Trail becomes historic route

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has completed action on legislation granting National Historic Trail designation to the 1,170-mile route used by Nez Perce Indians in their 1877 trek to flee the U.S. Army and settle in Canada.

The legislation cleared the House this week after Senate passage in August, said Sen. James McClure. It now goes to the White House.

"The Nez Perce route marks a significant event in the history of Idaho and the West," said McClure.

The legislation authorizes $50,000 to pay for improvements to the trail, such as marking the route, upgrading trails and constructing new trails and campsites.

The improvements will be funded through the Forest Service, but not before the fiscal 1988 budget.

Portions of 447 miles of the route are considered potential high-use segments, McClure said, and will be developed for cultural and historical identification and recreation use.

Miners to receive retraining

BOISE (AP) — Miners at the Sunshine and Hecla mines in northern Idaho's Silver Valley who lost their jobs in recent layoffs have become eligible for federal job retraining programs.

Gov. John Evans said Wednesday the Department of Employment has approved special retraining and job search assistance under the Trade Readjustment Act.

Scott McDonald, state employment director, said the act provides money for retraining, job searches, extended unemployment benefits and relocation expense for U.S. workers unemployed due to foreign imports.

Evans said the retraining money will help minimize the impact of mine shutdowns on the Silver Valley.

Mayor's son fined, sentenced

BLACKFOOT (AP) — Robert Dean Hill, the son of the city's mayor, has been sentenced to 180 days in jail and fined $290 in connection with a shooting incident a month ago at the Bingham County Courthouse in Blackfoot.

Hill, 23, pleaded guilty in mid-September to firing shots at the courthouse.

Magistrate Robert Brower suspended 90 days of the jail term and placed Hill on probation for a year on the condition that he complete an inpatient rehabilitation program recommended by his probation officer, refrain from drinking alcohol and taking drugs and stay out of taverns.

In addition to the fine, Brower ordered Hill on Tuesday to pay $120 for the cost of his public defender and contribute $10 to the state Crime Victims Compensation Fund.

Jones warns of loan scams

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Residents should be wary when anyone approaches them and asks for an advance loan brokerage fee for arranging a loan, Attorney General Jim Jones says.

Jones said Wednesday that except in certain specified situations, it is not proper for a loan broker to ask for or receive a loan brokerage fee unless the loan is actually made.

He said at least one Idaho farmer, hard-pressed to arrange farm-operating loans, have reported paying up-front "broker fees" of $3,500 each, but still haven't received a loan.

"The alarm bells should ring if a person is asked to pay a loan fee before the loan is made or before a binding commitment is in hand," Jones said.

"Unless the prospective lender is checked out and found to be operating in accordance with Idaho's advance fee loan statute, the brokerage fee may be money down the drain," said Jones.

Jones said several advance fee loan scams have been proposed to Idaho residents, especially farmers who may be having a hard time arranging loans.

Crime team's work successful

BOISE (AP) — City, county and federal law enforcement officers arrested 112 people and cleared 153 felony warrants during September in the Ada County area's first Fugitive Investigative Strike Team operation.

"This was incredibly successful," said John Pasuccelli, an inspector with the U.S. Marshals Service.

The first operation by the Marshals Service, Boise Police Department and Ada County Sheriff's Department was aimed at reducing the backlog of more than 1,300 outstanding felony warrants in Ada County, Sheriff Vaughan Killen said.

The month-long project, including a sting operation Tuesday night that netted one man wanted for second-degree burglary, cost an estimated $4,000, or about $13 per arrest. Killen said that was far less than the cost of pursuing most felony warrants.

But authorities conceded that the majority of the people arrested for crimes ranging from murder and rape to grand theft and counterfeiting already had been released from custody.

Kirkpatrick to help Symms

BOISE (AP) — Jeanne J. Kirkpatrick, the first woman to serve as chief U.S. representative to the United Nations, will campaign in Idaho Oct. 11 for Republican Sen. Steve Symms.

Kirkpatrick will speak at a Boise convention center for Symms at 7 p.m.

Mesa Falls land swap advances

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Completion of the land exchange that will allow the preservation of scenic Mesa Falls in eastern Idaho has been approved by the endorsement by the House Interior Committee of legislation intended to resolve problems surrounding the swap.

"Without congressional action and support the Mesa Falls land exchange could have been delayed for several more years," Democratic Congressman Richard Stallings said after Wednesday's committee vote on his proposal.

