Court snuffs budget law provision

By JAMES H. RUBIN
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court on Monday struck down a key portion of a law requiring a balanced budget by 1991, disabling the legislative "machinery" Congress assembled to attack spiraling federal deficits.

By a 7-2 vote, the justices said the central provision of the Gramm-Rudman Act — ordering automatic deficit reductions — violates the constitutionally required separation of powers between the executive and legislative branches.

The law's main supporters immediately said they would introduce legislation amending the act to conform with the court's objections. And President Reagan said the decision "should not defer Congress from following through with spending cuts to slash budget deficit running in the range of $200 billion a year."

"Those of us who have fought so hard to restore fiscal sanity will not allow Congress to get off the hook on its commitment to balance the federal budget," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, one of the prime authors of the statute along with Sens. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., and Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C.

However, some critics of the balanced budget law said they would fight the effort to restore the provision that could trigger automatic, across-the-board spending cuts to meet predetermined annual deficit targets. Instead, they argued, Congress should follow a fallback provision in the law that calls for Congress to act on such cuts.

"The court said today, no more gimmicks, no more tricks, no more easy answers. Congress must do its job, and it cannot give its responsibility away," said Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., the chief plaintiff in the court case.

Sen. Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., agreed that "there'll be a very solid effort to go back and deal with the court's ruling to make certain that Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction targets back to where it belongs: on the Congress."

The president did not indicate whether he would support the move to restore automatic spending cuts to the law. Automatic cuts would take a significant chunk out of the Pentagon budget, which Reagan has fought to increase.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., agreed that "there'll be a very solid effort to go back and deal with the court's ruling to make certain that Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction targets back to where it belongs: on the Congress."

But, Dole added, regardless of the future of that part of the budget law, Congress must deal with deficits.

"I don't believe we should be able to hide," Dole said. "Gramm-Rudman-Hollings served a purpose, it may continue to serve a purpose as far as tightening up the budget act."

He said Congress now may consider raising taxes, other than income taxes, to reduce deficits.

In a written statement, Reagan said the decision brings the focus of compliance with the law "back to where it belongs: on the Congress."

Law's backers set for repairs

WASHINGTON — Supporters of a law to force a balanced federal budget by 1991 rushed Monday to repair a key enforcement provision that the Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional.

"Those of us who have fought so hard to restore fiscal sanity will not allow Congress to get off the hook on its commitment to balance the federal budget," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, one of the prime authors of the statute along with Sens. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., and Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C.

In a statement issued by the White House, President Reagan said he would hold lawmakers' feet to the fire on the deficit-reduction issue, saying, "The Supreme Court's decision today brings the focus of compliance with the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction targets back to where it belongs: on the Congress."

The president did not indicate whether he would support the move to restore automatic spending cuts to the law. Automatic cuts would take a significant chunk out of the Pentagon budget, which Reagan has fought to increase.

Ruling party rolls to record victory in Japan election

By JOHN BURGESS
The Washington Post

TOKYO — Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's ruling Liberal Democratic Party erupted in celebration Monday night after a parliamentary election gave the party the biggest victory in its 31-year history.

The victory count from Sunday's voting showed the party won 390 of the lower house's 512 seats. Its majority grew to 384 as four conservative independents announced they would join the party.

"I never thought we could get 394 seats in the lower house," Nakasone said at a press conference Monday afternoon. "When I saw this figure, I thought this is not the result of human power. What shall I say — the voice of the people, the voice of heaven, the voice of the gods."

At a campaign headquarters around the country Monday, jubilant Liberal Democratic Party members shouted the traditional banzai (10,000 years) victory cry, broke open cans of sake and painted eyes in large red daruma dolls, which in Japanese culture is done when one has been blessed with good fortune.

The victory was not expected to bring major changes in national policy in Japan. That is because the Liberal Democratic Party has held a majority in the Diet, or parliament, since the party was formed by a merger of two conservative parties in 1955.

However, with the Japanese political world interpreting it as a resounding endorsement of Nakasone's assertive policies and leadership style, it could cause them to be pursued with new vigor.

NEW YORK — A man with a sword attacked a crowd of people on a Staten Island ferry Monday, killing two and wounding nine others before a retired policeman subdued him. Police quoted the man as saying, "God told me to do it."

Among the wounded were tourists in the "city for the redefinition of the Statue of Liberty." The attack began just after the ship, the Samuel I. Newhouse, had gone past the statue shortly after leaving Manhattan.

retired police officer Edward del Pino, who was headed home from a night security job, Richard Condon, the first deputy police commissioner, said at a news conference.

"It was bedlam," said del Pino, 55. "Everyone was running past me incoherently screaming." He said he pushed past the panicked people to where the man stood over a woman and "to my horror, I see him going up and down, lunging — down — repeatedly with the sword."

"I yelled 'Drop it!'" he said, and fired a shot to get the man to drop the weapon.

After that, del Pino said, he ordered the man to sprawl across a seat and warned him, "If you move, you're dead."

Condon identified the suspect as Juan Gonzalez, 43, who told police he had bought the weapon, a 24-inch curved, thin blade with a 2-inch fake pearl handle, at a shop in Times Square. He took it aboard the ferry concealed in a wrapping of newspaper.

"He said God told him to do it," Condon said.

Marcos' role in uprising sought

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration said Monday it wants to find out whether deposed Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos played a role in the latest uprising against the government of Corason Aquino.

While rebuking supporters of Marcos for the rebellion over the weekend, the White House did not Immediately make it clear whether the uprising would jeopardize Marcos' stay in this country.

Marcos was given safe haven in Hawaii in late February, when his 20-year rule of the Philippines crumbled and he was ousted by Mrs. Aquino. In a presidential election Marcos had called.

Principal Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes refused to say whether the administration contemplated any reprisals against the exiled Marcos — even if U.S. officials felt that he — former president — posed the newest challenge to Mrs. Aquino.

At one point, Speakes said that Marcos' intervention — if proven — "probably would not" affect his status in the United States, since President Reagan had promised Marcos a safe haven in this country after the Philippine leader fled.

Several hours later, however, the spokesman left open the possibility that other steps — short of expulsion from the United States — might be taken.

Speakes said did not know "the specifics" of any actions that might be directed against Marcos, but said options were available.

"We deplore any intervention and activities of this type, no matter what the source is. Anything that's aimed at sowing disension in the Philippine — he — politics, we vigorously oppose," he said. Speakes was referring to an uprising over the weekend led by Arturo Tolentino, a former political running mate of Marcos.

The spokesman said that administration was "looking into" Marcos' role in the matter, but that no conclusion had been drawn yet as to whether Marcos was involved. The State Department would be involved in such an inquiry, Speakes said.

"We'll look at it. We'll have to continue to look at it," Speakes said.

Chamber to promote right-to-work law

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Moving squarely into the 1986 political arena, the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce has announced it will collect funds to pay for a local advertising campaign in support of Idaho's right-to-work law.

Mike Dolton, executive vice president of the chamber, said Monday that the decision to support the referendum on Idaho's year-old right-to-work law was based on an opinion issued by the Fantus Company, a Chicago-based firm that is helping the chamber assess the business climate here.

Phillips told Dolton that approximately 50 percent of Fantus' clients rule out states without a right-to-work law.

Idaho has a right-to-work law, but voters will have a say in a referendum in November on whether it should be maintained.

The right-to-work law makes it illegal for any person to be forced to join or pay dues to a union in order to hold a job.

Gary Glenn, who heads up the pro-right-to-work Idaho Freedom to Work Committee, said Tuesday that the remarks from Fantus were a boost to his efforts. "I consider that the greatest economic development evidence we have seen to date," Glenn said. He has argued that the law gives workers more freedom of choice and has suggested that passage of the law will lead to increased economic growth in the state.

But a spokesperson for a group opposing the right-to-work law said they were not allowed to argue their side of the issue before the chamber and said asking Fantus for an opinion on right-to-work was like asking the National Rifle Association for an opinion on gun control.

Paula Wissel, a spokesperson for Idahoans Against Deception, said Monday that her group tried to schedule a meeting with the Twin Falls Chamber to give an opposing viewpoint on the bill, but was denied because there were no open slots in the chamber's schedule.

"We think it's unfortunate that they didn't hear someone from our group speak, because if they had we would have told them about the flaws in the law," she said. "What they would see CHAMBER on Page A2 parliament, affecting the rates of more than the more than 1,000 death row inmates nationwide.

Said it will decide whether the Alabama state police must promote one black trooper for every white promoted to raise the percentage of black officers. The court, which last week reaffirmed the principle of affirmative action, will use the Alabama case for further examination of special on-the-job preferences.

The court also agreed to decide in a California case whether a public employer may promote a woman child of a more affluent man before being promoted to higher-ranking jobs.

In the Gramm-Rudman case, the court said the law improperly empowers an officer of Congress, the comptroller general, to perform an executive function. The law empowers the comptroller general to order specific levels of deficit reduction to meet Gramm-Rudman targets.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, announcing the decision on the his last day of presiding over a court session, said "convenience and efficiency" cannot justify an unconstitutional law.

"No one can doubt that Congress and the president are confronted with fiscal and economic problems of unprecedented magnitude," said Burger.

"By placing the responsibility for execution of the act in the hands of an officer who is subject to removal only by itself, Congress in effect has retained control over the execution of the act and has intruded into the executive function," he said. "The Constitution does not permit such intrusion."

The court gave Congress 60 days to implement the fallback provisions of Gramm-Rudman authorizing the lawmakers to vote on a deficit-reduction package themselves in the event part of the law was invalidated.

The chief sponsors of the law — Gramm and Sens. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., and Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C. — said they will seek the alternative of restricting congressional power over the comptroller general.

The proposal will be attached to a bill to raise the debt ceiling to pay the nation's bills. It was approved Monday's much-anticipated ruling came 22 days after ABC News reported that the court was about to strike down the law.

The report was correct that the vote would be 7-2 and that Burger would write the opinion. But the network was incorrect in reporting that Justice Sandra Day O'Connor would write a separate concurring opinion.

O'Connor joined Burger's opinion but did not write separately. Only the dissenters were Justices

Byron R. White and Harry A. Blackmun.

Joining Burger, in addition to O'Connor, were Justice William H. Rehnquist, President Reagan's choice to succeed Burger as chief justice, and Justices William J. Brennan, Thurgood Marshall, Lewis F. Powell and John Paul Stevens.

The ruling upheld a Feb. 7 decision by a special three-judge federal court that said the comptroller general's role in the law is unlawful. The author of a key section of that decision was Antonin Scalia, a federal appeals court judge selected by Reagan to fill the court vacancy created by Burger's retirement.

The comptroller general heads Congress' General Accounting Office, a watchdog agency that audits federal programs.

The current comptroller general is Charles Bowsher. He was appointed by the president to a 15-year term and may be removed only by Congress.

Burger swept aside assertions that the court's ruling jeopardizes many major quasi-independent federal agencies such as the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Communications Commission and the Federal Trade Commission.

He said that, unlike the comptroller general, members of those agencies may be removed by Congress only for impeachable offenses.

Timber unions reject proposal

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Striking loggers and millworkers Monday overwhelmingly rejected a revised Weyerhaeuser Co. contract offer that would have cut wages and benefits by more than $4 an hour.

Members of the western councils of the International Woodworkers of America and the Lumber, Production and Industrial Workers voted 3,772 to 639 to reject the proposed contract, said IWA spokesman Oliver McMillan.

The vote totals were released by James Bledsoe, executive secretary of the LPIW's Western Council and Vernon "Red" Russell, president of the IWA's Western Regional Council No. 3.

Ballots were issued June 27 after union negotiators agreed to put the proposal to union members for ratification. The results were tallied last week and announced Monday afternoon.

RICHMOND, Wash. (AP) — The U.S. Department of Energy in a semi-annual internal appraisal of the Hanford nuclear reservation issued Monday, called for improvement in Rockwell Hanford's management of the Basalt Waste Isolation Project.

That project is the state's first high-level nuclear waste dump at Hanford.

Hanford is one of three finalists for the repository. Hanford is under appraisal called for Rockwell to pay closer attention to performance assessment, technical integration and data management.

Those concerns already are being addressed through discussions with the DOE, said Paul Lorenzini, Rockwell Hanford vice president and general manager.

San Diego has woman mayor

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Maureen O'Connor pledged to put San Diego "in the front-row center" of the state as she was inaugurated Monday to fill out the term of Roger Hedgecock, who resigned after convictions of election violations and perjury.

"I'm so proud to stand before you tonight as the granddaughter of a coalminer, the daughter of a prizefighter and a native daughter, the first woman mayor of San Diego," O'Connor said to about 4,000 people as she became the city's 31st mayor.

Ice cream plant dismantled

GLENVIEW, Ill. (AP) — Officials began dismantling a Kraft Inc. plant in Virginia on Monday as they sought the source of bacteria in ice cream bars that may have sickened people in eight states, while Florida officials reported the first case of the disease linked to the bacteria.

The elderly Jacksonville woman, who said she ate ice cream bars from the contaminated batch, contracted listeriosis, said Walt Lanes, environmental health supervisor for the northeast Florida city.

Hijacking trial goes to jury

GENOA, Italy (AP) — The Achille Lauro trial went to the jury Monday after a final plea by two men accused as hijackers for sympathy for their Palestinian cause. One statement ended with the cry: "Long live Arafat!"

Authorities kept the location of deliberations a secret, worried that terrorists might try to attack the jurors. Judge Lino Monteverde said he expected a verdict on Wednesday or Thursday.

Contras profit on dollar sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaraguan rebels, through their control of currency conversions in two Miami bank accounts, sold dollars for U.S. non-lethal aid for a profit, and put the extra money into their "general funds," a State Department document says.

The department's Nicaraguan Humanitarian Assistance Office, which disburses the aid, first learned about rebel control of the two "broker" accounts on March 10, five months after the program began, department lobbyist James W. Dyer said in a June 9 letter to Rep. Michael Barnes, D-Md.

at deficit is for Congress to face up to it.

"I think that may be the one positive thing about the Supreme Court's decision. We can't hide," Dole said.

The budget law calls for Congress to meet a deficit target of $144 billion for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. A fiscal 1987 spending blueprint, which Congress adopted just before beginning its two-week Fourth of July recess, projects a deficit of $142.6 billion.

But many legislators have all but conceded that the budget blueprint will not meet its targets because it is based on outdated economic data, meaning government revenues likely will be lower than projected and the deficit higher. In addition, some legislators say that projected savings from the sales of government assets and other proposals in the budget will not happen.

Thus, Congress was facing a rough time even before the court's decision.

"Both the president and Congress are in for a long, hot summer of budget battles," said Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif.

The court, by a 7-2 vote, said the main enforcement provision of the budget-balancing law — the requirement for automatic spending cuts to meet deficit targets — violates the constitutionally mandated separation of powers between the executive and legislative branches.

The law wrongly empowers an officer of Congress, the comptroller general, to perform an executive function by allowing him to order the cuts, the court said.

