Big Wood spills into low-lying lands

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Big Wood River in Blaine County overflowed its banks early Friday, causing isolated problems.

More flooding is predicted through the weekend, the National Weather Service says.

The river peaked at 6.8 feet in Hailey early Friday morning, causing some inundation of the flood plain and threatening at least one home with high water.

The Blaine County Board of Commissioners Friday passed a resolution declaring the county is in a state of emergency, a move that allows the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to take necessary action to relieve threatened areas.

The proclamation will not go into effect unless the problem becomes greater during the weekend and if there is "imminent danger" to public and private structures.

The Weather Service says hot weather will continue to melt the above-normal snow pack in the high mountains surrounding the Big Wood River and cause more flooding today and Sunday.

Hydrologist Scott Kiser said the river is expected to reach 6.7 feet Saturday morning and possibly 7 feet the next. It will, however, fluctuate during the day, because cooler nights will slow the rate of melting.

Sheriff Dennis Haynes, the county's Civil Defense coordinator, toured the river Friday with a representative from the Idaho Bureau of Disaster Services to determine the extent of the threat.

Haynes advised the Board of Commissioners to make the declaration to allow emergency procedures along the river.

High water eroded one house on Broadford Road, south of Hailey, and Hailey work crews worked to save the city's sewage plant from flooding, Haynes said. Elsewhere, debris in the river plucked several vehicles to fragments, he said. The sheriff said the Corps of Engineers is on standby until the commissioners make the proclamation, which would help alleviate these problems without expense to the county.

Haynes' advice met with some resistance from one commissioner, however. "I don't think it's a disaster," said Commissioner Alan Reynolds. "It's a normal runoff."

Bus plunges into river, 18 aboard die

By JOHN ROLL
The Associated Press

LLKER, Calif. — A tour bus carrying residents of a retirement home careened at high speed off a twisting mountain road and plunged into an icy, swift-running river Friday, killing 18 people and injuring 24.

The death toll made it the worst U.S. bus crash in nearly six years.

There was confusion over the number of people aboard the bus, and divers searched the West Fork of the Walker River for more victims.

The bus, bringing passengers back to Santa Monica, Calif., after four-day outing to Reno, was 90 miles southeast of Reno on U.S. 395 when it bounced off a fence and plunged down a 15-foot embankment into the Walker River.

It flipped over and then lodged upright on rocks with its rear ripped apart in a few feet of racing water, the California Highway Patrol said. The river is near flood stage and seven feet deep in some spots.

Mono County Sheriff's Department investigator John Daniels said the accident apparently was caused by excessive speed and no other vehicles were involved. The condition of the driver was not immediately determined.

The CHP initially said that 49 were aboard, but Bob Grunbaum, a spokesman for Starline Tours of San Francisco, said the bus was carrying 44 people, and a spokesman at the Bally Grand Hotel in Reno, Nev., where the tour stopped, said there were 42 aboard.

There were bodies all over the place," said Alex McEwan, owner of the nearby Mountain Gate Lodge, who helped remove the victims. "I believe quite a few got washed out through the back when the windows popped out. A couple of the people we carried out died at the side of the road."

One of the passengers, Valerie Webb, said she was hurled into the air when the bus crashed, and saw her husband, Buster, tossed out a window as people fell on top of her.

"He went out the window and I thought he was floating down the river," she said. "It was horrible not knowing where he was." Webb later turned up among the survivors.

Another passenger, Bob Roesser, said he had been unable to locate his wife.

"I tried to do the best I could," he said. "I don't know where she is."

Fork of the river, between Hailey and Ketchum, House said he was losing some land and a fence. That is a disaster, he said. "That's not a disaster," Reynolds disagreed. A resident along the East

Poisoned pill scheme lands clerk in jail

By LINDA DEUTSCH
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A fired clerk at a stock brokerage was arrested on charges of putting rat poison in over-the-counter capsules in a failed scheme to make money on the stock market, the FBI said Friday.

Edward Arlen Marks, 24, of suburban Temple City, was ordered held without bail at his arraignment in federal court in Los Angeles on the count of tampering with consumer products. The charge carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $50,000 fine.

U.S. Magistrate James McMahon ordered Marks transferred to Florida, where most of the tainted capsules were discovered.

It was the first drug-tampering arrest in a series of cases that resulted in at least nine deaths since 1982, although others have been arrested for making extortion demands or threatening to poison drugs.

No one was injured by the rat poison, found March 19-20 in Orlando, Fla., and Houston in nine capsules of cold and allergy medicines and diet aids made by SmithKline Beckman Corp.

The poisoning prompted an $8 million recall of Contac, Teldrin and Dielac capsules by the Philadelphia-based company.

A man identifying himself as "Gary" had called new organizations and stores to say he had poisoned capsules in Orlando, Chicago and St. Louis.

"He believed that hysteria would result," said Richard Bretzing, the special agent in charge of the FBI's Los Angeles office.

According to the FBI, Marks, who once trained at Merrill Lynch, had hoped to profit by depressing the price of SmithKline stock.

He apparently made no money because the stock price did not fall substantially despite the recall, Bretzing said.

Marks worked as an office clerk in San Marino for 3 1/2 weeks beginning in mid-October 1985, said Merrill Lynch spokeswoman Kay Ramsden.

He was fired, she said, declining to elaborate except to say discrepancies had turned up in a check of his

Summit chances slimmer

By SUSAN J. SMITH
The Associated Press

BONN, West Germany — A Soviet news agency chief said Friday that prospects for a second superpower summit have dimmed because of Washington's "restrictive attitude" on nuclear arms control.

Valentin Falin, director of the government news agency Novosti, complained about President Reagan's tentative plans to scrap compliance with the SALT II treaty. The Soviet official said he was skeptical a summit can be held this year.

"If the United States continues its restrictive attitude to disarmament, I am not sure the summit will take place," Falin told reporters at a news conference here.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Reagan met in Geneva last November and agreed to hold a summit in the United States this year. The Soviets have not agreed to set a date.

On Tuesday, Reagan announced he decided to dismantle two Poseidon nuclear submarines and stay in compliance with limits set by the 1979 Strategic Arms Limitation Talks treaty, SALT II, which was never ratified by the Senate.

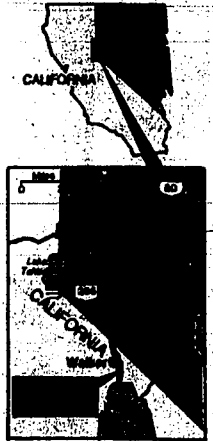

The president said the United States intended to exceed the pact's limits later this year unless the Soviets reversed arms programs that he claimed violate SALT II, an accusation the Kremlin has rejected.

Referring to Reagan's decision, Falin said: "I don't know what more we can offer the U.S.A. to continue to abide with the agreement, unless of course we declare ourselves the 51st state of the United States."

Falin is in West Germany as a guest at a Physicians for the Prevention of Nuclear War meeting in Cologne, about 18 miles from Bonn. The group won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1985.

In a written message to the meeting released Friday, Reagan said the Soviet Union failed to comply with major arms control agreements and refused to respond positively to U.S. arms reduction proposals.

Reagan's message said weapons reductions were his highest priority and that he has sought to accelerate arms control negotiations since meeting Gorbachev.

Letter proves faint link between couple, Posse Comitatus

COKEVILLE, Wyo. (AP) — Police say a letter found in the Tucson, Ariz., trailer of David and Doris Young, the couple who held Cokeville Elementary School's hostage two weeks ago, is from a possible member of the extremist group Posse Comitatus.

But authorities say the discovery does not come close to establishing a link between David Young and the anti-Semitic group, which also advocates use of violence to protest taxes.

"I think David Young was working strictly on his own," Earl Carroll, investigator for the Lincoln County Sheriff's Department, told the Ariz. Daily Star.

He said investigators here are "better than halfway through" a pile of hundreds of letters and thousands of pages written by the Youngs, and it probably will be three more weeks before the task is completed.

Some of the letters were brought by the Youngs to Cokeville, Idaho, where they were found in a Wayan, Idaho, trailer owned by Young.

The letter found in the Youngs' Tucson trailer was written by an Idaho man who has the same name as the author of the letter is the same guy. It's a fairly common name — not like John Doe — but in any city over 10,000, you'd probably find that name in the phone book.

"To you that's not a disaster; to me that's a disaster," House replied.

There was some confusion over who should sign the emergency proclamation: the Board of Commissioners or the trustees of the Big Wood River Flood Control District.

Because of several turnovers with the trustees, Corwin said, he wasn't sure who was in charge of the district and if they could be reached to sign for the responsibility.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Heavy thunderstorms triggered flash floods and mudslides along two tributaries of the Allegheny River on Friday evening, and at least four people were killed as high waters inundated homes and businesses and cut off rescuers.

Marines stationed at the Picket Meadow Marine Corps Mountain Warfare Training Center a few miles away, were called to the scene about a half-hour after the accident.

FBI affidavit alleged that a fingerprint taken from a tampered product in Orlando matched Marks' fingerprints.

Idle acreage maximum rises

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department announced Friday it will require farmers participating in the 1987 wheat price-support program to idle 27 1/2 percent of their crop acreage in order to be eligible for benefits.

Writers inundated homes and businesses and cut off rescuers.

The rush-hour flooding from Pine Creek and Little Pine Creek struck Pittsburgh's northern suburbs and caused fires, power outages and traffic jams in northern Allegheny County.

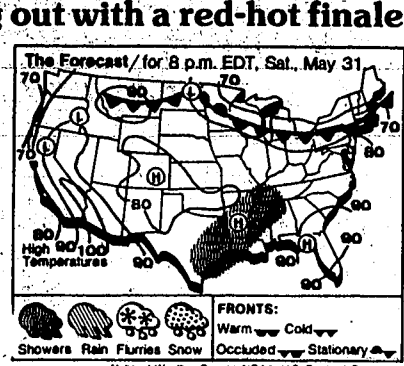

Officials could not immediately say what the speed limit was at the point where the bus left the road, but said the limit generally drops from 55 mph to 35 mph in twisting sections.