The bulk of the exchange for the 160-acre tract around the 114-foot upper falls occurred several weeks ago. But two parcels to be turned over to a Montana Power Co. subsidiary by the Targhee National Forest for the remaining 40 acres were tied up in a lawsuit over the Interior Department's policy of revoking federal land withdrawals.

The legislation winning committee support on Wednesday will permit the government to revoke the specific land withdrawals needed to complete the Mesa Falls deal.

The bill is similar authority for lands in Arizona and Nevada. Approval by both the full House and the Senate is still required.

Those and other federally-owned parcels have been the focus of the lawsuit brought against the Interior Department by the National Wildlife Federation and Rep. John Stenholm, D-Ohio. Stenholm was a part of the negotiations leading to the special legislation.

"It takes those lands out of the case so we can get on with our own business," Stallings said.

Andrus, Leroy duck long-range solutions

Both gubernatorial candidates, David Leroy and Cecil Andrus, are touting economic plans to help Idaho progress, but from what we can tell, both are more interested in short-term solutions than in long-range ones.

A Wall Street Journal article this week focuses attention on the West's loss of economic strength by too great a reliance on natural resources, from which there is likely to be little recovery in the foreseeable future.

Too little internal economic development has left Idaho scrambling to replace dwindling federal funds and hemorrhaging export markets. What's needed are home-grown jobs and industries, but a mediocre educational system isn't providing the people for leadership needed to create them.

Instead, our best and brightest, young people, recognizing the obvious weaknesses in Idaho's university system, are leaving to attend college out of state. How many are likely to return?

Neither Andrus nor Leroy is dealing with the solutions to this problem. Why? Political expediency.

They know we can't afford four universities. They know we have to eliminate duplication. They know we have to consolidate schools at the local level. But it is not politically wise to say so. God, they might offend someone.

There are no short cuts to excellence in education. We all know kids need to be in school for longer days, for a longer year; that they need to take tougher courses, that the "C" average rule, if anything, doesn't go far enough. But we accept less than best.

Lowering standards in our schools will only lower expectations and ultimately performance.

The burden falls on each of us. Instead of a system which breeds mediocrity, we need one which raises standards, in our businesses, government institutions and schools.

If we want Idahoans to have a better life — meaning something beyond having another snowmobile or three-wheeler in the yard — we will have to work and sacrifice for it.

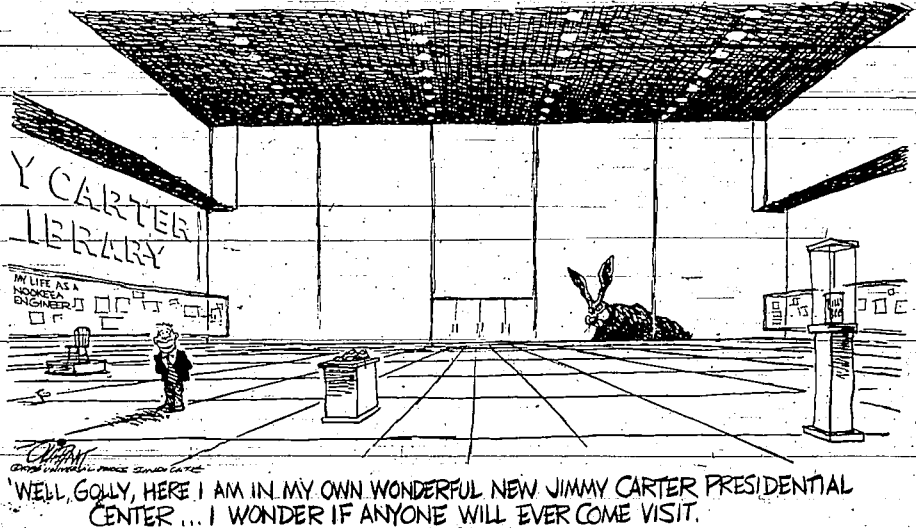

But few people want to do that, and no candidate would dare use the word "sacrifice" in anything less than the rhetorical sense. Remember what happened to Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale.

Raise your taxes? Not me. Close a university? Not me. Drop duplication? Not me. Consolidate schools? Not me.

The candidates yab about "Jobs, Now" and propose shifting taxes from one place to another to pay for it.

But neither addresses how we get beyond the pervasive mediocrity. Neither sets a course for excellence; when all is said and done, both want things to remain pretty much as they are.

Each cites all sorts of reasons why we should elect him. But neither cites the mediocrity which is all around us, nor offers any idea on how it can be overcome. Meanwhile, our best young people are "voting with their feet."