Gramm said Rudman and Hollings would join him in seeking to make the position of comptroller general similar to other agencies such as the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Communications Commission and the Federal Trade Commission.

"Fortunately, the court decision affirms 95 percent of the powers contained in the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law," Gramm said.

yellow sweatshirt with the city's skyline and the words "New York," on it, described himself as "a beat poet who arrived in March 1977" from Cuba, Condon said.

Gonzales, who told police he had been living in a shelter for the homeless in Manhattan for a few weeks, was taken to a police station for questioning.

Among the wounded were a prominent Kansas banker and his professor wife, and a visitor from Austria. Four of the injured were hospitalized, but none was in serious condition, officials said. The other five were treated and released.

One of the wounded wore aboard the vessel, which can carry 6,000 passengers between the boroughs of Manhattan and Staten Island.

One of the wounded passengers, Annamaria Zervoulou, 16, said at St. Vincent's Hospital that she was being with her aunt and was reading a newspaper when she heard people screaming. "There's a maniac."

"My aunt yelled at me to get down. There were a whole bunch of people on the floor, and he swung it around and hit me in the back."

She was listed in Koch's report.

Mayor Edward I. Koch visited the wounded and said one of them, Richard Nichols of McPherson, Kan., told him he and his wife were in New York for the Liberty Weekend celebration. "They thought they were to get pictures of the Statue of Liberty," Koch called it "really incredible" that Nichols "was comforting me, instead of the comforting him."

"This won't spoil the celebration, mayor. It's a wonderful city," he quoted Nichols as saying.

Nichols, 60, president of the Kansas Bankers' Association and chairman of the Home State Bank and Trust Co. in McPherson, was at the Bayley Seton Hospital, where he underwent exploratory (for an abdominal wound) but was expected to be "quite well," said Dr. Stephen Swerski, emergency room chief.

Koch, reflecting on the general tranquility in the city through the four-day Liberty Weekend celebration, said, "It's sad that it would happen at any time."

"That it didn't happen on the Fourth of July made the Fourth of July weekend perfect. It's just sad that it happened following the Fourth of July."

Nichols' wife, Connie, 54, a home economics professor at McPherson College, was in stable condition at St. Vincent's with an abdomen wound.

"We were looking at the statue and he came out with a large knife," he said. "I don't know what he was after. He was very wild and he just attacked several of us," Mrs. Nichols said.

Victor Ross, spokesman for the Transportation Department, which operates the ferry, said news of the attack came by radio when "our operator on Staten Island received word that a passenger with a machete was cutting people."

The ferry continued on to its berth at Staten Island, where police and ambulances were waiting, Ross said.

The Staten Island ferry, with four boats in operation daily, carries 21 million passengers annually across the upper bay of New York Harbor, between the northern end of the borough of Manhattan and the lower tip of Manhattan.

It also is a favorite of sightseers because its regular runs across the harbor pass close to the Statue of Liberty. The boats leave every half-hour and take about 25 minutes to cross the bay.

The two dead were taken to Bayley Seton Hospital. One of them was identified as Jo-

704 6TH AVENUE WEST (TWIN FALLS) TWIN FALLS 723 146 6

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — With nine of the West's 16 governors leaving office next year, the region's political leadership is changing, but the eventual effect is hard to gauge, Colorado Gov. Richard D. Lamm said Monday.

"You really have the fact that the West's political leadership is in transition. It does not mean that any of us is infallible, but it does give us an experience base," Lamm said at a news conference kicking off the annual meeting of the Western Governors' Association.

Lamm, who isn't seeking re-election this year, noted the outgoing top executives represented 80.5 years of gubernatorial experience and 170 years of public service.

However, Lamm said there is nothing to prevent the new batch of governors from "equaling or surpassing" the regional record compiled by the incumbents.

And he noted that a loss of seniority in governor's offices isn't as significant as in Congress, where "your political power is linked to your seniority."

Lamm added that due to the nature of the political system, he expected that some of the Democratic governors would be replaced by Republicans, possibly moving the region's leadership toward a more conservative bent.

Lamm, the chairman of the WGA, pointed to the energy crisis of 1975-76, as the organization's highwater point for regional coordination, citing its success in conserving energy and starting a number of oil shale projects. "Regional agendas are often defensive rather than offensive."

In his remarks, Lamm previewed the two-day meeting saying he was excited about the group's agenda, specifically a report on creating a regional economic research center and a report on restructuring the West's water policy.

The regional center could take many forms, but could help the West compete on the national and international business markets, he said.

"In this way, the West could get into fundamental research that would lead to economic development in the future," he said.

Lamm said the water report, which he expected to be adopted, would "recognize that the West wastes a lot of water," and recommend that the region move away from its "century-old policy that 'water means storage.'"

Simplifying water law and taking advantage of possible efficiencies would mean a "great deal of water would appear almost magically," Lamm said.

Lamm emphasized the importance of water to the arid West, noting that "the West is an oasis civilization. We have succeeded in the west because we have stored our water."

But with the apparent end of federally funded water projects, the West must reexamine its water policies, he said.

Drunk driving petition fails to gain signatures

BOISE (AP) — Backers of a petition drive to put a referendum on drunken driving on the November ballot have given up their effort because they couldn't collect enough signatures to make Monday's deadline.

"It isn't going to make it," said Rep. Lyman Gene Winchester, R-Kuna.

Winchester and Caldwell chiropractor Alvie McElford had led the fight for the referendum, which proposed tougher sentences for drunken driving.

Winchester said about 40 percent of the signatures on the petitions submitted Thursday were ruled invalid and there was not enough time over the weekend to collect 6,800 valid signatures.

On Thursday, Secretary of State Pete Conrussa said the original 5 p.m. Thursday deadline may have been incorrect and extended it to 5 p.m. today.

Winchester said the fact that the effort was conducted with volunteers and little organization made the task difficult. He said the drive may have succeeded with a paid staff. "It seemed to be a popular concept. Nine out of 10 people signed when asked," he said.

Bush schedules Idaho Falls speech

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — For Idaho residents unable to travel to New York City last weekend, for the huge Statue of Liberty celebration featuring President Reagan, Idaho Falls will offer something almost as good Friday night.

At least, that's the promise of Dennis Stoddard, chairman for a rally here Friday night that will feature Vice President George Bush.

Bush will be in town at a rally for Mad Richardson, the Idaho Falls said will be an old-fashioned broadcaster who is the Republican candidate for the congressional seat now held by Democrat Rep. Richard Stallings.

Bush is expected to touch down at the Idaho Falls Airport Friday afternoon in "Air-Force 2." He'll attend a private reception, where the tab for admission is expected to be $500 per person, then will be whisked over to Bonneville High School as the featured speaker at what Stoddard said will be an old-fashioned patriotic rally.

Orval Hansen speaks to Ada Democrats

BOISE (AP) — Republican Orval Hansen found himself "picking his way through a minefield," as he spoke to a partisan Democrat gathering here Monday.

He apparently did a good job. Ada County Democrats gave the three-term 2nd District Republican congressman a standing ovation when he finished speaking to their luncheon.

Ada Democrat Chairman Betty Richardson said she felt no need to explain why the Democrats invited a Republican to speak to them.

"Any time we can hear from one with your integrity and wisdom that speaks for itself," she said.

It was a continuation of the effort launched last week at the Democratic state convention — by governor candidate Cecil Andrus to appeal to moderate Republicans to work with Democrats to solve state problems.

Andrus, described Hansen as a longtime personal friend. He said the Hansen and the Andrus families traded baby-sitting many years ago when they had young children, and they've been friends ever since.

Ms. Richardson said the "unproductive-partisanship" of recent Idaho legislative sessions must end and said Hansen appearing before Democrats was "a symbol of the continuing effort to bridge the gap" between the parties.

"We're going for inclusion, not exclusion," she said.

Hansen said he's been a lifelong Republican and has no plans to change. He said he was a bit nervous appearing before Democrats, "but I'm not nearly as nervous as a lot of my Republican colleagues."

"I have deep Republican roots and they are very strong. I have no regrets at all about my membership and activity in the party," he said.

Hansen praised many Republican and Democrat political leaders he has served with, but the Democrat audience cheered harder for the Democrats he mentioned.

The largest applause came when Hansen described the late Frank Church by saying, "His service reflected a great deal of credit on this state."

There was less reaction when Hansen praised Republican Sen. James McClure as "the premier technician" he's ever encountered in the Legislature and later the U.S. Senate.

1st Gem teacher elected to NEA executive board

BOISE (AP) — The first Idaho teacher elected to the executive committee of the National Education Association will take office Sept. 1.

Sue Hovey, 53, who coordinates the gifted and talented program at Moscow High School, was elected last week at the NEA convention in Louisville, Ky., to a three-year term on the nine-member board.

Meanwhile, Melanie Hutchison, a government teacher at Filer High School, was one of seven NEA members selected nationwide to participate in the Roy Archibald Internship Program July 14-18. She will spend the week in Washington, D.C.

Ms. Hovey said the unprecedented election of a delegate from a smaller, rural state was possible because of support she got from members in other Western states.

"It's an exhilarating experience, because you get to meet the most exciting members of the organization," she said. "It's especially exciting for me because this is the culmination of a lot of hard work."

Ms. Hutchison has been a member for two years of the Idaho Education Association's congressional action team. NEA is the Idaho association's national affiliate.

"I expect to gain knowledge for my classroom, for the IEA and for myself during this internship," she said.

Interns will attend hearings, assist with legislative research, accompany NEA lobbyists on assignments and help design NEA materials.

Supremacists, task force set up opposite forums in northern Idaho

HAYDEN LAKE (AP) — At a small compound nestled in the verdant Idaho Panhandle countryside north of here, the gathering will be, for the sign on the unmanned guard station says, "Whites Only."

In Couer d'Alene, 10 miles to the south, an opposite group will celebrate the cultural differences of the Northwest.

Two years after the neo-Nazi-like group The Order launched its failed war against the U.S. government, white supremacists will gather to promote the establishment of a "whites only" homeland in Idaho; Washington, Oregon, Montana and Wyoming.

The Rev. Richard Butler, pastor of the Church of Jesus Christ Christian, Aryan Nation, said he expects more than 200 supremacist leaders, including members of the Ku Klux Klan and the neo-white Identity Movement, to attend what is called a special session of the Aryan Nations Congress July 12-13 at the Aryan Nations compound.

It will be the first gathering of white supremacy leaders in the Pacific Northwest since an FBI investigation led to last December's racketeering convictions of members of The Order, who met through the Aryan Nations.

"Kootenai County" Undersheriff Larry Broadbent, considered an expert on hate groups, said patrols will be increased in response to the gathering, but added he does not expect problems. He said previous Aryan Congresses have been quiet.

Also on July 12, the Kootenai County Task Force on Human Relations hopes to attract 1,000 people to its Human Rights Celebration in Coeur d'Alene, designed as a five-state response to the supremacists' territorial movement.

Leroy criticizes timber-blocking lawsuit

McCALL (AP) — Republican governor candidate David Leroy says despite Democratic rhetoric about the need for new jobs in Idaho, Democrats didn't say anything as environmentalists blocked a salvage timber sale last week.

Leroy, campaigning Monday here, said environmental groups would not allow the salvage sale of timber damaged in a forest fire last year in the Elk Creek area. The timber had to be salvaged by July 1 to retain its value.

Leroy said an Oregon company wanted to buy the salvage timber, but an environmental lawsuit blocked it.

School principal enters race

BOISE (AP) — A Boise school principal has been appointed to run against Sen. Rachel Gilbert, R-Boise.

Linda Clark, principal at Joplin Elementary here, was appointed Monday as a replacement for a candidate who dropped out.

Ms. Clark said she was undecided which party to represent, but then she determined that Republicans have failed to respond to needs of the state, particularly in the funding of education, and social issues such as day-care licensing.

She also criticized the "lack of discussion" between the majority Republicans and Democrats in the Legislature. "We should encourage people to work together," she said.

Nuclear negotiation clock is ticking away

A knowledgeable official of the Reagan administration, mulling over the obstacles that still stand in the way of a new strategic arms control agreement, remarked the other day that the window of opportunity — assuming that one exists — will close in about 18 months. If substantial agreement has not been worked out with the Soviets by that time, the whole issue will be put over to the next administration.

Experience suggests that he is right. Foreign-affairs specialists have long noted that a U.S. president can conduct serious diplomatic business with the Soviet Union during only two years — three in the case of a reelected president — of his four-year term.

A president's first year is spent getting acquainted with the realities of arms control and other problems, and in trying to come up with approaches that are different and "better" than those of his predecessor. During a president's last year, which ends with a presidential election, partisan considerations tend to dominate the negotiating process and the political atmosphere in which it occurs. Essentially, that leaves only the second and third years for fruitful endeavor.

We are now a year and a half into President Reagan's second term. He and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev at last seem to be moving toward serious negotiations. A month ago the Soviets submitted a revised strategic arms reduction proposal in Geneva; Reagan has given the package a warm though conditional welcome, and expresses optimism that a deal can be struck.

There is a very real danger, however, that time will run out before anything is accomplished.

One problem is that Gorbachev's offer, while making some helpful concessions to the American viewpoint, would leave intact the large fleet of superheavy, multiple-warhead Soviet missiles that are of special concern to the United States.

Another problem is that the Geneva negotiations have become ensnared with the question of a second summit meeting between Reagan and Gorbachev. And here the Soviets, while talking a good game, still seem to be holding out for prior concessions by Washington as a pre-condition for such a meeting — a tactic that the administration is resisting. As a result, it is unlikely that a summit session can be held before the year's end — leaving only about a year in which to wrap up difficult negotiations.

The biggest problem of all, however, is that the administration has been unable to agree on a negotiating position. The president himself, while unwilling to restrict "Star Wars" work to the laboratory as Gorbachev proposes, has suggested a willingness to negotiate some kind of restraints on the deployment of such a system. A compromise should be possible. But Star Wars zealots within the administration, backed by those who simply want to block an agreement, do not want the issue on the negotiating table at all.

Both sides should give the process a helpful shove. The Soviets should stop stonewalling on summit preparations. Washington should accept the Soviet proposal for an early meeting to clarify the bottom-line meaning of Reagan's recent repudiation of the unratified SALT II treaty.

Most fundamental of all, Reagan should make up his mind once and for all that Star Wars is negotiable, then order his subordinates to stop their bickering and support a negotiating position embodying this decision. Otherwise we can all forget about a new arms-control agreement for several years to come.

Take time to read footnotes on Supreme Court decisions

BOSTON — There are times when you can only get to the heart of the matter the long way around. You have to begin with the footnotes and work your way up.

Last week, a slim majority of Supreme Court justices upheld, 5-4, a Georgia law against any sexual act "involving the sex organs of one person and the mouth or anus of another." The Court declared that the state can criminalize sodomy between homosexuals even in their own home.

