Critical Congress starts Challenger probes

By HOWARD BENEDICT
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Members of Congress launched their investigations of the Challenger accident Tuesday with criticism of their own past supervision of the space agency and promises of a tougher stance in the future.

"Congress has been too shy in finding fault with NASA," said Rep. Robert A. Roe, D-N.J., of the House Committee on Science and Technology. "As the result of the Challenger accident, Congress and NASA must begin a new era, one in which Congress must apply the same strong oversight to NASA that it does to any other government agency."

At a Senate space subcommittee hearing, chairman Slade Gorton, R-Wash., said his panel would review whether any of the recommendations by the Rogers Commission need to be written into law, but would in any case be "monitoring how promptly and completely NASA is following the commission's recommendations and deciding the propriety of any NASA decisions not to do so."

Those remarks set the tone as lawmakers in both the House and Senate began a lengthy series of hearings into the nation's worst space disaster.

Key witnesses were William P. Rogers and Neil Armstrong, chairman and vice chairman of the presidential commission whose report on the accident was released Monday.

That report blamed the disaster on a faulty joint in the shuttle's right booster rocket and faulted the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for insufficient safety precautions and bad management.

Rogers said the commission had done its job in pinpointing the cause of the accident and underlining NASA's deficiencies.

"Now it is up to this committee to be watchful," he said. "This committee could be very helpful to make sure there is a reinvigoration of NASA."

"This has been a tough time for NASA," Rogers said. "They have to say, we made a mistake, now let's get on with it."

Summing up the commission's four-month probe, Rogers told the House committee: "There's no doubt about it, serious mistakes were made. ... We set them all out."

Congress deferred to the Rogers Commission in the investigation, but member after member began the hearings with a pledge to look more critically at NASA, which has enjoyed overwhelming approval from legislators for a quarter century.

Some critics have expressed concern about a cozy NASA-Congress relationship that enabled two oversight committee chairmen, Rep. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., and Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, to make shuttle flights.

The first indication of an altered relationship came early in the House committee hearing when Rep. Manuel Lujan, R-N.M., the senior Republican, said, "As a committee, we may have been too trusting when

At 9 a.m. Tuesday the Warners' two-story home left its location of 30 years on Blue Lakes North, heading for a new spot near the canyon rim

After living for 30 years on Blue Lakes Boulevard North

Warners pack up, move, house and contents

TWIN FALLS — Thirty years ago, Blue Lakes Boulevard North was a fairly quiet, largely residential street.

Now fast-food restaurants and other commercial activity predominate, squeezing out long-time residents. The latest family to relocate took their house with them.

After 30 years at 960 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., George and Geraldine Warner packed up their house Tuesday and moved it to a place where it will be more "appropriate," says Mrs. Warner.

Tuesday morning, the house was taken to its new location on Canyon Rim Road. Because the original property is zoned commercial, the Warners decided to take the house with them instead of attempting to sell it.

The house was built in 1954, Warner says and she, her husband, and her family of five children had lived there for the last 30 years.

The Warners had foreseen problems with living on the main road through Twin Falls, but did not make the decision to move until the recent addition of a new wing to the Best Western Weston Inn.

"We had been happy with the location because we still had some privacy in the back of the house. But with the new wing, the winter sun was blocked out and we knew we had to start looking for another lot," says Warner.

Until Tuesday, the house had been suspended with pulleys and dollies, waiting to be moved. The move had been in the works since January. "It was a good time to move, because we have a lot of spare time and moving the house took up every minute of it," says Warner.

The house's new spot is on Canyon Rim Road, where Warner feels it is more appropriate. The lot was found in December, after a long search. The two-story frame building will be placed between other two-

IRAs make gains

By JIM LUTHER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senators seeking to restore tax-deductible Individual Retirement Accounts for all workers claimed growing support Tuesday and rejected leadership arguments that any amendment would jeopardize the Senate's far-reaching tax overhaul bill.

"If we thought this would make it (the bill) come unraveled, we would not be offering it," Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., told reporters, as a bipartisan group unveiled an amendment to preserve a partial IRA writeoff for all.

"More and more of our colleagues are finding it's not either-or, that we are not sacrificing the tax bill to get IRAs," added Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska.

But at a closed Republican caucus dominated by the IRA issue, Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon, manager of the bill, renewed his plea to keep it intact and rely on a conference of key Senate and House members to make any necessary changes.

Seizing a lack of support for his own plan for restoring IRAs, Sen. William Roth, R-Del., offered a substitute that would put the Senate on record for IRAs without forcing a major confrontation. A vote on that proposal, endorsed by the leadership, is likely Wednesday.

The Roth amendment would leave the fate of IRAs to the Senate-House conference committee that will work out the final version of the bill. Senators on that conference would be instructed to "give the highest priority to retaining maximum possible tax benefits" for IRAs without raising the tax rates in the bill.

Other senators said adoption of that non-binding resolution would not deter them from seeking a vote on amendments restoring IRAs. The

Organize, downtown Twin Falls advised

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Downtown Twin Falls needs to organize and pull together if it is to survive tough economic times and an exodus of businesses to the Magic Valley Mall, according to a preliminary report prepared by urban planner David Peterson.

The preliminary analysis of downtown is scheduled to be presented to members of the Downtown Business Improvement District at a general meeting today at 7 a.m. in the Elks Club Dining Room. A press conference will follow.

Downtown and small malls in Twin Falls will lose retail space and sales, at least for the short term, when the Magic Valley Mall opens this fall, according to the report prepared by Peterson of Thornton-Peterson Planning Group. But there are ways to promote the downtown's strong points and overcome some of its liabilities to help keep the area the strong center of the city it is now, the report says.

"Consistency is necessary," Peterson writes. "Even if downtown merchants are not willing to stay open seven days a week or to stay open as late as the Magic Valley Mall, they should establish a uniform downtown hours. Shoppers should know that just as in a shopping center, if one store is open, likely all stores are open," the report says.

The downtown also would benefit from uniform parking lot operations, the report says. Now downtown is a mix of metered parking, free parking and validated parking.

Peterson is also concerned about the vacant buildings downtown now and the ones that will become vacant after the Bon and Penney's move to the Magic Valley Mall, under construction on Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

Downtown merchants should market the space to tenants new to the area and to tenants who

Surgical team gives infant new heart

By BRUCE V. BIGELOW
The Associated Press

LOMA LINDA, Calif. — A baby rejected for a heart transplant until his young, unwed parents gave up custody underwent transplant surgery Tuesday, hours after the couple were told on national television a donor heart was available.

Surgery on 16-day-old Jesse Dean Sepulveda began at 7:25 p.m. MDT, and, "as of 9:32 (EST) the heart has been removed and the donor heart is being sewn in and Baby Jesse's condition remains stable," said Gus Cheatham, a spokesman for Loma Linda University Medical Center.

The operation was following normal patterns and nothing unexpected had occurred, Cheatham said.

The operation was expected to last up to six hours, said Susan Carpenter, a Michliar, a spokeswoman for the Right to Life League of Southern California, which championed Jesse's cause.

The 16-day-old, brain-dead donor baby, whose availability was announced by his parents in a telephone call on the Phil Donahue television show, had earlier arrived from Grand Rapids, Mich.

Deborah Walters says farewell to her brain-dead son performed the operation, for tests on his heart's condition. While the donor heart was tested, Jesse received the anti-rejection drug cyclosporine.

Loma Linda agreed to send a donor for Jesse after his parents turned over custody to his paternal grandparents.

Ballou, who has performed four successful infant-to-infant heart transplants at Loma Linda plus the baboon-to-baby transplant on Baby Fae in 1984, praised the parents of Frank Edward Clemenshaw for agreeing to donate their son's heart.

The parents in Michigan have done a really wonderful thing, a terribly compassionate thing," he said.

The donor baby, born May 25, was flown Tuesday from Butterworth Hospital in Grand Rapids, Mich., to Norton Air Force Base, a few miles from Loma Linda. Seventh-day Adventist hospital 65 miles east of Los Angeles.

Jesse suffers from hypoplastic left heart syndrome, the same fatal underdevelopment of the left side of the heart that afflicted Baby Fae, who died 20½ days after her transplant.

The donor was chosen Monday night after Edgar Beaumont, a Butterworth neonatologist, called Loma Linda. The donor was born through an emergency Caesarean section after it was determined that his head had pressed the umbilical cord against his mother's pelvis and shut off his supply of oxygen.

The 8-pound, 5-ounce child was immediately placed on life support, said Leonard Radecki, chief neonatologist at Butterworth. The child was diagnosed as brain-dead last Wednesday.

The parents, Frank Clemenshaw and Deborah Walters, 33, of Wyoming, Mich., who also are unwed, said at a news conference Tuesday morning that they heard about Baby Jesse on television.

Smyser retracts accusation, blaming wrong information

BOISE (AP) — State Sen. C.A. "Skip" Smyser has retracted an accusation he made last fall that backers of Democratic gubernatorial candidate Cecil Andrus conducted a deliberately "deceptive and biased" poll.

He blamed Helen Chenoweth, campaign manager for Republican Lt. Gov. David Leroy, who is running for governor, for providing inaccurate information.

Smyser, R-Parma, held a press conference in November on behalf of Leroy to criticize the poll. He said that he spoke rather than Leroy because the candidate was campaigning in northern Idaho and did not have the information on the poll. Smyser is a regional county coordinator for Leroy.

He said last fall that the poll was conducted so it would be biased in favor of Andrus. Smyser said Andrus' supporters would have leaked the results to media representatives.

"But in an affidavit filed Friday in U.S. District Court, he said, 'It is the present firm belief of this defendant (Smyser) that the . . . poll was not structured to produce bias in the results.' He also said he had sent a letter of retraction to the polling firm, which sued him for his public statements about the poll.

Chenoweth, who Smyser said had given him the information in last fall's news release, could not be reached for comment Monday, nor could Smyser. A secretary at his law office said he was on vacation.

Smyser denied in his first court reply to the suit that his claims at the press conference were false.

Last week, he said the press release had been prepared by Ms. Chenoweth, "and that he in good faith relied upon the information supplied by her in making the release."

Since then, he said, he has "learned that information reported to him by Ms. Chenoweth, including the opinion that random sample techniques were not used in the field in conducting the poll, was inaccurate."

Leroy campaign attorney John Runk, Boise, declined comment because the case still is in litigation. Barry Poole, Leroy's press secretary, said Monday, "Nobody in the Leroy committee has seen or heard of the affidavit."

Smyser and political consultant Vern Ravenscroft, Boise, are defendants in a defamation lawsuit filed Feb. 5 in federal court by TH Research. The Portland company, which conducts opinion surveys and research in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana. The company performed the poll in October and November 1985 for Citizens for Idaho, a political action committee set up to support Andrus' candidacy, which had not been declared formally at the time.

TH Research sued Smyser and Ravenscroft for $450,000 each in general and punitive damages.

Smyser said in his affidavit that when he held the press conference, he did not even know the polling firm existed and hadn't intended to harm it.

Ravenscroft sent letters in December to newspapers in Twin Falls and Lewiston saying the Citizens for Idaho poll was rigged. He too said his comments were aimed at the Andrus campaign, not the polling firm. Ravenscroft is a partner with Ms. Chenoweth in Consulting Associates, a Boise political consulting firm.

Ravenscroft said Monday he hadn't seen or heard of Smyser's affidavit and declined to comment on it.

Ravenscroft has asked for dismissal, and Smyser' for a summary judgment in the case. A hearing on those motions is scheduled for June 20.

Andrus press secretary Marc Johnson said he was "not terribly surprised by this (or) the tactics that have been employed throughout this whole business. I'm not surprised that six months after the original story, the truth comes out."

State employee, 44, found dead

MOSCOW (AP) — A 44-year-old Boise man who worked for the Idaho Department of Commerce's tourism division was found dead of an apparent heart attack in his hotel room Tuesday morning, said police Sgt. Neil Odenberg.

Carlisle "Carl" Leon Wolfe II was found in the bathroom of his hotel room by a business associate at about 6:30 a.m., Odenberg said.

Police also reported that Wolfe may have had a mild heart attack about three weeks ago. Police Chief David Cameron said foul play was not suspected.

Teller heads SDI list

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Nobel laureate Edward Teller heads a list of scientists and government officials participating in a classified conference here on the United States' Strategic Defense Initiative program.

Teller, who won the Nobel Prize for physics and played a major part in the development of the nuclear bomb, is to speak on technology needed for the program, known as "Star Wars," at the "SDI and Nuclear Technology" conference today and Thursday.

The meeting was organized by Troy Wade, manager of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson, who heads the Office of Strategic Defense, and James W. Vaughan, principal deputy assistant energy secretary for nuclear energy, are to participate. Idaho Gov. John Evans and Sens. James McClure and Steve Symms, R-Idaho, also are expected to attend.

ANNOUNCING

Dr. Max S. Bonner being in Dental practice for 28 years would like you to join him and his staff in welcoming Dr. Kevin D. Bonner to their practice. Dr. Kevin received his degree (Doctor of Dental Surgery) from Case Western Reserve School of Dentistry, Cleveland, Ohio on May 21, 1984. He also received a Bachelor of Science degree from Utah State University in 1982.

Dr. Kevin is single. He was raised in Burley and graduated from Burley High School in 1975. He enjoys fishing, skiing, hunting and water skiing. He also trains on weight lifting and biking.

He enjoys all phases of dentistry but particularly loves working with young people. He has been in the Big Brother Program and youth counselor in several different organizations and has lectured and counseled high school young adults about dentistry and other health related careers.

Barbara is in charge of our preventive dental care program.

We are located in the East Plaza Professional Building at 917 E. Main, Burley, Idaho. Office hours are Mon.-Fri. 8 to 5 pm. Also evenings and Saturday appointments available with a 24 hour emergency service.

State input backed

SEATTLE (AP) — States that might be involved in the transportation of nuclear waste in a permanent repository must take part in the process of selecting that site, Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones says.