A $300,000 reward was offered in the case by the Proprietary Association.

Right-to-work battle gathers speed

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho referendum on a new right-to-work law still is five months away, but already the battle is heating up.

Union members from Lewiston and Caldwell on Friday exchanged criticism over campaign financing reports. And they wound up both filing complaints with the secretary of state's office.

Corey Lane, Caldwell, a Teamsters Union member, filed a complaint that Teamsters officials from Canyon and Ada counties haven't filed campaign contribution and spending reports as required by state law.

Mark Arneson, a Potlatch Corp. sawmill worker from Lewiston, filed a similar complaint against Lane, who heads a small group of members of his union supporting right-to-work.

Later in the day, Barbara Babic, spokesman for the state AFL-CIO organization, said a check of the records indicated that the Canyon County Teamsters organization listed in one of Lane's complaints was not a part of the secretary of state's office as part of the Committee on Political Action.

She said contrary to Lane's allegations in the complaint, that local is not collecting dues or special assessments for the right-to-work battle "and never has."

State labor leaders called a news conference Friday afternoon to announce Arneson's charges, but Lane unexpectedly showed up and joined in.

Lane argued that his group, Union Members for Right To Work, does not qualify as a political action committee and has not raised at least $500.

"I'm not an attorney," said both union members, but Arneson whipped out a copy of Idaho election laws, and read Lane a section that appears to require all political action committees to register, even if they haven't spent $500.

"If I'm required to file and report, then I will file and report," said Lane. He said he's spent about $300 of his own money, but denied that his group should be defined as a political action organization.

Lane said he particularly objected to the fact that his union local is taking $2 per month from his paychecks to finance the battle against right-to-work. He said he's seen surveys showing at least one-third of Idaho's union members favor right-to-work.

"Absolutely not," said Arneson, who said most union members favor repealing right-to-work.

"Unions are democratic organizations. Everything we do, including dues, is voted upon by the members," he said.

Idaho in 1985 became the 31st state to enact a right-to-work law, banning compulsory union membership or payment of dues as a condition of employment.

Court decision have upheld the law. But union members gathered more than 60,000 signatures on petitions to force a referendum of the new law at the November general election.

Senator wants road funds used responsibly

COEUR D'ALENE — Sen. Steve Symms said it would be a tough job to sell his bill, but that he would work hard to "make a case" for it among local and national officials.

He held hearings on the bill May 20.

The bill authorizes highway spending for the next four years and provides for using surplus money in trust for highway construction and maintenance. Symms is chairman of the Senate Transportation Subcommittee and a member of the Public Works Committee and Budget Committee.

He stressed a revival of local control in highway funding, construction and repair. "We must have less federal interferences in the highway program," he said, "and a fair shake in the distribution of secondary highway funds from states."

Justices uphold termination of rights

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Court of Appeals on Friday upheld a district judge's decision to terminate the parental rights of a woman accused of neglecting her three children.

The court unanimously upheld lower court decisions terminating the parental rights of Wanda Chacon Bauer to her three children and appointing an aunt and her husband as guardians until a petition for adoption is settled.

Both a magistrate and a district judge ruled that the children had been neglected and that the court would serve their best interests as well as that of the mother.

Mrs. Bauer disputed the finding, and the Court of Appeals said it didn't like the finding that the mother would benefit by termination of her parental rights.

But the court ruled it did not have to consider whether the mother would be better off by the action, and upheld the decision to take the three children from her.

The legal action was filed by Frederick and Lydia Hofmeister of Pocatello. Lydia Chacon Hofmeister is the sister of the children's father, Thane Chacon, who consented to the

In other decisions released Friday, the Court of Appeals:

- Overturned a 7th District Court ruling in a drug case, and ordered further hearings on whether there was probable cause to issue a search warrant after police received anonymous telephone tips that marijuana plants appeared to be growing at a Bonneville County home. Keith Prestwich was charged with manufacturing a controlled substance after police said they found more than 400 marijuana plants.

- Upheld the main verdict, but denied attorney fees, in a lawsuit filed by the owners of cattle who leased the animals to a dairy in a Jerome County case. Bob Herbst, Sue Herbst, Allan McGinnis, Elizabeth McGinnis, Lydia A. Liggett and Food Formulations International, Inc., filed the lawsuit against Bothof Dairies, Inc.
- In a Nez Perce County case, ruled that a district judge retained jurisdiction in a lawsuit, even though formal judgment wasn't filed until 23 months after a jury returned its verdict.

Explosion damages Pocatello plant

POCATELLO (AP) — An explosion Friday at FMC Corp.'s elemental phosphorus plant west of here set the top of one of the company's four large electric furnaces on fire, but no one was injured.

FMC emergency response crews brought the fire under control within 45 minutes, said Dick Scott, FMC human resource manager.

The number one furnace "went on major pressure," forcing feed material back through chutes, Scott said.

"That caused a fire on top of the furnace."

He said it was too early to determine extent of damage, if any, but one observer said there could be a lot of damage to the furnace area.

The worker said plant personnel were kept away from the fire zone and there was confusion among many employees who didn't know exactly what happened.

"Our own major emergency response group responded very quickly and effectively. We don't appear to have even minor injuries," Scott said, estimating the fire broke out at about 11:15 a.m.

The Chubbuck Volunteer Fire Department and Power County Search and Rescue squad also responded, but weren't needed, Scott said.

Audit sought in petty theft

CALDWELL (AP) — Canyon County commissioners are asking for an independent audit to investigate a $6.80 embezzlement in the sheriff's department.

The theft occurred two months ago when a clerk who had access to a petty cash fund admitted stealing $6.80, Canyon County Sheriff Bill Anderson said. The clerk resigned and later paid back the money, he said.

The name of the clerk was not released because the incident is a personnel matter, Anderson said.

Commissioners asked for the independent audit to determine the nature and extent of embezzlement, and to evaluate accounting procedures in the sheriff's office according to a statement released Tuesday.

Results of the audit will be used to determine whether accounting procedures should be changed to reduce or eliminate embezzlement.

Nofziger to speak at Gem GOP meet

POCATELLO (AP) — Lyn Nofziger, a longtime political associate of President Ronald Reagan, will be keynote speaker June 20 at the state Republican Party convention here.

Reagan carried Idaho with 67 percent of the vote in 1980 and 73 percent in 1984, second only to Utah in both elections.

Centers square off over treatment decision

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A fight is shaping up between Port of Hope and the Walker Center over a state decision that, for the first time, divides state monies between them for an in-patient drug and alcohol treatment program.

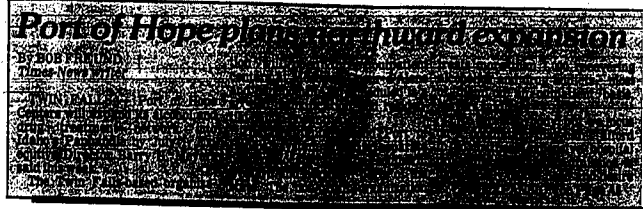

Both the drug and alcohol treatment centers are appealing the decision, seeking all or nothing from the state Department of Health and Welfare.

The challenge revolves around a committee recommendation in May that reviewed bids from both programs and said Port of Hope should no longer receive state monies, in part because the treatment program had a lower success rate in treating alcoholics than the state average.

The report was done by the Alcohol and Intoxication Treatment Act Committee, a group composed of area social workers, a judge, and vocational rehabilitation workers.

In addition, the committee recommended that 100 percent of the $137,845 in state money be given to the Walker Center, a private, nonprofit treatment program based in Gooding. Walker Center has bid for the state contract in the past, but has never been awarded state monies.

Yet despite that report by the six-member committee, the bureau chief of preventive medicine at the state Department of Health and Welfare, Dr. Fritz Dixon, ruled Port of Hope should receive 75 percent of the $137,845, and Walker Center 25 percent.

Walker Center Director Gail Ater said his center is appealing the state decision because "We believe the review process was fair, but someone was better at politicking."

Port of Hope Director Barry Meyers said his center was appealing the state's decision because the review process was "ludicrous." State H&W Department officials in Boise said they could not comment on the case, as it is under appeal.

Roberta Crockett, substance abuse program specialist with the H&W in Pocatello, said the group's report was an "exhaustive and detailed evaluation" by volunteers with expertise.

She said the committee reviews all bids for state contracts for drug and alcohol treatment programs.

Treatment programs are reviewed on the basis of seven criteria, including staff qualifications, facilities, accessibility of the program to residents and a survey of clients on their rate of success in staying off drugs.

Crockett said the committee found that clients who went through Port of Hope's 28-day resident treatment program had only a 42-percent success rate of staying drug- or alcohol-free, while the state average was 49 percent.

In Port of Hope's combination program, where clients are treated on a part residential, part out-patient basis, the success rate was 62 percent, even though the state average was 70 percent.

Crockett said she had not seen the reasons why the AITA Committee's recommendations were ignored in Boise. Meyers said he questioned the entire outcome data system.

"They sampled 19 people, and we have a caseload of 600," Meyers said.

But Ater said both centers were reviewed on the same criteria, and the AITA Committee report found "We could provide a better treatment program."

"It's our belief, and the AITA Committee's belief, that we can do a better job," said Ater, who just began as director, May 15. "We want an opportunity to compete."

'Hopper war' to be renewed near Bruneau

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The federal government will open its campaign against invading grasshoppers next week by spraying insecticide over 2,600 acres of range and park land near Bruneau.

The U.S. Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service has awarded its first contract of the year for protecting crops from the insects, which migrate from open rangeland.