This week, it's time to read the footnotes. At the bottom of Justice White's opinion, in the oft-quoted way you might brush something under the rug, there is a notice. The court, he writes, is expressing "no opinion" on the constitutionality of heterosexual acts of sodomy.

The Georgia law itself contains no such neat distinctions. It makes the act of oral or anal sex illegal, no matter what the sex of the actors. The legislature there and in 17 other states has no qualms about telling husbands and wives what they cannot do with each other.

Not to worry, though. If we believe the footnote, the Court has "no opinion" on whether the law applies to heterosexuals. Not yet.

Homosexuals are the targets of the Court's attention this time because Michael Hardwick, the man arrested by police, is homosexual. They entered his bedroom to deliver a warrant for a fine and found him engaged in oral sex with another man.

If they had found him with a wife, I assume they would not have arrested Hardwick for sodomy. They might have just closed the door and given them privacy. This, however, is precisely what the Court says homosexuals do not have: the right of privacy.

Justice White insists that the people who brought the Georgia law to the Supreme Court want nothing less than "a fundamental right to engage in homosexual sodomy." This, we are quite unwilling to do. The Court bolsters its argument against homosexual sodomy by tracing history back to the days of Henry VIII, when sodomy was considered an offense of "greater malignity" than rape. Is it any wonder that in Georgia today, oral sex between consenting adults may still carry a greater penalty — 1 to 20 years — than sexual violence?

I do not agree with Justice White. The Court was not asked to create "a right to homosexual activity." Hardwick did not request the seal of government approval on his bedroom door. He asked, rather, to be protected from government intrusion. In the words of Justice Blackmun's impassioned dissent, Hardwick wanted "the right to be left alone."

What is chilling in the Court's ruling is not just its limp reliance on tradition. It's the vigor with which it closed down the borders on the "zone of privacy."

Over the past decades, in one case after another, the Court marked out a certain territory of personal decision-making, a turf where individuals could lead their lives without interference from the government. The choice of a marriage partner, of birth control, of abortion. "We protect those rights . . ." explained Justice Blackmun, "because they form so central a part of an individual life."

What is more private than the sexual act itself? The right of an individual to conduct intimate relationships in the intimacy of his or her own home seems to me to be the heart of the Constitution's protection of privacy, writes Blackmun. Yet, this centerpiece has been declared out-of-bounds by the majority of justices.

Would the Court have drawn the same bold line around the zone of privacy if Michael Hardwick had been arrested with a wife? Maybe not. It is homosexuals who the Court, and much of society, want to keep beyond the door.

But if a state has the right to tell man and man how to behave sexually with each other, it has the right to tell man and woman. If homosexuals have no privacy in bed, then neither do heterosexuals. If a legislature can criminalize oral sex, it can criminalize any other practice considered "deviant" by any political majority. Never on Sunday?

When we limit rights, it is easiest to start with a minority. It's easiest to draw the line that defines "them" as outsiders. But it rarely stops there. Check the footnotes.

Manion should win next time around

WASHINGTON — When the Senate returns from its Independence Day recess, a top order of business will be a second vote on the confirmation of Daniel A. Manion to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 7th Circuit.

The first vote ended inconclusively in a parliamentary maneuver. The next time around should see Manion approved.

Let me be candid: The gentleman, on paper, is not the most brilliant nominee ever proposed for the federal bench. Manion's opponents should be equally candid: They are fighting his confirmation not on his merits but on his philosophy. They oppose him because he is Reagan's man. This isn't cricket; in a stronger image, this is dirty pool.

Opponents of the nomination, led by Delaware's usually responsible Sen. Joe Biden, have fired off a blunderbuss of birdshot. What has Manion done, or not done, to deserve the attack?

It is said, first, that the American Bar Association's committee on judicial appraisal has given Manion its "lowest possible rating" of "qualified." Come now. From Lyndon Johnson's inaugural address through Reagan's first term, 163 persons were nominated for the federal bench. Of these, 326 had precisely the same ABA rating of "qualified" and all of them were confirmed.

Then it is said that Manion's father, Clarence Manion, dean of the law school at Notre Dame, was "a founder of the notorious John Birch Society." Like father, it is heavily breathed, like son. Besides, a quartet of a century ago young Manion backed up his father on the radio "Manion Forum," which espoused "extreme right-wing views." Dan Manion himself never has been identified in any way with the Birchers.

Further, it is charged that as an Indiana state senator, Dan Manion introduced a bill "that defamed the Supreme Court." The charge is unworthy of anyone who knows the first thing of law. The facts are that the Supreme Court in 1980 held it unconstitutional for Kentucky to require the posting of the Ten Commandments, at public expense, in every classroom.

Manion's bill, overwhelmingly approved by his legislative colleagues, would have permitted such display at private expense. It was an effort to mount a further test case. If such efforts were to be forbidden as "defiance," Plessy v. Ferguson would never have been challenged, and we would still have segregated public schools.

Critics say that Manion, a small-city lawyer with a general practice, never has published a scholarly paper. They say that several of his briefs, submitted to the Senate Judiciary Committee, were flawed by misspellings. Biden even has howled that Manion "altered" the transcript of his testimony before the committee. Here Biden is engaging in shameless demagoguery. Manion made the same kind of corrections, in the name of an accurate presentation of his views, that Senate witnesses historically have made.

Finally — more or less finally — it is charged that Manion in times past has questioned the doctrine of absorption. This is the theory that in 1866 the framers of the 14th Amendment meant to impose upon the states all the provisions of the Bill of Rights. The Supreme Court itself has spent the past 60 years haggling over this remarkable theory.

Let me recall a bit of history. Almost 50 years ago, President Roosevelt sent a judicial nomination to the Senate. His choice to succeed Willis Van Devanter on the Supreme Court was an Alabama senator distinguished only for his 100 percent fidelity to F.D.R.'s New Deal.

The nominee had backed F.D.R.'s effort to "pack" the Supreme Court; he stood foursquare on TVA and the rest. The nominee never had written a scholarly paper or gained experience in federal courts. His only prior judicial experience was as a police court judge 27 years earlier. Senators objected that their colleague was not qualified — 16 senators would vote not to confirm — but the nominee argued that a president has a right to appoint judges who share his view of the public interest. The nominee, of course, was Hugo Black, whose name would appear on anyone's list of the court's 10 greatest justices.

I'm not saying Manion is another Hugo Black. I am saying that he is at least as qualified to sit on the 7th Circuit as Black was qualified to sit on the Supreme Court. The conservative Manion is at least as qualified for appellate jurisdiction in Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin as the liberal congressman Abner Mikva was qualified for a Carter appointment to the circuit for the District of Columbia.

Manion's decency and integrity have been attested by Father Theodore Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame. The next roll call should see him confirmed.

James J. Kilpatrick writes his column, "A Conservative View," from Washington.

Tell delegation your opinion

The SALT II (Strategic Arms Limitation Talks) treaty between the United States and the Soviet Union was signed in June 1979 by President Carter and President Brezhnev. It was never ratified in the U.S. Senate, but both countries complied with its terms.

It was scheduled to expire in December 1985 on the assumption that a SALT III treaty would be negotiated by then. SALT II set counting rules for strategic nuclear weapons and set specific numerical limits on various categories of those weapons. Until now, our country has abided by its limits.

Recently, the administration announced that U.S. nuclear weapons policy would no longer be based on the treaty, which means we will break its limits on nuclear weapons if we want to.

On April 10, 1986, a bipartisan majority (52) of the Senate backed a letter to President Reagan in support of SALT II. The letter, authored by Senators Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., John Chafee, R-R.I., John Heinz, R-Pa., and Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., stated, "We believe that discarding the SALT II limits will endanger U.S. and NATO security by allowing the Soviets to add thousands of new warheads to their arsenal. . . . Without the 'no-undercut' policy, we will in all likelihood see a new accelerated arms race."

June 19, 1986, the House of Representatives passed a non-binding "sense of the House," resolution 256-145 calling on the administration to continue to comply with SALT II limits.

At this time, it appears that Rep. Norman Dicks, D-Wash., will introduce such a measure in the House; Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., will do so in the Senate. (Attitudes, laws, reverses, and forwards change so rapidly in this country anymore that it is almost impossible to write an up-to-date letter to a newspaper. The information in this letter was accurate on June 26, 1986 — six days before this July 2 writing.)

All senators and representatives need to be encouraged to take a positive role in armament control. Call Capitol switchboard, 202-224-3121, and ask for Stallings, Symms, or McClure's office. Please call, or else write U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515, U.S. Senate, Washington D.C. 20510. They need to know you care.

Air Force One contract snared

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force on Monday awarded a $249.8 million contract to the Boeing Co. for two 747 airliners that will be used to transport the president.

The Air Force announced June 5 that the Seattle-based company had won a competition with the McDonnell Douglas Corp. to produce a new White House jetliner. A contract could not be negotiated and awarded, however, until final congressional approval was obtained.

The Air Force said Monday in a brief announcement that it had signed a "firm, fixed-price acquisition contract" with Boeing totaling $249.8 million for "two executive-configured Boeing-747 aircraft."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Health and Human Services Department refused Monday to take emergency action against a widely prescribed arthritis drug suspected of causing deaths among the elderly, saying studies did not support allegations of unreasonable risk.

HHS Secretary Otis R. Bowen denied a petition by a public health advocate group that asked him to declare the arthritis drug Felodene an "imminent hazard" to health in people aged 60 and over.

Army cracks down on smoking

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army formally launched its crackdown on smoking Monday with the service's top officer urging commanders to exercise common sense and avoid overzealous enforcement.

"As caring and concerned leaders, we must exercise sound and reasonable judgment and carry out this policy in a gradual yet deliberate way," Gen. John A. Wickham Jr., the Army chief of staff, wrote in a memo.

Wickham's memo, which was dated July 2, was obtained Monday as the Army launched a program to make "non-smoking the norm for Department of Army-occupied buildings and work areas."

Talks resume in Philly strike

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Negotiations in a 6-day-old strike by 14,000 municipal workers resumed Monday for the first time in a week, leading Mayor W. Wilson Goode to cancel announcement of an emergency plan to remove tons of uncollected trash.

The walkout has halted most City Hall services, including issuance of marriage licenses and birth certificates. It also has closed libraries, museums, health care centers and many swimming pools and recreation centers in the nation's fifth-largest city.

Arts award recipients set

WASHINGTON (AP) — A dozen artists and art patrons, including filmmaker Frank Capra, composer Aaron Copland and contralto Marian Anderson, have been chosen to receive this year's National Medal of Arts citations.

Another recipients of the awards being announced by the White House is Marian Anderson, the contralto who was once forbidden to give a concert in Constitution Hall because she was black.

Along with Ms. Anderson, Copland and Capra, the painter Willem De Kooning, choreographer Agnes de Mille, actress Eva La Gallienne, scholar Alan Lomax, literary critic Lewis Mumford and writer Eudora Welty also were honored.

Three patrons of the arts were

Court widens school discipline scope

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying public schools have a duty to teach "the habits and manners of civility," the Supreme Court on Monday gave school administrators nationwide broad disciplinary powers that include suspending students who use vulgar language.

By a 7-2 vote, the court upheld the 1983 suspension of a Spanaway, Wash., high school senior for giving an assembly speech filled with crude sexual allusions.

"Schools, as instruments of the state, may determine that the essential lessons of 'civil' mature conduct cannot be conveyed in a school that tolerates lewd, indecent or offensive speech and conduct," Chief Justice Warren E. Burger wrote for the court.

"Surely it is a highly appropriate function of public school education to prohibit the use of vulgar and offensive terms in public discourse," Burger said.

Matthew Fraser's one-minute speech in support of a friend's candidacy for student body vice president of Bethel High School contained no dirty words, but it caused a brief

Censorship hurt students' rights

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Suburban school officials violated the constitutional rights of student journalists by deleting articles on divorce and teen pregnancy from a high school newspaper, a divided federal appeals court ruled Monday.

In issuing its opinion, a three-judge panel of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed a ruling last year by U.S. District Judge John F. Nangle. Nangle concluded that publication of the Spectrum newspaper at Hazelwood East High School was a classroom laboratory exercise and therefore exempt from the First Amendment guarantees of freedom of speech and freedom of the press.

at the University of California at Berkeley, Fraser sued school officials. He was forced to miss two days of school before his suspension was lifted.

A federal judge, upheld by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, ruled that Bethel High officials had violated Fraser's free-speech rights by disciplining him. School officials were ordered to pay Fraser $278 in damages and $12,750 in legal costs.

Monday's decision reversed the lower court rulings.

"The American public school system... must inculcate the habits and manners of civility as values in themselves," Burger wrote. "The determination of what manner of speech in the classroom or in school assembly is inappropriate properly rests with the school board."

New York tallies Liberty's income

NEW YORK (AP) — Liberty Weekend brought in as much as $500 million for the city's tourism industry, and helped shine the Big Apple's image as a tourist destination, the head of the Visitors and Convention Bureau said Monday.

Producers of the four-day extravaganza expressed disappointment over ticket sales but said they expected revenue to run close to a break-even figure of $30 million to $32 million.

The Statue of Liberty centennial festival cost city government about $10 million, according to Mayor Edward I. Koch. That figure is almost certain to be exceeded by the weekend's sales tax revenues.

"It was a sensational weekend as far as we were concerned," said Charles Gillett, president of the New York Visitors and Convention Bureau.

"We think all the publicity, which was nationwide for four days, will help convince people to come and visit the Statue of Liberty. We think this helped the image of New York."

Gillett estimated that weekend revelers — both tourists and New York residents — spent between $34 million and $50 million on hotels, restaurants, souvenirs and other expenditures related to the festivities.

However, he said, attendance failed to match predictions that as many as 13 million people would take part in the festivities, with the figure closer to 6 million to 7 million people, most of them New Yorkers.

Journal says GE exec next NBC chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert Wright, president of General Electric Financial Services, is in line to become chief executive officer of NBC when Grant Tinker leaves sometime around Labor Day, a trade journal said Monday.

Wright, 43, left GE in December 1979 to become president of Cox Cable — but was brought back to General Electric in May 1983 and became president of the highly profitable Financial Services, which includes the GE Credit Corp., in March 1984.

Study: Gasoline is most dangerous cargo

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although nuclear material and hazardous waste get the publicity, gasoline is the most dangerous cargo in the nation's transportation system, congressional researchers said Monday.

Gasoline accounts for half of all hazardous material carried on the highways, and its accidents result in more deaths and damages than all other hazardous materials accidents combined," said a study by the Office of Technology Assessment.

Other findings of the study: Congress should consider a national truck driver's license for hazardous cargo, as urged by insurance and trucking groups. Sixty-two percent of hazardous cargo accidents are the result of human error. Shell Oil Co. reduced preventable accidents 58 percent by a combination

L.M. Boyd What's what

The dentists have made their point in Seattle, evidently. More toothbrushes are sold there per capita than anywhere else in the world.

Your granddad when young probably never even heard the word that's now described as the third leading cause of death in the United States — "trauma."

