Sky View-Hazeldel is a complex of two buildings on Filer Avenue West, currently housing a total of 143 patients

Home owner to appeal cutoff

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Because of "serious" and repeated violations in standards, the federal government has turned down a request from Sky View-Hazeldel nursing home to respect the facility, and Medicare and Medicaid payments will end Aug. 11, officials said Friday.

Meanwhile, Sky View's owner-director Richard Drake said many of the government's findings were "picky." He will appeal and reapply for Medicare and Medicaid certification in September, he said.

A July inspection report released by the state Department of Health and Welfare charged problems ranging from patients leaving clothing of grooming, improper dress and in some cases, no clothes on patients, bedsores and improper storage of toxic chemicals in other instances, call lights were observed to go unanswered up to 50 minutes.

"These are very, very serious problems," said Tom Wallner with the Healthcare Financial Administration in Seattle. HFA is part of the federal Department of Health and Human Services, which oversees Medicare payments.

HHS officials in Seattle said on Friday that Drake has had since May to correct the problems. Idaho's Department of Health and Welfare licenses nursing homes and does the inspections for both the state and federal government.

Sky View-Hazeldel is a brick, two-building complex located at 640 Filer Ave. W. about a quarter mile behind Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. Licensed for 485 beds, it currently has 143 patients and is the second-largest nursing home in Idaho.

In May, during a routine annual inspection, the state notified Drake of deficiencies. The nursing home was inspected again in July and August. State officials said that while some problems were corrected, Sky View was not in complete compliance.

On Monday Drake appealed for a fourth inspection, and was turned down.

"We don't think there's reasonable proof that the problems were corrected," Wallner said.

Earlier in the week Drake sought to minimize Sky View's problems as cited by the state.

When asked about whether patients were losing weight, he said Sky View was cited because one overweight patient was on a diet on her doctor's order.

"But in the July report, state workers documented eight cases of patients weighing around 100 pounds who lost weight over a 1- to 6-month period. In one case, a patient went from 86 1/2 pounds to 78 pounds. Another went from 91 pounds to 87 pounds.

The report said a lack of staff meant that patients had to wait an hour or longer in the dining room to be fed. In many cases, meals were served cold, and patients were not eating all of their meals. Also, patients who needed help in being fed were not receiving it, the report said.

In one case, state health workers said Sky View workers recorded a patient as eating 100 percent of the food, when only 20 percent was eaten. In addition, the patient was not offered assistance and "has weight loss documented."

When asked again on Friday about the problems, Drake said some of the patients who recorded weight loss were "in the process of dy-

Joint atomic panel revives data trading

MOSCOW — U.S. and Soviet atomic energy officials signed an agreement Friday to revive formal exchanges on nuclear energy and add nuclear plant safety to their discussions.

The signing culminated the week-long meeting of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Joint Committee on Cooperation in the Peaceful Uses of Atomic Energy, which had not met since 1978 because of the chill in superpower relations.

American delegates got a two-hour briefing on Moscow's report on causes of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster but told reporters at a brief news conference that they learned little beyond what the Soviets already made public.

The report is scheduled to be presented to the International Atomic Energy Agency on Monday in Vienna.

The American and Soviet officials agreed to exchange visits of nuclear safety specialists in the near future, starting with a visit to the Soviet Union by a team from the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Alvin W. Trivepiece, director of the Office of Energy Research at the Department of Energy, was the chief American delegate at this week's talks. Andranik M. Petrosyants, chairman of the State Committee for the Utilization of Atomic Energy, led the Soviet side.

Trivepiece told reporters that although divisions between the two sides remain, the talks were useful and concentrated on areas of agreement.

Petrosyants said the Soviets went beyond the agenda in giving the Americans information, and he hoped they would respond in kind.

"There is an old Russian saying that one should pay for what he learns," Petrosyants said. "You owe us. We shall see how you will pay for it."

A source close to the discussions, speaking on condition he not be identified by name, said the Soviets began pushing hard for the meeting early this year and seemed anxious to learn about American developments in nuclear energy.

He said the Americans are interested in progress the Soviets have made in reactors. The U.S. delegation was allowed to visit one such reactor in the Uralis city of Sverdlovsk this week.

Another source also speaking on condition of anonymity, said nuclear safety had been on the agenda before the April 28 Chernobyl disaster, but the accident added importance to the issue.

The explosion and fire at the reactor, 80 miles north of Kiev, led to the deaths of 11 people and spewed a cloud of radiation that eventually reached around the world.

The two sides agreed to meet again in the autumn of 1987 in the United States.

Crews make gains against Gem fires

By The Associated Press

Crews continued taking advantage of a break from heat and lightning on Friday in the battle to stop a forest fire that already has burned an area in central Idaho larger than Manhattan Island.

Rain early Thursday helped cut the area still burning out of control throughout the West by more than 51,900 acres. That left fires over 52,100 acres still unchecked, more than half in a 17,615-acre blaze ripping through valuable timber in the Boise National Forest.

"It was just enough rain to give them a one-day reprieve," forest spokesman Ron Sanow said. "Given the right winds, temperatures and humidity, we've still got lots and lots of problems, potentially."

But the 11-day-old Anderson Creek fire complex, stifled by cooler, moist air, grew only slightly on Thursday, allowing more than 1,600 firefighters to sweep up cleared lines around its perimeter.

It was listed as 50 percent contained Friday, but federal officials still had no estimate of when it could be completely reined in. The nearby Garden Valley fire complex, which was contained at about 2,700 acres on Tuesday, was expected to be controlled late Friday.

The elements were again on the side of firefighters early Friday, with temperatures forecast in the 70s and 80s, only light winds and humidity of about 60 percent.

"That's considerably more favorable than it has been," Sanow said. "It should be conducive to getting a fair amount of work done on those lines. It's days like today when we hope to make some progress instead of just holding."

The effort again was concentrated on strengthening fire lines on the northwest front closest to cabins and summer homes along the Middle Fork of the Payette River, Sanow said. But crews also were staging a direct attack Friday, using men and heavy equipment to build a fire break close against the flames.

Relatively clear skies over western Idaho valleys also allowed helicopters to ferry crews to hard-to-reach portions of the fire and to drop flames with water dipped from the Payette River, Sanow said.

For most of the past week, fire bosses hoping to attack the blaze from the air have been stymied by inversions that trap smoke near the

Reagan seals embargo holes

By GEORGE GEDDA
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has taken steps to seal cracks in the U.S. trade embargo against Cuba and put a stop to its "trafficking in human beings" trying to get out of the country, it was announced Friday.

Reagan ordered an end to Cuban immigration to the United States from third countries — a practice for which the State Department said Cuba sometimes charges emigrants or their families in excess of $10,000 a head.

The measures designed to tighten the 1960 embargo against Cuba "will make it more difficult for the government of Cuba to obtain U.S. dollars and American goods by unlawful means," State Department spokesman Charles Redman said.

"The objective is to lighten enforcement of the embargo, denying to the Castro regime economic benefits from the United States while Castro continues to ignore international obligations and to pursue policies inimical to U.S. interests."

Redman said a proclamation signed by the president calls for a crackdown on trading with Cuban front-companies located in Panama and elsewhere, which attempt to evade the U.S. trade embargo.

An official — at the Cuban diplomatic mission in Washington, who asked not to be identified, said,

"What can you expect from this administration's attitudes toward Cuba. It doesn't surprise me a bit."

The official said the embargo "hasn't intimidated Cuba in the past and won't now. And it won't encourage Cuba to change its policies in ways the administration might find more acceptable."

U.S. officials — who briefed reporters, asking to remain anonymous, said they have identified 118 companies or individuals involved in such activities.

Some sell Cuban goods, such as fish, to the United States while others serve as purchasing agents for the Cuban government, buying U.S. products for use in Cuba, the officials said.

Mail carrier marksman with Oklahoma Guard

By RON JENKINS
The Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — The two pistols with which mail carrier Patrick Henry Sherrill killed 14 co-workers and himself had been issued by the Oklahoma National Guard for him to use in a target competition, authorities said Friday.

Sherrill had performed his military service with the Oklahoma Air National Guard. He had been awarded the Oklahoma good conduct ribbon and the Oklahoma National Guard 100 percent drill attendance badge.

Gen. Bob Morgan, adjutant general of the Oklahoma National Guard, said at a news conference. "There had been no reports, including medical, that would have precluded him from serving in the Guard or from being a member of the marksmanship program," Morgan said two days after Sherrill's rampage at the Edmond Post Office.

Morgan said he is asking the National Guard Bureau to review regulations involving the issue of firearms and ammunition.

"The entire membership of the Oklahoma National Guard, comprised of 12,000 members ...

deeply regret this incident and wish to express their heartfelt sympathy to the families of the victims," Morgan said.

The two .45-caliber handguns Sherrill carried into the post office were issued to him in connection with competition to qualify for the five-man Oklahoma team scheduled to take part in a national marksmanship competition, Morgan said. Sherrill, 44, had been scheduled to leave Aug. 11 for that competition in Little Rock, Ark.

Morgan said Sherrill also had been issued 200 rounds of .45-caliber ammunition on Saturday for a National Rifle Association-sponsored contest at Arcadia, near Edmond.

Sherrill was issued an additional 100 rounds Sunday for practice in preparation with the national contest involving guardsmen from across the country, Morgan said.

Guard officials said Sherrill, a part-time postal employee, joined the Oklahoma Air National Guard in October 1984.

Col. Bill Francis, Oklahoma Guard public affairs officer, said it had not been determined whether Sherrill used the Guard-issued bullets on Wednesday morning when he killed 14 people and wounded six others before shooting himself in the head.

Guardsmen questioned about Sherrill, including fellow marksmen, said he exhibited no unusual behavior, Morgan said.

"He was a quiet person, but he served the military well," he said.

About 12 Guard members, including Sherrill, were authorized to check out ammunition and handguns, Morgan said.

One of the .45-caliber automatic pistols issued Sherrill was described by Morgan as a match-grade handgun. "It is more precision made with a better quality trigger so it won't throw you off the target."

State Rep. Cal Hobson, a National Guard major, said Sherrill had accompanied other guardsmen to England in July and was a firearms instructor at RAF Mildenhall, about 65 miles north of London.

This levy will keep on rising

By CHRISTOPHER BERN CONNELL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The tax overhaul bill now awaiting final congressional approval is likely to reduce income taxes for most Americans. But the Social Security levy will continue to rise inexorably.

The Social Security payroll tax already is a bigger burden for most low- and moderate-income Americans than the income tax, and the prospect is that the number of people in this category will grow unabated.

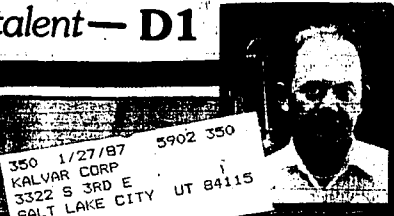

The payroll tax, which pays for Medicare as well as Social Security's old-age, survivors and disability insurance, is levied at a 7.15 percent rate on income up to $42,000 a year. It is headed for 7.51 percent in January 1993 and 7.93 percent in January 1994. The ceiling on wages subject to the tax also will rise over the years.

Thus, workers will pay 5 percent more Social Security taxes on the same wages in 1988, and a total of 7 percent more in 1990.

Currently, 120 million Americans are subject to the average of $1,000 a year in Social Security taxes. Those earning $20,000 this year will

Pan Am agrees to pay big fine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pan American World Airways, the country's sixth largest airline, agreed Friday to pay nearly $2 million in penalties for safety violations uncovered by government inspectors earlier this year.

The Federal Aviation Administration said the agency and Pan Am settled on the fine after Pan Am reorganized and strengthened its maintenance operation where most of the violations were concentrated.

FAA Administrator Donald Engen said Pan Am has taken prompt action to correct the violations, including expanding its maintenance forces by about 200 people. He said the airline is operating safely.

Pan Am spokesman James Arey said about half the fine already has been paid.

Blockade turns up no drugs

NEW YORK (AP) — The crackdown on crack prompted the first blockade of New York Harbor since the War of 1812, but federal agents who halted scores of vessels recovered no drugs and found just a few unrefined opiates, a spokesman said Friday.

"I can tell you, anyone trying to bring drugs into New York will be arrested," said Coast Guard Capt. Arthur Henn, who headed Operation Glass Eye. "We're out to catch those people bringing drugs into the port and poisoning our children."

But the blockade produced just one suspect from the first 90 ships boarded. Thomas Hall, 37, of Asbury Park, N.J., was arrested when a computer check turned up an outstanding warrant for armed robbery.

No injuries in Pentagon blast

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — A 250-pound acetylene tank caught fire in a construction area beneath the Pentagon Friday but caused no injuries, officials said.

A safety plug blew out of the cylinder, allowing acetylene gas to escape and ignite, according to Arlington County deputy fire marshal Henry Dayton.

Construction workers near the tank in the mall area beneath the Pentagon were evacuated and some Pentagon office workers on floor above the construction area were told to stay away from their windows in case an oxygen tank next to the acetylene tank exploded, Dayton said.

But the fire was controlled and never affected the oxygen tank, he said.

Illinois senator undergoes test

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Alan J. Dixon, D-Ill., and his top aides joined the growing list of Capitol Hill officials undergoing tests for illegal drug use, the senator's office said Friday.

Dixon became the second Illinois congressional member to launch such testing. At least five lawmakers, including Dixon and Illinois Republican Rep. Lynn Martin, have instituted voluntary or mandatory drug testing among their staffs, and others are said to be considering it.

Wade Nelson, Dixon's press secretary, said that Dixon passed the test.

Radiation worse than reported

NEW YORK (AP) — A Soviet report says that radiation spread more widely than first thought after the Chernobyl nuclear accident and raises the possibility of 6,500 premature deaths in the Soviet Union, The New York Times said Friday.

The 382-page report to the International Atomic Energy Agency says evacuated residents may not be allowed to return to their homes for four years, the Times said.

The report obtained by the newspaper says radiation in some areas remains at higher levels than was disclosed and might be particles drift, and that there may be continuing contamination of fish, vegetation and buildings dozens of miles from the plant.

About 3.5 percent of the radiation in the reactor got out into the atmosphere, the report said. The Times, quoting Western experts it did not identify, said this means the accident released more radiation than the atomic bombs dropped on Japan at the end of World War II.

Thousands protest U.S. forces

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — An estimated 5,000 workers and students marched through downtown La Paz on Friday, protesting the government's economic policies and the presence of U.S. military personnel in Bolivia.

An effigy of President Reagan was burned in front of the U.S. Embassy as the demonstrators waved placards reading, "Go home Yankee invader—this is not Honduras."

They referred to the 170 American soldiers who arrived in Bolivia last month with helicopters and other aircraft to assist Bolivian police in anti-drug operations.

Regents vote to sell holdings

SEATTLE (AP) — University of Washington regents Friday voted to sell the university's holdings in companies doing business in South Africa.

About 35 sign-waving, chanting students celebrated after the 6-3 vote, which followed years of demonstrations at the campus. The regents also agreed not to purchase any more stock in companies doing business in South Africa.

According to regents, the university has $2.5 million invested in five companies — including IBM, Westinghouse and NRC Corp. — that do business in South Africa.

ing," and others "just refused to eat."

"A lot of the state's beef with us is the charging," he said. "One aide recorded that a patient ate 100 percent, but she misunderstood the regulations. The patient ate 100 percent of what that patient always eats, not 100 percent on the tray."

Sky View also was cited for not storing toxic chemicals and cleaning agents under lock and key.

"During the initial review, the toxic chemical Heblecans was found open in residents' rooms," said the report. "During the follow-up, Heblecans was again found open in three residents' rooms. Note: there was at least one confused resident in each room."

The report also said that patients were "not always treated with consideration, respect and full recognition of their dignity."

As an example, the report said one female resident who supposedly dresses herself was observed walking around her room exposed from the waist down, with the door open and no privacy curtains being pulled.

Patients developed bedsores, according to the report, because they were not turned often enough in their beds or wheelchairs. In some cases, there was no documentation that patients had been bathed more than once every 7-10 days.

Drake admitted that Sky View has had problems, largely because the nursing home has had trouble attracting staff, he said.