Davison's Air Service East, of Caldwell, has been hired to treat rangeland owned by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management and part of the chemical malathion. Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, announced Friday.

Roger Pollard, APHIS officer-in-charge for Idaho, said grasshoppers were concentrated at 15 to 25 per square yard in the park, two to three times the level considered to cause economic damage in crops.

The treatment is being scheduled next week. APHIS must wait until state officials have notified park visitors about the spraying, Pollard said.

State money will pay the costs of treating the 640 acres of parkland being included, and the federal government will pay the tab for the BLM range. Symms said costs would range from $23.40-$35.90 a gallon of pesticide.

The Bruneau-area spraying is the first in Idaho this year. However, unlike last year, APHIS is negotiating spraying contracts with private companies in advance of the main grasshopper infestations. Among the counties covered now are Twin Falls, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka, Cassia and Power counties, Pollard said. The contracts allow the agency to respond to infestations within 72 hours, if necessary, he said.

Symms, who announced the Bruneau-area contract, said he is pleased at the quick action of APHIS. "This first contract is just in time," Symms said. "This time the money is there and those responsible are acting."

BOISE — Idaho farmers will begin protecting 94,808 acres of erosion-prone cropland during the next two years as a result of the second round of the federal conservation reserve program, U.S. Department of Agriculture officials said Friday.

The acreage was more than 10 times the amount idled statewide in the first bidding of the program, conducted earlier this spring, according to USDA figures.

The national program also showed a large gain in acreage enrolled, as federal officials accepted higher bids in some states and farmers dropped prices at which they would rent the land to the government.

Nationwide, the USDA will pay $132.2 million in annual rents to take a little more than 3 million acres of erosion-prone land out of production. The land is coming from 22,863 farms. The average bid accepted came to $44.23 an acre, federal officials announced.

Some of the land will be either immediately by farmers who would like to plant it, as well as initial financial help have not planted it or are willing to go out planting grasses, trees or other plow down crops. The rest will go out conserving cover on the acreage. Under the program, farmers sub-

Reserve Program. In the first round, only 838,356 acres nationwide were withdrawn at a cost of $41.82 an acre, leaving the USDA far below the official target for the year. In the 1985 Farm Bill, the U.S. Congress set a goal of withdrawing 5 million acres in 1986 and 45 million acres by 1990.

In announcing the second round results, Daniel Amstutz, undersecretary of agriculture for commodity programs, said the administration is "pleased with the excellent response from farmers" the second time around. "We are well on our way to our goal of taking 40 million to 45 million acres of highly erodible land out of production within the next five years," he said.

Norman Berg, an official of the conservation group the American Farmland Trust, called the new results encouraging.

"This will give us a good base to build on for the future," he said. "We're not running."

Farmers are to receive annual rental payments on the land they immediately by farmers who would like to plant it, as well as initial financial help have not planted it or are willing to go out conserving cover on the acreage. Under the program, farmers sub-

TWIN FALLS — Western Days hits full gallop today with a parade, chili cook-off, dances and the final night of rodeo action.

This year's parade will be bigger than ever, promise organizers of the already popular event. In addition to the many horses and floats of past years, today's parade will include nine bands and four drill teams. Parade organizers are also trying to draw more children into the event with prizes given in bicycle and costume contests.

John Roper, named Greater Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce person of the year, will be parade grand marshal.

Pete Creed, Western Days Pioneer of the Year, will serve as co-marshal. Creed has lived in Twin Falls for 70 years, raising money to fight polio, starting the canning kitchen and working on the Idaho Youth Ranch.

Marching bands and drill teams will begin performing in the Ernst's parking lot at 10 a.m., then join the parade as it passes.

Other parade participants will leave the College of Southern Idaho's arena parking lot at 11:30 a.m.

The parade will travel south along Frontier Road to Greale Avenue, then turn south at Blue Lakes Boulevard North, then southwest on Shoshone Street. At the corner of Shoshone and 2nd Avenue, the route will turn east for two blocks, turn onto 3rd

County appoints advocate to panel

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Bowing to public interest, the Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners has appointed an advocate for low-income and elderly persons to a committee to study the probable transfer of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Added to the list of 16 civic-minded residents already named to the panel was Pam Shropshire, board chairman of Idaho Neighbors Network, a citizens action group that represents the elderly, lower-income and handicapped persons.

Shropshire said her office received numerous calls from area residents who were afraid if the hospital is transferred, "they will be turned away."

"People are afraid of what's going to happen to them, and I'm hoping (this committee) will clear it up," Shropshire said. "There are so many people out there who have no insurance, and we need to safeguard their medical future."

Commissioners insist indigent cases will not be turned away, because state laws prohibit it. But some residents have questioned whether state laws would apply if it is not county-controlled.

Shropshire said she was "totally surprised to be asked," since she was not among some of the advocacy groups expressing interest in the committee.

Commissioner Ann Cover said Shropshire would more than likely be the last person added to the study group.

"I think it's it," she said. "We've tried to — er all the bases."

Advocacy from Family Health Services, South Central Community Action Agency and the Office on Aging voiced concern last week that they were not originally included on the study committee.

The study group is scheduled to begin meeting in June to consider what impact the transfer of the county-owned hospital to a nonprofit corporation will have on the community.

Of the 16 members originally appointed, a third are directly connected to MVRMC. Until Shropshire's appointment this week, the rest of the members were either bankers, lawyers or prominent area residents.

Commissioner Judy Felton said commissioners want to make a decision by the first of August on whether to proceed with the transfer or not. She also said public hearings will be held to allow for public input, but dates have not been set as yet.

Tough, new right-to-know rules put businesses on notice

The Associated Press and The Times-News

WASHINGTON — Beginning this week, some 300,000 businesses across the nation can be fined by the government if they haven't estimated 13 million employees about hazardous materials where they work.

At an initial cost of more than $600 million, new regulations by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration that took effect last Sunday provide a "right-to-know" more than half the estimated 25 million workers who face potential exposure to hazardous chemicals in their jobs.

"This is the most significant action ever taken by OSHA," said Patrick Tyson, who resigned two weeks ago as acting head of the 15-year-old agency. "It requires that people who work with hazardous substances are aware of the dangers and are trained to effectively protect themselves."

Formerly known as the hazard communications standard, the regulations were recommended more than a decade ago by a federal advisory committee to combat the annual 100,000 deaths and 340,000 disabling illnesses and injuries blamed on occupational diseases.

In Idaho, the regulations will affect a wide variety of businesses, ranging from food processors to woodworking shops, said Ryan Kuemichel, area director with OSHA in Boise. "About the only businesses which will be exempt from the rules are banks and retail stores," he added.

Kuemichel said the agency gets many complaints from employees with health problems they believe are related to chemicals in their workplace. The problem, he explained, was that the employees "didn't know what was being used."

The new right-to-know regulations, Kuemichel said, will give employees a more direct understanding of the cause-and-effect relationship between the chemicals they are exposed to and possible health effects.

"In the past, if employees wanted to know what they were being exposed to on the job, there was no obligation by an employer to tell them," said Christopher Graybill, an OSHA spokesman in Washington. "That's the kind of situation this regulation is ultimately will be forced to find ways to make their products without using hazardous materials."

Robert Moran, former chairman of the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission and now a private attorney specializing in workplace safety and health issues, predicts the impact will be much Employers, he said, can expect a flood of lawsuits, such as when a chemical that was not judged as hazardous "is later thought to be the malfactor in some media story or genuine industrial accident."

"It's going to change the way everybody is doing business," Moran said. "Industry is ultimately will be forced to find ways to make their products without using hazardous materials."

The regulations require a label on every container on the premises that includes any amount of some 2,500 hazardous substances. OSHA estimates there are 575,000 such chemical products in the workplace, more being introduced every day.

In addition, employers must have material safety data (MSD) sheets or technical bulletins for each product detailing its composition, health and safety hazards and precautions for safe handling and use. The of additional expenses on the federal agency owning the land.

 Although just starting in Idaho, the agency moved into Arizona and New Mexico earlier this month. In four days, planes hired by APHIS treated 154,960 acres in Grand County, Ariz., and, by May 20, completed another 6,900 acres in New Mexico.
 In 1985 the federal government sprayed close to 6.5 million acres in Idaho and 12 million acres nationwide. APHIS officials expect to cover much less territory in Idaho this year. "Surveys late last season showed about 563,000 acres with high grasshopper populations," Pollard said.
 APHIS also is gearing up its force of grasshopper scouts and other personnel, most of whom are assigned to BLM district offices, where grasshopper reports arrive. Federal and state officials also have arranged a reporting network with the University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service and have linked computers to keep up with grasshopper invasions.

 This year, APHIS is concentrating treatments in buffer zones of federal land near crop areas, instead of blanketing large tracts of land deep into BLM desert or U.S. Forest Service territory, Pollard said.
 Grasshoppers generally hatch in those wild areas and then move into cultivated areas in search of feed. Generally, grasshopper populations have been low this spring. Two bouts of cool, wet weather have killed young grasshoppers almost as they hatch.

 Some "hot spots" of grasshoppers have started to appear in areas of the Magic Valley, extension agents and some farmers say.
 Pollard said APHIS' strategy is to spray when the chemical will be most effective, which may mean waiting until most of the young insects have grown somewhat.
 "What we want is to get all of the hatch on top of the ground... before we do anything," he said.
 There's no returning for a second strike. Environmental rules allow only one spraying on any section of ground, the APHIS officer said.

Expansion

 for help with drug dependency.
 The move north will add 15 employees to the Port of Hope's staff of 65, which includes professionals with advanced degrees and former addicts who act as therapists.
 Meyers announced two personnel changes related to the new facilities. Program Director Joseph West is being transferred to run the new out-patient center in Moscow. Ronald S. Trompke, manager of Port of Hope at Mountain Home for the past two years, will become Magic Valley program director in Twin Falls.

