Winners, losers outlined by plan

Tax revision effort cuts across classes

By JIM LUTHER The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The winners in the big tax overhaul of 1986 are single, married, rich and not so rich, young and old, small businesses and giant corporations. So are the losers.

Related stories — A12

The multibillion-dollar corporation that has been giving the government 40 percent of its profits could end up with a sizable tax cut.

Among the winners: The poor: 6 million couples and individuals would be taken off the income tax rolls.

Shuttle plan fuels new NASA optimism

By HOWARD BENEDECT The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — When President Reagan ordered NASA to build a replacement for the destroyed space shuttle Challenger, agency Administrator James C. Fletcher remarked, "Morale in NASA is up 1,000 percent."

Among the positive developments recently for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration: Engineers selected a $500 million redesign for the jobs of the shuttle's solid fuel booster-rocket.

New directors were named at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida and the Marshall Space Flight Center in Alabama. Senate and House committees each approved fiscal 1987 budgets of more than $7.7 billion for NASA, up from $7.3 billion this year.

The agency formed two teams to take another look at design and assembly concepts for developing a space station before letting contracts for the work.

Gallup Poll: Drugs are No. 1 problem in schools

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — For the first time in the 18-year history of the annual Gallup Poll on education, the public has identified drugs as the biggest problem confronting the schools.

The survey said only 6 percent of the public mistakenly believe that a person can contract AIDS merely by being in a public place with someone who has it.

Responding to the survey results, Secretary of Education William J. Bennett said in a statement, "This confirms that the parents of America want to get drugs out of our schools. I have no higher priority than helping make American schools drug-free."

Public concern over the drug issue has been heightened by the spread of new, cheaper forms of cocaine, and the recent drug-related deaths of basketball star Len Bias and football player Don Rogers.

Heavy rains bring some (not enough) relief to Southeast

By RICK SCOPPE The Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Recent rains have flooded streets and transformed sun-baked fields into gullies in some parts of the Southeast, but it was far from enough to overcome the effects of the month-old drought, officials say.

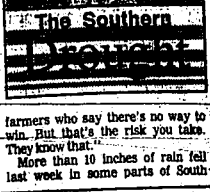

The drought started last winter, which was followed by a dry spring and a scorching summer. "It would take an awful lot of rain within the next six months — mother drowned as they tried to escape from their stalled car. Two other deaths were also blamed on the rain across South Carolina last week, officials said.

The survey found overwhelming support for tougher standards for grade promotion and graduation.

"We're in good shape this morning," Day said Saturday. "We only had two new fires reported in eastern Oregon yesterday."

"Most of the firefighters from out of the area are going back home. They need to get rested up in case something else happens here," said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Barbara Kennedy.

Fire crew sizes cut as rains bring aid

Full containment of Boise fire soon

By The Associated Press

Hundreds of firefighters were sent home Saturday after two weeks of fighting forest and range fires in the Northwest, and crews hoped to have the biggest remaining blaze contained by Monday.

Idaho fires — A3

Rain and cooler temperatures helped cut the average of fires still out of control in the Northwest to about 23,700, said Dave Damron, spokesman for the federal government's Boise Interagency Fire Center.

Here in Idaho, some 1,500 crews working 12-hour shifts had the Boise National Forest's 17,000-acre Anderson Creek fire on the run Saturday, with full containment expected by Monday morning.

Remaining fires in hard-hit eastern Oregon were either contained or controlled, and hundreds of out-of-state firefighters were sent home, leaving local crews to take over the cleanup.

About 1,500 lightning strikes were recorded in eastern Oregon overnight, but heavy rain limited the damage to only a few small blazes, said Gerry Day, a spokesman for the U.S. Bureau of Land Management in Portland.

"We're in good shape this morning," Day said Saturday. "We only had two new fires reported in eastern Oregon yesterday."

"Most of the firefighters from out of the area are going back home. They need to get rested up in case something else happens here," said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Barbara Kennedy.

Hot weather was expected to continue in the region into this week, and officials said the threat of more fires had not subsided.

"The potential for fires is still very great as we are very concerned," Ms. Kennedy said.

Soviet arrested on espionage charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI assigned a Soviet employee of the United Nations with espionage Saturday after arresting him in New York.

When he was arrested by FBI agents at 5:45 p.m., "Zakharov was in the process of accepting classified U.S. national defense documents for which he had offered to pay," according to the statement released in Washington. The documents were subsequently confiscated by the FBI.

FBI officials in Washington would not elaborate on who was allegedly selling the documents or whether an informant was involved.

No one answered telephone calls to the Soviet embassy in Washington. A person who answered the telephone at the Soviet Union's U.N. mission in New York identified himself as a diplomat on duty and said, "We have no comment on this case."

Webster said Zakharov's alleged spying activities involved a U.S. manufacturing employee whom Zakharov had befriended while the employee was a student at an undisclosed college.

"More than three years ago he allegedly initiated efforts to recruit a college student at a Northeastern university who was a permanent resident alien from a third world country."

Zakharov met with the student on many occasions during that time and reportedly paid him thousands of dollars to obtain a wide spectrum of valuable but top-classified information concentrated in the areas of robotics, computers and artificial intelligence," Webster said.

Zakharov told the student he should be remembered when he and Zakharov visit the United States, the FBI says.

Taxes

- Continued from Page A1
- deduction for mortgage interest and property tax paid from tax-exempt housing allowances.
- LOSERS
- New retirees who contributed to their own pensions: About 20 million lose a tax holiday of up to three years — a total now sufficient for them to get back the already-taxed dollars they contributed.
- Itemizers: Lose deductions for sales taxes, consumer interest and part of writeoffs for medical and union dues and other miscellaneous expenses. They get nothing from the higher standard deductions.
- Non-itemizers: Lose deduction for charitable contributions.
- Two-earner couples: Lose a special deduction of up to $3,000 that helps offset the "marriage penalty," which often means a couple pays more tax than if they remained single and filed separately. Well-paid couples with no children are likely to face tax increases.
- Profitable corporations: If they report a profit to heavily taxed shareholders, they would have to pay more income and others with income from which taxes are not withheld: Would have to make quarterly estimated payments to cover 90 percent (up from 80 percent) of current-year liability.
- Tardy taxpayers: Penalty for failure to pay on time would double to 1 percent a month.
- Businesspeople living on an expense account: Deduction for business-related meals and entertainment scaled back to 80 percent.
- Wealthy donors: If they make charitable gifts of stock, paintings or other property that has increased in value, some of the deduction might be lost because of the special minimum tax.
- Jobless: Unemployment compensation would be fully taxable.
- Political contributors: Credit of up to $100 a year would be lost.
- Banks: Traditionally paying low taxes, would be hit especially by a toughened minimum tax.
- Workers who change jobs and move some distance: Unimpaired moving expenses, now fully deductible even for non-itemizers, would be lumped with miscellaneous expenses, and only the part exceeding 2 percent of income could be deducted, and only if itemized.
- People with individual Blue Cross-Blue Shield policies: The insurers would lose their tax exemption.
- Those who cringe when Congress messes with the tax laws: Negotiators junked a Senate provision that would have imposed a five-year moratorium on passing any more major new tax bills.

Drugs recovered in raid that led to FAA probe

PALMDALE, Calif. (AP) — Sheriff's deputies recovered cocaine, hashish and documents in the raid that led to a federal investigation of alleged drug use by air traffic controllers, an officer said Saturday.

Thirty-four controllers at the Palmdale flight control center, which handles all flights that daily, have been reassigned to desk duty as a result of the probe, the center was arrested in the July 8 raid on her home here.

The officers raided a party attended by controllers, according to John Thornton, organizer for the National Air Traffic Controllers Association, a union trying to organize controllers nationwide.

Sheriff's deputies and an FAA investigator served a search warrant at the home of Karen McIntosh and her husband, Steven, said Deputy Sheriff Drew Basey.

"During the search, hashish and cocaine were seized," and both the McIntoshes were arrested," Basey said, reading from a news release.

"Miscellaneous papers were recovered that led the FAA to launch its own investigation into its personnel employed at the Palmdale flight control facility.

about how to pay for the $2.8 billion new shuttle, budgeting $72 million for start-up costs for fiscal 1987 and saying that the remainder over four years should come from savings found within NASA and other government agencies.

This angered Senate and House space committee members who said that if Reagan wants a new shuttle he must find a way of paying for it without touching NASA's budget.

"The fact of the matter is that there are no 'savings' kicking around to pay for all this," complained Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Wash., chairman of a NASA oversight committee. "The money doesn't exist, and NASA is being precluded from raising any revenue. I don't see how we can approve this."

And Reagan coupled his Aug. 15 announcement with a directive that the space agency get out of the business of launching commercial satellites, which have been the mainstay of the shuttle cargo manifest. This will mean lost revenue and could open the way for the Pentagon to play a major role in the shuttle program.

The decision opens the way for private industry to develop commercial launch services.

Companies that manufacture or are planning to launch space rockets said their phones started ringing earlier this month when rumors circulated about the change in shuttle launch policy.

Included were General Dynamics, which makes the Atlas-Centaur; Transpace Carriers, which owns the marketing rights to the Delta, and Space Services, which is developing the Conestoga 2 rocket. And Martin Marietta announced it is offering its Titan 3 rocket to launch commercial satellites.

Mike Bigler, a survivor of the shooting, began sobbing loudly at one point and was escorted outside. Bigler, whose casket was draped with an American flag, was one of the first people killed in the slaughter, police said.

Cathy Miller, wife of slain employee Bill Miller, said her husband may have saved several lives.

"Everything I can gather indicates that Billy was trying to take the gun away from him," she said after his funeral Friday. "I know of four people who told me their lives were saved because he gave 'em."

The Rev. Robert B. Hawkins, pastor of the church the Millers attended, said he was with Mrs. Miller when U.S. Postmaster General Preston Tisch called to thank her for her husband's heroic efforts.

About 175 people were crowded into the Minnie Funeral Home Chapel in St. John, Kan., for services for Leroy Phillips, 42, of Cheyenne, law, had worked as rural carrier at the Edmond Post Office for three months.

More than 2000 people attended services for Kenneth Morey at Baggerly Funeral Home in Edmond. Morey, 49, had been a rural mail carrier for five years.

Services also were completed Saturday for Judy Denney, 35, who had moved to Oklahoma City with her family about two months ago from Atlanta and had reported to

Commuter rail car crashes through wall; 30 are injured

UPPER DARBY, Pa. (AP) — A high-speed commuter rail car crashed through a terminal wall, injuring at least 41 people, authorities said.

The 3:45 p.m. crash occurred just after the operator tried unsuccessfully to use the front and rear brakes, one of the passengers said.

"The brakes weren't working when the operator went to use them," said passenger Sheila Freeman, 22.

"All we could do was brace ourselves," Ms. Freeman, who was on her way home from work, said she saw the operator lean back in his seat when the manual brakes failed to work in front as the single car rolled toward the 68th Street Terminal. When they failed, he ran back to the front and told passengers to brace themselves, she said.

At least one person in the terminal was believed to be injured when the car, inbound from Norristown, broke through the wall and came to a rest about a quarter of its length inside a concourse area, said Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority spokesman Donn Alston.

SEPTA officials said the cause of the accident was under investigation.

The cars, which can travel up to 65 mph, are similar to old-style trolley cars but without overhead wires. They run from Philadelphia's northwest suburbs to the 68th Street Terminal here, where commuters can change to city subway or bus lines, or for other suburban transit lines.

1986 has been either feast or famine for rainfall.

"We sure needed the moisture, but when it comes like this it's awfully hard," said Katie B. Perry, an agricultural extension meteorologist at North Carolina State University.

"This month, 1986 has been the driest and hottest year on record, but with the rain this month, temperatures have dropped.

As of Friday, Charlotte, N.C., had received 4.94 inches of rain this month; Raleigh-Durham, 10.05; and Greensboro, 7.5 — all above normal.

But rainfall in Charlotte is still 15.4 inches below normal this year, while Greensboro is -10.31 inches below normal. The Raleigh-Durham area is 1.73 inches below normal, weather service officials said.

In Virginia, last week's Hurricane Chaney dropped from 1 inch to more than 3 inches of rain, said Chip Knappenberger, research assistant at the state climatological office at Blacksburg.

"The rain may help farmers get a fall cutting of hay and revive corn and soybeans planted late, said Greg Hicks, spokesman for the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services.

Beef and dairy farmers will be looking for feed for their cattle this winter, despite the rain.

Today's weather

It looks like a swell day for a picnic!

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding: Mostly fair today and Monday with a slight chance of an afternoon or evening thundershower today. Highs 85 to 90 today and Monday. Lows near 50.

Camas Prairie, Halsey and Lower Wood River Valley: Mostly fair today and Monday with a slight chance of a thundershower. Highs today and Monday 85 to 90. Lows 50 to 65.

Northern Utah and Nevada: Mostly sunny days and mostly cloudy at night today through Monday. Highs today and Monday in the 70s and 80s. Lows mainly near the mountains. Highs low 90s. Lows 60-65.

Synopsis:

The National Weather Service says a weather disturbance moved through the state producing scattered thundershowers. The air mass remains relatively moist and unstable over Idaho with partly cloudy skies and scattered afternoon thundershowers. These conditions should continue through Monday along with little day to day temperature changes.

The highest temperature in the state Saturday was 92 degrees at Caldwell, Hagerman and Lewiston, while the low was 44 degrees was recorded at Stanley.

Southern Idaho: Tuesday through Thursday, warm with isolated afternoon and evening thundershowers. Highs in the mid-80s to mid-90s. Lows in the 50s to low 60s.

Elsewhere in the nation, Saturday's high temperature was 113 degrees at Palm Springs, Calif., and the low was 33 degrees at Truckee, Calif.

Firefighters make progress on Anderson containment

BOISE (AP) — Firefighters made progress in containing a fire that destroyed a house in the Anderson neighborhood Sunday, according to the Boise Fire Department. The fire, which started in the early morning hours, was contained by 10:30 a.m. and firefighters were working to remove the remains of the structure. The cause of the fire is still under investigation.

Deputy to be tried in car death
BOISE (AP) — Canyon County Prosecutor Richard Harris has been chosen as special prosecutor in the vehicular manslaughter case of Ada County Sheriff's Deputy Michael Vajda, said Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bower. Vajda was charged after an Emmett woman died early Thursday morning in the burning wreckage of her car, which had been rear-ended in a hit-and-run accident. Bower said the selection of Harris by 4th District Judge Gerald Schroeder was made to avoid any appearance of a conflict of interest, although there was no technical or legal requirement to select a special prosecutor.

After 8 months, PSA may drop Idaho air route

BOISE (AP) — After a much-ballyhooed arrival in December, Pacific Southwest Airlines' service to Boise may end in September. The San Diego-based carrier has informed Boise-area travel agents that it plans to pull out of the city by Oct. 1. The last day of PSA flights in Boise would be Sept. 30. In notices to travel agents, airline officials said Boise has not provided enough passengers to make service to the city profitable.

Legal opinion affirms plan for county personnel system

BOISE (AP) — County commissioners may establish a mandatory countywide personnel system for county employees, an attorney general's opinion says. But the commission may not use that system in an attempt to directly control work activities of deputies and assistants of other county officers, the opinion said Friday. Ada County Assessor William Schroeder asked Attorney General Jim Jones for an opinion whether a county commission may adopt a personnel system applying to all county employees. The opinion, prepared by Deputy Attorney General Warren Felton, generally went along with a 1979 attorney general's opinion on the same subject. While county commissions can't directly control the assistants and employees of other county officers, the opinion said for the orderly administration of the work force, it may be desirable to set up a uniform personnel system. The opinion also said county commissions may not create new "offices," although the distinction between new "offices" and "positions" may have to be decided on a case-by-case basis. Although not directly empowered by the Idaho Constitution to do so, county commissions have implied authority to employ persons needed to carry out their duties, the opinion said.

