 Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said "Gorbachev's announcement is welcome one. This decision offers more chance for both nations to turn away from newer and more deadly nuclear weapons and toward a health in the arms race." Kennedy said "the time for a com-

 At the State Department, deputy spokesman Charles Redman had no comment on Gorbachev's announcement, saying the moratorium extension is an issue for the Soviets to decide. Previously, the administration has declined to go along with such moratoriums because of difficulty in verifying compliance.

 On a related subject, Redman said the United States and the Soviet Union have agreed to a second round of talks on ways to reduce the possibility of nuclear-war through the establishment of so-called nuclear risk reduction centers.

 Charles J. DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute, said, "Based on our early understanding of its provisions, the conference report will have an adverse impact on all capital-intensive industries, particularly the petroleum industry."
 "It enacted into law the conference report would cost the petroleum industry a minimum of some $10 billion," he said, both from self-specific provisions and from those of the industry group in general. He said the new tax rules would further discourage exploration, which has already dropped precipitously because of the decline in world oil prices.

of the basis of the retroactivity." Abe Schneider, tax counsel for the National Federation of Independent Business, said it was too early to say whether his group would support the bill. He said much will depend on the final language used to flesh out the basic provisions adopted by the House-Senate negotiators.
 Simplified accounting for retailers and wholesalers would help small business, said Schneider, but treatment of capital gains in the bill could hurt.
 Limiting deductibility of business meals to 80 percent "discriminates against the restaurant industry and small business," said Dorothy Dee of the National Restaurant Association. Other marketing techniques, such as newspaper and television advertising, will take business away from restaurants, costing jobs and tax dollars, she said.
 The Boise Interagency Fire Center also said the Jump Off fire near Pendleton, Ore., threatened fire crews for a time on Sunday.
 The fire "crowded" through the tops of trees, forcing 38 firefighters to use portable fire shelters for a few minutes. Another 38 firefighters were evacuated by helicopter from the same area without incident.

Fading hurricane goes to sea

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Hurricane Charley lost its punch and moved out to sea Monday after fading North Carolina's Outer Banks and the mid-Atlantic coast and killing at least five people.
 Charley was downgraded to a tropical storm Monday afternoon, and the National Weather Service said the storm continued to weaken and move away from land. By 7 p.m. MDT its highest sustained winds were 50 mph.
 The service said it has discontinued all hurricane warnings and watches by noon Monday, and all coastal gale warnings were discontinued by evening. Gale warnings continued in the offshore waters south of Massachusetts.

Reagan ranch now cat refuge

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan's mountain-top ranch home to a vacationing elite is now a refuge for stray cats.
 The president and his wife Nancy, at their California spread for a three-week vacation, have taken a homeless male cat and two female tabby kittens, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary said Monday.
 The couple rescued the cats after the older male cat "Morris" and the kittens "Cleo" and "Sara."

Iowa legislators face charges

NEWTON, Iowa (AP) — A grand jury Monday indicted two Iowa legislators and three other people on charges stemming from an April bachelor party for one of the lawmakers that led to reports of nude dancing and sexual misconduct.
 The charges, ranging from indecent exposure to violation of the state's gift laws, capped a summer-long investigation during which 25 people were brought before the Jasper County grand jury in its six days of taking testimony.
 The party, held April 19 at the Back Forty lounge in Mingos, 25 miles northeast of Des Moines, was attended by 25 legislators in addition to a number of legislative staffers and lobbyists and two reporters.

Telephone workers end strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Negotiators for 38,000 unionized workers agreed tentatively on a contract with NYNEX Corp. on Monday and called off an eight-day strike against New York and New England telephone company subsidiaries, officials said.
 The Communication Workers of America instructed its members to return to work as of midnight. The CWA and NYNEX said in a joint statement issued after what they called "intensive bargaining" during the weekend and Monday.
 NYNEX was the last of the seven regional Bell phone companies to reach a tentative settlement with its major unions.

Aquino's death remembered

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — More than 100 relatives and friends of Benigno Aquino including his mother gathered at a suburban cemetery Monday as the Philippines began a weeklong commemoration of his assassination.
 Aurora Aquino, Aquino's mother and the mother-in-law of President Corazon Aquino, laid yellow chrysanthemums at her son's tomb.
 Aquino was shot and killed at the Manila airport Aug. 21, 1983, as he arrived from self-imposed exile in the United States — to challenge former President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Passengers evacuate airliner

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Passengers and crew on a Republic Airlines DC-9 used emergency chutes to evacuate Monday night when the control tower noticed an engine fire after the plane landed, authorities said.
 There were no reports of injuries and the fire was extinguished by emergency crews, said Ray Tyler, a dispatcher for the Memphis Fire Department.
 Jack Barker, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration office in Atlanta, said the pilot of Flight 478 already had made a scheduled landing at Memphis International Airport when the control tower notice flames from the left engine.

 "A lot of doctors in town simply will not visit their patients here. And the state is not sympathetic."
 Drake also said he thought many of the violations cited by the state were unhelpful.
 "The state will not follow through on some things," he said. "For instance, we were cited for a violation because one woman poured tomato juice all over her food before she ate. So the people just have 'idiot signs' on their plates and she will not eat her food unless she pours tomato juice all over it. But they don't ask us why we let her."
 Drake also pulled out a stack of 20 or more questions, responses from family members to the quality of care at Sky View-Hazelde that he has received within the last week.
 Except for two people who rated it poorly, the majority of people rated care between good to very good.
 "We're getting tremendous support from families," Drake said. "And most people signed their names. If this place were a real mess, we'd be getting more negative responses."
 Drake sent an appeal to the state DPH on Monday, requesting one more visit before his license in September to revoke his license. He said he recently hired another nurse, and Sky View is in the process of hiring more aides.
 If DPH inspects Sky View again this week, it will be the fourth inspection since May.
 "If they give us reasonable assurance that they've corrected the problem, and we find that they have, then we will reissue their license and notify Medicare and Medicaid," Schoonover said.
 She also stood by the three state inspections. "We believe what we saw was real," she said. "We don't do this without sound cause. And we think we have the facts to substantiate it."

Today's weather

Do you remember last December?

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding:
 Partly sunny today with a slight chance of thundershowers. Highs in the low 90s. Cloudy tonight and Wednesday with chance of more thundershowers. Lows in the high 60s.
 Camas Prairie, Halley and Lower Wood River Valley:
 Chance of afternoon thundershowers and evening showers with slight chance of locally heavy showers. Highs in the 90s. Lows near 50.
 Northern Utah and Nevada:
 Utah — Variable clouds today with scattered mainly afternoon and evening thundershowers in the west and widely scattered in the east. Partly cloudy Wednesday with widely scattered afternoon and nighttime thundershowers. Lows tonight from 55 to 65. Highs in the mid to upper 80s into the east. Winds light to moderate.
 Nevada — Partly to mostly cloudy today with showers and thundershowers. Partial clearing in the extreme west with showers continuing overnight elsewhere. Partly cloudy in the west on Wednesday with a chance of thundershowers and scattered thundershowers continuing elsewhere. Highs today from the low 80s to mid 90s and lows tonight from the mid 50s to mid 60s. Highs Wednesday from the low 80s to the 90s.
 The National Weather Service says a south to southwesterly flow of air continues to move over Idaho on Monday.
 Moisture carried in the flow is moving into southern Idaho from Nevada by today. This surge of moisture will increase the chance of thundershowers for southern portions of the state while the north will remain dry.
 Skies were generally clear Monday, though some scattered clouds were reported throughout the day. No rainfall was recorded during the previous 24 hours.
 Temperatures were hot. Many of the lower valley stations had mid-afternoon readings in the mid 90s while the 80s were common over the mountain states.
 Normally mild Halley reached 92 at 3 p.m.
 Winds were light throughout the day with speeds less than 10 miles per hour. The extended forecast for Southern

Canadian timber duties sought

BOISE (AP) — Representatives of Idaho's sagging timber industry say a countervailing duty on Canadian timber would boost their economic situation.

Meanwhile, Butch Otter, a Republican who is running against State Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon for lieutenant governor, said Monday that he would like to see trade restrictions by the end of the year to send a message that the United States will protect its industries.

Testimony was given Monday before Sen. Steve Symms and U.S. Rep. Larry Craig, both Republicans, on the impact of international trade on Idaho's economy.

Donald Jensen, Star, president of the Associated Logging Contractors of Idaho, said wages and benefits reductions in Idaho's timber industry have taken their economic toll on workers.

He said wage and benefit reductions don't receive the same focus of layoffs, but contends they also have tremendous effects.

Doctor leaves China group

BOISE (AP) — The doctor who cared for a Boise photographer who died on a river expedition in China has left the group partyway through the trip, along with three American boatmen.

Annette Sprouse, an employee of the Ken Warren Outdoors Inc., a fishing company running the expedition on the upper Yangtze River, said Dr. David Gray was returning to the United States along with oarsmen Bill Atwood, Toby Sprinkle and Gary Peebles.

Sprouse said Gray plans to speak to Margit Shippee, the widow of Dave Shippee, a 29-year-old photographer for The Idaho Statesman who died Aug. 3 of pulmonary edema, a complication of altitude sickness.

Gray is an emergency medicine specialist from Corpus Christi Medical Center in Texas.

"I think there was a sense of relief here that the doctor is coming back because he can tell us the whole story. We have a lot of questions that are unanswered," Mrs. Shippee said Sunday.

3 arraigned on drug charges

REXBURG (AP) — Three people were arraigned Monday on drug charges in the confiscation of about two pounds each of marijuana cocaine and black-tar heroin with an estimated street value of $1.6 million, officials said Monday.

The men were arrested Sunday at the Rexburg Airport after setting up a drug buy that turned out to be with undercover narcotics officers.

U.S. Attorney Maurice Ellisworth said that Julio Terraza-Lea, 18, Jose Meles Rodriguez Machado, 32, and Gonzalo Carrasco-Lujana, 29, all of Rigby, are facing state charges for possession with intent to deliver heroin and cocaine.

Madison County Prosecutor Dale Thompson said they were arraigned Monday on the state charges.

Deputy Prosecutor Mike Larsen said bond was set at $750,000 each, and a preliminary hearing was scheduled for Aug. 22.

Federal officials also are drawing up charges of conspiracy to export firearms to Mexico and illegally dealing in firearms, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Dana Biehl.

Ellis auction billed as largest

POCAHELLO (AP) — Power tools, clothing, saddles and dining chairs that once belonged to ex-car dealer Earl Ellis are being sold in a liquidation sale in years.

"I'm taking a big risk here," said Ellis, who is selling the items at a small-order catalog, "but I think it's a name it and it's probably here on sale."

Ellis, who specializes in liquidation sales, earlier this year awarded the contract to dispose of the last of the Ellis property.

The sale starts today at a former clothing store and will run about three weeks, said Ellis.

Three months ago, 250 automobiles that once belonged to Ellis were auctioned off. The cars and merchandise were seized by authorities last year when Ellis, 63, was arrested on federal charges of altering serial numbers on auto parts and possession of stolen property. His wife, Peggy, 50, was also charged in the federal warrant.

Mexican enters innocence plea

AMERICAN FALLS (AP) — A Mexican national charged in the May 10 murder of a Power County farm worker has pleaded innocent in 6th District Court, court documents show.

No trial date was set by Judge Peter McDermott for Jose B. DeLeon, 29, of Tuxco, Mexico. DeLeon was bound over to district court last week in the slaying of Thomas Bravo, 41.

DeLeon, who was originally a co-defendant in Bravo's murder, Mauricio Colma Vasquez, 26, also of Mexico, pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of grand theft. A pre-sentence report was ordered.

Both DeLeon and Vasquez remain incarcerated at the Power County Jail pending further proceedings.

DeLeon is accused of slaying Bravo 24 times after a dispute over the use of a tape player at Bravo's trailer. A criminal complaint cites robbery as a motive and includes a count for use of a deadly weapon.

Tax vote cancelled

AMERICAN FALLS (AP) — A $12,000 override-levy election on Aug. 28, designed to pay money for Power County's ambulance service, has been called off, county officials say.

County Commission Chairman Lois Bauer said officials discovered that a state law prevents holding two tax increase elections in less than six months. Last month, Power County voters rejected an override levy for ambulance and hospital services. Another tax increase election can't be held until January, she said.

H&W begins budget review

BOISE (AP) — The Department of Health and Welfare began two days of budget review Monday to decide which fiscal year 1988 budget requests will be included in the agency's final proposal.

Health and Welfare budget officer Gary Broker said an 8.6 percent increase is needed above the current general tax funding of $71.7 million just to continue the present level of operations.

Department division administrators are asking for an increase of 30.9 percent for new or expanded efforts.

Those so-called "above maintenance" requests will be reviewed by Director Rose Bowman, who will decide which of the new items will be included in the agency's formal budget. The budget session continues here on Tuesday.

Broker said the 8.6 percent increase needed to maintain current programs includes inflationary increases, costs of replacing outdated equipment, and personnel adjustments.

Among the "above maintenance" requests submitted Monday were:

- The addition of 20 child protection investigation staff to keep up with increases in complaints of child abuse, child neglect and child sexual abuse. Ray Winterwood, chief of the Bureau of Social Services, said the new staff is needed "unless you consider slapping someone's hands and admonishing them to take better care of their children an acceptable level of service."
- Employment of six welfare fraud investigators, who would be expected to recover $3 for each $1 spent to pay for their costs.
- Purchase of more than $400,000 worth of equipment for the state laboratory. Director Darrell Brock said most of the lab's instruments and equipment was bought with federal funds in the 1950s and 1960s and is worn out. The federal Environmental Protection Agency already has funded the state it must replace obsolete equipment if the Idaho lab is to continue to do work for federal environmental protection programs, Brock said.

• Addition of 22 new staff to the Child Support Enforcement program. Begun as a means of reimbursing the state for welfare payments to children, the program now is required by federal law to serve non-welfare clients. Its caseload has nearly doubled in the past couple of years.

Bureau chief Pat Howell said the new staff would bring in nearly $5.2 million to reimburse state payments, and collect another $13 million for custodial parents.

• Restore child care and training costs to the Community Work Experience Program (CWEP), designed to find employment for welfare recipients. Scott Cunningham, supervisor of the self-help section, said the money is needed to continue Idaho's record of placing about 25 percent of CWEP clients into unsubsidized employment.

Cunningham said that saves the state about $330,000 annually in assistance payments.

County seeks local Enviro-safe control

BOISE (AP) — Owyhee County is seeking local control over Enviro-safe services because of what Prosecutor Clayton Anderson says are inadequate enforcement guidelines by the state and the federal government.

"It's in our backyard," Andersen told the Legislative Council County-City Mandates Committee Monday. "We just want to regulate it."

Meanwhile, other county officials said increasing new mandates by the Idaho Legislature coupled with federal budget cuts in the wake of Gramm-Rudman have left counties with dramatic budget problems.

Anderson said the state receives $600,000 in disposal fees annually from Enviro-safe, and questioned how the money is spent. He said complaints to both the state Division of Environment and the federal Environmental Protection Agency fall on deaf ears.

Owyhee County would like to have an ordinance regulating Enviro-safe and collect a fee to fund hiring a local inspector, he said. Because of increased financial pressure facing Idaho's counties, Owyhee County will have to eliminate the position of county environmental-safety officer.

now held by Dr. Charles Scott. In next year's budget, Andersen said.

The county had an ordinance regulating Enviro-safe, but Andersen said a district judge struck it down in December 1984, on the grounds that it pre-empted by state law.

Anderson said the county would like to have the authority to inspect the site, but said violations would be referred to state officials.

Other county officials testified that counties need some relief from budget problems that are plaguing local governments statewide.

Dick Pence, Twin Falls County clerk, told the committee that his county has faced in the last eight years revenue increases of $306,000 and legislative mandates adding $63,000 to the county budget over the same period.

The Legislature mandates range from weed control to setting aside funds for the district courts, said Canyon County Clerk Bill Staker.

"All these things keep coming in at a time when we should be cutting costs," Pence said of Legislative mandates.

Sen. C.A. "Skip" Smyser, committee chairman, said testimony throughout the day reiterated the message of counties facing serious cutbacks because of funding problems.

Heinz: If Demos win, West loses

BOISE (AP) — The western United States, and particularly states such as Idaho and Utah, will lose a lot if Republicans lose control of the Senate in this fall's election, says Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa.

He's chairman of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee and was in Idaho on Monday to campaign for Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, who's facing a tough re-election battle against Democratic Gov. John Evans.

Seven of the 13 most important Senate committees are headed by Westerners, Heinz told a news conference here Monday. If Democrats re-capture the Senate, he said, just one committee chairman is likely to be a Westerner.

"There is no one who is a tougher fighter for the things he believes in than Steve Symms," said Heinz. "There's nobody who is a better spokesman for his state or tougher in the clinches — and I've been in Steve's clinches," said Heinz.

"There will be a massive shift of power to liberal eastern Democrats," said Heinz.

Tax bill's domino effect is unknowable

WASHINGTON — House and Senate conferees reached agreement this past weekend on a tax bill that might apply to the Great West. Don't know Act of 1988. It is highly probable that the bill will pass both chambers without significant change. The president will sign it. And the people will be handed a pig in a poke. Let me venture a preliminary, tentative judgment, based upon everything I could read about the bill. The conferees committee produced a pretty good pig.

Piler 'resignation' won't mask the facts

Searching for a resolution to its long-running dispute with former superintendent Gary Piller, the Twin Falls School Board has done some artful crafting of the English language by allowing Piller to officially "resign," nearly two years after it fired him.

The change in terminology will not deter anyone who really wants to find out the circumstances of Piller's departure, nor the way in which numerous employees of the district assess his brief tenure as superintendent.

All that will be necessary will be to check the court file in the case, including the testimony of people who came forward at the district's dismissal hearings in 1994.

Nonetheless, it strikes us as curious that board members, who only months ago were saying they would stand by their decisions in the Piller dismissal, now would settle the case by agreeing to a change in his official record.

That will not, in itself, make it easier for Piller to find another job.

If, as he claims, he has sent out hundreds of resumes without getting a job, he should not be surprised if little changes, despite the official record being changed from "fired" to "resigned."

There is an impression that school superintendents may be passed along all too easily from district to district, with sometimes embarrassing results.

It is evident that some people are suited for these kinds of positions and, perhaps, that some are not, at least not in the same setting.

The fit of an individual to a sensitive post like superintendent of schools is a delicate one of individual, board, community, style and tone.

Those qualities did not exist between Piller and the Twin Falls board, and as a result, the man was fired.

The board may officially state, from now on, that Piller "resigned." But saying so will not make it so.

The result of this verbal shell game, in our view, will be a diminishing of the board's credibility in the eyes of the community.

James Kilpatrick

In the beginning, the idea was to combine "tax simplification" with "tax reform." A third goal was to produce a bill that would be "revenue neutral" over the next five years.