Confident employers needed in Idaho

John Parrish

The Idaho Legislature passed the right to work law in January, 1985, which was then treated to a veto stamp from Gov. John Evans. The bill then returned to the Capitol Building, where the House voted 55 to 18 to overturn the veto, and the Senate split along party lines to overturn the veto with a 28 to 14 vote.

A right to work law simply means that no worker may be forced to join a union in order to hold a job in Idaho. An employee may join a union if he or she wishes, but cannot be forced to do so.

The right of states to enact right to work laws banning the union shop is provided by Section 14-B of the Taft Hartley Act of 1947, which has been amended numerous times. About 20 states have taken advantage of it to enact such laws. So far most of these are in the South and West.

To understand the meaning of right to work, it is necessary to consider the various types of labor-management contracts. Under a "closed shop" and a "union shop," an employer can hire only union workers and must hire them through the union. Jobs are closed to non-union workers.

This type of compulsory unionism is outlawed under national labor policy in the Taft-Hartley Act as amended.

A second type of shop is the "union shop." Under a union shop contract between an employer and a union, the employer may hire whom ever he wishes, but the new employee must join the union within 30 days — even if he does not wish to do so — or be dismissed. The union is open, that is, it must accept as a member any worker hired by the employer. This is also compulsory unionism.

Under a right to work law, unionism is voluntary for the worker. The employer is free to sign a collective bargaining contract with a union if desired. But if most of the workers are non-union, there is no compulsion to do so.

There are many reasons why some employers prefer to work under laws which ban compulsory unionism.

Unions are organized to push wages ever higher, and hours ever lower. If productivity lags, then unit costs rise; prices rise and the employer's competitive position may be jeopardized.

Work rules which result in overmanning and underworking, with adverse effects on productivity and competitive position, are the result of unions pushing for these rules.

Unions with the power of compulsory unionism want higher and higher fringe benefits, which raise costs and prices, and hence, may weaken competitive position. In some union firms, fringe costs are about 50 percent of total unit labor costs.

Where unions have union shops, they use the threat of strikes for a grievance structure in which union members are relieved of hourly work and paid by the company to process grievances. This has proven to be very expensive. These unions may try to obtain industry-wide or region-wide bargaining contracts.

This simplifies collective bargaining, but results in high costs and higher prices to consumers, without regard to the needs of individual firms. Since 1980 these monopoly contracts have been breaking down under competitive pressures.

Where applicable, union shops have worked for automatic wage gains under seniority schedules. The $3 an hour lettuce handler starting out in a supermarket may get $10 an hour eight years later for doing the same work. This automatic wage escalation, with no increase in productivity, has proven disastrous for many firms.

Unions argue that compulsory unionism is needed to prevent "free riders," or some workers benefiting from the bargaining efforts of the union, but who then refuse to pay dues to support the union.

Employers reply that if a union is badly led, there will be no benefit in belonging to the union, and workers should decide for themselves if there are, or are not, benefits.

Further, employers point out that recent court decisions have revealed only about 20 percent of union dues are used for collective bargaining.

The other 80 percent are used for political activities, convention costs, union officer entertainment, etc.

Unions oppose right to work laws because they say employers may arbitrarily dismiss workers. They have no protection under grievance procedures.

Employers reply this is a phony argument. Any employer who dismisses competent, good-attendance workers in whom he has put expensive training dollars, for no reason at all, won't be in business very long. His good workers will leave.

Officers of unions also argue that under right to work, employers will exploit workers and pay them very low wages, far below their real worth.

Employers counter that, except in a very depressed labor market, such personnel policy would be self-defeating. They point out that due to higher efficiency, non-union plants often pay much more than union plants. If they paid far below union rates, they would suffer high costs due to high labor turnover.

Since 1981 a number of Idaho's basic industries (lumber, mining and agriculture) have been under great stress from a variety of conditions. There is need for alternative job opportunities in Idaho.

Employers supporting right to work legislation argue there is a need to encourage cost-consciousness to create more jobs in new industries and services. These employers contend an Idaho right to work law will provide those employers with confidence and the freedom necessary to innovate and invest in new ventures.

New set of heroes needed

Prime Minister Nakasone of Japan managed to stir up the natives to no small degree with his press campaign. It addressed remarks comparing literacy and intelligence between his country and the U.S. Instead of being insulted, it's just possible that we should have realized Nakasone is simply telling it like it is, and thanked him for reminding us of our deficiencies.

