Judge tosses out Twin Falls plan, zone law

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Fifth District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt tossed out the Twin Falls city comprehensive plan and zoning ordinance Friday, potentially throwing city development into chaos.

"Although the city claimed problems with the code were minor, Hurlbutt ruled that the city had bungled the job of adopting zoning codes so badly that it became impossible for residents to determine what laws were discussed and passed.

Both the letter and the spirit of the law were violated, Hurlbutt said. Hurlbutt, City Attorney Shane Bengochea, and state Rep. Jeff Stoker, R-Twin Falls, who brought the two suits that resulted in the ruling, did not agree Friday afternoon on what the ruling would mean to Twin Falls landowners.

"There is no area of impact — no zoning laws," said Stoker. Residents are now free to use their property for any use they choose — even if that means putting up a K-Mart in a residential area, he maintained. Bengochea, however, said he expects the city to appeal the decision and, in the meantime, he will be enforcing zoning codes.

Hurlbutt wrote in a 22-page decision that "no authority exists to be reversed or modified. The property in question is, therefore, without zoning."

However, he said Friday that the decision should not affect zoning laws in force before the comprehensive plan was adopted.

City zoning law was substantially the same before passage of the comprehensive land use plan, said Community Development Director LaMar Orton. The stretch of Addison Avenue on which Stoker opened a legal office — after suing to reverse a council decision opposing legal offices there — has never been zoned for professional use, Orton said.

However, the comprehensive plan created the area of impact, a band of land around the city with city jurisdiction over zoning law issues: Hurlbutt's ruling invalidates action the city and county took to transfer zoning authority over the land from the county to the city.

The ruling requires the city to refund to Stoker $300 he was charged for a permit to build a home in the area of impact and another $600 for a reissue of the permit. The city must also pay interest on the money, but Hurlbutt withheld a decision on whether the city also owed him attorney fees and costs.

Stoker said the ruling would not necessarily mean that other homeowners in the former area of impact would also get re-funds. He paid his fees under duress, he said.

"Most of this comes from the city's hard-headed attitude," he said. "I told them a long time ago it (the zoning ordinances) needed to be straightened out. Now they

U.S. veto stops UN sanctions

The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — The United States and Britain vetoed a Security Council resolution Friday night that called for selective international sanctions to punish South Africa for its raids into three neighboring countries.

Twelve of the 15 Council members supported the resolution and France abstained.

The United States and Britain had both declared their willingness to join other council members in unanimously condemning South Africa for Monday's raids on alleged guerrilla targets in the black-ruled nations of Botswana, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

But the two Western powers balked at binding international sanctions even though they already had imposed limited economic restrictions of their own on South Africa.

U.S. delegate Patricia Byrne told the Council after the vote. "We do not believe that the destruction of the South African economy serves anyone's interest, least of all those who suffer under apartheid."

The destruction of economic ties, she said, would lead inevitably to the severance of political ties, "depriving us of any leverage" over South Africa's white-led government.

"My government cannot support language calling for the imposition of mandatory sanctions," the American envoy concluded. "We believe that all states should be able to decide for themselves what measures are most appropriate as we pursue our common goal of destroying apartheid."

British ambassador Sir John Thomson noted that Britain was engaged in Commonwealth efforts to arrange talks between South Africa and black guerrillas to bring peace to the region. Therefore, he said, he opposed "short-term steps that might endanger that long-term goal."

Two Western allies, Denmark and Australia, supported Friday night's sanctions resolution.

Reagans plan to join 'Hands'

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Saying the first family "will do its part," President Reagan abruptly changed his plans and decided to join Hands Across America on Sunday to help raise millions of dollars for the nation's hungry and homeless.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan told aides Friday morning that he and his wife, Nancy, after a long family discussion Thursday night, concluded they should participate in the privately organized effort to raise $50 million.

Speakes said the president was "surprised to find out he had been invited to participate, because he somehow didn't know that."

The president's daughter said she assumed the "invitation" had been received at the White House, but had not reached her father's desk. "We all thought it would be something he would want to do, and he did," she said.

Speakes said after the president informed White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan of his wishes on Friday morning. It was decided the Reagans could best participate by re-routing the line inside the White House gates. This, the spokesman said, would eliminate the need for much of the disruptive logistical work and security precautions involved whenever the president leaves the White House grounds.

Ken Kraegen, organizer of Hands Across America, said, "I feel terrific about Reagan joining in it. It demonstrated more clearly than anything else we could have done that it's not too late for anyone to come and be a part of the line."

The Reagans invited members and families of the White House and executive office staffs, the Secret Service and news reporters to join them in stretching the line along the semicircular White House drive of Pennsylvania Avenue, the original demonstration route.

The Reagans themselves will join the line under the North Portico by stepping just outside the main door of the executive mansion, the spokesman said.

Speakes said Reagan decided to take part in the event after a conversational Thursday night between the Reagans and the president's older daughter, Maureen, and her husband, Dennis Revere.

"It was the first time that the Reagans as a family had had an opportunity to talk about it, and they spent most of the evening talking about it," Speakes said.

Maureen Reagan said she and her husband would join the chain at the White House, along with the president and the first lady.

Of the family discussion Thursday night, she said, "The president was a little surprised to find out he had been invited to participate, because he somehow didn't know that."

The president's daughter said she assumed the "invitation" had been received at the White House, but had not reached her father's desk. "We all thought it would be something he would want to do, and he did," she said.

Lowest-paid teacher leaves as N. Dakota school closes

By PHILIP BRASHER
The Associated Press

MCLEOD, N.D. — Janice Herbranson fought back tears Friday and said goodbye to her three pupils and their parents in the classroom school where her $6,300 salary brought her the title of the nation's lowest-paid teacher.

The 80-year-old school is closing. Two of her three pupils graduate to seventh grade and a larger school.

Mrs. Herbranson plans to move to Alaska, leaving behind the school where she taught for 20 years and the saloon she ran to supplement her income.

"When I walked to school this morning, I said a little prayer and said, 'Why do I need to feel this way?' It's a beautiful day," she said.

Mrs. Herbranson, 51, was identified as the nation's lowest-paid teacher in a 1983 survey by the National Education Association. She has gotten a $500 raise since then.

People in this tiny ranching community of 45 or 50 people about 60 miles southeast of Fargo say they couldn't afford to pay her more but can't bear to see her leave.

JANICE HERBRANSON She'll move to Alaska

"I know she could have gone elsewhere and gotten far more the financial gain than other teachers get," said Tammy's father, Ron. "I loved the grade school here. I wouldn't trade it for anything."