Jones, who is attending a convention of the National Association of Attorneys General, heads a committee on energy.

Selection of a site to place the nation's nuclear waste "is the most difficult environmental problem confronting the nation," Jones said Tuesday.

While nuclear waste can be handled and stored safely, he said, states must be certain that transportation is done as carefully as permanent storage.

The Hanford site near Richland, Wash., is among sites under consideration. Jones said if Hanford is selected, Idaho will be a "corridor" state for the transportation of nuclear waste.

"I can tell you Idaho is looking into getting involved as far as the Hanford site is concerned," he said.

Evans says trade debate can be eased

LEWISTON (AP) — Although the temperature continues to rise in the heated trade debate between the U.S. and Canada, Idaho Gov. John Evans still believes the joint task force of American governors and Canadian premiers can ease the tension between the two neighbors.

While the task force on trade has done little since it was announced with some fanfare at the National Governors' Conference in Boise last August, the panel has finally begun to take shape and interest, at least from the U.S. side of the border, appears to be growing.

Since the initial seven governors, mostly from the border region, signed on as members of the task force last summer, the membership roles have expanded with governors or their representatives from a June 20 states from various regions of the nation expected to attend a June 24 briefing session in Washington, D.C., led by Evans.

American interest in the task force was evident, officials said, from the turnout for a staff meeting of the task force last month.

But on the Canadian side, while five premiers have joined the task force as members, the leader of the movement, British Columbia Premier William Bennett has announced he will resign from the Canadian government.

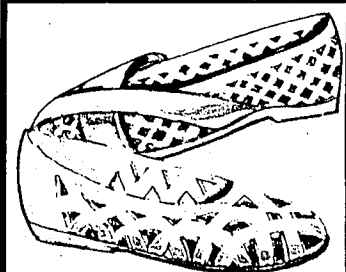

Evans, who less than a year ago called tariffs on Canadian imports a fast resort in dealing with the trade problem, gave his support earlier this month to the Reagan administration's imposition of tariffs on Canadian shakes and shingles.

But the challenger to Republican U.S. Sen. Steve Symms has also held out the prospect that the task force, once the regional leaders of each country finally sit down to talk, can smooth what has become a rocky trade road.

Hutchin got off easy for his check forgery

Perhaps there is something we don't know about the case, but the unsupervised probation given former Castleford Superintendent of Schools Robert Hutchin on a felony forgery charge strikes us as too light a punishment. We have several reasons:

First, the felony involved public funds. Hutchin, by his guilty plea, admits that he forged a signature on Castleford schools check for $2,023, not exactly chicken feed.

The entrusting of public funds to responsible public officers, including school superintendents, is part of the day-to-day functioning of government. Breaking this trust, in our view, is a serious offense, regardless of the amount involved. The message sent by probation and, ultimately, a clean record is that the offense is not to be taken seriously.

Second, it appears this forgery charge is not the first problem Hutchin has had. A felony theft charge in Twin Falls County — stemming from his failure to return four X-rated video tapes from a Buhl store — was dropped.

An exhaustive check of Hutchin's background by The Times-News last summer shows him drifting from education job to education job, apparently benefitting from the failure of any one district to thoroughly investigate his background. In at least one of those positions, office equipment showed up missing at the time Hutchin left.

Third, the effect of Hutchin's three-year probation and withheld judgment by Fifth District Judge Daniel Huriburt means that, if Hutchin successfully completes probation, the forgery conviction will be removed from his record. A school district checking on him three years from now would find no indication of the past problems.

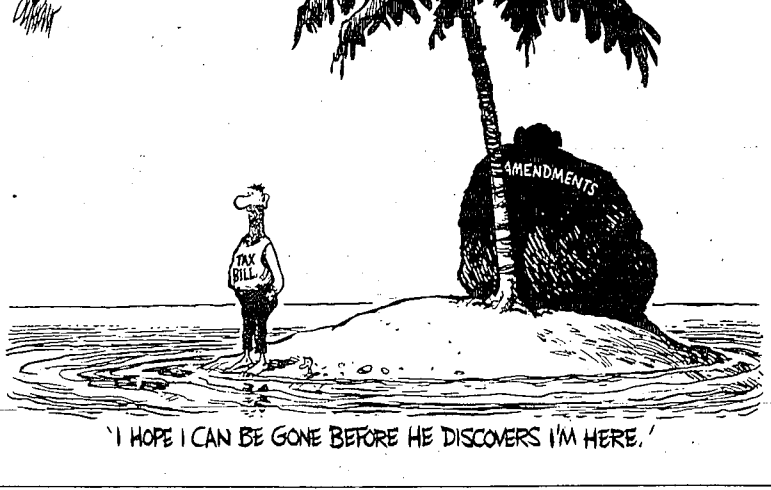

Hutchin's attorney says Hutchin admits he made a "stupid mistake" and that it will "follow him the rest of his life." How will this withheld judgment enforce Hutchin's responsibility for his own actions?

We doubt it will. Even though it is Hutchin's first felony conviction, we think a felony forgery conviction for conversion of public funds is a very serious crime.

We think the offense merited some time in jail.

I HOPE I CAN BE GONE BEFORE HE DISCOVERS I'M HERE.

Rich get cream of Senate tax reform

WASHINGTON — Genuine tax reform is within reach. The bill approved by the Senate Finance Committee is a significant improvement over current law. But in one major respect, it should be further improved.

As reported, the bill accomplishes part of the tax reform agenda: by substantially reducing special preferences and exemptions, and adding an effective alternative minimum tax, it responds to public doubt about the fairness of our tax system.

But it does not accomplish another important part of the reform agenda: providing tax relief to the middle-income taxpayers of this country.

Of the 89 million returns that report taxable income, less than 5 percent reflect income over $75,000. The Finance Committee bill gives almost 27 percent of its total tax relief to the 5 percent of Americans with the highest incomes.

At the highest income levels, only one-half of 1 percent of all taxpayers report taxable income of $200,000 or more. The committee bill channels fully 16 percent of the total tax relief to these wealthiest Americans.

But for people in the middle class — the vast majority of tax-paying wage-earners — the tax bill would mean relief ranging from $100 to $400 a year.

The Senate should accept the president's proposal of three tax rates, which the House has already adopted.

The additional revenues from a higher top rate (the president proposed 35 percent; the House adopted 38 percent) should be used to provide greater tax relief for middle-income taxpayers. It could be provided most broadly and equitably by raising the level of income at which the 27-percent rate takes effect.

Under the committee bill, a single person would start paying the maximum rate of 27 percent on taxable income that exceeds $17,600. At that point, a middle-income, single taxpayer would be paying tax at the same rate as the person earning $70,000 or $1 million a year. That's not fair.

I intend to offer an amendment on the Senate floor to establish a more progressive, three-rate structure, similar to that proposed by the president and adopted by the House.

The principle of progressivity has been embodied in the federal tax system since the permanent adoption of the income tax.

But since the late 1960s that progressivity has declined. Between 1965 and 1985, the one-tenth of taxpayers with the lowest incomes saw their overall tax burden rise by 30 percent. The one-tenth of taxpayers with the highest incomes saw theirs fall by 16 percent.

The 1981 tax bill was a major part of that shift. In the aftermath of the bill, the federal budget deficit increased dramatically. That in turn has produced tax increases that have further eroded the progressivity of the federal tax system.

In 1982 gas, cigarette, airline and telephone excise taxes went up. In 1983, the payroll tax went up. In 1984, alcohol excise taxes went up.

Although President Reagan professes opposition to "higher" taxes, he has in fact proposed, endorsed and signed into law a series of tax increases since 1981 — in payroll taxes, excise taxes, user fees and other "revenue enhancement" bills.

His 1987 budget asks for 10 more such tax increases. The only tax the president truly opposes is the income tax — the only non-regressive federal tax.

The policy of cutting income taxes, which are based on ability to pay, and raising other taxes, which are not based on ability to pay, has shifted the tax burden down the income scale.

It has reduced taxes for persons with higher incomes. It has raised the tax burden on persons with lower incomes. And it has wiped out tax relief for the middle class. That is unfair and wrong.

Moreover, fiscal realities make it more than likely that this trend will continue.

After debating the tax bill, the Senate will turn to the budget, which both the House and the Senate have already agreed should include $46 billion in new taxes over the next three years. These new taxes will almost certainly be excise taxes.

It is in this context that we should debate the tax bill. It will enormously improve the tax system by ensuring that all Americans pay a share of the tax burden.

But unless the essentially flat rate in the bill is modified, we will not be able honestly to claim that all taxpayers are paying a fair share.

Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, is a member of the Senate Finance Committee.

Clever sidestepping could keep many tax shelters in place

Contrary to the avowed mission of those who seek genuine tax reform in this country, tax shelters will not completely disappear even if the Senate Finance Committee bill becomes law.

That is because the plan put forward by Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., the Finance Committee chairman, continues to give preferential treatment to several items of income or deduction in calculating one's annual income-tax liability.

Such is the case with home-mortgage interest expense. That is the only form of consumer interest expense that remains tax deductible: all other interest incurred to finance personal consumption, such as the purchase of the family car, becomes an element of non-deductible personal consumption itself.

If the Packwood plan passes, there most likely will be pressure on the business community to come up with innovative credit instruments to allow taxpayers to use their homes as collateral for all or most of their credit needs.

Already there is talk in banking circles of offering credit cards secured by a second trust deed on real property held for personal use. The credit line could be used to buy a car, take a vacation or go out to dinner, and because the card would be secured by a first or second home, all interest payments then would become tax-deductible.

On the investment side, losses generated from most passive tax-shelter investments (among them investments in real-estate limited partnerships) would no longer be deductible against other unrelated income earned during the year. In addition, gains on the sales of appreciated properties would be taxed in full with the proposed repeal of the 60 percent long-term capital-gains deduction. Does that combined "one-two" punch spell disaster for the real-estate investment industry? Or will the marketplace be able to sidestep the blows by packaging real-estate investment opportunities in a slightly different form?

To avoid the passive tax-shelter loss limitation in the Packwood plan, investors in real-estate shelters might consider becoming shareholders in "small-business corporations" (commonly known as S corporations), where they would be considered actively involved in the management of the company. Such an adjustment would not be without its cost, however. Investors would have to be willing to forgo the limited liability that they currently enjoy as limited partners for continued "flow-through" of investment losses on their individual returns. That is because shareholders in small businesses or closely held corporations are typically asked to guarantee personally the loans of the corporation itself. In any event, investors should only dispose of their appreciated real-estate holdings by swapping with other real-estate investors, avoiding the payment of tax that would normally accompany an outright sale of appreciated property for cash.

Other tax-shelter investment opportunities may actually be strengthened by this legislation. Oil and gas may be deluged with a massive inflow of capital investment because tax-shelter losses reported by investors who have "working interests" in oil and gas ventures will remain deductible against other income. Various special benefits unique to the industry, such as percentage depletion and direct write-off of tangible drilling costs, also will be retained. In effect, a tax-shelter "monopoly" has been created by simply changing the tax treatment of all other passive investment activity relative to it.

Let us not forget that progressive income taxation is still alive and well, although only a shadow of its former self. Nonetheless, where some individuals will be taxed at 27 percent (or even higher for families that earn $75,000 to $185,000) and others at 15 percent, higher-income taxpayers will continue to transfer investible funds or income to lower-income taxpayers to take advantage of the lower marginal tax rate. Permanent gifts of capital to lower-income family members such as children and elderly parents should thrive, as should temporary trusts and lending.

Unlike the dinosaur, tax shelters will adapt to their new surrounding environment, changing shape to accommodate any shift in tax preference brought about by a change in the law.

Letters/ Teachers won't get raises, but they're not second-class citizens

Taxes hit farmers harder

Shortly after the school levy failed to pass, a teacher was heard to say: "The farmers didn't have to be so selfish, they could have voted for the levy and paid a little more tax."

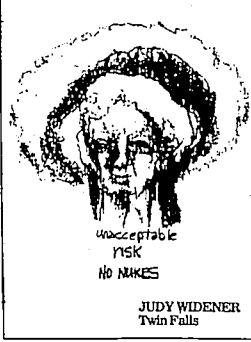

Unfortunately, that attitude is the unimproved basis for thinking in our community. While a home owner may look at about a $40 tax increase, three farmers I know were looking at $450, $500 and $1,500 tax raises. I don't call that a "little more!"

Just because the community says it isn't economically feasible to give raises to a particular group of workers (teachers) at this time, doesn't make them second-class citizens.

Also, in our elementary school (even though we passed the part of the levy to reduce classroom sizes) that will not happen as we thought since we are short two classrooms needed to achieve that goal.

I have just read an article on how the school board will "sharpen the pencil" without the levy. I ask, why didn't they do that before the levy? (I can't imagine any of the businessmen on the board going for a business loan before they had figured with a very sharp pencil.)

Criteria for life is arbitrary

The recent story on the dying Los Angeles infant that was denied a heart transplant is a perfect picture of the arbitrariness of "quality of life" criteria that is pushed by much of the medical community. The baby's parents were unwell, therefore the hospital decided not to even look for a new heart. But, when the grandparents were given custody, suddenly it was okay to give the infant a new heart.

What, may I ask, does the marital status of the parents have to do with saving a life? Undoubtedly someone will say that some other child with stable parents was "more deserving" of a new heart because it would "probably" have a "better life." This is so foolish. Have we now become diviners able to foresee the future?

How many of the people reading this letter were conceived and born outside of wedlock? How many of them have such a poor "quality of life" that they wish they had been killed or allowed to die or been refused medical treatment when they were born?

We are returning to the value system where one's "breeding" determines one's worth. There is only one criterion on which to base a life or death decision — all human life is precious and sacred and every human life must be saved regardless of other circumstances and regardless of cost. We must always choose life.

Abolish Marxist income tax

Webster's Dictionary defines reform as "a removal or correction of an abuse, a wrong, or errors."