Have you read how automatic scrubbers several times a day wash down the new dairy barns? Such barns are far freer of germs than is the typical hospital, according to those who purport to know. Knowledge of hospital contamination is spreading, evidently. Home births nationwide have tripled in the last five years.

CATS AND DOGS

Q. We've always heard about presidential dogs — FDR's Fala, Nixon's Checkers, Lyndon Johnson's Him and Her. Why no cats? Haven't there been any cats in the White House?

A. A few. Abe Lincoln kept cats. So did Teddy Roosevelt, Calvin Coolidge and John F. Kennedy. An old claim is that Lincoln are identified with people, cats with houses. Might be something to it. Each of the aforementioned cats was referred to as "the White House cat."

Q. What creature has the best sense of smell?

A. The male Emperor moth, undoubtedly. He can smell the sex stimulant of the female moth 6.8 miles upwind. Note that "upwind." It's the word that makes the fact so phenomenal.

Marcos' stand-in Tolentino ends challenge to Aquino

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — An ally of Ferdinand Marcos who had declared himself president gave up his rebellion against Corason Aquino on Monday, but hundreds of his military and civilian backers held out in a luxury hotel.

Arturo Tolentino, Marcos' running mate in February's fraudulent elections, abandoned the Manila Hotel with some of his civilian supporters and met for four hours with Rafael Nieto, Mrs. Aquino's deputy defense minister.

Following the meeting, Tolentino said he and three other pro-Marcos politicians agreed that their civilian followers would leave the hotel by dawn today.

However, Tolentino still described himself as president and said he did not know what his military supporters planned to do. "I do not control them," he said.

"The purpose of the rally was the oath-taking, and that has been achieved," said Tolentino, who swore himself in Sunday during a rally by about 10,000 Marcos supporters outside the hotel. Tolentino, 75, had declared the hotel his "seat of government."

Senior officers of the approximately 100 soldiers in the hotel gave reporters contradicting statements after a meeting late Monday night. One said the soldiers would follow Tolentino's decision but another said they could stay holed up for "two days, four days or even one week."

Mrs. Aquino had set a 24-hour deadline to vacate the building, which by Monday was littered and dirty as a result of the occupation.

Tolentino said he had been ordered to declare himself acting president by Marcos, who is in exile in Hawaii.

"Mrs. Aquino, who had been on a visit to the southern city of Cagayan de Oro when the rebellion broke out, said at a news conference. "Let me tell you now that the law will not be flouted with impunity."

She said Tolentino would be charged with sedition, but the elderly politician was not arrested.

Asked what she would do if the rebels did not heed her, Mrs. Aquino replied, "I will not tell you what our options are at this point."

Although Tolentino said his followers tried to reject the February "people power" revolution that ended Marcos' 20-year rule, and brought Mrs. Aquino to power, it was clear by Monday that he had failed. Only about 3,000 people, including onlookers, were near the hotel.

About 300 soldiers, including several generals, originally responded to Tolentino's call. But 200 of them subsequently surrendered.

Ship sinking agreement set

PARIS (AP) — France and New Zealand have settled their bitter dispute over the blowing up and sinking of the Greenpeace ship Rainbow Warrior by French agents, officials in Paris and Wellington announced Monday.

Under terms of an agreement worked out by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, France will formally apologize for sinking the vessel in Auckland harbor last year and pay $7 million in damages. New Zealand will let two French intelligence agents out of prison to spend the next three years at a French military base on a South Pacific island.

The attack on the vessel, in which one crew member was killed, had poisoned French-New Zealand relations. France imposed trade sanctions on New Zealand as part of an effort to gain its agents' release.

Premier Jacques Chirac told reporters in Paris that France accepted the deal "without reservation."

Chirac said he was delighted, and praised what he called "the exemplary dignity" with which the agents "accepted and endured their detention."

In Wellington, New Zealand Prime Minister David Lange said the transfer of the agents, which he had previously said he would not permit — was "an appropriate outcome, be it unexpected."

Restrictions on Mandela lifted; newsmen can quote her carefully

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government said Monday it lifted all restrictions against anti-apartheid activist Winnie Mandela, but the press was warned to be careful about quoting her under national emergency regulations.

Also Monday, about 10,000 black gold and diamond miners were on strike or staging slowdowns to protest the detention of union leaders under the emergency declaration. The multiracial Metal and Allied Workers Union representing 50,000 workers said, its challenge of the state of emergency would be heard in the Durban

Supreme Court today.

Police reported a 58-year-old white man was shot to death in the Fort Elizabeth black township of Zwijde after dropping off black workers; the 141st person reported killed in political violence since the emergency was declared June 12.

The restrictions on Mrs. Mandela for the past 20 years governed where she could live and visit and to whom she could speak. Her husband Nelson, an African National Congress leader, has been in jail since 1964 serving a life term for plotting sabotage.

Mrs. Mandela had openly defied many of the restraints. She has had a series of scuffles with security police since January after she ignored her banishment to the rural town of Brandfontein and moved to Soweto, Johannesburg's black township.

Mrs. Mandela's name was missing from a Government-Gazette listing Friday of banned people. Those so sanctioned may not be quoted by the news media and may not meet with more than two people at a time.

Police Capt. Henry Beck, a spokesman for the Minister of Law and Order, said Monday: "I can confirm all restriction orders on Mrs. Mandela have been lifted."

Court clears former CIA agent

LONDON (AP) — Prosecutors dropped the espionage case against a former CIA agent Monday, explaining that he had duped the Soviets with useless material, and a court cleared him of all charges.

Attorneys for retired U.S. Navy officer John Bothwell said he probably will sue for wrongful arrest and malicious prosecution.

Bothwell, 59, lives in Bath, England, and runs an import-export business. He was arrested Feb. 16 as he tried to leave for Vienna, Austria.

Prosecutor Michael Bibby told Old Street Magistrates Court police acted on a tip "from a very good source" that Bothwell was passing NATO secrets to the Soviet Union.

The defendant, who retired from the Navy in 1965 with the rank of commander, was charged under the Official Secrets Act with arranging to communicate information calculated to be useful to an enemy.

News reports at the time said his arrest was based on disclosures by Viktor Gudarev, a Soviet trade mission member who defected earlier in February in Athens, Greece. U.S. officials identified Gudarev as a colonel in the Soviet KGB secret police.

Bibby offered no evidence against Bothwell in court and a formal verdict of innocent was given.

Church of England votes for sanctions

YORK, England (AP) — Church of England leaders voted overwhelmingly Monday in favor of economic sanctions against South Africa and urged the British government, banks and businesses to exert pressure on Pretoria.

The 394-21 vote followed a three-hour debate at the regular summer session of the General Synod, a policy-making body of bishops, clergy and laity.

"Let us now with faith, determination and hope support this motion and determine that we will not let the Africans down," said Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie. "We will, as much as it is in our power, lead the way to a new order in South Africa for the good of all."

The primate is spiritual head of the church and leader of the world's 70 million Anglicans. About 2 million South Africans — black, white and mixed-race — are Anglicans.

The decision was certain to irritate Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government, which has opposed sanctions against South Africa on grounds they are not effective.

The approved resolution said that "to help bring about a non-racial, democratic South Africa the British government should 'deploy effective economic sanctions.'"

Oman, United Arab Emirates cut oil prices

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Oman and the United Arab Emirates were reported Monday to have cut their crude oil prices below $11 a barrel.

The report came as the aggregate production of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries soared to a five-year high of 19.5 million barrels daily.

The Middle East Economic Survey, an authoritative oil industry publication, said Oman was charging its customers on the basis of $10.70 a barrel for June supplies, down $1.15 from May's average.

The United Arab Emirates has cut prices by $1.40 per barrel, to a range of $11-$10.60 for various grades. This compares with an average of $12.35-$11.80 for May, the publication said.

OPEC's 13 members, meanwhile, pumped more than 19.5 million barrels daily on the glutted market during June and were expected to maintain that level in July because of contracts already signed, the report said.

Pope ends visit

CASTRIES, St. Lucia (AP) — Pope John Paul II ended a week-long visit to Colombia on Monday with a final plea for an end to violence, drug trafficking and poverty, then flew to this Caribbean island en route home to the Vatican.

"How much you desire, beloved Colombians, that the weapons are silenced; that the hands which strike out instead reach out fraternally; that the desired and invoked peace arrives for all ... after so many years of violence that has left the grief of death and painful wounds so difficult to heal," he said in his final homily from the flower-decked balcony of the cathedral in Barranquilla, Colombia.

Reagans slip out for birthday

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and his wife Nancy kept top aides and the press in the dark and slipped away from the White House in an unmarked motorcade to celebrate her 63th birthday privately at a nearby restaurant.

The unannounced getaway Sunday night drew sharp protests from the press because the Reagan administration previously had guaranteed that a small group of reporters always could accompany the president whenever he left the White House.

"I guess that whatever commitment we have made to you in the past, we cannot make it anymore because if they decide to do it again, they will do it," said presidential spokesman Larry Speakes.

Speakes said he did not know of the outing until after Reagan had left the White House. The first lady's press secretary, who had assured reporters that the Reagans would celebrate alone at the White House, said she didn't hear about their foray until Monday morning.

"I was surprised," said Elaine Crisp, Mrs. Reagan's spokeswoman. "I had told everyone that they were going to spend a quiet day. I guess they changed their minds. It was just, maybe, a 1-2-3-minute decision."

They sat at "a very secluded table," away from other guests, and were noticed by very few of the 50 or so other patrons, said a restaurant spokesman who refused to give his name. The Reagans both ate sea bass, and the meal was topped off with California wine and a birthday cake.

Wick, director of the U.S. Information Agency and a frequent visitor to the restaurant, made the reservation only an hour before the president arrived, according to the spokesman.

TWIN FALLS — Biological control for grasshoppers has a future, but for now, farmers need the immediate results that come from pesticide spraying, says a local official with the U.S. Animal Plant Health and Inspection Service.

"Farmers aren't going to wait 21 days for a problem to go away," said Roger Pollard of APHIS, referring to the longer kill period required by biological controls.

Pollard spoke at a meeting last Friday of the Sawtooth Press Club. Spokesmen for a distributor of a biological control agent and for an environmental group also spoke at the meeting and offered differing views on the subject.

By last Friday, 105,660 acres of rangeland adjacent to cropland had received pesticide treatment for grasshoppers, said Pollard. Control programs are supposed to last three to five years, which is why the amount of acreage sprayed this summer is down significantly from the 2.5 million acres sprayed at this time last year.

The federal government has spent millions of dollars trying to control the grasshopper infestation in southern Idaho.

This week spraying is occurring in Minidoka, Blaine and Lincoln counties and daily in other southern Idaho counties, he said.

Pollard said there was a delay in transition from the first spraying program to the second because of "administrative problems" in the service, which allowed an almost-immediate reinfestation of an untreated block of rangeland.

Pollard left the door open for the use of a biocontrol agent, Nosema locustae, which is fatal to 58 varieties of grasshoppers and the Mormon cricket. He said the service wanted to use different agents to control the crop-devouring insects.

The federal government's positive attitude toward biological control is demonstrated by the service's willingness to pay for Nosema spraying of 12,000 acres along the Little Wood River in Lincoln County near Richfield, said Pollard.

However, most of the spraying in southern Idaho involves spreading the chemical pesticides cabaryl, malathion and acephate over the rangeland.

Grasshoppers die three days after being sprayed with malathion, but Nosema is fatal to grasshoppers 21-30 days after spraying, said John Durham, president of Biotechnic Corp., a local company which sells Nosema.

In addition to chemical agents because it lasts longer. Durham called Nosema "a real good answer in environmentally sensitive areas." He said it is harmful only to grasshoppers.

One stumbling block to wider use of Nosema is cost. Durham said the price is twice as much as chemical sprays. The cost will be competitive with chemical sprays next year, when he can get production up to meet demand, he said.

Nosema has been successfully tested by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Montana and Idaho and used by producers on private land.

Janet O'Crowley of Picoabo, a member of the Committee for Idaho's High Desert, said 95 percent of the pea pods have been wiped out since residents of Picoabo received assurances there would be no pesticide spraying within a mile of the town. She said she has noticed fewer frogs and insect-eating birds since the spraying started. Nosema sounded like a great way to control grasshoppers, she said.

MVRMC reaffirms its billing policies

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Regional Medical Center reaffirmed its collection policies following complaints from some patients that the hospital no longer allowed them to pay in small amounts.

At a board meeting on Monday, MVRMC Administrator John Bingham distributed a memo on the hospital's collection policies established by the board in November 1984 and May 1985.

According to board policy, balances on outpatient accounts are due in 90 days and balances on inpatient accounts are due in 120 days from discharge. If the patient is unable to pay the full amount, "the patient is encouraged to obtain outside financing through bank loans, independent loan companies or other sources of payment."

The other option is to sign up for a time payment plan with Healthcare Financial Services, an Ogden-based company, which charges 18 percent interest and carries the account for up to 36 months.

The memorandum issued on Monday followed criticisms by a Buhl

Council OKs development proposals

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council granted three development requests at a Monday night meeting.

The action clears the way for a home to be built closer to the Snake River Canyon rim than specified by city code; allows development of a mobile home park on Elizabeth Boulevard; and waives public hearing requirements for Les Schwab Tire to open a store on Blue Lakes Boulevard.

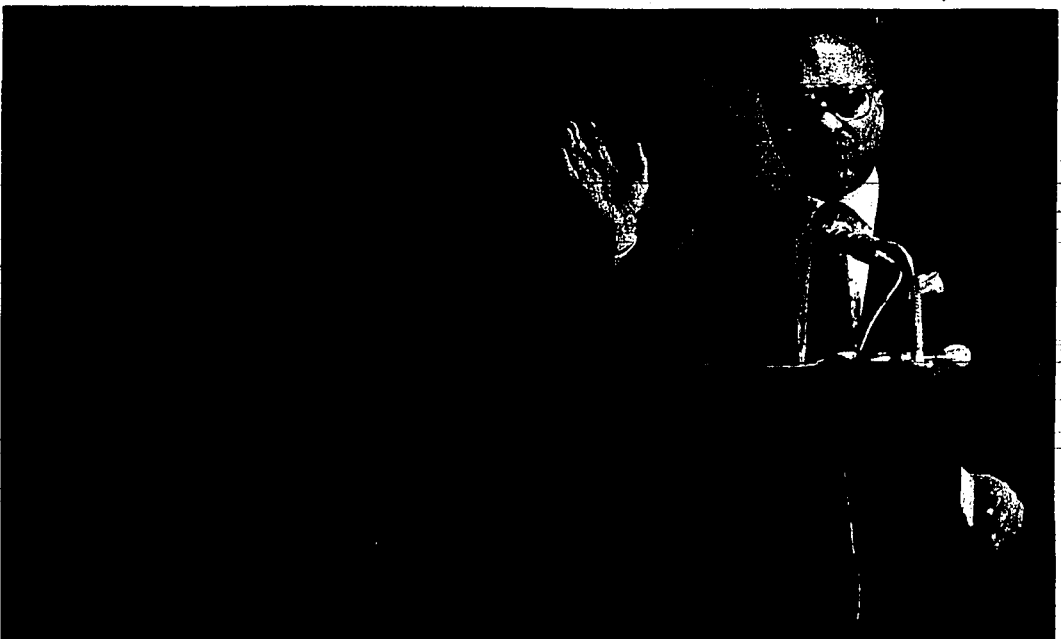

Carroll L. Jensen asked the council to approve his plans to build a house 35 feet from the canyon rim, because building farther back would obstruct his view, he said.

