Fireworks crown Liberty ceremony

By EILEEN PUTMAN
The Associated Press

Focus on Liberty — A5

NEW YORK — The biggest blast of fireworks in America's history crowned an all-day birthday party for the Statue of Liberty and the nation Friday, booming across the majestic ships that filled New York Harbor after a spectacular Fourth of July parade.

"What a glorious Fourth of July! One thing America knows how to do is throw a party," said Lee Iacocca, chairman of the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation.

There was pagantry on land, on sea and in the air, part of the four-day extravaganza marking the $66 million restoration of the statue and her 100th birthday.

The scene in New York Harbor recalled the splendor of a bygone era as 22 tall-masted schooners, square riggers, barks and brigantines from 18 nations glided by the statue.

On the island of Manhattan, the Harbor Festival provided a giant street fair of food and entertainment throughout the afternoon.

The Boston Pops led a musical tribute to the statue in an hour and 40-minute concert in Liberty State Park in New Jersey. The United States Marine Band provided accompaniment to the fireworks with a medley of patriotic songs.

After dark, the sky was filled by a dazzling shower of 40,000 shells fired from 42 barges in what was billed as the world's biggest pyrotechnics display.

President Reagan kicked off the 26-minute show by telling the nation and thousands of sailors aboard the aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy: "Let's have some fun. Let the celebration begin."

The fireworks boomed and glittered across the harbor, illuminating the towers of Manhattan and the thousands of small boats anchored at the statue's feet in bursts of crimson, silver, blue and gold.

The display ended with a fountain of flares rocketing upward around Liberty's base, surrounding the statue with a silver cloak.

So many people jammed the Brooklyn Bridge and nearby streets that police asked the media to warn spectators to stay out of the area. Five miles west of the harbor, a stretch of the New Jersey Turnpike was closed temporarily as motorists parked illegally to view the display.

"It's been said that we Americans count our blessings too seldom, but not this weekend," Reagan said as he opened the day's extravaganza.

"This weekend we celebrate, my friends, we celebrate."

New York Harbor harbor was jammed with vessels ranging from the John F. Kennedy, at 1,652 feet the Navy's largest aircraft carrier, to Chinese junks, tugboats, fireboats spouting streams of water, sailboats and even canoes. In all, the Coast Guard estimated there were 20,000 private pleasure craft.

A pleasure boat, the Trade Winds, collided with a Dutch sailing vessel, the Onderhook, injuring four people on the pleasure boat. One of the injured was hospitalized in good condition with a broken rib, while the others were treated and released.

The flat-bottomed Onderhook lost a mast.

Land of the free looks to sea for July 4 festivities this year

The land of the free looked to the water for a good part of its Fourth of July celebration, with "Old Ironsides" booming its cannons in Boston Harbor, tall ships parading in New York and paddle-wheelers straining toward the finish line in St. Louis.

Helen, Ga., staged its parade on the Chattahoochee River, red, white and blue sailboats and paddle-boats plied the Cumberland River in Nashville, Tenn., and competitors in the Pacific Cup yacht race took off toward Hawaii from San Francisco.

In Windham, Conn., an estimated 1,500 residents turned out and tuned in for the town's "boom" parade. Because organizers couldn't line up a live band, they asked townspeople to bring portable radios and tune into a local station which was broadcasting parade music.

The USS Iowa, with President Reagan aboard, led the second day of fanfare for the rejuvenated Statue of Liberty. The battleship slid down the Hudson River, acknowledging 21-gun salutes from warships of 14 nations, and 22 tall-masted ships tested the winds around Manhattan.

In Boston, the USS Constitution took its annual lap around the harbor, firing a salute which was answered by pealing bells from the tower of Old North Church.

Among the 420 passengers and crew aboard the 189-year-old Constitution were Joe and Marcie Haggerty, who had flown in from Burbank, Calif., earlier in the week.

"I'm 60 years old and it's the greatest thing in my life," Mrs. Haggerty said. "I just feel so American. Don't you?"

About a dozen members of the Greater Boston Union of the Homeless mounted a quiet protest outside the former Charlestown Navy Yard in Boston, where the Constitution is berthed.

"This is a time when the country is spending tremendous amounts of money restoring its great symbols. We're saying, 'What about giving meaning to those symbols?'" said Dennis Cuhane, an organizer of the homeless group.

More than 3 million people were expected in St. Louis for the VP Fair, a three-day bash along the Mississippi riverfront. The fair opened Friday with the completion of a 1,039-mile race between the Mississippi, Queen and the Delta Queen, which began last month in New Orleans.

The fair is an offshoot of the Veiled Prophet Parade, which was held Thursday night. The parade is staged by the Veiled Prophet Organization, a secret, 109-year-old social group which also puts on a debutante ball every year. The VP Fair is run by a separate organization.

A nine-year-old girl suffered second- and third-degree burns, and seven other people were injured in Dunwoody, Ga., Thursday night.

Presidents agree a summit needed to revive arms talks

By W. DALE NELSON
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — President Reagan and French President Francois Mitterrand, tending to affairs of state in the midst of a majestic Statue of Liberty celebration, agreed Friday that a new U.S.-Soviet summit is needed to get superpower arms controls talks moving, the White House said.

Spokesman Larry Speakes, briefing reporters after Reagan and Mitterrand held an 80-minute working lunch on Governors Island in New York harbor, conceded that "perhaps there is some disagreement" over Reagan's proposed Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars" missile defense system.

Mitterrand has balked at French participation in planning for the potential space-based defense network.

But, Speakes said, "The U.S. president and the French president see eye to eye on all major facets of relations with the Soviet Union."

Reagan, opening his Liberty weekend with a visit to the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy, saluted the courage of Americans in uniform and prayed "that the call for their courage will never come."

In remarks prepared for delivery aboard the Kennedy in New York harbor, Reagan set the stage for what was billed as the largest fireworks display in U.S. history.

"Tonight, there is much to celebrate and many blessings to be grateful for," he said. "So while it is good to talk about serious things, it is just as important — and just as American — to have some fun. Now, let the celebration begin."

Speakes quoted Reagan as telling Mitterrand, "I believe the Soviets may be more serious than ever before about working out an agreement to limit superpower nuclear arsenals. He said Reagan also reiterated that the Strategic Defense Initiative is "not negotiable, not a bargaining chip." He said Mitterrand did not respond on the issue.

Speakes said that Reagan did not discuss in any detail the negotiations for a summit meeting between administration officials and representatives of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

But the spokesman said but "there is a desire on the part of both leaders (Reagan and Mitterrand) that there be a summit ... and they both agreed basically on the approach."

The two presidents agreed on "the need to negotiate, the need to reduce" nuclear arms, Speakes said.

Reagan, who says he wants another summit with Gorbachev, said he was not asking Mitterrand to carry a message to Gorbachev.

"I don't think that would be appropriate to impose on him," Reagan said of his French counterpart. "He has his own relationship with other countries."

Carter's walkout highlights a day of mixing politics and celebrations

By SIDNEY S. FEINGOLD
The Associated Press

From Moscow to Manila, foreigners joined in that great old American tradition of mixing politics with Fourth of July celebrations, even prompting a walkout by Jimmy Carter and American diplomats in far-off Zimbabwe.

Former President Carter and U.S. Charge d'Affaires Edward Lanpher led about 40 American diplomats to a Fourth of July diplomatic reception in Harare, the capital, after a Zimbabwean Cabinet minister attacked U.S. policy on South Africa.

Minister of Youth David Karimanzira accused Washington of indirectly supporting South African "terrorism."

"It was offensive," Lanpher said later.

In Manila, police gunfire, tear gas and smoke grenades dispersed about 5,000 leftists protesting at the U.S. Embassy against what they consider American intervention in the Philippines. Several injuries and detentions were reported.

The demonstrators later were allowed to make speeches demanding removal of U.S. military bases in the Philippines.

Filipino-American Friendship Day, a national holiday, coincides with Independence Day. The Philippines became fully independent July 4, 1946.

Independence Day overseas also had a healthy day of celebrating. Soviet newspapers published a message of congratulations to the government to President Reagan. But the newspaper Moscow Pravda complained that official U.S. programming was using celebrations of the Statue of Liberty's centennial to fan chauvinism in the United States.

It said that "from the interven-

Nature blows out fireworks in Magic Valley

By ANNETTE CARÝ
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The biggest show in town for the Fourth of July was Mother Nature, as 50-mile-per-hour winds roared through the Magic Valley and quashed most plans for fireworks displays.

The Twin Falls fireworks display, planned for the College of Southern Idaho campus, has been postponed until dusk this evening. But the fireworks will not be preceded by the traditional concert of patriotic songs performed by the City Band. That event was moved indoors to the Fine Arts Auditorium and held Friday night.

Buhl also canceled its fireworks display.

Wind, snow hit West — A2

Local residents can see them tonight instead across from Buhl High School, reported Buhl City Police.

Bliss Meyer Rolland Zollinger said that although a horse race had gone on as scheduled there Friday, the town postponed the fireworks display until dusk tonight. Before that, barbecue will be served today at 6 p.m., and the Old Time Fiddlers have agreed to come back and play at 7 p.m.

The Sun Valley Co. had one of the few displays still scheduled to continue near dusk on the Fourth. But anyone who let the wind keep them away can still see an encore performance planned for this evening.

Several area residences were without power Friday afternoon, but that evening Idaho Power was still struggling to restore electricity, in spots throughout its service area.

Electrical Supervisor Don Watson said he had no estimate Friday evening of how many homes were affected, but said he expected problems to continue as long as the wind kept blowing. Power outages began occurring just after 2 p.m., he said.

Some homes had been without power for eight hours at press deadline Friday.

Lines had been blown down by the wind and knocked down as trees blew over, Watson said. There were also poles that had snapped when wires came loose and started fires. Those were more difficult and time-consuming to repair, he said.

Power outages extended throughout the Magic Valley. In Lincoln County Friday night, some farmers were milking whole herds of dairy cows by hand, said the sheriff's dispatcher there.

The winds were caused by a cold front moving through the valley, said Roger Lamoni of the National Weather Service in Boise. "There's a lot of cool air rolling in behind the front from the Northwest," he said.

"Peak winds of 44 knots, or 51 miles per hour, were measured at the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport at 1:38 p.m. and at the Burley Airport at 2:42 p.m.

Gusts averaged about 30 to 40 miles per hour throughout the afternoon, he said.

The cold front was also disrupting Fourth of July plans outside the Magic Valley. Snow was reported in the mountains of Idaho, Northern Utah and Western Wyoming had thunderstorms Friday afternoon, and frost warnings were out in Eastern Oregon Friday night, Lamoni said.

Jackpot, Nev., also had high winds. But that didn't interfere with the Ninth Annual Hollering Contest, said Carl Hayden,

Storm dusts high country with snow

By-The Associated Press

Most of the East basked in sunny skies Friday, while a strong storm pushed across the northern Pacific Coast, spreading rain across the northern Rockies into northeast Montana and dusting mountain passes with snow.

A winter storm warning was posted overnight in portions of western Montana above 6,000 feet, the National Weather Service said.

Rain changed to snow in some areas, with Logan Pass, Mont., reporting snow at noon MDT. Up to a foot of snow was expected in Glacier National Park, and lesser amounts were likely in the Idaho mountains.

Showers and thunderstorms drenched parts of eastern Arizona, where almost 2 inches fell at Mount Airline and 1.7 inches at Flagstaff.

Scattered thunderstorms developed over the southern and central Rockies.

The storm produced strong winds over much of northern and central Nevada, where gusts of more than 50 mph were clocked at Winnemucca, Elko and Battle Mountain.

Gusty winds produced blowing sand and dust in southern Nevada.

Sunny, windy and hot conditions prevailed over the southern and central plains and the mid-Mississippi Valley. Readings reached near 100 degrees from southeast Colorado into western Kansas.

Much of the East enjoyed sunny weather, with temperatures ranging from the upper 60s to low 90s. Showers and thunderstorms were scattered over the Florida Peninsula and near the upper Great Lakes.

Heavier rainfall during the six hours ending at 2 p.m. EDT included .52 inch at Alpena, Mich., .40 inch at Houghton Lake, Mich., .36 at Missoula, Mont., and .35 at South Ste. Marie, Mich.

Temperatures at 1 p.m. MDT ranged from 47 degrees at McCall and Mullan, Idaho, to 102 degrees at Needles, Calif. The morning low was 33 degrees at Bradford, Pa.

Winds of 70 mph batter Logan

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Winds that gusted up to 70 mph knocked down power lines, broke windows and brought a halt to Independence Day celebrations throughout Cache County Friday.

Sheriff's dispatcher Bob Trowbridge said the high winds hit about 2 p.m., breaking several major electrical lines and causing a power outage across most of the county.

Trowbridge said the worst damage was near downtown Logan, where 16 plate glass windows were broken by the wind at a Smith's Food King grocery store and a tree was blown into a residence.

No injuries were reported, Trowbridge said.

Nicaragua banishes bishop

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist sandinista government said Friday it had banished Bishop Pablo Antonio Vega for his alleged involvement in a rebel attack on a bus earlier this week that killed 52 civilians.

The government also said the Roman Catholic prelate had openly backed President Reagan's campaign to provide aid to anti-Sandinista rebels, and thus was "an accomplice of the U.S. government's policy of terror and crime against Nicaragua."

Vegas subsequently went to the border with Honduras on Friday morning and was granted political asylum in that Central American nation, Honduran officials said.

Ordination of women debated

YORK, England (AP) — The Church of England opened a policy-making synod Friday that will debate the thorny issue of whether women should be ordained as priests, including a proposal that the church be split in two if they are.

The state church maintains an all-male priesthood despite a campaign to admit women in the Anglican movement worldwide and the ordination of 750 female priests abroad, most of them in the United States, Canada and New Zealand.

Costa Rica intercepts drugs

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Police intercepted two trucks in northwestern Costa Rica and seized $18 million of cocaine worth $55 million, Interior Minister Guido Fernandez said Friday.

A police report said the cocaine, packed in 12 bags, was flown aboard a single-engine airplane from Colombia to a small airfield at Nicoya Peninsula in Guanacaste province, where the Colombians loaded it on trucks and drove off. The shipment apparently was destined for the United States.

Teachers applaud McAuliffe

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The husband of Christa McAuliffe, in his first speech since her death in the Challenger explosion, urged 7,500 teachers Friday to take political action to prevent the teacher-in-space program from becoming "a public relations ploy."

Steven McAuliffe brought tears to many eyes and was applauded and cheered during a brief speech before the delegates to the National Education Association's annual convention.

McAuliffe, with his parents-in-law and his children, Scott, 9, and Caroline, 6, accepted a posthumous "Friend of Education" award to his wife, Mrs. McAuliffe, 37, selected to be the first "ordinary" citizen in space, died Jan. 28 along with the six other people aboard the space shuttle.

Pinochet denounces strikers

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Augusto Pinochet on Friday accused organizers of the anti-government strike that closed shops and disrupted transportation across Chile this week of "trying to create another Nicaragua here."

Police estimated that more than 1.6 million people lined both shores of the vast harbor to watch the scene on a gloriously clear day that had spectators speaking in superlatives.