In some ways the measure is indeed "simpler" than the present tax code. Instead of 14 rates of taxation on individual income, we are to have two rates. For an estimated 6 million low-income taxpayers, there will be no tax obligation at all. But let us not kid ourselves. Apart from these provisions, the bill is anything but simple.

Beyond question, the conferees have produced tax reform — breathtaking, jaw-dropping tax reform. For good or ill — this is one of the great unknowns — an estimated $120 billion in taxes will be shifted from individuals to businesses over the next five years. Radical changes have been made in tax credits and depreciation schedules. These are no cosmetic revisions. They are substantive.

Is the bill "revenue neutral"? No one knows. We are reminded of the famous scene in "Alice in Wonderland," in which it transpires that the Mad Hatter, using a bread knife, has oiled the Mad Hatter's watch with butter. "It was the BEST butter," says the March Hare. "Yes," grumbles the Hatter, "but some crumbs must have got in as well."

So it is with this bill. It has been oiled with the very best assumptions, made by conscientious people, but there are crumbs in it. What will be the rate of inflation in 1997? What unemployment is to be expected in 1997? What will be the prime rate of interest in 1997? No one knows. What does the future hold in terms of personal income, housing starts, automobile sales, trade balances, the harvest of wheat and corn? No one knows. This summer's terrible drought in the Southeast, coupled with bumper crops in the Midwest, has skewed estimated income for the current fiscal year. What about next year?

The most serious unknowns are inherent in the nature of tax reform. Here in Washington we deal constantly in nice round numbers, and the numbers take on a mystic life of their own. Staff members provide estimates. This change as to the deductibility of credit-card interest will produce X billions of dollars; repeal of tax shelters will produce Y billions. Reduction of rates on taxpayers earning $30,000 will cost Z billions. This, X plus Y minus Z equals — what? No one knows.

This is because these changes do not take place in an economic vacuum. Changes affecting individual Retirement Accounts will not affect individual taxpayers only; these changes also will have some unpredictable effect upon investment capital. Repeal of investment tax credits, retroactive to Jan. 1 of this year, will hit certain industries where it hurts. Will this result in significant price increases? In layoffs? How many jobs may be lost? What will be the impact on retail sales? How will state and local revenues be affected? Who knows? Nobody knows.

Not until the bill becomes law will most of us know about the so-called transition provisions.

Some of the changes, notably repeal of the investment tax credit, would apply to 1988. Other provisions would apply to half of 1987. Still other provisions are staggered over the next five years. It will take months — many months — for an army of tax lawyers and public accountants to master the intricate provisions of this bill.

The conferees labored mightily to write a new tax code that would be "more fair" than the present code. For one example, they sought to impose an inescapable minimum tax on corporations. The idea is politically appealing.

Last month Citizens for Tax Justice publicized a report showing that more than half of the nation's largest corporations have avoided any income tax in at least one of the past five years. Giant AT&T, with almost $2 billion in pretax profits, "paid not one penny in federal income taxes between 1982 and 1985."

Very well. Let us belt AT&T a good one. But what will a minimum tax do to long-distance rates, to the cost of a lighter plane, to the cost of lumber? Eventually we will know. Right now, nobody knows.

James Kilpatrick writes his column, "A Conservative View," from Washington.

See Dick, Jane suffer to stay fit after 40

BOSTON — Dick and Jane play middle-aged tennis. See the brace Dick puts on his right arm to protect his tennis elbow.

See the high-top shoes he ties to support the foot which he broke on the middle-aged squash.

See the double socks he wears to shield the bone spur on the other foot.

See Jane's orthopedic lifts specially made for her tennis shoes.

See the elastic support on her right knee.

See the X-rays of her back.

This is how Dick and Jane prepare to play middle-aged tennis this morning.

Dick stretches his hamstrings. Jane stretches her back.

Dick takes aspirin.

Jane takes calcium.

Dick drives to the tennis court to save wear and tear on his bone spur.

Jane walks to the tennis court to warm up her spine.

Dick and Jane take out their middle-aged, mid-sized racquets, their sun block, their yellow balls, and play.

Look at Jane lunge.

See how she winces.

Look at Dick hitting a backhand.

Ellen Goodman

See how he twitches.

Dick and Jane are playing middle-aged tennis to stay in shape. They play a prize.

Dick and Jane have two friends. They are Jack and Jill. These two do not play tennis. Nor do they run. Nor do they ache.

But Dick and Jane worry about their friends' health. "What will become of Jack?" frowns Dick at times. He sends Jack articles about exercise and blood pressure. "What will become of Jill?" frets Jane. She sends Jill research about arthritis and heart disease.

Right before Dick's 40th birthday, he and Jane began to read about health. They read that exercise was an anti-depressant. They read that exercise promoted a longer life. They read that exercise helped the cardiovascular system.

Right before Jane's 40th birthday, they began to notice wear and tear around their athletic friends. They saw their casts and crutches. They saw their X-rays and membership cards at sports-medicine clinics.

Dick and Jane decided that there were two choices for middle age. They could be depressed or broken. They could strain their hearts or their backs. They could choose between cardiologists or orthopedists. They could live a shorter life of leisure or a longer life of injury. They could be Jack and Jill or Dick and Jane. They decided to play for the long run.

See Dick and Jane now as they finish their game of middle-aged tennis.

Off goes his elbow brace.

Off goes her knee support.

Dick stretches out his hamstrings.

Dick drives home to save wear and tear on his foot.

Jane walks home to cool down her vertebrae.

Listen to Dick as he puts the flexible cold pack on his toe: "I feel great!"

Listen to Jane as she puts the flexible cold pack on her sacroiliac: "Fit as a fiddle!"

Dick and Jane are willing to sacrifice every bone in their body in order to stay healthy.

Letters/ Equal time requested for conservatives, fundamentalist Christians

Evolution theory has holes

Your choices for guest commentators on the opinion page of The Times-News has been lacking in quality lately. Anthony T. Podesta is the latest example of your lack of discretion. This fellow is a master of deception.

To begin with, he is president of a group calling themselves People for the American Way. Such a wonderful name! Stirrs up feelings of patriotism doesn't it? But it is misleading — this group attacks everything most Americans hold dear. They are especially vicious when it comes to our religious liberties and the Judeo-Christian heritage of our nation. (Yes, our country has a Judeo-Christian heritage. I need point no further than the words "In God We Trust" on our coins.) So much for Mr. Podesta's "patriotic" group.

His article (Aug. 13) is also very deceptive. His first two sentences tell us that he wishes to discuss the problem of science education. But he spends most of his time telling us that we are "scientific illiterates" if we don't accept the theory of evolution as scientific fact. Oh, come now! I do not accept the theory of evolution and I am not scientifically illiterate. I reject it on the basis of scientific evidence. The theory of evolution is so full of holes it takes either ignorance or something akin to fanaticism to accept it. Tell me, if I am scientifically illiterate (Ph.D.'s, etc.) who also reject it? Why, I've even heard of some out-and-out atheists who regard that foolish theory.

Mr. Podesta does, at last and to his credit, go on to discuss the problem of scientific literacy, a very real problem in our nation. I agree with him that we must address this problem. I disagree with him on what symptoms point to the problem.

Unions leech off workers

those "ultra-fundamentalist" people Mr. Podesta refers to. Let's have a one to one ratio between the liberal, humanistic writers you usually choose and some conservative or maybe (could you bear it?) even an occasional fundamentalist Christian. Let's have equal time for all in The Times-News.

JOHN T. REAGAN
Gooding

Mr. Mattles letter is before me. There are a couple of points to be corrected. He said he had 42 years with the Carpenter's Union and a fine pension plus social security.

Evidently he is older. I've had only 32 years with the Carpenters, and no pension! More lose than gain.

Second point. Jennie D. Ross was right as rain. I was told many times who to vote for, what to vote for, and when to vote.

It doesn't seem reasonable to believe a man could work that long in unions and not hit a check-off job. There was a Local 1913 in Van Nuys, Calif., that had a dollar for each man who died, and three or four did each month. No one can tell me there are not assessments for everything under the sun. Here is the main point. Most carpenters here in Twin Falls cannot deny they have heard Carl Boyd say "Where do you want your nail, in your pocket or in your pension?" Where do you think I voted to put it? Only to learn later it was not mine and would never be mine. That fact holds true for any union on this earth. Jack Murphy said so.

Understand I'm talking money paid by a company to a union on your behalf for a pension fund build-up. It was 12 cents, then 25 cents, and the last I knew of was a dollar an hour. That's where all that union money comes from. Every hour, hour after, in thousands of unions, thousands and thousands of people. Two hours per month dues doesn't amount to much money in comparison to that kind of money — dollars per hour time worked.

Yes on sheep referendum

Idaho has recently been embroiled in an escalating discussion of the upcoming sheep industry referendum. The advertising program of the American Sheep Producers Council and the financial plight of the National Woolgrowers Association has figured prominently in these discussions.

I am currently in agreement with my fellow sheep producers that we need adequate support for both the NAWGA and the ASPC. These two organizations provide a balanced operating structure for the American Sheep Industry.

I do not believe, however, that we can successfully enhance the stability and financial position of the National Woolgrowers Association by failing to adequately fund the increasingly successful programs of the American Sheep Producers Council. The proposed six-cent checkoff is a substantial contribution from the producer but it is a wise and profitable investment in the industry. Advertising programs of the ASPC have been progressively expanded in recent years and we are now realizing the benefits of these programs. To reject or reduce our self-help measures at this time would defeat the objectives of the entire industry.

Questions have been raised about a second referendum. This is a complex problem and one consideration must certainly be the cost of an additional poll of producers. The other major consideration is whether the industry will be given a second opportunity to address this question. Should this opportunity not occur we would face the loss of our only proven advertising program.

of Idaho on the upcoming referendum.

Port of Hope needs support

This letter is in response to all the flak these past months on the state monies being awarded to the Walker Center in Gooding.

I for one would like to know what DHW based their findings on about the percentage of recovered alcoholics. There is no such animal. The word "recovering" one day at a time. Apparently the DHW has an outdated mode of investigational procedures since the rates of recovery vary from one month to the next, depending upon the individuals treated for alcohol and drug addiction.

As a heavy taxpayer in the state of Idaho, I've always been satisfied with the Ports' performance and expertise in the field of alcohol and drug rehabilitation and it is a pleasure to see my tax dollars spent so wisely and efficiently.

I have volunteered my services to the Port of Hope for years on various projects including the design of their 1985 Christmas Card, but would like at this time to let the public and the DHW know a bit of history:

It's been almost 12 years now since my friend and neighbor asked me to help open the doors of the WCC (Women's Crisis Center) which is now the Port of Hope's adult residential center for alcohol and drug abuse. As volunteers we took turns working 4-hour shifts in addition to contacting and meeting with the terrified residents of Twin Falls. They provided us with furniture, curtains, carpets, appliances; the merchants gave us wallpaper, paint, wood, spackle and tools at cost; the downtown businessmen's association met with us and donated our first monies of $50 for office supplies; Dr. Briggs who donated his time and expertise to the clients who came through the door in need of medical attention; the local printer who not only printed up the material we needed but also gave jobs to individuals after treatment and a host of other support factors from individuals within our community.

3 rays, Sandy Thomas and associates. The J nited Way was a great support to us during the second year of operation when we received our first gift from your agency, we were indeed thankful to be put on the J nited Way's list of recipients.

In the years that followed the individuals within the community met us at every corner of a hard turn and we had many aches and growing pains. When 3 arry Meyers was hired in the mid 70s it was an answer to our prayers, combining the men and women's facility as a Port of Hope.

One very important issue has not been addressed here, the potent message of after-care and family involvement. Residents that go through a 28-day treatment here in Twin Falls are afforded an aftercare program for themselves and family members. They are counseled on an individual basis and also with the families of the alcoholic addict.

The Gooding facility also has an aftercare program in their 28-day treatment fee, but since most treatment centers operate in much the same fashion (no one program superior to the other), using the same tools of the program" one may want to consider The Betty Ford Center in Rancho Mirage near Palm Springs for a mere $1,500 additional cost! The Port has always been affordable to most individuals. It was set up like that from the very beginning.

In today's Times-News, Mr. Ater of the Gooding facility states: "If I stuck our program up against their any day. We have a commitment to the community and to the patients. We have a superior program." The commitment by the community for the Port of Hope has been over whelming for years and its time will be Rose Bowman and Glen Nickels, 3 HW at the Statehouse, 3 case ID 272, KNOW IT. CAROLEE S. # Poll finds split on use of nuclear power

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are divided over the use of nuclear power to generate electricity, and many worry that nuclear plants lack adequate safeguards, according to a Media General-Associated Press poll.

The poll also found that most Americans believe the federal government has done a fair or poor job in supervising the nuclear industry.

Thirty-six percent of the 1,365 adults questioned in the poll said they supported the use of nuclear power to generate electricity, while 38 percent said they opposed it. Twenty-nine percent had no opinion or declined to answer.

Fifty-six percent of the respondents said the federal government did a fair or poor job in supervising nuclear power plants. Only one-quarter thought the government did a good job, and 5 percent thought the government did an excellent job.

On the safety issue, 44 percent of the respondents said they believed nuclear power plants had inadequate safeguards, while 33 percent said the safeguards were adequate. About six in 10 respondents thought nuclear power plants were safer today than they were 10 years ago.

People who lived closer to nuclear plants were more likely to believe the plants were safe than those who lived farther away.

Nearly eight in 10 respondents said most people didn't know enough about the effects of radiation to make informed decisions concerning nuclear power. And the poll also found a strong correlation between education and support for nuclear energy; support was highest among college graduates and lowest among high school dropouts, about half of whom had no opinion about the use of nuclear power.

Nearly half of the men and slightly more than one-quarter of the women supported the use of nuclear power. About one-third of men and women were opposed, while 18 percent of men and 23 percent of women had no opinion.

Whites were more likely than blacks to support the use of nuclear power, and Westerners were more likely to support it than residents of other regions, the poll found.

Respondents in the Media General-Associated Press poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,365 adults across the country June 20-28. As with all sample surveys, the results of Media

General-AP telephone polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variation in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,300 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations in the sample. That is, if one could have questioned all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary from the results of polls such as this one by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for several reasons. Differences in exact wording of questions, in the timing of interviews and in the interview methods could also cause variations.

B-52 modification begun

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force has begun the process of modifying its 131st B-52 bomber to carry cruise missiles — a step that will carry the United States beyond the limits of the SALT II arms accord, the Air Force's new chief of staff said Monday.

Gen. Larry D. Welch, in his first meeting with Pentagon reporters since assuming command of the Air Force on July 1, said the modification work on the bomber would be completed sometime within the next three months.

White House and Pentagon officials had said previously the United States would surpass the SALT II limits on nuclear weapons only in the course of modernizing its B-52 bombers. Welch's comments, however, were the first to confirm that modification work on the particular bomber had already begun.

Army defense plan approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon's civilian leadership has approved the concept of an Army plan to develop an $11 billion system of missiles, guns and radar sensors to protect tanks and soldiers from aerial attack on the battlefield.

The plan, known as the Forward Area Air Defense System, or FAADS, was approved by Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV on Aug. 14 and revealed on Monday.

It calls for a replacement for the ill-fated Sgt. York air-defense gun, deployment of a new guided missile that is already under development, and accelerated development of a radar and communications system that would feed target data to the various weapons.

Army officials predicted Monday the entire system would be ready by fiscal 1991, even though not one of its five elements has moved to the point of field testing. It based the projection on plans for many of the components to be selected "off-the-shelf" from existing weaponry.

"The lessons learned from the Sgt. York experience proved that one weapon alone or even multiple weapons acting independently cannot defeat the air threat," the Army said in a statement.

The [new] strategy relies heavily on non-developmental items [off-the-shelf], and pre-planned product improvements to rapidly overcome our current air-defense deficiencies and keep pace with the advancing threat."

The Sgt. York — also known as the Divad or Division Air Defense Gun — consisted of a modified tank chassis, two 40mm cannons and a radar system. After more than seven years of development and an investment of $1.8 billion, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger scrapped the weapon last Aug. 27, saying it "simply could not meet the tank columns from modern Soviet helicopters."

The new plan, however, calls for an even broader mix of weapons. Lt. Col. James Starkey, one of the officers overseeing the effort, said during a briefing Monday that the changes were based on a new assessment, validated by the Defense Intelligence Agency, of the Soviet threat.

That assessment, he said, predicts that by 1995 the Soviets will have large numbers of sophisticated helicopter gunships and unmanned reconnaissance and decoy drones to augment their attack plans. To counter that threat, Starkey said the Army now plans:

- A combination of guns and missiles on a tracked vehicle to replace the Sgt. York.
- A non-line-of-sight missile to be used against helicopters that are firing anti-tank missiles beyond visual range on the battlefield.
- The mounting of wheeled ground-to-air missiles on stinger utility vehicles.

Launch inquiries flood rocket firms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two rocket rocket builders have received 34 inquiries from satellite companies anxious to get into space, but so far, no private firm has launched any of the big launch vehicles, Titan, Atlas or Delta, in private hands.

Secretary Elizabeth Dole said Monday that the inquiries were for the space shuttle, Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole said Monday.

Martin Marietta has received formal requests from 21 satellite companies, she told news conference attendees Monday.

And Mrs. Dole said that Transpace Carriers, Inc., an Maryland firm that has marketing rights to the Delta rocket, has finalized contracts for launching two satellites.

President Reagan on Friday announced that the shuttle is opening up to commercial launching business and that only 14 of 46 Delta-class scheduled for shuttle launch will find space on the orbiter fleet when it flies again in 1988.

The others will have to find a way into orbit among private launch companies in this country or overseas.

Mrs. Dole said private firms expect to start launching from government facilities in 1988 and that there is interest in eventually building private launch towers.

The Transportation Department was made the government's lead agency 2½ years ago, "facilitating" development of a private launch industry. But so far, no private firm has launched any of the big launch vehicles, Titan, Atlas or Delta, in private hands.

Our intent was to clear away excessive regulations so that this fledgling industry could thrive and compete against foreign launch systems," the Transportation secretary said. "It soon became clear, however, that the greatest barrier to success was not excessive regulation but a highly subsidized shuttle system."

She said what the launch industry was anxious to see "was not so much moving aside excessive regulations or trying to streamline a process; it was this issue of 'will we be competing with NASA?' Mrs. Dole said. "That has just been determined this past couple of weeks."

Martin Marietta, of Denver, makes the Titan family of rockets used by the military to launch large satellites. General Dynamics, of San Diego, makes the Atlas-Centaur. Another major rocket builder is McDonnell Douglas of Huntington Beach, Calif., which makes the Delta.

Delegation back from hostage trip

OTENARLY, N.J. (AP) — An Arab-American delegation working for the release of American hostages in Lebanon returned home with a promise from the Syrian government to double its efforts to free the captives, the group's leader said Monday.