The nursing home has made major changes in solving problems, Drake said, and because of those changes, the state's inspection report went from 28 pages of deficiencies to 14 pages at the last inspection two weeks ago.

"We have been addressing these problems," he said.

But officials in Seattle said Medicare and Medicaid will pay on Aug. 31, meaning they will not pay for any new patients admitted to Sky View.

Medicaid pays about 80 percent of a patient's care, which ranges from $42 a day to $88 a day. Of the 143 patients, 10 receive Medicaid payments, state officials said.

Payments for those patients on Medicaid and already in Sky View will continue through September, but Walker said the state must show it is making provisions to move those patients.

Drake said he will reapply for Medicaid and Medicare certification, and he has no plans to close the facility.

Tax

$1,430 to Social Security in 1988, the payroll levy on the same income will be $1,502 and in 1990, $1,530.

Employers pay a matching tax. The self-employed have even steeper rates, now 12.3 percent and headed for 13.3 percent in 1990.

The new overhaul bill will remove 6 million low-income Americans from the income tax rolls by sharply raising the standard deduction and personal exemptions. For others, tax rates are set at 15 and 28 percent.

Some parents will also be helped by an expansion of the Earned Income Tax Credit, a tax refund that Congress enacted in 1975 to help cushion the working poor from the payroll tax. The credit, now a maximum of $550, will be boosted to $800, and it will help families with incomes up to $17,000 instead of $11,000.

John Bickerman, research director for the private Center on Budget Priorities and Priorities, said the Tax Cut is perhaps the most important piece of anti-poverty legislation in a decade. "But he added, "The middle-income person isn't going to benefit a great deal. Some are going to lose under this system."

George Mitchell, D-Maine, who tried unsuccessfully to add a third, higher tax rate for the wealthy, said: "There is a very unhealthy and unfair trend now occurring to reduce the income tax, which is based on ability to pay, while increasing all other federal taxes, which are not related to ability to pay."

The Social Security tax "is now a larger tax for more working people than is the income tax," Mitchell said in a telephone interview. "When you add on all the other excise taxes and gas taxes and other things, the effect is to shift the tax burden down the income scale, so that middle-class working people are bearing an ever-larger share of the tax burden."

Joseph Pechman, senior fellow at the Brookings Institution, and his former director of economic studies, said most Americans, in fact, now pay more in Social Security taxes than income taxes, counting both what they contribute and what their employers kick in.

Pechman calculated that in 1984, Social Security taxes were steeper than income taxes for single people, earning up to $18,000, a married couple earning up to $29,000 and a couple with two children earning up to $33,000.

"Now that we've reformed the income tax, we should reform the payroll tax, which is really the oppressive burden on the poor," Pechman said.

But former Social Security Commissioner Robert M. Ball said it was irrelevant that Social Security taxes are steeper than income taxes for many workers.

"When you pay these (Social Security) taxes, you get something for it. People have a different reaction to generalized (income) taxes," Ball said.

Graddick vows to be in race

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Attorney General Charlie Graddick told jubilant supporters Friday he will run as a write-in candidate for governor of Alabama if court appeals fail to win him another chance at the Democratic nomination.

"I'm going to be on the ballot in November one way or the other," Graddick said after a rally attended by 300 supporters at his campaign headquarters. "We're going to go out and face them."

The Democratic Party already has a nominee for governor, Lt. Gov. Bill Baxley, who was chosen by a five-member party subcommittee after a week of hearings.

Baxley contested the June 24 primary runoff, which Graddick led by 8,756 votes, claiming the attorney general encouraged Republicans who had already voted in their primary to cross over and cast ballots in the Democratic runoff.

The party selected Baxley after a pair of three federal judges ruled Aug. 1 that Graddick had flagrantly missed his office by calling for the GOP crossover voting. The judges said Graddick violated the 1965 Voting Rights Act by diluting black voting power.

Graddick was back in federal court again Friday to appeal both the party ruling and the order issued against him by the three federal judges, but he said he was not optimistic about winning in that arena.

surface, grounding helicopters and air tankers sometimes until late in the afternoon.

A total of about 1,000 firefighters and support personnel were battling 18,250 acres of fires still burning out of control throughout Idaho one day. But the number of people working to control fires throughout the West was down 2,000 to about 16,000, and was expected to drop by another 1,000 with additional demobilization.

Dave Damron, spokesman for the federal Boise Interagency Fire Center, said fire crews in Oregon were being returned to as far away as Pennsylvania and Massachusetts after rain doused thousands of acres of flames.

Since June 1, 742,418 acres of forest and range have been blackened by 6,724 fires, nearly all in the lightning-scorched Northwest, Damron said.

An estimated 50,000 lightning bolts scored the West late Thursday and Friday, starting 184 new fires. The activity was centered in New Mexico, Arizona and Utah, Damron said, but rain associated with the thunderstorms stopped most of the new blazes in their tracks.

Today's weather

Showers may dampen the weekend

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding:
Clouds and a chance of showers and thundershowers increasing early today, decreasing later in the day. Partly sunny with a slight chance of thundershowers Sunday. Highs 70 to 85 today and in the 80s Sunday. Lows 60 and 65 today and 60 and 65 Sunday.

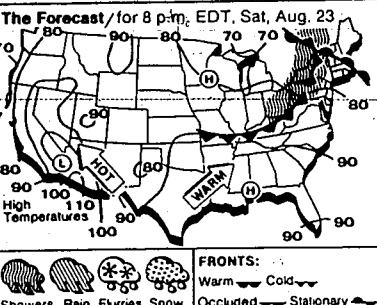

Clatsop, Halsey and Lower Wood River Valley:
Clouds and a chance of showers or thundershowers today, decreasing later in the day. Partly cloudy with a slight chance of showers Sunday. Highs 70 to 80 today and near 80 Sunday. Lows in the 50s.

Northern Utah and Nevada:
Scattered thundershowers mainly afternoons and evenings through today. Decreasing some northwest late Sunday. Locally heavy rainfall possible. Utah mountains through Saturday. Lows mostly in the 60s and highs in the 90s.

Synopsis:
Clear skies and warm temperatures prevailed in the Magic Valley Friday, but a change appeared in prospect for today with increasing clouds and a chance of rain showers.

The National Weather Service says a disturbance over the southwest corner of Oregon began spreading clouds over Idaho, which was expected to move across the state today.

The increase in clouds will bring a chance of showers and thundershowers over all of Idaho today.

Fronts:
Warm Cold
Occluded Stationary

Unsettled conditions appear likely though the middle of the coming week.
Friday's warm temperatures in south central Idaho were tempered to some degree by an easterly breeze.
The pollen count in Twin Falls Friday was 202 particles per cubic meter of air.
The highest temperature in the state today was 96 degrees at Lewiston.

while the low of 38 degrees was recorded at McCall.
Southern Idaho: Monday through Wednesday, widely scattered thundershowers. Highs in the 80s to lower 90s. Lows mostly in the 50s.
Elsewhere in the nation, Friday's high temperature was 114 degrees at Bucky, Ariz., and the low was 34 degrees at Truckee, Calif.

Harris set for hit-and-run case

BOISE (AP) — Canyon County Prosecutor Richard Harris has been chosen as special prosecutor in the vehicular manslaughter case of Ada County Sheriff's Deputy Michael Vajda, said Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bowen. Vajda was charged after an Emmett woman died early Thursday morning in the burning wreckage of her car, which had been rear-ended in a hit-and-run accident. Bowen said the selection of Harris by 4th District Judge Gerald Schroeder was made to avoid any appearance of a conflict of interest, although there was no technical or legal requirement to select a special prosecutor. The Ada County prosecutor said Harris' appointment will promote public confidence in the criminal justice system. Linda Griffith, 34, died at the scene of the accident of massive chest injuries. Her husband, Garry Griffith, was ejected from the car upon impact and suffered pelvic and back injuries.

Cammack back as candidate

BLACKFOOT (AP) — The Blingham County Democratic Central Committee may have had a change of heart over who will be its candidate for county commissioner solved far it. Orville McCrory, who announced as the Democratic candidate to run against Republican Dale Arave, commission chairman, said Thursday that he was withdrawing from the race for personal reasons. But Ferrell Cammack, who was the committee's first choice, told party members he has changed his mind about resigning from the campaign and wants to run after all. Cammack resigned last Friday at the request of John De La Mare, local Democratic central committee chairman, De La Mare said.

Millworkers take wage cuts

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Union millworkers have ratified a Boise Cascade Corp. contract that calls for wage cuts and the repeal of five company holidays, a union spokesman said today. The contract affects about 2,200 millworkers at 11 plants in Idaho, Oregon and Washington. It was approved by 62 percent of those voting, said Denny Scott, a spokesman for the Lumber, Production and Industrial Workers union. The exact vote was not released. Ratification of the two-year contract means the workers will receive wage cuts ranging from $1.25 to $1.65 an hour, Scott said. Union workers have been earning about $16.75 an hour in wages and benefits. The company had complained that the average wage at its Northwest mills was about $5 an hour higher than that of its competitors.

Toll-free service considered

BOISE (AP) — Toll-free service between communities in northern Idaho and Washington that share schools and medical facilities, but must dial long-distance, is under consideration by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission. Residents have asked for toll-free telephone service between Priest River and the communities of Oldtown and Blanchard, Idaho, and Newport, Wash. The PUC said Aug. 19 that a "community of interest" exists between Priest River and the other towns and has directed the phone company to submit more information about toll-free costs within 60 days. The commission said it will approve the change if General Telephone Co. can provide the service at a reasonable cost.

Bronco marching band reborn

BOISE (AP) — The changes are coming fast to Boise State University football games: a blue playing field, orange jerseys and now, the rebirth of the Bronco marching band. BSU President John Kaiser announced Thursday the band is back, as a $250,000 gift from Boiseans Keith and Catherine Stein will be used to endow a 120-member marching band to begin playing for the 1987 football season. The school lost its last marching band in 1975. A lack of funds that year forced the disbanding. Newly hired Band Director David Wells will organize the unit. Wells, nationally known for his marching bands at Murray State University in Kentucky for the past 11 years, joins the BSU faculty Monday.

Men's room sweep nets arrest

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A Nevada man is the latest to be arrested and charged with a sex offense at a city park men's room on South Capital Avenue in Idaho Falls. The arrest Thursday afternoon brought to 12 the number of men arrested in the restroom in the past week for sexual offenses. The man was charged with public display of offensive sexual material for allegedly offering to perform oral sex on a plainclothes police officer. Detective Capt. Marvin Campbell said the arrests are part of a police effort to halt homosexual solicitations in the park.

Bonneville bidding procedures backed

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A revised opinion from a deputy state attorney general supports the bidding practices of the Bonneville County Commission but has been challenged by a contractors group. But the Eastern Idaho Contractors Association, which disputes the bidding procedures following construction of a county sign shop, has sought its own opinion from private attorneys. "We're going to carry this thing through to the end now," said Con Mahoney, president of the contractors association and Atlas Mechanical Inc., who added that their action would depend on their attorneys' advice. The contractors became concerned about the county's bidding policies when the road department constructed a $68,470 building addition. Construction began with county labor. When costs escalated beyond the $20,000 estimate, the commission sought outside help but did not get formal bids for the project from private business. The association claims the county has become a construction company in competition with their private businesses. Both parties agree that the sign shop project violated state bid laws. Prosecutor Blake Hall and the county commissioners maintain it is the exception rather than the rule. "First of all, we (the prosecutor's office) were not made aware of it until afterwards or else it wouldn't have happened," Hall said. "And second, in our opinion, there were some violations of the statutes. The question is, where were the violations of the statutes?" But Mahoney claims the sign shop is only one instance when the county violated state bid laws. He said the city of Idaho Falls has also circumvented the intent of the law. The first attorney general's opinion, signed by Roble G. Russell, resulted from a letter drafted by the county and the contractors seeking clarification of bid laws. Russell, a deputy attorney general, said counties and cities are required to advertise and take bids for any projects more than $5,000 or for the purchase of equipment beyond $10,000, and project costs cannot be split into portions to avoid bidding. John J. McMahon, who replaces Russell as he assumes the post of Environmental Protection Agency regional administrator, agrees with his predecessor's views on county bidding. However, McMahon deviated from Russell's findings when he said projects consisting entirely of county labor need not be put to bid. The second opinion shows "the attorney general's office has agreed that the county memorandum was more precise in stating the law than their initial findings, said Hall.

Citizen's group wants lottery vote

BOISE (AP) — A citizens' group says Idaho's voters should have a chance to vote on a lottery initiative slated for the November ballot and then consider its constitutionality. "Vote Yes" For Idaho's Economy voiced their support for an Idaho lottery on Friday in Boise, but stopped short of any action through the courts to accomplish that goal. The Associated Taxpayers of Idaho filed a writ of prohibition on Aug. 14 to stop the lottery question from appearing on the ballot with the idea that approval of the initiative would violate the Idaho Constitution's ban on a state-run lottery, although they took no stand for or against the lottery.

The Idaho Supreme Court has allowed interested parties until Aug. 27 to respond and may conduct a public hearing on the issue on Sept. 5. "Steve Green, chairman of the 'Vote Yes' group said although the Idaho Legislature has succeeded in keeping the lottery from the voters on a regular basis since the 1970s, the collection of 49,308 signatures on initiative petitions this summer shows that voters want to have their voices heard in the matter. "If people want to challenge the problem of the constitutionality of a lottery, they can do that after the election," he said.

Chubbuck transit costly

CHUBBUCK (AP) — Fewer than 50 Chubbuck residents rely on Pocatello Urban Transit for daily transportation. Currently, city taxpayers are subsidizing each rider to the tune of $70 annually. That's too much money, Chubbuck City Council members contend. Officials are recommending the city withdraw its financial support. Should that happen, PUT's "C" route, which links Chubbuck to Pocatello, will be eliminated.

Service to the Pine Ridge Mall, though, will be maintained. The mall is located in Chubbuck. Currently, Chubbuck appropriates $5,900 annually as its portion of the expense for PUT. Earlier this week, Mayor John Cotant Jr. warned the council might decide to pull its funding, rather than pump more into PUT. Eliminating PUT's funding is one of several budget items Chubbuck officials have been examining the past few weeks.

Pocatello OKs budget

POCATELLO (AP) — Promising to make long-range plans to improve fire protection, the Pocatello City Council has approved a $19.7 million budget for the 1986 fiscal year. Pocatello's new spending plan is about $600,000 higher than the current $19.1 million budget. At least 58.5 percent of next year's budget — about $11.4 million — is for salaries and benefits for 375 full-and part-time city employees. Supplies, contractual services and other programs amount to about $5.7 million, or roughly 29.5 percent of the budget.

Council members spent about 30 minutes discussing the budget before unanimously approving it. Meantime, the southeastern Idaho city's fire insurance rating will be released in October. Even if it should drop from its current "four," the city will have at least 12 months to review the rating, implement needed improvements and request a new evaluation.

Hearing: Teacher's rights weren't violated

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The North Idaho College Board of Trustees did not violate the constitutional rights of a journalism instructor last spring when it failed to extend his teaching contract, a hearing officer has determined. Rather, the board had sound financial reasons for its action, former Sandpoint magistrate Hardy Lyons decided. Attorneys for NIC, former instructor Nils Rosdahl and college president Barry Schuler received the decision Thursday, six weeks after each testified before Lyons, the agreed-upon hearing officer. "It's a matter of how wrong this is," said Rosdahl. "What Schuler and the board did was not right to do. It seems like he (Lyons) didn't listen." The controversy began last fall after the student newspaper published several scathing editorials or Schuler's administrative practices. At Schuler's request, the board elevated Rosdahl from newspaper adviser to publisher. When the board failed to renew Rosdahl's one-year contract last spring, he contended it was because he was publisher, refused to control the content of the newspaper. The board said the return of former newspaper adviser Tim Pilgrim from a leave of absence this year would eliminate the need for Rosdahl. Rosdahl filed a grievance against the board and Schuler last March. Backing Rosdahl was Pilgrim's letter to the board stating that he chose to return as an English instructor and an assurance from English department chairman Virginia Tinsley Johnson that teaching slots were available for both men. A committee of four NIC faculty members and one administrator decided in April that the board had erred. It recommended the board offer Rosdahl a probationary contract for the 1986-87 school year. But the board, upon the advice of NIC attorney James Knudson, refused to recognize the grievance committee as a legal forum. The trustees let the matter drop, but Rosdahl asked for a hearing.