"It bogged your mind to sit here and watch this. It just takes you back to the beginning of this country," said Rex Woodford, from Charleston, W.Va., who watched from Governors Island just off the tip of Manhattan.

One patriot, Anibal Rivera of Jersey City, N.J., carried a brass mace and a 3-by-5-foot American flag as he ran along the New Jersey side of the Hudson River in what he said would be a 26-mile marathon.

On Pier 36 at 48th Street, passers-by stopped to snap a photo of a six-foot plastic model of the Statue of Liberty. Judd Scott, of Arlington, Texas, said he would save the picture as a memento. "This is probably the closest we'll come to it," he said.

The day began with Reagan and his wife, Nancy, boarding the USS Iowa, an 887-foot battleship. The ship steamed down the Hudson River as Reagan surveyed a line of warships from the United States and 13 other countries.

Overhead, the Navy's Blue Angels and the Air Force's Thunderbirds flying teams streaked across the sky in formation. A French aerobatic team trailed red, white and blue smoke, and a Harrier jet from the British carrier Ark Royal hovered briefly over the harbor.

Then the tall ships, led by the Coast Guard bark Eagle and accompanied by a flotilla of about 200 smaller ships, began their stately procession upriver. Even those aboard were moved by the spectacle. Crew members gawked at the sea of boats that surrounded them.

Steve Masone, captain of the 103-year-old Gazela of Philadelphia, a 177-foot vessel believed to be the oldest and largest wood-hulled square-rigger still putting out to sea, called it "the most moving day I'll ever have afloat."

"We are sailing on history, we are sailing into history and we are celebrating history," said Masone.

On the Belem, France's three-masted bark, young cadets in dress whites performed a low-kick dance set as they balanced themselves in the boat's yards.

On Thursday night, Reagan had triggered a laser beam that bathed the statue, its pedestal and base in a glow of red, white and blue, symbolizing the conclusion of the restoration. At the end of the night's festivities, the new torch was lighted.

More than 100 buses were marshaled in Utah to carry 3,000 barbershop quartet singers from Salt Lake City to Congrad Stadium to perform in Alan Osmond's "Light of Liberty Panorama" — where the Mormon Tabernacle Choir was also joining the celebration.

A fleet of windjammers dating from the 1800s competed in the annual Great Schooner Race off Rockland, Maine.

"It's the finest kind of racing," said Ken Barnes, captain of the 68-foot Stephen Taber. Built in 1871, she is the oldest documented sailing vessel in continuous service in the country.

Thunderstorms also moved into extreme western Idaho. The storms are associated with the cold upper low pressure system over eastern Oregon. This low was the trigger for Friday's wild weather and will continue to push showers and thunderstorms across the state through today.

Emergency aid not reaching state's farmers, Symms told

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Government farm loan programs are on the increase, but many Idaho farmers have not received the emergency aid and other aid they feel they are qualified for, Sen. Steve Symms has been told.

Symms, R-Idaho, was in Idaho Falls to conduct a hearing as chairman of the Joint Economic Committee's monetary and fiscal policy subcommittee. He received testimony from bankers, farmers and government officials on the plight of agriculture.

"I'm worried about this 'wringing out' process," Symms said Thursday. "It's been going on for a long time, since my Dad's time, since before that there have always been less and less farmers."

The senator also heard that both land values and farm prices are expected to continue falling before any recovery, and 10 to 50 percent of Idaho's farmers — depending on various estimates offered — have not gotten adequate financing this year. Rick Floyd, a loan administrator for 15 branches of the First Interstate Bank, said he sees fewer qualified farm borrowers these days, particularly on the basis of ability to repay as affected by falling commodity prices.

And although he saw little problem with liquidity among Idaho banks, "the degree of risk will continue to increase. Obtaining credit will become an increasing problem for Idaho farmers."

Blair Hawkes, president of the Ireland Bank of Malad, said that "if the past trends continue into the future, no amount of credit or forbearance will see us out of this agricultural quagmire. Frankly, I do not see the light at the end of the tunnel."

Bruneau cattlemen Gene Davis predicted said.

that agriculture would not return to financial health "until this period of disinflation has had time to run completely through the economy and affect our input costs as well as our commodity prices."

"Slaughter steers at $56 per hundredweight won't justify $6 per hundredweight barley. Barley at $4 per hundredweight won't justify $120,000 combines or forage harvesters. I do not see the worth of having equipment, much less a $15,000 pickup to feed a $350 cow," Davis said.

Crews want chief, will take pay cut

LAVA HOT SPRINGS (AP) — In order to help pay for a full-time ambulance chief, Lava Hot Springs ambulance crews say they're willing to take a pay cut.

"If we can't have a full-time chief, come Oct. 1 we're through," Linda McFarland told the Bannock County Commission and Pocatello Mayor Dick Finlayson recently. Mrs. McFarland is a member of the ambulance crew.

Dave Sanders, Lava's ambulance chief, faces the possibility of his $13,000-a-year job being eliminated as a result of Finlayson's 5 percent budget reduction order.

The cut was suggested by Pocatello Fire Chief Don Jones, who estimated he could save $10,000 by reducing Sanders' salary.

Sanders claimed a pay cut would lead to deteriorated ambulance service for Lava Hot Springs. He also said that south county residents were being forced to take a 40 percent budget cut, not the 5 percent ordered by Finlayson.

"I can't print money to finance ambulance service," said Finlayson.

Sculptor's kin proud of lineage

BOISE (AP) — For Dorothy Franks, the Liberty Weekend festivities are a little like watching herself on television.

Mrs. Franks, 62, bears a strong likeness to Lady Liberty. And for good reason. Her great-great-grandmother and great-great-great-grandmother were models for the statue. The Frenchman who designed the 151-foot-tall symbol of freedom was Mrs. Franks' great-great-grandfather, Frederic Auguste Bartholdi.

Mrs. Franks said she would stay home and watch television coverage of the weekend celebration of the statue of Liberty's 100th birthday. She'll postpone her trip to New York until the crowds thin out.

"The thought of 13 million people there and the heat and humidity — I just decided I'd rather go back in October, the actual 100th birthday of the statue," she said.

The statue was unveiled on Oct. 28, 1886.

Mrs. Franks was last in New York in 1956, when she helped raise $5 million for a new museum in the basement of the statue.

She said all the attention lavished on "the statue" has been gratifying. "I never get tired of it."

"Naturally, I feel very, very proud that a member of my family was part of this," she said, adding that Bartholdi "was more or less obsessed with it."

Bartholdi used his mother — Mrs. Franks' great-great-grandmother — as the model for the lady's face. A younger woman, who later became Bartholdi's wife, was the model for the statue's body.

Remarkably, I can see family members who I look at the face of the statue," she said.

Mrs. Franks' youngest daughter, Linda Thompson of Bethel, Wash., resembles the lady. Another daughter, Anita Ledbetter, of Renton, Wash., looks like the statue "just in the eyes is all. She doesn't have the nose and the chin."

Owners of Harrah's Lodge put facility up for sale

BOISE (AP) — Harrah's Lodge, the wilderness playground for the rich and famous on the Middle Fork of the Salmon River, will be offered for sale at a public auction in September.

Harrah's Hotels and Casinos is selling the lodge because it is "not a good, strategic fit with our main line of business, which is hotels and casinos," Richard Wells, Harrah's senior vice president of planning and administration, said Thursday.

Lodge Manager Ric Nicholson said the resort has lost money since it was opened to the public in 1982. However, he said the unspecified losses were not a factor in the decision.

"Harrah's took a look at itself and said, 'We are a gaming business and we do gaming, so let's get out of this other stuff,'" Nicholson said.

The lodge, in the heart of the Frank Church River of No Return Wilderness, will be auctioned Sept. 24. Wells said between 20 and 100 "pre-qualified" bidders will be flown to the remote central Idaho resort 100 miles northeast of Boise.

"My own feeling is that it will go for between $3 (million) and $4 million," Nicholson said.

To discourage the curious, Harrah's is charging a $300 fee for bidding privileges, which include a flight into the unroaded wilderness. Terms are cash, and a senior company official will be on hand to decide if the final bid is high enough. Wells said no minimum bid price has been set.

Harrah's Lodge is on 80 acres next to the Middle Fork of the Salmon. It has 10 buildings that house guests willing to pay $170 per person for a two-night stay during the summer.

Besides a hot tub and a 1,000-square-foot geothermally heated swimming pool, the lodge provides a telescope for star-gazing, a library and equipment to play for gold and blood-colored garnets.

"It is a unique, one-of-a-kind facility," Wells said. In the past decade, the lodge has entertained such luminaries as former President Jimmy Carter, Vice President George Bush and singer John Denver.

Holiday Corp., the parent company of Harrah's Hotels and Casinos, acquired the log cabin complex in 1980 when it bought the giant Reno, Nev.-based gambling empire.

Holiday Corp., based in Memphis, owns 1,700 Holiday Inns in the United States.

Waste-eating bugs under study at INEL

POCATELLO (AP) — Among the nearly 100 projects under way at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory are studies of bugs that eat toxic waste, a system to improve heavy plume performance by 50 percent and a room that removes magnetic field, officials say.

Phil Warner, manager of the Science and Technology Department at EG&G Idaho Inc. says that many of those projects could save money on local business developments.

INEL can provide the technology and technical help. If another group would provide the business expertise and the capital to get the businesses off the ground, he said.

Warner made his presentation during a day-long economic development workshop earlier this week at Idaho State University. The seminar, involving some 50 local government officials, university representatives and business leaders, was sponsored by the ISU Research and Business Park.

EG&G's Ken Koller listed eight technologies that could be available now for commercialization. The projects include:

- An ultrasonic inspection welder system that inspects a weld as it is being made. Koller said the inspection system eliminates the need to check-and-fix-welds-after-several-of-them are made. A flaw can be detected and remedied immediately, he said.
- A magnetic field shield room. The room would screen out magnetic "background noise" making it possible to do medical research or test brain waves without the interference of other magnetic sources.
- A polyphosphazene membrane that works as a filter. The filter can withstand higher temperatures and higher acidity than current products. It could be used in food processing, paper manufacture and mining, Koller said.

• A video probe for severe environments. The probe could be used to visually check the progress of ceramic, paper and petrochemical manufacture, the company representative said.

• Bioprocessing of phenol wastes. Koller said there is currently no way to eliminate phenol wastes, a byproduct created when aircrafts are cleaned. The hazardous phenol wastes are presently stored in drums. Koller said INEL has trained a microorganism to eat the wastes.

Several commercial airlines and the Air Force are interested in the waste eating process.

• A hydrozine film badge could warn a pilot immediately if he has been exposed to the hazardous chemical which is used to trigger backup emergency power in aircrafts, Koller said. The badge, similar to chemical detection badges currently in use, would change color if hydrozine is detected at a rate of one part per million or more.

• Production of oxynitride glass by hot isostatic pressing. Through a process of compression — changes, glass could be made to withstand greater stress, the spokesman said.

• A rotary recuperative magnetic heat pump. By use of a magnetic field, the producers of heat pumps and refrigeration devices could improve the performance of such products by as much as 50 percent, Koller said.

Joke backfires, injures man

MELBA (AP) — A man who said up in his face at about 4:20 a.m. he wanted to blow up a parade float, was shot in the face by a police officer. The man, identified as Carl Hinz, 24, of Melba, was released from Mercy Medical Center in Nampa after being treated for second-degree burns on his face and arms, a hospital spokesman said.

Canyon County Sheriff Bill Anderson said Hinz took black powder balloons filled with highly flammable acetylene and oxygen and a radio-controlled detonator into a large building housing the float. He was installing the detonator when it malfunctioned and the mixture blew up in his face at about 4:20 a.m. The space shuttle float was built by parishioners at the local Roman Catholic church for an Independence Day parade in this small southwestern Idaho town.

Hinz told deputies he intended to use the radio detonator to blow-up the float at the conclusion of the parade, Anderson said.

That float and another, four older-model cars and the rest of the contents of the building were destroyed and the structure gutted, the sheriff said.

Damage to the structure, as well as heating and air conditioning business and a print shop was estimated at more than $100,000, deputies said.

A sheriff's department spokesman said Friday night that the incident was under investigation but no charges had been filed.

Meanwhile, in nearby Middleton four people were arrested when a melee broke out shortly after midnight at a street dance attended by about 1,000 people, the sheriff's office said.

The fray erupted when a vehicle tried to drive through the crowd to a bandstand. One deputy was treated on the scene for injuries suffered when he was struck by a rock hurled along with bottles by people in the crowd.

Pro-Hansen drive keeps wires warm

BOISE (AP) — A telegram campaign calling for the release of imprisoned former Idaho Rep. George Hansen has been so successful it will continue through at least Monday, an organizer said.

"I think this is going to make a difference," organizer Judie Lords, Boise, said Thursday. "It's going to make them (federal officials) aware of what we are doing in Idaho, making them aware we are not going to let this thing die. We are going to keep it alive."

Telegrams are being sent to White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan, White House Communications Director Patrick Buchanan and Attorney General Edwin Meese.

Each message says the Pocatello Republican was selectively prosecuted and calls for his pardon and release.

Lords said she did not know how many messages have been sent, but that a Western Union operator told her the system had been heavily used.

She said Hansen supporters in the district are asking people to send telegrams. And she said people who have not supported Hansen in the past also have sent messages.

Hansen, who represented the 2nd District for 14 years, entered a federal prison camp in Petersburg, Va., on June 20 to begin serving a five-to-15-month sentence. He was convicted in 1984 of four felony counts of failing to properly report his personal finances.

Medal of Liberty given 12 foreign-born notables

NEW YORK (AP) — Twelve foreign-born Americans from comedian Bob Hope to journalist James Reston were honored with the Medal of Liberty on Thursday night on Governors Island.

The medals, which pay tribute to naturalized Americans who have made a significant contribution to their country, were given out by President Reagan.

Here is a list of the medalists:

- Irving Berlin, Russian born composer whose name has become synonymous with Tin Pan Alley for his classic songwriting on tunes such as "White Christmas," "Easter Parade," and "God Bless America."
- Franklin R. Chang-Diaz, born in Costa Rica, was the first Hispanic-American to orbit the earth aboard the space shuttle Columbia.

- Kenneth B. Clark, Jamaican-born psychologist, whose work on the problems of blacks in America was cited by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1954 when it declared public school segregation unconstitutional.
- Hanna Holborn Gray, born in Germany, is dean of the University of Chicago, the first woman to serve as chief executive officer of a major American coed school of higher education.

- James B. Reston, a native of Scotland, is a Pulitzer-Prize-winning columnist with The New York Times.

• Bob Hope, who was born in England, is a world-renowned comedian and entertainer.

- Henry A. Kissinger, German-born, was secretary of state during the Nixon and Ford administrations.
- I.M. Pei, a native of China, is an architect who has left his mark on buildings from New York to Hawaii, including the Robert F. Kennedy memorial at Arlington National Cemetery and the Jacob K. Javits Convention Center in New York.

- Itzhak Perlman, a violinist born in Israel, is widely acclaimed as the most gifted violinist of his generation.
- Albert B. Sabin, born in Poland, a physician whose 1962 creation of the oral polio vaccine helped virtually eliminate the viral infection in the United States.