Archbishop Philip Saliba, of the Antiochian Orthodox Church of North America returned to his office at church headquarters after 12 days in Damascus.

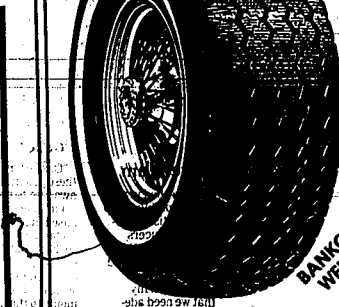

Saliba said he will wait for word from Syrian President Hafez Assad before making his next move to seek the release of the hostages.

Black Utah senator seeks Demos slot

By The Associated Press

The only black ever elected to the Utah Senate is seeking the Democratic nomination Tuesday to oppose Republican Sen. Jake Garn, while in Wyoming, 11 men are competing for a chance to succeed bankrupt Gov. Ed Herschler.

State Sen. Terry Williams is opposed by real estate salesman Craig Oliver for the nomination to face Garn, who has no GOP primary opposition in his bid for a third term.

A Salt Lake Tribune poll published Sunday gave Williams a 6 percent lead over Oliver, 31 percent to 25 percent with 44 percent undecided. But the same survey gave Garn a 74 percent to 19 percent advantage over Williams and a 76 percent to 17 percent lead over Oliver.

Moreover, Garn has collected more than $499,400 in campaign funds, according to a July 30 report to the Federal Election Commission. Williams has collected $6,113, $5,000 from his own pocket. Oliver's $10,000 campaign chest includes $2,000 the candidate contributed directly and $2,000 he borrowed personally.

"It's difficult to run against Jake Garn," said Democratic Chairman Randy Horluchi.

Williams and Oliver both have criticized Garn for his opposition to economic sanctions against South Africa and his support of Contra rebels seeking to overthrow Nicaragua's Sandinista government. Also, both point to Garn's ride on the space shuttle last year as evidence that he is no longer interested in Utah.

In Wyoming, where the farm crisis and oil slump have hurt the economy, Herschler's decision not to seek a fourth term prompted seven Republicans and four Democrats to enter the race.

The leader in the GOP field is Pete Simpson, vice president of the University of Wyoming and brother of Republican Sen. Alan Simpson. Their father, Milward, served as both senator and governor.

Others in the race include Bill Budd, former executive vice president of the Wyoming Mining Association; Fred Schroeder, a businessman and GOP national committeeman; and former House Speaker Russ Donley.

The Democratic front-runner is Mike Sullivan, a Casper attorney with little political experience. His opponents are Pat McGuire, a Laramie man known for alleged sightings of UFOs; Al Hamburg, a Torrington sign painter who has entered his pets in political races; and Keith Goodenough, a Casper woodcutter who said he would "throw" a month-long party in the governor's mansion if elected.

Herschler, a Democrat, has stayed neutral, saying he would support the party's nominee.

He filed for bankruptcy in September, listing more than $2 million in debts stemming from the failure of the sprawling Yellowstone Ranch that he and three partners bought in 1977.

Schreuder murder conviction upheld

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Supreme Court on Monday upheld the murder conviction of Frances Schreuder, a former New York socialite accused of browbeating her teen-age son into murdering his millionaire grandfather.

The court ruled that Marc Schreuder's testimony against his mother was well corroborated. The judges also ruled that false testimony about his arrangement with prosecutors was corrected and did not taint the conviction.

Mrs. Schreuder, a former member of the New York City

Ballet board, was sentenced to life in prison for the July 22, 1978, shooting death of her father, Franklin Bradshaw, 76.

"We're disappointed in the result," said defense lawyer Ron Yengich. "Frances is disheartened; but she maintains her innocence."

Yengich said he planned to file for a new hearing before the state Supreme Court, as well as a writ of habeas corpus in the 3rd District court seeking Mrs. Schreuder's release.

Yengich said he had obtained new evidence, which he declined to detail, supporting allegations of misconduct by prosecutors.

Chilean junta made 'aware' of U.S. view

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Monday that following a visit to Chile by a high-ranking U.S. general, the military-led junta is "well aware" of the U.S. view that it should make reforms in the area of human rights and move toward a democratic government.

But Speakes, in California with the vacationing President Reagan, refused to confirm a report in The New York Times that because of the visit, the United States was considering blocking international loans to the government of Gen. Augusto Pinochet.

The paper reported in Monday's editions that Pinochet rejected the proposals of U.S. Gen. John R. Galvin, the chief of the U.S. Southern Command based in Panama, for improvements in Chile's human rights and political policies.

"I won't comment specifically on it," except to indicate that they understand (and we have) made a decision about the loans," Speakes said.

The spokesman confirmed that the general did pay a "courtesy call" on Pinochet, but he declined to give details of the meeting, saying it was private.

Rap group cancels show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The popular rap group Run DMC canceled an appearance Monday, a day after being members smashed seats and beat and stabbed at least 42 people at a sold-out concert called "Raising Hell."

"One young man suffered a minor gunshot wound in what was at least the fifth outbreak of violence at a Run DMC concert this summer. At least four people were booked for investigation of assault, interfering with police and public intoxication, said Long Beach police Cmdr. Al Van Olfenro.

"Anywhere you stand, people just come up and start fighting," concertgoer Janie Flores, 17, said Sunday night at the Long Beach Arena where 14,500 fans had gathered for the concert.

Run DMC canceled Monday night's show at the Hollywood Palladium and vowed not to play in Southern California until police could guarantee protection for their audiences.

Skaggs' son shot

TROUTVILLE, Va. (AP) — The 7-year-old son of country recording star Ricky Skaggs was shot in the face by an angry trucker on an interstate highway, authorities said Monday.

Andrew Lee Skaggs was in stable condition after being hit with a bullet that struck his lips and jaw before lodging in his neck, said state police Lt. Charles Fraley.

Radio identifies Sri Lankans

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Radio Bremen said Monday that the Sri Lankans smuggled by ship from West Germany to Canada belong to a guerrilla group that is fighting for an independent Tamil state in Sri Lanka.

Three Canadian fishing boats on Aug. 11 rescued 155 Sri Lankans, all Tamils, from two lifeboats that had been set adrift off Newfoundland's southern coast.

Radio Bremen, attributing its report to "police circles," said the Tamils went to West Germany from Sri Lanka or India to raise money through welfare checks and drug dealing to buy weapons for the guerrilla movement, the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam.

Werner Breuer, a spokesman for police in the port city of Bremen, refused comment on the radio report.

Australia cuts joint exercises

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Australia announced Monday it will not take part in joint military exercises planned for next month with the United States because it lacks the necessary funds.

Defense Minister Kim Beazley said that participation in the Sept. 5-20 exercises in the Philippines had been deferred in favor of another exercise in May 1987.

The decision came on the eve of an expected 1986-87 austerity budget and growing Australian government resentment over subsidizing U.S. wheat sales to China and the Soviet Union, traditional Australian markets.

Pravda airs Chernobyl gripes

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party daily Pravda on Monday aired readers' complaints about the handling of the Chernobyl nuclear accident, including that of a woman who said her parents' home had been ransacked.

Pravda acknowledged that there have been some problems with getting relief to evacuees and providing them with prompt, relevant information. It urged officials to redouble their efforts to resolve all difficulties.

Pravda said some readers' letters praised the Soviet Union's ruling Politburo for announcing that officials responsible for the disaster would be punished.

But others expressed frustration with bureaucratic red tape and anxiety about the fate of evacuees and their homes.

More than 100,000 people were evacuated from an 18-mile zone around the Chernobyl plant after an April 26 explosion ripped open the No. 4 reactor there and speeded radiation into the atmosphere.

War games set for E. Germany

BERLIN (AP) — About 25,000 Soviet troops will take part in maneuvers next month in East Germany to test combat readiness, the official East German news agency ADN said Monday.

The report said the maneuvers will be conducted Sept. 8-13. It did not say where in East Germany the war games will be staged.

The state-run news agency said troops from different armed services will take part in the exercises. It gave no other details.

Supertanker hit

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A supertanker believed to be from Iran was hit by a missile Monday off Dubai, and an explosion could endanger the Fateh oil field, marine salvage executives reported.

Fateh is the largest terminal in the United Arab Emirates, the federation of seven states led by Abu Dhabi.

S. Africa names 8,501 being detained

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government told Parliament on Monday that it is holding 8,501 people under the state of emergency, most without charge, and named them for the first time.

Louis Nel, the deputy Information minister, blamed African National Congress guerrillas for land mines that killed five blacks Sunday, including two babies. Among the six people named were a white woman and four of her children.

Nel referred to the guerrillas as "friends of the Ted Kennedys" and other liberal politicians who have denounced apartheid, South Africa's system of racial segregation.

President P.W. Botha's government must tell Parliament who it has detained, under terms of the Public Safety Act on which it based the emergency imposed June 12.

But Parliament was not in session at the time of the mass detentions, and the government had refused to say how many people were held or why they were.

At one point, the government said it had charged 780 detainees with criminal acts, but it never acknowledged estimates by the political opposition and private monitoring groups that thousands of people had been incarcerated.

When Parliament opened a special session Monday in Cape Town, Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange presented 177 pages of names of people "currently being held." It did not include addresses or say where the people were arrested or imprisoned. Emergency regulations prohibit journalists from revealing the names of detainees unless they are announced officially.

Soviet Union ends abruptly 1st talks with Israel in 19 years

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — The Soviet Union abruptly ended its first formal talks with Israel in 19 years after only 90 minutes Monday. The delegations had been scheduled to meet for two days. Israeli officials said they were disappointed and the meeting was "definitely not" a failure. They said contacts would continue after both sides reported to their governments.

4 killed in Pakistani protests

LAHORE, Pakistan (AP) — Thousands of people marched through the streets of Pakistan's cities Monday, often clashing with police in an opposition campaign to oust President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq. At least four people were killed and dozens injured.

The largest procession was a march through Lahore by up to 10,000 people shouting "Zia is a dog!" and "Death to the American imperialists!" Riot police broke up smaller demonstrations in Karachi and Rawalpindi. Officials and local news reports said many of the injuries occurred in the volatile southern province of Sindh. Opposition leaders there promised more protests Tuesday and said they would step up such civil disobedience actions as blocking roads. Sindh's provincial government said the scheduled reopening of all schools and universities Wednesday after summer vacations was postponed until Sept. 2.

An alliance called the Movement for the Restoration of Democracy began the nationwide protest after opposition leader Benazir Bhutto's arrest last Thursday in an attempt to depose Gen. Zia and force elections.

Gen. Zia, who like most of his compatriots is a Moslem, has been out of the country since the latest trouble started. He is in Saudi Arabia, making a pilgrimage to Mecca, site of the Islamic faith's holiest shrine. The civilian government Zia appointed late last year issued a statement Monday saying two policemen were killed and another was wounded while trying to move about 200 protesters from a road near the town of Khersona Fort. They were the first police deaths reported in the current disturbances.

Red Cross suspends food lifts to Sudan

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Monday the International Red Cross on Monday suspended emergency food shipments to southern Sudan after rebels in the area warned that relief flights were not immune from attack.

The warning came as the rebels took responsibility for shooting down a Sudan Airways plane on Saturday. All 60 people aboard the plane were killed.

The Sudan Peoples' Liberation Army said over its radio station that a Fabsoba battalion fired the anti-aircraft missile Saturday in Malakal, underscoring rebel warnings to the government as well as to foreign relief agencies not to fly over rebel territory.

The international Committee of the Red Cross said in Geneva it had suspended flights of emergency food supplies to southern Sudan and would halt shipments permanently if it confirms the rebels plan to attack relief flights.

The committee began emergency flights last Thursday to southern Sudan, where Western relief officials estimate 2 million people face starvation because of a famine brought on by the three-year civil war and by floods.

Rebels claim the government uses relief flights to ferry military supplies and troops to battle areas.

The Sudan Peoples' Liberation Army, backed by Ethiopia, has fought in southern Sudan since 1983 for regional autonomy, an end to Islamic law, and for social, political and economic reforms.

Poor tribal women prefer jail births

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Some impoverished tribal women in drought-stricken central India prefer to give birth inside jails, the United News of India reported Monday.

Not only are they assured of regular meals but they consider it a good omen.

The news agency said women of the Bauri and Mangaroli tribes in Madhya Pradesh state commit not-crimes before their delivery dates with the intention of being caught in a nearby district police station.

Superintendent A.K. Ansari said the women receive bail as they give birth in the prison until their babies are born.

Israel's Foreign Ministry spokesman said the meeting was "definitely not" a failure. They said contacts would continue after both sides reported to their governments. "Certainly it is a step in Soviet-Israeli relations," said Elnud-Gol, spokesman for the Israeli-Foreign Ministry. "We haven't had such a meeting in 19 years and today we had such a meeting."

He said contact would be maintained through the Finnish Embassy in Israel, which represents Soviet interests, and the Dutch Embassy in Moscow, which handles Israeli matters.

Other officials, speaking privately, expressed surprise at the session's brevity. Sources close to the talks said the Soviets may have been sending a message to Arab nations who complained about the meeting.

The Soviet Embassy in Helsinki would not comment. Soviet delegates refused to have their pictures taken with the Israelis before the meeting, Israeli officials said.

The Soviet Union and all its Eastern European allies except Romania broke relations with Israel after the 1967 Middle East war. Israel's prime minister, Shimon Peres, had indicated last week that the Helsinki talks might lead to renewed relations.

Israel's Foreign Ministry spokesman said the meeting was "definitely not" a failure. They said contacts would continue after both sides reported to their governments.

One conference source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said "The Soviets needed to show their Arab friends they were not deserting them for Israel. The Israelis were cautious in what they wanted to achieve, but certainly hoped to walk away with more than this."

Another high-ranking official said the Soviets "made a gesture toward Israel in agreeing to the talks. Then they made a gesture to the Arabs in keeping the talks short."

Newspapers in the Persian Gulf region criticized the Soviets for holding the meeting at all.

"Moscow now sees that its vital national interests in the Middle East dictate that it fill politically with Israel... without any consideration for the Arab reaction or the reasons that Moscow gave for rupturing ties with Tel Aviv in 1967," said the pro-government newspaper Al-Jezira in moderate Saudi Arabia.

The Soviet Union has said it wants to be included in an international conference on the Middle East, but Israel has said it will not agree until Moscow renews full diplomatic ties.

Amnon Seia, a specialist in Soviet affairs at Hebrew University, said the Israeli side was something very cheap because of Israeli insistence "on making the issue of Soviet Jews their top priority."

The Israeli delegation was under government orders to put the issue of Jewish emigration at the top of their agenda.

Israel says 400,000 of the 2.5 million Soviet Jews want to leave the country, but are thwarted by strict emigration policies.

Gov. the Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman, told reporters after the Helsinki meeting that it was "held in a candid and concrete atmosphere. Both sides were able to present their positions."

"We expect them to deliver our message to the leadership of the Soviet Union, and indeed we'll bring the message of the Russian delegation to our government," he said.

Monday's meeting was held in the Government Compound in Helsinki's historic district. Two dozen uniformed police guarded the compound, and plainclothes security officers also were seen in the area.

What's what

When you think you're coming down with a cold, drink fluids, take Vitamin C, and get dressed up in your best clothes. The fluids and C go to work physically. The clothes light that depressed frame of mind that left you vulnerable in the first place. Such is the advice of a medical expert.

Can you dispute the claim that kangaroos don't drink water?

Q. What's the biggest industry.

not counting government, in Washington, D.C.?

A. Publishing.

It was a Portuguese explorer who named that snake the "cobra."

Q. Red is supposed to be the outside color of a rainbow. But I saw one with a blue inside color. What's the deal?

A. That could've been a rainbow's reflection. Fairly common.

Q. Have any popes kept their real names?

A. Not since 1522 when the Dutch Cardinal Adrian Dedel became Pope Adrian VI. He was the last non-Italian pope until John Paul II, might mention.

Too much, too soon: Full-page ad early for Redford's 50th

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A full-page advertisement in Monday's Santa Fe New Mexican gave greetings to actor Robert Redford on his 50th birthday, but it may have been a year early.

The ad read: "50. Five decades. Half a century. Two-thirds of your life span. But don't worry. If you hurry, you can still make something of your life. And remember this: better you than me. Happy birthday cowboy."

It was unsigned but noted: "This advertisement paid for by a younger friend of Robert Redford."

However, both the 1985 World Almanac and Book of Facts and the 1984-85 edition of Who's Who in America say Redford was born Aug. 18, 1937, making him a mere 49.

Redford is in New Mexico producing and directing "The Milagro Bean Field War," which is being filmed in the northern New Mexico village of Truchas.

Come back little Shiba! Navratilova's dog found

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Martina Navratilova was a winner on and off the tennis court this weekend. She captured the finals of the Virginia Slims of Los Angeles women's tennis tournament and reunited with her lost and 2-year-old Shiba Inu named Yoni Sunday. The dog had been missing since Friday and Navratilova, staying with friends in Sherman, came during the tournament. A $250 reward for Yoni's return and handshakes followed.

She got a call from a woman who found the dog scratching at her door Saturday.

The woman, who was not identified, was unashamedly identified. Navratilova was offering a reward. "The lady didn't want the money, but I told her, 'Take it, you deserve it.' It restores your faith in humanity after all," she said.

Open school window alerts prince's security

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — An open window prompted police to search a public school with bomb-sniffing dogs Monday, a few hours before 7-year-old Prince Carl Philip arrived for his day in school.

Nothing suspicious was found in the Smedstett preliminary school in the suburb of Bromma, police said. "Somebody had simply forgotten to close the window," police spokesman Ingve Larsson said.

Prince Carl Philip is the second child of Swedish King Carl XVI Gustaf and German-born Queen Silvia. His older sister Crown Princess Victoria, 9, is a third-grader at the school. Swedish children start school at age 7. Since it was Carl's first day, the king himself drove his whole family, JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Prince Norodom Sihanouk, president of a coalition fighting Vietnam in Cambodia, begins a four-day visit Tuesday to discuss the Cambodian conflict with President Suharto, a palace spokesman said Monday.

The proposals also called for phased withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia and a free election. Vietnam has rejected the coalition proposal.

Vail woman last in Jeu de Paume museum

PARIS (AP) — An American woman begged her way past a symphonic guard Monday to become the last visitor to enter the famed Jeu de Paume before the great museum of impressionist painting shut its doors for the last time.

The 125-year-old Jeu de Paume will be renovated and is to reopen in 1988 as a hall for temporary exhibits, as Cezanne, Renoir, Manet and other French impressionists, has outgrown its quarters with only half the works on display.

The paintings are to be moved to the new, larger Orsay Museum, scheduled to open in December.

Officials at the Ministry of Culture said the Jeu de Paume's collection, which includes 700 works by

Girl, 2, dies awaiting liver transplant

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Despite an appeal by President Reagan for an organ donor, a 2-year-old girl died Monday while waiting for a liver transplant.