The white, clapboard school sits at the end of a dirt road next to a pasture and across a baseball park from the town's two churches.

Mrs. Herbranson rang the school bell every morning at 9. She cooked her pupils breakfast and lunch every day.

She also taught them piano. On Friday, they performed for their parents and the reporters and television cameramen who had come to record Mrs. Herbranson's last day.

A framed letter from President Reagan hangs on the classroom wall, near the faded painting of Abraham Lincoln.

Mrs. Herbranson did not get rich teaching in McLeod, but she got fame. It bothered her some Friday, as she squeezed in interviews while helping her pupils color book covers. • See TEACHER on Page A2

Police say 'projectile' death cause

The Associated Press

COKEVILLE, Wyo. — Doris Young, who along with her husband held 150 Cokerville Elementary School students, teachers and administrators hostage a week ago, was not killed by the blast of a bomb that accidentally detonated in front of her but by a "projectile," police said Friday.

Lincoln County Sheriff's Department investigator Earl Carrill stopped short of saying Mrs. Young was deliberately shot in the head, but did say her death was being treated as a homicide.

Authorities initially presumed that Mrs. Young died when the homemade gasoline bomb she was holding was accidentally detonated.

David Young, who masterminded the plot to obtain $300 million ransom, then committed suicide.

Space report proposes lunar ports by 2005

By MICHAEL ISIKOFF
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — NASA administrator James C. Fletcher Friday hailed as an "exciting and challenging blueprint" for the future a National Commission on Space report that called for the construction of lunar spaceports by 2005 and the colonization of Mars by 2035.

But the ambitious program — outlined in a report released Thursday by the 15-member presidential commission and estimated to cost as much as $700 billion — quickly ran into criticism from some scientists who charged that it was so improbable it could undermine national support for more practical space goals.

"I'm really afraid people will snort and laugh at this," said Thomas M. Donahue, chairman of the National Academy of Sciences' Space Science Board. "I'm worried this is going to do damage to the cause. You can never justify this in terms of science."

The commission, whose members included former U.N. ambassador Jenne J. Kirkpatrick and test pilot Chuck Yeager, was created two years ago to help chart a new course for a U.S. space program that some critics felt lacked direction. In a glossy 211-page report, dedicated to the seven crew members killed in the Jan. 28 Challenger disaster, the panel called for the United States to move beyond the shuttle with an immediate crash research effort to develop a new generation of aerospace vehicles.

By the early years of the 21st century, the panel said, the United States should return to the moon with small colonies of about 20 that would eventually grow into large bases for mining, manufacturing and scientific experiments. The colonists would grow their own food in self-sustaining "habitation modules," the report said.

This would be followed by journeys to Mars, ultimately supported by spaceships that would make regular six-month voyages ferrying • See SPACE on Page A2

PUC hears final power rate testimony; decision by July

BOISE (AP) — After winding up testimony on Idaho Power Company's request for a $6.2 million rate increase, the Idaho Public Utilities Commission plans to reach a decision by the middle of the summer.

A staff witness presented testimony on Friday urging the PUC to cut Idaho Power's rate by $2.4 million, instead of granting the rate increase, which would be the largest ever given a utility in Idaho.

Research director Stephanie Miller, who earlier recommended that Idaho Power's rate be cut by $2.6 million, revised the figure to $2.4 million in testimony filed Friday.

Idaho Power originally asked for a rate increase of $84.2 million, or 27.4 percent. In rebuttal testimony filed with the PUC earlier this month, the utility dropped the request to $66.2 million, 21.4 percent, to take into account changes since the rate increase request was filed last September.

Accounting for the biggest part of the original rate increase request was Idaho Power's investment in the Valmy II coal-fired generating plant in northern Nevada. The utility has asked $37.5 million, or nearly half the overall increase, to recover its investment in the plant.

But the PUC staff recommends disallowing one-third of the Valmy II investment, and one-third of Idaho Power's interest in the Boardman coal-fired plant in Oregon, on the grounds that electricity from those sources is not needed to meet Idaho Power's firm demand.

Ms. Miller testified Friday that to be consistent, she has revised her earlier proposal to include consistent adjustments to rate base, tax expense, depreciation and accumulated deferred income tax. She also disputed a company contention that excluding part of the Valmy and Boardman investments from the rate base could cause Idaho Power to lose investment tax credits for all tax years still under review.

In an order signed earlier this month, the Public Utilities Commission extended by 60 days the deadline for deciding the case. The decision now is scheduled by July 14.

The PUC noted the case has produced "an unprecedented number of intervenors" and there may be 30 volumes of transcript covering several thousand pages.

"This case represents the largest request for increased revenues by any utility in a single proceeding in the history of the state," the commission said.

Street fee under study

POCATELLO (AP) — The Pocatello City Council will decide June 5 whether to implement a controversial street utility fee to finance a multimillion-dollar rebuilding program.

If approved, the fee is expected to raise about $600,000 a year for street repairs. Officials estimate it will assess $2.65 a month on single-family homes, $1.59 a month for apartments, $1.33 a month for mobile homes and 80 cents a month for residents of retirement communities and homes.

The city council decided on Friday to consider the fee. In a special election earlier this month, Pocatello residents narrowly rejected a $5 million, five-year property tax increase for street repairs. The measure was favored by 62.8 percent of the city's voters.

Pizzuto receives death sentences in slayings

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — Gerald Pizzuto also received a fixed 14-year prison term for grand theft and a fixed life sentence for robbery.

The Herndons were killed last July 25 at Ruby Meadows, about 25 miles north of McCall. Their bodies were discovered buried in shallow graves about five days later.

Two other Orland men involved in the killings, who had pleaded guilty to reduced charges in exchange for their testimony against Pizzuto, were also sentenced Friday.

Bill Odum, 26, was given a 20-year indeterminate sentence for voluntary manslaughter.

James Rice, 27, received two 20-year indeterminate sentences to be served concurrently for second-degree murder. Rice had confessed that he shot Del Herndon "to put him out of his misery."

Regulators give gas company OK to change industrial price changes

BOISE (AP) — Saying Intermountain Gas Co. needs flexibility to adjust to conditions in its unsettled industry, Idaho utility regulators have granted the company's request to change its price structure for industrial customers.

Intermountain Gas told the Idaho Public Utilities Commission last month that unless it was allowed to revise its large-volume and transportation rates, it would lose $3 million a year.

