Captain Kangaroo leads call for ban on ads

By RICHARD CARELLI
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congress should ban all cigarette advertising to save lives and protect future generations of Americans from becoming nicotine addicts, a House subcommittee was told Friday.

Captain Kangaroo, Yul Brynner's daughter and the grandson of tobacco magnate R.J. Reynolds joined the medical establishment in endorsing a bill to outlaw all promotion and advertising of tobacco products — in newspapers and magazines, on billboards and as part of sales displays.

The bill also would ban any tobacco company from using a brand name in sponsoring public events such as sports tournaments.

The subcommittee did not hear from Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, a longtime foe of cigarette smoking who supports the advertising ban.

White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan reportedly killed Koop's planned testimony, but a presidential spokesman said Friday that Koop would testify before the subcommittee Aug. 1.

Bob Keeshan, a former smoker and creator of the Captain Kangaroo television character, called tobacco use a threat to the well-being of the nation's youth.

Victoria Brynner, a professional model who lives in Paris, showed the subcommittee a videotaped statement by her actor father before he died of lung cancer last year.

Now being aired, the segment features Brynner saying heavy smoking caused his fatal illness and urging others to stop smoking.

Dr. Charles A. LeMaistre, president of the American Cancer Society, called cigarette smoking "the single most preventable cause of death in the United States."

Representatives of the tobacco and advertising industries are scheduled to testify against the proposed ban at the Aug. 1 hearing.

U.S. and Bolivia conduct first anti-drug raid

By PETER MCFARREN
The Associated Press

LA PAZ, Bolivia — Bolivian police raided and destroyed a jungle laboratory Friday that could produce nearly 3,500 pounds of cocaine a month, Information Minister Herman Antelo reported.

He said the police arrested one man who was caught dismantling the processing equipment and also confiscated an airplane.

Antelo refused to disclose the location of the raid, but the U.S. Bolivian anti-cocaine operation is based in Beni province, the heart of the cocaine industry in northeast Bolivia. He also declined to say how many policemen or helicopters participated in the assault.

U.S. and Bolivian sources said earlier Friday that the anti-cocaine raids had started — four days after some 160 U.S. soldiers, six helicopters and other American equipment began arriving for the joint campaign with Bolivia's anti-narcotics police, the Leopards.

"There was no confrontation of any kind," Antelo told a news conference at the government palace in La Paz. "Not a single shot was fired."

He said the lab was a log-frame, thatched-roof structure designed to blend in with the surrounding grasslands. An adjacent airstrip contained several barrels of kerosene, ether and other chemicals used to process cocaine, he said.

The laboratory had a capacity to produce at least 3,500 pounds of cocaine a month, he said, but no processed drugs were found. "We are talking about a laboratory of great dimensions."

"We do not suppose that there was foreknowledge (of the planned raid) at this particular site," Antelo added.

The operation was launched from the Josuani Ranch, a cattle and farming spread that was operated by a cocaine trafficker and shut down by Bolivian authorities last year, said U.S. and Bolivian sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

According to the sources, the combined strike force established a staging base on the ranch near Santa Ana de Yacuma in Beni province. U.S. officials estimate that nearly half the cocaine reaching the United States and Western Europe originates in Bolivia.

The ranch is about 140 miles northwest of Trinidad, the capital of Beni province and headquarters for the anti-cocaine operation.

Antelo also said the Leopards in recent days had destroyed six cocaine-paste labs and 50 coca-leaf crushing pits in the Chapare region, about 250 miles southeast of La Paz.

Bolivian and U.S. officials have refused to give details of the operation in hopes of gaining an element of surprise. Newspapers began reporting on the operation Tuesday, however, and it is widely suspected that many traffickers were packing up their operations and leaving.

Federal police in neighboring Brazil reinforced the border to prevent traffickers from crossing it. A Colombian anti-narcotics officer said privately that the campaign against coca cultivation in Bolivia probably will create more in his country and Peru.

Pregnant women not receiving care

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Pregnant women in the Burley area are being turned away by doctors no longer able to treat them because of malpractice insurance limits, and health officials are calling the situation a "crisis."

"We're in an untenable situation," said Dr. Daniel Henrie, a Burley family physician who was forced to limit his practice beginning July 1. "I've already had to turn away people. It's very frustrating."

Added Henrie, "I'm past the point of anger. Now I'm just depressed."

Henrie and seven other Burley-area family physicians were given a choice by their insurance company, CNA, one of the few companies that still writes malpractice insurance: pay double or triple the medical malpractice insurance rates, or limit coverage to 40 procedures a year, which includes some surgical procedures as well as deliveries.

Two physicians decided to pay the higher rate for unlimited coverage. Six other physicians, including Henrie, reluctantly chose to limit their practice, meaning they will be able to care for 240 women if they all just do deliveries. In 1984, there were 840 births in the Middoka-Cassia area, according to Vital Statistics.

Currently, the problem appears limited to Burley. Attempts to con-fact the Idaho Medical Association to see if the problem was more widespread were unsuccessful.

A lawyer with the Chicago office of the American Medical Association, B.J. Anderson, said on Thursday the limited coverage angle was a new twist for insurance companies.

"I'm not aware of that occurring in any other parts of the country," said Anderson.

However, Anderson added it was not unique for both family physicians and obstetrics physicians to stop treating pregnant women.

"In rural America, it's becoming more and more difficult for a woman to find a physician," said Anderson. "Some women are having to travel 150 miles."

A survey by an OB-GYN association found that in Nevada, 40 percent of family physicians and OB doctors were getting out of the baby business; in Arizona, it was 35 percent, and in California, it was 23 percent.

The situation already is proving a nightmare to expectant mothers. And both health and insurance officials say there is no immediate solution other than the women showing limited to Burley. Attempts to con-

Videos show icicles of iron grip liner

By ARLENE LEVINSON
The Associated Press

WOODS HOLE, Mass. — Videotapes of the Titanic released Friday evening showed parts of the luxury liner sheathed in icicles of iron and an encrusted crystal chandelier, hanging slightly askew inside the dead ship.

The researchers from Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, co-sponsor of the Titanic expedition, also said they had found several safes from the wreck, which rests more than two miles beneath the surface of the sea.

"It's been transformed into another ship," said expedition leader Robert Ballard. "It has the vestiges of the Titanic, but it's now a ship of the deep."

Ballard narrated part of the three minute, 10 second videotape shot by a remote-controlled robot, describing the underwater views of a porthole, and the coral- and rust-encrusted bow and promenade.

"Coming up the side of the ship you can see these iron-ricicles that hang down like giant icicles of rust," he said. "I can see the promenade, looking into the promenade windows, and rising up to the deck above, and overhead a lifeboat davit with its block as we disturb these rust-icicles and they fall down like a rain of iron."

Officials at Woods Hole also showed reporters 12 color slides taken by the researchers, including one looking down the opening of the ship's grand staircase.

Other slides, which like the videotape were crisp in clarity, showed the hull of the Titanic buried in sand with a lone porthole above the seabed; a shot of where the stern was ripped from the front of the ship; its surface caked with layers of rust; and an anchor and chain that appeared to be hanging from the side of the ship.

The researchers said they had seen enough of the sunken luxury liner to conclude they would find no remains of the 1,513 victims.

"It's almost like going to a museum? If we were ever going to see any human remains, we would have seen them," said Ballard, adding that he was relieved there were no remains.

Ballard and two crew members in a submersible craft 450 miles off Newfoundland on Friday viewed the debris left when the ship struck bottom and the stern broke into pieces 74 years ago.

The stern was "just a tremendous twisted pile of wreckage," Ballard said.

"One of the safes found" had a big handle, bronze, or gold ... and some British crest," Ballard said. "They (the handles) were polished clean. We went over to one with a big handle but it didn't open."

"I'm very convinced now that no attempt would ever be made to try to salvage the ship itself," Ballard said Friday. "It's buried deep in the bottom. The bow section is 30 to 40 feet in to the bottom all the way up to the base of the anchors."

The slides and the three- to five-minute long videotape were flown from the Atlantis II, • See TITANIC on Page A2

Woman suspect in Jerome shooting arrested in California

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — A woman wanted in connection with a double shooting in Jerome last Oct. 10 was arrested on a warrant from Jerome County late Friday and was being held in Sacramento County, Calif., jail.

Jerome County Sheriff Eliza Hall said he was notified after 5:30 p.m. Friday by California authorities that Mary Susanne Workman, 39, had been "picked up" by fall authorities there and was being held without bond for Jerome authorities. The caller stated Workman indicated she is willing to waive extradition and return to Idaho.

Hall and the Times-News were unable to obtain additional details of the arrest Friday night because of telephone communication problems in Sacramento. Hall said he is tentatively planning to go after the woman on Wednesday. She is wanted in connection with the deaths of her step-father and mother, John Slater and Pauline Slater, who were shot to death in their mobile home last fall.

A Jerome County coroner's jury ruled Friday afternoon that the Slaters both died by criminal means and that Mrs. Slater's daughter, Mary Susanne Workman, was "most probably" responsible for both gunshot wounds.

The six-member jury returned the verdict about three hours after retiring to deliberate two days of testimony in the inquest. As a result of the verdict, a warrant was issued for the arrest of Workman, 39, who was believed living in Sacramento. A request for assistance from Sacramento authorities was immediately teletyped to that area. Hall said he understood a residence where the woman was residing had been surrounded by

Sacramento officers and the arrested made. Slater, 81, and his wife Pauline, 68, died of cancer patient, was found dead in the bedroom of the couple's trailer home. Slater was found lying on a bullet wound to the head on a living-room sofa. Officers at first believed the shootings to be a murder-

"I see this basically as a mandate to prosecute, so that is what I am going to do," Jerome County Prosecutor Mark Gause said of the verdict. He said it was unanimous by the six-member jury.

Gause said no decision has been made as to the charge that will be filed against the woman.

"In a criminal death," he added, "there can only be three types of charges: a first-degree murder, a second-degree murder or manslaughter."

He explained that Idaho law says that in the event of such a verdict by a coroner's jury, the coroner is to be directed to issue an arrest warrant, and he said he directed the coroner to carry out his responsibility under the law.

Sponsors plan to restore bite in Gramm-Rudman measure

By STEVEN KOMAROW
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The sponsors of the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law Friday announced plans to put teeth back into the measure by replacing the automatic spending-cut provision ruled unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

"We got a flat tire on the way to the Supreme Court, and we're fixing the tire that's all," said Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D.

S.C., at a press conference with Sens. Phil Gramm, R-Texas and Warren Rudman, R-N.H.

"This bill... must have an action-forcing mechanism," said Rudman. "I think the economy is imperiled right now by these $200 billion-a-year deficits."

The three lawmakers said they were confident Congress would approve their plan to fund the director of the Office of Management and Budget the power to order across-the-board spending cuts. Those cuts are required when Congress and the president fail to meet deficit targets in the law, which is designed to balance the budget by fiscal 1991.

Using an executive branch officer to order the cuts would address the court's main objection to the original law, the senators said.

At the White House, deputy secretary Albert R. B. Gattuso said the administration was interested and said the administration's initial reaction was favorable. But he cautioned that further study was required to determine whether it would meet the high court's constitutional test.

In its ruling, the Supreme Court said the Gramm-Rudman law violated the Constitution's separation of powers doctrine because an officer of Congress — the comptroller general — ordered the executive branch to make the cuts.

The lawmakers said they rejected one possible legal remedy, to change current law so the comptroller general could be fired by the president. "Too many lawmakers objected to that, since the comptroller heads the General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress, they said.

Their proposal would be offered as an amendment to a bill to raise the national debt ceiling, which could be taken up in the Senate before the end of next week, they said.

The court ruling invalidated only the automatic cuts in Gramm-Rudman, and the rest of the law remains in effect.

up ready to deliver at hospital emergency rooms.

Just this week in Twin Falls, a young pregnant woman began bleeding, indicating she may have been ready to miscarry, but she could find no one who would or could treat her because of the limitations, said Paul Bean, a registered nurse and coordinator of Family Planning with the Health Department.

The kicker, said Henrie, was not just the skyrocketing cost of malpractice. It was also the anticipated cost of what is called the fall — a premium charged by insurance companies to physicians for retiring or stopping certain procedures.

The talk works this way. If Henrie had renewed his malpractice insurance this year, at triple the premium, and then decided next year he could no longer afford to deliver any babies, he would have had to pay the insurance company close to $100,000 to get out of the baby-delivering business.

The fall covers the physician for the next 18 years because under the law, parents may sue physicians for malpractice up to 18 years after the child's birth.

The situation is squeezing family physicians out of not only obstetrics, but also minor surgical procedures, such as tonsillectomies.

In 1985, Henrie delivered 66 babies and performed that many tonsillectomies. This year, he will be limited to delivering 40 babies, and he decided to quit doing tonsillectomies.

Dick Cook, with the Idaho Insurance Commission, said on Thursday his office had not been notified either by doctors or insurance companies of the limited coverage.

Coroner Gerald Oster said late Friday that the felony warrant has been signed — almost immediately after the verdict was announced.

The National Crime Information Center was also alerted.

Oster said he expected Workman to be told of the verdict within minutes after it was announced and he was concerned that she would be found so quickly.