Idaho Symms rips 'Mickey Mouse' lawsuits against timber mills

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — Timber harvesting is needed by timber-dependent communities, and the economies of those communities are threatened by "Mickey Mouse lawsuits" filed by environmental extremist groups, according to Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho. Symms said many Idaho communities thrive on timber harvesting, and many environmentalists ignore that dependence. "The forest plans are hindered by Mickey Mouse lawsuits from extremist groups that don't have a concern for the economy," Symms said. He was speaking after a public hearing here Friday on the U.S. Forest Service planning process for the Clearwater and Nez Perce national forests. Hearings for the Panhandle and Boise national forests were held earlier this week in Coeur d'Alene and Emmett. Symms was accompanied at the hearings by Sen. Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, and Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, who called the meetings as field hearings of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Interior and Related Agencies. McClure said most of the 77 people who testified in the three cities favored changing forest plans for the three forests to allow for more timber harvesting. McClure said most testified that they believe timber-harvest levels are too low. Such levels would cost jobs in timber-dependent communities, he said. The levels also would make an impact on school districts, which receive funding through timber receipts, McClure said. Symms said he agreed with testimony calling for more harvesting. "We've got major problems with the forest plans for Idaho," he said. McClure said "environmentalists who testified favored keeping harvest levels as presented in the plans." "We can't ignore the fact that as timber activity increases, impact on natural conditions increases," McClure said. Some of the plans call for harvesting half of all timber grown.

FCC kills air request by RTW group

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has ruled against a demand by a pro right-to-work organization in Idaho for free television air time to promote its side of the right-to-work controversy. Union Members for Right to Work, a group promoting Idaho's new right-to-work law, filed a FCC complaint earlier, contending television stations hadn't fairly covered the right-to-work issue. The group argued that stations in Idaho have aired a number of AFL-CIO advertisements that solicit a "no" vote on a referendum on right-to-work on the November general election ballot. The group said it wanted free air time to present its own unique side of the controversy. A FCC hearing examiner concluded that the argument was without merit, because Union Members for Right to Work failed to provide any specifics on dates and times of relevant programming. The group also has no particular right to demand that its use of viewpoint be aired or made public, the FCC concluded. Two television stations in Boise, two in Idaho Falls, two in Nampa and one each in Lewiston and Twin Falls were named in the complaint. All argued that they have covered both sides of the right-to-work issue. Paula Wissel, spokesman for Idahoans Against Deception, an organization working against right-to-work, hailed the decision on Friday as "another blow to the right-to-work promoters who always seem to be looking for a free ride." She said the pro-right-to-work group apparently wants "local Idaho TV stations to pay for the promotion of their bad idea."

Nampa woman dies in canal fall

NAMPA (AP) — An elderly Nampa woman died Friday when she apparently fell into an irrigation canal adjacent to her back yard, police said. Fay L. Gregg, 83, was discovered missing about 12:30 p.m. Friday and was found by her husband about an hour later. She had been swept about two blocks downstream, police said.

Cigarette may have caused fire

NAMPA (AP) — A burning cigarette may have started a fire that killed a Nampa man in his small travel-trailer, Canyon County Deputy Coroner Tim Lewis said. Tony Lee Erwin, 19, was believed to have died from carbon monoxide poisoning in the trailer early Friday, Lewis said. He said a man returning home from working the graveyard shift at Albertson's saw smoke coming from the camper, parked at a Nampa intersection.

But travel agents said the competition that drove prices lower and increased vacation travel from Boise to California by 60 percent this summer may dwindle with PSA's departure from Idaho.

Judy Mills, owner of Boise's Travel Centre agency, said recent PSA flights from Boise had been about 30 percent full. PSA's announcement to Boise travel agents mentioned that the firm decided it could better fill the plane that had been used for Boise if they flew from somewhere else, said Bob Harmon of Harmon Travel Service Inc.

Time to scrutinize political rhetoric

Now that the summer fair season is upon us, the political candidates will be stirring and we can expect more from each of them talking about what they can do for Idaho and its ailing economy.

If Thursday's speeches at the Twin Falls County Republican picnic are any indication, the answers vary widely with the vision of the candidate. Some examples:

Butch Otter, candidate for lieutenant governor, knows he has hit a responsive chord in his talks about international trade and marketing. As president of Simplot International, Otter would bring considerable experience in world commodities to the task.

Despite the state's problems, he is optimistic about Idaho's long-range potential. He has both poise and confidence and, most importantly, a real plan about how to market Idaho's products. We need all of that in Idaho government, and Otter knows it.

Elsewhere on the ticket, trouble looms.

The local Republican faithful are worried about gubernatorial candidate David Leroy's campaign, which has not caught fire of late.

Some folks are whispering about the Peter Principle with Leroy, saying that the boy wonder of Republican politics in Idaho may have gone as far as he can.

Certainly, there's not much enthusiasm for the right-wing color to his campaign staff. New campaign manager Chuck Lempeis played to the sloganeering right in his losing primary bid against Otter, and Leroy has done little to win the moderate center which, in Idaho, is critical to a state-wide contest.

No one is saying Leroy's race is irrevocably lost but the talk is that he will have to do a lot better from now on to catch Cecil Andrus, whom Leroy has not really attacked for his service in "the discredited Carter administration.

Congressional candidate Mel Richardson, on the other hand, seems to be making little progress against incumbent Rep. Richard Stallings.

At Thursday's picnic, he repeated a two-month old speech about how "excited" he is to be a Republican and to be in the race against Stallings, but didn't touch on substance.

His comments bubbled with enthusiasm, but little else, giving the distinct impression Richardson is still not up to speed on the issues. Warning: shallow water here.

Republicans in Idaho have often had a relatively easy time of it, what with a stranglehold on the Legislature and many of the state's top offices. But unless things change, this year could see different results.

Fulfilling public needs takes money

Here's a thought you probably haven't heard much in the Reagan era: government in the United States is too small.

While you recover from the shock, let me explain why this idea is not as outrageous as it sounds.

First, I don't mean that the 35 percent of gross national product now spent by all levels of government in the United States on all public purposes is too little in any abstract sense. Such an assertion would be as foolish as earlier pronouncements that ruination would follow once government spending reached 25 percent of GNP or some such number.

Nor do I mean that all government spending is of immense social value. No doubt there are billions of dollars in waste, fraud and abuse in the federal budget and billions more in state and local budgets. Certainly, we would all prefer better government to bigger government — if only we knew how to get it.

And I most emphatically do not mean that government should intrude more into our daily lives or into our market economy. Government-as-busybody has never been a popular concept in the United States, and for good reasons.

In suggesting that the public sector has more spending on some traditional functions of government would yield benefits to society that exceed the value of the private goods given up in exchange. We Americans enjoy the highest levels of private consumption in the world. Yet we are repeatedly inconvenienced, and sometimes endangered, by an impoverished public sector. I submit that this makes little sense.

One homely example is the way we wait in lines to be served by an understaffed government. We wait at motor vehicle bureaus because there are not enough clerks. We wait at toll plazas because there are not enough toll takers.

Alan Blinder

We wait in airplanes because there are not enough air-traffic controllers. You can easily add your own pet peeve to this list. Individually, most of these instances are trivial: a few minutes here, a few minutes there. But collectively they add up.

The next time you waste several minutes in a toll line where the booths go unmanned, ponder the following calculation. Suppose 24 people pass through the toll plaza each minute. If this goes on for eight hours, 11,520 people experience delays. If the authorities could reduce the average waiting time by one minute by hiring two more toll collectors, then 192 hours of private time could be saved by adding 16 more hours of labor to the public payroll. Is that not a good use of public funds? Even if my hypothetical numbers exaggerate the savings, the margin is large enough to justify not only hiring more toll takers but building more toll booths on congested routes.

Can't get exercised over a few minutes of inhaling carbon monoxide? Then think instead about the huge costs imposed on American businesses and individuals by the legendary delays in our overburdened court system. Or consider the criminals who must be released early because we refuse to build enough prisons. Or ask yourself if I spend enough on drug enforcement.

But these are only the nickels and dimes of our starved public sector. If you want to think bigger, picture thousands of municipal sewage-treatment plants violating environmental standards rather than pay the high costs of reducing pollution. Want bigger sums yet? Then consider our decaying bridges, tunnels and roads. London Bridge is now in the private sector and is no longer falling down. But public-sector bridges are more numerous and less well cared for.

Finally, if you want to think about truly staggering sums and the very future of our nation, think about public education. The harsh truth is that the United States no longer has the best-educated populace in the world, nor even close. Illiteracy is shockingly common in America — so common, in fact, that corporations report difficulty finding workers who can read and write. American students learn far less science and math in the public schools than do Japanese students. Ironically, the Japanese remember what Americans seem to have forgotten: that high-quality public education was one of the secrets of America's social and economic success.

To be sure, money will not cure all our educational ills, and some important steps require little public expenditure. But we do have ourselves if we think we can sharply reduce illiteracy or raise the level of scientific education without devoting more resources to these tasks. And that means more government spending.

High crime, environmental degradation and faltering public education seem so much more important than long lines at toll booths — and they are. But all of these are, in part, symptomatic of our ideological attachment to starving the public sector. The next time someone tells you that America cannot afford higher literacy, better sewage-treatment plants and more law enforcement, think about all the video cassettes, designer jeans and trashy movies we apparently can afford. Are these private needs really so much more urgent than our unmet public needs?

Letters / Maybe with understanding a tragedy could have been avoided

Lots of blame to go around

To the mayor of Edmond, Okla.

I just heard about the postman that shot and killed or injured his fellow employees. You stood on TV and said, "how could this happen?" and that even you wanted to shoot him even if he is dead.

Or his neighbors that said he was crazy but offered no support or even tried to help him get mental help? Or maybe his friends just because they did not want to get involved?

I grieve heavily for all the families that this shooting will affect and the depressions that will be there as well as the bad feelings he got with something like this.

But who really let something like this happen? Remember it could happen again and yet maybe not if someone would have just said "let's talk about it."

Conservatives not slighted

John T. Reagan's challenge to the editorial board of the Times-News to provide equal exposure for conservatives raises the question of how regularly he (Reagan) reads the paper.

Considering the frequency of the offerings of Geo. Will, James Kilpatrick, et al. to say nothing of the "bend-over backwards" policy of printing every letter from every local nut, I'd be willing to bet that a "score card" would indicate that the conservatives already enjoy a decided exposure advantage.

The T-N has been scrupulously, even painfully, fair in this area ever since the arrival of Steve Hartgen. Dick Manning and Mike Sullivan notwithstanding.

Paradoxically, a front-page AP release in the same issue of the T-N informs us that no less than 72 Nobel Laureates, along with 24 "scientific organizations," have filed a friend of the court brief in the Louisiana creation-science case, petitioning the Supreme Court to nullify the Louisiana law which requires the teaching of creationism in the public schools. Are 72 Nobel prize winners mistaken? Should the public take its direction from Cal-Tech and MIT or from Jimmy Swaggart and Jerry Falwell?

Mr. Reagan should be advised that our money would be every bit as negotiable if it were imparted with the lyrics to Maury Deats; his perception of our Judeo-Christian heritage is simplistic at best.

In any case, the people who originated that heritage could not possibly have known the pericote table from the kitchen table, or a molecule from a can of camel dung.

Ask any black, Hispanic or Asiatic person about his "Judeo-Christian heritage." Ask any American Indian. "To be fair, that heritage does manifest itself currently in the vicinity of Hayden Lake." So perhaps we should ask Rev. Butler.

One wonders if Mr. Reagan would plead with equal passion for equal time for conservative, fundamentalist Muslims, or if he is aware that the world population contains more non-Christians than Christians, not all of them ignorant savages.

Perhaps Mr. Reagan would be willing to define the term "conservative" and explain just what it is he wishes to "conserve."

Since most of the so-called "Liberals" I know seem intent on the conservation of the human species in a relatively free state, it would appear we're using contradictory terminology.

Official explains road work

To Rita Hess, Jerome:

Governor Evans has referred his copy of the letter you sent to the Twin Falls Times-News to us for response.

The work you observed was the installation of thermoplastic guide lines for Shoshone Street traffic going north onto Blue Lakes Boulevard North or east onto Addison Avenue East. The lines, by providing positive guidance through the intersection, will improve traffic flow and reduce accidents.

The thermoplastic markings were extended beyond the intersection limits so that the striping truck wouldn't have to enter the intersection while painting. Since the markings were made several times the life of painted markings, this will reduce traffic interference at the intersection for the next several years.

The size of the crew was based on our desire to get the job done quickly and to avoid closing the intersection to traffic while we worked. Flaggers were used to protector personnel working in traffic and guide motorists around our moving operations. Although approximately 9,000 vehicles entered the intersection during the operation, we are not aware of any extensive delays or accidents. The particular phase of the operation that you saw had part of the crew installing thermoplastic material (one pickup with material) and the others preparing to mark the location of the guidelines (with the second pickup) through the intersection.

Your description of the work required to install the thermoplastic was quite accurate. The work was done in conformance with manufacturer's specification. This included priming both the thermoplastic stripe and the pavement surface. The pavement priming compound needed to cure, so some of the crew primed the pavement several minutes in advance of those placing the stripes.

Transportation Department employees are also "taxpayers that work for a living," (often under very hazardous conditions. They have a genuine interest in providing the best possible service.

During election season all politicians are pro-education

BOISE — You hear a lot in the major Idaho political campaigns about support for education.

But if the well-educated voter is looking to sort out the candidates on that issue, forget it.

Virtually everyone in Idaho politics is for education. And the quickest and least fruitful argument you can get into is whether Republicans or Democrats are the greater champions of the classroom.

Democrats say if it weren't for their party, and the leadership of Democratic governors Cecil Andrus and John Evans the last 16 years, Idaho's schools and colleges wouldn't even be as well-funded as they are now.

Republicans point out they are the ones who control the purse strings, and the GOP majority has been the one that has gradually boosted state support for local schools in the last decade.

Education support became a campaign issue again this past week. A group of educators, parents and businessmen endorsed Andrus for governor over Republican Lt. Gov. David Leroy.

That led Leroy to point out that Andrus has made no specific recommendations for improving education, while Leroy in May proposed a 13-point program for boosting public schools.

Later in the week, Andrus continued on the same theme, telling a Junior Statesman Foundation audience that economic development potential in Idaho is directly linked to the quality of the state's education system.

"Do you think it was an accident that Silicon Valley developed where it did in California — near Stanford and Berkeley and one of the best public school systems in the country," asked Andrus.

One of the top problems who has controlled the purse strings in the Legislature in recent years dismissed the Idaho Education Association endorsement of Andrus as partisan in nature.

David Little, who is retiring from the state Senate after the current term, said the IEA is essentially a teachers' union, concerned primarily with increased teacher salaries.

What Idaho needs, stressed the Emmett Republican, is a governor willing to provide leadership for the Republican-controlled Legislature, "instead of engaging in battles drawn along partisan lines."

Andrus was Idaho governor, also complained that Andrus paints himself as a champion of education. Three times in Andrus' six years as governor, the Republicans appropriated more money for education than Andrus requested, he said.

Education spending takes two-thirds of the entire state budget in Idaho. Usually, Republicans and Democrats engage in the major game-playing over the public school and higher education budgets, because once they are settled, there usually is little

As an example of what can happen, House Democrats a couple of sessions ago voted against a business tax increase, which would have produced more revenue for education, in hopes of an even-higher increase. That was their last chance, and they acknowledged later they would have been ahead to support the business tax increase.

Like most other Idaho candidates, both Leroy and Andrus have been very shy about calling for higher taxes for education — or any other purpose.

So picking a candidate on the basis of their stands on education might be a little difficult in Idaho this year.

It's certainly time for Scarecrow to quit acting like a nerd

SCRABBLE, Va. — The Scarecrow and Mrs. King, I see by the papers, will start behaving "like real human beings" in the coming TV season. By George, it's about time.

For the past four years, I have been shouting every Monday night at the Scarecrow. His real name, of course, is Lee Stetson, and he's an agent of the CIA. "Scarecrow" is only his code name. His partner, a volunteer at the agency, is the divorced Amanda King. She is beautiful, and not just beautiful. She is intelligent, brave, spunky, a loving mother to her all-American boys. She is every man's dream boat.