Affirmative action challenged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, in its latest challenge to affirmative action, urged the Supreme Court on Friday to overturn a California county highway department's promotion of a woman over an allegedly more-qualified man.

The case "reveals not carefully tailored remedial action, but a rather extreme example of casual social engineering heedless of individual rights," the Justice Department said in a legal brief submitted to the court.

"The department said the plan giving preferential treatment to women sacrificed the interests of a veteran male worker in the illegal 'pursuit of gender balance' in the highway department's workforce."

The court will hear arguments in the case this fall, providing the justices with their latest opportunity to set guidelines for preferential treatment of women and minorities. A decision is not expected until 1987.

Reagan takes ax to oak trees

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan kept up his wood chopping chores on Friday, determined to topple three dead oak trees on his mountain-top ranch before his three-week vacation ends.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan varied his schedule on his seventh day at the 688-acre spread by taking ax in hand before lunch rather than following his usual habit of taking on heavier ranch chores in the afternoon.

Friday afternoon, Reagan and his wife Nancy were to go horseback riding at their remote ranch high in the Santa Ynez Mountains, Speakes said.

In addition to the trees, the president has been clearing brush and small trees from the woods in front of the small adobe ranch house, Speakes reported.

Anesthesia standards needed

CHICAGO (AP) — Establishing mandatory standards for monitoring patients under anesthesia could save thousands of lives and reduce the number of malpractice claims, according to a report released Friday.

Harvard Medical School in Boston has developed the first such standards for anesthesiologists, which suggests that the concept could be applied to doctors in other specialties, said the report in Friday's journal of the American Medical Association.

Traditionally, doctors have resisted attempts to regulate their day-to-day methods of caring for patients, the report said. But doctors could prevent operating-room deaths by following guidelines for the minute-by-minute care of their patients, said Dr. John Eichhorn, a Harvard assistant professor and one of the report's co-authors.

Harvard's standards for monitoring patients under anesthesia apply to its nine affiliated teaching hospitals in the Boston area.

Fuel likely plane fire source

DENVER (AP) — An engine fire that forced the 339 people aboard a TWA jumbo jet to evacuate, causing minor injuries to 14 passengers who slid down escape chutes, probably was sparked by pooling of fuel, federal officials said Friday.

"It's not uncommon," said Greg Feith, a National Transportation Safety Board spokesman. "It's sort of like a carburetor fire in your car."

The fire flared shortly after the plane, a Tristar ending a flight from St. Louis, landed at Stapleton International Airport Thursday evening.

Control tower personnel spotted the fire, and the plane's 228 passengers and 11 crew members were evacuated. The 14 passengers who suffered minor injuries while sliding the chutes were treated at hospitals and released.

Airport firefighters extinguished the blaze within minutes.

White House solar panels out

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the energy-conscious time seven years ago, the Carter administration installed a solar water-heating system in the White House and said it would save $1,000 a year in heating costs.

Now workmen have dismantled the panels in order to fix the roof underneath and the Reagan administration has decided, said spokesman Dale Petroskey, that "putting them back up would be very unwise, based on cost."

"There was a bit of embarrassment about all this. On Thursday, when the General Services Administration was asked if the panels would be replaced, spokesman Joe Slye said they would."

On Friday, Slye said the person who had given him the information had been mistaken and that a decision on replacement would be made after the roof repairs were done.

Informant back with parents

TUSTIN, Calif. (AP) — A teen-ager who turned her parents in to police for their alleged drug abuse was reunited with them, but cannot talk with them about the case because she might be a witness in court, an attorney said Friday.

The family reunited Thursday after a juvenile court hearing called at 13-year-old Deanna Young's request, is "tearfully overjoyed," said attorney Gary Proctor, who represents the girl's parents.

Deanna went to police Aug. 12 with a trash bag full of pot, pills, cocaine and a gun she said she had gathered up at home. She was prompted to turn her parents in after attending a lecture on the evils of drugs at a local church.

The parents, Bobby Dale Young, 49, a bartender at a Santa Ana tavern, and Judith Ann Young, 17, a U.S. Bankruptcy Court clerk, have been charged with one count each of cocaine possession.

Postal workers mourn slain

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — Postal workers, many in uniform and some wearing black armbands, joined more than a thousand other mourners at funerals Friday for five of their 14 fellow workers who were shot dead in a rampage at the post office.

The services, the first for the victims of the Wednesday slayings, are to be followed by more funerals over the weekend and a city-wide memorial service Sunday.

"We are realizing now, as we never have before, how great a gift we have in life," the Rev. Del Hamm said before 350 mourners at a funeral in Lawton for Pat Lou Welch.

In Oklahoma City, uniformed postal workers wearing black armbands escorted the casket of Richard Charles Esser Jr., a postal supervisor, from the St. Charles Borromeo Catholic Church.

In Edmond, an estimated 200 people were on hand for the funeral of Donna Gragert Hamilton. About 500 people attended services in Wellston for Patricia Chambers, 41, and in Yukon for Bill Miller, 30.

No one had claimed the body of Patrick Henry Sherrill, a part-time postal worker who killed himself after the assault, according to the state medical examiner's office in Oklahoma City. Five of the six postal employees wounded in the massacre remained hospitalized Friday, all in stable condition.

Sherrill, 44, silently walked through the post office about 7 a.m. Wednesday. Authorities said he first killed two supervisors, then a man who fled out the back door of the building, before returning to walk through the main offices, killing 11 others before shooting himself in the head.

In Lawton, family members and friends of Mrs. Welch were joined at the First Baptist Church by scores of postal workers, many wearing their blue uniforms.

Mrs. Welch, 27, was the daughter of Pat Ford, the director of customer service at the Lawton Post Office.

"There's a great deal of respect for Pat," said Kinley McGuire, postmaster of the Lawton office. "Several of our carriers took about 45 minutes leave to attend. One person told me they wanted to go but preferred not to because it tore him up so."

Hamm, pastor of the Hillcrest Christian Church in Oklahoma City, where Mrs. Welch and her husband, Randy, were about to become members, told the mourners, "She is not dead. She lives forever in our memories and in her faith."

The brightly lighted altar was adorned with more than three dozen blue, red, white, yellow and peach-colored flowers. Two framed pictures of Mrs. Welch, including one of her in her wedding gown, were placed above her closed steel blue casket.

Esser, 38, is believed to be one of the first killed in the slaughter. At his funeral Mass, the congregation sang of abiding in the shadows of God.

Mrs. Hamilton, 28, was eulogized as a woman with a warm personality whose smile was the first thing people noticed when they met her.

"I predict that Edmond, Okla., is going to be stronger as a result of this nightmare, this catastrophe, and will be united as never before," Dr. Alan Day of the First Baptist Church of Edmond told the congregation.

Edmond postal officials said most employees attended funerals Friday. The office was run by employees from Oklahoma City and the surrounding area.

In addition to Friday's five funerals, seven services were scheduled Saturday and one each were set for Sunday and Monday. The services were taking place in 10 different communities, including Marietta, Ga., and St. John, Kan.

Services were pending for Sherrill. As the funerals began, residents — greeting their own letter carriers with newfound appreciation — and decorating mailboxes and telephone poles with yellow ribbons — banded together to try to cope with the tragedy. Counseling sessions were scheduled for survivors and victims' families.

One of the men in charge of the grief therapy is Michael Mantel of the National Organization of Victim Assistance, who led the response team in San Ysidro, Calif., following the killing of 21 people at a McDonald's restaurant in 1984.

Nurses strike 3 hospitals

BOSTON (AP) — Nurses launched a 24-hour strike against the three city-owned hospitals Friday, but the state ordered them to return to work and to meet with arbitrators over demands for higher wages and freedom from non-medical duties.

A spokeswoman for the 800 striking nurses said the union would review the state labor commission order before acting on it. "That could take some time," said Gale Shore, a registered nurse with the Local 285 of the Service Employees International Union.

By late morning, about 200 nurses were picketing the large Boston City Hospital and two smaller chronic-care hospitals, Ms. Shore said. She said few nurses had crossed the picket line.

Anti-satellite test success, officials say

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force successfully tested its anti-satellite weapon Friday even though the test remained within restrictions imposed by Congress, the service announced.

The anti-satellite, or ASAT, test used the energy source of a distant star as the target, the Air Force said.

The test was conducted by a high-flying F-15 jet from Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. It was the fourth test of the weapon, which sits at the end of a small, two-stage rocket carried aloft by the fighter. After the plane fires the weapon, the ASAT is supposed to aim into its target at high speed.

Last year, congressional arms control advocates succeeded in winning enactment of a ban on tests of the ASAT weapon against a target in space. That ban, which extends through the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, came after the U.S. ASAT successfully destroyed an aging scientific satellite in the only attempt thus far to knock out a satellite.

The ASAT test ban would be extended through the next fiscal year in the Pentagon budget bill approved last week by the Democratic-controlled House.

No such ban is part of the companion measure passed earlier by the Republican-run Senate and a House-Senate conference committee will try next month to iron out differences between the two bills, President Reagan has threatened to veto any final version of the bill if it contains the ASAT test ban or four other amendments added in the House by arms control advocates.

The Air Force said Friday's test provided data on the ability of the weapon's sensor to track an infrared heat source closer to the earth's horizon than previous tests.

The test was the fourth in which the ASAT weapon was actually fired and comes in the wake of 33 other demonstrations in which the weapon was simply carried aloft by the F-15.

The three previous tests involved the destruction of the satellite last year and two 1984 tests. In one of those, the ASAT was launched at a predetermined point in space and in the other it locked on heat emitted from a distant star.

The Air Force said Friday that it plans another test before the end of next month against an "infrared source" in space, along with three tests against targets in fiscal 1987. Those tests would be blocked if the House ban is enacted into law.

Silkwood case settled for $1.38 million

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Kerr-McGee Corp. agreed Friday to give the estate of Karen Silkwood $1.38 million to settle a 10-year-old plutonium contamination lawsuit against the energy company.

Silkwood, a lab analyst at the Kerr-McGee Cimarron Plutonium Plant near Crescent, died in an auto accident Nov. 13, 1974. The 28-year-old employee was on her way to meet with a New York Times reporter to discuss alleged safety problems at the plant.

A federal court jury in 1979 awarded her family $10.5 million in punitive and compensatory damages, but the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver twice reversed the $10 million in punitive damages and last year ordered a new trial. That trial was to be limited to conduct by Kerr-McGee that might have allowed plutonium to escape from its Crescent plant and punitive damages that might result from that conduct.

With the settlement, Kerr-McGee in no way accepted blame for alleged plutonium contamination of Silkwood and in fact "believe we would have prevailed" in a new trial, company spokesman Rick Perelles said.

But Perelles said Kerr-McGee felt it was to its economic benefit to settle out of court and get the case behind it.

"That is not our only consideration, but it was a large consideration," Perelles said. He said the company believed "the economic decision was foremost for us." The legal process would have cost in excess of the settlement.

The family's attorney, Jim Ikard, said Silkwood's three children on Thursday waived any future liability against the energy company.

Ikard said the three children will each receive about one-third of approximately $500,000. Most of the rest will go for attorney fees and expenses, including about $70,000 to Silkwood's father, Bill, as administrator of the estate.

Perelles said a settlement was agreed to after several months of negotiations between Kerr-McGee and attorneys for the family.

Controllers now in desk jobs

PALMDALE, Calif. (AP) — Officials investigating alleged drug use by air traffic controllers at a regional center have removed 38 controllers from their radar screens and placed them in desk jobs, union officials said Friday.

The allegations stem from a sheriff's raid on a party attended by controllers about a month ago, said John Thornton, who is with a union trying to organize controllers nationwide.

The union hasn't heard if the Federal Aviation Administration suspects the controllers of using drugs on duty, Thornton said from the Washington, D.C., headquarters of the National Air Traffic Controllers Association.

FAA officials refused to discuss the investigation, but scheduled a news conference later in the day.

Los Angeles County Sheriff's Deputy Jim Bauder said the local investigation was turned over to the FAA and referred all questions to that agency.

Can pull tabs have no value

WASHINGTON (AP) — People in several states have been collecting pull tabs from beverage cans under the wrong assumption—the tabs can be redeemed to help kidney disease patients, the Aluminum Association says.

There's no truth to what seems to be a persistent myth that the tabs can be used to buy treatments for kidney patients on dialysis machines, association president John C. Bard said in a news release distributed Friday.

Groups have collected hundreds of thousands of pull tabs, Bard said, but these people were victims of "an unfortunate myth." "We have no idea how it gets started or how it's perpetuated," he said. "We only know that a lot of well-meaning people are left unhappy and embarrassed."

He said no aluminum company has ever sponsored such a program.

Emmylou, Dolly, Linda team for show

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singers Emmylou Harris, Dolly Parton and Linda Ronstadt will make a rare public performance together at the Country Music Association Awards show Oct. 13 on national television, the CMA says.

The trio will sing the song "Dear Companion," which is on an album they have collaborated on, the association said Thursday.

The album has been in the works for several years and is due for release early next year.

In 1977, the three joined voices to record the Christmas song "Light of the Stable."

Dallas' star auctions items he had touched

CLINTON, Ind. (AP) — Actor Ken Kercheval was along to encourage the bidders as 400 people thronged to his mother's yard for a chance to bid on items that the "Dallas" star had touched.

Kercheval, who plays Cliff Barnes on the television show, worked the auction-day crowd, signing autographs on everything that was shoved in front of him.

"I ate Jell-O out of every one of those ... bowls out there," he said, trying to pump more interest into the bidding Tuesday.

He and his mother, Christine Kercheval, needn't have worried. Everything from pitchers with no handles to chairs with no arms was snapped.

Skaggs' son on mend after shooting attack

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — The son of country music star Ricky Skaggs was doing well after a second operation to repair damage from a gunshot wound, Roanoke Memorial Hospital said.

Seven-year-old Andrew Lee Skaggs was listed in satisfactory condition Friday in the pediatric intensive care unit, and no complications had surfaced from Thursday's surgery to repair the lining of the carotid artery in his neck, said spokeswoman Sally Ramey.

Doctors predicted he will remain

LINDA RONSTADT Singing from joint album

In the hospital another five to seven days, she said.

The surgery performed by Dr. Rahmat Seli was the second in five days for the boy, who was brought into the hospital Sunday night with the wound suffered when a trucker allegedly fired a shot through the window of the car in which the youngster was riding with his mother, Brenda Skaggs.

The first operation was to remove the bullet from the boy's throat.

Skaggs joined his first wife at the hospital Thursday during the surgery. Mrs. Skaggs said hospital personnel told her the bullet just missed her son's jugular vein. "It was a miracle that it hit exactly where it did," she said.

Trucker Edward Dean Duerhing, 36, of Germantown, Md., was arrested about two hours after the shooting. He is charged with malicious wounding, shooting into an occupied vehicle, possession of a stolen weapon, possession of cocaine, methamphetamine and marijuana, and use of a firearm in the commission of a felony. He is being held on $125,000 bond.

Paroled Crosby joins Nash for concert set

HOUSTON (AP) — Singer David Crosby, recently paroled from a Texas prison on narcotics and weapons charges, joined his former partner, Graham Nash, for an emotional concert reunion at a Houston nightclub.

"Thinking about this is what kept me going," Crosby told the enthusiastic audience Thursday after he came on stage midway through Nash's set.

"I've been waiting for this for almost a year," Nash replied.

Crosby, who gained fame as a member of the Byrds in the mid-1960s, later teamed with Nash as part of another hit group, Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young. They sang several songs from their past.

Crosby also sang a song he composed during his five months in prison. He was convicted in 1983 after being arrested in Dallas on charges of possession of cocaine and possession of a firearm.

"I don't regret any of it," Crosby said to the crowd Thursday.

New Miss U.S. Teen given cellular telephone

MERRILLVILLE, Ind. (AP) — The new Miss U.S. Teen, Curtis Zukaukas, says winning the pageant was fabulous.

