Daniloff flies from Frankfurt to U.S. today

By MARK HEINRICH
The Associated Press

Bump removed — A5

FRANKFURT, West Germany — American journalist Nicholas Daniloff flew to the West and freedom Monday, released in a still-secretive U.S. Soviet agreement that could help shake off a deepening chill in superpower relations.

In New York, a Soviet bloc source at the United Nations said Gennady Zakharov, which he called "an independent event" and charged with being a Soviet spy, would be exchanged for Daniloff. There was no immediate official announcement on the outline of a deal.

President Reagan, visiting Kansas City, Mo., said, "We didn't give in," and added that details of the arrangement would be disclosed Tuesday.

A senior administration official said no strings were attached to Daniloff's release, which he called "an independent event" and said, "A word of caution: don't jump to any conclusions until all events connected with this situation are played out."

Daniloff, U.S. News & World Report correspondent in Moscow for five years, said after landing in Frankfurt: "I'm grateful to the president of the United States. I'm free. I'm in the West. I cannot tell you about any other arrangements. ... All I know is that I am free."

The 51-year-old journalist wore an orange turtleneck beneath a cream-colored parka and appeared to be in good health, but tired.

Daniloff and his wife boarded a small bus parked in front of the plane and were taken to the residence of the U.S. consul to Frankfurt in the city's quiet Ginnheim district.

American and German guards stood outside the white, three-story building which is surrounded by a garden.

"He feels a little tired and he is going to bed," said U.S. Embassy spokesman Robert Heath.

U.S. consulate spokesman Tom Johnson said no news conference was scheduled and the Daniloffs would fly to Washington today. Pan Am spokeswoman Pamela Hanlon said in New York that their flight would arrive at 2:40 p.m. MDT.

On hand to welcome Daniloff was the U.S. ambassador to West Germany, Richard Burt.

The KGB secret service jailed Daniloff as an accused spy Aug. 30, in what U.S. officials called retaliation for the arrest in New York of Zakharov, a 39-year-old physicist and Soviet U.N. employee.

Although the U.S. administration had insisted there would be no swap, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze negotiated at length in Washington and New York.

Shultz and Shevardnadze have both scheduled news conferences today. The Soviet foreign minister will talk with the news media at 10 a.m. at the Soviet U.N. Mission.

Battle alters lives of dairy owners, worker

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Five years ago, farmhand Sergio Salinas was hit by a bale of hay while working at the Classic Dairy, south of Twin Falls. The legal battle that ensued lasted four years and changed the lives of both Salinas and the dairy's owners, Richard and Norma Vieira. "We won, but we lost," says Richard Vieira.

The Viestras sold their dairy this year as part of the federal government dairy herd buy-out. The decision was based, in part, on the stress both Salinas and the dairy's owners, Richard and Norma Vieira, endured over the legal battle and lingering disillusionment with the government, they say.

The Viestras say that if Salinas had not taken the matter to court, both sides could have worked the matter out between them and Salinas would be better off. "How much was spent? And how was Sergio benefited? He came out with nothing. Now the man is stuck with nothing," says Richard Vieira.

Salinas, 31, is an American whose wife speaks little English. They have two small children.

Today, Salinas is unable to pay his medical bills from the accident and is considering bankruptcy. He won no money in the suit, either for the time he lost from work or his medical bills, and in fact was charged with paying $2,157 in costs to the Viestras.

But even if his debts are settled, the debilitating pain remains. Because of his injury, he may never be able to find a job which pays as much as he used to earn, his relatives say. Each side retains emotional scars and skepticism about the way the legal system functions. When they talk, anger seeps into their voices, particularly when they talk about those things they are saying.

The allegations that they did not care about their employees was particularly upsetting to the Viestras. Norma Vieira says the suit against them came as a complete surprise. A summons arrived in the mail one otherwise ordinary day in 1981. He was shocked, says her husband.

The suit accused them of "negligence and, failure to regulate working conditions," says Norma.

"That was what was demeaning," she says, "when you have to defend that, when the attorney for the plaintiff has no idea, has never seen a picture of the place. The burden of proof is on you to prove it is not all those things they are saying."

and had a bunkhouse of employees. Accidents had happened before. A dairy farm, like other agricultural operations, involves physical work and accidents do occur, they say.

They cite an incident in 1981 involving a young Mexican national, Carlos, who was working for them to earn money for a university degree when his leg was broken in a truck accident.

The Viestras rushed him to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, called his family in Mexico and then called a family friend who said the best orthopedic surgeon was in Boise, so they transferred him there to St. Alphonsus.

By the 1980s the dairy was successful. They were milking 900 cows

Police hunt for bombs on rooftops after 3 explode at Coeur d'Alene

The Associated Press

COEUR D'ALENE — Three bombs exploded Monday in the heart of this resort community, a fourth was defused and numerous telephoned threats forced evacuation of major businesses.

No one was injured in the explosions, but scores of county, state and federal law officers descended on this north Idaho town to probe the blasts and possible ties to an earlier pipe-bombing at the home of a priest who has led the fight against the white-supremacy movement in nearby Hayden Lake.

"Someone is trying to disrupt the system," said Kootenai County Commissioner Frank Henderson. "I believe people are scared."

Coeur d'Alene Police Chief Frank Premo said, one block from a maze of cordoned-off areas marking the blast sites.

After a late Monday meeting between the various police agencies called to the scene, Premo said there were no leads.

"We're looking at several vehicles, and there are people in the area we're looking at," the chief told reporters. "I don't feel like this is a town under siege. Bad circumstances happened here, but I don't feel that."

"I think it's got the whole community shook up but good," said resident Ralph Rich. All city and county police officers were mobilized, federal agents were sent in and bomb squads were called in from nearby Spokane, Wash., and Boise.

In late morning, state police and firefighters were spread out over rooftops throughout the city to check for other bombs. Major portions of the city — a major reason that has 20,000 year-round residents — were closed to traffic and pedestrians were kept a block away from each of the bombing sites.

The Idaho Supreme Court, meeting in two-day session at the Kootenai County Courthouse, adjourned when the courthouse was closed soon after the bombs exploded.

The fourth bomb was found after garbage sacks wrapped tightly with

House overrides sanctions veto

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House, reversing President Reagan's major foreign policy reversal, voted Monday to override his veto of punitive economic sanctions against the white minority government of South Africa.

The Democratic-controlled House originally approved the sanctions legislation 308-77, and it had seemed virtually impossible that the chamber would reverse course and sustain Reagan's veto of last week. It takes a vote of two-thirds of the members present to override a veto.

Reagan picked up only six votes from the last roll call on sanctions. A total of 81 Republicans joined 232 Democrats in voting to override the veto. Only four Democrats and 79 Republicans voted to sustain it. Idaho's representatives split, with Democrat Richard Stallings voting to override the veto and Republican Larry Craig voting to sustain it.

The Reagan defeat in the House shifts the battle to the Senate, where Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., has acknowledged that finding enough votes to sustain the president's veto has proved "very difficult."

In his letter to Dole and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., sent hours before the House vote, Reagan condemned South Africa's racial policies and urged the House and Senate to join with him in a united foreign policy. He offered to impose these new sanctions and measures by executive order.

A ban on new U.S. investments other than those in black-owned firms. A ban on the import of South African iron or steel. A ban on U.S. bank accounts for the South African government or its agencies. $25 million in aid to disadvantaged South Africans. Review of ways to reduce U.S. dependence on strategic minerals from southern Africa. The new steps would expand a list of sanctions Reagan issued last year.

Almanac, 80 percent right, calls for 'easier' mid-winter

DUBLIN, N.H. (AP) — The Old Farmer's Almanac, which predicted the weather for the summer, but "somewhat missed" the Southeast drought, goes on sale this week predicting a "reasonably good" winter. The almanac editors, who have been predicting weather with a claimed 80 percent accuracy since 1792,

He promises a "Thanksgiving Day snowstorm" in New England, and winter colder than usual elsewhere. The Southwest and West, elsewhere, it will be warmer. Spring will be warmer than usual east of the Mississippi, but cooler elsewhere with more rain than normal. The Southeast will be drier than usual again, while New England's coastal areas, middle Atlantic states and Great Plains will have more rain than usual. The West will have fewer snow days than other parts of the West and Northwest.

"He had the best of care," says Norma. "We felt responsible and wanted to do the best we could." When he was out of the hospital, they bought him a life. Care and cared for him until he was well enough to go home.

Webb says that Sergio, hampered by his cultural background, was his own worst witness. "His name made image almost prohibited him from saying he was hurt," Webb says.

"If Sergio had not been approached or found an attorney, he would have had his last life. Care and cared for him until he was well enough to go home."

"There was a trial. I had an appeal, then a second trial. The first trial was particularly emotional for both sides," says Norma.

The Gibbs Building bomb was placed near the desk of Lohman Castro, owner of the Engage Back. Boyer said Castro had called in just minutes before to say he'd be late for work.

"The hardest thing for me was the third day," says Norma Verstra. "I knew my son (who had been working at the scene of the accident) that day was going to testify. I knew they were going to test Ken apart."

"If they had wanted to make their presence known, and if they wanted people to be hurt, the bomb-bombers have gone off behind an oak tree," said businessman Durrett.

"I was a terrible experience," says Richard. "The main thing was getting on the stand. The attorney can ask anything and you can only answer yes or no. You can't explain."