"Yes her!" I have been yelling at the screen. "The Scarecrow would rather drive his sports car. 'You need!' I have been crying. 'Whassa matter with you, Stetson? Lost your nerve?'"

One Monday night — I forget the story line — he climbed up a trellis at her home and through a window into her room. Oh, boy, I said to the TV screen, now you're showing some gunplay. No way. He sat on the edge of her bed and they discussed how they would nab some international villain. Then he climbed back out of the window and down the trellis and into the sports car, and I threw some leftover spaghetti at the screen. "Dope!" I hollered. "Un-speakable wimp!"

This has kept my adrenals pumping since 1982. Once I was in Los Angeles and missed the show. My wife telephoned me the next morning. "Did you see them hold hands?" she asked. She was breathless. I hadn't seen them hold hands, but well, it seemed a likely start. Nothing happened the rest of the season. Amanda gave him a few longing looks but the idiot just holstered his pistol and looked the other way.

Now, it says here, "after years of working undercover, Scarecrow and Mrs. King are going to try working under the covers this season. Literally." They are "going to do what comes naturally." Scarecrow viewers, it says here, "will be pleased to see the consummation of desire."

Now that kind of dirty talk leaves me uneasy. I expect them to do a little necking. I'm no prude. I mean, after all, I'm a pretty sophisticated fellow, but I don't want the producer implying that they're ab-jecting all the way. You know? These are the who love Amanda want to see a ring. We want to hear wedding bells. We want a sign on the rear of that sports car that says "Just Married!" Then they can go off on a honeymoon and meet a couple of gangsters, and it will be perfect, just perfect, and pass the popcorn, sweetie, he's not a nerd anymore.

Most men are nerds. You take Judge Parker in the comic strips. Actually, you rarely see Judge Parker anymore. You see the handsome young lawyer Sam Driver. He's maybe 45. Good looking guy. A beautiful redhead named Abby Lane is crazy about him. She's beautiful, brave, spunky, intelligent and rich. Lives on a great estate. Sereniks, horses, all that good stuff. She's forever feeding him. Will he propose? No. Will he even put an arm around her? Not him. I will give you another dope. Dr. Rex Morgan. His nurse is named June. You can tell by the way she looks at him that she would love to be Mrs. Morgan. And she's beautiful, brave, spunky, intelligent. All he ever says is "cancel my next appointment."

It has been ever thus. Remember Dick Tracy? He went with Tess Trueheart for years and years before he popped the question. There used to be a magician named Mandrake. Top hat. Flowing cape. Handsome dog. For 25 years he dated Princess Narda. Gorgeous brunette — beautiful, brave, spunky, intelligent. They traveled around a lot together, but they always stayed in separate palaces. I stopped reading Mandrake. But I hear he's still around.

So it goes. In the Adventures of Mark Trail, this great outdoorsman and adventurer has a girl, name of Cherry. She adores him. He loves the dog. Big dog. There used to be a character named Smilin' Jack. He flew airplanes. He had a girl too, but I forgot whatever became of them. Not much.

There are exceptions. The Phantom and Diana finally got hitched and went to live in their treehouse, but goodness knows I took them long enough. Joe Palooka got married. The Bumsteads are a happy family. Jiggs and Maggie fought a lot, but they stayed married for 150 years. In Doonesbury two of the characters are legally co-nurturing a child. I'm for that.

But the big news is that Lee and Amanda will really be going steady. They're on their way to the altar. Stay tuned. This season it will be Friday night at 8 o'clock, and I'll be in the kitchen swooping it up for the "happy pair." He's no bargain; but she's beautiful, brave, spunky, intelligent....

Consensus on defense is possible

WASHINGTON — Washington is witness to a strange inversion possibly also an instinctive one. In tax reform, an area of public policy where politics traditionally and naturally reigns, there is a serene, almost bloodless unanimity, and the air rings with mutual congratulations and celebration of the spiritual wonder of it all.

But in national security, where the hopeful expect politics to stop at the water's edge, the seas churn. Brulish battles between President Reagan and Congress and between Republicans and Democrats on Nicaragua and South Africa pile atop tense confrontations over arms and arms control.

Ronald Reagan, abandoning appeals for bipartisanship, warns he will make national security "the issue" in the November elections.

It is clear enough where the troubles lie: policy misfortunes may not rub off on the president's personal standing, but as his presidency nears its terminal quarter, he is finding it ever harder to make his personal standing carry controversial policies ahead.

That is what creates the current spectacle of a president's being forced for the second straight year to initiate South African sanctions in an uncertain effort to pre-empt tougher congressional ones; of a president who has won immense past defense increases losing control of the defense bill to the point that he feels he may have to veto it.

It is also clear enough where the answer lies: In attempting to re-nationalize security issues — and that means arms and arms control — some of the same conditions that have just made possible the great shared triumph of tax reform.

Two conditions ensured tax reform: its national centrality and its aspect of fairness and reasonableness. The startling thing about the security scene now is that, despite the intense combativeness and partisanship so widely evident, the outlines of a policy promising the same national centrality and fairness have come into view.

This is where the nearly six years of Reagan and a year-plus of Mikhail Gorbachev have fetched us all up.

A moderate American policy that would serve strength and stability and that would likely win Soviet accord has been taking shape from many hands and has now received powerful formulation and impetus from a group of estimable former national security officials — Harold Brown, Melvin Laird, James Schlesinger, Brent Scowcroft, Cyrus Vance.

Together, they have the credentials to bring aboard mainstream conservatives and Republicans and to keep mainstream liberals and Democrats from jumping ship.

No less interesting than the collection and combination of the names is the channel in which these advisers of past Republican and Democratic presidents delivered their recent counsel: In a paper sent quietly to Secretary of State George Shultz.

The secretary seems to have an inclination for a balanced policy, but has often appeared to be unprepared in personal background and in high-level advisory support to do battle against the heavyweight conservatives in the Pentagon. Brown & Co. compose a formidable team to help ensure a hearing for an alternative policy.

In its main features it would respect old arms-control agreements (SALT, ABM), add flexibility to some new arms-building programs (MX, Minuteman), and hold the most speculative and provocative new program (SDI) to "measured" research; familiar ideas, good ideas, ideas that the Reagan team has so far spurned.

In Congress, most Democrats would leap to support such a policy. As for Republicans, it's worth noting that it was defections from their ranks, not Democratic votes alone, that produced last week's precedent-setting approval of every arms-control amendment proposed in the House defense bill: nuclear testing, SALT compliance, SDI funding, ASAT testing, chemical funding. The result: left President Reagan protesting that the House had pulled the rug out from under arms-control negotiations. Armed Services Committee Chairman Lea Aspin observed, more plausibly, that there is "a new congressional majority" for arms control.

In short, if President Reagan wants the national security equivalent of tax reform — an arms and arms-control policy with nearly wall-to-wall expert and congressional support — it's his for the asking.

Frontier flying despite rumors of a shutdown

DENVER (AP) — Frontier Airlines kept a full flight schedule Saturday and denied reports the troubled carrier was on the brink of packing its planes and going to bankruptcy court.

Some travel agents have stopped writing tickets on Frontier, other airlines made plans in case they have to handle more passengers, and some Frontier employees are given money out of their credit union Friday.

Frontier, with 4,700 employees nationwide, lost $10 million a month during the first six months of this year. It serves 60 cities in 22 states

Family seeks end to fear over demons

WEST PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — A couple, who say their family is plagued by demons said Saturday they would spend two days reviewing proposals from scientists, to choose several to help them try to oust any evil spirits.

Jack and Janet Smuri say that for the past 16 months, their lives have been dominated by demons that lurk in their house and follow them on trips.

The Smuris said they have received numerous proposals from scientists who want to study the case and hundreds of letters from ordinary people, wishing them well.

They declined to identify the individuals or institutions offering to work with them, saying they want to make sure first that the proposals are legitimate.

"We are looking for somebody very reputable," said Mrs. Smur.

The Smuris say they and their four daughters have been physically attacked and jarred awake by blood-curdling noises, and the house has been filled with foul odors that have not been known cause.

across the country and in Canada and Mexico.

People Express, which is negotiating to sell the Denver-based Frontier to United Airlines for $146 million, has been tight-lipped about its plans for Frontier, but Frontier officials strongly denied a shutdown was imminent.

"Frontier Dispatch says flight control has had no instructions from corporate to operate the airline in other than a scheduled manner for the foreseeable future," the company said in a memo distributed to employees Friday night.

"There is apparently quite a bit of fabrication going on," it said, adding that some flight changes were caused by a plane temporarily out of service.

Denver newspapers have reported that Frontier will run out of cash when it must make a $5 million payment Tuesday to the Airline Clearinghouse, a central clearing agency for tickets, unless it receives a cash infusion from its parent company.

Business urged to sell in South Pacific

WASHINGTON (AP) — The spectacular economic growth of Pacific countries, led by Japan, makes it imperative for U.S. businessmen to adopt a comprehensive Asian strategy, a congressional study said Saturday.

For Japan, even though riding the crest of success and enjoying rising influence in world affairs, the time has come for "a complete rethinking of its growth formula," the study said.

Other Asian countries with growing prosperity such as South Korea, Taiwan, Singapore and Hong Kong — nicknamed "the Gang of Four" in the study — also face the prospect of adjusting export-led growth policies, it added.

Unlike Japan, which is strong enough to resist pressure, newly industrializing countries "may have to adjust to survive," it concluded.

Countries of ASEAN, the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, may find "the Japanese export-driven growth model" attractive, but some features "could be untimely in the currently imbalanced commercial environment," it said.

However, "China's success in generating increased food production and rural industrial output and its apparent management of the balance of food and population growth ... makes the (Chinese) model especially relevant for the Service.

It agreed with President Reagan's administration in articulating protection, but they said the report also underscored "why the administration must straighten out its confusion, pursue more coherent and effective trade policies and non-protectionist Congressional Research Administration engaged in international trade and finance."

The 120-page report predicted that unless American and other Western businessmen actively participate in the growth of Asian markets, they "likely will lose the ability to meet Asian competition in their home markets."

The report on Pacific rim economies was commissioned by Rep. David R. Obey, D-Wis., chairman of the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, and prepared by the aggressive trade policies and non-protectionist Congressional Research Administration engaged in international trade and finance."

Governors: Create education backups

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — The nation's governors issued a report Saturday that recommends an "educational bankruptcy" system allowing states to take control of public schools that fail to meet learning standards.

The report by the National Governors' Association says that local educators should be given more control over how schools are run and that, in exchange, the schools be held accountable for what students learn.

That accountability, the governors propose, would include better reporting to parents on school performance and intervention by state authorities in extreme cases of failure by school districts or schools.

The report is the focus of the governors' four-day 78th annual meeting which began Saturday at this island resort.

"The governors are ready for some old-fashioned horse-trading," said Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander, chairman of the association.

"We'll regulate less, if schools and school districts will produce better results," he added. "The trade we're talking about will change dramatically the way most American schools work."

At a news conference to unveil the report, Alexander cautioned that in providing more discretion to local educators, "We wouldn't want anyone to conclude we're going to negotiate away minimum stan-ards."

The report was to be presented Sunday to the governors, who will vote later on whether to embrace it. It was written by a committee of governors, headed by Alexander, after hearings around the country.

The association, which includes governors from the 50 states and five territories, is to hear from some of the nation's top education officials, including Education Secretary William Bennett and the heads of the major national teachers unions.

They also may take a position on the agreement by House and Senate conferees on tax overhaul legislation, which they were scheduled to discuss Sunday.

The governors' group has been generally supportive of the drive for tax overhaul, but it opposes elimination of the federal deduction for state and local sales taxes. That deduction would be wiped out by the bill while deductions for other state taxes would be retained, and state officials say the move would pressure states that rely on sales taxes to shift to other tax bases, such as income taxes.

Alexander, a Republican whose state has no income tax, called the sales tax change "terrible policy" but suggested it may not prompt the governors to oppose the entire bill.

MX missile test reported successful

VANDEMBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — An unarmed MX missile flew 4,200 miles to a target area in the Pacific on Saturday, completing the 13th test of launch of the missile, military officials said.

The missile carried nine unarmed MK-21 re-entry warheads, said Maj. Barry Gluckman, director of public affairs for the Air Force Ballistic Missile Office.

"The unarmed re-entry vehicles are instrumented and we track them and we test the accuracy," he said.

UAW workers strike at three Deere plants

MOLINE, Ill. (AP) — United Auto Workers at three Deere & Co. plants struck Saturday after their contract expired, and company and union officials said no new talks were scheduled.

"We proposed a contract that did not take away wages or benefits," said Brian Alm, spokesman for the world's leading farm tractor manufacturer. "We are not seeking to take anything away, but we cannot afford to give more after losing $170 million this year."

The proposal, rejected by the union, called for a 37-month contract in which the 4,300 striking employees would have "the opportunity" for a raise, the company said in a statement. The statement did not elaborate.

Bill Casstevens, a UAW spokesman, said Saturday that the major sticking point in the contract was job security and the company's efforts to "emasculate our cost-of-living benefits."

No negotiations are planned, said Casstevens and Deere spokesman Bob Shoup.

The 4,300 striking employees work at a parts distribution center in nearby Milan and at plants in Waterloo and Dubuque, Iowa, Shoup said.

They were chosen because there are local issues as well as basic contract issues to be worked out, said Casstevens.

Shoup said he did not know if the strike would spread to the 11 other Deere plants in Illinois and Iowa under UAW contracts. The 14 plants have about 15,000 UAW workers.

37 cars of train leave tracks in California, injuring hobos

NORTH PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Thirty-seven cars of a 57-car freight train derailed early Saturday, injuring four hobos and closing Southern Pacific's tracks, authorities said.

The cause of the derailment was not known, Southern Pacific spokesman Bob Hoppe said.

The Los Angeles-to-Chicago freight derailed just south of Interstate 10 at 12:05 a.m.

The train was hauling new cars, televisions, roller skates and teddy bears, Proctor said. Some of the cargo was strewn along the tracks when the train went off the tracks.

The four hobos, who were apparently riding the train, suffered minor injuries, said Riverside County fire Capt. Dan Proctor. Three of the men were treated at Desert Hospital in Palm Springs and released.

ed, said a nursing supervisor who refused to identify herself.

The derailment closed Southern Pacific's main line 100 miles east of Los Angeles, but it was expected to be reopened by late Saturday, Hoppe said.

The derailment forced Amtrak to reroute passenger trains over the Santa Fe Railroad line, Hoppe said. Amtrak passengers destined for Yuma, Ariz., were being bused there from Phoenix, where the Santa Fe's line stops.

3rd round of Salvador peace talks set for Sept.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The long-awaited third round of peace talks between El Salvador's U.S.-backed government and leftist rebels is set to begin Sept. 19 in the eastern Salvadoran farming town of Sesori, a commune said Saturday.

The time and place were set in three days of private meetings in Mexico between delegations from the two sides. The meetings, held at an undisclosed location, ended Friday night.

A possible agenda for the peace talks was not discussed, said the commune, signed by Roman Catholic Archbishop Arturo Rivera Damas of San Salvador. He has mediated the peace negotiations since their start.

The commune was distributed by Salvadoran government delegates at a news conference at their country's embassy here.

No indication emerged that either side changed its position since the first two rounds of peace talks deadlocked in October and November 1984.

About 61,000 people have been killed during nearly seven years of civil war between the government and the Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front, an umbrella organization of five guerrilla groups.

Rivera Damas' statement said the two sides agreed to hold another preliminary meeting in the first half of September to discuss security, communications and other logistical details. It said the actual peace talks would be held in Sesori, 95 miles northeast of the capital, San Salvador.

The statement said, "Both delegations left open the possibility of modifying through mutual agreement the place and the date" of the peace talks.

The first round of peace talks was held in October 1984 in the rural village of La Palma, and the second round the next month at a Catholic religious retreat at Ayacucho.

President Jose Napoleon Duarte called last June 1 for a resumption of the talks.