Founded as Magic Valley Alcohol Recovery Center Inc. in 1971 at Twin Falls, the non-profit agency has grown into a large system, mostly in its eight years as executive director, Meyers said.
 Port of Hope now operates with a $2 million annual budget drawn from government funds, insurance payments, client fees and United Way contributions, he said.
 Although recovery figures are hard to figure, Port of Hope claims a 45-percent success rate in keeping addicts off drugs or alcohol for at least one year, said Meyers, himself a former addict.
 The association now runs three residential centers with 42 beds, including an eight-bed program at Twin Falls for adolescents. Other residential centers are at Boise, Nampa and Coeur d'Alene.

 Outpatient units are located at Burley, Mountain Home, Caldwell, Emmett and Payette. To date, Port of Hope has not moved into eastern Idaho because other groups offer good drug dependency programs there, the official said.
 Port of Hope may consider placing treatment clinics at nearby locations in Nevada or Oregon in the future, Meyers said. "We go wherever we can afford to go to reach more and more people who are addicted to alcohol and drugs," he said.

 with bids starting now month. They will accept in rental payments to take their erosion-prone land out of production-for-at-least-a-decade. The department accepts the most attractive bids, limiting eligibility to the 69 million acres it has classified as the most highly erodible cropland in the nation.
 To be eligible, soil has to be eroding at a rate of at least three times as fast as it can be restored through natural processes.
 As expected, most of the Idaho acreage enrolled in the second round is coming from the hill country part of the state, known as Pool 3, said Kent Kirk, conservation specialist at the Boise office of the U.S. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, which fields the program.
 In that area, which lies east and north of the Cassia County border, the government accepted 73,186 acres from 266 farms at an annual rent of $3,027,768. Bids as high as $45 were taken, and the average bid was $41.37. A total of 110,538 acres were offered from 409 farms, Kirk said.
 Pool 2, which covers the Magic Valley and western Idaho south of the Salmon River, the government enrolled 16,591 acres from 147 farms at an annual rent of $666,410. The highest bid accepted was $50, with the average falling at $41.97. A total of 46,175 acres had been offered from 175 farms. In the pool, 19 bids were accepted from Cassia County, 16 from Washington, six from Elmore, five from Owyhee, two from Twin Falls, one from Gooding, one from Jerome, one from Lincoln, and one from Gem counties.

 In the northern Idaho pool, the government took 5,030 acres from 60 farms at an annual rent of $234,902. The highest bid accepted was $50 and the average was $41.76. A total of 16,740 acres had been offered from 154 farms.
 Statewide, the government accepted 94,809 acres from 388 farms at an annual rent of $3,959,080. The highest bid accepted was $50 and the average was $41.76. A total of 168,688 acres had been offered from 568 farms. Oneida County had the most bids accepted with 91 farms enrolled. About 53 percent of the acreage offered was taken, far more than the 4.6 percent acceptance in the first round of the program.
 At that time, the average bid taken was only $33.16 an acre, which ignited protests from Idaho's congressional delegation. The head of the program for the ASCS ultimately visited the state to gather information on handling the second round of the program.

 Kirk said Friday, "I think we were quite pleased that the maximum accepted bid levels this time are comparative with neighboring states, which we felt was not true under the first bids."
 Surrounding states had the following bids and acreages accepted:
 • Utah - 154 bids, 490,837 acres, $1,547,637 rent.
 • Nevada - none.
 • Wyoming - 51 bids, 14,786 acres, $498,609.
 • Montana - 324 bids, 117,834 acres, $1,009,509.
 • Washington - 365 bids, 95,717 acres, $1,633,040.
 • Oregon - 382 bids, 112,850 acres, $5,497,810 acres.
 In the Midwest, bids as high as $90 an acre were accepted for some land, but the ceiling in the Northwest was $65 an acre, in Oregon's Willamette Valley.

 sheets, usually two to four pages in length, must be readily accessible at all times.
 And - in what has proven to be the most expensive part of the package - companies must conduct training programs for all potentially exposed workers.
 OSHA estimates it is costing manufacturers about $48 per employee to provide that training and meet the other requirements. Just keeping up with new products and new workers is expected to add a cost of $160 million annually, or about $11 per employee.
 As part of their routine inspections of manufacturing facilities, OSHA officials will start asking workers whether they have received that training.
 The regulations went into effect six months ago for the chemical industry, but they have been given customers with the safety data sheets, and its 1.4 million employees. From November through April, OSHA found 497 violations at 175 of the 762 chemical plants inspected, including one serious and one willful, with penalties of $1,000 and $10,000 fines respectively.

 Now that the coverage is being expanded to all manufacturing and 10 times as many workers, officials expect the number of violations and fines to increase substantially. For one thing, manufacturing is a broad category in the government's eyes, including everything from newspaper and book publishing to food processing.
 Coverage might be extended even further next year. Under orders from a federal appeals court, the agency is drafting a proposal to require that agriculture, construction, service and office employees be given the same information.
 OSHA officials said several companies in the past few months have asked for more time to comply with the regulations. All of the requests were denied on the ground that the standards were published in November 1983 and employers have had 2 1/2 years to meet them, the officials said.

 Richard Neergaard, manager of environmental services for the American Newspaper Publishers Association, said most of its members have reported few problems, although many had to hire consultants to set up their training programs.
 "It's not a very easily understood topic," he said. "It's a standard that really was developed for the chemical industry and now it's being applied across the board to relatively low-risk workers."
 Bill Amardt, a consultant with the Organization of Resource Counselors that advises primarily large companies on the issue, said most of them for years had been doing even more than what the standards required.
 "Most employers want to do what is right," Amardt said. "This push by OSHA isn't all that bad. I'm sure there are people out there not doing a thing."

Scrubbing: no takers

TWIN FALLS - The canyon walls above Shoshone Falls Park may not be scrubbed clean this summer, despite available federal funds.
 The city of Twin Falls has been awarded enough money from the Job Training Partnership Act to hire a crew of four youths and an adult trainer to spend eight weeks scrubbing and blasting spray-painted graffiti from the canyon walls.
 But the city is having trouble finding takers for the job. To date, no youth has applied, says Parks and Rec Supervisor Chad Browning.
 Recruiting has been difficult because the money came with strings attached, including a stipulation that because the work may be dangerous no one under 18 may be hired, says Community Development Director LaMar Orton. And no one older than 21 is eligible to participate in Job Training Partnership program.

 In addition, the youth must be from disadvantaged families or be living at or below poverty level. The positions pay minimum wage.
 Anyone wishing to apply for the youth positions should contact Job Service of Idaho at 260 4th Ave. North.

Bishop Kelly names Day new president

BOISE (AP) — A Boise native who has been active in the anti-abortion movement has been named president of Bishop Kelly High School.

The Rev. Dennis Day, 35, pastor of Sacred Heart Church in Emmett, will become president of Idaho's only Roman Catholic high school on June 10 as part of an administrative reorganization at the school.

Day has been active in anti-abortion groups on a local and national level, serving as a board member of Right to Life of Idaho, a founding director of National Pro-Life Democrats, and the pro-life coordinator of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Boise, among other positions.

He replaces the Rev. Ralph Drendel, who resigned as principal after three years at the school.

As president, Day will be responsible for the educational and religious direction of the school, financial development and communication with the parishes, clergy and the public, among other duties.

A vice president, who will be appointed sometime this summer, will be responsible for the day-to-day operation of Bishop Kelly, much like a public school principal, Day said.

The Bishop Kelly School Board and Bishop Sylvester Trelohan of the Boise Diocese decided to divide the administrative duties because they were becoming too much of a burden for one person, board President Larry McEntee said.

The highlight of the convention will come on Sunday at 2 p.m., when the public address, "A Worldwide Brotherhood Saved From Calamity," will be delivered by Donald E. Mendenthal. Mendenthal is a representative of the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society in New York, where the worldwide headquarters of Jehovah's Witnesses is located.

Pope warns against evils of Marxism

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Marxism seeks to root religion out of society and the "very heart" of man, Pope John Paul II said Friday in an encyclical that calls atheistic ideologies the path to spiritual ruin for the world.

John Paul wrote of the evils of materialism and disobedience to God, which he said deceive man into believing he can decide for himself what is good and evil.

He also deplored what he described as increasing signs of death in the modern world, including "death-dealing poverty and families," international terrorism, the danger of "nuclear self-destruction," abortion and euthanasia.

The 141-page encyclical, titled "Dominum et Vivificantem" — Latin for The Lord, the Giver of Life — is dedicated to the Holy Spirit, the third of the Holy Trinity, along with the Father and the Son. It is the fifth that John Paul has issued since his papacy began in 1978.

Encyclicals are the most authoritative form of papal letter, informing the church and its members on matters of importance.

They once were the main vehicles used by popes to communicate their teachings, but their importance diminished somewhat as pontiffs began using foreign tours and the mass media to convey their message.

The Vatican said John Paul wrote his latest encyclical in his native Polish, beginning in the second half of last year.

Cardinal Jerome Hamer presented the document at a news conference. When asked whether the pontiff's vigorous denunciation of Marxism meant the church would not engage in dialogue with atheists, he replied: "Dialogue always makes sense. Dialogue is necessary not only to understand but also to persuade."

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said the encyclical is based on John Paul's long-standing personal views.

"It reflects his idea of sin, not only in social-political terms but on a spiritual level, and how Christians should deal with it as the church charts its course for the third millennium," Navarro said.

Hamer described it as a message of hope for the world and the church as Christianity prepares to celebrate the 2,000th anniversary of the birth of Jesus Christ.

The pope said the document is designed to help Christians, through prayer and the intercession of the Holy Spirit, to deal with "the signs and symptoms of death" that he said have become particularly frequent.

It blames the troubles of the world on "the evil of disobedience" to God through "man's claim to become an independent and exclusive source for deciding about good and evil."