"I had no reason to expect anything but to see him down in the same alley," Webb says. But one which he says weighed 65-80 pounds and hit Salinas in the head.

"It was not fair. The other lawyer was telling things I did not really understand," he says. "He talked in English, and I had to translate to Spanish. It was hard to understand."

Fast budget passage dim. (WASHINGTON, AP) — The Senate opened debate on a $56 billion catchall spending bill Monday, but quick passage appeared unlikely.

"The result was not fair, but the trial was fair," he says. Wednesday: Insiders view.

Bombs

He called the defused bomb a "valuable piece of evidence" and said the defusers were "not sophisticated."

The bombs did not resemble the pipe bomb that did $4,000 worth of damage to the Hey-Bell Wasserman in the West End district. Premo said. Authorities believed all Monday bombs, equipped with timing devices, were tossed from moving vehicles.

The first bomb exploded at 7:30 a.m. in a windy wall at the federal building. Nine minutes later another blast occurred. Salinas Gibbs Mercantile Building. About 11 minutes later a third explosion. Damage was heaviest at the Gibbs Building, where the bomb blew a 2-foot hole in the ceiling. Collateral estimates of damage were not available.

Lt. Wall Roese of the Coeur d'Alene police said his department received several phone calls Monday morning. At Coeur d'Alene High School, administrators stopped a repairman carrying a suitcase. The suitcase contained a bomb. Police: Matt Muckelbauer.

At the Church of Jesus Christ Christian (Mormon) in nearby Hayden Lake, where the area's religious community is prominent, he said. A man who refused to give his name said he had been deputized as spokesman while the Rev. Richard Butler was on a speaking tour.

"With all parts of an orchestrated campaign to denounce the church and make the community more hostile against us," the spokesman said. He and Betty Tate, Butler's secretary, blamed the bombings on the militant Jewish Defense Organization.

Butler himself appeared later and told reporters that trying to place blame for the bombings on his followers was "an old tactic of the Marxistists."

"We have something to gain and everything to lose," Butler said of such tactics.

"Attempts to reach the JDO in New York and Los Angeles were unsuccessful," he said.

"If they had wanted to make their presence known, and if they wanted people to be hurt, the bomb-bombers have gone off behind an oak tree," said businessman Durrett.

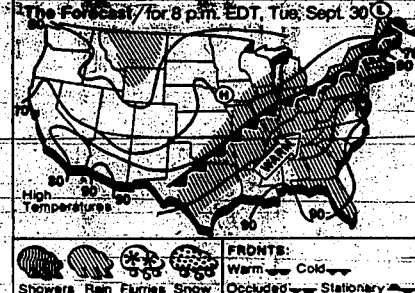

The Coeur d'Alene Press, one of Hagadone's holdings in this area, was among the businesses receiving bomb threats Monday. A volunteer crew continued operations at the Press, an afternoon newspaper, and most workers were evacuated while a bomb squad from Spokane checked the premises. Nothing was found, said editor Jim Borden said.

At Coeur d'Alene Mining Corp., a male caller said. "Your office is no longer safe," a company spokesman said.

Costs can't support projects in Salmon basin, study says

POCATELLO (AP) — A draft environmental impact statement on the cumulative effect of 13 proposed hydroelectric projects in the Salmon River Basin concludes that 10 would do only minor damage to the basin, but most probably would not be economical.

The study by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission is part of a "Cluster Impact Assessment Procedures" to aid FERC in its decisions on licensing hydro projects in the basin.

The EIS addresses 15 proposed projects that would generate 33.7 billion-watt-hours of electricity annually, at well as alternatives including 16 other hydro sites in the basin and five outside, a coal-fired plant, conservation of existing generating resources, and no action.

The draft report concludes that five of the projects, on Trapper, Fall, Grave, Allison and French creeks, would cause "significant, unavoidable, adverse environmental impacts" including erosion of soils, lowered water quality due to turbidity, and decreased fisheries.

The 10 remaining projects — on Rloridan, Ditch, Lower Squaw, China, Upper Squaw, Lower Hat,

Elkborn, Partridge, Lake and Single creeks — "could be constructed and operated without significant impact to environmental resources."

However, the EIS notes six of the 10 Rloridan, Ditch, Lower and Upper Squaw, Lower Hat and Single creeks — "have a high potential for interaction among projects which would result in additional adverse impacts."

The report also suggests that the Upper Squaw Creek project would be "economically marginal" if constructed with the mitigating measures recommended by the FERC staff.

Development of Upper Squaw Creek and six other projects also would not be possible without increasing the capacity of 34 miles of Idaho Power Co. transmission line from New Meadows to Riggin, at an estimated cost of nearly $6 million, according to the EIS.

"There is no combination of projects, with staff's recommended mitigation, that would have enough benefits to support the cost of upgrading the transmission line without financial contribution from the Idaho Power Company," the EIS says.

Idaho Power spokesman Larry Taylor said the study "would not be willing to foot the bill. And it would be entirely inconsistent with the cogeneration orders we live by that specifies the developers are responsible for expenses to hook into our system."

Taylor said the developers could ask the Idaho Public Utilities Commission to order Idaho Power to upgrade the transmission system. But he said the PUC probably would find it hard to justify adding the costs to our rate base, given the surplus generating capacity already available in the region.

The FERC report found that power from the Salmon River Basin "would be useful in meeting the need for power forecast by the NPCC (Northwest Power Planning Council) by the mid-1990s."

But Taylor said Idaho Power still would not be interested in improving transmission lines, especially since one of the reasons the PUC granted only a fraction of its recent $68.2 million rate hike request was a perceived lack of need for power being generated at the company's Vainy II coal-fired plant in northern Nevada.

Ballot measures explained in guide

BOISE (AP) — Idaho voters will be "faced" with an initiative, a referendum and three proposed constitutional amendments when they enter polling places for the Nov. 4 general election.

To help them make informed decisions about complicated issues, the secretary of state's office is sending out voter information pamphlets to more than 365,000 households in the state.

The goal is to give them something to study in their homes, said Deputy Secretary of State Ben Yursa.

The secretary of state's office is printing enough to send the eight-page pamphlets out to every household, hoping to reach what election officials estimate will be 900,000 registered voters.

The pamphlet explains the initiative, the referendum on the right-to-work law and three proposals to change the state constitution.

One changes county coroner terms from two to four years. The second would give the Legislature more control over the powers of commission and pardon exercised by the Board of Pardons and Paroles.

The third proposal would limit future Idaho legislatures to no more than 35 members in the Senate and a House twice the size of the Senate. The current Legislature, the largest ever in Idaho, has 84 House members and 42 senators.

The pamphlet also contains information on who can register to vote and how to do it, and who cannot vote.

Many of the pamphlets will be included with daily and weekly newspapers this week. Households which do not subscribe to newspapers also will receive the pamphlets. The constitutional amendments also must be published twice more before the election.

They're being printed at a cost of about $50,000.

Each of the proposals is explained, and pro and con arguments are presented. "We are not responsible for the accuracy of any of those statements," said Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa.

There was a brief legal squabble earlier on the wording to be used on the initiative. Cenarrusa finally agreed to print the title of the proposal, with the question, "shall the legislation pertaining to the Right To Employment require a union membership non-membership be approved?"

Cenarrusa, who served three terms as House speaker before being appointed secretary of state on May 1, 1987, said he favored the proposal to limit the size of the Legislature. The proposal would not go into effect until after the 1990 census.

"That's a step in the right direction," said Cenarrusa, who said the last two legislatures have been so large that they have been unruly.

Ellis auction cash falls short of goal

POCATELLO (AP) — Although proceeds from the Earl Ellis alone property disposal are short of projections, officials from Pocatello and Chubbuck plan to make good use of the receipts.

"It's not what we had hoped for," Pocatello Mayor Dick Finlayson said of the $24,421 the city received. But, "it's more than we feared we would receive."

The revenue will enable the city to undertake some priority purchases. Ellis, former Pocatello car dealer, pleaded guilty last year to federal charges. As part of a plea-bargain agreement, he agreed to forfeit hundreds of motor vehicles and other items. They were sold at auction, and the two Bannock County communities split the proceeds.

Callers to get billing break

BOISE (AP) — State utility regulators have given preliminary approval to a discount long-distance telephone rate for residents in Idaho City in a compromise move to help consumers reduce their toll-call bills.

The Public Utilities Commission proposed the discount plan after it tentatively rejected the request of Idaho City residents for an extended area local phone service that would allow them to call the Boise area toll free.

The commission determined that the shift to extended local service would be too costly for Mountain Bell Telephone to effect. It said the loss in long-distance revenues under extended local service would have to be made up through higher rates for remaining long-distance calls.

Clearing summit road bump could still embarrass Reagan

By BARRY SCHWED
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The release of American reporter Nicholas Daniloff clears a bump on the road to a U.S.-Soviet summit, but the political fallout could be embarrassing for President Reagan.

The deal that is taking shape is blind to the reception given Gennadiy Zakharov, a Soviet physicist charged with spying in New York. And if Zakharov's case had been handled differently, Daniloff's arrest might have been avoidable in the first place.

Even though Reagan and other administration officials said over and over that there would be no trade for the American reporter whose innocence they vouched for, a swap is turning out to be the solution to Daniloff's confinement.