- An Wang, Chinese-born, is the founder of Wang Laboratories in Boston, a computer business which has made him one of America's wealthiest men and most generous philanthropists.

• Exilj Weisel, native of Romania, is a writer, educator and philosopher described by a biographer as "the spiritual archivist of the Holocaust." He is currently chairman of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Council.

The medalists were selected by a panel of politicians, historians, journalists and writers.

Burger welcomes latest Americans

The Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — Echoing the great era of America's immigration past, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger welcomed more than 15,000 new Americans to liberty and citizenship Thursday night.

Standing before the ghostly redbrick ruins of historic Ellis Island, Burger swore in 267 people from 109 countries with a solemn oath of allegiance to this melting-pot nation of immigrants.

"People were meant to be free," Burger said in an open-air courtroom built on the island through which nearly 17 million new Americans once passed.

Via satellite television and audio hookups, Burger simultaneously led thousands of other immigrants in Miami's Orange Bowl, San Francisco's scenic Crissy Field, on the steps of St. Louis's Old Courthouse, and at the Jefferson Memorial in Washington in the unusual naturalization ceremony.

Two television sets flanked the wind-swept stage—here and—the black-robed Burger appeared bemused as he sat through several minutes of television commercials, singing and appearances by entertainers Kenny Rogers and Robert De Niro.

"I think it was very American, with hamburger advertisements in the middle of waiting to become Americans," brand-new citizen Tsipi Ben-Haim, 34 and born in Israel, said with a laugh.

But several other participants cried, most waved tiny American flags, and all cheered and shook hands when the traditional oath was complete. Hundreds of boats surrounding the nearby Statue of Liberty footed their horns in salute. The nation's newest citizens ranged from napping 10-month-old Felipe Gorkic of Guatemala, to grinning 25-year-old bartender Leka Rukha of Albania.

"This is the biggest day of my life," said Rukha, dressed in his finest suit. "Next week I'm getting married. You only become a citizen once. You can always get married again."

The new Americans also included dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov and commetnee Yakov Smirnoff, both from the Soviet Union. Smirnoff said he decided to apply for citizenship after performing before President Reagan at a Republican dinner last year.

"I was very nervous," recalled the 35-year-old Californian, sporting a U.S. flag in his tuxedo jacket's breast pocket. "If he doesn't like you, you'll never work this country again."

Still others were pensive. "If this country is good enough to give me a job and a home, I figure I owe something in return," said Sam Varghese, 33, an Indian-born junior high school teacher in the Bronx. "I want to vote."

Across America, from Adak, Alaska, to Yuma, Ariz., some 26,525 immigrants were scheduled to be naturalized in 49 separate ceremonies this Independence Day weekend, according to Immigration and Naturalization Service officials.

The largest naturalization ceremony in the nation's history took place in Miami, the INS said. Local judges administered the oath and Burger spoke via an audio hookup to about 14,200 mostly-Cuban petitioners gathered in the giant Orange Bowl stadium.

The evening did not come without controversy. Several judges complained that TV ads and Hollywood stars were inappropriate for a dignified, legal proceeding.

In Los Angeles, Chief U.S. District Court Judge Manuel L. Real refused organizers' requests to hold the naturalization ceremony in the Memorial Coliseum or at Dodger Stadium. Instead, judges will swear in more than 12,000 new citizens over four days next week at the Convention Center.

About 1,000 people from 78 nations stood at San Francisco's Crissy Field near the Golden Gate Bridge to receive the oath of allegiance in a ceremony presided over by Federal District Judge Robert F. Peckham.

Fund drive tops goal

NEW YORK (AP) — Lee Iacocca, who led the effort to raise money for the Statue of Liberty's restoration, Thursday night attributed the success of the project to the millions who contributed "from their hearts and from their pockets."

The Chrysler Corp. chairman, who is head of the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation, announced moments before the refurbished monument was flooded in light that the fund-raising goal of $265 million had been surpassed.

"Now that's a huge number for a private fundraising effort," he said. "But more important than how much is from whom. And the answer to that is from everybody — from millionaires to school kids, from companies and civic groups, from people in Europe and people from behind the Iron Curtain, even from Vietnamese boat people. It came $5 million at a time, and it came 5 cents at a time."

"To all of you and to all the people who worked on this great project, we say thank you."

NEA backs national teacher certification

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
The Associated Press

Delegates to the National Education Association convention held their president's plea and voted Friday by a show of hands to support a plan to create a national teacher certification board.

Mary Hatwood Futrell, president of the 1.8 million-member union, had forecast a tough floor fight, but the 7,448 NEA delegates in Louisville, Ky., approved the resolution by about a 2-1 margin after a low-key, half-hour debate.

Albert Shanker, president of the rival American Federation of Teachers, opened his union's convention in Chicago by appealing to his members to accept the national board and other "revolutionary" changes in the way schools are run.

The only alternative, Shanker cautioned the 3,700 AFT delegates, is "a school system that is worse instead of better with more 'oppressive supervision' of teachers."

The delegates representing the AFT's 630,000 members vote Sunday on a package of school reforms suggested in May by the Carnegie Forum on Education and the Economy. Shanker and Futrell were on the panel.

That panel urged creation of the national standards board as a step toward a new class of "lead" teachers commanding salaries of $65,000 a year and exercising broad control over how and what children are taught.

Shanker said he did not agree with everything in the Carnegie blueprint, but "it would be a great tragedy if we didn't know how to make a deal."

Futrell urged the Carnegie report with "deep reservations." She only asked her members to back the national board, not its other provisions.

The resolution the NEA adopted supports the concept of a voluntary, national certification process integrated with state boards that would do the actual screening.

"This historic action taken by the NEA today gives a powerful boost to a keystone Carnegie recommendation," Marc S. Tucker, executive director of the Carnegie Forum, said. "It greatly increases the likelihood that the Forum's proposals will be widely adopted."

Teachers would dominate the national standards board and certification would be voluntary. But advocates say the certified teachers — who would have to pass comprehensive exams yet to be developed — would command higher salaries and respect.

Shanker told his convention, "The only thing that current teacher examinations are good at telling us is that most people are illiterate." In some cases, such as Baltimore last year, school districts hire people who flunk them anyway, he said.

Shanker, in an 80-minute address, traced the history of the AFT, which was founded in 1871 as the first teachers' collective bargaining contract in New York and later became a symbol of teacher militancy.

In recent years Shanker has played a leading role in the movement to raise standards and force new political and business alliances for the schools.

Now, he said, "Everybody's going to start looking for results, and we all know the results are not going to come quickly." The schools are "in grave danger of having a substantial disaster" because talented women are passing up teaching to pursue careers in business and finance.

"It's great for women, great for the country, (but) a disaster for public education," he said.

Without improvements, people will turn their backs on public schools and approve tuition tax credits and other help for private schools that the Reagan administration has sought, Shanker said.

He said auto and steel workers have fashioned new work arrangements to improve productivity and reduce the need for supervision. "If blue-collar workers can be trusted to run their own plants... why can't teachers be trusted to do exactly the same thing?" he asked.

He told reporters afterward that teachers are not going to take on more responsibility for running schools overnight because "if you've been caged for a long time, you're not going to fly as soon as the cage is open."

Shanker predicted that experiments with peer review and team leadership in schools in such places as Toledo, Ohio, and Hammond, Ind., will spread.

The rank-and-file "are more receptive than the (local) leaders" to radical changes because the leaders got their positions by being tough adversaries for school boards, he said.

At the NEA convention, delegates also voted to have Futrell write all college presidents and athletic associations "to express the deep and serious concern of America's educators with the increasing evidence of the exploitation of student athletes." The action was prompted by the recent cocaine death of a Maryland basketball star Len Bias.

Farm Aid attracts throng of 45,000

MANOR, Texas (AP) — Tens of thousands of Fourth of July revelers jammed a race track Friday for a rousing, 18-hour Farm Aid II concert thrown by Willie Nelson to help save the nation's farmers from financial disaster.

Crowds began streaming through the Manor Downs gates as soon as they opened at 6 a.m. Thousands more spent the morning stuck in an 11-mile traffic jam. Margaret Wade, a Farm Aid spokeswoman, estimated the crowd by late afternoon at 45,000.

Beginning the concert about a half-hour after dawn, Nelson welcomed spectators to "the concert for America."

"A lot of people... all the musicians backstage... all you folks out front — are here to help the American farmer," Nelson said, interrupted by cheers.

"He needs our help. And we're here to let the world know that he needs our help and he needs your help... So let's make today a great, historical day and a big positive day for the American family farmer."

Spectators danced, cheered and sang along as the 75 acts took their turns on the stage, singing pieces ranging from "Mammas, Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to be Cowboys" to "Surfin' USA."

The temperature soared toward the mid-90s, and officials urged spectators to drink plenty of water and take other measures to ward off the heat. Up to 30 people had been treated, mostly for heat exposure, by 4 p.m., said Dr. Red Duke, concert medical director.

"For the most part, it's problems with what people have ingested."

Luke said. Many in the crowd had been drinking and smoking marijuana since early morning.

The Beach Boys, Waylon Jennings and Judy Collins all performed during the opening hours. Nelson joined several acts. Others included country stars Kris Kristofferson and Jerry Jeff Walker; rockers like Steppenwolf and the band X; and Cajun fiddler Doug Kershaw and funk rocker Rick James.

Among those pleading for help for American farmers was "Miami Vice" star Don Johnson, who will be joined by Nelson in the first episode of "Miami Vice" this fall.

"Contrary to what you might think, I wasn't born in the back seat of a Ferrari down in Miami," said Johnson, who wore a Panama hat (turquoise shirt and white suit). "I was born on a little farm right up the road here in Missouri. My family were all farmers."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson called the celebration at the Statue of Liberty in New York City "an extravaganza for the very rich" and said farmers were the "new huddled masses yearning to breathe free."

Seats on Governors Island for President Reagan's lighting of the centennial of the Statue of Liberty on Thursday night went for $5,000. Farm Aid tickets sold for $20 each.

"If we turn our backs on the hand that feeds us, it will be an indictment on our national character," Jackson told reporters backstage.

Outside Manor Downs a line of cars stretched to Austin, 11 miles to the west.

FBI pressured cyanide victim's spouse

SEATTLE (AP) — A man whose wife died after swallowing cyanide-laced Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules says the FBI pressured him into taking a lie detector test and subjected him to an intense background investigation.

Paul Webbing said the FBI made him feel like he had to take a polygraph test or be considered a suspect in the cyanide deaths of his wife, Snow Snow, 40, and Bruce Nickell, 32, an Auburn man who lived a few miles away.

Webbing, who said he passed the test, said agents questioned him repeatedly to determine whether he was responsible for the poisonings. So far, authorities have found five bottles of cyanide-laced capsules in south King County.

"The police, the FBI hadn't given me a moment's peace," Webbing said. "They interviewed me daily. They interviewed the family daily."

Stella Nickell, whose husband died June 5 after swallowing Extra-Strength Excedrin capsules at home, also has been interviewed in the investigation and was asked to take a polygraph.

"She resented the request," said her lawyer, Bill Donais. "Her doctor and I told the FBI no because she's too shaken up."

FBI agent Joe Smith in Seattle said Friday he was unable to disclose any details about the bureau's investigation, and declined to comment on the statements made by Webbing and Donais.

Prank leads to shooting

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — A teen-ager who was shot in the head after blowing up a homeowner's mailbox with a firecracker remained in serious condition on Friday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The 36-year-old Spanaway man arrested in connection with the shooting was held on $50,000 bail in Pierce County Jail for investigation of three counts of first-degree assault, said police Sgt. Wayne Zinter.

The man's name was withheld because he won't be formally charged until his arraignment on Monday, Lt. Jeff Edmunds said.

Edward A. Zenger, 17, was driving a car early Thursday with two passengers, ages 17 and 18, in Spanaway, a suburb south of Tacoma, putting firecrackers in the rural-style mailboxes, Zinter said.

Zenger and his friends were chased by the owner of one of the mailboxes for about 25 blocks shortly before 1 a.m. Zenger's friends told authorities they decided to pull off and talk to the man, but the man "fired a couple of rounds from his .44-caliber gun. One of the bullets went through the head of the driver," Zinter said.

Kraft pulls tainted ice cream

GLENVIEW, Ill. (AP) — Kraft Inc. said Friday it had pulled from store shelves all unsold Polar B's ice cream bars that came from a batch of 65,000, some of which were contaminated by deadly bacteria.

Kraft Inc. announced Thursday it was recalling all Polar B's produced at its Richmond, Va., after a bacteria called Listeria monocytogenes was found in a run of Cheekberry flavor Polar B's that left the factory before June 19.

Contamination was found in two other batches in time to keep them from leaving the plant.

No illness has yet been linked to the contamination, Richard Davis, regional director of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, said in a telephone interview.

Strikers heckle Philly mayor

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Striking city workers heckled the mayor at Independence Hall on Friday as the walkout by 14,000 municipal employees left trash littering city streets and dampened the celebration of the Fourth of July.

"This is a very, very happy day, and one of those basic rights we celebrate is the right of expression," Mayor W. Wilson Goode said. "I was booed by pickets at the building where the Declaration of Independence was adopted 210 years ago."

"The union has every right to express themselves, but they have no right to interfere any way with anyone else. That's the beauty of democracy," he said.

Fireworks would go on as scheduled, he said, but the city had to cancel Friday night's concert tribute to the Statue of Liberty because of threats of violence by some strikers.

Caterpillar, UAW reach terms

BRIDGECTON, Mo. (AP) — Negotiators for Caterpillar Inc. and the United Auto Workers reached a tentative settlement on a new contract for 17,000 workers Friday, ending 30 consecutive hours of bargaining.

Spokesmen for both sides described the settlement as innovative and historic.

It was the first time the company and the UAW have reached an agreement without a strike since 1976, James Ward, a Caterpillar vice president and the company's chief negotiator, said at a news conference following the bargaining session.

Bill Castevens, chief negotiator for the UAW, said the grueling bargaining session was worth the end result.

U.S. keeps tight rein on aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is holding a promise to send aid worth $282.7 million to the Philippines in the next nine months, but is waiting for more assurances of economic reform before giving that country a freer hand in spending the money, U.S. officials say.

At issue is whether the government of President Corason Aquino will be permitted to stick $100 million of the U.S. funds into the general budget account for use at will, or must earmark the money for specific projects approved by the United States.

The aid issue is likely to be a major topic of discussion when Mrs. Aquino makes her first visit to the United States since taking office. She is scheduled to meet President Reagan on Sept. 17, and has been invited to address a joint session of Congress while she's in Washington.

Aluminum union accepts pact

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Leaders of the Aluminum, Brick and Glass Workers-International union voted Friday to accept a contract with Alcoa, ending a 34-day walkout against the nation's largest aluminum manufacturer.

The agreement will be presented to union members after local contract issue disputes are resolved this weekend, said Ernie LaBaff, president of the ABGW.

He declined to reveal how the union's local presidents voted, but said: "I think it was a realistic vote. I think people knew what we were up against."

LaBaff also said he does not know when striking workers would return to the job at the 15 Aluminum Company of America plants in eight states that have been affected by the walkout.