"It hasn't sunk in yet," said the 18-year-old winner from Elizabeth, Pa., whose prizes include a $5,200 cash scholarship and a Caribbean vacation.

Ms. Zukaukas' prizes also include a four-year tuition scholarship to Indiana University, Livingston State University in Florida, or Jacksonville University in Florida.

Chicago Bears football player Willie Gault, who opened a business in Merrillville called Gault Communications, gave the winner a cellular telephone.

First runner-up in Thursday night's event, billed as a "scholarship pageant," was Miss Mississippi, Johanna Plummer; second runner-up, Miss Florida, Laura Rogers; third runner-up Miss Alaska, Kathy Waeloff; and fourth runner-up Miss Texas, Julie Condra.

Jim Herrett, Acme's chief executive officer, says the company is turning to new manufacturing tasks

Acme adapts to slow farm economy

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

FILED — Acme Manufacturing Co. Inc. is not the company it was three years ago. It operates with half as many workers. It has lopped off some product lines. It has switched out of complex farm machines and into simpler parts. To remain profitable, Acme Manufacturing has been forced to scale down operations. At the same time, it has started to "work smarter" by turning its machinery to new manufacturing tasks, Chief Executive Officer Jim Herrett says. Acme Manufacturing is being reshaped. "We have restructured ourselves internally to make sure that we are here later when things pick up," Herrett says. For years, Acme has produced specialized farm equipment, primarily for potato and sugar beet growers. Most of its business comes from sales of harvester chains that dig tubers out of the ground. It also has manufactured potato planters, bale handling equipment, harrows, row markers and other tools adapted to farming conditions in the Northwest.

Like other agricultural suppliers, Acme has found its livelihood threatened by economic conditions on the farm. "Basically farmers are not spending any money for products they don't absolutely have to have," Herrett says. A flood of tillage tools from foreign countries such as Korea and India also has hurt the industry. "Everybody agrees that they are poor quality, but they still are 40 percent of the cost of ours and farmers cannot afford to buy the U.S. product," he says. Three years ago, with conditions worsening, Acme executives started to cut the size of the company. "We have reduced our work staff only at the blue-collar level, but at the middle-management level as well," Herrett says. The cuts have dropped the Acme work force to 65 employees from about twice that number. Layoffs recently reached to the supervisory level. At this stage, Herrett says he expects revenue or profit figures. But Acme remains profitable as it nears the end of its transition, Herrett says. "We're being successful at it. We're a smaller company, downsized from what we were, but we hope we're working smarter and in the right area. That's diversifying out of some agriculture (production)," he says.

fabricating parts. Acme will continue to produce the potato-digging chains, that bring 75 percent of its business. It is one of only five companies in the country making them. It will continue to manufacture some private-label farm tools. However, the manufacturer also is moving outside agriculture to keep its machine tools busy. The machinery will be hardening lawn mower blades and edges for other uses, Herrett says. "We are redirecting our efforts into some new areas we have not been active in before," he says. The company will build on its expertise in "wear" products. "Acme executives have been looking for new customers and have been finding some. The volume isn't enough to return Acme to its robust days, however. The privately held company does not release revenue or profit figures. But Acme remains profitable as it nears the end of its transition, Herrett says. "We're being successful at it. We're a smaller company, downsized from what we were, but we hope we're working smarter and in the right area. That's diversifying out of some agriculture (production)," he says.

Judge says hearing will remain open

JEROME — A preliminary hearing scheduled for Tuesday in the first-degree murder case of Mary Susanne Workman will be open to the public, 5th District Magistrate Judge John Varn ruled Friday. He based his ruling on a U.S. Supreme Court decision, made seven weeks ago, which held that preliminary hearings may be closed only if there is a substantial probability that the defendant's right to a fair trial will be prejudiced. In the past, Idaho law has allowed preliminary hearings to be closed automatically if the defendant requests it, as Workman did. Workman, now free on a $20,000 bond, is accused of first-degree murder for the shooting death of her stepfather John Slater, 81, on Oct. 10. The bodies of Slater and his wife Pauline, 68, were found in their trailer home in Jerome. She was charged after a coroner's jury ruled it was probable she was responsible for both deaths. She was not charged, however, with the death of her mother Pauline. Her attorney, Randy Stoker, argued that the news media and public should be excluded from the hearing because Jerome has a population of only 15,000 from which to choose jurors. And, Stoker said, most of the people in the county have access to the three news organizations that challenge his petition for closure — The Times-News, the Northside News of Jerome and KMYT-TV. Stoker also argued that there has been substantial publicity so far in the case — and that not all of it has been accurate. If the court proceedings have to be moved to another county to find jurors not prejudiced by pre-trial publicity, costs to Jerome County taxpayers could be substantial, Stoker said. While Stoker may have his facts straight, none of them necessarily show that Workman's right to a fair trial would be prejudiced by allowing the press and other public access to the preliminary hearing, Varn wrote in his decision filed Friday afternoon. Vair dire, a preliminary examination of prospective jurors, is cumbersome but can identify those whose prior knowledge of the case would prevent them from rendering an impartial verdict, Varn said. He quoted Chief Justice Warren Burger's opinion that "the First Amendment right of access cannot be overcome by the conclusory assertion that publicity might deprive the defendant of the right to a fair trial." "This court must conclude that even though Idaho Code 19-811 requires closure automatically if the defendant requests closure, that statute must be construed in light of the Supreme Court decision in Press Enterprises II," Varn wrote. "In this case, the defendant has not demonstrated she would be denied a fair trial if public access is allowed. Her request for closure is denied." Varn will allow witnesses to be excluded from the proceedings while other witnesses are testifying, however. Witnesses will also be ordered not to talk to each other until all the witnesses have been examined, Varn said. Times-News Managing Editor Stephen Hartgen said he was pleased with Varn's decision. "Simply saying that a case has had a lot of publicity, as Stoker did, is not a reason to close the hearing," he said. "If the case goes forward, there will be plenty of opportunity to question what they have read and seen in the news. I don't think a lawyer has an absolute right to keep the public out of court. I think Stoker was wrong, although I can't fault his diligence on behalf of his client." While Varn's decision will not officially set precedent, because it was not made on the appellate court level, Hartgen predicted that it would be widely noted by the legal community across the state. The public can expect to have more information about what goes on in preliminary hearings — in

KETCHUM (AP) — The Groundwater Alliance, a Ketchum-based anti-nuclear group, said it plans to oppose the Department of Energy's tentative plans to build a facility to produce weapons-grade plutonium from spent nuclear fuel at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory. The INEL was chosen last week as the preferred site for the $500 million Special Isotope Separation project, which would use laser technology to extract plutonium for use in nuclear weapons. The project is expected to generate 400 construction jobs and employ a permanent work force of 750 during its 30-year lifespan. "The SIS would be a nuclear weapons production facility, and the Groundwater Alliance is opposed to the production of nuclear weapons," a spokeswoman said. "We believe that nuclear weapons will threaten global security, not enhance it." White stresses the value of independent courts

Justice expresses concern about ability of middle class to gain access to courts

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Supreme Court Justice Byron White told circuit court judges and lawyers here Friday that Americans have adequate access to the courts and that an independent judiciary allows them fair treatment when there. "Most people should feel bad about losing a case, but I don't feel they should feel they are getting a bum shake," White said during the 1986 8th Circuit Judicial Conference meeting in Sun Valley this week. While federal judges having appointments are salaries set for life, Americans should believe that they have an independent judicial system not influenced by politicians or wealthy business interests, White said during a question and answer session in which he touched on several subjects. White said he is more worried about the ability of the middle class to gain access to courts than he is the rich or poor. The rich have the money to pay their way into the system, and the poor have access through legal services. But, the middle class has neither of those resources, he said. However, with the adoption of federal fee-sharing statutes, under which the loser of a lawsuit pays the winner's legal fees, all classes should have adequate access, White said. "I think the fee-sharing statutes have had a tremendous impact on access to the courts," he said. On another subject, White defended President Reagan's right to make appointments to the federal courts based on the ideology of the nominees. "I can't imagine a president who wouldn't consider ideology in appointing (Supreme Court) justices or other people to the courts," he said. There is no constitutional prohibition against it and every president has done it, White said. Although there is no requirement for Supreme Court justices to have legal experience, White said "all have been (lawyers) of one kind or another." He said the only necessary qualifications for a justice are intelligence and productiveness. He also defended the Senate's right to intensely examine a president's choices to fill openings in the judicial system, saying they should maintain the right to approve or disapprove the appointees. Some critics have recently suggested the Senate should have that right taken away. White predicted little immediate change in the direction of the Supreme Court under William Rehnquist, Reagan's nominee for chief justice. "Because his ideological position differs little from retiring Chief Justice Warren Burger's. He said, however, that each chief justice's personality eventually will have an effect, and some internal changes may take place immediately. "The arrival of a new chief justice is a time for looking around

Justice Byron White defends the Senate's right to examine judicial appointments on his procedures, our own rules." White said. He called it a time for "questioning if we can't do things better." On other subjects, White's comments were: • He favors an inter-circuit panel to help relieve the Supreme Court of its workload. • Since his appointment in 1962, White said the court's workload has increased 50-percent with the number of written decisions rising from about 100 each year to about 150. Jim Herrett, Acme's chief executive officer, says the company is turning to new manufacturing tasks

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

FILER — Acme Manufacturing Co. Inc. is not the company it was three years ago. It operates with half as many workers. It has lopped off some product lines. It has switched out of complex farm machines and into simpler parts.

To remain profitable, Acme Manufacturing has been forced to scale down operations. At the same time, it has started to "work smarter" by turning its machinery to new manufacturing tasks, Chief Executive Officer Jim Herrett says.

Acme Manufacturing is being reshaped. "We have restructured ourselves internally to make sure that we are here later when things pick up," Herrett says.

For years, Acme has produced specialized farm equipment, primarily for potato and sugar beet growers. Most of its business comes from sales of harvester chains that dig tubers out of the ground. It also has manufactured a potato planter, bale handling equipment, harrows, row markers and other tools adapted to farming conditions in the Northwest.

Like other agricultural suppliers, Acme has found its livelihood threatened by economic conditions on the farm. "Basically farmers are not spending any money for products they don't absolutely have to have," Herrett says.

A flood of tillage tools from foreign countries such as Korea and India also has hurt the industry. "Everybody agrees that they are poor quality, but they still are 40 percent of the cost of ours and farmers cannot afford to buy the U.S. product," he says.

Three years ago, with conditions worsening, Acme executives started to cut the size of the company. "We have reduced our work staff not only at the blue-collar level, but at the middle-management level as well," Herrett says.

The cuts have dropped the Acme work force to 65 employees from about twice that number. Layoffs recently reached to the supervisory level. At this stage, Herrett says he expects few or no more reductions of permanent employees.

In addition to slimming Acme down, top management also jettisoned product lines, selling off the rights to its potato planter among others. The strategy, Herrett says, is to stop making complicated machinery and focus on fabricating parts.

Acme will continue to produce the potato-digging chains that bring 75 percent of its business. It is one of only five companies in the country making them. It will continue to manufacture some private-label farm tools.

However, the manufacturer also is moving outside agriculture to keep its machine tools busy. The machinery will be hardening lawn mower blades and edges for other uses, Herrett says. "We are redirecting our efforts into some new areas we have not been active in before," he says. The company will build on its expertise in least-trail and specialty "wear" products.

Acme executives have been looking for new customers and have been finding some. The volume isn't enough to return Acme to its robust days, however.

The privately held company does not release revenue or profit figures. But Acme remains profitable as it nears the end of its transition, Herrett says.

"We're being successful at it. We're a smaller company, downsized from what we were, but we hope we're working smarter and in the right area. That's diversifying out of some agriculture (production)," he says.

JEROME — A preliminary hearing scheduled for Tuesday in the first-degree murder case of Mary Susanne Workman will be open to the public, 5th District Magistrate Judge John Varin ruled Friday.

He based his ruling on a U.S. Supreme Court decision, made seven weeks ago, which held that preliminary hearings may be closed only if there is a substantial probability that the defendant's right to a fair trial will be prejudiced.

In the past, Idaho law has allowed preliminary hearings to be closed automatically if the defendant requests it, as Workman did.

Cable proposal to televise CSI basketball sparks interest

TWIN FALLS — A winning basketball team is generating local excitement and big ideas, which may or may not pan out for the College of Southern Idaho.

King Videocable in Twin Falls has approached the college with an offer to donate two hours of air time a day to broadcast CSI basketball games.

The proposal was discussed at a CSI Board of Trustees meeting on Wednesday. CSI President Gerald Meyerhoefer said talks many between the college and King Video are only in the preliminary stages.

But that discussion sparked some interest from other broadcasters.

KMYT General Manager Lee Wagner said on Friday that his station is interested in broadcasting some games this season although they had not approached the college with an offer.

"It wouldn't be appropriate for us to broadcast all the games, there are just too sure how it would affect his station's con- tract," Wagner said. "But, absolutely, we're interested in doing some."

College officials this week expressed concern that the King Video proposal may set off a bidding war between King Video and KMYT, a long-time college supporter, officials said.

KEEP Radio already has an exclusive contract to broadcast Golden Eagle games. David Capps, with KEEP, said he was not aware of King Video's offer and he was not planning on doing."

King Video did broadcast some past-season CSI games, and Capps said his station had no problem with that.

One board member worried, however, that broadcasting games would cut down on attendance, unless coverage were blacked out or games were tape-delayed.

Wagner said he saw no problem with broadcasting games, whoever does it.

"You're always going to have the serious CSI fan who will go to every game," he said. "I think the broadcasts would generate additional following."

Wagner said the only other way to do it would be to tape-delay games. A blackout, which national TV networks use for major sporting events, would not work in this area, because if they blacked out Twin Falls, very few people would be left to watch.

Group opposes plutonium project

KETCHUM (AP) — The Groundwater Alliance, a Ketchum-based anti-nuclear group, said it plans to oppose the Department of Energy's tentative plans to build a facility to produce weapons-grade plutonium from spent nuclear fuel at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

The INEL is the site for the $500 million Special Isotope Separation project, which would use laser technology to extract plutonium for use in nuclear weapons.

The project is expected to generate 400 construction jobs and employ a permanent work force of 750 during its 30-year lifespan.

"The SIS would be a nuclear weapons production facility, and the Groundwater Alliance is opposed to the production of nuclear weapons," spokeswoman Lisa Paul said. "We believe that nuclear weapons will threaten global security, not enhance it."

The Groundwater Alliance says it will work with other state and national peace organizations to campaign against SIS construction, and urge the DOE prepare a worst-case accident scenario.

Idaho DOE Manager Troy Wade said the Groundwater Alliance opposition comes as no surprise, adding that the group would have "ample opportunity" to air its concerns.

White said he is more worried about the ability of the middle class to gain access to courts than he is the rich or poor.

The rich have the money to pay their way into the system, and the poor have access through legal services. But, the middle class has neither of those resources, he said.

However, with the adoption federal fee-sharing statutes, under which the loser of a lawsuit pays the winner's legal fees, all classes should have adequate access, White said.

"I think the fee-sharing statutes have had a less-than-impact (on access to the courts)," he said.

On another subject, White defended President Reagan's right to make appointments to the federal courts based on the ideology of the nominees.

"I can't imagine a president who wouldn't consider ideology in appointing (Supreme Court) justices or other people to the courts," he said. There is no constitutional prohibition against it and every president has done it, White said.

Although there is no requirement for Supreme Court justices to have legal experience, White said "all have been (lawyers) of one kind or another." He said the only necessary qualifications for a justice are intelligence and productivity.

He also defended the Senate's right to intensely examine a president's choices to fill openings in the judicial system, saying they should maintain the right to approve or disapprove the appointments. Some critics have recently suggested the Senate should have that right taken away.

White predicted little immediate change in the direction of the Supreme Court under William Rehnquist — Reagan's nominee for chief justice — because his ideological position differs little from retiring Chief Justice Warren Burger's.

Justice Byron White defends the Senate's right to examine judicial appointments at our procedures, our own rules," White said. He called it a time for "wondering if we can't do things better."