In fact, the Soviet envoy have seized the U.S. News & World Report correspondent as the practical way to get Zakharov out of jail.

Apart from the political aspects, however, the outlook for a summit has brightened.

Even at the height of the tug-of-war over Daniloff, Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze had signaled a relaxation of Moscow's preconditions for a meeting between Reagan and General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev.

He told reporters Sept. 20, after two days of tense talks with Secretary of State George Shultz, that they had laid a foundation for a summit.

The basis for the new show of Soviet flexibility was the narrowing of differences in Geneva arms control talks over ways to reduce both long-range and medium-range nuclear missiles.

Reagan had instructed U.S. negotiator Max Kampelman only a few days earlier to ease the missile reductions initially demanded by the president. The improved prospects of a deal, particularly on Euro-missiles, that could be signed at a summit meeting.

But Daniloff's liberation removes one of the four "bumps on the road" enumerated by Gennadiy Gerasimov, the Soviet foreign ministry spokesman, last week in New York.

Others are the case of Zakharov, the Soviet employe at the

Nicholas Daniloff, wife Ruth arrive at Frankfurt airport

Analysis

U.N. Secretariat charged with spying, the U.S. order expelling 25 Soviets from the U.N. mission and the unspecified retaliation threatened by Moscow if the order is not rescinded.

Shultz last Thursday flatly refused to backtrack on the expulsions. "Being host to the U.N. does not mean we should be host to intelligence activities by other nations," he said heatedly at a news conference.

The administration has accused the 25 of espionage and called for 75 additional Soviets to leave over the next 18 months.

The U.S. proposal that freed Daniloff provides for Zakharov's release as well, but it may not come right away. A U.S. official here said he assumed the physicist would "have to go through some judicial proceeding" in federal court in Brooklyn. A pretrial hearing is scheduled for Friday. It is not clear whether Zakharov will actually stand trial.

Statements by Reagan and other U.S. officials labeling Zakharov a spy could be taken by a judge as prejudicial publicity making a fair trial impossible. Or Zakharov might plead no contest to the charges and be expelled — as Soviets accused of spying traditionally are.

A two-stage U.S. proposal was sent to Moscow through diplomatic channels shortly after Daniloff's arrest Aug. 30. It served as the basis for the lengthy negotiations Shultz and Shevardnadze held in New York.

The first stage, now played out, called for Daniloff's release from Moscow. The second involves an understanding that Zakharov would be available for exchange after trial for a number of Soviet dissidents.

Much of the tedious bargaining between Shultz and Shevardnadze apparently centered on which dissidents would gain their freedom. A State Department official, who demanded anonymity, said Zakharov should have been placed in the custody of Yuri Dubinin, the Soviet ambassador, and that the State Department would have suggested as much if asked.

In the aftermath, the prospects for holding the Washington summit meeting that Reagan and Gorbachev agreed to last November are clearly brighter even though a date has yet to be set.

The Soviets have said consistently they do not want "an empty summit," but one that would curtail the nuclear arms race.

The narrowing of differences in Geneva may foreshadow an agreement on at least an understanding that Reagan and Gorbachev could initial.

Reagan and Gorbachev agreed to meet here this year and in Moscow in 1987, time is running out. But Daniloff's release and progress in Geneva could still bring Gorbachev here before Christmas or possibly in January.

Navy force shows flag in Soviet 'private sea'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four Navy warships led by the battleship New Jersey completed a secret "show-the-flag" mission off the Soviet coast on Monday that featured a deep incursion into the Sea of Okhotsk north of Japan.

The deployment of the New Jersey, two cruisers and a destroyer into the area began on Sept. 25 under the command of the four "show-the-flag" mission off the Soviet coast on Monday that featured a deep incursion into the Sea of Okhotsk north of Japan.

The deployment of the New Jersey, two cruisers and a destroyer into the area began on Sept. 25 under the command of the four "show-the-flag" mission off the Soviet coast on Monday that featured a deep incursion into the Sea of Okhotsk north of Japan.

Group finds it's possible MIAs captive

WASHINGTON (AP) — A task force headed by a retired director of the Defense Intelligence Agency has concluded there is a strong possibility that American servicemen are still being held as prisoners in Southeast Asia, administration sources said Monday.

The report by the task force, headed by retired Lt. Gen. Eugene F. Tighe Jr. of the Air Force, does not contain any new, hard evidence that would establish "beyond all doubt" that prisoners from the Vietnam War are still being held against their will, the sources said.

Moreover, the report also concludes there is nothing to substantiate charges the Reagan administration has purposely covered up evidence showing there are still live prisoners, added the officials. Nonetheless, the task force concluded the preponderance of the available intelligence information is sufficient to support a conclusion that there are American servicemen who are still alive and being held against their will, the sources said.

The officials argued Monday that conclusion differs only semantically from current U.S. policy. But the descriptions of the report appeared to suggest the task force had gone a step beyond the current policy.

Mountain Bell's repair service has gotten better.

Our telephone repair service is an important aspect of our ongoing commitment to customer satisfaction. And that's why we're pleased to announce an improvement in that service.

From now on, we'll visit your location at no cost to you, even if we find that the problem is not related to Mountain Bell equipment. So you'll no longer have to pay the $27.50 we charged in the past when equipment belonging to other companies was at fault.

Instead, the Idaho Public Utilities Commission has approved a 20¢ per month increase on all residence and single line business customers' basic phone service rates—an increase that will allow us to cover our costs and make all repair calls free of charge.

Of course, it's still important that you try to identify the source of your service problem before calling us. But isn't it nice to know our repair crews are as close as a phone call away 24-hours a day? And, better yet, that there's no extra charge for fixing it, or even coming out to see where the problem lies?

For residence repairs call 1-551-1631 (toll-free); for business repairs call 1-551-1633 (toll-free).

Americans in need of regular exercise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are bucking up and dieting more, but less than half the people exercise regularly, and many have problems with stress, concluded a new government study released Monday.

There is evidence that seat belt use is increasing rapidly, the National Center for Health Statistics said in the health study.

It found that the percent of adults wearing seat belts most of the time increased from 30 percent in the first three months of 1985 to 41 percent over the last three months.

This no doubt reflects the impact of seat belt legislation in many states during 1985, said the report, based on a survey of 34,399 households last year. That finding contrasted with a preliminary report covering the first half of the year, which said only about one adult in three wears a seat belt.

Otherwise, the newly released year-end findings were similar to those reported for the first half of 1985, including concern about weight loss through dieting, failure of most people to exercise and continued reduction in cigarette smoking. Half of the adults responding to the survey reported at least moderate stress in their lives.

The study is designed to look at Americans' attitudes, knowledge and actions concerning their own health, with the long-term goal of assessing the nation's progress between 1985 and 1990.

The survey found that 55 percent of men and 42 percent of women control their weight to be "just about right."

However, one-quarter of men and almost one-half of all women were trying to lose weight, primarily by eating fewer calories, or increasing

Finding cancer early pushed in new drive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Susan Ford Vance joined others Monday in a nationwide program aimed at increasing the early detection of breast cancer among American women.

"I am disturbed that only 25 percent of the American women regularly perform breast self-examination," said Mrs. Vance, daughter of former President Ford and national spokeswoman for the campaign.

"Our goal is to educate all women about the techniques of breast self-examination, the importance of regular physician examination and mammography in order to detect the disease at its earliest stages," she said.

Mrs. Vance said breast cancer was diagnosed in 119,000 American women in 1985 and that 38,400 died from the disease.

However, she said it is one of the easiest cancers to treat if detected early and that 90 percent of breast cancers are discovered by the woman herself.

"Early detection can save lives," Mrs. Vance said. "Breast cancer is a potential threat for all women, and the best weapon we have against it is at this point is education."

Mrs. Vance said her personal involvement stems from Betty Malherbe's experience when they were in the White House. Betty Ford underwent breast cancer surgery a decade ago.

"I saw the pain and the fear that is associated with breast cancer," Mrs. Vance said. "And as a daughter of a woman who suffered from the disease, I myself, am a high-risk candidate for breast cancer."

physical activity," it said.

That did not necessarily translate into regular physical exercise, however, since the survey also found that "less than one-half (40 percent) of the adult population exercises on a regular basis, and only one-quarter have done so for five years or more."

Some four-fifths of adults believe they are at least as active as other people their age, the study noted, but the majority are not knowledgeable regarding the specific requirements for exercise to strengthen heart and lungs.

Although cigarette smoking has been on the decline for more than 20 years, 32 percent of men and 28 percent of women still smoke, the report said. This happened despite the fact that 79 percent of adults are aware of the danger of emphysema, chronic bronchitis and cancer of the lung, larynx and throat.

People tended to be unaware of another danger posed by smoking — an increased incidence of bladder cancer, the study said.

One-half of adults reported experiencing at least a moderate amount of stress during the two weeks preceding the interview, with the lowest percent for the elderly (28 percent). In addition, almost one-half of adults felt that stress had had some effect on their health in the past year, the study said.

The survey found that 88 percent of adults know that smoking, high cholesterol levels and high blood pressure are risk factors in heart disease, but only 61 percent knew that diabetes is also a heart disease danger.

Other findings of the report included:

- About 55 percent of adults eat breakfast daily, 66 percent sleep between seven and eight hours at night and 78 percent have a regular health care provider.