The economic agreement was the same as the one approved Wednesday by the United Steelworkers of America.

Capital holiday relaxed

WASHINGTON (AP) — With all eyes on New York for the Statue of Liberty festivities, the nation's capital enjoyed a sunny, mellow holiday that sharply contrasted with raucous and sometimes violent Independence Days in the past.

There was plenty of strolling room along the grassy grounds around the Washington Monument, which last year teemed with more than half a million people who came to hear the Beach Boys and other rock groups.

Moderate crowds did, however, gather along adjacent Constitution Avenue to watch a parade that included high schools and District of Columbia fire trucks and police vehicles and a float carrying 7-year-old Grand Marshal Bobbie Jo Buckley, who holds the title of "Little Miss America."

The National Park Service estimated there were 90,000 people in the monuments area by early morning. A service spokesman said there had been a half dozen arrests.

People sat and stood politely along the parade route, where there seemed to be a good viewing spot for everyone. Warm-up entertainment on reviewing stands consisted of a square dance troupe and Colorado recording artist Chris Hollaway singing some of his patriotic specialties.

No giant concert was scheduled this year, but musical events around the monuments and Capital Mall included military jazz and Dixieland bands. The Captain and Tennille, Sara Vaughan and a group called the Singing Sergeants.

At the Old Post Office Pavilion, country, Latin and gospel groups performed.

The festive atmosphere seemed to suit this year's crowd, and the authorities, just fine.

"I got the shirt ripped off my back right over there last year," said U.S. Park Police Sgt. Andrew Smith as he reviewed the stand. He noted there was no comparison between this year's families with strollers and last year's rowdy, beer-swilling concertgoers who shoved and fought as the hot afternoon wore on.

"We wouldn't have come down this year if it was like last year," said Debbie Knight of Manassas, Va., who with her husband Tom and their 12-year-old son watched the parade on Friday. "We were scared to death a few times last year... About every five minutes there was a fight. People would set off fireworks right in the crowd."

But the vendors trying to peddle hot dogs, flags and ice cream were less enthusiastic.

"It stinks," said ice cream seller Dorey Fox, 17. "There's no big bands. You're getting all the wine-and-cheese type coming down with coolers." Normally the Fourth of July is his busiest day, he said, but this year's sales were only a fraction of last year's.

Appeals court upholds fines for extremists

BOSTON (AP) — Four organizations linked to political extremist Lyndon LaRouche are liable for civil citations and fines amounting to $17 million under a decision upheld by the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The court's ruling Thursday was aimed at four groups that have refused to pay daily fines of at least $10,000 imposed in 1985 by U.S. District Judge A. David Mazzone when the organizations refused to comply with grand jury subpoenas seeking documents for an investigation of credit card fraud.

Prosecutors have contended that the groups made unauthorized charges of $50 and $100 to the credit card numbers of people solicited to buy the group's magazines.

The groups were Campaigner Publications Inc., Fusion Energy Foundation, National Democratic Policy Committee and Caucus Distributors Inc.

Mazzone ordered each group fined $10,000 daily on March 29, 1985, until they complied with the subpoenas. He levied an additional daily fine of $5,000 Jan. 22 against Caucus Distributors for failing to produce additional documents.

The groups have paid no fines. LaRouche and his supporters advocate quarantine for AIDS patients, link the queen of England to drug trafficking and consider Henry Kissinger a Soviet agent.

Pope supports land reform in visit to guerrilla country

POPAYAN, Colombia (AP) — Pope John Paul II walked on a path of flowers to a roofless church in guerrilla country Friday, where he told Indian peasants he supports their desire to regain sacred lands and preserve their ancient ways.

Earlier in the day, the pope broke protocol at a Pacific coast fishing village populated by poverty-stricken descendants of African slaves, walked into a tin-roofed shack and blessed the grizzled patriarch of the large family inside.

John Paul told the people of Popayan "You are struggling for the defense of your culture represented in your languages, your customs and way of life, for the defense of your human dignity and also for the obtaining of rights due you as citizens."

Pope John Paul II tries on a Colombian peasant hat

"My struggles always be in the religious line of love to all other brothers in accord with Christian morals," he said, continuing his theme against violence and class warfare.

The pontiff, 66, appeared to be tiring on the fourth day of a week-long visit to Colombia, his first to this country and his seventh to Latin America.

He arrived in this Andes mountain city 240 miles southwest of Bogota in the late morning to find that residents had strewn flowers along the entire route from the airport to the Roman Catholic cathedral.

The roofless church was laced with scaffolding, being rebuilt after an earthquake that killed 5,000 people on March 31, 1983, which was Holy Thursday. The church also was devastated by three previous earthquakes.

John Paul's message, delivered from a thatched-roof podium to an audience including many Indians in traditional dress, alluded to priests who have helped in the struggle to recover ancestral lands.

They include the Rev. Alvaro Cue, the first Indian priest in the area, who advocated land reform and was shot dead near Popayan in mysterious circumstances two years ago.

The area around the city is one of Colombia's poorest, largely neglected by the government. Many towns have no public schools or medical clinics, and such diseases as typhoid and malaria are common.

Indians, have taken up arms to recover lands they consider to be sacred ground. Many have been driven into the mountains by rich landowners and have joined leftist guerrillas who take refuge there.

Andes Indians use coca as part of their heritage, and many who cultivate the plant have links with both cocaine traffickers and the guerrillas. Some have joined guerrillas involved in the drug trade.

Soviets replace director of probe

MOSCOW (AP) — The director of the government commission investigating the Chernobyl nuclear accident has been replaced, a Tass report indicated Friday.

There had been rumors that the man replaced, Boris Shcherbina, 66, a deputy premier, was seriously ill from radiation exposure.

The Soviet newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda reported at the same time Friday that an accident during cleanup operations at Chernobyl showered firemen with dangerously radioactive water.

The official news agency Tass, in a report on discussions by the commission with other officials, did not announce a change in chiefs, but its report on Friday indicated a new man was in charge.

Shcherbina was named commission chief right after the April 26 disaster that killed at least 26 people. The Tass report Friday said the government inquiry is headed by Vladimir Gusev, also a deputy premier.

In late May, a Soviet government source, who insisted on anonymity, said Shcherbina had been hospitalized "for about a day." The source said he had no details, adding it could be assumed Shcherbina was ill because of his work at Chernobyl.

In a previous change related to Chernobyl, Soviet radio broadcasts reported on May 21 that the man heading cleanup operations, Ivan Silaev, was "taking leave" and Lev Voronin was assuming his duties. Both men are also Soviet deputy premiers.

Recent Tass accounts of the work of the government investigation commission have referred only to the "chairman" without using a name.

The commission has told the International Atomic Energy Agency, based in Vienna, Austria, that its report on the accident will be available next month.

Tass said Friday that Vladimir Shcherbina, a Politburo member and head of the party organization for the Ukraine, and Alexander Lyashko, premier of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, visited the Chernobyl region and held talks with the government commission and Gusev.

Japan shifts policy, endorses whaling ban

GLAND, Switzerland (AP) — Japan on Friday endorsed a global ban on whaling, the World Wildlife Fund said. It was a reversal of long-standing policy by the world's largest whaling nation.

The move came five days after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled out mandatory curtailing of Japan's fishing which informed the WWF, the conservationist organization said in a statement.

The Japanese had said they would endorse the global whaling ban if the International Whaling Commission in Cambridge, England, threat of U.S. fishing sanctions,

Gunfire claims 15 in Punjab violence

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — Gunfire killed 15 people in Punjab state in less than 24 hours in the bloodiest outbreak of Sikh terrorism in weeks, police said Friday. In one encounter, 10 people were reported shot to death.

Police said Sikh extremists killed seven Hindus with bursts of automatic fire near this Sikh sacred city Friday, and then got into a shootout with police that left two assailants dead. A policeman also was reported killed.

Security forces called in a military helicopter to search for three other attackers who fled after being wounded in the gunbattle.

Pretoria bombing wounds 20

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A bomb exploded between two parked cars outside a crowded supermarket in a white Pretoria neighborhood Friday, wounding 20 people, the government said.

A witness saw two women "with their legs blown away from the knees down" and wounded people sprawled on the sidewalk, the South African Press Association said.

Another witness, 15-year-old newspaper vendor Norman Mkhizi, told reporters:

"I heard this huge explosion. ... People ran, some were covered in blood. I saw a black lady lying on the pavement and her legs were blown off. Then I ran too."

It was the second urban bombing in two days and the 12th since a nationwide state of emergency was imposed June 12.

In a protest of detentions of union leaders under the emergency, about 10,000 black miners walked off their jobs or staged slowdowns. They halted production at four diamond mines and disrupted some shifts at Free State Consolidated Gold Mines, the world's biggest producer.

The bombing at 5 p.m. in Pretoria's Silverton district damaged five cars and shattered windows, hurling shards of glass through the air. The store was full of after-work shoppers.

Ambulances were called to the scene and police cordoned off the area. The government said the victims were nine whites, 10 blacks and one person of mixed race.

The government's Bureau of Information said the bomb was in a plastic bag that had been dumped between two parked cars.

President P.W. Botha's government has blamed the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla movement for the bombings, which have killed three people and wounded more than 100 in five cities — Johannesburg, Cape Town, Durban, Queenstown and Pretoria. Most of the victims have been white.

Hanoi says China shells border area

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam accused Chinese forces Friday of firing 15,000 artillery rounds into Ha Tayen border province and staging 11 commando probes into its territory last month.

The Vietnam News Agency said shells hit Thanh Thuy village and other populated areas. It said that on June 1, International Children's Day, the Chinese shelled a school in the province, killing two students and wounding five students and a teacher. Vietnam had reported the school shelling earlier.

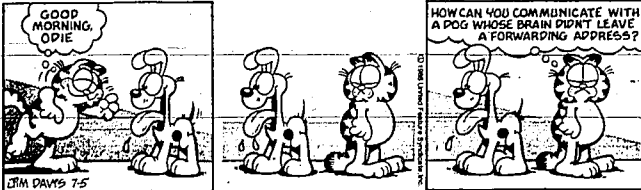

The agency said local armed forces captured "many intruders, shot a military truck and an ammunition depot."

What's what?

Our Chief Prognosticator thinks the United States is 66. In China, long a nation of rice eaters, soon will become a nation of wheat eaters. Why not? South Korea already has turned into one of the biggest buyers of U.S. wheat.

Deer: If the doe lives on fertile soil, she'll probably have twin fawns. If she lives on eroded soil, she'll probably have a lone fawn. Nature worked that one out, too.

Crooner Rudy Vallee, 84, dies at home

By BOB THOMAS
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The death of crooner Rudy Vallee as he watched the Statue of Liberty celebration on television was a "happy way for him to go," his publicist said Friday.

Vallee, who died Thursday night at age 84, had been ill with throat cancer and had suffered a slight stroke while in the hospital.

Vallee, idolized in the 1920s and '30s as the first star crooner in a string that ran from Bing Crosby to Frank Sinatra to Elvis Presley was with his wife, Eleanor, at their Hollywood home when he died.

"Rudy was watching the unveiling of the Statue of Liberty and he remarked, 'I wish we could be there; you know how I love a party.' Then he took a big breath, and he died," Mrs. Vallee said.

Actress Dorothy Lamour said she heard about Vallee's death on television while watching the Liberty celebration.

"I was thinking back to when I was very young and he was very good to me, I got a few tears in my eyes," she said.

"He was very instrumental in any success I might have had in the business," she said. "I was a New York working at the Stork Club; and he came over and introduced me for my show."

"He was very patriotic and to be watching the Liberty weekend on television and the Statue of Liberty was probably a happy ending for me," his publicist Chris Harris said.

"It was a happy way for him to go," Vallee was hospitalized in February for treatment of throat cancer shortly after recording the song "Junior Movie Star," Harris said. It has yet to be released. A Mass was scheduled for Saturday at St. Charles Roman Catholic Church in North Hollywood, Mrs. Vallee said. Vallee will be buried privately in Westbrook, Maine, where his parents are buried.

A baritone with a nasal voice, Vallee burst onto the music scene in the Jazz Age of the 1920s. In the 1930s, he was one of radio's biggest draws, and he went on to star in movies and on Broadway.

through now. They'll be no more Gene Austin, no more Nick Lucas and no more Rudy Vallee. Bing Crosby has come along, and he sings like a man."

He was born Hubert Prior Vallee on July 28, 1901, in Island Pond, Vt., and grew up in Maine. He took a year's leave from Yale in 1924 to play at the Savoy Hotel in London, where he found the song that became his theme — "My Time is Your Time."

Fame came in 1928, when his band, the Yale Collegians, signed on at the Heigh-Ho Club in New York City. He used a megaphone to project his voice over the noise of the patrons. His greeting, "Heigh-ho, everybody!" became another trademark.

Vallee and his band were soon broadcasting as many as 25 shows a week on three stations. It was Prohibition, the flapper era, and audiences lionized the Ivy League lifestyle.

His hits included "Springtime in the Rockies," the University of Maine's "Stein Song" and Yale's "Whiffenpoof Song."

His "I'm Just a Vagabond Lover" led to his screen debut in "The Vagabond Lover" in 1929, and other crooner roles followed, including parts in "Gold Diggers in Paris" and "Too Many Blondes." Vallee won new fame in the 1960s in the Broadway musical "How To Succeed in Business Without Really Trying." He repeated his role in the movie.

Vallee married four times — to Leonie Caucholis in 1928, a union annulled the same year; to Fay Webb, 1931-36; and to actress Jane Greer, 1943-44. He married Eleanor Norris in 1949. He had no children.

Memories still painful 25 years later

Families to face retrial in girl's death

HANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Booker T. Hillery Jr. had been in prison for nearly a quarter-century for the murder of a teen-ager when the conviction was struck down. Now he and the victim's family must endure another trial.

Only two convicted murderers have been in California prisons longer than Hillery, and the prospect of a retrial has roused wrenching reminders of Marlene Miller's death for this farming town of 25,000 people.

The Hillery case at this point in time almost has a life of its own," said defense attorney Clifford Tedmon. "I doubt that there's a 5-year-old child in Hanford today who hasn't heard of the Hillery case in one form or another."

Hillery has spent 24 years in prison for the murder of 15-year-old Marlene, whose body was found with her sewing scissors sticking out of her neck.

The U.S. Supreme Court overturned the conviction in January because blacks were excluded from the 1962 grand jury that indicted Hillery, who is black.

Kings County District Attorney Robert Maline decided to retry the case, and Hillery, now 54, has been ordered to trial Oct. 20.

Hillery escaped the death penalty three times as the nation revised its standards for execution. He ultimately received a life sentence with the possibility of parole, and residents have gathered up to 16,000 signatures on protest petitions before each parole hearing.

A jailhouse lawyer with a halo of gray hair to mark the passage of time, Hillery contends his rights were abused in an investigation so old that many key witnesses are dead or too ill to testify.

Among them are the chief investigator at the murder scene, the deputy who arrested Hillery and the state criminalist. Their testimony will be read at the retrial, typically a disadvantage to the prosecution because readings tend to bore jurors, legal experts say.