Kimberly Izzo died of liver failure at 5:30 a.m. at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh, said hospital spokeswoman Mary Ann Ference.

She was admitted to the hospital Aug. 12 in critical condition and was given a high priority on the hospital's waiting list for a liver transplant.

Kimberly was a normal, healthy child until two weeks ago, when she developed an infection that attacked her liver. Doctors did not identify the cause of the infection.

"Keep your faith strong and your hopes high," Reagan said in a telegram Friday to Kimberly's parents, Alfred and Lois Izzo of Woodbridge, N.J.

"Nancy and I have learned about little Kimberly and her need for a liver transplant. Americans are generous people and will give the gift of life once they know the needs of others such as Kimberly," the telegram read, according to hospital spokeswoman Carole Adzint.

Stronger measures to control cruising eyed

Jerrilyn Hillman, manager of Blue Lakes Mall, describes problems caused by cruisers who frequent the mall

Boise program may be model

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council is considering increasing police patrols and starting a program patterned after Boise's "Project Clear" to control automobile cruisers on Blue Lakes Boulevard next night.

A new program that schedules police officers for 12-hour shifts allows two officers to patrol Blue Lakes Boulevard when teenagers and young adults are cruising. Public Safety Director Tim Qualls said at a Monday council meeting to discuss cruising problems.

However, two officers are not enough, he said, adding, "I think strict enforcement is the only thing that will slow them (the cruisers) down."

He is preparing a proposal that would allow more officers on Blue Lakes Boulevard on nights when many kids are out. He estimated that seven officers would be needed.

Mayor Doug Vallmer said that in addition to increased patrols, he would like to appoint a citizen's committee to discuss the problems with 5th District judges.

In Boise this summer magistrate courts, downtown business leaders, police and the chamber of commerce began working together in a program called Project Clear to alleviate cruising problems.

Magistrate judges are encouraged to sentence people picked up for littering, vandalism, disorderly conduct and traffic offenses to serve on work crews.

Businesses in the core area pay $1 per foot of frontage per year to hire marshals to supervise early morning curbside parking, remove trash and clean business windows and parking lots.

Those who are sentenced to serve on the work crews for cruise-related misdemeanors but fail to show up can be picked up for contempt of court and given harsher punishments.

Many business owners on Blue Lakes Boulevard and nearby homeowners said that local judges should take harsher action against cruisers who cause the problems. Several said they supported community service sentences, either in lieu of, or in addition to, fines.

"Make them perform a service," said Cathryn Brown of Fillmore Street. "They can sweep, remove trash or clean up broken beer bottles."

"They've got lots of money, but not much time," agreed Councilman Jim Wicklers.

Councilwoman Mary McClusky said, "They go to court, they pay $5 or $15, and they're out causing problems next weekend."

"We have to be on Blue Lakes drinking and swearing, we'd be arrested," said Geraldine Hillman, manager of the Blue Lakes Shopping Center Mall. "If adults drove down the street hanging out a car window, we would be immediately pulled over and the judge would not have much sympathy. But they do have sympathy with the kids."

The cruising issue has been on the council agenda at the last two meetings at Hillman's request.

"There's a major problem with respect for private property," she said. "Somewhere along the line you have to make young people responsible. If I'm not invited on property, I don't go there. When they come out our lot with lawn chairs and kegs, I do not remember anyone inviting them. We have the lot because the city requires off-street parking. People are invited to park there while they shop and eat dinner."

Cruisers drove customers away, littered, parked lot with beer and wine bottles every night and regularly demolished signs, she said.

"When I go out and talk to them they say they just want to sit and talk and visit with their friends and meet new people, but my lot is not the place," she said. "I understand they want a social program, but when they damage property it becomes a criminal program."

Other merchants agreed that cruisers were driving away business.

Ernie Robertson said he hired private security personnel to prevent vandalism to his business on Blue Lakes Boulevard.

"But as a citizen, I do not frequent restaurants on Blue Lakes Boulevard on weekends," he said. "I do not want to take my family out and put them in danger of a traffic accident or be physically or verbally abused."

Several of the residents and merchants at the meeting said they sympathized with the teenagers who were just interested in a place to socialize. It was only a minority who caused problems, they said.

Some characterized the troublemakers as adults in their 20s and others said most were not from Twin Falls.

Although several who spoke asked that the parents of troublemakers be notified, Qualls said he suspected those causing the problems could not be controlled by their parents.

Council members expect cruising problems to ease when schools and colleges reopen and the weather cools. However, Vallmer said he would still like to find a solution to the problem starts again next summer.

Proposed budget draws lone comment

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls residents seem to like the city's proposed budget for the fiscal year beginning in October, if the lack of participation at a Monday night budget hearing is an indication.

Only one resident spoke at the hearing required by state law.

"I know that everyone is cutting budgets all over, but somehow we need to do something about the dog situation," said Betty Bobler, who lives on Harrison Street. "There's a chronic dog problem in the city."

The city's one full-time and one part-time dog catchers are not enough to control the dogs that run loose in the city, she said.

She is tired of having other people's dogs in her lawn and is concerned about reports from area medical emergency rooms about dog-bite victims in the summer, she said.

"In other places I've lived, they put dogs to sleep if they are not picked up (from the pound)," she said. "That's not cruel laws, but they are not enforced because there are not enough (employees) to do it. I think we've become very lax in our city."

The City Council has until September to consider the budget proposed by a budget subcommittee. It includes no provisions for changes in the way dog problems are handled.

City Manager Tom Courtney said the proposed financial plan is "mostly a status quo budget." The general financial condition of the city is good, and resources are adequate to provide investment income, he said.

The biggest capital improvement problem facing the city is street repairs, he said. Although the federal revenue sharing program — which provided the city with more than $400,000 last year for capital projects — has been discontinued, the city is increasing money for major street projects by 21 percent, he said. Overall, the capital improvement fund will be 15-percent lower than last year.

Residents can also expect to see increases in water and sewer fees, he said. The city is projecting increases of 2.5 to 8 percent, depending on the cost of projects and interest rates.

Proposed projects include replacing the city's major sewage collection line, increasing water supply and pressure in the southeast corner of the city, and automating the water supply system.

"The automation project will allow three full-time positions to be cut. However, other city workers will receive a 2-percent pay increase under the proposed budget."

The budget also will provide funds for a return to monthly reading of water meters and billing for actual, rather than average, use.

McClure spreads defense of Farm Bill

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

BURLEY — U.S. Sen. Jim McClure strode into farm country when he entered a Burley courtroom Monday. He had heavy baggage — the 1985 Farm Bill.

To the 30 farmers, business people and local politicians before him, McClure carried a message in defense of the Reagan administration.

The Republican-led government is spending an estimated $60 billion this year for agriculture, more than double the $24.6 million spent in 1980 under the Carter Administration.

Federal farm spending in agriculture rose from $28.7 billion in 1982 to $29.9 billion in 1986.

"It's not because we haven't tried," McClure said. "It's because we haven't succeeded."

Idaho's senior senator was meeting farmers at four stops, from Blackfoot to Burley. He was fielding frustrations and admitting to some himself. The formula to rescue American agriculture is not apparent, McClure indicated. Nor has the last chapter been written into the 1985 law.

"I wouldn't say the Farm Bill will be left alone," he said.

With Idaho's farmers in mind, McClure said he:

- supports incentives to increase exports and backed President Reagan's recent subsidized sales of grain to Russia. "It's not a subsidy to Russia; it's a subsidy to our farmers, so they can meet international competition."
- sees no way to avoid multi-million-dollar government support payments to big farmers and corporations. They must be involved in cutting output, McClure says.
- wants tighter standards for wheat sent overseas to maintain America's reputation for quality grain. "We need to have stricter standards and stricter inspection at the ports."

He also urged development of ethanol made from farm products. At the same time, he cannot halt the U.S. Department of Agriculture from conducting studies that show ethanol production "to be uneconomical. Ethanol is a frustration to me," he says.

"I will continue to pressure the Department of Labor to hold hearings in Idaho about wages paid to farm workers."

Hansen rips Darrington on day-care licensing

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Grant Hansen, Democratic candidate for the state Senate in District 24, says his opponent, Sen. Darrington, must be held accountable for killing the original Day-Care Licensing Bill for the second consecutive year, but Darrington says he feels day-care licensing is something that should be handled on a local, not statewide, level.

The original mandatory, enforceable, statewide day-care bill was drafted by a bipartisan task force after statewide hearings and was supported by most day-care center operators. As Senate Health and Welfare Committee chairman, Darrington allowed the bill to be gutted. Hansen charges in a press release issued last week.

"In helping to defeat the original bill, Sen. Darrington followed the arrogant leadership of James Risch, an extra-conservative Republican, and totally disregarded the wishes of the people of Idaho. I believe that there is overwhelming popular support for this legislation in the state," Hansen said.

Darrington on Monday defended his party's views on the subject. "We (Republicans) have always been willing to strike a compromise — local licensing — with the Democrats on this issue, but they won't agree," he said.

Idaho is the only state in the nation that does not require statewide day-care licensing.

Senate Republicans "thumbed their noses" at the Child-Care Coalition, a group of 39 Idaho organizations that were lobbying for the original Day-Care Licensing Bill, Hansen said. This coalition includes organizations such as the Idaho Parent-Teacher Association; the Idaho Nurses Association, Idaho Consumer Affairs Inc., and many local YMCAs and YWCAs.

"This is the typical liberals versus conservatives' issue — people who think the state government should get involved in every little

Indigents, jail, insurance to boost county budget $1 million

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The proposed 1986-87 Twin Falls County budget of $6.3 million is about $1 million more than the current budget, despite the fact that most county departments held the spending line on operations and salaries.

The reason for the increase in the proposed budget is due to increases in the indigent fund, jail operations and insurance costs — which the Board of County Commissioners describes as being forced on the county.

The commissioners will begin hearing public comment on the 1986-87 budget during the first week of September. To help explain the process, the commissioners have begun to distribute pamphlets on the proposed budget, which will take effect Oct. 1.

"What the public will find when looking at a copy of the proposed budget is a 57 percent increase in the poor fund over the present year, allocation of $639,000. The proposed indigent budget of $1.1 million accounts for almost 18 percent of the entire county budget for the upcoming fiscal year.

The commissioners previously said they expected little or no carryover from this year's poor fund, most of which paid medical expenses for the county's indigent people. The commissioners, in fact, considered borrowing money last month to keep the fund going until tax payments arrive in December, because the fund has been almost exhausted.

Because of the increasing number of indigent, the indigent fund director hired earlier this year, Commissioner Judy Felton said. Previously, the position was part-time.

Veteran commissioner and board Chairman Ann Cover added that this was the largest the indigent fund ever has been. "And it's getting worse," she said.

During the last quarter, the county had more than 20 claims for large or "catastrophic" indigent medical bills paying with a self-insurance program that helps counties pay the bills, Cover said. Catastrophic claims are those that exceed $10,000.

Another budget increase will take place in the Sheriff's Department. This year's budget was $757,236. But it was expanded by $125,000 last month to pay for the costs of transporting and boarding inmates in the jail population. The proposed 1987-88 sheriff's budget of $872,236 may even be higher, because county officials anticipate that the boarding bills will continue.

The proposed sheriff's budget will be about 10 percent of the entire county budget for the upcoming fiscal year.

Liability insurance cost the county $140,000 this fiscal year. Facing an increase in premiums, the commissioners have proposed budgeting $240,000 for the upcoming year. The aged jail, already the subject of several lawsuits, may result in an increase in rates because of the potential for more claims against the county, said Felton.

The addition of a second law clerk and additional secretary to serve 6th District judges will account for a proposed $300,000 increase in the District Court fund, for a total budget of $195,300.

Two district judges ordered the county this month to hire the extra help. The judges claimed that they needed the personnel to help with the court's operations.

The county's general expense budget also will be upped this coming year to $883,500. That's about $103,000 more than this year. The commissioners kicked in more money to fund several maintenance projects, such as a parking lot and roof repairs. Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said. The county also will be putting money aside to purchase property for landfills, because federal land will be unavailable in the future.

Most of the county's other departments will remain about the same in 1986-87, compared to the 1985-86 budget.

The biggest cut took place in the county's weed bureau, reduced earlier this year when a six-man department that offered a spray-on service to a one-man office. The proposed budget will be $50,000, compared to the current budget of $105,000.

Every penny of the proposed $6.3 million budget won't necessarily be spent, according to county officials.

The commissioners, for example, have budgeted $400,000 in hopes that the federal government will continue to provide revenue sharing. If the funds arrive but aren't budgeted, the county won't be able to spend the money, said the commissioners.

The county won't be devastated if revenue sharing is eliminated, as federal officials have threatened, Felton said. In the 1985-86 budget the commissioners attempted to climate the county to life with revenue sharing by shifting into the regular budget most of the items funded in the revenue sharing.

About $3 million in property taxes will be collected.

BLM sets vegetation burns

BURLEY — John Davis, Burley district manager of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, is reminding the public that recently announced open-flame fire restrictions apply to these lands administered by the Burley District.

Davis explained that the fire danger in the district is not considered to be a major concern at this time. However, he is concerned that the public will be confused by observing BLM employees setting fire to the public lands in the Burley District.

Hollister and Rogerson areas, despite the announced fire restrictions.

The Burley District is planning to use fire to restore undesired vegetation growing on these areas. The burning will be done only if the fire temperature, wind speed and direction, and vegetation moisture are at acceptable levels. Because such burning is managed by trained fire crews and these crews are composed of college students, little time remains to accomplish these burns prior to the crew members returning to college, Davis said.

Davis emphasized that the lack of applying fire restrictions to lands administered by the Burley District should not be interpreted that the vegetation in Southern Idaho will not burn. Great care must still be taken in the use of open flame throughout the area. Burley District employees will ignite fires only under proper and safe conditions, with plenty of fire fighting equipment standing by on the area.

Voc-Rehab board meets today

TWIN FALLS — A quarterly meeting of the Idaho Division of Vocational Rehabilitation and Facilities Advisory Board will be held in Twin Falls. These advisory sessions to be held on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho, beginning at 8:30 a.m. in the Voc-Tech Building 'D'.

The Advisory Board is composed of members from all geographic regions of Idaho, and convenes to lead guidance and direction to the Vocational Rehabilitation Program in Idaho.

George J. Pelletier Jr., administrator, will brief the board on the status of the division's new Independent Living Rehabilitation program — a program that can provide the services needed to allow a severely disabled person to live and function more independently in family or community.

Services which may be available include counseling and guidance services, attendant care, transportation, interpreter services for the deaf, recreational activities, technological aids and devices, and modifications to any space to serve disabled people.

Burley couple hurt in rollover

WEENEDELL — A Burley couple suffered injuries and their 1983 sedan was demolished in a one-vehicle rollover Monday afternoon on Interstate Highway 84.

Cpl. Doug McCall of the Idaho State Police said the accident occurred about 3:25 p.m., two miles east of Weenedell.

Harold Rowley, 50, of Burley was driving the west-bound vehicle when he apparently fell asleep, McCall said. The car left the roadway on the right side, went into a ditch, then overcorrected. This caused the vehicle to go into a skid, crossing the roadway and rolling over 1 1/2 times. It came to rest on its top in the median, McCall said.

Rowley was wearing a seatbelt and escaped with minor injuries. His wife Jeanne, 42, was not wearing her seatbelt and was seriously injured. The couple was enroute to Mountain Home, McCall said.

No citations have been issued, but the investigation is continuing.

Park concession goods stolen

TWIN FALLS — A burglary at the Shoshone Falls park concession stand resulted in several hundred dollars loss Friday night, Twin Falls city police reported Monday.

Someone broke into the building between 11:30 p.m. and 7:30 a.m. Friday, officers said. Several cartons of candy and cigarettes were taken, along with more than 40 T-shirts and sweat shirts. Eight belt buckles and $25 in cash were also missing.

Police were also investigating a burglary at Don's Kawasaki, 361 4th Ave. W. A break-in was discovered Thursday by the business owners and employees. Police said someone removed a snowmobile valued at $5,295 from a fenced area.

children, Hansen says.

"They (day-care center operators) feel that it will provide greater respect and credibility for the service they provide and will give the parents greater peace of mind and reassurance about the safety and well-being of their children," Hansen says.

The cost of the program should be paid through licensing fees and the program should be administered by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, he says.

"When elected, I will work unceasingly for the passage of this urgent and important legislation," Hansen says.

Police investigate robberies

BURLEY — Burley Police Chief Leman Messley said Monday that his department is still looking for a Hispanic man who robbed the United Oil Co. service station at 560 Overland Ave. last Thursday night.

Messley said the man wore a nylon stocking mask and entered the station alone, about 7 p.m., armed with a handgun. He took about $200 in cash from the attendant, Messley said. The man left in a vehicle. Police have not seen the man or the vehicle since, and search efforts proved futile.

The robbery was still under investigation Monday, the police chief said.

Messley also reported Monday a liquor store burglary that occurred at 1300 Hansen Ave. Saturday night. Three quart bottles and two half-gallon bottles of whiskey were taken, he said. Nothing else in the building was bothered.

Crusader nominated for Nobel award

By CAM ROSSIE
The Associated Press

MONTERREY, Mexico — In the 11 years since her son was detained by police and never heard from again, Rosario Ibarra de Piedra has become Mexico's most prominent human rights crusader, and a thorn in the government's side.

Ibarra, 59, has been nominated for the 1986 Nobel Peace Prize, a nomination she says will help pressure the Mexican government on the issue of "desaparecidos," or missing people.

Her son, Jesus, was a 19-year-old medical student in this northern industrial city and a member of an armed student communist league when, according to other newspaper reports, he was detained by Nuevo Leon state judicial police in April 1975.

He has not been seen since by family or friends. Ibarra believes her son and hundreds of other desaparecidos are held in clandestine jails somewhere in Mexico.

ROSARIO IBARRA
Seeking missing son

The National Front Against Repression, an organization founded by Ibarra, says there are more than 100 known political prisoners in Mexico and 470 people whose disappearances are based on politics.

The government denies holding political prisoners, saying all its prisoners were convicted of common crimes, and denies involvement in disappearances. It says those who are missing have changed their names, gone underground or left the country.

In its 1985 report, the human rights organization Amnesty International said Mexican authorities do violate human rights, especially in rural areas. The London-based group said it remains concerned "about recurring instances of arrest without warrant and secret detention of political suspects."

The U.S. State Department, in its annual human rights report, acknowledges the allegations about missing people in Mexico and says Mexican government efforts to investigate 11 recent cases proved fruitless.

In an interview in her Monterrey home, Ibarra said she learned through an April 30, 1975, story in the daily Monterrey newspaper, El Norte that her son had been detained by police for his involvement in the opposition group.

Police came to the family home and told her Jesus was a leftist guerrilla and was in custody, she said. "Well, take him before a judge and you can accuse him. But they never gave him a chance."