- Most women (87 percent) know how to examine their breasts for lumps, but only one-third do so more than six times a year. Half have had such an exam by a professional during the past year and 46 percent had a smear test.

- While 88 percent of adults with young children at home have heard about poison control centers, only 60 percent have the local telephone number for the center handy. Of those with children under age 5, 98 percent were aware of the importance of child safety seats.

- About 40 percent of homes do not have a working smoke detector.

- Although 93 percent knew that heavy drinking can lead to liver disease, only 46 percent knew it also carries a risk of cancer of the throat and 32 percent knew of the danger of mouth cancer. Ten percent of adults admitted to drinking at least once in the last year after drinking.

Jail inmate gives birth alone in cell

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A county jail inmate says she gave birth to a son alone in her cell because guards and a nurse ignored her pleas for help for several hours.

Franklin Lott, superintendent of the Milwaukee County House of Corrections, said he was told inmate Karyn Tess was checked every 15 to 20 minutes, but that he will investigate her charges.

Tess, 30, said jailers had ample time to get her to a hospital before the birth. She said she "flew" called during labor, "I was having severe contractions—I had vomited my supper," Tess said. "I kept crying for them to help me. The nurse let my stomach and said she did not think I was in labor."

House narrows gates for entry via marriage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Monday to stiffen federal penalties for immigrants who fraudulently take wedding vows with Americans to gain immediate entry into the United States and then have the marriages annulled.

Also by voice vote, the House agreed to allow the Immigration and Naturalization Service to hold swearing-in ceremonies for newly naturalized citizens, sharing that ceremonial role with overworked federal judges.

The House approved and sent to the Senate a series of miscellaneous immigration bills. The House had refused last week to take action on the first major overhaul of immigration laws governing illegal aliens.

With Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., declaring that "we ought not to have people defrauding their way into this country," the House boosted the criminal penalties for fraudulent immigrant marriages to a $250,000 fine and five years in prison.

Members also approved requiring a conditional two-year award of permanent resident status for certain newly married aliens. Toward the end of the two-year period, the couple would have to prove that their marriage was legitimate or risk deportation and sanctions.

In addition, "fiance" visas would be denied to aliens who have not personally met their intended American spouses at least once.

The citizenship bill was intended to eliminate the long periods that otherwise qualified aliens must wait to take the oath as American citizens because of a growing backlog at federal courts, especially in such major metropolitan areas as New York and Los Angeles.

The INS estimated that 213,744 aliens were awaiting court swearing-in ceremonies as of June 30.

Under current law, the INS is responsible for processing applications and giving examinations to test knowledge of the English language and U.S. history or government, while federal or state courts administer the oath to new citizens.

Bus-truck collision leaves 40 injured

CARNEYS POINT, N.J. (AP) — A gambling excursion bus headed for Atlantic City slammed into a tractor-trailer truck on Monday, injuring at least 40 people, four of them seriously, officials and witnesses said.

The accident occurred at 9 a.m. MDT about four miles from the Delaware border on Interstate 295, said state police in Belmar.

The injured, most of whom suffered bruises and cuts, were taken to three hospitals.

Chernobyl reactor at minimum level

MOSCOW (AP) — The No. 1 reactor at the Chernobyl nuclear plant was restarted on Monday for the first time since the disaster in a nearby reactor five months ago, the government newspaper Izvestia reported.

It said the 1,000 megawatt No. 1 reactor was on the minimum standby power level, but would be brought up to the Ukrainian electricity grid. The report did not specify when.

The reactor operation was brought to the minimum controllable level this morning for the first time since an explosion and fire in the No. 4 reactor shut down the entire four-reactor plant, Izvestia said.

Kremlin press reports said No. 2 reactor would be shut back into operation after the first reactor is brought on line.

It said the building housing the No. 3 reactor, adjacent to the ruined No. 4 reactor, is still being decontaminated and inspected by experts.

The No. 4 reactor has been "reliably isolated" from the rest of the Chernobyl system, the paper said, although workers have not yet finished a project to entomb the reactor in concrete and steel.

Elsewhere in Europe, restrictions on food products initiated because of the fallout from the explosion were extended.

British restrictions on the slaughter of sheep because of the disaster will continue because there are still areas of high radiation in England, Scotland and Wales, the British Ministry of Agriculture said in a statement in London.

In Brussels, Belgium, the European Community agreed in principle Monday to extend by four months a ban on the import of food contaminated with nuclear radiation, according to a spokesman.

The spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said that the measure will affect mainly East European countries.

In Vienna, the International Atomic Energy Agency started its annual meeting with Hans Blix, the U.N. organization's director general, saying the Chernobyl accident will help scientists develop safer and more efficient atomic power plants.

Earlier, the Communist Party daily Pravda said the Chernobyl accident and delayed construction at three other nuclear power plants were contributing to serious shortages in the electricity supply as winter approaches.

In a front-page editorial urging conservation of electricity, the newspaper did not specify how much electrical production was lost because of the April 26 disaster.

The Soviets have largely blamed human error by operators at Chernobyl for the chemical explosion that ripped the No. 4 reactor open and spread a cloud of radiation that was eventually detected around the world.

At least 31 people died because of the accident, the worst in nuclear power history, and the Soviets have estimated direct costs at $2.9 billion.

Western experts have estimated that Soviet nuclear experts to the West would be cut to conventional energy lost because of the Chernobyl disaster.

10 Chinese artists plan to visit U.S.

PEKING (AP) — Ten of China's top artists will leave Peking Oct. 5 for a 20-day tour of the United States, the state-run Xinhua News Agency said Monday.

The group will visit Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, Washington and New York, Xinhua said.

It quoted the delegation head, painter Ya Ming, as saying the group is the largest of its type to visit America since Peking and Washington established diplomatic relations in 1979.

Lebanese friction worsens

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunfire assassinated a senior army officer in his bed Monday after his troops shot and killed two Christian militiamen in the central Lebanese mountains, police reported.

The shooting pointed to the growing tension between the regular army, the Lebanese Forces, the nation's largest Christian militia.

The friction emerged after soldiers and Lebanese Forces militiamen fought together in savage street battles in Christian east Beirut over the weekend to crush an attempted comeback by an ousted, pro-Syrian militia commander, Elie Hobeika.

A French free-lance television cameraman and his assistant meanwhile were missing and presumed kidnapped, said the French Embassy and family members. The Frenchman, Jean-Marc Sroussi, 41, is the 20th foreigner missing or kidnapped in Lebanon.

Sroussi was last seen Sunday driving to Moslem west Beirut. A witness who demanded anonymity said he saw Moslem militiamen climb into Sroussi's car and race away. Sroussi's aide, a Maronite Catholic Syrian, was last seen Friday.

Police said Monday that the final day from the weekend fighting was settled: 200 wounded and 55 missing.

Police officers said that Lebanese Forces militia stormed the house of Col. Killi Kanaan in east Beirut's Hamieh district at daybreak and sprayed his bed with submachine gun fire.

The colonel had 28 bullet wounds in his body and died at the scene. His wife was seriously wounded, police said.

Kanaan, 51, was commander of the army's predominantly Christian 6th Brigade. His soldiers shot and killed two Lebanese Forces militiamen at a militia checkpoint set up near a military garrison in the central mountain resort of Monteverde on Sunday, police said.

Samir Geagea, commander of the 6,000-strong Lebanese Forces, sent a militia contingent to Monteverde Sunday without consulting the army command.

Lebanese Forces spokesmen said the move was to reinforce the army against another possible thrust by Syrian-allied Christian dissidents.

Sudan rebels deny passage to food planes

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Sudanese rebels, who shot down a civilian airliner last month, said Monday they would not grant safe passage to an emergency airlift of food for starving people in government-held areas of southern Sudan.

A relief official said the airlift would go ahead despite the rebel announcement.

The Sudan People's Liberation Army said it would not be monitored in Nairobi that it could not accept the latest plan of international relief agencies in Khartoum, capital of Sudan, to aid some of the estimated 2.3 million people threatened with starvation in southern Sudan.

It calls for a C-130 Hercules transport to fly food and medicine from Khartoum to the southern cities of Juba and Malakal, which are held by the government. An earlier plan, endorsed by the rebels but opposed by the government, would have carried supplies to the rebel-controlled town of Yirol and the government-held town of Wau.

Paul Mitche, a spokesman for the World Food Program in Khartoum, said: "We are still planning to fly Wednesday regardless of what they say."

Relief agencies made the decision after studying the SPLA message, he said, and "the status quo remains as it was yesterday."

Soap opera star says shows rely more on sensationalism

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — Patricia Barry, who stars in the daytime serial "Guiding Light," says soap operas rely more on the sensational to attract viewers.

"It's to the point that it's just one stinky kiss after another — people popping in and out of bed with each other, and unmarried women having babies," said Barry, a Davenport native.

CLINT EASTWOOD Guest at telecast

"In order to get the ratings, the soaps resort to more and more sensationalism. We're shooting all kinds of exotic locations and they're spending more and more money on the shows," she said in a recent interview.

However, she said that she sees signs that soaps may become tamer and put emphasis upon relationships, as they previously did.

Barry plays Sally Gleason, a former madame.

Eastwood the honored guest at group's benefit

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Clint Eastwood was the guest of honor for this year's Variety Club of America fund-raising telecast, a role filled last year by President Reagan.

