Cleanup crew wipes away Shoshone Falls paint daubs

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The layers of spray paint that have become a familiar sight at Shoshone Falls Park were removed Tuesday, the last day of the Region IV Development Association cleanup project. The young adults involved in the project had been chipping away at the spray-painted graffiti for around five weeks, said Region IV board member Rob Lundgren. Patches of paint dating back to the 1950s were found in some places. Except for some high places that the workers could not reach, the rocky canyon walls above Shoshone Falls Park are now "clean slates," Lundgren said. The problem that the cleaning committee and the city now have is keeping the walls clean. "The city recognizes the time, money, and effort put into this project. I'm sure something can be done," he said. The city has an ordinance against vandalism, which will possibly be strengthened in the future, City Manager Tom Courtney said. The maximum possible fine for a crime such as vandalism is $300 or six months in jail.

"At this point, we hope the City Council will either pass or enforce an ordinance that will set a fine of $300 for anyone caught spray painting down at the Falls," Lundgren said.

Different methods of deterring the would-be "artists" from covering the rocks and building walls with graffiti a second time have been discussed among the Region IV members. Lundgren said he hoped the sight of clean walls would be enough to turn people away from vandalism. "I hope they realize that the area is a tourist attraction and it's not good for us as a city to have all that paint on the walls," he said. Increased patrolling of the Shoshone Falls area will also be encouraged. If nothing else works, a "paint rock" may be set aside as a designated place to spray paint, similar to those found at most high schools, Lundgren said. Overall, the project was a success, he said. The crew finished ahead of time and under the projected budget. "We came through fairly injury-free. We had a couple of small accidents, but they really weren't that serious," he said. Though future vandalism in the Shoshone Falls Park is likely, another cleaning project is not planned, he added.

Senators, secretary clash over sanctions

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON, The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz told Congress Wednesday that imposing punitive sanctions on South Africa would lock the Reagan administration into a "straitjacket of rigid legislation" and weaken or destroy the ability of the United States to influence events.

"The question you have before you is whether to pull the plug and leave," Shultz said.

But senator after senator told Shultz they believe the administration's South Africa policy is unequal to the task of compelling change in a society they said is rapidly becoming polarized and descending into violence.

Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., announced they will offer a long series of South Africa sanctions as an amendment to the pending debt ceiling bill.

Their measure called for a ban on new U.S. investment in South Africa, a ban on U.S. bank loans to the South African private sector, a ban on the importation of South African uranium, coal and steel, and a ban on the import of South African food and agricultural products.

Other steps are: The ending of landing rights in the United States for South African aircraft, a ban on permitting U.S. consulates from offering services to South African citizens, the termination of all U.S. assistance to investment in South Africa and trade there, a ban on U.S. government contact with South African companies, a ban on U.S.-aid to the South African energy industry and a ban on the promotion of U.S. tourism to South Africa.

Most of the new sanctions could be lifted if South Africa frees black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela.

In testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee which echoed President Reagan's televised address on Tuesday, Shultz said the administration is prepared to take coordinated action with U.S. allies "to change the mix of our pressures, positive and negative, to meet the rapidly changing course of events in South Africa.

But he declined to spell out those measures, saying it was usually counterproductive to threaten another country. In any case, he said he remained skeptical about the ability of economic sanctions to have any positive effect.

Shultz had a particularly sharp exchange with Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., after Biden said "blacks have tried everything available to them in the last 20 years" and nothing has worked.

Biden said there were few or no options open to blacks. Shultz retorted, "I hate to hear a senator of the United States calling for violence."

Biden answered, "I am not calling for violence... I am ashamed at the lack of moral backbone" of U.S. policy.

"I resent that deeply," said Shultz. "There is plenty of moral backbone here."

Westerners fail to head off nuclear waste dump efforts

By JILL LAWRENCE, The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House on Wednesday passed a $15.5 billion energy and water bill after defeating an emotional effort by Westerners to halt the Energy Department's controversial nuclear-waste dump site program.

The Energy and Water Development appropriations measure was approved 329 to 82 and sent to the Senate. It includes $10.8 billion for DOE activities, including nuclear research and atomic weapons development, as well as $4.1 billion for water projects and money for several independent agencies.

Under the bill, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers would receive nearly $1.2 billion for maintenance and construction on dozens of navigation, flood protection and erosion control projects. The Bureau of Reclamation would get $592 million for water delivery projects, repairs to seven dams in California and Arizona and a new water supply system for Needles, Calif.

The nuclear waste site amendment, voted down 351-68, would have eliminated $291 million earmarked for excavations and other work at prospective radioactive dump sites in Texas, Nevada and Washington.

The lopsided vote on the high-level radioactive waste dump was more a reflection of most lawmakers' relief that their states are out of the running than a vote of confidence in the DOE site selection process.

Rep. Gerry Sikorski, D-Ill., called the DOE program fraught with error, incompetence and secrecy, impervious to citizen participation and callous to local governments. But he and others said the amendment, while preserving some $380 million to pay salaries, computer fees and other program costs, would send DOE back to square one and put Minnesota and many other states back into consideration as potential sites.

At another point, Biden recalled that Reagan called for a South

Hepatitis B vaccine gains FDA nod

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A genetically engineered vaccine to prevent hepatitis B infection was approved Wednesday by the Food and Drug Administration, which said the laboratory product showed only a lingering fear of catching AIDS from a blood transfusion.

The new product is the first genetically engineered vaccine approved for human use. FDA Commissioner Dr. Frank Young said the technique "opens up a new era of vaccine production... The principle, this type of technique, should be able to be extended to any parasite."

The new substance also should ease what Young said were unwarranted fears that the existing vaccine, produced from human blood plasma taken from carriers, may also carry the AIDS virus.

"There is no doubt that the plasma-derived vaccine is safe and its processing kills the virus that causes AIDS," Young said. "But the new lab-made vaccine should further reassure high-risk groups that they can be safely vaccinated."

Those high-risk groups include dental and medical workers, who are exposed to blood and body fluids from hepatitis victims; intravenous drug abusers, who may use infected needles; homosexuals who could get the hepatitis virus from semen or blood; and infants born to hepatitis B carriers.

Hepatitis B, sometimes called serum hepatitis, is a liver infection that is the most serious of the three principal forms. Each year, more than 100,000 Americans are hospitalized with the disease, and about 250 die each year of severe infection.

In addition, about 4,000 Americans die each year of hepatitis-related cirrhosis of the liver, a major complication, and about 900 die of liver cancer linked to hepatitis.

5 Americans indicted in plane switch

By KAREN BENNETT, The Associated Press

ATLANTA — A $50 million plot to lease two Lockheed transport planes to Libya was the largest illegal shipment to Col. Moammar Gadhafi's government ever uncovered, a federal official said Wednesday.

Five Americans and two Libyans were indicted in the scheme. Although there was no direct evidence that Gadhafi was involved, acting U.S. Attorney Steve Cowen said the chief of Libyan armed forces, Gen. Abu Bakr Younes Jaber, was named as an unindicted co-conspirator. When the diversion of the two planes to Libya was discovered, Cowen said, the seven defendants were in negotiations with Lockheed-Georgia to buy two additional planes for $60 million.

Neither Lockheed-Georgia Co., which made the planes, nor any of its employees were charged in the case, although Cowen said his office looked into the activities of the suburban Atlanta aircraft manufacturer. Commerce Department officials are investigating whether civil sanctions should be sought against parties involved in the sale, including Lockheed-Georgia, said Donald Creed, a Commerce spokesman in Washington.

"It's the largest diversion of military equipment ever discovered to Libya," said Steve Hooper, the agent in charge of the Atlanta office of the U.S. Customs Service. President Reagan in February invoked a total embargo of American goods to the northern African nation. For several years, U.S. policy has forbidden the delivery of American aircraft or military equipment to Libya.

The seven indicted Tuesday are accused of purchasing two L-100-30 four-engine propellers, the civilian equivalent of the C-130 military transport plane, and telling Lockheed, the Department of Commerce and the Customs Service that the planes were to be used in the west African nation of Benin for oil exploration.

Instead, the indictment said, the men planned to lease the planes to Contrast, a West German company operated by the Libyan defendants, for use in Libya. They were to be converted to KC-130s, a military tanker plane used for mid-air refueling, the indictment said.

Indicted by a federal grand jury Tuesday were Edward J. Elkins, David E. Baskett and Thomas J. Burnham, all of Santa Maria, Calif.; Franklin D.R. Corcoran of Pismo Beach, Calif.; Carl D. Lilly of California, whose hometown was not available; and Abraham M. Badr and Abdurrahman M. Badr, both Libyan nationals.

The indictment also named five companies: Armoflex Inc., AFI International Ltd. and Quicksilver Systems, all operated by the California residents, and Top Technologie (Gesellschaft Fur Oelproduktionen, GmbH) and Contrast (Vertriebsgesellschaft, GmbH), both German companies operated by the Libyans.

Each defendant is charged with conspiracy to violate the Export Administration Act, two counts of violating the Commodity Control List, one count of making fraudulent statements to the U.S. Customs Service, one count of attempting to defraud the federal government of the right to implement its foreign policy and two counts of interstate wire communication violations.

Balky robot scuttles Titanic search plan

The Associated Press

WOODS HOLE, Mass. — The remote-controlled robot that has scudged the seafloor in search of the Titanic's battered hull and details of its luxurious interior failed to work for the second day in a row Wednesday, scuttling plans for two Navy officers to practice operating the small tethered device.

The officers said in a ship-to-shore conversation with officials at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution that they descended 2 1/2 miles to the sunken hulk and explored the outside of the luxury liner in the three-man research submarine, Alvin.

The problem with Jason Jr., the lawnmower-sized robot tethered to the sub, apparently was a loose electrical wire that was repaired after Wednesday's dive, said Woods Hole spokesman Anne S. Rabushka.

Jason Jr. should be ready to use today in the last of 11 scheduled dives, she said. Wednesday's dive concentrated on exterior parts of the bow already examined in previous dives.

The plan for today's call for chief scientist Robert Ballard, who did not go down Wednesday, to take the final dive in Alvin and send Jason Jr. deeper into the Titanic's interior.

Panel votes cigarette tax hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee, searching for ways to help Congress meet its deficit-reduction targets, voted Wednesday to raise the federal cigarette tax by 8 cents a pack.

But a House panel strongly rejected the proposal.

The votes came as the full Senate began debate on an amendment to restore the automatic spending cuts of the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law. A Supreme Court ruling said the original scheme was unconstitutional.

The finance committee, by an 11-8 vote, approved raising the cigarette tax on Oct. 1 to 24 cents from the current 16 cents. That would raise $5 billion for the treasury over the next three years, according to Sen. John H. Chafee, R-R.I., sponsor of the amendment.

Farmers line up for free hay

Farmers drove 100 miles and lined up overnight Wednesday in Georgia for a chance to free hay to feed cattle starved in a drought that has cost farmers in the Southeast an estimated $1.5 billion and forced water conservation measures.

Although temperatures have temporarily eased in the region after 2½ weeks of 100-degree highs, the death toll since July 1 rose to 42.

Georgia cattlemen lined up Wednesday at the Atlanta Farmers Market for a share of 40 tons of hay donated by Illinois farmers and flown in by Air Force cargo jets.

"This is our only chance to keep our cattle alive," said Sara Dockery of Royston, who drove 100 miles. "This means the cows will survive for five more days," said her husband, Franklin.

Sierra aftershocks continuing

BISHOP, Calif. (AP) — More than 1,000 aftershocks have struck the eastern Sierra since an earthquake damaged nearly 150 homes, a scientist said Wednesday, and many residents along the shaky mountain range are living in fear.

"I'm worried about another one coming that could do more damage," said Nora Denmark, a resident of the heavily damaged town of Chalfant Valley. "But what can you do?"

Monday's main quake, measuring 6.1 on the Richter scale, caused at least $1.7 million damage in addition to the homes, said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Ray Schaaf.

Goldwater stays in hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., remained hospitalized at Walter Reed Army Medical Center after being admitted early Wednesday complaining of abdominal pains, hospital officials said.

His spokesman said the pains were apparently a case of indigestion following a meal of seafood.

Goldwater, 77, remained hospitalized, but his condition would not be disclosed, Ben Smith, a hospital spokesman, said Wednesday night.

BLM crews combat range fires

By The Associated Press

Bureau of Land Management fire crews controlled one brush fire in eastern Idaho Wednesday and contained a second, but not before gusting winds sent flames licking across thousands of acres of tundra rangeland.

A 6,200-acre blaze, ignited by dry lightning a day earlier, was contained just before noon Wednesday by 45 firefighters in the Cedar Butte area 12 miles north of Mud Lake, officials said.

To the northwest in Kroyer Gulch near Salmon, some 170 firefighters remained on the scene of a stubborn fireline blaze that burned 750 acres of sagebrush, grass and fir trees.

More drug laboratories found

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Bolivian police aboard U.S.-piloted helicopters uncovered a cocaine laboratory in the northern jungles Wednesday and another Brazilian team found one during a separate operation, the government said.

Information Minister Herman Anelo said at least one U.S.-Bolivian military camp Wednesday to locate cocaine laboratories met with success, and that it occurred along the sparsely populated border between the provinces of Beni and La Paz, about 160 miles north of La Paz city. He gave no other details.

FAA may ban canyon flights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration, spurred by the fatal collision in June of two aircraft over the Grand Canyon, said Wednesday it is considering a ban on sightseeing flights below the canyon rim.

The FAA's plans were revealed as legislation advanced in Congress that would require the aviation agency to impose such a ban at the Grand Canyon as well as restrictions on tourist flights over two other national parks in California and Hawaii.

Senate confirms IRS chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Wednesday confirmed Dallas tax lawyer Lawrence B. Gibbs to be the new commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, a job that will require implementing a sweeping tax-overhaul law being written by Congress.

The lawmakers approved Gibbs on a voice vote with no debate, sending him from a job where he advised people on how to avoid paying taxes to the role of the nation's chief tax collector.

Rollover kills Challis youth

CHALLIS (AP) — A 15-year-old Challis boy was killed Wednesday when the car he was driving rolled over on a steep, unimproved county road one mile south of Challis, Ouster County Sheriff Doug Leaton said.

The boy's name was being withheld Wednesday night pending notification of relatives.

Leaton said another 15-year-old boy from Challis, a passenger in the car, was slightly injured in the crash about 12:31 p.m. Wednesday.

African timetable to end apartheid and demanded of Shultz: "What is our timetable? What are we saying to that rampant regime? Are we saying we've got 20 days, 20 months, 20 years? We ask them to put up a timetable. What is our timetable? Where do we stand morally?"

And Shultz, at another point in the debate, told Biden: "Obviously the blacks are repressed and change needs to be made urgently. I agree with you completely on that. But I don't turn my back on the whites. They are also people. They have their problems and we need to work with them and South Africa needs them."

Chairman Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said he does not believe diplomatic persuasion will produce significant changes in sufficient time and said for that reason "something more is required."

Later, responding to questions from reporters, Lugar said a bipartisan Senate majority favors additional sanctions against South Africa but that no agreement has been reached on what form those sanctions should take.

Responding to questions, Shultz made these other comments:

- Stated that CIA Director William Casey denies published reports that the United States has given South Africa intelligence information on black nationalist groups. However, Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., urged the Senate Intelligence Committee to open an immediate investigation into the allegation saying, "I believe it is our clear responsibility to clarify and resolve this situation at once."

- Disclosed that he will soon meet for the first time with Oliver Tambo, a leader of the black nationalist African National Congress.
- Confirmed that Reagan will shortly nominate a new U.S. ambassador to South Africa.
- Declined to say whether Reagan will retain the list of limited sanctions he imposed by executive order last year.
- In his testimony, Shultz said a House-passed bill calling for complete U.S. disinvestment from South Africa amounts would "end our capacity to have any positive influence on the struggle for justice and human rights in southern Africa."

The repository has become like some kind of radioactive Godzilla that rages through the states," added Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore. "What the gentleman's amendment does is correct this abuse of power. It's time to tame this monster."

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., said he couldn't defend DOE's performance. "But he said the amendment would bring all activity to a grinding halt — and the nation cannot afford that. 'This waste is here,' he said. 'We have 40 years accumulation of this junk sitting in tanks. For all practical purposes, if you take away the money, DOE is going to have to go back to the drawing board.'"

In other action on the appropriations bill, the House:

- Defeated 241-167 a proposal by Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., to make a 4.6 percent across-the-board cut in the entire bill, including research on the Strategic Defense Initiative. Opponents said the bill already conforms to deficit-reduction targets and is $300 million below the administration request.
- Defeated 315-106 an attempt by Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., to eliminate $87.7 million for eight unauthorized energy research projects at universities and hospitals. Walker called the allocations "hog heaven" for projects with enough political muscle to avoid going through an authorizing committee or a peer review process.

- Defeated 309-102 an amendment by Rep. Richard Armye, R-Tex., to cut Appalachian Regional Commission funding from $165 million to $32.5 million.
- Defeated 254-150 an attempt by Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., to restore $16.3 million for nuclear arms control verification programs and proliferation safeguards, and nuclear weapons and materials security measures.
- Defeated by voice vote a Weaver amendment that would have shut down DOE's N-Reactor at the Hanford Nuclear Reservation near Richland, Wash., until 120 days after the completion of two independent safety studies.

If convicted of all counts, each of the individual defendants faces up to 35 years in prison. The companies would face fines of as much as $500,000 or twice the gross gain realized on the sales, Cowen said.

Elkins, Baskett and Burnham were expected Wednesday to surrender to federal authorities in California, Cowen said. Corcoran was arrested Tuesday in California and was released on $1 million bond, and Lilly was arrested Tuesday in Hawaii and faced a hearing there Wednesday.

The Libyans are believed to be in Europe, and U.S. officials will seek to extradite them, the prosecutor said.

A statement by Lockheed-Georgia said the company was alerted "by a U.S. government source" that the two aircraft it sold to AFI International may have been seen in Libya. The information was not available until after the sale was completed and Lockheed-Georgia complied with all U.S. regulations in the original sale of the aircraft, said Lockheed

Gadhafi's government paid $12 million for eight C-130 cargo planes in 1972. But in the eroding relationship between Libya and the United States, the State Department denied an export license for the planes.

Utah — Becoming partly cloudy with widely scattered afternoon and early evening thundershowers through Friday. A little warmer in most areas today. Lows from the mid 50s to mid 60s. Highs in the mid 70s.

Nevada — Partly cloudy today with a few light rain showers in the morning and scattered thundershowers during the afternoon and evening. Partly cloudy tonight. Isolated afternoon thundershowers on Friday. Highs in the upper 70s and 80s. Overnight lows in the mid 40s and 50s.

Synopsis:

A moist subtropical flow of air continued to bring clouds and scattered thundershowers to southeastern Idaho on Wednesday, the National Weather Service said.

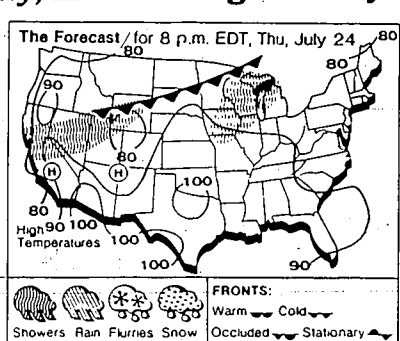

In the north, a weak weather disturbance moving through the area increased the cloud cover. The rest of the state remained under fair skies Wednesday afternoon.

Lightning detection equipment and radar showed scattered showers and thundershowers in the southern corner of the state at mid-afternoon Wednesday.

A few lightning strikes also were detected along the Nevada-Idaho border. No rainfall was reported at any of the reporting stations in that area.

Skies were mostly cloudy to overcast in the extreme north and southeast Wednesday afternoon.

High clouds moved into the southwest producing partly cloudy conditions. The central portions of the state were mostly sunny. Temperatures by mid-afternoon were in the 70s in the north and 70s to mid 80s in the south.

Winds were between 10 to 20 mph statewide.

The highest temperature in the state Wednesday was 79 degrees at Caldwell, while Stanley had the low of 42 degrees.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Wednesday was 86 particles per cubic meter of air.

The extended outlook in Southern Idaho — Saturday through Monday, chance of thundershowers in the east Sunday and Monday, otherwise sunny days and fair nights. Highs in the 70s to low 90s. Lows from the upper 40s to 50s.

Elsewhere in the nation, Wednesday's national temperatures were not available to The Associated Press and The Times-News because incomplete data was provided.

Grasshopper aerial spraying campaign may end this week

BOISE (AP) — Adequate financing and a chance to learn from last summer's mistakes have made this year's grasshopper problem pale in comparison to 1985, when Idaho recorded its worst infestation in three decades.

"There's no comparison to last summer," said Roger Pollard, spokesman for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service in Twin Falls.

"Some of the reasons are we had money up front and did some of the things we needed to do ahead of time," Pollard said. "Last year, we were always playing catch up."

The 1985 grasshopper season with no money allocated to pest control in the West, finally spent $55 million. This year, it earmarked $15.5 million for pest control in western states.

The state of Idaho spent nearly $600,000 last year, more than 10 times its $50,000 allocation. This year, the commitment was upped to $550,000.

As of Tuesday, 623,065 acres of federal, state and private land had been sprayed in Idaho — less than a tenth of the 6.5 million acres sprayed in 1985, when hordes of grasshoppers advanced in mile-wide swaths.

Pollard said about 60,000 acres in Owyhee and Cassia counties need to be sprayed. He predicted the remaining acres could be wrapped up in two days, and said it should be finished by the week's end if the weather cooperates.

If spots of land that meet APHIS' spraying criteria of abutting federal land reported later, they would be sprayed. APHIS also would spray if land owners could organize a 10,000-acre block made up of private, federal or state land. But for the most part, the books on the 1985 spraying season will be closed this week.

However, Pollard said it will take a while to close the financial ledgers because bills from private pilots are still coming in.

The payment to private pilots is based on a number of factors, so Pollard said he couldn't provide an estimate on the cost of spraying this summer. But like the amount of spraying done this summer, the cost is expected to be minuscule compared to 1985, when the federal government picked up most of the $12 million tab for spraying in Idaho.

The cost of the pesticide used this summer in the Gem State totaled at least $725,000. Pilots rained 40,000 gallons of the pesticide, malathion, which costs $16.61 a gallon, and 5,000 gallons of Sevin-4-Oil, which sells for $12 to $14 a gallon.

Idaho also this summer became the first state to take part in a long-range program to control grasshoppers biologically.

Dr. Roger Vega, spokesman for the state Department of Agriculture, said pilots bombarded nearly 20,000 acres of land in southern Idaho with brain infested with a single-cell insect known as Nosema locustae.

