats contend

WASHINGTON (AP) — The dismal show-up by disciples of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche in Tuesday's primaries proves that LaRouche wins in Illinois in March, "indeed a fluke," a Democratic official said Wednesday.

"They're out," Democratic National Committee spokesman Terry Michael said in a telephone interview from his home in North Carolina and Ohio.

The only nominations won by LaRouche candidates were by default — no other Democrats filed — in two congressional districts in Ohio and another two in the Texas primary on Saturday.

"The results of these first primaries make it clear that the Illinois nomination of two Democrats was indeed a fluke, and that LaRouche's success in Illinois is a fluke," a Democratic official said.

LaRouche's cult members were indeed a fluke, and that LaRouche's success in Illinois is a fluke, a Democratic official said.

LaRouche's cult members were indeed a fluke, and that LaRouche's success in Illinois is a fluke, a Democratic official said.

He also said the campaign was in fore LaRouche's unconventional beliefs among them that the Queen of England backs an international drug ring and that AIDS victims should be quarantined.

The race this week that most concerned Democrats was the Indiana U.S. Senate primary, where Jill L. Long, a largely unknown university professor endorsed by the state party, faced Georgia Irey, a LaRouche follower who had top billing on the ballot.

Long captured 74 percent of the vote on Tuesday and will face Sen. Dan Quayle in November.

Irey said she was not disappointed because "we're building a constituency here" and she hinted at a possible challenge to Sen. Richard Lugar in 1988.

"I've had a wonderful time," she said. "It's really fun to express what I've been yelling at the television set for such a long time. Now I can say it in public and people will listen to me."

In Ohio, LaRouche candidate Don Scott got just 13 percent against Sen. John Glenn in the Democratic primary.

Michael said it was up to state and local party officials to decide how to handle the races where LaRouche candidates by default wound up being the party standardbearer.

Senate approves measure reorganizing armed forces

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate gave overwhelming approval Wednesday to the most far-reaching reorganization of the nation's armed forces in 30 years in an effort to ease inter-service rivalry and to encourage cooperation in joint military operations.

The bill, which was resisted by many Pentagon officials, was approved 95-0.

The measure strengthens the authority of the chairman of the military joint chiefs of staff and the heads of joint commands while reducing that of the individual uniformed service chiefs and making hundreds of changes in current military procedures.

It is the product of more than four years of hearings and study by the Senate Armed Services Committee, its chairman, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and its ranking Democrat, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga.

Similar legislation is making its way through the House.

The legislation, in effect, gives the chairman of the joint chief, and the commanders of the worldwide unified commands more authority to set priorities and guide and coordinate military policy.

The Senate bill designates the chairman as the "principal military adviser" to the president, the national security adviser and the secretary of defense. The other members of the joint chiefs would be designated as military advisers.

The change is intended to change a situation in which many officials complained that military advice from the joint chiefs was diluted and neither timely nor useful.

Other provisions provide that the chairman may be appointed for up to eight years. At present a chairman is allowed to serve for a maximum of four years.

The legislation also creates a position of vice chairman and designates him as the nation's second highest ranking military officer after the chairman. In effect, both he and the chairman would outrank the chiefs of the uniformed services, a provision that was hotly contested by the Pentagon.

The bill gives the JCS chairman authority over the joint staff rather than the corporate JCS.

And, in another controversial provision, it requires a cut of 10 percent or about 17,600 in the Pentagon's civilian work force in order to streamline the military bureaucracy.

Nunn told the Senate that he believed the compromise met all of the concerns raised in a staff report and did so without calling for potentially disruptive steps.

Acting on a series of amendments, the Senate voted 62-34 to block action on an amendment by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., which would have barred the covert shipment of Stinger shoulder-fired, anti-aircraft missiles to anti-communist rebels in either Angola or Afghanistan unless the president was able to certify that they would be protected from diversion to terrorists.

Goldwater said the amendment had no place in the reorganization bill. Nunn agreed but added that the vote blocking it should not be interpreted as the Senate's final word on the subject.

Nunn suggested DeConcini renew his efforts when the Senate considers the defense authorization bill.

Plane strikes man

WINCHESTER, Tenn. (AP) — A man repairing an airport runway was struck and killed by an airplane making a landing, officials said.

Richard N. Crawford, 55, of Nashville, was struck by the right wingtip of the four-seat Bellanca Tuesday afternoon at Winchester City Airport. Officers said Crawford was part of a crew preparing the runway for sealant to be applied.

Police said the pilot tried but could not swerve to miss Crawford.

NASA sets back launch on May 22

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA on Wednesday postponed the planned May 22 liftoff of an Atlas-Centaur rocket for about four weeks, leaving the United States with no heavy satellite launch capability for that period.

The nation's other three vehicles capable of carrying large satellites have suffered failures in the last three months and are grounded for periods up to a year or more.

They are the space shuttle, halted by the Jan. 28 Challenger explosion; the Air Force Titan 34D, which exploded April 18 seconds after lifting off from a California base with a military spy satellite, and NASA's Delta, which was destroyed Saturday night while hoisting a weather satellite from Cape Canaveral.

The Atlas-Centaur is to lift a military communications satellite into orbit.

The Atlas first stage has an engine similar to the Delta's main engine that failed Saturday, and the space agency said it wants to learn more about what happened to the Delta before it commits the Atlas-Centaur.

Here are key provisions of tax overhaul measures

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is how key provisions in the tax-overhaul plan approved by the Senate Finance Committee early Wednesday compare with those in a bill passed by the House in December.

RATES: The Senate bill would compress the present 15 taxable brackets for single people, 14 for couples filing a joint return, into two and change the present rates (ranging from 11 percent to 50 percent) to 15 percent and 27 percent. The House bill has rates of 15 percent, 25 percent, 35 percent and 38 percent.

EXEMPTIONS: The Senate plan would raise the personal exemption, now $1,080 for 1986, to $2,000 for couples with taxable incomes up to $145,320 a year and single people up to $87,240; as income rises, the exemption would decline to zero. House voted $2,000 for all who do not itemize deductions and $1,500 for those who do.

STANDARD DEDUCTIONS: Present deductions are $2,480 for single people and $3,670 for joint returns. Senate would raise to $3,000 and $5,000; the House, to $2,500 and $4,400.

TWO-EARNER COUPLES: Special deduction of up to $3,000 would be repealed in both bills.

INTEREST: Senate bill would allow no deduction for consumer interest, such as a car loan; $1 investment interest could be deducted for each $1 of investment income. Mortgage interest on two homes could be deducted. House limits are sharply higher: $20,000 ($10,000 for a single person) plus mortgages on two homes plus an amount equal to investment income for the year.

STATE AND LOCAL TAXES: Senate would end deduction of sales taxes and allow full deduction of real property, personal property and income taxes. House would retain full deduction of state and local taxes.

MISCELLANEOUS DEDUCTION: Including union dues and job-related publications would be repealed.

FRINGE BENEFITS: Both bills would keep the full tax exemption for employer-paid health insurance, the first $50,000 of group life insurance and $5,000 for death benefits.

EARNED-INCOME CREDIT: Both bills would raise this benefit for working families with children, to a maximum $700; families earning up to $16,000 could get some benefit.

CONTRIBUTIONS: Senate would end the deduction for charitable contributions by non-itemizers. House would permit deduction of all above $100 a year. Both bills would permit full deduction of contributions by itemizers.

CHILD CARE: Both bills would retain the present child-care credit of up to $1,440 a year.

CAPITAL GAINS: Senate would repeal preferential tax treatment of capital gains, which now are taxed at a maximum 20 percent rate; House would raise it to 28 percent.

INCOME AVERAGING: Both bills would repeal.

RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS: Under the Senate bill, most tax benefits connected to Individual Retirement Accounts would be lost by most workers; only those not covered by another pension plan would be allowed to continue contributing up to $2,000 a year ($7,250 if the spouse has no income) with neither that amount nor the interest it earns taxable until withdrawn. Workers covered by another plan could deposit up to $2,000 a year (or $2,250 if the spouse is not working) but would have to pay tax on that amount immediately; the interest would remain tax-free until withdrawal. House would retain present law.

PENSIONS: Both bills would reduce to $7,000 the $30,000 annual limit on wages a worker may forgo if deposited by the employer in a tax-deferred pension known as a 401(k) plan. Senate would ensure a worker's right to a pension after five years on the job and limit pension offset due to Social Security.

LIFE INSURANCE: Both would retain tax-free treatment of the increase in value of ordinary life insurance.

MINIMUM TAX: Both bills would toughen this special levy on high-income investors and corporations that use so many deductions and credits that they pay little or no tax. The Senate bill generally is much lighter than the House version.

MEALS AND ENTERTAINMENT: Both would limit deductions for business-related meals and entertainment, including sports tickets, to 80 percent of the cost; they are now fully deductible.

DIVIDENDS: Both would repeal the $100-per-person ($200-per-couple) exclusion for dividends received.

INVESTMENT CREDIT: Both bills would repeal.

DEPRECIATION: Senate bill would generally liberalize tax benefits for depreciation, under which businesses and investors recover money spent for plant and equipment. House bill would be more restrictive than present law.

CORPORATE RATES: Top rate of 46 percent would drop to 33 percent under Senate bill and 38 percent in House version.

TAX SHELTERS: Either bill would make it tougher to shield wages and fees from taxes by using big deductions from investments built around limited partnerships, especially in real estate.

OIL AND GAS: Senate would retain most present benefits for this industry, and exempt oil and gas from a new anti-shelter rule affecting "paper" losses. House would reduce the industry's special benefits by $4 billion over five years.

TIMBER: Senate bill would keep special incentives for reforestation and quick deduction of expenses although special treatment of individual capital gains, a major benefit to timber, would be lost. House would virtually repeal all timber benefits.

BONDS: Senate would tighten the definition of "public purpose" in defining tax-free bonds issued by state and local governments but allow more bonds than present law. House would allow fewer bonds. No interest on such bonds would be taxed under Senate bill. House bill could tax some interest on future bonds bought by upper-income investors.

Probe of alleged rebel drug traffic concludes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Justice Department official said Wednesday a federal investigation into alleged cocaine-trafficking and gun-running by Nicaraguan rebels and their private-American backers has effectively stopped.

Department spokesman Patrick Korten said the investigation, directed by U.S. Attorney Leon Kellner in Miami, found no evidence of drug trafficking, but would examine any new information. Korten said the probe uncovered one case of a weapons shipment involving one person and a small number of guns.

"We examined and conducted interviews on every lead or bit of information that we had passed along," Korten said. "None of them Abrams denied participation by exception of one. There just wasn't other rebel groups.

anything there."

Korten refused to comment on whether Attorney General Edwin Meese had contacted Kellner about the investigation, although he added that such a call would not be unusual.

Other federal officials have acknowledged that some Nicaraguan rebels apparently did engage in cocaine trafficking, particularly after Congress cut off covert CIA-support in 1984.

Elliot Abrams, assistant secretary of state for Inter-American affairs, told Congress in March that the U.S. government had reports implicating members of Eden Pastora's Democratic Revolutionary Alliance, ARDE, in cocaine trafficking. But he said Abrams denied participation by other rebel groups.

6th Fleet on stand-by

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. 6th Fleet was dropped back into a stand-by posture in the Mediterranean Sea, removing all three of its carriers from an operating area north of Libya, Pentagon sources said Wednesday.

The sources, who agreed to discuss the matter only if not identified, said the Coral Sea was about to be relieved of duty and allowed to sail home; the America was steaming for a port call in Italy, and the Enterprise was situated well to the north of Sicily participating in a NATO exercise.

According to the Pentagon officials, the aircraft carrier Coral Sea began sailing westward from its patrol station north of Libya on Monday.

High insurance rates threaten medical care

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spiraling malpractice insurance rates that forced many obstetricians to stop delivering babies threaten the availability and quality of medical care, doctors and patients told Congress on Wednesday.

"It has never been safer for a mother to have a baby in the United States than today. And it has never been more risky for a doctor to deliver one," Dr. Howard G. McQuarrie told the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee. "In maternal mortality rates are down, fetal mortality rates are down, yet the number of lawsuits is up."

McQuarrie, a Salt Lake City gynecologist, and other doctors told the panel that the twofold jump in malpractice insurance rates in the last two years has "forced" many obstetricians to give up the specialty for less risky areas of medical practice.

If it continues, "it's going to depress the quality of care in obstetrics" by driving out qualified and experienced practitioners, he said.

The committee is considering legislation introduced by its chairman, Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, that would give states money incentives to adopt legislation limiting malpractice awards and attorney's contingency fees.

States enacting legislation would receive grants to finance studies of ways to reduce insurance liability of doctors and hospitals. Among the bill's recommendations is a $250,000 limit per malpractice lawsuit for pain and suffering.

"There is a great deal of reformation going around as to the causes and effects of the medical malpractice insurance crisis," Hatch said. "The public interest groups blame the insurance companies, the doctors blame the lawyers and the insurance companies blame the lawyers. And the lawyers say, 'What crisis?'" Hatch said.

"The first step is for all of us to recognize we have a problem — a problem that is not being solved by adequate risk-management techniques," Hatch said.

Too much tolerance deplored

WASHINGTON (AP)—Exiled Polish philosopher Leszek Kolakowski came to this capital, where compromise is an art form, Wednesday to lecture in favor of absolute values and against a democratic tolerance so broad it acquiesces in distant evils.

To an invited audience of 1,200 dignitaries, Kolakowski deplored the attitude encompassed in the saying: "We have our values, they have theirs."

It is a platitude "we frequently hear when dealing with the atrocities of totalitarianism or of other forms of despolism," he said, but to merely accept with a shrug that societies are different is to say that slavery is just as good as freedom.

Kolakowski, delivered the 15th annual Jefferson Lecture, sponsored by the National Endowment for the Humanities. The agency calls selection as the lecturer "the highest honor conferred by the U.S. government for outstanding achievement in the humanities."

The designation brings a $10,000 stipend and the lecture is frequently published as a book. The lecturer is chosen by a board appointed by the president.

Kolakowski was denounced by Communist Party chief Wladyslaw Gomułka in 1968 and expelled from the University of Warsaw. He now divides his time between Oxford and the University of Chicago. He is the author of 30 books on philosophy and the history of ideas.

In his lecture, he scorned the neutrality that characterizes democratic pluralism.

"When we extend our generous acceptance of 'cultural diversity' onto all the rules of a good and evil and aver that the human rights idea is a European concept, unfit for, and an understanding in societies which share other traditions, is what we mean that Americans rather dislike being tortured and packed into concentration camps but Vietnamese, Iranians and Albanians do not mind or enjoy it?" he asked.

Thursday, May 9, 1986 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho A-7

"And if so, what is wrong with racial laws of South Africa and why should we not be satisfied with saying that the Afrikaners simply 'have some values of their own' and that we have no way to prove that ours are any better?"

Interview with key terrorist hailed, attacked by newsmen

By FRED ROTHENBERG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Interviewing the man alleged to be the mastermind of the Achille Lauro hijacking, as NBC did, was hailed by some press members as legitimate reporting while being attacked by others for providing a major platform to a terrorist.

Without commenting specifically on NBC's interview Monday with Mohammed Abul Abbas, Robert Siegenthaler, vice president for news practices at ABC News, said Wednesday. "Our position is that Abul Abbas is a legitimate news target. We would have gone after him. He is not off limits as an interview subject."

Legitimate news target

Siegenthaler added that, under ABC's guidelines, the main caveat is that "we would not agree to anything illegal as a quid pro quo. . . I don't think we should be suppressing information. It's better to be informed than not informed."

Speaking as an individual and not on behalf of CBS News, CBS correspondent Charles Osgood said in a radio commentary Tuesday that "the news media must be independent, must not be government controlled, but perhaps we should not let Abul Abbas and his kind call the shots, either."

Osgood said Wednesday that he didn't speak to his superiors before or after the commentary. Admitting it was "a little unusual" to criticize another network, Osgood said, "The press should avoid being used by anybody. In this particular case, the medium was used by Abul Abbas for his purposes. It provided him with a platform to reach millions of people."

In the interview, conducted by NBC correspondent Henry Champ, Abbas said that President Reagan had become "enemy No. 1" and that operations are envisioned in the United States. A pre-condition was section, criticized NBC's pre-conditions. When a media outlet makes deals with a terrorist—not to divulge his whereabouts, the news organization is saying, "we've become his accomplices in order to give him publicity." Oakley said in an interview with Cable News Network.

"The media are free," he added. "We think it's reprehensible, but nevertheless they are free to do it."

Abbas is under indictment by a federal grand jury in connection with the slaying of Leon Klinghoffer, a wheelchair-bound New Yorker traveling on the Achille Lauro when it was hijacked last October in the Mediterranean.

The State Department, which said Abbas masterminded the hijacking, is offering a $250,000 reward for information leading to his arrest and prosecution.

An executive at CBS News, speaking on the condition of not being identified, said there was internal disagreement at CBS on the propriety of NBC's deal, but there was unanimity against the tone of the government's criticism.

"We see the main issue that a high-ranking official from the Reagan administration would use this as an opportunity to bash, harass and intimidate NBC," the source said. "It's unworthy of U.S. government officials and not in keeping with our traditions of fairness."

Fears cancel ballet tour

LONDON (AP) — The London Festival Ballet, one of Britain's leading dance companies, canceled its planned tour of the Soviet Union because of fears over radiation from the Chernobyl nuclear disaster.

The visit to Moscow and Leningrad, sponsored by the British Council, a government-funded cultural organization, was called off Tuesday. It was to have been the first Soviet tour by a British dance company in 25 years.

The company had been scheduled to begin its Soviet tour last Sunday but postponed it on advice from the British Foreign Office.

Ethiopia claims relief official fled with funds

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ethiopia said its top relief official during the 1984-85 famine fled to the United States with at least $300,000 in famine aid money.

In Washington, the State Department on Wednesday confirmed that Dawit Wolde Giorgis was in the United States. Deputy spokesman Charles Redman had no comment on whether Dawit had sought political asylum.

A Voice of America official said Dawit was in New York where he told VOA by telephone there was no foundation to Ethiopian government charges that he had "betrayed his country and exchanged his dignity for personal gain."

The VOA official, Brian McClure, said the conversation with Dawit did not go beyond the denial and that Dawit declined an on-the-record interview.

The accusations against Dawit, who headed the Relief and Rehabilitation Commission, was made in a lengthy statement in Amharic language late Tuesday by Ethiopia's state-run radio. An English version of the statement was broadcast Wednesday and monitored in neighboring Kenya.

Asked about the allegations against Dawit, Redman said extensive U.S. government monitoring shows "no indication any U.S. assistance has been diverted."

The radio announcement was the first official acknowledgement that Dawit had defected. He was last heard of on Oct. 25, when he left Ethiopia for Europe and the United States to solicit famine relief funds. Western diplomats and Ethiopian and foreign relief officials in Ethiopia generally assumed late last year that he had left for good.

Soviets promote former diplomat

MOSCOW (AP) — Yuli Vorontsov, the former Soviet ambassador to France, has been named one of two first deputy foreign ministers, replacing Georgy M. Kornenko, a Foreign Ministry official said Wednesday.

A Western diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he had heard Kornenko was appointed aide to Anatoly F. Dobrynin, the former ambassador to Washington who now heads the Communist Party Central Committee's international department.

Vorontsov's appointment, rumored earlier in Moscow, was confirmed by a woman at the Foreign Ministry's information office, who refused to give her name.