After Jesus disappeared, Ibarra said she followed the legal routes available to try to locate him.

"I went to all the city and state police offices. They said they didn't know anything. The governor told me not to bother him," she said. She also met with then-President Luis Echeverria in Mexico City, again without result.

Ibarra said she notified newspaper advertisements from other women appealing to the president for help in finding their children. In 1977, she and other women established the National Committee to Defend Political Prisoners, Exiles, Exiles and Missing Persons, and two years later she formed what has become the National Front Against Repression.

Study says assaults decline if reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women who report abusive husbands to the police are less likely to be attacked again within the next six months, according to a Bureau of Justice Statistics report released Sunday.

The report said a National Crime Survey found that about 41 percent of the married women who were attacked by their husbands or ex-husbands but did not call the police were assaulted again within an average of six months, while 15 percent of the women who alerted police were assaulted again.

"I believe that this is a most provocative finding and should be reflected upon by everyone interested in the subject of spouse abuse," said Steven R. Schlessinger, director of the bureau, a Justice Department agency.

The report also found that nearly half of the incidents of domestic violence disclosed in the survey were not reported to the police.

About 49 percent of the women who did not report their attack to the police said they considered the crime a personal matter, while 12 percent said they feared retaliation.

The survey also found no evidence that women who called the police and were attacked again suffered more serious physical injury in the subsequent assault.

About 128,000 members of some 60,000 households across the country were interviewed twice a year from 1978 to 1982 for the survey.

An estimated 70 percent of the domestic violence reported in the survey was committed by a woman's husband, ex-husband, boyfriend or ex-boyfriend.

About two-thirds of the incidents were classified in most states as "simple assault," which is a misdemeanor, according to the report. One-third would fall into the category of "rape," "robbery" or "aggravated assault," which are felonies.

The extent of the victim's injury is not critical factor in police decide how to classify a crime. More important is whether a weapon is present, the report said.

Second opinion needed on woman's implants

DEAR ABBY: I am beginning to think I am going crazy. I'm 38 years old (married) and have had three breast implant operations — now I need a fourth. I'll start at the beginning:

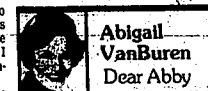

First, I wanted to increase the size of my breasts. Well, the plastic surgeon showed me the various sizes, and I am sure he used bigger implants than the ones I picked out because I came out looking so top-heavy, I hated myself. I couldn't wait until my doctor redid the operation. (By the way, he is a board-certified reconstructive plastic surgeon, has a good reputation and is not cheap.)

Disappointment No. 2: For some reason, he replaced the too-large implants with ones that were too small. I knew right away they weren't what I ordered, so I had a third operation.

This one has me looking lopsided. My left breast is about four inches higher than my right. When I told my doctor he would have to do it over again, he refused, saying, "I'm sorry, I don't think I can please you."

Now what kind of a doctor is he? And what should I do about this situation? I certainly can't go around looking the way I am.

— LOPSIDED IN CALIFORNIA
DEAR LOPSIDED: I think you should see another plastic surgeon for an evaluation, or possibly some corrective surgery. If you don't know one, inquire at the Cosmetic Surgery Information Service, 860 Via de Paz, Suite B2, Pacific Palisades, Calif. 90272. The national hotline is: 1-800-221-9308. In California, call 1-800-824-3042. Good luck.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I'm a receptionist in a busy beauty salon, and this is my beef: When a client who has an appointment comes into the shop, I always say, "Please have a seat; I will tell your operator that you are here."

Invariably, she says, "Oh, that's all right, and proceeds to walk straight through to find her operator. She then finds an unoccupied shampoo chair or one where the operator is engaged in conversation — disregarding the fact that her operator is working on another patron.

At this time, she starts to take the patron's hair for the operator's time and full attention and to rude and presumptuous for another person to burst in and interrupt the operator's time and attention. I don't rightly belong to speak for this letter. Abby, Receptionists everywhere will be grateful.

DEAR DESK GIRL: Find room? I'll make room. Now a word to whom it may concern: Madame, if you see yourself in the above picture, color yourself a blushing pink, and please meet your ways.

DEAR ABBY: A lady wrote to say that her family chilled her because she accidentally called her brother's third wife by his second wife's name.

A slip of the tongue does occur. I know. Mine was much more serious. I was married for 10 years the first time. We were divorced, then I married for the second time. On our wedding night, after we had made love, my husband kissed me tenderly. Then I called him by my first husband's name.

For the next eight hours all I got was the cold shoulder. The next morning he told me that all was forgiven.

BLM sets vegetation burns

BURLEY — John Davis, Burley district manager of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management, is reminding the public that recently announced open-flame fire restrictions do not apply to those lands administered by the Burley District.

Davis explained that the fire danger in the district is not considered of the nature to warrant such a restriction. Also he is confident that the public will be contented by observing BLM employees setting fire to the public lands in the Hollister and Rogerson areas, despite the announced fire restrictions.

The Burley District is planning to use fire to remove undesired vegetation growing on these areas. The burning will be done only if the temperature, wind speed and direction, and vegetation moisture are at acceptable levels. Because such burning is managed by trained fire crews and these crews are composed of college students, little time remains to accomplish these burns prior to the crew members returning to college, Davis said.

Davis emphasized that the lack of applying the fire restrictions to lands administered by the Burley District should not be interpreted that the vegetation in Southern Idaho will not burn. Great care must still be taken in the use of open flame throughout the area. Burley District employees will ignite fires only under proper and safe conditions, with plenty of fire fighting equipment standing by on the area.

Voc-Rehab board meets today

TWIN FALLS — A quarterly meeting of the Idaho Division of Vocational Rehabilitation and Facilities Advisory Board will be held in Twin Falls on Tuesday, with sessions to be held on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho, beginning at 8:30 a.m. in the Voc-Tech Building 'D'.

The Advisory Board is composed of members from all geographic regions of Idaho, and convenes to lend guidance and direction to the Vocational Rehabilitation Program in Idaho.

George J. Polster Jr., administrator, will brief the board on the status of the division's new Independent Living Rehabilitation program — a program that can provide the services needed to allow a severely disabled person to live and function more adequately in family or community.

Services which may be available include counseling and guidance services, attendant care, transportation; interpreter services for the deaf, recreational activities, technological aids and devices, and modifications to any space to serve disabled people.

Burley couple hurt in roll-over

WENDELL — A Burley couple suffered injuries and their 1963 sedan was demolished in a one-vehicle rollover Monday afternoon on Interstate Highway 84, near Wendell.

Cpl. Doug McFall of the Idaho State Police said the accident occurred about 3:25 p.m., two miles west of Wendell.

Harold Rowley, 50, of Burley was driving the west-bound vehicle when he apparently fell asleep, McFall said. The car left the roadway on the right side, waked Rowley who then overcorrected. This caused the vehicle to go into a skid, crossing the roadway and rolling over 1 1/2 times. It came to rest on its top in the median, McFall said.

Rowley was wearing a seatbelt and escaped with minor injuries. His wife Jennie, 62, was not wearing a seatbelt and was more seriously injured. The couple was enroute to Mountain Home, McFall said. No citations have been issued, but the investigation is continuing.

have to be raised to fund the county budget. The remainder of the budget will be funded by the county's other funding sources, such as fees. For example, the misdemeanor probation program for adults pays for itself through fees. The county fair — with a proposed budget of $387,500 — supports itself with revenue from the fair, with the exception of a $30,000 allocation from county taxes.

The Shoshone Regional Medical Center, a county hospital, is listed separately because it is totally self-supporting.

Found

Tracks of the missing people were found Sunday afternoon and it appeared they had hiked back toward their campsite, crossed their trail, and headed back toward East Pass Creek, McClure said.

Two of the two of the South-Center County searchers returned to Mackay about midnight, while two other searchers, Dale Lords and Ed Adams, continued the search, hiking on down the East Pass Creek drainage.

The District family planned to return to Filer Monday, Leaton said.

Both were taken from the scene by ambulance. The officer said they were transported to St. Benedict's Family Medical Center, but a nursing supervisor there said they had no record of the two. They could not be located in Twin Falls or Burley hospitals.

Police investigate robberies

BURLEY — Burley Police Chief Lerman Messley said Monday that his department is still looking for a Hispanic man who robbed the United Oil Co. service station at 560 Overland Ave. last Thursday night.

Messley said the man wore a nylon stocking mask and entered the station alone, about 7 p.m., armed with a handgun. He took about $200 in cash from the attendant, Messley said. The man left in a vehicle. Police have not seen the man or the vehicle since, and search efforts proved futile.

The robbery was still under investigation Monday, the police chief said.

Messley also reported Monday a liquor store burglary that occurred at 1200 Hansen Ave. Saturday night. Three quart bottles and two half-gallon bottles of whiskey were taken, he said. Nothing else in the building was bothered.

Park concession goods stolen

TWIN FALLS — A burglary at the Shoshone Falls park concession stand resulted in several hundred dollars loss Friday night, Twin Falls city police reported Monday.

Someone broke into the building between 11:30 p.m. and 7:30 a.m. Friday, officers said. Several cartons of candy and cigarettes were taken, along with more than 40 T-shirts and sweat shirts. Eight belt buckles and $25 in cash were also missing.

Police were also investigating a burglary at Don's Kawasaki, 361 4th Ave. W. A break-in was discovered Thursday by the "business owners" and employees. Police said someone removed a snowmobile valued at $5,295 from a fenced area.

Crusader nominated for Nobel award

By CAM ROSSIE
The Associated Press

MONTERREY, Mexico — In the 11 years since her son was detained by police and never heard from again, Rosario Ibarra de Piedra has become Mexico's most prominent human rights crusader, and a thorn in the government's side.

Ibarra, 59, has been nominated for the 1986 Nobel Peace Prize, a nomination she says will help pressure the Mexican government on the issue of "desaparecidos," or missing people.

Her son, Jesus, was a 19-year-old medical student in this northern industrial city and a member of an armed student communist league when, according to Monterrey newspapers, he was detained by Nuevo Leon state judicial police in April 1975.

He has not been seen since by family or friends. Ibarra believes her son and hundreds of other desaparecidos are held in clandestine jails somewhere in Mexico.

ROSARIO IBARRA
Seeking missing son

The National Front Against Repression, an organization founded by Ibarra, says there are more than 100 known political prisoners in Mexico and 479 people whose disappearances are based on politics.

The government denies holding political prisoners, saying all its prisoners were convicted of common crimes, and denies involvement in disappearances. It says those who are missing have changed their names, gone underground or left the country.

In its 1985 report, the human rights organization Amnesty International said Mexican authorities do not reveal names, especially in violation of human rights, and that it remains concerned "about recurring — instances of arrest without warrant and secret detention of political suspects."

The U.S. State Department, in its annual human rights report, acknowledges the allegations about missing people in Mexico and says Mexican government efforts to investigate 11 recent cases proved fruitless.

In an interview in her Monterrey home, Ibarra said she learned through an April 30, 1975, story in the daily Monterrey newspaper, El Norte that her son had been detained by police for his involvement in the opposition group.

Police came to the family home and told her Jesus was in custody, she said. "I said, 'Well, take him before a judge and you can accuse him.' But they never gave him a chance."

After Jesus disappeared, Ibarra said she followed the legal routes available to try to locate him.

"I went to all the city and state police offices. They said they didn't know anything. The governor told me not to bother him," she said. She also, met, with then-President Luis Echeverria in Mexico City, again without result.

Second opinion needed on woman's implants

DEAR ABBY: I am beginning to think I am going crazy. I'm 39 years old (married) and have had bigger implants than the ones I picked out because I came out looking so top-heavy. I hated myself. I couldn't wait until my doctor redd the operation. (By the way, he is a board-certified _____ reconstructive plastic surgeon. Has a good reputation and is not cheap.)

Disappointment No. 2: For some reason, he replaced the too-large implants with ones that were too small. I knew right away they weren't what I ordered, so I had a third operation.

This one has me looking lopsided. My left breast is about four inches higher than my right. When I told my doctor he would have to do it over again, he refused, saying, "I'm sorry, I don't think I can please you."

Now what kind of a doctor is he? And what should I do about this situation? I certainly can't go around looking the way I am.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a receptionist in a busy beauty salon, and this is my beef: When a client who has an appointment comes into the shop, I always say, "Please have a seat; I will tell your operator that you are here."

Invariably, she says, "Oh, that's all right" and proceeds to walk straight through to be near her operator. She then finds an unoccupied shampoo chair or one under a hair dryer and engages her operator in conversation — disregarding the fact that her operator is working on another patron.

At this shop, we start from the patron has plans for the operator's time and full attention, and the rude and presumptuous for another operator to burst in and usurp the operator's time and attention. I hope you find room for this letter. Abby. Receptionists everywhere will be grateful.

Study says assaults decline if reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women who report abusive husbands to the police are less likely to be attacked again within the next six months, according to a Bureau of Justice Statistics report released Sunday.

The report said a National Crime Survey found that about 41 percent of the married women who were attacked by their husbands or ex-husbands but did not call the police were assaulted again within an average of six months, while 15 percent of the women who alerted police were assaulted again.

"I believe that this is a most provocative finding and should be reflected upon by everyone interested in the subject of spouse abuse," said Steven R. Schlesinger, director of the bureau, a Justice Department agency.

The report also found that nearly half of the incidents of domestic violence disclosed in the survey were not reported to the police.

crime a personal matter, while 12 percent said they feared retaliation. The survey also found no evidence that women who called the police and were attacked again suffered more serious physical injury in the subsequent assault.

About 128,000 members of some 60,000 households across the country were interviewed twice a year from 1978 to 1982 for the survey. An estimated 70 percent of the domestic violence reported in the survey was committed by a woman's husband, ex-husband, boyfriend or ex-boyfriend.

About two-thirds of the incidents would be classified in most states as "simple assault," which is a misdemeanor, according to the report. One-third would fall into the category of "rape," "robbery" or "aggravated assault," which are felonies.

"The extent of the victim's injury is not a critical factor when police decide how to classify a crime. More important is whether a weapon is present, the report said.

Fire crews gaining control of northeastern Oregon fires

By The Associated Press

Firefighters gained more ground Monday on dozens of forest and brush fires that have charred northeastern Oregon, leading officials to declare most of the blazes contained or nearly contained.

Only two blazes of more than 10,000 acres remained out of control after a potentially devastating weekend lightning storm failed to spark a large number of new fires. Most of the lightning was confined to the northeastern region of the state.

"If the wind dies down, by golly, we're going to put a hammerlock on this thing in a few days, we think," said Ron DeHart, a spokesman for the U.S. Forest Service in Enterprise.

Two hundred fifty-four fires were still burning in Oregon on Monday, down from 313 Sunday, said Jim Fisher, a spokesman for the Oregon Forestry Department.

"Things continue to look improved today," he said. "We're estimating about 50 percent containment on all fires in northeastern Oregon."

The largest blazes were the Pumpkin Creek fire, which had burned about 11,000 acres three miles east of the tiny community of Innaha near the Idaho border, and the combined Joseph Canyon-Starvation Ridge fires, which had burned a total of 19,100 acres about 25 miles north of Enterprise, Fisher said.

The Pumpkin Creek fire, 45 percent contained Monday, was burning on steep terrain within the Hells Canyon National Recreation Area.

Gov. Vic Atiyeh on Monday declined a request by the Oregon Cattlemen's Association to close all range and forest land east of the Cascade Mountains to recreational activity.

"The recreationists have not been the problem," said Denny Miles, Atiyeh's press secretary. "The problem has been with lightning."

Miles also said the governor lacked the authority to impose such a ban.

Fisher said the public's awareness of the extreme fire danger in Eastern Oregon was evident by the few reports of human-caused fires this summer. A ban on open fires in the area, imposed Saturday, remains in effect.

On Aug. 10, lightning triggered the latest round of range and forest fires. Within the three fire-prone areas in northeastern Oregon, 74,000 acres have been burned since that date, Fisher said.

At the Pendleton post, 88 fires were reported 80 percent contained by early Monday. A total of 7,800 acres had been burned.

The 135 fires reported by the Enterprise post were 42 percent contained and had charred 60,150 acres, Fisher said.

Border fire almost contained

By The Associated Press

Firefighters were near to containing a 1,200-acre brush fire near the Utah-Idaho border Monday, one of two new weekend blazes that scorched 2,700 acres of grasslands and juniper trees, authorities said.

Pete Hansen, manager of the Interagency Fire Center in Salt Lake City, said an army of about 30 firefighters expected to contain flames in Rich County by late Monday.

"We'll be finishing up on it today with a little luck," he said of the blaze, located about 10 miles southwest of Randolph near Bear Lake.

Meantime, a 1,500-acre grass fire was burning in Tooele County 5 miles north of Lookout Pass, but officials were letting the fire burn.

Hansen said the cause of the blaze, being watched by 20 firefighters Monday, still was under investigation, but it is suspected to have been man-caused.

The fire, on the western side of the Onaqui Mountains in the Davis Forks area near Dugway, was on a Bureau of Land Management "observation area," a patch of ground that is burned clean periodically to improve the range.

No containment line was projected for the fire, but Hansen said crews had it well in hand.

"It's just a matter of getting it corralled and cooled off to where you can handle it," he said.

No injuries or structure damage were reported in either blaze.

The Rich County fire was sparked Saturday when a pickup truck left by three bow hunters in a remote section of Rich County burst into flames.

Sheriff Thad Mattsen said it was unclear why the truck caught fire as the hunters walked away Saturday, but he said the flames probably were caused by fuel leaking on a hot engine.

"It probably just happened to overheat going into the hills," he said. "It just started burning and there wasn't anything they could do about it."

Mattsen said the fire threatened a stand of U.S. Forest Service timber on Sunday and came within a mile of several homes, but firefighters using bulldozers were able to keep the flames away.

Section opens to complete Interstate 80

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The last section of Interstate 80, the nation's first east-west freeway to be finished, was opened late Sunday, the Utah Department of Transportation says.

Opening of the airport-collector portion of I-80 here culminated the 28-year project. Other east-west interstates — I-90 across the northern United States and I-10 in the south — are still under construction, officials said.

UDOT crews had planned to open the last portion of I-80 at 6 a.m. MDT Sunday, and authorities actually announced the road was opened. However, a gosepy paint used to stripe the road clogged up a machine and officials had to retract the announcement. Finally, at 7 p.m., the section was opened.

Despite the 13-hour delay, the section still was opened six days before the official dedication on Friday and almost two months before the original projected completion date.

The contractor was offered a $13,000 per day bonus incentive for finishing early, officials said.

Delay Dye, the project engineer, said Sunday's delay was due to a thick epoxy-based paint jamming the striping machine in 90-degree-plus temperatures over the weekend.

There are 194.4 miles of I-80 running from Evanston, Wyo., to Wendover, Nev. It has cost approximately $1.76 billion per mile of road. Construction began in 1958.