"An unanticipated and massive shift" of sales to industrial customers from large-volume natural gas rates and transportation rates was costing Intermountain Gas more than 018 cents per therm, the commission said.

The commission agreed Friday that the current rates "seriously inhibit (Intermountain's) ability to provide continued service. It would be unfair, unjust and unreasonable to require the company to continue to operate under said tariffs."

"However, (Intermountain) is reminded that this is not yet a deregulated market," the PUC order said, urging the company to "re-evaluate and accept that its role in a changing industry carries with it some inherent risk."

To expand its customer base, the PUC order allows Intermountain Gas to reduce the volume-of-use qualification for large-volume rates from 2,000 therms a day, or about 720,000 therms a year, to 200,000 therms a year.

The commission approved monthly large-volume rates of 37.67 cents per therm for the first 250,000 therms 33.821 for the next 500,000 therms and 27.874 for the next 750,000. The graduated charges replace a flat rate of 31.699 cents per therm.

The order also substantially boosts Intermountain's T-1 or transportation charge from a flat rate of 5.3 cents per therm to a declining rate /gP13.309, 9.460 and 3.513 cents per therm. However, the PUC said gas used for ammonia production would remain at the flat rate of 1.5 cents per therm.

Industrial cooperation key to economic gains

BOISE (AP) — With Idaho's corporate industries often at the mercy of forces beyond their control, business, government and education leaders say the state's economic revival depends on increased cooperation among themselves and a greater financial commitment to education.

During a three-hour symposium at Boise State University's new Simplot-Micron Technology Center Friday, they said the state should take the lead in selling Idaho's virtues outside its borders.

In addition, leaders of key Idaho industries laid the blame for their financial woes today at the feet of government policies they claimed led farmers, bankers and others to make decisions that in hindsight proved disastrous.

"If we had realistic trade policies, we wouldn't need to restrain America" because of the economic upheaval in Idaho, said Tom Richards, president of Idaho Forest Industries.

But with the decisions on trade policy and other factors outside Idaho's control, Dennis Wheeler, president of Coeur d'Alene Mines and the state Board of Education, said state government should serve as the catalyst for a major promotional effort to foster new and expanding businesses.

"I cannot do that, however, when other states in the region are spending five and 10 times as much as Idaho to promote themselves to businessmen looking for new locations.

In addition, Conrad Wredberg, senior vice president of Gould-AMI in Pocatello, charged that the state's underfinanced educational system has served as an impediment to high-technology industries like his attracting qualified workers.

"The amount of money we spend is drastically lacking," Wredberg argued.

Attorneys cite delays, back Hart

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Members of two major law firms in Twin Falls say they're speaking for most attorneys in the 5th Judicial District in supporting William Hart as magistrate, who seeks the 5th District Judge's seat in Minidoka County.

Hart is opposing the incumbent, Judge Ronald Bruce of Rupert, in the primary election Tuesday.

The two attorneys say they believe most of the attorneys in the 5th Judicial District share their concern and have swung their support behind Hart for the same reason — delays that are costing their clients time and money.

A number of lawyers have signed their names to advertisements supporting Hart and others have said they are in Hart's corner, but do not wish to be quoted since they practice in the courts of both men.

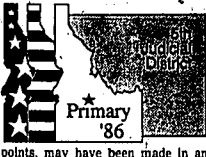

Tom Nelson of Twin Falls and John Hepworth of Buhl and Twin Falls said this week they are willing to go on record publicly and strongly urge voters to elect Hart.

"I am not opposing (Judge) Bruce; I am supporting Hart," Nelson said in response to why there appears to be so much support for Hart among the attorneys. "I think there are sufficient delays in (Bruce's) court to concern all of the district's attorneys."

Hepworth emphasized that it is not the attorneys who are losing money, but rather their clients, and that while the attorneys can do about it — other than to help elect a candidate they believe will correct the situation.

"He says he's a 'people's judge,' but it's the people who suffer from such delays," Hepworth said. "When you hold a hearing and all of the issues are argued and everything is in order and then six months go by before there is a decision, we may have to refresh the memory of the judge by presenting the arguments again."

"It costs the client double, and it isn't his or her fault... I'm just saying that anyone who deals with cases day after day can't possibly remember six months later what all of the details, or even some major points, may have been made in an oral argument."

Both attorneys said they have nothing against Bruce and have never had any complaints about his capabilities.

But he takes too much time to make a ruling or a decision, Hepworth said, and many times cases in his court drag on for months when, in the opinion of the two attorneys, the issues could be settled much sooner.

Hepworth explained that if a legal action is pending against an individual it often ties up assets, bank accounts and can create other serious inconveniences. In contested divorce cases, delays result in hardships for whole families, Hepworth added. It is the attorney, he said, who must explain the delays to the unhappy client.

Nelson said that in Bruce's court there is not just an occasional case delay, but a total calendar delay. Both lawyers pointed to a letter Bruce wrote to two opposing attorneys in March apologizing for "my long-overdue opinion in the case."

"In that same letter, Nelson and Hepworth pointed out, Bruce also wrote that he could not recall what had brought up a specific point during oral arguments in the case; but Bruce went on to explain the value of that point in relation to the property settlement set by the magistrate court."

"We are asking for a new judge only because of the serious delays in Judge Bruce's court — delays that cost clients big dollars in attorney fees," Hepworth said.

"Isn't the attorney who suffers when decisions are delayed. In fact, the result may even be more money for the lawyer. It's the individual who is suing or being sued... that is the loser."

5th District Judge Ronald Bruce refutes accusations of decision delays Friday while Magistrate William Hart takes notes

Order! District judge hopefuls debate

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Fifth District Judge Ronald Bruce of Rupert and the challenger for that office, Magistrate William Hart of Stoshone, expressed respect for one another and then took off the gloves in a lively debate of issues Friday night in Twin Falls.

The two were guests of the Sawtooth Chapter of the Idaho Press Club at a public meeting held in the county judicial building.

Hart continued to stress that serious delays exist in Bruce's court. He said he was asked to run by concerned and frustrated attorneys who are tired of delays. The human involvement in suits calls for prompt decisions, Hart said. He explained later that he is known as a hard worker and is prepared to make prompt decisions, as illustrated in a case in Ketchum in which he and his staff worked well into the night to conclude a long-overdue civil case.

Hart explained court procedure to the reporters and newscasters and said a 30-60-day period is standard for reaching decisions on the various motions and appeals as the case progressed through court. He then cited cases Bruce has heard, saying that in one divorce case one member of the 80-year old couple had died before the case was finalized.