Vorontsov's appointment puts an entirely new team at the top of the Foreign Ministry since Mikhail S. Gorbachev became party general secretary in March 1985.

Ukrainians panicked after plant blast

MOSEOW (AP) — Some Ukrainians were hospitalized because they panicked after the Chernobyl nuclear plant accident and poisoned themselves with medicine they thought would prevent radiation sickness, Tass said Wednesday.

It was the first official reference to panic after the explosion, fire and reactor core meltdown April 26 that spewed an invisible cloud of radiation over Europe.

The government said radiation was declining around the Chernobyl plant and a small group of foreign journalists will be taken to Kiev, the Ukrainian capital 80 miles away.

An American bone-marrow specialist who came here to treat radiation victims said he and other experts probably will be in Moscow for at least a month. Dr. Robert Gale would not say how many marrow transplants he had performed.

Tass, the official news agency, carried a report from Kiev on a television appearance by Anatoly Romanenko, the Ukrainian health minister. He said radiation levels in Kiev were slightly above normal but posed no health risks and did not require preventive measures.

Romanenko said of those who took the medicine: "Such is life and there are panic-prone people. They follow some hasty advice, taking medicines that were alleged to protect them from radiation, and there were cases of poisoning. They are now being treated in hospitals."

He did not say how many people were poisoned or what they had taken.

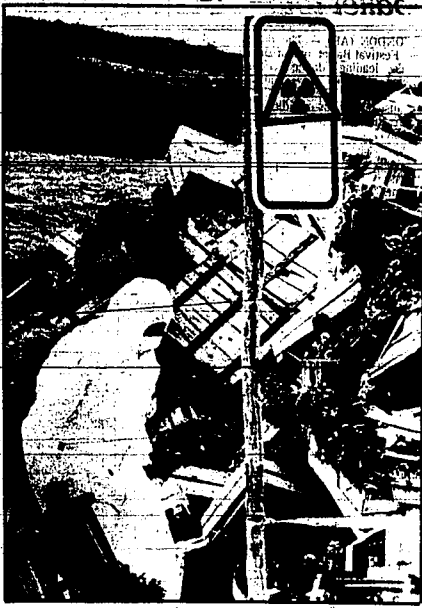

Like other Soviet reports on life in Kiev, the Tass dispatch said the situation was under control and consequences of the accident were being dealt with appropriately.

A Foreign Ministry official advised several Western news agencies Wednesday evening of the tour to Kiev and said it would leave late Thursday. He did not say who would be invited or whether they would be allowed near the site of the accident that spewed an invisible cloud of radiation over Europe.

He said the trip was organized in response to requests to visit the area. Such requests have been denied routinely.

No radiation levels dangerous to health were reported in Europe.

A U.S. Embassy statement said tests so far show no cause for con-

An official of the affected area said tests were being conducted on water from the Pripyat, but that so far only insignificant amounts of radiation had been found.

A government official in Bonn said a West German company that specializes in nuclear cleanups had sent two remote-controlled earth moving machines to the Soviet Union on Wednesday for use at the Chernobyl plant. The Soviet government asked earlier in the week to buy or rent the equipment.

Officials of a French-Soviet company acting as intermediary said in Paris that a manufacturer had supplied tons of anti-radiation paint to the Soviet Union.

In Italy, Premier Bettino Craxi's office said Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev had pledged to keep the world informed on the aftermath of the disaster.

Gale arrived last Friday to help Soviet doctors treat the people most seriously injured at Chernobyl. Bone marrow transplants are considered their only effective treatment for severe radiation exposure.

He said by telephone Wednesday that he has been operating on victims, and "we expect to be here for at least a month."

Two other American specialists, Dr. Paul Terasaki and Dr. Richard Chertok, are here to assist with treatment and Dr. Yair Reissner of Israel arrived Wednesday, Gale said. Official government statements have said 13 of those injured were in serious condition, but have not disclosed the degree of exposure.

The Communist Party daily Pravda on Wednesday renewed criticism of Western reporting of the Chernobyl accident.

"Certain quarters in the West are speculating on the issue of information for the benefit of an anti-Soviet campaign," it said.

The government press agency Novosti said: "A suspicion naturally arises that some American and other Western circles strive to use the Chernobyl accident to lessen the impact of the Soviet program for a nuclear-free world. Aren't they trying to torpedo the prestige of the Soviet foreign policy of peace in order to carry on the arms race?"

West Berlin sends contaminated vegetables to dump; issued since the accident. The first was issued April 28, two days after the accident, when unusually high levels of radiation were detected in Scandinavia.

The latest statement was read on a national television news program which also showed footage of a few evacuees at a collective farm. The program said the evacuees were working at the farm while their own settlements were being decontaminated. It said that 204 people were injured.

Several official statements have been

Bomb shatters windows

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A bomb exploded Wednesday on a fire escape in a shopping center in a wealthy suburb, smashing windows but causing no injuries.

Elsewhere, police said the mutilated bodies of three black youths, aged from 12 to 16, were found behind a black workers' residential complex in a township west of Johannesburg. It was unclear why they were killed.

The explosion in the Benmore Gardens shopping center in Sandton, just north of Johannesburg, came at 1:20 p.m. Witnesses told reporters the blast, in an emergency exit stairwell, sent a shower of glass from offices and stores.

Police disclosed the details beyond saying the remains of an "explosive device" were found on the fire escape.

The largest store in the complex is a Pick 'n' Pay supermarket, part of a nationwide chain crippled by a sit-in strike Wednesday by about 8,000 black workers demanding higher pay. Regional Managing Director Gordon Houtt said he did not believe the bombing was related to the strike.

Iraqis raid oil refinery

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraqi warplanes hit an oil refinery near Tehran with bombs and rockets Wednesday, and Iran claimed the raiders also struck civilian areas of three northwestern towns. The Iranians said 11 people were killed.

Marine salvage executives based in the Persian Gulf said Iran carried out its third raid in a month on a Saudi Arabian oil tanker in the southern part of the gulf, away from the war zone.

Salvage executives said two Iranian missiles hit the 144,264-ton Saudi tanker Al-Nisr al Arabi, which was carrying crude to Singapore.

They said one missile exploded in the crew's quarters, starting a fire, but the other bounced off.

Crew members brought the fire under control and the vessel headed for Dubai for repairs, according to the reports.

WOMEN IN MINES
Q. Why did the oldtime miners prohibit women from going into the mines.
A. Superstition, they said. But few superstitions survive without cause. Mines were dangerous. In a cave-in or gas rise, the men down there hardly knew how they'd help themselves, let alone how they'd help distracting visitors. What they feared was not the women so much as their own old-Victorian gallantry — the deadly compulsion of trying to help the helpless. It's also why old soldiers so long have kept women out of combat.

Guests hold punches at Cronkite roast

Thursday, May 8, 1986 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho A-11

WASHINGTON (AP) — Walter Cronkite did a better job of making fun of his sainted image than the celebrities who gathered to roast CBS' anchorman — they made it more of a toast.

"I'm taking the easy way out," talk show host Dick Cavett said Tuesday night. "I'm going to use all the jokes I used at the Mother Teresa roast."

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said he always thought that "if God were to speak out loud to me, he would sound something like Walter Cronkite."

Cronkite said he expected "to grow old gracefully — like Jean Collins or Gary Coleman."

He poked fun at his candidacy, at age 69, to be the first journalist in space, noting it could be years before NASA resumes the space shuttle program.

"To tell you the truth," he said, "I think that right now it's sort of a race between NASA getting the shuttle's plumbing fixed before mine wears out."

About 300 people attended the $1,000-plus dinner to benefit a Walter Cronkite Chair in the communications school of the University of Texas at Austin, which Cronkite attended.

Real estate broker sues Carson over condo deal

NEW YORK (AP) — A real estate broker has sued Johnny Carson for $175,000, claiming the television entertainer broke a deal to sell his Manhattan condominium for $2.5 million so he could avoid paying a brokerage fee.

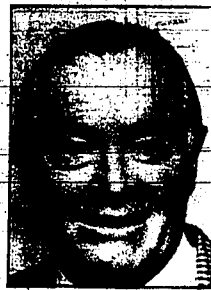

Previews Inc. charged in the suit Tuesday that lawyers for Carson canceled their agreement after finding an independent buyer to purchase the apartment for the same amount, commission-free.

Carson's spokesman, Jim Mahoney, said he had no comment, and Carson's lawyer in the suit, Jeffrey Straus, said he had not seen the complaint and had no comment.

Previews said it was hired in February 1985 to find a buyer for Carson's condo in exchange for a 7 percent brokerage fee, and that Straus drew up a contract for the sale after

But it charged that Straus' law firm received another offer of about $2.5 million and Straus demanded on Dec. 2 that the first buyer make a $250,000 downpayment by 3 p.m. on Dec. 4.

That demand was made "with the expectation that ... the deadline would not be met and thereby ... furnish an 'excuse' to accept the third party's offer, which did not involve payment of a broker commission," the suit charged.

Previews said its buyer left the downpayment at Straus' office at 4 p.m. Dec. 4, and the check was rejected.

The broker demanded the $175,000, plus interest and court costs.

Hope, Taylor on hand for Navy air anniversary

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Entertainers including Bob Hope, Elizabeth Taylor and Don Johnson were helping the Navy celebrate the 75th anniversary of its air arm Wednesday at the Pensacola Naval Air Station.

Hope, who will join Navy brass at a diamond anniversary gala Thursday night at the Pensacola Civic Center, is taping his annual birthday television show Wednesday through Friday aboard the Pensacola-based aircraft carrier Lexington.

Besides the 33-year-old comedian, Johnson and Miss Taylor, the cast for the show to be broadcast May 25 includes comedian Jonathan Winters, actresses Brooke Shields and Phyllis Diller, and singers Sammy Davis Jr., Barbara Mandrell and Moe Davis.

Naval aviation began May 8, 1911, when — Capt. Washington Irving Chambers ordered two A-1 Triads from aviation pioneer Glenn Curtiss.

Three years later the former Pensacola navy yard was reactivated as the nation's first naval air station and became known as the "Cradle of Naval Aviation." It remains a major training base and home of the Blue Angels flight demonstration squadron. The Blue Angels are celebrating their 40th year and will headline anniversary air shows here Saturday and Sunday.

Charles, Diana arrive in Japan for 5-day stay

TOKYO (AP) — Britain's Prince Charles and Princess Diana arrive Thursday in the western city of Osaka for a five-day glimpse into the ancient and the modern sides of Japan.

They were arriving from Vancouver, Canada, where Diana suffered a dizzy spell Tuesday, fueling speculation that the 24-year-old mother of two was pregnant again. A spokesman said she felt better after resting and denied she was pregnant.

While in Japan, the couple is scheduled to see the ancient capital of Kyoto for a day and then head for the capital, Saturday, where they will meet Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, Emperor Hirohito and other members of the imperial family.

Although "of course they're not on a trade promotion mission," said a British Embassy official who spoke on condition of anonymity, British hopes that royal efforts will help attract Japanese businesses to Britain and sell more British goods here.

In Kyoto, the royals will visit two temples and attend a garden party at a feudal castle. In Tokyo, the princess will view the Japanese arts of flower arrangement and doll making; and they will both see sumo wrestling and kabuki theater.

Former beauty queen wouldn't be there either, Luke said

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Former beauty queen Joyce McKinley, accused in 1977 of abducting and murdering a Mormon missionary in Britain, failed to appear Wednesday for her trial on charges she shadowed the same man here.

Fifth Circuit Court Judge Michael L. Hutchings issued a bench warrant for McKinley, who made international headlines when London prosecutors accused her of kidnapping Kirk Anderson, then 21, handcuffing him to a bed with fur-lined manacles and forcing him to have sex with her.

The Asheville, N.C., native and 1973 Miss Wyoming-USA denied the allegations, saying Anderson was a willing partner, but she slipped away before trial. British authorities never sought extradition.

Chief City Prosecutor Cheryl Luke said the warrant issued by Hutchings could be entered on the National Crime Index Computer, served outside of Utah and extradition sought upon McKinley's arrest. "But we would never do that on a misdemeanor. The expense would be prohibitive."

Prosecutors considered trying McKinley in absentia on charges of disturbing the peace and giving false information to police, but were unable to do so because defense attorney D. Gilbert Athey indicated he wouldn't be there either, Luke said. A secretary said Athey was out of his office and unavailable for comment.

McKinley's absence in court Wednesday was not unexpected. In an April 29 letter to The Associated Press and other news organizations, she said she would not attend the trial, which she characterized as a "Mormon kangaroo court."

Her trial had repeatedly been postponed on a string of continuances stretching over nearly two years. Athey is McKinley's third attorney, succeeding Ronald Vengich, who withdrew from the case late last year after replacing James Barber.

McKinley, whose whereabouts were unknown to authorities, had said earlier she feared coming to predominantly Mormon Utah. She is a former member and outspoken critic of the faith embraced by 70 percent of the state's population.

On June 16, 1984, she was arrested near the Western Airlines Commissary Building in Salt Lake City, where Anderson works. Police said Anderson told them he was afraid McKinley intended to abduct him.

She contends she was only gathering background for a screenplay and book. The false information charge stems from police claims that McKinley at first identified herself as "Susan Castelli."

McKinley claims she was beaten by police and hospitalized with injuries. Police have denied the charge.

City dwellers respond to small town ad

CONDON, Ore. (AP) — From Japan to Virginia, the responses to this rural town's advertisements for "a few good residents" are filling the mailboxes at City Hall, the chamber of commerce and the local newspaper.

The obscure town of about 700 residents, in Eastern Oregon's Gilliam County, has been plagued by a shrinking population. So the chamber placed ads last month in The Oregonian of Portland and the Los Angeles Times, hoping to attract just 10 families.

The story was distributed nationally by The Associated Press and United Press International. As of Monday, there had been nearly 200 calls and letters received, said Max Stinchfield, editor of the Condon Times-Journal.

"It's been unbelievable," city administrator Bonnie Parker said. "The phones have been crazy as well as the mail. It's pretty neat to see that people are interested in living here."

The calls and letters are coming from farther away as time goes by, Parker said. One arrived Monday from Korea, she said.

The ads read, "Upbeat Eastern Oregon community is looking for a few good residents. Safety, inexpensive housing, good schools and services, recreation opportunities."

The responses were as concise as the ad. An example is the reply by Al Seidner of Desert Hot Springs, Calif.

"Have good income. Have car, and fishing rod. Can move," Seidner said. "Most of the letters have come from the Northwest and from California. Others have come from cities as large as Chicago, Philadelphia and Houston, and as small as Gillette, Wyo.; Manassas, Va.; and Merrimack, N.H."

"There are a lot of people in this world looking for a way to get out of the big cities," Parker said. "Most of the people who have contacted us are retired people living in smoggy, unsafe, congested communities and they would like very much to get into a country setting."

They have asked lots of questions about Condon, including: "How hot does it get in the summer and cold in the winter? Is there a decent mobile home park? Where is the nearest pet doctor? Can I buy a home for under $10,000?"

"They've asked about rainfall, medical facilities, shopping, churches, recreation — even leash laws and bars. In response, they are sent a brochure and answers to specific questions."

Several letters have come from younger people who grew up in rural communities and long to return.

"To put it simply, I'm homesick for the wide open spaces; small towns and most of all the West," lamented Joan Lehrenz of Hixon, Tenn., who read about Condon in the Chattanooga News.

Alain Feyte, 42, of Tucson, Ariz., offered Condon French pastry. Feyte, a native of France, wrote that he recently lost his bakery business. He said he can drive a truck or forklift and "I can of course bake bread and make all sorts of French pastries."

"I would like this tranquil way of living if there was something for me to do," he said. "I could not find Condon on the map, which is OK."

A 22-year-old sailor aboard the USS Blue Ridge in Japan wrote that he will study aeronautics in Tulsa, Okla., when he gets out of the Navy in 1989.

Condon, an Eastern Oregon town of about 700, is looking for 'a few good residents'

Walker said his usual explanation in recruiting a prospective spy was that the information was being bought by a private intelligence or defense organization. He said he also gave that explanation to his wife, Barbara, after she allegedly found out about his espionage activities in 1968 after breaking into his desk.

Asked by defense lawyer James Larson whether he kept other members in the dark because of a fear of exposure, Walker said, "Partially because there was a risk, and also because one does not want everybody in the ring, as you call it, to know what was happening."

He said he was protecting the "security of the ring."

Walker also said he suggested to Whitworth when he recruited him in 1974 that the buyer of the secrets might be Israel, because "Israel fights our battles for us and we withhold certain weapons and technology from them."

He said he had discussed Israel with Whitworth and thought the explanation might produce a favorable response.

Confessed spy Walker denies informing ring

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Confessed spy John Walker said Wednesday he never told any members of his ring, including Jerry Whitworth, that they were spying for the Soviet Union because their ignorance made the operation more secure.

Questioned by the defense at Whitworth's spy trial, Walker expanded on earlier testimony that he ducked six or seven inquiries from Whitworth over the years about the buyers of the Navy code and communications secrets that Whitworth allegedly furnished Walker.

Whitworth, 46, a retired Navy radioman, is charged with selling secret documents for $332,000 to the Soviet-controlled spy ring led by Walker, his longtime friend.

Walker pleaded guilty last October to espionage and agreed to testify against Whitworth. Walker's son, Michael, also pleaded guilty, and Walker's brother, Arthur, was convicted by a federal judge.

The issue of Whitworth's awareness of Soviet involvement is potentially important because he is charged with providing secrets with the knowledge and intent that they would be relayed to the Soviets.

Tests warning sought

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A citizens' watchdog group has asked Arizona, Utah and Nevada governors to demand two days' warning on underground nuclear tests, but test site officials say they already do so when appropriate.

Steve Erickson of Down Winders, a non-profit group in Salt Lake City which has represented victims of radioactive fallout in federal courts, told a news conference Tuesday that the U.S. Energy Department is covering up radiation leaks.

Erickson said the Energy Department should warn the public at least 48 hours in advance of any nuclear tests at the Nevada site near Las Vegas.

That would allow children and pregnant women to arrange to stay indoors and would permit distribution of iodine pills to offset some effects of radiation, he said.

"Although they are conducting these tests underground, one out of 10 explosions has released radiation off site where it can be a potential danger to the public," Erickson said. "Sooner or later, one of these tests is going to splatter fallout over Nevada, Utah or Arizona."

Voter sues over lost ballot

DILLON, Mont. (AP) — The value of a single vote isn't lost on Holiday R. Smith, who has sued to void a local school board election because she didn't get her absentee ballot — a ballot that would have broken a tie.

The April 1 election between Guy Hall and Fred Stewart for a three-year term on the Relchie School Board ended with a 29-29 tie. That means the two sitting school board members must appoint one of the candidates for a one-year term, after which another election would be held.

The Relchie school, which is north local school board election because of Dillon, has 17 students from kindergarten through eighth grade.

Smith has petitioned district court to invalidate the election, and her effort has been joined by both candidates.

The petition also asked for a new election. It did not ask for a re-vote on the school levy, which passed by a wide margin.

Right to Work head defends FCC complaint

By DEAN MILLER
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Corey Lane, leader of Union Members for the Right to Work, said Wednesday he is not merely seeking publicity in his complaint to the Federal Communications Commission asking Idaho television stations to grant his group a chance to rebut anti-right-to-work law advertisements.

He said the committees working for voter approval of the so-called right-to-work law are short on money and are complaining about unequal treatment by Idaho's television stations, because they can't afford to buy as many advertisements as can the unions who oppose the law.