Workman's daughter, Janet Robinette, said on the witness stand Friday that she had talked with her mother Thursday night and Workman was in the process of moving.

Reid testified that he made no such statement and explained in detail the explanation he gave Mrs. Robinette about accepting service of the papers. Her husband Ken, who was not able to appear Thursday, took the stand Friday to tell of events on the night of the double shooting.

He said the couple left two insurance policies with Mrs. Workman as beneficiary for $5,000 each, plus some smaller policies. All are in the hands of attorneys and the estate has not been settled, he said.

In summing up the testimony and evidence in the case, Gause told the jurors: "It is true—the police made some errors in their investigation, but they did a lot of things right. We have a gun with no fingerprints and we don't know if we ever would have found prints. We also have no evidence of gunpowder, since no immediate tests were made of the hands of the victims, Mrs. Workman or others who might have fired a gun."

However, Gause said, police have been able to locate a prime witness, Cochran, and have traced his trip through California, verifying the stops that Cochran said he and Mrs. Workman made after the shootings.

Gause reminded the jurors that trials cost county taxpayers a lot of money, and said before they "put the taxpayers to that expense and the state and me to that much work, you should be positive that testimony you have heard here is sufficient to prove guilt beyond a doubt."

Gause said later he felt the verdict was a fair one and that the jury did a good job of sifting through testimony and statements.

Parents drop court battle

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A group of parents who fought to keep 14-year-old AIDS victim Ryan-White out of school has decided to end its battle, the group's attorney said Friday.

Plans were being by school officials one year ago from attending classes at Western Middle School in suburban Kokomo because of fears that the disease could be transmitted. He monitored classes during much of the past school year from his home via a telephone hook-up.

Nixon meets with Gorbachev

MOSCOW (AP) — Richard M. Nixon and Mikhail S. Gorbachev had a long talk about U.S.-Soviet relations Friday near the end of a private visit by the former president that coincides with diplomatic efforts to schedule a summit.

A senior diplomatic source said the two countries were "looking forward" to a September meeting of high-ranking ministers to prepare for the second summit between Soviet leader Gorbachev and President Reagan. They agreed in Geneva last November to meet this year in the United States.

Jetliners avert collision

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — Two jets with a total of 266 people aboard tried to land on the same runway at the same time, coming within 100 to 200 feet of each other, officials said Friday.

"One was virtually on top of the other," said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Mitch Barker.

A collision was averted when the American Airlines jet asked to switch runways and landed safely, he said. The Mexicana Airlines jet then made a second approach and also landed safely.

Refuse workers will return

By The Associated Press

Philadelphia's sanitation workers agreed to return to work Friday after they were found in contempt for defying an order to start picking up garbage, while a judge in Detroit refused that city's request to order all 7,000 strikers back to work.

In Pittsburgh, meanwhile, union officials said a garbage workers strike was possible if no settlement is reached when the current contract extension expires at midnight Monday. City officials, however, said they'd expect a walkout.

Researchers had hoped to look Thursday at the spot where the ship broke apart, but their work was hampered by strong currents that prevented a camera-equipped robot, Jason Jr., which operates on a tether from Alvin, the submersible, from getting close to the thsibe.

But as the exploration reached its halfway point Friday, Woods Hole

She said the ship is only scheduled to spend 12 days at the Titanic site no matter what the water conditions and must return to shore on July 22.

Wide gap separates rich, poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau, in its first assessment of wealth in America, said Friday that the top 12 percent of American families control almost 40 percent of household wealth, while the typical black family has less than one-tenth of the assets of a white family.

The report showed a wide gap between the wealthiest families and the poorest, with the two groups differing significantly in terms of race and education.

The study said that the typical American family had a net worth of $32,667 when the statistics were gathered in late 1984, with by far the biggest portion of this wealth, 41 percent, accounted for by equity in a home.

Another 17 percent of the median family's net worth was deposited in interest-bearing accounts in banks and other financial institutions while stocks and mutual funds accounted for 7 percent of total household wealth.

The study found that the typical black household had a net worth of just $3,397, less than one-tenth of the typical white family, which had a median net worth of $39,135. Hispanic families fared only slightly better with a median net worth of $4,913.

At the top, the report said the wealthiest 12 percent of American families had a median net worth of $123,474 and accounted for 38 percent of all household wealth in the country. This group controlled 63 percent of all stocks and 53 percent of all bonds and money market funds.

This top 12 percent, which earned $48,000 or more in income each year, was predominantly white, well-educated and employed in white-collar jobs or owners of their own businesses.

Almost half of the wealthiest Americans, 48 percent, had college degrees and another 21 percent had attended college. For all categories, householders with a college education had about twice the net worth of those who only graduated from high school, $69,420 versus $31,700.

EPA accepts Idaho proposal for oxygen levels below dams

BOISE (AP) — The federal government has accepted Idaho's proposals for oxygen levels below dams, and has withdrawn its own attempt to impose federal standards on the state.

A letter from the Environmental Protection Agency's administrator was received by the governor's office here Thursday, apparently ending a six-year battle over water quality.

EPA Administrator Lee M. Thomas notified Gov. John Evans that he has accepted compromise standards for oxygen levels below dams.

However, EPA regulations for allowable ammonia levels statewide will remain under consideration, along with specific standards for Indian Creek near Nampa.

Indications are that the state may be able to adopt appropriate standards on ammonia this summer," said Thomas. "Should this occur, our proposal will be withdrawn completely."

For years, Idaho environmentalists, the Legislature and EPA have been battling over dissolved oxygen standards below dams. Although the regulations apply statewide, the discussion has centered on the Snake River below American Falls Dam.

Sportsman groups contended that if the oxygen standards were dropped, the resulting loss in water quality would badly damage sport fishing below American Falls Dam and other streams.

Idaho Power Co., which operates the dam and power plant, contended that it never was demonstrated that fish would suffer from lower oxygen standards. But the utility argued that if it had to increase releases of stored water to meet water quality standards, eventually that would cause higher power rates because there would be less water available for hydroelectric power generation.

The Legislature wouldn't approve higher water quality standards, but EPA threatened to impose its own standards.

Evans proposed new state water quality standards at hearings held by EPA last summer. The federal agency also agreed not to impose its standards until Idaho had time to draw up and adopt new state standards.

Water users, electric utilities, conservationists and three state agencies worked on compromise standards.

Evans said the new standards are a compromise "which will protect our pristine rivers and fisheries without imposing undue burdens on either farmers or other ratepayers."

money will have to be found to support the delegation.

Producers at the Grace meeting, criticizing the latest revisions in federal farm policies, called for less government intervention in agriculture, more control over their markets and a significant increase in the prices they get for their crops.

"If I let the farmers write their own farm bills," said Joyce Bowles, a southeastern Idaho farm activist, "the farmers at the meeting agreed they'd all have been better off if they'd gone on a long vacation this spring instead of being in the fields, but they're doing it anyway because a farmer is dedicated and the most optimistic hour-to-hour wage earner in America."

Strong turnout at session to pick farm meet delegates encouraging

GRACE (AP) — Turnout was so strong at Idaho's initial meeting to select delegates to a nationwide farm congress this summer that local leaders believe additional money may have to be raised to underwrite the expenses of the state's full delegation.

"If we have as good a turnout at our other meetings, we'll have to do some of our own fundraising," said Irene Myers, coordinator for Farm Aid in Idaho.

Seventy-five farmers attended the initial organizing meeting this week in Grace, selecting seven delegates to the United Farmers and Ranchers Congress, scheduled for mid-September in St. Louis. Fourteen other meetings are scheduled throughout Idaho over the coming weeks with additional delegates to the congress designated for every 10 people attending.

"We had this first meeting in an area that's not highly populated compared to the Magic Valley or the Treasure Valley, but the response was absolutely fantastic," Mrs. Myers said.

The farm congress, coming just two months before this fall's congressional elections, is being financed by a $250,000 grant from country music star Willie Nelson's Farm Aid organization. Up to 1,500 delegates from every state were expected to attend with the bulk of their expenses financed by Farm Aid, but Myers indicated that if Idaho participation is as high as it appears it might be additional delegates to the congress designated for every 10 people attending.

Short term in drug case

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — An Oregon man who pleaded guilty to charges stemming from the biggest cocaine bust in Idaho's history has been given a modified sentence and may serve only 120 days in prison.

Second District Judge George R. Reinhardt retained jurisdiction for 120 days over Daniel P. Gerrerio, 36, of Portland. If Gerrerio meets all the requirements of his sentence, he may be given probation. Reinhardt said Thursday.

The Department of Corrections will determine where Gerrerio will serve the 120 days following a two-week indoctrination period.

Echolaw resigns seat in Legislature

POCATELLO (AP) — Rep. Larry Echolaw, named last month as Bannock County prosecuting attorney, has resigned his seat in the Idaho House of Representatives.

The Pocatello Democrat, who until county commissioners' chambers recently was also the lead attorney for the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes, submitted his resignation to Gov. John Evans, effective Monday.

Echolaw will be sworn in as prosecutor Monday morning in the county commissioners' chambers.

Generators charge up Stallings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, is pushing a proposal to develop small, nuclear-powered generating plants for American military installations.

Stallings said Friday power plants up to 10 megawatts could give military bases a "secure, reliable and economic power source" without having to rely on outside electrical sources that might be disrupted in an emergency.

"Nuclear energy is a viable option to meet our secure military power needs," he said.

Stallings said he won endorsement from the House Science and Technology Committee for the proposed Multimegawatt Terrestrial Power Plant project. The committee has authorized $3 million for the project in the Energy Department bill, added to $5 million contained in funding for the Air Force.

The committee also authorized funding for three projects at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Included were $1 million for an Advanced Process Research project;

Richardson third in race spending

BOISE (AP) — Mel Richardson, winner in the five-way battle for the Republican congressional nomination in Idaho's 2nd District, was outspent by two of the four other candidates.

That was disclosed Friday when Richardson filed his campaign financial report, showing he spent $73,992 in the first six months of this year.

Richardson, an Idaho Falls broadcaster making his first bid for major office, was a clear winner in the primary, receiving nearly three times as many votes as the second-place finisher.

He meets incumbent Democrat Rep. Richard Stallings in the general election. Stallings, who was unopposed in the primary, reported spending $102,000, a balance of $54,244 and unpaid bills of $12,679.

For the year, Stallings reported contributions of $132,372.

State Sen. Dane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls, who finished fourth, reported spending $137,000. State Rep. J.F. Chad-Chadband, R-Idaho Falls, who was last, spent about $102,000 on the campaign.

Richardson reported contributions of $48,220 for the latest period. Included were about $5,000 each, after he won the primary, from the National Republican Congressional Committee, the Idaho Republican Party, the National Republican Senatorial Committee and the Republican National Committee. Citizens for the Republic, Santa Monica, Calif., also contributed $5,000.

Richardson also reported receiving loans between $150 and $1,000 from 15 individuals and a business in the final weeks before the May 27 primary vote.

Richardson's largest expenditure was $15,000 to Harris Publishing, Idaho Falls, for advertising services.

As of the end of June, Richardson listed unpaid loans of $11,500; a bill of $12,659 with Harris Publishing and $11,849 in a personal loan to his campaign committee.

Stallings listed $3,199 in contributions from political committees, $47,195 from political action committees and $11,962 in individual contributions.

For the year, he has received $45,702, $4,106 from political parties and $82,862 from political action committees. The largest contribution was $7,000 from a PAC for letter carriers. He also has received a total of $4,750 from the United Food and Commercial Workers International Union.

Stallings lists unpaid bills of $6,067 to a Washington, D.C., consultant, Peter Penn and Associates; $4,426 to Tele-Pac Advertising, Pocatello, and $2,185 to the Democratic Media Center, Washington, D.C.

Keep spotlight on racists, Evans says

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Northwest publishers have been urged to keep the spotlight on activities of organizations such as the white supremacist Aryan Nations.

Gov. John Evans gave a welcoming address here Friday to Newslink 86, a gathering of publishing of-nicals. He contrasted the freedom of speech enjoyed by America's newspapers, with efforts of what he called "hate groups" to preserve those rights to whites only.

Used false documents at age 15 Porn star won't be charged for under age appearances

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pornographic film star Traci Lords, who was 15 when she started taking part in sex acts for the camera, will not be prosecuted, the district attorney said Friday.

Instead, the investigation will be directed at the people she worked for, said District Attorney Ira Reiner.

"She may very well be a hard professional now, but she was a 15-year-old runaway when the pornographic film industry got hold of her," he said.

He identified Miss Lords as Norma Kuzma, a 1984 runaway from Steubenville, Ohio.

Miss Lords, now 18, told authorities her employers knew she was under age and that she was told to get a phony ID, he said.

"She tells us that she was told to just get some kind of an ID and that was, according to her, done with more of a wink and a nod than any serious effort to determine what her real age was," Reiner said.

"It may be difficult as we go ahead, trying to prove that these people involved in this pornography industry were unaware of her age," he said. "But frankly, I personally find it incredible. I think it was pretty clear. Traci

TRACI LORDS
Has made 75 films

Lords will tell you that it was pretty clear they understood she was under age."