"When I heard you were honoring an actor who ran for political office and who co-starred with a chimp, I had a strong sense of déjà vu," Reagan said in a letter read to the gathering by Cary Grant.

Reagan referred to his own film, "Bad News" — for "Bono," and Eastwood's movie, "Evening, Where We Stay But Loose." Eastwood is mayor of Carmel.

The 11th annual special, taped Sunday at NBC Studios for broadcast later on CBS, followed a traditional format. Eastwood sat at a center table with his family and reacted to praise from James Stewart, Sammy Davis Jr., Lucille Ball and others, and cracks from Bob Hope and Don Rickles.

"As mayor, Clint calls a council meeting at 10 and says, 'Everyone in makeup at 8:30,'" joked Hope. "He is the only mayor who sends a SWAT team for overdue library books."

Miss Ball announced that the Clint Eastwood Recovery Center for chemically dependent patients will be added to the Community Hospital of Monterey.

In his speech accepting the club's honor, Eastwood said, "Since none of you are Carmel voters, this will be short."

"I've had a fantastic life. As a teen-ager, I sat in theaters with my knees on the back of a chair watching people who have honored me tonight. I have some skills in this business, but an awful lot of luck."

French present award to famed Nazi-hunter

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Simon Wiesenthal, head of the Jewish Documentation Center, was honored with numerous Nazi war criminals to justice, was awarded Monday the distinction of "chevalier" of the French Legion of Honor.

Ambassador Francois Regis Bastie presented the award on behalf of French President Francois Mitterrand at a ceremony in the French Embassy.

"Like every country that has become a victim of Nazi rule, France owes you great gratitude in general," Bastie told Wiesenthal.

The ambassador praised "the methodical way" Wiesenthal and his assistants tracked down Nazi war criminals, but stressed Wiesenthal was "a champion of reconciliation rather than retribution."

Wiesenthal, 77, said the distinction honored not only himself but "the victims of an inhuman period and it honors friends from many nations who attempted to fight barbarism because to them freedom meant more to them than their lives."

2 killed when car hits hotel

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A car smashed into the wall of a hotel Monday, killing two people and injuring four, and police were investigating whether the car had been racing another vehicle.

The driver, 19-year-old Raul Oliver of Oakland, and an unidentified passenger were killed when the car ran up over a sidewalk and crashed into the hotel Lake Merritt, police said.

Police detained the two occupants of a second car after witnesses said the cars may have been racing. The occupants of both cars had just come from a nearby bar, said Sgt. Bernard Gardner.

A male passenger was in critical condition with apparent brain injuries, said a spokeswoman at Providence Hospital. A female passenger was in serious condition. Two other passengers were hospitalized with less serious injuries, police said.

Church ends racist policy

DETROIT (AP) — Members of a suburban Baptist church voted overwhelmingly to end a 94-year-old unwritten policy barring black members, a church official said.

"The church has acted in an incredibly mature way," said the Rev. Truman Dollar, pastor of the Temple Baptist Church.

About a third of the 9,500 members voted Sunday. Earlier, the church's board of deacons voted 29-7 to drop the policy.

Stewart Pledger, 24, of Southfield will become the first black member when he is baptized next week, Dollar said. About 60 black people attend the church each Sunday.

Israel indicts American, 66

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prosecutors formally charged retired U.S. autoworker John Demjanjuk on Monday with torturing prisoners at a Nazi death camp and operating gas chambers in which hundreds of thousands were killed.

The 26-page indictment accused him of "crimes of incomparable severity," including stabbing prisoners and tearing off pieces of their flesh, while serving as a guard at the Treblinka camp in German-occupied Poland during World War II. Conviction could bring the death penalty.

Demjanjuk, 66, was born in the Soviet Ukraine and worked at a plant in Cleveland. He was extradited from the United States in February, accused of being the sadistic guard Jewish prisoners called Ivan the Terrible.

U.S. authorities stripped him of citizenship in 1981 after he was found guilty of lying about his Nazi past when he came to America in February 1952.

He will be the first person tried in Israel on charges of Nazi war crimes since Adolf Eichmann was convicted and hanged in 1962. Eichmann directed the Nazi extermination of Jews.

Demjanjuk's trial is not expected to begin before December.

Among details of Demjanjuk's alleged crimes included in the indictment are cutting off the ear of a prisoner named David Auslander, whipping an elderly Jew to death, and stabbing victims while forcing them into gas chambers.

In addition, it said, "the accused by his own act caused the deaths of hundreds of thousands of human beings" by running the motor, which sent poisonous fumes into the chambers.

Botha says he won't call elections

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President P.W. Botha said Monday night he will not call elections this year, as predicted, but added: "I appeal to voters to ensure that their names are on the voters' rolls."

There had been widespread speculation that Botha would use the congress of his governing National Party at East London for his home Cape Province to announce elections, which are not due for three years. He remarked instead that Parliament's term runs until 1989, but did not specifically rule out a vote before then.

Some newspapers had quoted government sources as saying an election would be held before Christmas. Others said it would be next year, said.

South Africa's 24 million blacks cannot vote on a national level. The 5 million whites control the government and have reserved 87 percent of the nation's land for themselves.

He marked eight years Sunday as government leader, first as prime minister and then as president under a new constitution promulgated in 1983. The last general election was in 1981, when only whites voted for members of Parliament.

On Monday, he added the remarks about elections in delivering the party conference of the year. No advance text, which concentrated on what Botha called his government's determination to resolve the problems of black rights and living conditions.

"We are a country of minorities... white, brown and black... Our problems are unique and therefore our solutions must be unique," he said.

Risk of lawsuits just part of doing business

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Safeway Stores Inc. will not halt the practice of food giveaways just because one woman successfully sued the company when she slipped on a patch of melted ice cream, says a regional official.

"We have a business to run and operate, lawsuits or not," says David Blevins, spokesman for the 60 Safeway stores in the Intermountain region.

It's business as usual, he says. Store managers remain responsible for the maintenance, cleaning and sweeping of stores, although, it takes only two seconds for something to happen.

Blevins says the chain does require proof of insurance from the companies which distribute samples, and even from those companies whose products line Safeway shelves. That way, Safeway is protected from defending lawsuits involving another company's product.

But he adds, "There are sue-happy people. And, there are a lot of hungry lawyers."

Blevins declined to say how many lawsuits have been filed against the corporation involving its stores in Idaho or elsewhere. Mentioning numbers would encourage more lawsuits, he says. But he says he hasn't noticed any increase over years in the amount of litigation.

"The number of claims is small compared to the thousands of people who walk into the chain's 2,000 stores nationwide, Blevins says.

Safeway's corporate office keeps a list of "professional slip-and-fallers" — people who file claims in different stores across the country, Blevins says.

He had no figures on how much money suits have cost the company or if product prices had been increased because of lawsuits. The company's insurance costs are based on expenses, which includes the costs of defending litigation, he says.

He did say about 99 percent of the litigation "filed involves" amounts under $100 for items such as torn clothing or ruined shoes from fallen bleach bottles.

Safeway takes the position that it will pay — if it is responsible, he says. But if not, "we are not going to offer anything."

Blevins believes it is unfair for the store to be named a defendant in lawsuits over defective products when the store's only role is the sale of the product.

Unfair or not, lawsuits are an inherent risk of doing business. "It's all part of the risk you take," he says.

For the Sun Valley Co., operating the world-famous ski resort — risk and insurance also are part of a day's business.

During the last three years, liability insurance costs for the resort have risen substantially, says the company's public relations director, Carl Wigfus. The company declined to release specific figures.

Courts are not exclusive provinces for lawyers

Twin Falls man often uses right of access to the courts

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Some defense attorneys may think the name Arlo Kent is synonymous with "frivolous lawsuit."

But to Kent, the lawsuits he has filed — including a multi-million dollar action against the city of Twin Falls — are justified, and not for the purpose of striking it rich.

"I have pretty strong beliefs in the right of access to the courts," says Kent.

Hitting the jackpot with one case, he says, is the "least of my concerns. My rights are basic."

A diesel mechanic, the 54-year-old Twin Falls man frequently makes use of his right of access to the courts. Since 1981, he has filed five civil actions without the aid of lawyer.

The actions include a $4 million lawsuit filed in August 1985 against the city over his claim that a police officer illegally confiscated his son's bike. Kent says he arrived at the $4 million figure for alleged damages after reading legal periodicals.

"Just asking for a million dollars doesn't necessarily mean you'll get it. There's no way I could have," he says. "I just wanted the city to know I was serious."

The case was dismissed in October, partly because Kent failed to file a required notice with the city before he filed the suit.

Kent says the reason he didn't file a notice was because the law book which included the requirement had been checked out from the county law library when he was preparing his suit.

Kent did gain a victory of a sort. The city had asked the court to order Kent to pay $37 for their attorney fees, but Kent filed a motion objecting to the payment. The court sided with him and he ended up paying $25 in costs.

About three months after his lawsuit against the city was dismissed, Kent filed a $100,000 lawsuit against the city.

The second suit, basically containing the same allegations as the first one, included an allegation that the city had ignored his first complaint.

The second suit was also dismissed; this time because he had failed to file a required bond. Kent asked the court to reconsider and a decision now is pending.

Kent says that if he had received what he thought was fairer treatment at the hands of the city, he probably wouldn't have sued. "I tend to be reasonable," Kent says.