Vega said researchers have discovered that some grasshoppers have become infested with the insect, which causes sickness and eventually death in grasshoppers.

Pollard said the first tract of land near the Little Wood River treated with Nosema in June has shown fewer grasshoppers.

He said that could be because the grasshoppers that were hatching in June have since grown wings and migrated.

Gem court upholds 50-50 exemption for homeowners

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Supreme Court has upheld the so-called 50-50 homeowners' exemption, rejecting arguments that the state constitution requires property to be taxed at a uniform rate.

"Although the homeowners' exemption does shift the burden of retiring bonds to some extent from one class of taxpayers to another, all of the real property in the county remains subject to tax levy ... and the state's high court said in a ruling handed down Wednesday.

The Supreme Court affirmed a decision handed down by 7th District Judge Boyd R. Thomas, who rejected claims by representatives of the Idaho Association for Equitable Property Taxation that the exemption violated the state's constitution. The court said it was the framers' intent that the legislature have broad discretion in making property tax exemptions, thus allowing a partial exemption.

The 50-50 exemption was brought about by an initiative in 1982, rather than passed by the legislature.

Beginning with tax year 1983, the first $50,000 of the market value of an owner-occupied home, or 50 percent of the market value for assessment purposes of residential improvements was exempt from property taxation. Only the lesser amount could be used.

The exemption, which applied only to owners living in their homes, drastically changed the tax inequity between exempt and non-exempt homes.

For example, the tax liability on an $100,000 exempt home in 1982 was $1,453, compared to $1,615 on a $100,000 non-exempt property. After the 50-50 exemption became effective, the tax liability on an exempt $100,000 home was $1,085, compared to $2,170 on a non-exempt property of equal value.

State law in 1982 granted home owners an exemption of $10,000, 20 percent of market value, which ever was less.

Blaine Simmons and other representatives of the Idaho Association for Equitable Property Taxation argued that the tax burden had shifted so radically that it violated the state constitution because property wasn't taxed at a uniform rate.

Leroy backs 'bonus bushel' plan

McCALL (AP) — Republican candidate for governor David Leroy has called on the Reagan administration to abandon its opposition to including Communist nations in the government's bonus commodity program.

"Let's tell the world by this dramatic act that America and American farmers are back as aggressive, price-oriented competitors for all commodity sales to all global markets," the outgoing GOP lieutenant governor said in a letter sent Wednesday to President Reagan and Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng.

"Both the symbolism and increasing of demand, price and sales are needed by Idaho's farm families immediately," the letter said.

Leroy announced his support of the so-called "bonus bushel" program in a speech to the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation convention in McCall a day after the U.S. Senate approved a plan that would include the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China in the program at least through September.

Under the proposal, which sparked only limited resistance from some senators opposed to financial breaks for communist nations, America's traditional farm commodity purchasers in the international market would be given surplus, federally owned commodities as bonuses with their regular purchases of U.S. grain and other farm goods.

The "bonus bushel" plan was enacted by Congress a year ago, but the Reagan administration has repeatedly refused to extend it to the Soviet Union and other communist nations.

Dentist claims city harassment

AMERICAN FALLS (AP) — An American Falls dentist has filed a $600,000 tort claim against the city and Pover County, alleging he was harassed after an arson fire that wiped out four businesses in January.

Will Pacheco and his wife Patsy contend they were harassed by American Falls Police Investigator Jerry Hubbs following the Jan. 2 blaze.

The fire erupted early that morning at the Parkview Shopping Center in downtown American Falls, engulfing Pacheco's dental practice, the True Grit Western Wear store, an Idaho State Liquor Dispensary and a Radio Shack franchise.

Officials later determined the fire was arson-caused. Gasoline cans and other fire-related materials reportedly were found in the dental office and the clothing store. No one has been charged in the case.

The Pachecos said in their tort claim, required prior to filing a lawsuit against government entities, that Hubbs had "engaged in discriminatory and harassment type conduct" toward them since the fire. They accused Hubbs of "irritably and unjustifiably" attempting to prosecute them for arson "without cause or proof."

Because of the alleged harassment, the Pachecos claim they have suffered general damages of $500,000. They also listed property damage in terms of lost income and destruction of professional practice of $100,000.

The claim has been denied by both the Pover County Commissioners and the American Falls City Council, and has now been forwarded to the county's insurance carrier, city-county attorney Ben Cavness said.

New processing plant will use smaller spuds

SUGAR CITY (AP) — Eastern Idaho farmers hope a new potato-conditioning plant south of Sugar City will help put their plentiful three- to six-ounce spuds to more profitable use.

"The more little potatoes we can get off the market, the better," Rexburg grower Byron Webster said.

The smaller spuds usually are used as cattle feed. But the new Anheuser-Busch Cos. facility, opened Tuesday, will prepare them to be made into the beer and snack-food giant's new Russet Valley potato chips.

The plant, adjoining Sun-Glo of Idaho's fresh pack plant, allows precise control of temperature and humidity to produce the proper sugar level in the potatoes for a consistent dark golden chip color. The Russet Valley chip is darker than ordinary potato chips.

The facility, estimated to cost well over $1 million, was built by Anheuser-Busch on property leased from Sun-Glo. Sun-Glo, which began supplying potatoes for testing Russet Valley chips at the end of 1984, has contracted to handle the spuds Anheuser-Busch will buy in the area, said Jerry Hastings, Sun-Glo general manager.

Small to mid-size potatoes are best for chips because slices from larger spuds tend to fold over in the fryer, an Anheuser-Busch official said.

This year Sun-Glo will ship potatoes to North Carolina to be made into chips. Eagle Snacks, Inc., Anheuser-Busch's snack food subsidiary, plans to build a chip factory in Visalia, Calif., to be in operation by the end of 1987, when Russet Valley chips will begin being marketed nationally. Sun-Glo also will supply potatoes conditioned at the Sugar City facility to the California plant.

14 to keep jobs

POCATELLO (AP) — Layoff orders have been lifted for 14 workers in Union Pacific Railroad's mechanical car shop in Pocatello.

"The layoff notice was cancelled. We found another way without jobs being cancelled," said John Bromley, UPRR spokesman in Omaha. "I wish we could do that for everybody."

The railroad announced July 14 that the 14 carmen would be laid off at the close of business Tuesday in its continuing effort to cut costs.

Waste dumps at 3 airports pose hazards

REXBURG (AP) — The state Division of Environment has expressed concern over possible groundwater contamination from aerial pesticide applicators operating out of three eastern Idaho airports, but officials say further study was needed to determine the extent of any potential hazard.

The state's initial survey has placed the potential problems at the airports in Rexburg, Rigby and St. Anthony in the low-priority category, requiring additional investigation into possible harmful effects to water and soils, according to Scott Lund, a research analyst for the division.

But Lund said that with other areas rated as posing more serious threats, it would likely be some time before the state begins work at the three airports.

At all three airports, crop dusters have rinsed pesticides and other chemicals from their planes and spraying tanks in drainage areas, Lund said; but in each case, the drainage arrangements may have been undermined by poor soils and underground water levels within 10 feet or less of the contaminated rinse water.

Senate can prepare program of action

The address by President Reagan on the problems of South Africa neither charted a new course nor made more comprehensible his policy of the past. Rather, it was a defense essentially of his six years of immobility.

That may satisfy President Pieter W. Botha and the radical right in the United States, but it will surely frustrate the majority in South Africa that had hoped for an aggressive American role.

And, in converting the conflict over political and economic justice in Southern Africa into an East-West confrontation, just as he has chosen to do in Central America, Reagan made the efforts of those seeking genuine reform more difficult.

There will be no argument with Reagan's insistence that only South Africans can solve their problems. The issue has been how to permit South Africans, notably the black majority, to have a voice in that process.

Once again Reagan has been absolute in his opposition to sanctions. And worse. He called for coordination with the allies, then associated himself with the one and only ally that opposes sanctions, Great Britain.

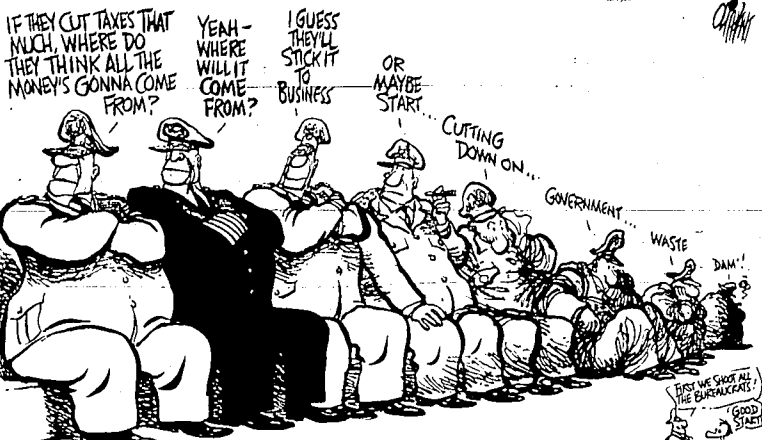

Most disappointing of all, however, was the president's ideological excursion into the Cold War.

He had intended to dramatize his good intentions by naming a black ambassador to represent the United States in Pretoria — a gesture in itself that measures the shallowness of policy thinking in the U.S. government at this time.

His words leave little choice. The House of Representatives, in a moment of excessive emotionalism, has adopted extreme measures that would do more harm than good.

But from this the Senate now can draw a program of moderated, constructive action that will erase, in the minds of the white oligarchy in South Africa, the doubts that Reagan has surely left about the determination of the United States to stand with the majority in South Africa.

Tobacco ad ban moral, constitutional

WASHINGTON — If applause is indeed the echo of a platitude, applause probably greeted the legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union when he denounced "government-imposed ignorance."

But before applauding, understand that Burt Neuborne's worry is "ignorance" imposed by a ban on tobacco advertising.

It thinks such a ban would be unconstitutional and immoral. It would be neither.

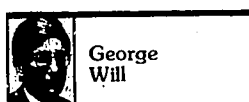

In a recent decision upholding the constitutionality of Puerto Rico's ban on the advertising of casino gambling, which is legal there, the Supreme Court reiterated the principle that commercial speech is more subject than other speech for regulation when the regulation directly advances a substantial government interest, such as public health.

That principle flows from this one: The First Amendment is, after all, an amendment to a political document. Its primary protection is for speech related to the process by which we govern ourselves—the working of representative government and the cultural activities that nourish a free society.

In the Puerto Rico case, Justice Rehnquist, writing for the majority, argued that regulation of the advertising of a product is less intrusive than regulating the sale of the product. (There are only a few products, such as contraceptives, the sale of which enjoy constitutional protection.)

Smoking, like gambling, is not a constitutional right. It would be perverse to argue that a legislature can ban a product or activity but can not regulate commercial speech that stimulates demand for the product or activity.

It is odd to suggest that banning tobacco advertisements would constitute "enforced ignorance." Ignorance of what? The availability of cigarettes? Neuborne considers a ban on tobacco advertisements a form of "censorship" and says all censorship arises from "paternalistic zeal to shield others, presumably less enlightened, Americans from speech that one or another pressure group thinks isn't particularly good for them."

But no one thinks tobacco advertising is "good for" someone who reads it. Perhaps because he knows that reasonable people can not differ about tobacco advertising's potential for good, Neuborne leaps, as the ACLU is wont to do, to the notion that any regulation of any expression puts society on the slippery slope to totalitarianism. "The hallmark of a totalitarian state," he says, "is a government-managed information flow."

But examine the average cigarette advertisement — toothsome young people frolicking in a picture of a mountain meadow, slogans such as "Get a taste of it" or "Come to where the flavor is." Try to measure the information content. Cigarette advertisements are not seminars; they are inducements.

Neuborne says it is incidentally totalitarian for government to use "manipulation" of information as a "behavior-modification tool." By "manipulation" he seems to mean any government use of selected information for government purposes. By his logic, he must oppose government requiring health warnings on cigarette advertisements — the only real information in most such advertisements.

Multiple illness is voluntary, meaning behaviorally based: People eat and drink foolishly, exercise too little, smoke, drive recklessly. The only substantial improvements of public health immediately available can come not from new medical technologies but from modifications of behavior.

And the behavior-modification capacity of advertisements? Without ascribing to advertising more manipulative power than can be measured, one fact is telling. Last year $2 billion was spent advertising tobacco products.

It is, to say no more, counter-intuitive to suggest, as some industry sources do, that the principal purpose of such advertising is to influence the choices of confirmed smokers who change brands. Only 10 percent of smokers change each year. Anyway, many competing brands are manufactured by the same parent companies that are buying the advertising.

Given that 350,000 persons die each year from smoking-related illnesses and one million quit, the industry must find 1.35 million new customers a year just to maintain its market. Advertising is designed to manufacture new demand, not just redirect existing demand.

Furthermore, cigarette advertisements, which are low on information and high on appeals to social aspirations, are apt to be especially effective with young people. Sixty percent of today's smokers started by age 13 or 14. The evidence from the nations with the severest limits on cigarette advertising is that after such advertising is limited, adult smokers continue but fewer young people start.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., notes that the tobacco industry, having tried the pittance of reasonable people by arguing that smoking does not cause a new sickness that advertising does not cause smoking. Two billion dollars says they do not believe that.

At age 16, granddaughter is turning into a budding writer

To Heather, at 16:
Some birthdays are more important than others. I can remember wanting sorely to reach 30, because 30 seemed so very much more mature than 29. Then I wanted to hurry up on 40, but getting to 50 was no thrill at all. We won't talk about the others. Anyhow, today brings one of your big birthdays. Sincerely! What a lovely age!

James Kilpatrick

It's been a memorable year for you. Twelve months ago you still could be categorized as girl, teen-aged, blond, blue-eyed, 5 feet 5, all arms and legs and freckles and giggles. Now, quite suddenly, you're a young woman — and very nicely assembled at that. Your father swears you spend two hours every morning putting on your face, which sounds like a fatherly exaggeration to me, but the time must be well spent. You look good to me.

This was the summer you decided — well, almost decided — to become a writer. Three years ago you were crushing others. At an astronomer, which was OK by me, but to become a writer! Now you're talking. Your grandfather Walker Stone, editor in chief of Scripps-Howard, would be just as pleased as I am.

This excitement came as follows: Your English teacher at Rappahannock High School announced that a two-week course in creative writing would be offered this summer at the University of Virginia. You applied for one of the slots, got accepted, and drove the family van down to Charlottesville. (This was also the summer you got your driver's license, and your father's gray hair started to turn your father's gray hair white.) Last week you returned, and we sat for an hour in the kitchen talking about the course.

It was the best thing that could have happened to you. For two weeks of concentrated criticism and instruction, you shared the intoxicating pleasure of talking about writing with fellow writers. You tackled assignments in writing fiction, poetry, radio scripts and newspaper stories. You worked on copy editing. You stayed up half the night and staggered off to class at 8 the next morning. Stalinal! That's my Heather at 16.

You returned with all kinds of impressions. One of your fellow students, a brilliant boy, arrived with a mohawk hairstyle and a ring in his ear. Another talked of committing suicide. He was "all negatives."

You made up a game to play with him: Every time he put forth a negative word, you would answer with a positive word. "War," he said. "Trees," you responded. I asked how come. You said that every time you ever had seen of a battle showed some trees surviving amid the gore. Trees grow for years and years, you said, regardless of wars. Some trees still are standing that shaded the Wars of the Roses, Agincourt, Hastings, Gettysburg, and all that stuff. Your friend said "death." You replied, "the smell of a new book." That's a positive response, all right. New books, like new cars, have a smell that ought to be bottled like perfume.

Anyhow, you fell in love this summer — not with a boy, which will come in time, but with a word. The word is "elegant." Splendid! A superlative word! It exactly describes your taste in both writing and reading. You quoted Emily Dickinson: That's a word to tip your hat to.

You developed a crush on Garrison Keillor, author of "Lake Wobegon Days," and you wanted to write the way he writes. "I'm OK at developing character," you said, "but I'm not much on plot."

You had tried a short story about the old man who sits in front of Burke's Store at Woodville, but you couldn't think of anything to do with him after you had described him. I said that plots will come; just open your brain and see what comes out. Let the old imagination flow. And keep writing!

Then you said something that touched me. "I find it necessary to write," you said. That's the way it is, or ought to be, among the professionals. We have to write. We need to write. It's necessary for us. If we would pursue happiness, to put one word after another, and one sentence and paragraph after another, just reveling in the riches of the English language.

What else do we want to remember? I suppose it's much easier to let your opponent release his plan, attack it, then get to work on yours. Where's the vision you promise? Where's the substance?

I look at this race for the governorship from a strictly business viewpoint. Two men want the job of chief executive officer of a multi-million dollar operation. One has excellent qualifications and a proven track record. The other has been a trainee. We, as voters or members of the board, must select the candidate that can enter right away without on the job training and accomplish difficult tasks.

Letters/ Man keeps on making the same old mistakes he has for centuries

Cicero's list is still valid

The following is something I read and would like to pass on. Cicero set down "six mistakes of man" some 2,000 years ago. Time has yet to prove him wrong:

- 1) The delusion that individual advancement is by crushing others.
- 2) The tendency to worry about things that cannot be changed or corrected.
- 3) Insisting that a thing is impossible because we cannot accomplish it.
- 4) refusing to set aside trivial preferences.
- 5) neglecting development and refinement of the mind and not acquiring the habit of reading and studying.
- 6) Attempting to compel other persons to believe and live as we do.

Elders should note votes

We have four representatives in Washington, D.C. from Idaho. We have the shame, according to voting records, of having three of these four oppose five pieces of legislation in the 99th Congress that would preserve Social Security and Medicare. All four have an Idaho tag (R) behind their name.

Our other (D) representative has an 80 percent pro Social Security voting record. We are the only state in the nation where all our senators voted against Social Security on all issues. Elderly, take note.

Eden proud of hometown

Citizens of southern Idaho should be thankful for the efforts of our attorney general in opposition to the Idaho Power rate increase.

Last fall I sent Jim Jones a petition signed by many Magic Valley residents in opposition to the rate increase. He wrote back saying that he, too, opposed the rate increase and was intending on intervening in the case to present evidence against it. He followed through with that commitment and the Public Utilities Commission is evidence of the effectiveness of his efforts.

We in Eden are proud of our home town boy and pleased with his efforts on behalf of the average citizen.

Right-to-work not panacea

I have waited to see if anyone else noticed the correlation between the Associated Press story of July 11 "Growth Pattern Could Divide Nation" and the map "July 13" of the United States showing which states have right-to-work laws. Since no one else has written regarding the two stories, allow me to call it to the attention of your readers.

The AP story concerned the 16 growing states in the nation as opposed to the 31 states whose economy is stagnant. The study noted that the identity of the growth states, saying only that they were all on the Eastern coast. The lone exception is California, the only Western state that is growing. The study noted that the entire interior of the nation is "experiencing very limited economic opportunity."

A look at the right-to-work map shows that, with the exception of the Deep South, the Eastern seaboard states have no right-to-work laws in effect. Nor does California, while the interior is an almost unbroken expanse of right-to-work states.

Clearly we need to consider the various possibilities in these stories present:

1. The AP story may be in error.
2. The right-to-work map may be in error, or both stories may be accurate, in which case:
3. Growth seems to be occurring only in those states which do not have right-to-work laws — and in that event:
4. The right-to-work people have been misleading us when they tell us that passing right-to-work will bring growth to Idaho. Superficially at least, the opposite would seem true.

The Times-News could do its readers (the voters) a real service by researching and printing a story which shows each state's rate of growth (or lack of same), whether the state has right-to-work laws, and the real personal income levels of each state from 1980 through 1985. Such a comparison would certainly aid us voters in November.

In lieu of such a comparison story, the story and map mentioned above should lead thinking people to conclude that right-to-work is not the panacea that its proponents would have us believe.

Proven hand is his choice

An open letter to gubernatorial candidate Dan Claitor:
I, like many Idahoans, have deep sympathy for your fledgling campaign. It has to be very difficult waging a successful challenge when you have got a very successful opponent such as a former governor. Let's face it Mr. Claitor, Governor Andrus' campaign committee and his advisory committee read like a who's who in Idaho business. The successful businessmen of this state have, on a non-partisan basis, formed a coalition with Governor Andrus to study and implement long-range solutions to our social and economic problems. A fine example of this non-partisanship came in the form of Governor Andrus' 20 point economic plan for the state released last week. They proposed sensible, visionary solutions. They know that with a coalition of business and government, working together, new and exciting opportunities exist. Governor Andrus knows that if left to "flicker down" from business to all Idahoans to revive our economy, it will never happen. We need only look at the last time this theory was proposed on a national basis. Idaho is still waiting to prosper.

If you feel that your economic plans are far more superior to that of Cecil Andrus', then why didn't you submit your plans first? I suppose it's much easier to let your opponent release his plan, attack it, then get to work on yours. Where's the vision you promise? Where's the substance?

I look at this race for the governorship from a strictly business viewpoint. Two men want the job of chief executive officer of a multi-million dollar operation. Train bearing TMI fuel rods proceeds

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — A train carrying damaged radioactive fuel from the Three Mile Island nuclear plant was allowed to roll into Nebraska early Wednesday, 3½ hours after Gov. Bob Kerrey ordered it halted in Kansas.

Kerrey on Tuesday ordered the Nebraska State Patrol to stop the train, saying that U.S. Department of Energy officials had notified him or the patrol that the fuel would be coming through on its way to Idaho.

The train was stopped at Marysville, Kan., about 9 p.m., and was given clearance to cross the border, about 10 miles away, at 12:30 a.m., said Union Pacific railroad spokesman John Bromley.

The train stopped at Marysville "to avoid any state border confrontation," said W. Don Nelson, Kerrey's chief of staff who flew with state patrol Col. Bob Tagg to talk with federal officials riding the train.

Kerrey said Nelson and Tagg had the authority to allow the train to enter Nebraska without consulting him.

He ordered the train stopped because there had been no prior notification about the shipment, Nelson said. The train is carrying the radioactive fuel to the National Engineering Laboratory in Idaho Falls, Idaho.

"We negotiated with the federal government so that the state has a role in these shipments," Kerrey said. "This is a serious breach of faith on the part of the federal government."

State officials have a right to know about such shipments to ensure public safety and protection, he said. "Our designated contact person is the Nebraska State Patrol and they weren't notified."

Janine Wilson of EG&G Idaho Inc., an energy department contractor, said the patrol had been notified of the train in February and last Friday.

Nelson said that when trains carrying nuclear weapons or other dangerous loads pass through the state, Nebraska officials receive the specific dates and times of passage.