Time also can blunt memories of those still able to testify, but they will have their original words to consult. The case against Hillery is purely circumstantial, "but it's very sound circumstantial evidence," Maline said.

Marlene Miller's father, Walter, declined to be interviewed.

His daughter was sewing a party dress when she disappeared from home March 21, 1962. Her body was found the next morning in an irrigation canal. She died of a collapsed lung, and there was evidence of an attempted rape.

Hillery was on parole for rape and was working as a ranch hand at a dairy four-tenths of a mile from the Miller home. Physical evidence placed him one-quarter mile away the night of the slaying.

Hillery denied entering the house or molesting the girl. He acknowledged boots found in his car were his but denied that gloves and a belt recovered at the murder scene were his.

Green particles of roofing shingle similar in color to that found around the Miller house were on Hillery's boots, but his girlfriend's house had a similar roof. The lining of one glove was made of red Orlon, and red fibers were found in the Miller house.

Much of the evidence, including Hillery's car, was saved and now is subject to analysis by modern techniques.

This time, a scanning electron microscope fitted with special infrared and X-ray attachments will be used to produce graphs reflecting

"I never had much of a voice," he once said, "and it was all in my nose. But I think one reason for the success was that I was the first articulate singer — people could understand the words as I sang. And at least I had pitch."

Comedian and producer Ken Murray, a friend of more than 50 years, said Vallee predicted the demise of his own singing style in 1931.

"I said to him, 'Rudy I'm so glad for your success,' and he said 'Well, I'll tell you one thing, we're all from taking that decision into account. A judge also will decide how much the jury will learn of Hillery's past."

"The whole dynamic of that delay will be different depending on how much information they have," said Rachel Moran, a law professor at the University of California at Berkeley's Boalt Hall.

But the verdict could hinge on moral issues, she said.

Promotion puts woman in top spot

DETROIT (AP) — Commander Mary Jarrett-Jackson, former head of the Detroit police crime lab, has been promoted to chief, becoming the department's highest-ranking woman officer since its 1974 reorganization, officials said.

"When I came on in '58, I never dreamed that this was a possibility — it wasn't at that time," Jarrett-Jackson, 53, said after her promotion Tuesday.

Prior to 1974, the police department had a separate women's division headed by a female chief.

An officer for 28 years, Jarrett-Jackson will head the department's western operations bureau, replacing Joe Areda, who died earlier this year.

An expert in serology, the science dealing with the actions and properties of serums, Jarrett-Jackson interned at Scotland Yard in 1972 and commanded the crime lab from 1975-1982.

Morton Thiokol rated

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — The Air Force and NASA have rated Morton Thiokol as satisfactory in six areas and marginal in the areas of engineering and safety, a spokesman said.

The ratings are a measure of how the contractor is complying with its government contracts, and a marginal rating means, "to some extent, that the contractor is not in compliance," said Kar Fielder, UASF public information officer.

The ratings are an improvement over the company's last review, when it received three satisfactory ratings and five marginal ratings, said Ms. Fielder.

The review was conducted June 2 to June 13 and results were released Thursday.

The company was rated satisfactory in the categories of product integrity, quality assurance, manufacturing, subcontract management, contract management and property. It was rated marginal in the categories of engineering and safety.

Fielder would not be more specific and said the company will be asked to provide a plan to the Air Force Contract Management Division outlining specific steps it will take to make improvements. She said the division is currently determining what, if any, action the government will take as a result of the review.

Morton Thiokol spokesman Gil Moore was not available for comment.

Of the eight categories, product integrity is probably the most important, said Ms. Fielder. "Product integrity is defined as hardware compliance to contractual specifications, or is the 'Air Force' getting what it contracted for and paid for?"

In a 1984 review, the company was rated marginal in product integrity.

"Thiokol has improved significantly since the 1984 (review)," she said.

The reviews is a routine investigation the Contract Management Division does of all companies that contract with the government, said Ms. Fielder. Morton Thiokol had reviews of it done in May 1981, and September 1984.

Results of the 1981 review were not available, but in 1984, the company was rated marginal in product integrity, quality assurance, engineering, subcontract management and safety. It was rated satisfactory in manufacturing, contract management and property.

'Drug-free youth' new group's goal

GREAT FALLS (AP) — A new group called Montana Communities in Action for Drug-Free Youth has been formed.

Darlene Meddock of Great Falls, one of the organizers, said the purpose "is to support community-based goals for drug-free youth."

She said about a dozen representatives from across the state met last week to establish a statewide drug prevention network.

"This grass-roots movement for drug-free youth has grown nationwide in recent years," she said. "It is anticipated that through this effort, parents and other members will be encouraged to join forces to protect their children from the ravages of drug abuse."

Meddock said the meeting was sponsored by the state Department of Institutions' Drug and Alcohol Abuse Division.

"Through establishment of a statewide prevention network, it is hoped more communities will be able to form groups, and that ideas, materials and resources can be shared," she said. "The network will provide a means of coordinating programs, as well as coordinating efforts at imparting legislation."

Swimmer sets Billings visit

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Ross Swimmer, assistant U.S. Interior secretary for Indian Affairs, will make his second visit to Billings in less than a month next Thursday.

He will attend a public hearing scheduled on the federal government's emergency hay program.

Swimmer will hear testimony from tribal leaders and members in Montana and Wyoming about the hay program, plus management of Indian trust lands.

Dave Pennington of the Billings Bureau of Indian Affairs office said Thursday he hopes the hearing will "produce some management suggestions that will improve agriculture and help avoid the need for future emergency programs."

Also at the hearing will be Frank Ryan, deputy to the assistant interior secretary for trust and economic development.

Utah bar meets in Sun Valley

Business resents racketeer connection

SUN VALLEY (AP) — Bankers and banks, corporations and businessmen, brokerages and brokers all have felt the threat and public scorn associated with being a defendant in a "racketeer influenced and corrupt organization (RICO) action."

RICO was passed in 1970 to aid in the prosecution of organized crime. By defining "enterprise" — whether formal or informal — as a potential defendant, RICO opened the way for prosecutors to get at the organizations that have orchestrated crimes ranging from mail to murder and from extortion to pension-fund abuses.

But its treble damage provisions have made it a powerful tool in civil actions against plaintiffs whose alleged misdeeds do not include racketeering as traditionally understood.

Utah bankers, businessmen and state officials have found themselves the unhappy defendants in RICO actions. Bankers complained they have been named RICO defendants merely for trying to collect unpaid loans.

There have been abuses of RICO, said Brigham Young University Professor Michael Goldsmith, here for the annual convention of the Utah State Bar.

But it would be far better to soften the word racketeer in a RICO action to something like criminal activity than to dull the thrust of the law, which, he said, is a most useful tool for the small and the weak in exacting justice from the large and the strong.

The strong has included such combinations as the American College of Trial Lawyers.

Hatch, who practiced law in Pittsburgh for 14 years, said he believed William R. Rehnquist and Antonin Scalia will be readily confirmed as chief justice and justice.

Less certain, he said, is the future of Reagan nominees to lower court positions.

The Democrats, he said, would delay and block confirmation proceedings in hopes this fall's elections will restore the Democrats' majority in the Senate.

With 22 Republicans up for re-election, compared to only 12 Democrats, the odds are in favor of the Democrats, he said.

With Senate Judiciary Chairman Strom Thurmond moving to the Armed Forces Committee chairmanship, Hatch said he will seek chairmanship of the Judiciary committee, giving up his chairmanship of the Senate Labor Committee.

He said that while he has not studied the Supreme Court's 5-4 opinion upholding a Georgia law against sodomy, the decision appears to favor states' rights.

However, he said it will trigger a spate of lawsuits at every level.

a bank, bank officers and lawyers engaging in such as mail and wire fraud to identify and target elderly rich to defraud them of their estates.

"The losses are not less painful because the culprit is a legitimate business and not a Malloso," says Goldsmith, who was once second counsel to the New York State Organized Crimes Task Force.

There are those complaining that RICO has spawned frivolous and harassing actions against business defendants.

But Goldsmith said there are a host of tools for lawyers to deal with frivolous RICO actions.

Among them: Sanctions against law firms which have brought actions not in good faith.

Utah blazes considered under control

DELTA, Utah (AP) — Two fires which scorched 650 acres in central Utah's Little Sahara Recreation Area had been contained and were expected to be declared under control by late Friday, authorities said.

Bureau of Land Management fire dispatcher Jerry Empey said the 500-acre Tinetic blaze, 50 miles north of here, was contained Thursday and firefighters were off fire lines Friday and making only occasional checks.

The Tinetic fire was sparked Wednesday afternoon by a spark from a passing train, authorities said.

A 150-acre fire in the Gilson Mountains, about 25 miles north of Delta, also was contained Friday. That blaze and the Tinetic fire were expected to be controlled by 6 p.m. MDT, Empey said.

On Thursday, BLM officials said two other fires which had blackened nearly 12,000 acres of southern Utah forest lands were under control.

An 8,500-acre blaze in the Blue Valley Mountains near St. George was being watched for hot spots. The blaze, sparked June 19 by an unattended campfire at the Oak Grove Campground, was battled by nearly 600 firefighters, a fleet of fire-retardant-dumping helicopters and several bulldozers at its peak late last week.

Major malathion vs. 'hoppers campaign set

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Federal officials will launch what is likely to be the summer's biggest spraying campaign against grasshoppers early next week, raining insecticide on 220,000 acres of infested range and desert in the Magic Valley.

The U.S. Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service has hired an Arizona flying firm to spray malathion over 44 miles of Lincoln, Minidoka and Blaine counties, said Roger Pollard, APHIS officer in charge for Idaho. The swath is four miles wide.

Four planes from Custom Farm Service of Stanfield, Ariz., are scheduled to begin the operation Tuesday, weather permitting. The spraying, estimated to cost about $1.50 an acre, is expected to take five days.

The single block of rangeland is more than double the total acreage treated so far this year to stop grasshoppers from eating Idaho square yard in the area. Eight is the level of infestation considered to cause economically significant damage.

The desert spraying is designed to back up earlier insecticide treatments protecting crops to the south, Pollard said. The area was treated by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management. It also includes 12,000 acres of state-owned range. "It's probably the largest one we're going to do this year," Pollard said.

APHIS surveyors have found grasshoppers in concentrations between eight and 35 per acre in the area. Eight is the level of infestation considered to cause economically significant damage.

The counterattack against the grasshoppers continues to be far smaller than that in 1985. By this time last year, federal officials had sprayed 2.5 million acres of federal, state and private rangeland. The entire campaign last year took in 6 million acres.

The grasshoppers then hatched on government-owned land and moved into crops to feed when rangeland dried out during the summer. This year, concentrations of grasshoppers are lower and are spotty instead of widespread, APHIS officials report.

Counter offer on dorm set

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

ALBION — Negotiations for the sale of the first of the buildings on the old Albion campus are continuing and most parties involved say they believe it can be accomplished.

Ferry Frank Keeton of San Diego, Calif., has made an offer to the city of Albion for the purchase of McMoran Hall, the former military dormitory, which she hopes to convert into an art center and gallery.

However, in a meeting of the Albion City Council Tuesday, it was decided the city will make a counter offer, Mayor James Kelley said.

"We think that for the money she is offering, she is asking a little more land than we want to let go," Kelley said.

Keeton's offer, which Kelley did not disclose at the request of the prospective buyer, is for the 12,000-square-foot, two-story building and 2.5 acres of campus land.

Kelley said the council is anxious to get something going in the way of development of the long vacant campus, but he said council members want to negotiate for reducing the 2.5 acres of land around McMoran Hall in the interest of other future campus development.

The Albion City Council plans a special meeting in about two weeks, he said, to set the city budget and discuss the campus.

"We will probably decide at that time on a counter offer to be sent to her (Keeton). We also want to get a commitment from her as to when she would begin work on the building renovation and some sort of time period as to when it would be completed. We don't want to have it 10 years down the road," Kelley said.

Still clouding any transaction involving the campus is the question of ownership. Although the campus and its buildings were given to the city by the state — or sold for a token price — when the college closed, the city's ownership came with a challenge several years ago. Heirs of one of the major original land owners told the city the original gift of the land carried a stipulation that if the campus were no longer used for educational purposes, it would revert to the original owner.

George Kelley, of Albion, had purchased land titles from these heirs and a court case is pending on the question of ownership.

George Kelley could not be reached this week for comment. However, on Wednesday, his attorney, William Von Tegen of Boise, said he believes something can be worked out between Kelley and the city so as not to block the building sale. He said he believes it can be arranged for the sale to be finalized pending determination.

Officials inspect housing for aliens in H-2 Program

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Farmers housing alien workers under the federal H-2 Program must meet a bumper crop of standards, stipulating clean, adequate and safe shelter.

The people who inspect the housing say a majority of the participating farmers are doing a good job at providing a home away from home.

But of the 220 growers in the program, only about a third of them will be visited this year by inspectors while the aliens occupy their American home.

To date, about 1,024 aliens admitted legally from Mexico under the program are working in Idaho. A majority of those people are employed in the Magic Valley, said Keith Gabriel, program supervisor of the Idaho Employment Security Agency, state administrator of the H-2 Program.

The program, a provision of federal immigration laws, allows farmers to hire aliens if they can't find enough domestic laborers for the often strenuous work. The program is not new to the nation, but it is new to Idaho.

This is the first year Idaho farmers have used it for agricultural workers, Gabriel said. The Snake River Farmers' Association was responsible for initiating the use of the program in the state.

The benefit to the farmers is a supply of workers who won't be in danger of being swooped up by the U.S. Immigration Service when they are most needed.

But the farmers must pay the price in terms of paperwork and federal wage and housing regulations.

Some farmers are following the rules, staff from local Job Service offices make field checks, Gabriel said. So far, about 20 to 25 growers have been contacted, with about 16 of them in the Magic Valley.

Gabriel said he couldn't release the names of those growers for reasons of privacy.

Of those inspected, overall, housing conditions were good, he added. Farmers usually house the aliens and domestic workers on their property and at a labor camp.

"Some farmers go beyond the requirements," Gabriel said. "I don't think anybody is trying to take advantage of the workers or put them in poor housing."

Floyd Padilla with the Twin Falls Job Service office said that most of the housing he had inspected in the region was adequate, and the workers were happy.

Club donates $1,000 to journalism at TFHS

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The journalism program at the Twin Falls High School picked up support on Thursday from the 20th Century Club, which presented the school with a $1,000 check.

"We read that schools were in deep trouble, and we thought this would be a good place for our money to go," said Fay Hoffman, chairman of the Building Trust Fund of the 20th Century Club, a women's service organization in Twin Falls.

"We wish we could give more and come here more often," said Helen McCauley, secretary-treasurer of the club.

The money will be combined with a $750 donation earlier in the year from Twin Falls Bank & Trust and will be used to purchase a terminal and printer for the journalism department, said TFHS teacher Mary Lou Barry.

"We just got into computers last year, but we could only afford to buy one computer," said Barry. "It's been difficult to service 25 students with one terminal. We really appreciate this."

"Not only will the new equipment be a learning experience, it will also save the district money. Barry said the one computer this year saved the school about $300 an issue of the TFHS newspaper.