Bruce pointed out in his opening remarks that frequently, requests for delays by attorneys or the individuals who bring the suits causes the case to be held back. He said he is inclined to handle the more pressing issues. He admitted he is guilty of some delays — a small percentage of his cases — and said that is frustrating to him as well.

However, Bruce said he has had very few reversals of his judgments by the Supreme Court or Court of Appeals in his 10 years on the bench. Bruce said he takes time to seriously review all of the evidence and circumstances, adding he would rather make the right decision than a wrong one. A wrong decision and appeal lands the case back in court again for another long period of motions, hearings and much greater frustration for the client," he said.

Bruce accused Hart of saying he was "soft on drug offender cases" in a meeting in Gooding several weeks ago. Nothing could be further from the truth, Bruce said, adding he had expected Hart to tell him he was sorry he made that mistake.

Hart countered by saying he did not recall making so strong a statement and recalled telling a reporter later that he is not charging Bruce with being soft on drug-traffic issues. Questioned about the specific case involving the man who died before his divorce was final, Bruce said he could not recall the circumstances of that case in the many he handles.

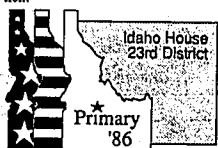

Asked about campaign expenses, Hart said has spent $6,000-$8,000, most of which has come from his mother and some from attorneys and other supporters.

Bruce said his expenses are about $500, adding his wife is his major contributor.

Black, Scott rap each others' finances

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Campaign finances became an issue in the legislative race between Ron Black and Rep. Donna Scott, R-Twin Falls, Friday when Black criticized Scott for accepting money from utility company political action committees and the criticizing his donations from the Idaho Education Association.

Black, a Twin Falls day-care center operator, said "Donna just has too much of a record in the last session of voting for things that benefit people outside of our county." Both are Republican candidates for House seat 23A, which covers Twin Falls County.

"When we're looking at the kind of rate increase that Idaho Power is requesting, I would personally be very careful about taking any contributions from any committees funded by Idaho Power," Black said in a Friday interview with The Times-News.

REP. DONNA SCOTT
"My vote cannot be bought"

Black said he opposes the rate hike request and also will not vote for deregulation of Mountain Bell telephone company until he is convinced a deregulation plan will not hurt rural customers and the elderly.

Scott said the three political action committee (PAC) donations to her campaign, totaling $1,200, do not guarantee she will vote to help either Idaho Power or Mountain Bell, but are based on her past voting record. "My vote cannot be bought," she said. "I have never responded to a lobby for a special interest, but I have been supported consistently by private enterprise."

Scott verified that she received a $200 donation from Idaho Power's Idaho Energy Resources Campaign Committee; $500 from United for Idaho, a pro-business PAC Idaho Power belongs to; and $500 from Taxpayers for a Responsible Government, a pro-business PAC, which Mountain Bell belongs to.

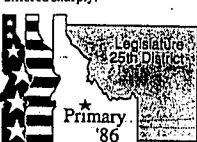

"I have just as much trouble with his contributions from a union (the Idaho Education Association) of $3,000 as he might have with me for a contribution from the business sector," Scott said.

Black said Republican gubernatorial candidate Lt. Gov. David Leroy received funding from the National Education Association, which the IEA is affiliated with. He said his IEA contribution is a sign that the IEA has begun to recognize the importance of endorsing Republicans, like himself, who are in favor of increased education funding.

Callen, Kinsey clash on special education

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Disagreements were hard to find at a League of Women Voters gathering of Republican legislative candidates for District 25 Thursday night, but one pair of Senate candidates and one pair of House candidates differed sharply.

Rep. Jerry Callen, R-Jerome, and his challenger, Robin Kinsey, parted ways over whether funding for special education programs is money well spent. Anderson and Callen, a former member of the House, and George Anthony, a Filer businessman, are running for the Senate seat in the same district.

Callen said the special services budgets of the schools, which pay for special education programs for gifted and retarded or disabled students, as well as other services, run a separate little bureaucracy in the schools. He said that in the Jerome district, if the program had been done away with, about 35 teachers could have been hired to reduce class-loads.

REP. JERRY CALLEN
Questions programs' value

Callen said he has "visited" the special education programs in Jerome and "You've got to be guided to handle them... I question whether you're doing all that much good; (it is) almost one-on-one. I don't know whether we are serving them."

Kinsey said the money spent on special education programs is money well spent. "Sitting next to a student with no bowel control doesn't do any good for a student who has no problem," he said.

Anderson reiterated his support for local option taxing authority for cities and counties and said it will be necessary so that local governments can fund those services they decide are needed locally. Also speaking at the forum were florial district House Seat B candidates Lee Barnes, a denarius from Buhl; Kay Cramer, a Jerome legal secretary; and Jerome Mayor Ralph Peters.

Buying new stamps can save cash at camps

By KENNETH A. BROWN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — This Memorial Day weekend, the U.S. Forest Service will introduce its "Camp Stamps" program, which can save campers 15 percent on camping fees.

The new, nationwide program enables campers to pre-purchase camp stamps good for covering fees at national forest campgrounds.

"The neat thing is that it's more of a business-like way than what we've been doing in the past," Sawtooth National Forest Supervisor Ron Stoleson. "By buying stamps people can save 15 percent," Stoleson said, "and they carry over from year to year and are good at any national forest campground in the country."

Instead of putting money in the campground fee envelopes, those who buy the discount stamps can affix them to the outside of the fee envelope. Stamps come in $3, $2, $1 and 50¢ denominations. And $10 worth of stamps are sold for $8.50. The Forest Service will continue to accept cash, however, as well as stamps.

The stamps are available now in area Safeway stores, says Andy Anderson, manager of the Lynnwood Safeway store. Safeway has two stores in Twin Falls, and one each in Buhl, Mountain Home, Ketchum, and Jerome. Stamps are also available from Stokes Food Center in Burley. Stamps, he said, are available at checkout stands and at store offices.

Additional retail outlets will be added to the Camp Stamp program in the vicinity of the Sawtooth National Forest.

Stamps are also available at all national forest offices. The program was tested last year in Utah and Colorado. It was so successful that the Forest Service decided to expand the program to all national forests.

In addition to savings for campers, the program is also convenient for the Forest Service, saving personnel time which used to go into counting the cash in fee envelopes, Stoleson said.

Last year, Stoleson said, the Forest Service collected $120,000, from 36 fee sites, in the Sawtooth National Forest.