Lane said Wednesday that in the last Idaho battle over the law, unions claimed they were destitute and were given free advertising time to counter the advertisements of pro-right-to-work forces.

But AFL-CIO Information Director Barbara Babic said that an attorney for Idahoans Against Deception (an AFL-CIO-affiliated group fighting enactment of the law) has said circumstances were different when the Idaho AFL-CIO appealed to Idaho TV stations for a chance to rebut pro-right-to-work ads in 1977. The ads the union sought response to were run during the legislative session, because of imminent consideration of the bill, there was a need for rapid response at the expense of the television stations, she said.

Lane said that while his group is separate from the Freedom to Work Committee, he knows that neither group has the money to equal what he said was $40,000 worth of television advertising bought by opponents of the right-to-work law. He said Freedom to Work Committee Executive Director Gary Glenn is out-gunned by better-financed union organizations.

"If he had the money, he'd be buying the time. With the unions buying time this far out, it's soaking in," he said.

Idahoans Against Deception staff coordinator Paula Wissel said Wednesday night that television advertising by the group so far has totaled $15,589 for ads run in the first two weeks of March. She said the group bought ads on all the commercial stations in the state, but not in Spokane or Salt Lake City.

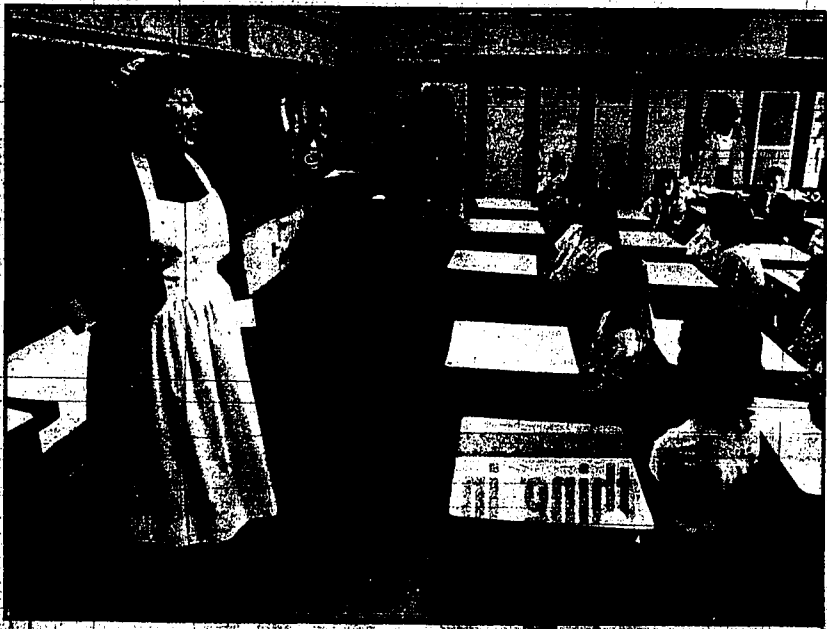

Lane said his organization is completely financed with the out-of-pocket contributions of his 50 members and that Glenn's organization is not as well-financed as the AFL-CIO and Idahoans Against Deception, who he said will benefit from $5 million that will be spent by AFL-CIO and the Teamsters unions.

Babic said AFL-CIO has collected $120,000 in 1986 and expects to spend nowhere near $5 million.

Wissel said her group will not spend $5 million, either. "Our spending will compare to other statewide races, such as gubernatorial candidate Lt. Gov. David Leroy's or (U.S. Senate candidate Gov. John) Evans'." Those races are expected to cost between $1 million and $2 million.

Anderson claims record of keeping platform promises

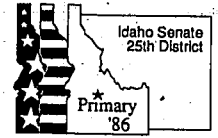

By DEAN MILLER
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Heading into a three-way primary election race, state Sen. Larry Anderson, R-Twin Falls, said Wednesday he has been able to keep the promises he made during the 1984 election campaign.

With a proposal to reduce the size of the Idaho Legislature scheduled for printing on general election ballots, and with the state moving ahead on a plan to put up more roadside attraction signs, Anderson said he kept his word on promises to eliminate his own federal District 25 seat and to better promote Idaho to tourists.

SEN. LARRY ANDERSON Helped kill day-care bill

In the primary, he faces former state representative Gordon Hillfield and George Anthony of Filley, a former Democrat who has previously run for Congress.

The 32-year-old writer and campaign operator didn't spend all his time in the Senate on those two issues alone. This year, he engineered the death of the day-care licensing bill presented by a governor's task force, participated in the brief heyday of the "young lions" of the Senate, and is claiming partial responsibility for passage of a bill to allow growing towns to exceed the cap on budget increases that was implemented after the 1 Percent Initiative passed.

The task force day-care bill was supported by Democrats and moderate Republicans such as Sen. Darrel McRoberts, R-Twin Falls, and called for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare to attend to the licensing of day-care centers.

Anderson and Sen. Marti Calabretta, D-Oborn, headed the bill off by offering amendments that completely rewrite the bill and passed out inspection duties among the local fire, sheriff's, and health district offices. "If you're looking at it from the point of view of pure Republican politics, basically I passed the bill that stopped the Democratic day-care bill," he said.

Anderson said he objected to the complexity of the task force bill and he was able to convince Calabretta that even if it passed, the program would not get the funding it needed. Like all other day-care bills, Anderson's died this year.

In late February, Anderson joined a group of young Republicans called the "young lions" and passed a budget-balancing plan that called for a temporary sales tax increase, revocation of the two-year-old state revenue sharing program that sends about $15 million a year back to local government from the state, and allowed cities and counties to pass local sales and income taxes with a 55-percent majority. The measure died on the desk of House Speaker Tom Silvers.

Anderson said Wednesday he expects it will pass next year. He said that while he ran for office on the standard Republican anti-tax platform, he soon found that more money was needed for schools and other state programs, which is why he became interested in local option taxes. "You're not raising taxes, you're giving people the option to," he said.

The one-time field staffer for former congressman George Hansen said that while the Legislature has

Lawmakers turn down nurse outing

Most cite scheduling difficulties in spending a day with a public health nurse

By JIM ROBISON
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An attempt to take a health tour to see their tax dollars at work fell flat this week when most lawmakers declined the offer.

Cheryl Juntunen, physical health director at the South Central District Health Department, said several lawmakers were invited to spend the day to see a public health nurse in action.

"We've never done it before," she said on Tuesday. "We thought it would be an information/education experience."

Juntunen said Sen. Larry Anderson, R-Twin Falls, was out of town and could not attend and Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, could not work it out with his schedule.

Sen. Darrel McRoberts, R-Twin Falls, also declined, she said, but gave no reason. And Rep. Jeff Stoker, R-Twin Falls, said the outing was not right.

On Wednesday, Stoker said he thought the health department should have waited until after the May 27 primary to see who was still around.

"I thought it would be nonproductive until after the elections," Stoker said. "Besides, I'm not sure it was proper to make a home visit."

Juntunen said the idea was to hold the event in conjunction with National Nurses Week this week and to help celebrate the 100th year of public health nursing.

"We just thought it would be a way to show them what we're doing," Juntunen said. "We thought it would be more personal than the annual legislative meeting we hold."

activities planned included traveling with a nurse on a home visit for a crippled child and following a nurse to schools, watching a nurse work in the refugee program and with the tuberculosis clinic; and watching a nurse work with pregnant women who were at high risk.

Juntunen said county commissioners in each area also were invited, and Twin Falls County Commissioner Judy Felton was scheduled to attend.

Because of a cutback in state funds, the health department is asking for a 5-percent increase from each county next year, Juntunen said. For 1985, a lack of funds meant health departments were asked to hold back 4.5 percent of their budget. For SCHD, that meant a loss of $14,000.

Juntunen said that despite the low turnout, they would try it again later in the year.

Accepted bank's offer Chamber signs lease on new building

By BOB FREUND
 Times-News writer

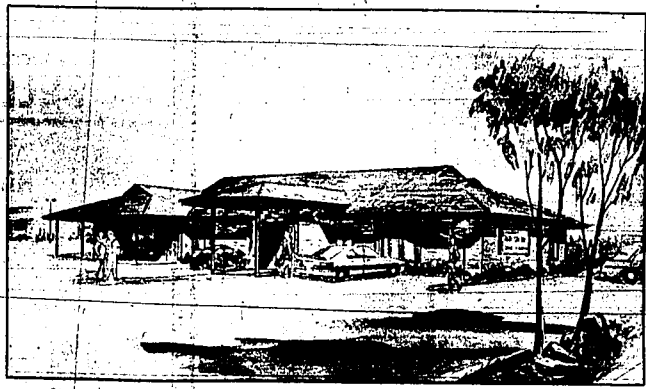

TWIN FALLS — The Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce has signed a five-year lease for offices in a building to be constructed on the north side of Twin Falls.

As expected, chamber officials accepted the offer of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Twin Falls to construct the new headquarters on the financial institution's property at Falls Avenue and Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

First Federal Chairman Jim Dodds said Monday that construction of the $190,000 building probably will begin during the second week of June. The chamber expects to move into the new building this summer.

Chamber Executive Vice President Mike Dolton pronounced the building "perfect" for the future growth. He said the new building structure, which has another level below ground, will have enough space for an convention and visitors bureau if the chamber buys one in the future.

When it opens, though, the chamber will occupy about 4,000 square feet of the 7,000 square feet available. At about 50 percent of the building, Lease terms call for the chamber to pay rent at a rate equivalent to 10 percent interest on the cost of the space. Dodds said the chamber will extend the lease to 10 years. First Federal plans to lease the remainder of the building to another tenant, Dodds said.

The chamber had been seeking a new home for several months. It had been renting a small office building from First Federal at 323 Shoshone St. N. for several years. However, First Federal announced earlier this year that it will build a new, $1.7 million headquarters on the site this year.

Temporary chamber offices are located at 212 Shoshone St. E. Before it moves into its new quarters later this year, the chamber may be welcoming some new members.

The chamber will open its annual membership drive on May 13 with a community-wide recruiting blitz by 50 active members. The day-long event will be capped with prizes for the "teams" bringing in the most new members.

Hagerman neutral on hospital tax levy plan

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — City Council members decided Tuesday to voice an opinion on a proposed tax levy for the Gooding County Memorial Hospital.

Steve Waugh, a member of the hospital steering committee, asked the council to write a letter to the editor "expressing its support" of a proposed new hospital taxing district.

The issue will be put before voters in the May 27 primary election.

If approved by voters, the new district would provide additional revenue from property taxes for support of the hospital.

Mayor Merle Owsley said Gooding County is required by law to pay for hospital care of its indigents if the county has to send these indigents to other hospitals, he said, the care would eventually cost taxpayers more than the proposed levy.

But Councilwoman Gloria Jazwick said she did not want to voice an opinion for Hagerman residents.

"I don't know whether people in Hagerman are in favor of having their taxes raised," she said.

Councilman Bill Wilson said some Hagerman residents support the levy and others do not.

"I make a motion the city (council) stay out of it," he said.

Wilson's motion passed unanimously.

Waugh later said the hospital steering committee was organized to analyze the hospital's financial problems and find some solutions.

To build support for the new hospital district, he said, petitions have been circulated and all the city councils and chambers of commerce in Gooding County were asked for their support.

"Now, we're following through, trying to inform people," Waugh said.

"Most of our push," he added, "has been in Gooding."

Waugh said councils and chambers were asked to write letters to newspapers "so people would read that and see who is in support of it, or if they're not for it, that's fine, too."

He estimated the levy would cost taxpayers $8 per $10,000 of taxable value of property. This revenue, Waugh said, would give the hospital operating funds and needed equipment. In return, he said, the hospital provides local emergency services, employment and lower cost indigent care.

Without a hospital, Waugh added, new businesses and industries would consider Gooding County less appealing.

In other business, the council decided to buy 24 Carolina poplar trees for the city park. The new trees will replace the old Lombardi poplar trees recently removed from the park.

City Superintendent Richard Scroggs said the dying Lombardi trees still in the park are dangerous during wind storms because of falling branches and chunks of bark.

Cable project awaits more cost details

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — A decision to pay for putting power cables underground in parts of Ketchum will wait until Idaho Power provides more detailed cost information.

The City Council on Monday also decided to delay the decision to give City Administrator Jim Jaquet a chance to determine how the cost fits into the 1986-87 budget, which the council will review for the first time on May 19.

Idaho Power is expanding two feeder lines in the city this year and has offered to bury the cables if the city pays the difference between the cost of overhead and underground. That cost is $375,000.

The utility has said it is willing to allow the city to spread the cost over three years beginning with the 1986-87 fiscal year. It also is giving the city the option of putting one line underground if there is not enough money to pay for both.

Bill Sikes, district manager for Idaho Power, said Monday he cannot provide the separate cost figures for the work on the two lines — one along Second Street and the other in the alley between Main Street and Washington Avenue — for at least one week.

The city had requested the cost breakout so it can review the options before making a decision.

Sikes also said Idaho Power will ask the Idaho Public Utilities Commission to waive the city's interest payments on the second and third installments. The utility cannot waive those payments without permission from the commission, he said.

Idaho Power proposes to place the Second Street lines in concrete ducts, capped by a sidewalk between Walnut Avenue and Washington Avenue. An uncommon way of undergrounding, the sidewalk duct costs about 13 percent more or less than conventional methods of burying power lines.

Since the line would run along an area that does not have continuous sidewalks, Jaquet said he will determine how the additional cost of the sidewalk duct compares with the cost of putting a new sidewalk along the same stretch.

Sikes said the $375,000 cost includes above ground switch boxes between the two lines. Those can go in later, he said, and the city asked for a cost excluding the price of the switches.

If the city decides to pay for the burying, it will become a part of an effort by the city and the utility company to get rid of overhead lines.

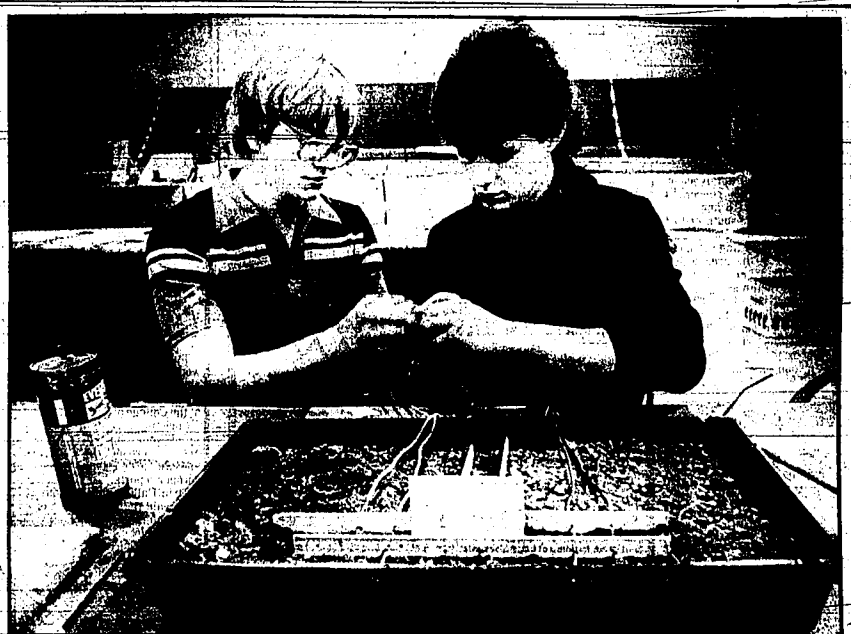

Last year, the developers of the Walnut Street Mall placed the lines running along its project underground. Those lines run one block south on Spruce Avenue between Sun Valley Road and Second Street and then one block west to Walnut Avenue.

Next year, Idaho Power intends to bury lines from its substation on Sun Valley Road to Spruce Avenue. If the city agrees to pay for burying the company's work this year, it will give the utility the option of eventually placing lines along the rest of the alley between Main Street and Washington Avenue — for at least one week.

If accomplished, the lines between the Substation to Washington Avenue on the south side of Sun Valley Road would be out of sight, giving the city a start on its underground program.

Sikes said Idaho Power will pay for putting the Sun Valley Road lines underground to Spruce Avenue because its right of way will not allow any expansion. The utility must go underground to meet increased demands for electricity in the areas the line serves, he said.

However, the Second Street line has room for expansion, and it is the company's policy to require cities to pay the difference in the cost of overhead and underground lines in such cases, Sikes said.

Worms make all the right moves

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Two students in Wendell are showing that nightcrawlers can be trained — if they survive the lessons.

Junior Blaine Johnston and sophomore Eric Bartlett will exhibit their "trained earthworms" at the high school's annual science and history fair being held at the Wendell junior high gymnasium today from 6 to 8 p.m.

"They're smarter than I thought," Johnston said, explaining how the worms learned to turn right instead of left in a small T-shape maze.

Using a dry-cell battery, the students shocked the worms when they crawled the wrong direction.

The first worm, said Bartlett, went through the maze six times before it learned to go the correct direction. Some of the others learned a little faster, he said, while others died from too much shocking before they learned which way to go.

"It seems that after so many times of being shocked, they die," concluded the young scientist. "However, we were able to train a few."

The Worm Conditioning experiment is one of more than 80 projects on display at the science-history fair. Teacher Gay Petersen said students work on the projects outside the classroom, spending their own time to do the research, experimenting and display production. Usually, two students work together on a project, she said.

"It's a good opportunity for all students to display their abilities, not only academically but also artistically," Petersen said.

Trophies are being awarded in each division and there will also be a grand prize awarded, she said.

The fair is free to the public and is being held along with an open-house evening at the junior high and high school.

Ketchum will hold hearing on Lane Ranch annexation

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — The city of Ketchum Monday decided to proceed with a zoning hearing for the annexation of the Lane Ranch, but reserved a final decision to annex the property until after a public hearing next week.

The council maintained its position of trying to avoid an annexation fight with the city of Sun Valley over the 700-acre ranch south of Ketchum by refusing to give the first of three required readings to a proposed annexation ordinance.

Despite Sun Valley giving the first reading to a similar ordinance two weeks ago, Councilman Tom Held thought a reading by Ketchum would unnecessarily offend Sun Valley officials.

However, that decision did not prejudice Ketchum's position in beating Sun Valley in a race to annex the property, since the city can waive the required three readings of the annexation ordinance if it wishes.

Despite his desire to avoid a fight, Held said he had little hope the two cities will reach an agreement over the issue following last week's meeting between elected officials of both cities. That meeting ended with little hope of a compromise.

"I don't see us going anywhere right now with Sun Valley," Held said. "I think we're going to end up going to war with this."

The council agreed to have the Planning and Zoning Commission continue with its May 12 public hearing and to make a recommendation for a zoning district on not only the Lane Ranch but also the Reinheimer Ranch and Weykain subdivision, which are located between the city limits and Lane property.

Sun Valley's Planning and Zoning Commission will meet for the same purpose on only the Lane property on May 19, one week following Ketchum's meeting.

Ketchum has long maintained it has the right over Sun Valley to annex all of the property between its southern boundary and the Idaho 75 crossing of the Big Wood River. Ketchum provides fire and police protection to the area and maintains it is capable of providing emergency services there better than Sun Valley could.

Last month, however, the developer of the Lane Ranch requested annexation into the city of Sun Valley, and the council responded by setting the required zoning hearings.