A few years ago, when "A Nation at Risk" and similar studies indicated an alarming degree of functional illiteracy in our society, steps were taken to address the problem. Today, school administrators all over the country are telling us the problem cannot be solved. For example, the "C" average requirement for high school graduation is said to be unattainable. The educators now want to modify the standards or drop the requirement, contending that there are simply too many high school students who are incapable of maintaining the "C" average.

This is hogwash. If the Japanese, to say nothing of the Europeans, can produce a better-educated population, it is utterly ridiculous to claim that it can't be done here. Go to any locality where significant numbers of Asian refugees have located in the past 15 years or so — an examination of school records will show that the so-called "boat people," even when faced with the handicaps of the language barrier, consistently break into the upper achievement levels, while the same people who have always occupied the bottom rungs of the ladder are still there. Does this mean that Cambodians, Laotians and Viet Namese are "smarter" than Americans? Not really.

When Congress imposed the double nickel in 1974, the 55-mile limit had a rational purpose. This was at the peak of the Arab oil embargo, and fuel conservation was a national cause. Sometime in the future, if a 55-mile limit again could be defended.

The double nickel is indefensible now. Under the Senate's proposal, sponsored chiefly by Idaho's Steve Symms, the states would be authorized to set speed limits up to 65 miles per hour on interstate highways located outside of an urbanized area of 50,000 population or more.

That makes sense. On the congested interstates of New Jersey, jammed with hundreds of thousands of cars a day, a 55-mile limit is acceptable. It's a different story out native intelligence is no higher among Orientals than among, say, Swedes or Frenchmen. It would seem to indicate that Asians have done a better job of sorting priorities.

Who is to blame? Certainly not the educational system — there is more educational opportunity available in the U.S. today than ever before in history; certainly not the poor, who devote 90 percent of his or her energy to simply maintaining some sense of order in the slum. So if you really want to know why Johnny can't read, go home with him after school; it will soon be apparent.

Before a society can be better informed, it must want to be better informed. Even among the lower echelons, the kids are remarkably knowledgeable about Madonna, Michael Jackson and Rambo. Unfortunately they know less about Wm. Rehnquist or Casper Weinberger.

What Americans need most in the "catch-up" game is a new and different set of heroes, with Albert Einstein's name at the top of the list.

Courageous stand lauded

I would like to congratulate the Twin Falls and Castleford school districts for having the courage to publicly state that they will not conform to the new "C-Average" regulation. I commend their willingness to publicly confront the political dictates of the State when they perceive them to be educationally unsound.

The comment of KIV News (9-25-86) was that these school districts do not have the authority to refuse. My response is to ask,

"What would happen if all the school districts in Idaho refused to submit to this political dictate?"

Perhaps such an action would be an effective way of letting the politicians know that we in education are tired of being their political footfall.

I ask parents, "Who do you want in charge of your schools; the educators you trust to look after your children's interests, or those in Boise motivated by political interests?"

I encourage all school districts in Idaho to join Twin Falls and Castleford in this courageous stand, and I am proud that Wendell School District has already passed a resolution supporting Twin Falls.

Senate drops double nickel, strikes blow for common sense

WASHINGTON — The Senate struck a blow for common sense and sound government when it voted on Sept. 23 to drop the double nickel. On certain rural interstate highways, the 55-mile per hour speed limit may soon be a thing of the past.

When Congress imposed the double nickel in 1974, the 55-mile limit had a rational purpose. This was at the peak of the Arab oil embargo, and fuel conservation was a national cause. Sometime in the future, if a 55-mile limit again could be defended.

The double nickel is indefensible now. Under the Senate's proposal, sponsored chiefly by Idaho's Steve Symms, the states would be authorized to set speed limits up to 65 miles per hour on interstate highways located outside of an urbanized area of 50,000 population or more.

That makes sense. On the congested interstates of New Jersey, jammed with hundreds of thousands of cars a day, a 55-mile limit is acceptable. It's a different story out

James Kilpatrick

West. The Wyoming motorist who takes I-80 east out of Rawlins is likely to see no more traffic than four rabbits loping toward Cheyenne. The Symms amendment leaves it to state officials, familiar with local traffic conditions, to decide what is appropriate on rural interstates in their own states. Such decisions lie at the very heart of federalism.

During the Senate debate, statistics ricocheted like handballs off the chamber walls. Defenders of the double nickel repeatedly cited a study by the Transportation Research Board that reached a highly conjectural conclusion: The 55-mile limit was responsible for preventing 2,000 to 4,000 highway fatalities a year between 1974 and 1984. In this 10-year period, the death rate per 100 million miles of travel dropped from 4.24 to 2.48. We may all be thankful for the drop.