With the arrival of the Memorial Day weekend and recent wet weather, Stoleson said, the agency is concerned about possible traffic on unsurfaced roads — particularly from those who may be planning to go into the forest to cut firewood. Heavily loaded trucks can cause substantial damage to wet, unsurfaced roads.

"We would prefer people wait a week, until things dry out," Stoleson said.

Forum focuses on how to aid rural residents

By KRISTIN TUCKER Times-News correspondent

Farmers, counselors, pastors gather for discussion

KIMBERLY - Seeking ways the church can address problems faced by rural residents, about 75 farmers, counselors, pastors and rural residents gathered at Kimberly United Methodist Church last Sunday evening for a forum sponsored by the Filer-based Small Church/Rural Life Center of the United Methodist Church.

"Not all farmers are in trouble and we are thankful for that," said Shoshone resident Sue Westendorf, a counselor for the Center for New Directions and volunteer on the rural crisis hotline. "But the problem looks so bad that we wonder what we can do in one age-locally, said Westendorf, and pastors often do not know where to find the resources to help those in need.

Edna Kuiken, president of the local Mental Health Association, said that traditional views of the Independent, self-reliant farmer make it especially difficult for them to ask for assistance, and they may become depressed, even suicidal.

"If agriculture fails, the city will fall - including other businesses," he said. "The (United Methodist) church could take a great leap forward by initiating some kind of program - but no other church is offering a program, either."

Lewis suggested a $20,000 non-denominational, non-partisan corporation that would aid local farmers by providing low-interest loans; scholarship and research assistance; pleasure and discussion hotline funding and a locally based international trade center.

smaller-scale solutions, with participants agreeing that churches need to give more active support to those in trouble.

"As church members, it is hard to walk up to someone and say, 'If you want to talk, I am here.' But that is what we need to do," Baker said.

Journal blasted for crucifixion study

CHICAGO (AP) - The biggest furor to hit one of the nation's leading medical journals in years stems not from an article about abortion, AIDS or smoking, but from a study of how Jesus Christ died on the cross.

"Perhaps the future will see these authors equally successful in studying 'Thermal Injuries to Joan of Arc,' 'Alkaloid Intoxication and Socrates,' and 'Gunshot Wounds and the Brain of Hitler,'" wrote Dr. Norman Marcus of Springfield, Va.

Seven letters are reprinted in a nine-page section of Friday's Journal, along with a reply from the article's authors, Dr. William Edwards, a pathologist at the Mayo-Clinic in Rochester, Minn., and Wesley Gabel, a pastor at two Methodist churches in Minnesota.

JEROME - A Yecylliff film showing the 24 years of work of Marianna Slagel and Florence Gerald among the Tzeltal Indians of Mexico will be shown at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at the Jerome Nazarene Church. A freewill offering for Yecylliff Bible translators will be received. The public is invited to attend.

Militaristic, sexist hymn lyrics voted down

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - An "Onward Christian Soldiers" hymn should be left out of the new Methodist hymnal and a sexist hymn should be changed, a church committee has voted.

"I'm trying to raise my sons to be peacemakers, not soldiers, and it's not easy," said Mary Brook O'Neil, a committee member from Gainesville, Ga.

Other committee members appealed to the song's 80 percent approval rating. Jim Gresham, a member of the congregation, had sung it at least once in the past year.

Have Seen the Glory, based on the Civil War-era "Battle Hymn of the Republic," was also voted to remain.

Genetic technology "is welcomed as an enhancer of life," the board said in a statement. "However, its promises ought not seduce people into believing... that human beings can be made into perfect specimens of physical form and total health."

Fed allows monetary policies to stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Policy-makers at the Federal Reserve Board decided at their April meeting to leave monetary policy unchanged although they expressed support for a further cut in a key interest rate, according to minutes of the meeting released Friday.

Officials of the Federal Open Market Committee voted 11-0 to keep essentially the same degree of control over growth of the money supply. The central bank exerts tremendous influence over economic activity through its control over the supply of money and thus its price —

Interest rates.

Interest rates have fallen dramatically this year, helped along by an accommodative Fed policy and plunging oil rates, which eased inflation fears.

The April 1 meeting came 17 days before the Fed voted to cut its discount rate from 7 percent to 6.5 percent. In the minutes, officials said the reduction, the second this year, would be justified if warranted by conditions in U.S. financial markets and actions overseas.

Many economists believe the discount rate cut to 6.5 percent will be the last move toward lower rates, the Fed will make for some time.

The Fed policy-makers met again this week and most analysts expect no change in interest rates to come from the meeting as the Fed prefers to sit back and see if the lower rates already in effect will "have" the desired effect of boosting economic growth.

While in general agreement on policy, various members pushed for slightly different approaches, the minutes said. Some preferred looser controls on the money supply in the belief that the economy needed further stimulation while a separate minority pushed for tighter controls to make sure that inflation does not become a problem later in the year.

The Fed seeks to supply enough money to keep the economy expanding at a healthy rate while guarding against money growth that is so rapid that it risks re-igniting inflation.

Radioactivity in milk at peak, will fall soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Radioactivity in milk from the Chernobyl nuclear accident is peaking now and will decline, the Environmental Protection Agency said Friday in its final daily fallout report.

Although it plans no more daily announcements, the agency said it would continue daily sampling at its 68 radioactivity monitoring stations, until readings fall to normal.

EPA, which has been issuing the statement for a government-wide task force that monitored Chernobyl developments, noted a traveler's advisory from the State Department cautioning against trips to the Kiev-Chernobyl area of the Soviet Union.

Food and Drug Administration warnings against eating foods from the "affected area" — an area the government has never defined with precision — also are still in effect.

The agency has said the radioactivity in the air and falling as rain — which works its way into the food supply — has never remotely approached concentrations that could harm public health.

Chemical found in imported wine

WASHINGTON (AP) — A chemical used in automobile antifreeze has been found in a 96th imported wine, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said Friday.

The New York State Liquor Authority, the Treasury Department agency detected traces of diethylene glycol in a wine labeled Bongiorno Lambrusco Italian melow red table wine and produced and bottled by Vinicola Corregese, Correggio, Italy.

William T. Drake, ATF associate director of compliance for operations, said consumers should look for the code number RI 813RE on the right side of the label in small letters.

GM changes sales policy to S. Africa

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp., pressured for years by apartheid foes to stop vehicle sales to the South African police and military, has cut off the sales, company Chairman Roger B. Smith revealed Friday.