Earlier this week, investigators revealed that Miss Lords starred in many of her 75 top-draw sex films when she was still a minor, making those films and tapes child pornography.

It is a felony to knowingly make or distribute pornographic films or photos of a minor.

Al Abergate, a spokesman for the county district attorney's office, refused Friday to reveal how investigators learned Miss Lords was under age when she appeared in such films as "New Wave Hookers" and "Educating Mandy."

Miss Lords, who formerly lived in Redondo Beach, is secluded at an undisclosed location and could not be reached for comment, said her attorney, Leslie H. Abramson.

She is "very confused and very scared and very upset and embarrassed about the whole thing."

My client did nothing illegal," Abramson said.

The investigation involved Miss Lords and anybody who employed her, Abergate said. Those employers say they were duped by a very mature-looking teen-age girl.

The revelation of Miss Lords' age spurred distributors and video dealers to pull her tapes from their shelves, cancel orders and even remove posters.

Miss Lords, who also appeared in the September 1984 issue of Penthouse magazine, presented identification indicating she was then over 18; publisher Bob Guccione said in a statement Friday.

Superpowers continue jockeying for position on possible arms talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration acknowledged Friday it was unable to arrange a visit here this summer by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze to accelerate preparations for a new summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

But officials said that Shevardnadze and Secretary of State George P. Shultz were likely to meet at the special session of the U.N. General Assembly in late September to work on a summit agenda.

The delay raises doubts that a visit by Gorbachev to Washington could be arranged before the end of the year. "It's going to be tight, but it's do-able," said an official, who demanded anonymity.

The two sides have held already held meetings of experts on the war between Soviet troops and anti-government rebels in Afghanistan, and on problems in the Middle East, southern Africa, East Asia and Central America.

All are likely topics for Reagan and Gorbachev at the summit.

"A lot of other preparations are going into it," the official said.

The Soviets have indicated, however, that they will not set a summit date until Reagan responds to their June 11 proposal for reducing nuclear weapons and limiting space-based missile research.

The president intends to respond before the next round of negotiations in Geneva in September, officials said.

Reagan and Gorbachev agreed at their first summit meeting last November in the Swiss city to meet again in Washington this year and in Moscow in 1987. A Gorbachev visit last spring was projected.

But U.S.-Soviet tensions slumped, and when American bombers made anti-terrorist assaults on Libya, the Soviets canceled a mid-May planning session between Shevardnadze and Shultz. That is the meeting the administration is unable to reschedule until late September.

The White House announced, meanwhile, that U.S. and Soviet experts would meet in Geneva late next week to discuss nuclear testing. Spokesman Edward P. Djejerian said July 25 was the approximate starting date.

Reagan proposed the meeting to Gorbachev last November and followed up with letters to the Soviet leader.

The United States is expected to seek Soviet permission to station advanced monitoring equipment at their underground test sites.

Kennedy clan sails sound with friends

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP) — Members and friends of the Kennedy clan went sailing Friday in Nantucket Sound as on-lookers snapped photos of the church where President John F. Kennedy's only daughter is to be married this weekend.

Caroline Kennedy and her fiancé, Edward Schlossberg, were among the group of about 30 people aboard the chartered 65-foot ketch "Spray," which returned to the private Hyannis Port Pier & Yacht Club to find a crowd of reporters, photographers, and curiosity seekers.

The bride's brother, John Kennedy Jr., wearing only black shorts and swim goggles, delighted the crowd when he jumped off the boat and swam to the dock.

The crowd applauded as Ms. Kennedy, 28, and Schlossberg, 41, passed, but the couple did not respond to most of the reporters who shouted questions.

When asked what she will call herself after she is married, Ms. Kennedy responded, "Caroline."

Meanwhile, at Our Lady of Victory Church in nearby Centerville where the couple will wed in a Roman Catholic ceremony Saturday afternoon, gardeners were sprucing up the push lawn.

Reagan slaps media hands over disputed Regan remark

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan scolded news organizations Friday for "violation of the journalistic rules" and distortion in stories quoting White House chief of staff Donald Regan as saying women would have to give up their diamonds if the United States slapped sanctions on South Africa.

Regan, leaving a ceremony in the Rose Garden, also said he is "very much opposed to punitive sanctions" against South Africa as a tool to force the white-minority government in Pretoria to abandon its segregationist policy of apartheid.

The White House announced the president will deliver a speech on policy toward South Africa at noon MST Tuesday in the East Room before members of the World Affairs Council-Foreign Policy Association.

White House officials have said the speech would defend U.S. ties with South Africa as a way to persuade Pretoria to change its policies.

Publicly, the president and his staff refused to confirm that it was Regan who made the remark about women and diamonds, which had triggered a flood of criticism about sexism.

However, one White House official, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed Regan as the source, and said, "He's put his foot in his mouth again. I don't know why he does it."

The controversy began when an unidentified official, in a meeting with several reporters, warned that imposition of sanctions would hurt the United States because it counts on South Africa as a supplier of strategic minerals, such as manganese, platinum, rhodium, chromium and diamonds.

"Are the women of America prepared to give up all their jewelry?" he said. "Are the Israelis, the Belgians, the Netherlands people prepared not to engage in any more diamond trade? Are we telling ourselves that industrial diamonds — things that we need for etching, cutting, shaping of tools and so forth — that we now have to give up if anywhere, to the Soviet Union?"

After the initial account was published in The Baltimore Sun, Regan was identified in subsequent stories elsewhere as the source of the remark.

Immediately, Regan was criticized by the National Organization for Women, the head of the Congressional Black Caucus and others who accused him of insensitivity and sexism.

He did not specify which account he considered a distortion.

Refusing to confirm that Regan was the source of the remark, presidential spokesman Edward Djejerian said the unidentified official had been interviewed under ground rules prohibiting disclosure of his name.

Posner guilty of tax evasion

MIAMI (AP) — Industrialist Victor Posner, one of the nation's highest-paid businessmen, was convicted Friday of evading $1.2 million in federal income taxes on a gift of 22 acres to a small Christian college.

Jurors deliberated 14 hours over two days before returning the verdict of guilty on all 10 counts. The Miami Beach investor now faces up to 40 years in prison when sentenced Sept. 19 by U.S. District Judge Eugene P. Spellman.

Posner, who clenched his jaw when the verdict was read, was allowed to remain free pending appeal.

Posner, 67, was charged with four counts of income tax evasion, five counts of making false statements and one count of conspiracy to defraud the government. The prosecution said he evaded taxes by inflating the value of two tracts of land he donated.

Chinese detain Western reporter

PEKING (AP) — U.S. officials Friday pressed the Chinese government for an explanation after New York Times correspondent John Burns was detained by police on suspicion of entering an area barred to foreigners.

The Times reported he was suspected of espionage. Burns, 41, a Briton, was placed in Peking's Paozhu detention center Friday after 15 hours of questioning at Peking airport. He was at the airport with his wife, Jane Scott-Long, and their two children to leave China on a vacation.

Yan Rongsen of the Public Security Bureau said Burns was not charged and that it was "too early to draw conclusions" on possible charges.

But U.S. Embassy officials said Chinese authorities told them Burns had entered an area off-limits to foreigners, and the Times reported Chinese officials suspected him of "gathering intelligence information and espionage."

Scott-Long told The Associated Press the incident apparently stemmed from a motorcycle trip Burns took this month with an American lawyer and a Chinese friend.

British Ambassador Sir Richard Evans said he was not officially notified of Burns' detention until Friday. "We are pressing for regular access under the terms of the Sino-British consular agreement of 1984," he said.

Officials in Washington and the U.S. Embassy in Peking expressed "great concern" to the Chinese over the detention and told them "the U.S. government views this as an extremely serious matter," an embassy official Lynn Noah said.

JOHN BURNS
Entered area off-limits

Noah said the United States has not filed a protest because it does not have all of the facts, but it has asked for full information and will seek contact with Burns.

Times Executive Editor A.M. Rosenbhal and Foreign Editor Warren Hoge left Friday for Peking.

Burns and his two companions were stopped by police at the border of Shaanxi and Sichuan provinces for traveling in a restricted area, but were released two days later after agreeing to write "self criticisms" and return to Peking by train and airplane, Ms. Scott-Long said.

Police confiscated 11 rolls of film and other materials, she said. Scott-Long said Burns went to the Foreign Ministry on Wednesday to ask if he could have his film back and tell officials of his vacation plans, but was given no hint there still was any trouble.

Moslem gunmen release American missionary

MARAWI, Philippines (AP) — An American missionary, Brian Lawrence, clutching a rifle in his mosquito-bitten arms, was released Friday by Moslem gunmen who held him for six days in the forest.

Hours later, a military official said troops were ordered to move against the kidnappers.

Lawrence, 30, said his captors threatened to kill him if the military attempted a rescue operation.

But he said he was treated well and added, "From the beginning, I knew that their intention was to release me and not to harm me."

Maj. Gen. Jose Magno, head of the military's southern command, said in a statement released by his headquarters that he ordered unspecified "operations" against Lawrence's kidnappers and a separate group of Moslems who held 10 Filipino nuns for six days. The nuns were freed Thursday.

Magno's spokesman, Lt. Col. Anthony Elias, said a battalion of troops was sent to Marawi, 510 miles south of Manila, to back up one that arrived there Thursday with a tank and artillery.

However, Marawi area commander Col. Raul Aquino said more than three hours later that he had not received the order, which also called for the kidnappers' arrest. Sur province on Mindanao Island.

Aquino said he did not believe an attack would be conducted unless arrest warrants were issued and the kidnappers refused to surrender.

President Corazon Aquino said no ransom was paid for Lawrence's release. He was the eighth foreigner not received the order, which also called for the kidnappers' arrest. Sur province on Mindanao Island.

South Africa releases activist black editor

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Zwellakhe Sisulu, one of South Africa's most prominent black activists, was released Friday from three weeks of detention under the nationwide state of emergency.

Of the thousands believed arrested under the emergency imposed June 12, Sisulu is the only person the government acknowledged holding.

He is editor of the New Nation newspaper and the son of Walter Sisulu, an African-National Congress leader, jailed in Pollsmoor Prison with his colleague Nelson Mandela. Both were convicted on charges of conspiracy to overthrow the government.

Lane Kirkland, president of the American AFL-CIO, and other world labor figures arrived Friday to support the black union movement and seek the release of an estimated 269 of its leaders detained under the emergency decree.

A U.S. Information Service official said the Rev. Brian Burchfield, an American Lutheran Church minister ordered out of the country, left for the United States via Amsterdam on a flight Friday evening.

Kirkland said his delegation came to express "our concern and our outrage at the imprisonment of trade unionists for carrying out their trade union commitments, and urge their release."

Soviets fire state head of atomic safety

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin removed Zwellakhe Sisulu, head of the state atomic safety committee Friday, nearly three months after the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, and a news weekly said the accident has forced a review of atomic power policy.

The magazine New Times indicated radiation still is leaking in small amounts from the crippled Chernobyl reactor, about 80 miles north of Kiev in the Soviet Ukraine.

In a one-sentence announcement, the official news agency Tass said the "Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the nation's nominal Parliament, had "released from his duties" Yevgeny V. Kulov, 57, chief of the State Committee for Safety in the Atomic Power Atomic Industry since 1983.

It gave no reason for the move and did not list any new assignment, indicating he was fired. It did not mention the Chernobyl accident, or say who was replacing Kulov.

Some area doctors demand cash up front for prenatal care

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Cash on delivery is no longer a prerequisite to have a baby. Now, some doctors in Twin Falls are demanding cash before delivery, and cash before the first office visit.

"We were told we wouldn't be able to come back because we couldn't pay the entire $700 before delivery," said Debora Jones, a Jerome woman. "It was just beyond our means to do that."

Jones, who is 6 1/2 months pregnant and in is in a category known as high risk of developing complications, said she and her husband didn't know where to find help at first.

"All the doctors I spoke to wanted between $150-$250 down payment on the first visit. And we had to have the entire bill paid by the eighth month," she said. "Not everybody has that kind of money sitting around in the bank."

The problem is not just one of money, but of insurance. Jones said she and her husband, who is employed, do not have any insurance because she got pregnant before he qualified for insurance at work.

But Jones said even if they had insurance, doctors are still requiring payment before delivery and insurance companies do not reimburse families until after the baby is born.

Jones and her husband are not alone. A recent study released by the Idaho State Perinatal Project found that almost half of the women who deliver babies in the state have no insurance.

Dr. Paul Miles, a Twin Falls pediatrician and chairman of the Perinatal Project, said the study suggests that women do not have insurance not because they cannot afford it, but because they do not understand the importance of having it.

But others in the health care field suggest the problem is more complex.

"A lot of families just can't afford insurance, or they don't qualify," said Maggie Machala, director of the Maternal and Infant Child Care Program through the South Central District Health Department. "We're getting calls even from women who have insurance, but doctors won't take them because they can't pay the up-front money."

Machala said some physicians are even refusing women with Medicaid cards.

"It's bad, really bad," she said. "I can understand how it happened. Physicians are having a difficult time collecting their money."

But Machala, who is also pregnant, said she had difficulty agreeing with the new policy instituted by many local physicians that women must pay for prenatal care before the service is rendered.