On other subjects, White's comments were:

- He favors an inter-circuit panel to help relieve the Supreme Court of its workload. Since his appointment in 1962, White said the court's workload has increased 50 percent from about 100 cases yearly to about 150. Yet, many cases worthy of the

Garn tested for kidney donation to daughter

By MICHAEL WHITE Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Sen. Jake Garn underwent tests Friday and said doctors found him a good candidate to donate a kidney to a diabetic daughter whose kidneys are failing.

"I'd be very happy and proud to help her. I have absolutely no qualms," said Garn, adding that the operation could take place as soon as a week, or as long as several months from now. "Any other father or mother would feel the same."

Garn, a Republican seeking a third term Utah's senior senator, was tested at the University of Utah's Health Sciences Center early Friday after being told the condition of his daughter, Susan Garn Horne, 27, had worsened.

He would not provide details, saying only "she does face total kidney failure." Mrs. Horne, 51, suffers from progressive kidney failure and is being treated at Georgetown Hospital in Washington, where the transplant would take place, said press secretary Laurita Snow.

Sum Valley, Idaho, aides said. Garn, 53, has been evaluated to determine his suitability as a donor.

Symms rips forest management plan

EMMETT, Idaho (AP) — U.S. Forest Service plans for Idaho national forests will not provide enough timber for Idaho sawmills, Sen. Steve Symms told a hearing here Friday.

Symms said the Forest Service has decided that "aesthetics, wildlife, recreation and wilderness are more important than Idaho jobs."

Leroy said the management plans could cost 2,000 jobs in the Idaho timber industry. He said the planning process does not reflect a full understanding of its impact on Idaho's economy.

Hofmann files stolen; judge delays hearing

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A hearing on a motion to consolidate the five trials of documents dealer Mark Hofmann was continued until Sept. 10 after defense attorneys told a district judge their files on Hofmann's case had been stolen.

Yengich said the disk was not discovered until Wednesday when a secretary opened the box where the computerized files are kept. He said the matter has been referred to police.

County ponders changes in drinking law

CALDWELL, Idaho (AP) — Canyon County commissioners are awaiting more input from local residents before deciding whether to loosen the county's drinking laws.

Even if commissioners approved the bar owners' request, local city councils would also have to consider the issue.

ized the drive to get signatures of persons opposed to the extended laws because of the number of people who die in alcohol-related accidents.

Egan said he believes the upcoming election and religion have some bearing on the commissioners' reluctance to take action on the request.

"The rest of the disk will not hamper the case because written copies of the same information were kept and no confidential files were on the disk."

Yengich said he had planned to seek the continuance before the disk was discovered missing.

"I included it in the reasons for a continuance because I'm concerned lest it happen again that the judge be aware of it," he said.

Yengich said he needed to delay the hearing because he is preparing defense motions that he wants the judge to hear at the same time prosecutors present theirs.

He said he also needs more time to prepare because he has been preoccupied with other cases, including the Utah Supreme Court's recent decision upholding the first-degree murder conviction of New York heir Frances Schreuder.

Retigrup said he had no objection to the delay since Hofmann's murder trial, scheduled for March 2 in Rigtrup's courtroom, was still half a year away.

However, he indicated that any delays closer to the trial date may not be tolerated.

"I'm committed and I'm firm on that date. We're going to go," he said.

Boise offers incentives for new wood stoves

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The city of Boise is offering incentives to get local residents to buy new, more efficient wood-burning stoves for winter heating.

changes from the Exxon Corp.

Kemphorne said the loan programs will buy about 600 new stoves and help reduce Boise's wood smoke pollution, which last winter choked the city with 18 straight days of unhealthy air.

He said the 10,000 people who generally rely on wood heat will get an economic benefit, along with a health boost, from the more efficient stoves.

"With these new, clean-burning stoves you're going to burn less wood to get the same heat," Kemphorne said.

Kemphorne said a 30 percent incentive in efficiency would save the typical stove user about $20 a year in wood costs.

Loans will be available beginning Sept. 1, Kemphorne said.

Only those replacing inefficient stoves with clean stoves will be eligible for the loans, Kemphorne said, so the city is not encouraging the purchase of stoves for those who don't already heat with them.

Interest rates for the loans range from 1 percent to 5 percent, with loans for cleaner, more expensive stoves set at 1 percent.

Catholic theologian punished for views

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Vatican, in an unprecedented step against an American priest, declared on Monday that a prominent Catholic University professor cannot remain a church theologian because of his liberal views on sexual issues.

The punishment, long threatened by church officials in Rome, came despite objections from hundreds of the Rev. Charles Curran's fellow theologians, who complained to the Vatican that he should not be singled out for views they said were common among Catholic teachers in this country.

Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, in a written decision approved by Pope John Paul II, declined to directly address the issue of widespread U.S. dissent to church leaders' teaching on such issues as abortion and divorce.

Instead, Ratzinger quoted from a letter he sent Curran last fall, stating: "The authorities of the church cannot allow the present situation to continue in which the inherent contradiction is prolonged that one who is to teach in the name of the church in fact denies its teaching."

Curran, a former president of the Catholic Theological Society of America, could not be reached immediately for comment.

He had refused numerous demands to retract, contending he was "a committed Catholic" who simply believed such church-banned practices as artificial birth control, divorce and even abortion can be morally chosen in limited circumstances.

Monday's action does not affect his standing as a full-fledged Catholic priest. However, it does mean he cannot keep his professorship at Catholic University of America, a Washington college controlled by the Vatican and supervised by America's bishops.

The university's chancellor, Archbishop James Hickey of Washington, said in a statement, "The fully supported judgment of the Holy See. The Holy Father and the bishops have the right and the duty to ensure that what is taught in the name of the church be completely faithful to its full and authentic teaching."

Curran had complained to Ratzinger that his dissent should be allowed because it did not take issue with church standards that any pope had declared infallibly true.

Ratzinger, in his written reply, said the church's Second Vatican Council defined infallibility more broadly, decreeing that "when the world's Catholic bishops are agreed—that a particular position ought to be held as definitive and infallible manner."

And he said Curran paid too little heed to the council's condemnation of abortion as an "unspeakable crime" and to church leaders' unequivocal stands against divorce, artificial contraception, premarital intercourse, homosexual acts and euthanasia.

In any case, he said, Catholics must religiously submit their "intellect and will to the teaching which the Supreme Pontiff and the college of bishops enunciate on faith or morals... even if they do not intend to proclaim it with a definitive act."

The action against Curran marks the first time such a punishment has ever been meted out to an American and the first time the rarely used penalty has been used against anyone since 1979, when the Vatican punished internationally known Swiss theologian Hans Kung.

Curran will no longer be deemed "suitable nor eligible to exercise the functions of a professor of Catholic theology," said the official letter to Curran from Ratzinger, who is head of the Vatican's Congregation for the Faith.

Earlier this year, more than 700 members of the Catholic Theological Society and the College of Catholic Theologians signed a letter telling Ratzinger that they and others would "be profoundly disturbed" by action against Curran.

"If Father Curran's views on the various issues mentioned in the letter are so incompatible with Catholic teaching that he must be declared no longer a Catholic theologian, justice and fairness would dictate that other Catholic theologians who hold similar views should be treated in exactly the same fashion."

"Indeed the credibility of any action on the part of the congregation would be seriously undermined by a failure to identify and act upon other such cases," they said. "The problem is, of course, that there are very many Catholic theologians who do dissent from noninfallible teachings."

Alabama town gets Idaho messages

SELMA, Ala. (AP) — Hundreds of letters from Hope, Idaho, bearing biblical messages of death and destruction have landed in Selma mail boxes much to the bewilderment of recipients and postal officials.

The plain white envelopes, which began arriving Wednesday, have become the talk of this Bible Belt town of 27,000.

"I wonder if someone's mad at me," said Pat Hageman, who owns a downtown restaurant. "But I've been cursed since I was a little girl."

Recipients say each envelope contains an onion-skin page from the Bible. The pages vary from letter to letter, but each contains

Mrs. Hageman said her page came from Deuteronomy and mentioned curses for disobedience.

"The Lord shall smite thee with a consumption and a fever," it read.

Attorney Fred McCormick disclosed his letter as the work of "some kind of religious nut."

He said his page was from Genesis, "and said something about plunging a dagger into some king's belly."

Postmaster Paul Greenleaf said a heavy-set woman in her mid-50s brought the envelopes to his resort community post office this week.

Old English Bible stolen

LONDON (AP) — One of the oldest English Bibles, printed in 1540, has been stolen from a village church in northern England, police said Tuesday.

They said the thieves left behind two other valuable books when they forced open a display case in St. Edmund's parish church at Castleton, Derbyshire, to steal the 6-inch-thick Bible.

The complete English Bible, translated from Latin by Miles Coverdale, was published in 1535. The stolen Bible is the second edition of his Great Bible of 1539. It is known as a Cranmer Bible because it was a preface by Archbishop of Canterbury Thomas Cranmer and was the first authorized to be read in churches.

St. Edmund's vicar, the Rev. Michael Collier, said that the stolen Bible "is of enormous sentimental value to us. To anyone who really goes in for antique books, this would be quite a gem."

Opposition party demands S. African government quit

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government came under a two-pronged attack Friday, with the opposition in Parliament demanding its resignation and Bishop Desmond Tutu accusing it of "Tutu bashing" to make him a political scapegoat.

South Africa's Roman Catholic bishops meanwhile filed an urgent application at the Supreme Court in Pretoria seeking to restrain police from assaulting or torturing Rev. Smaugalis Mkhathshwa, general secretary of the bishops' conference.

The application, to be heard Monday, did not say how Mkhathshwa might have been mistreated since he was detained without charge on June 12. However, the jailed cleric's lawyer, Brian Curran, said he and two doctors visited Mkhathshwa late Friday and decided to proceed with the application.

In Parliament, a no-confidence motion by the Progressive Federal Party calling on the Cabinet to resign was tabled for a three-hour debate. A motion supporting the government was then adopted by a vote of 77-38.

The Progressive Federal Party's leader, Colin Eglin, said the governing National Party has outplayed its apartheid. He and his colleagues said the government had progressed apace, oppressed dissenters and provoked sanctions.

Tutu, the black Anglican bishop, returned Thursday from a trip to Japan, China and Jamaica.

He told a news conference Friday he stood by his previous calls for punitive sanctions against South Africa. He said he was not deterred by suggestions that he should be prosecuted for treason.

Asked about a government charge that while in China he revealed his advocacy of socialism, Tutu said he consistently voiced his dislike for capitalism and his preference for "a system that is sharing, caring, compassionate."

Tutu responded sharply to remarks by Manpower Minister Pietie Du Plessis, who said this month that Tutu's advocacy of sanctions bordered on high treason.

"He, like others before him, engages in the national pastime of many white South Africans, Tutu bashing, knowing it will give them instant popularity, certainly assured publicly," the bishop said.

"It is sad to discover that we still think we can solve the serious problem of this country by looking for scapegoats either outside the country or internally, and fill the bill."

Tutu was clearly angered by Du Plessis' charge that he did not care if sanctions hurt South African blacks. He said Du Plessis' "inflammatory" is quite gallant, when you realize that he is a member of a government whose policies have inflicted, quite deliberately, unnecessary and unacceptable suffering on our people.

"I want to tell him that the vast majority of South Africans are sick and tired of the evil, immoral and unjust policies that he and his colleagues have carried out and continue to do so," Tutu said.

Tutu is to be installed Sept. 7 as archbishop of Cape Town, the top Anglican post in southern Africa. He criticized local newspaper accounts of his decision to invite noted entertainers, politicians and civil rights leaders to the ceremony.

"Can you imagine in a more normal country there being such an unseemly fuss over a guest list?" he asked. "And to have newspapers gloating that invited guests may not come? How petty."

Eglin, introducing his no-confidence motion in the white chamber of the three-house segregated Parliament in Cape Town, said the government and most whites failed to realize that "elimination of apartheid requires a vast social, economic and political reconstruction of our society."

Apartheid establishes a racially segregated society in which South Africa's 24 million black majority has no vote in national affairs. The 5 million whites control the economy and maintain separate districts, schools and health services.

A state of emergency was declared June 12 because of widespread anti-apartheid unrest.

Seeking riches

Prospectors attack a "gold face" on the banks of the Insuza-River near Durban, South Africa. Experts who say the nuggets being found are only gold rush has drawn thousands of fortune seekers to the river in recent weeks, undeterred by experts who say the nuggets being found are only fool's gold.

Pakistan security forces, demonstrators exchange fire

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Security forces exchanged fire with demonstrators Friday, killing at least two people and raising the official toll to 29 in more than a week of protest against President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq.

Turmoil at rallies organized by the political opposition declined on the day of Zia's scheduled return from a Moslem pilgrimage, with riot police often outnumbering protesters.

Only one person showed up for what had been billed as a major protest in Rawalpindi and was seized by scores of waiting police. About 300 people gathered in Karachi but were quickly dispersed.

Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo postponed a trip to Kenya that was to have begun next Thursday, citing unspecified "administrative difficulties." High-level sources said he did not want to leave until the situation was secure.

A government statement said security forces opened fire after shots came from people blocking a road near Shahdadhpur in southern Sind province. It said four protesters were wounded.

Opposition activists in the area claimed five people were killed and 11 wounded. They said soldiers tried to stop a march, shots were fired on both sides and the troops then ransacked the village of Qayyab Thaaheem.

Officials would not say whether army units were involved but stated that the action was taken by "law-enforcing" representatives rather than making the usual reference to police. Thousands of troops have been deployed in Sind to help quell disturbances, but none have been reported involved in clashes with protesters.

Despite dwindling turmoil, the opposition Movement for the Restoration of Democracy coalition insisted it would continue the campaign begun Monday to drive Zia from office and force elections.

In an interview with a newspaper in Saudi Arabia, where he has been on a pilgrimage to Mecca, Zia said again that he would not hold early elections.

The English-language Arab News quoted him as saying Benazir Bhutto, leader of the main opposition Pakistan People's Party, is "in a hurry to become president or prime minister."

"She will not succeed as the government insists that she will have to play according to the rules of the political game, which includes general elections in 1990," Zia said.

Miss Bhutto, 33, is the daughter of Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, whom Zia overthrew in 1977. Bhutto was convicted of conspiring to kill a political opponent and was hanged in 1979.

Honduras denies permission for U.S. to train Contra units

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The government said Friday it won't allow the United States to use Honduran territory to train Contra rebels fighting neighboring Nicaragua's leftist government.

Foreign Minister Carlos Lopez Contreras announced the decision after attending a meeting of the Honduran National Security Council, which discussed the issue behind closed doors. The council is headed by President Jose Azcona Hoyo.

"My government will not permit the so-called anti-Sandinista Contras to use our territory to be trained by American soldiers. This situation has already been very clarified with the United States," Lopez Contreras said.

"The decision has already been made by the government... and it will not be modified," he said.

In Washington, Pentagon officials said Thursday they were drafting plans for a training program as part of a $100 million Contra aid package recently approved by Congress. The officials said no decision had been made on whether the training should be conducted in Honduras or the United States.

The planning is going on but nothing is set in concrete," said a Pentagon official who spoke on condition of anonymity. The official said a decision was expected by the end of September.

"The United States has been supporting the Contras, sometimes covertly, during the past four years and maintaining the policy of pressuring the Sandinistas to cut their close military ties with Cuba and the Soviet Union. The United States considers these ties a threat to Central American security."

American troops regularly are stationed in Honduras and take part in joint exercises with Honduran troops.

CIA-contracted military instructors have trained Contra rebels in the past at isolated camps in Honduras, usually well-guarded and frequently off limits. The Contras operate from just inside the Honduran border.

Soviet obstructions at Stockholm lashed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States accused the Soviet Union Friday of obstructing progress at the current Stockholm negotiations on confidence-building measures to reduce the threat of a conventional war in Europe.

"Despite the highly publicized Soviet 'agreement in principle' for on-site inspection... the Soviets are now apparently maintaining that such inspections could not include broadly-defined 'closed areas,' thus effectively obstructing progress on this issue," State Department deputy spokesman Charles Redman told reporters.