Earlier this week, a spokesman for EG&G Inc., which operates the lab for the U.S. Department of Energy, said schedules of the damaged fuel shipments are considered confidential national security information.

However, Kerrey said there was no call to "change the flag of national security" over the train's route. He said officials in other states were notified of the train's passage.

Bromley said he was not aware of any other problems along the train's route. Union Pacific is carrying the nuclear waste through Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming and Idaho.

The uranium fuel at TMI Unit 2 overheated and began to melt during the March 1979 accident, the worst ever at a U.S. commercial nuclear power plant. The DOE signed a contract with GPU Nuclear Corp., the TMI operator, to remove the fuel, test it and dispose of it.

Each shipment consists of one rail car carrying seven canisters of fuel and metal debris from Unit 2. The debris is not as intensely radioactive as spent fuel rods from normal nuclear plants, officials said earlier this month when they announced the shipping plans.

Silver mine executive disputes earlier view

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Sunshine Mining Co. Chairman G. Michael Boswell said Hecla Mining Co. Chairman William Griffith should speak only for Hecla when he comments on what's right for Idaho's silver industry.

Griffith was critical last week of a proposal backed by Democratic gubernatorial candidate Cecil Andrus to provide production loans for domestic silver mines. The loans, which would bolster sagging silver prices that are hovering at about $5 an ounce, would be repayable when silver prices improve.

Griffith chided Andrus for not consulting with the operators of major Idaho silver mines, saying they oppose government action to bolster the silver market.

Boswell, who called for the renationalization of silver, said Griffith overstepped his authority.

"I think Bill perceives himself as the senior mining executive in the silver mining business," Boswell said. "But that doesn't mean he speaks for anybody other than Hecla."

Hecla was the top domestic silver producer in 1985. Sunshine was the leader in 1984.

Boswell did not back Andrus' production loan proposal, but challenged Griffith's belief that the silver industry will correct itself. He said renationalization of silver would improve the prospect of a lasting recovery. The Kennedy administration demonetized silver in the early 1960s.

Citing figures that show a decline in silver prices versus a rise in gold and platinum prices during the last 17 months, Boswell said the traditional view of silver as a precious metal is losing credibility among investors.

Fire death case settled

BOISE (AP) — A settlement was reached between Frank Ng and a company that manufactured a space heater linked to a 1982 fire that killed Ng's wife and six children.

Jim Risch, Boise attorney representing Ng, said the settlement was reached Wednesday, the day after a jury was selected for the case that would have been heard by 4th District Judge Gerald Schroeder.

Arvin Industries, manufacturer of the space heater, and Ng agreed not to disclose terms of the settlement, Risch said.

The lawsuit filed by Ng sought more than $1 million in damages from Arvin Industries.

Ng was working at a Chinese restaurant the night of the fire and returned home to find the bodies of his wife and children who were poisoned by smoke from a smoldering fire in their mobile home.

The fire started when an extension cord attached to a space heater overheated and shorted out, Cole Collier, Fire Marshal Neil Coburn said at the time. The home's smoke alarm did not sound, apparently because it was on the circuit shut off by the shorted extension cord.

Authorities said after the fire all the oxygen in the home was burned by the fire, although there were no leaking flames.

Risch said Ng earlier had reached undisclosed settlements with Leviton Manufacturing Co., which made the extension cord, and Guerdon Industries Inc., manufacturer of the mobile home.

Reagan plugs 'good times' under GOP

Briefly

Intelligence passing denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House on Wednesday denied reports that the United States has given South Africa intelligence on the banned African National Congress, which is seeking to overthrow the South African government and end apartheid.

"Not true," said White House spokesman Larry Speakes when asked about a report in Wednesday's editions of The New York Times.

And Secretary of State George Shultz told Congress that CIA Director William Casey denied the story.

The administration funneled the information, including political intelligence and specific warnings of planned attacks by the group, to South Africa at least into the mid-1980s, the Times said.

Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., urged the Senate Intelligence Committee to open an immediate investigation into the allegation.

Nuclear waste poses hazards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tanks of nuclear waste at a South Carolina weapons plant could explode and disgorge enough radioactivity to cause 20,000 cases of cancer, an environmental group said Wednesday.

The DuPont Co., operator of the Energy Department's Savannah River complex near Aiken, said it believed such an explosion was extremely unlikely and would occur no more often than once every 25,000 years.

Arjun Makhijani, one of the authors of the Environmental Policy Institute's study, told a news conference, "I cannot presume to give you a responsible estimate" of the numerical chances of an explosion. "I can certainly tell you that what estimates that have been presented are gross under-estimates."

Negotiator sounds optimistic

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief U.S. negotiator Max Kampelman said Wednesday that "broad understandings" to curb nuclear arms may be reached by the United States and the Soviet Union this year.

Kampelman offered the optimistic forecast in a U.S. Information Agency television special while U.S. arms control director Kenneth Adelman said in a separate interview there were "real signs of hope" of progress.

The two officials also predicted that President Reagan would seek Senate ratification of 1974 and 1976 treaties limiting underground nuclear weapons tests to 150 kilotons if anti-cheating safeguards were improved.

U.S. and Soviet representatives open talks on the verification issue Friday in Geneva. A separate session on the 1979 SALT II weapons limitation treaty began Tuesday in the Swiss city.

Textbook trial testimony ends

GREENEVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Testimony ended Wednesday in a trial of a school system's reading books with an attorney asking that public education be saved from seven fundamentalist Christian families, who say they are being persecuted for their beliefs.

The families sued the Hawkins County schools to obtain alternate books for their children, complaining that a 1983 Holt, Rinehart, Winston reading series taught evolution, humanism and 14 other themes offensive to their strict interpretation of the Bible.

U.S. District Judge Thomas G. Hull set an Aug. 22 deadline for additional written arguments in the case and scheduled final oral arguments for Sept. 23.

Leukemia victims file claims

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Families of seven people who died of leukemia in the 1960s and '70s have sued the federal government, claiming the mishandling of radioactive waste at a government uranium mill led to the deaths.

The complaint filed in U.S. District Court on Tuesday claims the government negligently permitted radioactive materials to be released into the area near the Monticello mill site, causing the victims to be exposed to radiation resulting in leukemia.

The 15 plaintiffs claim the government and its contractors knew or should have known about hazards that accompanied the excavation, recovery, processing and disposal of uranium ore.

MIAMI (AP) — President Reagan, promising "economic good times" under Republican leadership, campaigned Wednesday at big-money political fund-raisers across the South and told a cheering audience that American presidents should not be limited to two terms in office.

As a heated debate opened in the Senate over his South Africa policy, Reagan flew to Dallas to promote the comeback bid of former Texas Gov. Bill Clements. Then, he came to Miami to help one-term Sen. Paula Hawkins fight for her political survival.

Speaking before a crowd of thousands in a balloon bedecked hotel lobby in Miami, Reagan was interrupted by chants of "four more years, four more years."

Putting aside his prepared text, Reagan, after his second term, restated his previously voiced view calling for elimination of the constitutional prohibition against a president serving a third term.

However, he said that "any president who will try to get the Constitution changed should not be doing it for himself, he should be doing it for those who will follow him.

"I think it should be changed because I think it's only democratic for the people to be able to vote for someone as many times as they want," Reagan added.

The crowd, which included many Cuban Americans, erupted again in cheers of "Four more years."

During the day, Reagan ignored shouted questions from reporters about criticism of his South Africa speech.

Bedging a cheering crowd of thousands at the Dallas Apparel Mart, Reagan was heckled by a handful of people protesting his South Africa policy and holding up a sign saying "Sanctions Now." The audience cheered the president when, at one interruption, he said "There's an echo in the rally."

At the rally for Mrs. Hawkins, Reagan said the senator had just flown in from Washington, where she had cast her vote in favor of reaffirming Daniel Manion as a federal appellate judge.

"A little lynch mob had organized resistance to his appointment," Reagan said. "We won by one vote."

Leaving his plane on arrival in Dallas, the president was asked about negative reaction from Capitol Hill and elsewhere to his speech Tuesday opposing sanctions against South Africa's white minority government. He shook his head, smiled and said something that was not audible to reporters.

At both stops, Reagan's public appearances were followed by private meetings with major campaign donors.

In Dallas, the private affair was a $5,000-a-couple luncheon that sponsors said would raise between $300,000 and $750,000 for Clements.

In Miami, a ticket for a private reception cost $1,000, with the proceeds split between Mrs. Hawkins' campaign and the Florida GOP.

Last year, Reagan raised nearly $1 million for the embattled senator, who now is trailing her Democratic challenger, Gov. Bob Graham, by 11 percentage points, 49 percent to 38 percent, according to a mid-July poll by the Miami Herald-Florida Times-Union and Jacksonville Journal newspapers.

In contrast, Clements, trying to reclaim the office he lost in 1982 to Democrat Mark White, is thought by his forces to hold a comfortable lead as Texas grapples with record unemployment triggered by the energy industry crash.

The only statewide public poll thus far, affiliated with Texas A&M University, was taken shortly after the May party primaries and showed Clements 14 points ahead, 47 percent to 33 percent.

Portraying the 1988 elections as a political watershed, Reagan added: "Believe me, the liberals in Washington know what's at stake. They know that this may well be their last chance to steer American politics way over to the left."

House votes pay raise for U.S. armed forces

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Armed Services Committee voted approval Wednesday of a 4 percent pay hike in the next fiscal year for the nation's 2.1 million uniformed personnel, congressional sources said.

The voice vote approval came in a closed-door meeting as the panel tried to finish writing its version of a bill authorizing the Pentagon's budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, according to the sources, who would speak only on condition of anonymity.

Last month, the Democratic-controlled panel had rejected a pay raise as part of its effort to reduce President Reagan's requested $20 billion defense budget to meet the $285 billion level that was part of a budget resolution approved by the House.

But since that action, the Democratic-run House and the Republican-controlled Senate, which approved a $301 billion figure, have compromised on a $293 billion total for the Pentagon.

To meet that higher figure, the House panel has been rewriting its version of the defense budget and added $7 billion on Wednesday for a variety of programs, the sources said. One of those additions was the pay hike.

Meantime, the Senate Armed Services panel is also meeting behind closed doors to cut $8 billion from the $301 billion figure it approved earlier this month, the sources said. That action will bring the Senate panel in line with the $293 billion total.

The pay hike for uniformed personnel has already been approved by the Senate panel.

The Senate panel is reducing spending in a number of Pentagon accounts rather than making large reductions in only a few items, the sources said.

Russians embark on 'peace cruise'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forty-six Russians, including a cosmonaut and other prominent Soviets, will begin a "Mississippi Peace Cruise" through the U.S. heartland this weekend, to see and be seen by Americans and to talk about the dangers of nuclear warfare.

The trip down the Mississippi River, which will also include more than 100 Americans, is privately sponsored but is taking place with the cooperation of the Reagan administration, organizers said at a news conference on Wednesday.

Senate clears Manion way to federal bench

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted 50-49 Wednesday to reaffirm Daniel Manion's confirmation as a federal appellate judge, clearing the way for President Reagan's nominee to take a seat on the bench.

Vice President George Bush, in the chair as president of the Senate, cast a tie-breaking vote. But Bush's vote against reconsidering the nomination was unnecessary because the motion would have been defeated on a 49-49 tie.

Opponents of Manion, who was confirmed by a 48-46 vote June 26, argued that the South Bend, Ind., lawyer was professionally unqualified to sit on the Chicago-based 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

But Republicans argued Manion was being unfairly attacked for his conservative ideology.

"This business about competence has been knocked into a cocked hat," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah. "This is an ideological attack, pure and simple."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, traveling in the South with Reagan, said after the vote, "We're extremely pleased about Manion."

And Attorney General Edwin Meese III said: "The Senate deserves credit for resisting extremist attempts to politicize the judicial confirmation process. I have particular admiration for Mr. Manion, who courageously withstood vicious and unfounded ideological assaults against his professional reputation."

DANIEL MANION
Bush's vote breaks tie

Reagan telephoned Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., from Air Force One to congratulate him "for the great engineering job" on the Manion vote, said Walt Riker, Dole's press secretary.

Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., chief sponsor of Manion's nomination, said in a statement he had "every confidence that... Dan Manion will serve the American people fairly and compassionately and fulfill his duty to uphold the law rigorously and impartially."

"I think the message is clear. This man is marginally qualified," Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr. of Delaware, who led the opposition to Manion, said after the vote.

"Close only counts in horseshoes," Biden added. "We lost. Fifty-one senators at one time or another voted against Manion, but it's like crying over spilled milk."

Anthony T. Podesta, president of the liberal group People for the American Way that had worked against the nomination, said: "The administration has paid a very high price for the Manion confirmation, and the integrity of the Senate has been tarnished in the process. A clear majority of senators acknowledged, by vote or by statement, that Manion is unfit."

John J. Connaughton, a partner in Manion's law office, said Manion will not make a statement or speak to reporters before a news conference this morning in South Bend.

The vote to reconsider Manion's nomination was engineered last month by Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., who voted with the winning side to give himself the right under Senate rules to move for reconsideration of the nomination.

The sudden hospitalization of Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., threatened to delay Wednesday's vote. But Goldwater, who was being treated at Walter Reed Army Medical Center for what aides called a bad case of indigestion, paired his vote with Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.

DeConcini, who had planned to vote to reconsider Manion's nomination, agreed as a favor to Goldwater to abstain so their votes would cancel each other.

Manion, the son of the late Clarence Manion, a founder of the John Birch Society, was criticized by liberal groups for conservative views they contended would interfere with an even judicial temperament.

Opponents also argued that Manion was unqualified to sit on the appeals court. They cited samples of legal briefs he had submitted to Senate Judiciary Committee that were riddled with spelling and grammatical errors.

"He has had almost no experience in federal courts; his briefs in state courts border on the illiterate," Kennedy said during the debate before the vote.

Supporters noted that Manion had been found "qualified" by the American Bar Association, even though the rating was that group's lowest passing grade.

"What has Mr. Manion done? Misspell some words?" Dole asked. "What is wrong with Mr. Manion? Small-town lawyer? Conservative? Republican?"

"In the final analysis, this man has been deemed qualified by the American Bar Association." Democrats argued that last month's vote to confirm Manion was tainted by confusion over vote pairs for absent senators and decisions by senators to support Manion in return for administration sponsorship of federal judicial nominations in their home states.

"Logrolling on legislation is a traditional, if dubious, practice in the Senate, but judge-rolling is completely unacceptable," Kennedy said.

Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., said in a statement last month that he voted for Manion because he had received "last-minute assurances that the administration would nominate a Seattle lawyer he was supporting for a federal district judgeship. The statement said Gorton considered Manion only "marginally qualified."

But after Wednesday's vote, Gorton denied that he ever planned to vote against Manion.

Pentagon agents don't trust nation's defense contractors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Only half the men and women who oversee contracting by the Defense Department believe contractors can be trusted to behave ethically and 5 percent say they have been the object of improper advances by a contractor within the past year, a survey shows.

Many of the Pentagon agents also believe they are not paid well enough given their level of responsibility, the survey said. The public and Congress don't understand the intricacies of their work, that they are often at a disadvantage in negotiating with their civilian counterparts, and that "blowing the whistle" on fraud cases will hurt their career.

More than half of the Pentagon contract specialists "would leave if offered jobs in other federal agencies or in private industry."

These and other results are contained in a previously unpublished survey conducted last April and May by the firm of Market Opinion Research for the President's Blue Ribbon Commission on Defense Management.

The commission, which recommended a wide range of improvements to the Pentagon's administrative structure in a final report in June, released a 378-page appendix to that report on Wednesday that contains the new survey.

Questionnaires were mailed to almost 10,000 Defense Department acquisition officials, of whom almost 6,200 responded. Overall, more than 165,000 civilian and military employees are involved in Pentagon procurement, a massive job that entails about 50,000 contract actions every working day.

The results paint a picture of a work force that is, for the most part, dedicated and that believes both they and their civilian counterparts must adhere to a higher level of ethics "because of the importance of DOD acquisition to the defense of the United States."

But it also depicts a work force that struggles against paperwork and bureaucracy; lacks proper supervision and training; and that has doubts about advancement opportunities and what they need to do to win a promotion.

The contracting personnel also have doubts about some of the key recommendations by the Blue Ribbon Commission, including a call for private industry to adopt Internal Codes of Ethics.

"Only half say that contractors could be trusted to live up to a Code of Ethics were such a code to be developed," the survey reports.

"Over half of the contract specialists say defense contractors seldom try unethically to influence DOD acquisition personnel, but one-fifth disagree. Almost all say it is not hard to resist the temptation to accept an unethical offer by a defense contractor, but 2 percent say it is. One in 20 contract specialists say a defense contractor has tried unethically to influence them within the last year."

Also disturbing, according to the survey, is the fact that one in seven of the contract specialists, or 14 percent, "say they are too busy to do anything about fraudulent contractors."

"Only 3 percent say they used the DOD Inspector General Hot Line to report fraud, waste and abuse in the last year. Forty-two percent say blowing the whistle within DOD in a case where fraud actually occurred would probably or definitely hurt their chances of obtaining a valued work reaward."

According to Market Opinion Research, "the majority of contract specialists clearly recognize the need to maintain a high level of ethics in carrying out defense acquisition responsibilities."

The survey also reported that many of the contract agents themselves believe a college degree should be a prerequisite for their job, even though that is currently not the case.

Author Ellerbee signs with ABC

NEW YORK (AP) — Linda Ellerbee, best-selling author, talk-show circuit celeb and subject of a network tug of war, will return to being a television news writer and anchor, this time with ABC, the network announced Wednesday.

Ellerbee's decision to accept ABC News' offer instead of the "CBS Morning News" co-anchor job was widely reported last week, but ABC and Ellerbee waited until the expiration of NBC's one-month option on her services to officially confirm her three-year contract. According to a published report, her annual salary will be $350,000.

After a vacation in California, and away from agents, publishers, telephone and interview requests, Ellerbee will start work Aug. 11.

Her assignments include co-host of "Our World," ABC's new historical news program that will compete against the top-rated "The Cosby Show" this fall, and her light-hearted and quirky "T.G.I.F." feature on Fridays for "Good Morning America." She previously did "T.G.I.F." on NBC's "Today" show.

Ellerbee said in an interview that discussions were continuing on a possible late-night role for an unspecified program following "Nightline."

Since leaving NBC last month, Ellerbee appeared on the "Donahue" show.

Prince, bride to themselves

Smiling queen dusts couple, then chases down grandson

TERCEIRA, Azores (AP) — Prince Andrew and his princess, newly wed in the splendor of British pageantry, boarded the royal yacht Britannia on Wednesday evening for a honeymoon cruise through this lush chain of Atlantic islands.

The world watched Andrew and Sarah Ferguson marry Wednesday morning in Westminster Abbey, that venerable symbol of England, and grant the wish of a cheering throng by kissing tenderly on the balcony of Buckingham Palace.

Andrew's mother, Queen Elizabeth II, gave them a good-luck dusting of confetti as they left the palace in an open carriage to be brought to the Britannia by a jet of the Queen's Flight.

The sleek, blue-hulled yacht dropped anchor in Prala da Victoria just two hours before the newlyweds, both 26, landed at 8 p.m. (2 p.m. MDT) at Lajes, the U.S.-Portuguese air base.

After a welcoming ceremony, they sped by motorcade three miles to the dock and boarded a launch for the Britannia. Hundreds of residents lined the small bay and the last hundred yards to the port gates.

Forty minutes after their plane landed, Andrew and Sarah were aboard the yacht for the five-day cruise through the Azores islands of the Portuguese archipelago, 740 miles into the Atlantic.

Local officials said the Britannia requested permission to call at Pico, Sao Jorge, Faial and Sao Miguel for a farewell reception before the newlyweds fly home July 28.

On Wednesday morning, they walked into Westminster Abbey separately as Andrew, the royal bachelor, and Sarah Ferguson, the commoner daughter of a retired army major. They emerged hand in hand about an hour later as the newest pair of royal highnesses and, by order of the queen, the Duke and Duchess of York.

Tens of thousands of Britons and tourists lined the mile-long route of the wedding procession from Buckingham Palace to the medieval church, in which members of the royal family have been crowned, married and buried for 500 years.

It was a day to forget economic recession and other troubles, and to glory in the remembrance of empire that Britain displays so well.

Crowds were much larger for the wedding in 1981 of Prince Charles, the queen's eldest son and heir to the throne, and Lady Diana Spencer; but that day was declared a national holiday.

Family and friends gave Andrew and Sarah a tumultuous, confetti-strewn sendoff to their honeymoon in the Portuguese Azores Islands in the Atlantic.

Discreetly placed television cameras gave an estimated 300 million viewers in 42 countries a prime view of the day's events.

Britain's favorite family kept the common touch despite the pomp, and the wedding remained a family event that brought tears to the eyes of Prince Charles.

For the public, one of the biggest treats came last.

Television viewers saw Queen Elizabeth, relaxed and smiling, tossing confetti at her son and her daughter-in-law. At one point she chased Prince William, her 4-year-old grandson, to keep him away from the departing carriage.

Cheers from the crowd outside the abbey grew so loud at times that the sound filtered through the thick stone walls into the cavernous space where Andrew and Sarah knelt before the archbishop of Canterbury, the Most Rev. Robert Runcie, who conducted the ceremony.

The 2,000 invited guests ranged from first lady Nancy Reagan to princes and princesses from Europe and Japan, and pop singer Elton John.

Clouds and a spattering of rain ushered in the day, as they do so often in London, but sun broke through as the procession of horse-drawn coaches, vintage Rolls-Royce limousines and cavalrymen left the palace for the abbey.

Sunshine put a glitter on the silver breastplates and gold braiding. Pall Mall, Trafalgar Square and Whitehall were awash with red, white and blue Union Jacks, and the red tunics and black bearskin caps of marching bands.

The statues of such as Winston Churchill and Abraham Lincoln gleamed under fresh coats of beeswax.

"God Save the Queen" rolled majestically over the crowd outside Buckingham Palace as Queen Elizabeth and her husband, Prince Philip, set out at the head of carriage procession.

Andrew, looking poised and self-assured in the dress uniform of a Royal Navy lieutenant, rode with his younger brother Prince Edward, the best man, and Charles and Princess Diana.

Sarah rode in the 1910 Glass Coach with her father, Maj. Ronald Ferguson.

She wore an ivory silk satin dress with a 17½-foot train, by designer Linka Clerch. It was beaded with bees and thistles from her coat of arms and anchors and waves representing the royal family's naval tradition.

Her thick red hair was down, under a veil and a gem-studded tiara.

"Sarah! Sarah!" the crowd chanted. Enthusiastic admirers were held back by some of the 3,600 policemen and soldiers assigned to security and crowd control.