City zoning codes require a 100-foot setback from the canyon rim, unless a geological survey shows the area to be safe. In that case, the council may grant approval for homes to be built within 50 feet of the rim.

Jensen requested a variance to the 50-foot limit because houses built to the east and west before the law went into effect are within 10 feet of the rim and would block his view if

Trade guru Yeutter predicts deficits

Trade Ambassador Clayton Yeutter told agricultural leaders, "We are going to regain our market share, but it will be a vigorous struggle to do so."

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The nation may continue to see monthly trade deficits for farm products as foreign buyers allow lower prices this fall, U.S. Trade Ambassador Clayton Yeutter says.

Starting a Monday swing across Idaho on the behalf of U.S. Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, in Burley, Yeutter also blasted a trade bill recently passed by U.S. House of Representatives as "atrocious" for the nation and for the state.

The provisions of the Trade and International Economic Policy Reform Act of 1986 — which include both countermeasures against some imports and export enhancements for U.S. goods — would "guarantee retaliation" from other countries, most of which would fall on agricultural products, the ambassador said.

Talking with agricultural leaders, Yeutter expressed long-term optimism about trade in farm goods. "We are going to regain our market share, but it will be a vigorous struggle to do so," he said.

Yeutter remarked in an interview later that he would not be surprised if trade deficits for agricultural products persist during the next few months.

Overseas buyers know that the 1985 Farm Bill will force down agricultural prices and are waiting for the prices to drop this fall, Yeutter said.

Last week, the U.S. Commerce Department reported that imports of farm goods exceeded exports in May for the first time since 1971. The one-month deficit was $382 million, the largest in the nation's history.

Idaho farm leaders have protested the impact of Canadian

Exchange ambassador fears for farm products

imports on their markets, most recently at a Twin Falls hearing sponsored by Symms.

Gary Ball of Rexburg, a director of the National Potato Council, told Yeutter on Monday the potato industry needs "fast-track" relief from Canadian spuds pouring over the border.

Other Canadian products also are hurting the U.S. farm economy, said Gene Davis, a cattle rancher from Bruneau.

Yeutter said the Reagan administration intends to pursue fair trade aggressively in recently opened talks with Canada. "The field will have to be level on agriculture, or there won't be a deal," he pledged.

At a later appearance in Boise, Yeutter predicted that the U.S. and its northern neighbor can resolve differences without starting a trade war. "I really think the U.S.-Canada relationship is back on track," he said.

On other international issues involving Idaho industries, Yeutter said:

• He would look at imports of New Zealand and Australian lamb decried by members of the sheep industry as a factor eroding the domestic market. At the same time, he cautioned that the question touches some larger, geopolitical issues, such as New Zealand's attitude on allowing nuclear warships into its territories.

• He is "reasonably optimistic that we will wind up with an agreement on semiconductor chips that will set a very favorable precedent" from current talks with the Japanese. The agreement on computer memory chips particularly affects Micron Technology, a Boise company, which has filed a lawsuit alleging Japanese dumping of 256-kilobyte random access memory chips on the market.

Yeutter said the Reagan administration is attacking trade imbalances three ways: with fiscal and monetary policy, with tough trade talks and with long-term efforts to change the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, which regulates international export and import trade.

The upcoming GATT talks, which are likely to open in September and go into depth early in 1987, will be critical, he said. The administration will try to eliminate a 1979 provision that requires an industry seeking trade protection to prove harm. The clause has made countermeasures expensive and time-consuming to obtain.

Yeutter-Symms and Rep.-Larry Craig, R-Idaho, met in Boise on Monday and flew on to Casco, Maine, for talks with representatives of the lumber industry. President Reagan recently ordered import tariffs on Canadian shakes and shingles, a measure which had been sought by the industry.

Yeutter's trip took on a political tone several times at the Burley meeting, as he praised Symms for his work in the Senate on fiscal and trade issues. He said Symms is a "strong supporter" of U.S.-Canada trade talks and one of the first lawmakers to recognize the "historic potential" of the discussions.

Symms described Yeutter, former president of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, as a "tough negotiator" and "the right man, in the right place, at the right time" as special trade ambassador.

Squadron of biplanes flies for youth program

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Three World War I-style barnstorming planes, the Red Barons, will be in the air over Twin Falls and Jerome on July 12 as part of an aerial demonstration and fund-raiser for the Idaho Youth Ranch at Rupert.

The open-cockpit Stearman, known as the Red Baron Squadron, will fly out of the Jerome airport and over the local area to call attention to the youth benefit programs of Red Baron Pizza Service of Marshall, Minn.

The pizza makers will donate 5 cents for every Red Baron pizza sold in local stores from July 7-19, and funds will be used to help support the Idaho Youth Ranch. The firm also is urging local residents to support the youth facility and its programs for troubled and disturbed youth. The red-and-white Stearman Model A-75 biplanes can trace their heritage to earlier-Stearmans that flew the first aerial routes. They also closely resemble the Fokker, the German aircraft used by "The Red Baron," Manfred von Richthofen, a famed air ace of World War I.

Built in the late 1930s and early '40s, the Stearman A-75 was conceived as a primary trainer for World War II pilots, preparing them for the larger planes they later flew into battle.

The pizza squadron's planes, although more than 40 years old, fly daily in aerobatic demonstrations and to give passengers and air show audiences a look at classic aircraft in action.

The local program is part of the nationwide youth benefit that has

Fair board approves funds for produce building repairs

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Fair Board voted Monday to spend $1,026 on roof repairs to extend the life of the produce building just one more year.

The board members also voted to increase the fair's 1988-89 budget by $40,000 as a first step toward financing a new building.

The building, which is at least 70 years old, is violating county building codes because of structural problems with its roof.

After the board decided it couldn't afford a new roof — estimated to cost about $40,000 — and didn't have time to finance a new building, it voted to determine if a minimum of repairs could be made to use the building just for the upcoming fair.

Engineer Gerald Martins reported to the board that the roof could be supported with boards as a temporary solution. The completed work would have to be approved by the county zoning administration.

Martins also suggested that the repaired building be monitored during the fair and evacuated if winds exceeding more than 15 miles per hour arise. Fair Manager Tom Shouse said.

"It (the building) was still standing after the high winds of July 4," Shouse added.

The board voted to award the repair job to Filler carpenter Richard Schweitzer, currently doing repair work at the fairgrounds. The project didn't have to be placed to bid because it was under the state requirement of $5,000.

With the repair question settled, discussion Monday turned to thoughts of a new building or a new roof on the old one. Board members estimated a new structure would cost about $100,000, which is the cost of a new merchants building next to

Jerome coroner sets double shooting inquest

JEROME — Jerome County Coroner Gerald Oster said Monday that an inquest is tentatively set for July 17, in the double shooting last October of a Jerome couple.

Oster said a coroner's jury will be selected to hear evidence in the shooting of John G. Slater, 81, and his wife Pauline, 68, who died of gunshot wounds in their mobile home in Jerome last Oct. 10.

Mrs. Slater, a cancer patient, was confined to her bed in the final stages of the disease. She was shot in the front of the head and her husband was shot in the back of the head in the couple's living room.

An investigation has been continuing since then by the Jerome Police Department, but despite an announcement in January by Jerome police that charges were to be filed, none have been filed at the present time.

Oster said that should the coroner's jury rule that it appears from evidence heard in the inquest that a murder or murders were committed and that the evidence points to a suspect, then the jury can require that an arrest warrant be issued.

Originally, Jerome officers believed the deaths constituted a murder-suicide and that both fatal shots were fired by John Slater, who killed his wife to end her suffering from cancer and then shot himself.

Evidence obtained since that time indicates Slater probably could not have killed himself. The bullet entered his head in a downward angle from the upper back of the head.

Police were called the night of Oct. 10 after the two deaths were discovered by Mrs. Slater's daughter and a neighbor.

All individuals with knowledge of the deaths of the Jerome couple will be subpoenaed to testify at the inquest. Oster said the inquest will probably begin at 10 a.m. July 17, but it has not been determined if the public and press will be permitted to attend.

C of I graduates 7 locals

CALDWELL — The following students from the Magic Valley Community College of Idaho graduated from the College of Idaho with bachelor degrees:

Wendy Geist, Twin Falls, bachelor of arts degree in psychology; Randy Plankey, Twin Falls, bachelor of business administration degree in finance; David Ensuna, Castelford, bachelor of arts degree in English literature; Shawn Jones, Jerome, bachelor of arts degree in political science and history; Jensen, Kimberly, Laurk, bachelor of arts degree in psychology; Linda Reiss, Sun Valley, bachelor of science degree in zoology; and Jerri Adams, Wendell, bachelor of science degree in zoology.

The Fair Board had to decide on its budget at the Monday meeting because the county commissioners wanted county departments to submit their budgets by the following Monday so the commissioners could begin preparing the total county budget.

In other business, the board voted unanimously to provide one free booth at the fair to veteran organizations of the county. The request was made last month by Dan Hart, president of the Vietnam Veterans of America.

The board, however, rejected Hart's suggestion that veterans be allowed free admission on one day of the fair.

Board Member Jack Skinner said the free booth was all the Fair Board could afford.

Shouse also reported that the Filer Mutual Telephone Co. had donated a copy machine to the fair office.

the produce building.

Board member Don Kramer suggested the board use revenue bonds, and the county to pay for the fiscal residents. According to financial advisers, the board could afford an annual payback of about $14,000 on bonds.

County Commissioner Judy Felton asked the board to consider other potential expenses, such as the fair, to protect the property owners from having to pay back the bonds if the board couldn't do so.

"There are other costs than just the building," she said.

Board member Emmett Harrison said a group of private individuals could finance and donate the building to the county. The Fair Board then could pay the individuals.

The board members agreed to obtain more information on financing the project through bonds.

Board member Jack Shouse said $40,000 of its proposed budget of $317,500. If fair revenue meets that budgeted figure, the board could install a new roof or stockpile the money for a new building, said board Chairman Stan Snow.

Under the law, the board can't spend more than the money it budgets. But it isn't obligated to spend all its budgets, and that's exactly what occurred last year. The board revised its operating budget after the fair to reflect the revenue from the event. The revenue was less than the budget approved earlier in the year.

Snow previously asked the commissioners if the county could provide $40,000 to the Fair Board budget for the building. The fair last year received a $9,000 supplement from the county.

But County Commissioner Marvin Hempenly replied, "That's dreaming."

Felton added that the county was stopped for money and had just enough for mandated functions. If the commissioners approved $40,000 for the fair, it would have to take away from other county operations.

Stallings hosts retirement talks

TWIN FALLS — U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, will sponsor a forum in Twin Falls this evening designed to help answer questions about benefits and pensions available to those already retired or preparing to retire.

The forum, one of four Stallings will conduct around the 2nd Congressional District during the week, will start at 7 p.m. in the Shields Building, Room 117-118, College of Southern Idaho, 315 Falls Ave.

In an effort to help answer questions about retirement benefits and pensions, Stallings says he has invited representatives from Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, the Idaho Office on Aging, Legal Services and other organizations to participate in the forum.

"These representatives will be able to answer questions Idahoans may have about retirement income, health care and other issues of concern in these areas," Stallings says. Stallings' staff also will be on hand to help with individual problems.

Youth, 15, charged with battery

RUPERT — A 15-year-old boy was in custody Monday in Minidoka County as a result of a weekend incident at the Idaho Youth Ranch.

Deputy Sheriff Bob Nevarez said the youth is being held on a battery charge in connection with alleged battery of a counselor at the youth detention facility Saturday night.

Nevarez declined to release the name of the victim, but said he was severely injured and did not require medical attention.

Golden Griddle reports safe try

TWIN FALLS — An attempted safe burglary was reported Monday at the Golden Griddle restaurant, 2036 Kimberly Road.

Twin Falls police said someone "broke" into the business between 8 p.m. Sunday and 5 a.m. Monday. After entering the building, officers said, the burglars entered the office area and other parts of the building, apparently looking for money, and then attempted to break into the safe.

Nothing was reported missing, but the owners reported heavy damage to the safe.

Man, 19, injured in 'cycle crash

TWIN FALLS — David Lee Hill, 19, of Twin Falls, was injured and given a citation for inattentive driving as the result of a motorcycle accident on Monday afternoon.

Twin Falls City police said Hill was traveling south on South Locust Street at 12:51 p.m. when he went turned a curve onto Osterloh Avenue and lost control of the motorcycle, causing it to overturn. He was taken by ambulance to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for treatment and listed in good condition Monday night.

2 men jailed on burglary charge

RUPERT — Two young men were in the Minidoka County jail Monday, charged with first-degree burglary in connection with burglaries late last month of the Longhorn Mercantile at Minidoka.

Minidoka County Chief Deputy Sheriff Bob Nevarez said both were arrested about noon Monday during efforts of the Joint Mini-Cassia Task Force of law enforcement officers. The Minidoka County Prosecutor's staff reported both are scheduled to appear in court today.

Arrested were Charles Brewer of Burley and Floyd Ray Kyles of Rupert, both 18. Each is charged with two counts of first-degree burglary, Nevarez said.

The store was burglarized June 23 and again June 28, Minidoka County officials said.

In both instances merchandise, including food items, cigarettes and beer, were taken. Nevarez said some of the merchandise, but not all, was recovered Monday.

Bills

man and a Twin Falls woman last week that unlike other hospitals, MVRMC no longer allowed patients to pay smaller portions of their bills over several years. Instead, patients say their bills are turned over to collection agencies, else they are forced to pay for loans.

In the memo, Bingham said the hospital "prefers a minimum payment of $50 a month."

Bingham also said since last year, the total dollar amount in MVRMC's receivable rose to $320,099 this year, from $62,275 of $7,002,615, and the total number of active accounts jumped from 11,844 to 15,185.

In addition, he said the outstanding balance of accounts over 180 days old rose from $1,331,998 in June 1987 to $20,000 this year.

At the board meeting, Bingham did not address complaints that the hospital is also having problems with patient billing.

But during an earlier interview, he did say the hospital has an "obligation to get down and work out problems."

"If we've made an error, they need to let us know so we can resolve it," said Bingham. "Obviously, we're not trying to harass people. We've made a lot of changes with our computers, and we're trying to improve the system."