Lawmakers are debating how best to reform the Marxist graduated income tax or how best to raise the same revenue by shifting the tax burden from one group to another. One tax "simplification" proposal (Packwood) consists of 2,847 pages which apparently contains cleverly disguised special interest provisions and all some way or another shift more tax burden to the middle class Americans or to business which will pass higher taxes on to consumers.

None of these approaches, no matter how well intended, is the best tax solution for the United States, which is to abolish the federal income tax altogether. This could be done if the federal government was limited to its constitutional functions. This would require much less revenue. Needed taxes would come from indirect taxes such as tariffs and excises.

From 1789 until passage of the 16th amendment in 1913, indirect taxes constituted the primary means the federal government had for raising money. This kept government small and allowed our nation to prosper.

With income tax government has first claim on our income and this infringes on property rights. Direct income tax has allowed the federal government to bring a free people to their knees.

The solution to our federal government's tax problems is not to "reform" the Marxist income tax system and make it more equitable, but to restore the Constitution.

America ran very well without the federal income tax. We can do it again.

Fundamentalist wins S. Baptist helm

ATLANTA (AP) — Backed by biblical fundamentalists, the Rev. Adrian P. Rogers defeated a moderate to win the powerful Southern Baptist presidency Tuesday, giving the strictly conservative faction the reins over the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

The 14.5 million-member denomination has been rocked by a long-running battle between fundamentalists, insisting on a strictly literalist view of the Bible, and moderates, open to varied understandings.

REV. ADRIAN P. ROGERS Takes 54 percent of vote

Rogers, of Memphis, Tenn., carried 21,201 votes, or 54 percent, to 17,838 votes, or 46 percent, for the moderate-supported candidate, the Rev. W. Winfred Moore of Arlington, Texas. Moore also lost a bid for the top office a year ago but had won the first vice presidency.

Announcement of the count stirred prolonged applause and cheers at the Georgia World Congress Center, where 40,000 delegates, called "messengers," were spread through four hunches immediately after the election results were disclosed, a message from President Reagan was read to the convention, declaring that "liberalism, which had seemed triumphant, has been thrown on the defensive."

Stating positions held by fundamentalists and most moderates, Reagan denounced the "tragedy of abortion" and defended the "right of children to pray" in public schools, which has been banned by the courts.

He said, "I am counting on men and women like you to continue to work until these things have been remedied."

The winning side in the fight over the presidency is regarded as securing control over the denomination's multimillion-dollar, national operations.

"It's the Southern Baptist Kentucky Derby," commented the Rev. Paige Patterson of Dallas, a fundamentalist campaign strategist. The Southern Baptist presidency is one of the strongest offices in American Christianity, peculiarly so in a denomination with a heritage of democratic rule, individual freedom of belief and congregational autonomy.

The president names a committee that nominates another committee that chooses trustees governing denominational agencies, seminaries and other institutions with annual total expenditures of about $400 million.

Such far-reaching organizational authority is not matched by any other top office in mainline U.S. Protestantism, nor by any member of the American Roman Catholic hierarchy.

Rogers, 51, an eloquent speaker, is pastor of Memphis' 16,000-member Bellevue Baptist Church, where he has served for 14 years. He initially won the denominational presidency in 1979, launching the fundamentalist surge.

Family's killer gets death

SEATTLE (AP) — A jury Tuesday sentenced to death a drifter who bludgeoned and knifed to death a lawyer, his wife and their two sons and claimed he killed the family because he thought the lawyer was a communist.

David L. Rice, 27, an unemployed steelworker, was sentenced by the same King County Superior Court jury that convicted him Thursday in the Christmas Eve attacks in the home of Charles Goldmark, 41, his wife, Annie, 43, and their sons, Colin and Derek.

Presidential biographer Miller dies

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — Merle Miller, the author of biographies on presidents Harry Truman and Lyndon Johnson, died Tuesday at Danbury Hospital. He was 67.

A hospital spokeswoman said she didn't know the cause of death.

Miller, born in Montour, Iowa, was a correspondent for the Philadelphia Record in 1940. He was an editor at Yank magazine from 1941-45, contributing editor to Time magazine in 1945 and an editor at Harpers magazine from 1947-49.

A resident of Brewster, N.Y., he wrote several books, including: "Plain Speaking, An Oral Biography of Harry S. Truman," "Lyndon, An Oral Biography of Lyndon Baines Johnson," "We Dropped the A-Bomb," and "On Being Different."

Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Ex-counsel's ethics questioned by panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House counsel Fred Fielding "skipped Common Sense 101" during a Reagan administration probe of lobbyist Michael K. Deaver, showing that Fielding was ethically insensitive, members of a House panel maintained Tuesday.

Fielding's actions during the internal probe "poorly served" President Reagan, especially when the White House counsel wrote a memo favorable to Deaver just one day after meeting with a vice president of Deaver's firm, the lawmakers said.

Members of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee told reporters they were under the impression that Fielding received a job offer at the meeting, although both Fielding and Deaver denied that.

The lawmakers commented on Fielding's performance after he testified for nearly three hours before a closed subcommittee session. The House members emphasized that Deaver, not Fielding, remains the main target of their investigation.

Deaver is the former deputy chief of staff and a longtime confidant to President Reagan, who left government on May 10, 1985 to form the lobbying firm of Michael K. Deaver and Associates. The panel and a court-appointed independent counsel, in separate inquiries, are trying to learn whether Deaver violated conflict-of-interest laws by lobbying his former colleagues on issues he personally handled while in the government.

A House committee source, speaking only on condition he not be named, said Deaver's lawyers have balked about a return appearance by their client, who testified in closed session last month. The source said the attorneys believe Deaver should not testify during the independent counsel's investigation, and have sought a meeting with panel chairman John D. Dingell, D-Mich., to press their case.

Dingell told reporters after the Fielding hearing. Yes, Mr. Deaver's going to be back. The committee source said the chairman would recommend use of his subpoena power, if necessary.

Fielding, who went into private law practice last March, was called to testify because of his role in an earlier investigation of Deaver by the Office of Government Ethics.

President welcomes Gorbachev proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, in a departure from its generally skeptical view of Soviet proposals, welcomed on Tuesday an offer by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to create an international program to assist victims of nuclear accidents.

A State Department spokesman called it "a new idea" and said the United States supports efforts to work out international agreements for emergency assistance.

The Gorbachev proposal would provide free medical care, housing and financial aid to victims of nuclear accidents. The Soviets suffered a major disaster in April at their Chernobyl nuclear reactor near Kiev.

Valery Legasov, a member of the Soviet investigating commission, told East European allies attending a meeting in Budapest, Hungary, that "Chernobyl showed that a large accident caused moral and material damage not only to the larger regions and states."

Bernard Kalb, the State Department spokesman, said Gorbachev's proposal went beyond existing guidelines of the International Atomic Energy Agency on emergency assistance. He said when further details were available they would be studied.

Train yields 2 bodies

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Two burned bodies were found Tuesday in the wreckage of a derailed freight train as approximately 700 people remained out of their homes for a third day for fear of a second explosion among the hazardous chemical-bearing cars.

The unidentified bodies, discovered as crews worked to douse the wreckage, still burning from Sunday's derailment, might have been those of hobos who were hitching a ride, said Union Pacific Railroad spokesman John Bromley.

All crew members have been accounted for, and no one in the area of the accident been reported missing, said Bromley.

Seven tank cars filled with hazardous chemicals were among the 32 cars derailed from the 80-car Union Pacific train Sunday afternoon as the train crossed a trestle over Salado Creek in San Antonio.

As many as 2,000 people have been evacuated during the ongoing cleanup.

One of the tank cars filled with butadiene exploded and a second one caught fire Monday, as did two box cars carrying cotton seed and wooden pallets. The wreckage was still burning Tuesday evening.

GAO claims new chemical warfare weapon has bombed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Accounting Office said Tuesday that the Pentagon's main new chemical weapon — the Bigeye bomb — doesn't work, an assessment that gave new ammunition to opponents of the Reagan administration's plan to resume production of chemical armaments.

The Bigeye bomb is not ready for production, the congressional watchdog agency said in a study released by Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee; Rep. John Edwards, R-Ill.; and Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark.

The trio led the losing side last year when Congress approved production of the first U.S. chemical weapons since 1969.

The Defense Department wants to produce three types of chemical weapons, including a Bigeye bomb dropped by airplanes, a chemical-tipped shell for 155mm artillery guns, and a chemical warhead for the Army's Multiple Launch Rocket System.

The GAO said the Bigeye has problems with the chemicals inside it and with the bomb itself. Although many of the details in the report were classified, an unclassified version was released at a news conference.

The Pentagon plans to build binary chemical weapons, which take their name from the fact they are composed of two chemicals kept separate until the shell is fired or bomb dropped. At that point, they are supposed to mix to form a lethal gas.

The study criticized plans to have Navy and Air Force pilots who deliver the bomb fly to their targets at relatively high altitudes of around 30,000 feet and then drop the bomb.

That tactic exposes the pilots to enemy missiles, the GAO said, and is not as sound as permitting the pilots to fly much lower.

The Pentagon says the tactic — and the long fall of the bomb — is necessary to sufficiently warn the chemicals inside the bomb so that they can mix.

The GAO study did not analyze the warheads for the rockets or artillery shells.

The Pentagon, asked for reaction to the GAO study, said it was preparing a formal response. However, a spokesman, Air Force

Lt. Col. Don Brownlee, said many of the problems cited by the GAO were being fixed.

Congress last year approved chemical weapons after a long fight, a close decision that reversed four years of earlier congressional defeats for the weapon. It was only significant weapon that President Reagan had been denied in his military rearmament program.

But Congress put several conditions on its approval, including a ban on production until at least Oct. 1, 1982, and no production unless U.S. allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization set a new "force goal" that includes new American chemical weapons.

NATO took that action last month.

Reagan says the new U.S. weapons are needed to offset a growing Soviet chemical arsenal, although opponents say the current U.S. arsenal is enough. The size of both superpowers' arsenals are classified, but most accounts put the U.S. arsenal at 25,000 to 40,000 tons, while the Soviet stockpile is estimated at about 300,000 tons.

The Pentagon has asked for $56.9 million for the Bigeye in its budget request for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, and Pryor promised Tuesday to try to eliminate that money.

"This bomb is a turkey to end all turkeys," he said. "I'm willing to dig my heels in and fight this."

35,000 set for desert exercise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roughly 35,000 U.S. servicemen will participate in a major exercise next month designed to test their ability to operate in a desert environment, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

The exercise, staged every two years and code-named Gallant Eagle, will begin July 25 and extend through Aug. 3, the Pentagon said.

The exercise is sponsored by the U.S. Central Command, one of six so-called "unified commands." The Central Command is responsible for military readiness in a broad area that extends from Kenya in eastern Africa northward to Egypt and then eastward through the Arabian peninsula and Pakistan on the Asian continent.

The Pentagon said Gallant Eagle 86 will be conducted at 10 military installations in California and Utah, with most of the ground operations taking place at the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., and the Marine Corps Air Ground Combat Center at Twentynine Palms, Calif.

Elements of each of the four services will participate, along with units from the Reserves and National Guard, the Pentagon added, "and air support for the exercise will be spread from several airfields scattered throughout the Southwestern United States."

NOW sues abortion activists

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Organization for Women said Tuesday it has filed a lawsuit against three prominent anti-abortion activists to try to stop what it called "a reign of terror" against abortion clinics.

The announcement came just hours after a pipe bomb ripped through an abortion clinic in Wichita, Kan., the latest act of violence in an escalating war over the emotional issue.

The class-action lawsuit, filed Monday in Wilmington, Del., claims the anti-abortion leaders violate federal antitrust laws by inciting their followers to harass and intimidate abortion clinics out of business.

"These fanatics have instituted a reign of terror against women nationwide," NOW President Eleanor Battaie Small said at a news conference. "They have used violent tactics to close clinics, including smashing medical equipment, invading clinics and intimidating patients and medical staff."

"This is clearly a nationwide criminal conspiracy, which the federal government has refused to treat as such."

The lawsuit seeks a federal court injunction to prevent the three from driving women's health centers that perform abortions out of business through a pattern of concerted, unlawful activity.

The Southern Poverty Law Center of Montgomery, Ala., is representing NOW and two clinics — the Pensacola Ladies Center and the Delaware Women's Health Organization — in the lawsuit.

The suit was filed in Delaware because it is the spot Mr. Scheidler has declared will be the first state to be free of abortions," attorney Richard Cohen said.

The unusual antitrust approach is being patterned after a successful SPLC lawsuit that in 1982 protected Wisconsin fishermen in Texas against the Ku Klux Klan's attempts to drive them out of business.

The Justice Department has declined to investigate abortion-related violence, saying there is no nationwide link to the bombings and 27 arson attacks on abortion facilities recorded since 1977 by the National Abortion Federation. The federation counted 45 acts of violence in 1982, 54 in 1983, 173 in 1984 and 224 in 1985. The acts ranged from death threats to vandalism to bombings.

Shuttle report seen as victory for astronaut corps

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronauts will gain more power in NASA if the recommendations of the Rogers commission are followed, but an astronaut said Tuesday that senior military pilots still might avoid space agency management jobs because it would mean a loss of up to $10,000 a year in pay.

The astronaut, who spoke only on condition that he not be identified, said recommendations from the commission investigating the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger are a triumph for the astronaut corps and will restore the powers once enjoyed by the Apollo mission crews.

The Rogers commission recommended that the Flight-Crew Operations Directorate, which includes the astronauts, should be elevated in the NASA management structure.

"If that office gets elevated, then the astronauts will have more say," he said. "Their word will be heard at a higher level and the astronauts should be able to accomplish more in the design and the design changes of the shuttle."

"This would effectively put the astronaut office operating at the level it did during the Apollo days," he added.

Members of the astronaut corps also are happy about the commission's suggestion that more astronauts be placed in agency management positions.