For Jones, the situation was not hopeless. By calling the Salvation Army's Pregnant Crisis Hotline, she learned of the MIC program through public health, which in turn put her in touch with two local physicians who were willing to work out a lower payment plan.

Others haven't been so lucky.

Linda Roethlisberger said her 17-year-old daughter is pregnant, does not qualify for coverage under Roethlisberger's insurance at work, and is having problems finding a physician.

"Even if we had insurance, we'd have to pay $250 down," she said on Friday. "And we can't afford that. I can't see how insurance helps. You still have to pay out the nose."

Political activity picks up in valley

Democrats to open new headquarters

By DEAN MILLER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Backed by the promise of money from statewide candidates and spurred on by the prospect of winning some elections this year, Twin Falls County Democrats have picked out a 1986 headquarters building and are planning to open it a month before the Twin Falls County election.

And in another harbinger of the political season, Republicans held a campaign college in Twin Falls Friday to train candidates and their staffs how to beat the bushes for votes.

County Fair week usually marks the beginning of serious campaigning by legislative candidates, while statewide candidates, with their larger budgets and territories, start earlier.

At their Wednesday night meeting, Twin Falls Democrats voted to sign a lease for the vacant space in the 2nd Avenue South Building, southeast of Kregel's Hardware, on 2nd Avenue South and next to the Animal House.

Democratic Party Chairman Joe Gulick said the campaign committees of Rep. Richard Stallings of Idaho and U.S. Senate candidate Gov. John Evans have promised to send Twin Falls Democrats enough money to pay a month's rent and the party will raise the rest.

Gulick said Friday the Democrats will move into the building Aug. 6 and hold a grand opening later in the month, when Stallings and other prominent Democrats can be on hand.

Twin Falls County Democrats also decided Wednesday night to cooperate with Jerome Democrats in a Magic Valley-wide fund-raising picnic and rally later this summer, though a date has not yet been set.

Local legislative candidates reported on their campaign activities and planned to coordinate their efforts to put together a float at the Elmer Friendship Days parade next weekend.

History group seeking ideas for centennial

TWIN FALLS — The South Central Idaho History Council is looking for ideas for the State Centennial Celebration.

The council, headed by College of Southern Idaho history instructor Jim Gentry, agreed Monday to invite representatives of Magic Valley historical societies and local chambers of commerce to the council's September meeting to discuss the 1990 celebration.

"There are a lot of local summer celebrations already, in operation that could use the state centennial theme that year," Gentry said.

The council agreed to encourage use of the historic theme in the summer of 1990 and to develop a possible "museum for a day" program in towns that do not have established museums.

Idaho joined the union July 3, 1890, and a state Centennial Commission has been formed to prepare a state celebration centered around July 3-4.

The local history group agreed to encourage celebration of the event locally, and interested persons are welcome to offer ideas.

The state celebrated its Territorial Centennial in 1963 and is now preparing for its statehood centennial, Gentry said.

'Here you got everything'

Mexican farm workers Martin, left, and Jose Salinas came to America with visas for the first time this year, for the first time

Laborers take legal route into America

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

RUPERT — America's reputation as a golden land of opportunity may be just a faded memory to some Americans, lost amid unemployment and inflation.

But to Mexicans Jose Salinas and brother, Martin, now legally working on a farm north of Rupert, the land of opportunity is under their feet.

They now can sit out on the crooked wooden steps of a mobile home in which they reside and watch cars kick up dust on the road without fear that behind the dust is the U.S. Border Patrol.

For the past few years, however, the road to and life in America was not easy.

Jose, 24, and Martin, 22, from the state of Michoacan near Mexico City, would walk across the desert and U.S. border, show the way by a "coyote," a smuggler of Mexicans into America, for the price of hundreds of dollars. The brothers then would head to Los Angeles, where they had relatives. From there they hitched a ride to Idaho.

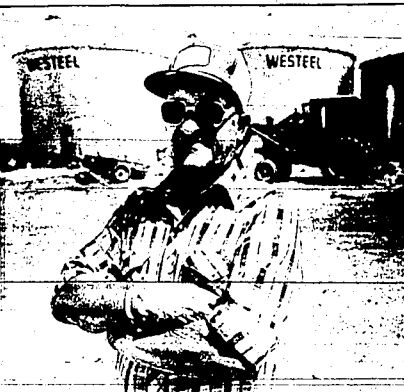

Once in the fields, they hauled gear as well as irrigation pipe as they constantly were on guard for the green vehicles of the immigration officers.

Jose was apprehended once in Twin Falls and returned to Mexico. The immigration officers treated them well, he said. "If you are good, they are good."

This year they came to America with visas in hand.

The Salinas brothers move pipe for their "patron," Juan Guerry, for whom they have worked for the past two seasons. Three years ago, Guerry met the brothers through the cousin, who was also working in the area.

The brothers make about $7 an hour apiece, most of which they send home to their families every two weeks, they said. Their housing and transportation is provided free under the federal program.

Guerry no longer employs undocumented workers

Spaniard passes experience along to Mexican transients

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Juan Guerry has plenty of advice on how to succeed in America for the two Mexican nationals he employs on his farm under the federal H-2 Program.

Guerry knows what he's talking about.

In 1948, he immigrated from Spain to the United States as a sheep herder. Today he owns 400 acres north of Paul, was recently named Farmer of the Year by a local organization and is attempting to enjoy the good life after more than 30 years of working work.

"I gotta change, but I don't know how," he says with a laugh. He identifies with his employees, Jose Salinas and his brother Martin, said the 57-year-old Guerry with just a flavor of an accent. Like them, he was once a stranger in a strange, but also a wonderful land, he said.

The Salinas brothers are in the country legally under the federal H-2 Program, the first time the program has been used in Idaho to import Mexicans for agricultural work.

But Guerry had employed the young men two seasons before, when they were in the country illegally. He says he used "wet-backs" because he tried and failed to find domestic labor for the more than 30 years of working work.

"It is not against the law to employ undocumented workers, only to transport them.

Unlike his neighbors, his farm • See GUERRY on Page B2

ing on the steps, working in America this year is "buen."

But even when it is full of fear and hiding, they still came to work in America's fields because the money was good, and they were treated well by Guerry and the townspeople, they said.

In their homeland life was not as good.

Experts say inflation hit 64 percent last year, while it's predicted that one dollar will equal 1,000 pesos this year. Mexico also is shackled with a $10 billion foreign debt, unable to pull itself out with its oil industry because of deflated oil prices. Those factors, plus the killer earthquake that hit Mexico City last September, are driving more Mexicans to the north, where INS officials expect this year to apprehend at least 1 million Mexican nationals.

There are no opportunities in Mexico, Martin said. They came to America to improve themselves and their family.

Jose added that they never tried to find work in the factories in Mexico. There is a farm life. At home in Michoacan, they worked on a small family farm.

In Idaho, farm life begins at 5 a.m., moving four or five 40-foot-long irrigation pipes, each weighing about 30 pounds empty. In the afternoon they move more pipe, until about 9 p.m.

"We don't mind the work," added Jose, who like Martin is lean and small, but muscular.

Only on Sunday is there rest, at least half a day. Sometimes Guerry takes them into town, where they meet their friends, many of whom work on nearby farms.

Working several miles away is Otaustoberto Ruiz, from the same town as the Salinas brothers. Ruiz has been working on American farms for 15 years; eight of those for George Grant, founder of the group who helped bring the H-2 program to Idaho.

This is the first time Ruiz is in the country legally. When asked what he liked about the program which made it possible, he returned a broad grin.

Before this year, he would crouch down in the fields if he saw a car coming down the road. This year there's no need. In fact, he • See BROTHERS on Page B2

Utilities criticize new plan by BPA

Protest surcharge for efficiency failure

By RONDA TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — Utility company spokesmen from Idaho and Wyoming handed stiff criticism to Bonneville Power Administration officials on a proposed surcharge policy during a public meeting Friday in Burley.

"The only people that I've found at this meeting in favor of this program are the people paid to administer it," said Burley City Councilman Wendell McMurray, chairman of the city electric department which purchases power from BPA.

The BPA policy would establish a 10 percent surcharge on utilities that fail to meet energy efficiency targets for new home construction.

To avoid the surcharge, utilities would be required to adopt residential standards — the Super Good Cents Program — or an acceptable alternative by January 1987.

However, local utility spokesmen said the proposed policy is too costly and difficult to administer and may be counterproductive to the growth and use of electric energy use in the future.

"It's shortsighted at this time to impose penalties on one type of energy, in one part of the country," Fall River Electric's Calvin Wickham told officials. He claimed that BPA had "tunnel vision" and placed an "unhealthy emphasis on the shortage of power."

Wickham said customers will shift from electric heating to gas or oil if the surcharge is passed on, further complicating electric rates and increasing the U.S. trade deficit.

Southside Electric's Bruce Newcomb chided the BPA for not taking a businesslike approach to the situation. Currently, there is an energy surplus in the Northwest, and the BPA is "talking about a 10 percent increase in rates due to lack of sales," Newcomb said.

"You're saying, 'let's save sales.'"

Input sought on proposed detention site

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

JEROME — A youth-advocate committee is accepting public comment and questions on a proposed 30-bed juvenile detention center, four miles east of Jerome, to aid in its review of the facility.

Comment is welcome on the physical plant, standards, program and policies of the Southern Idaho Youth Center, proposed by a group of private investors and now under construction, said Anne McNeill, a member of the Region V Council of the Idaho Commission on Children and Youth.

McNeill chairs a council committee reviewing the facility, scheduled to open later this summer.

The investors in the center invited the state commission, an advisory group to the governor, on issues relating to youth, to make the review, she added.

In its inspection, the committee will use standards from the American Correctional Association. The guidelines of the association, partly funded by the U.S. Justice Department, are a comprehensive set of recommendations covering everything from admittance forms to clothing for juvenile detainees.

Comment will be accepted until the middle of August by the com-

Business rebirth seen in recent Bliss actions

TEIRRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

BLISS — A city council member and the new owner of a business in Bliss at the site has recently "come to life" with new business opening and established ones improving their property.

"You can just see the atmosphere changing," Councilwoman Fern Cenarussa said this week. "It proves what cooperation can accomplish."

Spring and summertime improvements about the city, she said, include the raising of the old Fifth Wheel Restaurant and leveling of the ground there, re-opening of a restaurant and motel, re-opening of a Texaco service station closed five years and numerous cleaning and remodeling projects throughout Bliss.

Tim Williams, new owner of the Crete Bar Restaurant and motel, named several "eyesores" in Bliss that recently have been cleaned up. He said neighbors have kept up with neighbors in making property improvements.

"The general community has caught on," Williams said.

The new and expanded businesses have opened more than 20 new jobs, Cenarussa estimated, and the city has been drawing more local trade in addition to tourists and truck drivers from the nearby highway.

Bliss residents, she said, are working harder to offer quality food 24 hours a day, live entertainment and accommodations.

"People here really care about Bliss," Cenarussa said. "It creates a feeling of hope . . . Bliss has a lot to offer and we want to sell it."

Since the freeway opened in 1974 and traffic was rerouted around Bliss, the city has struggled but managed to adjust, she said.

"I think Bliss has survived better than most of these little towns," Cenarussa said.

Mayor Holland Zollinger, when asked about the recent surge of business improvements in Bliss, said there is some change but it is not much more than usual.

"I'm really happy to see it," he said. "I wish we could get more new businesses. I'm not sure it's growing much . . . It's not a major change. People come and go."

Farmers association cuts H-2 red tape

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

RUPERT — By joining the Snake River Farmers Association, farmers receive a guiding hand through the bureaucratic red tape of the H-2 Program and, more importantly, a needed legal work force, says Association President George Grant Jr.

The association, started last fall for the purpose of bringing all workers into Idaho through the federal program also known as Alien Certification, now is recruiting members for the 1987 season.

To date, there are 270 member farmers from all over the state, with most concentrated in southern Idaho. Through the H-2 program and mostly through the efforts of the association, more than 1,000 aliens are working, legally, in the state. Although the program has been in existence for several years, this year was the first time it was used to recruit farm workers.

When the association started last year it kept a low profile to avoid any controversy, said Grant, a Rupert-area farmer. This year, however, the association decided to go public because it's established and better known, he added.

Association memberships cost $400 a year, but if farmers join before Sept. 1, it's $300.

For the money, farmers receive a legal work force, Grant said. Under the H-2 program, a provision of federal immigration laws, farmers may hire alien laborers if they can't recruit enough domestic help.

With H-2, workers who entered the country illegally don't have to look over their shoulders for the Border Patrol and the farmers have the help they need, say participants. Immigration officials, meanwhile, say the program allows them to keep track of who has entered the country.

Grant said the association, headquartered in Rupert, does the paperwork for the farmer to apply for alien workers under the H-2 program. Part of the reason for the carty recruitment is the amount of paper work involved.

According to the program rules, farmers must submit "job orders" to Job Service, a division of the state Employment Department, before the work begins. If enough American workers can't be found to fill the job order, alien workers may be recruited.

Grant said the association takes referrals from Job Service and helps recruit workers from Mexico. It also provides staff at the border to help process the aliens through the border.