Nicaraguan defense chief warns against U.S. invasion

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Defense Minister Humberto Ortega, the nation's new general of the army, said Saturday that thousands of American soldiers would be killed if the United States attacked Nicaragua.

"We are willing to pay with tens of thousands of deaths if the United States intervenes in Nicaragua, but American troops will also leave thousands of dead behind, since the invaders also will bite the dust of defeat as they did with Sandino," Ortega said.

The ruling Sandinistas take their name from Augusto Cesar Sandino who led a revolt after U.S. Marines entered Nicaragua in 1926. He ended his guerrilla campaign when the Marines withdrew in 1933 and was seized and killed the next year after agreeing to meet with government mediators.

Ortega spoke at a ceremony installing new ranks on senior officers of the Sandinista army following a reorganization of the armed forces last week.

Ortega, who previous had the title of commander, was given the rank of general of the army by his brother, President Daniel Ortega, on Friday.

U.S./Contras — B5

That is the highest rank in the Nicaraguan army, followed by lieutenant general, major general and brigadier.

Such makeshift ranks as commander and subcommander were adopted by the Sandinistas during the civil war that they won in July 1979 with the defeat of the right-wing regime of the late President Anastasio Somoza.

Staff officers now have the ranks of colonel and lieutenant colonel while there was no change for field grade majors and lower ranking officers.

Pakistan's Zia checks security outlook

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq plunged straight into top-level talks on domestic security Saturday upon his arrival home from a two-week overseas pilgrimage.

Anti-government arson and skirmishes persisted. Protesters burned government buildings Saturday and tangled with riot police in various parts of Pakistan, but clashes and demonstrations were relatively minor.

The Movement for the Restoration of Democracy, or MRD, an alliance of 11 opposition parties, tried to keep alive the flagging drive it began last Monday to oust Zia and force elections. The alliance appealed for foreign support.

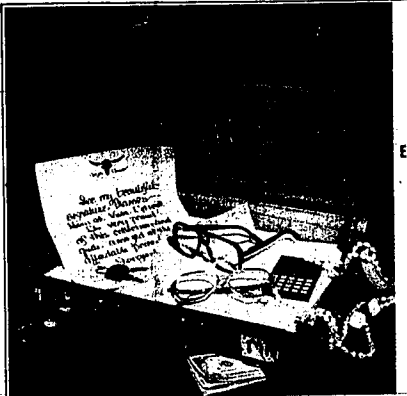

Crowds burned a post office and a railway station in Sukkur and two government buildings were burned in Kohri, officials said. Riot police dispersed a small protest march in Larkana, they said. All three towns are in southern Pakistan.

At least 29 people were killed and dozens injured since the MRD began its drive following a government crackdown on the political opposition. MRD spokesman Shah Mohammad Amroli said in a statement Saturday that 60 people died in the clashes.

Disturbances began when the government arrested more than 500 opposition leaders Aug. 13 to prevent political meetings on the country's independence day. Benazir Bhutto, head of the Pakistan People's Party, and other top opposition leaders remain under detention around the country.

The president was briefed on the security situation during his absence aboard, but officials refused to give details on the discussions.

Botha plans to resist foreign pressures

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President P.W. Botha on Saturday accused both the Western powers and the Soviet bloc of trying to impose their will on South Africa, and said he is prepared to fight off attempts from both sides.

Unveiling a monument marking Africa's southernmost tip at Cape Agulhas, Botha was quoted as saying that East and West were gambling with this nation's peace and stability in a contest over who would control the Cape sea route.

In a brief report on the speech, the South African Broadcasting Corp. quoted Botha as declaring he is prepared to fight off Western countries' attempts to force their will on his government as well as communist efforts to forcibly bring about a Marxist government in South Africa. He was quoted as saying Western leaders seldom mentioned the strategic value of the meeting point of the Atlantic and Indian oceans, although military leaders in communist and Western lands are well aware of it.

In another indication that the government is preparing South Africans for inevitable economic sanctions, the deputy minister of finance, Kent Durr, reiterated Saturday that the government has been stockpiling strategic materials for more than a decade to prepare for interruptions in supply.

Finance Minister Barend du Plessis announced the stockpiling earlier, but Durr added Saturday that stockpiled supplies include oil. He would not name other materials in the interview with the government-controlled South African Broadcasting Corp.

Durr said stockpiling would gain time for local industries to begin producing important items made unavailable by sanctions, and let the government find ways around restrictions through barter or trade with countries willing to break the sanctions.

South Africa has been under an oil and arms embargo for 20 years, but has plenty of fuel and has developed its own sophisticated weapons.

The government's Bureau for Information reported Saturday that the wife of a black legislator in the KwaZulu homeland was killed and her three sons severely wounded Friday night in a grenade and rifle attack on their house.

Honeymooner fans end event with final POW! in the kisser

NEW YORK (AP) — "Bang! Zoom! To the moon!" The guy on stage Saturday certainly sounded like Ralph Kramden, the loud but lovable "big driver" from "Beverly Hills Cop."

But this guy had a seriously heard and an even bigger belly than the portly Kramden. Immortalized on television by Jackie Gleason.

"As we say in the sewer, here's mud in your eye," chimed in Kramden's "sidekick," Ed Norton, played by wrestler Capt. Lou Albano as Ralph, and Brian Carney, Art's son, on stage Saturday. They were joined by a very pregnant Alice Laura-Marie Taylor, to re-enact a popular "Honeymooners" scene.

The occasion was the farewell convention of RALPH, the Royal Association for the Longevity and Preservation of the Honeymooners.

There were also lessons on how to improve your "Pow! Right in the kisser," a "Baby, You're the greatest!" kissing contest, and a crowd of Ralph, Alice, Norton and "Trixie" lookalikes.

"The Honeymooners" began in September 1952 as part of Gleason's variety hour on CBS, based on earlier sketches on the limited DuMont network's "Cavalcade of Stars." It continued as either part of Gleason's touring variety show or a half-hour series until June 1957, but was revived in the late-1960s with different female stars. A 25th anniversary special was broadcast on ABC in 1976.

On stage Saturday, only Trixie was the real thing. Actress Joyce Randolph revived her almost 15-year-old role as Norton's wife to the cheers of hundreds of devoted fans, many of whom could practically recite the words to the scene themselves.

"This is what you get for having a VCR," said Julia Williams, a lifelong fan and word processor from Brooklyn, who would only say she was in her 10s.

"Har-har-HAR-dy har-HAR," she mimicked Ralph.

Voyager Heyerdahl poses Columbus theory

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Columbus didn't just get lucky when he discovered America, says Thor Heyerdahl, one of the world's most acclaimed voyagers, who announced a study to document his contention.

Columbus knew exactly where he would find the New World because of solid information from Norsemen who corresponded with the Vatican four centuries before, the Norwegian explorer said in an interview Saturday.

well-documented, and the study would attempt to prove that Columbus was the result of real methodical planning," Heyerdahl said. "He had calculated exactly where America was because he knew from the church."

Letters to the Vatican told of Norsemen sailing from Greenland across the Davis Strait to as early as the 10th century, Norsemen established a settlement in Newfoundland.

"So many people believed that he had good luck because he bumped in-

"Columbus had much more information than we thought," said Heyerdahl, who made his reputation sailing the raft Kon-Tiki from Peru to Polynesia 39 years ago.

Heyerdahl announced plans Friday for the three-year study, which will cost at least $250,000 and involve a half-dozen scholars from Norway, Iceland and the United States.

Heyerdahl, 71, said other projects preclude him from taking part directly but he may write a book on the findings.

The Sons of Norway International, an 11,000-member fraternal organization meeting here, decided to sponsor the study after Heyerdahl proposed it. He is the group's current "Norwegian of the Year."

"We have ample evidence, known to the scholars and already published, but never put together as a complete picture," Heyerdahl said. "And that is what we're hoping to do."

He said the link between the 11th century Vikings and the Vatican was

County's residents captured in photo

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A struggling Mississippi county's plump posters lack sex-appeal, but its smiling residents—hope—they can win the hearts — and maybe investment dollars — of some executives, officials say.

More than 5,000 of Montgomery County's 14,000 residents posed for photos in Winona earlier this month in hopes of lowering the area's 19.3 percent unemployment rate.

People with jobs and without them posed with their children behind county officials holding up a series of red-lettered banners with messages tailored for each company receiving the poster.

Sly Stallone happy to visit spouse's native land

By The Associated Press

COPENHAGEN, Denmark — Actor Sylvester Stallone said Saturday he's happy to get the chance finally to see the native country of his wife, actress-model Brigitte Nielsen.

The couple were met by cheering fans as they arrived at Kastrup International airport for what Stallone said would be a weeklong private visit to Denmark.

"For a long time, I have been looking forward to see Brigitte's land, and I am happy we had the time now to do this trip," the star of "Rocky" and "Rambo" told reporters as he got off his private jet, dressed in jeans, cowboy boots and a black leather jacket.

"I am so happy to be back in Denmark," said Ms. Nielsen, visibly moved. She had not visited her country since her marriage to Stallone on Dec. 15.

Actor Tucker resting after sudden collapse

LOS ANGELES — Actor Forrest Tucker was resting in a hospital Saturday, two days after he collapsed at a ceremony to place his star in the Hollywood Walk of Fame, a spokeswoman said.

"He's in the hospital, and he's resting comfortably," nursing supervisor Ever Jaldon said Saturday morning. Tucker's family requested that no details of his illness be revealed.

Tucker, 67, best known as Sgt. O'Rourke in the 1965-67 television series "F Troop," had arrived for Thursday's ceremony on Hollywood Boulevard when he became ill and was taken to Hollywood Presbyterian Medical Center.

The veteran actor had complained of chest pains earlier this month while on an airline flight from Memphis, Tenn., to Chicago.

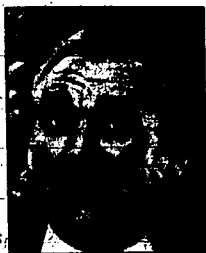

The five-minute unveiling of Tucker's star went on as scheduled Thursday, with his sister, Betty Hitchcock, and daughter Cindy Tucker attending. They went to the hospital afterward.

Columbia Pictures TV sues 10-year-old star

LOS ANGELES — Columbia Pictures Television has filed an $80 million lawsuit against 10-year-old Soleil Moon Frye, the star of "Punky Brewster."

The Superior Court suit, filed Friday, alleges that Miss Frye violated her contract by not showing up for work.

The suit alleges the girl works for the production company because it acquired a 20-year license from NBC in April to syndicate the 44 episodes already shown on the network and produce at least 40 more episodes.

However, the suit says Miss Frye's attorney, Dennis Ardi, has told Columbia his client isn't required to perform in a show not produced by the network, which signed a contract with her in 1984.

Superior Court Judge Jack Newman refused Friday to grant

Columbia's request for a temporary restraining order that would have prohibited Miss Frye from working for anyone but the production company until the dispute is resolved. News is scheduled a Sept. 24 hearing on the lawsuit.

Telephone calls to Ardi went unanswered Friday evening and Saturday.

U.S. women climbers leave for Everest effort

PORTOLA VALLEY, Calif. — The first four members of a 15-person climbing team have departed for China and what they hope will be the first ascent of Mount Everest by American women.

Team member Ellen Lapham said the "last contingent" of the "Americans to China" expedition left Friday and she and three other climbers leave Monday. The remaining seven will fly out from their homes in Colorado, Utah, Alaska and Washington.

It feels good to be preparing to leave even though they will miss their friends and families. Ms. Lapham said, because "a lot of preparation over nine months' time has led to this point." She is one of three women taking part in the expedition.

Economists predict tax revision will slow economy initially

WASHINGTON (AP) — With economic growth already slowed to a near standstill, the country is about to get a massive overhaul of the tax system which, at least initially, will weaken economic activity, many economists believe.

By closing loopholes, lowering tax rates and shifting $120 billion in taxes from individuals to businesses, the changes in store for the economy will be profound, affecting a multitude of financial decisions made by families and businesses. Because of this, analysts are making their predictions with the caveat that no one really knows how the $4 trillion U.S. economy will perform under the historic changes, which are awaiting final approval when Congress returns in September.

While many economists are predicting economic growth will be somewhat lower next year because of the tax changes, there is little belief that the weakness will be enough to push the country into a recession. Most economists are predicting growth, as measured by the gross national product, will start to rebound in the second half of this year. Although they say the upturn will not be dramatic, many analysts feel the country will muddle through this year and 1987 much as it has the past two years, with sluggish growth of around 2.5 percent.

This would still be an improvement over the most recent quarter, when GNP growth slowed to a barely perceptible annual rate of 0.6 percent. When the government announced this figure last Tuesday, it raised new concerns about the durability of the 34-month-old recovery.

Even though economists fear the tax changes will lower growth below what it otherwise would have been next year, many of them are predicting the economy will begin to benefit from the tax changes by expansion and modernization because of the elimination of the investment tax credit and a clampdown on accelerated depreciation schedules, which allow businesses to write off the cost of new equipment and facilities during a very short period.

The reason for the pessimism about 1987 stems from the fact that while the bill is designed to raise the same amount of revenue over five years, it will result in a tax increase of $11 billion the first year. A substantial part of that bite will come from an elimination of business tax breaks.

Economists are predicting a slowdown in business spending on Roger Brinner, an economist at Data Resources Inc., predicted that the tax bill will shave growth by 0.1 percentage point next year.

Reagan: Congress can notch a victory

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, reverting to his days as a radio sportscaster, called on Congress Saturday to "score the winning run" by approving its sweeping tax reform plan.

"Tax reform is on its way," Reagan exulted in his weekly radio address, delivered from his mountain-top ranch near here.

In his first extended remarks about the tax plan since it was hammered out last weekend on Capitol Hill, Reagan used a baseball metaphor to show that despite widespread support, tax reform is not a certainty.

"It's the bottom of the ninth and tax reform is rounding third and heading home. We're about to score the winning run, not just of the game, but of the whole season," Reagan said.

But Reagan paraphrased the line of baseball great Yogi Berra to warn, "The game isn't over till it's over."

Speaking to those who are holding out against tax reform, Reagan said, "There is absolutely no reason for further delay, which only causes uncertainty and hampers economic growth."

"I urge Congress when it reconvenes in September to act promptly and make tax reform the law of the land," Reagan said.

In the Democratic response, New York Rep. Charles B. Rangel, a member of the conference committee that worked out the compromise legislation, chided Reagan for insisting on a bill that would not raise taxes.

"The Congress and the conference in an effort to preserve the reform measures in the bill, went along with the president. But isn't the president deceiving himself and the nation as a whole when he insists on revenue neutrality? Our national debt has doubled in the 5 1/2 years that the president has been in office," he said.

"Mr. president, it may be the ninth inning but our home team can only win when we finally put that deficit behind us."

Reagan had made passage of the legislation the premier legislative goal of his second term.

Experts doubt tax overhaul will change buying habits

NEW YORK (AP) — Elgie Holstein rues the elimination of credit card interest deductions in the tax plan before Congress, but he doesn't think it will stop people from pulling out the plastic.

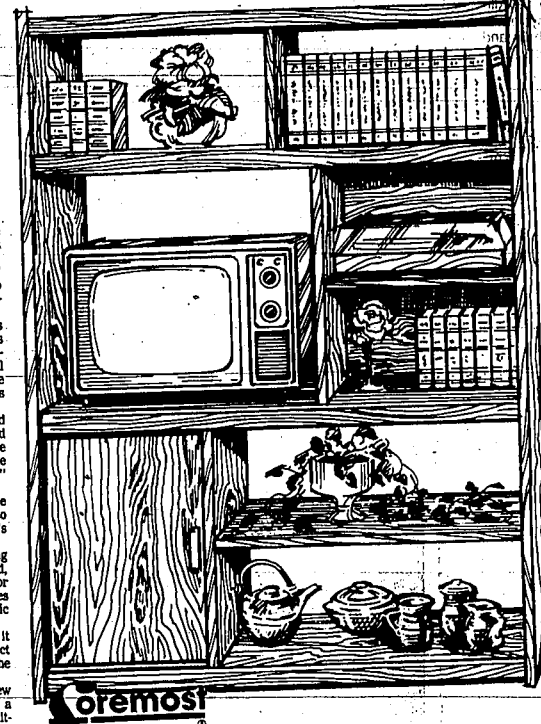

"A credit card has become for most of us an everyday part of our financial lives," says Holstein, associate director of the Bankcard Holders of America, a consumer group. "As such, don't think a change in deductibility rules will change consumers' daily needs and habits."