The bride entered the abbey to a trumpet fanfare from red-coated marines in pith helmets. Her walk down the aisle, on her father's arm, was accompanied by music from the organ and a choir.

Her mother Susan, divorced and remarried, sat near the altar with Maj. Ferguson during the ceremony.

Mrs. Reagan wore a sea-green silk dress and matching coat by James Galanos, one of her favorite American designers. She sat facing the altar in an area reserved for high-ranking foreign dignitaries.

Sarah chose the traditional service in which the bride pledges to "obey." As her good friend Diana had done in 1981, she stumbled over her husband's name, repeating Christian while taking Andrew Albert Christian Edward as her lawful wedded husband.

Andrew had trouble keeping his sword out of the way as he slipped the gold ring onto Sarah's finger. Sarah put a ring on his little finger, which was a surprise not in the script.

At 11:50 a.m., Runcie pronounced the couple married. Charles pulled out a large handkerchief, blew his nose and wiped his eyes.

Restless William shows age

LONDON (AP) — Prince William, second in line to the British throne and youngest attendant at the royal wedding, showed his age — 4 — at today's ceremony: He fidgeted.

But on the mile-long procession to Buckingham Palace from his uncle's wedding at Westminster Abbey, William adhered to a British royal tradition — he waved all along the route.

The young prince seemed little interested in the ceremony, and sat playing with the cord on his hat, wrapping it around his fingers and his nose. Then he poked himself in the eye with it.

His antics drew a warning glance and giggles from his mother, Princess Diana, who was sitting nearby.

William was on his best behavior when the service ended, leading the seven other young attendants out of the abbey.

The bride's 17½-foot train was the biggest problem for the children in the wedding party.

WORKING EFFECTIVELY FOR IDAHO

"Steve Symms made the I.R.S. apologize to me!"

"Earlier this year, due to a mixup, a levy was placed on my wages by the I.R.S. They wanted to take half my salary! As a single parent, without child support, I was working two jobs just to make ends meet. To make matters worse, both my sons had to be hospitalized for a time. If the I.R.S. forced me to pay, I'd have to declare bankruptcy. I'd lose everything. I did what I could to clear up the misunderstanding. I consulted with a lawyer. I called the I.R.S. Nothing worked. "Finally, someone suggested I contact Senator Steve Symms. So I wrote to him and explained my plight. "Within two days, I'd received a personal letter from Senator Symms, saying he'd been in touch with the proper authorities. A day later, the levy against my wages was removed and I had an apology from the I.R.S. — in writing — for my error. "Thank you, Senator Symms, on behalf of my whole family. You have clearly proven to me where your priorities lie: in Idaho and its citizens."

Poor area skips fete for couple

LONDON (AP) — Across the Thames River from the cheering throngs at Westminster Abbey, two policemen waited in impoverished Brixton for a royal wedding street party to start. It never did.

"There's virtually nobody here," Constable John Fleming reported to police headquarters by walkie-talkie. There's no sign of any party whatsoever."

The fete in honor of newlyweds Prince Andrew and the former Sarah Ferguson was to have taken place at Dexter playground on Railton Road, Brixton's so-called Front Line, a stretch of land in what has been called the country's most violent area.

Fighting broke out along the Front Line in 1981 and eventually spread to 30 cities across Britain. Street fighting flared again last fall after police in Brixton accidentally shot a black woman, leaving her partly paralyzed. During two days of burning and looting, police recorded 800 crimes, including the killing of a newspaper photographer.

The wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer on July 29, 1981, just two weeks after Brixton's first riots, provided an opportunity for improving community relations. Hundreds of people celebrated. White police danced with black youths. A spirit of good will prevailed.

But on Wednesday, it was hard to find evidence of jubilation in Brixton over the marriage of Queen Elizabeth II's second son.

At the Brixton Neighborhood Community Association, workers set up tables for the elderly to watch the ceremony on television. The woman in charge said no party was planned.

A few blocks away, the Atlantic pub posted a sign notifying customers that it would stay open an extra 30 minutes, until 1:30 a.m., in honor of the wedding. As images from Westminster Abbey flickered on a color television screen, a half-dozen customers drank their beer, chatted and occasionally commented on the spectacle.

"The wedding's not bad — it's the money that's spent on it," said Keith Donovan, a 33-year-old mechanic.

What's what

Q Didn't Thomas Jefferson translate his own version of the New Testament?
A. Sort of. With scissors and paste, he excerpted from two different Bibles to piece together a version he preferred, minus some mysteries and miracles he felt didn't jibe with his own notions of natural law.

The traveling musician in the Middle Ages had no legal rights. Murder of such an entertainer was not a punishable crime.

Q Only one flower grown commercially is never grown in a greenhouse. Name it.
A. Gladiolus.

TAR, FEATHERS
An asked who invented that ancient punishment known as "tarring and feathering." Blame Richard the Lion-Hearted. One of the laws of his fleet stipulated: "A robber shall have his head cropped after the manner of the champions, and both ing pitch shall be poured thereon, and feathers of a cushion shall be shaken out on him, and at first land the ship touch, he shall be set ashore."

What the wart is to the dermatologist — a major source of income — so the flea is to the veterinarian. Claim is flea-related problems are the No. 1 reason people take pets to vets.

The Scots once wore a lengthy shawl draped all the way to the ground. It kept hanging up on thistles. So they shortened it. Again and again. Until it wound up as the kilt.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This day can have some very upsetting conditions connected with it. However, "all's well that ends well" and the evening brings romance, peace, and happiness.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You may find it difficult to get rid of worries during the daytime, but the evening can bring happiness.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Communicating with others is rather difficult during the daytime but social life can be positively brilliant.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Use much care in the outside or business world and guard your reputation. Use tact and diplomacy.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Make the right contacts, but avoid one who is overly glib and who would not be good for you.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): See what can be done to keep promises. Then you can have much happiness with the one you love.

VRGO (August 22 to September 21): A depressed partner can be a nuisance to you during the daytime but take this in your stride and be cheery.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Be alert to obstacles in the path of your progress. Enjoy the company of many friends in the evening.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You may find it difficult to push your special talent in the morning, but persevere. Romance tonight!

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): In the morning you think the conditions at home can never improve, but by evening all is right.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You may find it difficult to communicate with others during the day because of certain obstacles.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You can get into financial trouble if you take any unnecessary risks during the daytime.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Get poised early otherwise you could be going hither and yon without real purpose. Remember your mate.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will early need fine training in ethical tenets if the life is to become successful, be it in business or more personal activities and should get as fine an education as money can buy. Permit participation in all sports early in development.

Martin, Channing tour with comedy

BOSTON (AP) — Mary Martin, a 72-year-old great-grandmother, says her son, "Dallas" star Larry Hagman, persuaded her to come out of retirement to tour with actress Carol Channing in a stage comedy. "It has been what you call utter madness. But it's been great fun," she said of her role in "Legends," a farce opening here Wednesday for a 2½-week run. Miss Martin said she had had trouble remembering lines and felt insecure after so many years off the stage, but that another veteran actress, Helen Hayes, encouraged her to keep going. "One should never stop because when you stop, everything stops," Miss Martin said. "Carol has never stopped playing, and she never will."

Rostenkowski to lose license over DUI case

CHICAGO (AP) — U.S. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, will lose his driver's license for a year after pleading guilty to Wisconsin drunken driving charges, state officials said. "He's going to serve out his suspension just like anybody else would," said David P. Lowe, Rostenkowski's lawyer in Milwaukee.

On Tuesday, the Cubs organization said it "does not authorize nor does it condone or approve of Marla Collins' appearing in Playboy," but spokesman Ned Colletti would not say whether her departure was linked to her Playboy debut.

Assessments opposed by Woodward, Newman

WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — Joanne Woodward and Paul Newman are among more than 60 property owners filing suit against Westport's Board of Tax Review over its October 1985 property reassessments. Representing both residential and commercial interests, the suits by the couple seek a reduction in the assessments to what they say is the legally required 70 percent of the properties' market value. Newman is appealing the assessment placed on land and improvements at two addresses, which were set at $60,000 and $988,300. The property assessed at $988,300 was initially assessed at $1.02 million, which Newman appealed.

Shamir to stay at home following eye surgery

JERUSALEM (AP) — Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir will be homebound for 24 hours following treatment for a cataract in his left eye, a government official said Wednesday. Shamir, 70, will be off duty while recuperating from the treatment at Hadassah Medical Center, but would receive a full report from Prime Minister Shimon Peres on his peace-seeking mission to Morocco.

Ballgirl, management parting was 'mutual'

CHICAGO (AP) — Marla Collins, the Chicago Cubs ballgirl, says she has parted company with the baseball club because officials were unhappy about her nude photo spread in September's Playboy magazine. "I thought it was tastefully done," said Ms. Collins, who said she had not asked the Cubs' permission to pose for Playboy. "We just had a mutual parting of the ways," said Tom Cooper, Cubs director of stadium operations, said Wednesday. "We could not condone her actions in relations to the Playboy spread. She was planning on leaving anyway."

Town restricts street skateboarding

CLINTON, N.J. (AP) — The Town Council has approved an ordinance prohibiting skateboarding on public streets, but the police chief says officers will use discretion in enforcing it. If people riding skateboards operate safely, they won't be subjected to the $50 fine approved under the ordinance, Chief Michael Wolfe said.

Hassan says Israel will not talk with PLO, yield territory

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — King Hassan II said Wednesday his two days of talks with Shimon Peres did not persuade the Israeli prime minister to recognize the PLO or to withdraw from occupied Arab territories.

In a 45-minute television speech addressed primarily to his own subjects, Hassan appeared to acknowledge that the historic meeting brought no direct progress toward breaking the Middle East deadlock.

"We did not meet to negotiate or to find a solution, but to explore the possibilities. We Moroccans have courage in our blood, and we cannot flee from our responsibilities," he said.

Hassan said President Reagan tried to persuade him to hold the meeting in the United States, but he turned down the suggestion to avoid accusations that he acted under American influence.

Peres left for home from the Meknes military airfield two hours after Hassan spoke. He was the first sitting Israeli prime minister to visit any Arab country other than Egypt, with which Israel signed a peace treaty in 1979.

A joint communique on the meeting is expected to be issued by the two governments this morning.

Hassan gave no precise details of his 10 hours of talks with Peres. But he summed up the deadlock in the form of a simplified conversation between Peres and himself:

"I said to Shimon Peres, 'What do you think about the PLO?' He replied, 'I will not recognize the PLO.'

"I asked him, 'Then how will you settle the Palestinian problem without a valid partner with whom to discuss it?' He replied, 'I will find them in West Bank, in Syria and in Jordan.'

"I said, 'but they will not negotiate with you on occupied territory. You must withdraw, and the PLO is the necessary path toward it.' He says he cannot evacuate, cannot talk about Jerusalem, refuses to recognize the PLO or even to recognize that he must withdraw from the occupied territories."

Hassan said he took the initiative to invite Peres in order to ask for a direct response to the peace plan adopted by a 1982 Arab summit meeting held in Fez under his chairmanship.

Times reporter denies Chinese spy charge

HONG KONG (AP) — John Burns, the New York Times reporter expelled from China, said Wednesday that he would not have ridden through the countryside on a motorcycle if he had any intention of spying.

"This is not the kind of thing spies do," he told reporters after his arrival in Hong Kong. "I'm not a spy. I'm a journalist. If I had been a spy, I certainly would not have chosen to do anything as clumsy as this way to go about gathering information."

A statement issued in Peking by Public Security Bureau officer Xu Hui claimed Burns, American attorney Ed McNally and a Chinese man "broke into a militarily restricted zone of our country, and took numerous photographs of classified objects."

"Such demeanor obviously constitutes an act of spying and intelligence gathering which will not be tolerated by any sovereign state and needs to say is also a regrettable incident," the statement said.

It called the case "a grave one," adding that the men "disregarded the laws of China, deliberately violating the law governing aliens entering into and exiting from the People's Republic of China."

Hopeful Howe, Botha confer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe met President P.W. Botha on Wednesday and later said the winds of change were blowing across the racially tense region.

"Outsiders can perhaps see things that those closer to the scene may miss. What all outsiders can see clearly is that, after 25 years, the wind of change in Africa is shaking its southern part to the roots," he said.

Howe arrived Wednesday morning on a mission for the 12-nation European Common Market to press for an end to apartheid. South Africa's system of racial separation.

He appealed to government foes to reconsider their refusal to see him because "talking can solve many problems; however difficult, and violence few."

Most black leaders have declined to meet Howe, describing his trip as a delaying tactic to avoid imposing tough economic sanctions.

Howe planned trips to neighboring black countries before he meets Botha on Tuesday for a second time.

He said his nearly two-hour meeting with Botha was "candid, courteous and substantive," but refused to disclose details.

In other developments:

- Apartheid foes fiercely criticized President Reagan's speech firmly opposing sanctions to prod the government to move faster on race reforms. Under apartheid, South Africa's 5 million whites dominate 24 million voteless blacks.

- The Bureau for Information said six more blacks were killed by other blacks in continued unrest. Five of the six victims were burned to death in KwaNdebele, northeast of Pretoria, where rival groups have fought for months over that black homeland's plan to accept independence from South Africa.
- More than 2,000 people have been killed in violence since September 1984. The toll since a nationwide state of emergency was imposed June 12 was 172. The government says most recent victims were killed by other blacks, not by security forces.

USSR rushes to construct new housing

MOSCOW (AP) — A huge construction project is under way so more than 25,000 families evacuated from around the wrecked Chernobyl nuclear reactor can be given new homes elsewhere by fall, the newspaper Pravda said Wednesday.

The Communist Party daily also said a new settlement for 10,000 Chernobyl workers is being built outside the evacuation zone.

About 100,000 people were evacuated from an 18-mile radius around the plant in the Soviet Ukraine after a chemical explosion and fire in the No. 4 reactor on April 26 speeded radioactivity into the air. It was not clear how many of the evacuees were accounted for in the Pravda figure of 25,000 families.

More than 50,000 construction workers are taking part in the evacuee relocation program, Pravda and other news reports said.

The program includes building 7,250 homes around Kiev, 80 miles south of the plant, and Zhitomir, about 100 miles southwest of it, and repairing another 6,000 existing homes, presumably empty, for use by evacuees, Pravda said.

Russians may read emigre

MOSCOW (AP) — Vladimir Nabokov, the late Russian emigre author described by Soviet censors as a "literary snob" and banned for decades, may be published soon in his homeland, according to an interview that appeared Wednesday in the writers' weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta.

Consultations with the official literary archive indicated Nabokov, author of "Invitation to a Beheading," has never been published in the Soviet Union.

The possibility of Nabokov's debut followed other signs that previously banned writers or works are now to be published as part of a limited relaxation of cultural policy under Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who became Kremlin leader in March 1985.

Mikhail Alexeyev, editor of the literary journal Moskva (Moscow), told Literaturnaya Gazeta that Nabokov's novel "Invitation to a Beheading" was among several publishing projects under consideration.

1,000 homeless in wake of waves

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — High waves caused by rainstorms washed away mud-and-straw houses in the coastal district of Noakhali, leaving at least 1,000 people homeless and 25 injured, officials said Wednesday.

The officials in Noakhali, 120 miles south of Dhaka, told The Associated Press by telephone that the Meghna River, which flows to the Bay of Bengal, surged after heavy rains Tuesday, destroying more than 200 houses and flooding 1,300 acres of farmland.

At least five of those injured were hospitalized after their homes collapsed.

City's new industrial park well is tagged a costly washout

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city's new, $6,366 well is a washout, say J-U-B Engineering consultants developing a new water-pressure district for Twin Falls.

Consultants are advising the city to abandon any attempt to incorporate the Chamber of Commerce Industrial Park well into the town's water system.

About the best the city can hope for is to cap it now and transfer it to a private company in the southeast corner of the city, if they can find one that wants it, J-U-B engineers said at a City Council work session this week.

The latest information shows the well pumps only 175 gallons of water per minute, and engineers are not certain it can pump even that much around the clock.

The council had hoped to pump 300 gallons per minute from the well when drilling began. As recently as June, city officials were still expecting 300 gallons per minute from the well.

The 300 gallons may seem like a healthy flow, but one hose on a city fire truck has a maximum capacity of 300 gallons per minute, says Councilman Jim Vickers. When all five hoses on a truck are operating, they can pump 1,500 gallons per minute.

The city drilled the well in the Industrial Park to improve water flow and pressure there. Now the park lacks enough water for fire fighting and industrial sprinklers.

Drilling was originally covered by a community development block grant, but city money had to be spent when drillers ran into problems.

Drillers hit a hard, sticky clay between 500 and 600 feet, says engineer Dale Riedesel. To keep the clay from sloughing in, the well had to be cased down to 600 feet. That added $11,520 to the $32,800 budgeted for the project.

Another $2,046 was added to the project as drillers dug farther than planned — to below 1,000 feet — in a futile attempt to find a substantial flow of water.

The council is now considering J-U-B's plan to improve water pressure in the Industrial Park and nearby areas with the addition of a storage reservoir and booster station. The project would cost $576,000, plus the cost of purchasing about two-thirds of an acre for the reservoir.

The new well could be incorporated into the new water district at an annual cost of 30 cents per 1,000 gallons. However, the proposed booster station could provide the same pressure for only 20 cents a gallon, according to J-U-B estimates.

J-U-B is also working on plans for a new automatic water-control and monitoring system for the city.

The computerized system would cost $141,350, but would allow three city positions to be cut, says City Manager Tom Courtney. It would pay for itself in two years.

Street repairs given a boost

Low oil prices reducing costs

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Street construction and seal-coating funds will go further than usual this year in Twin Falls, thanks to the low price crude oil is bringing on the world market.

The Twin Falls City Council has accepted bids for both projects that were substantially less than the city had expected to pay.

The city's wish list of projects this year was really "shooting the moon," said City Engineer Gary Young. The city had expected to choose which projects to proceed with after bids came in, but to his surprise, only $40,000 worth of projects had to be cut.

Aslett Industries has been awarded the seal-coating project. The city had budgeted $275,000, but Aslett bid the work at $185,840.

The low bid for construction, $125,607, was submitted by Gordon Paving. The budget allowed $123,846 for construction, including $73,300 which had already been committed to other street and parking lot projects and $121,635 to help property owners with work on Highland Avenue.

To make ends meet the city will postpone about 34,000 square feet of a proposed 250,000 square feet of seal-coating. And it will do work on Mimodoka Avenue between Shoshone Street and 3rd Street South with city crews rather than having it overlaid by a contractor.

The drop in oil prices could not have come in a better year, Young said.

"We bid a more expensive type of seal-coat oil this year than in the past," he said, "because the end results after seal coats have been erratic. On some streets, the chips come off. We decided rather than to hope or fiddle we would use it — it's a rubberized oil that holds chips and resists cracking and bleeding."

The city staff tested the expensive seal-coat oil on a few streets last year and was pleased with the results, he said.

Street construction planned this year includes overlaying several streets with asphalt and construction cloth to form a new driving surface. Those streets include Falls Avenue East from Elm Street to Eastland Drive; the central three blocks of Main Avenue; Locust Street from 4th Avenue North to Addison Avenue; Eastland Drive between Elizabeth Boulevard and Addison; some blocks of Washington Street North; and Russet Street from South Park Avenue to the railroad tracks.

Also planned is work to alleviate drainage problems on 5th Street North at the corner of 4th Avenue North and 4th Avenue North.

Seal-coating will not begin until late August because of the contractor's previous commitments, Young says. The extra time will also help city crews finish repairing streets scheduled for coating, he says.

The seal-coating list includes the following streets:

- Ostrander Street North from Strouper Avenue North to the dead end; Ostrander Street from 3rd Avenue West to Delong Avenue; Wendell Street from Robbins Avenue to Ridgeway Drive; Rose Street from Caswell Avenue to the railroad tracks.

Jennifer Hovey says that people often have a stereotyped idea of what a beauty pageant winner is like

Confident Jennifer Hovey seeks coveted Miss America tiara

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — No Miss Idaho has ever won the Miss America pageant. No Miss Idaho has ever even placed in the top 10. This year's state contestant, Jennifer Hovey, plans to change that.

The national pageant is on Sept. 13 in Atlantic City, N.J., and Hovey says she is going with the thought that she can win. "The people at the pageant think that California and New York have all the winning girls. It's time to prove that Idaho can do it, too," she said Wednesday.

Hovey is originally from Twin Falls, the daughter of Larry and Jean Hovey. She now lives in Boise — a requirement that goes with winning — with temporary foster parents Lloyd and Karen Falk, who are helping her to prepare for the national pageant. She is a member of Boise State University and plans to major in communications.

She was crowned Miss Idaho 1985 on June 14, when she competed as Miss Idaho National Guard. The pageant was her second attempt at the title of Miss Idaho. She competed as Miss Twin Falls the year before, but did not place as a finalist.

"It was hard to come back in defeat. This year, it feels great to come back to my home town in victory," Hovey said Wednesday at a Rotary Club luncheon.

Among Hovey's advantages as a contestant for Miss America is her natural ability to perform and achieve a happy medium between her 'Ever since I was 5, I've been performing for other people. I've grown up a little faster than what was natural because I was always around people older than me.'

— Jennifer Hovey

assertiveness and her true personality.

"Ever since I was 5, I've been performing for other people. I've grown up a little faster than what was maybe natural because I was always around people older than me," she said.

"Many people, including the judges, have told her she's a natural for performing in beauty pageants," foster mother Karen Falk said.

The Miss America pageant will be Hovey's fifth pageant, a factor she sees as an advantage. While many of the other contestants will have been in the pageant business for up to seven years, she will have the advantage of "freshness."

Win or lose, the September pageant will be Hovey's last. "I won't be falling back on pageants for support in the future," she said.

Her lifestyle has changed in many ways since winning the title of Miss Idaho. One difference form and achieve a happy medium between other people," she said.

hard to go from being a normal person to a beauty queen," she said.

The responsibility of the Miss Idaho title has meant appearances almost every day for Hovey. Maintaining her poise and behavior in order to represent the state has been trying, but she sees it as a positive force.

"It gets hard sometimes, because being Miss Idaho comes before being Jennifer, but it helps keep me in practice for the Miss America pageant," she said.

She also has found that many people have a stereotypical image of beauty pageant winners. Making appearances all over the state has been a good opportunity to show people she isn't just "blond and ditzy," she said.

Since the Vanessa Williams incident three years ago, the image of the "typical" Miss America has gone through some changes, Hovey said. "They're trying to update the image a little more to make it more contemporary. A pageant winner isn't the girl next door anymore," she added.