But he admits he didn't take his protests about the bike incident any farther than the police officer or the officer's immediate supervisor. Going to court was the only thing he knew was open to him, he says.

He had attempted to find a lawyer to represent him in his claim against the city, but no one seemed interested, Kent says. They suggested that he take up the matter in small claims court. But Kent says it was too important to him to drop.

Twin Falls City Manager Tom Courtney says he didn't know exactly how much money it has cost the city to defend both Kent's actions.

But it was "frivolous" suits like those which resulted in the loss of the city's insurance coverage, eventually leading to the city's formation of a self-insurance program, Courtney says.

Kent is known outside the court system, too.

In January, he challenged the Twin Falls School District about the use of a closed detention "box" at O'Leary Junior High School in which his son had been placed, he says.

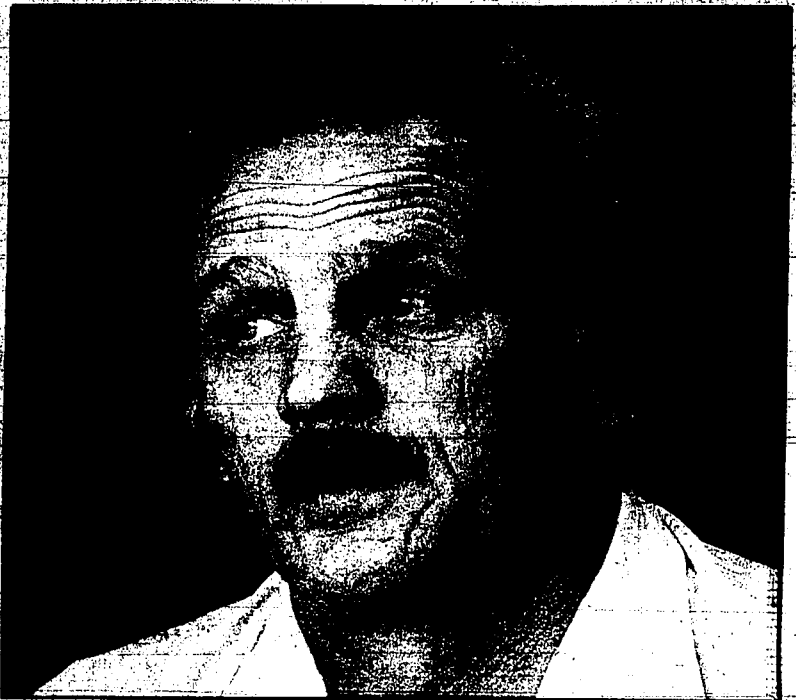

He did file a notice of claim with the school, but didn't seek money. He says he doesn't know if he would ever file a lawsuit in court.

The stark wooden box was later removed. His son didn't want to challenge the school because, he said, he was embarrassed, Kent says. But he proceeded because he felt something had to be done, and he did it himself.

It's not that Kent dislikes lawyers. He says he has sought the services of and has employed attorneys in past court actions, but likes "to speak for himself."

"If (the law profession) seems to be one way to solve a problem, that's the way to go," he says.

Stallings, Richardson tackle welfare

By JANE ROBINSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The two candidates for the 2nd Congressional District race squared off Monday over welfare and workfare and state's rights, with the Democratic incumbent defending states' rights and the Republican challenger calling for federal intervention.

The debate came after Republican candidate Mel Richardson endorsed a workfare program for welfare recipients, calling the present welfare system "inefficient and ineffective."

At his weekly Monday press conference, Richardson said he endorsed a 1985 proposal presented by Rep. New Gingrich, R-Ga., which was later defeated in Congress. The Gingrich amendment called for 75 percent of eligible welfare recipients to be enrolled in workfare programs within three years.

The Gingrich proposal, an amendment to the 1985 Farm Bill, was defeated in October 1985 by a 227-163 vote. Richardson said his opponent Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, "help defeat" the proposal.

Monday, said he voted against the Gingrich amendment because it would have added $240 million in costs to states if approved.

"The choice was very clear — whether to allow states flexibility in employing welfare recipients, or whether to force states to abide by strict performance standards," Stallings said. "It was a very costly program, and in Idaho, we didn't have that kind of money. It would have been foolish."

Richardson said the present welfare system needed to be streamlined to save bureaucratic waste and "put money in the pockets of the poor."

Richardson said a study by the Grace Commission found that a direct, annual payment of $61 billion to the nation's poor would eliminate poverty. "We're spending double that on welfare programs now, and more than half of it is used to administer the programs," Richardson said.

Richardson cited a model workfare program in Massachusetts that was saving $107 million and said it was the "type of program that should be implemented nationwide."

Stallings charged that Richardson's campaign was lacking in consistency.

"Last week he blasted me for supporting the EDA, which didn't let states choose," Stallings said. "This week he's blasting me for voting to allow states to make those decisions. There's no consistency. I wonder if he does have a philosophy."

The Richardson camp also attacked Stallings last week for not having his facts straight. Stallings had defended Economic Development Agency money, saying part of the money went to reopen a Glenns Ferry potato plant.

Richardson's campaign said the money used to reopen the potato plant came out of a community block grant and not the EDA. The point of the fuss was that EDA was federally controlled, while community action money was locally controlled, Richardson's staff said.

The Stallings camp admitted the mistake, but called it a minor error.

"Richardson has made policy statements without doing his research or studying the programs," said Melodi Rydahl, Stallings press secretary. "The congressman just mixed up the agencies when he cited the wrong program. There's no comparison between the two mistakes."

Students in trouble over scavenger hunt

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — At least 25 Jerome High School students found themselves in trouble Monday, after a Saturday-night scavenger hunt got out of hand.

Jerome County Sheriff Elza Hall said the students, their parents and police officers will be called in for a meeting tonight at the Courthouse to discuss plans for making restitution for the collection of numerous items from property owners in the city and county.

"We met today at the school with most of the students and agreed to allow them to put everything back to the satisfaction of property owners and el-ficers," Hall said. "If they do that, we will not file petitions on them."

If the restitution plan works out satisfactorily, all of the participating students will be placed in the county's diversion program and put on probation to county juvenile officers, Hall said.

The scavenger hunt involved collecting everything from highway signs to garden hoses and the license plate from a Federal Bureau of Investigation officer's vehicle. One of the newly planted trees from the downtown Jerome area was also cut off and included in the collection, Hall said.

The sheriff's evidence room was filled Monday with two recovered items.

A mature way to practice birth control is to use self-control

DEAR ABBY: I am 15 and have been going with this guy I'll call Brian for four months. (He's 17.) We are very much in love and need help. We have been having sex regularly and we never once have used any kind of protection. Thank God I haven't ended up pregnant. I want to ask my mom to put me on the pill, but I'm afraid if I do, she will forbid me to see Brian again, then I'd probably end up running away. Brian keeps telling me to ask my mom to put me on the pill, but I'm scared. I'm scared I'll get pregnant, and I'm scared to ask my mom. What should I do?

— SCARED

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR SCARED: First, a boy who uses no protection when he's having sex with a girl doesn't "love" her—he's using her. And a girl who would permit it is a child in a woman's body.

Sex is for mature people who can handle parenthood should they accidentally have a child. You obviously do not qualify. The best birth control is SELF-control, but for me to tell you that you have no business having sex is useless, because you already know it, and are not about to stop because I said so. Y ou can either go on as you are and end up pregnant—which you surely will—or you can tell your mom that you are sexually active, and want to go on the pill. Or you can go to a family planning clinic on your own and learn to protect yourself from an unwanted pregnancy or the possibility of a venereal disease.

I do not approve of sex for children your age, but if you choose to continue, then you MUST protect yourself.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, "Wide Awake" wrote to say that her husband had been talking in his sleep about a "Jean" and a "Marlon," but when she asked him who Jean and Marlon were, he claimed that he didn't know any women by those names.

Abby, both you and "Wide Awake" must have been sound asleep. Her husband could have been referring to men named "Gene" and "Marlon." I personally know three male Marions and innumerable men called "Gene," which is short for "Eugene."

— ROLLAND G. JONES
FROM SOUTH DAKOTA

DEAR MR. JONES: You're right. I shot from the hip. I know several Eugenes who are called "Gene," but only one male Marlon comes to mind. He was born in Iowa in 1907 and was christened Marlon Michael Morrison. He earned a football scholarship at the University of Southern California and played under the name of Marlon Morrison from 1925 to 1927. But Marlon had dreams of being an actor, so he changed his name from Marlon to one he thought would be better suited to his macho image. His dreams came true and he made it big in films: Score: Marlon Morrison, 0; John Wayne, 10.

Centennial car plates in works

BOISE (AP) — Starting after the first of the year, Idaho residents will be able to buy special license plates commemorating the statehood centennial observance in 1900. Idaho became a state on July 3, 1890, and a two-year birthday observance will center on that date.

The new plates won't look like anything in the past. The brand new design features shades of red, white and blue, breaking with the decades-long tradition of green and white plates in Idaho.

"A distinctive design was our goal," said Arthur Hart, retired director of the Idaho Historical Society and a member of the Centennial Committee.

The first of the new plates, which feature an outline of Idaho mountains and a pine tree, will go on the state car of Gov. John Evans.

Then after Jan. 1, Idaho residents will be able to buy the special plates for an extra $25 above any other license costs. The plates will be renewable each year through 1990, the statehood year, for $10 per year. After that, the state plans to go back to the traditional design.