Nor will Americans stop buying cars just because the proposed tax code will eliminate deductions for interest on auto loans and for sales tax, says Jack Gillis, a spokesman for the Consumer Federation of America.

"Basically, we feel that for the average consumer, it will have very little impact," said Gillis. "There are few consumers in the low-to-middle-income area who make an auto purchase based on the deductibility."

Under the proposed new tax code, deductions for interest payments on most types of consumer loans would be eliminated in phased-in steps starting next year. That means borrowing money to finance cars, vacations and other consumer items will be more expensive because the interest on such loans and on credit card balances will no longer be deductible.

Homeowners may be able to get around the loss of deductions by using home equity loans to finance such purchases.

No government suits Carey fine

Town of 800 relies on community spirit

By NORMAN N. KING
Times-News correspondent

CAREY — Like dozens of small, rural towns in Idaho, Carey is a town without a government, but that hasn't stopped local residents from getting things done when the need arises.

The unincorporated community of 800, which has never had a local government in the 107 years since the first settlers came to the area, is structured around its local public school and several churches, including Carey's 600-member Mormon Church.

Because the city is unincorporated, residents in Carey have looked to Blaine County government for street maintenance, a community water and sewer system and law enforcement.

But for smaller projects, residents rely on old-fashioned community spirit.

A new city park was dedicated Friday, marking the end of an effort that started three years ago as a 4-H project and grew to include the whole community. The town's baseball fields and fairgrounds also were built through local efforts.

Ken Mecham, a local historian and "walking encyclopedia" on the community, says that active community groups such as a riding club, Friendly Neighbors Club, 4-H and the ability to promote Carey to tourists and business.

Meanea said Carey was once a lot more active with a Chamber of Commerce and an active Legion Post. But now, "people are just awful complacent," he said.

The fire department in Carey has been "sadly neglected," said Meanea. Although the department received a fire engine from the Department of Energy at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory site some years back, the equipment has not been maintained as it could have been with proper government supervision, he claimed.

Although Carey is without a local mayor and city council, residents are not without opportunities to vote and pay taxes.

Carey residents vote in county, state and national elections and pay county taxes, special district taxes and school taxes. The area also has a county cemetery district, fire protection district, water and sewer district and a flood control district.

Sheriff's Deputy Dude Green, a Carey resident and law enforcement officer, works regular shifts in Carey as well as takes calls for the community.

Captain Ramsey, of the Blaine County Sheriff's office, said one officer provides adequate protection for Carey.

Due to a limited department clubs and a baseball program contribute a great deal to the community.

Mecham, who was raised in Carey and now teaches school there, said the community is "like a huge family."

"It's always been just kind of like this with the same number of people," although there were once many more businesses operating in the area, he said.

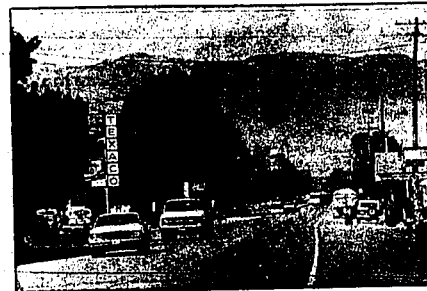

Mecham is currently working on a book about the history of Carey and said he has been told the unincorporated town once had a mayor, although he has not been able to substantiate the claim.

He doesn't see any need for the town to incorporate for now, but he recalls that when he was in the eighth grade, there was an effort to get a town government established.

Millard Meanea, a retired rancher, was part of that effort, one of two such attempts tried by a few concerned citizens.

"People wouldn't go for it," he said. There was too much opposition from mostly retired people and long-time residents who resisted what they considered negative aspects of city government, like taxes, Meanea said.

However, he sees advantages in having a local government, including better law enforcement, more improvements to the town budget, Carey residents would have to incorporate and establish a police department. They would also have law enforcement protection that they have now, Ramsey said.

U.S. 93 splits the unincorporated town of Carey

A community-wide water system was completed in Carey in 1978, and the water and sewer district is overseeing the completion of a $1,822,000 sewer system which should be functioning this fall, said Bob Adamson, chairman of the district.

Most of the money for the sewer system came from grants, although the district had to have a $180,000 bond approved by voters.

Adamson said the district is in charge of system maintenance and a fee is charged for water and sewer use. Although the district has the power to levy a tax, if needed, they have not had to.

Adamson, president of a business that employs 25 people in Carey, said he doesn't see any advantage for Carey to be incorporated.

Local residents say the economy of the ranching and farming community is depressed, so there is little chance residents would approve a city government — which could levy taxes.

City eyes budget cuts

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Faced with demands for lower property taxes from local residents, the Ketchum City Council will consider cuts in its proposed $3.18 million budget for the 1986-87 fiscal year.

The council meets at noon Monday to consider specific cuts suggested last week by organizers of a petition calling for relief for property owners.

For the most part, the council took the suggestions seriously and agreed to give budget railroads a hard look, including the possibility of cutting its support for the resort's marketing effort through the Sun Valley-Ketchum Chamber of Commerce.

"These people are enlightening me," said Councilman Larry Young after listening to the suggestions. "I want them to keep hammering on us until we do better."

A petition of about 80 signatures protesting the budget was given the council by Alma Mullins and Austin Rungis, who asked the council to use the city's large option tax revenues for property tax relief rather than to increase the budget by the proposed 28.2 percent.

"There are ski resorts that are providing less than we are," said Rungis in response to some officials' position that they are trying to raise Ketchum's level of services to compete with other destination ski resorts.

Under the state law creating the option tax, collection of the tax above the amount a city budgets must go to property tax relief, and Rungis outlined three areas he believes the city can make cuts to do that.

These were: in the city's donation to the chamber for advertising; the purchase of a new fire truck; and proposed wages for the city's staff.

The city has tentatively budgeted $100,000 for the chamber, with $80,000 going for marketing and $20,000 for a visitors information office on Main Street. Sun Valley would make an identical contribution.

The chamber says both contributions are necessary for it to keep its co-operative advertising program, dependent on other sources, going.

German mayor set to visit sister cities

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — The mayor of the German town with a "partner" city arrangement with Ketchum and Sun Valley will visit the Wood River Valley next week.

Mayor — or Bürgermeister as he is called in Germany — Peter Rixner of Tegernsee, a Bavarian town near the Austrian Alps, will visit the area for nine days through Ketchum's Wagon Days celebration during the Labor Day weekend.

In conjunction with Rixner's visit, German national television crew will film a documentary on the area, says Dan Henry, a part-time Wood River Valley resident who has lived half each year in Tegernsee for several years.

The television show, "Pictures from America," is the creation of Dieter Kronzucker, a long-time German reporter on American affairs, and appears on German national television six times a year, says Henry.

Kronzucker, a Tegernsee resident, is returning to Germany and the Sun Valley documentary will be one of his last in the "Pictures from America" series, Henry says.

While here, the film crew will visit the Stanley area as well as many areas around Sun Valley.

Mendive named new Lincoln prosecutor

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Gooding attorney Steven Mendive was appointed Tuesday to be the new prosecutor for Lincoln County.

The Lincoln County Board of Commissioners picked Mendive after considering two candidates presented by the county Republican Central Committee. Five area lawyers applied for the position.

Mendive will replace Doug Rose who resigned from the post earlier this month.

Rose, who served in the position for six years, gave no reason for his resignation, which is effective Aug. 31. He is leaving with two years and four months remaining in the term. He assured the commission he would work for a smooth transition with the incoming appointee.

Mendive is currently serving as law clerk for District Judge Phillip Becker in Gooding and Jerome counties. Lincoln County officials say he will be moving to Shoshone when he begins to serve as prosecutor.

Because the county prosecutor is an elected official, state law requires the office holder to live in the county. The part-time position pays $15,750 a year.

Mendive will start work Sept. 2 and finish out Rose's term without facing election this November. Secretary of State Pete Cennarius notified county officials last month the position did not need to be placed on the ballot this year because an attorney general's office opinion says openings in elected positions that occur after the primary election in May can wait until the next full election cycle in 1988.

Hospital to pay debts to Walker Center

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Representatives of Gooding County Memorial Hospital and Walker ACT Center have hammered out a plan so the financially troubled hospital can pay $145,000 it owes to the adjacent alcohol and drug treatment facility.

The hospital has been collecting patient fees for the center but has not been able to turn the revenue over to Walker ACT because of the hospital's cash flow problem in recent months, GCMH board member Rod Spackman said Thursday.

"They have been very patient with us, but we cannot continue to borrow from them against their will, to use them as a buffer for our problems," he said.

The Walker ACT Center, owned by St. Benedict's Hospital of Ogden, Utah, operates under the hospital's acute care license, with the alcohol and drug treatment program listed as a hospital program. The hospital then contracts with Walker ACT for treatment and counseling while the hospital provides meals, laundry and other support services.

The hospital also must bill the patients and collect the revenues. Walker ACT receives about three-fourths of the payment and GCMH keeps the remaining one-fourth, Spackman said.

However, in recent months, the funds have been used for hospital operations rather than being turned over to Walker ACT, he said.

Walker ACT center administrator Gail Ater told the growing debt is straining relations between the two facilities and making it difficult for him to justify the Gooding operation to his employers in Ogden.

He said St. Benedict's wants a formal commitment from GCMH to pay the $145,000 and turn current ACT treatment collections over to Walker Center as soon as the money is received.

"We understand what the hospital is going through financially," Ater said. He said the Walker Center, which is built adjacent to and opens into the hospital, is anxious to see GCMH continue operating and is willing to work out the problem.

Spackman said St. Benedict's is offering to accept repayment over the next four years at 10 percent interest and is asking GCMH to stay current with its distribution of funds.

"We have a legal obligation to pay them this money and a moral obligation to keep current," Spackman said.

He said Walker ACT is also asking to renegotiate its contract to bring it more in line with current operations and avoid a similar problem in the future.

The board agreed to accept St. Benedict's offer of paying GCMH $28.76 per patient day beginning Sept. 1, instead of the approximately $40 per patient day previously received as the hospital's share of alcohol treatment fees.

The agreement is a temporary one until negotiation of a payment schedule to retire the debt can be prepared, Spackman said. Ater agreed the difference would be applied toward the debt.

The GCMH board also agreed Thursday to stay current with its disbursements to Walker ACT.

"We used the money to pay other bills. It's a working cash flow problem and if we had paid Walker Center we would owe someone else."

Spackman said. The existing problem of insufficient funding for hospitals has been aggravated over the past 10 years by economic conditions in health care and the community, he added.

The contract negotiation problem is further complicated because the GCMH board is preparing to turn the facility over to a newly formed Gooding Hospital District board. Members of the new board have agreed to participate in the negotiation process but will have no authority until a transfer of hospital operations is complete.

The hospital taxing district was formed by Gooding voters in May as a way of bringing more tax money into the operation. But hospital attorney Fred Decker told both boards last month the new district will not be able to collect any tax money before January 1988 which will not do much to help the hospital's current financial woes.

A 10 percent cut in staff wages, enacted in April, was set to expire Sept. 1, but the board agreed to extend the cut because the financial crisis is continuing, and to study other ways to deal with wage questions.

Katz: Cooperation needed for rural health care

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Regionalized hospital care may be the answer to many local hospital problems, Dr. Ben Katz, a Twin Falls pediatrician and chairman of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's long-range planning committee, told the Gooding County Memorial Hospital board Thursday.

"We must establish good inter-working relationships (between area hospitals)," Katz said. He said people must break down "past provincial feelings and ideas" to avoid duplicating services and to foster cooperation.

"This is not a high school basketball game," he said. "We need community cooperative effort to keep the facilities open and services available."

He said MVRMC wants to become a truly

"regional center" in the eight-county Magic Valley by establishing "mutually beneficial" relationships with the rest of the valley's communities and outlying hospitals.

Katz said small hospitals should offer what services they can, then use MVRMC as a back-up facility for other services. He said MVRMC also hopes to become a satellite center for the Boise-based Mountain States Tumor Institute to provide cancer treatment in the Magic Valley area.

MVRMC board chairman Robert Valentine told the GCMH board Thursday there are several areas where the two facilities can cooperate, including doctor recruitment, medical supply purchasing, a regional laboratory, home health services, an eight-county study to determine rural health needs and outreach clinics.

Some clinics, for pediatrics, orthopedics, urology, neurology and speech, are already in operation at Gooding, and Valentine said he hopes an obstetrics, pre-natal clinic also can be established.

Another plan MVRMC is considering is a Magic Valley-wide ambulatory district, Valentine said. All the programs could help cut costs, help provide service to the rural population of Magic Valley and help medical institutions, he said.

Both MVRMC and GCMH are county-owned hospitals and can cooperate in this manner, Valentine said. St. Benedict's Family Medical Center of Jerome, Gooding and Twin Falls are pursuing a cooperative home health program.

"There is not room for competition in regional medical services," GCMH administrator Dwayne Cutright told the board. "We must cooperate to keep us alive."

Budget

 member of the chamber's marketing committee, defended those contributions as making a difference in the chamber's efforts to market the resort.

"We're just beginning to piece something together that we feel might be critical mass," Fenton said.

The chamber's marketing effort is five to 10 times lower than similar resorts and needs to grow, he said.

Councilwoman Suzanne Ors suggested, however, that it's time for the private sector to bear more of the burden to support the efforts instead of depending on the city.

Councilwoman Sue Wolford defended the contribution, saying the chamber is gaining strength in the community and in its marketing effort and it deserves the city's support.

Councilman Tom Heid said it may be time to re-examine the city's option tax that carries a 1 percent charge on most general sales items and a 2 percent charge on rented rooms and bar drinks.

Heid said he wants to see how the option tax payments break down between locals and tourists to determine if the city is spending the money in the right place.

In the proposed budget, the city would spend only $80,000 of the estimated $850,000 in option tax revenues for improvements that will directly benefit local residents: $60,000 for street paving and $20,000 for replacing a bridge.

City Administrator Jim Jaquet said, however, the option tax money going to the police and fire departments also will have a direct benefit on local residents in increased protection.

As for the marketing program, Jaquet said, "I think we are doing what one sector of the community is telling us to do, and that's to support tourist-related services."

Jaquet also said that since 1977, the city's budget has grown at approximately a 5.3 percent annual rate. This year's budget will reduce property taxes by 5.3 percent, he said.

"The city's not doing badly in keeping property taxes low," he said. The proposed 7.1 percent overall salary increase also bothered some of the council members, with Young suggesting reducing the overall amount to 5 percent.

Mayor Jerry Seiffert defended the increase, saying it will make the city's pay scale competitive with other resort areas.

Mullins and Rungis questioned whether another fire truck — to be paid off in seven years with the first-year's payment at $40,000 — is needed.

Fire Chief Tom Johnson said the truck should lower the city's fire rating and cause substantial savings in fire insurance for commercial buildings. He said the truck should be viewed as a long-term investment, by the city and taxpayers, and it is cheaper than hiring three new firemen to have the same effect on the city's rating.

The council votes to publish the budget and set Sept. 2 as the date to adopt it. Once the budget is published, however, the city cannot increase it, but can decrease it.

U.S. and Canada study merit of rules on Great Lakes levels

By NANCY BENAC
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States and Canada have ordered up a new study of water levels on the Great Lakes, hoping that this time the results will justify regulating the swollen waters.

The lake levels, now reaching record highs nearly every month, will be studied by the bi-national International Joint Commission in its fourth look at the problem.