Workers drag tarpaulin over 850,000 bushels of corn stored outside an elevator at West Jefferson, Ohio

Grain glut goes onto ground

By ROBERT LEE ZIMMER
The Associated Press

CERRO GORDO, Ill. — The nation's grain elevators are bulging, another huge harvest is coming, prices are falling and farmers are willing to take their crops almost anywhere but to market.

Near this central Illinois town, earthen walls covered with a tarp will hold corn in a temporary storage bin the size of five football fields. A few miles away, soybeans will fill old wire corn cribs lined in plastic.

Across the country, river barges, railroad cars, caves, machine sheds, chicken houses, barns and plastic sacks all are likely to be full of grain this fall.

Some simply will be piled on the ground by the time farmers finish harvesting 8.32 billion bushels of corn and 1.96 billion bushels of soybeans.

"We'll not only have to find room for much of the 1986 crop, we'll have to continue storing the crops of earlier years," said Donald Paarberg, a retired agricultural economist at Purdue University.

Many commercial elevators and conventional grain bins on farms around the nation are still full of the record 1985 crops, and "there may be no home" for the excess of 2.5 billion bushels expected after the harvest, said Dean Brown of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

"We do not want our customers to be forced to sell at a time when prices may hit 10- or 20-year lows," said elevator owner Lynn Clarkson of Cerro Gordo. "That would take a horrendous bite out of their income when they are already on the ropes."

Clarkson this year decided to create makeshift storage by bulldozing 3-foot-high dirt walls, then lining and covering the sprawling pile with plastic. This dirt "bin" next to one of his permanent grain elevators at nearby Oakley, will hold 3.2 million bushels of corn. The expected construction cost of 18-20 cents a bushel is far less than a price of up to $1.25 to build upright steel tanks.

Farmer Jim Garvey of Cerro Gordo found that for 10 cents a bushel, he could line his old cribs with plastic and wrap them with cables to secure 3,400 bushels of soybeans in each. The 13 tall cribs once were used for ear corn.

"Most of the elevators are full and you wouldn't want to sell in today's market," said Garvey. "This way I can put my crop under government loan, get the money, store the crop. At harvest time, the government offers farmers loans that are secured by their stored grain. The loan rate often is higher than the market price for grain. If commodity prices later rise, farmers may repay the loans and sell their grain. However, if commodity prices remain low, farmers may forfeit their grain to the government and keep the loan money. That adds to the huge grain surplus and, along with relatively weak demand and foreign competition, helps hold prices down.

Commodities are worth so little now that "it's shocking," said Bill Wilson, public relations manager of the U.S. Feed Grains Council, a trade group. He said, however, he expects grain sales to pick up by the end of the year.

In the meantime, farmers and grain elevator owners who can afford it have added permanent storage units this year.

"All of a sudden, we had three months to do two years of building and we couldn't do it," said Jack Teagarden, sales manager of Quad Structures Construction and Equipment Co. in Des Moines, Iowa.

His company, which sells large concrete storage bins to grain companies, turned down some projects that had to be completed by Sept. 1. Chuck Studnicka of Illinois FS Inc.

Factory use rate declines to 3-year low

By ROBERT FURLLOW
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a new sign of economic weakness, the government said Monday that U.S. factories operated at just 72.2 percent of capacity in July, marking the third straight decline and lowest rate since 1983.

"The manufacturing sector is doing miserably," said David Wyss, chief financial economist for Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., after the Federal Reserve Board reported July's 0.2 percentage point decline.

He and other analysts said the figure could continue to drop in coming months, pulled down by such factors as the steel strike and anti-investment influences of the big tax legislation approved over the weekend.

Still, no one predicted that a new recession is on the horizon.

In fact, Michael Evans, president of the economist in Washington, said the economy's sluggishness in recent quarters has actually made a recession less likely.

A burst of growth, he suggested, might have aroused inflation fears that would have caused the Federal Reserve Board to pull back on the availability of money to the economy, thereby perhaps triggering a recession.

The new factory-use figures, however, were hardly cause for celebration.

In July, the report said, auto-plant use declined 3.4 percentage points — to 76.1 percent of capacity — nearly wiping out the 4.2 point gain of the previous month. And Evans said it was unlikely there would be a pickup for auto in coming months, partly because some in the industry are wary of repeating last year's mistake when they increased production on the assumption the economy in general would grow strongly this year.

There were also significant declines for factories involved in producing instruments, petroleum products and rubber and plastic products and smaller declines for most other sectors, the report said.

Gains for two categories — primary metals and electrical banks, is the most dramatic signal it can make of its desire to push interest rates in general lower to stimulate economic growth.

It was the third time this year that the discount rate has been reduced, and many analysts believe it is only a question of time before a fourth cut, to 5.5 percent, is made.

Some analysts predict the cut will come within the next two weeks, but other analysts said the Fed is more likely to wait until September to give Japan and possibly West Germany a chance to reduce their discount rates as well.

"The dominant position on the board is that there is still room for further interest rate declines based on a very weak economy," said David Jones, economist with Aurbrey G. Lanston & Co., a government securities dealer.

Various business barometers have been flashing signals of weakness in recent months.

The government on Monday, for instance, reported that U.S. factories operated at just 72.2 percent of capacity in July, the third straight decline and the lowest

Blue-chip buying marks mixed trade

By CHET CURRIER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stock prices were mixed Monday in a session marked by buying concentrated in a few blue-chip issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down about 8 points in the earlier going, was up 13.92 at 1,869.52 by the close. The average climbed 72.98 points last week.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange slowed to 112.84 million shares from 123.49 million Friday.

Analysts said traders were struggling to sort out the economic and financial implications of the final version of the tax-overhaul bill approved over the weekend by a House-Senate conference committee.

There were no major surprises for Wall Street in the measure, which is expected to become law in something very close to its present form.

Gainers among the blue chips included International Business Machines, up 2 1/4 at 135 3/4; Procter & Gamble, up 1 1/4 at 78 1/4; General Motors, up 3/4 at 71 1/4; and International Paper, up 1 1/4 at 68 1/4.

Energy stocks, which were strong late last week, turned mixed. Exxon rose 1/2 to 63 1/4 and Chevron 3/4 to 43 1/4, but Atlantic Richfield dropped 1/4 to 55 1/4 and Occidental Petroleum was down 1/4 at 27 1/4.

Precious-metals issues gave ground as the price of gold dropped $7.10 to $376.40 on the Commodity Exchange in New York. ASA Ltd. led, lost 1 to 31 1/4; Homestake Mining 3/4 to 22;

Campbell Red Lake Mines 1 to 17 1/4, and Dome Mines 3/4 to 6.

Jet America, traded on the American Stock Exchange, climbed 3/4 to 4. A Delta Air Lines subsidiary is climbing a $4.25-a-share tender offer for the company.

Delta shares dropped 1/2 to 49 1/4.

Cetus Corp., which reported lower quarterly earnings, fell 1 1/2 to 31 1/4 in the over-the-counter market.

In the daily tally on the Big Board, declining issues slightly outnumbered advances. The exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks edged up 10 to 142.32.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in the over-the-counter market, totaled 136.38 million shares.

Analysts think Fed will cut key rates

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve Board will soon slash a key lending rate for the fourth time this year in yet another effort to stimulate a listless economy, many analysts predicted Monday.

These economists contend that the nation's central bank will act because of near-recession conditions in American manufacturing — and farm for that matter — and because Republican administration worried about the November elections.

If the analysts are right, it will mean that a variety of interest rates, including mortgage rates, will be headed lower in coming months.

Fed policymakers will meet behind closed doors Tuesday to assess the current state of the economy and to plot future monetary strategy. On July 10, two days after the last meeting of these officials, known as the Federal Open Market Committee, the central bank cut its discount rate by one-half percentage point to 6 percent.

A cut in the discount rate, the Fed's primary tool, would allow banks to borrow money from the Fed at a lower rate, which would then be passed on to consumers in the form of lower interest rates on loans.

Various business barometers have been flashing signals of weakness in recent months.

The government on Monday, for instance, reported that U.S. factories operated at just 72.2 percent of capacity in July, the third straight decline and the lowest

Declining prices for silver, oil and natural gas

Sunshine Mining posts quarterly loss

BOISE (AP) — Sunshine Mining Co., under pressure from continuing declines in prices for silver, oil and natural gas, has reported a second-quarter loss of $25 million.

The company said the unaudited loss for the quarter ending June 30 was $25.03 million, or $2.22 per share higher than the $13.74 million loss reported in the same quarter of last year.

After taking into account obligations it has to preferred stockholders, the second-quarter loss is applicable to common shares to $28.53 million, the company said.

For the first six months of this year, Sunshine lost $44.07 million, 163.9 percent more than the $16.70 million lost during the first half of 1985.

Sunshine is based in Dallas and has an operations headquarters in Boise. The precious metals and energy company owns the Sunshine Mine in Idaho's Panhandle. The mine was closed indefinitely in April after workers balked at proposed cuts in wages and benefits, estimated by the United Steelworkers Union at 35 percent.

In June, President G. Michael Boswell told stockholders the company expected its losses in 1986 to match last year's net loss of $57.6 million. Boswell cited dim prospects for silver, oil and natural gas for the anticipated losses.

The company said Friday that silver prices declined to an average of $5.51 per troy ounce for the first six months and $5.17 in the second quarter, from $6.18 and $6.30 in the same periods of last year.

Because of the price declines, Sunshine will suspend mining at its Sixteen-to-One Mine near Silver Peak, Nev., within a few weeks, the company said. Workers will be used to produce gold ore from the company's adjacent Weepah Mine, Sunshine said.

Average oil and gas prices Sunshine received in the second quarter were $12.19 per barrel and $1.80 per million cubic feet, respectively, in the same periods of 1985, the company was paid $25.80 a barrel and $1.78 per million cubic feet for its oil and gas.

The company said it has received exchange offers for 72 percent of its silver-indexed bonds. In June, Sunshine announced the exchange offer for $115 million of the bonds, hoping to reduce interest costs and increase its financial flexibility. The offer expires Aug. 21.

"The high level of success we have achieved on the ... exchange offers, combined with substantial progress in restructuring our bank debt ... should provide the company with the necessary financial and operating flexibility to ride out this trough in prices for our principal products," Boswell said.

How much are you worth? The answer could be a surprise

At this late stage in our aging business cycle, you may feel painfully squeezed financially — not broke, but approaching that point and worrying about your debt, your family's future, your own standards of values.

But I'll wager that even at this critical point in your life, if you figured out your "net worth," you would be startled, perhaps astonished, to discover how much richer you are than you think.

Let's try to calculate your net worth. It'll take time and thinking. But it won't cost you anything except three sheets of blank paper and a pencil. Mark your first sheet "assets" and list:

- 1) The amount of money you have in checking and savings accounts, in savings and loans, money market funds, a credit union, in time deposits, in cash on hand, in a strongbox at home or elsewhere, the like.

- 2) The cash value of your life insurance (the amount you actually could borrow back today on re-quests)
- 3) The cash value of your U.S. savings bonds (not the maturity value but what you would get if you cashed in the bonds today).
- 4) The amount of cash of its equivalent you could withdraw now from your profit sharing, employee savings, retirement programs, etc. A rough calculation will do, says Frederick I. Sandstrom, senior vice president of the Fleet Financial Group, headquartered in Rhode Island.

- 5) The current market value of stocks and mutual fund shares you may own (not the purchase price, but what you'd get if you sold them tomorrow). And the current market value of other securities you may own — Federal government, municipal or corporate bonds and, investments, such as mortgages you have extended to others.
- 6) The price you would get if you offered your car (as a used-car dealer or sold privately) for cash right now. Be honest. Write yourself on this. Also, if you own your boat, motorcycle, airplane, trailer, snowmobile, the like, do the same.

gerate your sales profits.

- 7) The net value of your household goods — furniture, rugs, appliances, TV, stereo, linen, silverware. Make your own conservative estimates, then slash your conservative estimates by 75 percent and you'll be safe.
- 8) The market value of your other personal assets — jewelry, paintings, furs, rare books, art objects, coins, stamps, antiques, clothes, etc. Make your own conservative estimates, slash by 75 percent and you'll be safe.
- 9) The price you would get if you sold out your investment in any unincorporated business, farm or other ventures.
- 10) Any amounts of money other responsible people (emphasis on "responsible") owe you.
- 11) A conservative estimate of the value of any other asset you can think of.

- 12) The price you would get if you put your house and land, summer house, or other real estate you own on the market today or tomorrow. Get a conservative estimate from a reliable real estate agent.

Add the totals.

Take a second sheet of blank paper, mark it "liabilities," and list:

- 1) The total amount you owe on your mortgage or mortgages and on your car or cars, boat or boats, motorcycle and so on.
- 2) The total you owe on installment debts, charge accounts, credit cards, other personal debts and bills.
- 3) The taxes you owe that have not been withheld.
- 4) Whatever sums you've committed for college or other types of education.

- 5) Any other liability you can think of.

Add the totals.

Take a third sheet of paper, mark it "net worth," and:

Simply subtract the total on your second sheet from the total on the first sheet. Your net worth is the difference between what you own and what you owe — as will be immediately apparent from these figures.

Aren't you unexpectedly pleased to discover how much you are worth? No other nation in the world approaches the "norm" in the United States.

Goo Goo candy bars 'Dumb name,' but acclaimed in South

By CHARLES HILLINGER
Los Angeles Times

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — "Sure, it's the dumbest name ever heard. But it's one people never forget," insisted Jimmy Spradley, 29, president of Standard Candy Co. He was talking about his company's principal product — Goo Goo candy bars.

For 74 years, Goo Goos have been acclaimed as "the South's favorite candy bar," but to this day the confection is little known outside the area. Spradley is trying to change that. Since becoming president of the Nashville candy company four years ago, he has watched gross sales rise from $2.7 million in 1981 to $15 million in 1985.

"But we have a long way to go. We're still an insignificant candy maker next to the industry's two giants, M&M-Mars and Hershey," Spradley said.

About 85 percent of sales are in Tennessee and bordering states, he said. "But if you look hard enough, you'll find Goo Goos being sold in all 50 states. Not many, but they're out there."

Many have surmised that the 'goo' in Goo Goo stands for Grand Ole Opry, because Standard has sponsored radio broadcasts from the Nashville country music "thriving for years." But the Opry began in 1925, and Goo Goo Cluster — a round bar made of caramel, marshmallow, roasted peanuts and milk chocolate — has been manufactured since its invention by candy maker Howell Campbell in 1912.

Campbell is thought to have named the bar after his infant son's entire vocabulary: "Goo Goo."

Standard Candy was on the verge of bankruptcy in 1982. The company had lost $400,000 in 1980. A year later, it moved into a new 65,000-square-foot plant, but a drought caused peanuts, a main ingredient in Goo Goos, to soar in price from 30 cents to $1.50 a pound. The company lost money again in 1981 and again in 1982.

That's when James W. Spradley, 62, retired president of Stuckeys, the Atlanta-based chain of roadside stores and candy manufacturer, bought 50 percent of the company.

"I was nuts about Goo Goos," said Spradley's son, Jimmy. "The candy bar has an almost cult-like following."

James Spradley became secretary-treasurer and named his son, an MBA graduate of the University of sity of Chicago, president. Jim Fischer, 54, who had been chairman since 1974, continues in that position and has a 50 percent stake.

Standard Candy has been profitable ever since, Spradley said, although the privately owned company does not reveal its earnings.

Jimmy Spradley turned the company around. He launched an aggressive sales program. He strengthened the distribution channels. Delta Air Lines introduced the candy bar as a snack on some flights. Bloomingdale's in New York, Marshall Field & Co. in Chicago and May Co. in Los Angeles have carried the candy bars as a specialty item.

"It's a constant struggle trying to increase sales to capture a bigger piece of the market," Spradley said. "The chains feature the top 20 sellers. If you're not in the top 20, you don't get there."

Three years ago, Fantasy Flavors, a Wheaton, Ill., ice cream company, began making Goo Goo cluster ice cream. The flavor is now sold by ice cream companies across the nation, with Standard deriving royalties. Goo Goo cluster ice cream bars were introduced in 1984.

In 1982, author Ray Brockel's "The Great American Candy Bar Book" was published. It describes 1,500 American candy bars of yesterday and today, including some old favorites of the past such as Winning Lindy, Chicken Dinner, Fat Emma and Old Nick.

Brockel's all-time favorite, however, is Goo Goo.

"If someone stuck me on a deserted island with just one candy bar, I would hope that it would be a Goo Goo," Brockel said.

Grumman pick for aircraft work

Newsday

The Pentagon has recommended to Congress that Grumman Corp. be awarded a $260 million contract to develop two new anti-submarine aircraft for Taiwan and help modify 30 others. Department of Defense officials said.

Lt. Col. Don Brownley, a Pentagon spokesman, said there have been only a few military contracts given to American aerospace companies for work in Taiwan since the United States severed relations with Taiwan in 1979 and recognized the Peoples Republic of China.

Officials of the Coordination Council for North American Affairs in Washington, an organization established to conduct business between Taiwan and the United States after ties were cut, could not be reached for comment Thursday. If approved, the purchase will be made through the council.

Brownley said the Pentagon notified Congress it had received a request to develop two new anti-submarine planes, called S-2s, and to upgrade about 30 existing anti-sub planes. Brownley said the Pentagon is supporting the request. He said he did not know why Taiwan was making the request at this time.

"Grumman will build two planes and show them how it's done and then they (the Taiwan government) will do more," Brownley said. He said that no U.S. government representatives would go to Taiwan, but about 30 Grumman executives and workers would spend three years in Taiwan if Congress approves the program. Brownley said the program would be approved if Congress does not object by Sept. 19, which will be 30 business days after the request was made.

The S-2 anti-submarine airplane, called the Tracker, was built by Grumman for the U.S. Navy, between July 1953, and December 1967. A total of 1,167 S-2s were delivered.

President of Sperry will move

Los Angeles Times

The president of Sperry Corp., but not its chairman, will join Burroughs executives in a newly created five-office office once the two computer companies have completed their merger, Burroughs announced.

Joseph J. Kroger, the 51-year-old former heir-apparent at Sperry, will become vice chairman of the yet-to-be-named merged corporation. Burroughs Chairman W. Michael Blumenthal and Kroger in the new head office will be Paul G. Stern, current Burroughs president, and James A. Unruh, currently an executive vice president and chief financial officer at Burroughs.

Gerald G. Probst, the chairman and chief executive of Sperry who was widely believed to have strongly opposed Burroughs' $4.8 billion acquisition of Sperry, will retire at the end of the year. Probst, who will work 12 months on a consulting basis until year-end, afterwards, Burroughs said, he is expected to serve as a "special consultant" to Blumenthal.

The changes are effective following the official completion of the merger. A Sept. 16 shareholders meeting has been set for the formal vote of approval.