The typical pageant ideal now has a more updated image. The recent Miss Idaho pageant was called a "scholarship pageant." Instead of a "beauty pageant." Emphasis is now being placed on the girl's personality and mind, rather than how good she looks in a swimsuit, Hovey said.

Until September, Hovey will continue to train and prepare for the big pageant, as well as make appearances throughout Idaho. "I'm going to Atlantic City to win. If I go not expecting to do any better than second, I won't," she said.

Trouble intersection site of 4th stop sign

TWIN FALLS — The intersection of Pole Line Road and Washington Street, formerly a three-way stop, was changed to a four-way stop on Monday due to complaints from motorists.

The intersection has been a three-way stop for two years. According to Michael Warr of the Twin Falls County Highway District, complaints had been coming in since the original change.

"People just didn't know what to do when they got to the intersection. Some just sat there, wondering if they should go. It was confusing for a lot of people," she said.

The idea of making the intersection a three-way stop was meant as a convenience for trucks going through that area. Trucks coming from the east and going into town by way of Washington were not required to stop.

The convenience turned out to be more confusing than expected, and after receiving enough calls and complaints about the intersection, the Highway District decided to install a fourth stop sign.

There had been no reported accidents at the intersection, according to Warr, but many people had complaints of just barely avoiding an accident.

Highway District Curamiss slower Doug Howard said that the commissioners had felt the intersection was a safety hazard. "I live out in that area and I have to drive through that intersection every day," Howard said, explaining the safety concerns of residents in the area.

Although truckers turning left onto Washington from Pole Line will now have to stop, a right turn can still be made without stopping.

Ethanol outlook belies rosy political speeches

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sens. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, and Robert Dole, R-Kan., were in Twin Falls recently, touting the use of agricultural products to make ethanol as a tonic for the listless farm economy.

But a check with Idaho's only ethanol manufacturer and the principal marketer of the gasoline-stretching additive shows no sharp increase in production over last year.

A number of hurdles remain in terms of public acceptance and other glitches before ethanol-producing crops can hold their own as the state's farmers, according to spokesmen for J.R. Simplot and Ethanol Marketing of Boise.

Production of ethanol was up substantially in the first half of 1986, when J.R. Simplot Co. operated ethanol plants in Caldwell and Heyburn, but in the last two to three months production is at the same level as last year, said Fred Zerza, Simplot's director of public relations.

"The market in Idaho has leveled out. We're pursuing markets beyond Idaho. We see some potential in neighboring states," said Zerza.

The Heyburn and Caldwell plants process potatoes and make ethanol. The Heyburn plant was closed approximately three months ago because of reduced demand for potato processing and the need for scheduled maintenance at the facility, said Zerza.

Potato processing is scheduled to resume at Heyburn Sept. 2. Zerza said reopening of the ethanol part of the facility depends on the market, which is being hurt by low oil prices and other factors.

One part of ethanol is mixed with nine parts gasoline to yield the common gasoline-ethanol blend. Ethanol reduces dependence on refined petroleum products, and one industry estimate is that every barrel of ethanol replaces two barrels of imported oil.

One indication of the state of the ethanol market in Idaho is that half a dozen ethanol plants have closed in the state in the last three years, said Jim Glancey, president of Ethanol Marketing of Boise. Glancey's company is Simplot's principal marketer but is not connected with Simplot.

Glancey said he projects sales of 2.5 million gallons of ethanol in the state this year. Previous year's sales were about 2 million gallons. He said this is up from 1984 when 700,000-800,000 gallons were sold.

Ethanol is available mainly from non-oil-based retail gasoline stations. Of the major brands, Sinclair has shown some interest in it, Glancey said.

The feedstock for annual ethanol production at Simplot is 3 million hundredweight bags of potatoes. One-third of the feedstock, or about 1 million hundredweight bags, comes from distressed potatoes Simplot buys on the open market and potatoes not suitable for food processing. The balance, or 2 million hundredweight, comes from food-processing waste.

Together these sources amount to less than 3 percent of the 87 million

Search launched to find Heaton's replacement

By JANE ROBINSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls School District on Tuesday began interviewing candidates to replace Assistant Superintendent Dr. Kent Heaton, who resigned July 1.

Superintendent Carl Snow also said on Tuesday that the district has made other personnel changes, including naming a new director of personnel, Twin Falls High School Counselor Keith Farnsworth.

Snow said Doyle Simcoe, who was head of personnel, maintenance and transportation, has been selected to replace Marilyn Heaton as director of all federal programs, including Migrant and Chapter I programs. Simcoe will continue as director of maintenance and transportation.

Snow said they expect to fill the assistant superintendent's position by Thursday or Friday. The district received 28 applications, but no one locally applied, he said.

"We had a couple of principals express interest, but they later withdrew because they didn't have doctorates," Snow said.

He would not release the names of the top five candidates because they were still employed by other districts.

He did say, however, that of the 28, nine were from Idaho, one was from Kansas, one was from Nebraska, one from California, and the rest from surrounding Northwest states.

Fantus study 6 months late

TWIN FALLS — A long-promised look into the economic climate of Twin Falls will appear next month, more than six months later than scheduled, an executive for the city's hired consultant says.

"The best estimate at this time is a mid-August completion date," Robert M. Ady, executive vice president for The Fantus Co., has written to the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, which requested the study.

Delivery of the $8,000 analysis has been delayed since February. The consultant writing the report — Fantus Vice President Phillip D. Phillips — also resigned earlier this month to take an academic post.

The study was "overlooked" when Phillips stepped down, Ady said in a letter to chamber Executive Vice President Mike Dolton, the city's main contact. Phillips now has agreed to help his replacement finish the report.

"Rest assured we will fulfill the commitment contained in this letter," Ady wrote.

To date, chamber and city officials have received 10 of the 18 parts comprising the study.

The city council authorized the analysis late last year. In it, Fantus, a well-known corporate relocation consultant, will evaluate Twin Falls from the perspective of a company seeking to expand an existing operation. Phillips gave a preliminary, oral report in January while researching.

Resource tour prepared

FAIRFIELD — This year's summer tour of the Wood River Resource Conservation and Development area will center around Fairfield and begins at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday from the Fairfield city park.

Those attending will board tour buses at the park.

Lou Pence, area director, said among features of the tour will be a look at new "space age" systems in snow measurement. Through the use of remote control systems, an agency staff can measure snow and water content on a remote mountain side and never get their feet cold.

Pence said the remote control equipment and computers work together to provide immediate reports on any day's snow depths and water content.

At least a trip of several hours in over-the-snow vehicles.

Other stops on the tour will include the Soldier Mountain Ski Area where management of recreational facilities on forest lands will be discussed and a seedling tree storage facility. This is used by the Sawtooth National Forest to store new trees raised for replanting of timbered or burned areas of forest land. There will also be a stop at a controlled burn area in the forest near Fairfield.

Anyone interested in the conservation and development of resources in the Blaine, Camas, Gooding and Lincoln counties area is invited to attend.

A steak fry will follow at 5:30 p.m. in Fairfield City Park featuring steaks, french fries, salad, rolls and beverages. The cost is $7.50 per person.

Library receives equipment

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Public Library received new reading/printing microfilm equipment last Friday, a combined donation from The Times-News and the Twin Falls Rotary Club.

The new machine will make hard-copy prints of information stored on microfilm and micro-fiche cards for 20 cents. Previously, the library's microfilm equipment consisted of readers, but no printers.

The equipment cost over $3,000 to donate. The Rotary Club raised much of the money by selling Statues of Liberty pins, a project which has been in effect since last autumn. The microfilm itself is purchased by the library.

Information available at the library on microfilm or microfiche includes copies of 11 local newspapers from as far back as 1904. They also have backfiles of magazines, and issues of the New York Times from 1894-1967.

Maps, government documents, special reports and other information are also available. The library hopes to increase the amount of information to include Boise newspapers and records in the future.

Boot woman Cole dies at 73

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls businesswoman who built a small shoe repair shop in a local store into one of the nation's leading western boot sales operations will be buried Friday in the place she called her town.

Mae L. Cole, 73, died on Monday evening in Magic Valley Regional Medical Center after a long illness. For 48 years, she owned and operated Mae's Boots on Main Avenue, and was known by customers and other business owners as the region's leading authority on "cowboy" boots and how to fit them.

Several times she won awards from a major boot manufacturer for retailing more western boots than any other business in Idaho and ranking among the top in the nation.

Cole once said she put people of every walk of life into the comfortable high-heeled western boot and sold her products to ranchers and cowboys in Nevada, Utah and many other states. She also listed a number of Hollywood personalities among her customers.

She came to Twin Falls during the Depression and built her own business. From a one-woman operation nearly 50 years ago into a firm that employed 15 people and sold hundreds of pairs of boots a year. Her store also branched into several lines of western clothing.

Cole was born in Perkins, Okla., and came to Twin Falls with a small child and no money. She said she decided at that time that Twin Falls was her town and she was going to leave her mark in the community.

Cole's funeral will be conducted on Friday at 3 p.m. in the White Mortuary with burial in Sunset Memorial Park.

Two bridges were washed out by water and the Mill Creek portion of the road was severely eroded.

The agency has applied for Federal Highway Administration emergency relief funds to make repairs on several roads throughout the forest.

The price tag for flood damage is estimated at $165,000, said Jerry Hinn, Challis Forest assistant engineer. The forest's road maintenance budget for the entire year is only $210,800.

Although the federal engineer who inspected the damage has recommended denial of assistance, officials have not given up hope, Hinn said.

Both men are alleged to have entered Chelsea's restaurant at 64 Main Ave. N. on the night of July 15 or the morning of July 16. In addition to the theft of food, liquor and a clock, the burglary involved extensive damage throughout the building.

Brink is also charged with burglary of the adjoining Donnelly Sports on the same night and Obenchain's Insurance office at 263 2nd Ave. N. June 30 or early July 1. Police also reported extensive damage was caused in both of these burglaries.

Burglary charges against Brink include other break-ins dating back to March and up to last week.

Other night-time entries in which Brink is accused are those at New Beginnings at 500 Addison Ave. on March 23; Nelson's Inc., 1641 Highland Ave., June 18 or 30; B and B Oil Co., 219 Maxwell Ave., and Wright's Flowers, 1409 Kimberly Rd.

Police reported some of the items missing in the burglaries have been recovered.

Jerome County Sheriff Elza Hall said Wednesday he probably will leave this weekend for California to return Workman to Jerome. He said he will drive, and because he is picking up a woman prisoner, will take his wife with him.

Workman was living in the Slater home, caring for her mother, Paula Slater, at a cancer victim, at the time of the death of Workman's stepfather and his wife. A coroner's jury last week determined the pair was murdered and that Workman was the prime suspect in the deaths.

No charges have been filed involving the death of Mrs. Slater, and Jerome County Prosecutor Mark Gause said it has not been decided if such a charge will be filed.

Workman was taken into custody by Sacramento officers shortly after the coroner's verdict was reached and a warrant issued in Jerome last Friday.

Census official to give a talk at IPC meeting

TWIN FALLS — A U.S. Census Bureau official will speak at a noon meeting of the Sawtooth Press Club today.

Larry Hartke of Seattle, information officer for the bureau's Northwest region, will discuss demographic trends and how to use Census Bureau data.

The luncheon meeting will be held at George K's on Kimberly Road. The public is invited, and reservations are not needed. For more information call Steve Hartigan at The Times-News.

TWIN FALLS — Two men, arrested by Twin Falls police Tuesday in connection with a string of burglaries from March to last week, remained in the Twin Falls County Jail Wednesday under bond.

Donald Shane Brink, 28, of 1595 Lindy Lane in Twin Falls, is charged with eight felony counts of first-degree burglary. Bond was set at $1,500 per count, for a total of $12,000. Larry John Jones, 28, of 260 2nd Ave. N., is charged with one hundredweight bags of potatoes the state produces annually.

Another question in the ethanol debate is what future will waxy barley have.

Synonymous supporters at a fundraiser here last Saturday that he was excelling about Simplot's plans for using waxy barley as a feedstock for ethanol production.

Zerza said Simplot is in the early stages of looking into waxy barley, which yields other potentially marketable products besides ethanol.

The company has about 2,000 acres planted for seed production in Montana and Idaho.

Ethanol production would be dead in the water without state and federal tax incentives to produce it.

The United States Department of Agriculture estimates it costs $1.82 to make a gallon of ethanol. With federal and state tax incentives, the manufacturing price per gallon drops to $1.13-$1.60 per gallon.

In April a 4-cent-per-gallon exemption from the state fuel tax was extended for gasoline through 1992.

The company has introduced an amendment to the Income tax reform bill being debated in Congress which would extend federal tax credits to ethanol blenders until 1992. He also talked on an amendment which it alleged for a country to ship ethanol to the Caribbean, refine it there and import it into the United States, duty-free.

"That, in the long run, would keep out unfair competition and give the domestic industry better opportunity," said Symms aide Glen Youngblood.

Asked if Symms wasn't giving the agricultural community false hope by touting ethanol as a solution to farm problems, Youngblood said, "I doubt he was talking about immediate consumption. I think he was couching it as an opportunity over time."

However, two people who heard Symms' remarks recall no such qualifications.

So what is standing in the way of making the ethanol market grow?

"The principal item is there has to be greater public acceptance of ethanol and greater awareness of ethanol's potential to reduce dependence on its foreign petroleum products on its qualities as an octane enhancer in no-lead fuel and its benefits to the agricultural community of Idaho," said Zerza.

Glancey said the incentives for ethanol production are in place in Idaho, but the state has a conservative population which is hesitant to use it.

TWIN FALLS — We're very pleased, we have excellent candidates," said Snow.

The district at large is filling the remaining teaching positions open. Since February 23, teachers and two administrators, Heaton and his wife Marilyn, have resigned. Two teachers requested a leave of absence.

Snow said on Tuesday that all but two positions have been filled. He said they are still trying to hire a junior high math teacher and a high school counselor to replace Francisworth.

A study released by the Idaho Board of Education in June found a majority of Idaho school districts experienced some shortage of teachers in 1983, especially math and science teachers.

Except for the one math teacher, Snow said Twin Falls School District did not have a problem attracting qualified teachers. He said the new teachers hired included both teachers with experience and those just out of college.

Workman will return, face charge of shooting

JEROME — Susanne Workman, 39, charged with first-degree murder in the Oct. 10 shooting death of John Slater, 81, of Jerome, waived extradition in Sacramento, Calif., and will be returned here to face the charge.

Jerome County Sheriff Elza Hall said Wednesday he probably will leave this weekend for California to return Workman to Jerome. He said he will drive, and because he is picking up a woman prisoner, will take his wife with him.

Workman was living in the Slater home, caring for her mother, Paula Slater, at a cancer victim, at the time of the death of Workman's stepfather and his wife. A coroner's jury last week determined the pair was murdered and that Workman was the prime suspect in the deaths.

No charges have been filed involving the death of Mrs. Slater, and Jerome County Prosecutor Mark Gause said it has not been decided if such a charge will be filed.

Workman was taken into custody by Sacramento officers shortly after the coroner's verdict was reached and a warrant issued in Jerome last Friday.

Troubles with cash flow, curriculum beset Minidoka board

By Ronda Taylor
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — Finances and upgrading high school programs were again on the minds of Minidoka County School District trustees during the regular board meeting Tuesday.

District Clerk-Treasurer Audrey Newert reported that the annual financial report was better than she and Assistant Superintendent Floyd Merrill had anticipated. There was a $168,000 carryover, partially caused by earned interest that was higher than expected, she said.

However, expenses, including two insurance premiums that are due, will "more than eat that (carryover) up," Newert said.

The trustees authorized Newert to borrow up to $86,000 in tax anticipation notes. The money would pay off $5,000 owed to the bond building fund, pay additional fees and leave about $80,000 for the district to use before tax collections are received by the district in January.

Newert said she may have overestimated tax collections for this year, causing the $80,000 shortage. She also said the district could not borrow money from its plant facilities funds because it would be unlawful to do so.

Better financial news was heard from Assistant Superintendent Floyd Merrill who reported on utility bill savings at East and West Minco Junior high schools. The district had participated in an energy conservation program with the Bonneville Power Administration and saved $53,177 in energy costs at the two schools over the last year, he said.

Trustees approved a new weighted grading policy Tuesday, a policy they have been discussing for over three months.

The policy sets a five point grading scale for "rigorous, demanding" academic classes. According to the new scale, an A grade is worth five points, a B equals 4 points, a C

Budget ax to be wielded at special meeting

By Ronda Taylor

RUPERT — The Minidoka County School Board will hold a special meeting July 23 to determine what cutbacks will be made after a $335,000 override tax levy request was soundly defeated Tuesday by district patrons.

The meeting will convene at noon at the Rupert Elks Club.

"We have to balance the budget," Superintendent Gene Snapp said Wednesday. The bulk of the override monies, $250,000, would have been used to erase the district's deficit which amounted to $243,000 at the end of the 1985 fiscal year.

Had the measure passed, $55,000 would have been used for required teacher salary increments, and $30,000 would have allowed the district to hire an additional elementary principal.

Voter turn-out Tuesday was less than half the number voting in May when the board first tried to get an override levy approved. In that election, patrons defeated three of four measures put before the voters on a "menu" style ballot.

In the May election, levy requests that would have funded increment pay for teachers and paid off the deficit were narrowly defeated by 51 percent of the vote. However, opposition to those re-

Doubts emerge on plan to annex

Opposition stated because of tax fears

By Barbara Newert
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Strong opposition emerged Monday at a hearing held by the City Council on whether the city should annex the Reinheimer and Weyakin properties at the south entrance to Ketchum.

Seven Weyakin residents and a manager speaking on behalf of the Weyakin Homeowners Association said they are opposed to being included in Ketchum's city limits due to the increased tax burden they would bear and the relatively low benefit they would derive from the annexation.

However, one local resident, Edward Scott, spoke in favor of the city annexing the two parcels which are contiguous to the present city limits.

"If somebody should eventually annex it, it should be Ketchum," Scott said.

Weyakin homeowners disagreed. "My feeling is the city of Ketchum is just doing a tax grab and cannot provide us with anything," said Weyakin homeowner R.G. Reeder.

The Weyakin residents already are supplied with water and sewer by the city of Ketchum and currently pay an average of $150 a year to the Ketchum Rural Fire District for fire protection.

Reeder said annexation would result in an annual increase of $1,500 in property taxes on a $50,000 home, and did not see the benefit in services to homeowners for this increase.

Attorney Gary Slette spoke on behalf of Reeder, saying the legal requirement for annexation — the orderly development of the city — had not been met for this involuntary annexation. Slette said the Weyakin property has already been developed to its full extent and the Reinheimer land will see no future development as it has been deeded to the Idaho Parks Foundation as open space in perpetuity.

Ketchum city attorney Jim Phillips disagreed and said the annexation has to be "reasonable for development of the city as a whole, not just a segment of property."

Mayor Gerald Seiffert said the annexation of these properties had been addressed in the city's comprehensive plan, and the citizens of Ketchum should have control of these areas which are at the entrance to the city.

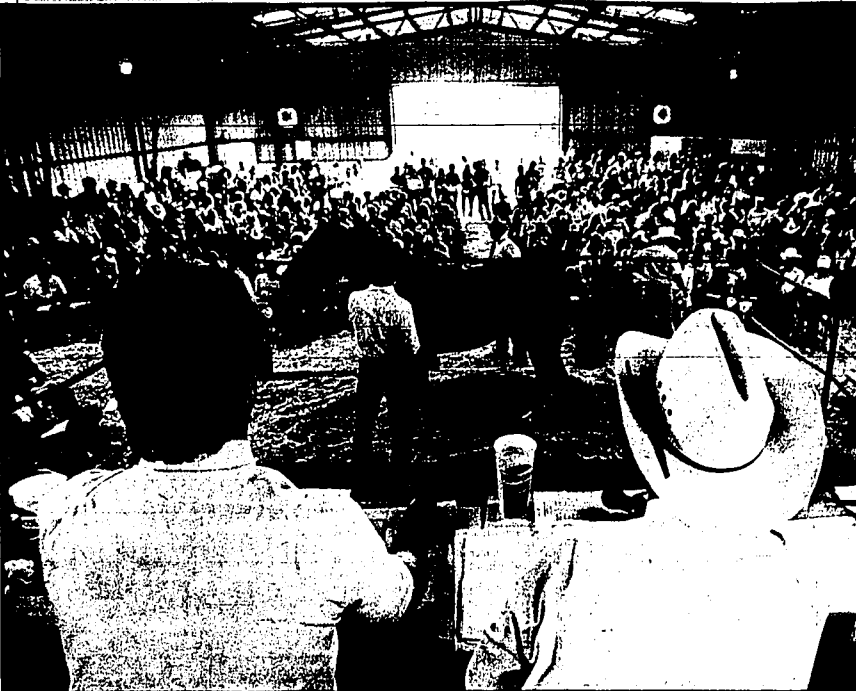

The council will take testimony from the public hearing into consideration, but tabled further discussion of the annexation until they could obtain an interpretation of the original agreement with the developers of Weyakin.

In a related matter, a public hearing was held to add a Limited Residential 1 zoning district for the city. This classification would apply to the Weyakin property if it is annexed.

City Planner Linda Haavick said the Reinheimer land would be zoned agricultural/forestry for flatland areas and recreational use for areas on the hillside with a 25 percent or greater slope. Weyakin properties would be zoned with the new classification, LR-1, for flatlands and RU for the hillside with a 25 percent or greater slope.

Councilman Tom Held objected to the stipulation in the ordinance limiting structures to a 25-foot height. The ordinance will be changed to reflect a maximum 35-foot height and another public hearing will be held.

134 steeds draw bids in big auction

By Terrell Williams
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — The biggest sale of race horse stock in the Northwest was held Tuesday at the Billingsley Creek Ranch south of Hagerman.

Ranch owner and operator Donnie McFadden said Wednesday the horses sold this year for less money than they ever have before because of the slow economy of the area.

"It was a buyer's market," he said.

The highest price paid this year was $19,500 for a son of Dash for Cash named Better Judgement. This eight-year-old stallion went to a buyer from Helena, Mont., McFadden said.

The highest selling yearling was a stud colt stired by Bedulino and from a daughter of Moon Deck named Moon Spin. The yearling sold for $16,500 to a group of eight investors headed by Jim Gibbs of Boise.

The highest selling brood mare also brought $16,500. Earthquake Ethel, an eight-year-old stakes winner of more than $80,000, went to a Utah buyer.

McFadden said 134 horses went through his auction ring between 5 p.m. and midnight Tuesday. About 500 people, he estimated, attended the sale, with buyers from most of the Northwestern states. The majority of the buyers, he added, were from within a 200-mile radius of Hagerman.