"We see this confirmed in the modern age, when the atheistic ideologies seek to root out religion," he said.

John Paul attacked Marxism for opposing religion "as a kind of ideologic illusion to be fought with the most suitable means and methods according to circumstances of time and place, in order to eliminate it from society and from man's very heart."

Citing the Scripture injunction, he warned that the "radical refusal to accept the salvation" constitutes an unforgivable sin. "This is a state of spiritual ruin because blasphemy against the Holy Spirit does not allow one to escape from one's self-imposed imprisonment and open oneself to the divine sources of the purification of consciences and of the remission of sins."

Therefore, he said, Christians "cannot but reject" Marxism as "the clearest expression" of anti-religious materialism. The pope said materialism has placed God "in a state of suspicion" and challenges man to become his adversary.

That is in line with consistent warnings by the pope and the Vatican against Marxist elements in liberation theology, a movement spearheaded by priests and nuns seeking social equality in developing countries.

Church tightens archive-use rules

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon Church on Tuesday announced stricter requirements for use of the history department's library and archives.

Among the changes will be a clearance check of persons using archival materials and sign-in and sign-out procedures to identify library and archives patrons; the church said in a new statement.

Administrators have consulted with an expert from the National Archives and other experts in the field in order to institute standards consistent with the best practices in professionally directed archives."

The changes also include the installation of a computerized circulation and location system expected to be in operation by the end of the summer, the church said.

Soviet doctor: 130 of 299 victims of Chernobyl radiation released

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet doctor said Friday that 130 of the 299 people hospitalized after the Chernobyl nuclear accident have been discharged, and said that women can better combat the effects of severe radiation than men.

Dr. Angelina Guskova, chief radiologist at the Moscow hospital where many victims of the April 26 disaster are treated, did not say in her remarks to the official news agency Tass whether the patients returned to the Ukraine.

Nor did she say whether plans existed for monitoring their condition.

Dr. Robert P. Gale, a U.S. bone marrow specialist who has been treating victims, said Thursday that 25 to 30 patients remain in serious condition, with 14 of them critically ill. He said 23 people have died in the disaster, including two killed instantly when the No. 4 Chernobyl reactor was torn by an explosion. A woman was among those who have died since the accident. Guskova said at least two women were among those still hospitalized with radiation sickness, and added that her experience treating the victims showed that female bodies could combat the effects of heavy radiation doses better than male bodies. She did not elaborate.

Gale said he planned to leave Sunday night for the Chernobyl area and Kiev, the Ukrainian capital of 2.4 million people about 80 miles south of the reactor. He said he hoped to visit radiation victims at Kiev hospitals.

In West Germany, Soviet official Valentin Falin said his country needs "all medical means available to help" the victims.

Falin, director of the Novosti news agency, spoke to reporters in Bonn. He also said the Soviet Union is ready to accept world safety standards for nuclear reactors.

Papandreou blasts U.S. techniques

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Premier Andreas Papandreou said Friday that the United States, which he accused of committing a terrorist act in bombing Libya, wants to police the world against terrorism according to its own definition. The Socialist prime minister, who has close relations with Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi, proposed that an international conference under U.N. auspices define terrorism and devise effective measures against it.

Forest fires burn wildly in Canada

TORONTO, Ontario (AP) — More than 100 fires raged through Canada's forests Friday, and three conservation workers reportedly drowned while trying to escape a blaze in far-northern Quebec province.

The fires, ranging in size from a few acres to tens of thousands and fueled by a heat wave and lack of rain, were destroying hundreds of timber from British Columbia through northern Quebec and forced the evacuation of at least two Indian communities.

In eastern Canada, continued rain has helped keep fires in Newfoundland under control, while seven fires in New Brunswick were virtually out.

The bodies of three forest conservation workers who had been fighting fires in northern Quebec were found after they were reported missing the day before, said the Canadian Press news agency.

Police said the three drowned after throwing themselves into Lake Frotet, about 400 miles north of Quebec City, when fire encircled a camp of about 20 firefighters. The others also jumped into the water but grabbed the foals of an airplane and a helicopter and were carried to safety, police said.

Bonner says West is target of blackmail

LONDON (AP) — Ignoring a warning from Moscow, Yeiena Bonner accused the Soviet Union on Friday of trying to blackmail the West into silence about her husband, exiled dissident Andrei D. Sakharov.

Mrs. Bonner met Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and the two women stood with their arms linked outside the prime minister's office. Mrs. Bonner told reporters she rejected a threat implied in comments made Thursday by Soviet journalist Viktor Louis.

Louis, who often conveys Kremlin information to Western reporters, told reporters in Moscow he doubts Sakharov would be permitted to leave his internal exile in the closed city of Gorky because of Mrs. Bonner's outspoken views.

The statements (by Louis) seem to me to be simply blackmail," Mrs. Bonner said. "It seems to me they wanted to scare Madame Prime Minister (Mrs. Thatcher) by this statement and other Western political leaders into not meeting me."

She said she had seen many of Sakharov's supporters in Britain. "I hope our mutual efforts will be successful and he will be freed," she said.

UN's African talks 'tough'

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Final negotiations on an official document of the General Assembly special session on the critical situation in Africa are "bloody, boisterous and very tough," a diplomat said Friday.

Stephen Lewis, Canada's U.N. ambassador who chairs the committee trying to thrash out a concluding document by today, said progress had been made on the question of aid and debt relief requests.

The Organization of African Unity requested the session to approve at least $80 billion in new aid and debt relief over five years.

But Lewis said problems had arisen over "new and unexpected submissions" to the committee.

Soviet opera singer defects

TOKYO (AP) — A Soviet opera singer who won an international contest in Tokyo earlier this month has defected and is asking for political asylum in Japan, Foreign Ministry officials said Friday. Vyacheslav Mikhailovich Polozov, 36, told Japanese authorities he did not want to return to the Soviet Union, according to an official of the Foreign Ministry's Soviet Affairs Division.

The Japan Broadcasting Corp. reported that Polozov wanted to go to the United States.

What's what ...You can make those fat cells smaller, but you can't make them fewer. So says an authority on weight reduction. It explains the unhappy obvious: Best way to control your weight is never put on too much in the first place.

President Reagan presents medal to son, daughter of late Navy Capt. Joseph Rochefort

Top code-breaker receives late medal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The late Capt. Joseph J. Rochefort was finally honored by his government Friday when he received a posthumous medal from President Reagan for cracking a World War II Japanese code and providing the U.S. Navy with the key to one of its greatest victories at the Battle of Midway.

Reagan presented the medal to Rochefort's family in a brief White House ceremony attended by top U.S. national security officials. The White House refused to permit reporters to cover the event.

Rochefort, who died in 1976, was denied the Distinguished Service Medal twice during his lifetime. But it was granted him last fall by special order of Navy Secretary John Lehman.

Reagan presented the medal to Rochefort's son, retired Army Col. Joseph Rochefort Jr., and his daughter, Janet Rochefort Elerding. They left the White House after the ceremony without speaking to reporters.

Also present during the ceremony were Vice President George Bush, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, CIA Director William Casey, Lehman, and Adm. William Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The citation noted that Rochefort's "unrelenting efforts" resulted in breaking the Japanese code and defeating the Japanese during the Battle of Midway from June 2-4, 1942.

Rochefort, who has been widely acknowledged to be one of the top U.S. code-breakers during World War II, headed a code-breaking station at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, which was known as Station Hypo.

After the devastating Japanese attack on the U.S. fleet at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941, American forces were on the defensive across the Pacific in the early months of 1942.

During the spring of that year, Rochefort's team successfully broke Japanese codes and concluded that a huge enemy war fleet then being assembled in the western Pacific was planning an attack Midway Island, a small U.S. outpost west of Hawaii.

But other Navy intelligence analysts in Washington said the Japanese planned to attack Johnston Atoll or the west coast of the United States.

After a long intraservice battle, Adm. Chester Nimitz, the Pearl Harbor commander, decided to accept Rochefort's view and deployed his badly outnumbered forces near Midway.

The American fleet totally surprised the Japanese and destroyed four enemy aircraft carriers in one of its greatest victories, forcing the Japanese on the defensive for the rest of the war. The citation presented by Reagan on Friday noted that the Battle of Midway "is acknowledged as the turning point of the Pacific War."

After the battle, Nimitz recommended Rochefort for the medal, but it was denied by service officials in Washington who argued that a number of intelligence offices besides Station Hypo had contributed to the victory.

Instead, Rochefort was ordered to San Francisco, where he ended up commanding a floating dry dock.

Nimitz petitioned again in 1958 for a medal for Rochefort, but the Navy again denied it, noting that World War II medal cases were already closed.

When Lehman finally granted the medal late last year, he offered no public reasoning for overturning the earlier decision.

But the decision came shortly before publication of a book, "And I Was There," which drew upon thousands of pages of declassified documents about the early years of the Pacific War. In detailing Navy intelligence successes and failures.

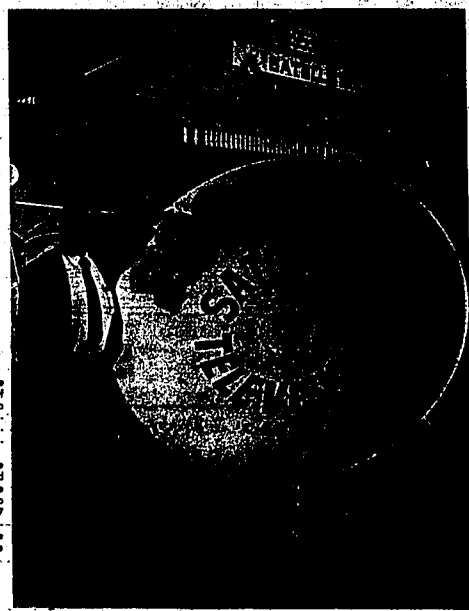

The primary author of the book was the late Rear Adm. Edwin Layton, the Pacific fleet intelligence officer at Pearl Harbor throughout the war. Layton details intraservice fighting between intelligence officials at Pearl Harbor and in Washington and argued that Rochefort's bureaucratic enemies succeeded in blocking the acclaim that was due him.