For the first time in many years, Idaho residents with centennial plates will not have a plate promoting the state's largest cash crop, potatoes.

But Evans said potato growers doubtless will recognize the importance of the centennial observance.

"There weren't many potatoes grown in Idaho in 1890," Evans said.

"They're an important product, and we've promoted them since then," Evans said.

Only people who choose to pay the extra $25 will get the special centennial plates. Others will continue with the traditional plates, with county designations and with "Famous Potatoes" across the bottom.

Evans and the others had no estimate on how much money they hope to raise through sale of the special plates, but Evans said it should be a substantial amount.

Blyleven breaks baseball record for gopher balls

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota right-hander Bert Blyleven established a major league record for home run pitching on Monday night, giving up three to the Cleveland Indians to boost his total to 49.

Blyleven broke the old standard of 46 set by Robin Roberts of the Philadelphia Phillies when he gave up a two-out, third-inning homer to Indian rookie Jay Bell.

Bell, who previously was involved in a 1955 trade for Blyleven, hopped on the first pitch he saw in the major leagues and hit it 389 feet into the left field bleachers.

Blyleven then gave up a homer to Joe Carter in the fourth inning and another to Brett Butler in the eighth.

Bell, a former minor leaguer in the Twins' organization, had been traded to Cleveland along with three other players for Blyleven on Aug. 1, 1985.

Blyleven had been tied with Roberts, who allowed 48 home runs in 1956 for the Philadelphia Phillies. Before allowing the home run to Bell, Blyleven had retired the first eight batters in the game. It was also the first ball hit out of the infield off the Twins' right-hander.

It had taken Roberts 297 innings to make the record, while Blyleven broke it in 257 and one-third.

Earlier this season, Blyleven broke the AL record of 43 homers given up by Pedro Ramos of the old Washington Senators in 1957.

Minnesota's Gary Gaetti was the last player to hit a home run on the first pitch of his major league career when he homered on Sept. 20, 1981. Bell is also the third rookie this season to homer in his first at-bat.

Bell, a second baseman, was traded to Cleveland along with pitchers Curt Wardle and Rich Yeti and outfielder Jim Weaver.

Blyleven, 35-14, gave up seven hits overall and emerged the winner when the Twins rallied in the eighth for a 6-5 win.

Leading 5-4, Minnesota rallied in the eighth to pull it out. Kirby Puckett singled, went to third on Garry Gaetti's single and scored on Tom Brunansky's sacrifice fly. With two outs, pinch-hitter Randy Bush singled to score Gaetti with the winning run.

Minnesota took a 2-1 lead in the third on Mickey Hatcher's sacrifice fly and Gaetti's run-scoring single. Carter's two-run homer in the fourth, his 28th, gave the Indians a 3-2 lead. Minnesota took a 4-3 lead in the fourth on two Cleveland errors, but the Indians tied it in the seventh on Pat Tabler's run-scoring grounded out and went ahead in the eighth on Butler's fourth homer.

Kansas City 2 California 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — George Brett doubled home the winning run and Mark Gubicza scored eight hits through 6 1/2 innings Monday night to give Kansas City a 2-1 victory over the California Angels.

Gubicza, who began the season 0-4, raised his record to 11-6. The right-hander had four strikeouts and one walk while outdueling Angels starter Urbano Lugo, 1-1.

Bud Black relieved Gubicza in the seventh and picked up his eighth save.

Texas 3 Oakland 0

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Edwin Correa and Jeff Russell combined on a four-hitter and Pete Incaviglia hit his 28th home run as the Texas Rangers beat the Oakland A's 3-0 Monday night.

Correa, 12-13, went six innings and allowed one hit, a two-out single by Rusty Tillman in the second. The rookie right-hander ran his consecutive scoreless inning streak to 23 1/2 before leaving the game complaining of stiffness above the right elbow.

Russell came on at the start of the seventh, gave up a single to Bruce Roche, the first batter he faced, then pitched a shutout ball the rest of the way to earn his second save.

Oakland left-hander Curt Young, 12-9, took the loss despite giving up only three hits. Two of the runs against him were unearned.

N.Y. Yankees 8 Toronto 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Dennis Rasmussen pitched a six-hitter and Ron Kittle hit his 21st home run of the year Monday night, leading the New York Yankees to an 8-1 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

The Yankees moved into second place in the American League East, a half-game ahead of Toronto.

Don Mattingly, who is battling Boston's Wade Boggs for the AL batting crown, went 0-for-3 with a sacrifice fly and an intentional walk, dropping his average to .349.

Dave Winfield's two-run single highlighted a five-run seventh, giving Winfield 101 runs batted in this year. Winfield became the first Yankee to drive in 100 or more runs for five consecutive years since Joe DiMaggio did it seven straight times from 1936 to 1942.

Rasmussen, 17-6, pitched his third complete game, allowing the only Toronto run on a one-out homer by Willie Upshaw in the ninth, his ninth of the season.

Chicubs 8 Philadelphia 3

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Greg Maddux won a battle of sibling rookies Monday night, beating brother Mike and pitching the Chicago Cubs to an 8-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Baseball

Jody Davis went 4-for-5 and drove in five runs to back the 20-year-old right-hander Greg, 24, who allowed nine hits over 7 1/2 innings. Greg Maddux struck out seven and did not walk a batter, holding the Phillies scoreless until Glenn Wilson drove in a run with a single in the sixth inning.

Mike, 25 years old and also a right-hander, gave up three runs on six hits in three innings as his record fell to 3-7.

The last time brothers pitched against each other was on Sept. 18, 1982, when Joe Niekro of Houston defeated brother Phil of Atlanta, 5-4. It was believed that the Maddux matchup was the first involving brothers who both were rookies.

Davis hit a three-run homer in the fifth inning, then drove in two more runs with a single in the ninth. Both RBI hits came after Leon Durham was walked intentionally.

Boston 7 Baltimore 5

BOSTON (AP) — Wade Boggs drove in three runs with a double and a single and raised his American League-leading batting average to

.353 as the Boston Red Sox beat the Baltimore Orioles 7-5 Monday night.

Boston, which clinched the AL East title Sunday, scored the game's first three runs in the second inning and never trailed despite several Baltimore comebacks.

Boggs, who started the game batting .352, went 2-for-4, to take a four-point lead in the AL batting race over New York's Don Mattingly, who dropped to .349. Mattingly went 0-for-3 in New York's 8-1 victory over Toronto.

Al Nipper, 10-11, got the victory for the Red Sox, who won for the 20th time in their last 27 games. John Habyan, 1-3, was the loser as the Orioles suffered their eighth loss in nine games.

Habyan walked Boston's first two batters, Jim Rice and Don Baylor, in the second. They moved to second and third on a groundout and Rice scored on Tony Armas's sacrifice fly.

Marc Sullivan then reached first on shortstop Cal Ripken's two-out throwing error. Spike Owen walked and Boggs hit a two-run double.

The first of Eddie Murray's three doubles, after a single by Ken Gerhart and a double by Ripken, cut Boston's lead to 3-2 in the top of the third.

Boggs improved the Red Sox lead to 4-2 in the fourth with an RBI single, but Baltimore got that run back in the fifth when John Shelby singled, stole second and scored on Murray's ground-rule double.

'Terrible' takes on new meaning for Steelers

By ALAN ROBINSON
By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Now the joke is that the terrible towel has been replaced by the terrible team.

"You can't get any worse than we are right now," said Pittsburgh Steelers' running back Walter Abernethy, "but it's at the bottom."

"It's bad," said receiver John Stallworth, one of just three veterans left from the championship days when fans waved black-and-white "terrible towels" at their four-time Super Bowl heroes.

"Times are bad, real bad."

How bad?

The Steelers have managed 17 points in three games. They've opened with three consecutive losses for the first time since 1970, and two of the defeats — to Seattle (30-0) and Minnesota (31-7) — were blowouts.

The team first once combined the brittle running of Franco Harris, the current MVP, and a quarterback, Terry Bradshaw and an outstanding defense now struggles to keep the score respectable. The running game has slowed to a crawl and not only can't the Steelers run, they can't hide.

Quarterback Mark Malone, the target of increasing fan hostility, has had more passes batted off the turf or his receivers' hands than he has completed. His quarterback rating of 28.7 translates into a baseball-batting average of about .100.

The Steelers' secondary, weakened by a season-ending injury to cornerback Duane Woodruff, is a shambles, contrary Harvey Clayton has already been "burned" for four touchdowns. The running backs are averaging a scant 2.9 yards per carry and Malone has thrown eight interceptions and only one touchdown pass.

"The conclusion is that we've got to improve as a football team in all areas, or the prospects for a single victory might be in trouble," Coach Chuck Noll said. "All we're asking our guys to do each week is get a little better, but there has been no improvement. We've gotten worse."

Even Noll, who owns the 40 Super Bowl playoff appearances, has been subjected to fan and media discontent for his alleged reluctance to bench unproductive players.

Noll himself is concerned that if

Browns game crucial to Pittsburgh's season

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers' season hinges on whether Coach Chuck Noll can lead his team to a victory over the Cleveland Browns on Sunday. Noll said Monday that the Browns' offense is "one of the best in the league" and that the Steelers must play five NFL playoff games to reach the Super Bowl. After three weeks, the Steelers played impressively well in the first two games, but the Browns' offense is "one of the best in the league" and that the Steelers must play five NFL playoff games to reach the Super Bowl.