In addition, the group provides a legal voice to farmers, he added. For example, the association is fighting a court challenge by a Texas migrant-aid group of the association's 30-day experience requirement on workers. The Texas group calls the requirement discriminatory, while the association states it's needed because the workers are expected to work without supervision and run the risk of electrocution when moving irrigation pipe around power lines.

"An individual farmer couldn't afford to do that by himself," Grant said.

In some ways, however, there are other costs to the participants in the program. Farmers are required by the U.S. Labor Department, the administrator of H-2, to provide adequate housing, minimum wage or the prevailing wage in the area, cooking facilities and, in some cases, transportation costs.

BPA

just won't be able to operate," he said.

Dwinnell Allred, of Rupert, said the city had paid to improve its delivery system, a move that benefits all customers instead of a few.

But Rupert could still be surcharged because the program was not an acceptable alternative to BPA, Allred said.

Carr said he heard two major recommendations from the audience: one was to exempt utilities with low housing starts or declining load rates and the second was to substitute distribution improvements for the model conservation standards.

Idaho Power's representative Cliff Snider recommended "shifting the burden to the people who are causing the problem." Punitive rates should be passed on to owners who will not comply with conservation standards when building a house.

John Jones of Unity Light and Electric said the small privately-owned company had pushed the Super Good Cents Program and had nine houses under construction or developed with the program.

Yet customers refused to go along with installing a crucial feature of the program: an air-to-air heat exchanger, that he claimed couldn't be given away. "So, despite trying to comply with BPA guidelines, the utility would be out of compliance and subject to the surcharge," he said.

Carr said BPA was examining the unpopular features. "I don't know if I can say we have our doubts that the air to air heater is cost effective, but we certainly have our concerns," he said.

BPA will accept written comments on the surcharge proposal until 5 p.m. July 31 at the Portland office, P.O. Box 12999, Portland, OR 97212.

Three public information meetings will be held next week in Missoula, Mont., Seattle, Wash., and Salem, Ore.

A copy of Friday's proceedings will be available through the Idaho Falls BPA office in two weeks.

Local groups best for earthquake warnings

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Local organizations provide the best means of getting information about earthquake hazards to the public, officials said Friday at the conclusion of a conference on earthquake hazards in Utah.

Such informal networks can begin with circulation of information for the layman in pamphlets, and presentations to school groups and community councils.

"We never deal with the public directly," said Dr. Walter Arabasz, assistant director of the University of Utah's seismograph stations. "Getting information to the layman has to be through non-mass media sources," he said.

Arabasz and others, who attended a five-day conference sponsored by the federal Earthquake Hazards Reduction Program, cited the public's short memory of warnings as the reason for using other means of communication.

He said federal safety agencies could begin by educating businesses, which stand to lose the most from an earthquake. Then businesses should be encouraged to share the information with their customers.

"We need neighborhood and peer group interest, like the neighborhood watch program," said Utah State University sociologist, Gary Lynn Turner, a Taylorsville-Benion community councilwoman, said she planned to hold an earthquake seminar to explain to citizens what she has learned about the Wasatch Fault.

The fault extends for 230 miles along the western front of the Wasatch Mountains, and snakes through portions of Salt Lake City.

Turner also wants to push for strengthening the state laws requiring disclosure of earthquake hazards in property up for sale.

Conference members also stressed the need for stricter building codes that would require new buildings to be earthquake resistant.

"We want to be able to take the scientific information generated and get it into a code in a usable format," said Larry Reveley, vice president of Reveley Engineers and Associates.

Reveley said codes should be uniform throughout the state and plans submitted for permits should have a competent structural engineering review. He added that field inspections should ensure that building designs are followed.

Building officials, architects and engineers should make sure buildings are safe. The buck stops with us," Reveley said.

Concern about high rise buildings and schools is at the top of the list. School districts are not regulated by state or local governments for seismic safety, said Genevieve Atwood, director of the Utah Geological and Mineral Survey.

"Utah schools are not evaluated for seismic capability," Reveley said. "A lot of good schools are being built, but we aren't sure if they are being built right."

However, Reveley said many hospitals have already begun to upgrade their facilities. LDS Hospital has replaced a wing, and St. Mark's was designed with earthquake resistance in mind.

Geologists emphasized the need for more strong motion recording equipment. Walter Hays, a geologist with the U.S. Geological Survey, said despite the increase in neophysical information, there are still many questions to be answered.

Much of the work done in these areas is being implemented by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), which is the lead agency in the Earthquake Hazards Reduction Program, said FEMA chairman Gary Johnson.

never was "traded" by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. But he applied for workers — specifically the Salinas Brothers — to travel to America through the H-2 Program, also called the Alien Certification Program. It will cost him more money this year to employ the foreigners, but he had to do so to help his wife, who is recovering from a stroke.

Guerry said he had to do so to help his wife, who is recovering from a stroke. He said he had to do so to help his wife, who is recovering from a stroke.

a rival career in construction.

"I didn't like it. The people were too rough," he said.

In 1953, he arrived in Rupert and herded sheep for a company. Three years later Guerry became a citizen of the country he so admired.

In 1960, Guerry applied for and received 230 acres of desert land under the federal program. He and his brother, who immigrated in 1955, spent four years — at a cost of $65,000 — to clear and develop the land.

He used savings from his work as a sheep herder to help finance his farm and also worked in the winters for others. Just on his reputation, a Colorado company, for which he had raised sheep helped finance him, though he never met any company officials face-to-face.

His farm has survived through the years because he is conservative in his spending, in everything.

"Even if I had a big year," he said, "He and his brother still do most of the work around the farm. If he were young enough, he'd work the pipe himself, he added.

"Twelve hours of work (a day) is nothing, but it's getting a little harder," he said.

Now Guerry is the man who employs young foreigners, who ask how he succeeded in America.

"I tell them whatever they want to do, do it while you are young. Save up your money," he said. "I tell them to have discipline and pride. Pride is whatever you do, like it, and think, 'I'm going to make it.'" even stopped his work once to talk with immigration officers.

While Jose and Martin were shy talking with strangers about their work, Ruiz was ill at ease. As he leaned on his hoe in a sugar beet field, his eyes looked elsewhere, as if he couldn't break the habit of searching for the border patrol.

He says there's no work in Mexico to make a living for his nine children in Mexico. He works on farms, but doesn't make as much money as in the United States.

"Here you got everything," he said.

When he doesn't work, he said, "I think about Mexico."

In the fall, Jose and Martin and over 1,000 other Mexican nationals in Idaho under the H-2 Program will return to their country.

"If we had the opportunity, we would stay (in America)," Jose said. They like the money and the work. Ruiz and Martin Salinas say the same thing.

And even if they can't enter the United States legally next year, they still will come because, they said, this is the land of opportunities.

Campaigns

At the Holiday Inn on Friday, Idaho Republican Party Director Dave Pearson oversaw a day-long series of seminars on fund-raising, campaign tactics, use of advertising, and resources of the state party.

At that meeting, about 15 candidates and campaign workers met with staff from the campaign of U.S. Rep. Larry Craig, B. Balho, and a campaign school at their convention regional program director from the Republican National Committee to discuss how to hold onto the Republican majority in Idaho.

State Rep. Gary Robbins, IDistrict, was the only local incumbent at the meeting Friday afternoon.

Pearson said the Twin Falls meeting was one of five being held statewide. Democrats had a similar Rep. Larry Craig, B. Balho, and a campaign school at their convention last month.

Catholic lay woman appointed to share parish's ministry

By SUSAN OKULA The Associated Press

NORTH BRANFORD, Conn. — In what is believed to be a first, the Roman Catholic Church has appointed a lay woman to share a ministry of an established parish, said the priest who will work with her.

Blaine Blondin Kriedel, a Yale Divinity School graduate, and the Rev. Daniel F. McSheffery will work together at the 1,100-family St. Augustine's parish in North Branford starting Aug. 1, McSheffery said Thursday.

The two will form the first "designated ministry team" at an established Catholic parish, he said. The appointment grew out of a program established in 1981 by the Most Rev. John F. Whealon, archbishop of Hartford, McSheffery said.

The designated ministry team is designed "to open parish administration not only to women but to men as well. This is not specifically directed to women," he said.

The team concept is unique to the Hartford archdiocese, McSheffery said. "Hopefully, this will be a model for other places in the country," he said.

It may eventually help address a shortage of Catholic priests, McSheffery said. The Catholic Church does not allow women to be priests, nor does it allow its priests to marry.

McSheffery said he will be the pastor of the parish and perform the traditional sacramental rites. Kriedel's major responsibilities will be in education and pastoral counseling.

She will assist in the Mass by performing readings and helping distribute communion, he said.

The archdiocese has had no direct contact with the Vatican over the appointment.

"Our canon lawyers saw no problem," McSheffery said.

where a telephone message was left for her.

McSheffery said a team made up of a priest, a deacon and nun is working in Hockley Hill in a mission, an offshoot of a parish. The new appointment marks the first time the team approach will be tried in an existing parish, he said.

McSheffery is finishing a 12-year stay as pastor of St. George Church in Guilford. Kriedel is a 1981 graduate of the Yale Divinity School. Before attending Yale, she was three-tor of religious education at St. Helena's Church in West Hartford and she also taught at Northwest Catholic High School.

The present pastor at St. Augustine's is retiring and the assistant pastor is being transferred, McSheffery said Kriedel will serve a six-year term.

McSheffery said he will move into St. Augustine's rectory, while Kriedel will continue to live in the West Hartford home she shares with her two sons.

Mass baptism and lectures mark Jehovah's convention

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — A mass baptism and lectures stressing the theme of "Deus Peccator" marked the annual district convention of Jehovah's Witnesses, which attracted more than 6,000 church members from Oregon and western Idaho.

The weekend convention at Oregon State University also attracted about 15 people who protested church practices. They picketed outside the convention hall Saturday.

Among the highlights of the convention were the baptism of about 50 worshippers Saturday and 19 hours of lectures and discussions that stressed the need to reach for spiritual rather than material goals.

The theme of the gathering was shared with the community Friday afternoon when the Witnesses canvassed homes in Corvallis, Lebanon, Albany and Salem, said Herbert Somfleth of Dayton, a Witness minister in McMinnville.

While believers in Jehovah prayed inside Gill Coliseum Saturday, about 15 non-believers protested with signs outside.

"We just want to make a statement that we don't feel their practices are right," said the group's spokesman, Dave Frechette.

Frechette said the protesters include breaking up families, encouraging members to shun former Witnesses, and misinterpretation of Scripture.

Although Frechette himself was a Witness for nearly 33 years, he was "disfellowshipped" from the church in 1983 and has been treated by an outcast since then, he said.

"I was kicked out for not meeting up to their standards," Frechette said. When a person is disfellowshipped they are considered apostates, and are treated like outcasts, he added.

Pope meets Brazilian leader, supports land reform efforts

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II met with the president of Brazil on Thursday and said that distributing land to the poor was essential for social justice and democracy in the South American country.

President Jose Sarney came to Rome during a period of tense relations between the government and the bishops of the world's largest Roman Catholic country. The bishops have accused the government of moving too slowly on land reform.

John Paul met with Sarney for 35 minutes in a private audience, then celebrated Mass for the president in a small chapel in the Vatican.

contribute to cure and prevent, in this immense and beloved country, situations of impoverishment and of economic imbalance," the pope said in his homily, delivered in Portuguese.

He prayed that "no one remains excluded from development and of the wealth of progress."

"Let us implore that the initiatives and reforms of these challenges, as in the case of agrarian reform, be undertaken with courage and appropriateness, and take place with the acceptance and participation of everyone, in the light of Christian humanism."

families by 1989. So far, about 10,000 families have received of land.

Brazilian landowners recently have organized an association and pledged to defend their land with weapons, if necessary.

Government officials have charged that some church officials are too vocal on the land reform issue and overly critical of the democratic government that took over after 21 years of military rule.

John Paul, talking to Brazilian reporters after the audience with Sarney, said agrarian reform in Brazil "can't fail because it is a problem of social justice and democracy."

Russians take Goodwill to extreme

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union continued its relentless march through the inaugural Goodwill Games Friday, collecting six of a possible seven gold medals and widening its lead over the United States in the medal race.

The games, billed as a battle between the two superpowers, has turned into a one-sided affair.

After Friday's competition, the Soviets had a total of 79 golds and 178 medals, compared with the United States' 35 golds and 117 medals.

With only two days remaining in the games, the Soviets virtually had clinched the gold medal race. With 51 gold medals yet to be decided, they led the U.S. by 44 golds.

That difference of seven automatically will be erased in Saturday's boxing finals, because seven of the 12 championship bouts will be all-Soviet matches. The Soviets also have fighters in the other five weight classes, and will meet the United States in the final men's volleyball game Saturday.

The Soviets earned two gold medals in weightlifting, and one each in women's gymnastics, men's judo, men's team handball and women's team handball Friday.

The only gold they didn't win was in the snatch category in weightlifting's 100-kilogram (220-pound) class, and they didn't miss that by much.

Soviet Yuri Dandik and Romania's Nick Vlad each lifted 187.5 kilograms (413 1/2 pounds), but Vlad was given the gold medal, because he weighs less than Dandik.