As they apply to the Symms amendment, the figures have little relevance. Highway death rates per 100 million miles have been dropping ever since Henry Ford produced the Tin Lizzie. True, the death rate dropped sharply in the year after the 55-mile limit was imposed, but the rate has dropped sharply in other years when the speed limit has remained unchanged.

To argue that the double nickel alone has saved all these hypothetical lives is to engage in hocus-pocus. Dozens of factors have played an indeterminate role. Young drivers are better educated; automobiles are structurally safer; highways are better engineered; tires are less prone to blowouts; drunk driving statutes have been more strictly enforced; the use of seat belts has steadily increased. Doubtless a slower average speed has contributed to the saving of some lives. Beyond that reasonable surmise we get into pure conjecture.

The 55-mile limit on rural interstates promotes a contempt for law. Studies by highway engineers, using speed sensors embedded in roadways, indicate that 85 percent of the interstate motorists flout the law. In many states the effective speed limit on these highways is 65 and everyone knows it. It is a ridiculous waste of time and manpower for state troopers to attempt rigid enforcement of a law so widely disdained.

The Transportation Research Board estimated that the 55-mile limit costs 1 billion additional hours of passenger time every year. That figure is as shaky as some of the other figures. Even so, a great deal of time obviously is lost because of the limit, and time has economic value.

Nebraska's Sen. James Exon provided some data that were a little more solid. During 1985, Nebraska recorded 207 fatal highway accidents. Of these, only seven occurred on the interstate system. In not one of those fatal accidents was speed cited as a contributing cause. In the nation as a whole, police in 1984 counted 39,622 deaths on the highways, but more than 90 percent of them occurred on primary and secondary roads.

If the tradition of federalism were to be purely observed in this area, Congress would make no attempt to fix a nationwide speed limit. Ideally, it is contended, states should be free to fix any limit they wish — or as on the autobahns of Europe, no limit at all. I don't buy that argument. The interstates have been found to have "federal" standards, and Congress has power under the Commerce Clause to set conditions on how those dollars are used. The Symms selective ceiling of 65 miles per hour is a reasonable compromise between federal authority and state discretion. This is a law that most of us can willingly obey.

Time to take a stand against immorality

I have never written to the editor before, but after seeing Sunday's column I decided I needed to start. Gerry Trudeau has never been a favorite of mine and after the strip he ran Sunday, he never will be. I am on Dr. James Dobson's mailing list. Dr. Dobson served on the Meese Commission, appointed by the attorney general to investigate and make recommendations regarding the pornography industry. In his latest newsletter, he states that the public relations firm of Gray & Company in Washington, D.C. has been hired by the pornography industry to discredit and undermine the Meese Commission's report and recommendations. This firm informed the pornography industry they should plan on incurring charges of $50,000-$70,000 per month initially, to combat this report. The pornography industry granted Gray & Company $90,000 to wage the war. I'm wondering if part of that money didn't find its way to Mr. Trudeau. I, for one, applaud and appreciate the 7-Eleven store management who took a stand and then backed that stand with action by removing pornographic material from their stores. They can count on my business from now on.

I would urge those of you who care about the future of this great country of ours and about our children's future to join me in showing 7-Eleven we appreciate their stand for morality and decency.

The Lord will not allow his moral laws to be flouted forever and someday we will answer to him as a nation and as individuals.

The filth that this industry is flooding us with will undermine and destroy our families if we do not rise up and take a stand against it.

Idaho native Gulick best choice for seat
In this Fall's election we will have the opportunity to elect a new state representative for Twin Falls County, District 23A. With our sagging farm and business economy it is more important than ever that we elect an experienced and qualified individual who knows us and can effectively represent our interests in Boise.

I ask myself then, why is a man by the name of Ron Black running for this office. I understand that Mr. Black is a newcomer to this area, residing in Twin Falls County only three years after having lived in four-to-five different states.

In my opinion, his career experience looks a bit unstable for someone in his forties and running for state office. For 20 years he worked in four different stores ranging from K-Mart to a flower market. He obtained a two-year degree in horticulture from Rick's College just five years ago, now runs a day care center in his home and is majoring in management technology?

What does this guy want to be when he grows up? If he is so indecisive about his own life, what kind of leadership can we expect him to provide for us?