But despite Noll's protests to the contrary, the intense desire that was the hallmark of Steeler stars like Joe Greene, Jack Lambert and Bradshaw seems to be missing from the 1986 Steelers.

Non-playing members of the team's traveling party were surprised when some players seemingly shrugged off the Seattle loss during the flight back to Pittsburgh.

"You wouldn't have seen guys laughing and joking, playing cards when Joe Greene and Jack Lambert were around. Those guys took it personal when they lost," said one Steelers' official who asked not to be identified.

The Steelers have lost seven of their last nine regular-season games, and are a world 8-13 since upsetting Denver to reach the American Conference championship game in 1984.

"The improvement has to come from everybody," Noll said. "If everybody becomes a little bit better, the cumulative effect is great. But all kinds of little things have hurt us."

The Steelers' tumble from the top has resulted from years of selecting late in the NFL draft and the failure of recent high draft picks to develop into top players.

Fans have criticized the team for failing to make trades, for not signing USFL players and for not taking more gambles in the draft — such as passing up promising but sore-footed running back Keith Byars last spring.

But some team officials say the opposite is true, that the Steelers have been burned by drafting too many players such as defensive linemen Keith Gary and Darryl Sims, who possessed pro-level physical talent but weren't star-quality college players.

"The guys who had good ability but were mediocre in college have been the same with us, mediocre," said Art Rooney Jr., chief of the Steelers' scouting department.

The Steelers' draft failures were glaringly apparent in 1983, when quarterbacks Dan Marino, who played at Pitt, Todd Blackledge of Penn State and Jim Kelly, from nearby East Brady, were among the selections.

Zheng, Miyazaki favored in Games 'fastest Asian' sprint

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Sprinters will battle for the title of "Asia's fastest human" Tuesday when China and Japan meet overall leaders of the 10th Asian Games, also favored in the glamorous 100-meter men's event.

In heats for this sprint Monday, China's Zheng Chen and Japan's Hirofumi Miyazaki both were clocked at 10.57 seconds. Zheng so far is considered Asia's fastest, holding the record at 10.28.

The final week of the 27-nation Asiad undoubtedly will see continued domination by China, Japan and South Korea.

Entering the 11th of 16 days of competition, China has amassed 49 golds, 51 silvers and 27 bronzes. Japan has 43 golds, 47 silvers and 46 bronzes, and the South Koreans are closing the gap with the Japanese at 35 golds, 33 silvers and 45 bronzes.

On Monday, the South Korean men's field hockey team dined Olympic champion Pakistan 2-1. Pakistan had won two medals in that event during the last four Asiad Games. It was South Korea's first medal in Asian Games field hockey since it won a bronze in 1958.

Also unexpected Monday was South Korea's upset of defending champion and world badminton power China. The men's team dominated the Chinese 5-0. The Chinese women, however, shut out Japan 5-0 for the women's team title.

China began its track and field drive Monday by capturing golds in the women's javelin and long jump and the men's 20-kilometer walk.

Japan's Masanari Shintaku sped to an Asian Games record of 28 minutes-26.74 seconds in the men's 1000-meter steeplechase.

China led all the way to win the 20-kilometer walk in another Games record of 1:25:48.

China's record holder Li Baolun of China threw the javelin 194 feet, 11 inches to win the women's event, in the women's long jump; China's Liao Wenfen won the gold with a leap of 40-10.

South Korea's star archer Kim Jin-ho set the third world archery record of the Games, this time in the 60-meter women's double round.

Kim scored a two-of-a-kind of 679, two points above Soviet archer I. Soldatova's old record of 671, set in 1985. This gave Kim Jin-ho the gold medal for the 60-meter distance.

Japan, China and South Korea each won one gold in the other single-distance events Monday. Two Asian records also fell.

Yachting ended with Pakistan taking its first Asian Games gold in the Enterprise class. Park Gil-Chul and 13-year-old Park Chong-Woo gave South Korea two golds in the two one-man classes, Laser and Optimist Dinghy.

China's Qi Jianguo won in windsurfing, called Division II class, and another Chinese gold came in the two-man 470 class.

In fencing, China captured gold medals in the men's sabre and women's foil team events, raising its gold medal total to four in this sport.

In weightlifting, South Korea's Hwang Woo-won broke an Asian record in the 100-kilogram (220-pound) division with a total of 350 kilograms (774 pounds).

The old mark, set by Iran's A. Majidi last year, was 355 (783 pounds).

Thailand won the five-man team bowling while Japan's Hiroshi Ishihara captured the men's all-events title. Olivia "Bong" Garcia of the Philippines led to victory in the women's all events.

The losing continues — the Steelers still must play five NFL playoff games, including Super Bowl winner Chicago and loser New England — as the mounting pressure could be catastrophic.

"We've got a lot of guys who are tight right now," Noll said. "Guys who want to win so badly, and they're tightening up more and more

Spinks HBO pullout due to South Africa

NEW YORK (AP) — Promoter Butch Lewis is going to withdraw Michael Spinks from HBO heavyweight championship unification series, Don King, Lewis' partner in the series, said Monday.

Lewis has called a news conference for 11:30 a.m. Wednesday in New York.

The news conference's purpose, according to an announcement from Lewis' office, is for Spinks and Lewis to make "a very significant and dramatic announcement concerning their immediate career plans, their involvement in the $20 million HBO heavyweight unification series and their efforts regarding the modern day Holocaust taking place in apartheid South Africa."

"The announcement will have ramifications in the world of business, sports and politics."

Apartheid will be the reason given by Lewis for leaving the tournament, King said.

Under the series format, Spinks could end up fighting for the undisputed title against the champion of the HBO series, which recognizes South Africa.

But, King said, apartheid will no longer be an excuse available to Lewis.

"The World Boxing Association will take action against South Africa at its convention at Reno, Nev., Oct. 23, James Binns, WBA counsel, said by phone from his Philadelphia office.

"We're going to suspend relations with South Africa," Binns said. "It will have no vote and we will not sanction title fights in South Africa until apartheid is abolished."

"We have every confidence it (a resolution) will be passed unanimously," he said.

Binns said, however, "We cannot penalize South African fighters." They would be allowed to fight for WBA titles, but not in South Africa.

"Come Wednesday everyone will know why I'm holding the press conference," said Lewis, who is Spinks' close friend and advisor.

"Everyone's assuming things. I'll let them know Wednesday."

"I'm under a lot of pressure."

"I know he's trying to get out of it," said King, who is promoting the unification series with Lewis as Dynamic Duo, Inc.

"He don't want to fight Mike Tyson."

Tyson, an unbeaten power puncher, will challenge Trevor Berbick for the World Boxing Council title in the 22 and count to Spinks' opponent instead of the WBA champion, who currently is Tim Witherspoon.

"In the back of his mind is a fight with Gerry Cooney without sharing with Mike Tyson," King charged.

"He's going to cloak his reason in apartheid. He got all his little fights in first and got his money. Now he's trying to get out on a moral issue."

Michael Spinks defended a WBA title for five years.

Spinks was WBA light heavyweight champion from 1980 through 1982, then was recognized as champion by the WBA, WBC and International Boxing Federation until he won the IBF heavyweight title in 1985. Two of his title defenses were part of what is to be the eight-fight unification series.

But if Spinks remains in the series, there are still stumbling blocks to a unification fight.

In the series, Spinks is not to fight again until he meets the winner of fight between the WBA and WBC champions.

But Bob Lee, IBF president, said Spinks must make a mandatory defense by, or about, Jan. 15 against the highest available IBF contender, Tony Tucker is No. 1.

And Lee said he is far as the unification series: "We are not eager to get involved with the WBC or WBA. We would sit down and talk about it (a unification fight). We owe that to the fighters."

While Spinks has performed twice in the HBO series, Lee said the IBF is not involved in it.

"I've never been presented any formal," he said. "I've never been consulted by HBO."

If possible, Spinks, by withdrawing from the HBO series, could get a big-money defense against Cooney before the IBF's Jan. 15 deadline, then retire.

But he's very interested to see what Butch has to say," Dennis Rappaport, Cooney's manager, said. "There've been no negotiations. I haven't spoken to Butch in a couple of weeks."

But any attempt to get out of the series by Lewis and Spinks probably will lead to legal action by HBO, which has paid about $20 million, and the Nevada Hilton Corp., which has paid more than $10 million, for five of the series fights to be held at the Las Vegas Hilton. So far, two have been held.

Advertisement for Intermountain Gas featuring a smiling sun icon and text: 'You'll smile when you switch from electric to gas heat!'. It lists benefits for Gas Heat, Electric Heat, and Heat Pumps, along with financing options like 'No Money Down Financing', '$100.00 Early Bird Bonus', '$200.00 Cash Rebate', and a 'Free Pocket Calculator'.

Micron lists another quarterly loss. BOISE (AP) - Micron Technology Inc., the Boise-based computer chip maker who has battled the Japanese over dumping, has reported a $38 million fourth quarter loss.

HEATING AT ITS BEST. Provides the ultimate in economy, convenience and comfort. High efficiency means lower heating bills. Maintenance costs are lower, too. Today's gas furnaces are so dependable that most have warranties up to 20 years.