The Soviet's Ruslan Bataev, third at 185.0 kilograms (407 1/2 pounds) in the clean-and-jerk category, lifting 227.5 kilograms (501 1/2 pounds), and won the overall title, with a total of 472.5 kilograms (999 1/2 pounds).

All the weightlifting winners were far off the world records in their respective categories.

In women's gymnastics, Vera Kolesnikova led a 1-2-3 Soviet sweep, collecting 78.55 points for the all-around title. Her teammates, Elena Shushunova and Oksana Omelianchik, who had tied for first place in the last world championships, finished 2-3, with 78.40 and 78.10, respectively.

"I didn't think I could win against Elena and Oksana," Kolesnikova said. "I am very happy that I beat the two world champions."

In judo, the Soviet's Vladimir Shestakov won the gold in the 78-kilogram (171 1/2-pound) division, beating Marcel Pietre of France 7-0 in the final bout.

In team handball, both Soviet teams finished with 5-0 records, men completing their perfect performance with a 26-11 victory over around title. Her teammates, Elena Poland and the women winning their final match, 26-15, over Hungary.

Team handball provided the U.S. with its only medal of the day, as the men finished in a second-place tie with Czechoslovakia, each with 2-3 records. The Americans, after winning their first two matches, suffered their third straight defeat Friday, 27-22, to a Soviet federation team, despite six goals by Steve Goss of Castro Valley, Calif.

The winless U.S. women's handball team completed play with a 19-13 loss to West Germany.

In volleyball, the U.S. and Soviet teams set up Saturday's showdown with come-from-behind semifinal victories.

Norman shatters record in taking British lead

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) — On Wednesday, Greg Norman called Turnberry "impossible." On Thursday, in the first round of the 115th British Open Golf Championship, he called the course "humiliating."

On Friday, he called it his own.

Norman matched the course record, the tournament record, the record in all the four major championships, with a 7-under-par 63 and, in the process, took a two-shot lead at the halfway point at 3-under 137.

And still, he said, he found it "disappointing" — "I was trying to shoot 60."

It was, quite simply, one of the great rounds of golf ever played.

The Australian scattered eight birdies, an eagle and three bogeys across his card for a jaunty journey through chilly breezes and occasional misty rain. Only a bogey on the final hole kept him from having the best round ever played in the British Open, the U.S. Open, the Masters or the PGA.

As the word spread through the gorse and over the dunes lining the Firth of Clyde, thousands and thousands of golf-mad Scots flocked to his side, eeking and burring in excitement.

"By the time we finished, we must have had 15,000 in the gallery," Norman said.

There was not a single American among the top nine.

Gordon Brand, a 30-year-old English touring pro, was the only other man to break par for 36 holes.

He was at 139 after a second-round 68 in weather that improved greatly over Thursday's gales but remained chilly and breezy.

It was two more strokes back to Tommy Nakajima, who now ranks as Japan's best player; and Nick Faldo of England. Nakajima had a second-round 67, Faldo 70.

Bernhard Langer of West Germany, a former Masters champion, matched par 70 and was at 142.

At 144 were first-round leader Ian Woosnam of Wales, Anders Forsbrand of Sweden, Gregory Turner of New Zealand and Jose-Maria Canizares of Spain, who had a 68. Woosnam slipped to 74, Forsbrand had 73 and Turner 71.

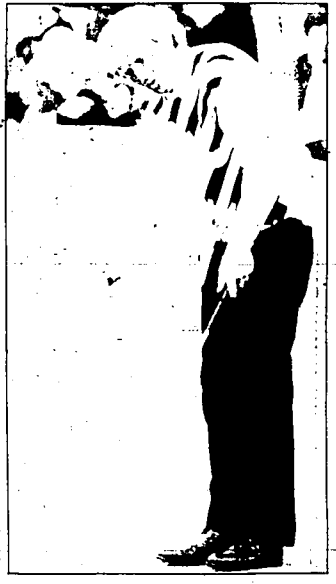

Ray Floyd, the current U.S. Open champion, along with Payne Stewart, Bob Tway, Donnie Hammond, Gary Koch and D.A. Weir were the best U.S. players at 145. Floyd shot 67, Stewart 69, Weir 70, Tway and Hammond 71 and Koch 72.

The rest of the Americans were scattered out somewhere at the back of the pack, or on the roads leading to town and airports.

PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman, making an appearance as a competitor after 12 years as one of the U.S. Open and PGA title-holder (175-156) also missed the cut.

Former U.S. and British Open champ Johnny Miller (77-152), Tom Kile (74-152) and Larry Nelson, a former U.S. Open and PGA title-holder (175-156) also missed the cut.

Jack Nicklaus, a three-time winner of this title, just 33 eagle-birdie finish would do it," he said.

GREG NORMAN On a day of day made it. He again scored an eagle-3 on the 17th, shot 73 and was at 151, the cutoff figure.

Norman was by far the star of the day.

And even with the mob of followers, there was no undue noise or distraction for the man who went to the gallery ropes to challenge some hecklers a month ago at the U.S. Open at Shinnecock Hills in Southampton, N.Y.

"All those people, thousands of them, and I was standing over a putt on the 17th and I couldn't hear a sound. It was as if there was no other golf shots being played on the course. It was eerie," Norman said.

And it was at that point, looking at an 18-foot eagle putt, that Norman began "thinking about shooting 60. A Jack Nicklaus, a three-time winner of this title, just 33 eagle-birdie finish would do it," he said.

Brain tumor hospitalizes Howser

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Dick Howser, manager of the defending world champion Kansas City Royals, will undergo surgery next week for a brain tumor and miss the rest of this season, team officials said Friday.

"The neurosurgeon does not feel that this surgery is life-threatening," Dr. Paul Meyer, team physician, said at a news conference.

"Under the best of circumstances, the recovery process would require three or four months. We will not know whether it is benign or malignant until we have sections taken and studied under the microscope."

Meyer said doctors felt the tumor "has been there for some time," but declined to answer specific medical questions.

Howser, 50, was admitted to Kansas City's St. Luke's hospital Friday morning, barely 48 hours after managing the American League to a 3-2 victory in the All-Star Game in Houston. Howser missed the Royals' game against Cleveland Thursday night with what was announced as a sore neck. Meyer said he was taken to the hospital for tests after he became disoriented.

"We would ask him who is this man," said Meyer, pointing at the Royals' General Manager John Schuerholz. "He didn't know. We asked him who was the game last night and he said the Royals, but he didn't know the score."

"Any time a person has a brain tumor, it is serious," Dr. Meyer said. "But there is no way to know whether the tumor is malignant or not until the surgery."

Mike Ferraro, a close friend of Howser's and the Royals' third base coach, was appointed interim manager.

"Driving to the park today, I kept thinking about all the things Dick and I have been through," said Ferraro, dabbing at his swollen eyes. "But Dick is a battler. He's always been a battler and I have faith that he can handle any situation."

None of the coaches said much about Northern Arizona, which finished 1-6 and 3-8, or Montana, which finished 2-5 and 3-8.

Keystone drop Scott Bradley, bottom, of Seattle slides into second base knocking over shortstop Rey Quiñonez (51) of Boston during action in the Kingdom.

Bradley was safe on the play and Quiñonez was charged with an error. Reaching for the ball is second baseman Marty Barrett.

Falls-Falls run goes today

By STEVE CRUMP Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — It isn't the largest of the ubiquitous fun runs in the Magic Valley, nor is it the oldest. But the Falls to Falls Fun Run bids fair to be called the granddaddy of them all.

The eighth renewal will begin this morning at Twin Falls Park in the Snake River Canyon northeast of here. The 5.3-mile course moves out of the canyon, moves west along the south rim of the canyon to Shoshone Falls Road, ending at Dierkes Lake in the canyon.

Since Twin Falls dentist Dr. Bob Ridgeway began the event in 1978, it has consistently drawn both serious and recreational runners — the former attracted by the steep climb out of the canyon at the race's start, the latter by the gentle topography during the last 3 1/2 miles of the race.

"In the past we've experimented with different routes, including running the race in the other direction," said Bob Donnelley, this year's race organizer. "Most people seem to like it best this way."

About 100 runners are expected to participate, according to Donnelley.

"That's about where we were last year, and I expect that's about how many we'll have this time," he said. "We could have a few more or a few less; it just depends on who's available, and who's passing through the area."

Donnelley said he expects several entries from the Wood River Valley, Pocatello and the Boise area.

Chris Williams of Twin Falls and Laura Jensen of Jerome are the defending men's and women's champions. Donnelley said organizers wouldn't know until this morning who would be participating in this year's race.

"We'll take entries until a half-minute before it starts," he quipped.

Williams' winning time last year was 28 minutes, 37 seconds, about 30 seconds slower than the time in which he won the event in 1984. Jensen's winning time was 34:30.

In addition to the open division, there will be competition for men and women in the 13-and-under, 14-19, 20-29, 30-39, 40-49, 50-59 and 60-and-over divisions.

Top finishers will receive awards; all entrants will get T-shirts.

Check-in time is 7 a.m., with the race scheduled to start at 8. Entry fee is $10.

Donnelley emphasized that no parking is allowed at Twin Falls Park; all vehicles must be left at the top of grade. Trans Van bus service will be available to bring competitors back to their cars from Dierkes Lakes.

Donnelley's Sports and Twin Falls radio station KREP-AM are sponsoring this year's event.

Reno ranks as Big Sky coaches' selection for league crown

By BOB BLACK The Associated Press

SUN VALLEY — The Big Sky Conference coaches say Nevada-Reno will be main contender for the league football title this year, but Wolf Pack Coach Chris Ault isn't clearing a spot in the trophy case just yet.

"Absolutely not," Ault said, when asked if he thinks his team already has the conference crown wrapped up for 1986. "We'll be in the thick of it (but) it's a tough schedule for us."

Ault, who's piloted UNR for a decade, has to take his team to Montana State, Weber State, Idaho State and Boise State this fall. And the coaches say all four of those teams will be strong this year.

On paper, UNR looks unbeatable, with six starters returning on offense, but Ault said he's concerned about his offensive line, where only titles, has the conference champion repeated.

That factor could work in Nevada-Reno's favor. The Wolf Pack finished second in the conference overall, and advanced to the second round of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs before losing to Furman 35-12.

Idaho, where Keith Gilbertson is a rookie coach, also finished at 6-4 in the conference, but the Vandals won the title because of their 25-21 win over Nevada-Reno early in the season.

"Our goal is going to be to win as many football games as we can," said Gilbertson, an assistant coach at Idaho last season. "I think we can contend for the championship and I think we'll have something to say about it."

Like the Ault, Gilbertson has a core of starters returning to the offensive backfield, but only one lineman is backfield.

"Every year I think Nevada-Reno is going to contend," Gilbertson said. Boise State will be good. Idaho State and Montana State will be right in there."

Montana State was a disappointment last year. The Bobcats, who won the conference title and national championship one year earlier, finished in the Big Sky canyon with a 1-4 conference record, 2-9 overall.

"I hope we're better, because if we're not better, we're in a lot of trouble," said MSU Coach Dave Arnold. "We're kind of in an 'every other year syndrome.'"

In even years, the Bobcats have been good, but in odd years they've had trouble staying out of last place. This year, an even year, Arnold is more optimistic.

"I hope they pick us ninth again and we'll be back in the thick of it."

Malay adds luster to golf field

TWIN FALLS — The late addition of newly crowned state amateur champion Joe Malay, Welsch, and Aaron Bengoechea to the state added more zest to the Canyon Springs Amateur Golf Tournament opening today.

Malay and Bengoechea will be joined by Steve Hays of Blackfoot and Doyle Corbett of Ketchum along with brothers Jason and Steve Meyerhoeffer to account for most of the top 10 in last weekend's state, added more zest to the Canyon Springs Amateur Golf Tournament opening today.

The tournament will run through two days with the final foursome slated to leave the tee about 2 p.m. Sunday, reports host Professional Ed Ericson. A total of 123 has entered the event, which offers more than $2,000 in added money.

Morris tames Texas for third straight shutout

DETROIT (AP) — Jack Morris pitched a two-hitter for his third consecutive shutout, while Kirk Gibson went 4-for-4, including an RBI single, as the Detroit Tigers beat the Texas Rangers 5-0 Friday night.

Morris, 10-6, moved into a tie with California's Mike Witt for the American League lead in complete games with nine and matched Milwaukee's Juan Nieves with his third shutout. The only hits he allowed were doubles by Scott Fletcher in the first and Don Slaught in the second.

Morris, who has 31 consecutive scoreless innings and one earned run in his last 41 innings, beat Minnesota 7-0 on July 9 and followed that with a 5-0 triumph over Kansas City on July 13. He became the first Tiger to pitch three straight shutouts since Mickey Lolich in 1967. Morris struck out 11 Rangers and walked two. He retired 18 straight batters between the second and eighth innings.