She said the next goal is to raise enough money to purchase a $4,500 laser printer so that students will be able to do everything, but actually print the paper.

The award-winning journalism program at the high school serves about 75 students throughout the year.

In presenting the check, Hoffman expressed thanks to outgoing Assistant Superintendent Kent Heaton for finding a worthwhile project for the money.

TFHS Principal Frank Charlton also thanked Heaton, who resigned last week to become superintendent-principal of the Sandy, Ore., High School District.

"We're going to miss your leadership in Twin Falls," Charlton said.

Resigning school board member vents frustrations

By BARBARA NEWEIRT
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — "I've heard some people refer to Idaho as the Appalachia of the West. I get furious when I hear people talk of Idaho in these terms. I hate that, but there is a ring of truth to it."

So says David Griffith, a 14-year Idaho resident who recently handed in his resignation as vice chairman of the Blaine County School Board of Trustees.

Griffith is moving from Sun Valley to become associate director of development at Colorado College in Colorado Springs. His duties will focus on fund-raising for the small, private liberal arts campus in addition to teaching on a part-time basis.

Griffith said his two real avocational loves are agriculture and education. The move to Idaho was in pursuit of his love of the land.

In 1972, Griffith chose to run a ranch near Bliss and then moved to Sun Valley in 1976 to work as director of the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities. Since his resignation from there in 1981, he has been busy running his ranch, as well as pursuing timber interests in Northern California and business interests in Minnesota.

He and his family are leaving the state with mixed emotions.

"My roots are very, very deep here, but my mind needs nurturing," he said.

... extremely irritated and frustrated at Idaho's continued reluctance to adequately fund education at all levels."

The decision to move came in part to pursue full-time work in an academic setting. A second reason for the move is to find a "bigger challenge and opportunity" than a resort community with a five-month economy can provide for his wife, Katherine, director of the Kneeland Gallery in Ketchum.

Griffith served on the Blaine County School Board for eight years and has been involved in the educational process at both the county and state levels.

"Serving on the school board has been the most rewarding thing I've done in the years I've been here, but it also highlights the 'love-hate' relationship I have with Idaho," said Griffith.

He places a high value on education and finds he is among many people in the state who are "extremely irritated and frustrated at Idaho's continued reluctance to adequately fund education at all levels."

However, the Blaine County School District is fortunate, he said, to have good financial support and a positive attitude toward schools from its patrons.

Holiday traffic accidents kill man, put 11 in hospitals

TWIN FALLS — A young man from Jerome was killed and 11 other people were transported to hospitals following July 4 accidents on Magic Valley roads.

Russell W. Palmer, 22, of 323 East St., Jerome, died when the pickup he was riding in went out of control and rolled down an embankment on the Shoshone Basin Road, also known as the Rogerson cut-off road, in the South Hills, according to Idaho State Police reports. The accident occurred less than a mile west of Rock Creek Road.

Palmer was ejected from the vehicle and died instantly, according to state police and Sgt. Gary Kaufman of the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office. The pickup went off the side of the mountain road about 2:40 a.m. Friday and rolled over two or three times, Kaufman said. He estimated it stopped 60 to 70 feet below the road.

The driver, Steve Brannon, 23, of Twin Falls, was taken by helicopter to St. Alphonsus Medical Center in Boise. He had been released by Friday evening.

Two other passengers in the pickup, Annette Dewitt, 22, and Daria Prescott, 21, both of Twin Falls, were taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. Dewitt was in fair condition Friday night, and Prescott was treated and released.

Kaufman said one of the people riding in the pickup apparently walked out to get help. The accident is still under investigation, he said.

In an unrelated accident, Kim J. Allen, 18, of Brigham, Utah, was in custody at the Cassia County Law Enforcement Building Friday night after being arrested on charges of driving under the influence, said Idaho State Police dispatcher Dee Silver.

Allen was driving a 1972 Ford Bronco that overturned in the late afternoon Friday about 20 miles south of Malta on the Naf Road, a half mile west of the Naf store. No other vehicle was involved.

Three passengers were taken to Tremonton, Utah, for treatment in injuries, Silver said. One was in serious condition. Names of the passengers and conditions of the others were not available late Friday night. A fourth passenger was not injured.

Allen was treated and released at Cassia Memorial Hospital, Silver said.

In a third accident, five people were injured when William Henry Brewster, 81, of 503 E. Main St., Jerome, allegedly executed a left hand turn against a red light, according to Twin Falls City Police reports.

Brewster was driving a 1970 Oldsmobile four-door south on Blue Lakes Boulevard when he attempted to turn left onto Pole Line Road at 10:55 a.m. Friday. He struck a 1983 Buick two-door traveling north on Blue Lakes Boulevard, according to police reports.

The Buick was being driven by Gene Albert Lombard, 45, of 433 Madrona St., Twin Falls. He had four passengers in the car, all of the same address: Dan Rice, 17; Laura Rice, 19; Mike Rice, 20; and Sharon Lombard, 46.

Two ambulances were needed to transport both drivers and Dan Rice, Laura Rice and Sharon Lombard to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. All were treated and released except Sharon Lombard who was admitted. Her condition was not available to the press Friday evening.

No one involved in the collision at Blue Lakes and Pole Line was wearing seatbelts, according to police reports.

Rains, snow slow wilderness flames

RIGGINS (AP) — Mountain rain and snow on Friday beat down flames that had blackened 720 acres in the Gopel Hump Wilderness area of the Nez Perce National Forest since Wednesday, a U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman said.

The lightning-caused blaze about 20 miles east of Riggins along the Main Salmon River was declared contained at 5 p.m. Friday, public information officer Mary Zabinski said. Fire officials expected to have the Cherry Creek fire completely under control by Saturday evening, she said.

More than 500 firefighters from Idaho, Oregon and Washington had been ferried to the scene by helicopter since the blaze was detected Wednesday morning.

mination of ownership through the courts.

Members of the agreement, Von Tegen said, are not complete at this time, and he did not want to go into further detail.

Mayor James Kelley said he is hopeful that his cousin, George Kelley, and the city and their attorneys will reach one of the agreements that will prevent blocking all campus development or sales. Members of the alumni association, which includes students of the college when it was the Albion Normal School, College of Southern Idaho or Magic Valley Christian College, held Saturday in Albion and buried their annual homecoming. At their meeting, alumni heard a report on the proposed sale of McMurray Hall from Mary Lynn Bristol, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, who has been working for several years to save the campus. Bristol explained that Keeton has suggested the alumni join in the effort to restore and save McMurray Hall. She is asking families, individuals or organizations to each contribute one of the 21 shares in the building and restore it in the memory of a former student in the family, or any other individual associated with the school or interested in the campus.

Alumni members living in the local area volunteered to furnish materials and labor to clean up the building and haul away debris and trash accumulations when Keeton finalizes the purchase and is ready to begin work.

Albion President Keith Amende of Albion announced the donation from a former student of a $100,000 trust fund which can be maintained for campus improvement and maintenance. Interest from the trust, he said, might be used to help restore additional buildings. Keeton also asked for an advisory board from the Alumni Association to work toward a uniform-campus renovation plan. The board of directors agreed to serve in this capacity.

About 160 alumni and their wives or husbands attended the annual homecoming dinner.

Two local artists, John and Elaine Horjels of Burley, also have volunteered to help in the efforts to bring the college back to life.

Blaze blackens 2,000 acres, temporarily closes freeway

HAMMETT (AP) — About 60 Bureau of Land Management firefighters battled a range fire Friday night that had burned some 2,000 acres of grass and sagebrush east of Hammett, a BLM spokeswoman said.

The man-caused blaze started about 2 p.m. Friday and was quickly spread across a county road by winds gusting up to 30 mph, dispatcher Sharon Stewart said.

Thick smoke from the fire cut visibility and forced the Idaho State Police to close Interstate 84 between Hammett and Glens Ferry for about two hours Friday night. It was reopened about 8 p.m.

Stewart said crews from the Boise and Shoshone BLM districts were fighting the flames, aided by three bulldozers, six water tankers and a helicopter for aerial reconnaissance.

She said the blaze was about 70 percent contained Friday night after temperatures cooled and winds calmed. No buildings or other structures were threatened and no injuries were reported.

Exactly how the fire started was unknown, but an investigation was under way, Stewart said.

inspectors are being paid the stipulated wages, which are minimum wage — $3.50 an hour — or 10 cents for every joint of pipe they move, Gabriel said.

The farmers must supply detailed wage stubs and records for inspection and pay their workers every two weeks.

The regulations don't just pertain to aliens, he added. If there are domestic workers on the farm, they must benefit from the regulations.

To make sure the state is doing its job, inspectors from a regional U.S. Labor-Department office also conduct field checks, said Jim Bailey, regional director of the U.S. Employment Service in Seattle. The federal office contracts with the state office to conduct the inspections.

The federal field checks at the farms are not as extensive as the state's.

"We just talk to some of the Ron Gates, another office worker, said he was impressed with the housing and sanitation.

Gabriel added that only one or two sites in the state had what he would term "severe problems." The worst house, although unoccupied, was found in April in the Magic Valley during a training session for state, federal and local inspectors.

"The housing is horrible," he said. There were holes in the roof and the back door was propped up by a board. The grower soon corrected the problems.

More commonly, the problems have been minor, such as the lack of a fire extinguisher or first aid kit, he added.

All housing had to meet the federal requirements prior to a 45-day period before the workers started on the jobs, he added.

During the season, however, state inspectors will be able to visit about 30 to 35 percent of the growers in the program, Gabriel said. The farms will be randomly selected.

Conditions are checked against a check list of regulations from the Occupational Housing and Safety Administration or the Employment Training Administration, depending on when the structure was built. Both are U.S. Labor Department agencies.

The check list covers nine pages. It asks, among other items, whether there are screened windows or skylights, safe wiring conditions, adequate toilet facilities and fire exits.

Believing Blaine County is the "premier" school district in the state, Griffith feels there is still much room for improvement.

"Many people think we are the golden goose and all we have to do is pat it and we get what we want — it's simply not true."

Even after receiving a $1.6 million override tax levy the last two years, Griffith said the district still falls in the middle of funding on a statewide basis. Expenditures per pupil and teacher's salaries fall right in the middle, he said.

He said that this is related to a failure at the state level to compete with surrounding states in attracting and bringing new business and industry to Idaho.

Saying that one of the primary considerations for businesses locating in one state over another is the quality of education, Griffith finds Idaho falls short.

The solution to upgrade the state's lagging economy is to develop a progressive coalition from the public and private sectors to work toward a "small area development" throughout the state, Griffith said.

To successfully compete with Utah, Oregon and Washington, the state needs to upgrade the education system and work on recruitment and enticement of new business and industry.

In addition, Griffith sees Idaho's higher education system in need of "wholesale reform."

"We need to have a state system of higher education, not a series of public institutions that are fighting over a small area of money."

On a local level, Griffith believes the Wood River Valley's dependency on tourism will increase in the future.

"I'd like to think there would be a lot more power. Engineers business is moving into Blaine County, but I don't know we can count on that as being the solid economic base we're looking for," said Griffith.

He does see the "encouraging" workers. We don't really do housing inspections," Bailey said.

The federal inspectors conducted such checks in April in the Twin Falls and Burley areas, Bailey said. He also said he could not release names of people who were visited.

The federal agency also certifies the program applications of the farmers and gives state employment offices clearance to recruit domestic workers in other states. If enough domestic workers can't be found to fill a job order requested by a farmer, they may recruit alien workers, Bailey said.

The federal agency also administers funds for the state program.

Among the states within its jurisdiction, which include Idaho, Alaska, Oregon and Washington, only Idaho uses aliens for agricultural work, Bailey said. The other states use the H-2 program to supply aliens for jobs such as teaching, cooking or "any job an employer tries, but can't get an American worker," Bailey said.

Church: Teach morals with sex

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormons should encourage the teaching of morality and parents should seek to ensure that sex education given to their children is consistent with appropriate moral and ethical values, church leaders said.

In a letter to the general, regional and local authorities of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the First Presidency said many private and public schools are offering instruction on human sexuality.

"Parents should be aware of the content of such instruction, so they can supplement it with appropriate teachings of moral values and responsibilities in the home," the letter said.

The letter said that with the encouragement of parents and other citizens, many schools offering sex education classes can be persuaded to include instruction on the importance of chastity and marriage at the appropriate time.

"Parents have a God-given duty to teach their children to understand the laws and ordinances of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Parents cannot properly shift this duty to other persons or organizations," the letter said.

Pope reports revised catechism due in 1990

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II announced June 26 that the Roman Catholic Church's new comprehensive catechism should be ready by 1990.

"With the help of Our Lord," the pope said, a special commission "should finish the new catechism in 1990, on the 25th anniversary of the ending of the Second Vatican Council." He spoke to officials of the Roman Curia, the Vatican's central administration.

The decision to write a universal catechism was decided at an extraordinary bishop's synod last year. Prelates stressed the need for uniform guidelines reflecting the wideranging reforms in church practice approved by the Second Vatican Council (1962-65).

Until now, Roman Catholics have used different manuals published by individual bishops conferences.

Catechism is a series of questions and answers summarizing Catholic doctrine.

Vatican sources said the new catechism will eliminate elements in various national texts which do not conform to the spirit and letter of the Vatican II reforms.

The draft will be submitted to the pope for approval before being published, the sources said.

'Thumb' markers are punched into Bibles published by Abingdon Press, a Methodist publisher begin selling Bibles door-to-door. In 1961, he started Royal Publishing and published his own Bibles.

Eight years later he bought Thomas Nelson Publishers, the British Bible publishing company founded in 1798.

Today, Moore is president and chief stockholder of Thomas Nelson, a publicly owned company that had $68.9 million in gross sales last year.

Pat Robertson, the Rev. Jimmy Swaggart, Jerry Falwell, Robert Schuller and Billy Graham all use

Nelson Bibles. The Billy Graham Association last year bought 400,000 Bibles from Thomas Nelson, the company that also publishes popular sellers written by Schuller and other religious leaders.

Thomas Nelson publishes seven of the best-known English translations of the Bible, as well as the new Catholic Study Bible, among others.

Dodd Mead, the 145-year-old publishing house, is now owned by Thomas Nelson. It is an Idealis Publishing Co. and Morning Star, a Christian greeting card company.

'Buckle on the Bible Belt'

Nashville is U.S. capital for religious publishing

By CHARLES HILLINGER
Los Angeles Times

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — They call Nashville the "Buckle on the Bible Belt" with good reason. Its population is predominantly conservative Protestant. It is the religious printing and publishing capital of America.

Bibles, hymnals, Sunday School books, Scripture tracts and religious magazines roll off the presses day and night in this, the biggest printing center in the South.

Printing is Nashville's No. 1 industry, employing 12,000 with gross annual sales of more than $600 million, half of it in religious publications.

Nashville is the home of Thomas Nelson Publishers, reportedly the biggest Bible publishing company. United Methodist Publishing House claims to be the largest church-owned and operated publishing and printing plant in the world.

Gleasons International, the world's largest Bible distributor, is headquartered here. Last year, Gleasons distributed 24 million Bibles printed in 55 languages to more than 100 countries and to hotels, motels, hospitals and jails all over America.