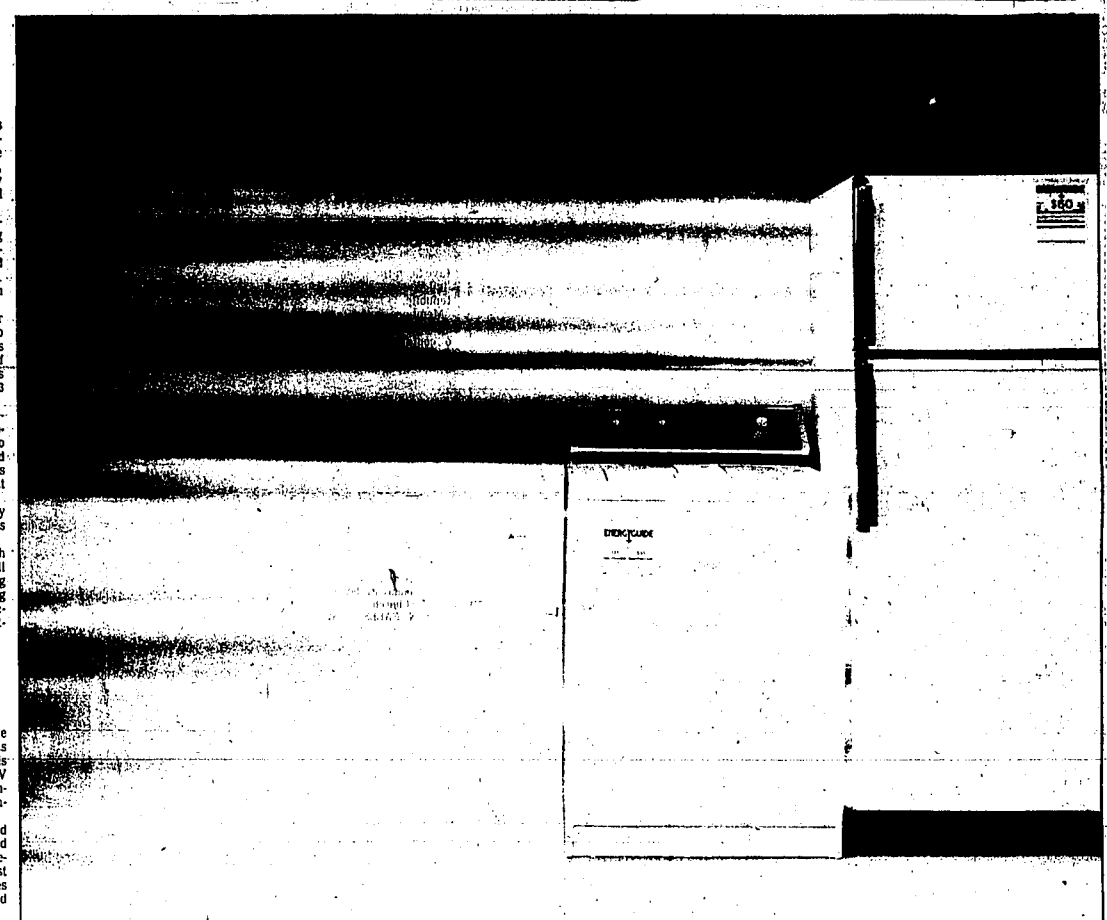

The announcement at the company's annual shareholders meeting was hailed as a victory by anti-apartheid activists, although they vowed to press GM and other major U.S. corporations to pull out of South Africa entirely.

"Clearly, GM has acceded to our wishes," said Eric Wollman, who spoke at the meeting against GM's South Africa activities, on behalf of the New York City employees' retirement system, which owns $23 million of GM stock.

Smith's announcement represented a sharp break with GM's decade-long stance: that refusing to supply the white regime's armed forces and police to cause an "expulsion from the country, where it has 200 dealers and 3,500 workers."

GM argued this point as recently as five weeks ago in proxy materials mailed to shareholders.

Smith said a deal was struck with the "apartheid" government in April that will allow GM to continue doing business in South Africa, including selling vehicles to non-military sectors of government such as the postal service.

Synar lashes land rentals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, which wants to hike national park visitor fees, is renting public land to movie and TV commercial producers at bargain-basement rates, a House subcommittee chairman said Friday.

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., said that not only has the Bureau of Land Management skirted a 1976 law requiring such rentals to carry at least "fair-market" prices, it sometimes gives below its already-low posted prices.

Synar said that on their way to a $66 million gross, the makers of the box-office smash, "Return of the Jedi," paid $8,620 for the use of BLM property in California's Buttercup Valley for 243 days in 1981.

He said BLM "could have earned thousands of dollars more" under fees charged by California for productions on state land. The fees are $100 a day during set construction and removal and a minimum of $600 a day during actual filming, according to Synar.

In a letter to Interior Secretary Donald Hodel, Synar said that areas of the valley were denuded and that, contrary to the BLM permit requirement, trash "was burned on the site and buried in the sand."

Carter lobbying

ATLANTA (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter, in an admittedly rare show of support for Reagan administration policy, has begun lobbying senators in support of a plan to sell defensive weapons to Saudi Arabia.

The Senate earlier this month passed a resolution opposing Reagan's request for weapons for the Saudis, and votes next month on whether to overturn a presidential veto of that resolution.

ENERGYGUIDE

$57

The yellow EnergyGuide labels help you compare the operating cost of one model with another. The Federal Trade Commission requires manufacturers to place them on refrigerators, freezers, dishwashers, and clothes washers.

The easiest way to see if an appliance is energy-efficient is to look at the bar graph across the center of the label. The most efficient models have "This Model" indicators on the far left of the graph.

You can also compare the energy efficiency of different models by comparing their estimated annual operating costs. The big number underneath the arrow is based on a national average electric rate, which varies from label to label.

BPA recommends that the chart at the bottom of the label be used instead of the big number. Pick a rate that is closest to your own utility rate (such as 4 cents/kWh). Then compare all models at that rate. The lower the operating cost, the more energy-efficient the model is.

CLIP AND SAVE

All new appliances look fine at the starting line. But when they start to run, some of these hot new models don't look so hot. Because they waste electricity. And money.

run with the right crowd

The best models money can buy save energy all the way to the finish line. Plug them in and these freezers, refrigerators, dishwashers and clothes washers won't waste watts—or hot water—because they're built with better door seals. More insulation. And more efficient motors.

pick a winner at the starting line

You don't have to work-up a sweat—or give up your favorite features—to pick a winner. Just ask your salesperson to show you the most efficient machines and compare the yellow EnergyGuide labels. Take the winners home, plug them in—and relax. They'll give you a great run for your money. For now and for the future.