Dropout's estate assists 2 colleges

WINONA, Minn. (AP) — A high school dropout who never was paid more than $11,970 annually in 47 years as a court clerk, bequeathed more than $1.3 million to two colleges from an estate valued at $1.5 million.

Joe Page earned his money through "frugal" good investments and the fact that he was constantly employed," said Joe Fleischman, director of development at St. Mary's College and a confidante of Page during the last few years.

A childless widower who died last September-10 days short of his 91st birthday, Page bequeathed $884,000 to St. Mary's and $456,000 to the College of St. Teresa, both in Winona.

Navy buries heroic officer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy buried a forgotten hero Friday, ceremoniously carrying the remains of Civil War Medal of Honor winner James Smith to Arlington National Cemetery, "where he belongs" after lying for a century in an unmarked pauper's grave.

"This is now as it should be, only 105 years late," Rep. Norman Lent, R-N.Y., said at a wreath-laying ceremony on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial. Walking across the Potomac River at Arlington were some of the Navy's most senior admirals, ready to bury the old sailor with solemn military honors.

Smith had died in New York City in 1871 and was buried in an unmarked common grave. His earlier exploits aboard the USS Richmond at the Battle of Mobile Bay almost forgotten.

But he left behind three children. And a 20th century great-grandson took up his cause. For the past eight years, Thomas Clarkson Brener struggled to correct what he felt was the wrong done his great-grandfather.

Presser enters innocent plea

CLEVELAND (AP) — Teamsters President Jackie Presser pleaded innocent Friday to charges of labor racketeering and embezzlement of $700,000 stemming from an alleged payroll-padding scheme at his hometown union local.

Presser, 59, president of Local 507 and a Teamsters' national vice president, and Anthony Hughes, 59, the local's recording secretary, also pleaded innocent to charges returned in a federal indictment May 16.

Presser, 59, and the other defendants did not speak as their pleas were filed through their attorneys during the five-minute proceeding in the small, standing-room-only courtroom of U.S. Magistrate David S. Parham.

The federal magistrate continued the $50,000 personal signature bond for each defendant. The bonds do not require the men to post any cash.

No trial date was set, however. During a pretrial hearing following arraignment, U.S. District Judge Ann Aldrich decided to have another federal judge weigh arguments from Presser's attorney, John R. Cimaco, that she excuse herself as the trial judge.

Helicopter crash investigated

STURGIS, S.D. (AP) — The Air Force on Friday convened a special board of officers from the Strategic Air Command to investigate the crash of a UH-1 Huey helicopter that killed five people and critically injured a sixth.

The helicopter, which was providing security for a missile maintenance convoy, crashed shortly after 3 p.m. Thursday in a field about five miles northeast of Sturgis.

Killed were the pilot, Capt. Brian H. Snider, 29, New Palestine, Ind.; and the co-pilot, 2nd Lt. David H. Gordon, 25, Auburn, Wash.

Also killed were Senior Airman Donald Heitkamp, 23, St. Henry, Ohio; Airman 1st Class Berry P. Holmes, 21, Miami; and Staff Sgt. Charles L. Kuskey, 23, Chatsworth, Ga.

Airman 1st Class Letaunia Huguley, 22, of Salem, Ala., was the lone survivor. She was listed in critical condition Friday in Rapid City Regional Hospital with undisclosed injuries.

Alaskan volcano erupts again

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Pavlov Volcano erupted Friday for the second time in two months, spitting steam and ash up to 17,000 feet high, a geologist said.

The eruption of Alaska's most active volcano was reported by passing pilots Friday morning, said Tom Miller, a scientist with the U.S. Geological Survey.

Miller said the eruption posed little danger to humans near the 8,905-foot peak, located 600 miles southwest of Anchorage at the sparsely inhabited tip of the rugged Alaska Peninsula.

An easterly wind Friday was carrying the eruption plume of ash north of Cold Bay, a town 35 miles away from the mountain, he said.

Pilots survive midair collision

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Two Marine jets collided in flight Friday, sending both aircraft tumbling into the Pacific Ocean, but both pilots ejected and were rescued in good shape, a Marine spokeswoman said.

The A-4M Skyhawks were engaged in an aerial refueling exercise when the accident occurred 66 miles south of San Clemente Island off Southern California, said Sgt. Anne Larson, a spokeswoman at the Marine Air Station in El Toro, where the planes were based.

Both pilots were reported in good condition, Larson said.

Vietnam to resume MIA talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ending a break imposed by Vietnam to protest the U.S. raid against Libya in April, representatives of the two countries will meet in Hanoi June 11-14 for talks on locating at least some of the 2,436 Americans missing from the Southeast Asian war, the State Department said Friday.

The dates were announced after Vietnam's deputy foreign minister, Hoang Blich Son, met a U.S. delegation in New York, where he is attending a United Nations meeting.

Marcos pumps iron, studies law

HONOLULU (AP) — Former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos spends his time pumping iron and poring over law books, an aide said Friday.

"He finds a lot of time now to exercise with light weights," working out daily, said aide Arturo Arutza.

Postal official pleads guilty to charges of contract payoff

WASHINGTON (AP) — The vice chairman of the U.S. Postal Service's board of governors pleaded guilty Friday to taking illegal payoffs in exchange for trying to steer a $250 million postal contract to a Texas company.

Peter Voss, a businessman who was co-chairman in 1980 of Ronald Reagan's presidential campaign in Ohio, also pleaded guilty in a three-count felony information in U.S. District Court to embezzling money from the postal service. Prosecutors said he collected for a first-class airline ticket when he actually traveled in coach class.

Voss immediately resigned from the eight-member board of governors, which is expected to award the $250 million postal contract later this year.

He faces up to seven years in prison and $21,000 in fines. He will be sentenced July 24 before U.S. District Judge George H. Revercomb.

"I'm going to stand up as straight as I can," Voss said in a telephone interview Friday afternoon. "It's a new beginning. I'll be starting all over."

He said federal prosecutors have led to additional counts being filed against him.

Voss was appointed to the board of governors by Reagan in 1982. He was elected vice chairman in January.

According to U.S. Attorney Joseph E. DiGenova and Assistant U.S. Attorney E. Lawrence Barcella Jr., Voss took from $20,000 to $25,000 in illegal payoffs in cash and free-airline tickets in a fee-splitting arrangement with a public relations firm hired by the Texas company.

Recognition Equipment Inc. of Dallas, to help it win the contract for high-speed, address-reading machinery.

Voss also arranged with the PR firm, operated by Michigan businessman John R. Gnuv Jr., who was chairman of Reagan's 1980 presidential campaign in Michigan, to receive up to $1.2 million if the Texas company got the contract, the prosecutors said.

Voss has known Gnuv for nearly a decade.

Top spellers see Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Youngsters who competed in the National Spelling Bee capped their week in the nation's capital Friday with a visit to the White House where President Reagan joked with them and praised their achievement.

"I understand the winning word was 'edontology,'" Reagan said, getting help pronouncing the word from Jon Pennington, 14, of Shiremanstown, Pa., who topped the field of 174 spellers in the two-day competition Thursday.

After Reagan presented Pennington with the spelling bee trophy, the winner gave the president a spelling primer. "I can use this, too," a smiling Reagan said.

Perry Ellis, top designer, dead at 46

NEW YORK (AP) — Sportswear designer Perry Ellis, a fashion maverick who believed that clothes should not be taken too seriously, died Friday of viral encephalitis. He was 46.

Ellis died around 1:30 a.m. at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. He had been in a coma for several days, said hospital spokesman Spencer Vibbert. The cause was viral encephalitis, an inflammation of the tissue near the brain.

Friends and other designers along Seventh Avenue remembered Ellis as warm and humorous, a man of impeccable style and a designer who added youth and zest to the sportswear market.

He had been ill for several months. He appeared pale and gaunt at the fashion, fragrance and cosmetic Industries AIDS benefit on April 30. He was hospitalized a week later immediately after unveiling his fall collection.

Green is the key color for delayed Indy 500

By MIKE HARRIS
The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — A green flag is what everyone is waiting for. A green track is what the drivers are going to get Saturday in the two-day delayed Indianapolis 500. Even the drivers may be a little green after a six-day layoff.

Everyone from the 33 starters to ABC, which will again try to send to millions of homes the first live telecast of the world's richest race, to the expected crowd of up to 250,000 at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway will breathe a collective sigh when the engines roar to life at 9 a.m. MST.

A green flag will also put the rocket-like cars, which qualified at an average speed of 210.279 mph, on a 2.4-mile oval that has not seen any serious action since May 22 — the final full-scale practice session.

The $3 million race was washed away last Sunday and again on Monday before track officials, faced with prospects of continuing bad weather, made the unprecedented choice of postponing the race until Saturday.

The forecast is for partly sunny skies with a 20 percent chance of wide scattered thunderstorms, which would have no more than a temporary impact on the race. Temperatures are expected in the low 80s.

The week's inactivity has left the asphalt track without much rubber in the racing groove. The rubber, laid down by the wide, slick race tires, can help the cars adhere to the track, and also slow them down.

"It's real clean, it's what we call a green racetrack," Al Unser Jr. said following Friday's 30-minute warm-up practice, limited to 120 mph.

That condition could cause problems, particularly at the start

'Everybody has to be especially alert because the car balance will be different and I think everybody is pretty much expecting that. I think the leaders are going to be in good shape.'

— Mario Andretti

when the cars are running close together, the turbulence from their ground effects aerodynamics giving the drivers more to think about than just staying out of each other's way.