In other business:

"The board voted to get outside funding to conduct a $7,000-10,000 survey on ambulance service in the area in an effort to try and consolidate ambulance service with smaller communities."

The board also voted to try and cooperate with smaller hospitals in a recruitment drive for local physicians.

Board Chairman Robert Valentine said if requested MVRMC will try and locate local physicians to provide services to hospitals such as Gooding County Memorial Hospital, which only has two doctors and a surgeon on its staff.

"We'd like to see them maintain their facility," said Valentine. "It would help us and them to cooperate with services."

Council

he built too far back on his property, he said. He also agreed to sign a covenant relieving the city of responsibility for his action.

A geological survey reportedly shows his property on Canyon Springs Road to be safe.

Community Development Director LaMar Orton said the canyon setback laws had been approved by the council in 1981 to protect property owners and that aesthetically and protecting the canyon view for the public were only a minor consideration when the law was passed.

All council members approved the request except Jim Vickers, who was absent, and Mary McCuskey, who voted "no."

McCuskey said she and others had worked hard in 1981 to establish the 50-foot setback in the face of developers' objections. The council could do nothing about homes built near the rim before the law was passed, she said.

People who have adhered to the canyon-rim-setback requirements have not regretted that decision, she said.

City Attorney Shane Bengoechea reminded the council, at a work session before the meeting, that whatever their decision it could set a precedent for other canyon rim property.

On the matter of the mobile home park, council members voted to extend approval of development plans for two more years.

The council approved the Elizabeth Park Plaza Subdivision in the 1900 block of Elizabeth Boulevard in 1982. However, the economy prevented development of the park. Edwards, Howard and Martens Inc. now have a prospective buyer for the development, said Gerald L. Martens.

Plans call for 7.3 acres, with 5 acres developed at first. Streets, water, sewer and utilities will be already been installed for those acres.

Orton said the neighborhood had changed little since 1982. And council members agreed that their was little reason to reopen public hearings on the project.

The council also waived special use permit requirements that would have called for a public hearing before Les Schwab Tire Center opened a store on Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

Orton brought the matter before the council because code requirements conflicted and because the commercial property is adjoined by residential property to the rear.

The code allows service stations outright on the land in question between 397 and 421 Blue Lakes North, but requires special use permits for auto repair shops.

The council decided that Les Schwab would be sufficiently like a service station that a special use permit would not be required. The shop will sell tires and accessories and do such work as installing brake shoes and shock absorbers and aligning tires.

The real Red Baron, von Richthofen of the German air corps of World War I, was so named because he flew a bright red triplane as a challenge to allied aircraft. He was shot down by allied warplanes in World War I before he was finally downed by a British Royal Flying Corps pilot, Capt. Arthur Roy Brown, who flew a Sopwith Camel. The baron was buried by the allies with full military honors as a tribute to his skills of the man who was to become a legend.

The barnstorming squadron performs over more than 50 cities each year. There are four planes and five skilled aerobically pilots in the squadron.

The pilots have a combined 23,000 hours of flight time, including 9,300 hours in the Stearman. Jim Bowman, of Boulder, Colo., is lead pilot; Steve Thompson, of Sloux Falls, S.D., files the left wing position; Randy Brooks, a Marshalltown, Minn., native, is on right wing and Kooki Grey flies solo pilot and comes from Slippery Rock, Pa., while Jeff Randall, also of Sloux Falls, is the newest member of the squadron and is backup pilot for the group.

Interested residents may visit at the Jerome airport during the afternoon of July 19 to view and photograph the planes.

Study: College women seek glamorous image in cigarettes

DETROIT (AP) — College women are more likely than college men to smoke cigarettes, suggesting that the tobacco industry is successfully linking female smoking with an image of glamour and success, according to a federal study released Monday.

"The cigarette companies emphasize two major themes in getting women to smoke: One is trying to associate smoking with being liberated and the other is more subliminal, but not very subtle, and that is that women should smoke to stay thin," social psychologist Lloyd D. Johnston said.

"The typical cigarette ad aimed at women features 'very long, slender models and very long, slender cigarettes,'" Johnston said.

Johnston was a director of the study conducted for the National Institute on Drug Abuse by the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research.

Among college women, the daily smoking rate was 18 percent last year compared with 10 percent for men.

"It appears the tobacco industry's expensive and long-term effort to associate smoking with liberation and success among women has paid off, at least for the industry," Johnston said. "The payoff for those young women who bought the message is quite another matter."

Scott Stapf, a spokesman for the Tobacco Institute, a Washington-based trade organization representing cigarette manufacturers, called the conclusions "complete baloney."

The Tobacco Institute said advertising and promotions are aimed at current smokers as competing companies try to win converts or persuade smokers to stick with their current brands.

"There's not a single study that establishes cigarette advertising as the main factor" or a contributing factor in a person's decision to become a smoker, Stapf said. Rather, "peer pressure and the role of parents and elders generally" are the main factors, he said.

Officials of Philip Morris Inc., maker of Virginia Slims, and R.J. Reynolds, producer of More cigarettes — brands heavily marketed to women — could not be reached for comment because their New York offices were closed Monday for the Fourth of July holiday.

Virginia Slims advertising has featured the slogan, "You've come a long way, baby."

The study grew out of a 10-year series of surveys of drug use by high school seniors around the country. About 1,100 college students were interviewed each year from 1980 to 1985. The results have a margin of error of less than 3 percentage points.

"Smoking tends to be highly related to grades and to school performance generally," Johnston said. "The smarter kids are less likely to get hooked on cigarettes."

The study didn't say how much college women smoke. Past studies indicate that more women than men fall into the "moderate to light smoker" category, he said, but the situation may be changing and more study is needed.

The study found that cigarette smoking is much less common on campus than among young adults who don't go to college.

"Most smoking habits are established in adolescence," Johnston said. "The sex difference goes back to high school. For some reason, college-bound females are smoking more than college-bound males."

An even sharper difference was found between college students of both sexes and other young adults.

In 1985, 14 percent of college students said they smoked cigarettes daily, compared with 31 percent of non-students, the study said.

In their 1985 survey of high school seniors, the researchers found that 20.7 percent of those not planning to attend college said they smoked at least half a pack of cigarettes a day, compared with 6.5 percent of the college-bound.

Poet's advice is slow down, enjoy more

DEAR ABBY: Seeing "Slow Me Down, Lord" by 85-year-old Willard A. Peterson in your column not only triggered "Speed Me Up, Lord," it brought to mind a surmounting by my grandfather, Samuel Ullman (whose "Youth" was published in your column in 1982 and was often quoted by Gen. Douglas MacArthur).

Grandpa's poem (enclosed) was written circa 1918, so if you think it merits sharing with your readers, you have my permission.

—MAYER U. NEWFIELD

Is a minute's time so precious, That you need be so ungracious, And go tramping on your fellows, As on the way you speed?

Can't you spare a not of greeting, Pass the time of day in meeting, Swap a joke or smile a little, When a neighbor comes along?

Is the dollar so enticing, Is success so all-sufficing, That you can't devote a second To a brother in the throng?

Do you know your destination? It's a quiet little station, Where ambition never troubles And the dollar jingles not; Where riches are not enduring.

Where your note has passed maturing, And the richest man's possession Is a little grassy spot.

Why be over-keen in speeding, On a trail so surely leading To that lonely little city, where We all must land at last?

Slack up, brother! What's your hurry, That so recklessly you scurry? You may lead a slow procession 'Er another year is past.

By Samuel Ullman, "From a Summum of Years Fourscore" away with other parts of a woman's anatomy, but this is a new one. Have you ever heard of it before? And should I worry?

—TOOTSIE-WOOTSIE

DEAR TOOTSIE: Your boyfriend has a foot fetish, which simply means that he is "turned on" (sexually stimulated) by feet. It's nothing new, and it's not dangerous. If he wants to know what caused it, a psychotherapist could probably dig it out of his subconscious. Don't worry about it. You could be "solitaires."

DEAR MR. NEWFIELD: Thank you, I do.

WHAT'S YOUR HURRY? —Slack up, brother, what's your hurry, That so recklessly you scurry, With your elbows crowding sideways And your eyes fixed straight ahead?

DEAR ABBY: I am going with a wonderful man—He's good-looking, romantic, decent, sober, works steady and treats me like a queen. So what's the problem? He keeps asking me to take my shoes off so he can kiss my toes and caress my feet. Frankly, I would rather have him pay more attention to the rest of me, but what really turns him on is my feet.

DEAR ABBY: My father owns a catering business. I am getting married soon, and my father assumes that he will cater my wedding. Abby, I've been to some of the weddings he has catered, and the food was lousy and the service was terrible.

—His competitor in town does a much better job. I really want a catered wedding but I hate to hurt my father's feelings. What should I do?

Rules required when latchkey kids at home

Latchkey kids came onto the American scene about 15 years ago. Parents put a key around their neck with instructions to "Go straight home from school, lock the door and watch TV." It was a great line. Some parents even delivered it with a straight face. Can you honestly see 6.5 million kids sitting around in a darkened house watching "The Dating Game"? Please.

Realistically, some parents were sensitive to the emotional isolation and set up Rules for Social Behavior in the Home When School Leaves Out. They are relevant in the summer months. Parents would do well to magnet these to their refrigerator for easy reference.

OCCUPANCY CODE —Occupancy in this home by more than 200 people is considered a hazard to the stability of the neighborhood... and regular breathing. Early reservations are suggested to avoid disappointment. Please do not linger over kitchen table or television as people are waiting. BE CONSIDERATE. Before entering premises, guests must know at least the first name of the children. This is not a USO for lonely children away from home for the first time.

NOISE ORDINANCE —A zoning ordinance specifically states, the noise level may not exceed that of a hovering jet at 300 feet. Electronic equipment of any kind is not welcome.

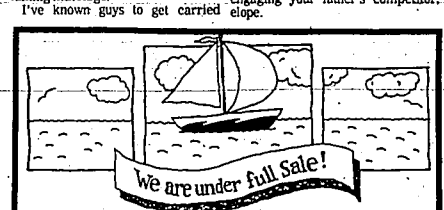

ANIMAL PROTECTION LAW —If a dog is in residence and it barks/bugs at your leg/tumbles under the door, it indicates he would like to be let out. That is his way of communicating. He needs water to survive. He has a bowl for this. There is no need to serve him water in Daddy's tennis trophy or a Waterford fruit bowl.

FOOD MANDATE —Eating bolted ham out of the package is considered a federal offense, punishable by no lunch for a week. The refrigerator has a hidden camera and will later be used in tracking down offenders who will be brought to a swift justice. EAT ALONE. If your Mother and Father wanted to feed the world, they would throw a telethon. Refrigerator food does not have legs. It must be manually picked up and put back or it will turn green and make everyone sick. Green is not a happy color.

PHONE REGULATIONS —Do not take down messages in the kiddy litter. There is margin for error. Long distance calls must be cleared with check writer of family. Before you call your parents at work ask yourself, "Will there be reprisals?"

FIGHTING STATUTE —Do not bleed on anything that you cannot wipe off with a sponge. Food fights leave stains and are not understood by parents. "I'm telling" is a phrase that may leave you an orphan. Don't overuse it.

Finally, coats, books, lunch boxes and schoolmates left over 30 days will be sold by the owners at public auction.

Study finds battered women get protection

WASHINGTON (AP) — Battered women are getting more protection because of increasingly aggressive prosecution of domestic violence, a new study concludes.

The federally financed survey of assault on women in the home says that until recently, most criminal justice officials looked the other way when domestic violence occurred, treating it as a low-priority problem that didn't warrant special legal attention.

More than 1.7 million Americans a year face a spouse with a gun or a knife and more than 2 million are beaten by their spouses, says the report, "Confronting Domestic Violence: A Guide For Criminal Justice Agencies," which cites recent research on the subject.

"As our understanding about domestic violence increases, more and more criminal justice officials are realizing that spouse abuse is a crime and should be treated as such," says the 176-page survey by private researcher Gail A. Goolkasian.

The study, conducted for the National Institute of Justice, says law enforcement officials should give domestic violence the same rigorous response that they give to violence committed by strangers.

Mediation services and counseling for abusers have some limited uses that can be helpful mainly in less serious cases of domestic violence, the study says. Instead, it recommends that criminal justice policy-makers recognize spouse abuse as a serious crime and that they establish detailed policies for directing police, prosecutors and judges on how to handle domestic violence cases.

The report says the Baltimore County, Md., Police Department has established a special Spousal Abuse Unit within the criminal investigation division that conducts follow-up probes after domestic violence incidents. It reviews all cases, keeps a repeat offenders file, alerts police precincts about violent households in their areas and coordinates with local prosecutors.

The Denver Police Department revamped its policies to place increased emphasis on vigorously investigating domestic violence cases. The Minnesota Department of Corrections, meanwhile, receives reports on battering incidents from shelter programs, medical professionals and human service professionals as well as police.

In Westchester County, N.Y., San Francisco, and some other areas, prosecutors have established a special staff unit to handle domestic violence cases.

Basic military training at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, he will receive training in the Electronics specialty. He is a 1982 graduate of Jerome High School.

2 Utah range fires out

RICHFIELD, Utah (AP) — Earlier in the day, light rain fell on Monday extinguished two western Utah range fires that together blackened more than 40,000 acres of grassland over the weekend, authorities said.

"As of 1 p.m. (MDT), both the Twin Peaks and Wide Canyon fires were declared out," said Bureau of Land Management spokesman Bert Hart. "The troops have been moved off the fires and are heading home."

The Twin Peaks fire, about 15 miles north of Richfield, burned some 36,000 acres before firefighters contained it late Saturday. No injuries were reported, and the blaze was declared under control late Sunday, when a seven-man crew battled it.

NFL to give compulsory drug tests

By EDSCHUYLER JR.
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A drug program that includes mandatory random testing for National Football League players during the season will begin with 1986 training camp physicals this month, Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Monday.

The National Football League Players Association in Washington said it will not accept the program because it represents an unauthorized change in the current collective bargaining agreement.

The league and team management will get involved only when a player is hospitalized for a substance abuse problem, according to Rozelle. Any player requiring hospitalization for substance abuse will be removed from the team's roster for 30 days and will receive 50 percent of his pay for that period. A second hospitalization would mean removal from the roster for 30 days with no pay. If the player relapses and tests positive again, he will be permanently banned from the NFL.

"I feel the collective bargaining agreement and the by-laws give me the obligation and the authority to protect the health and welfare of the players and to preserve the public confidence in the NFL," Rozelle said.

He said he derived his authority from Article 8.13 (A) of the NFL Constitution and Bylaws article VIII of the Collective Bargaining Agreement.

A release from the NFL said Article 8.13 (A) gives Rozelle power to impose discipline for "conduct detrimental to the welfare of the league or professional football" and Article VIII concerns "conduct detrimental to the integrity of, or public confidence in, the game of professional football."

"I would have much preferred that management and the players reach agreement on it than to act independently," Rozelle said at a news conference where he unveiled a seven-point drug program of testing, education and discipline, which would cost an estimated $1 million annually.