"It was recognized that a lot of astronauts have not had the opportunity to move up in the management structure because it has been closed to them," he said. "This will force the issue."

Senior military pilot astronauts, however, might still avoid civil service jobs in NASA, he said.

Astronauts who hold the rank of captain in the Navy or colonel in the Air Force or Marine Corps, he said, would have a $10,000 a year pay cut if they retired from the military to take NASA civil service jobs.

A Navy captain in the astronaut corps now receives about $38,700 annually, counting flight pay and housing allowances. A civilian astronaut without a medical degree receives $42,653. A medical degree adds about $8,000 to the civilian rate.

Three senior military pilot astronauts, Richard Truly, Thomas Mattingly and Robert Overmeyer, have left NASA in recent months. Others have told colleagues of their intentions to leave.

"Opportunities on the outside were more appealing to me than they were in the government," Overmeyer said.

Still-other astronauts, said the source, are planning to leave because they expect to not be able to fly for years.

"When they look into the future and realize they'll not be flying for three or four years, they start looking around for a career move," he said.

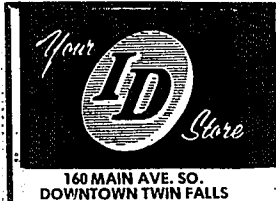

Astronauts have had little power in recent years to change the shuttle design and flight operations, the source said. John Young, chief of the astronaut corps, was reduced to writing memos to get the astronaut views into the upper management decision process.

Some of Young's memos critical of NASA management were leaked during the Challenger investigation, and several of the points he made were incorporated in the Rogers commission report. These include recommendations that no landings at the Kennedy Space Center be planned without further testing of landing systems.

Escape system 'not practical' — Armstrong

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former astronaut Neil Armstrong told Congress Tuesday it is "neither practical nor desirable" to install an all-situation escape system for space voyagers.

But Armstrong, first man to walk on the moon and vice chairman of the Challenger investigative commission, called anew for a more modest system to save lives during certain types of mishaps.

What's what

Australia is now No. 1 on that list of foreign destinations Americans say they'd most like to visit. Up from No. 49 in 1983. Most observers credit not Midwest terrorists but one jaunty young man on TV. You've seen the fellow, chmate?

Why whales as yet haven't learned how to breathe underwater I don't know. They spend as much as 80 percent of their lives there?

The male-female ratio in Anchorage, Alaska, is 107.7 men to 100 women. In Jackson, Miss., it's 89.3 men to 100 women. Arrange your holiday plans accordingly.

Women's clothing now costs more in Chicago, Tokyo and Buenos Aires, than in any other cities worldwide.

BIKE POWER

Q. If you converted calories to gasoline, how many passenger miles per gallon would you get on a bicycle?

A. About 3,000.

Q. What U.S. city has the highest divorce rate?

A. Dallas. Then Phoenix. Then Houston.

Q. The slit in the lower back of a man's suit coat - what's it for?

A. Comfort on horseback. Or it was when the fashion got started.

WARS

One thing more than any other in human history has caused wars - border disputes. In medieval England and elsewhere, combat was the normal legal way to settle rural property claims. No court system handled such. This was brought over to North America's frontier, quite naturally. In movies, we see cattlemen justly little wars against settlers with tales of how said cattlemen alone fought the Indians to tame the land. But traditionally, they didn't need to justify. That was how it was done, how it always had been done.

In the world of deer, the best thing a doe can do for her newborn fawn is stay away from it. Except to nurse. And so she does. The doe has a scent perceptible to predators. The fawn doesn't.

In Oregon's Portland is a company that makes life jackets for dogs and cats.

Statlers, Lynn top honorees at Country Awards

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Statlers hit it big with five fan-voted honors and "Coal Miner's Daughter" Loretta Lynn was honored as a Living Legend at the 20th Annual Music City News Country Awards.

REBA MCENTIRE Top female vocalist

"We want to simply and sincerely say God bless all of you in a very special way. ... I hope we never do anything to disappoint you," said Don Reid, lead singer for the group.

The Statlers, from Staunton, Va., and discovered by country star Johnny Cash in the 1960s, have won a total of 33 Music City News awards.

Miss Lynn won the Living Legend award for contributions to country music during a career spanning more than 25 years.

"I think this is quite a surprise. I think probably since I've been singing, you people have done more for me than I have for you and I love all of you," Miss Lynn said as she brushed away tears in accepting the award.

Her life was made into the 1980 movie "Coal Miner's Daughter," which starred Sissy Spacek and won her an Academy Award for the title role.

Miss Lynn was presented the award by last year's winner, Barbara Mandrell, who lauded her as the first female headline singer in country music.

Reba McEntire won female vocalist of the year for the second straight year and George Strait won male vocalist of the year.

"This is very special," said Miss McEntire. "The fans are extra special to me. If it wasn't for the fans I'd be back in Oklahoma teaching."

She studied elementary education at Southeastern Oklahoma State University before a singing career beckoned.

Strait, a former cattle drive foreman in Texas, was presented.

The Judges, a mother-daughter combination, were voted duet of the year and the "Hee Haw" gospel quartet was gospel act of the year for the seventh time.

Members are Grandpa Jones, Roy Clark, Buck Owens and Kenny Price.

Jones, accepting the award, dedicated it to Owens, who has left the syndicated country music show to concentrate on business interests.

Other winners were: Ray Stevens, comedian of the year; "Nashville Now" on The Nashville Network, country music TV series of the year; "FarmAid," country music TV special of the year; John Schneider, former co-star of the TV series "Dukes of Hazzard," star of tomorrow.

The Statlers, whose singing specialty is love themes, won in every category they were finalists in except for comedian of the year.

The four-piece band Alabama and Miss Mandrell, who have dominated country music awards in the 1980s, won nothing. Alabama was a finalist for three awards and Miss Mandrell was a finalist for four.

Miss McEntire, Clark, the Oak Ridge Boys and Mel Tillis were hosts for the show — the only fan-voted country music awards presented on television.

The show was among the first events in the 15th annual "Pan Fair," a week of special country music concerts, exhibits and activities.

About 21,500 country music fans are in Nashville this week for the festivities.

PG-13 Rating Introduced

A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is designated as "PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children."

The revised five-category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

G: General Audiences, all ages admitted.

PG: Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

PG-13: Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

R: Restricted, under-17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

NC: No one under 17 admitted. All films rated after July 1 will be given ratings under the new five-category system.

Brutal killings bewilder rural residents

NORTHAMPTON, Pa. (AP) — A few days after Martin Appell's arrest for allegedly taking part in a bank robbery that left three people dead, someone sneaked onto his property and spray-painted "Hang em High" on his trailer.

Several miles away, drivers for a taxi fleet have been pelted with eggs or called "killer cabbies" because they worked for the same company as Appell and Stanley Hertzog, the second suspect in the bank robbery.

The slayings of three innocent, likable people would shock any community, but the brutal manner of Friday's holdup at the First National Bank of Bath branch in East Allen Township has multiplied the outrage and bewilderment in this semi-rural section of the Lehigh Valley.

Residents of Northampton, Bath and other towns interspersed among the cement mills, potato farms and strawberry fields 60 miles north of Philadelphia can't fathom why two men would enter the bank with guns blazing — killing three women employees before fleeing with a little more than $2,000.

"Bank robbers shoot their way out of a bank, not in," said Dan Kereb, a Cermanin resident who recently lost his job when Mack Trucks closed a plant in nearby Allentown. "There's one place of information everybody wants to know — Why did they do it, shoot people for twenty-two hundred bucks?"

Funeral services were held Tuesday for two of the three victims — Teller Janice Conter, 46, of Northampton, and secretary Jane Hartman, 34, of Catasauqua. Teller Hazel Evans, 55, of Coplay was buried Monday in a private ceremony.

Reagan's elementary principal dies

DIXON, Ill. (AP) — Esther Barton, the principal of the elementary school where Ronald Reagan attended fifth grade, has died at the age of 89.

Barton, who had been the last school official left alive from when Reagan attended the E.C. Smith Elementary School, died Monday at Franklin Grove Health Care after a long illness, authorities said.

The president sent a basket of flowers to Barton when she suffered a stroke and was hospitalized in November 1964.

The two injured people continued to improve at hospitals. Two other people inside the bank during the attack escaped unharmed.

The killing was "an appearance of evil itself," Rev. David Bat-chelder of the First Presbyterian Church of Hokendauqua said at Ms. Hartman's funeral in Northampton.

"What happened here offers no reason, no sense and no rationale," he said.

The community's outrage flooded over when it was learned Friday afternoon that two men had been arrested in connection with the robbery. Two hundred people gathered outside the district justice's chambers, cursing the suspects and shouting "Kill 'em, Kill 'em!" as the two were led from the storefront office into police cars.

David Miller, a Board of Supervisors member in East Allen Township, which has no police force of its own, said residents were just numb and sad, not angry. But fellow supervisor Grace Check, a customer at the bank who knew the three victims, disagreed.

"They are very angry. They just want the men punished. But what punishment could be enough? You have to remember, this is a small community and many people banked there. People knew them," she said.

"They should add a day to deer hunting season, and let them out with bullets on their heads," Jerry Barnack, a cement hauler, suggested to fellow patrons at the Miller Manor bar Monday evening.

Police this week continued their tight grip on information, declining to speculate on a motive for the slayings or disclose whether investigators have one. Eighteen state police investigators were working on the case along with the FBI.

Information on Appell and Hertzog remained sketchy and shed no light on why they allegedly committed the robbery.

Appell, 28, of Northampton, and Hertzog, 29, of Allentown, were described by co-workers at the Quick Service Cab Co. in Allentown as regular guys who caused no trouble and seemed incapable of committing such a crime. The two men joined the company about two years ago and regularly worked the 3 p.m. to 1 a.m. shift without incident, often taking dinner breaks together. Two fellow drivers said they were aware of no drug or alcohol problems.

"In my wildest dreams I couldn't imagine these guys doing something like that," said one driver who spoke on the condition he not be identified.

"They were both real nice guys," said another driver. "Stanley was the blond-haired one. He was immature, like a big kid. Marty Appell, he was very quiet. I would say this took us by surprise."

Hertzog lived with his father and mother on the east side of Allentown, and neighbors there were reluctant to talk about him.

Appell lived in a mobile home park in semi-rural Moore Township, about five miles north of the bank. He had lived there about a year, making no friends with other residents, according to five neighbors interviewed Monday.

He had at least one prior brush with the law. In 1984 he was placed on one year's probation on a conviction for impersonating a police officer. He was suspended from his job as a corrections officer at the Lehigh County Jail in 1984, authorities said.

"Nobody ever saw him in the yard or doing anything. He never had any co-workers or children running around," said Tony Farkas, a 35-year-old decorator. "The curtains were drawn all the time. It didn't look much different than it does now."

Squatter-camp bloodbath continues; death toll at 14

CROSSROADS, South Africa (AP) — Hundreds more shanties were burned Tuesday, the second day of a battle between rival blacks that is laying waste to this squalid squatter camp. The death toll rose to 14 and about 50,000 people are homeless. Men fought in a cold winter rain with guns, axes, iron bars, rocks — any weapons they were able to hand. Police said seven people were killed each day. It is the second explosion of violence in less than a month between conservative vigilantes and militant "comrades" in Crossroads, a sprawling shantytown 12 miles east of Cape Town that the government has been trying to bulldoze for years. Among 20 people wounded in the two-day battle were four journalists, one of whom suffered serious wounds. Many of the people attacked this week were among about 30,000 people who lost their homes in the previous fighting and had taken refuge in tents, churches and community halls. Relief workers said another 20,000 were left homeless by the fighting Monday and Tuesday, most of them in the KTC section, which is named after a local store. Vigilantes controlled virtually all of KTC by Tuesday evening. Those now homeless in Crossroads constitute nearly half its population. The vigilantes are called "wildcocks" (white scarves) for the bandannas they wear and are loyal to Johnson Ngobongwana, boss of the Crossroads Committee that since it was founded in 1975. Younger activists in outlying sections, known as "comrades," have challenged the committee in recent months, accusing the "fathers" of corruption. The conflict eventually led to violence. As in the fighting last month, many residents and clergymen accused police of allowing, or even encouraging, the vigilantes to attack the homes of foes in the outlying sections. Police and the government deny any involvement, except in trying to stop the fighting. Reporters saw hundreds of vigilantes attack KTC after police dispersed a group of 2,000 to 3,000 young "comrades." The younger men had taken up positions on a sandy ridge when the vigilantes arrived. It was a standoff for about 30 minutes, with small groups making brief advances to throw stones and bottles. Some gunshots were heard, but most of the combatants were armed with clubs, axes, hammers and iron bars. Several police vehicles came from another direction and drove through the maze of shacks, firing tear gas and rubber bullets to drive off the militants. Vigilantes moved up during the melee and set fires that spread through hundreds of shacks that had survived Monday's fighting. Thick clouds of black smoke billowed into the sky. Cameraman George De'Ath and soundman Andile Fosi, South African freelancers working for the British network Independent Television News, were caught and slashed with axes, apparently by the vigilantes, colleagues said.

20 die as jet crashes

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — An Egyptian airliner diverted to Alexandria because of sandstorms caught fire and crashed Tuesday as it returned to Cairo, killing 20 of the 25 people aboard, officials and a survivor reported. The officials said six passengers survived, but one died shortly after being admitted to a hospital. The twin-engine Fokker 27 operated by the government's Air Sinal crashed about a half mile away from the Cairo airport at 7:30 p.m. Cairo time and plowed into the compound of a construction company. The crash site was a mile from an amusement park jammed with people celebrating the final day of a four-day Moslem holiday. Air Sinal authorities said all of the passengers and crew members were Egyptians. The plane was on a domestic flight to Cairo from the Sinal resort of Sharm el-Sheikh when it was diverted to Alexandria because of sandstorms here. After a four-hour layover in Alexandria, the plane departed for Cairo as the weather cleared. One of the survivors, Rizk Abdul Ritzkallah, 31, told The Associated Press the pilot tried to land "six or seven times" but would "pull up at the last minute." Rizkallah, whose bride of one month also survived the crash, said passengers saw flames coming from the right engine as the pilot made his final approach. "All the red lights in the plane went and I hit the alarm," said Rizkallah, an accountant for the Egyptian-American Bank. "The next thing I knew we hit the ground, and my wife and I were thrown a long way out in our chairs. I saw the plane go up in flames."