"This sale grosses more money each year than all the other sales in the Northwest combined," McFadden said.

At least one of every three yearlings sold last year has already qualified for the finals of the futurity this year, he said.

He said the sale has a good reputation, but prices are down from previous years because the economy is down.

"It's just that nobody has any money," he said. "It was a great opportunity to buy racehorses, let me add that all the problems grandmother had are still there, mostly arthritis, family concerns and financial security. But the spirit of resignation or associated with the elderly, is going, gone with the wind.

Oakley's Pioneer festival prepared

Musical, barbeque slated for weekend

OAKLEY — The annual celebration honoring Oakley's early-day settlers is already under way in this small, agricultural community, with the main events starting today and continuing through the weekend.

A musical, rodeo, parade and barbeque are among the highlights of this year's Pioneer Days, being sponsored by the Oakley Vigilantes.

The festivities started Tuesday with the premiere presentation of "Prelude to the Present," a new musical play depicting the saga of Goose Creek and the early-day main events in Oakley's history. The play will be shown for the last time at the Howells Opera House Saturday at 3 p.m. Admission is free.

A gymkhana will be held today at 7 p.m. and is open to amateur contestants. There will be calf riding and horse games for participants ages 6 to 16, with sign-up at 5:30 p.m. to 6:45 p.m. at the Oakley Rodeo Grounds. Admission is $2 per adult, $1 per student, and children under 6 are admitted free.

The annual Pony Express Race will be held Friday. The teams will start and finish in front of the grandstand. The race course is about 10 miles of dirt track and will start about 7 p.m. in the rodeo arena. Entry fee is $250 per team.

The first place team will receive $1,500 and belt buckles, the second place team receives $700 and the third place team receives $300. All three top teams will receive trophies.

Spectators may guess the time it will take to run the race, with the prize for the first place guess $100 and $50 for the second place guess. Admission is included with the purchase of a rodeo ticket at $3.50 per adult and $1.50 per child.

The rodeo will be held at 8 p.m. on Friday and Saturday with stock penmanship by Crystal Brothers Rodeo Company. Rodeo events include bareback riding, bull riding, team roping, calf roping and girls' barrel racing.

A street dance, with music by Raintree, will be held by the city park Friday, starting at 10 p.m. Admission is $1 per person.

Raft River parents question 'lifetime sports' class

By Ronda Taylor
Times-News correspondent

MALTA — Burke Heaton, of Raft River, says he and other parents have serious concerns about activities in the athletic department at Raft River High School.

Heaton told the Cassia School Board last week there is "a lot of unrest at the high school" over the way head coach Olani Wallace teaches a "lifetime sports" course in which students played cards and board games and about Wallace's sporting goods business, which has supplied athletic equipment to Raft River students.

Heaton urged the board to consider whether the policy of allowing a coach to sell supplies through his own company was ethical or practical.

"I'm not saying anything is wrong," Heaton said, but he suggested the board consider "checking it out."

School board members said they would like to change Wallace's business relationship with his students and directed Superintendent Norman Hurst to examine the situation further.

"When you handle public funds you have to bend over backwards," Trustee Ann Woodhouse said.

Wallace said in a phone interview following the board meeting that he is selling his sporting goods franchise, the "OK Sports Shack," to another area resident.

He said he bought the franchise "years ago" with former assistant coach Keith Wilson, who sold out his half of the business when he left the area. The two had seen the franchise advertised in a magazine, Wallace said, and thought it could help save

A tough new breed of grandmas is ready and able

A new breed of grandmas is breaking into the American scene. She's still rocking, but not in a chair. She's on a floor mat at the YWCA rockin' and rollin' in to an aerobic tape. Or she's pushing pedals, dragging Main Street on a 10-speed.

I asked one of these grandmothers what happened to all the sweet, little old ladies that used to be grandmas.

"They got slick and died."

"Oh." Sometimes when you ask a dumb question you'll get a smart answer.

I think this new model grandma is especially prevalent in our area. Our mountains and whitewater host not only brassy young kayakers; I know a whole group of lean and mean grandmas that this very week are going out into the merciless wilderness for one purpose and one purpose only — to have fun.

Just because the new grandmother likes backpacking, biking and hiking doesn't mean she's given up on her traditional pastimes of crocheting and cookie baking. She still loves to do those things. The only difference is now her perspective has sharpened and widened. She's not crocheting dillies anymore. She's crocheting ski caps, for herself. And her cookies contain oatmeal and grain to qualify for livestock feed.

However, there are some things these women used to do that they won't do today. For example, a couple of weeks ago I needed a grandmotherly type to babysit my kids. I found what I considered to be a perfect pigeon (I mean grandmother) to dump the kids off on (I mean leave them with).

She was kind and loving. Somewhere along the line she'd learned how to be assertive, too. Could she babysit my kids a couple of hours? I'd asked. "Sorry, I don't do diapers," she pleasantly replied.

These grandmas are not to be manipulated and used. By the way, unless she's your own grandma, don't try calling her "Grandma." She might kick your teeth in. These women have names like Mildred, Gladys, and Harriet, and that's what they prefer to be called.

"Are they still devoted to their children and their family?" you may ask. Sure, they're devoted to their family. And their garden, their golf game and their political party. Active takes on new meaning with these 50-plus females.

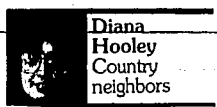

Let's make them out to be Amazons, let me add that all the problems grandmother had are still there, mostly arthritis, family concerns and financial security. But the spirit of resignation or associated with the elderly, is going, gone with the wind.

These women are living all those slogans college kids tack up on their dorm room walls: "I live each day to the fullest." "Make this day the first day of the rest of your life." "Don't rust out, wear out."

Probably the nicest thing about the new grandmother is she's less lonely than she used to be. Why? Because she isn't widowed as often or as early. It would take another whole column to give adequate space to the new breed of grandmas. Let me just say this, they make a formidable twosome. Grandmas and grandpas provide a real challenge to all us younger folk.

Diana Hooley writes her weekly column from her farm home near Indian Cove.

"We're obviously losing ground," Snapp said.

Snapp said he believes the most recent measure was defeated because patrons are "feeling an economic crunch."

"I don't think this is an indication that patrons don't want quality schools," Snapp said.

Trustees will not be able to cut the entire $3.5 million from the budget because programs are already tight, Snapp said. But, school officials will "analyze and scrutinize" several proposed cuts, he said.

Possible reductions include cutting secondary teaching positions in English and science, as well as eliminating coaching stipends. The district may go without a psychologist and one part of the basketball program may be discontinued, Snapp said.

Travel for football teams and other sports programs may also be reduced, and elementary school field trips may be eliminated.

Snapp said about 80 third-grade students may be transferred from Pershing Elementary School in Rupert to Memorial Elementary School. The reduced teaching staff would be run by someone in the district office, Snapp said.

Despite the cutbacks, there should not be a great impact on the new Big Valley Elementary School, for grades four to six, scheduled to open this fall, Snapp said.

Expert: Quakes not regional danger

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — While Californians have been rocked by three hefty earthquakes this month, residents of the northern Rockies have no reason to fear the earth-shaking is contagious, a state earthquake expert says.

money in their "heavily indebted" athletic department.

The idea was to use the business to pass on "nearly wholesale" prices to student athletes, Wallace said.

Wallace said he passed on the cost of the equipment plus the cost of the franchise to his student customers.

"I have never used it for financial build-up," Wallace said. He also said the company was never intended as "a business per se."

He said he did not solicit business outside the school, and that the business was used to buy equipment only a couple of times in the last year.

Bids from other companies are always considered when the district needs equipment, Wallace said, and the lowest price wins out regardless of who the supplier is.

Wallace said he is selling the Minnesota-based franchise because competitive sporting goods prices have limited the amount of equipment purchased through Sports Shack, he said.

The Ratt River athletic department also is in better financial shape than it was when the franchise was originally purchased, and potential discounts aren't as important, he

Any "honors" or advanced placement course would be included in the new grade scale as well as selected classes in chemistry, algebra, geometry, calculus, computers, languages, composition and literature, physics and biology.

Snapp encouraged the board to accept the new grading system, which he called "an attempt to reward those students who take those tougher classes."

About half of those public high schools across the country already have a weighted grading policy and the percentage of private schools with this system is even higher, Snapp said.

Trustees decided to review the policy annually. Notification of the weighted grading system will be sent out with students' high school transcripts, Snapp said.

and board games last year.

Hurst said after the board meeting that when the school principal, Bud Watkins, discovered that card and board games were being taught, a directive was issued against that practice.

Heaton said his information about the lifetime sports class came from a survey conducted by a group of Ratt River parents last February. None of his own children were enrolled in the class last year, he said.

However, he said the survey indicated the lifetime sports class was scheduled at a time when the gymnasium was unavailable.

Wallace said scheduling conflicts with the junior high school created the problem of the gym not being available.

"Lifetime sports is a relatively new part of the curriculum," Wallace said. It takes time to decide what sports to include, he said, and activities are limited because students must bring their own equipment for class.

Shannon Page, of the Idaho Department of Education, said Idaho is a "local option state" where school districts set their own curriculum within state guidelines.

Page said state guidelines for lifetime sports would include instruction in sports that students could be expected to continue throughout their lifetimes, such as skiing, golf, tennis, badminton and table tennis.

Weddings

Wade-Murphy

KIMBERLY — Gerald Wade, Kimberly, and Mary Luna, Burley, announce the engagement of their daughter, Jannett Marie, to Mark Murphy, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Murphy, Kimberly.

Wade, a 196 graduate of Kimberly High School, is employed at McDonalds in Twin Falls.

Murphy, who graduated from Kimberly High School in 1985, attends College of Southern Idaho.

The couple plans a July 31 wedding in the LDS Temple in Boise.

Mom upset by neighbor kids' behavior

DEAR ABBY: We live in a highly desirable section of town. A few years ago when our neighbor's little boy was 3, I observed his father teaching him to relieve himself off the side of their house! He's 7 now, and he's still urinating outside whenever he feels like it. (In the winter it's freezing cold here, but that doesn't seem to matter.)

We have a daughter (now 8) who has been taught to come into the house to use the bathroom. She knows that urinating outside in public is nasty, unsanitary and ill-mannered.

These same neighbors have a 4-year-old girl who is following in her big brother's footsteps. Our son, just turned 3, sees these kids poltynig in the yard, and now he's doing it.

I realize that the neighbors have a right to do whatever they want on their own property, but it's setting a terrible example for our children. The neighbors across the street are also upset about this because their children play over here.

What can we do? Please don't

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

— APPALLED IN THE MIDWEST
DEAR APPALLED: First, speak to the offending neighbors and explain the unhygienic aspects of using the yard as a toilet. Advise them that the department of public health disapproves of this practice, and you will report them to the authorities if they do not clean up their act.

Then have no hesitation to make an official complaint if necessary.

DEAR ABBY: Remember me! I'm "Katherine in Georgetown, Texas." I wrote to you last September saying that I wanted to donate my organs after death but couldn't get any witnesses to sign the consent form.

Members of my family refused to sign it, fearing some doctor might get "scalpel happy" and remove the organs they need before I'm dead. I took the form to church five Sundays in a row but couldn't get anybody to sign it. (They said I might need all my parts at the Resurrection.) Even my own husband wouldn't sign it!

Well, Abby, you printed my letter, explaining that my husband needed to understand that willing one's organs after death in order to improve the quality of life for the living is one of the most generous acts a person can perform.

And the possibility that some "scalpel-happy" surgeon might remove one of my organs before I was dead was impossible because a patient must be pronounced dead by two doctors before a death certificate is signed. And as for "needing" all my organs for the Resurrection, should a person return to live again in the body of his previous life, the good Lord could be trusted to miraculously replace the missing parts.

To make a long story short, when my family saw your explanation in the paper, they not only offered to witness my donor form, they became donors themselves!

And listen to this, Abby. Last week I had major surgery, and when I gave my doctor my donor card to clip to my chart, he asked me what it was. He said he had never seen one before!

So please print this and tell everybody who has a donor card to inform their doctors now, in case one day they'll need emergency surgery and are in no condition to let the doctor know. Thank you.

— KATHERINE IN GEORGETOWN

DEAR ABBY: May I suggest a more appropriate reply to the question, "I'll bet you don't remember me, do you?" How about, "You doctor know. Thank you."

— STAN HAUXHURST, CORONA DEL MAR, CALIF.
DEAR STAN: Beautiful. You win!

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls American Legion baseball team is sponsoring a yard sale from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday. The event will be held at 705 Fillmore St., west of the Blue Lakes Mall.

Continue courtship to keep romantic flame lit

CARSON, Calif. (AP) — After years of familiarity between spouses, the embers of love may start burning low, but in order to keep the flame lit, long-term couples must continue courtship behaviors for life, says a clinical psychologist.

The reason a relationship is so alive at the beginning is that the two people involved are working very hard to keep it vibrant, says Dr. Susan Regas, a lecturer in marriage and family counseling at California State University, Dominguez Hills, in Carson.

"They tell each other how attractive they are and what they like about each other," she explains. "When people are just getting to know each other, they do a lot of things to get it going. They do romantic things such as sending love letters, sending a rose. People, as soon as they get married, stop doing this." The early fire won't be kept alive without hard work, she says, noting that it was hard work at the beginning but a little easier because the relationship was new.

"You did a lot of thinking about how to keep the other person happy. That has to be done even in the 15th year of marriage, or else it will die," says Regas, who offers some suggestions on keeping a marriage fresh:

- Learn to love yourself first, something you must do before you can love anyone else. People who don't feel good about themselves don't give to the relationships — they pull things from other people.

- Really identify what you want in the marriage. A lot of people don't think about what they want in a relationship. They just feel unhappy, so they nag. Recognize what you want and communicate that to your partner in a way that doesn't blame him or her. Don't say, for instance, "You're a crummy husband, you're never home." Say, "I feel sad when I'm left alone every night at home."

- Always keep the relationship alive sexually and romantically. Keep up or start doing the candlelight dinners, romantic walks and handholding. Set aside time to be devoted to affection and sex.

- Have friendships outside the marriage. There's no way one person can meet all your needs. Each spouse needs his or her own friends and the pair also need joint couple friends. These need to be good couples, not troubled couples. The basis of the friendship should be strength, not trying to rescue the couple.

- Beware of becoming over involved with each other. A couple can get enmeshed, too involved. So when one spouse is in a bad mood, the other takes it as a personal offense because every need is being met by the spouse.

Nursing students graduate

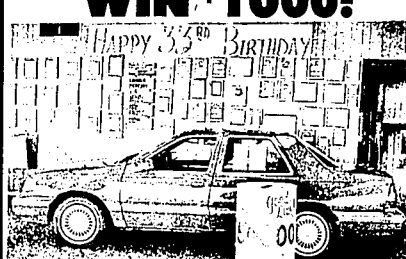

TWIN FALLS — Twelve CSI practiced nursing students were honored Monday night in graduation ceremonies at the college.

Jenet Swainston, Shoshone, was named student of the year, with Bernice Grimes, Hagerman, and Robbie Hamilton, Twin Falls, receiving perfect attendance awards.

Shirley Bryan, Gooding, received the Dr. James L. Taylor scholarship. Kay Wheeler Weighall, Castletford, received Harral's Nursing Home award, and Gerry Loughmiller, Twin Falls, was presented the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and Irene Oliver award.

Virginia Moore, Twin Falls, received St. Benedict's Family Medical Center Sister Martina award. The Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital award went to Liz Kilme, Shoshone. Other graduates include Sayda Cagl, Twin Falls, Elizabeth Clifford, Jerome, and Linda Clifford and Paula Quintana, both Buhl.

Warmup arrives way early

MOSCOW (AP) — A University of Idaho researcher is theorizing that increased use of fossil fuels is responsible for rises in sea level and Utah's Great Salt Lake — marking an early arrival to the phenomenon known as the greenhouse effect.

"It appears mankind may have messed up the earth's climate so severely that the effects are irreversible," said Maynard Miller, dean of the College of Mines and Earth Resources.

He said increased amounts of carbon dioxide, emitted by the burning of fossil fuels such as petroleum products, coupled with an increase in clear-cut logging, are responsible for the warming trends in the earth's atmosphere.

Carbon dioxide forms an invisible covering around the earth that allows sunlight to pass through, but traps heat inside, Miller said.

The phenomenon is known as the greenhouse effect, which was predicted in the 1920s to become evident in the 21st century.

"It's well in advance of an Environmental Protection Agency forecast that the greenhouse effect wouldn't be fully noticeable until about the year 2040," he said.

Certainly the increase in atmospheric carbon dioxide is, in the short term, irreversible," Miller said. "Over the long run, the only way to stabilize or decrease the amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere is to reduce logging, minimize the burning of fossil fuels and curb air pollution."

Miller, who directs U of I's Glaciological and Arctic Science Institute, said he has gathered information from an extensive study he and his colleagues have made through the Juneau Ice Field Program, begun in the 1940s.

Patterns of snowfall accumulation, fluctuations of outflowing glaciers, winter temperatures and solar energy variations began to change in the early 1960s, he said.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING PROPOSED ADOPTION OF AREA OF
TWIN FALLS CITY IMPACT AND COMPREHENSIVE PLAN AS APPLICABLE THERETO
COUNTY OF TWIN FALLS

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN by the Planning and Zoning Commission Twin Falls County, State of Idaho, that a Public Hearing will be held upon the proposed Area of Twin Falls City Impact to be established in accordance with Idaho Code 67-6526
as shown on the map published simultaneously herewith by the City of Twin Falls titled Twin Falls, Idaho Revised Area of Impact and Comprehensive Plan Land Use Map.

An Area of Impact is defined as the developing area around but outside the City with the following factors considered: (1) Trade Area, (2) Geographic factors, and (3) Areas expected to be annexed.
The proposed Area of Impact being an area outside the Twin Falls City Limits in which the City of Twin Falls Comprehensive Plan and Zoning Ordinance will be applied. Twenty acre or larger farm units will be excluded.

The Twin Falls City Comprehensive Plan, entitled
Twin Falls, Idaho Comprehensive Plan CH2M Hill
(March, 1960) and depicted on the above mentioned map, affects the direction of City growth, and it places certain requirements on the type and quality of growth that will occur.

The Plan includes growth guidance proposals to the year 2000 and calls for a pattern of urban containment and the preservation of highly productive agricultural land. The Plan attempts to accommodate future growth consistent with the current environmental quality of the City of Twin Falls and the surrounding area.

Among other things the Plan gives consideration to population, economic development, housing, land use, natural resources and hazardous area, cultural and historic resources, public services and facilities, transportation, recreation, community design, and implementation.

The Comprehensive Plan Study Area includes all land within the Twin Falls City Area of Impact. The Plan will be used by the City and County in determining where future development will be directed in relation to the Area of Impact.

Public comment is also invited on the City Zoning Code, as proposed by the City of Twin Falls and depicted on the map published simultaneously herewith by the City of Twin Falls titled Zoning and Subdivision Regulations and Area of Impact and Zoning District Map for the City of Twin Falls, Idaho.
Among other things, the Zoning Code consists of seventeen chapters concerning the following areas:
(1) General Zoning Provision, (2) Zoning Definitions,
(3) Zoning District Map, (4) Zoning District Regulations, (5) Zoning Subdistricts Map, (6) Zoning Sub-district Regulations, (7) Zoning Supplementary Regulations, (8) Area of City Impact, (9) Sign Regulations, (10) Off-street Parking and Loading, (11) Required Improvements, (12) General Subdivision Provisions, (13) Zoning Permits, (14) Zoning Amendments, (15) Annexation Regulations, (16) Vacations and Dedications, and (17) Administration and Enforcement.

Three copies of the City Zoning Code, the City Comprehensive Plan and the aforementioned maps are on file in the County Clerk's Office, County Courthouse, and are available for public review and inspection during regular business hours.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that a Public Hearing will be held before the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission at the hour of 8:00 p.m. on the 14th day of August, 1966, in the Twin Falls Judicial Building, Twin Falls, Idaho.
Any and all persons interested may appear at said hearing and register their approval or disapproval of the matter stated above or may file their written comments to said request at the Office of the Zoning Administrator, 634 Addison Avenue West, Twin Falls, Idaho, before said hearing.

DATED This 11th day of July, 1966.
Robert A. Pettygrove, Chairman
Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission

Legion 'B' tourney begins in Burley today

Jerome's Amundson — any position anytime

By FLYNN McROBERTS
Times-News writer

JEROME — It doesn't look spectacular. Judging from a quick read of the Southern Region "B" Division standings, Jerome's American Legion baseball team is less than striking: 14-19 overall, 6-4 in conference for a third-place conference finish behind Pocatello and Idaho Falls.

But behind those numbers, crouches Todd Amundson — the Elks' ubiquitous shortstop, threatening relief pitcher and top gun at the plate — his batting average for the season hovers around .545, and that was before he went four-for-four, including a triple, against Twin Falls' "B" squad Tuesday night.

With those threatening statistics, Amundson, a 1988 graduate of Jerome High School and an old hand at Legion ball, will be a key factor when the Elks clash with Buhl at 11:30 a.m. today in the first game of the district tournament in Burley.

"We can't go up there and rely on him to do it all," says Jerome Coach Kurt Bartholomew. "But, definitely, he'll be dad-gum sure in the thick of it."

Wood River chief Bob Shay concurs. "He's just a winner; he comes through when they need him," says the veteran coach. "He helps them no matter where he's playing."

Amundson has done damage to many clubs, and Shay has his own tale to tell about the 5-foot, 11-inch ballplayer: earlier this season, Wood River was up 3-0 at home going into the top of the seventh inning when Amundson stepped to the batter's box.

"Todd got a triple," Shay recalls, "and before we knew it, they beat us 5-3."

Says Amundson of his batting efforts: "I seem more relaxed when I'm hitting. . . . I just say, 'They can't get me out.' . . . It seems to have worked."

Though his hitting ability makes Amundson a standout, he is equally effective on the field. "I don't know of too many other shortstops who cover so much territory," says Bartholomew, who has coached Amundson for about six seasons. "He's been a whale of a stabilizing factor and a team leader for us for several years."

Amundson has been team captain for three straight seasons and led the team in hitting last year, at .490. His leadership also is evident when he "directs traffic" on defensive plays, as his coach puts it. "He's probably a little bit tougher on the kids in some respects than I am," Bartholomew says.

The 18-year-old also provides hurling help. Jerome's pitching staff is dominated by younger players, but Amundson offers the Elks needed relief.

and adds, "maybe one of the best in the conference. . . . We respect him."

Shay also gives credit to Bartholomew for capitalizing on Jerome's overall ability. "I think he made the most of his talent this year," he says.