Three commission studies in the 1970s and early 1980s found that the benefits of building new dams, canals or other water diversion projects or altering existing ones to better regulate lake levels were outweighed by the construction costs. Loss of hydroelectric generating capacity and adverse effects to the shipping industry.

Backers of the new study say the cost-benefit scale could tip this time due to the recent decline of energy prices and the increasingly severe erosion, flooding and damage being suffered by homeowners and communities around the lakes.

The commission is expected to begin planning the new study at its Sept. 9-10 meeting in Washington. An interim report on short-term steps to alleviate the current crisis is due in a year, with the final report due in May 1989.

Lake Ontario's shoreline is the only one touching the five lakes that so far has escaped serious damage from high water levels, according to commission spokeswoman Sally Splers.

No matter how the study turns out, she warned, it offers no immediate relief to homeowners whose homes are perilously close to the water with the fall storm season approaching.

Nevertheless, the new study is being hailed as a sign that the two governments are paying attention to the plight of homeowners like Sandra Sasty, a resident of Ily LaSalle, Mich., on the west shore of Lake Erie south of Detroit and north of Toledo, Ohio.

"Reducing three inches on Lake Erie where I am means the difference probably between me standing in water right here and not standing in water in a storm," said Mrs. Sasty, who helped organize the eight-state Great Lakes Coalition of homeowners after storm waters pounded her home last spring.

"A year ago March on Palm Sunday we had $24,000 in damage to our home due to direct wave action that came over our retaining wall," she recalled. "The wave action broke down the front door and it was all downhill from there."

She conceded that any relief recommended in the study may come too late for someone whose home is now a few inches away from falling over a bluff. But with the higher water levels believed to be part of a long-term trend, she said, "we're going to start losing parts of whole cities if something isn't done."

Sandinista soldiers fire a Soviet-made grenade launcher at U.S.-backed Contras on Friday.

Late deal with Sandinistas remains possible alternative

By R. GREGORY NOKES
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Reagan administration officials and congressional sources insist Nicaragua's latest leaders still could cut a deal at the negotiating table as an alternative to renewed full-scale combat with the U.S.-backed Contras.

One official said "our bottom line" is to curb Nicaragua's strong ties to Cuba and the Soviet Union. Officially, negotiations have always been a key element of administration policy. But President Reagan has insisted that the negotiations "must transform Nicaragua into a 'real democracy,' a condition that few expect the Sandinista government to agree to.

— And last week he said for the first time that if the Sandinistas refused to agree to a democratic government, "the only way is for the freedom fighters to have their way and take over."

No senior official had previously said publicly that the administration favored a Contra takeover.

Reagan also has insisted that the Sandinistas negotiate directly with the Contras, which the Sandinistas have insisted they won't do. However, other officials, who are informed on the policy, say privately that the administration probably would have to settle for less. They say it is possible, even probable, that the Sandinistas could negotiate a solution that would keep them in power while satisfying the United States on other key points.

One official, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, said the key points are:

- Sending all Cuban advisers home.
- Halting Soviet military support.
- Reducing the military threat to Nicaragua's neighbors.

Holding a meaningful dialogue with the Contras, which would permit their participation in politics, such as in new elections. The integral opposition includes the Roman Catholic church and six opposition political parties.

Ending harassment of the Catholic church and permitting the reopening of La Prensa, the opposition newspaper the government closed last month.

The official said this was not a negotiating outline, but was only his assessment of the kind of outcome that might prove acceptable.

"If the talks were genuine, and the opposition actually said to us there were good substantive negotiations and that we're getting some place, it would make it very difficult for us to continue to support the Contras," said one official.

"We'd still want to get rid of the Cubans and the Soviets — that's our bottom line," he added.

As for transforming Nicaragua into a democracy, he said, "All we are really talking about is an opportunity for the opposition to live and participate."

The official did not know whether Reagan would accept that outcome — he has pledged never to stop supporting the Contras. But he said Congress, which has only narrowly approved Reagan's latest request for $100 million in aid, almost certainly would not approve more funds if that kind of agreement were made.

Another informed official, who also insisted on anonymity, said "it is obvious that if the Sandinistas began to move toward reconciling themselves with their own people, we might alter our views." But he added, "there is absolutely no indication they are moving in that direction. In fact, they are moving the other way."

The first official said Ortega is "a typical Latin American dictator, who happens also to be communist. He thinks he has got it all and won't give up a thing. Ortega is his own worst enemy when it comes to negotiations."

The view that a negotiating track must be an important part of U.S.

policy was echoed by a senior adviser to a key Republican senator, whose support for Contra aid was crucial to getting it passed in the Senate. He said 10 of 15 of the senators who voted for the aid "are looking for progress on the negotiating side."

"In the next six to seven months, we need really clear support for negotiations, or this is in trouble next spring," he said.

Another congressional source said he understands that Ortega and the presidents of the four democratic-oriented Central American countries — Honduras, El Salvador, Costa Rica and Guatemala — will meet in New York during the U.N. General Assembly meetings in mid-September and that a regional peace accord probably will be discussed.

An administration official said that for negotiations to succeed "the key is to get the four (democratic) Central American countries to stick together on what they want."

There is no administration strategy for arranging negotiations that would involve the United States and Nicaragua at the same table. While there has been high-level contact between the two countries, Philip Habib, named last spring as Reagan's special Central American envoy, has yet to visit Nicaragua.

T.F.'s offense takes off

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — No, it's not true that the Twin Falls High School Bruins will throw the ball on every down this fall.

But Bruin followers, who are used to the veer offense, power sweeps and games that end by 9:15 p.m. are in for a surprise.

Twin Falls High has a new offensive coordinator in Jon Jund, who coached Jerome to the Idaho Class A-2 championship last fall. It also has the quarterback in that offense, junior Joel Jund, vying for the starting job.

'We're a little bit behind, but that's to be expected with any new offense. A lot of the things in the new offense, like blocking, really aren't that much different than what we did with the veer. I don't think the kids will have too much trouble picking it up.'

— Twin Falls Coach Bill Jones

That much different than what we did with the veer. I don't think the kids will have too much trouble picking it up.

The veer isn't dead at Twin Falls. Although now it's an offensive series rather than the system. Nor will the running backs be limited to blocking and running decoy patterns.

Coach Dennis Erickson. Both on the offensive line and in the "skin" positions, size counts for less than quickness.

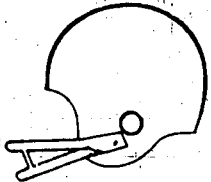

That coincides with the fact that this will be the first Bruin team in five years that hasn't had a true power back in the mold of Corky season in the Gem State Conference. You know in the past, we used the pass to set up the run," said Jones. "That's the biggest difference."

The name of the game at Twin Falls this fall is the short passing game, very much like that favored by former University of Idaho Coach Dennis Erickson. Both on the offensive line and in the "skin" positions, size counts for less than quickness.

"I never knew," quips Bruin head Coach Bill Jones, "that you could throw the ball that much."

Actually Jones and Jon Jund know each other's offensive philosophies pretty well. They've coached against each other for five years and for most of that time have run the Snake River Football Camp together during the summers.

"The transition to the new offense has gone pretty well," says Jones. "We're a little bit behind, but that's to be expected with any new offense. A lot of the things in the new offense, like blocking, really aren't

Spartans working on putting together a winning streak

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

RUPERT — For third-year Minico High School Coach Doug Bailey, the current football season actually began last Oct. 18.

That was the date the Spartans broke a 21-game losing streak by beating Burley 27-26.

"It's a whole lot better going into a season with a two-game winning streak than going in 0-10, like we did two years ago," he says.

Unfortunately, a good part of the cast that broke the spell last October finished its eligibility when Minico finished its season. Gone are Jesse Branson and Marty Carter, the Spartans' outside linebackers and two important parts of their 4-4 defense in 1985, and all three starters in a secondary that was the key to Minico's pass defense that finished second in the Gem State Conference.

Going too is Dallan Heiner, a 545-yard rusher.

But Bailey predicts the Spartans will be "better than what we have been."

"We're inexperienced at a lot of positions, but we have a lot of good players," says Bailey. "When they get some experience, I think they're good. We played really well in the last two games of the season, and I'm hoping that experience will carry over into this year.

"I tell you this, the kids are excited about coming out for football this season," Bailey continues. "That hasn't been the case for the last couple of years."

Bailey's optimism starts with Jack Bagley, a 6-foot-3, 170-pound junior who started the final two games of last season — the games Minico won — at quarterback.

"He has the potential to be a good one," Bailey says. "He's a very good dropback quarterback and stands tall in the pocket. But he still needs a lot of work on reading defenses."

Defense will mark Bobcats' return to Class A-1 ranks

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

BURLEY — If it's possible to take a being kicked upstairs from Class A-2 to A-1 in stride, Burley's football program has done it.

"We're not real happy about it, but there's not much we can do," says second-year head Coach Gary Hoxsey. "We're an A-1 school now, and we just have to make the best of it."

Making the best of it includes a football schedule that is remarkably similar to last year's and a decision not to join the Gem State Conference, the league that involves the other 10 A-1 schools in southeastern and south-central Idaho. The Idaho High School Activities Association, which forced Burley into A-1 starting this school year, made the transition somewhat easier by putting the school in the same "pod" for state playoff-qualifying purposes as Mountain Home and Caldwell, two schools Burley has scheduled for years. To get to the state A-1 Division 2 playoffs, the Bobcats must only beat those two teams.

But for Hoxsey, it's a big word.

"Mountain Home and Caldwell are going to have good teams this year," he says. "It's going to be tough for us to do."

The Cats are coming off a 2-8 season with a brand new offensive line and some significant holes to be filled elsewhere on the offense and on the defense. But Burley does have three of the ingredients essential for the success of its sprint-draw offense and its 4-4 defense: a quarterback who can run and throw on the run, four experienced running backs, and proven defensive tackles and inside linebackers.

The quarterback is Jared Skaggs, a 6-foot, 160-pound senior who played a little behind Shane Newcomb last year. Skaggs had a significant amount of experience running the offense as Burley's sophomore team, and Hoxsey feels comfortable with him at the helm of the varsity.

"Jared is hopefully going to be a good quarterback," says Hoxsey.

"He's a running quarterback and a sprint-out type passer, and I think he'll do pretty well."

Skaggs will be backed up by Pete Rodriguez, a 6-1, 185-pound junior who quarterbacked on the Sophomores.

Movin' on up

Burley reluctantly re-enters big-time prep sports

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

BURLEY — Burley High School is back in the big time of Idaho prep athletics, and profoundly sorry to be there.

"The school has 780 students (in four grades), which is under the limit for a (Class) A-1 school," says Steve Jensen, Burley's boys' basketball coach and golf coach. "So why are we A-1?"

That's a question that has been asked here with great regularity since the board of control of the Idaho High School Activities Association voted in the spring of 1985 to move Burley, Rigby and Moscow high schools from Class A-2 to A-1 for the 1986-87 school year by placing the upper limit for A-2 schools at 800 students. The move put Burley in the same classification as Meridian High, which has 2,700 students.

Burley's administrators protested — unsuccessfully — by pointing out that their school has lost enrollment steadily over the past few years and that Burley was barely competitive with other A-2 schools in some sports.

"We're sitting at less than 800 students in four grades right now," says Bob Matthews, Burley's athletic director. "Last spring's enrollment was down to 780 and they about said that in two years Burley will be back down in the A-2 group."

"When the proposal was being put together, I talked to the man who put the big push on it and told him that he was going to be the ruin of Magic Valley athletics, and I think it's true," says former

'The school has 780 students, which is under the limit for an A-1 school. So why are we A-1?'

— Basketball Coach Steve Jensen

Burley football Coach John Billett, who as vice-principal the school led opposition to the change. "It's tough to compete with those schools, particularly for us. Our first choice would have been to remain A-2. When that option was taken away the next choice was a three-team district (an option rejected by the IHSAA)."

"But we just have to do what we have to do," he continues.

Although not everyone connected with the school's athletic program agrees, most say the practical effect of the change is going to be minimal for sports such as football, golf and baseball, where Burley has played a mixed schedule of A-1 and A-2 schools for years and will continue to do so. The biggest difference will be in boys' basketball, girls' basketball, volleyball, track and wrestling, where Burley is grouped in A-1 Region III with Twin Falls, Minico, Pocatello and Highland. Three of those schools have more than 1,000 students.

"We're a little fish in a big pelvis," says Dean Satterfield, Burley's head baseball coach, and whose team will now compete in an A-1 football and basketball Mountain Home and Caldwell for the right to go to the state A-1 Division 2 playoffs, the task is "the hardest thing is going to be convincing the kids that we can compete," he says. "That's why our first few games are going to be so important this year. Anytime you get positive reinforcement, it makes you go out and play with more confidence."

Burley's football schedule is basically the same as it has been in the past three years, except that the school is dropping Wood River, an A-2 team, and picking up Nampa, an A-1 school. Burley will continue to participate in the South-Central Idaho Conference, which includes Wood River and two other A-2 schools, Jerome and Buhl, as well as A-1 Mountain Home.

"If you'd asked me when I was a football coach, I would have answered differently. But I think realistically that we've beaten Mountain Home and Caldwell in the past and we can do it again," says Billett. "The unfortunate part is that Mountain Home has one of the best teams they've had. (Running back Mauri) Toy is a senior and a nationally recognized back. Caldwell is always tough. It will be a challenge."

"The biggest adjustment is that we are going to have to work a lot harder," says Kirk Meiling, a senior who is a starting wide receiver and defensive back on the football team and a guard on the basketball team. "The teams we will be playing have bigger people, so we'll really have to work hard."

Meiling also thinks the Cats can be competitive in boys' basketball in Region III.

"If we didn't think we had a chance to win it, we wouldn't have to win it. We wouldn't Joining Bagley will be the incumbent in a "slot" position, senior running back Jeff Garro, a 6-1, 180-pound senior. Garro didn't carry the ball as much as Helmer did last year in Minico's three-back, multiple-set offense, but Bailey likes his potential.

"With Garro, we've got a quality kid at running back," he says. "If we can find some other kids who can run and catch the ball, we'll be all right."

A leading candidate right now is Kevin Brown, a 5-11, 200-pound senior who is new to the position.

Branson, who caught 24 passes for 458 yards last year, leaves a big hole in the receiving corps which must be filled by newcomers. Among the candidates Bailey has liked so far is Kevin Conde, a 5-9, 155-pound senior. Two seniors and a junior are vying for the tight end starting spot.

The coach's biggest concern offensively is the line, although he has second-team all-Gem State Conference guard Ben Naylor returning to anchor it. The only other experienced player besides Naylor, a 6-2, 200-pound senior who missed part of last season with injuries, is Joe Fitzgerald, a 5-9, 200-pound senior. He was a part-time starter at center. Two newcomers show some promise, according to the coach. They are Roy Barrera, a 6-1, 210-pound junior tackle who played on the sophomore team last year, and Clay Landon, a 5-10, 200-pound junior guard who transferred in from Hermiston, Ore.

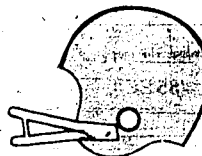

"One of the areas we want to improve this year is pass blocking," Bailey says. "As a staff, we went down to BYU to a clinic and we'll be incorporating some of what we learned in our blocking this year."

Defensively, the Spartans' strength has shifted from the periphery to the middle, with Naylor and Fitzgerald at the tackles and Brown and David Armstrong (5-9, 175, senior) behind them at inside linebacker.

"We're going to have better quickness defensively, but the thing that's going to hurt us is inexperience," says Bailey. "We're going to have five or six kids going both ways, which is something you'd like not to have to do. But we're going to put our best players on field."

Questions remain about outside linebacker and the secondary, where the Spartans picked off 13 passes

Bruins

played some at wide receiver last year and has good hands, and sprinter Matt Chidichimo (a 6-0, 160-pound senior) has the breakout speed to be a deep threat in the Bruins' new offense, Jones believes. Among the candidates for tight end is Rick Horner. If he doesn't play quarterback.