Some Ketchum officials objected, but Mayor Jerry Seiffert presented a compromise that would give Sun Valley the Lane Ranch while leaving to Ketchum the remaining property south of town.

Bellevue picks first administrator

By BARBARA NEIWEIT
Times-News correspondent

BELLEVUE — Milton Walth, a retired Naval administrator, has been selected as Bellevue's first city administrator.

During a closed executive session of the City Council Monday, Walth was chosen from a field of five applicants for the $400 per month job.

The adoption of Bellevue's new comprehensive plan and zoning ordinance prompted the council to hire an administrator to handle routine questions and problems. Council members also agreed hiring an administrator would solve a lot of problems people have had contacting city officials.

Walth will be available at city hall for three hours on week days from April through October each year. In addition to his administrative building inspector duties, Walth will act as the city's building inspector.

Walth said Tuesday he was looking forward to the job and said the job would be similar to the work he had done in the Navy.

In other business, the newly elected council members were installed in office. City News Editor Kylv McGeehe joined incumbent Terese Bergin and Mayor Dale Eversen on the council.

Eversen then appointed Councilman Mike Ivie as street commissioner. Bergin as parks commissioner, Don Litzinger as police commissioner, Gene Field as head of the water department, Noxon to head up public buildings and McGeehe as fire commissioner.

Over a dozen concerned residents urged the council to consider obtaining land on which to build up to four baseball diamonds for Little League baseball and men's and women's softball play.

Part-time teacher policy in works

By HOWARD MILLER
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone School Board has invited the Shoshone Education Association to give input on the formulation of employment policies governing part-time teachers.

Shoshone recently reduced several teaching positions to part time for the 1986-87 school year, making formulation of official policy necessary, said Superintendent Tim Adstir.

Positions in business, vocational special needs, home economics and guidance counseling have been reduced to part time in cost-saving moves.

Adstir presented his recommendations for the employe policy to the board in April and then suggested that the SEA also participate in the policy recommendations.

The SEA had previously informed the board of its intent not to negotiate this year. Teachers offered to continue under their current contract in light of a deficit and other economic problems facing the school district.

SEA President Larry Bond told trustees that the association would amend its intent notice and negotiate only on the policy for part-time teachers.

Under Adstir's recommendations, the part-time teachers shall not have any compensation or reserve time for preparation. Full time teachers in the Shoshone School District receive a preparation period each day.

In other Shoshone School Board business:

• The calendar for the 1986-87 school year has been adopted, with school beginning August 25 and ending May 27. Teachers and students will get two full weeks off for Christmas vacation and one week for spring vacation.

• Trustees have approved the transfer from School Plant Facility funds to the General Fund of $15,281. Adstir said the district's auditor has recommended the transfer as a result of the district falling to collect from taxpayers an approved $15,000 levy last year due to a clerical error.

• A policy has been set for providing correspondence courses when students are prevented from taking school classes due to scheduling conflicts. The school district will pay in those instances, with approval given on a case-by-case basis, Adstir said.

But when the two cities' officials met, Sun Valley Mayor Ruth Lieder and Councilman Joe Humphrey said they had interests in more than the Lane Ranch, citing an interest in Weyyakin and possibly other properties.

Lieder said she believed a natural break between the two cities is the Reinheimer Ranch. Owned by the Idaho Parks Foundation and dedicated as open space, the Reinheimer property lies between Ketchum and the Weyyakin and Lane properties.

Two Sun Valley council members did not attend the meeting, and no consensus for the city was drawn. Councilman Tom Pragastis disagreed with Humphrey and Lieder over Weyyakin, although he said the city has legitimate interests in the Lane Ranch.

Sun Valley officials have said they desire the property in part because they want aesthetic control over development on its southern entrance.

The council authorized formation of a committee to investigate the possibilities of a land acquisition for such a purpose. Bergin, who will serve on the committee, said council members are "only kidding themselves" to think somebody will donate land for the project.

• Bellevue resident Pam Wheeler told the council she is concerned about the accessibility to her home located adjacent to the south end of the old Bellevue City Park. City crews are currently cutting down old cottonwood trees in the area which has made the road inaccessible by car. Council members assured Wheeler that once the city shop was built at that location, a maintained city road would be constructed and plowed during the winter months, and that the roadway would not be fenced off to deny her access to her property.

Sportsmen blast Leroy for efforts to win OK on road

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A sportsmen's coalition is criticizing Republican governor candidate David Leroy for his efforts to win approval for a controversial transportation road in northeastern Idaho.

The Sportsmen's Political Action Committee told a Boise news conference here Wednesday that Leroy went to Washington and used political pressures to win approval at the national level for a road rejected three different times at the state level.

"It was highly unfortunate that he interfered," said spokesman Russ Heughins, alleging in essence that Leroy was pre-empting local opinion by having the decision made at the national level.

"That is a very undemocratic way of doing things," alleged Heughins.

Leroy responded later in the day that Sport PAC was "misusing the political process to make unfounded allegations."

"They should be reviewing the facts which have led even Idaho Gov. John Evans to believe the Hamer-Egin Road should be built, with winter closure."

"This is another example of the misuse of anti-environmental and anti-wildlife allegations that are not justified by the facts," Leroy said.

The Sport PAC said state Bureau of Land Management officials last month decided against the proposed road in Fremont and Jefferson counties. The action was based on local input, which ran 7-1 against the project, Heughins said, and the fact it could damage the Sand Creek elk herd of 2,000 head, which uses the area for winter range.

The proposed road, near Rexburg, would bisect the winter range, Heughins said.

He said Leroy met in Washington with BLM Director Robert E. Butler and Interior Secretary Donald Hodel and convinced them to approve the road, overruling the decision made at the state level.

The BLM expects to issue a preliminary environmental impact statement next month, allowing 90 days for public comment, before the project can proceed, Heughins said.

The Sport PAC organization said the Egin-Hamer road would benefit "a handful of local farmers," including James Siddoway, who is using the issue in his campaign for the Fremont County Commission.

Sport PAC, which described itself as a 200-member sportsmen's coalition, said individual farmers would save $95,000 to $125,000 on annual transportation costs, but the rest of the area would suffer because fewer hunters would use the area for big game hunting.

The Legislature even got involved in the battle over the road, voting for a resolution in favor of the road.

Expert calls Hofmann documents fake

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A documents expert testified Wednesday that some 18 historical manuscripts linked to Mark Hofmann, including the "controversial" "white salamander" letter, showed signs of forgery.

William Flynn, a documents examiner with the Arizona State Crime Laboratory, said the Hofmann documents contained evidence of artificial aging and forged handwriting.

Flynn was the second documents expert to testify of possible forgery of purported early Mormon documents during a 5th Circuit Court preliminary hearing to determine whether Hofmann, 31, must stand trial. He is charged with two counts of first-degree murder and 30 counts of fraud, theft by deception and bomb making.

Hofmann is accused of painting pipe bombs that killed Mormon bishop Steven Christensen, 31, and Kathleen Sheets, 50. Prosecutors contend Hofmann was trying to cover up a scheme in which he sold allegedly fraudulent, historical documents for hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Flynn, who teaches classes on forgery detection at the Arizona Police Academy and at Phoenix College, said he examined 461 historical documents provided by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints and police between December 1985 and April 1986.

He said not all the documents were linked to Hofmann. But Flynn said all the documents showing signs of forgery were among those Hofmann had sold to collectors or the Mormon Church.

He testified that on the 18 documents he found indications the ink had been artificially aged. On some documents, he said, infrared light showed the ink ran in one direction, evidence the paper had been wet and hung vertically to dry.

Normally, he said, ink spreads in all directions as it dries.

In each case, genuine 19th century paper was used, he said.

"Among the documents Flynn declared to be fakes was the "white salamander" letter purportedly written by early Mormon convert Martin Harris. In the letter, Harris links Mormon Church founder Joseph Smith to folk magic and treasure hunting.

The document also contradicts official Mormon accounts of how Smith obtained an ancient record from which he claimed to have translated the "Book of Mormon," which church members regard as scripture.

Some critics of Mormonism have used the letter to support their claims that Smith was a charlatan.

Flynn testified that examination of the letter under a microscope showed the surface of the ink was badly cracked, an indication the ink had been artificially aged with ammonia or sodium hydroxide.

The ink had the components of a common 19th century formula, Flynn said, but cracking would occur only when new ink, made according to the old formula, was treated with the aging chemicals. He said he applied the chemicals to the ink on genuine documents and found no such reaction.

The formula for the ink can be found in a book entitled "Great Forgeries and Famous Fakes," by Charles Hamilton. On Monday, a police detective testified he found a copy of the book in Hofmann's house after the fatal bombings.

In addition, Flynn said he believed the handwriting on the letter was "not genuine of that period."

Flynn also concluded that handwriting on a letter purportedly written by Smith to one of his followers, Josiah Stowell, was forged. He said the penmanship was superior to what he saw on numerous other samples of Smith's writing.

Marchers fight wind, rain

FRUITA, Colo. (AP) — The Great Peace March battled high winds and rain Wednesday through the western Colorado desert to reach its scheduled campsite between Fruita and Loma, a spokesman said.

"We do this in any kind of weather," said Marj Natrine. "It was wind and rain today, it'll be something else later on."

That "something else" could be snow, since forecasters were predicting steadily falling temperatures and a slight chance of the white stuff.

The marchers, about 500 of them, plan to arrive in Grand Junction late Thursday and have a rest day with rallies and prayer services on Friday.

Sportsmen blast Leroy for efforts to win OK on road

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A sportsman's coalition is criticizing Republican governor candidate David Leroy for his efforts to win approval for a controversial farm-to-market road in northeastern Idaho.

The Sportsmen's Political Action Committee told a Boise news conference here Wednesday that Leroy went to Washington and used political pressures to win approval at the national level for a road rejected three different times at the state level.

"It was highly unfortunate that he interfered," said spokesman Russ Heughins, alleging in essence that Leroy was pre-empting local opinion by having the decision "made at the national level."

"That is a very undemocratic way of doing things," alleged Heughins.

Leroy responded later in the day that Sport PAC was "misusing the political process to make unfounded allegations."

"They should be reviewing the facts which have led even Idaho Gov. John Evans to believe the Hamer-Eglin Road should be built, with winter closure.

"This is another example of the misuse of anti-environmental and anti-wildlife allegations that are not justified by the facts," Leroy said.

The Sport PAC said state Bureau of Land Management officials last month decided against the proposed road in Fremont and Jefferson counties. The action was based on local input, which ran 7-1 against the project, Heughins said, and the fact it could damage the Sand Creek alkali herd of 2,000 head, which uses the area for winter range.

The proposed road, near Rexburg, would bisect the winter range, Heughins said.

He said Leroy met in Washington with BLM Director Robert Buford and Interior Secretary Donald Hodel and convinced them to approve the road, overruling the decision made at the state level.

The BLM expects to issue a preliminary environmental impact statement next month allowing 90 days for public comment before the project can proceed, Heughins said.

The Sport PAC organization said the Eglin-Hamer road would benefit "a handful of local farmers," including James Siddoway, who is using the issue in his campaign for the Fremont County Commission.

Sport PAC, which described itself as a 200-member sportsmen's coalition, said individual farmers would save $95,000 to $125,000 on annual transportation costs, but the rest of the area would suffer because fewer hunters would use the area for big game hunting.

The Legislature even got involved in the battle over the road, voting for a resolution in favor of the road.

Expert calls Hofmann documents fake

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A documents expert testified Wednesday that some 18 historical manuscripts linked to Mark Hofmann, including the controversial "white salamander" letter, showed signs of forgery.

William Flynn, a documents examiner with the Arizona State Crime Laboratory, said the Hofmann documents contained evidence of artificial aging and forged handwriting.

Flynn was the second documents expert to testify of possible forgery of purported early Mormon documents during a 5th Circuit Court preliminary hearing to determine whether Hofmann, 31, must stand trial. He is charged with two counts of first-degree murder and 30 counts of fraud, theft by deception and bomb making.

Hofmann is accused of planting pipe bombs that killed Mormon bishop Steven Christensen, 31, and Kathleen Sheets, 50. Prosecutors contend Hofmann was trying to cover up a scheme in which he sold allegedly fraudulent historical documents for hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Flynn, who teaches classes on forgery detection at the Arizona Police Academy and at Phoenix College, said he examined 46 historical documents provided by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day-Saints and police between December 1985 and April 1986.

He said not all the documents were linked to Hofmann. But Flynn said all the documents showing signs of forgery were among those Hofmann had sold to collectors or the Mormon Church.

He testified that on the 18 documents he found indications the ink had been artificially aged. On some documents, he said, infrared light showed the ink ran in one direction, evidence the paper had been wet and hung vertically to dry.

Normally, he said, ink spreads in all directions as it dries.

In each case, genuine 19th century paper was used, he said.

Among the documents Flynn declared to be fakes was the "white salamander" letter purportedly written by early Mormon convert Martin Harris. In the letter, Harris links Mormon Church founder Joseph Smith to folk magic and treasure hunting.

The document also contradicts official Mormon accounts of how Smith obtained an ancient record from which he claimed to have translated the "Book of Mormon," which church members regard as scripture.

Some critics of Mormonism have used the letter to support their claims that Smith was a charlatan.

Flynn testified that examination of the letter under a microscope showed the surface of the ink was badly cracked, an indication the ink had been artificially aged with ammonia or sodium hydroxide.

The ink had the components of a common 19th century formula, Flynn said, but cracking would occur only when new ink made according to the old formula, was treated with the aging chemicals. He said he applied the chemicals to the ink on genuine documents and found no such reaction.

The formula for the ink can be found in a book entitled "Great Forgeries and Famous Fakes," by Charles Hamilton. On Monday, a police detective testified he found a copy of the book in Hofmann's house after the fatal bombings.

In addition, Flynn said he believed the handwriting on the letter was "not genuine of that period."

Flynn also concluded that handwriting on a letter purportedly written by Smith to one of his followers, Josiah Stowell, was forged. He said the penmanship was superior to what he saw on numerous other samples of Smith's writing.

Marchers fight wind, rain

FRUITA, Colo. (AP) — The Great Peace March battled high winds and rain Wednesday through the western Colorado desert to reach its scheduled campsite between Fruita and Loma, a spokesman said.

"We do this in any kind of weather," said Mark Nairne. "It was wind and rain today, it'll be something else later on."

That "something else" could be snow, since forecasters were predicting steadily falling temperatures and a slight chance of the white stuff.

The marchers, about 500 of them, plan to arrive in Grand Junction late Thursday and have a rest day with rallies and prayer services on Friday.

BPA proposal to withdraw crew from Burley draws mixed reaction

By LINDA LARSON
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — City officials have mixed feelings on a proposal by Bonneville Power Administration to move their crew linemen out of Burley.

Electrical Superintendent Don Hill told the Burley City Council Monday he objects to the move which would leave the nearest BPA crew in Idaho Falls.

Hill said agreements had been reached between BPA and two other area utilities, Rural Electric and Unity Light and Power, to provide repair services in the case of emergencies. The BPA is seeking a similar agreement from the city of Burley as well, he said.

Hill said that BPA would train local crew linemen to use the BPA equipment which would be left at the Burley BPA location.

"I believe in being a neighbor and helping," said Hill, "but I have objected to the agreement for several months."

Hill's main objections came because of the problem of liability insurance coverage when workmen are called out of their jurisdiction and because training sessions by BPA on use of the equipment could be forgotten if the equipment was not put to use except at rare intervals.

Mini-Cassia

City Attorney Bill Parsons was in favor of looking more closely at the agreement before making a decision. He said the payment section of the agreement was vague, but he said it could be worked out.

In other business, the council listened to a report by Bill Block from J-U-B Engineers on the progress of a water project that will provide the city with a new well and a water storage tank.

Block said the well drilling is behind schedule and will result in a delay of the entire project. He said the problem is not serious at this time, but that it demands monitoring.

The council targeted idled vehicles, weed patches, open vacant houses and junk in residential areas in its discussion of the need to clean up unsightly properties within the city.

City Clerk Bud Brinegar said the resident who does not clean up a problem after being notified by the city will have the junk removed by the city at the resident's expense.

Burley resident Mary Ellen Rasmussen attended the council meeting and complained about the sharp drop in the city's appearance in recent months.

Bids were awarded for street repair to Gordon Paving of Burley and Koch Asphalt of Salt Lake. Street Superintendent Leon Bedke said costs were down as much as 15 percent for some materials.

The council retained Truman Bradley to obtain property easements for sewer and water lines with the later option of having him obtain right-of-way purchases for a proposed truck route.

The easements and the truck route are part of a related project, with funding to come from two different grant sources.

Twin Falls boys receive Eagle Scout awards

Paul Wight, son of Bill and Judy Wight, received his award at a Court of Honor held in the Twin Falls 11th Ward of the LDS Church.

For his Eagle project, Wight designed and supervised the construction of signs to mark the Kimberly Stake welfare farm of the LDS Church. His achievements include completion of two 50-mile hikes in the Sawtooth and White Cloud areas. He has also served as a senior patrol leader.

Trent Cole, son of Russ and Karen Cole, also received an Eagle Scout award at a Court of Honor at the Twin Falls 11th Ward of the LDS Church. He is a student at O'Leary Junior High School.

For his Eagle project, Cole, 13, designed and supervised the construction of a judges stand for the O'Leary Junior High School track.

Kindergarten screening set

CASTLEFORD — A pre-kindergarten screening clinic will be held at the Castleford elementary school May 9 from 8 a.m. to noon.

The clinic is free to all parents of children planning to attend kindergarten in Castleford next fall.

The screening tests will include speech, hearing, vision, motor skills and eye-hand perception, said kindergarten teacher Diane Mitton.

The screening will take about 15 minutes per child, said Mitton.

Unless there is a language problem. The results of the tests will provide information on the skills the children already have as well as make parents aware of any developmental problems their children might have, she said.

Because the screening will take place in the kindergarten room, there will be no kindergarten class held that day.

Anyone having questions about the clinic can call the school at 537-6511.

Wood River honor roll

HAILEY — The following students at the Wood River Junior High were named to the honor roll for the third nine-week grading period.

Still no shelter in Castleford for QRU's emergency van

By DIANE SCHORZMAN
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD — Mayor Robert Sample told the council that members of the community are organizing benefits to help raise money for Barry Henke's hospital bills. Henke, 17, was seriously injured last Sunday when he was run over by a pickup and is in intensive care in St. Alphonsus Hospital in Boise.

A benefit breakfast will be held in Castleford next week and a chili supper will be held at the high school cafeteria on May 15.

In other business, new Councilwoman Mary Pinkston reported that Johnny Horizon Day was a success in Castleford. Pinkston, who organized the event, said about 60 children and 15 adults participated this year.

Capps-Wyant

TWIN FALLS — Ginger M. Capps became the bride of Ronald L. Wyant April 12 at the First United Brethren Church in Twin Falls.

Rev. Jim Winkie officiated and Mrs. Frank McMullin was accompanist. The bride provided special music.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Capps, Twin Falls, and the bridegroom is the son of Ruth Wyant, Burley, and the late Gerald E. Wyant Sr.

Donna Griffith, Twin Falls, was maid of honor with Melody Capps serving as bridesmaid for her sister, George Wyant, Shoshone, was best man, with Gerald Wyant Jr., Burley, as groomsman. Both are brothers of the bridegroom. Bob Capps and Ray Capps, both brothers of the bride, ushered.