He also said U.S. negotiators at the Stockholm talks which started this week have not yet "seen any serious Soviet cooperation in drafting the vital details and modalities which would give practical effect to on-site inspection."

Such details are vital to agreement by the scheduled conclusion Sept. 19 of the final round of the 2 1/2 year, 35-nation Stockholm conference, Redman said. Stockholm is, one of several parallel East-West negotiations growing out of the 1975 Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe known as the "Helsinki Process."

Elaborating on the dispute over on-site inspection of military activity, the spokesman said, "We cannot accept inspection modalities that would restrict access to training areas nor one that would restrict access to areas normally open to indigenous publics."

Western proposals have "recognized from the beginning the need to exclude from inspection legitimate sensitive installations such as ships, aircraft and garisons," Redman said. "There are other ways" besides on-site inspection to check such matters, he added, apparently referring to satellites.

Typhoon leaves 22 dead on Taiwan

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Typhoon Wayne headed towards Okinawa on Friday after it lashed central Taiwan, leaving at least 22 people dead, 110 injured and nine missing, authorities said.

The Central Weather Bureau reported that Wayne, with winds of up to 82 miles an hour, triggered floods in coastal areas and disrupted land and air traffic. About 600 coastal residents were evacuated.

Warrant out for American

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Rwanda's Justice Ministry confirmed Friday it has issued an international arrest warrant for an American researcher suspected in the murder of gorilla expert Dian Fossey.

Fossey, 53, was found hacked to death last Dec. 27 on her remote camp on the slopes of Rwanda's Mount Visoke, where she lived among the endangered mountain gorillas.

Jean Damsene Nkeezabo, Rwanda's director-general for the administration of justice, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that a warrant was issued last month for the arrest of Wayne Richard McGuire, 34, of Hazlet, N.J.

"We think that McGuire is the principal author of the murder, and he has left our country. We don't know where he is," Nkeezabo said.

First news that McGuire was wanted came Thursday in a daily newsletter published by the Rwandan Information Ministry. McGuire, a doctoral candidate from the University of Oklahoma at Norman, was Fossey's research assistant at the time of her death and the only other foreigner at her Karisoke Research Center.

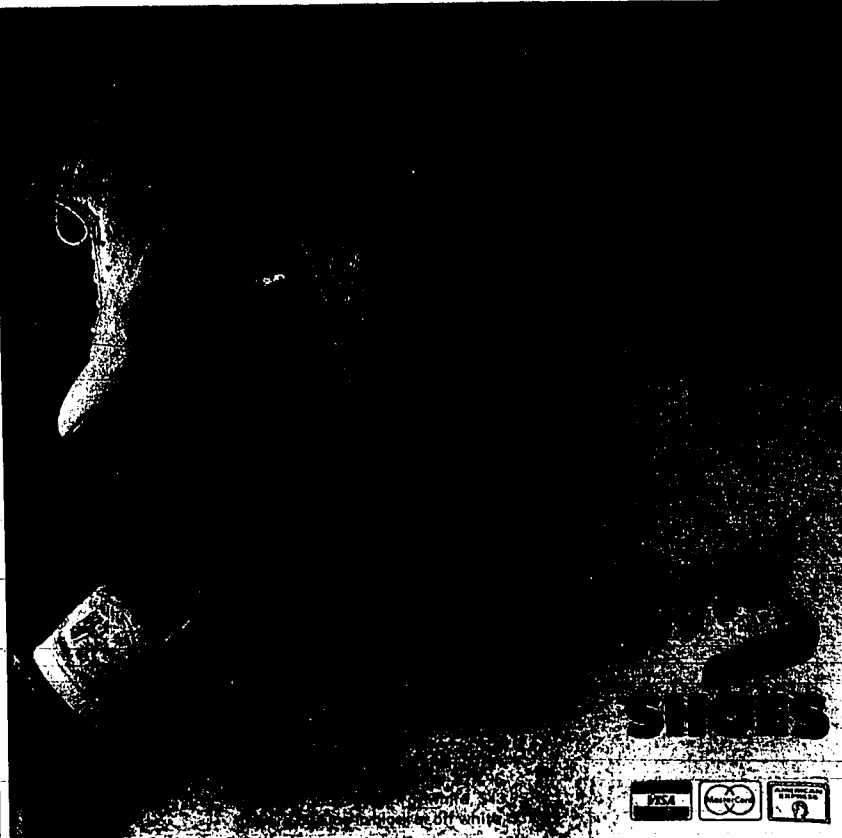

India tries to end burning of brides

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Parliament passed a tough law Friday that outlaws dowries in a bid to stop the practice of burning to death brides who do not bring as much property to their marriage as the groom's family wants.

The bill, which still needs the signature of President Zail Singh to become law, provides for life imprisonment for some dowry offenses and makes some of them non-bailable.

Bride-burning already is considered murder and can be punishable by death, but such killings usually are camouflaged as cooking accidents and rarely are proven.

'Big ticket' orders up in July

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to U.S. factories for big ticket durable goods jumped 4.3 percent in July for the biggest one-month gain since 1984, the government said Friday.

However, analysts suggested the news wasn't as promising for the sluggish national economy as it might have seemed at first glance.

General gain. Non-military orders were up 1.1 percent, about the same as their 1.4 percent June rise.

"In this respect, a jump in orders in late 1986 will only be followed by a deeper decline in 1987."

Norfolk Southern withdraws bid to purchase Conrail freight system

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's frustrating 18-month battle to sell Conrail to the Norfolk Southern Corp. ended Friday as the railroad announced withdrawal of its bid to purchase the government-owned freight line.

The railroad would have no further role in the sale of the freight line, which serves 15 states from the Northeast to Missouri.

Assets of money market mutual funds increase, yields dip

NEW YORK (AP) — Assets of the nation's 362 money market mutual funds rose $1.10 billion to $231.92 billion in the week ended Wednesday.

The seven-day average yield on the money market funds fell to 5.76 percent from 5.82 percent the previous week, Donoghue's Money Fund Report, a trade journal based in Holliston, Mass., said Thursday.

The newsletter Bank Rate Monitor of North Palm Beach, Fla., said its survey of 100 leading financial institutions nationwide showed money market assets' yields fell to 5.69 percent as of Wednesday from 5.93 percent a week earlier.

THE ACES

BOBBY WOLFF

"Every calamity is a spur and valuable hint." — Emerson.

A bad trump break can wreck almost any reasonable game. However, it is sometimes possible to overcome a foul break. Witness how Seymour Deutch of Laredo, Texas, overcame a trump calamity during the Texas Grand National Teams final qualification round.

When the hand was first played, South could not avoid the loss of two trumps, a diamond and a club, sending the game one down.

Against Seymour, the lead of the heart 10 went to his queen, and a spade was led to dummy's ace. When East's jack appeared, Seymour hoped for a doubleton Q-J, but he suppressed his curiosity while laying a contingency plan.

When the hand was first played, South could not avoid the loss of two trumps, a diamond and a club, sending the game one down.

The Reduced Payment Auto Loan. The lowest payment on wheels.

Often, the only thing standing between the car you want and the car you can afford is the monthly payment. But now, with approved credit, you can finance up to 100% of any new car with monthly payments lower than auto industry financing and up to 25% lower than conventional car loans.

With a First Security Reduced Payment Auto Loan, no matter how high the car's price, the payments stay low. And if you like, you can take up to five years to repay. Ask about the Reduced Payment Auto Loan or other affordable loans at your nearest First Security office or car dealer.

For monthly payments lower than you ever thought possible, we're right where you want us to be.

Burley pro sinks putt on 18th for Cactus win

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

Cactus Pete's Open

JACKPOT — A three-foot uphill putt on the final hole completed a day-long subpar battle and elevated Burley assistant Professional Tracy Frank to the championship of the $20,000 Cactus Pete's Open Friday.

Frank, who entered the day one stroke off the pace, won when first round leader Jeff Green of Salt Lake City missed a little birdie putt and Lynn Landgren of Salt Lake City came up two inches off line on a closing five-footer. In the meantime, defending champion Kim Thompson of Salt Lake City, stood in the wings and watched with a four-under par 68 falling one stroke short.

"No. 17," Frank said without equivocation concerning the turning point of this one. "I made a par and Jeff had a bogey."

But then, upon reflection, Frank noted, "maybe it was 15 where I hit an eight-iron to within two and one-half feet for a birdie that got me even. But I went ahead with the par on the 17th."

"It's my biggest payday," he beamed over his $3,000 first-place check. "It just keeps this season going as my best one thus far."

This season not only has meant $4,200 in the past three weeks but also points toward participation in the national assistant's championship in Brockton, Mass., late in September and then a wedding planned for the early part of November.

Frank simply outdistanced his competition over the closing holes for this title. The back nine proved as difficult Friday as it had for the rest of the field since Tuesday.

Over the front nine, everyone seemed to have a chance for the title. Lynn Landgren, last year's runner-up, was five under at the turn. Caldwell assistant Tad Holloway was four under. Frank appeared in trouble at only three under and Thompson was making a valiant effort to redeem himself from an opening-round 73.

But things started falling away from Frank on that No. 15, Holloway noted. "I lost three shots to Tracy over the last four holes" when he went from four under to two under.

Landgren knew his problem: "If you can't hit the last green with a sand wedge, you deserve a bogey. That was a 5600 bogey."

Green felt he had a good chance of forcing a playoff with his closing putt but then watch in disbelief when the putt refused to take a two- and one-half inch break that seemed mandatory.

"I watched the other guys put from about the same angle and the ball moved," said the incredulous Green. "My putt just didn't come at all."

Up to the point that Green had missed his birdie putt, Thompson was hopeful of getting into a playoff. But Frank killed that with his concluding putt.

"I was nervous going into the last hole," Frank admitted. "I didn't want to get into a playoff with Kim and Jeff because they are good players."

Frank said he felt his approach shot into the 18th was going to be a little kinder to him than it ended up being.

"It was about 12 feet shot but the greens were drying out a little and I felt it would release and give me a pretty good run at the hole," he said. "But it really released and it ran about 20 feet past the cup. I was trying to make it," he said of the birdie putt. "But it just kept running and when it went that far past the hole, I was just hoping to get it down."

While all that settled the professional squabbling, Burley's Glenn Blakeley came up with a 148 to become the low-scoring amateur in the tournament. His 75 of Friday was enough to assure a two-stroke lead over Bryan Witzel of Salt Lake City in the gross division. Twin Falls' Kevin Packard, who missed a number of close-in birdie putts, rallied for third with a 152 while Steve Leathers of Sun Valley and Greg Hansen of Jackpot had 154s.

In the net division, Dr. Frank Lewis had a second straight 65 to tie the title without problem. First-day gross leader Bryan Massa of Jackpot had a 135 for second while Jim Packard of Twin Falls was third at 144 and Doyle Morrill Kimberly fourth at 145.

In the first flight, Dave Devenport of Sun Valley made a shambles of the gross race with a two-over par 74. That gave him a four-stroke victory over runner-up Ray Crumbliss of Twin Falls, while Dan and Jack Downs, brothers from Ogden, Utah, shared third at 161.

In net competition, Richard Hadfield ran off with honors at 134, three ahead of Dick Kacker and four up on Sun Valley's Lee Scott.

Sandy Koufax: Odds-beater

Southpaw ace recalls his rocky beginning

By FLYNN McROBERTS
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — Experience alone does not a legend make. Case in point: Sandy Koufax had only pitched a handful of games when the Dodgers signed him at the age of 18.

Growing up in Brooklyn, the boy who would become the Sultan of Southpaws threw in just a couple of semipro games and played first base during his only year of high school ball.

"They had plenty of pitchers," Koufax says with a smile, shortly after finishing his Friday round at Elkhorn Golf Course on the first day of the 10th Danny Thompson Memorial Golf Tournament, the yearly celebrity event to benefit leukemia research.

Attending the University of Cincinnati, the gentleman who would become the first unanimous winner of the Cy Young Award went to college to play basketball; the sport he loved as a kid.

"And only when he heard that the school's baseball team was going on a road trip to New Orleans did he consider taking to the diamond again."

Though Koufax only pitched four games at Cincinnati and those against minor opponents — some far-sighted Dodger scout knew in-born talent when he saw it.

That scout deserved a raise. By the time Koufax retired in 1966 at the age of 30, he had won the Cy Young Award in his throwing arm, he and his fastball were as famous as John Kennedy.

The National League's earned-run-average leader from 1962-66, Koufax had other plans while growing up.

"My childhood dream might have been to play for the Knicks. It wasn't going to happen," he says with a flash of his pearl-white teeth that sharply contrast his deeply tanned skin.

At 6-foot, Koufax was better suited for the mound than the court. So when the offer came to play for the Dodgers, he took it.

"Hey . . . 18 years old and a chance to play in the big leagues," he says. "Why not?"

The year was 1955, and a now-defunct rule barred players who received a sizable bonus from playing in a club's minor league ranks for two years. Signing for a $14,000 bonus, Koufax fell under the statute and wound up never leaving the majors.

Times-News photo/DIKYE SAYERSON

Three-time Cy Young Award-winner Sandy Koufax is in Sun Valley for the Danny Thompson Memorial Golf Tournament

"That's probably why it took so long for anything good to happen," he says.

Because the Dodgers usually were contenders for the pennant, the hometown hurler spent his first two seasons on the bench.

Forbidden to develop his aim on a farm team, Koufax earned a reputation for inconsistency his next four seasons.

"I had the ability; I was born with that . . . I knew I could throw the ball hard, I (just) didn't know where the hell it was going," he says with a laugh.

After an 8-6 win-loss record in '59 he dropped to 2-13 the next year. Then came the season of '61, the first time he pitched as a regular.

Yet his Series win-loss record was 4-3, leading some to tag him as a hardiuck pitcher. In fact, when he faced Baltimore's Jim Palmer in the second game of the '65 Series, Koufax gave up only one earned run. But the Dodgers fell 6-0.

Those statistics are lost on the easy-going lefty. "I never thought about it as hard luck," he says.

Despite the World Series defeat, Koufax was 27-6 on the season, throwing 317 strikeouts on an ERA of 1.73.

Then, at the age of 30 and already having played 12 seasons, he chose to quit while he still had the use of his left arm.

"It was a decision I didn't want to make, but I had to make it," he says. "I was doing things to get ready to pitch that I didn't want to continue to do."

With a legendary reputation to ease the pain of withdrawal, Koufax went on to work for NBC as a game analyst. ("I didn't quite care for that," he says.)

batters in 256 innings and finished at 18-13.

At that point, he was 54-53 for his career. Over the next five seasons he won 111 games, losing only 54.

The records he set along the way are numerous: Koufax led the NL in strikeouts and victories in '63, '65 and '66; won the Cy Young Award in those same years; pitched a no-hitter every year from '62-65; and led the league in shutouts in '63, '64 and '66.

He held the mark for most number of strikeouts in a single season, with 302 in '65 — until Nolan Ryan broke it, by one, with 383 eight years later.

His World Series performances, all coming after his team had moved from Brooklyn to Los Angeles in '58, were even more impressive. Over four Fall Classics ('59, '63, '65 and '66) of which the Dodgers won three, Koufax had an ERA of 0.95 in 57 innings.

Yet his Series win-loss record was 4-3, leading some to tag him as a hardiuck pitcher. In fact, when he faced Baltimore's Jim Palmer in the second game of the '65 Series, Koufax gave up only one earned run. But the Dodgers fell 6-0.

Those statistics are lost on the easy-going lefty. "I never thought about it as hard luck," he says.

Despite the World Series defeat, Koufax was 27-6 on the season, throwing 317 strikeouts on an ERA of 1.73.

Then, at the age of 30 and already having played 12 seasons, he chose to quit while he still had the use of his left arm.

"It was a decision I didn't want to make, but I had to make it," he says. "I was doing things to get ready to pitch that I didn't want to continue to do."

With a legendary reputation to ease the pain of withdrawal, Koufax went on to work for NBC as a game analyst. ("I didn't quite care for that," he says.)