Sally Gulick is a native of Idaho, born and raised in Twin Falls County. She is a small farmer and has owned and operated a small business here in Twin Falls for 18 years. Sally knows the people of Twin Falls, their problems and the solutions to them. I know she will do a good job for us in Boise. I hope you join me in voting for Sally this November.

Unions aid economy in Idaho, elsewhere

This letter is in regards to the fellow that said the unions hurt the economy. In my opinion the unions help the economy a great deal. If the people of Idaho vote in this right to work law, they themselves are hurting the economy.

The only thing this right to work law is going to do is line the pockets of the businessmen. I myself would prefer to pay a few dollars in order to get a good wage.

Mr. Britt Pugh said that the unions are responsible for the economy's depression. That is the biggest joke of the year. It isn't the unions that keep passing laws to send millions of our American dollars to the foreign countries to keep them afloat. There are people and families right here in Idaho that could use the millions we are sending to the Philippines. They are willing to see that the other countries are taken care of. But they are willing to let the people here work for nothing. I don't see the congressmen or the senators or the president take a cut in their wages.

Sally should we? Why don't they come down to our level of pay and see how they would like to live with a wage that doesn't even begin to compare with the price of groceries or clothing?

Everyone is out to break the unions and the farmers. I just hope that if they get the job done they are pleased with themselves. For they are hurting their own people.

I truly hope that the people here in Idaho take a good long look at this right to work bill before they vote to pass it.

Leroy offers a plan to remove barriers

Idaho's return to economic stability rests squarely on the strengths and abilities of her people. The entrepreneurship, courage and decisions of those involved in the free enterprise system will provide jobs for Idahoans.

It has been said that 80 percent of the new jobs that will be available between now and the year 2000 will come from small business (those hiring less than 500) and the largest share of those would be from businesses hiring less than 20 employees.

If you are among the voters who are in the category of "undecided" for Governor, I ask you to consider Dave Leroy as one who has not made any rash promises, but instead has offered a point by point positive plan to provide incentives to business and remove some of the barriers and regulations. In addition to attracting new industry, it is essential to do more to encourage existing business.

Having served on a special committee whose purpose was to advise Mr. Leroy in his economic development plan, I can guarantee he will listen to the private sector. He will appoint qualified individuals to the key agencies, regulatory boards and commissions who have the necessary business experience for the needs of our state. Your vote is essential for Idaho's future.

Keep Right-to-Work on state's law books

Do you union members believe your top officials are working only for your benefit? Are you sure they really care if you can support your family? Maybe they are more interested in the cut they get from your pay check every month.

They showed how they care when they forced Bunker Hill mine and smelter to close in North Idaho. The union bosses back East forced their own workers out of their jobs. When silver prices dropped too low, the mine and smelter began losing $40 million a year. Either costs must be cut or the operation abandoned. The miners voted to accept lower wages and benefits. They wanted to keep their jobs and be able to support their families. Not as well as before, but well enough to get by until the price of silver went up.

But the big union bosses who were being paid to take care of their people said No. So Bunker Hill closed down and over two thousand workers lost their jobs.

Now that area is dying. Many families have moved away, many leaving homes they can't finish paying for.

The same thing happened at Browning Freight Lines. The union got all these workers' wages and benefits changed, alright. But how did the pay go? Up or down? Why? Because the union had total control of all the workers in those shops.

Your union officials' story: We are working for your best interest protecting you from your "enemy," the employer.

Their actions tell the true story: If your union bosses can't collect the high dues that come from your high wages, they are just as happy if you don't have any job at all.

Be smart enough to vote yes. Let's keep the Right to Work. So sorry stories like these won't ever have to be repeated in Idaho.

Freshmen enrollment up at universities in West

NEW YORK (AP) — A comprehensive survey of college trends finds average freshman enrollments surging at Western public universities, but sagging at some New England private schools where tuitions have increased sharply.

From 1980-85, average freshman enrollments at Western public doctoral-granting four-year universities grew 19.9 percent, according to The College Board's "Annual Survey of Colleges, 1986-87," released Wednesday.

Nationwide, average freshman enrollments at public four-year universities rose 1.8 percent during the same period, but fell 2 percent at four-year private institutions.

The survey showed that some institutions fared far better than others during the first half of the 1980s.

Among the weakest were New England four-year private doctoral-granting institutions, where undergraduate enrollments fell 15.8 percent from 1980-85, 12.8 percent in 1984-85 alone. At the same time, public colleges in the region gained nearly 5 percent.