Special guests were Ray I. Pace, Jerome, grandfather of the bride; Dr. and Mrs. Paul Swatsenberg, Boise; and Glen Bailey, Burley, Charlotte Wyant, Burley, and Christine Behr, Twin Falls, attended the guest book and Mona Dugley, Slays, aunt of the bride, was gift attendant.

A reception was held following the ceremony.

Ginger and Ronald Wyant ceremony, Kay Mayes and Beverly Slays, both Gooding, served.

Following a trip to Ketchum, the couple resides in Shoshone.

Nearly 5 million wives earn more than spouses

WASHINGTON (AP) — In families where both spouses work, nearly one wife in five earns more than her husband, the Census Bureau reported Tuesday.

"That situation involves almost 5 million women and occurs most often in the 25-34 age group, where about one-third of working wives bring home more than their spouses, the report found. The share gradually declines with age.

Delayed childbearing by women pursuing education and careers is likely at least partly responsible for this age difference, said Robert W. Cleveland of the Census Bureau.

Women aged 25-34 are more likely than their mothers and grandmothers to have attended college, and their careers have not been interrupted by child-rearing, as is more common among older wives, studies have found.

"Wives earning more than their husbands were more likely to be working year-round, full-time, to have no minor children at home, have completed college and work in professional specialties occupations of executive, administrative or managerial occupations," said the report by Cleveland and Mary F. Henson of the Census Bureau's Population Division.

Two primary reasons have been suggested for situations in which wives earn more than husbands, according to a 1984 Census analysis of these cases.

"One is the 'female superstar' image, which stresses the wife's occupational accomplishments. The other view, which might be characterized as the 'underachieving husband syndrome,' focuses on how the husband's characteristics — retirement, illness, disability, temporary layoff or simple lack of initiative — might account for superior earnings of the wife," said the report by Suzanne M. Bianchi and Daphne Spain.

While the two views are stereotypes, they point out possible explanations and are not necessarily opposing outlooks, the analysts wrote.

Pet owners need humane qualities

DEAR ABBY: I felt terrible when I read the letter from "Feeling Bad in Birmingham" (state unknown). She took her daughters, ages 2 and 5, to the Humane Society to adopt a kitten, and the people there wouldn't let her have it because the kitten cost $45 and she was $1.22 short!

You called them insensitive and you were right. I work at a Humane Society in Newport News, Va., and we certainly don't operate that way. We're not out for the money — we just want to make sure our pets are placed in good homes. We don't just let anybody who comes in off the street adopt one of our pets. They have to meet our requirements.

I'm sorry the Humane Society in Birmingham disappointed those people just because they were a little short. Everyone who works here is a true animal lover. We buy special treats and toys for the animals with our own money. We also make sure they get plenty of love and exercise while they're here.

Bless you, Abby, for offering to send the $1.22 to close the deal. Please let us know what happened.

— LIZ LEVINE, ANIMAL LOVER

DEAR LIZ: Nothing happened because "Feeling Bad" did not include her name and address. I appreciate your generosity, but before you rush in to bless me, please read on:

DEAR ABBY: I nearly choked on my fur ball when I read your response to "Feeling Bad in Birmingham" — the woman who was upset with the Humane Society because she was $1.22 short in meeting the adoption fee for a kitten. You called the people at the Humane Society "insensitive and petty" for not giving her the kitten anyway.

Abby, there may have been other reasons the adoption was denied. First of all, the mother said her daughters had just left the dentist's office "feeling glum" and she wanted to get them a pet to cheer them up. Pets are living creatures — not toys to be bought on an impulse to cheer up a child.

Also, the children were 2 and 5. At our shelter we don't even consider adoption of small puppies and kittens to children under 6 years old.

We've seen too many cases of pets (and children) being seriously injured.

Third, how were the people at the Humane Society to know whether the family could afford to care properly for the pet if they couldn't come up with the price of adoption? We've had pets returned to us because they were too expensive to care for.

Some people don't realize that sick animals may need to be taken to the vet. And it costs something to feed them properly. Abby, put your claws back in. Give shelter workers some credit for knowing their job, and some thanks for being there to accept the responsibility of a heart-breaking job not too many of us would be willing to assume.

— JANETTE BOEHM, HUMANE SOCIETY, KANSAS CITY, KAN.

DEAR ABBY: For a columnist who is usually fairly objective, you reinforced the popular stereotype of the chess player as an intellectual freak. You made the sweeping generalization that most chess players are "quiet, pensive, more introverted than extroverted, highly competitive, and slow to make decisions." Then you cap it with, "And they're not exactly a barrel of laughs!" That's like saying most sports fans are aggressive, beer-guzzling loudmouths.

This may come as a shock to you, Abby, but chess is enjoyed by college professors, farmers, factory laborers, artists, doctors, lawyers, children, salesmen and people on welfare!

I think you owe chess players an apology.

— CHESS PLAYER

DEAR CHESS PLAYER: Give me a break. In the last month I've managed to alienate the Texas oil tycoons, smokers, the American Donkey and Mule Society, Alaska, Canada and the Mormon Church. My apologies.

Cost of Yuppie toys has climbed in year

By DENISE GELLENÉ
Los Angeles Times

If your yuppie pals seem unhappy these days, here is why — it now costs more to collect such vital necessities as BMWs, imported sneakers and souped-up video cassette recorders.

So says Hugh Gee, publisher of Money Power Confidential, a San Francisco investment newsletter which offers stock tips that only the wealthiest young urban professionals, or yuppies, can afford.

According to Gee, it costs at least $30,829.85 to buy the 10 essential items that yuppies cannot be yuppies without. That is 5.9 percent more, he says, than the $29,117.85 yuppies would have plunked down to buy the same items a year ago.

High on Gee's list is the BMW 528e "the true chariot of the over-reachers." It now costs $26,000, up from $24,000 a year ago, he says. English-made Reebok Hi-Top aerobic shoes cost $5 more than last year and dinner for one at Berkeley's Chez Panisse costs $45, up from $40 a year ago, according to Gee's yuppie Index. Still, die-hard yuppies will pay the price, as the restaurant is to yuppies "what Disneyland is to mice," says Gee.

Gee's list has uncovered a few bargains. An Apple Macintosh Plus home computer has dropped in price to $2,499 from $2,795 and a Cuisinart DICT Super Pro food processor which "does everything but make reservations" costs $250, down from $290. And prices of the Sony CDP 302 compact disk player and the Trivial Pursuit board game are unchanged.

And who are the yuppies? Gee acknowledges that young urban professionals "who once thought nothing of jumping in the old Bimmer (BMW) and heading down to the local gourmet grocer for some Brie" are keeping a lower profile, fearing they may be called "Too Yup." But while it may not be fashionable to behave like a yuppie, it is still OK to spend like one, he says. "They are still with us."

Wary Wall Street backs off

MARKET REPORT

Activity over the past 30 trading days

Dow Jones Average
High: 1,780.05
Low: 1,755.27
Close: 1,775.30
Change: -12.85

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gave ground Wednesday as investors cautiously watched for signals on the outlook for interest rates.

A selloff in International Business Machines shares contributed to the wary mood on Wall Street. But the market nevertheless managed to close well above its 50-day moving average.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down almost 30 points at one stage, finished with a loss of 12.85 at 1,775.30.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 129.89 million shares, against 121.18 million Tuesday.

Analysts said traders were preoccupied with the Treasury's sale of $27 billion in bonds and notes, which got off to what was described as a lukewarm start on Tuesday and continues through Thursday.

In Wednesday's auction, the Treasury sold 10-year notes at an average yield of 7.47 percent.

There was some unhappiness on Wall Street over provisions of the tax bill passed by the Senate Finance Committee that would eliminate tax breaks for long-term capital gains and curtail the tax advantages of individual retirement accounts.

The declines have spurred a boom in housing sales and construction plus a stampede by many homeowners to refinance existing mortgages, purchased during the early 1980s when mortgage rates soared to highs above 18 percent.

The popularity of adjustable rate mortgages continued to decline last month with their share of total loans dropping to 29 percent. ARMs had 50 percent of the market just a year ago and the April figure was the lowest level since May 1983.

The rates on the bank board survey, taken in early April, are for loans on new homes where the mortgage covers at least 75 percent of the purchase price. The rates are the effective interest rate, which includes any fees or "points" that lenders tack on to the quoted mortgage rate.

A more recent weekly survey done by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. found that fixed-rate loans, without taking into account add-ons, were 9.90 percent last week. While this was up slightly from a 9.86 percent average the week before, it was substantially below the 13.07 percent rate of a year ago. In this survey rates have fallen to their lowest level since the fall of 1978.

Gem home building turns up in March

BOISE (AP) — Pushed partly by lower mortgage rates, the amount of residential construction in Idaho...

The value of the residential construction was $22.6 million, an increase of 36.9 percent over March 1985.

The value of all construction in Idaho during March was $32.2 million, 9.4 percent ahead of 1985, the report said.

Non-residential construction in March was valued at $19.2 million, down 25.5 percent from last year. However, alterations and repairs totalled $11.4 million, up 7.1 percent from March 1985.

For the first three months of 1986, the value of construction was $85.5 million, a 2.8 percent gain over the same period of last year.

Mining official offers plan to boost industry

POCATELLO (AP) — A seven-point plan for restoring Idaho's "competitiveness" on American leadership in all economic sectors, but a broad industrial base is needed, he said.

Idaho can initiate seven specific programs to improve its ability to compete worldwide, Peterson proposed. It can:

- Create an Idaho venture capital fund of at least $10 million.
Create Idaho business incubation centers to convert excellent ideas and creative ventures into reality.
Create an Idaho business center at Boise State University that would tap the resources of BSU's business college and on-campus Simplot, Micron Technology Center to provide marketing, economic and financial analyses for statewide businesses.

All intertwined, he added. Competitiveness does not require Idaho's "competitiveness" on American leadership in all economic sectors, but a broad industrial base is needed, he said.

Mortgage rates continue their decline in April

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mortgage rates fell again in April, the seventh consecutive decline, although the drop was not as substantial as in March, the government said Wednesday.

The Federal Home Loan Board said rates fell on both fixed-rate loans and adjustable rate mortgages, hitting their lowest levels since the agency began tracking them separately in the fall of 1983.

The board said that lenders were offering a 10.57 percent average effective interest rate for fixed-rate conventional mortgages.

In March rates plunged even more rapidly, falling to 10.83 percent, more than one-half percentage point below the 11.36 percent February rate.

The most popular form of adjustable rate mortgages, those that restrict rate increases, fell to 9.68 percent in April, down from 9.84 percent in March.

Variable rate mortgages with no cap on how much rates can increase dropped to 9.51 percent in April compared to 9.62 percent in March.

The latest round of mortgage rate declines began in October and has accelerated this year, spurred on by the dramatic plunge in oil prices which eased inflation worries in financial markets.

The declines have spurred a boom in housing sales and construction plus a stampede by many homeowners to refinance existing mortgages, purchased during the early 1980s when mortgage rates soared to highs above 18 percent.

The popularity of adjustable rate mortgages continued to decline last month with their share of total loans dropping to 29 percent. ARMs had 50 percent of the market just a year ago and the April figure was the lowest level since May 1983.

The rates on the bank board survey, taken in early April, are for loans on new homes where the mortgage covers at least 75 percent of the purchase price. The rates are the effective interest rate, which includes any fees or "points" that lenders tack on to the quoted mortgage rate.

A more recent weekly survey done by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. found that fixed-rate loans, without taking into account add-ons, were 9.90 percent last week. While this was up slightly from a 9.86 percent average the week before, it was substantially below the 13.07 percent rate of a year ago. In this survey rates have fallen to their lowest level since the fall of 1978.

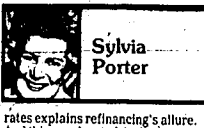

Use common sense in deciding whether or not to refinance

With mortgage rates sinking to the most attractive levels in years, many homeowners are planning to refinance existing loans, and countless others are considering the idea.

Refinancing now account for about 30 percent of loan closings, according to the U.S. League of Savings Institutions, trade group for the savings and loan industry. That's an historically high amount.

Moreover, adds a spokesman for Lomas & Nettleton, mortgage bankers in Dallas, a number of big lenders report that refinancings account for up to 35 percent of their volume.

Many refinancings involve government loans, such as those obtained through VA and FHA programs. The recent downturn in interest rates explains refinancing's allure. And this accelerated decline comes on top of a falling trend in mortgage rates that dates back to the summer of 1984. In March of '86, rates reached their lowest levels in six years.

Sylvia Porter

The Federal Home Loan Board reports that fixed-rate mortgages for new homes fell to 10.93 percent in March—a drop of about half a point from January's rate of 11.45 percent.

Meanwhile, rates on adjustable-rate loans with caps on how much the rates can change dropped to 9.93 percent, down from January's 10.15. For many consumers with older adjustable-rate mortgages, these new rates look especially attractive because they offer long-term security at an affordable price.

Lower fixed-rate loans have wooed consumers away from adjustables: The ARM share of the market plummeted from 46 percent in December of '81 percent in March, the FHLB reports.

Determining whether refinancing makes sense for you, however, depends on a variety of circumstances and assumptions, beyond today's rates. "Obviously, you have to look at your existing loan contract," says Michael Wilson, director of research at the U.S. League.

Look at the index, the frequency of adjustment, and what kinds of caps there are. You need to know what sorts of limits are on the loan. For example, your loan may not have a lifetime cap on the interest rate, or it may have a payment cap so that your payment doesn't exceed a specified amount after each adjustment. If the latter, your loan balance can actually grow—a process called negative amortization.

Another key question: How long do you plan to stay in your home? Refinancing basically means applying for a new loan, and that entails new origination and closing costs. These costs can amount to thousands of dollars that can take years to pay off in savings on your new loan.

One rule of thumb: Unless the difference between your old and new contracts equals 2 percent, and you don't plan to sell for at least five years to recover the new costs, refinancing won't pay off.

Some lenders give you the option to convert from an ARM to a fixed rate. If you have that provision in your contract, you won't have to pay new origination fees.

In still another twist, suggested by Saul Shiffman, Lomas & Nettleton's research director, consider refinancing to a 15-year term, especially if you've already built up some equity. You're monthly payments won't be much different from what they are now.

Payments on a 30-year $100,000 mortgage at 13.5 percent cost $1,145 for instance.

To refinance that same $100,000 at 10.5 percent will result in a payment of $915 a month—a savings of more than $200.

But look at payments for the same amount, same rate, but 15-year term. Payments would be $1,690, $55 less than the old payment. You'll pay off the loan much sooner, though, and have that money for other activities.

Incidentally, some lenders offer 15-year loans at slightly lower rates than 30-year mortgages.

In this area at this time, that traditional commonsense advice makes more sense than ever. Shop around.

SPECIAL ELECTION NOTICE PROPOSAL FOR SCHOOL DISTRICT REORGANIZATION

sketch map of such trustee districts is attached hereto as Exhibit B. Population: Trustee District 1 ..... 457 Trustee District 2 ..... 455 Trustee District 3 ..... 453 Trustee District 4 ..... 468 Trustee District 5 ..... 450 7. Schedule and Name: The proposed new election district shall come into existence on July 1, 1986, and shall be known as Joint School District No. 418. Home County: Twin Falls County shall be the home county of the proposed new district. 8. Attached hereto, marked Exhibit C, is a map showing the boundaries of the proposed new school district and the boundaries of the trustee districts therein. 10. Attendance Units: The general long range plan for future attendance units in the new district will include attendance units for grades K-8 in Murtaugh and Hansen, and a new school for grades 7-12 to be constructed at a location decided upon at a later date. It is understood however, that the ultimate decisions concerning attendance units, transportation routes, instructional programs and new buildings will be within the primary jurisdiction of the Board of Trustees of the new district when organized, and with respect to new buildings, largely dependent upon the authorization of new bond issues by the elected trustees of the new district. The short term plan is to maintain attendance units for grades K-8 in Murtaugh and Hansen. Current secondary facilities will be utilized with grades 7-12 housed at one location and grades 9-12 housed at the other location. Transportation routes will remain essentially unchanged due to the necessity of maintaining the existing elementary school units. Additional transportation costs would be incurred by the necessity of transporting 110-120 secondary students over two (22) miles per bus footprint on a daily basis.

BOBBY WOLFF

"It is better to ask some of the questions than to know all of the answers."
— James Thurber.

What card should East play to today's first trick? If your answer comes too easily, think again. The solution may not be as obvious as you might believe.

Many Easts would play the diamond king at trick one and return the 10. South would refuse to cover and the defense would be stymied. If West overtakes the 10, the defenders get only three diamonds and a club. And if West waits for a third diamond lead from East, he is in for a long wait.

The winning play to trick one is the diamond 10, and the rule of 11 provides the clue. West's fourth-best lead leaves four cards higher than the seven in the other three hands (11 minus 7). East can see three of these in his hand and dummy, therefore South has only one.

What will South think when East plays the 10? He will assume that West has underlined the A-K and he will win the first trick, fearing an immediate set after a low diamond return from East. When the club finesse loses to East's king, East returns the diamond king and West can afford to overtake it to run the rest of the suit.

Bucks whip 76ers, 113-108, for lead

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Paul Pressey scored 13 of his 23 points in the fourth quarter and Terry Cummings converted three free throws in the last 14 seconds, helping Milwaukee to a 113-108 victory over Philadelphia Wednesday night and giving the Bucks a 2-2 edge in their NBA playoff series.

NBA Playoffs

Wednesday's game was marked by physical play from both teams, and Philadelphia's Charles Barkley and Paul Mokstki had two scuffles in the fourth quarter.

ing's turnaround basket fell short and the 76ers fouled Cummings, who converted another free throw to make the score 113-108 with three seconds left.

Win extends Rangers' hopes

Mets win 5th straight: 3-2 tally over Astros

Fernandez wins his 4th straight game

NEW YORK — Darryl Strawberry hit a two-run home run, and defeated left-hander Sid Fernandez to win his fourth straight game for the New York Mets on Wednesday.

Strawberry struck for five with a 2-1 victory over Nolan Ryan and the Houston Astros Wednesday night.

Fernandez worked seven innings, striking out three and walking two. Roger McDowell and Jesse Criscoe each pitched an inning in relief, Orsco getting save No. 6. The Mets have won 16 of their last 17 games, while the Astros have four in a row.

Ryan, 34, who pitched five innings, was the loser as he allowed all three runs, striking out three and walking two.

After Keith Hernandez lined a one-out single to left field in the third inning, to extend his hitting streak to 11 games, Strawberry hit the first pitch from Ryan over the fence in right field. Strawberry now has 15 RBI and 11 runs scored in the past 13 games.

Len Dykstra's double, which bounced over the wall in right field, scored Ray Knight in the fourth inning. Knight opened with a single and was sacrificed to second.

The Astros made it 3-1 in the sixth inning on a one-out double by Glenn Davis after Billy Hatcher opened the inning with a single to right.

Houston cut the deficit to 3-2 in the seventh on a walk to Mark Baile, a one-out pinch single by Jim

San Francisco 7 Pittsburgh 5

PITTSBURGH — Bob Brenly's two-run double knocked a three-run first inning and Candy Maldonado rocked the deciding run with a fifth-inning double as the San Francisco Giants won their fourth game in a row, beating the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-5 Wednesday night.

Maldonado's double helped the Giants build a 6-2 lead against losing pitcher Larry McWilliams, 0-3, who surrendered 10 hits in 4 1/3 innings.