Kickoff Classic pits Tide vs. OSU

Buckeyes figure they owe 'em one

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The only time Alabama and Ohio State met on the gridiron, two of the winningest teams in college football history were led by two of the winningest coaches — Alabama's Bear Bryant and Ohio State's Woody Hayes.

Alabama easily won that meeting 35-6 in the 1976 Sugar Bowl to wind up their 1977 season. The coaches are different for the second meeting of the two schools Wednesday night in the fourth annual Chase Kickoff Classic at Giants Stadium; this time they will be getting the season underway.

"We kind of owe them one," said Earle Bruce, who succeeded Hayes after the 1976 season.

The teams were remarkably similar last year when Alabama finished No. 13 in the Associated Press poll with a 9-2-1 record and Ohio State was right behind at No. 14 with a 9-3 mark. This time, they have designs on the Top Ten and the winner will emerge as an early-season national championship contender.

In 91 years of football, Alabama ranks fourth among major colleges with 615 victories and third in winning percentage at .728. Ohio State, which has been playing football for 96 years, has 593 victories and a .705 percentage.

The opening weekend of the season is a slim one, with just 11 other Division I-A games, although five Top Twenty finishers from 1965 will be in action. On Sept. 9, Florida, the No. 3 team from last year, entertains defending Division I-AA champion Georgia Southern; No. 8 Air Force plays host to Hawaii; No. 9 Miami (Fla.) visits South Carolina and No. 15 Florida State will be in action. On Monday night, No. 18 Maryland is at Pitt.

Other Saturday games find Western Illinois at Kansas State, Fullerton State at Nevada-Reno, Angelo State at New Mexico State, Ball State at Michigan Tech and Northern Michigan at Texas-El Paso and Louisiana Tech at Tulsa.

Alabama, which has 17 returning starters, and Ohio State, with 16, are expected to field similar teams

Hammond birdies 3 straight to take 2-shot lead in Series

By The Associated Press

AKRON, Ohio — Dennis Hammond birdied three consecutive holes and moved out to a two-shot lead Friday halfway through the second round of the 700,000 NEC World Series of Golf.

Hammond played the front side on the Firestone Country Club course in 2-under-par 33 and reached the turn with a 27-hole total of 99, six under par.

U.S. Open champion Ray Floyd, who hared the first-round lead with Hammond and Mark Wiebe, made double-bogey on the fifth hole for the second time in as many days and dropped back to 101, four under par. Floyd played the front in par 35.

Lanny Waddins and West German Bernhard Langer also were at 101. Waddins was out in 33, Langer in 34.

NEC World Series

Dan Pohl was next at 53-102. Wiebe was out in 37 and was four strokes off the pace at 103.

PGA champion Bob Tway, one of the early starters, had a second-round 72 and completed 36 holes at 146, six over par.

Masters champion Jack Nicklaus reached the turn in 36 and was at 107 for 27 holes. British Open title-holder Greg Norman was at 106 after 28 over the front.

After an opening bogey, Hammond beginning with a two-putt birdie on the second.

On the next two, he hit irons less than a foot from the cup. A 9-iron second shot came to rest four inches from the hole on the third and he stroked a 3-iron approach to hit the hole. "I hit the best shot I hit this year," he said — that stopped about nine inches from the cup.

He bogeyed the 15th, pulling a 4-iron into a bunker, and was one stroke behind when Pohl turned out a potential bogey into a birdie on the 17th.

Off the 17th tee, Pohl drove into the adjacent 18th fairway, hit his second-high over-tee on the 17th green and then made an 18-foot putt.

But Pohl 3-putted for bogey on the 18th and Hammond, playing behind him, hit the lead alone with the 15-foot birdie putt on the final hole.

Fish & Game adopts rules governing steelhead fishing

By The Associated Press

MCCALL — The catch and keep season for steelhead will open Aug. 30 on the Snake and Salmon rivers, just in time for anglers who want to fish over the Labor Day weekend.

The catch-and-keep season on the Clearwater River begins Oct. 15. Seasons on the three rivers end Dec. 31.

Those were regulations adopted by the Idaho Fish and Game Commission in a Thursday night meeting here.

The commission voted to allow Salmon River anglers to keep fish only if they retain clipped adipose fins, the fleshy fins on the back of the fish between the dorsal fin and tail.

Snake River steelhead with a clipped adipose fin, a clipped left ventral fin or a dorsal fin measuring less than 2 inches may be kept only if those fish are caught at the river's confluence with the Clearwater upstream to the Washington-Oregon state line.

A Salmon River regulation that says fishermen must release fish with dorsal fins of 2 inches or more was discontinued by the commission. A recommendation to continue the regulation was made by Dan Hormaechea, an Idaho Steelhead and Salmon Unlimited representative from McCall.

Hormaechea said he made the recommendation because old and large hatchery-produced steelhead are returning to the Salmon, but should be allowed to spawn.

The commission also established limits of three fish per day on the Salmon and Snake rivers. Members also established nine- possession limits and 20-season limits.

Two-per-day limits also were established on the Clearwater River, as were four-possession and 10-season limits.

Schiraldi a saver again: Red Sox beat Tribe

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Calvin Schiraldi posted his sixth save in the last 20 days as the Boston Red Sox defeated the Cleveland Indians 6-3 Friday night.

Schiraldi was a first-round selection by the New York Mets in the 1969 June draft. The 24-year-old right-hander spent parts of the 1964 and 1965 seasons with the Mets before he went to Boston in a trade for Bob Ojeda.

Schiraldi started this season with the Class AAA Pawtucket Red Sox before being recalled on July 17. His outing against Cleveland gave him five saves and one victory in his last six appearances.

Schiraldi gave up a single to the first batter he faced, Julio Franco, then retired the final eight hitters. Three on strikeouts, to preserve a victory for Bruce Hurst, 6-6, who yielded three runs, two of them earned, in 6 1/3 innings.

Schiraldi has a 0.63 earned run average in 28 2/3 innings.

The Red Sox victory made them 2-0 this season against Cleveland and came on the heels of a 2-5 thrashing of the Indians Thursday night. Bill Buckner's two-run single in the seventh inning put Boston ahead 4-3 and the Red Sox went on for their 11th consecutive victory against Cleveland over two seasons.

Baltimore 8 California 7

BALTIMORE — Fred Lynn hit a bad-hop double off the glove of California third baseman Doug DeCinces to spur a five-run eighth-inning rally that gave Baltimore an 8-6 victory over the Angels Friday night and snapped the Orioles' four-

American

California Angels pitcher Don Sutton slips, but makes the put-out during the Angels 8-7 loss game losing streak.

Because of the shoulder tendinitis, Lynn was not in the original starting line-up until he told Manager Earl Weaver he was available.

Eddie Murray singled to open the inning and Jim Traher, who earlier had driven in a pair of runs, followed with a single to chase California reliever Gary Lucas.

Angels relief ace Donnie Moore, 2-5, yielded a pinch single to Juan Benitez and consecutive two-run doubles to Floyd Rayford and pinch-hitter Jim Dwyer to tie the score 7-7.

Baltimore starter Mike Boddicker pitched hitless ball through the first four innings. But Downing walked to open the fifth and came around to score on singles by Bobby Grich and Dick Schofield.

New York 3 Oakland 2

NEW YORK — Rickey Henderson led off the eighth inning with a cue-shot off the end of his bat down the first-base line, thus putting himself in place to become the New York Yankees' winning run as they beat the Oakland A's 3-2 Friday night.

First-baseman-Carney Lansford misplayed the ball for an error, allowing Henderson to reach safely.

Henderson promptly stole second base, No. 71 on the season. Bobbing back and forth as I to go again, Henderson got A's pitcher Joaquin Andujar so out of joint that he twisted his shoulders toward second without taking his foot off the rubber. Third base umpire Rich Garcia immediately called a balk, moving Henderson to third.

Willie Randolph, followed with a flare single into right field that scored Henderson, giving the Yankees a 3-2 victory.

Yankees left-hander Dennis Rasmussen, 13-4, who had lost two straight, gave way to Dave Righetti to start the ninth. Rasmussen allowed just four hits.

Andujar, 7-6, now a loser of four of his last five, allowed seven hits in going the distance for Oakland.

Texas 11 Chicago 3

ARLINGTON, Texas — Right-hander, who has posted a 11-29 record in three seasons as a starter, ran his 1968 record to 5-2 Friday night as the Rangers bombed the Chicago White Sox 11-3.

It was Texas' seventh win without a loss against Chicago this season. Russell relieved starter Mike Mason in the fifth with two runners on, no outs and the Rangers leading only 4-3.

He pitched four Innings of one-hit relief, walked none and struck out two.

After his four-inning scoreless stint, Russell sat in the dugout and watched the Rangers erupt for six runs in the eighth against relievers Gene Nelson and Ray Searage.

Chicago starter Floyd Bannister, 7-10, lasted only 3 2/3 Innings and was charged with four runs, the key blow against him being Gary Ward's two-run double in the fourth that broke a 2-2 tie.

Kansas City 4 Milwaukee 2

MILWAUKEE — Kansas City left-hander Denny Jackson pitched himself into a jam in the fourth inning Friday night when he loaded the bases with no outs, but he allowed Milwaukee to score only two runs and went on to scatter four hits for 8 2/3 Innings in beating the Brewers 4-2.

Struggling is nothing new to Jackson, 6-8, who won his third straight start to increase his record to 8-6.

Hal McTae homered to start a three-run fourth inning for the Royals.

Jackson struck out five and walked five in his second complete game. Dan Qusenberry got the final out for his 11th save and Milwaukee starter Juan Nieves, 10-6, took the loss.

Minnesota 4 Toronto 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Greg Gagne hit a pair of two-run homers and Bert Blyleven allowed seven hits in seven Innings as the Minnesota Twins defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 4-3 Friday night.

Gagne's sixth home run, off Jim Clardy, gave Minnesota a 2-0 lead in the third inning after a single by Roy Smalley.

Gagne made it 4-0 in the fourth with another homer to let that brought home Tom Brunansky, who had walked.

Bream's 5-for-5 night spurs 16-5 win, Pirates over Braves

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Sid Bream went 5-5 with five RBI to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 16-5 victory over the Atlanta Braves Friday night.

A crowd of 27,517 sat down for what was billed as "Salute to the City Night." The Pirates came up with the promotion to thank city officials for putting together a coalition that brought the franchise last winter and agreed to keep it in Pittsburgh.

Braves Manager Chuck Tanner was ejected for arguing with plate umpire Tom Hallon in the eight-run Pirate sixth inning. Tanner vacated the clubhouse quickly after the game.

National

Rookie pitcher Cliff Speck was pitched for five hits and four runs as he finished the game.

The Pirates rapped out 19 hits in their biggest offensive showing in three years.

Bream hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning, his 14th, and had a two-run single in Pittsburgh's eighth-run sixth. R.J. Reynolds and Jim Morrison drove in three runs each as Pittsburgh had its biggest outburst since a 16-2 victory over Los Angeles on May 3, 1963.

In the Atlanta first, Dale Murphy hit a two-run single, and Bob Horner and Terry Harper got run-scoring hits. Winn then relieved. Barry Jones worked the final 3 2/3 Innings for his second save.

Pittsburgh tied it off Rick Mahler, 11-13, on a two-triple by Reynolds and RBI singles by Bream and Morrison.

Atlanta, which had won four straight games, retook the lead on Murphy's RBI single in the second.

St. Louis 6 Houston 5

ST. LOUIS — John Tudor scattered nine hits over seven Innings and drove in two runs with a pair of singles to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 6-5 victory over the Houston Astros Friday night.

Tudor, 13-6, struck out seven and allowed one earned run in helping the Cardinals snap a four-game losing streak. Todd Worrell earned his 28th save by stopping the Astros, despite allowing a three-run pinch homer to Denny Walling in the ninth.

A wild Nolan Ryan, 6-8, was unable to earn his 25th career victory. He struck out six in 5 1/3 Innings, but walked five and had three wild pitches.

The Cards took the lead in the fifth as Horvath walked, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on Curt Ford's double.

St. Louis added three runs in the sixth when Clint Hurdie hit a lead-off double and Tudor blooped a single to left.

Philadelphia 4 San Diego 1

SAN DIEGO — Rookie left-hander Bruce Ruffin pitched a seven-inning shutout for his fifth complete game in just 12 major league starts as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Diego Padres 4-1 Friday night.

Ruffin, 6-3, since being called up from Reading of the Eastern League, struck out a career-high eight batters and walked two in leading Philadelphia to its fifth victory in six games.

Tony Gwynn's RBI single in eighth inning spoiled Ruffin's bid for his first shutout.

Padres starter Ed Whitson, 1-6, gave up four doubles and all figured in the scoring. In his suffering his fourth straight loss, Whitson gave up nine hits, struck out six and walked one in 7 2/3 Innings of work.

Chicago 3 Cincinnati 2

CHICAGO — Jerry Mumphrey tripled with the bases loaded in the fourth inning to carry the Chicago Cubs to a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Friday.

Rookie lefty Jamie Moyer, 5-3, got the win despite giving up eight hits and five walks over 5 2/3 Innings. Lee Smith pitched two scoreless Innings at the end to gain his 24th save in 30 save opportunities this year.

Mollie Scott fun run is today

By SCOTT TUDEHOPE Times-News writer

KETCHIKAN — One of the biggest fun runs in southern Idaho, the ninth annual Mollie Scott Fun Run, will be put on this morning by the clinic named in her honor.

It's a no-fee, no pre-registration 10-kilometer arrangement, and just as importantly, it's fun.

That says the clinic's administrative assistant, explains why the run last year pulled in over 200 participants. If the weather holds, runners can expect a similar turnout Saturday as well, said G. Regan.

And with some of the bigger names in running, such as Sun Valley's Gabriele Anderson, he in attendance.

"It's hard to say who'll be there," Regan said, "without pre-registration. We try to make it less competitive. It's for families."

The race starts at 9 a.m. at Beaver Pond on Trail Creek Road, ending at the Sun Valley Gun Club. Runners are to park their cars at the gun club and take a shuttle to the starting line, she said. There's no parking at the starting line.

Prizes will be awarded to the top male and female runners, and there won't be any age category prizes awarded. A random drawing for other prizes, including the Elephant Perch gift certificates, will also be given away.

Scott was an area woman who donated a sum of money to start an athletic training clinic for Sun Valley-area residents, Regan said.

fall. "We lost a few key defensive people, they lost a few defensive people," says Alabama Coach Ray Perkins, who will be making a homecoming of sorts when he returns to the stadium where he coached the New York Giants from 1979-82 before stepping into Bryant's shoes. "We lost only a few offensive people, they lost only a few offensive people. We've got the bulk of our team back, they've got the bulk of their team back."

Perkins also says it will be "a great thrill for me to come back to Georgia Stadium and walk out on the field. I'm sure a lot of fond memories will come back. But I'm more excited about seeing 100 kids get to come to the New York area. How many of these kids would otherwise have that opportunity? They also have an opportunity to play in the greatest outdoor complex in America."

Karsatos and Shula each have an outstanding wide receiver on whom to zero in.

Palmer's face straight at undie promo

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Former major league pitcher Jim Palmer, now pitching a brand of underwear, drew more than requests for autographs Friday during a promotional visit to a department store.

"What would you like me to write?" the 40-year-old Palmer asked one woman who requested his autograph.

"Your phone number would be fine," she answered. "I know your name." Palmer smiled. And signed his name.

He autographed giveaway T-shirts and Jockey for Her underwear that the company he represents is marketing.

Also free were a poster of Palmer dressed only in underwear and a photograph of him in his Baltimore Orioles uniform.

Sprinkled through the crowd of about 300, mostly women, were people holding baseballs. Some mothers got Palmer to autograph the baseball poster for their sons.

Lingerie departments and underwear posters embarrass their sons, they said.

A 25-year-old man brought in four baseball cards of Palmer, including his rookie card.

"That's worth $38," said Palmer, now a sportscaster for ABC. The card lists him incorrectly as a left-hander.

In 1976, he and eight other athletes, including Pete Rose, were featured in a Jockey ad with the headline, "Take away their uniform and who are they?" The company got so many letters about Palmer that they decided to use him as the sole endorser.