Also, Burroughs said that it had requested the Securities and Exchange Commission for a shelf offering of as much as $560 million in debentures.

Following the May 27 agreement to merge, Blumenthal said that both of Sperry's top men would hold key posts in the new company, but Probst had not been expected to remain.

"I am grateful to Mr. Probst for his help in meeting our two companies together. I am glad (he) will continue to work closely with me as a consultant following his retirement," Blumenthal said in a statement.

Kroger's retention in such a visible position puts him in the running to succeed Blumenthal, analysts said, and is a further nod of assurance to Sperry customers that the merged company would retain some of the Sperry flavor. Kroger, who began his 23-year career with Sperry as a sales man and acquired a reputation for strong marketing skills as he rose through the ranks, will run the sales and marketing operations of the new company.

Media magnate buys TV station from CBN

Los Angeles Times

Media magnate Rupert Murdoch further forsook his American newspaper empire in favor of television by announcing that he will buy a Boston television station from TV evangelist Pat Robertson's Christian Broadcasting Network for $28 million.

If approved by the Federal Communications Commission, the sale would add television station WXNE Channel 25 in Boston to the six stations Murdoch acquired earlier this year from Metromedia for $1.55 billion. The deal also would make Murdoch's group the only station operator with outlets in seven of the nation's 10 largest markets.

By combining the stations with Los Angeles-based 20th Century Fox Film Corp., which he acquired last year for $575 million, Murdoch hopes to build a fourth American television network, a strategy that even required that he renounce his Australian citizenship. The newest deal would likely force Murdoch to sell the Boston Herald, the daily tabloid he acquired in 1980 for $1 million and the assumption of $7.4 million in debts. FCC regulations forbid the common ownership of a newspaper and television station in the same market.

Murdoch said he will ask the FCC to grant him a waiver regarding the Herald so he might have "a reasonable period of time to comply with FCC rules barring common ownership."

The deal could leave Murdoch with just two American newspapers, the Express and the News in San Antonio. He sold the Chicago Sun-Times last month to conform to FCC regulations and still must sell the New York Post.

Murdoch generally has had limited success importing his British-style tabloid journalism to America. His largest paper, the New York Post, has never made money.

Big Sky pollsters pick 'Pack

DISE (AP) — Nevada-Reno is a unanimous selection by league coaches to capture this year's Big Conference football championship.

The conference on Monday releases a preseason poll taken of league coaches. Seven of the coaches picked Wolf Pack to succeed Idaho as Big Sky champion, with coaches not allowed to vote for their own team.

Nevada-Reno Coach Chris Ault says Boise State as the top team.

A poll of 27 sportswriters and broadcasters also picked Nevada-Reno, which was 11-2 last season and made it to the semi-finals of the CAA Division IAA football championships, as the favorite this season.

Nevada-Reno received seven first-place ballots in the coaches' poll for 56 points. Boise State was second with 43 points, followed by Idaho, 34; Idaho State, 28; and Montana State, 25. Northern Arizona, 25; Weber State, 23; and Montana, 15, trailed the other teams.

In this year's poll, UNR received 11 first-place ballots, followed by Boise State received 172 points in second place, including four first-place votes.

Idaho State also received two first-place votes in the media poll, finishing with 138 points.

Idaho was picked to finish fourth, followed by Montana State, Weber State, Northern Arizona, and Montana.

In another news media poll, Idaho

State running back Merrill Hoge was the preseason pick as offensive player of the year, Idaho linebacker Tom Hennessey was picked as the top defensive player and transfer quarterback Vince Akende of Boise State was picked as the newcomer of the year.

Hoge, a 215-pound senior from Pocatello, is a two-time all-conference running-back. Last season he led the league in all-purpose running with 2,113 yards, second in Division IAA.

Hennessey, a 210-pound senior from Boise, was the league's top defensive player last season. He was all-conference last fall at inside

UI starters Dial, Washington ruled academically ineligible

MOSCOW (AP) — Two wide receivers and two running backs have been declared academically ineligible to play football this fall at Idaho, including one player who did not meet the NCAA's new academic requirements for incoming freshmen, athletic department officials said.

The ineligible receivers are sophomores Nelson Washington of Seattle and Neil Lambert of Tacoma, Wash. Washington, a probable starter this year, was Idaho's fifth-leading receiver last season with 11 receptions for 194 yards and three touchdowns.

Also ineligible is sophomore running-back Greg Dial of Tacoma, the third-leading rusher last season who scored five times and gained 327 yards on 77 carries.

Washington's younger brother, freshman running back Aron Washington, is ineligible under the NCAA's Proposition 48.

Proposition 48, enacted by the NCAA last year and going into effect this fall, requires that incoming freshman athletes meet minimum grade standards on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or the American College Test (ACT).

Buhl CC adding 9 holes

By MICHAEL VANAUDELN
Times-News writer

BUHL — The Buhl Country Club has approved plans to expand its nine-hole course to 18 holes and build a new clubhouse.

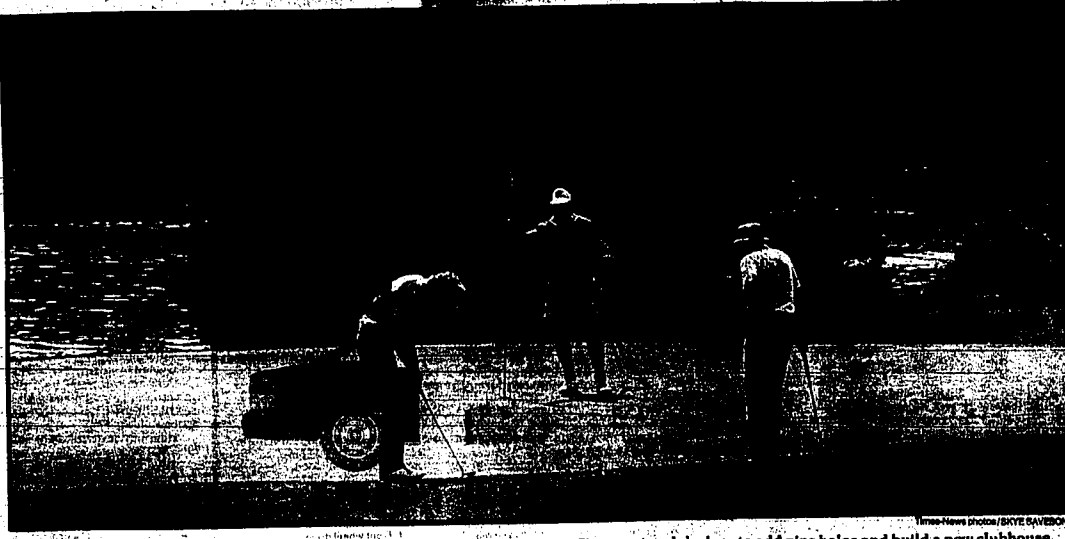

BCC Pro Larry Francis said the cost of the project will be approximately $600,000, to be paid for from club member fees. For the use of the club at anytime, a member pays a $1,500 membership fee with $200-$250 yearly dues.

So far, the club has 200 members but will need about 180 more to fund the project.

The project should begin construction on Jan. 1, 1987 with completion expected the following March.

"This is a project we've been working on for two years," said Francis. "We've felt that an 18-hole course is needed since we are becoming a more popular course."

The 52-year-old course — one of the oldest ones in the state — will expand on property on the west side of the course, along the Snake River. After the project is completed, Golfers play one of the Buhl Country Club greens adjacent to the Snake River. The country club plans to add nine holes and build a new clubhouse.

Kelly, Bills make deal for more than $7.5 million

By STEPHEN W. BELL
The Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Jim Kelly, a record-setting passer in the USFL, agreed to a five-year contract Monday with the NFL's Buffalo Bills, who have won just four of 32 games and need both his offensive skill and box-office appeal.

The contract, according to Kelly's agents worth somewhere between $7.5 million and $8 million, makes him professional football's highest paid player at about $1.5 million a year, $200,000 more than San Francisco 49ers quarterback Joe Montana.

At a news conference with Bills owner Ralph C. Wilson Jr., Kelly took a phone call from Gov. Mario Cuomo. After listening to Cuomo for about a minute, Kelly replied, "Maybe we'll get to the Super Bowl, and you'll call me president."

"I'm an athlete, I'm a competitor, whatever the situation is, I'm going to give 100 percent," Kelly said. "I can't promise you a Super Bowl because you're only as good as the people they put around you... If I get some help, I definitely think we can take this team to a championship."

Kelly, who worked with a run-and-shoot offense in the USFL, said he had been practicing the drop-back style of passing the Bills use and hoped to be ready to play in about two weeks.

Kelly dismissed his past statements about whether he wanted to play in Buffalo or elsewhere, saying he had had favorite teams since his childhood in Pittsburgh but, "right now I'm playing for the Buffalo Bills."

"Kelly's our future, because he's given us something to build on," Bills Coach Hank Bullough said. "We have that one big block to build on."

"He's going to be a great impact player, as much an impact as any player can be," Bullough said. "But there's never been one player who's turned everything around in the National Football League."

Wilson charged Kelly to have a career with Buffalo that would merit his placement on the Bills' "Wall of Fame," that presently includes O.J. Simpson, Rep. Jack F. Kemp and long-time team executive Patrick McGroder Jr.

At the Buffalo airport, after a flight from Houston, Kelly stepped off a private plane with Wilson. He posed with a football and a No. 12 Bills jersey before heading downtown in a police-escorted limousine for the news conference.

At the podium, where he was joined by his parents, Kelly was flanked by team and city officials before being introduced by Wilson.

The Bills have been 2-14 in each of the last two years and their season ticket sales are the lowest in the league. Last season, Buffalo sold just 14,500 season tickets.

"Mr. Wilson alluded to the fact that he's sometimes called cheap and he's sometimes cabigated for not doing what he can to build a championship team," Bills General Manager Bill Polian said. "The fact that Jim is sitting here to my left is an enduring monument to Ralph Wilson's commitment to building a winner for the city of Buffalo."

After word of the signing was public Monday, lines formed at the box office at 80,290-seat Rich

Campbell announces he's giving up pro football

HAMMOND, La. (AP) — Earl Campbell, the New Orleans Saints running back who won three NFL rushing titles during his glory days with the Houston Oilers, announced his retirement Monday, 593 yards short of 10,000 career yards.

"I'm a man. I'm not a little boy," Campbell said at a news conference. "I believe this is the best thing — not only for myself, but for the Saints."

"He's a cinch for the Hall of Fame," the Saints Head Coach Jim Mora said.

Campbell's performance since joining the Saints six games into the 1984 season was disappointing. But he began training camp this year full of optimism, weighing in at 225 pounds and saying he was ready to put a poor 1985 season behind him.

His performance in two pre-season games, however, wasn't impressive. He had 78 yards in 25 carries.

Saturday night, in a losing effort against the New England Patriots, he played only in the first half, carrying 12 times for 35 yards.

Nevertheless, Mora said he wasn't expecting Campbell's retirement announcement.

"It was a complete surprise to me," Mora said. "He was still our No. 1 tailback."

Campbell, who did not disclose any future plans except to say he wanted to spend more time with his family, said he decided to retire Sunday night and he informed Mora on Monday morning.

Asked if the decision was his or the team's, Campbell said: "That's the surprising thing, I did it on my own."

Most of Campbell's 9,907 yards came during his years in Houston where he began his pro career in 1976 after winning the Heisman Trophy at the University of Texas. In 1977, he topped the 1,000-yard mark each year except 1982, when an injury kept him out of five games, 1983 when he had 1,000 yards in the NFL.

His 1984 season, when he was named Most Valuable Player honors in 1980, his best season. That was "Bum Phillips" last year as coach of the Oilers, when he rushed for 1,334 yards, the third best single-season performance in NFL history.

Phillips, who was fired before the end of the 1980 season at Houston, was "let go" at New Orleans and brought Campbell over six games into the 1984 season — stealing away a first-round draft pick in a trade that drew immediate criticism.

Phillips' family means a lot to him, he said. "He enjoyed football while he played but his family couldn't be there at training camp with him.

"I honestly believe that Earl Campbell thinks more of his family than money. He just wanted to be here (Houston) more than there."

Campbell had begun the 1984 season with 8,296 yards, but was having a relatively bad year at the time of the trade, averaging 2.9 yards per carry.

The trade came as a surprise because the running back position was one of the few spots on the Saints roster that was well-staffed at the time by experienced players, George Rogers.

Campbell gained only 468 yards in 1984.

"We haven't talked to anybody. I've said 'Pat, I'll wait to hear from you.' As of now, I haven't heard from Pat yet," Trainer said.

Trainer said he would have no problem with such a bout between Leonard and Hagler.

"That's a man of his word. If he says he will call me, he'll call me. If he wants to get the fight going, to get an agreement together — great, let's go do it. I'm ready whenever (he is)," Trainer said.

"Pat's a man of his word. He has been a professional since 1973 and he has been contemplating retirement lately, largely because of pressure from his wife, Bertha."

"He and Bertha came to a conclusion and Marvin is going on," Arum said. "It's exciting."

MARVIN HAGLER
Biggest purse ever?

Hagler postpones retirement for Leonard bout

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvelous Marvin Hagler discarded retirement plans Monday when it was announced that he will fight Sugar Ray Leonard in a middleweight championship showdown that could yield record purses for both boxers.

Hagler ended the suspense when his co-manager, Pat Petronelli, announced a March 1987 fight against Leonard to be promoted by Top Rank Inc. The date and exact details were not announced.

Hagler, who was reportedly in Bartlett, N.H., was unavailable for comment.

"I've long-availed right now," Hagler said. "The great goal challenge is the 1987 Larry Holmes-Dezney Conney heavyweight title fight which reportedly paid each fighter $10 million. Leonard and Hagler both have made more in their fights. This will absolutely be a record purse for each boxer," promoter Bob Arum said.

Arum said he did not have a contract with Leonard.

"Now we will have an agreement with Ray, by the way, it's fair. This will absolutely be a record purse and we have an agreement with Marvin."

"We don't have a contract, we haven't agreed on anything. We haven't even heard from Hagler's manager Pat Petronelli. He's probably making up his mind," Mike Trainer, Leonard's attorney, told WRX-TV, a Washington television station.

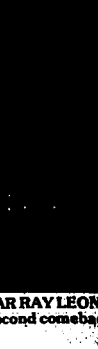

Hagler has been middleweight champion since knocking out Alan Minter in September, 1980 and has defended the title 12 times, two of the division record held by Carlos Monzon. Hagler's most recent defense came last March in Las Vegas, Nev. with an 11th-round knockout of John Mugabi.

Throughout, however, Hagler has languished for the big payday a fight with Leonard could provide. They often have seemed headed for such a showdown, only to have other factors interfere.

Leonard, one of the heroes of America's gold medal boxing sweep in the 1976 Olympics, knocked out Willie — Benitez — to win the welterweight title in Nov., 1979. He is 32 years old, has been a professional since 1973 and has been contemplating retirement lately, largely because of pressure from his wife, Bertha.

"He and Bertha came to a conclusion and Marvin is going on," Arum said. "It's exciting."

L.A. Rams surprise San Francisco, 31-17, in NFL exhibition

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Steve Bartkowski threw for two touchdowns and Charles White ran for two more as the Los Angeles Rams defeated the San Francisco 49ers 31-17 in an NFL exhibition game Monday night.

Pro football

as a free agent, during the off-season. White's second score gave the Rams a 31-17 lead with 9:26 to play. White finished with 17 yards on 10 carries as the game's leading rusher.

The 49ers had cut the Rams' lead to 24-17 in the second half on a 2-yard touchdown run by reserve quarterback Mike Moroski and a field goal by Ray Werschung. Moroski replaced Ken Stabler... Jeff Kent at halftime... Bartkowski was the Rams' 7-0 lead on their first possession with a 22-yard pass to Ron Brown.

with 1:13 left in the first quarter. Werschung, who missed two field goal attempts in the first half, kicked a 38-yard field goal late in the third quarter.

The 49ers, touted two years ago as the NFL's dynasty-to-be, must answer the question marks sitting on both corners and one end of their defense if they hope to re-establish that description. The 49ers followed up a 15-1 year climaxed with a one-sided Super Bowl victory with last year's 16-6 record and a hurried exit from the playoffs.

However, predictions foretelling how the defensive questions will be answered don't interest Coach Bill Walsh. He knows he has to wait until Sept. 7 when the 49ers meet the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in their season-opener. Rookie Charles Haley and Larry Roberts are being asked to replace Fred Dean, the 49ers' designated pass rusher who was waived by the club during the off-season.

him a great deal," Walker said. "That's the way things are. We're friends. He's one of the best running backs in the NFL. 'People aren't upset, he added. 'I've been treated very nice. The players have helped me out a lot. They want to win. I really don't feel any pressure. You put pressure on yourself. My job is to play football. I'm feeling pretty good.' The Cowboys practiced for nearly two hours in the afternoon. After that, Walker stayed on the field with a handful of players for another 25 minutes.

"It went pretty well. I'm beginning to recognize things better now," Walker said as he walked off the field. "I think things are going to work out pretty good for me. I'm feeling pretty good," he said. "Right now, I think I'm learning just like everybody else. I'm not a guy who's crazy about practice but I know it comes along with the business. I've got a lot of learning to do."

Walker said he was the No. 3 tailback at the present time. "He's working. He's learning the assignments," Landry said. "He's getting the plays at tailback. That's the easiest way to learn the offense. He's like a rookie coming in."

When asked if he planned on working Walker-and Dorsett together in the same backfield, Landry said "Anything's a possibility." Walker, Dorsett and LaVette alternated at one running back spot during the afternoon practice. Landry commented on the optional depth the Cowboys have in the running back.

"It's the best that we've had, but many good running backs," Landry said. "There's just a lot of depth there right now."

Wearing blue pants, symbolic of being a rookie, Walker seemed to know what he was doing and fit in well during his first workout in full uniform. For the most part, when he wasn't participating in what was a light scrimmage, he stayed near the side of LaVane.

Rookie quarterback Chuck Long ended a holdout by signing with Detroit on Monday. Long, from Iowa, ended his 27-day holdout by signing a four-year contract with the Lions worth approximately $1.75 million.

Long signed at the Pontiac Silverdome and then joined his teammates for an afternoon workout at Oakland University.

Former Houston Gamblers defensive end Van Hughes signed a contract and reported to the team's summer training camp. Hughes was chosen by the Steelers in the fifth round of the 1984 draft but decided instead to play in the USFL.

The Steelers also hold rights to quarterback Cliff Stoudt of the USFL's Birmingham Stallions. But Coach Chuck Noll has said he doesn't want Stoudt, and Stoudt has said he doesn't want to return to Pittsburgh, where he played last year under coach Terry Bradshaw.

Seahawks Cornerback Keith Simpson, the Seattle Seahawks' 1978 first-round draft choice, and veteran fullback Deane Smith among 14 players released by Seattle's reduced roster to 72.