Reliever Mark Davis balled the Giants out of a seventh-inning jam by Jim Robinson, the fourth Giants' pitcher, worked the final two innings for his third save. Bill Laskey, 1-0, pitched two innings in relief of starter Juan Berenguer for the victory.

Chris Brown and Jeff Leonard each struck out seven and walking three in seven innings for his first victory of the season. Tim Burke finished out for his third save.

The Philadelphia Phillies' first straight ball landed between them on the warning track, scoring both runners.

Mike Brown's two-run single in the Pirates' fifth made it 6-4 before Jim Morrison hit a solo homer, his fifth of the season and third in four games, in the Pirates' sixth.

Montreal 8 Philadelphia 2

PHILADELPHIA — Tim Lincecum extended his hitting streak to 12 games with a pair of singles, scored twice and had two of seven Montreal stolen bases as the Expos beat the Philadelphia Phillies 8-2 Wednesday night for their fifth straight victory.

Right-hander Floyd Youmans, winless in three decisions and carrying a 7.25 ERA into the game, yielded just seven Philadelphia hits, striking out seven and walking three in seven innings for his first victory of the season. Tim Burke finished out for his third save.

The Philadelphia Phillies' first straight ball landed between them on the warning track, scoring both runners.

Mike Brown's two-run single in the Pirates' fifth made it 6-4 before Jim Morrison hit a solo homer, his fifth of the season and third in four games, in the Pirates' sixth.

Already leading 5-2, the Expos scored three insurance runs off Don Carman with two out in the ninth inning. Herm Wynnhaming hit a two-run homer, and Hubie Brooks followed with an inside-the-park homer after Phillies center fielder Mill Thompson failed on a shoestring catch attempt.

The Expos took a 3-0 lead in the first with three unearned runs after an error by second baseman Juan Samuel.

St. Louis 4 San Diego 3

ST. LOUIS — Ozzie Smith tripled off Rich Gossage to start the 12th inning and scored on Jose Oquendo's single to give St. Louis a 4-3 triumph Wednesday night over the San Diego Padres, snapping a Cardinals home losing streak at six games.

The St. Louis victory, only its third in 16 contests, was the first at Busch Stadium since April 12. Cards pitching blanked San Diego for 10 straight innings after Steve Garvey's two-run homer helped stake the Padres to a first-inning lead.

Todd Worrell, 2-4, pitched the final two innings in relief of St. Louis starter John Tudor. Gossage fell to 2-3.

Jack Clark had a two-run homer for the Cards.

Tudor, who yielded only 14 home runs in 275 innings last year, surrendered his fifth of this season to Garvey after Jerry Royster opened the game for San Diego with a single into right field.

St. Louis closed to 2-1 in the first when Willie McGee and Andy Van Slyke each singled, and Tommy Herr followed with an RBI grounder.

Tudor pitched 10 innings, yielding nine hits, before giving way to Worrell. The St. Louis starter struck out six and walked two.

Los Angeles 8 Chicago 4

CHICAGO — "I don't even dream about grand slams because it seems too far-fetched," said Steve Sax said after he hit the unthinkable Wednesday.

The Los Angeles second baseman hit a seventh-inning grand slam through a stiff wind to complete a five-RBI performance and carry the Dodgers to an 8-4 win over the Chicago Cubs.

The grand slam, Sax's first in the big leagues, broke a 4-1 tie and made a winner of reliever Tom Niedener, 1-2.

Earlier, Sax knocked in a run on a groundout as part of career high five-RBI game.

Niedener entered the game with one out in the sixth. Ken Howell pitched the final two innings.

Indians notch 10th straight

Krabe beats Royals 7-1, sweeps series

CLEVELAND — Pat Tabler's two-run double kept a three-run fifth inning, and Neal Heaton pitched a seven-inning shutout as the Cleveland Indians extended their winning streak to 10 games with a 7-1 victory Wednesday night over the Kansas City Royals.

The victory gave the Indians a 10th straight win in the American League East, their longest winning streak since an eight-game run in May and June of 1982. Cleveland had won three games of the series since 1979.

The left-handed Heaton, 31, struck out four and walked one in his last complete game of the season.

Seven Kansas City were shingles.

Bull Franco singled to center to start the fourth against loser Bret Saberhagen, 2-3. Joe Carter's sacrifice bled Franco at second.

Brock Jacoby hit a two-out single to put runners at first and second.

Heaton lined his hit into the bag in center field. He scored when Mel Lutzke's double to right.

The Royals scored in the fifth on Salazar and Greg Pryor single and Salazar bunt into Lonnie Wilson fly to right. He scored when Willie Wilson narrowly beat out a gentral double-play grounder.

Cleveland got an unearned run in the bottom of the fifth when Andy Johnson scored from third on Franco's double-play grounder. Allison singled and taken third when neday night as the Minnesota Twins defeated the Baltimore Orioles 5-2.

Smithson, 27, struck out three and walked three in pitching his fifth complete game, tops in the American League.

The Twins, who snapped a three-game losing streak, built a 3-0 lead off Baltimore starter Mike Flanagan, 1-4, who allowed six hits in seven innings.

In the second inning, Flanagan issued a one-out walk to Gary Gattell. Steve Lombardozzi singled on Flanagan's next pitch and Billy Beane lined the next for an RBI single.

In the third, first baseman Eddie Murray — who won three straight Gold Gloves from 1982-84 — was unable to handle Mickey Hatcher's leadoff grounder. One out later, Brunansky hit a 1-2 pitch high and deep over the left-field wall for his fifth homer.

New York 5 Chicago 1

CHICAGO — Veteran left-hander Tommy John hurled seven innings of five-hit ball in his first start of the season as the Yankees dumped the struggling Chicago White Sox 5-1 here Wednesday.

The 42-year-old John, in his second tour of duty with New York, walked two and struck out two in sending the White Sox to their sixth straight loss. Dave Righetti pitched the last two innings for his seventh save, the Yankees won for the third straight time.

They are 8-3 on the road, their best showing at this point of the season since 1976.

Chicago Manager Billy LaRussa, who has watched his team lose eight Saberhagen fielded Brett Butler's punt and hit Butler in the back on the throw to first.

Singles by Franco and Carter, a sacrifice fly by Andre Thornton and Jacoby's fourth homer of the season accounted for three Cleveland runs in the eighth.

Texas 2 Detroit 1

ARLINGTON, Texas — Steve Buechele hit a two-out tie-breaking home run in the seventh inning to spoil a strong pitching performance by Detroit's Jack Morris and lead the Texas Rangers to a 2-1 victory over the Astros on Wednesday night.

Buechele's fifth homer of the season, to left field, came on Morris' first pitch. It made a winner of reliever Dwayne Henry, 1-0, who pitched 2 1/3 hitless innings. He struck out five and walked none. Greg Harris pitched the ninth for his fifth save.

Ricky Wright started for the Rangers in place of Ed Correa, who was scratched because of leishermess in his arm, and pitched 5-2 in impressive innings. Wright, making his first start since Sept. 27, 1984, retired 17 of the 21 batters, he faced, allowing only three hits. He struck out three and did not walk a batter.

Minnesota 5 Baltimore 2

of its last nine games, said: "On a night when it's tough to hit homers, Wynegar comes up and does us in. I can't fault Bannister and I'm not going to second-guess him."

LaRussa, whose club has now lost 14 of 17 home games and whose job is said to be in jeopardy, added, "I'm looking forward to going on the road Friday because we're 4-4 and are playing Cleveland, a very hot club."

Among the rumored replacements for LaRussa are former Yankees' Manager Billy Martin and Dick Williams, who resigned before the season as manager of the San Diego Padres.

The left-handed John, signed last Friday after pitchers Steve Carlton and Ed Whitson went on the disabled list, won for the first time since last Aug. 27, when he beat the Yankees while pitching for the Oakland A's.

New York catcher Butch Wynegar's third homer of the year, a three-run shot, came in the top of the second.

Gotte's run-scoring single in the fifth finished Sox starter Floyd Bannister, 1-3, while Don Mattingly's double and Mike Essler's RBI single in the ninth finished the scoring.

NCAA hits football program at TCU

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Texas Christian University Chancellor William E. Tucker says the school has received notice of NCAA penalties to be imposed on its football program.

Although Tucker refused to say Wednesday what the penalties would be, he cited an unidentified source to say they were less than those assessed by the NCAA's Committee on Infractions and school officials over the last month.

Penalties that had been considered included a drastic reduction in scholarship awards of 33 over a 30-year period; Also included was a one-year ban on bowl participation and television appearances and a three-year probationary period.

"We have received the communication (from the NCAA)," Tucker said. "Beyond that, I am not in a position to comment at this point. We are now considering the contents and will reach some conclusion reasonably soon."

The investigation began last September when Coach Jim Wacker dismissed six players and later a seventh for receiving payments from boosters.

TCU has 15 days — or more if an extension is granted — to decide whether to appeal the penalties or appeal to the NCAA Council. Historically, such appeals have not been successful.

After receiving the NCAA's letter, Tucker called an afternoon meeting of his officiating staff. At that time, TCU faculty representatives at the southwest conference athletic director Frank Vindegger and Jim Wacker.

None of the three would comment on the two-hour meeting, referring inquiries to Tucker.

TCU officials have had two hearings before the infractions committee, the latest on April 27 in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Blocker honored in magazine

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho's standout guard Chris Blocker has been named to the Basketball-News junior-college All-America basketball team, according to the newspaper's May 14 edition.

Blocker earlier was named second team by the NJCAA and was an all-regional-and-all-national-tournament-selection. He has signed with University of Texas at El Paso.

Ricks College's forward Jeff Schofield, who will attend Weber State next fall, was named to the Basketball-News second team.

McLinn gets 1st hole-in-one

TWIN FALLS — Ed McLinn of Twin Falls gained the first hole-in-one of his career at Canyon Springs Golf Course Wednesday afternoon.

Jim Gleason and Ron Watson witnessed the seven-iron shot on the par 3, 154-yard third hole.

NHL doubts drug allegations

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Hockey League said Wednesday it does not plan to pursue an investigation into alleged drug use by some members of the Edmonton Oilers unless law enforcement authorities can substantiate a report by Sports Illustrated.

The SI article, in its 22 edition which reached the newsstands Wednesday, quoted unidentified sources as saying several Oilers had been involved in illegal drugs.

"If professional investigators — the Royal Mounted Canadian Police and the Edmonton police — have not found sufficient evidence to substantiate charges," NHL spokesman John Halligan said, "we feel it inappropriate for the NHL to press the matter."

Phillies' Maddox calls it quits

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Outfielder Gary Maddox of the Philadelphia Phillies ended his 14-year career in the majors Wednesday, saying a recurrent back problem has forced him to leave a game he loves.

"This decision was harder than laying off the first pitch," said Maddox, a lifetime .296 hitter and an eight-time Gold Glove winner. "You know how hard that was for me."

Maddox, 36, who joined the Phillies in 1975, was put on the disabled list April 22 because of a protruding disc in his lower back, a problem that forced him to miss 57 days of the 1984 season. He underwent surgery late in the 1984 season and again this year.

"Playing baseball does cause aggravation to my health. I didn't want to play one game too many," he said.

The 6-foot-3 Maddox joined the Phillies in an unpopular trade in 1975 after 3 1/2 seasons with the San Francisco Giants. He was dealt to Philadelphia for Willie Montanez, but he won the fans' hearts with his defensive wizardry.

Hints about LaRussa dropped

CHICAGO (AP) — The slumping Chicago White Sox may need a spark to move them out of the American League West basement, and the spark may come from firing Manager Tony LaRussa, co-owner Eddie Einhorn hinted Wednesday.

But LaRussa expressed optimism about his future Wednesday, saying he expected to be on the team plans to go to Chicago Friday.

Veteran managers Billy Martin and Dick Williams have been mentioned as possible replacements for LaRussa, who has managed the team since 1979.

General Manager Ken Harrelson said Tuesday that he had met with Martin.

Borah's Lions out-hit Bruins in 14-11 battle; Prater hit for 10 runs

BOISE — The Borah Lions, riding the clutch hitting of Paul Pulice and Mark Miller, rolled to a 14-11 slugfest victory over the Twin Falls Bruins Wednesday afternoon.

The Lions jumped on Twin Falls starter Tom Prater in seven runs in the first inning and added three more in the second before Kevin Ames came on in relief.

Pulice and Miller each had key hits in the first inning and Miller provided most of Borah's second-run fireworks with a two-run homer in the second.

Pulice ended the day with four hits in four appearances and four runs-batted-in while Miller was 3-4 with five RBIs.

Prater cracked a two-run homer to get the Bruins on the scoreboard in the second and after that it was

Plan would limit foreign prep athletes

By TOM HAMILTON
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Many foreign high school students in Southern California would be ruled ineligible for varsity athletics if a proposal initiated by an Orange County principal is approved by the California Interscholastic Federation on Thursday.

Foreign students living in Southern California with their parents or under one of 11 foreign exchange programs recognized by the federation's Southern Section would remain eligible under the proposal, originally made by Dennis Evans, principal at Corona del Mar High School.

However, those who have come to the area through any other program or on their own — a group that includes a large population of refugees from Southeast Asia and Central America — and who live with relatives or friends would no longer be able to play varsity sports.

Evans introduced the proposal which must be approved by the 61 leagues of the California Interscholastic Federation, because he was concerned that some Southern California high schools were becoming training camps for foreign athletes.

However, critics of the proposal believe it would unfairly penalize too many foreign students.

"I have Southeast Asian kids who live with aunts, uncles, grand parents and friends," said Robert A. Boehme, principal of Westminster High School. "We have a lot of Southeast Asians playing badminton, soccer and tennis. The proposal will run them out of business. "I think there's a personal bias," Boehme said. "You're denying a kid the right to participate on varsity sports. That's discrimination."

The proposed rule change reads: "A foreign student who is under 19 and whose exchange program is not for varsity athletics."

Although the proposal does not specifically address the parental issue, Stan Thomas, a Tustin Unified School District administrator and chairman of the CIF's Southern Section Rules Committee, said officials understand it to mean that only those foreign students who move here and live with their parents or are here under qualified exchange student programs would be eligible.

A survey of league representatives in the Southern Section showed that the proposal will encounter strong opposition. Twenty-two of the 45 league representatives surveyed said their leagues oppose the proposal. Eleven said they will vote in favor of adopting it as part of the CIF Blue Book. Twelve leagues were undecided.

Critics argue that the proposed rule change is vague, misguiding and discriminatory.

Boehme estimated that the majority of the 500 Southeast Asian students who attend Westminster High are refugees who do not live with their parents. He said he is concerned that these students will not be eligible to compete on the varsity level under the proposal.

Miguel Vivanco, varsity soccer coach at Santiago High in Garden Grove, estimated that five of his 20 players — from Mexico, El Salvador and Vietnam — would be ineligible under the proposal.

NCAA to bar teams that flunk drug testing

By DOUG TUCKER
The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — A team that has one player who tests positive for drugs may be kicked out of one of its players is found to be using drugs. Davis said Tuesday this new written-in-the-drug-testing program approved at last January's NCAA convention was adopted by the NCAA Executive Committee at its meetings in Kansas City this week. He emphasized that details are yet to be worked out but that the Executive Committee hopes to put the policy into effect for all men's and women's team championships.

"It would apply only if the player who tests positive had participated in earlier competition in the tournament or the championship," Davis said. NCAA schools approved a drug-testing proposal at their January convention in New Orleans, including a list of performance-enhancing substances to be banned as well as street drugs such as cocaine and marijuana. Considerable work remains in deciding how the tests will be administered and when, Davis said. "The NCAA sponsors 74 championships in men's and women's sports but tests will not be conducted in every championship every year. The earliest championship the testing could be done would be the cross-country competition next November. Tests will be made at all football bowl games. As approved in the proposal adopted in January, an athlete who tests positive would be immediately disqualified for 90 days.

Asked whether the men's and women's basketball tournaments were likely candidates for drug-testing, Davis said, "That is a very good assumption."

"The testing could take place, for example, after the second round of the basketball championship," he said. "If a player who appeared in the tournament tests positive, then that team would be disqualified and the last team it beat in the tournament would take its place."

There is a provision for appeal. Davis said the Executive Committee felt that disqualifying a team with a player who tests positive for drugs would be the fair thing to do for teams that do not have drug-users.

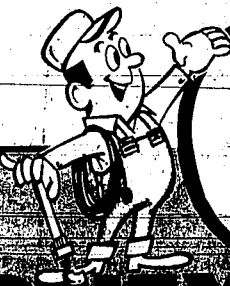

"A team and a school has a responsibility to police itself," he said. "We believe this would encourage institutions to make thorough drug tests before the start of a championship event."

next year's NCAA Basketball Tournament even if the tournament has already begun, says an NCAA official.

"We want to rid our sports and our student-athletes of drugs," said

Jack Davis, NCAA president. "We think the institution and the team should bear some responsibility if

Antelope still pose a problem

But recent measures with new fence taken

BLISS — A little judicious use of barbed wire and time have cut the antelope problem at Bliss about in half.

It now remains a question of how badly the 75- or so head still rubbing elbows with humans want to stay in the area.

Bill Webb, Region 4 supervisor for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, said cooperation of the Idaho Highway Department had played an important role in the antelope's movement.

The department replaced a section of mesh fence with barbed wire strands for distances of about 150 yards on each side of the interstate highway where it skirts to the north side of Bliss. The barbed wire allows the antelope to scramble under or the lower strand.

Over the weekend approximately 100 antelope moved across the interstate and into the major desert area north of Bliss. Webb said the department would attempt some leisurely hazing of the remaining animals in the confined area "to get them into the area of the barbed-wire fence and let them find their own way out."

The Bliss antelope herd began developing three years ago with the second in a succession of bad winters.

"We always had a remnant antelope herd in that north Bliss area — about 15 to 20 head, so I suppose we're always going to have a few antelope here. But the hard winters brought a couple hundred more in from the north country and we estimate at one time last year we had about 400 head in the area."

It wouldn't be a problem if the antelope stayed in the desert, but in each of the past two winters that's found their way into a closely confined — and privately owned — area that is bounded by the interstate on the north side; Snake River canyon on the south and the two Bliss access ramps.

The antelope found their way in, evidently coming across the access points although they are cattle-guarded. With a relatively large area to work in and sagebrush loafing sites, the antelope had shown reluctance to leave, becoming a headache to landowners. The department also is concerned for the safety of animals and the motoring public if a large number should get into the interstate right of way.

Last year, amid hovering helicopters of the media and dozens of camera-armed onlookers, the department, through state highway cooperation, cut off travel on the interstate and tried to herd the animals into the safety of the north desert. It became a debacle and the antelope, with fawning approaching, were left.

Webb said most of the animals wandered out of the triangle by late May but returned again with winter.

"So far they've managed to get by without any major losses or major accidents but it is a very poor place for wintering and we'd rather have them stay north of the interstate," Webb said. "This year's fawning should start next time, now so any movement that occurs in the next few weeks will be up to the animals."

Riding the Snake

We went down the Snake River on a rafting trip. It was a quick and exciting experience. The water was turbulent and the rapids were challenging. We had a great time and the guides were very professional.

BY KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — This summer the Snake River runs from the mountains to the state capital, sometimes in a day.

During the spring, the river runs from Twin Falls to Boise, one of the best whitewater rafting areas in the country.

It is considered one of the best whitewater rafting areas in the country. The water is turbulent and the rapids are challenging. We had a great time and the guides were very professional.