"At first I was embarrassed," said Palmer of being asked to autograph posters and undergarments. "But now it's like signing a baseball. It puts a smile on somebody's face."

Spike Owen didn't count his record six runs against Tribe

CLEVELAND (AP) — Spike Owen knew that his feet were getting sore. He had no idea that he was on his way to tying a major-league record of six runs scored in one game.

"I never really counted them," Owen said after the Boston Red Sox pummeled Cleveland 24-3 Thursday night. "I knew I had scored quite a few. They told me how many on the postgame radio show."

Owen, a Red Sox only a couple of days, is the fourth player in modern time to score six times in one game. Mel Ott of the New York Giants did it twice, in 1934 and 1944. Frank Torre of the Milwaukee Braves did it in 1957, and another Red Sox, Johnny Pesky, scored six runs in a 1946 game. In 1886, Guy Hecker scored seven runs for Louisville of the American Association.

Pesky is currently the special assistant to Red Sox General Manager Lou Gorman.

Owen, the shortstop acquired from the Seattle Mariners in an August 17 trade, hit his first home run of the season, had three singles, walked and reached base on an error.

"I just want to contribute by getting on base and having the big RBI man, The Big Sticks; drive me in," Owen said.

Tony Armas drove in six runs with his sixth career grand slam and a mammoth two-run homer and also singled. Bill Buckner had five of Boston's 24 hits, and drove in three runs.

Marty Barrett and Dwight Evans

each had three hits and four RBI, and Jim Rice drove in three runs with three hits. Wade Boggs, the American League's leading hitter for most of the year, went 0-5. The Red Sox had 61 plate appearances.

"I was beat," said Buckner. "That was like a double-header that we played out there."

Boston's hits and runs were the most by a major-league team this season. The last American League team to score 24 runs was the California Angels against the Toronto Blue Jays on August 26, 1978.

Boston scored 12 runs in the sixth inning. The last AL team to score as many in a single inning was the Texas Rangers, who stunned the Oakland A's with a 12-run 15th inning on July 3, 1983.

Both the 24 runs given up and the 19-run margin of defeat are negative standards for the Indians, a charter member of the American League.

Amazingly, Boston scored 22 of its 24 runs with two outs.

"We still have nights where we fall apart," Indians pitching coach Jack Aker said. "All in all, I've been very pleased the way our guys come back after they take a beating like that."

Cleveland's earned run average jumped from 4.54 to 4.68 while the Red Sox, the leaders of the AL's Eastern Division, hiked their batting average from .268 to .271.

Greg Swindell took the loss in his major league debut. The 21-year-old left-hander from the University of Texas was the second overall pick in last June draft.

Ex-Yank Pepitone on trial; co-defendant in case missing

NEW YORK (AP) — Jury selection began Friday for the drug and weapons trial of former Yankee baseball star Joe Pepitone although one of his two co-defendants remained missing.

For the second straight day, Thomas Carbone, 53, of Sound Beach, failed to appear when the case was called in Brooklyn.

His lawyer said Carbone's wife and two sons also were missing.

The lawyer, Lawrence Carra, told the judge he had no luck locating his client.

Acting state Supreme Court Justice Alan Marrus, who issued an arrest warrant for Carbone on Thursday, said the case would go forward and Carbone would be tried in absentia.

"To allow the absence of this defendant to further delay the trial would prejudice the case of the prosecution and possibly the defense. The trial should not be allowed to wag the dog," Marrus said.

He ordered the lawyers in the case to refrain from mentioning Carbone's absence in front of prospective jurors and ordered Carbone's empty seat at the defense table removed from the courtroom.

On Thursday, Carra said he last talked with Carbone on Saturday night. He said Carbone was concerned about his father who was in ill health. Carra also said Thursday's rainy weather might have delayed Carbone who lives at the far end of Suffolk County.

But Assistant District Attorney Peter Samberg said police in New York and Suffolk County had checked several addresses listed for Carbone without success.

Samberg said police also had checked area hospitals, morgues and jails and found no trace of Carbone.

Carra later told reporters he now had little hope Carbone would appear and said "other pressures exerted on him" might be responsible for his disappearance. Carra would not elaborate.

Carbone, Pepitone, 45, and Robert Oates, 47, both of Brooklyn, were arrested last year on drug and weapons charges after police stopped their car for allegedly running a red light.

Carbone also was indicted for heroin possession.

Denver veterans sweating on bench

Studdard, Howard see youngsters play

By The Associated Press

It's Week Three of the NFL exhibition season, time for the veterans to start worrying. Just ask Dave Studdard and Paul Howard of the Denver Broncos.

When the Broncos play the San Francisco 49ers at Mile High Stadium Saturday night, Studdard and Howard will be on the bench watching rookie Jim Furgis and fourth-year man Mark Cooper in their jobs at left tackle and right guard.

"I want to see how they handle starting jobs," Denver Coach Dan Reeves said of his younger players. But he has also asked his two veterans they'd be willing to accept demotions to backup status.

Most NFL coaches approach this week's games the same way as Reeves:

If the first two weeks were to weed out marginal rookies and free agents and next week as a final tuneup for the team that will start the first week is to determine starting positions and the last five spots on the roster. A lot of veterans are vulnerable.

"We'll attack San Francisco a little more than we would a normal preseason opponent," Reeves said. "But it's still important for us to look at people and to work on things we want to use in the regular season."

The 49ers' hot seat belongs to Jeff Kemp and Mike Moroski. Kemp will share the quarterback position in their continuing battle to back up Joe Montana, who will sit out the game with an ankle injury. "This will be a critical game for both Jeff and Mike," said San Francisco Bill Walsh. "Although we don't exclude the possibility of carrying three quarterbacks."

Walsh also said rookies Tim McKeyer will start at cornerback, where the 49ers are without the injured Eric Wright and the waived Dwight Hicks. Second-year man Tony Nixon and former USFL player Derrick Martin started there last week.

The weekend began tonight with three games, Pittsburgh at Dallas; New England at the Los Angeles Raiders and Minnesota at Seattle.

The other games Saturday include Washington at Tampa Bay; Green Bay at Cincinnati; Miami at Philadelphia; Cleveland at Atlanta; the New York Jets at the New York Giants; Detroit at Indianapolis; Buffalo at Kansas City; New Orleans at Houston; St. Louis at Chicago; San Francisco at Denver, and San Diego at the Los Angeles Rams.

Another veteran who will be tested Saturday is Cleveland quarterback Gary Danielson, who may test his arm against Atlanta for the first time since he had shoulder surgery last January. But Bro Coach Marty Schottenheimer says he won't decide until the last minute to use Danielson, who missed most of 1968 because of the injury.

Schottenheimer, like the other coaches, is also using the game to make important decisions.

"At wide receiver we have quite a bit of competition," Schottenheimer said. "At that position, frankly, we've had difficulty evaluating players because we've been playing so many people that not many of them have had a lot of playing time."

The Jets, meanwhile, will use Freeman McNeil for the first time in their "Battle for New York" against the Giants. McNeil, the brilliant but brittle running back, was held out of the first two games to keep him fresh for the season.

"Freeman is itching to get in there and we need to get him some work," says Coach Joe Walton said. "He's such an important part of our offense and he needs to get going with the ball."

The Giants are still going without Joe Morris, who gained a team record 113 yards but is holding out in a contract dispute. He is being replaced by Lee Rouson, a second-year man.

Still, the game doesn't have the aura it had back 100 days when the Jets were the newcomer from the American Football League.

"The fans take it more seriously than we do," Giants linebacker Andy Headen said. "Both teams play in New Jersey and there are bragging rights."

Steelers frustrate Cowboys

Turnovers were bane of Landry's 0-4 squad

By The Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Bryan Hinkle returned a blocked field goal 65 yards for a touchdown and Rick Woods scored on a 22-yard interception return as the Pittsburgh Steelers defeated the Dallas Cowboys 41-29 in an NFL preseason game Friday night.

The victory was the first in three exhibition games for the Steelers while the Cowboys fell to 0-4.

Hinkle picked up the blocked kick by rookie Max Zendejas, who is trying to unseat Dallas placekicker Rafael Septien, and ran untouched to the end zone 58 seconds before halftime.

Woods earlier picked off a pass by Dallas quarterback Danny White and scored as time ran out in the first quarter.

White hit Tony Hill with a 77-yard scoring strike in the second quarter.

Veteran Dallas tailback Tony Dorsett, who said he wants to be traded because of the signing of former USFL star Herschel Walker, ran 22 yards for a first-quarter touchdown.

Walker began practicing with the Cowboys this week but didn't suit up for the nationally televised game.

Dorsett, greeted by a loud chorus of boos when introduced to the Texas Stadium crowd of 54,229, set up the Steelers' first score when he fumbled at the Dallas 22.

Los Angeles Raiders 24 New England 10

LOS ANGELES — Quarterbacks Marc Wilson and Jim Plunkett each threw a touchdown pass and the Los Angeles defense dominated New England most of the way Friday night as the Raiders rolled to a 24-10 NFL preseason victory over the Patriots at Memorial Coliseum.

Wilson hit Todd Christensen with a 1-yard scoring strike midway through the first quarter and Plunkett fired a 22-yard TD pass to wide receiver Dokie Williams early in the third period as the Raiders raised their preseason record to 2-1.

The Patriots, who eliminated the Raiders from the playoffs last January by winning a 27-20 decision at the Coliseum, fell to 0-1 this summer. Los Angeles sacked New England quarterback Tony Eason 11 times for 80 yards in losses.

The Raiders also got a 36-yard field goal from Chris Bahr after just a 269-of-play-and-a-16-yard touchdown run by Marcus Allen on the first play of the second quarter.

Bahr's field goal put Los Angeles ahead for good and Allen's TD made it 17-0.

The Patriots got their points on a 33-yard field goal by Tony Franklin midway through the second quarter and a 5-yard touchdown pass from Eason to wide receiver Cedric Jones midway through the third period. Both scores were set up by Raider mistakes in Los Angeles territory.

Seattle 27 Minnesota 17

SEATTLE — Free agent rookie quarterback Sean Salisbury passed 57 yards to Byron Franklin for a touchdown with 8:22 left Friday night to break a 17-17 tie and the Seattle Seahawks notched a 27-17 NFL exhibition victory over the Minnesota Vikings.

The Vikings led 14-0 with just six seconds gone in the second quarter on a pair of touchdown passes from Tommy Kramer to Leo Lewis — 67 and 33 yards. But Wade Wilson and Steve Bono, Minnesota's other quarterbacks, could only account for a 27-yard field goal by Chuck Nelson that tied the score at 17 with 2:42 gone in the fourth quarter.

Salisbury, a major surprise for the Seahawks in their training camp, engineered a seven-play, 78-yard drive that took 3:46 and put Seattle ahead to stay at 24-17.

On the tie-breaking touchdown pass, Franklin easily beat Vikings free safety Mike Lush.

The 6-foot-5, 215-pound Southern California, completed six of nine passes for 120 yards in his three offensive series of work. He now has four touchdown passes in three preseason games.

Norm Johnson, who kicked a 27-yard field goal to put the Seahawks ahead 17-14 in the third quarter, booted a 31-yarder with 1:56 remaining.

Dave Kling, Seattle's starting quarterback, teamed with Daryl Turner on touchdown passes of 24 and 5 yards in the first half.

Giants' Morris receives warning

His holdout spurs threat of benching

ROCHELLE PARK, N.J. (AP) — Joe Morris, who has been fined $1,000 a day during his three-week holdout, said Friday the New York Giants have threatened to place him on a special list that will force him to sit out the season unless he returns to the team within five days.

Morris, who rushed for a club-record 1,36 yards and 21 touchdowns last season, said a letter he received at his home Thursday contained the warning and informed him he would be placed on the reserve-left camp list.

"Any player put on the list must sit out a season, but remains the property of the club that placed him on the list."

Morris also disclosed at a hastily called news conference that he has asked the Giants to trade him three times in training camp.

Giants General Manager George Young was in meetings Friday and did not return a telephone call seeking comment on Morris' statements concerning his trade request and fines.

The contract controversy between Morris and the team centers on money and whether the Syracuse back has an option-year on the four-year deal he signed in 1962. Young has said the contract contains an option year, while Morris and his agent, Tom Toner, say there isn't one.

The option year really is secondary to the financial aspect of the contract.

Morris earned $14,000 last season and in the alleged option year would receive $197,000.

Toner said that amount was simply a minimum pay. Morris would receive in a new contract under an addendum to the original contract, not an option-year agreement.

However, it is not the amount Morris wants to get this year. He has asked the Giants for a club, $3 million contract. The club reportedly has offered a four-year, $1.8 million contract.

Tomczak starts Bears against the Cardinals

CHICAGO (AP) — Reserve quarterback Mike Tomczak will start for the Chicago Bears Saturday night when they meet the St. Louis Cardinals in a preseason game before a sellout crowd of 65,000 in Soldier Field.

Tomczak is getting the opportunity because of impressive performances in the last two games and because Jim McMahon remains hampered by a leg injury. Tomczak played in the second half of a 13-13 victory over Pittsburgh and threw three touchdown passes. He also took over in the second half of last week's 38-21 triumph over Indianapolis and again passed for three touchdowns.

That's when Coach Mike Ditka announced, "I'm going to start Mike against the Cardinals to see what he can do against their No. 1 defense."

But that might not be the case when the Bears take a 3-0 exhibition record against the Cardinals, who are 1-2 including a 27-26 loss to Kansas City last week.

The Cardinals will be without their regular front three on defense. Nose tackle David Galloway suffered a pulled groin and will be out from two to three weeks.

Defensive end Curtis Greedy underwent knee surgery Tuesday and will be out six weeks and defensive tackle Bubba Baker remains unsigned.

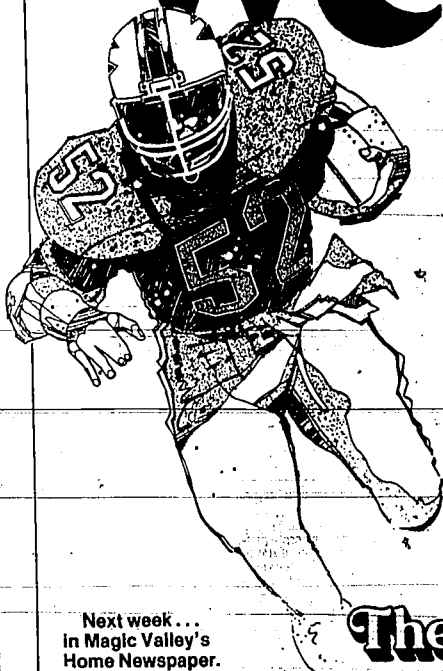

Tomczak will take some pretty heavy numbers into the contest. The second-year backup from Ohio State has completed 31 of 40 passes for 396 yards for a whopping completion of 77 percent. To go with his six touchdowns, he has yet to be intercepted.

The Cardinals again feature a high-powered offense led by quarterback Neil Lomax, wide receiver Roy Green and running backs Ollis Anderson and Stump Mitchell.

Their lone victory was a 26-10 decision over Tampa Bay, and they lost to their opener to New England, 21-16.

Lomax has completed 30 of 58 passes for 379 yards and two touchdowns but the also has been intercepted twice. Both of the touchdowns were to Green for 12 and 20 yards against Kansas City.

Football Week

The Magic Valley had three state high school football champions in 1985 — a record. Can Jerome, Gooding and Oakley do it again?

Starting Sunday, The Times-News will take a week-long look in depth at the five high school conferences that involve Magic Valley teams, as well as the Big Sky Conference, which includes Boise State, Idaho State and the University of Idaho.

It begins Saturday with a look at the Gem State Conference, which includes Twin Falls and Minico, and at Burley, which is moving up from Class A-2 to A-1 this year.

On Monday, it's Jerome and the South-Central Idaho Conference; on Tuesday, Gooding and the Canyon Conference; Wednesday, Oakley and the Magic Valley Conference; and Thursday, the Sawtooth Conference and Jackpot, where the football program is entering its second season.

On Friday, The Times-News will take a detailed look at the Big Sky, of which Idaho is the defending champion and Boise State is one of the teams favored to win this year's title.

Next week... in Magic Valley's Home Newspaper.