The nation's largest Protestant denomination — the 14.1-million member Southern Baptist Church, has done nearly all of its printing here since 1891. The church sells its Bibles, books and magazines to its 57,000 congregations and through its own 53 bookstores as well as other outlets. Last year's gross sales totaled $147.8 million.

"We spent $3 million in 1985 on postage alone at the Nashville Post Office sending our publications to all 50 states and 117 foreign countries," noted Frank White, 32, spokesman for the Southern Baptist Convention's Sunday School Board, the agency in charge of publications. It has 1,200 employees.

The $7-million profit from sales was used for missions, seminaries and other church work. The Southern Baptist Broadman Press handles all publications except Bibles, which are published by Holman Press, a Bible publishing house started in Philadelphia and purchased by the Southern Baptist Convention in 1979. Holman sold 625,504 Bibles last year.

The Southern Baptist Convention's Sunday School Board does not do its own printing. It contracts it out to printing companies primarily located in Nashville.

Credit for the establishment of printing as the major manufacturing industry in Nashville goes to the United Methodist Publishing House, established here in 1854. It is the oldest printing company in the city.

Last year, UMPH's gross sales totaled $73.25 million, with $1 million in profit going to pensions for church ministers of the 9.2-million member denomination. UMPH does 50 of its own printing in its huge publishing house. It employs 1,300 in its publication divisions: Graded Press, Abingdon Press and Parthenon Press.

One of the largest religious book publishers in the United States, but not church owned, is Thomas Nelson Publishers. The company claims to publish one-third of all the Bibles printed in the world each year.

His president, Sam Moore, 55, is a native of Beirut who changed his name from Zaidy to Moore when he migrated to America in 1950 and

1928 Book of Common Prayer to be reissued

TWIN FALLS — A strong demand for the 1928 Book of Common Prayer has resulted in plans by the Oxford University Press to resume publication of the Prayer Book this summer, according to a recent news release.

A spokesman for Oxford Press, Hartis Thomas Jr., says in the news release announcing the resumption of publication, "Oxford has heard the call for choice."

Controversy has surrounded the switch in 1979 from the traditional service to what some church officials call a more modern form of service. Preference for the traditional services remains strong.

The Prayer Book Society, the largest lay organization in the Episcopal Church, and a group representing traditionalists within the church, has produced several Gallup polls that clearly show a majority prefer the more traditional Prayer Book.

Oxford Press also researched the question, and their research clearly showed a demand sufficient to make resumption of publication economically feasible. Says Thomas, "we would not have gone into the venture if it had not been economically viable." He added that the market research leading to the decision was done solely within the limits of the Episcopal Church and did not include data from any of the splinter groups that have emerged since the church introduced the 1979 version over a decade ago.

Thomas points out, "The 1928 and 1979 Books of Common Prayer have been in existence side by side, for some time now. Many people have compared the two books and expressed a clear preference for the 1928 version which creates this demand." He said that Oxford anticipates sales of 19,000 to 21,000 1979 versions of the Prayer Book during the next fiscal year. They expect to sell at least 10,000 of the 1928 Prayer Books between October and March.

The Prayer Book Society Publishing Company, a subsidiary of the Prayer Book Society, will market approximately 25 percent of the 1928 Prayer Books produced, in cooperation with the Oxford Press.

Ketchum's Tobin wins Ore-Ida stage

By FLYNN McROBERTS
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — Never mind the Lady of Liberty whom the rest of the nation was fawning over this Fourth of July. At the latest stage of the Ore-Ida Women's Challenge cycling event here Friday, screaming crowds had their hearts set on a different woman — Katrin Tobin.

The 24-year-old from Ketchum conquered the gusting winds, tight turns, grueling climbs and steep descents of the 12-lap Elkhorn Circuit Race to capture the sixth stage of this, the nation's premier all-women's cycling contest.

Topping her third-place finish in Thursday's Stage 5 to Ketchum road race, Tobin on Friday defeated Rebecca Twigg, 1984 Olympic silver medalist and winner of the first two Challenges, in the race around a 1.6-mile course circling Elkhorn Village.

And with her performance, the sweet, blonde-haired Tobin sparked uproarious applause from the hometown fans as she crossed the finish line about two bicycle lengths ahead of second-place Madonna Harris and another length in front of Twigg and the rest of the pack.

Official time had the first 20 cyclists all clocked at 52 minutes, 39 seconds.

Harris' Centurion/Texas Metros team held on to first place, ahead of Twigg and her 7-Eleven crew and Tobin's Winning Club/Ketchum Connection squad.

The results of the circuit race left overall individual standings virtually unchanged, as Twigg still leads by more than a minute going into the final stage today — the one-hour Boise Parkcenter Critérium.

But for Friday, the spotlight was on Tobin.

She waved and winked to the cheering spectators from atop the winner's stand as Connie Carpenter-Phinney, '84 Olympic gold medalist, draped a Challenge gold medal around her neck.

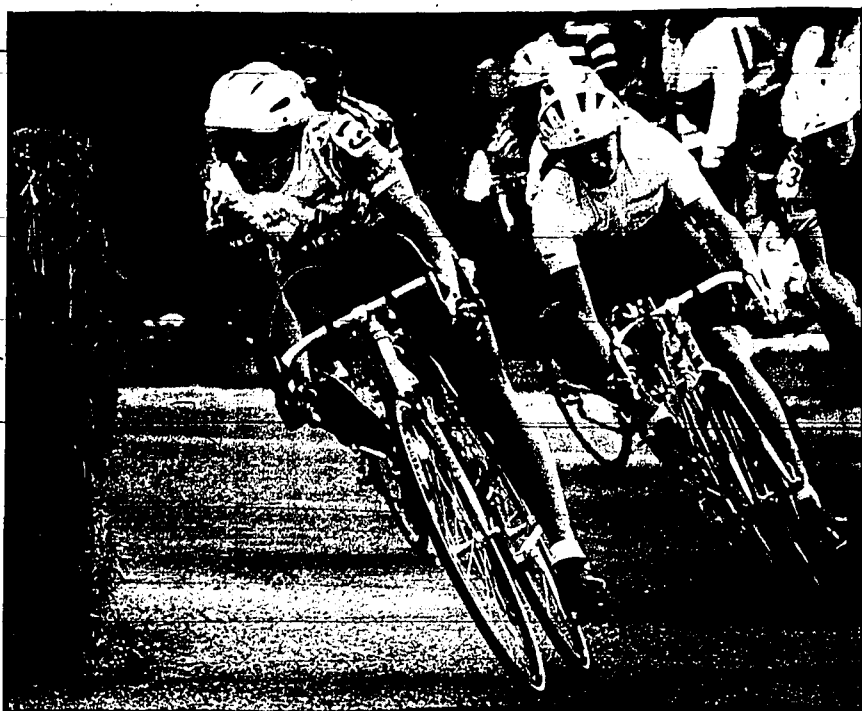

"I think the crowd just carried me," Tobin later said of the race's final 160 feet, as she sat on the stand, holding a bouquet of flowers and signing autographs. "I will never ever forget this day."

After topping the hill near hole No. 8 at Elkhorn golf course, both Tobin and Twigg were working off the draft of a group of Centurion riders, including Harris, that was working for its own sprinters.

But Twigg broke ahead as the pack neared the final corner, only to see Tobin take a risky inside cut just before the turn.

"Katrin made a really good move prior to the corner," Harris said, before adding with a good-natured grin as she sat next to Tobin on the winner's stand. "(That's) a sneaky way to take it."

Harris said she was holding back, breaking the wind for her team's sprinters, until she saw

... Going into Friday's stage, and its demanding hills, with a strong overall lead. "My job now is defense," Twigg said.

In addition to the stage title and cash prize, Tobin won $75 in primes, awarded to the leader on selected arbitrary laps. Marianne Berglund of Centurion left with $100 in primes, while Genny Brunet of 7-Eleven pocketed $75.

Reagan upholds Weinberger's ban on servicemen in Goodwill Games

By BERT ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Reagan crushed any hopes that the United States would lift its ban on military personnel competing in the Goodwill Games Friday as the competition began.

Results — B6

Reagan said in New York he would not rescind the Pentagon ban announced Thursday, explaining that the event was a "commercial endeavor."

The games, being held for the first time, are sponsored by Atlanta television magnate Ted Turner and the Soviet government.

Reagan, when asked about the order, replied, "I can answer that very easily. That happens to be a commercial endeavor. We can't use military in that sense."

Reagan's statement came despite efforts to get him to lift the ban which kept 11 members of the boxing team and a pentathlete from making the trip.

Don Hull, a retired Army colonel who heads both the international and U.S. amateur boxing federations, called the Pentagon order "morally and constitutionally wrong." He had sent a telegram to Reagan requesting the order be rescinded.

U.S. Olympic Committee President Robert Holmick also asked Reagan to overrule the order.

But said there was little more he could do after Reagan's statement.

"All we can do is try to substitute the armed forces athletes with non-armed forces athletes," Hull said.

Rodeo PRCA stars Young, Jucker lead way at Rupert

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Some people save the best for last — Jerome's Mickey Young didn't follow that pattern Friday night.

Young, a veteran of 10 National Finals Rodeos, opened the evening with a superior performance riding "Jesse James" to a score of 73 in bareback riding in the second round of the 1986 Rupert Night Rodeo.

"That total not only got him the prize money for the go-around, but valued Young — owner of the Silver Lining Rodeo Company — into the bareback riding lead going into tonight's final round.

Young and trails only Ronald Belcher of Bastrop, Texas in the race for the $2,000 cash prize.

The team roping duo of Evan Tripp and Troy Eldridge from Wells, Nev., grabbed the lead in that event with a 7.1 timing.

Barry Johnson of Caldwell and Jake Stephens fromampa were six tenths of a second off that pace, but held second after two nights of rodeo.

World champion calf roper Joe Beaver led a trio of Texans in Friday's round with a time of 10.2.

Another National finalist, Raymond Hollibaugh, finished second.

Lisa Davis of Homedale snatched the WPRA barrel racing lead away from Susan Hill with a time of 17.68 seconds beating out Blackfoot's Didi Taylor and Terri McCook of Star in the process.

Another Magic Valley cowboy, Gooding's Doug James, joined Young in the winner's circle garnering 75 points to take the bull riding. James leads in that category by two points over Friday's winner Rock Ricks out of Avon, Utah.

Winds afflicts final go-round of Hailey rodeo

By The Times-News

HAILEY — A record-breaking number of participants competing for a record amount of prize money underwent some weather for the books here Friday in the final go-round of the Days of the Old West Rodeo.

With winds gusting out of the northwest at between 25 and 30 miles per hour for most of the afternoon, there were few sterling times and scores in Friday's second go-round.

One exception was College of Southern Idaho student Frank Norcutt, a Battle Mountain, Nev., native who followed his winning performance at last month's National College Finals Rodeo with a ride of 74 Friday to take the saddle bronc competition.

The 77 that Richfield's Mike Johnson turned in during Thursday night's first go-round in bull riding stood up easily Friday as did Jerry Jones' 72 in the first go of the bareback riding.

PRCA hand Walter Parke of Gooding won the calf roping, while Sue Smith of Idaho Falls took the

Becker breezes into finals; Lendl struggles

By BOB GREENE
The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Ivan Lendl has reached the final of the men's singles at Wimbledon, and he did it his way. For the last two matches, it's been the long way.

It wasn't that long ago, 1982 to be exact, that Lendl decided not to play Wimbledon because, he said, he was allergic to grass. He was the classic fly-courter, a man who played as if the baseline was an imaginary boundary that you were not supposed to cross.

This year, Lendl has been a serve-and-volleyer, taking the net at every chance, chipping and charging.

It's a new Lendl, and a successful Lendl. Although he has been stretched to five sets in his last two matches, including Friday's thrilling 6-2, 6-7 (5-7), 6-3, 6-7 (1-7), 6-4, victory over Slobodan Gvoznic, whose serve is as hard to handle as his name is to pronounce.

Tennis

Lendl, a native of Czechoslovakia who speaks several languages, had no trouble with either. His problem on the All England Club's Centre Court came from the way the ball bounced.

"I had a hard time swallowing the fact today that I broke him five times and he broke me once and we went five sets," said Lendl, who served 18 aces in the match, equaling the total of Zivjovic.

His Yugoslav opponent created that oddity by winning Utrabra in the second and fourth sets.

"I thought I was the one who was serving better and returning better," Lendl said. "Unfortunately, that doesn't always mean that you're going to win.

"I was lucky that I won." In the quarterfinals, the right-hander who now makes his home in Greenwich, Conn., had a close call against American Tim Mayotte, winning 9-7 in the fifth set.

"Tough matches are something you have to live with," he said. "I had tough matches and I won them. It means that I had to work harder, but it means that, through very tough situations, which is also important. There's always two ways of looking at it."

Lendl's next hurdle is yet another big server, defending champion Boris Becker of West Germany, who displayed his power game in his semifinals victory over Henri Leconte of France 6-2, 6-4, 6-7, 6-3.

On Saturday, Martina Navratilova will be going for a record-tying fifth consecutive women's singles crown when she takes on Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova, the reigning U.S. open champion.

On Friday, it was the battle between Lendl, reaching the final at Wimbledon for the first time in his career, and the unseeded Zivjovic that highlighted the long day.

And it was Lendl, known for his stoic, expressionless on-court demeanor, who let for joy when he finally wrapped up the match to keep alive his chances of winning his second consecutive Grand Slam title. He won the French Open last month on the clay courts at Roland Garros stadium.

With the victory, Lendl erased more of the doubts about his ability to win close matches. He had lost the first five Grand Slam finals in which he played, but has won two of the last three. He captured the U.S. Open crown last September, to go with the French Open last month.

Zivjovic's hard serve and all-around powerful game gave Lendl all he could handle. But handle it, he did, although it took 3 hours, 26 minutes to close out the victory.

"I told myself, 'If I may take a half hour, it may take an hour, it may take until tomorrow, but don't give in because the guy got four straight points against you," Lendl said. That came in the fourth-set tiebreaker, when Zivjovic, who also reached the semifinals of the Australian Open last year, reeled off the first four points. Then, after Lendl won his first point of the tiebreaker, the 6-foot-6 Yugoslav won the next three points to take the set and level the match at two sets apiece.

In the seventh game of the fourth set, Zivjovic threatened to quit playing when David Howe overruled a line call and gave Lendl an ace to pull the game to deuce.

"I know the umpire was not right," the Yugoslav said. "I'm not saying anything bad about him. Everybody makes a mistake."

Simpson sets record in 2 rounds at Hartford

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — Tim Simpson shot a 5-under-par 66 Friday for a record-139 total and a two-stroke lead over Tom Watson after two rounds of the $700,000 Canon Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open.

Simpson, 30, who has admittedly been struggling for several months, challenged the usually unflinching Tournament Players Club of Connecticut course for the second straight day and again came out on top.

"I've always been one of the more aggressive players out here," he said, explaining his seemingly blatant disregard for the abundant bunkers, ditches and six-acre pond on the par-71, 6,786-yard layout.

But I think, over the years, playing like that can start to get you in trouble," he said. "So I've tried to modify it in the last year or two. I call it intelligent-aggressive instead of raw-aggressive."