Rick Mears, the record-setting pole-winner, said, "It would have been green on Sunday. If you remember right, it rained between (the practice on Thursday and Sunday. It was green then. It doesn't make a difference between Tuesday and Saturday.)"

"You just have to take it a little easy," said defending champion Danny Sullivan, who will start next to Mears in the middle of the front row. "The track will be green, everybody will be a little green. It will make everybody be a little more calm at the beginning. It will make them settle down and get into the groove."

"It's green, it's definitely green and it's going to be very fast at the beginning," added Mario Andretti, the 1969 winner who is expected to make an early charge after starting 30th, inside the 10th row. "Everybody has to be especially alert because the car balance will be different than it was last Thursday, and I think everybody is pretty much in the know and expecting that. Because of that I think the leaders are going to be in pretty good shape."

Okamoto fires a 70 for 3-shot LPGA lead

The Associated Press

MASON, Ohio — Ayako Okamoto fired a 2-under-par 70 Friday to take a three-shot lead after two rounds of the LPGA Championship at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center.

Okamoto, a native of Japan in her sixth year on the LPGA tour, followed a first-round 66 to move to 8-under-par 136 midway through the second of the four major championships of women's golf.

In a group three shots back at 139 came first-round leader Lori Garner; Pat Bradley, the four-time top money-winner; Minky Moore, Muffin Spencer-Devlin and Ok-Hee Ku.

Okamoto, whose victory in the Elizabeth Arden earlier this season was the sixth of her career, played consistently on Friday, compiling 16 pars to go with her two birdies. She came into the tournament ranked 15th on the money-winning list.

Heading into the second round, Garback led the way at seven under with Okamoto six under and Bradley five under.

Moore, a non-winner in her sixth year on the LPGA tour, made the biggest move with a 6-under-par 66 following a first-round 73.

At 140, four under par, through 36 holes were Becky Pearson, who matched Moore's low score of the day with a 66, and Cindy Mackey.

Five shots back of the leader were three-time U.S. Open champion Hollis Stacy, Robin Walton and Alice Riltman.

Two-time LPGA champion Patty Sheehan led a group at 2-under 142. The 1982 LPGA champion, Jan Stephenson, was at 143, while Amy Alcott and JoAnne Carner were in a group at 142, even par and eight shots back of Okamoto.

The field was cut to low 70 scores and ties at the completion of the day's round.

The $300,000 championship continues with rounds Saturday and Sunday over the 6,242-yard Grizzly Course. Both rounds will be televised by ESPN.

Western Days rodeo leads change hands

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Three leads changed hands Friday night at the second performance of the Western Days rodeo at the College of Southern Idaho's Expo Center.

There were new leaders in the steer wrestling, calf roping and bull riding events.

Robert Schall, who received a no score in the barrel racing event prior to the steer wrestling, took down his steer breaking in 5.9 seconds. The cowboy from Arlee, Mont., knocked Thursday night's winner, Tim Chadwick of Rogerson, into second place. Another Montana cowboy, Mike Pettit of Wisdom, Mont., tied Chadwick with a time of 6.1.

Bill Parker of Billings, Mont., came out on top in the calf roping event, eclipsing Thursday night's mark by more than one second. Parker roped his doogie in 10.2 seconds to take the lead and set himself up for a possible payoff after tonight's performance.

Brent Miles of Pocatello, who led going into yesterday's performance, followed himself in second place, followed by Nick Baldwin of Jona.

Ken Behling of Ferguson, Utah, has had a hard luck year in bull riding. Behling recently came off the disabled list after having his face stepped on by a bull.

Behling was the first cowboy out of the chute, scoring a 76 to edge out Thursday's audience favorite, George Barber of Pocatello, Utah. Shawn Jones of Twin Falls remained in the hunt for prize money, hanging behind the top three cowboys with a score of 74.

Thursday's marks in the bareback riding event remained the same with Duane France of Hyrum, Utah, scoring 118. France's highest mark was a 69. Blackfoot's Ron Callison remains on top of the leader board with a 72 recorded on Thursday.

Schall, who placed first in the steer wrestling event, teamed with another Montana cowboy to claim second place in the team roping competition.

Schall and Owen Stullner of Hamilton roped their steer in 7.0 seconds. Just behind Thursday's tandem of Zane and Brent Danale, who clocked a 6.9.

Kevin Small stayed on top of the saddle bronc event, and saw the second and third place cowboys from Thursday fall by the wayside.

Steve Latham of Dupree, South Dakota, had a 70, which was good enough for the second place spot.

Deke Latham, the No. 7 cowboy in the world in the saddle bronc event, scored a 69, but was given the option of a re-ride.

Latham took the re-ride, but dropped to a 67 in the event. His score placed him in third place in that competition.

In the barrel racing event, Thursday's cowgirls posted some impressive times.

School teacher Linda Munns of Garland, Utah, was not impressed as she rode her horse to clock a time of 16.9 seconds. Munns tied Blackfoot's Suzanne Hill, who had the same time in Thursday's competition. Susan Smith of Idaho Falls stayed in the lead with her 16.2-second run recorded on Thursday.

Barbeck event—1. Ron Callison, Garland, Utah, 72; 2. Three cowboys tied at 70.

Steer wrestling—1. Robert Schall, Arlee, Mont., 5.9; 2. Mike Pettit, Wisdom, Mont.; and Tim Chadwick, Rogerson, 6.1.

Amid pagantry and police, 13th World Cup chase begins

By TERRY LEONARD
The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — The 13th soccer World Cup is set to kick off Saturday in a blaze of color and pagantry that for a month will put Mexico near the center of the sporting world.

Defending champion Italy will play Bulgaria in the opening game of a 24-team, 52-match tournament that for the next four years will give one country the bragging rights to the world's most popular team sport.

Festivities will open with folk dancing and a parade of children dressed in the uniforms of the competing countries. It will end in sweat, cheers and tears on the floor of Aztec Stadium.

The tournament originally was set for Colombia and almost switched to the United States before settling here.

Brazil, the only team to have qualified for all 13 World Cups, is here. So are West Germany and Italy, competing in their 11th Cup, and Argentina, Hungary, Mexico, England and France in their ninth. Canada, Iraq and Denmark have qualified for the first time.

London oddsmakers have installed Argentina and Brazil as the favorites at 7-to-2, followed by Uruguay at 6-to-1, England at 9-to-1, Mexico and Italy at 12-to-1 and France, Denmark and West Germany at 14-to-1.

The wide open tournament in this economically distressed country is being staged less than a year after Mexico was rocked by disaster. Mexican authorities have spent almost nine months cleaning up from Sept. 19 earthquake that killed 9,500 people and left large areas of the city in ruins.

Scattered piles of rubble remain and the skeletal forms of some buildings stand twisted and broken, grim reminders of the force of the quake that measured 8.1 on the Richter scale.

The earth shook in the capital again Thursday afternoon, but there were no reports of damage or injury from the quake measuring 6.0 on the Richter scale. The epicenter of the quake, felt only lightly in parts of Mexico City, was located 242 miles to the southeast in the Pacific Ocean.

For the most part, the city has been swept clean of debris, and visitors see far more images of the World Cup than the disaster.

The stadiums have been festooned with the flags of the visiting countries, the shops are filled with World Cup souvenirs and the tax drivers want to talk about "La Copa Mundial," and who will win.

The government has issued commemorative stamps and coins to celebrate the event. It also has erected giant screens in parks and low income areas of Mexico City so that those who cannot afford to buy tickets, which cost between $3 and $5 apiece, can still watch the games.

Officials say they are ready for the up to 40,000 visitors they expect. They hope the publicity and the global television audience estimated at eight billion can generate new tourism to ease Mexico's economic crisis.

The crisis began in 1982, the same year Spain hosted the last World Cup, but it has been aggravated by the plunge in oil prices.

Mexico is the first country to host two World Cups, and despite the excitement the tournament has generated here, it is not certain the ticket sales, sponsorships and related revenues will make it a financial success.

The financial status of the tournament is unclear because this country has little tradition of openness about financial matters and because the agreement by private enterprise to finance the bulk of the World Cup has kept most arrangements behind closed doors.

Sluggish extradition pours salt on wound of Heysel soccer riot

By DEREK BROWN
The Guardian

BRUSSELS, Belgium — The Heysel soccer massacre happened a year ago Thursday. It's an anniversary nobody in authority much wants to remember, let alone mark. For the British the memory brings shame, for the Italians it means pain, and for the Belgians it represents a dangerous mixture of both.

Thirty nine people were killed or fatally injured in the televised tribal rush of Liverpool supporters on their Juventus rivals. A year on, not one fan has been charged. No police officer or organizing official has been brought to task for the mistakes, delay, and general murderous mayhem of the 1985 European Cup Final.

The anti-British passion of last May has given way to Belgium's longstanding anglophobia. Diplomats, who flinched abusive calls are now being assured that the UK cannot be held responsible for a few thugs.

would have been funneled into the angle between wall and fence, with no hope of escape.

The first wreath has already been laid at the stadium, and more are expected when pilgrims from Turin solemnly process to the grounds Thursday.

The Belgian government has discreetly issued its own Heysel memorial, in the form of a 58-page manual for improving safety at football grounds. Published without fanfare on Monday, 362 days after the event, it follows the line taken by instant critics in the immediate aftermath of the massacre: fans should be strictly segregated, police tactics should be streamlined and coordinated, fire precautions and evacuation procedures should be improved, and so on.

Blame there is none. Not for the breakdown of coordination between local police and national gendarmes. Nor for the crumbling dereliction of the Heysel ground last year, with its flimsy wire mesh fencing, and its decayed brickwork. Nor for the organization of Europe's premier soccer match, when tickets for the last part of the ground found their way willy-nilly to rival supporters.

The Brussels city authorities, as owners of the ground, have set aside $1.75 million for ground improvements, but it hasn't yet been spent.