When it comes to making the most of expertise, Amundson is effective, too. In addition to his Legion success, he was a second team all-state Class A-2 selection in football at wide receiver his senior year; he set the school record (447) in the triple jump, taking two district titles, and a pair of fourth-place finishes at state; and he started on the Jerome basketball squad that went to state in 1985.

Amundson didn't play football until his junior year, yet he caught 66 passes for 1,165 yards during his senior year when the Tigers made it to the semifinals in the state playoffs before eventual champion Madison eliminated them.

"Todd could have played anywhere for us," says Jerome football coach Jon Jund. "(He's) really a clutch receiver; he has very deceptive speed."

Amundson's football accomplishments landed him scholarship offers from Western Montana and Montana Tech, but he declined both because a back injury he suffered in the state high school all-star game made him leery of football.

Even though he passed on football and went to the College of Southern Idaho last year, Amundson has another offer from Montana Tech for this coming gridiron season. But he wants to wait.

"I want to play baseball," says Amundson, a native of Yorba Linda, Calif., where he was able to play the sport year-round. He's hoping his squad will qualify this week for the state "B" Legion tournament, giving him the opportunity to perform in front of any college coaches watching in the bleachers.

Four clubs advance to state meet

"If we're ever going to make it (to state), it better be this year," quipped Wood River Coach Bob Shay.

Idaho Falls, as host of the state tournament, has an automatic berth. Normally, the Southern Region would get two other spots. But Coeur d'Alene, runner-up of the Northern Region, has indicated it won't send a team to

Meyerhoeffer carries win streak in Burley amateur

BURLEY — Jason Meyerhoeffer will be back in Magic Valley again this weekend and so far that's been the harbinger of an amateur golf championship.

Meyerhoeffer will be battling basically the same crew he met in the state amateur in Pocatello two weeks ago and the Canyon Springs Amateur last week when the annual Burley Amateur begins Saturday morning at the city course.

Meyerhoeffer was still at University of Arizona when the Buhl Amateur was settled, but since returning home he's grabbed the Rupert and Canyon Springs prizes.

"But," he protests the idea of being named the favorite for Burley, "I've only won one in a row. Yes, I won at Rupert but I played in several tournaments between Rupert and Canyon Springs. My other wins have been few and far between."

The key to winning at Burley, he said with a smile, is "making lots of birdies. The driver, the wedge and the putter. If someone gets those three clubs going, it's going to be low numbers," he added, referring to the relatively shortness of the course.

Meyerhoeffer said there should be few championship fighters who don't have a chance to rise this weekend.

"I think Steve, my brother, and Aaron (Bengoechea of Boise) will have short shots into the greens," he said. "Steve Hays (Blackfoot), this is his type of course. He plays well around the greens. And if (state champion Joe) Malay hits his driver like he did at the state amateur, he'll be tough."

Western Idaho's is sending Gordie Crockett of Caldwell. But Hays, apparently will be the only eastern Idaho championship fighter.

On the local scene, Meyerhoeffer said he couldn't overlook Glenn Blakeley, Terry Spackman or Ken Huianga.

"Spack was second last year and Blakeley won it the year before and I remember Huianga shot real well in the pro-am there. That's their home course and they play it well," he said.

Twin Falls will be sending Jim Packard, who was second net in the Canyon Springs amateur, along with Perry Hanchey, David Driscoll, Dr. Chick Cutler and Jim Purves.

Host Professional Earl Simpson said a few spots still remain open with the entry deadline falling when the course closes tonight. He is shooting for a 229-man field over the several nights.

The tournament offers $1,500 in added money plus a blazer, donated by Topper's, for the champion.

Simpson said he felt the course "is in great shape" for the tournament.

Grid lawyers fire last shots

NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL's lawyer charged the USFL had tossed about a series of baseless charges in hopes of making some of them stick. The USFL's lawyer claimed his client was the victim of merciless NFL "pressure, pressure, pressure, pressure," and urged the jury to "nail them."

And so the court battle between the two pro football leagues moved another step closer to decision Wednesday.

The day was devoted to closing statements in the USFL's $15 million antitrust suit, which has dragged on over 11 weeks before Judge Peter K. Leisure and a jury of six non-football fans — five of them women. Leisure will charge the jury Thursday.

What the jury heard Wednesday was two totally conflicting versions of all it had heard from 39 witnesses in testimony that took more than 6,500 pages of transcript.

NFL lawyer Frank Gottman went first, taking two hours and 23 minutes to say the USFL had done nothing but throw out a series of unrelated charges in hopes of making an impression.

"It was a scattergun approach — throw everything up on the ceiling and hope some of it will stick," Rothman said. Of what the younger league described as its principal "smoking gun," a presentation on how to combat the USFL given to 63 NFL executives by a Harvard Business School professor, Rothman said:

"They're trying to make a Tup-pervare party look like a terrorist conspiracy."

Conspiracy, in fact, was a word used over and over by USFL lawyer Harvey Myerson, who spent three hours in the afternoon making his case. He also kept repeating "pressure, pressure, pressure, pressure," four words he kept repeating along with "Kafka, Kafka, Kafka, Kafka," a reference to the Czech writer Franz Kafka who wrote that "black is white and white is black."

The summations took place in a courtroom so crowded that some spectators were forced to stand elbow-to-elbow in the aisles and others along the sides.

Where Rothman's approach was to outline his contention that the USFL's overspending, expansion and geographic moves were responsible for $150 million in losses in three spring seasons, Myerson's approach was by far the more emotional.

"Nail them!" he said looking directly at NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle. "That's what this country is looking for you to do." Then, at the end, he sat down in his chair and said: "Without minimum damages, this league is dead. Please God, find for us. God Bless you."

Jund joins Twin Falls grid staff

TWIN FALLS — Jon Jund, who has coached Buhl and Jerome to state A-2 football championships, will join the Twin Falls football coaching staff this fall, announces Brian Athletic Director Al Glanders.

The widely anticipated move will see Jund assume the offensive coordinator duties under Coach Bill Jones. Bill Ingram, who has handled the offensive play coaching the past several years, will not be part of the football staff but will retain his head baseball position.

Glander said Jund will teach social studies at the high school in addition to his coaching assignment.

"I suppose," said Coach Jones with a laugh Wednesday night, "that I'm going to see something in the paper tomorrow about the Bruins throwing the ball a little more."

That probability is solid since Jerome won the A-2 championship with a passing attack last fall and the marshal of that team, Joel Jund, will be transferring to Twin Falls with his father. Joel will be a junior this fall.

A native of South Dakota, Jund joined Coach Rod Hohmhorst's coaching staff at Buhl in the late 1960s and was the Indian head coach for five years. He resigned that position to coach at Great Falls, Mont., high school for three seasons before returning to Idaho and Jerome four years ago.

Glanders said other moves within the athletic department may still occur before the start of the school year.

"We have some people who apparently are in the running for some other jobs in other districts," Glander said. "We will announce any more changes in our athletic staff as soon as they are finalized."

Rosters still shifting on eve of festival

HOUSTON (AP) — Even though Carl Lewis, high jumper Jimmy Howard and Doug Nordquist, pole vaulter Joe Daj and Earl Bell, triple jumper Willie Banks and sprinter Kirk Baptiste. Lewis will be in the long jump and will anchor a 400-relay team.

The seventh Festival and the first under the current name — the sponsoring U.S. Olympic Committee altered the event title from National Sports Festival — lost two of its best-known performers when figure skaters Brian Boitano and Tiffany Chin officially withdrew Wednesday.

Boitano, the world champion and two-time U.S. titlist, suffered an inflammation right knee at the Goodwill Games earlier this month. His coach, Linda Leaver, notified Festival officials that Boitano "needed complete rest."

Last year, Boitano used the Festival as his major preparatory competition of the summer, easily winning a gold medal.

Chin, the former U.S. champion and third-place finisher in the Worlds in March, was withdrawn by her coach, John Nickes, for personal reasons related to her "training and preparation for future international events," Festival officials said.

Chin sat out nine months of competition last year with a muscle imbalance in her leg and was expected to use the Festival to help eliminate some remaining rustiness.

Women's world and American champion Debi Thomas, the Festival's defending champion, did not enter the skating competition, which will take place Saturday and Sunday.

Earlier this week, organizers said that intermediate hurdling star Edwin Moses would not be here. Moses, who also appeared in the Goodwill Games, never formally entered the Festival track and field competition, which will be held Aug. 1-3.

Track and field, clearly the glamor event here, has drawn the strongest roster of athletes in Festival history. Recent additions to the men's competition include triple jumper stars Charlie Simpkins and Mike Conley, and 400-meter standouts Darrell Robinson and Roddie Haley.

They join a star-checked field highlighted by 1984 Olympic hero Evelyn Ashford, the '84 Olympic 100-meter champion and world record holder in the event, has entered her specialty as well as a relay. Jackie Joyner, who set the world record for the heptathlon at the Goodwill Games, American discus record holder Carol Cadz and Olympians Chandra Cheesborough (400 meter) and Julie Isphording (marathon) filed entry forms.

In all, an estimated 4,000 participants will gather in Houston for the 34 sports of the Festival. Opening ceremonies are Friday night at the Astrodome, though the action begins earlier that day with compulsory figureskating.

USOC officials and local organizers have said that ticket sales already have passed the $1.3 million record set in 1982 in Indianapolis. But the total number of tickets sold is below expectations — only about half of a projected 300,000 tickets have been sold.

A new twist added for these games will have the boxing and cycling champions facing their Soviet counterparts in exhibition matches next week. The cycling and cycling events are set for this weekend, with the races against the Soviet champions scheduled for next Tuesday.

Kelcey Batts of Chicago, the 125-pound arm-wrestling champion and U.S. titlist, and fellow American champions Michael Collins of LaPorte, Texas at 119 pounds; Vincent Phillips of the U.S. Army at 132 pounds; Nick Kakouris of St. Louis at 139 pounds, and Brian Lott of the Army at 166 pounds, are entered.

Three of the Festival's softball teams will take part in a tripleheader Thursday against local clubs as a preview of the round-robin competition which begins Saturday.

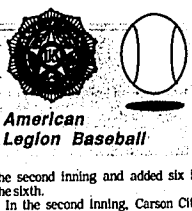

Carson City buries Twin Falls 19-3 behind 11-hit barrage

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — For the team from Nevada, Wednesday night's American Legion game against Twin Falls was no gamble.

The Carson City Capitols banked on 11 hits and the three-hit pitching of Don Osborne to whip the Cowboys 19-3 in a non-conference 'A' Legion game played here.

The game was all in favor of the Capitols as they scored seven runs in second inning and added six in the sixth. In the second inning, Carson City sent eleven batters to the plate and took an early lead on five singles and three walks by a pair of pitchers for Twin Falls.

The big blows came from the bats of Jeff Record and Jason Estabrook who combined to drive in five runs in the frame.

Twin Falls cut the lead to five in the bottom of the second inning when Shane Clark walked and went to third as Barry Smith reached on an error. Nick Baumert plated both runners with a double.

The Capitols added three more in

Carson City added another in the fourth and a pair in the fifth boosting the lead to 19-3.

A pair of Twin Falls pitchers helped Carson City boost their lead as three straight batters walked with the bases loaded in the sixth. Osborne then helped out his own cause driving a double to right field sending home a pair of runners.

Twin Falls added a final run in the bottom of the sixth when Tim Shaw hit a two-out single and scored on a double by Shane Clark.

Twin Falls gets back into conference action Friday with a nine-inning contest against Minico and a twinbill with Idaho Falls on Sunday.

Minico drops pair

IDAHO FALLS — Minico saw its losing streak extended to nine games Tuesday night in dropping a Southern Region "A" American Legion doubleheader to Idaho Falls, 2-0 and 7-2.

The twin-killing left the Sage at 2-11 in conference and 12-27 for the season.

In the first game, right-hander Brad Foster limited Minico to four hits and no earned runs while the Russells hammered out 12 hits in the 10-run rule shortened five-inning contest.

Jerome takes win

TWIN FALLS — Jerome put together nine runs in the first three innings and went on to silence Twin Falls, 12-1, in a non-conference American Legion "B" contest here Tuesday night.

The Elks batted around the roster in the first inning as Twin Falls went through a handful of pitchers. Todd Amundson led Jerome from the plate with his four-for-four effort, including one triple.

Morris loses streak, not game

DETROIT (AP) — Jack Morris won his fourth straight game, and his 10th in a row, as he pitched a six-hitter to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 12-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Morris, 11-6, saw two errors snap his scoreless inning streak at 32 on a near-run in the first inning. Kirby Puckett walked, stole second, moved to third on a wild throw by catcher Lance Parrish and scored as shortstop Alan Trammell erred on a grounder.

But Morris shut the door, scattering four Minnesota hits. He struck out six and walked one before being relieved by Jim Slaton in the ninth.

homers and Tony Phillips drove in three runs as part of a 16-hit attack Wednesday, leading the Oakland A's to their fourth straight victory, an 9-2 triumph over the Boston Red Sox.

The loss extended Boston's longest losing streak of the year to four games and was its seventh defeat in their last eight.

decision as the Cleveland Indians beat the Chicago White Sox 7-2.

Schorn, 11-2, struck out four and walked none for his third complete game. The right-hander has not lost since May 25, and his streak is the longest for a Cleveland pitcher since Fritz Peterson won 10 straight in 1975.

The victory was the Indians' fifth in the last six games and moved them within five games of first-place Boston in the AL East. The loss was Chicago's third straight.

SEATTLE (AP) — Jesse Barfield hit his major league-leading 25th home run and Dave Stieb got his first career save Wednesday as the Toronto Blue Jays defeated the Seattle Mariners 6-2.

Jim Clancy, 11-5, won his fifth straight decision. He gave up six hits in 7 2/3 innings before Stieb took over and struck out Jim Friesley with the bases loaded. Stieb, making his second relief appearance this season and the fourth of his career, pitched a hitless ninth.

Royals 7, Orioles 3

BALTIMORE (AP) — Steve Balboni and Willie Wilson drove in two runs each in a four-run Kansas City second inning, and the Royals turned three double plays in the first four innings Wednesday night in a 7-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Ballgame starter Scott McGregor, 6-10, who has failed to go past two innings in his last three starts, walked Frank White to open the inning and then Balboni hit a 9-2 pitch over the center field fence for his 20th homer.

Cardinals sweep Giant series

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ozzie Smith's tiebreaking single keyed a three-run sixth-inning rally Wednesday night, giving the St. Louis Cardinals a 4-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants for a three-game sweep.

Danny Cox, 4-8, won for the first time at Busch Stadium in 11 starts since Game 3 of the National League playoffs last season. He took a fourth-inning lead, but left after a pair of leadoff singles. Rick Davis hit a sacrifice fly off Chilly Horton before Todd Worrell got the final two outs for his 18th save.

Indians 7, White Sox 2

CLEVELAND (AP) — Brook Jacoby's two-run single keyed a four-run second inning Wednesday night, and Ken Schrom pitched a five-hitter to win his eighth straight enabled New York to overcome a 2-1 deficit. The victory handed the Mets their second three-game series sweep in Cincinnati this season.

The Mets are 11-1 in Riverfront Stadium the last two seasons, and held an 8-4 edge in their season series with the Reds this year.

playing his first game for Houston, singled home Dickie Thon from second base with two outs in the 11th inning Wednesday and gave the Cardinals a 4-3 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The victory was the sixth straight for Houston. The Expos lost their fourth in a row.

Montreal reliever Tim Burke, 7-3, who walked the bases loaded in the 10th but got out of the jam, walked Thon to open the 11th. Thon was sacrificed to second and, after Bill Doran struck out, Kevin Bass was intentionally walked.

Dodgers 6, Pirates 5

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Ken Landreaux ended an 0-for-14 slump with a two-run homer and Mike Scioscia drove in two runs as the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-5 Wednesday night.

Winning for the fourth time in their last five games, the Dodgers broke a 2-2 tie with three third-inning runs keyed by Landreaux's homer. Pirates starter Rick Reuschel, 6-12, lost for the eighth time in his last nine decisions.

Tourney

state this year. The extra berth goes to the south.

That's a dramatic change from the past two years, when the tournament was played in St. Maries. Although the south had seven and nine teams in those seasons, it never got more than two spots in the state tournament.

That means that any team that wins its first two games here can relax.

Action starts this morning at 11:30 when Jerome (14-19), which finished third in the final regular-season standings, takes on Buhl (14-20), which tied for fourth place with Wood River. The Wolverines (10-15) will face sixth-place Mini-Cassia (21-22) at 2 p.m., while second-seeded Idaho Falls (23-9) will take on Shoshone (12-16), the seventh-place team, at 4:30. The loser of the Jerome-Buhl game will face the Mini-Cassia-Wood River loser at 7 p.m. today.

Malad (2-16), which finished eighth in the regular-season standings, won't participate in the tournament, which gives regular-season winner Pocatello (20-14) a bye into Friday's second round.

Games Friday will be played at 11:30 a.m., 2 p.m., 4:30 p.m. and 7 p.m., with action resuming Saturday at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The consolation final is slated for Saturday at 6 p.m., with the championship contest Sunday at 10 a.m. A second championship game, if it is necessary, will follow.

Idaho Falls is the defending regional champion and the hottest team in the tournament, having won seven of its last eight games, including a doubleheader sweep of Pocatello in Pocatello last Saturday.

"I think we'll be all right if we can get some solid pitching performances," said Russels Coach Alan Phillips. "That's the big thing for us. We've been hitting the ball pretty well."

Idaho Falls, which will send right-hander Bill Belknap (5-3) to the mound this afternoon against Shoshone right-hander Tim Rowlan

(6-4), suffered only two league losses during the year, one to Pocatello at home and the other to Wood River in Ketchum. The Russels have won four out of six against the Rebels and carry the league's best team batting average, .253, paced by outfielder Tyler Walker (.436), outfielder Todd Holverson (.431), catcher-third baseman Nate Adomson (.400) and second baseman Ryan Smith (.397).

Aside from Pocatello, the only conference opponent to beat Idaho Falls during the second half of the season was Mini-Cassia, which has won eight of its last 10 games.

"We're starting to peak," said first-year Coach Joe Valdez, who will send either right-hander Lonnie Winmill (1-1) or right-hander Alfie Aragon (5-3) against Wood River this afternoon. "We've won quite a few ballgames in the last few weeks. If we get the soreness out of the muscles and we hit the ball well, we'll be tough."

Pocatello, which has only played four games in the last two weeks, finds itself in the enviable position of going to state if it wins Friday. The Rebels have a reputation for winning the big games, as evidenced by the fact that Pocatello has lost just one of 10 conference games this season despite the fact that the Rebels have split doubleheaders with Buhl, Idaho Falls and Mini-Cassia and lost to Idaho Falls and Mini-Cassia in their own tournament earlier this month.

"If we play ball the way we're capable, if the kids play up to their potential and keep the errors down to a minimum, we'll be OK," said Coach Bob Jenkins, who will send right-hander Brian Hicks (6-2) or right-hander Jim Hallinan (5-2) to the mound Friday. Hicks pitched a no-hitter against Jerome earlier this season and is also the Rebels' offensive leader, batting .325.

Jerome, which knocked Pocatello out of last year's district tournament and made its first trip to state in several years, has struggled with injuries and numbers this season. But the Elks won their last four games, which has Coach Curt Bartholomew feeling pretty good.

"With a couple of exceptions, we're healthy and everybody is back from football camp," said Bartholomew, who will send either right-hander Jim Boes (2-3) or right-hander Buddy Lacomb (2-1) to the mound against Buhl this morning. "We feel we're in a position to win a couple of ballgames, but it won't be easy. And I'm sure Mr. Jenkins hasn't forgiven me for last year."

Jerome split a twinbill with Buhl in their only two meetings of the season.

Wood River, which for the last couple of years was known for pulling out of the last two weeks of the regular season, won't be taken lightly at this year's tournament: The Wolverines are the most improved team in the region; thanks largely to a group of 17- and 18-year olds who have hit well this season.

"At times we've played well, but at times we've haven played up to our capabilities," said Shay. "We beat Mini-Cassia in both of our conference games this season (the teams split 2-2 overall), but it's hard to beat a team three times."

The Elks will have the tournament's leading hitter in shortstop Todd Amundson, who is batting a lofty .522. He's followed by catcher Rob Bartholomew at .443, outfielder Jim Huber at .415, first baseman Mark Boer at .397 and infielder Joel Jund at .344.

Jerome split a twinbill with Buhl in their only two meetings of the season.

Wood River, which for the last couple of years was known for pulling out of the last two weeks of the regular season, won't be taken lightly at this year's tournament: The Wolverines are the most improved team in the region; thanks largely to a group of 17- and 18-year olds who have hit well this season.

"At times we've played well, but at times we've haven played up to our capabilities," said Shay. "We beat Mini-Cassia in both of our conference games this season (the teams split 2-2 overall), but it's hard to beat a team three times."

Wilderness trails inviting to many Sawtooth Wilderness Area attracts those who desire solitude, escape

By MIKE SULLIVAN
Times-News city editor

STANLEY — Sunday was a busy day on the Iron Creek Trail. About a dozen persons passed our party of three between the trailhead and Sawtooth Lake, five miles up the trail. It was double the desirable number for the Sawtooth Wilderness Area, northwest of here.

It doesn't sound like much of a crowd, but most visitors hit the trail in wilderness areas to get away from people entirely.

The percentage of people spending "visitor days" (12 hours or more) in the 217,000-acre Sawtooth Wilderness Area is a fraction of total visitor use within the U.S. Forest Service's 756,019-acre Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

An average of 2,500-3,000 visitor days are recorded on the Iron Creek Trail each summer, according to SNRA figures. As the visitor day is determined on a 12-hour basis, day-hikers are decimated. Our threesome, for example, which spent six hours there, counts as 1.5 people.

The other major trailhead into the Wilderness Area, Bench Lake Inlet, averages 1,500 visitor days from June through Sept. 30.

With over 1 million visitor days for the entire SNRA, wilderness use is minimal. And that's the way SNRA officials want it.

"We don't want to see much more use than that," says Dave Hoefler, the SNRA's assistant superintendent for resources. No more than six encounters a day is considered desirable, Hoefler says.

It's the Iron Creek Trail, a semi-primitive area, rather than a pristine area because you encounter too many people," Hoefler says.

Most of the vast SNRA is easily accessible to motorized vehicles and offers a variety of recreational activities: fishing, hunting, camping, boating, swimming, trailbike riding, and even dining at the Redfish Lake Lodge and nearby restaurants. In winter, there's snowmobiling and skiing. Well-maintained campgrounds offer all the amenities, including restrooms, picnic tables and grills.

It's what the vast majority of SNRA visitors are looking for.