Rozelle said he notified the 28 club owners Monday by electric mail.

In a statement, released in Washington, Gene Upshaw, president of the NFLPA said the union would be willing to meet with Jack Donnan, executive director of the NFL Management Council, to discuss possible changes in the current drug-testing program.

"But we simply cannot agree that Rozelle has the authority to unilaterally change the terms of our agreement," Upshaw said. "The agreement reached in 1982 is final and binding on all parties, and its terms cannot be changed in mid-term without consent."

The NFLPA has scheduled a news conference at its western office in San Francisco at noon MDT today.

"From a medical perspective I don't know how there can be a challenge," said Dr. Forest Tennant, Jr., a recognized expert in the field of chemical-dependency treatment, who was named by Rozelle as NFL drug advisor and placed in charge of the program.

NFL players "fit the target group" for drugs in age, money and time (the off-season is about six months), Rozelle said.

"You have to find out if there is a problem before you can stop a major problem from developing," reasoned Rozelle. "You need testing."

Rozelle's announcement came within days of two cocaine-induced deaths of sports stars. Maryland All-American basketball player Len Bias died of cocaine intoxication on June 19. Eight days later, Cleveland Browns defensive back Don Rogers died of a cocaine overdose. Bias was 22, Rogers 23.

"I don't see that those tragic deaths caused us to meet today," Rozelle said, referring to Bias and Rogers.

"I announced in March that I would implement a stronger policy if the management council and the players association could not come to some sort of agreement.

"Certainly those deaths made this timely."

One point in the program will require more frequent urine testing, including two unscheduled tests during the regular season for every player in the league.

Upshaw noted the current drug program negotiated in 1982 calls for a mandatory test before the season and an extensive drug counseling program. The NFL is the only professional sport that requires mandatory testing, Upshaw added.

"Rozelle said a ban of a player would not necessarily be permanent. 'I wouldn't say they are banned forever,'" Rozelle said, adding he would review each individual case

The summer game?

Royals lose their 10th straight game

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — When Baltimore's Mike Boddicker faced the Kansas City Royals on Monday night, one miserable losing streak had to give.

It was Boddicker's. The right-hander, who had dropped his three previous decisions, allowed eight hits and struck out five in leading the Orioles to an 8-1 conquest of the staggering world champion Royals, who lost their 10th consecutive game.

"Maybe Boddicker's going to get on a good streak again like he was at the beginning of the year," Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver said. "It was a typical Mike Boddicker outing — very well-pitched."

More baseball — C2

It was not a happy homecoming for the Royals, who set a club record by going 0-9 on a road trip to Minnesota, Seattle and Cleveland.

"It was just another game like the last 10," Manager Dick Howser said. "We didn't hit well or pitch well. About the only thing we didn't do was kick it around defensively. But it will come around for us. Maybe it will be tomorrow night."

Baltimore's Cal Ripken hit a home run, a double and two singles while Fred Lynn had a homer to go with his two singles and Floyd Rayford also homered.

The only run off Boddicker, 11-4, came on Steve Balboni's 37th homer in the fifth after the Orioles had taken a 5-0 lead against Charlie Leibrandt, 8-6.

Rayford, just recalled from the minors, hit his second home run of the season leading off the third inning and the Oriole scored three times in the fourth.

Lynn singled leading off the inning and Ripken followed with his 12th homer. The Orioles then loaded the bases on walks to Juan Beniquez and Rick Dempsey and Mike Young's bunt single.

The comeback kids

Giants rose to first after they fired most high-paid veterans . . .

By STEVE WILSTEIN
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — It's a little early to compare the resurgent San Francisco Giants to the Miracle Mets of 1969, but look at the standings.

It's the end of June, nearly mid-season, and the Giants have been at or near the top of the National League West every step of the way.

When was the last time an NL team lost 100 games or finished in the cellar one year and won a pennant the next?

Hint: It wasn't the New York Mets, who finished next-to-last in 1969.

Answer: It never happened. (For trivia buffs, in 1890 Louisville won the pennant in the American Association, then the second major league, after finishing last, 66½ games out, with a 27-111 record the year before.)

It may not happen this summer, but don't tell that to the Gee Whiz Kids on the Giants. They believe in miracles, and so do their fans, who are setting a record for sending telegrams and letters.

"I've watched the Giants for 25 years, and I remember the glory days," said Tim Walton, 34, of Fremont. "This is a glory team, this is a team that has restored the love of baseball in the Bay area. To be able to say they may go all the way, that is amazing. Now the fans are coming out of the closet. My wife is obsessed, driving down the highway, listening to the games and screaming 'Go Giants!'"

There's still a lot of baseball left, plenty of time for the bubble to burst, but the Giants are undaunted.

"We're going to win this thing," pitcher Mike Krukow said. "If people think we're just a fluke and take us lightly, that's good. I hope they take us lightly the whole year."

This time last summer, the Giants were in last place, 18 games behind division-leading San Diego, and grumbling on the way to their worst season ever while playing to empty seats.

"We were a bad movie last year," Krukow said. "I wouldn't have paid to see us play. Nobody wants to watch crummy baseball and that's what we showed them. This year, the fans are not only coming out to the ballpark, they're psyched up in the communities, too. Giants fever is contagious."

Fifth-year catcher Bob Brenly noted "with a grin" that: "In the past, it wasn't always the proper thing to walk into a restaurant and say you play with the Giants and hope to get a good table. They'd stick you in the kitchen. This year we get better seats."

The players got charged up when bundle after bundle of telegrams from fans were delivered to the team during a recent trip to Houston. At Candlestick Park, no one talks about the wind and cold anymore and the average attendance has leaped to 20,000 from 13,000 at this point last year.

Veterans like Krukow, Brenly, pitcher Vida Blue, and hard-hitting outfielders Jeff Leonard and Chili Davis are as hungry as the fans after years of suffering.

But rookies don't know the hard times, and this team is full of players who dropped through the fog from Phoenix and began playing, as Brenly said, "like they were born to the job."

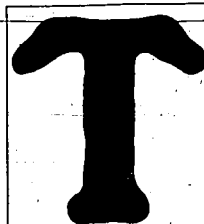

At times there have been as many as six rookies in the lineup. They heard new Manager Roger Craig tell them in spring training that they could win the division this year and they believed him, no matter how hard skeptics laughed.

"A lot of people talked about how young we were and said we were going to be in the cellar," rookie second baseman Rob Thompson said. "They were saying our double-play combination wasn't any good and we had a long way to go. But we fooled them all."

. . . but in Texas, the youth movement began in front office

By ALAN SAYRE
The Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — Tom Grievie wasn't sure what he would do when his baseball playing days ended. Get his math degree? Coach? Go into business?

Bobby Valentine knew what he wanted to do all along — manage a major-league team.

Little did they know they would cross paths, again, in Texas, where Valentine is managing the surprising Rangers and Grievie is the team's vice president-general manager.

The former New York Mets teammates even mesh perfectly with their young roster of players: Valentine, 36, and Grievie, 38, are the youngest management team in the majors today.

"They're two young, aggressive baseball people, maybe years ahead of their age," said Tim Foll, in his first season as the Rangers' third-base coach after a 14-year playing career. "They seem to sense the whole picture, what needs to be done," he said.

What needed to be done was a pretty tall order: move from last season's last-place finish — 20½ games behind — in the American League West to a more respectable spot.

So far, so good. The club that left spring training merely hoping to be the best, improved team has been sitting near or atop the division since the season started.

The youth movement in the Rangers' front office, has also extended to the field.

Ed Correa, at 20 years old, is the youngest player in the majors and has flashed signs of brilliance including a three-hit shutout over the Yankees on May 7.

Pitchers Jose Guzman, 23, and Mitch Williams, 22, have also contributed heavily to the Rangers' rise. Last season the pitching staff finished with a 4.56 earned run average, but has kept to about 4.00 in 1986.

One of the most talked about rookies this year has been outfielder Pete Incaviglia, who spent 1985 with Oklahoma State, where he hit an NCAA-record 48 homers.

Incaviglia got off to a slow start, batting below .200, but has since lifted his average to over .260 and . . .

Raines, Jax move into all-star slots

NEW YORK (AP) — Tim Lincecum of the Montreal Expos has moved ahead of Tony Gwynn of the San Diego Padres in the voting for the third starting National League outfield position in major league baseball's All-Star Game, the commissioner's office announced Monday.

The starting lineup for the National League will be announced Wednesday at 6 p.m. with the American League starters being announced Thursday at 6 a.m.

Raines trailed Gwynn by more than 74,000 votes after last week's tabulations, but moved ahead of the Padres' outfielder, 893, 823 to 796,557 this week.

All-star voting — C2

New York Mets right fielder Darryl Strawberry, who leads all National League players with 1,366,374 votes with one more announcement of voting remaining, is ahead of Dale Murphy of Atlanta, who has 1,080,292 votes.

In the American League, Baltimore Orioles shortstop Cal Ripken leads all vote-getters with 1,285,424.

In the AL, California Angels outfielder Reggie Jackson has extended his lead slightly over Kirby Puckett of the Minnesota Twins for the third starting spot.

Jackson had less than a 1,000-vote lead over Puckett after last week's voting, but has increased that to 7,000.

Rickey Henderson and Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees are running No. 1 and No. 2 for the outfield positions.

Lance Parrish of the Detroit Tigers leads all catchers with 902,925 ballots. California Angels rookie first baseman Wally Joyner has a better than 100,000-vote advantage over the New York Yankees' Don Mattingly.

Joyner breaks world heptathlon record

By BERT ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Jackie Joyner put together a series of remarkable performances and shattered the world record in the heptathlon by more than 200 points with the first 7,000-point total in history at the Goodwill Games Monday.

Joyner's performance highlighted another big day for American athletes at the multi-sport festival. Americans took the lead in the gold-medal count from the Soviet Union, 22-1.

Swimmer Sean Killion of Cherry Hill, N.J., beat former world record-holder Vladimir Salnikov of the Soviet Union in the men's 400-meter freestyle, and Angel Myers of Americas, Ga., and Furman University, won her third and fourth gold medals.

Off the field, the U.S. Defense Department barred three more athletes who are members of the military from participating in the games, bringing the number of banned athletes to 12, American organizers said.

But a Soviet official said the latest announced ban applied to eight Americans and that a total of 13 boxers were not participating.

A spokesman for Turner Broadcasting System, which is co-sponsoring the games with the Soviets, said the Defense Department has applied to nine boxers, a boxing coach, a manager and a doctor, as well as two team handball players and a competitor in modern pentathlon.

The first group of 15 boxers arrived Monday. The nine substitutes are scheduled to arrive Wednesday. Joyner, a 24-year-old from East St. Louis, Ill., compiled 7,148 points in the two-day, seven-event competition.

"I like to compete against the best, and when I perform, I like to do my best," she said.

Joyner, the world's third-ranked heptathlete, certainly competed against the best. Her opponents included four of the other top six heptathletes, including world record-holder Sabine Paetz of East Germany and No. 1-ranked Jane Frederick of the U.S.

"Coming into this competition, I had set goals for myself," Joyner said. "I realized that the competition was out there, but my competition was against the scoreboard. I just concentrated on what I had to do."

Joyner concentrated so well that, in addition to the overall world record, she set a first-day world record with 4,151 points, a world record in the heptathlon long jump of 22 feet, an American heptathlon record in the 100-meter high hurdles of 12.85 seconds and five personal bests. Runnerup Sybille Thiele of East Germany, ranked No. 6, finished second with 6,635 points. Natalya Shubenkova of the Soviet Union, ranked fifth, was third with 6,631 points.

"I've got to read about it to believe," said her coach and husband, Bob Kersee. "I saw it, but I don't believe it yet. She's an amazing athlete. She's very blessed and very talented."

Paetz, who had set the world record of 6,945 points in 1984, placed fourth with 6,456 points. Frederick failed to finish, dropping out after the sixth event with a back injury.

Joyner is the first American woman to hold a world record in a multi-sport competition since the late Babe Didrikson, the star of the 1932 Olympic Games, set the triathlon mark more than 50 years ago. The triathlon then consisted of the 100-meter dash, high jump and javelin throw.

Joyner's gold medal was one of four earned by the United States in the 12-event track and field program. The Americans also collected six golds in eight events on the final day of swimming and finished the competition with 15 golds and 49 medals, a tremendous feat for a "second-string" team. The top U.S. swimmers are preparing for the world championships.

Overall, the Soviets have 69 medals, the United States 63.

In a stunning upset in the pool, Killion beat Salnikov in the men's 400-meter freestyle in 3 minutes, 51.91 seconds.

"I didn't think I could beat Salnikov," Killion said. "He is the best distance man around. I just wanted to give him a race, but when I saw I could win, I just closed my eyes and pressed hard."

Salnikov, the former world record-holder in the event, was limited in 3:52.00.

Myers finished as the biggest winner in the pool, capturing her third and fourth gold medals to go along with one bronze.

Myers won the women's 100-meter freestyle in 56.48 and swam a leg on the winning U.S. 400-meter medley relay team, timed in 4:12.54.

The Soviets, featuring their best swimmers at the game, wound up with 39 swimming medals, including 13 golds.

Meanwhile, the United States and Soviet women's basketball teams continued the road toward a showdown in Thursday night's final game of the round-robin tournament, each undefeated team posting its third victory.

The Americans, with Cheryl Miller leading the way for the third time, defeated Czechoslovakia 78-70. Miller scored 20 points, while 6-foot-8 Anne Donovan added 15.

The Soviets overpowered Bulgaria 82-56, while Brazil downed Yugoslavia 79-65 in the other game.

Joyner began her sensational series with her American record in the hurdles. She followed with a personal best of 6 feet, 2 inches in the high jump, 48 feet, 5 1/2 inches in the shot put and a personal best 23.00 seconds in the 200 meters.

On Monday, she opened with the heptathlon world record in the long jump, threw the javelin a personal best 163.4 and completed the run in to the record books with a 2-minute, 10.02-second clocking, her second-fastest ever, in the 800 meters.

Cowboys lose to Colorado club in Price

By The Times-News

PRICE, Utah — Cherry Creek pushed across three runs in bottom of the fifth inning and reliever Steve Snow made that margin stand up through the next two innings as the suburban Denver ballclub defeated Twin Falls 10-7 here Sunday in the consolation round of the First International American Legion Baseball Tournament.

The loss left Twin Falls with a 2-2 tournament record and gave the Cowboys' season mark of 11-16 pending a Wednesday afternoon Southern Region "A" contest against Minico in Rupert.

The Cowboys had tied the game in the top of the fifth with two runs. Rob Ellis singled and stole second and Mike Buster walked. Shane Clark laid-down a sacrifice bunt to move both runners along, and Ellis scored on a passed ball that moved Buster to third base. Snow, who had come on in relief of starting Bruce Goldman in the fourth inning, then loaded the bases with walks and forced in Buster when he walked Nick Baumert.