Yankees 8, White Sox 4

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Pagliarulo went 3-for-3, including a three-run homer and an RBI single, and Don Mattingly homered and drove in two runs Friday night, leading the New York Yankees to an 8-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Pagliarulo put New York ahead 5-3 in the fourth atop Floyd Bannister, 5-6. With one out, Mike Easier singled, Butch Wynegar doubled and Pagliarulo followed with his 22nd homer, but only his second off a left-hander. Pagliarulo has homered six times in his last 11 games, and has hit five home runs this season against Chicago.

Pagliarulo scored an insurance run in the seventh when he opened with a double off Bannister, took third on a sacrifice and came home on a wild pitch by Dave Schmidt.

Twins 7, Orioles 3

BALTIMORE (AP) — Kirby Puckett and Gary Gaetti homered to open the game for Minnesota, and Puckett and Kent Hrbek added homers later as the Twins defeated the Baltimore Orioles 7-3 Friday night.

Puckett hit his 18th homer, his fourth leading off a game, on the second pitch from Scott McGreer, and five pitches later, Gaetti connected for his 19th.

McGreer, 6-9, was lifted before he retired a batter. He followed the two homers with a walk to Hrbek, a single by Tom Brunansky and an RBI double by Roy Smalley.

Indians 3, Royals 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Brett Butler scored on shortstop Buddy Dick Hovsler who underwent surgery for a brain tumor. Third base coach error Friday night and the Cleveland Indians snapped a three-game losing streak with a 3-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Butler, who scored all three Cleveland runs, singled with one out and went to second when Joe Carter singled for his fourth hit.

Reliever Dan Quisenberry, 0-4, then coaxed a potential double-play grounder from Andre Thornton, but Gianfranco swung wildly to second base, allowing Butler to score.

The winner was Bryan Oelkers, 1-1, the fourth Indians pitcher. Oelkers posted his first major-league victory with two innings of hitless relief.

Astro Knepper pins first shutout of year on Mets

HOUSTON (AP) — Alan Ashby hit a two-run single in the seventh and Bob Knepper pitched a three-hitter as the Houston Astros defeated New York 3-0 Friday night and handed the National League East-leading Mets their first shutout this year.

Knepper and Ron Darling had allowed only three baserunners each in his last 41 innings, beat Minnesota 7-0 on July 9 and followed that with a 5-0 triumph over Kansas City on July 13. He became the first Tiger to pitch three straight shutouts since Mickey Lolich in 1967. Morris struck out 11 Rangers and walked two. He retired 18 straight batters between the second and eighth innings.

Reds 6, Phillies 5

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dave Parker drove in four runs with a single and a three-run homer Friday night, powering resurgent Tom Browning and the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-5 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Browning, 8-7, pitched six shutout innings to pull his record above .500 for the first time this season, getting his fifth win in his last six decisions. He faltered with a 5-0 lead in the seventh, giving up runs on Von Hayes' single and Glenn Wilson's double before yielding to Ron Robinson.

Robinson struggled, giving up a sacrifice fly to John Russell and an RBI single to Steve Jeltz before ending the inning. He gave up another run to the Phillies in the ninth on Ron Iacone's run-scoring groundout before John Franco came on for his 15th save.

The game ended on a bang-bang play when Glenn Wilson was thrown out at home by Dave Parker attempting to score on a single to right by Luis Aguayo.

Sanderson was in control thereafter, striking out nine and limiting the Giants to two walks before yielding to Smith, who struck out three in earning his 15th save.

Cubs 2, Giants 1

CHICAGO (AP) — Scott Sanderson limited San Francisco to one hit, a fourth-inning double by Jeffrey Leonard, through seven innings, and Ken Smith pitched two perfect innings in relief as the Chicago Cubs beat the Giants 2-1 on Friday.

Sanderson, 5-6, retired the first 11 batters before Leonard doubled to right. Chili Davis followed with a hard grounder that handuffed third baseman Dave Lopes and bounded into left field. Lopes was given an error on the play, which allowed Leonard to race home to score an unearned run.

Sanderson was in control thereafter, striking out nine and limiting the Giants to two walks before yielding to Smith, who struck out three in earning his 15th save.

Pirates 12, Padres 7

PITTSBURGH (AP) — U.L. Washington's bases-loaded triple keyed a five-run Pittsburgh fifth inning and Rick Reuschel ended a seven-game losing streak as the Pirates defeated the San Diego Padres 12-7 Friday night.

Washington had three hits and drove in four runs as Reuschel, ending a career record-tying losing streak, won for the first time since June 2. Reuschel, 5-11, allowed three runs and nine hits over seven innings before needing relief help.

The victory was the Pirates' first in four home games, against San Diego this season.

Reliever Dan Quisenberry, 0-4, then coaxed a potential double-play grounder from Andre Thornton, but Gianfranco swung wildly to second base, allowing Butler to score.

The winner was Bryan Oelkers, 1-1, the fourth Indians pitcher. Oelkers posted his first major-league victory with two innings of hitless relief.

It was the first game for the Royals since learning that Manager Dick Howser will undergo surgery for a brain tumor. Third base coach error Friday night and the Cleveland Indians snapped a three-game losing streak with a 3-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Butler, who scored all three Cleveland runs, singled with one out and went to second when Joe Carter singled for his fourth hit.

Reliever Dan Quisenberry, 0-4, then coaxed a potential double-play grounder from Andre Thornton, but Gianfranco swung wildly to second base, allowing Butler to score.

Top seeds named for Jerome meet

JEROME — Jess Olavarría of Twin Falls and Marcia Slavin of Twin Falls are the top seeds in the annual Jerome Tennis Association Membership Tournament, to be played today and Sunday at the Jerome City Tennis Center.

Meet organizers were still counting entries, but expected more than 50 players to participate in the event, sponsored this year by ABS, Paul's Market and Zioff's.

Olavarría, coming off the men's A singles championship of the Blue Lakes Mall-Jensen's Jewellers tournament in Twin Falls last weekend, will have to contend with Ron Fish, the second seed, in men's A singles. Slavin is the only seeded player in women's A singles.

Olavarría and Fish will combine as the top seeds in men's A doubles, seeded ahead of Ron Renwick and Doug Blewitt, both of Jerome. There are no seeds in women's B doubles, which will be conducted on a round-robin format.

In a mixed doubles, Bob and Emily Perry of Jerome are the top seeds, followed by Dave and Donna Peterson of Jerome.

The other seeded events are men's B singles, where Todd Amundson of Jerome occupies the No. 1 spot, and B mixed doubles, in which John and Sandy Clark are the top seeds.

Competition will begin at 8:30 a.m. this morning, with play to advance through the semifinal round tonight. Championships will be played Sunday, starting with the men's and women's A singles at 9 a.m.

Caribbean nations join in commonwealth boycott

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — The governments of Trinidad and Tobago and Jamaica announced Friday night their national teams will not compete in next week's Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh, joining a boycott called to protest Great Britain's refusal to impose economic sanctions on South Africa.

The two nations, joined by the Bahamas, several African states and India in supporting the boycott, and other Commonwealth Caribbean governments were expected to follow suit.

In a speech in Parliament Friday night, Trinidad External Affairs Minister Errol Mahabir said the government had taken the decision to boycott the Games as a "complete act of solidarity with all those who struggle against apartheid."

He also indicated he believed the rest of the Commonwealth Caribbean would take a similar position.

"This is one of the few times that Caricom (Caribbean Community) countries have coordinated their position on an issue," Mahabir said. "On this occasion, our position is far better coordinated than previously."

Meanwhile in Kingston, Minister of Youth and Community Development Edmund Bartlett, said the decision to pull Jamaica's 34-member national team out of the games was a question of principle in keeping with the country's anti-apartheid stance.

Bartlett said Prime Minister Edward Seaga has strongly condemned apartheid in international forums.

"Our decision, therefore, which on the surface may affect some of the athletes, is based on a principled position and we feel very strongly that all athletes of Jamaica, on reflection, will recognize that this decision is the correct one at this time and one which is only in keeping with a position that we have articulated over time, but also is consistent with the very will of the people of Jamaica," Bartlett said.

In his speech to the Trinidad Parliament, Mahabir noted that while his government did not wish to preempt the results of the Aug. 3-5 Commonwealth meeting, "it believes that the present momentum of events might prove invaluable to the efforts to secure the introduction of comprehensive sanctions against South Africa in an attempt to hasten the demise of the apartheid system of apartheid."

Barbados and Guyana announced Thursday they were holding off on a decision pending the results of the African front-line states meeting Friday in Harare.

Barbados Foreign Minister Cameron Tudor said after a Cabinet meeting Thursday night that the government had reviewed its earlier decision that the national team would be permitted to compete in the Games.

He added that he had spoken to his counterparts in Trinidad and Tobago and Guyana, and expected all three would take the same position.

Guyana made a similar announcement Thursday night, following a meeting of government officials and sports representatives.

Soviets, East Germans dominate junior track

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Vladimir Sasimovic of the Soviet Union hurled the javelin 258 feet, 8 inches Friday at the World Junior Track and Field Championships to set a world junior mark.

"I went two meters further than I expected. I never thought it would be such an impressive world record," the 19-year-old Soviet athlete said.

His throw bettered the record of 251-7 set in Athens just two weeks ago by New Zealand's Gavin Lovegrove. Lovegrove tossed 243-6 and placed third behind Britain's Mark Robertson, who notched a personal best of 243-7.

East Germany's Katrin Kley clipped almost four seconds off her own world's best junior performance in the women's 10,000 meters, striding home to win the gold medal in 33 minutes, 19.6 seconds.

There is no official world record for the event since it is not included in Olympic competition, but Kley's time was the fastest since the distance became part of official track contests.

"I love long distances. I'm as strong as a man," the 18-year-old East German who trains with a marathon runner, said.

Kenya's Nora Malariga, running barefoot, took the silver medal in 33:57.9 in her first race over 10,000 meters.

East Germans picked up four out of a possible five gold medals in the women's events Friday, with Ilke Tilkack equalling the European junior record of 13.10 seconds in the 100 meters hurdles.

Claudia Brill edged American Kelli Roberts, into second-place meters, striding home to win the women's 400 meters.

Idaho steelhead runs not hurt by Indian fishing, Wapato says

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A spokesman for the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Commission says he's puzzled by Idaho sportsmen's claims that Gem State steelhead runs are damaged by Indian fishing.

"These sports fishers know as well as we do that steelhead runs into Idaho are better now than they have been since the Snake River dam were completed in the 1970s," said Tim Wapato, director of the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission.

He said steelhead runs into the Snake River basin have almost quadrupled record lows of 1974 through 1982.

Idaho Steelhead and Salmon Unlimited last month blasted a proposal between the states of Oregon and Washington and the Columbia River tribes that would allow Indians to fish longer and on more of the Columbia River.

Steelhead and Salmon Unlimited director Mitch Sanohetena said Idaho produces about 1 million steelhead annually, but sees only about 100,000 return. He contended last month that an extended fishing season would destroy Idaho's steelhead runs.

Sanohetena could not be reached for comment on Friday.

Wapato said in a press release that of the 342,400 steelhead returning from the Pacific Ocean in 1985, 117,100 reached the Snake River Basin. He said that figure included 26,900 wild steelhead.

"Since steelhead runs have increased, the tribes' steelhead catch has also increased," Wapato said.

"However, tribal harvest rates are still conservative."

Sanohetena said last month that the tribes harvested 78,000 steelhead in their annual gill-net harvest of fall chinook salmon Aug. 18 through Sept. 5.

He said he's concerned that number would greatly increase if tribes are allowed to set tribal and commercial fishing seasons, gill-net sizes and other fishing rules without giving Idaho any say, as would be allowed under the proposal.

The proposed compact between Oregon and Washington and the tribes, which would not require court approval, would allow the Columbia River tribes to add 32 miles of Columbia River to the 130-stretch on which they now fish.

Wapato said it is in the tribes' best interest to make sure adequate steelhead and salmon return to Idaho to spawn. "The tribes have depended on these fish since time immemorial, and they aren't going to do anything to jeopardize the resource."

"Indians and Idaho sport fishers can both catch some of the steelhead, but neither can take as many as they might want," Wapato said. "The best way to restore a shared resource is through cooperation."

Part of the long-standing dispute over fish management of the Columbia River also is pending before the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Indictment seen in Bias case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The prosecutor conducting the investigation into the circumstances surrounding the cocaine-induced death of Len Bias told ABC News Friday night that he expects to indict a long-time friend of the University of Maryland basketball star.

Arthur T. Marshall Jr., Prince George's County state's attorney, told ABC that Brian Tribble could be indicted on criminal charges.

"That seems pretty clear to us that he is the person who brought the drugs into the room," Marshall told ABC. "I think that our evidence is sufficient to indict Mr. Tribble."

Bias died of cocaine intoxication on June 19 after collapsing in his dormitory room on the College Park, Md. campus, just two days after being drafted by the NBA Boston Celtics. Tribble is one of three people believed to have been with Bias at the time.

Marshall said he thinks that someone told those in the room with Bias to cover up the drug involvement, ABC said, and added that Maryland basketball Coach Lefty Driesell will be asked if he knows anything about that.

Bias' former high school basketball coach will be asked why he removed articles from the player's room shortly before he died, ABC reported.

Attempts by The Associated Press to reach Marshall at his office and home Friday were unsuccessful.