The attraction of the Wilderness Area is solitude. It requires some physical effort to reach places such as Sawtooth Lake, as machines of any kind are prohibited in federal wilderness areas. The mode of transit is by foot or horseback. There are no amenities.

The dirt trail to Sawtooth Lake winds through old-growth pine and fir some five miles and 1,400 vertical feet from the Iron Creek Transfer Camp trailhead. The views are nothing short of spectacular, increasingly so as the trail penetrates into the Wilderness Area. The trail starts in the green Alpine Lake, at 7,825 feet above sea level, before climbing steep cliffs another 600 vertical feet to Sawtooth Lake. Stark gray mountains sheltering strips of old snow surround the crystalline lake on all sides, with a narrow passage in and out at the north and south ends.

The setting is serene, causing a visitor to wonder how so placid a thing as wilderness has stirred so much controversy.

The wilderness debate surfaced again in Idaho recently when U.S. Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, suggested running a road through the River of No Return Wilderness surrounding the Middle Fork of the Salmon River.

The idea was improved access, Craig said. He wants to open up the 2.2-million-acre wilderness north of Stanley to more people. Craig talked about access for the elderly and the handicapped, and described wilderness as a "waste of resources."

Craig's argument was similar to one used about 20 years ago in Michigan's Upper Peninsula. A state senator was calling for construction of a paved road through the Porcupine Mountains Wilderness State Park, 58,000 acres of virgin forest fronting Lake Superior. The park contains red and white pine nearly 150-feet tall and has never been logged. Clear streams cascade down from the park's interior to the lake.

The argument advanced then was that access was being denied to the elderly and the handicapped. It turned out later that the senator was actually angling for access by logging companies, which had convinced him the tall pine was "rotting" and was being "wasted."

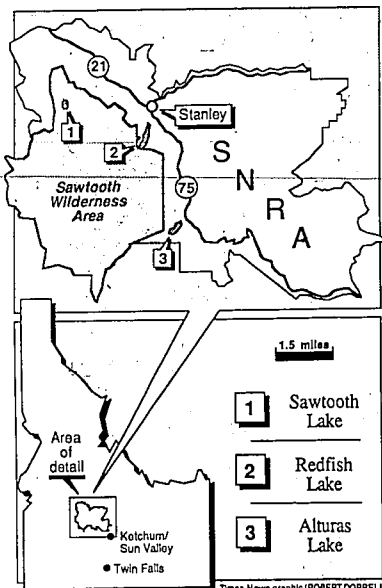

Sen. Joe Mack also favored construction of a fishladder up a wonderful series of waterfalls on the Presque Isle River to enable spawning trout to run farther and improve sport fishing. Enough people were concerned about preserving the "Porkies" that the ideas never went anywhere.

Once a wilderness area is compromised by roadbuilding, or any other construction, it's hard to argue that logging or mining should be denied. And the quality of wilderness is easily compromised. There really isn't much wilderness left in the lower 48 states, so the concept is relative.

Generally, areas without roads, that have not been heavily trampled by logging or mining, and possessing scenic or other aesthetic qualities, are recommended for wilderness use.

It's possible to get away from it all close to cities — in Snake River Canyon or the South Hills, for example. But the experience really doesn't compare to trekking through the high peaks and lakes of the Sawtooths.

It was the fear that America's wild places would all be exploited and destroyed that led to the preservation of wilderness areas back in the 1930s, on the Gila National Forest in New Mexico, Hoefler says. The Gila Primitive Area, southwest of Albuquerque, set the pattern for what was to follow. The Wilderness Act of 1964 formalized the protection of certain wild areas.

Should there be even more wilderness in Idaho? That's being debated, with groups such as the Idaho Conservation League arguing for much more, and a coalition of other interests calling for multiple use of roadless areas.

Old 50-50 law (applied to Idaho's fish share) takes beating

If this country ever gets around to playing "cowboys and Indians" again, the pivot point will be fishing rights.

Under the famed Boldt federal court decision several years ago, the fish in the "usual and accustomed" fishing places of Indians were defined as "held in common" under treaty terms. Therefore, Boldt decided, Indians got half the fish and sport anglers the other half, ostensibly of what was considered surplus to the reproductive needs of the species.

This rule has been applied to all management criteria since then — again ostensibly. Never mind that Idaho has never had 50 percent of its steelhead and salmon return in any one year. The understanding to this point has been that Oregon and Washington were sharing Idaho's fish equally with the Indians — and keep your mouth shut, Idaho.

Now there is direct word that the Washington fisheries boys haven't been playing fair with their own constituency.

In a column by Stan Jones of the Washington State Fishing Guide, word leaks out from the Washington fishery's own secret files that 50-50 is misunderstood of-officially. Jones claims to have Washington State Fisheries catch records — stamped "not for public release" — that indicate Indian fishermen in that state have taken 836,679 more salmon than the non-Indian sport and commercial fishery.

How applicable this might be to Idaho isn't understood here because the five-year catch reports in Washington show that non-Indians harvested 95,238 more chinook than Indians. The Indians' big numerical superiority was built up on coho, pink, sockeye and chum strains. None of these species figures into Idaho's anadromous fish menu.

Jones asks Fisheries Director Bill Wilkerson if his Interpretation is that the Boldt 50-50 decision applies only to chinook. "Why have you allowed such a flagrant imbalance in favor of Indians to continue for five years for four species of salmon while penalizing non-Indians on one species, chinook?"

"By giving into Indian demands and claims for citizen-owned salmon far in excess of the Boldt-ordained 50 percent, Wilkerson has avoided court battles. It is somewhat ironic that in doing so, now that fish catch records are finally made public, he surely will be faced with law suits unless he makes more than a token effort to divide available salmon 50-50 as the law requires," Jones writes.

Now if the Washington anglers are unhappy, let them identify with their continued resistance to suggestions that Idaho be given a say in the anadromous fish management in the mainstem Columbia and Snake rivers.

Obviously, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game was not privy to those Washington figures. Just as obviously, Idaho and Oregon sport anglers probably would like an accounting from the Oregon fishery department in light of these new developments.

Jerry Conley, Idaho department director, simply notes "I believe the article helps the sportsman of Idaho put into perspective what is happening in the overall take of salmon and steelhead." And if you don't catch his drift there, you're terribly dense.

Idaho currently is trying to head off the united five-tribe drive to extend their Columbia River gillnet fishing into the McNary pool above the dam at Umatilla. That would add 32 more miles of torture track for Idaho-bound steelhead and salmon — to the very mouth of the Snake River.

This would occur ostensibly on the mainstem-spawning fall chinook, which no longer is a viable resource in Idaho since the Hells Canyon dam complex. However, unless a chinook specific gillnet mesh size of seven inches or greater is used, that "fall chinook season" becomes a major intruder on Idaho's upstream B strain (larger) steelhead headed for the Clearwater. They have a propensity for the 5½-inch mesh and Idaho's larger steelhead can't evade that size.

The Indians maintain that record runs into Idaho indicate building populations and Tom Wapato, executive director of the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission, just this week has provided historic counts from 1953-56 through 1985-86 in defense of his position that "since steelhead runs have increased, the tribes' steelhead catch has also increased. However, tribal harvest rates are still conservative. The tribes manage their fall fisheries very carefully to insure that the steelhead and brook fall chinook runs continue to recover. The tribes have depended on these fish since time immemorial and they aren't going to do anything to jeopardize the resource," Wapato said.

But Idahoans should remember this is the same Wapato who told the Northwest Power Council he didn't want that group "married to a wild fish concept," while, Idaho believes, is the single most important safeguard against jeopardizing the resource and is dedicating entire drainages to its perpetuation.

"Because the steelhead runs are now good again, no one has to stop fishing," Wapato said in a news release. "Indians and Idaho sport fishers can both catch some of the Mountain lakes: Full o' fish

Comes July, comes the high-mountain lake fishing. My favorite of all the high-mountain lakes is in the White Clouds area.

Lying east of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area and the broad Sawtooth Valley, the White Clouds Mountains offer rugged, beautiful scenery and fine fishing. The range is aptly named as many of the high peaks are wreathed in clouds during the summer months. Castle Peak tops the divide with its rock summit at 11,820 feet above sea level.

Access is from the southwest along Idaho Highway 75, a fine surfaced road the entire length of the valley and on down the Big Salmon River. A road turns off below Clayton. This follows almost to the head of the east fork of the Salmon River and gives access to the eastern side of the big range. Several side roads lead into a portion of the area as shown on the Idaho Fish and Game Department map, but care should be exercised when traveling these narrow, rough paths.

My favorite group of lakes in the White Clouds are the Boulder Chain Lakes and Frog Lake.

The trails into these lakes are well marked, but as of the last few years are not as well kept as in the 1970s. Many times you will have to climb over or under snags that have fell across the trails.

I have been told that the trail length to the Boulder Chain Lakes is seven miles. At times I've thought it to be 700, but if you are trail-wise and prepared for this rough country it is well worth the effort.

Taking note of the accompanying map, you can see the lakes are numbered. Because many of these lakes are barren, I want you to find the lakes that have fish, so check the chart provided to find your favorite:

Do not plan on fishing the whole area in a few days. This fishing is to be planned. Pinpoint your lake area and plan your stay in that area. Next year you can hit the area over the next ridge.

I have stayed as long as a week in the Frog Lake area. It provides excellent fishing with some nice meadows for camping. Using this area as a base camp you can hike to the other lakes on a daily basis for your thrills.

Even at this high elevation you are going to have the bug problem, so be prepared with long-sleeved shirts and plenty of spray or rub-on dope.

All of the trail heads are marked along the east of the Salmon River, and parking is provided in most. Lock your rig before leaving it. I've had some reports of vandalism the past couple of years.

The trails are rugged, so leave the too-young at home. My favorite type of fishing in these high lakes is a dry fly, and have on occasion caught fish on a bare hook. If you bait fish you can gain your bait by looking along the edges of the water for bugs of all types. A jar of salmon eggs could be good insurance.

A clear bubble works well for spin fishermen who like to fish with flies.

The shrimp size 12 is the best all-round fly for these high lakes most of the time, but carry your full battery just in case.

Last, but most important, take cold-weather gear. The odds are that it will rain each afternoon and the nights will freeze your buns off.

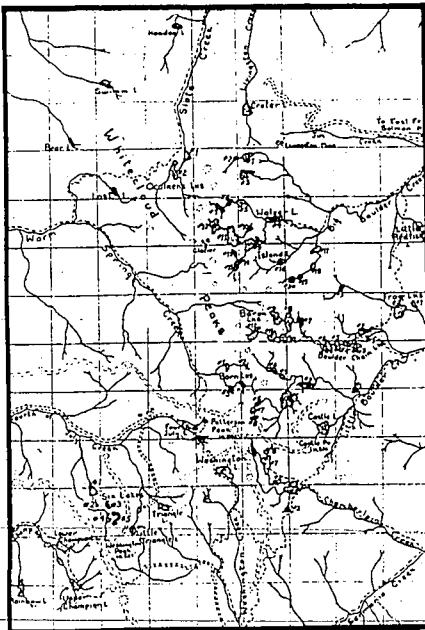

If you are one of the fishermen who fish the Bell Rapids area in the winter months, or fish during the summer in Lower Salmon Falls Reservoir or the river entering the reservoir, here is your chance to improve the fishery.

In June of 1986, the Fish & Game placed metal jaw tags on 5,000 hatchery rainbow trout in the reservoir. The trout ranged in size from six to 12 inches.

What Fish & Game wants you to do is help it do a study of these fish.

If you catch a fish from these waters with the tag, return the tag to the Region 4 office in Jerome. Also, it would help if you could take some measurements of the fish and, if you have a handy scale, weigh the fish.

The objective of this study is to help build the fishery up to its former status.

New Cabinet Gorge hatchery is dedicated

BOISE (AP) — With Gov. John Evans at the roadway controls, the first kokanee have been released from the new Cabinet Gorge Hatchery upstream from Lake Pend Oreille.

The hatchery, officially dedicated on July 12, is expected to produce 20 million fry annually, destined for the lake to help rebuild a declining fishery. Kokanee are a landlocked sockeye salmon which spawn in streams leading to the lake.

The construction costs of the hatchery were funded by the Bonneville Power Administration and the Washington Water Power Company to reverse the trend of fish losses from hydropower development. Operation and maintenance is provided by the Idaho Fish and Game Department.

Kokanee numbers started to drop when the Clark Fork River was blocked by Cabinet Gorge Dam, said Jack McNeil of the Fish and Game. Other factors were responsible, including the introduction of mysis shrimp which depleted plankton needed by the young kokanee and the fact that the kokanee are the prey of record-size Kamloops and Dolly Varden trout in Pend Oreille.

The raceway sends the young kokanee down a fish ladder for release. The fish are "imprinted" in this way and will return to the hatchery to spawn.

Sawtooth

Hoeler has mixed feelings. Some areas should be protected, he says, such as the White Clouds mountains to the east of Sawtooth Valley. But the U.S. Forest Service has been going through a steady decrease in funding during the 1980s and if the amount of wilderness it is asked to manage in Idaho increases, there probably would not be commensurate staffing increases. They'll be asked to do more, with less.

Wilderness management is tricky because motors are prohibited. Trail work, for example, cannot be done with chainsaws. All transportation must be non-motorized. The work takes longer, as a result.

Why all this fuss about wilderness? The argument in favoring of it is generally abstract, difficult to explain to someone who feels natural resources are to be protected, not preserved. Those who've experienced what some might describe as an epiphany on their miles from civilization, know what value there is to wilderness and they're the ones fighting to protect it.

Why should Idobans care about maintaining these preserves for out-of-state granola eaters who probably won't spend money in motels, restaurants and bars?

It's difficult to determine exactly how much the Sawtooths mean to Idaho's economy, but few wilderness advocates use the economic argument to support their position.

A University of Idaho study showed that in 1982 Idaho residents accounted for 62 percent of the visitors to the SNRA. Californians, who comprised 24 percent in 1972, had declined to 13 percent 10 years later. The average annual income of local users was $36,600. Californians reported an average income of $38,181.

Wilderness use in the SNRA has been fairly steady since 1981, showing a slight decline, actually, Hoeler says. But the numbers game is not considered important, unless the curve shoots up and the trails become too crowded. Quality is rated above quantity by both the Forest Service and wilderness users.

steelhead, but neither can take as many as they might want. "My hope is that Idobans who are interested in rebuilding steelhead runs to learn, as their counterparts in Washington and Oregon have, that trying to fight the tribes' treaty fishing rights is a waste of time and harmful to the resource — and that the best way to restore a shared resource is through cooperation," Wapato said.

The thing that Wapato, Oregon and Washington still don't care to provide — or even give lip service to — is that "shared resource" for us has meant 10 years of no salmon fishing, several years of no steelhead fishing, a couple of years of partial drainage openings, etc. Yet, they agree with Idaho estimates that the Gem State provides 60 percent of the Columbia River steelhead run.

How "shared" is that?

Outdoors-minded will want to peruse Hemingway, Hyatt

Mike Harrop Outdoors

Occasionally, an Idaho author will produce a book of high interest to the state's outdoorsmen. But this summer, two authors have produced two very different books.

Despite their vast differences, many Idaho outdoorsmen will want to read both.

The two are Jack Hemingway, Misadventures of a Fly Fisherman ($17.95, Taylor Publishing, 1986) and LeRoy Hyatt, Favorite Flies ($2.95, Tribune Publishing Co., 1984).

Hemingway is a former member of the Idaho Fish and Game Commission and author who has helped shape the tangle of regulations with which all hunters and fishermen must deal. He lives near Ketchum.

Hyatt lives at Lewiston, where he fishes, ties flies and writes an excellent fly-tying column for the Lewiston Morning Tribune, where his book is available. His special thrill appears to be sharing the secrets of the best flies for use in the intermountain region.

Hemingway's autobiography is more than a book about the scrapes and pleasures a fly fisherman can get out. It is a serious work about his relationship with his father, Ernest Hemingway. It is also a book about growing up and living under the shadow of the most influential writer the English language has produced since William Shakespeare.

Everyone expects a son to be a continuation of the same theme. But when your father's style spawned one generation of imitators and a second generation of writers who use similar Hemingwayesque styles to express original thoughts and themes, you've a lot to live up to.

Jack Hemingway solves that prob-blem by writing like Jack Hemingway. I wish he'd have begun sooner. He was a competent game commissioner, but there are a dime a dozen here, but there are few who give us as a writer.

The book offers students of Ernest Hemingway some real plums, and it'll probably sell nationwide on that basis.

But it'll probably sell in Idaho on another basis. There are a dime a dozen here, but there are few who explain so well why we feel as we do about our mountains and rivers.

It is hard to read about the love affair between the Hemingway family and the Northwest and not feel proud that we share the same streams, fields and mountains.

Along Idaho's swiftly flowing waters are many anglers in various stages of transition.

They start as killers and eaters of their own bass. Then there are a dime a dozen here, but there are few who explain so well why we feel as we do about our mountains and rivers.

And finally, they begin to appreciate the fish for themselves — as wild and lovely and powerful beings which can transform an ordinary day into a challenge for a fisherman who sets limits on what he'll do to take them.

Hemingway helps us understand this transformation of fishermen through explaining his own metamorphosis from meat hunter to conservationist.

In addition, the book helps explain some of Hemingway's actions as a game commissioner. There were a lot more catch-and-release fishing areas when he left the game commission.

And as he says in his book, "I suppose I made a few enemies."

There are a number of things for which we should thank Hemingway. We should thank him for writing a book worth reading and for giving us the Taylor "Bear Tracks" Williams catch-and-release fly fishing area on the Little Wood River.

If Hemingway hadn't given that three-mile tract to the public, it would probably have become the domain of an absentee millionaire fisherman like some of the places upstream along Silver Creek.

Instead of being open for all to use, today it would be patrolled by Idaho cowboys a little shamed faced at throwing out fishermen.

Hyatt is another Idaho outdoorsman who has gone through all the stages of fishing preparatory to becoming a master fly fisher.

Hyatt shares the secrets of tying and using the best flies for the intermountain region in his book. Whether you're tying flies or buying them and putting them to use, this is a book you should own.

Hyatt has collected recipes for the best flies in use for the Snake River drainage and put them together in a collection.

He's included several patterns that I've considered "secrets" because I fear that for the resource should meat fishermen begin using them.

Fortunately for the fish, Hyatt hasn't indicated which patterns they are.

Southern Idaho fishermen don't need to fear that Hyatt's patterns are exclusively for the freestone rivers of North Idaho. He lived at Idaho Falls for some time and most of the flies will soon be in his stream in Idaho as well as Montana and Wyoming, where Hyatt grew up. I was so impressed with his description of a fly new to me that I called Hyatt and ordered a dozen.

Most of the other patterns in the book are those I've grown up with and angved for years. However, knowing about the ones new to me is worth much more than the book's price.

Neither of these books is without flaws. Hyatt's book isn't in color and Hemingway left me wishing for answers in his final scene with his father.

Despondent over his providence, Jack discusses the problems he brought to his father. And then "Papa" Hemingway tells Jack "If you had any idea of the — I live with all the time."

"He (Papa) went on through a litany of problems" . . . But readers don't find out what Papa's problems were.

Each promised the other that he would never shoot himself as Jack Hemingway's grandfather had done. Papa Hemingway later broke his promise to his son. And if you don't understand the significance of the unexplained "litany" of problems, in the light of that fact, you'll have to read much more about the most important novelist of our time.

Record marlin bagged off N.Y. coast

MONTAUK, N.Y. (AP) — It cost him five hours of hard work and one broken fishing rod, but Bill Sweedler landed a 14-foot, 1,174-pound blue marlin and won a place in New York state records books.

"It was amazing. Marlins are the ultimate, the king of the sea," said Sweedler, 19, of Westport, Conn. He said he plans to have it mounted.

The fish, hooked off Ithyxahyins Island, easily surpassed the previous New York record of 940 pounds, recorded in 1981 and 1984. Art Woldt, spokesman for the state Department of Natural Resources, said Monday.

Richard Berk, Basin, the mat out on Sunday, said Sweedler hooked the fish at 7 a.m.

Sweedler's rod snapped halfway through the struggle, forcing him to switch from 80-pound tackle to 130-pound.

The fish jumped out of the water 10 times, "walking" across the surface on its tail, Berk said.

Buffalo barrier possible in park

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Yellowstone National Park's assistant superintendent says the Park Service will build a fence and a cattle guard later this summer in hopes of keeping buffalo from wandering outside the park's boundaries.

Ben Clary also said Thursday the park plans several other tactics to try to keep the shaggy beasts from wandering onto private and national forest lands.

Montana's second buffalo hunting season opened July 1. During the initial season from last December through the end of June, 57 buffalo that left Yellowstone were shot.

For the current season, which runs through next June 30, about 2,700 hunters applied for the 250 available licenses, which cost $200 for Montanans and $1,000 for out-of-staters.

The hunts were authorized by the 1985 Legislature because of concerns that the buffalo might spread brucellosis, a disease that causes cattle to abort, to ranchers' herds.

The New York-based Fund for Animals sued the Park Service in an attempt to end the hunt by forcing the park to keep the bison inside Yellowstone, but a judge ruled against the animal protection group.

Clary said the Park Service has completed its environmental analysis of the buffalo situation and concluded that a short fence, a cattle guard in the road leading from Mammoth to Roosevelt, and some "adversive conditioning" could prevent most of the buffalo from leaving the Lamar Valley and Blacktail Plateau area in the north end of the park.

"Adversive conditioning" techniques would include use of shooting the buffalo with rubber bullets and the use of noise-making devices and flashing lights to scare the animals.

"We intend to go ahead with those programs, and we intend to have them in place this fall," Clary said.

The fence will be constructed in the Lava Creek-Udine Falls area, Clary said, where natural barriers also can be used to prevent the bison from roaming. By using those natural barriers, he said, the fence may only have to be 300 to 400 feet long.

He said the Park Service will monitor the buffalo and put up the fence at the last minute to keep the animals in the park. When the buffalo aren't present, he said, the fence will have openings to allow other big game animals to go through.

Clary said the Park Service is considering a wire or cable fence that may be strung along posts of trees in the area.

TIER LIGHTING

4-LIGHT
Classic style light ideal for marking paths, walkways and steps, casting an active accent of light along decorative flower beds and patio borders. These tiers of light are cast downward in a soft ring of illumination. Their unique design projects the light right to the base of the fixture — an exclusive feature of Malibu Tier Lights. Easy to install with no more than a screwdriver. Low voltage operation means safety as well as economy; there is no chance for a shock; it is safe for use around children and pets. Includes 4 tier light fixtures, 50 feet of low voltage cable and plug in power pack with timer.