Cherry Creek had taken a 3-0 lead in the first inning, which the Cowboys erased with three runs of their own in the top of the second. Barry Williams singled and Barry Smith reached base on a fielder's choice. John Hayes sacrificed the runners along and Nick Baumert followed with a three-run homer, the first of two he hit in the game.

Cherry Creek made it 6-3 in the bottom of the inning, but the Cowboys cut the deficit to two runs in the top of the third when Kevin Ames singled, stole second and scored on an RBI single.

The Colorado ballclub scored a run in bottom of the inning, but the Cowboys again cut the margin to two runs, at 7-5, with Baumert's one-run homer with two outs.

After the Cowboys scored twice in the fifth, Cherry Creek pushed across three runs in the bottom of the frame to put the game away.

For the game, Baumert was 2-for-3 at the plate with four RBIs, while Ellis was 2-for-4.

Baumert, Ames and catcher Casey Bartholomew were chosen to the all-tournament team.

The Cowboys are scheduled to participate in the Rebel Invitational Tournament in Pocatello Friday, Saturday and Sunday, part of a field that will also include regional foes Pocatello and Idaho Falls.

Market suffers a record 1-day drop

By CHET CURRIER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market took a steep drop Monday, sending the Dow Jones average to a record point loss in selling touched off by economic worries and bearish statements by some prominent analysts.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial fell 61.87 to 1,839.00, exceeding its previous record point loss of 45.75 points on June 9 of this year.

Far greater percentage declines have occurred in the past, when the average was at low levels. Monday's drop of 3.25 percent was barely one-fourth the size of the 12.9 percent loss the average suffered on Oct. 28, 1929.

But that was small consolation to traders counting up their losses after a decline that extended into all major stock groups.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 138.23 million shares, against 108.26 million last Thursday.

Analysts said traders returned from the long July 4 weekend in an uneasy mood over evidence of continuing weakness in the economy.

A monthly survey conducted by the National Association of Purchasing Management found declines last month in production, employment and new orders. The trade group's composite index recorded its sharpest drop in nearly 2 1/2 years.

For much of the time lately, brokers have been talking of sluggish business activity as a plus for the market, in the sense that it seems to increase the likelihood of another cut in the Federal Reserve's discount rate.

But by Monday observers said concern was mounting that a discount-rate cut had already been so widely forecast that the prospect had been fully taken into account by the market.

Adding to the market's weakness was the news that two well-known analysts — John Mendelson of Dean Witter Reynolds and Robert Prechter, publisher of an investment advisory service — had turned negative on the outlook for stocks.

Four times previously since the start of 1986, the Dow has posted single-day losses of 2 percent or more. On each of those occasions, the market snapped back quickly to move on to new highs. But analysts said the damage, on first inspection, looked a little more severe this time.

Profit-taking was evident in some stocks that have been strong lately, including Federated Department Stores, down 3 1/4 at 83 3/4; ITT Corp., down 3 1/4 at 55; Coca-Cola, down 2 1/4 at 41; and Philip Morris, down 5 1/4 at 71.

Other losers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, off 3 1/4 at 145 1/4; General Electric, off 3 1/4 at 76 1/4; and Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing, off 1/2 at 108 1/2.

Radice Corp. was the day's biggest percentage loser among NYSE issues, down 2 1/4 at 10. The company said it had an unexpected loss for the fiscal year ended June 30.

In the daily tally on the Big Board, declining issues outnumbered advances by nearly 6 to 1. The Dow Jones's composite index dropped 4.24 to 140.43.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 182.24 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial fell 9.57 to 271.51, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 7.74 at 244.05.

The NASDAQ market index for the over-the-counter market tumbled to 10.20 to 490.96. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 276.71, down 7.88.

Battle of the brewers

By BART ZIEGLER
The Associated Press

BOSTON — A tiny Boston beer company is taking on two giant international brewers, claiming the tip: European imported beers couldn't be sold in West Germany because they don't meet that nation's beer purity law.

In a series of radio and newspaper ads, Boston Beer Co. has challenged the quality of the Beck's, St. Pauli Girl and Heineken beers sold in this country.

Beck and Co. of Bremen, West Germany, which brews Beck's and export-only St. Pauli Girl, denies the claim. Netherlands-based Heineken, brewer of the No. 1 import, acknowledged that its contains corn and they don't try to sell it in West Germany, according to the Boston Business Journal.

James Koch of the Boston Beer Company displays his challenging special brew

The guy said "That's where the white sugar comes in," Koch said. Koch also said he had a Cambridge laboratory test export Beck's and that it found some type of refined sugar or starch, which would be a violation of the West German purity law.

Schwalm said Beck's had two West German labs. Koch said Beck's last month and both found it as the purity law.

As for Samuel Adams, the brew named for the Boston revolutionary won first place at the Great American Beer Festival in Denver two months after its introduction last year.

Koch, 37, the sixth consecutive oldest son in his family to become a brewmaster, has been selling 1,500 to 2,000 barrels a month in New England and recently in Washington, D.C. area.

He said he hopes to make Sam Adams truly a Boston beer next year by opening his own brewery.

"It's sort of common knowledge among brewers that the beers are doctored," said James Koch, whose company began selling Samuel Adams beer a little more than a year ago. "If you're going to bring beer from that far away and have it drinkable, you've got to do something to stabilize it."

Koch even bases in the ads that Samuel Adams is the only American beer to pass the purity law and be sold in West Germany, albeit in small quantities.

"The German purity law is very simple. It says that if it's beer it can have only four things: water, yeast, malt and hops. That's all my beer has in it," said the former management consultant.

The people who distribute Beck's, the No. 3 imported beer in the United States, don't find Koch's ads very funny.

They note that he has a secret of his own: Samuel Adams is brewed under contract in Pittsburgh, not in Boston. Koch says it's made to his own family recipe.

"I think it's an effort on his part to build his brand up by basking in the sun," said Thomas Schwalm, vice president of sales and marketing for the importer, Dribble Inc. of Greenwich, Conn. He said Beck's asked Koch to stop his false advertising.

Koch's $100,000 ad campaign recently ended, but he says it was for a lack of money, not out of a fear of a suit.

"If I were wrong, do you think they would let me get away (with) saying there's something fishy in their beer? They'd squash me like a bug," he said.

Koch said he has proof that Beck's ads sugar to the beer it exports. He said he sent a German brewmaster on a tour of Beck's brewery, and that the visiting expert asked about a pipe connected to a brewing kettle.

FTC targets limited hours in showrooms

Detroit dealers hit for running a 'conspiracy'

By NANCY BENAC
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Trade Commission is out to bust a trade union — Detroit's auto dealers that it says makes the Motor City the hardest place in the nation to buy a new car on a Saturday.

Commission law judge James Timony is scheduled to convene a trial Thursday on FTC charges that Detroit area dealers have illegally collaborated to limit their night and weekend sales hours, making it harder for customers to shop around for a good deal.

"FTC court documents call it a 'conspiracy' — enforced through threats and violence against maverick dealers who try to offer expanded operating hours."

The dealers, meanwhile, maintain that their unusual hours — which leave most showrooms dark all weekend and after 6 p.m. on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays — were instituted to keep salespeople from unionizing.

The dealers say in their court papers that they adopted "parallel policies" to preserve labor peace, and that consumers haven't suffered because of it.

The FTC filed its complaint against the Detroit dealers in January 1985, naming 115 individuals, 105 dealerships and 19 dealer associations. Its alleged anti-trust violations in dealers limited sales hours and in restricted newspaper advertising of car prices.

The FTC staff has since recommended that 44 parties be dropped from the complaint, and that the advertising charge be dismissed under a consent agreement that bars dealers from making agreements to restrict advertising in the future.

Timony's ruling in the case will stand unless appealed to the five-member Federal Trade Commission for further review. The deal last fall, FTC staff summed up the situation in Detroit as follows:

dealers in the Detroit metropolitan area "it appears that only one domestic dealer and only a handful of import dealers are open on a regular basis on Saturdays, or Tuesday, Wednesday or Friday evenings. Our investigation indicates that Detroit is the only major metropolitan area in the United States in which virtually all automobile dealers are closed for new car sales on Saturdays."

The FTC claims the dealers' arrangement reduces competition by restricting shoppers' ability to look for the best price, and keeps new dealers from attracting business by making themselves available during convenient shopping hours.

Dealers who have attempted to stay open while others are closed "ultimately have been forced to cut back their expanded operating hours as a result of picketing, actual violence, and other forms of harassment carried out primarily by motor vehicle sales people," the FTC claimed in a statement of its findings.

It cited incidents of fire bombings, bullets fired into showrooms, a car driven through a showroom window, damage to cars, telephoned death threats to dealers and their families, and roofing nails strewn on driveways.

The Detroit Auto Dealers Association — maintains that the limited hours were instituted after sales people in the late 1960s and early 1970s became "increasingly vociferous in their demands that they not be forced to work on Saturdays," with many of them displaying "Never on Saturday" bumper stickers.

In 1973, most Detroit dealers began year-round closings on Saturday. Blue laws prevent dealerships from opening on Sundays.

The dealers' association calls the FTC's charges of sanctioned violence "hysterical accusations" about incidents never linked to those named in the complaint.

The dealers also argue that there's no evidence that car prices are any higher in Detroit than elsewhere, and that "two evenings a week is sufficient time for a consumer to compare prices at numerous dealers in a few weeks."

With so many Detroiters directly or indirectly employed by the auto industry, less comparison shopping is needed than in other areas, they said.

Fueled by gas prices, vehicles multiply

Your love affair with your automobile is intensifying, reaching full another peak this summer as millions of us take to the road for vacations and drive at any hour to avoid commuters.

Fueled by a 15 percent drop in gas prices, the mass of cars on the nation's highways will increase 8 percent over last summer, predicts the travel industry.

All these trips to plan, all those travelers checks, all those potential disasters and emergencies — no wonder membership in the nation's more than 100 auto clubs is booming.

We've all heard of the non-profit American Automobile Association. It remains the largest and best-known club with 26.5 million members and 165 of offices around the country. About 41 million motorists belong to one of the clubs, including the AAA. Only 20 of those clubs operate nationwide; the rest do business regionally or within a few states.

than over.

Just about everyone is in on the business: automobile manufacturers, retailers, oil companies.

This spring, Volvo Cars of North America began to include auto club warranties with Amoco as part of the warranty on 1986 cars.

Most of the clubs offer certain basic benefits and covers two adult drivers (or two adults) per household. Expect to pay extra charges for your children.

Annual memberships cost from $25 to $65. That covers the basics; you may pay extra fees for special services.

Annual membership services generally include accident insurance, discounts for lodgings at participating hotels and motels, discount car rentals, travel planning services (including maps and mileage counts) and emergency repairs.

In addition, many clubs offer ball and arrest bonds, free notary service, free or discounted rates for travelers checks, and check cashing services.

Several clubs now offer a feature known as Car/Puter — a new-car pricing service that helps you find a specific car at the best price. You fill out a form, and the system's computer goes to work, searching for a dealer and the best price near you.

If you buy the car at the dealer identified by Car/Puter, you either will get a refund or, if the price of the search deduced from the purchase price, it costs $12.75 at Montgomery Ward's auto club, for example.

What most motorists care about, of course, are the emergency services the clubs provide.

Basically, all clubs will help you out with a tow truck if you get in a jam.

But if you expect free towing, only Amoco and the AAA provide it, as long as you have your car towed to the truck's garage. Otherwise, you probably will have to pay extra, depending on the club's local arrangements and the distance traveled.

The other clubs expect you to make your own arrangements — and that includes paying the bill. The clubs reimburse you for.

Some clubs hold their reimbursements to a small amount — $25 or so for the cost of a tow. The highest seems to be Montgomery Ward, which will pay you back up to $80.

If you own a balky car, or are prone to problems on the road, look for a club with more comprehensive features. You'll need them.

Beware: Before you leave on your summer trip, review the features your auto club membership includes. Your club's services may not transfer into another part of the country, or even into another state. And if you belong to a club that reimburses you only for emergency expenses, bring along extra cash, or leave room available on your credit card — just in case you need a long tow.

Bank sets a location for branch

LAVA HOT SPRINGS (AP) — Security State Bank, a small independent bank based in Mud Lake with about $29 million in assets, has decided to open a branch here by the end of next week, the bank's president says.

The Security State office would fill a void left by the planned July 11 closure of a First Bank & Trust of Idaho branch taken over by Idaho First National Bank.

Idaho First announced earlier that it was closing the former FB&T branches in Lava, Bancroft and Soda Springs, among six banks acquired by IFNB after First Bank and Trust was declared insolvent. The Boise-based Idaho First National chain said it plans to keep three other former First Bank and Trust banks open.

"There is an obvious need in the community for a banking facility with the announced closure by Idaho First National of the community's only bank," said Frank Chadwick, Security State Bank president.

Organized 13 years ago by a group of private individuals, Security State has outlets in Mud Lake, Dubois, Soda Springs, Grace, Arco and Chubbuck. Chadwick said it will not open an office in the ex-FB&T building in Lava, but it will be downtown.

"It is our company's intention to provide the needed service," Chadwick said. "We'll provide most of those things typically performed by an ordinary banking company."

Chadwick estimated that First Bank & Trust's Lava branch had about $3 million in deposits at the time of its closure and said he hopes his new bank office can approach that level.

"We've felt like we've put our best foot forward trying to make good of a poor situation at this point in time. We're certainly hoping now the community will respond by supporting our bank," he said.

The rejuvenated statue of Miss Liberty symbolizes the aspirations and hopes for freedom and prosperity of millions of the poor, the oppressed, the enslaved and the downtrodden. No other nation in history has provided more opportunities for more people than the United States of America and our country continues to be a beacon of hope for millions throughout the world. The critics of our country who "Blame America First" or "Hate America First" for the most outrageous reasons should spend a few years trying to earn a living as internal critics of the governments of the countries where the refugees of this world never choose to go — RUSSIA, CHINA, EAST GERMANY, AFGHANISTAN, NICARAGUA, NORTH KOREA, IRAN, LIBYA to name a few. While Communism, state socialism and Marxist Leninist theory & doctrine may have great appeal to the liberal utopian mind-set (we can take care of you better than you can take care of yourself) intellectuals, the practice of these ideas has only resulted in cruel enslavement of free people of the installation of one despot in place of another. The end result of the communizing of the world may well be a peaceful place for the peacemongers inasmuch as a well run concentration camp will always be very peaceful. The price of liberty continues to be eternal vigilance and strong resolve to defend it. Peace of course may be purchased at a lesser price than freedom. As the anniversary of our country's birth passed by in 1986, Swensen's salute those who have sacrificed to maintain the United States strong and free for over 200 years. We hope it will continue to foster initiative, free enterprise, the pursuit of excellence, and the love of freedom for many years to come. Quality Food at these low prices are only found in the United States of America — AT SWENSEN'S.