"That's still an open question. Horner, a 5-11, 170-pound senior, played in all 10 of the Bruins' games last season, completing 31 of 80 passes for 497 yards, three touchdowns and seven interceptions. He's the starting QB at quarterback at Jerome in the Tigers' third game of his sophomore year, passed for 417 yards last season.

Second team all-conference offensive tackle Mike Pavlec is gone, and Jones doesn't see anybody in camp who can do the same things as he did for the Bruins' offense last year. But starter Dan Rice (a 6-2, 200-pound senior guard), Steve Monson (6-1, 190, senior tackle) and Jason Leforge (a 5-9, 165-pound senior center), are "back, bigger and stronger than a year ago, and Jones believes they will make a solid nucleus for the offensive line."

What concerns him at the moment is the juniors who will fill the other positions up front. Except for Rice, Monson and Leforge, all are newcomers "trying to learn a new offense. How quickly they come along, Jones says, will have a lot to do with how the Bruins handle Pocatello the second game of the season, one of the games that Twin Falls must win to make the state A-1 Division I playoffs.

Size shouldn't be a problem. Darren Robinson, a candidate for a starting spot at offensive tackle, is 6-4, 255, while Scott Crawford, another junior, is 6-1, 225.

"This is the largest bunch of incoming juniors we've had since I've been here," says Jones. "What I like more about this group, though, is that they're a great bunch of kids, a very pleasant bunch to work with."

Defense, which has always been Jones' specialty, will be in the hands of assistant Larry Lewis this year, with Mike Tinker coaching the defensive line and Ed Arndt the linebackers and ends. They're not changing the defense, but the cast will be different.

The five returning starters on defense — end Carlos Martinez (a 5-10, 155, senior), end David Glenn (a 6-2, 185-pound senior), linebacker Jon Mehr (a 6-1, 190-pound senior linebacker), linebacker Brent Knapp (a 6-1, 180-pound senior) and cornerback Kevin Ams (a 5-10, 160-pound senior) — were all part-timers a year ago, although most of them played a lot because of injuries to other players. The Bruins finished third in the Gem State in rushing defense in 1985, allowing an average of only 74.3 yards per game. But pass defense was more of a problem; Twin Falls ended up sixth in the league, with an average of 132.5 yards per game and 14 touchdowns.

Keeping the lid on the Highlands and Pocatello of the GSC will again be Twin Falls' biggest challenge defensively, Jones believes.

"We have some experienced linebackers and defensive ends, and that has to be our real strength," says Jones. "But we're inexperienced in the secondary and on the interior defensive line, and that's the biggest cause for concern right now."

Tinker and Jones have liked what Jerry Kepner, a 5-11, 185-pound senior who is a candidate for the nose-guard position, has shown in early drills, while the biggest Bruin this year, 6-2, 280-pound Shane Jeff, is in the running for a starting position at defensive tackle. Other candidates for the nose and tackle jobs include Matt Yost, a 5-11, 200-pound senior, and James Greene, a 5-9, 5-11, 185-pound senior, will join Martinez and Glenn at end.

Ams will play one corner, but the other is up for grabs among Chris Brose (a 5-10, 160, senior), Jason Denton (5-10, 140, junior) and Brian Haymore (a 5-10, 150, junior). Alex LaBeau, a 6-3, 180, senior, is the leading candidate for free safety, while Todd Embretson (6-0, 170, senior) has shown some promise at strong safety.

last season and limited opponents to an average of 137.3 yards passing per game.

"Our secondary was the real strength of our defense last year," says Bailey. "Right now, it's really up in the air who's going to play there. Craig Anderson (a 5-9, 150-pound junior) has looked pretty good, but beyond him I just don't know."

One goal for the Spartans this season will be shoring up their rushing defense, which finished sixth in the league last year with an average of 131 yards per game. "Our biggest problem last year defensively was overplaying," says Bailey. "We got so much penetration that we sometimes missed the play."

play," he says. "They can only put five guys out there at a time no matter how big they are. If you don't have a winning attitude, you don't belong on the court." Brad Church, last spring's state medalist in the Idaho Class B High School Golf Championship and a starter on Burley's basketball team, agrees.

"I think we can be competitive because we'll be going out as underdogs," he says. "We've got everything to gain and nothing to lose."

Church adds that the A-1 schools of Region III are almost as familiar to athletes in Burley's program as Buhl, Jerome and Wood River. "We've been playing Minico all of our life and we played Twin Falls in the eighth grade," he says. "Poky and Highland are very good schools. We'll have to be competitive on the whole."

"I like playing Twin and Minico because they are such big rivals," says Melling. "On paper, it sometimes looks like they can kill us, but these competition kind of gets the guys up. We've played against the Pocatello schools and know they have good programs. But if you put your mind to it, you can beat anybody."

Mathews and his coaches hope that confidence holds up. They worry that a few dismal seasons will cut down player turnout, keep fans home and discourage coaches. "Look at Pocatello," says Mathews. "They lost 22 straight football games and then had a four-game losing streak. We've got to win to get kids enthused about playing."

"We didn't even bar up in A-2," asserts Jensen. "We were just starting to get some pride and this set us back." "All you have to do is take a look at history and see we haven't done that well in A-1," he adds.

"If we don't win, then people won't come out and watch us play," says Satterfield. "The change was good for us in that more kids came out for sports," explains Madison's Crittendon, whose school has about 100 more students at the moment than Burley. "But we were hurt at the gate because people thought we couldn't win in A-1."

"It's been proven that when you are winning, the school is on an upbeat note," says Billetz. "Everything seems to run better all around. I think that we're going to do good job as administrators and as a coaching staff in selling the kids that we're going to be competitive. I think the students, and the community, understand where we're at."

Billetz's greatest concern is about girls' athletics and about sports such as wrestling and track. "I think the biggest adjustment for us is going to be with our minor sports," he says. "When I say minor, I don't mean to put less emphasis on the others, but in track, wrestling and the girls' sports we weren't very strong in A-2 and A-1 is going to be a lot tougher. "I don't want to take anything away from the other A-2 schools in the area," Billetz continues, "but I think (Burley girls' basketball Coach) Gordon Kerbs will have all five starters back from last year's team and I don't think I'm going to be going out on a limb to saying that Burley would have been the team to beat. Now we have to play Highland. It's really going to be tough. What have they won? It is 48 straight!"

Kerbs and some others don't think the effect will be that drastic on girls' sports.

"The only teams we pick up (on our schedule) are Highland and Pocatello," he says. "I'll be tough, but we should do OK. "Honesty," Kerbs adds, "we belong in A-2. The change won't have much effect early in the season, but as the season goes on the effect will be felt more."

"As far as girls' basketball goes, I wouldn't be surprised if we were in the top three at state," Melling says. "The same goes for wrestling. But in the others, it will be pretty move away."

"Even getting out of district will be tough against the schools we will have to face," Matthews prechits. "Twin is one of the bigger ones in the state."

Burley's teams in all sports for years, says Burley is big enough and has good enough athletes to compete in A-1.

"They can build their program," he says. "In certain sports, you do better in A-1 while others do poorly. For example, our basketball program is doing fine at Madison but we're hurting in wrestling since we moved up."

Almost everyone at Burley High thinks the school's stay in A-1 is temporary and that in the face of declining enrollment, the IHSAA will reverse its decision in a year or two. One possible solution, which Billetz suggested when the board made its original move, would be the creation of a fifth Idaho high school classification for small A-1 and large A-2 schools. By 1988, Matthews believes that Burley's enrollment figures will make the issue of whether Burley belongs with the big boys will be moot.

"There's an awful good chance that in two years, we will drop back," he says. "With our enrollment, yes, I'd like like to see us back with the same schools that have enrollment that we've got."

In the meantime, Billetz predicts Burley will remain an A-2 school stranded in A-1.

"It's hard to adjust, but we're not the only ones feeling this way," says Kerbs. "Moscow and Rigby are in the same boat. One thing I can tell you for sure is that Burley will never be in the Gem State Conference (the league that includes the other A-1 schools in southeastern and south-central Idaho). We've been asked a few times, but just don't see ourselves stepping into an alignment like that."

In the meantime, Jensen says, "we won't stop trying; we'll still try to remain competitive." "There are a few that really believe that they can compete in A-1) and a few that aren't quite so sure," says Melling of his fellow students. "The believers need to some time to do it, but by district time it will be there."

last season, Rodriguez will also see some playing time at running back this season. At fullback is Todd Sprenger, a 5-10, 195-pound senior, who was a starter last season, while Bryan Shaw, a 6-1, 190-pound senior, got in a lot of minutes with the varsity in '85. At tailback, Mike Kechter, a 5-10, 165-pound senior, and J.J. Gonzales, a 6-0, 165-pound senior, were the regulars a year ago.

"Bryan Shaw is a big, fullback-type of runner who came on toward the end of last season," says Hoxsey. "He's improving all the time. Gonzales and Kechter are quicker, but they can go inside too. Sprenger is a kid who we used last year, so we feel pretty good about our backfield."

When Skaggs throws the ball, the primary target will be Kirt Melling, a 5-8, 145-pound senior wide receiver. "I think he's going to be a good one," says Hoxsey. "He has good speed and he's proven he can catch the ball."

Hoxsey wishes he were as confident about his offensive line, where the graduation of all-state tackle Pat Hoxsey, three other starters and the light end has left a gaping hole.

"Right now, that's our big concern," says the coach. "We've got kids who played on the sophomore team, but there's hardly any varsity experience playing on the offensive line."

Hoxsey will pick his own linemen from among David Williams, a 6-1, 200-pound senior; Clinton Lewis, a 5-10, 200-pound senior; Brad Price, a 6-0, 185-pound senior; Garin Granada, a 6-0, 185-pound junior; Jason Ramsey, a 5-10, 165-pound junior; and Kirk Neivert, a 6-0, 180-pound senior. The tight end will be Trent Henry, a 6-2, 180-pound senior.

The 'Cats are in considerably better shape on the other side of the line where juniors were the mainstay of the defense last year.

"We have a talented group of players on defense," says Hoxsey. "We have good pass rushers in this group this year. I think that's probably our strong point. The biggest area we'll have to improve is pass coverage. We were in some light games last year where we got beat on our secondary coverage."

Lewis and Sprenger are returning starters-at tackle-while Williams and Shaw - regulars at defensive linebacker this year. Gonzales is an incumbent at outside linebacker, but a big concern for Hoxsey at the moment is filling the defensive end positions and the other outside linebacker slot, which are critical in a 4-4 defense. Leading candidates for the former are Granada, Price and Trent Henry, while Kechter, pound junior) and Spencer Darrow (a 5-9, 165-pound junior) are competing for the other outside linebacker spot.

In the secondary, Hoxsey will rely heavily on Melling, who saw considerable playing time a year ago, at cornerback. The other corner will be occupied by David Petersen (a 6-1, 170-pound junior) or Joel Robbins (a 5-11, 150-pound junior), while Skaggs will start at safety, although he'll rotate in and out.

Gonzales will handle the punting, but Hoxsey is still shopping around for a placekicker.

"Our goal is to have a winning football season," says Hoxsey, "and we told our kids that we can have a good season, even if we're in A-1. We have three games we should win, three games in which we'll go in as the underdog and the rest of them look pretty even. If we continue to improve each week, we can have a good year."

"So far, I'm pleased," he continues. "We've stayed away from injuries and the kids are working hard."

Burley will open the season here Friday with a non-conference game against a familiar A-2 opponent, American Falls. The 'Cats will compete again for the South-Central Idaho Conference title, although they won't play fellow SCIC member Wood River this season in football.

Minico

Joining Bagley will be the only incumbent in a "skill" position, senior running back Jeff Garro, a 6-1, 180-pound senior. Garro didn't carry the ball as much as Helmer did last year. In Minico's three-back, multiple-set offense, but Bailey likes his potential.

"With Garro, we've got a quality kid at running back," he says. "If we can find some other kids who can run and catch the ball, we'll be all right."

A leading candidate right now is Kevin Brown, a 5-11, 175-pound senior who is new to the position. Brown, who caught 24 passes for 456 yards last year, leaves a big hole in the receiving corps which must be filled by newcomers. Among the candidates Bailey has liked so far is Kevin Condit, a 5-9, 155-pound senior. Two seniors and a junior are vying for the tight end starting spot.

The coach's biggest concern offensively is the line, although he has second-team all-Gem State Conference guard Ben Naylor returning to anchor it. The only other experienced player besides Naylor, a 6-2, 200-pound senior who missed part of last season with injuries, is Joe Fitzgerald, a 5-9, 200-pound senior who was a part-time starter at center. Two newcomers show some promise, according to the coach. They are Roy Barrera, a 6-1, 210-pound junior tackle who played on the sophomore team last year, and Clay Landon, a 5-10, 200-pound junior guard who transferred in from Hermiston, Ore.

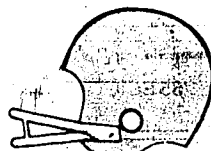

"One of the areas we want to improve this year is pass blocking," Bailey says. "As a staff, we went down to BYU to a clinic and we'll be incorporating some of what we learned in our blocking this year."

Defensively, the Spartans' strength has shifted from the periphery to the middle, with Naylor and Fitzgerald at the tackles and Brown and David Armstrong (5-9, 175, senior) behind them at inside linebacker.

"We're going to have better pass defense, but the thing that's going to hurt us is inexperience," says Bailey. "We're going to have five or six kids going both ways, which is something you'd like not to have to do. But we're going to put our best players on field."

Questions remain about outside linebacker and the secondary, where the Spartans picked off 13 passes last season and limited opponents to an average of 137.3 yards passing per game. "Our biggest problem last year defensively was overplaying," says Bailey. "We got too much penetration that we sometimes missed the play."

"Our secondary was the real strength of our defense last year," says Bailey. "Right now, it's really up in the air who's going to play there. Craig Anderson (a 5-9, 150-pound junior) has looked pretty good, but beyond him I just don't know."
One goal for the Spartans this season will be shoring up their rushing defense, which finished sixth in the league last year with an average of 131 yards per game.

Bruins

played some at wide receiver last year and has good hands, and sprinter Matt Chidichimo (a 6-0, 160-pound senior) has the breakthrough speed to be a deep threat in the Bruins' new offense, Jones believes. Among the candidates for tight end is Rick Harmer. If he doesn't play quarterback.

That's still an open question. Harner, a 5-11, 170-pound senior, played in all 10 of the Bruins' games last season, completing 31 of 89 passes for 407 yards, three touchdowns and seven interceptions.

Joel Junia, a 6-0, 150-pound junior who won the starting job at quarterback at Jerome in the Tigers' third game of his sophomore year, passed for almost 600 yards last season. "Second team" all-conference offensive tackle Mike Pavlic is gone, and Jones doesn't see anybody in camp who can do the same things as he did for the Bruins' offense last year. But starters Dan Rice (a 6-2, 200-pound senior) guard; Steve Monson (6-1, 190, senior tackle) and Jason Leforgee (a 5-9, 165-pound senior center) are back, bigger and stronger than a year ago, and Jones believes they will make a solid nucleus for the offensive line.

What concerns him at the moment is the juniors who will fill the other positions up front. Except for Rice, Monson, and Leforgee, all are newcomers "trying to learn a new offense. How quickly they come along, Jones says, will have a lot to do with how well the Bruins handle Pocatello the second game of the season, one of the games that Twin Falls must win to make the state A-1 Division 1 playoffs. Size shouldn't be a problem. Darren Robinson, a candidate for a starting spot at offensive tackle, is 6-4, 255, while Scott Crawford, another

Junior, is 6-1, 225.

"This is the largest bunch of incoming juniors we've had since I've been here," says Jones. "What I like more about this group, though, is that they're a great bunch of kids, a very pleasant bunch to work with."

Defense, which has always been Jones' specialty, will be in the hands of assistant Larry Lewis this year, now.

Tinker and Jones have liked what Jerry Kepner, a 5-11, 185-pound senior who is a candidate for the noseguard position, has shown in early drills, while the biggest Bruin is in the running for a starting position at defensive tackle. Other candidates for the nose and tackle jobs include Matt Yost, a 5-11, 200-pound senior, and James Greene, a 5-4, 220-pound senior. Wally Walcott, a 5-11, 185-pound senior, will join Martinez and Glenn at end.