In the longer term, a study group is working on three possible options for rebuilding the old shambled stadium into a venue worthy of international status. But those schemes, involving new stands and seating in place of concrete terraces, will cost anything up to $26 million.

What happens the dilapidated ground will likely to be restored to favor as the home of Belgium's cherished national team.

ZCMI sees profitable year

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — With first-quarter earnings well ahead of projections, ZCMI is looking for $3.6 million profits on $172 million in sales for the fiscal year ending next Jan. 31, said Lowell M. Durham Jr., president of the company.

AT&T announces more rate reductions

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s $2 billion rate reduction will be permitted to go into effect Sunday, the Federal Communications Commission said.

U.S. Trade Deficit $12.1 billion

WASHINGTON — Lower oil prices and the effects of a declining U.S. dollar helped narrow the nation's trade deficit to $12.1 billion in April, its lowest level in eight months, the government said Friday.

Some economists suggested the decline might represent the long-awaited turning point in a trade deficit which last year soared to $148.5 billion. But others cautioned against too much optimism, claiming the real turnaround may be several months away.

The Commerce Department said the trade imbalance fell from the March level of $14.3 billion, representing a decline of 16.6 percent.

April's improvement was led by a 10.2 percent drop in overall imports, which totaled $30 billion in April. This drop offset a 3 percent decline in exports in April to $18 billion.

The April trade deficit was the lowest since a $10.9 billion imbalance last August.

"I think it is a safe conclusion that the worst of the trade deficit is over. It won't get any worse and it is likely to get better," said Allen Slinn, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers.

But Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said the April decline in imports "probably did not mark a turning point, but I expect it to begin to improve later in the year."

"The pickup in economic growth in the United States will have to be matched by more rapid expansion abroad if U.S. exports are to increase significantly," he added.

In a separate report, the Commerce Department said new homes sold in April at a brisk seasonally adjusted annual rate of 862,000 units — down 3.5 percent from the record 893,000 rate of the month before but still 33 percent above last April's level.

The report showed that the housing boom spurred by reduced mortgage interest rates continued last month.

Figures rounded. In billions of dollars. Source: Commerce Dept.

It was the lowest dollar amount spent on oil imports in a single month since June 1973.

Meanwhile, non-petroleum imports dropped 7.5 percent in April, to $27.9 billion.

The U.S. trade deficit with Japan remained the largest of any single nation, but dropped to $4.7 billion in April from the $5.5 billion level of the month before.

The decline in U.S. exports in April included an 11.6 percent drop in farm exports, to $2.1 billion; and a 5.3 percent drop in exports of manufactured goods, to $12.6 billion.

While imports generally fell in April, imports of several passenger cars from Canada and Japan increased — by 11.6 percent, to $1.2 billion for Canadian cars; and by 2.3 percent, to $1.5 billion, for Japanese vehicles.

Many economists cautioned against reading too much into the figures.

"It looks good but it isn't," said Michael Evans, president of a Washington-based forecasting service. He claimed that the large drop in oil prices masks that fact that imports are considerably higher than would be for the rest of the year.

"The fact that exports went down is not a healthy sign either," he added.

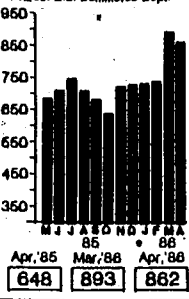

And Lawrence Chimerine, president of Chase Econometrics, another private forecasting service, said, "It's good news but I'd like to see it happen over the next few months before we can conclude that we've turned the corner on the trade deficit."

The huge trade imbalance was a major factor cited in House debate last week on a far-reaching trade bill that would force the president to retaliate against nations engaging in unfair trading practices. That bill passed overwhelmingly. President Reagan has threatened to veto the measure should it reach his desk.

The Commerce Department also issues a separate tabulation of the trade deficit in which month-by-month figures are partially revised to reflect the fact that reports of imports often lag by several months.

the actual arrival of the product in this country.

Under this procedure, the March deficit was revised to a $12.2 billion shortfall — rather than the $14.5 billion cited in the other tabulation.

Since 1985, for the first four months of 1986, the accumulated trade deficit totaled $55.5 billion — or an average of 13.8 billion a month. If the deficit continues for the next twelve months at that rate, it would imply a total 1986 deficit of $168 billion, well up from the $148.5 billion of 1985.

In January, the trade deficit was a record $16.5 billion; in February, $12.5 billion; and in March, $14.5 billion.

In April 1985, the trade deficit was $11.9 billion.

U.S. trade officials have suggested that the 1986 deficit may surpass the 1985 one, even with the anticipated improvements that they predict for the second half of the year.

AT&T announces more rate reductions

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s $2 billion rate reduction will be permitted to go into effect Sunday, the Federal Communications Commission said.

The company immediately announced more reductions.

Although a portion of the cuts come because of reductions in the price long-distance companies pay local companies to connect long-distance calls to the local network, the growth in the number of long-distance calls is also a factor.

"This is a sheer efficiency gain," said Albert Halprin, chief of the FCC bureau that regulates long-distance telephone prices. "It proves the wire is not a balloon," he said.

AT&T's major long-distance competitors will announce significant reductions that they said they were probably holding off announcing someone else."

Halprin said he expects another AT&T long-distance price cut in the $50 million to $75 million price range in the next few days, as the result of a FCC order lowering some of the costs AT&T pays local telephone companies.

That would equal a fraction of a cent per call, but enough to be significant for big businesses with huge phone bills.

AT&T said it would reduce WATS, 800 Service, and some business private line charges by $2 million. Other private line charges are set for an increase.

Halprin also predicted all of AT&T's major long-distance competitors will announce significant reductions that they said they were probably holding off announcing someone else."

Starting Sunday, residential phone customers will pay $2 a month for their connection. About $1 billion will be raised by that charge. At the same time, long-distance calls will start paying about $1 billion less for their connections to those local lines. The savings, plus those from more efficient use of the phone network, will be passed on to customers in the form of the lower long-distance rates.

BENTON HARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Whirlpool Corp. said Thursday it has completed the purchase for an undisclosed price of St. Charles Manufacturing Co., an Illinois maker of kitchen and bathroom cabinets.

The St. Charles, Ill., company will be operated as a division of Whirlpool Kitchen Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary that also will operate another recent Whirlpool Acquisition, Mastercraft Industries.

Whirlpool, based in Benton Harbor, makes household appliances and had $3.5 billion in sales last year.

American Stores sales dip

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — American Stores Co. reported more than $3.38 billion in sales for the first quarter, down slightly from 1985's $3.4 billion mark for the first three months.

Senior Vice President Michael Miller said the decrease in sales was due primarily to the continued low rate of inflation, soft purchasing patterns and a weak economy in the energy and agribusiness regions where American Stores operates.

The quarterly figures for the quarter were $2.313 billion, up 6.4 percent or 83 cents per common share, compared to $2.183 billion in 1985 first-quarter earnings, or 78 cents a share.

American Stores' principal operating subsidiaries include Ace Markets Inc., Alpha Beta Co., Buttery Food Stores, Jewel Food Stores, Osco Drug Inc., Sav-on Drugs, Skaggs Alpha Beta Inc., and Star Market Co.

The company has 1,497 stores in 40 states.

Off week for lumber industry

PORTLAND (AP) — It was an off week for the lumber industry with a decline in production, orders and shipments in 12 Western states for the week ended May 24, a trade association reports.

Production fell 26 million board feet to 361 million feet, while orders dropped 2 million board feet to 376 million feet, according to the Western Wood Products Association.

Shipments decreased 8 million feet to 383 million board feet.

Figures for the same week a year ago show production at 310 million board feet, orders at 339 million feet and shipments at 341 million feet.

Montana wood output rises

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Montana's wood products plants increased their output during the first quarter of 1986, the University of Montana's Bureau of Business and Economic Research said.

However, the research office said that production employment and wages were at the lowest quarterly level in three years.

The quarterly figures were gathered through a survey conducted in cooperation with the Montana Wood Products Association.

The survey includes 32 plants that account for more than 90 percent of the state's wood products manufacturing activity.

Agriculture work force up across region

BOISE (AP) — There were 15,000 more people working on farms and ranches in Idaho, Wyoming and Montana during the U.S. Department of Agriculture's semiannual survey period in April than during the previous reporting period.

The department's Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said 85,000 people were working on farms or ranches in the three-state area during the week of April 6-12. That was up from 71,000 during the week of October 6-12, 1985.

Hired workers accounted for 28,000 of that labor force, up 1,000 from the week of August 12-18, 1985.

October survey. Farm operators and other unpaid workers made up the remainder.

The reporting service said hired help worked an average of 51.3 hours during the survey week at an average wage of $4.31. Farm operators worked 57.5 hours of work during the week.

Nationally, 2.9 million people were working on farms and ranches during the period, down 7.7 percent from last October.

THE ACES®

BOBBY WOLFF

"We can outrun the wind and the storm, but we cannot outrun the demon of Hurry."
— John Burroughs

South was in such a hurry to start the trumps from his side of the table that he left himself vulnerable in another area. And the opponents were quick to press their advantage.

Note South's jump to two spades over North's takeout double. A bid of only one spade would be a forced response showing something less than about eight points.

South won the first heart in his hand to try the trump finesse. The trump queen was with West but the game still went down. West hopped up with his spade ace to lead another dummy's king. Later West took a club and a heart, giving the defense a total of four winners.

South was right to lead trumps toward dummy, but he shouldn't have been in such a hurry. He should have won the first heart with dummy's king to lead the king of clubs from dummy. West wins and leads a heart for East to ruff but South's heart ace is safe. South wins East's exit in his hand to start the trumps, and South wins an easy 10 tricks.

ANSWER: One spade. A single raise to two hearts does not do justice to this hand. Introduce spades and support hearts later.