Average freshman enrollments slipped 9.1 percent at four-year public and private schools in the Southwest from 1980-85, and were down roughly 1 percent in the South, New England and Middle States regions. Freshman rolls at Midwestern schools fell an average of 3 percent.

But, in the West, average freshman enrollments at all four-year colleges increased 22.3 percent from 1980-85 — 15.3 percent from 1984-85 alone.

Limits sought on 3-wheel ATV sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government safety experts say manufacturers should voluntarily stop selling motorized all-terrain vehicles for use by children or face the threat of a federal ban, according to a report obtained Wednesday.

The proposal follows an 18-month study by the Consumer Product Safety Commission of the three-wheel off-road vehicles which have been implicated in more than 500 deaths since 1982.

The motorized vehicles have become increasingly popular in recent years, and more than 2 million are currently in use across the country. The safety commission's investigation stemmed from concerns about the increase in deaths and injuries associated with the three-wheelers.

There have been 559 deaths reported in ATV accidents since 1982, and more than 50,000 injuries were reported in the first half of this year alone.

Restrictions on sales of the vehicles for use by children under 12 are suggested in the agency's staff report on that investigation, along with a series of warning label and other requirements.

That report, obtained by The Associated Press, is currently before the commission but no schedule has been set for action.

The study, which included six public hearings across the country, found many possible causes for accidents, including use of alcohol, riding double, rider inexperience and riding the vehicles on highways.

Typically, the agency staff concluded, "Children under 12 years of age are unable to operate any size ATV safely."

Although some companies sell smaller, less powerful vehicles aimed at youngsters, the agency said that those under-12 "lack physical size and strength, cognitive abilities, motor skills and perception" needed to operate these vehicles.

The staff recommended that the commission ask manufacturers to voluntarily stop marketing the lower-power ATVs for children under 12.

If they do not do so, the proposal added, "the commission should then move to ban all-terrain vehicles ... that are intended for use by children under age 12."

The agency also found that youngsters under 16 have an above normal risk of death and injury in ATV mishaps, "due to poor judgment and failure to recognize and operate ATVs within their skill levels."

As a solution, a label was proposed warning vehicle owners that ATVs are not recommended for anyone under 16.

The commission staff also recommended a series of warning labels stressing safety precautions on the vehicles.

Use of drugs brings charge of fetal abuse

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A woman whose son was born brain-dead with amphetamines in his system could face a year in jail after being charged with fetal abuse for allegedly contributing to his death by taking drugs during pregnancy.

The San Diego County district attorney's office acknowledges it is entering new legal territory, but contends Pamela Rae Stewart is criminally liable for the death of her son.

Courts previously have ordered drug tests for pregnant women suspected of abusing drugs, and a Michigan appellate court ruled in 1980 that parents can be cited for neglect if a baby is born addicted to drugs.

However, the Stewart case is believed to be the first criminal prosecution for fetal abuse.

Thomas Travis Edward Monson was born brain-dead Nov. 23, 1985. He died New Year's Day.

A pediatrician notified child welfare authorities after a toxicological report showed the presence of amphetamines in the baby's body. The case then went to El Cajon police.

Stewart's husband, Thomas Monson, denied that his wife used drugs while she was pregnant.

Drug abuse is not the sole issue. Deputy District Attorney Harry Elias said. He said doctors diagnosed Stewart, 27, as having placenta previa, a condition that can cause complications for mother and child if the placenta becomes detached from the uterine wall prior to birth.

Helms thinks spicy passage may be an aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms says he isn't happy about inadvertently placing a "dial-a-porn" message into the Congressional Record, but its publication may help people "understand how rotten this stuff is."

Helms placed the saucy transcript of a "dial-a-porn" tape into the Senate record last Saturday while arguing that young children should be protected from obscene telephone messages.

The transcript begins: "Hi, I'm Nellie from High Society and I'm so busy getting ready for my June wedding. Why don't you and I have a private shower?"

Interested readers can consult last Saturday's edition of the Congressional Record for the rest of the sexually graphic patter.

The transcript quoted was in a teletype memorandum by Citizens for Decency Through Law, Inc. of Scottsdale, Ariz.

Helms said in an interview that he had brought an unexpurgated version of the brief to the Senate last Saturday in order to provide his colleagues with an example of the obscene messages.

"I don't particularly enjoy causing it to be printed," Helms said, but "maybe it will be good for people to understand how rotten this stuff is."

"I'm told that I've made that Congressional Record edition the most popular document in Washington, D.C.," Helms said.