Geldof wins knighthood

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II on Tuesday awarded Irish rock star Bob Geldof an honorary knighthood in recognition of his work for the starving people of Africa, the Foreign Office announced. Because he is not a British citizen, Geldof will not be Sir Bob Geldof, but Bob Geldof, KBE — which stands for Knight Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire. The award was made on the recommendation of Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe because of the work Geldof has done in organizing Band Aid, Live Aid, and last month's Sport Aid.

Austrian Socialists attempt to regroup. VIENNA, Austria — The Socialists began reorganizing their government Tuesday in an attempt to counter Kurt Waldheim's presidential victory and recapture disenfranchised voters before parliamentary elections next April. Waldheim's capture of the largely ceremonial presidency Sunday with conservative support set off a swift series of actions by the Socialists, who have governed Austria for 16 years. Chancellor Franz Sinsowatz resigned Monday and was replaced by Franz Vranitzky, the finance minister. Foreign Minister Leopold Guentz and Agriculture Minister Grotzer and Haiden also said they would step down. Socialist popularity has been slipping in Austria. The party had suffered setbacks in local and regional elections before Waldheim won the presidency over Kurt Steyrer, the Socialist candidate, with nearly 54 percent of the vote. Gratz confirmed after a cabinet meeting Tuesday that he was resigning to devote full time to the chairmanship of the Vienna party organization. Sinsowatz said when he resigned a day earlier that he would give his full energy to getting the national party ready for the spring elections. The government, who has been in the holdover for nearly 10 years, did not say what he would do after leaving the post. His image suffered from last year's tainted-wine scandal and a conflict with dairy farmers.

Montaser Sadeddin, deputy commander of a local police station, said the plane crashed on a highway about 750 yards from a runway at the airport, located in the desert on the eastern edge of the city, and skidded into the construction company compound. One airport source said the dead included stewardess Ashgan Attia, who had survived last November's blocking of an Egyptian jetliner in Malta, in which 60 people were killed when Egyptian commandos stormed the plane. Other airport sources said pilots of an Iraqi Airways plane and a Lufthansa jetliner had radioed the control tower that they saw flames from one of the craft's two engines moments before the crash. Britain pulls kids' aspirin. LONDON (AP) — All children's aspirin products are being withdrawn from sale in Britain because of U.S. research suggesting a link between aspirin and Reye syndrome, a rare but often fatal childhood disease, a manufacturers' group said Tuesday. The Aspirin Foundation, representing nine British manufacturers of aspirin products, said it was acting on government advice to halt the sale of aspirin and to change aspirin-based medicines such as cough syrup, marketed for children. Nick Henderson, the association's executive director, said retailers were being told to return the products to the manufacturers. Within six months, adult aspirin products will carry warnings against giving aspirin to children, he said.

Navy dispatched. PARIS (AP) — The French government dispatched Navy units to Hendaye, a French port on the Spanish border under blockade by 270 Spanish fishing boats, officials announced Tuesday. The fishermen set up the blockade Monday to protest a ban on Spanish vessels fishing in the area. The ban was imposed after Spain joined the Common Market on Jan. 1.

FBI's leads place Claude Dallas somewhere near San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Claude L. Dallas Jr., the so-called "mountain man" who is on the FBI's list of 10 most wanted fugitives, is believed to be in the San Francisco Bay area, the FBI said Tuesday.

Special Agent Ellen Knowlton said a woman believed to be traveling with the prison escapee was spotted Friday night in Newark, a city on the east side of the bay about 30 miles southeast of San Francisco.

"We are following up leads and we hope to apprehend him shortly," Ms. Knowlton said.

She said Dallas himself had not been seen, but his girlfriend, Margaret Lundy, was spotted walking in Newark at 9:30 p.m. Friday. Lundy disappeared shortly after Dallas escaped from Idaho State Prison on March 30, she said.

Dallas, 36, was serving 30 years in the prison for a voluntary manslaughter conviction in the January 1981 slayings of two Idaho Department of Fish and Game officers. He escaped by cutting through two heavy gauge chain-link fences and wasn't missed by guards for about three hours.

The prison is in the area where the Idaho, Nevada and Oregon borders meet, a wilderness where Dallas had lived the life of a 19th-century mountain man for 15 years before the killings of officers Bill Pogue, 50, and Conley Elms, 54.

The two officers were trying to arrest Dallas on game violations when they were shot several times each behind the car with a .22-caliber rifle.

Dallas was arrested in April 1982 after being wounded in a lengthy chase with FBI agents. He claimed at his trial he had shot the two game wardens in self-defense.

The FBI is hunting Dallas on a federal warrant charging him with unlawful flight to avoid incarceration. Knowlton said no warrants are pending against Lundy, 30.

The bulletin said the couple is believed to be "staying either in a low-rent motel or a campground" in the area. Knowlton said there were no reports of sightings of the car they are believed to be driving, a silver-grey 1978 Fiat coupe with California license plates.

Jones says attorneys abusing act

SEATTLE (AP) — A change is needed in the Civil Rights Attorneys Fee Act of 1976, Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones says, because it is being used to claim excessive lawyer fees from governmental agencies.

Jones spoke Tuesday to the Corrections Committee of the National Association of Attorneys General convention here.

He said the U.S. Supreme Court "appears to be ready to make the needed limitations to protect state and local governments from abuses and excessive awards" under the 1976 act.

The act allows the award of attorney fees in successful actions alleging civil rights violations by government agencies.

"This legislation has been helpful in vindicating the rights of legitimate claimants whose civil rights have been infringed upon," Jones said, but there is "widespread abuse by litigants whose claims are only remotely connected to civil rights violations."

He said many government agencies have been overwhelmed by civil rights claims.

"Each time a police officer arrests someone, and each time the daily routine in a state mental or penal institution is changed, the governmental entity is potentially subjected to a civil rights suit."

"The courts have allowed these suits and the consequent award of attorney fees to be expanded far beyond the intent of Congress," Jones said.

Idaho recently won a favorable ruling in the U.S. Supreme Court on the issue. Attorneys sued on behalf of minors they claimed were being unconstitutionally confined in a state mental institution.

The state agreed to make the changes requested in the lawsuit. Later, the Idaho Legal Aid Society filed a claim for attorney fees, despite waiving fees in an earlier settlement.

Jones said Congress could change the law, but it does not appear that Congress will act, and the U.S. Supreme Court may be a more appropriate route to change.

Although it takes time to make changes through the court system, state and local government should appeal every unfair award of attorney fees, Jones said.

Student president says UI students hurting from fee hikes

MOSCOW (AP) — University of Idaho students are "sitting on the edge of their seats," afraid they won't be able to make ends meet next fall, according to the president of the student body.

"For every dollar the university increases fees, we will lose students," said Gino White, president of UI's Associated Students and critic of a $15-per-semester fee increase approved Friday by UI President Richard Gibb. "Most students have been tapped for all they can pay."

A majority of the fee increases will go to support intercollegiate athletics.

Gibb approved the fee increase last week following a series of discussions with students, including a public hearing last month. It is the first time raising the student activity fee was up to the president.

Wyoming flash-flood warnings lifted as storms move out

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Southeastern Wyoming was drenched Tuesday by heavy rains accompanying a low-pressure system that prompted the National Weather Service to issue flash flood warnings.

However, the warnings and ensuing flash flood watch were lifted ahead of schedule as the storms moved out of the state, clearing the way for a warming trend expected to reach the region today. Laramie County and Cheyenne specifically, were mentioned in the flood warning the weather service issued at 3 a.m. after 2 inches of rain fell at Granite Reservoir, some 30 miles west of Cheyenne. The bulletin urged residents along Crow Creek between the reservoir and through the capital to be ready to flee rapidly rising waters.

However, at 6:20 a.m. the agency noted that the reservoir's low water level would enable it to absorb the rainfall and it canceled the flood warning and replaced it with the watch.

The watch, which covered all of southeastern Wyoming, was lifted shortly after 9 a.m. as rain showers moved off to the east.

Laramie County authorities who viewed the reservoir shortly after 4 a.m. Tuesday doubted there would be any serious flooding because of the low level and no evacuations were ordered.

Flooding along Crow Creek was responsible for some of the $60 million in damage Cheyenne sustained during last summer's devastating flood that killed 12, but most of the damage occurred along the flood path of Dry Creek.

The Aug. 1, 1985, flood occurred when a thunderstorm stalled over the capital and dropped a record 6 inches of rain on Cheyenne in less than four hours.

A flood warning issued late Monday for Cottonwood Creek in northern Platte County was canceled at 7 a.m. Tuesday as runoff in the creek began to recede, the weather service said.

Overnight rainfall totals in southeastern Wyoming included a measurement of 2.52 inches in Douglas and 2.8 inches in Lusk, the weather service said.

3 workers receive dose of radiation

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Three Nevada Test Site workers were exposed to radiation last week when they re-entered a tunnel that was contaminated during the troubled Mighty Oak nuclear test April 10, the Department of Energy said.

DOE spokesman Jim Boyer said all three received exposure doses that were within occupational safety guidelines.

One of the three was also exposed to radioactive iodine last month while re-entering the tunnel where the weapons effects test was conducted, Boyer said Monday.

A malfunction in the test left parts of the tunnel contaminated and damaged at least $20 million worth of equipment, the DOE announced earlier.

One of the workers exposed last month while mining back into the tunnel received 200 millirems of iodine-131 to the thyroid. Another worker received an exposure of 70 millirems. Radiation levels from the latest exposure showed the three workers last week received 625 millirems, 590 millirems and 375 millirems, respectively.

Millirem is the term used to describe the radiation dose to which a person is exposed. A chest X-ray is equivalent to about 20 millirems.

Occupational safety guidelines for radiation workers permit cumulative exposures of up to 3,000 millirems in any three-month period, with a maximum annual exposure of 5,000 millirems, Boyer said.

The three workers involved last week were wearing protective clothing with respirators and were in the contaminated area for less than five minutes, Boyer said.

Because of contamination in the tunnel where the test was conducted, a second tunnel is being drilled above the first one. Workers expect to reach two main alcoves where the contaminated equipment is located in three to four weeks, Boyer said.

The mining operation is being conducted on a three-shift basis, seven days a week, Boyer said.

The tunnel tests are designed to test the survivability of United States military and space hardware to a nuclear blast. Some of the weapons effects tests are believed to be related to current Star Wars research.

DOE officials believe the equipment and some of the alcoves along the main test tunnel were contaminated when trap doors failed to spring shut properly following the nuclear blast.

Laxalt hints at run for presidency

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sen. Paul Laxalt, noting he has the trust of the Republican Party's powerful conservative wing, says if he decides to seek the presidential nomination "my competitive juices will flow and I'll give it hell."

Laxalt vowed he would not play a spoiler's role in the 1988 race and would run only as a "genuine candidate."

He said that as party chairman, his primary goal will be to nominate a candidate who can be elected.

The Nevada Republican made his comments Monday in a Washington interview with the Los Angeles Times.

Laxalt headed Ronald Reagan's bid for the Republican nomination in 1976 and orchestrated his presidential victories in 1980 and 1984. He declined to say how he differs politically from Vice President Bush. Pressed as to how a Laxalt candidacy would differ from a Bush candidacy, Laxalt said: "Without creating any kind of divisions between Bush and me, I'd talk about continuity (with the Reagan administration), credibility with conservatives. Conservatives in the country trust me, and certainly those that have been in the last campaign with us have implored me to stay loose and keep my options open."

Any Bush candidacy would have to count on support from Reagan and the Republican Party's conservative wing.

Scoutmaster still missing; river scanned

CASTLE DALE, Utah (AP) — More than two dozen searchers using dogs scanned the San Rafael River Tuesday for a scoutmaster missing since his canoe was overturned in the turbulent waters during an outing Saturday morning.

Capt. David Owens of the Emery County Sheriff's Office said an aerial search of the area was discontinued because frequent downdrafts in the canyon made flying dangerous.

Mark Johnson, 38, Salt Lake City, was last seen clinging to a canoe which apparently was swamped by a swift undercurrent. Owens said three other occupants, including one of Johnson's sons, made it to shore safely.

The search was hampered by high water and a swift current, Owens said.

"This is a bad time of year to be running that water," Owens said.

Owens said he was unsure how long the search would continue, but he said it probably would last through the weekend.

Registration rises

MOSCOW (AP) — Approximately 150 more students registered for summer school at the University of Idaho this year than last year.

UI Registrar Matt E. Tolin reported that total summer school enrollment is 1,650.

"It's a comparable figure," Tolin said Monday. "Last year, we had 1,500."

The figures do not include those who registered for UI courses offered at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho Falls and elsewhere in the state.

Woman sentenced

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A former bookkeeper who admitted embezzling more than $90,000 from the Boy Scouts over six years has been ordered to spend eight months in partial confinement and make restitution.

Mae L. Tomayko, 25, of Spokane, will be required to spend nights and weekends in the Spokane County City Jail Superior Judge John A. Schulthess authorized work-release privileges that will allow her to attend a local beauty school during the day.

Need a main meal? Salads fill up corners

Summer weather welcomes option of outdoor favorites

Salads are achieving main meal status at a greater rate than ever before. An obvious reason for this is the dual advantage of having fewer calories while yielding all the benefits of a fresh nutritional meal.