A man who identified himself as Brian Tribble called for an ambulance for Bias the morning the All-American died and told the emergency dispatcher, "You got to get him back to life," according to a tape of the telephone call.

"Yes, I would like to have and ambulance come to 1103 Washington Hall. It's an emergency," Tribble told the man who answered the Prince George's County emergency line, according to a tape played by WRC-TV in Washington, on its Friday newscast.

The tape was also played on WMAR-TV in Baltimore, which is an affiliate of the Washington station, on its nightly newscast.

"It's Len Bias and he just went to ... and he needs some assistance," said Tribble.

The emergency call was placed at 6:31 a.m. and lasted two minutes, according to WRC-TV.

In answer to Tribble's first statement, the dispatcher said "What are you talking about?"

"I'm talking about someone named Len Bias needs help," Tribble said.

"It doesn't matter what his name is, what's the problem?" the dispatcher asked.

Tribble told the dispatcher Bias was "not breathing right" then again gave the room number where he was in Washington Hall.

When the dispatcher asked, "What's your name?" the caller answered "My name is Brian."

"Brian what?" the dispatcher asked.

"Tribble."

During the two minute conversation, Tribble, in a halting voice that was at times difficult to understand, told the dispatcher he was in Len Bias' room but did not know the address of Washington Hall and attempted to give the dispatcher directions.

"Please come as soon as you can. It's no joke," Tribble said.

Pro grid trial now in hands of jury

NEW YORK (AP) — On the final day of the NFL's defense in the USFL's antitrust suit, the issue was framed perfectly for the jury of six non-football fans who will begin deliberating next week.

Who do you believe? Donald Trump or Pete Rozelle.

After 49 days of testimony, 35 witnesses and nearly 6,300 pages of trial transcript, the panel must now decide whether to award the USFL up to $1.69 billion and knock the NFL off at least one of the three major networks. Or the jurors can side with the NFL and say the USFL is directly responsible for its problems.

If the USFL wins, the case will be appealed; if it doesn't, the four-year-old league is likely to fold.

The USFL's case stems from a study presented by Harvard Business School professor Michael Porter on Feb. 29, 1984 to about 65 NFL executives. Harvey Myerson, the USFL's lead counsel, calls the study "How to Conquer the USFL," and says it has prompted a number of NFL actions, including limiting the networks' entitlements to USFL owners and attempts to drive up USFL costs.

The USFL also claims that the NFL's presence on all three networks — ABC, CBS and NBC — is an antitrust violation that has prevented the younger league from obtaining a network TV contract for its switch to the fall after three spring seasons. Its main weapon for that argument is a CBS in-house study which found that there was no money available for USFL games after the payments to the NFL were considered.

The NFL says it is blameless on the television issue — it had its TV contracts in place long before there was a USFL.

As to the Porter study, Rozelle wrote a memo ordering it ignored — he said he became "physically ill" when he read it. The NFL argument is that the USFL did itself in, overspending wildly for players, moving out of major markets into minor ones and, finally, switching to the fall.

"We have met the enemy and they are us," owner Tad Taube of the USFL's Oakland Invaders wrote in a letter gleefully introduced by the NFL during the trial.

But credibility may be as important as facts, and credibility may come down to Rozelle and Trump, who provide a clear-cut contrast for a jury overwhelmed with fuzzy facts and dozens of names.

The contrast involves a meeting between the two that took place March 12, 1984 at New York's Pierre Hotel. The only things the two parties agree on are the place, date and that Trump paid for the room.

Trump, the New York real estate magnate and owner of the USFL's New Jersey Generals, said the meeting was suggested by Rozelle, whom he described as "a friend."

At the session, he said, Rozelle held out the prospect of an NFL franchise for him if he would drop the lawsuit and keep the USFL from switching from spring to fall. Myerson tied that to his conspiracy theory by pointing to a section of the Harvard study suggesting that the NFL try to "co-opt" the richest and most powerful USFL owners.

Rozelle's version is that he was a very casual acquaintance, certainly not a "friend" of Trump, whom the NFL maintains masterminded the suit and the switch to fall to parlay a $5 million investment into a $70 million NFL franchise. Rozelle said Trump suggested the meeting and opened the discussion by saying he had been assigned by the USFL to develop the antitrust suit.

"But he said, 'I don't want to do these things,'" Rozelle testified. "He said, 'I want an NFL expansion team in New York.' And he said, and I'm quoting him exactly, 'I would get some stiff to buy the New York Generals, my team in the USFL.'"

Golf

Cochrane leads by stroke

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — Russ Cochrane shot a 3-under-par 67 Friday and grabbed a one-stroke lead after two rounds of the $400,000 Hardee's Golf Classic.

While Cochrane birdied three holes and shot par on the rest, Bob Lohr, the first-round leader, tripped up on his drives and fell into a five-way tie for second.

Tied with Lohr at 134 after 36 holes were: Curt Byrum, who was in second place, a stroke behind Lohr, after the first round; Eduardo Romero, Jeff Sluman and Mark Wiebe.

Calvin Peete, the highest-ranked player on the 1986 PGA money-winning list entered here — at No. 8 with $313,000 — was two strokes off the pace at 5-under 135, in a five-way tie for seventh.

Also at 135 were Scott Hoch, a two-time champion of this Quad-Cities area event, in 1980 and 1984;

Mark Calcavecchia, Mark Hayes and Blaine McCallister.

Defending champion Dan Forsman was in a crowd of nine golfers who finished Friday with 3-under-par 137s at the 6,514-yard, par-70 Oakwood Country Club course southeast of Moline.

Lohr birdied three holes and bogeyed two on the front-nine Friday, and seemed poised to retain the lead at mid-point of the PGA tourney, which pays $72,000 to the winner.

But he drove into a bush off the 16th fairway, took a penalty stroke and then three-putted the hole for a double-bogey.

"I didn't drive it well yesterday and I didn't drive it well today," Lohr said.

"But I'm only one shot out of the lead, so it's not the end of the world," said the 25-year-old from Orlando, Fla.

Korean outlasts Bradley

DANVER, Mass. (AP) — South Korea's Ok-Hee Ku, bidding for fame and fortune as a rookie on the U.S. women's golf tour, shot a second straight 4-under-par 68 to hold off Pat Bradley and retain the lead after two rounds of the $275,000 LPGA Boston Elve Classic.

Ku, nicknamed "Cookie" after joining the LPGA Tour in January, has a 36-hole total of 136 on Tara Ferncroft's short, but exacting course.

That gave Ku a one-stroke lead over Bradley, who became the third player in LPGA history to reach 52 million in prize money this year while leading all players with earnings of more than $300,000 in the Tour's first six months.

Bradley, starting the second round three strokes behind after an opening 71, applied the pressure on Ku as a "chip-shooter." The former-New England champion from nearby Westford shot a 6-under 66, finishing an outstanding round with an eagle 3 on the 485-yard 18th hole.

Rookie Deb Richard, a former U.S. Amateur champion, was third, two strokes off the pace.

Newman claims Miami forced his retirement

By The Associated Press

Four-time All-Pro Ed Newman grudgingly retired Friday after he couldn't reach agreement on contract terms with the Miami Dolphins. The 35-year-old guard was trying to come back from knee surgery.

"They have put me in the category of involuntary retirement," Newman said. "I don't agree, but I'm not bitter. I will not be on the field this year."

Newman didn't play last year after suffering his third serious knee injury. In addition to those surgeries, he fought and won a battle with thyroid cancer early in his career.

"It was a guy that battled adversity always had a great positive attitude," Dolphins Coach Don Shula said. "He developed from a mechanical player, to an aware player, to one of the best guards in professional football."

Despite that praise, the Dolphins didn't offer Newman a contract he felt worthy of his skills this year. "Negotiations ended after an early impasse," Newman said. "In good conscience, I could not accept less. With equal consideration, the Dolphins would not offer more."

"I'm not a slave—I had a choice." Newman has been attending night classes at the University of Miami law school. He said he will finish his classroom requirements for his law degree in August.

The Dolphins also announced that Charles Bowser, a 26-year-old linebacker, returned to camp Friday, less than a day after walking out of camp.

A defensive star for the 1984 AFC champions, Bowser was sidelined by an ankle injury last year and played only two games in October. His wife, Camilla, was killed in an auto accident, leaving him with a 1-year-old daughter. Since then, his father and grandfather have died.

Bowser underwent two ankle operations in the off-season, but recently reinjured the ankle and hadn't participated in workouts.

Shula said Bowser's agent has asked that the linebacker be traded. "Maybe the guy just doesn't want to play football here because of the memories of the tragic things that happened to him last year," Shula said. "I would certainly honor his request to try to trade him, but you can't just pick up a phone and say: 'Are you interested in a guy who didn't play last year and is not healthy now?'"

Benny Perrin, the St. Louis Cardinals' veteran defensive back, failed a physical exam on Friday and may be forced to retire because of an injury to his right knee that had healed.

Perrin has undergone three operations on his right knee, two in the past 16 months.

"I'm not officially retiring but after visiting with the doctor, if that little piece of bone—it's about the size of a dime—hasn't filled or regenerated by now, there's a good chance it's not going to ever regenerate," Perrin said.

Perrin, 26, missed nine games last season after starting at free safety the previous three seasons. He called the defensive signals for St. Louis. He said he didn't want to go through another year like 1985, where at the end of the season he was "hobbling through practices."

Cardinals spokesman Greg Gladysiewski said no decision had been made on Perrin's status with the team. He said Perrin probably will end up on a reserve list for players physically unable to perform.

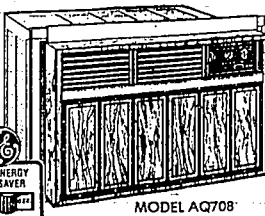

The world champion Chicago Bears worked out in 98-degree heat on the second day of their training camp. Two veteran Bears—Al Harris, who missed the championship season because of a contract dispute, and fullback Matt Suhey—appeared Friday for their first practice session.

Harris arrived in camp late Thursday, saying he felt "like a rookie again" after missing 1 1/2 years of football. "I've come back to get my Super Bowl ring," he said.

Veteran safety Gary Fenech agreed to report late Friday after reaching contract terms with the team, said Bears General Manager Jerry Vainis. Defensive end Richard Dent planned to arrive Saturday while negotiations continued on his new contract.

The Pittsburgh Steelers opened camp Friday minus an unprecedented four of their top six draft choices.

Bowser walks out of camp

MIAMI (AP) — Linebacker Charles Bowser, whose personal life has been fraught with tragedy in the past year, has walked out of Miami Dolphins training camp, the club said Friday.

Bowser, 26, has five days to return to camp or he will be placed on the Reserved-Left Camp list and won't be eligible to play for the Dolphins this year, said Head Coach Don Shula. Bowser left Thursday night.

A defensive star for the 1984 AFC champions, Bowser was sidelined by an ankle injury last year and played only two games, making four tackles.

In October, his wife, Camilla, was killed in an auto accident, leaving him with a 1-year-old daughter. Since then, his father and grandfather have died.

The 6-foot-3, 235-pound defensive player underwent two ankle operations in the off-season, but he had recently reinjured the ankle while lifting weights and had not participated in workouts since training camp began Monday. The Dolphin coaches expressed disappointment in Bowser's physical condition.

Bowser's agent had said Bowser is interested in being traded to another team, Shula said.

Fenech stops McCrory in 14th

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Jeff Fenech of Australia overpowered American Steve McCrory and stopped him in the 14th round Friday night, retaining his International Boxing Federation bantamweight title.

Reared on by a crowd of 11,000 at the Sydney Entertainment Center, Fenech dominated McCrory for most of the bout, scoring with powerful rights and combinations to the body.

Referee Paul Moore halted the contest after one minute and 41 seconds of the 14th round with McCrory helpless as Fenech unleashed a barrage of punches.

"That was the best performance of my career," Fenech said after the fight. "He was very quick and I had to use all my strength. I'm a street fighter."

Fenech, who was making his third title defense, improved his record to 14-0 with 12 knockouts.

McCrory, the 22-year-old flyweight gold medalist at the 1984 Summer Olympic Games, suffered his first defeat against 11 victories and one draw.

Suns treating Bulgarian

PHOENIX, ARIZ. (AP) — The Phoenix Suns have put forward Georgi Glouchkov through a series of laboratory tests to determine the cause of the Bulgarian's weight-loss problem.

A lackluster performance in this week's rookie-free agent camp alarmed officials of the National Basketball Association team, who believe the second-year pro is not at full strength.

Suns physician Dr. Richard Emerson said the tests were done Thursday but the results won't be available until sometime next week.

However, he did give the 6-foot-8 Glouchkov clearance to play for Phoenix's entry in the Northwest Summer League.

"It's too early to tell if there's anything of substance that's bothering him," Emerson said. "Right now, we don't suspect anything."

Glouchkov, 26, made only seven of 24 shots from the field in the three-day camp at nearby Arizona State University for an average of 3.5 points in the six scrimmages. He was fourth among the 18 players participating with 27 rebounds.

Signed after becoming the Suns' eighth-round draft pick in June 1985, Glouchkov weighed 240 pounds yet finished the season last year at 225 and weighed 218 after camp ended Wednesday night.