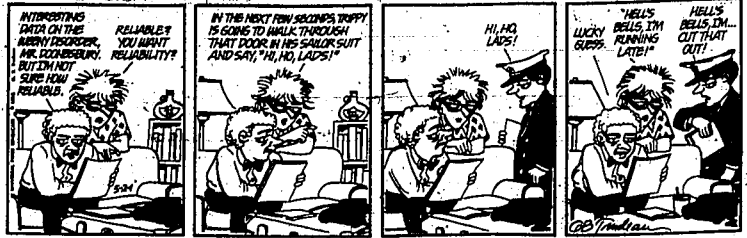

Energy-efficient appliances. They work out better in the long run. For all of us.

Actor who disdained tinsel, hoopla dies at 70 of cancer

SAUSALITO, Calif. (AP) — Actor Sterling Hayden, whose roles ranged from the comically obsessed Gen. Jack D. Ripper in "Dr. Strangelove" to a crooked cop in "The Godfather," died of cancer Friday at age 70.

The tall, rugged Hayden, a decorated Marine Corps captain in World War II who had a lifelong love of the sea and disdain of Hollywood, died in his sleep surrounded by his wife, Catherine, and children in his home on a hill overlooking San Francisco Bay.

"Sterling Hayden had a great, soaring spirit — truly a king among men," director John Huston said in a statement.

Born John Hamilton on March 24, 1916, in Montclair, N.J., the son of a New York newspaper advertising executive, Hayden went to sea at 20, serving as first mate aboard a schooner on an around-the-world voyage.

"Books and the sea, I discovered, had more than a little in common: both were distilled of silence and solitude," Hayden wrote in his 1963 autobiography, "Wanderer."

In addition to his autobiography, Hayden wrote a romantic and poetic novel, "Voyager." In 1977, about an 1896 sea journey around Cape Horn.

After a voyage to Tahiti, Hayden went to Hollywood in 1939 for a film career he vowed to pursue only for money. Between films, he took to the seas again for the merchant marine.

"I'll go back to Hollywood to pick up a dollar, but that's all. Everything is wrong with that city. It epitomizes all that's wrong with life," he said.

The 6-foot-4, blue-eyed actor with a deep, husky voice began his movie career with "Virginia" and "Bahama Passage" in 1941.

During World War II, he served with the Office of Strategic Services, the forerunner of the CIA, in Italy and Yugoslavia, running night missions under sail behind the lines to resistance forces.

He won a Silver Star, then came back to Hollywood and made 51 films through 1979.

Hayden's first major acting role came as Dix Handley in Huston's 1950 film noir classic, "The Asphalt Jungle." The film was a taut tale of crime, fabled by its own greed and was Marilyn Monroe's first major movie.

In 1963 he starred as Gen. Jack D. Ripper in Stanley Kubrick's "Dr. Strangelove," singlehandedly starting World War III in order to purify the human race. In 1971, he played a corrupt police captain in "The Godfather."

Hayden, an alcoholic who finally quit drinking in 1982, saying "I realize I can't drink any liquor."

"I hate to see what America has become," he said after the Tahiti trip. "The philosophy now is 'Gimme, gimme, gimme.' It's not only in Hollywood... Hollywood is only an extension of the prevailing philosophy." "I felt that in order to stand on my own two feet and be a proper man I had to do work other than what I was doing," he told the court during after his trip. "I was stunned by the decision (barring travel). I felt a direct and grinding conflict between my respect for the law and the best interests of my children."

Khadafy answers 3rd-graders but they say he's a 'dodo bird'

DES PLAINES, Ill. (AP) — Libyan Col. Moammar Khadafy was the only world leader to reply to letters from a third-grade class concerned with terrorism, but the pupils think he's a "dodo bird" whose response was "dumb."

Pupils in teacher Donna Hennessey's class at the South School in this northwestern Chicago suburb wanted to telephone Khadafy after the U.S. air raid on Libya last month.

Instead, they wrote a dozen letters to Khadafy, President Reagan and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

In their letters to Khadafy, most of the pupils expressed the same views as did Katie Slanko, 8.

"The world needs peace. We want to be your friend, but we can't if you are going to bomb us," she wrote.

Ms. Hennessey said she never expected responses, but last Friday and Monday envelopes addressed to her and 12 pupils arrived at the school from Libya.

Inside were messages full of bluster, anti-Americanism and errors in spelling, grammar and capitalization.

The messages began "Dear Friend" and thanked the writer for the "kind letters" in which you condemned the American barbarian aggression against our country and our people. We appreciate your deep feelings toward us."

The stationery bore slogans, including "Wage-workers are a type of slave."

Dondi to vanish from comic page

NEW YORK (AP) — Dondi, the little World War II refugee whose exploits have been a comic-page staple for 31 years, is about to join L'il Abner, Pogo and Krazy Kat in that Great Cartoon Panel in the Sky. Irwin Hasen, co-creator of the strip, said "Dondi" would make its last appearance June 8. Hasen said he made the heart-wrenching decision "because the number of newspapers taking the strip had dwindled to 35."

At its height, in the early 1960s, more than 100 newspapers — including most of the nation's largest — carried "Dondi."

Cleanup at plant hindered

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet newspaper said Friday that parts of the Chernobyl nuclear plant are so radioactive that cleanup crews can work only minutes at a time, and indicated some of the 52,000 evacuees from the area may never return.

The weekly Nedelya quoted Ivan Plyushch, head of the Kiev regional government, as saying: "It has become clear that evacuees will not be returning home as soon as they would like. Evidently, we will gradually be settling them in other places."

Plyushch's phrasing indicated the resettlement could be permanent. The newspaper, a weekly supplement to the government daily Izvestia, gave no hint of how many evacuees from an 18-mile radius of the Ukrainian nuclear power plant may never return home.

Soviet media said earlier this week that 10,000 new homes were being built for evacuees, along with barns for the livestock they took with them.

Plyushch said more homes would be built and dwellings that became vacant would be turned over to people from the Chernobyl area. Nedelya's report that men equipped with respirators and protective clothing could work in some parts of the plant for only a few minutes at a stretch suggests that radiation levels in the plant settlement of Pripyat also remain dangerously high.

Extremists' acts become probe target

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police may have allowed white extremists to storm a meeting of the governing party, where they created such turmoil that tear gas was used to clear the hall, a Cabinet minister said Friday. The government ordered an investigation.