Warm summertime weather lends itself to light and easy nutritional meals. Salads, one of the most versatile and economical meals around, keep time in the kitchen to a minimum, and can be prepared in advance without compromising taste for convenience. Creating salads with New Zealand Granny Smith Apples and California Iceberg lettuce is the freshest way to take the heat off on warm summer evenings.

The fresher the ingredients, the more nutritional the salad. This is because increased exposure to temperature and light can degrade the vitamin content in fruits and vegetables. It is essential that the freshest ingredients be used, to obtain the maximum nutritional value.

The freshest apples available during the summer months are New Zealand - Granny Smith - Apples. Because of the country's upside down growing season, New Zealand apples are harvested when domestic apple trees are barely in bloom. This allows consumers to have fresh apples six months before the domestic harvest begins.

There are only 80 calories in a Granny Smith apple and 25 calories in a single serving of iceberg lettuce (based on four servings per head of lettuce), and together they contain almost 20 percent of the daily requirement for Vitamin C.

Chicken is added to a basic Waldorf to make this a nutritious main dish. Add a touch of Mexican flair with salsa, avocado and sour cream.

MEXICAN CHICKEN WALDORF

- 1 head iceberg lettuce
- 2 apples
- 2 whole chicken breasts, boned, skinned, cooked and diced
- 1/2 cup sliced celery
- 1/4 cup dark seedless raisins
- 1/4 cup chopped walnuts
- 1/2 cup dairy sour cream
- 1/2 cup salsa
- 1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 1 avocado cut into wedges
- Core lettuce. With core-side down, cut a hollow in opposite side of head and pull open to make a bowl. Get a nice green, loose head for best results. Use two hands to open up gently so head remains leafy and attractive.

Dice 1 apple and combine with chicken, celery, raisins and walnuts. Combine sour cream, salsa and cayenne. Pour over chicken mixture and toss gently. Spoon chicken mixture into lettuce head. Garnish with avocado and remaining apple. If desired, dollop extra sour cream and salsa on top. Serve with tortilla chips. Makes four servings.

APPLE AND TURKEY JULIENNE SALAD

- 1 to 2 heads of lettuce
- 2 apples, cut into narrow wedges
- 1/2 lb. roast turkey breast, cut into julienne strips
- 1/2 cup crumbled blue cheese
- 8 slices of bacon cooked, drained and crumbled
- 3 green onions sliced diagonally
- Mustard French Dressing or Caraway Vinaigrette

Remove outer frilly leaves of lettuce and use to line salad bowl. Tear up enough lettuce to measure 1 1/2 quarts and place in salad bowl. Top with apples, turkey, blue cheese, bacon and green onions in an attractive manner. Serve with Mustard French Dressing or Caraway Vinaigrette.

Mustard French Dressing:

- Combine 1/4 cup cider vinegar, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon water and 3 teaspoons whole mustard seeds in an electric blender; whirl until smooth. Slowly whirl in 1/2 cup oil until thick and well blended. Stir in an additional 1 teaspoon whole mustard seeds. Makes about 1 cup.

Caraway Vinaigrette:

- Combine 1/4 cup vegetable oil, 1/2 tablespoons red wine vinegar, 1/2 teaspoon tarragon, crumbled, 1/2 teaspoon caraway seed, 1/4 teaspoon sugar and few dashes white pepper; mix well.

Makes four servings.

PALACE SHRIMP SALAD

- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 lb. medium prawns, shelled and deveined
- 1/2 medium onion cut into thin wedges
- 1/4 cup vegetable oil
- 1/4 cup white wine vinegar
- 2 medium cloves garlic, minced (1 teaspoon)
- 2 tablespoons peanut butter
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- Lettuce leaves
- 2 apples
- 1/2 lb. pea pods, steamed
- Heat oil in skillet. Sauté prawns and onion for 2 to 3 minutes or until prawns turn pink. Combine oil, vinegar, garlic, peanut butter, sugar and salt; mix well. Pour dressing over prawns and chill. To serve, line salad plates with several lettuce leaves. Slice apples and toss with dressing and prawns; divide prawn and apple mixture among salad plates. Garnish with pea pods and extra apple wedges. Makes four servings.

CAFE APPLE-CHEESE SALAD WITH WALNUT DRESSING

- 1 head lettuce
- 2 apples cut into wedges
- 8 oz. goat cheese or cream cheese* sliced into 8 pieces
- 4 oz. prosciutto, thinly sliced
- 1 teaspoon coarse black pepper
- 1/4 cup vegetable oil
- 3 tablespoons red wine vinegar
- 1/4 cup coarsely chopped and roasted walnuts
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon each: thyme, rosemary and marjoram

Cover four individual salad plates generously with lettuce leaves. Arrange apples, cheese and prosciutto in lettuce. Sprinkle each with pepper. Combine oil, vinegar, walnuts, sugar, thyme, rosemary and marjoram; mix well. Drizzle dressing over salad before serving.

THAI SALAD WITH SPICY DRESSING

- 1 1/2 quarts shredded lettuce
- 1 whole chicken breast, boned, skinned, cooked and shredded
- 2 apples, thinly sliced
- 1 cup bean sprouts, softened
- 2 tablespoons green onion, cut into long shreds, green part only
- 1/4 cup peanuts
- 1 teaspoon grated lime peel
- 1/2 cup rice wine vinegar
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1 to 3 teaspoons Tabasco

Place lettuce in large serving bowl. Top with chicken, apples, bean sprouts, green onion, peanuts, and lime peel in an attractive fashion. For dressing, combine vinegar, soy sauce, tabasco, sugar and garlic in electric blender; whirl until smooth. Whirl in olive oil a little at a time until thick and well blended. Drizzle dressing over salad; toss before serving.

*To soften bean sprouts, place in colander and pour boiling water over.

Makes four servings.

Rain has created a moss-laden grill

Last year at this time we were seasoned outdoor cooks, but, thanks to this year's cool, rainy weather, we haven't yet hit our stride. Usually by this time of year, we know when to start the coals so they are perfect after the Little League game. Everything is set with side dishes in the refrigerator, main dish marinating, trays of plates and stuff ready to be taken outside.

This year I discovered moss on my grill. Yep, on the north side, too! I guess we'll just have to change the way we do things unless this nice weather decides to stay around a bit.

By Father's Day, we normally are confident enough to try something new and different on the grill, but this year we'll be lucky if we feel brave enough to try variations on the old.

The Idaho Beef Council has a bunch of new recipes you might like to try. You know that TV ad where they show all those great things for $30 calories? Well, you can get the recipes for all of them. The beef promotion gets should be at your favorite market demonstrating this weekend, so ask them for recipes or write to 2120 Airport Way, Boise, ID 83705.

Lewiston woman winner of Idaho Beef Cook-Off with Philippine 'burrito'

BOISE — Diana Johnson Ocegiera, of Lewiston, won the Idaho Beef Cook-Off held June 7 in Boise with her recipe for Lumpia, a traditional Philippine food similar to a burrito.

Ocegiera won a new freezer and the beef to fill it along with a trip to Dearborn, Mich., and the chance to compete for $10,000 in prizes in the National Beef Cook-Off in September.

To develop her recipe for Lumpia, Ocegiera combined the filling for a Mexican taquitos and some ingredients from egg rolls.

For wrapping, she chose egg roll wrappers rather than tortillas because they work well for deep frying.

Lumpia can be served with a sweet and sour sauce or fish and worms well both as a main dish or an appetizer.

Taking second place was Kristi Appelhans of Idaho Falls, for Sildao, a Greek stew. Kimberly Little, Coeur d'Alene, was awarded third place for her Asparagus, Broccoli and Steak Salad.

For the first year, the contest included a microwave cooking contest in combination with the conventional category. E.J. Smith, Boise, was named the winner of that division for

Machamers share the cooking duties

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — In the Machamer household, the answer to the question of who is chief cook and bottle washer depends upon what day it is. It's the weekend, Dick is the one in the kitchen grating lime peel.

His wife, Maxine, works outside the home, so they share the cooking. He holds up his end of it — with pleasure.

"I really like to cook," he said. "It's not a forced issue, like you have to do it to survive. I just like to do it."

He collects cookbooks and has about 170 at this time. He also subscribes to several magazines devoted to gourmet cooking.

He first became interested in the subject while working with Boy Scouts about 20 years ago while teaching them how to prepare food on hikes. "I just brought it back into the home," he said.

Machamer taught his own children, Doug and Sherry, how to cook. Now that they are grown and on their own, they are putting this knowledge to good use.

The herbs, garlic and chives Machamer uses in his recipes originate in his own garden. He dries the herbs and puts his garlic in olive oil to keep it from drying out.

In addition, he makes several varieties of his own wine: berry, apricot, peach, apple, plum and rhubarb. "I like wine in my cooking, even my Chinese stir fry," he said. "I always pour a little wine in it."

"You don't get any alcohol content once you cook it, but you're getting the flavor, because your alcohol content burns out."

Machamer said he is an adventurous cook and enjoys experimenting. He especially likes to bake bread, stir fry and marinade steaks.

On Father's Day, he said he is going to prepare a meal on his barbecue for his father and mother. Among other things, he will cook a two-inch thick marinated beef roast and bake potatoes.

He usually does not make dessert. "Making ice cream is about the heaviest of my desserts. We have an ice cream maker, and the wife makes it — all I do is turn it on and off," he said.

The following are a couple of Machamer's favorite recipes.

STRIP STEAKS

Take a 2-inch thick round, boneless beef roast or chuck roast, and cut it cross grain, in about 1/4-inch strips. Remove any of the excess fat.

Prepare a marinade, using:

- 1 cup unsweetened pineapple juice
- 1 cup zesty Italian dressing
- 1/4 teaspoon paprika

Ken Hom lets secrets on deep-fried beans recipe slip by in book

Ken Hom, star of an eight-part television series on Chinese cookery, has written a cookbook that includes many of the recipes and techniques he demonstrates on his show. The book is titled "Ken Hom's Chinese Cookery" and is published by Harper & Row.

Ken Hom, star of an eight-part television series on Chinese cookery, has written a cookbook that includes many of the recipes and techniques he demonstrates on his show. The book is titled "Ken Hom's Chinese Cookery" and is published by Harper & Row.

A quality paperback, illustrated in color, it contains recipes practical for American cooks. His great knowledge of his subject, as well as his enthusiasm, enhance his work.

- KEN HOM'S DEEP-FRIED GREEN BEANS
- 2 cups oil
  - 1 pound string beans, trimmed and cut into 5-inch pieces
  - 1 tablespoon finely chopped garlic
  - 1 tablespoon finely chopped gingerroot
  - 2 tablespoons finely chopped scallions
  - 4 dried red chilies
  - 1 tablespoon bean sauce, available in Oriental food shops
  - 1 tablespoon rice wine or dry sherry
  - 1 tablespoon soy sauce
  - 1 teaspoon sugar
  - 1 tablespoon water

Heat oil in a deep-fat fryer or large wok until it is fairly hot. When a single bean is dropped into the oil, it should bubble all over. Deep-fry half the beans until they are slightly wrinkled — about 3 to 4 minutes. Remove beans and drain. Deep-fry the second batch the same way.

Transfer about 1 tablespoon of the oil in which you have cooked the beans to a clean wok or skillet. Add garlic, ginger and scallions and stir-fry quickly. Add chilies and stir-fry for about 30 seconds until they turn black. Remove chilies; add all the other ingredients. Stir-fry for a few seconds, and then add cooked, drained beans. Mix well until all the beans are thoroughly coated with the spicy mixture. Serve as soon as beans are heated through. Adapted from "Ken Hom's Chinese Cookery" by Ken Hom (Harper & Row.)

BEEF BREAKFAST BISCUITS

1 pound ground beef
 1/2 envelope onion soup mix
 1/4 teaspoon thyme
 2 tablespoons catsup
 2 cans (10-ounce size) large refrigerator biscuits
 2 tablespoons wheat germ
 Sprinkle beef with soup mix, thyme and catsup and stir well. Separate biscuits and flatten each to about 3/4 inches in diameter. Sprinkle 1/2 teaspoon wheat germ on half of biscuits, moisten edges with water and place 2 tablespoons beef mixture in center of each. Top with remaining biscuits and press edges together to seal. Place on baking sheets and store in refrigerator overnight or even a couple of days.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees and bake biscuits for 20 minutes or until lightly browned. Serve immediately. This makes 10 biscuits.

One fancy thing to do on Father's day is to make kabobs. They're really easy, and most of the work can be done ahead. They look and taste great.

Here is one that takes less than an hour.

BEEF AND THREE PEPPER KABOB

1 pound boneless beef sirloin steak, cut into 1-inch cubes

2 tablespoons each lemon juice, grated onion, red wine vinegar and vegetable oil
 1/4 teaspoon each ground cumin, garlic powder and crushed red pepper
 1/2 green, red and yellow bell pepper, each cut into 4 pieces
 4 small onions, parboiled salt and pepper to taste
 (I always add whole mushrooms, but this is optional.)
 Combine the lemon juice, onion, vinegar, oil, cumin, garlic powder and red pepper in bowl. Marinate for 15 to 30 minutes.

Thread beef cubes and pepper pieces (and optional mushrooms) onto four skewers, adding 1 onion to each.

Place kabobs on rack in broiler so surface of meat is 3 to 4 inches from heat. Broil 12 to 15 minutes, turning occasionally or to desired doneness. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Four servings.

If you are having a crowd over for Father's Day, try marinating a flank steak. It's great, serves a bunch and it's easy to make.

The easiest marinade is plain soy sauce. Just cover the steak with it and let sit at least overnight. (Drain and save the sauce in a jar in your refrigerator, so it will last all summer.)

Slice the steak diagonally against the grain in thin slices when you serve it.

This summer would be a good time for the Magic Valley cooks to experiment with beef. Every year there is a state and national cook-off. Next year, in September 1987, the national cook-off is going to be held here in Idaho — at Sun Valley. Wouldn't it be nice to have a local winner?