Philadelphia's Phillip Epps ended a 25-day holdout by signing a pair of one-year contracts, and Green Bay trimmed its roster by 14 players.

The 49ers included veteran linebacker George Cumby, defensive back Ronnie Burgess, former Pittsburgh Steelers punter Craig Colquhoun and former Chicago Bears kicker Bob Thomas.

Chargers Linebacker Gary Plummer, a three-year USFL veteran, was signed, making him the third San Diego signing from the rival league since it canceled its fall season.

Soccer clinics this week

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Youth Soccer Association is conducting a week-long series of clinics for coaches and players this week. Trent Felton, the Idaho Youth Soccer State Trainer, is running the clinics, which are aimed at player and coach development. The players' clinics, which began Monday, will continue through Thursday at Hartman Park with players being placed according to skill and age levels. Sessions will be two hours long with a maximum of 15 players in each group. Participation will be on a first-come, first-served basis, and the clinics will be held at 8 a.m., 10 a.m., 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. There is a $10 fee. The coaches' clinic, which began Sunday, will be for the E certificate and will require about 24 hours of instruction to complete. Sessions will be held tonight, Wednesday and Thursday from 6 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Coaches who cannot make the whole session are welcome to participate when they can. The clinic will be held at the YFCA. There is a fee for the E certificate. Further information can be obtained by phoning Tim at 733-1491.

Bruin corn feed Tuesday

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls High School Bruin Boosters will sponsor a free corn feed Tuesday night in Bruin Stadium. The 6 p.m. event is for all incoming and returning Bruin athletes, their parents and families. Anyone interested in Twin Falls High School athletics is invited to attend. Those attending are asked to bring a covered dish and their own table service. Coaches for the fall and winter sports programs will be introduced and speak briefly about upcoming events. Season tickets for the 1988-89 school year will also be available. Further information can be obtained by phoning Billie Bartholomew at 733-1285 or Olivia Prater at 733-1145.

Kimberly physicals tonight

KIMBERLY — Physical examinations for all Kimberly High School and junior high school aged students will be given tonight, starting at 7 p.m. The exams will be held at the high school. Boys' physicals will be conducted by Dr. Ron Miclak of Twin Falls and girls' physicals by Dr. Sara Johnson of Twin Falls. The boys will meet in the gym lockerroom and the girls in the school office. Tickets to $10, and payment must be made at the time of the exams. Further information can be obtained by phoning 423-4179.

Astros increase lead in NL West to 6 1/2 games

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Houston Astros pitcher Mike Scott may not be as famous as Dwight Gooden or Fernando Valenzuela, but there's little doubt he's become one of the National League's premier pitchers.

Scott pitched a four-hitter, six-hit game on Monday, beating Pittsburgh for the first time in nine career decisions. Monday night was the Houston Astros' 10th win over the Pirates.

"He's the most dominant pitcher in the league right now," said Houston Manager Jim Leyland. "He's pitched in strikeouts and earned run average and if we'd given him a little more support early in the year, he'd probably lead in wins."

"Right now I think I'd rather face Valenzuela or Gooden before him, the way he's throwing," Pittsburgh third baseman Jim Morrison said.

Scott, 34, raised his major league-leading strikeout total to 233. He pitched his fourth shutout of the season and lowered his earned run average to 2.23, best in the majors.

"The funny thing is I think he's thrown better against us this year," Pittsburgh Manager Jim Leyland said. "I'm not taking anything away from what he's done, either. It's hard to say who's the best pitcher in the league but it's pretty hard to argue with the stats he has this year."

Scott entered the game with a career 3.9 ERA and 5.73 ERA against Pittsburgh.

"These guys have been tough on me," Scott said. "I've pitched a couple of good games where I haven't had much luck and they've beat me up a few times. But the Astros won the eighth time in 11 games. Houston increased its National League West lead to a season-high 6 1/2 games over the San Francisco Giants.

Jose Cruz hit a two-run homer in the fifth inning home run of the season followed a two-out single by Kevin Bass.

"Jose's really come on and picked up the whole ball club," Lanier said. "He's been getting the hits in key situations and he's been leading the hitter he's seen his whole career."

The Astros scored a run in the third when Scott singled, advanced to third on a walk and an infield out and scored on Denny Walling's infield hit.

Pittsburgh's most serious threat came in the seventh when Sid Bream singled and continued to second on center fielder Billy Hatcher's error. Bream advanced to third on a groundout, and was stranded when Scott retired the next two batters.

"We tried to make some things happen when we got the chances," Leyland said. "We just didn't get too many chances."

N.Y. Mets 5 Los Angeles 4

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Darryl Strawberry ended an 0-for-24 slump with a two-run homer and RBI single and Keith Hernandez also homered Monday night, pacing the New York Mets past the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-4.

Bob Ojeda, 33-4, won for the seventh time in his last nine decisions. He left after the Dodgers' four-run Monday night, pacing the New York Mets past the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-4.

Strawberry gave the Mets a 1-0 lead in the first inning with a two-out single that scored Willie Randolph. The Astros scored a three-run fifth inning with a two-run homer, his 17th of the season, for a 3-0 lead against Orel Hershiser, 12-3.

Hernandez, who made it 2-0 in the third inning with his 11th homer, preceded Strawberry's homer with an RBI single after Beckman's one-out double.

Hernandez has hit .333 in his last 15 games with three homers and 16 RBI.

Weekend Bosox-M's trade on hold due to technicality

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A trade between the Boston Red Sox and Seattle Mariners was on hold Tuesday because of a technicality.

Brown nor Trujillo were placed on waivers. Both players have to be completed. Now Boston and Seattle must wait until Friday to ensure that no other teams claim the players.

Owen was listed as Boston's starting shortstop and leadoff hitter for Monday night's game here against the Minnesota Twins. But a few minutes before game time, Ed Romero was inserted into the lineup in Owen's place.

Seattle was off Monday. Because the game was starting late, the technicality was not a problem, neither Owen, Henderson nor Boston Manager Tom Yawkey was immediately available for comment.

Jose Gonzalez, pinch-hitter Jeff Hamilton and Steve Sax started the Dodgers' fifth with singles, bringing in a run. Mariano Duncan singled in a second run and Bill Russell singled in a second run in the fifth.

Los Angeles threatened in the sixth, but Strawberry's home run came running in from his right field position to snag Duncan's batting liner for the third out with two outs at first and second.

Ed Oroski was the first batter. Frank Pullar, 12-3, was beating out an infield hit to third in the seventh inning. Pullar had called strike on Cabell Mullen's earlier. Don Slaught was ducking a pitch from

Boston 3 Minnesota 1

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Boston's 1-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins Tuesday night was the Red Sox' 31st victory over the Minnesota Twins.

The triumph increased Boston's lead in the American League East to six games over the idle New York Yankees.

Gustavus' 12th homer of the season, off the upper deck facade in right field, decided a pitching duel between Seaver and Frank Viola.

Viola gave up a one-out single to Tony Armas before Gedman connected on a 2-1 pitch.

Seaver, 7-10, struck out seven and walked four in his 31th career victory. Seaver left the game after a two-out double in the ninth by Randy Bush, and Bob Stanley struck out pinch-hitter Tom Brunsansky for his 15th save.

The Red Sox took a 1-0 lead before

Viola retired a batter in the first inning. Ed Romero rapped a leadoff single and Marty Barrett followed with an RBI double down the left field line.

The Twins led the game in the third when Roy Smalley hit a two-out homer run over the auxiliary scoreboard and into the right field power deck. It was Smalley's 19th homer.

Cincinnati 6 San Diego 5

CINCINNATI (AP) — Buddy Bell hit a three-run homer and John Denny and John Franco survived a five-run rally by San Diego in the ninth Monday, leading the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-5 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Denny, 11-10, had allowed only three hits entering the ninth.

Tommy Glynn got three of the hits off Denny including a two-run homer in the ninth. After allowing a single to pinch-hitter Dana Iorg, Glynn homered and sparked a five-run outburst.

Two-out singles by Graig Nettles and Steve Garvey and a ground-rule double by Terry Kennedy pulled the Reds within, 6-3 before Franco followed with a pinch-hit, ground-rule double to drive in Nettles and Garvey before Franco struck out Garry Templeton to earn his 20th save.

Denny singled home the Reds' second run in the fifth inning off left-hander Dave LaPoint, who made his first start since being traded to the Padres from Detroit on July 9.

Rookie shortstop Barry Larkin singled to open the Reds' fifth and scored on Ron Oester's double to left-center field. Oester continued to third on shortstop Jerry Roster's wild throw home for an error, and scored on Denny's single.

Do Diaz hit his eighth home run with two out in the sixth off LaPoint to give Cincinnati a 3-0 lead.

Bell hit the first pitch off Gene

Walter in the seventh for his three-run home run. It was Bell's 14th homer of the season and his fifth in the five-game series with the Padres, extending his hitting streak to 16 games.

Cleveland 10 Milwaukee 4

CLEVELAND (AP) — Tony Barnazard homered and drove in three runs and Mel Hall hit a two-run triple in a four-run ninth inning Monday night as the Cleveland Indians defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 10-4 for their fourth straight victory.

Tom Candiotti, 12-9, tied the American League lead with his 11th complete game, scattering 10 hits and three walks, striking out seven batters. He won for the ninth time in his last 12 decisions.

Barnazard led off the bottom of the first inning with his 12th home run and singled in the first two runs in the third. Hall drove in his third run of the game with a fifth-inning groundout.

Chris Bando had three hits, two of them doubles, driving in a run and scoring one.

The Indians, now 62-57, have not been five games over 500 this late in the season since 1968.

Cleveland's first six runs were off Chris Boso, who was making his second major-league start. Boso, 4-0, struck out nine batters in 4 1/3 innings, fanning the side in order in the second and fourth innings.

Milwaukee scored in the fifth on Rick Manning's fourth home run of the season. Hall made it 6-1 a half-inning later with a bases-loaded groundout.

Robin Yount singled in the sixth, went to third when Cecil Cooper doubled and scored on Ben Oglivie's groundout.

Cleveland scored twice in the bottom of the inning. Pat Tabler and Jacoby singled before a Bando run scoring double, and another run scored on catcher Bill Schroeder's fielding error.

Ex-Idaho prep quarterback now hits quarterbacks for BYU

By BOB BLACK The Associated Press

PROVO, Utah — When Brigham Young football comes up in conversation, it's usually about the "game back" and "forward pass."

JASON BUCK Formidable pass rusher

College football

Jason Buck wants to change that. "One of the reasons I came to BYU was to help build up a defensive tradition," said Buck, a senior defensive tackle who logged 115 quarterback sacks as a junior and was named Western Athletic Conference defensive player of the year.

"There was no doubt in my mind I could help them do it," said the 6-foot-6, 270-pound third team All-America selection. "Of course, the big offense has always gotten the attention."

Buck, who grew up in the eastern Idaho town of St. Anthony, was a quarterback himself at South Fremont High School. But he failed in his attempt to walk on at quarterback at Ricks College, and returned to his hometown to work.

He later returned to Ricks after putting on some weight and was moved to defensive line, while he set school records for quarterback sacks as a freshman.

BYU, long one of the nation's premier passing teams, has produced a string of standout quarterbacks that includes Cary Steide, Clifford Nielsen, Marc Wilson, Jim McMahon, Steve Young and 1985 graduate Robbie Bosco.

"Offense wins football games but defense wins championships," Buck said. "That was BYU's problem in the past — they'd go out and score 45 points and the other team would score 30."

Against stronger foes, Buck said that score often was reversed.

BYU's coaches say the Cougars always have prided themselves on their defense and Coach LaVell Edwards began his coaching career as a defensive coach. They say both the offense and defense have progressed to the point they now complement each other.

"The offense is the key to our success on defense at this school," said Claude Bassett, linebacker coach.

Two BYU victories last season are a case in point. After BYU's 44-0 win over upstate rival Utah State, Bassett said people were impressed with the Cougar defense.

"But by the half, the offense had over 400 yards in total offense," he said. "When you're behind, you can't kick a field goal. You go on fourth down."

Also, against Washington, BYU struck for two early touchdowns in posting a 31-3 victory.

"The offense had them down 14-0 before (UW Coach) Don James knew what hit him," Bassett said. "The result, he said, is the Huskies were forced to pass up points in hopes of getting 'back' in the game with touchdowns.

Still, there has been solid progress over the years when the BYU offense has been on the sidelines. In 1982, Ohio State of the Big Ten defeated BYU 47-17 in the Holiday Bowl, but last year OSU managed only 3 points in a 17-10 victory.

The only touchdown by OSU was scored against the offense in a 14-yard third-quarter pass interception.

Bassett said recruiting coordinator Norm Cheney lured stronger, faster players to Provo and has been able to maintain depth to keep the program strong as players graduated.

Last year, BYU graduated three of four starting linebackers. All were drafted by NFL teams and two were named all WAC and AP honorable mention All-America.

While the Cougars are untested at those positions this year, the coaches say there are plenty ready to fill in at linebacker. And with Buck and 6-6, 285-pound tackle Shawn Knight, BYU's defensive front could be its best ever.

The Cougars, who open here Sept. 6 against Utah State, were 11-3 last season and are seeking their 11th straight WAC title. In order to get it, Bassett said, "We've got to flat line up and play great defense."

"The offense does its part, too," he said. "I'll guarantee you that they're going to get the more they're going to score. As a defensive coach, I love for them to be out there because my guys are getting a rest."

While the defense rested in past seasons, BYU's offense was running up points. The Cougars have led the nation in passing eight times since Edwards took over as head coach in 1972 and five times in total offense.

Edwards, whose teams have posted a 129-41 record since he came to BYU in 1972, said he always has emphasized defense, but the offense has made the headlines.

"You don't win the games we have won without a good defense," he said.

At quarterback, BYU is expected to go with Steve Linsley, a 6-foot, 185-pounder. The first quarterback in years to inherit the position as a Jim Flinch, the Saints' general manager, focused on better days at the end of the year.

"In my opinion, Campbell was one of the best to ever play the game," said the former Chicago Bears general manager, who joined the Saints last year.

There were four more fights, one in which Leonard won the junior middleweight title from Ayub Kalule, as he seemingly moved inexorably toward the top of the division.

But, Hagler, that, quite simply, the planned showdown was scrapped when Leonard underwent surgery for a detached retina in his left eye on May 9, 1982.

Exactly six months later, with Hagler present in a boxing ring, Leonard and entertainer Wayne Newton, Leonard emotionally announced his retirement from the ring, saying, "The feeling is gone. I will not come back. That's it."

Morales upends Biondi, Gross in 100-meter 'fly' showdown

By ROBERT MILLWARD
The Associated Press

Swimming

MADRID, Spain — World-record holder Pablo Morales of the United States upstaged countryman Matt Biondi and Olympic champion Michael Gross of West Germany Monday to win the gold medal in the men's 100-meter butterfly at the World Swimming Championships.

Biondi, the world's fastest 50- and 100-meter freestyle swimmer, collected the silver, while Gross was fourth behind Andrew Jameson of Britain.

In the women's competition, Silke Hagemer of East Germany set a world record in the 200-meter breaststroke with a clocking of 2 minutes, 27.40 seconds.

Hoerner, 20, edged Tania Bogomilova of Bulgaria, who also beat the previous record of 2:28.20, held by East German Silvia Gerasch, who finished fourth in the race behind 13-year-old Allison Hlagon of Canada. Bogomilova was timed at 2:27.66.

Meanwhile, Helke Friedrich of East Germany, won the 200 freestyle, with her countrywoman Manuella Stelmach, collecting the silver.

In the men's diving competition, American star Greg Louganis returned his springboard title, but failed to beat his all-time best score.

Gross, winner of the 200 freestyle Sunday, was only fourth fastest qualifier behind the same three swimmers who beat him in the final.

But Morales, third fastest in qualifying, reversed the heat order, leading at the halfway mark and staying ahead of his countryman to clock 33.45, a new championship record.

It was the third time in the day that a new meet best was set for the event.

Jameson lowered Matt Gribble's 4-year-old record of 53.88 down to 53.67, and 10 minutes later Biondi shaved it again by 17 hundredths of a second.

In the final, Biondi clocked 53.67 and Jameson was timed in 53.91 with Gross at 53.87.

Morales set his world record of 32.94 in the U.S. trials in Orlando, Fla. in June.

Morales said he planned to stay with Biondi and the others until the 75-yard mark, then to break.

"I knew by then I could win the race," Morales said. "It's been a great victory."

"I am much happier than yesterday," Biondi, who won a bronze in Sunday's 200 freestyle, said. "But, my best events are still to come."

Both Biondi and Gross picked up medals in the in the 4x200 freestyle relay.

Gross, swimming second for West Germany, swam the fastest ever 200-meter relay time — 1:46.73 besting the 1:46.89 he swam in the relay final at the Los Angeles Olympics.

The West German team clocked 7:15.96 to collect the silver medal behind East Germany, whose 7:15.91 established a championship record.

Biondi anchored the United States to the bronze with a clocking of 7:18.29.

In the women's 200 freestyle, Friedrich trailed Hellmach for most of the race, but overhauled her towards the end of the third lap.

Her time of 1:58.26 was a new championship record, beating the 1:58.53 set by American Cynthia Woodhead at the 1978 championships in West Berlin.

Her triumph followed three East German successes on Sunday.

Louganis, 26, the world and Olympic champion, posted a world championship record score of 93.06 with his 10th dive — a reverse 1½ somersault with 3½ twists.

It left him within sight of his record of 755.49 points, set three years ago in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. But his final dive, a reverse plunge with 3½ somersaults, was only good enough to lift him to 750.06, still well clear of second-place Ldangde Tan of China, who finished with 692.28.

Another Chinese diver, Hongping Li, was third with 642.06.

"I knew I was diving well and I had the opportunity to break the record," Louganis, who is also the highboard world champion, said. "However, it looks like I need a little more work on that dive."

In the men's water polo competition, the United States scored in the last three seconds to edge West Germany 10-0 and ensure reaching the medal round of the competition. In other matches, the Soviet Union beat France 13-4, Yugoslavia downed Spain 10-6, Italy edged Cuba 9-7, Brazil beat Canada 9-4, Australia stomped Israel 11-4 and Greece beat The Netherlands 5-3.

TWIN FALLS — Bill Heffner of Salmon and Andy Swenson of Caldwell shot 69s on Monday to take the first-round lead in the Idaho State Junior Golf Association Tournament at the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course.

Heffner, playing in the boys' 14-15-year-old division, and Swenson, competing in the boys' 16-17 class, toured the course in two fewer strokes than Gus Villines of Caldwell and Eric Peterson of Boise, who finished fourth in the boys' 16-17 division.

Low girls' score for the day was an 87 by Jennifer Harper of Boise in the girls' 16-17 division.

The tournament will conclude today at the Jerome Country Club.