Meanwhile, six more bodies were found at the Crossroads black squatter camp near Cape Town, raising the death toll from a week of factional fighting there to 32.

Hundreds of members of the far-right Afrikaner Weerstandsbeweging (Afrikaner Resistance Movement) invaded the National Party rally Thursday, engaged in fist fights with party faithful and prevented Foreign Minister Roelof F. Botha from speaking.

The extremists, who oppose the governing parties to modify the apartheid race laws, refused to leave and the meeting was called off. Police fired tear gas, causing a stampede from the hall at Pietersburg in the far north of Transvaal province.

Manpower Minister Pietle du Plessis said Friday that police in Pietersburg were "not capable, or did not want, to maintain law and order."

Italy draws up warrants

ROME (AP) — Italy has prepared 20 international arrest warrants for Syrians wanted for complicity in the bloody Dec. 27 Rome airport massacre, Italy's largest newspaper reported today.

Corriere della Sera said that prosecutor Domenico Sica, a leading anti-terrorist judge heading Italy's investigation into the attack, drew up the warrants after long hours of questioning Mohammed Sarham, alleged to be the lone surviving terrorist from the airport assault.

Sica had told The Associated Press in an earlier interview that Sarham's confessions revealed that the terrorist commando left Damascus, Syria for Europe to stage the attack and likely had Syrian support.

No one answered Sica's office telephone early Saturday morning and an official at the office of Premier Bettino Craxi said no one was available for comment.

OPEC mini-meet discusses market

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabia's Ahmed Zaki Yamani and the oil ministers of Kuwait, Venezuela, Indonesia and Nigeria met here Friday to take stock of efforts to enlist cooperation of non-OPEC producers in helping stabilize the world oil market.

The five-member committee was set up for the purpose by the full-dress ministerial conference of the 13-nation cartel last April in Geneva.

The ministers were to prepare a report for the next OPEC conference, scheduled for June 25 in Brno, Yugoslavia.

Daniel's lead shrinks

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Beth Daniel's lead in the $250,000 LPGA Colonial Classic shrank from three shots to one on Friday as Cindy Hill fired a smooth 7-under-par 65 to move into second place after two rounds.

Petty suffers concussion

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — Stock car driver Richard Petty suffered a concussion Friday after crashing into a wall at Charlotte Motor Speedway during a practice run, forcing him to withdraw his car from Sunday's Coca-Cola 600 NASCAR race, track officials said.

Nicklaus takes share of lead

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Jack Nicklaus rapped in a 15-foot birdie putt on the final hole and advanced to a tie for the lead Friday in the second round of his own tournament, the Memorial.

ISU assistant leaving

POCATELLO — Doug Sams, assistant football coach in charge of the offensive line with Idaho State University's football team for the last two years, has been named offensive line coach of the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League.

Riley: There'll be some changes made

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — For the first time in five years, the Los Angeles Lakers didn't reach the NBA finals. One reason for that, according to coach Pat Riley was that the team lacked a "championship-toughness... championship mentality."

Pro basketball

"We will have to re-evaluate talent and energy and enthusiasm and something will have to be injected into this team," Riley said. "And that probably will be by adding some new faces."

The Rockets eliminated the Lakers Wednesday night, winning 114-112 on Ralph Sampson's off-balance, 10-foot desperation shot at the final buzzer.

Karl replaces Bach

NBA Golden State Warriors sold to one-time proprietor of Bucks

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — George Karl was named head coach of the Golden State Warriors Friday by new owners Jim Fitzgerald and Dan Finnane.

Karl, 35, fired by the Cleveland Cavaliers in March after less than two seasons as their head coach, replaced John Bach as Fitzgerald and Finnane began sweeping house after taking over from longtime Warriors owner Franklin Miell.

Fitzgerald said that he and Finnane chose Karl because they were looking for someone young, with basketball know-how and the ability to relate to young players.

Must play back $1 million

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — An NCAA committee placed Memphis State University on two-year probation on Friday and asked the school to return almost $1 million received from postseason basketball tournaments in 1985 and 1986.

College basketball

The sanctions, but Carpenter issued a prepared statement saying he was disappointed in the severity of the sanctions.

(Kareem Abdul-Jabbar)... those guys know so well what they need to do. You're only as good as your support.

"Why is it so difficult for an NBA team to repeat as champion? "I don't know," Riley said. "It's all hypothetical. But there is something about being the hunted and the one that's doing the hunting."

"We had that last year. From the beginning of the season to the end. It was based on a prior experience (the Lakers had lost to the Celtics in the NBA finals the previous spring). All of our players were highly motivated. And they were easy to motivate, and they would listen."

Collins gets nod as new Bulls' coach

CHICAGO (AP) — Doug Collins on Friday became the Chicago Bulls' ninth head coach in the last 10 years, and he has no doubts of job security or doubts that he can turn the troubled NBA franchise around.

He also had no experience as a head coach, and at 34, became the league's youngest. Collins succeeds Stan Albin, who was fired last week despite keeping the injury-plagued club in contention long enough for Michael Jordan to return and spark a late-season surge that carried the Bulls into the playoffs.

"My job security is that I'm confident and capable of doing the job," said Collins. "One thing that I never do is put myself in a position to fail."

NCAA hits Memphis with 2 years' probation

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — An NCAA committee placed Memphis State University on two-year probation on Friday and asked the school to return almost $1 million received from postseason basketball tournaments in 1985 and 1986.

College basketball

about 60 athletes received a total of $58,000 in excess aid between 1981 and 1984.

The NCAA said the university should have declared those athletes ineligible for further competition until the money was repaid.

Because some of those athletes participated in postseason tournaments, the committee recommended that MSU forfeit 90 percent of the money the university received from the 1985 and 1986 tournaments, or about $1 million.

The committee also cited the university because a basketball player, William Bedford, borrowed luxury cars owned by Tigers athletic boosters.

The committee report also noted several other violations, including the offering of illegal inducements to a prospective football recruit. The NCAA said the inducements were not made by a university employee.

The university also lost five football scholarships during the 1987-88 season under the sanctions.

Collins must admit that we are disappointed at the severity of the proposed penalties," Carpenter said in the statement. "Neither we nor the NCAA investigators discovered any substantial recruiting violations, nor evidence of unethical conduct or activity by anyone involved with our athletic program."

Under NCAA bylaws, the university has 15 days to either appeal the committee decision to the organization's council or to accept the proposed penalties.

Collins' attorney would comment publicly, one official said an appeal is not likely.