Hope your Dad's Day cookout is warm and dry. That would be different for this year, wouldn't it? Enjoy!

Nancy Joy Jones welcomes comments or recipes. Her address is 1020 I.S.L., Rupert, ID 83350.

1/4 teaspoon turmeric
 2 tablespoons brown sugar
 1 teaspoon celery seeds
 1 teaspoon black pepper
 1 teaspoon mustard seed
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 Mix dry ingredients and work into pieces of meat. Place them in a large zip lock plastic bag or glass dish, cover with a mixture of the juice and dressing, and let it marinate overnight in the refrigerator.

THE SAUCE:

1 large onion, very finely chopped
 2 tablespoons butter
 1/2 cup water
 2 tablespoons distilled white vinegar
 2 tablespoons brown sugar
 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
 1 cup ketchup
 4 tablespoons lime juice
 1 teaspoon dry mustard
 1 tablespoon garlic powder
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1/2 teaspoon black pepper

In a large pan, saute onions until quite brown. Pour in other ingredients and let cook over low heat, stirring, for about 30 minutes, until it gets nice and thick.

Remove strips of meat from marinade 1/2 hour before cooking. Let all marinade drain, and place on broiler about 6 inches away from broiler on low heat, and baste a little with the marinating sauce. Use the sauce to dip them in afterward. Broil five minutes on each side. Throw away marinade. Serve about six. This takes approximately 1 1/2 hours to prepare.

BLACK-EYED BEEF

Use a round roast or boneless beef. For the marinade, combine:
 2 cups red wine
 2 cups beef broth
 1 teaspoon allspice
 1 teaspoon thyme
 2 bay leaves
 Trim fat from beef. Cut in 1 1/2-inch cubes. Place in heavy plastic bag with sauce and marinate overnight.

Drain and reserve the marinade, and remove bay leaves. In large fry pan, brown meat in 2 tablespoons vegetable oil over medium high heat, until brown. In the same pan, pour in reserved marinade and cook on high, until it starts to boil. Turn heat back down and simmer for about an hour, until tender and until all the marinade is absorbed into the meat. Remove any grease particles. When the meat is almost done, saute 1 cup frozen pearl onions with 1/2 cup of sliced ripe olives and 2 cups sliced mushrooms. Add to the beef and cook a little longer. Arrange the beef, onions, olives and mushrooms on a platter.

"With the sauteed onions and the olives and mushrooms, it makes a pretty nice looking dinner. You can serve it with rice or any kind of potato or vegetable," he said.

Sardines grace a light summer salad

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

SARDINE SALAD WITH CAPER DRESSING

Leaf lettuce
 2 cans (each 3 1/2 ounces) brisling sardines in oil, drained
 12 cherry tomatoes
 1 small red onion, sliced and separated into rings
 1 small cucumber, sliced

4 ounces sliced Provolone cheese, cut into narrow strips
 2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
 Radishes
 Capers Dressing, see recipe

Line serving platter with lettuce. Arrange sardines, tomatoes, onion, cucumber and Provolone on lettuce. Sprinkle with Parmesan. Garnish with radishes. Serve with Capers Dressing.

In an electric blender whirl together 3 tablespoons vegetable oil, 2 tablespoons red wine vinegar, 2 tablespoons water, 1 1/2 tablespoons drained capers, 2 teaspoons basil, 1 large clove garlic (thinly sliced) and 1/4 teaspoon pepper. Whirl until quite smooth — about 30 seconds. Makes about 1/2 cup.

Sauce:
 Dash red pepper sauce, optional
 2 cups water
 1/2 cup green peppers, sliced in thin strips
 1 can (8 ounces) crushed pineapple
 4 tablespoons soy sauce
 6 tablespoons vinegar
 2 tablespoons catsup
 3/4 cup white sugar
 4 tablespoons cornstarch mixed with 1/2 cup cold water

Garnish: Fresh pineapple wedges, orange wedges and parsley
 Sauté beef until just brown. Add oil and vegetables and, cook until vegetables are soft. Drain. Add soy sauce and allow to cool until warm.
 Spoon 2 full tablespoons of mixture onto egg roll wrapper. Fold in both ends and roll. Seal edges by putting water on edge of wrapper and pressing edge to roll.
 Deep fry in oil until lightly brown. Remove and drain on paper towel.

To prepare sauce combine all ingredients except cornstarch in sauce pan. Cook 5 to 10 minutes or until green peppers are tender. Mix cornstarch with small amount of water and add slowly to hot mixture. Cook for 5 minutes more, stirring until thickened.

Arrange on a platter. Garnish with parsley, pineapple and oranges. Pass the sauce with the beef. Makes 16, for four servings.

When retailers rude, shop somewhere else

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

Dear Martin — We have a food store in our area that does not give cash-register tapes to its customers. Even if you ask for a tape, they usually refuse it. Only if you insist will they give you the receipt, and by that time they are raging mad.

The last time I asked for a tape, the owner's son looked at my purchases, saw a beet tongue, and said, "Anyone who eats tongue must be crazy. It makes me sick to look at it."

Even though that store is near my home, I have decided not to return to it. The next closest store is two miles away, but the people there are polite. And they put customers' register tapes in their shopping bags without even waiting for them to ask! — Mrs. A.G. Bliswell, Gooding, Id.

Dear Mrs. Bliswell — Nothing makes me angrier than a store that thinks it's doing me a special favor by allowing me to make a purchase. Thank heaven there are plenty of other grocery stores and supermarkets around, so I can shop elsewhere, even though I may have to walk or drive a little further. And I would do just about anything to avoid the crowds running the store you described.

Some states and cities have laws that require retailers to provide receipts (you do not have to ask for them) as evidence of a purchase, and you might want to check and see if your state is one of them.

Dear Martin — Several years ago, a neighbor and I started refunding. We enjoyed it, and of course the money and gifts were great. But we often complained about the difficulty of filing all the forms and proofs of purchase. Finally we decided to work together and do something about it. Here's what we did:

We set up an cardboard box to file our proofs of purchase. On the outside, the boxes are numbered and marked with abbreviations to show the box tops and labels inside.

In each box, we have an envelope in which we file the refund forms for the type of product in that carton. We only place a refund form in the envelope if we are sure we are going to send for the refund. Before we place a form in an envelope, we circle the expiration date with a red pen, and underline any requirement

Supermarket Shopper

for a register receipt. (The forms we can't use, we seek to other retailers with whom we trade one-for-one.)

Near the end of the month, we go through each carton. First we check the envelope with the forms to make sure we do not miss an expiration date. Then, we look for the necessary proofs of purchase, needed for the offer. If we do not have sufficient proofs, there is enough time to get them.

My neighbor and I share the work and share the refunds. Our team work has really paid off. — Betty Jean from Lorain, Ohio

Dear Betty Jean — Some refunders find it hard to get organized when they are alone. And work comes a lot easier when there is a friend to share it.

Spicy Italian dish is good picnic fare

By TOM HOGGE
The Associated Press

As a lover of Italian food, I was intrigued recently by this recipe for sausage and kidney beans.

Featuring canned red beans, sausage and Zinfandel wine, this is a warm, filling dish which can be served well into the summer on cookouts.

SPICY ITALIAN

3 large onions, peeled
2 green peppers, cut into chunks
4 cloves garlic, minced
1-3rd cup olive oil

1½ pounds Italian sausage, sweet or hot
2 28-ounce cans Italian whole tomatoes, drained
2 15-ounce cans kidney beans, drained
1 15-ounce can tomato sauce
2 cups Zinfandel wine
2 tablespoons freshly chopped oregano and basil, or 2 teaspoons of each, dried
Salt to taste
½ teaspoon freshly ground pepper (you may want to omit pepper, if hot sausage is used)

1½ cups freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Halve onions and slice thin. In large skillet, cover medium-high heat, saute onions with pepper chunks and minced garlic in olive oil until light brown. Transfer to large kettle and set aside. Saute whole sausages in skins until lightly browned, about 2 or 3 minutes. Remove from skillet and slice into ½-inch pieces, removing skins if desired. Add sausage to kettle. Stir in tomatoes, kidney beans, tomato sauce, wine, herbs, salt and pepper. Simmer from 1 to 2 hours, until thickened. Stir in Parmesan cheese just before serving. Serves 8.

Noodles, mushrooms enliven this neat salad

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
The Associated Press

When I asked a young friend of mine, a recent graduate of a restaurant school, how she enjoyed serving mushrooms, she outlined several ways.

As an accompaniment to poultry, fish or meat, she slices mushrooms and bastes them with sliced zucchini. Or, if button mushrooms are at hand, she teams them whole with broccoli florets and very small carrots.

For a pizza topping she steams mushrooms with ripe olives and tomato sauce.

For tossed green salads, she slices mushrooms and adds them raw. Or, she adds them to a salad in which pasta is used.

NOODLE AND MUSHROOM SALAD
4 ounces fine egg noodles
8 ounces mushrooms, thickly sliced
4 scallions with tops, sliced
½ medium sweet red pepper, seeded and cut into short strips
1-3rd cup finely chopped parsley
Sesame-Ginger Dressing, see recipe

Cook noodles as directed on package until tender. Immediately rinse with cold water; drain thoroughly.

In a large bowl mix together the noodles, mushrooms, scallions, red pepper and parsley; add Sesame-Ginger Dressing and toss well. Set aside at room temperature to blend flavors — 10 to 15 minutes — before serving. Garnish with parsley sprigs and extra sesame seeds.

Makes 4 servings.
Sesame-Ginger Dressing: In an electric blender whirl together ¼ cup vegetable oil, 3 tablespoons distilled white vinegar, 2 tablespoons water, 1½ tablespoons grated fresh ginger, 1 teaspoon sugar and ½ to ¾ teaspoon hot pepper sauce until blended — about 30 seconds. Add 2 tablespoons toasted sesame seeds; whirl 30 seconds longer.

Correct watering boosts lawn's looks

Regardless of whether you have an automatic sprinkler system or drag a hose, you can probably improve on the efficiency of your lawn and garden irrigation. Proper watering will not only improve on the appearance and yield of your plants.

The first principle of irrigation is to water the entire depth of the root system each time you water. A healthy lawn should have roots 6 inches deep. Most flowers and vegetables also have roots about the same depth. Shrub roots are about one foot to two feet deep. Trees can have roots several feet deep, depending upon their size.

Soils differ in their water holding capacity. Sandy soils are wet 6 inches deep with less than an inch of water to reach 6 inches down. Flood or furrow irrigation in the vegetable garden wets the soil at least 6 inches deep. It is one of the most effective irrigation methods for vegetables. Sprinklers have become the most popular way to irrigate vegetables as well as everything else in the landscape. They are not the most efficient for water use, but require the least amount of time, especially if you have an underground system. Drip systems are the most efficient and work well for vegetable gardens and berries. Most people have a tendency to sprinkle too often and not long enough to wet the soil to the proper depth. Most sprinklers have to run an hour or longer to supply an inch of water. Impact or rainbird sprinklers may need to run several hours. It is easy to check the output of your sprinklers by placing straight sided cans in different areas or different distances from a sprinkler. If you use more than one kind of sprinkler or sprinkler head, check each for water output. Time how long it takes to accumulate an inch of water in the cans. Most lawns and gardens can go 4 to 5 days or longer between waterings if watered to the proper depth. Frequency will vary somewhat depending upon soil type, weather and natural rainfall. Check the soil an inch or two deep to see if it is dry.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

Watch plants for wilting. Grass will turn a dull color before it starts to wilt. If watered deeply, trees and shrubs can go much longer between irrigations than grass and flowers. That is why it is a good idea to design a sprinkler system with the shrubs on a different set than the turf. Trees and shrubs growing in the lawn should have a periodic deeper watering about once a month during the summer. Plants growing on the south and west sides of buildings sometimes need extra water because of the reflected heat. Plants on the east and north sides of buildings generally do not need supplemental watering. In fact, they may get too much water from automatic systems.

Some blooms do well in heat

By EARL ARONSON
The Associated Press

Some plants go on vacation in the heat of the summer, leaving your garden with little or no color. But some annuals and perennials provide beauty with little care during the hot days.

The weather gets pretty warm in some areas, so we have suggestions from Bill Welch of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, who recommends the vinca or periwinkle for lots of color all summer. A good one is Polka Dot, which won All-America honors, and can serve as a summer ground cover with low masses of blooms. Others are deep lavender Little Linda, and pink and red Delicata.

Zinnias have good summer heat tolerance. New varieties offer vivid colors and durability, ranging in size from tiny border hybrids to large dahlia types. Gloriosa daisy is a summer perennial that opens into daisy-shaped blooms of orange, pink and mahogany. Large heads are supported on strong stems, fine for cutting. Portulaca is excellent for a summer border or rock garden. This summer annual, often called moss rose, enjoys sun and will tolerate dry, hot conditions. For continuous summer flowering, sow seed at six-week intervals. Salvia, with bright scarlet or blue spikes, bloom until frost.

Smallish flowers bring huge delights

By HENRY MITCHELL
The Washington Post

Small pleasures are important to the gardener, which is well, since he is hard to find rapturous ecstasies fairly rare in the garden. But people who are not gardeners are usually startled to see the gardener happy as a dog with two tails merely because some scrawny plant or other has produced a flower.

I would be embarrassed for nongardeners to know how much of my attention this spring has been centered on a whiskey barrel with a few plants in it. The main thing is the fried eggs (an inebriant but appropriate common name for Limnanthes douglasii) that have started to bloom.

The leaves look very like carrot leaves, and the plant is dandy when covered solidly for weeks with inch-wide white saucers with canary yellow centers. They do look like fried eggs, in a way.

Sharing the tub is a little patch of toadflax, a real triumph. I ordered seeds from Thompson & Morgan and they were out - refunded my money. A kind reader sent me seeds collected from her garden. They are now blooming, tiny lavender snapdragon-type flowers with a yellow dot in the center. They will look fine when they start trailing over the edge of the tub.