Ames will play one corner, but the other is up for grabs among Chris Bross (a 5-10, 160, senior), Jason Denton (5-10, 140, junior) and Brian Layburn (a 5-10, 150, junior). Alex Layburn, a 6-3, 180, senior, is the leading candidate for free safety, while Todd Embretson (6-0, 170, senior) has shown some promise at strong safety.

Boss needing helping hand is beyond employee's reach

DEAR ABBY: I'm in a very strange predicament. I'm on the program of Alcoholics Anonymous and have been sober for almost four years. Because of my own experiences as an alcoholic, I'm able to recognize a practicing alcoholic when I see one.

Here's the problem: My boss is an alcoholic. She frequently comes to the office hung over and goes home early. Sometimes she doesn't bother to come in at all.

She goes out to lunch and never comes back, or comes back loaded. She lies, manipulates, dodges problems, is disorganized, inefficient, and generally makes life very difficult for those around her.

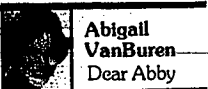

I understand she's ill, but I can't take much more of this. I hate to see her bloated face in the morning and listen to her excuses; as a former sufferer, I know them all.

Last night she drove home from a company function absolutely smashed, by her own admission. She's lucky she made it home alive; even luckier that she didn't kill someone.

If anyone is qualified to talk to her, I am, but my "positions" at work make it really tough — as her subordinate, I'm afraid to say anything.

I've tried praying for her; I've tried turning it over to a higher power. I'm waiting for an answer, and the only one I'm getting is to get out. I don't like that answer.

Courage is the next thing I pray for; I've been praying for that now

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

for a couple of years. The time to tell her has never been right.

If you publish this, it may solve my problem — or hers.

RECOVERING ALCOHOLIC

DEAR RECOVERING: You've done your part — and I've done mine. Now, if someone will see to it that your boss reads this, we may have saved a life.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been happily married for 37 years. We have one child — a son. He has been married for seven years — no children. Our problem is — our daughter-in-law.

She has decided that she and our son should spend every holiday with her family who live nearby. Last Christmas our son came alone to see us (she wouldn't come), and she refused to speak to him for a month.

We live 30 minutes from them. Her idea of a visit to us is to stop by for five minutes on their way to somewhere else.

We suggested alternating holidays or visits, but she wouldn't hear of it. The last time we had Thanksgiving with our son was seven years ago, then she criticized me for not making dinner at home — we took them out because my rheumatoid arthritis was too painful for me to cook.

We are so hurt. My husband wants to move to Sun City. We have friends and a lovely home here, and I don't want to move, but my husband says it would make it easier for our son. He wouldn't feel so guilty about ignoring us if we didn't live in the same city.

DAUGHTER-IN-LAW PROBLEM

DEAR PROBLEM: Your problem is not your daughter-in-law, it's your son. He is treating you shabbily by going along with his wife's wishes.

Should you move to minimize your son's guilt? Absolutely not. Stay where you are, and busy yourself with people who appreciate your company.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HERNANDO IN ORLANDO: Tell your teen-aged daughters: "The peach that's easiest to reach is more apt to wind up in the jam."

(Thank you notes, sympathy letters, congratulatory letters, and acceptance invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

takes time, and "it does not balance the checkbook, return a deceased loved one, make a teen-ager suddenly obedient or solve any other problem not related to symptoms of depression. But it does allow people to cope with life."

"They can face problems, more reasonably find solutions and have the drive to carry out actions and decisions when a balanced body chemistry is restored," Erickson writes.

Depression

CESSANTLY:

- Symptoms of depression include emotional instability, such as mood swings, irritability, anxiety and anger; sleep disturbance; excessive fatigue; having an "overwhelmed" feeling for normal tasks; loss of sex interest; change in appetite and weight; lowered self-esteem; reduced ability to concentrate; suicidal thoughts and undefined physical complaints.

Not one will have every symptom. But the person who is moody and has four or more of these symptoms longer than two weeks has depression.

Adolescents

know" about everything because they don't want to admit there's anything they don't understand.

Wiseman urges parents, as well as teachers, to respond by saying, "Just to make sure we both understand what we're talking about, let's go over it again."

"This approach saves the young person's ego and sometimes considerable misunderstanding, he has found.

The transition from a one-teacher, self-contained classroom to a big building and seven teachers is a major one, entailing much responsibility on the student's part.

The new seventh-grader is faced with finding his classrooms, remembering his locker combination and keeping track of his gym clothes and textbooks.

It also is the time when the adolescent's body is undergoing important physiological and emotional changes over which he has no control, Wiseman explained.

He stressed the importance of getting prompt medical attention since it is now generally accepted that a chemical imbalance is the culprit. He outlines available diagnostic tests and the tricyclic antidepressants used to correct the imbalance.

"Antidepressants are not tranquilizers or sleeping pills... uppers or downers, stimulants... not addicting nor harmful... but help replace natural chemicals essential to normal well-being," the author writes.

He acknowledges there is no magical overnight cure. Medication

And to compound the problems for junior and high-aged youth, this also is the time when they are being given much more freedom in their personal lives.

"They're making choices about drugs, alcohol and the friends they make, which can either get them into trouble or point them the right way," Wiseman said.

So, even though the new seventh-grader may think and act grown-up, parental guidance is still very important, he stressed.

Would you like to hear of your family reunion this year?

The Clawsons

TWIN FALLS — Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clawson will be honored at an open house Aug. 30 in observance of their golden wedding anniversary. Friends and relatives are invited to call from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Odd Fellows Hall, 255 Third Ave. E., Twin Falls. Clawson and Cleona Hampton were married Sept. 2, 1936, in Halley. He was then involved in building the Sun Valley Lodge. Later they moved to Twin Falls where he engaged in farming and heavy equipment operation. He was in partnership in heavy equipment sales and repair at the time of his retirement. A World War II veteran, Clawson now works part-time as a mechanic at Volvo in Twin Falls.

Mrs. Clawson was a volunteer at the local hospital during World War II and was one of the four mothers who started the school for handicapped children. The couple also kept foster children in their home. The event is being hosted by their children, Robert Clawson and Colleen Lamp, both Twin Falls. The couple has nine grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

The Quigleys

BUHL — Earle and Thelma Quigley, Buhl, will be honored at an open house Aug. 30 for their 60th wedding anniversary.

Friends and relatives are invited to call from 3 to 6 p.m. at their home on Floral Avenue in Buhl. Quigley and Thelma Gough were married Oct. 4, 1926, in Pocatello. They have lived in Buhl since 1932. He was a livestock dealer before retiring.

The event is being hosted by their three children, Wade Quigley, Buhl, Mickey Quigley, Fresno, Calif., and Joyce Goodman, Bountiful, Utah, and spouses. They have 21 grandchildren and 53 great-grandchildren.

The Langs

FILER — Mr. and Mrs. Ardean Lang, Filer, will be honored at an open house Aug. 31 for their 25th wedding anniversary.

Friends and relatives are invited to call from 2 to 4 p.m. at Knutson's Reception Hall, 375 Main St., Filer. Lang and Janice Laut were married Sept. 2, 1961, in Filer, where they own and operate Lang Electric.

The event will be hosted by their children, Richard Lang and Jackie Wakefield, and spouses, and Twila Knutson, sister of Mrs. Lang, all Filer. The couple has three grandchildren.

Exercise in youth

NEW YORK (AP) — Good exercise habits start early, reminds Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

To get the ball rolling, form a contract with your child, suggests Deb Clark of the Institute for Aerobic Research. List specific exercise goals, then reward the child for reaching them. "But not with a banana split," says Clark.

Incorporate exercise into your routine. Walk to the store instead of driving. Go to exercise class with your kids.

Have fun and "emphasize that their best is fine," says Clark.

American Stores sees losses for 2nd quarter

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Second-quarter earnings and flat profit margins for 1986 both likely will drop for American Stores Co., officials of the Salt Lake City-based food and drug store chain say.

Among reasons the company cited for the drop Thursday were "continuing weak economic conditions in the Midwest, Southwest and Rocky Mountain regions" and "a high effective tax rate."

The latter is apparently the anticipated effect on business of the new federal tax code approved last week by a House-Senate conference committee. Both houses must still approve the code, however.

The code repeals the investment tax credit which allowed a company to deduct 8 percent or 10 percent of the money spent to buy machinery and equipment.

American Stores' fiscal year ends in February.

The company said for the second quarter of this year it expects to report earnings per common share in the range of 82 to 87 cents, compared to $1.12 the same time last year.

While sales for the second quarter of 1985 increased 1.3 percent to about $3.5 billion, they will likely increase "slightly over 1.0 percent" during the same time this year, American Stores said.

American Stores' subsidiaries include Skaggs Alpha Beta Inc., Acme Markets Inc., Alpha Beta Co., Buttery Food Stores, Jewel Food Stores, Genco Drug Inc., Sav-on Drugs Inc., Skaggs Alpha Beta Inc. and Star Market Co.

Other reasons the company cited for projecting lower quarterly earnings and a flat pre-tax earnings for the year include a highly competitive retail atmosphere in Southern California, and food-price deflation or drop in the general price level due to a decrease in total spending relative to the supply of goods on the market.

Utah firm receives contract

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force has awarded a contract for more than $4.4 million to Gibson Cryogenics Inc. of Ogden, Utah for purchase of liquid oxygen storage tanks.

Sen. Judd Clement, R-Utah, said the government has contracted to buy all of its 5,000-gallon liquid oxygen storage tanks from Gibson. The agreement runs for two years, he said.

Boyer USA buys Utah resorts

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — Boyne USA, owner of the Big Sky resort south of Bozeman, has agreed to buy two other ski resorts in Utah, resort officials confirmed Thursday.

Taylor Middleton, Big Sky's marketing director, said Boyne expects to buy two Salt Lake City-area ski resorts, Brighton and Solitude, for an undisclosed price. The deal should be wrapped up by Oct. 1, he said.

"It's my understanding that we are close to a deal," said Middleton. "It's pretty obvious that Utah has become one of the dominant skiing states and that's where the action is. That's why we would like to be down there in the coming years."

John Kircher, Big Sky's general manager, announced the deals in a recent interview with the Lone Peak Lookout, the newspaper in Big Sky.

Middleton also confirmed that Big Sky is for sale, with an asking price of $34 million, but said a sale is "not imminent."

Earlier speculation had pegged the resort's price tag as ranging between $53 million to $60 million, he said.

Lumber production increases

PORTLAND (AP) — Lumber production and shipments increased but orders declined in 12 Western states in the week ended Aug. 16, a trade association reports.

The Western Wood Products Association reported that lumber production during the week was 389 million board feet, 13 million more feet than the previous week. Orders were 339 million board feet, 79 million more feet under the previous week's level. Shipments were reported at 352 million feet, an increase of 11 million feet.

Figures for the same week a year ago show production at 366 million board feet, orders at 338 million feet, and shipments at 376 million feet.

Year-to-date figures through 33 weeks of 1986 show production at 11,894 billion board feet, orders at 12,037 billion feet, and shipments at 11,857 billion board feet. Totals a year ago at this time show production at 10,704 billion feet, orders 10,69 billion feet, and shipments 10,661 billion feet.

Inventories in the region are 2.152 billion board feet, 36 million feet more than the previous week. Figures for the same week a year ago show inventories were 2.213 billion board feet.

Albertson's seeks store lease

BOISE (AP) — Albertson's is interested in leasing the former D'Alessandro's grocery store building at Glenwood Street and Chinden Boulevard, Albertson's Vice Chairman Gary Michael has confirmed.

Asked about rumors that the Boise-based grocery chain was in the process of acquiring D'Alessandro's, he said Thursday, "There's nothing to acquire. D'Alessandro's is not in business. It's bankrupt."

"We may make use of the vacant building. There have been some discussions," he added. He would not say what uses were under consideration.

At 58,000 square feet, the Glenwood Center grocery was the state's largest before it closed in January. When the store opened in November 1979, it occupied 35,000 square feet, but was enlarged a short time later.

Studio procedures develop questions

Q: I received a letter from a company by the name of Trinity Studio? They claim that I have won first prize in a drawing. All I have to do is pay $6.95 for a sitting fee and handling charge. What information can you tell me about this company?

Better Business Bureau

A: According to our files, Trinity Studios started operations here in Boise in June, 1986. John Anderson is listed as president and Gary Douglas is listed as ideal salesman and booker. Trinity Studios is in the business of selling family portraits. Trinity Studios has an unsatisfactory business performance record, to date. Specifically our files show a record of failure to cooperate with the BBB in eliminating misleading or deceptive selling practices.

According to the information supplied by the company, Trinity Studios sells up "drawing" books for consumers to register to win a grand prize or first place drawing of a free 16 by 20 photo of their family. We were informed by the company that first place winners had to only pay $6.95 for postage and that grand prize winners receive their photos at no charge.

After the Better Business Bureau received this information from the company, the BBB was supplied with different information from consumers. The mailings that the first place winners receive state that the $6.95 is for a sitting fee and handling charges. The grand prize winner has to pay $9.95 for shipping and handling charges. Wait consumers should realize is that they are not receiving anything free. The catch is that Trinity Studios will also be trying to sell you a package of family pictures after the photo sitting. The consumer is not obligated to purchase this package.

Q: Last night I received a telephone call from a company called Pacific Meridian Advertising, Inc., who is selling a coupon book worth $1,000 for only $39.95. Do you have any information on this company?

A: According to our files, Pacific Meridian Advertising, Inc. has an unsatisfactory business performance record to date. Specifically our files show a record of failure to cooperate with the BBB in eliminating misleading or deceptive selling practices.

This company may be in potential violation of the Idaho Consumer Protection Regulation (Regulation 16). We have asked Pacific Meridian Advertising, Inc. to substantiate claims made in its sales pitch. The BBB has also asked this company to show us written proof that changes have been made in their sales presentation. The company has failed to do so.

The BBB has found that most coupon book promoters fail to give honest values of products and service in their books, have many coupons that most people would never consider using, and generally misrepresent who they are in phone sales presentations. All potential buyers should slowly review a coupon book before paying a company delivery person.

Most consumers do not use their full allotment of coupons as they expect before the expiration date and thus do not have their cost returned in free products and services.

"Consumer Watch" is a readers service column. Questions should be addressed to: "Consumer Watch," Better Business Bureau, 409 W. Jefferson, Boise, ID 83702. Questions of general interest will be answered here, while others will be answered by mail.

H-P says 3rd quarter earnings rise over '85

BOISE (AP) — Hewlett Packard Co. had higher earnings in its third quarter than in the same period in 1985, but income the first nine months of the year was lower than a year earlier, officials said.

The electronics and computer company, based in Palo Alto, Calif., said unaudited net earnings during the quarter that ended July 31 were $123 million, a 5 percent increase from the $117 million earned during the same period of 1985.

The company said earnings per share of common stock also were 6 percent ahead of the third quarter of last year. Earnings per share were 43 cents, compared with 45 cents last year.

Revenues increased 11 percent to $1.79 billion, from $1.48 billion in the third quarter of 1985. Revenues from U.S. sales and service were $957 million, up 3 percent from last year, while international revenue was $837 million, a 23 percent increase.

For the first nine months, earnings were $359 million, or $1.40 a share, down 1 percent from the same $362 million, or $1.41 per share, reported the same period last year.

Nine-month revenue was $5.17 billion, a 7 percent increase over revenue of $4.82 billion the company reported in the corresponding period of 1985.

Yields on T-notes lowest in 9 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on two-year Treasury notes fell to 6.21 percent in the latest auction, the lowest level in nine years.

The yield was down from 6.67 percent at the last auction on July 31 and was the lowest since 6.14 percent on June 30, 1977.

The sale on Wednesday attracted bids totaling $31.1 billion, with $10 billion sold. The notes will carry a coupon rate of 8 1/2 percent, with a $10,000 note selling for $9,994.30.