Land Management's Snake River often conjoins to the Grand Canyon. It is often considered to be the Grand Canyon of the Snake River.

On the Murtaugh stretch, the Snake River from Twin Falls to Twin Falls you go through 18 miles in a day.

From advantage points like the Hansen Bridge, it is difficult to get a perception of just how big the river's "big water" is in the spring.

Spanning the river with Olin Gardner's Idaho Guide Service two weeks ago was a quick education. Gardner, a rather sharp guide, said the Snake River is the most beautiful river in the state.

Ten of us made the trip — a group from Ketchum and Boise and Jarvis from the BLM. The put-in point was at the bottom of the Murtaugh grade. It took about half an hour to inflate the rafts and sort out equipment — putting together the metal frames for the boats, oars, dry boxes, and coolers. For those riding, there were also wet suits and life preservers below the dam to Perrine Bridge had 40 pairs, compared to 68 last year.

Smith said the fluctuation in breeding pair numbers was of some concern but added it could be offset by good production by those geese setting up housekeeping.

"Our nesting surveys will be the next step," he said. "Even with the breeding pairs down, if nesting success increases or stays up, the area's goose population will remain in good shape."

The area west of Perrine Bridge — clear to the Oregon border — remains good.

Smith said he counted 132 breeding pairs this spring from Twin Falls to the backwaters of C.J. Strike reservoir. That compares with 139 counted last year and does not include any breeding pairs on the Hagerman Wildlife Management area.

Ted Chu of Ketchum, northern region biologist, said the Camas Prairie area seems right on average, with a little distribution. He said there appeared to be more nesting pairs in the Hill City marsh and fewer on Camas Creek. He said that shown a large increase in total geese and breeding pairs. Last year 560 total geese were counted in the area. This year that jumped to 1,100. At least some of that is attributed to an increase in non-breeder populations and some more to the reduction in Lake Lake goose harvest in last fall's hunting season which apparently lessened the usual impact on the resident geese.

Other factors also could be brought into the 1986 equation, Smith said.

He noted that Minidoka Wildlife Refuge Manager John Wilder reported the annual March flushing was held back by a week. The release of extra water from upstream storage encouraged ground-nesting geese to use higher ground and thus avoid appraisal of early hatches.

Game birds to be debated at F & G talk

JEROME — When the Idaho Fish and Game Commission holds a public meeting here next month, its primary consideration will be the possible closure of the game bird farm in Jerome.

The commission, which will put in at least one day of field surveys of this region's wildlife management areas, the farm and Salmon Falls Reservoir's walleye translocation success, probably will hold the public hearing on the evening of July 5. Region 4 Supervisor Bill Webb said time and site have not yet been finalized.

A small group of Jerome people requested the hearing when they appeared at the commission's quarterly meeting here last week.

The commission has approved the 1986-90 upland bird five-year plan, which includes a step-by-step phasing out of the Jerome bird farm, largely for economic and biological reasons.

That plan has been implemented to the point now that all the bird breeding stock has been transferred to South Dakota in exchange for wild turkeys. That trade includes a three-year contingency allowing Idaho to call on a return of 900 of those breeders from South Dakota to serve as brood stock in a Jerome game farm start up, should the state be unable to secure its planting needs through other producers.

The game farm was funded by solicitation of sportsmen clubs, private individuals and businesses in the mid-1930s and had been in operation every year since up-

Eastern valley census records dip in Canada goose nesting

JEROME — Eastern Magic Valley's Canada goose nesting pairs census indicates a rather sharp drop, while the western half of the Snake River Valley and the northern production areas apparently are right on average.

Randy Smith, biologist for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, said there is no apparent drop in breeding pairs from Minidoka Wildlife Refuge to Perrine Bridge, immediately north of Twin Falls.

The total number of geese counted in that stretch that dropped to 434 this spring. At the same time, the breeding pair count indicated a reduction on the Minidoka Wildlife Refuge from 66 to 48, while the river

Crush of Clearwater anglers prompts a park service study

By BILLOFTUS
The Associated Press

LEWISTON — The National Park Service is conducting a year-long Perce, Lewis, Idaho, Clearwater and study aimed at helping north-central Idaho.

Idaho officials cope with the hordes of fishermen that descend on the agencies such as the Idaho Fish and Clearwater River.

And, the outcome of the study could include future fishing restrictions on the river, such as the no-motors rule now in effect above Dworshak National Fish Hatchery at Orofino.

The study also will determine who uses the Clearwater between Lewis and Kootenai through all four seasons.

"By this time next year, we should have a much better idea of what people are looking for on the river and what they're finding," said Denzels Canty, park service river planner at Seattle.

The National Park Service will be asked by the Idaho Parks and Recreation Department for help on the project after the department had been contacted by the Clearwater Steelhead Impact Committee.

Discussions about the study first began in November, Canty said, and said, such as the current rule that officials of the Park Service, state bans steelhead fishing from boats and counties are near to completing with a formal agreement.

The committee was formed in 1983 to address safety, littering, sanitation and other problems that resulted from a large run of steelhead to the Clearwater in fall 1982 and spring 1983.

The committee's feeling was that it was only able to respond to immediate problems but was unable to deal with long-term planning and problems," Canty said. Committee members include representatives of sheriff's offices and commissions of five counties — Nez Perce, Lewis, Idaho, Clearwater and Latah.

Other members include state Game and Health and Wildlife Engineers and Fish and Wildlife Services on the river, such as the no-motors rule now in effect above Dworshak National Fish Hatchery at Orofino.

The regulations now, three-years-old, has attracted little controversy among steelhead anglers.

"In terms of zoning of use, it's not unlikely those things would be considered. Right now our fear is that the overcrowding in some areas is really discouraging a lot of people who have traditionally fished the Clearwater from getting on the river," Canty said.

The Idaho Fish and Game Department officials have discussed a wide range of such possibilities in the past. The ideas have included limiting boat fishermen on the river below Orofino to an odd or even-days schedule.

The memorandum of understanding that forms the basis of the study and development of a Clearwater River Recreation Plan include a variety of possibilities touching on physical characteristics, activities along the river, development of facilities and protection of sensitive areas.

"We are not talking about creating new regulations or a new management authority of any kind," Canty said. "We are just trying to coordinate the activities of existing authorities along the river into some comprehensive program."

The study itself will deal with such things as river flows, expected salmon and steelhead runs and current regulations. Anglers and other river users will be surveyed during all four seasons as part of the study.

F & G director Conley praises honoree Lucia

BOISE — Tom Lucia, who has come up with innovative ways to help the Department of Fish and Game deal with big game depredation, is the Shikar-Safari Wildlife Officer of the Year in Idaho.

"His initiative in solving these problems should serve as an example for all resource management agencies," said Director Jerry Conley in his letter of nomination.

Lucia, a district conservation officer based in Preston, initiated the use of relatively light metal panels to protect haystacks from foraging big game animals. It makes it possible for a pickup to haul double the load of conventional wooden panels and less manpower is needed.

Lucia started his career in 1972 as a conservation officer in the Eagle patrol area. He was promoted to senior conservation officer in 1972 and was appointed district conservation officer in 1978.

Shikar-Safari International presents its award annually to an outstanding conservation officer in each state.

Montana bears wake; two incidents reported

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Grizzly bears came out of hibernation and into the news this week in western Montana as state, tribal and national park officials found themselves dealing with separate bear incidents.

State wildlife officials captured their first native grizzly bear in the remote Yaak River Valley in northwestern Montana, while Flathead Indian Reservation officials investigated the illegal killing of two grizzlies and Glacier National Park officials caught a grizzly rummaging through a hotel storage room.

The Yaak bear was captured last week by University of Montana graduate student Tim Thier, who is conducting a study of black bears in extreme northwestern Montana.

The 400-pound, 8-to-10-year-old male was fitted with a radio collar and released again, Fish, Wildlife and Parks personnel said Monday.

The bear was only the fourth to be trapped and collared in extreme northwestern Montana and the first native bear trapped in the Yaak River Valley. Two cubs were transplanted into the area about five years ago, but one later was shot and the other was believed to have wandered into Canada.

Meanwhile Monday, Flathead Fish and Game Chief Frank Acevedo announced that two grizzlies were found shot in the Post Creek area. The bears, believed to be a sow and a cub, were shot about eight weeks ago and buried, he said.

Acevedo said he expects formal charges may be filed in U.S. District Court in Missoula against an unnamed person who is not a tribal member.

Glacier Park authorities are looking for a new home for a young grizzly that found his way into a storeroom at the Many Glacier Hotel and into a barrel of food.

"The bear must have gotten a whiff," Assistant Park Superintendent Alan O'Neill said. "It had turned the barrels over and was having a heyday."

O'Neill said the bear, a 3-year-old male, had not been in trouble before but might end up behind bars in a zoo.

Attorney fined over game

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — A former Canyon County deputy prosecuting attorney has had his hunting privileges suspended for three years and been ordered to pay $750 in fines following his conviction for wasting game.

But a jury acquitted Fred Ruiz of three other fish and game charges, including one of killing a deer in closed season, Idaho County Prosecutor Joy McLean speculated the jury returned the acquittals because of testimony at last week's trial indicating another person may have been involved in the Nov. 17 incident.

Magistrate Michael Griffin denied Ruiz' request that the judgment be withheld from his record. Ruiz' attorney William Brauner, calling the verdict confusing, said the case may be appealed.

In addition to the charge of wasting game, a misdemeanor, Ruiz had also been charged with killing a mule deer doe in closed season, exceeding bag limits for deer and discharging a firearm across a public highway.

On the charge of wasting game, he was fined $500 and assessed a $250 civil penalty.

Ruiz, who had been a deputy prosecutor for 10 months prior to the incident, was suspended on Nov. 19 and dismissal proceedings were initiated against him. But he resigned before they were completed to take a job with the military.

Orienteers finally find their way to spotlight

By MARY ESCH
The Associated Press

WEST POINT, N.Y. — A wiry man with a hermit's tangled hair and beard, naked from the waist up, crouched beside a boulder reading the Troll Trasher Rag, oblivious to the clouds of bloodthirsty stragglers.

He's a familiar figure to followers of a rather obscure sport. And soon, Fajar Gagari, five-time U.S. orienteering champion and now coach of the national team, will become a familiar face to millions of Americans when he shows up on Wheaties cereal boxes across the country.

Orienteering enthusiasts, the selection of Gagari last year as one of six amateur athletes to appear on Wheaties boxes is a sign their sport is finally getting noticed in America.

"Everyone's pretty excited about the Wheaties thing," said Gagari, 41, of Amherst, Mass., who was in the woods here recently for a national orienteering meet. "It ought to bring some recognition to the sport."

Orienteering is simply finding one's way with a map, whether on skis, horseback, in a canoe, or bushwhacking on foot to a remote fishing point.

As a competitive sport, it involves running through unfamiliar territory, up rocky hills, through ravines, swamps, and bramble-thickets, while reading a map to plot a route from one strategically placed checkpoint to the next in as little time as possible.

Organized orienteering started in Scandinavia in the late-1800s and is considered a national sport there, with government funding and commercial sponsorship for athletes. Nearly half a million people participate in orienteering in Sweden, where it's a required subject in high school.

The sport, regulated by the International Orienteering Federation, is recognized in more than 30 nations.

For the first time, world cup competitions are being held this year, with two of the eight events being held in North America — in Hamilton, Ontario, May 17, and in New York's Falmouth State Park, about 40 miles north of New York City, May 21.

On a recent weekend, about 400

orienteers from across the country, and a few from Norway, gathered at Turkey Mountain on the grounds of the U.S. Military Academy here for a meet sanctioned by the 15-year-old United States Orienteering Federation.

"This is a good-sized meet for this country," said Larry Berman, a member of the U.S. ski orienteering team and publisher of Orienteering North America magazine in Cambridge, Mass. "But in Sweden, you'd see maybe 10,000 people at a meet like this. They had 25,000 people a day for the five-day O-Ringen International competition last summer."

Over the last decade, orienteering in the United States has grown from about 100 participants to nearly 5,000 in 60 clubs, with the largest groups in Massachusetts, New York, Virginia and St. Louis, Mo., Berman said.

Before a meet, sponsored by a local orienteering club, a course setter plots routes ranging in difficulty from a novice path a child could follow to a complex circuit of up to 10 kilometers designed to challenge the world's best orienteers.

"A good course challenges both running and navigational skills," said Heather Williams, a bird-research scientist who is setting the course for the world cup at Falmouth.

Each competitor is given a different time to set out. Just before starting, the runner is given a highly detailed map, with circles indicating "control points" the runner must find. At each control is a small flag and a multi-pronged punch with which the runner marks his map.

Some participants are less interested in competition than in simply taking a leisurely walk, photographing birds and wildflowers as they meander through the course.

Others disappear into the woods at full gallop and emerge from a 7.5-kilometer course an hour later, spluttering to the finish, splattered with muck and bloodied by briars. They may run 60 miles a week to train, sometimes while reading a book or map. They keep up on the latest gossip in the Troll Trasher Rag, the orienteers' "insider" newsletter. Peggy Dickinson, a top U.S. orienteer, even puts maps on her shower wall to practice picking routes.

"The sport takes a combination of running talent, spatial perception, attention to detail and mental concentration," said Eric Weyman, 29, a land planner from Reading, Pa., who has been national champion four times and was the top American finisher in last year's world championship in Australia, finishing 28th overall. "If you don't understand contour maps, you really get frustrated."

"In some respects, it's like a chess game," said Bill Shannon, a 47-year-old assistant high school principal from Mahopac, N.Y., who runs orienteering camps in Westchester County. "It takes a lot of mental skill to choose the best route based on the terrain on the map. You're always thinking ahead to the next move."

"The appeal is in the adventure of it, feeling you're a pathfinder off the beaten trail, the individual challenge," said Maxine Hunter, 41, of Syracuse, who started an orienteering program at Penn State in 1972 after studying the sport at a summer program in Norway. "Also, there's a lot of camaraderie at orienteering meets. You build good friendships over the years."

A key part of the sport is accurate maps, which show boulders, stony ground, swamps, streams, cliffs, ditches, knolls, underbrush, dense forest and the contours of the land. Pat Dunlavy, 30, of Millbrook, N.Y., has made a full-time career of making orienteering maps for five years, and is generally regarded as tops in the field.

"It takes about 10 weeks of intensive field work to make a map," said Dunlavy, who produced the map for the U.S. world cup contest. The cost of a map, about $5,000, is delayed by entrance fees at a meet.

The scarcity of skilled mapmakers is one thing limiting the growth of orienteering in this country, said Shannon, who is planning a mapping camp in November.

"The sport is growing slowly here — it's not going to shoot way up," said Gagari. "Things grow fast if someone sees they can come in and make some money. But this isn't the kind of sport you can have on TV — we just disappear in the woods, and a while later we come out."

'Fish & chips' takes on new significance in salmon tracking try

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers this month will release into the Columbia River young salmon injected with computer chips designed to allow biologists to keep track of the fish.

Detectors have been installed at McNary and Lower Granite dams to monitor the progress of the fish-carrying electronic tags the size of a grain of rice. The tag, injected into the fish's belly, contains a chip, electronics and an antenna.

The fish are held in tanks for several hours until body tissues can be read.

Tagged fish are then released upstream of the dam. As the fish pass through conduits built into the dam to carry them around the turbines, they pass through a specially designed pipe.

The pipe is encircled with four electronic loops, connected to a scanner. The scanner detects the chips and sends a signal to a computer.

The chips can be programmed to identify several characteristics of each fish, including: species, age, where it was raised and where it was released.

Better knowledge of fish movement will help the corps decide the best time to release water from dams to speed fish migration. The corps also wants to know more about where fish migrate and what happens to fingerlings released by state and federal hatcheries.

The tag stays with the fish the rest of its life.

"It's apparently safe for both fish and fishermen," says Earl Prentice, fish research biologist and project leader for the National Marine Fisheries Service. "The chip and antenna are encased in glass. And because of the tag's location, it's unlikely anyone would eat it."

Previous fish tagging techniques involved the injection of a tiny piece of coded wire into the fish's snout. Retrieving the information involved catching and killing the fish — a time-consuming and costly process.

Idaho timber sale appealed

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Fish and Game Department has appealed an Idaho Panhandle National Forests timber sale.

The appeal is the first one the department has challenged since 1968.

The appeal states that the East Fork of Lost Creek timber sale would harm elk hunting in the area.

The Idaho Forest Industry Council's executive director, Joe Hinson, said his group almost joined in the appeal.

"We didn't feel one more appeal would really make that much difference," Hinson said. "But they are free to have at it."

Hinson's comments are in sharp contrast to criticism the organization leveled at the Fish and Game Department last year.

The difference now, says Hinson and Carl Nellis, Fish and Game program coordination chief at Boise, is an agreement between the groups.

"We asked them if they wanted to join in or do anything specific on that. It would have been a real major coup and something unheard of," Nellis said. "I think they came fairly close."

The agreement reached March 20 between the two groups forged joint recommendations to the Forest Service about future management of the Panhandle forests.

The appeal focused on Lost Creek, one of five critical routes elk hunting areas left in the Panhandle, ac-ording to Kris Moser, supervisor at the department's regional supervisor at Coeur d'Alene.

"The other reason we appealed it is that we and the timber industry got our heads together," Moser said.

Hinson said he was disappointed the Forest Service spent so much time and effort on the sale.

It's kind of like old home week on a big fire bust

Air-tanker pilots zig-zag across nation fighting forest fires

By BILL BERGSTROM
The Associated Press

PIKEVILLE, Ky. — The season starts each year with ground-hugging late-winter fires in the quick-drying snowless Southeastern woodlands, and progresses with arid climate patterns cross-country to the rip-spraying Western blazes of autumn.

And wherever smoke rises from the woods, from January to September, from Asheville, N.C., to Coeur d'Alene in far northern Idaho, a small cadre of air-tanker pilots converges, following the fires for the U.S. Forest Service.

Not more than 60 pilots fly the 42

ARCO Inc. — for Aerial Retardant Delivery Co. — now has seven pilots and three people working on maintenance of its four C-54 planes, 1946 vintage four-engine propeller-driven DC-4 aircraft.

One of his partners, Ken White, flew P-47 fighters in World War II. The other, Roger Iverson, has the job of collecting parts and keeping the old planes aloft.

ARCO does its own conversions, installing segmented 2,000-gallon tanks that let a pilot drop all or part of the 18,254-pound payload of water and fire retardant to establish a line of dampness around a forest fire.

"You go out and size up the fire and go to work on it. You try to put a line around the perimeter, to retard it until the ground troops come in and stomp it out," Garrett said.

Bruce Jewell, Forest Service information officer in Alaska, said the tankers account for about $10 million a year in federal firefighting funds.

The tankers are cost-effective, Jewell said, because "What they do jump over someone. That tanker is buy you time, and that saves a lot of acres."

John Rainey, fire management officer in the Daniel Boone Forest, described watching from a spotter plane as a ground crew fought a fire advancing toward a rocky mountainside in the forest.

"The commander on the ground called for a tanker drop to keep the fire away from the cliffs. If it had gotten up into the cliffs it probably would have cost twice as much to get it out," he said.

The tankers also help on what firefighters call breakovers, he said. "Sometimes you're about to get a line around a fire and get your backfires set and then the fire will drop can really save you."

The flying is risky, whether in the West, where a pilot can choose retardant down on a canyon-side blaze and fly out the end of the canyon, or in "these little choppy mountains here," where there are nothing but ridgelines ahead after descending into a hollow — four engines roaring — and "nowhere to go but up," Garrett said.