Then there is a slender annual with brilliant blue flowers, the name of which I am not bothering to look up since they seem to be petering out. Anagallis linifolia, it's come back to me. As far as I say looks puny and I doubt I'll have it long. Then there is a lavender in full bloom, over at the edge of the tub. Lavender does not usually lose it. In the ground you don't. This lavender is in the tub because that's where we want it, but I know from experience it will freeze solid next winter.

Another tub has two cranesbills or Geraniums, to give them their correct name. One is G. endressii 'Wargrave,' with pinkish flowers over freely cut leaves, and the other is the garden variety called 'Ballerina,' a rather smoldering but pale pink with black eye. I bought only one plant of each, assuming they will seed about madly in the tub and next year I can transplant the baby geraniums to carpet a bed beneath hybrid tea roses.

A somewhat flashy orange-peach tender hibiscus is also in the geranium tub, an odd combination, but it had to go somewhere. It will be potted early in October and brought indoors for the winter.

Yet another barrel is occupied by angel trumpets. These are Daturas, and I have no idea which one. The one we used to call angel trumpet is D. suaveolens, which makes a semiwoody plant up to 10 feet high, from which white trumpet flowers hang straight down. But Datura metel is also called angel trumpet, and its blooms are only five or six inches long, and they stick out from the plant rather than hang down.

Anyway, someone kindly sent me seed and we shall see what comes of it.

Another barrel is occupied by 50 freesias. I have never been able to flower freesias, really, but these are supposed to grow outdoors in summer. I will say this for them, all 50 are thriving now at about 7 inches. In the center I have some pea stakes made of steel, with a few Japanese morning glories (not yet sprouted) that are supposed to grow up the stakes and make the tub glorious when the freesias are finished and withered.

When they need help, let them know You're available

Letters of thanks

Harvey, Gates are owed a debt for Western Days

I'm amazed when I consider how the Western Days have grown since 1963. Each year we add new events, improve old events and find wonderful people who are willing to give their time to ensure continued success.

With little recognition, Kris Harvey and Wes Gates have shared the responsibility of Western Days for several years. The Western Days Committee would like to thank another group of people. Without the support of the media, we couldn't have done it.

In our community as well as neighboring communities, the Western Days Committee has been blessed with media support beyond imagination: stories, advertising, and reminders. All this has been devoted to us at no charge. Our thanks to the Times-News, KMVT, KEEF and KEZJ, KJIX and K-96, KPI (KART) and Z-103, Kido, Videocable, KSKI, KBAIR, KBBK, North Side News, Buhl Herald, and the Entertainment Guide. It is spirit like this that creates momentum for success.

'Walk for Lady Liberty' was wonderful success

On behalf of Aid Association for Lutherans Branch 3140, Filer, I wish to thank all of those who participated in "Let's Take a Walk for Lady Liberty" on April 19. The combined effort of all the walkers, workers and those who contributed resulted in $2,049 being sent to the Statue of Liberty restoration project. We cherish our liberty highly, which is reflected in the fact that each one of the 47 walkers collected their pledges.

Thanks also to those who contributed: Coca-Cola Bottling Company, Peterson's, and Mr. B's, B & B Rental Toilets, Stereo 96 Bear, KMVT-TV, Filer Mayor Bob Fort.

Everyone connected with the walk had a role to play in helping to preserve our greatest symbol of freedom for generations of Americans. Thanks to donations nationwide to the restoration project, we are on the brink of a great moment in American history and will see the statue's torch shine brightly once again as a beacon of hope for generations.

Writers, broadcasters have aided peace efforts

If "promoting peace is a task for all" — and we believe it is — then a note of gratitude is due all our friends of the Magic Valley media who have certainly been doing their share of promoting. Our thanks to Mike Vanausdell for attending the Global Village Conference and reporting on the various workshops; to

Ragu turns red after contest misprint

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) — The odds of winning $1,000 in a contest sponsored by Ragu Foods Inc. were supposed to be 1-in-385,000, but a misprint made the odds 1-in-1, and Ragu officials turned redder than their spaghetti sauce.

Their original advertisement in newspapers across the country showed three labels of Ragu products.

"Match the symbols below on this official game card to a Ragu Spaghetti Sauce package at your favorite grocer," the ad said. The prize was $100 if one symbol matched exactly, $1,000 if all three symbols matched exactly.

"Because of a printing error, virtually every card would have been a winner," said Marla Cummings, a spokeswoman at Ragu's headquarters in Westport, Conn.

"We don't know how many were distributed," she said. "Our best guess is in the thousands."

"According to the ad, $300,000 in prize money was to have been distributed.

Ms. Cummings said Ragu canceled the whole promotion more than three months before its Sept. 30 deadline, and hasn't decided if it will try again.

"That division is probably taking a long, hard look at it right now," she said.

Traffic officer did his job well at parade crossing

I happened to watch the parade at the corner of Filer and Blue Lakes Saturday.

I would like to commend the officer who risk his life to direct traffic.

It was shocking to see how rude and disrespectful the drivers (not all were). Some endangered the lives of both the ones in the parade and the ones watching, by turning into the parade route in direct opposition to the traffic officers.

Thanks to the Twin Falls traffic control for a job well done.

Pro-levy editorial was much-needed comment

This letter is coming to you relative to your editorial in today's Times-News! I would like to personally thank you for writing this editorial on behalf of our school district and its school plant facility levy.

Recognizing that attaining the 67 percent majority required for passage of said levy would have been most difficult, to say the least, I still feel that our district had to try for such a levy.

Again, I would like to thank you for your editorial and for assisting our school district, along with the other school districts in the Magic Valley.

Fine teen-agers worked well at bake sale benefit

A big thank you is due to some fine Twin Falls teen-agers. The FHA class at the high school worked real hard at a bake sale. They took their profits and purchased a high chair and some children's books for the tots at the Early Childhood Learning Center. It's wonderful to see these young men and women sharing with and caring for others.

Congratulations to your parents and teachers. They have raised you well.

City mall presentation was result of hard work

We sincerely hope that you took advantage of the opportunity of reviewing the city displays on the Downtown Mall last Saturday. The event was organized by Jody Hall, Monte Lee and Gene Ordaz, with support from employees in each of the city departments.

Our employees are proud of their community and the role they play in maintaining a pleasant living environment. This was their opportunity to explain city services, show city equipment and display a sampling of their creative talents. We believe they deserve public recognition for this effort.

Hats-off to a job well done.

Western Days a success thanks to many efforts

I would like to take a moment to thank all the people who spent their precious time helping make this year's Western Days such a great success.

The names and businesses that helped with prizes, food, money and time are too numerous to name in my letter. To all say thank you!!! Specifically, I must thank our co-chairpersons Wes Gates and Kris Harvey for doing such a fine job. Second, Marcy James, Rita Renwick, Clare Ferguson, Lori and Mickey Young, Rick Strickland, Teresa Maxwell, Doris Vipperman, Kevin Bradshaw, Tim Obendhein and Barbara Dey for chairing the various committees with such enthusiasm and ability. This year's Western Days had something for everyone. So if you did not catch the spirit this year, next year will be even better. Thanks again for a fantastic week.

Women in survey believe men gained most from feminism

NEW YORK (AP) — Only half of all women who have been married one time say they would marry the same man if they had it to do over again, according to a new survey.

Eighty-three percent of women surveyed agreed that men have gained more than women from the social changes of the past 20 years. But though 47 percent felt their lives have grown more complicated in that time, most women still feel they're better off now than they were in 1966.

"No matter what situation she's in herself, today's woman is likely to value the economic and personal gains women have made," said Ethel Klein, associate professor of political science at Columbia University.

More than 56,000 women completed questionnaires which had been published in Women's Day magazine. The pollsters Yankelevich, Skelly & White then chose 3,009 of the forms at random and tabulated them.

The resulting statistics have a margin of error of plus or minus 1.8 percent, according to the magazine.

Among the findings:

- Seventy-five percent feel men expect too much of them in the area of child care and 73 percent feel men expect too much housework.
- Forty-six percent said their husbands were understanding but not very helpful when they were too busy to keep the household running smoothly, while 17 percent said their husbands got irritated or angry.

• Half of the once-married women said children and family life would marry the same man again, 38 percent said they would not and the rest have children has become very complicated, were undecided. Those married more than 20 years were less likely to marry themselves; 63 percent said they would marry their present husbands again, but 24 percent said no.

Of those in their first marriages, only 55 percent felt they got married for the right reasons, while 41 percent said they did not.

• While majorities believe women have gained more than they've lost in the past 20 years when it comes to careers and relationships with men, 40 percent feel they've lost more than they've gained in terms of family life.

Three-quarters agreed that the decision to have children has become very complicated, for reasons as varied as the cost, the uncertainty of world events and the impact on the mother's career.

73 percent said public officials were not paying enough attention to child care.

Forty-one percent said men should and do take more responsibility in the raising of children, while 46 percent said they should take a greater role but must be unwilling to do so.

• Eighty percent believe men underestimate them in the workplace. But given the choice, 43 percent would pick a male boss and 14 percent would choose a woman. The remainder said there was no difference or had no opinion.

• Forty-three percent said they would choose the same type of work if they had it to do over again, but 45 percent said they would not.

• Half say today's woman works harder than those of the past; 38 percent disagree. Seventy-three percent said women today work not out of choice, but because it is an economic necessity.

Engagements

Joni Perkins and Steven Nelson

Perkins-Nelson

MURTAUGH — Mr. and Mrs. Stephen James Perkins Jr. announce the engagement of their daughter, Joni Dawn, to Steven Dale Nelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ty Nelson, all Murtaugh.

Perkins, a 1984 graduate of Murtaugh High School, has attended the College of Southern Idaho.

Nelson graduated from Murtaugh High School in 1983 and is employed at K-Mart.

A July 18 wedding is planned at the Murtaugh LDS Church.

Darcy Hall and Steve Reese

Hall-Reese

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Hall, Twin Falls, announce the engagement of their daughter, Darcy, to Travis Reese, son of Steve Reese, Grand Island, N.Y., and Gwen Reese, Twin Falls.

Hall, a 1985 graduate of Twin Falls High School, attended CSI and is employed as a secretary for Otis Hall Construction Co. Inc.

Reese, who graduated in 1984 from Twin Falls High School, is a cardiopulmonary technician in the U.S. Air Force, stationed at Minot, N.D.

The couple plans an Aug. 9 wedding.

Jones-Williams

KIMBERLY — Mr. and Mrs. Chuck Jones, Kimberly, announce the engagement of their daughter, Shannon, to Brad Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Williams, Sugar City.

Jones graduated from Kimberly High School in 1982 and from Utah State University in 1986 with a degree in agriculture.

Williams, who graduated from Salem High School in 1980 and from Utah State University in 1986 with a degree in range management, is engaged in ranching at Teasdale, Utah.

A June 28 wedding is planned at the bride's home with a reception to follow at the Elks Club.

Shannon Jones and Brad Williams

Blood donors exceed quota

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls blood donors exceeded the quota both days during last week's drawing at the First Presbyterian Church.

Ann Livingston, Red Cross Sawtooth Chapter manager, said 139 pints were received Monday and 131 were processed Tuesday, with 13 first-time donors during the two days. Quota for each day was 120 pints.

Receiving gallon pints were Vernon Smith, 20; Gregory Bedwell, 15; Charles Mattice, nine; Margaret J. Pratt and Br. Sylvester Sonnen, eight gallons each; Bob Shaffer and Leslie Wheeler, five; Mike Ford, Ritchie Weers and Dennis Ward, four gallons each.

Ann Rutherford, Terry Cook and Robert Shoup, three gallons; Larry Blackwood, Herman G. Tullos, Doug Biggers and Ivan Stone, two gallons.

Receiving one-gallon pints were Sandy Owings, Rebecca Delbert, Tracy Latham, Sandra J. Carney, Terry Humphries, Linda Burleson, Kent Wokersen, April Elcock, Grace Wegener, Char Clements and Clint Bingham.

Dirty socks give bride-to-be second thoughts

DEAR ABBY: My fiancé is in the Army, stationed in England. He will be coming home in three weeks and my wedding is scheduled for exactly one week later.

He shipped all his clothes home for me to launder. One of the boxes had a funny smell when it arrived, and when I unpacked it, I found a large pile of socks at the bottom. You probably won't believe this, but there were 203 pairs of dirty, black dress socks in that box. I counted them — 406 dirty socks!

My question: Should I go ahead and marry a man who would leave such a dirty job for a woman to do? I am afraid that this might be symbolic evidence of an unconscious lack of respect for women, and after we are married I will be expected to do the dirty work.

Hurry your answer, because if you agree with me maybe I should call off the wedding.

I would disagree with the "lady in charge." Rather than teaching the children to "hit back" she should teach the hitters to communicate verbally.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for informing your readers that the effectiveness of birth control pills can be diminished or canceled out if the woman takes antibiotics.

As a practicing certified nurse and midwife, I have known this to happen many times. The woman then says, "But nobody told me!" The problem is that the doctor who prescribed the antibiotics is the same doctor who prescribed the birth control pills. Also, when a doctor asks a patient, "Are you on any kind of medication?" the patient says, "No" — not thinking of the pill as "medication."

— SOUTH CAROLINA MIDWIFE

that is sure to make a big hit with every man who has ever fathered a child. And it doesn't cost a dime.

Sit down and write your dad a letter. Tell him how much he has meant to you over the years. Don't be shy about telling him how much you love him, and why.

I promise you that it will mean more to him than any gift you could buy. Trust me.

Valley happenings

Crider to address Network

TWIN FALLS — Ruth Crider of Kitchen Magic will speak to Network this noon at Canyon Springs Inn. For more information, call Teresa Maxwell at 733-2624.

Father's Day dinner served

EDEN — A Father's Day dinner will be served Thursday noon at the Eden-Hazelton Senior Center in Eden. The public is invited.

YFCA overnighiter set Friday