Watson, looking for his first PGA Tour victory in two years, stayed close as he shot a 67 to go with an opening-round 65 and was one stroke ahead of Dan Forsman, who shot a 68. Friday, and Roger Maltbie, who closed in on the leaders with a second-round 67.

U.S. Open champion Ray Floyd and Hubert Green both missed the cut.

"I have to play well again tomorrow (Saturday)," Watson said. "The course is going to yield a lot of birdies. I think I'll have to shoot in the 60s next to rounds."

Watson had two bogeys and six birdies, including three in his last four holes of the day on the older front nine at the TPC of Connecticut.

Non-winner Benz leads Mazda LPGA

SUGAR LAND, Texas (AP) — Amy Benz, leading a professional tournament after 36 holes for the first time in her career, shot a 1-under-par 71 Friday and held her two-stroke lead in the $300,000 LPGA Mazda Hall of Fame Championship.

Benz, who started the second round two strokes ahead of Judy Dickinson and Lauren Howe, had three birdies and two bogeys to finish with a 6-under-par 138 total for 36 holes.

Amy Alcott, who overcame a double bogey on the par-4, 375-yard 10th hole to register a 2-under-par 70 and a 140 total, was alone in second.

Deb Richard, currently second among four rookies in earnings, shot a 70 for a 141 total and third place.

Howe, after an opening-round 69, shot a 73 in the second round for a 142 total to tie the Rosie Jones, who has shot a pair of 71s.

Lefty speaks! Carlton talks to S.F. media

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Steve Carlton put on a San Francisco Giants uniform for the first time Friday and broke his eight-year ban on interviews by saying he thinks he can pitch until he is 50 years old.

"I would've walked away from the game," the 41-year-old left-hander said at a news conference. "If I were having mechanical problems or had a sore arm."

But he felt that despite his release by the Philadelphia Phillies he could still be a winning pitcher and help the Giants win the National League West pennant.

Carlton, who will start Sunday against St. Louis, threw warm-up pitches for 10 minutes before holding his news conference.

"I've been throwing every day," said Carlton, who agreed to terms with the Giants Thursday night. "My arms sound."

Carlton would not discuss the circumstances that led him to stop talking to reporters, but the last words he was quoted as saying in public were "policy is policy" in 1978.

Asked if it will be emotional when he eventually faces Philadelphia, after spending 14 seasons with the Phillies, Carlton said "I try to take the emotion out of the game. It only adds to losing, not to winning. I am a science-type pitcher."

"This is great," Carlton said as he stood with San Francisco Manager Roger Craig in the Giants clubhouse.

He said it had been 10 years since he held a news conference, and joked, "Fardon me if I make any mistakes." Carlton said he is open to learning, the split-finger fastball from Craig.

"I'm always open to new pitches," said Carlton, who mixes up a knuckleball with his fastball and curve.

NL: Gooden stumps Astros

NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Gooden did just what the New York Mets wanted Friday. He won, and he looked good doing it against the Houston Astros.

Gooden pitched a five-hitter, reaching back for something extra the only time he needed to, and the Mets won their eighth straight game with a 2-1 decision.

"When he gets his fastball in and out and gets his curve over he's dominant," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said. "Bretts into the seventh with a three-hitter and a 1-0 lead but Kevin Bass' home run tied the score. The Astros went on to put runners on first and third with two out but Gooden ended the inning by overpitching and striking out pinch hitter Tony Oliva."

The Mets then scored the go-ahead run in the bottom of the seventh when Rafael Santana walked, took second on Gooden's sacrifice bunt and scored on Len Dykstra's second double of the game.

Gooden had an eighth complete game of the season was a welcomed effort. Despite his winning record and a 2.58 earned run average, he had won just one of his previous four starts.

After my first two seasons, people come to expect things," said Gooden, the 1984 National League Rookie of the Year and the 1985 Cy Young Award winner. "They expect me to win every time and strike out 10 each time. I can't do that."

Gooden, who walked five and struck out four, won his seventh straight start against Houston and raised his career record against the Astros to 8-1.

Baseball

Astros to 8-1. In doing so, he looked like a "vintage Gooden" to Houston Manager Hal Lanier.

"I'm young who says he's in a slump is dumb," Lanier said.

The Mets scored the winning run off reliever Dave Smith, who was pitching for the first time since June 22 because of a pulled muscle in his back.

Smith, second in the league with 16 saves, took over in the seventh inning and his first four pitches to Santana were balls.

"Those walks haunt you every time," said Smith, 1-5.

Houston starter Nolan Ryan, the all-time major-league strikeout leader, fanned six in five innings and raised his career total to 4,160. Ryan, making his third start since coming off the disabled list after an elbow problem, gave up one run on three hits — Dykstra's leadoff double in the first inning and Keith Hernandez's RBI single. The Astros have been limping how much Ryan works while he comes back from his injury.

Montreal 11 Atlanta 5

ATLANTA (AP) — Mike Fitzgerald drove in four runs, including two in a five-run fourth, and Floyd Youmans and Dan Schatzeder combined on a five-hitter as the Montreal Expos defeated the Atlanta Braves 11-5 Friday night.

Youmans, 28, won his fourth straight game, giving up one run on three hits while striking out three and walking only one.

Kutcher's leadoff homer in the bottom of the first inning, his fourth since coming up from Phoenix of the Class AAA Pacific Coast League on June 18, tied the game 1-1. Kutcher has hit safely in 14 of his 16 games with the Giants.

Vince Coleman opened the scoring for St. Louis in the top of the first by walking, stealing second, going to third on Ozzie Smith's bunt single and coming home on Willie McGee's single.

The Giants went ahead 6-1 in the fourth inning, scoring five runs on four singles, a double, a hit batsman and an intentional walk.

Joel Youngblood led off with a single against St. Louis starter Ray Burris, 4-4. Chilli Davis followed with a single and Burris loaded the bases by hitting Chris Brown with a pitch.

Harry Spilman, a recently acquired free agent, hit a two-run double over first base, giving the Giants a 3-1 lead. One out later, Jose Uribe was walked intentionally to reload the bases and Brown was forced at the plate on LaCoss' bunt.

Kutcher then singled on a 3-2 pitch for two more runs — and Robby Thompson singled LaCoss home, chasing Burris.

San Francisco 6 St. Louis 1

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rookie Randy Kutcher homered for the second game in a row and drove in two more runs with a single in the fourth inning Friday as the San Francisco Giants beat St. Louis 6-1, handing the Cardinals their eighth consecutive setback.

The triumph put the Giants 1 1/2 games ahead of Houston in the National League West. The Astros lost 2-1 in New York.

Mike LaCoss, 23, gained the victory, holding St. Louis to five hits while striking out three and walking only one.

AL: 73,303 see K.C. drop 7th straight

CLEVELAND (AP) — Andre Thornton homered, went 4-for-4 and drove in three runs Friday night before the major league's largest crowd in 13 years as the Cleveland Indians extended the Kansas City Royals' losing streak to seven with a 10-3 victory.

The game and a fireworks display afterward attracted 73,303 fans.

The Indians had 15 hits in their fifth straight victory. Cory Snyder hit a two-run homer and Brook Jacoby had a two-run double.

The crowd was the largest in baseball since April 7, 1973, when the Indians drew 74,420 for their opening game.

The Indians also have baseball's third and fourth largest crowds of 1986, 61,411 and 61,340. Cleveland has drawn 683,323 in 38 home dates, surpassing last season's major league low of 653,181.

Royals starter Danny Jackson, 4-6, surrendered five runs in his first three innings to take the loss as the defending champions moved to within one defeat of equaling the club's all-time longest streak.

Phil Niekro, 5-6, allowed eight hits, struck out two and walked one in his third complete game. His 30th career victory tied the 47-year-old knuckleballer for 15th place on the all-time list with Eddie Plank.

Royals third baseman George Brett remained in Kansas City after straining a ligament in his right rotator cuff tendon on Tuesday.

The Royals had eight game losing streaks during the 1971, 1974 and 1980 seasons.

California 9 Toronto 1

TORONTO (AP) — Jack Howell hit his first two home runs of the season and Don Sutton pitched a four-hitter for his 302nd career victory as the California Angels defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 9-1 Friday night.

The victory, combined with Texas' loss to Detroit, put the Angels into first place in the American League West by one-half game over the Rangers.

Howell hit a solo homer in the fourth and a three-run shot in the fifth.

Sutton, 7-5, pitched his third complete game of the season. The 41-year-old right-hander, 3-0 in his last six starts, struck out three and walked two.

Howell gave the Angels a 5-1 lead and knocked Dave Stieb, 2-9, out of the game with his three-run homer in the fifth. Wally Joyner and Reggie Jackson opened the inning with walks and Howell hit Stieb's first pitch over the fence in right-center.

Texas 2 Detroit 1

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Rookie Jose Guzman and Greg Harris led Detroit to eight hits and Larry Parrish hit a solo home run as the Texas Rangers beat the Detroit Tigers 2-1 Friday night.

The Rangers scored both their runs in the fourth inning, on Parrish's 13th homer of the season and Curtis Wilkerson's RBI triple.

Guzman, 28, pitched into the eighth and allowed eight hits. The only run against him was unearned. He struck out four and walked only one. Harris retired all five batters he faced, getting one to hit into a double play.

Detroit starter Jack Morris, 7-6, went the distance, giving up 11 hits and two walks, striking out eight batters.

Boston 6 Seattle 5

BOSTON (AP) — Dwight Evans hit a three-run homer in the fourth inning and Rich Gedman added a solo shot an out later, powering the Boston Red Sox to a 6-5 victory over the Seattle Mariners Friday night.

The Red Sox, who have won all six of their games with the Mariners this season, had 14 hits on Friday as Jeff Sullivan, 2-3, a rookie right-hander, allowed five hits and five walks in 7 1/2 innings for the victory. Sellers gave up three runs on Danny Tartabull's homer in the eighth.

USSR opens Goodwill with record

MOSCOW (AP) — Competition in the Goodwill Games began Friday with Soviet swimmer Vladimir Sainikov smashing his world record in the 800-meter freestyle and American Angel Myers winning two gold medals in swimming.

The games, being held for the first time, are sponsored by Atlanta television magnate Ted Turner — and the Soviet government.

Sainikov, one of the greatest distance freestylers ever, shattered his 800-meter mark by nearly two seconds, clocking 7 minutes, 50.64 seconds, to the delight of the near sellout crowd of 8,000 in the Olympic pool, site of the 1980 Olympic swimming competition.

He had first broken the world record in 1970, and had lowered the mark to 7:52.33 in 1983 at Los Angeles.

Myers, a 19-year-old from Americus, Ga., and a student at Furman University, won the games' first gold medal, capturing the women's 50-meter freestyle in 25.60. Later, she swam a leg on the team that won the women's 400-meter — freestyle relay in 3:47.68.

The men's 50 freestyle resulted in the first controversy and an American protest.

Even though John Sauerland of Shaker Heights, Ohio, won the race in 23.13, the American delegation, led by Seldon Frutschner, protested to FINA, the World Swimming Federation, claiming that the start was faulty.

Frutschner said the Americans had predicted a 1-2-3 finish in the race. But because of the poor, quick start, the U.S. wound up 1-6-7.

Swimming was the only one of the 18 sports held Friday. It will be joined Saturday by track and field, with the running of the women's marathon, women's basketball, including games between the United States and Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union and modern pentathlon.

After all that competition, the opening ceremonies will be held in Lenin stadium. The games will continue until July 20.

The Soviets gained the advantage, capturing five gold medals to the Americans' four, but the U.S. showing was surprising since it isn't its second team while the Soviets were using their best swimmers.

Leslie Deland, of Westlake Village, Calif., and daughter of the American coach, won the women's 800-meter freestyle in 8:30.84 for the other U.S. victory.

Richmond survivor of wild Firecracker 400

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Tim Richmond was the survivor of the wild Pepsi Firecracker 400 Friday, taking the lead eight laps from the end when Buddy Baker tagged the wall while avoiding a spinning car.

Richmond went on to the sixth victory of his career and second of the season, beating surprising Sterling Marlin to the finish line by 1.39 seconds.

"That was a little luck," said the elated Richmond, "but I was really in the good at the end."

Bobby Hill Jr. was third, followed by defending Winston Cup champion Darrell Waltrip and Kyle Petty.

With eight caution periods, Richmond's average speed of 131.916 mph was the slowest of the 28 July 4 races at Daytona International Speedway. The old mark was 138.310 in 1974 by David Pearson.

Richmond won $50,655 from the $501,000 purse.

Dale Earnhardt, the heavy favorite going in and the leader as late as the 18th lap of the 100-lap race; Bill Elliott, Dale Yarborough and Bobby Allison all lost their chances to win Friday when they lost a lap by pitting too soon when the seventh caution flag of the day came out on lap 12.

Fourteen pits under the green flag just prior to the caution, Hill came in again when the yellow flag came out, thereby allowing the leaders to move past them and put them a lap in arrears.

Auto racing

Richmond was able to continue, but Hill and Allison were both eliminated.

"We had the race won," said Baker. "I was running away from Tim. Then that stuff happened out there ahead of me."

"I went up high, hit the wall and it about knocked me out," he added. "Something hit my head. After that, there was much confusion."

When the green flag came back out on lap 19, Richmond drove his Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS away from the field and easily won, with Allison, Yarborough and Elliott all running an involuntary interference between of him and the Marlin's Chevrolet.

It was the highest finish ever for both Marlin, the 1983 NASCAR Rookie of the Year and the fastest qualifier for this race, and Hill. It also was Richmond's best finish at Daytona in a Winston Cup event. His best previous finish was 11th in the 1984 Firecracker.

There were several early cautions that slowed the action for the fastest field ever in this race.

Mano Carter brought out the first yellow flag when he spun coming off turn four on the fourth lap. Carter did not make contact with the wall, but his windshield blew out of the car and three of his tires went flat before he stopped skidding.

through turn two without hitting anything. He was able to continue.

A blown engine in Eddie Bierschwale's car caused the sixth yellow flag. While the oil was being cleaned up, rain began falling in turns three and four. After several more laps under the caution, the race was red-flagged to a halt on lap 94.

It was restarted under a caution flag about 20 minutes later and went until lap 113 before the green flag came back out.

Rodney Combs spun harmlessly in turn four on lap 132, bringing out the caution on which Earnhardt, Elliott, Yarborough and Allison lost their laps.

An early casualty in the race was A.J. Foyt, who went out on lap three with a mechanical problem.

Former Winston Cup champion Terry Labonte also had early problems, losing a cylinder in the first 50 laps and just running for points after that. And Benny Parsons, another former champion, led the race briefly before going out at the halfway point with a blown engine.

THE ACES

BOBBY WOLFF

Our patience will achieve more than our force.

There's little more to be served by winning a trick just because it's there to be won.

West cashes his club and continues with another club to East's Jack. East returns the king (suit preference) and South ruffs with his 10.

If he does, South makes his game. East wins the spade ace and punches out another high club, but South ruffs high safely.

It's a different matter if West discards instead of overruffing the third club. South plays his ace and queen of trumps and West wins his king.