East or West, danger is ever-present in the billowing heat of the fires. A pilot was killed in an air-tanker crash three years ago in Clay County, Ky., and Garrett has known others who didn't return from their forays into the smoke-filled air over the fire zones.

The daredevil flying is coupled with a grueling nine months of unpredictable journeys for the tankers. Garrett left Tucson Jan. 24 to fly out of Forest Service tanker bases anywhere from Fort Smith, Ark., to Silver City and Coeur d'Alene before summer is out, and then battle West Coast fires in the fall.

Expedition reaches goal: North Pole

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first self-sufficient expedition to make it to the top of the world since Robert Peary's 1909 feat was recognized Tuesday by the National Geographic Society and hailed as a thrilling "echo of a great age of exploration."

Joseph Judge, the society's resident Peary expert and senior associate editor of the society's magazine, called the 55-day trek to the North Pole "a pure, clean act of heroism and endurance."

Will Steger and Paul Schurke, expedition co-leaders both of Ely, Minn., and Ann Bancroft, of Sunfish Lake, Minn., the only woman on the team, described the grueling trip for reporters.

"Surrounded by the gentle pastel beauty of the ice, snow and the low-lying Arctic sun, we endured the hardest work and most hostile conditions any of us have ever experienced," the team said in a statement it prepared and read at the pole and Bancroft read again Tuesday.

"We experienced pain, cold, hunger and fatigue. For us the significance of this is that we are able to better empathize with people all over the world for whom these are daily experiences and who deserve the world's attention much more than we do."

At times, Steger said, hope dimmed. "The worst part was the constant uncertainty."

The pole, Schurke said, is a moving target because the ice moves there from 3 to 10 miles day depending on season, ocean currents and wind.

After a month of dusty-dry weather, a spate of rain, snow and hail put a damper on the Kentucky fires.

Garrett, in an interview before moving on to Silver City, N.M., said he took up flying after returning in the late-1960s from a military security job in Hawaii to his home in northern Wyoming.

He trained as a flier, went to work as a co-pilot in a PB4Y2, a Navy converted for fire fighting, and then flew for six years as a pilot attacking fires in a converted C-119 "Flying Boxcar" military cargo plane. In 1976 he and two others started their own company in Tucson.

Refitted USS Missouri steams past San Francisco skyline Tuesday on return to active duty

Cheers, protests welcome 'Mighty Mo' to its home port

By JACK SCHREIBMAN
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The battleship USS Missouri, ready for another life after a $475 million overhaul, steamed through the Golden Gate Bridge into its new home port Tuesday with a flower-throwing welcome and a nautical salute on San Francisco Bay.

Hailed as a war deterrent by the Navy and denounced as a symbol of militarization by peace activists, the modernized "Mighty Mo" defied the dozens of ships that greeted it with blasts from air horns and the arching sprays of fire pumps.

Among the vessels meeting the battleship was a boat with a peace symbol on its sail and five other boats carrying protest signs, part of the "Peace Navy" organized by those opposed to the Missouri's presence.

As the Missouri passed under the Golden Gate, one admirer tossed down hundreds of purple ribbons to the 3,800 crew members lining six decks. A biplane towed a banner reading "We Welcome USS Missouri. We Love You," and a dozen helicopters buzzed overhead.

At a dockside ceremony, Mayor Elaine Feinstein told a crowd of about 1,000 people she was glad to welcome the crew and their families "because this is a Navy town."

Speaking in a steady rain, she thanked those who helped to make San Francisco the ship's new home, saying, "We are so proud."

"On these decks, World War II came to an official close with the signing of a surrender document," Rear Adm. Robert Toney, commander of the San Francisco Navy base, said aboard the battleship. "Now, some 1,600 proud and professional crew members of this modernized battleship (are here) to protect and defend the peace."

The 59,000-ton vessel, whose teakwood deck witnessed the surrender of the Japanese in September, 1945, will be recommissioned Saturday in a ceremony expected to include Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Navy Secretary John Lehman. The recommissioning will take place on the exact spot where the Japanese signed the documents that ended World War II.

The 42-year-old, Iowa-class battleship, a twin of the USS New Jersey, will be permanently based at the Navy's Treasure Island. The 212,000-horsepower Missouri stretches nearly the length of three football fields and is as wide as an eight-story building is tall.

The battleship's 16-inch guns, which can hurl a shell the weight of an automobile more than 20 miles, stole most of the attention from such modern arms as the ship's nuclear-capable Tomahawk cruise missiles.

"It's a floating fortress in mint condition," said Cmdr Fred Correll, spokesman for the Navy in Northern California. "A ship like that could not be built today."

He described the Missouri as "the quintessential surface fighting ship."

Peace activists object to the Missouri as a sign of military buildup on the bay, already home for 22 surface Navy combat and support ships.

"My main objection is that having nuclear missiles in heavily populated areas is unwise," said city Supervisor Richard Hongisto, who has opposed efforts to base the Missouri and its support ships in the bay. "Murphy's Law is that if anything can go wrong, it will."

Environmentalists fear dredging of as much as 7 million cubic yards of muck from the bay bottom to make room for the ship's 39-foot draft can disturb toxic materials from the bay that may have lain there since the Gold Rush.

The San Francisco Chamber of Commerce said the battleship and its support vessels will add $400 million to the local economy. The city put up $17.5 million to bring the ship here and expects to spend $1.7 million a year.

Navy board proposes blimps be returned for scouting role

By NORMAN BLACK
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Navy board has given its blessing to returning the blimp to active duty.

That move would bring back into harness updated versions of a World War II standby and pit it against the latest in Soviet missile technology, Navy sources say.

The Chief of Naval Operations' executive board has recommended to Navy Secretary John F. Lehman that he seek funds to begin building a new fleet of airships in fiscal 1988, said Navy officials who asked not to be named.

The board, during a meeting a week ago, concluded a newly designed, modern blimp could serve as a useful and relatively cheap "radar platform" that could travel with surface ships and warn them against low-flying cruise missiles, the sources said.

The board is contemplating between 20 and 50 blimps and is urging Lehman to go to bat for the program during upcoming internal budget fights, the officials added.

Lehman has not made a final decision, however, and the outlook for his response is clouded by the new Gramm-Rudman-balanced-budget law and congressional opposition to increased Pentagon spending, the officials said.

The Navy refused Monday to discuss the matter, saying only that the program's future had yet to be decided.

The Navy disclosed its interest in reviving the blimp last year by awarding six different feasibility contracts. Those studies — three to research blimp designs and three to research radar systems — were completed in December.

Those contracts were expanded earlier this year with a Navy request for more detailed analysis. The Navy's fiscal 1987 budget request already includes $10 million for additional design and research work.

The initial contract studies were provided by Adm. James D.

Watkins, the chief of naval operations, to his executive board, which serves as an evaluation panel on new weapons developments. It was that board which decided development was merited, the sources said.

During World War II the Navy used nearly 170 blimps to accompany convoys part-way across the Atlantic to help spot enemy submarines. By 1961, however, the last of the "lighter-than-air forces" had been retired.

When it awarded the feasibility contracts last year, the Navy said it was doing so out of concern over the growing sophistication of Soviet cruise missiles. Such missiles can be fired at great distance from a surface ship, skimming over the water at such a low altitude they are difficult to detect on radar.

"We want to examine what new technologies have become available since the Navy last used airships in the 1960s," a Navy spokesman said at the time.

Fred Nebeker, a vice president of the Goodyear Aerospace Corp., which received one of the feasibility contracts, predicted last July that radar carried aboard blimps could greatly expand the warning time for Navy vessels. Nebeker said blimps could be produced that would be faster, more maneuverable and more difficult to see than the type built by his firm and used during World War II.

Modern Navy blimps would probably cruise at an altitude of 5,000 feet to 10,000 feet and be capable of being resupplied and refueled at sea, Nebeker said. Such airships could replace helicopters and airplanes that now perform such surveillance missions but whose flight time is limited.

Barney Scofield, a Goodyear spokesman, said Monday he could not discuss the Navy board's decision.

"We completed our initial study at the end of last year and provided it to the Navy," the spokesman said. "We're hearing unofficially some of the same things you are, but we haven't been told anything formally."

According to trade publications, the Navy has reportedly talked of new blimps that would cost roughly $65 million each, including radar systems.

Texans felt at home for voting

HALTOM CITY, Texas (AP) — Republican precinct chairwoman Sandra Logan made voters feel right at home during the primary over the weekend; They voted in her living room.

When a church reneged on a promise to serve as an election site at the last minute, Ms. Logan set up a long table in her living room, erected voting stands in her kitchen, and wedged the electronic voting machine between her recliners.

"Whatever it takes to hold an election, we will hold an election," said Ms. Logan, who heads Precinct 319.

Some people had a little trouble finding her house for Saturday's election, but the turnout was good, she said. Ms. Logan said she also was able to tend to household chores between voters.

Eastwood's initial agenda as mayor carried 43 items

By STEVE WILSTEIN
The Associated Press

CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA, Calif. — Mayor Clint Eastwood conducted his first City Council meeting Tuesday before an overflow crowd, patiently working through an agenda that included public toilets, parking and whether the town should have ice cream stores.

The granite-faced actor who has played hard-bitten cops and silent cowboys said he was not bored by the 43-item agenda and the detailed discussions it provoked.

"I'm a patient person," Eastwood said after the six-hour meeting concluded. "We're here for progress, and I hope we started off with a bang."

Eastwood, who received a congratulatory call from President Reagan after winning the mayor's race April 8, got a call earlier Tuesday from a member of Mrs. Reagan's staff inviting him to play in an upcoming benefit tennis tournament.

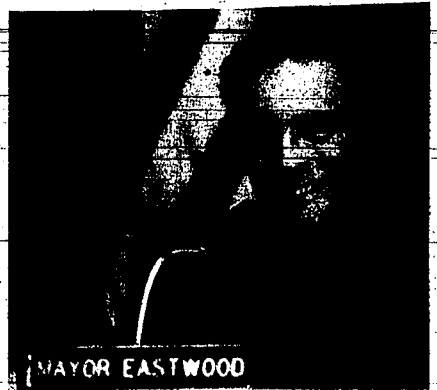

The mayor has not decided whether he will accept the invitation, said his secretary, Sandy Farrell.

Since his landslide election to the $200-a-month, two-year job, Eastwood had been going to his office a few minutes each day and putting together a list of problems he wants to tackle.

None drew as much attention from visitors as the ice cream question. The planning commission last year refused to issue a permit for an ice cream shop, saying the business's use of ice cream cones would cause "litter problems" in violation of the land use code. The decision created a flap, with some residents saying it held the town up to national ridicule.

Since then, three businesses have applied for takeout ice cream shops. Eastwood joined the four other council members in a unanimous vote, telling the planning commission to consider changing the land use code to allow new ice cream shops. Permits in place before the 10-year land use law was passed are exempt.

"It's become the big joke of the town," said Harold Wamsley, who wants to sell his Carmel Barber Shop to a would-be ice cream vendor and refused to issue a permit for an ice cream shop, saying the business's another location.

Fossil find impresses classmates

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Two young rock collectors who dug up some 400-million-year-old fossils are stars to their third-grade classmates, but geologists say the finds are nothing new to scientists.

Kwasi Brown and Abdul Freeman, both 8, found the fossils of tiny clam-like marine creatures a little more than a month ago while digging in a trash-strewn vacant lot.

Linda Fraser, Abdul's teacher at Alama Flagg Elementary School, was pleased with the boys' find but said Tuesday she never suspected the fossils were 400 million years old.

After Vice Principal Marc Katz asked a Rutgers University paleontologist to examine them.

Joseph Hull, a Rutgers geology professor, said Tuesday he was thrilled for the boys, but that scientists have unearthed many fossils like theirs.

The most interesting aspect of the fossils is that they were found in an urban area, said Hull.

"It's unusual in a highly urbanized area where everything is concrete and asphalt and buildings, that there are still boulders and you can find things like this," he said.

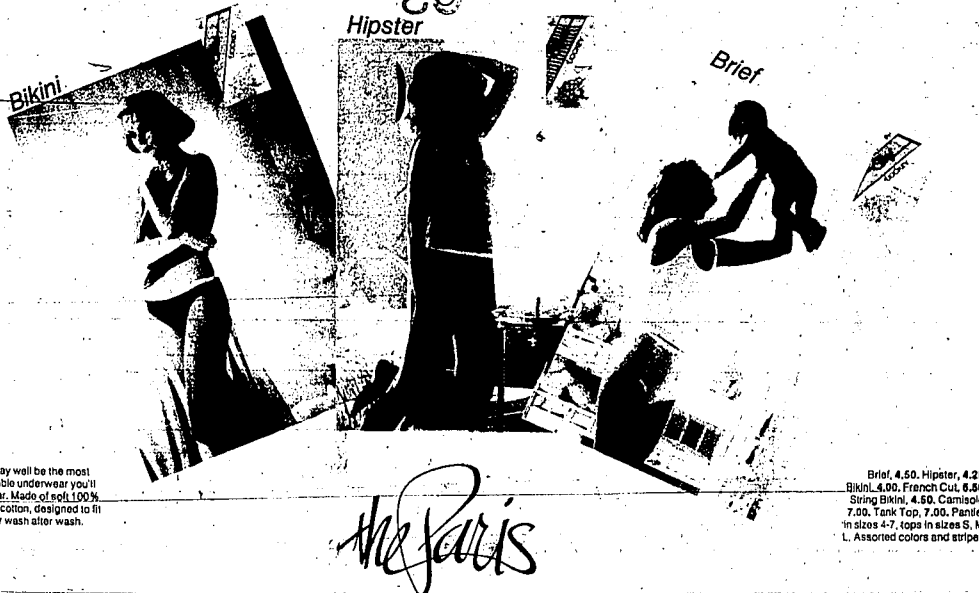

The fossils are of brachiopods, a marine creature that lived attached to rocks or beaching plins in shallow water 300 million to 400 million years ago. Hull said the animals were carried from New York by a glacier that moved across the continent 10,000 years ago.

Ms. Fraser said her students became excited about digging for rocks after she showed them purple amethyst crystals hidden inside a nondescript black rock. "That really motivated them," she said.

Abdul and Kwasi said they unearthed the fossils in a vacant lot near their baby sitter's house where they often play after school. The boys beamed Tuesday as they displayed their fossils to their classmates.

"We were playing out there when we found them," Kwasi said. "We were excited."

Guard begins educational upgrading

BOISE (AP) — Because of new educational requirements, Idaho National Guard members will hit the books as hard as they do the drill field.

All officers in the Idaho Army National Guard will be required to have a minimum of two years of college credit, when the new education requirements go into effect, said Capt. James Van Dinter, civilian education officer for the Army Guard.

To attain the rank of major or higher, Army Guard members will have to have a bachelor's degree, Van Dinter said.

Even enlisted men and women will have to master the basics of English and math, because the Army Guard will require all members to have a high school diploma or a General Equivalency Degree, he said.

The new emphasis on academic skills is part of a National Guard effort to better prepare soldiers for the demands of modern war, Van Dinter said.

A "more-educated" soldier will have a greater chance of survival on the modern battlefield, he said.

Van Dinter stressed that the new academic requirements mean National Guard members will take basic academic courses such as English composition and psychology, not courses related to the military.

"The National Guard believes that education will enhance members' performance," he said.

To help National Guard members living in the Boise area meet the new educational requirements, the Guard recently started a cooperative program with Boise State University to bring college courses to Gowen Field.

Last fall, BSU offered 15 classes at Gowen Field, including two telecourses beamed from the main campus to the military reservation via a special microwave link, said Richard Bullington, BSU executive vice president. Next fall, BSU will offer 22 courses, including six telecourses, he said.

The fall catalog for the Gowen Field satellite campus includes courses in English, accounting, diesel mechanics, word processing and speech.

By offering the courses at Gowen Field, the Army Guard cuts down on commuting time and parking problems for Guard members, Van Dinter said. Guard members also have a chance to take classes in an all-adult environment, he said.

As another incentive for Guard members to further their education, the National Guard pays 75 to 90 percent of tuition for courses, Van Dinter said.

"The people taking the classes have been really excited," he said.

Because the continuing education program is a statewide and nationwide effort, the Idaho National Guard plans to work out similar satellite campus arrangements with other Idaho colleges and universities such as Idaho State University and the University of Idaho, Van Dinter said.

The Idaho National Guard also is working with BSU's Simplot-Micron Center for Technology and the Army Research Institute to develop training programs, he said.

The Army Research Institute is developing a computer program to teach Guard members to fire an M-16 rifle, Van Dinter said.

With the help of a light pen that is connected to the rifle, a small personal computer can tell whether a soldier is aiming correctly even if he or she does not actually fire a bullet, he said.

Students get lucky with Harrah's jobs

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Every summer a miniature army of Oregon State University students, many from the state's smallest towns, head off to the glitter of Reno, Nev., to help Harrah's cope with its annual onslaught of vacationing visitors.

The unlikely pipeline between the quiet campus and the world-famed casino has been operating for the better part of a decade, and summer jobs at Harrah's have helped pay for hundreds of college educations in Corvallis.

"We hire more people here than at any other campus in the West," says Luis Rimoli, a Harrah's recruiter who dealt out summer jobs to about 100 students in a two-day visit to the campus last week. "We go to some other schools, but we always wind up filling more jobs here."

"I think one of the big reasons is that Oregon State is a school that gets about 80 percent of its students from within the state. A lot of the people we hire here come from small towns in Oregon. Everybody I hired this morning was from a town smaller than 15,000 people. For those kids, Reno is the bright lights and a chance to do something different."

Typically, the spring visit by Harrah's recruiters starts an avalanche of travel and housing arrangements. Last spring there was even a "Harrah's party" on campus, where students who had landed Reno jobs formed groups to share rides and apartments.

That gathering was organized by Steve Wood, 26, a graphic arts major who will be heading off for his third summer in Reno.

"It's a great way to spend three months," he says. "Harrah's is a good company, even for summer help. They have good benefits and there are lots of chances to move up. They'll give you lots of responsibility. But it's hard work. They treat you well but they expect a lot."

Rimoli and his assistant, John Leonard, were filling jobs that ranged from laundry work to valet parking to bingo and keno clerking. In the interviews for jobs on the casino floor, much of the questioning centered on the applicant's ability to handle the mental math needed in quickly dealing with hurried gamblers and large amounts of money.

Pay levels for the summer jobs range from $4.80 to $5.25 an hour, with the chance for ample overtime and a $125 retention allowance for students who work past Sept. 7. In most cases, the numbers work out to a gross income of at least $2,500 for three months.

"I have a lot of students who say that one of their goals is to save at least $1,000 over the summer," Rimoli says. "I tell them that's fairly easy to do if they share a place with some friends and watch their spending."

Priscilla Cornelius, scheduling supervisor at Oregon State's placement center, says there is indeed a campus "book" on Harrah's.

"The company has gotten a reputation here for treating students fairly but for expecting a lot," she says. "We have students who come back and say it's the hardest job they've ever had. But they think it's fun, too. For a lot of them, going down to work in the bright lights is intriguing." And for a few, the intrigue is enough to change their career plans.

Kent Wilson went from graduate school at Oregon State to a summer job at Harrah's in 1983 and never came back to campus. He works as a bellman in Harrah's Reno hotel now.

"It seems like an odd job for someone with a college degree," he says. "But there are lots of people like me doing it."