Court clears test for drugs

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A federal appeals panel ruled Wednesday that Burlington Northern Railroad Co. can require employees involved in accidents or returning from seasonal furloughs to take a drug test.

The workers' union, the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees, had sought to block the testing on grounds it was a major change from the union's contract with the company.

U.S. District Judge Donald E. O'Brien in Iowa refused to block the testing of employees involved in accidents, but issued an injunction against testing of workers returning from a seasonal furlough.

Talk about hazardous work: In the marble quarries of Italy's Carrara, some men get hurt every day, another gets killed every month. What makes marble quarrying there the most dangerous of peacetime jobs? Researchers shrug. They think the Italian men in that place take so much pride in the danger that they run risks on purpose.

A. Don't know about more beautiful, but they're around longer to be seen longer. Takes twice as long for dawn to develop in Anchorage as it takes at the equator.

Reagan praises Carter's role

ATLANTA (AP) — President Reagan, reunited with the adversary he once taunted, praised former President Jimmy Carter Wednesday as a man of intellect, faith and character, who helped build "the new South."

In a speech at the dedication of the $25 million Carter presidential library on a hilltop east of here, Reagan also paid tribute to Carter's handling of the Iranian hostage crisis, for which he bitterly criticized Carter during his 1980 presidential campaign.

Reagan told his audience that the South has changed "because men and women like Jimmy Carter refused to join White Citizens' Councils, and because they stood up in church to protest the exclusion of black people from worship."

"This celebration is in a sense a celebration of the South — the new South that Jimmy Carter helped to build," Reagan said.

Referring to their sometimes acrimonious disagreements, the president said, "None of us today need feel any urge, in the name of goodwill, to downplay our differences. Our very differences attest to the greatness of our nation."

President signs defense bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Wednesday signed a bill giving more power to military theater commanders and making the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff the principal military adviser to the president.

In a statement accompanying his signature, the president called the legislation "a milestone in the long evolution of defense organization since our national security establishment was created in 1947."

Congressional sponsors of the bill, led by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said it would help to prevent foul-ups caused by snarls in the chain of command.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, stated that it was "one of the landmark laws of American history."

Ag subsidy lid proposal fails

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Wednesday killed an attempt to put a lid of $500,000 per farmer on government agriculture subsidies and halt "obscene" multi-million-dollar payments to the nation's largest producers.

The lawmakers also turned thumbs down on an expensive grab-bag of aid for farmers that included everything from interest subsidies to disaster relief, but which Majority Leader Bob Dole derided as "a little pre-election farm fest."

Both defeated measures were proposed as amendments to the $556 billion omnibus spending bill designed to finance the government through fiscal 1987, which began Wednesday.

Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, said the payment cap, similar to a $250,000 lid on subsidies included in the House version of the spending bill, would help plug loopholes that are permitting some huge farming operations to collect as much as $20 million this year.

Court rejects order for runoff

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A federal appeals court Wednesday threw out a judge's order for a second Democratic gubernatorial runoff in Alabama, leaving Lt. Gov. Bill Baxley as the party's nominee.

Attorney General Charlie Graddick will take his bid for another election to the U.S. Supreme Court, an aide said.

The 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, overturning a federal judge in Birmingham, said "federal courts should not be involved in settling state election disputes."

The ruling comes after a three-judge panel, made up of U.S. Circuit Judges Robert S. Vance, John Goldbold and Frank M. Johnson Jr., heard arguments last week on Baxley's appeal of U.S. District Judge Foy Guin's decision for a second runoff between the lieutenant governor and Graddick.

Airlines announce higher fares

NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the biggest U.S. airlines raised one-way fares as much as $30 a ticket Wednesday because of higher demand, and analysts said it signaled a possible end to price wars incited by competition.

The increases of about 5 percent by United, American and Delta airlines take effect today and are aimed largely at business travelers. They do not affect discount fares, which comprise the overwhelming majority of airline business.

But many in the industry predicted broader fare increases would come later. Some said the airlines' heavy losses over several months because of price wars, combined with mergers and a rising number of passengers, has created an opportunity to start nudging prices up.

Air Force B-1s on active duty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first of the nation's new fleet of B-1 bombers went on full-alert status Wednesday, marking the beginning of regular operation for the once-canceled plane since its resurrection five years ago.

"The important revitalization of our bomber force continues on track," said Gen. Lawrence A. Skantze, the commander of the Air Force Systems Command.

"I am pleased to announce that today at Dyess Air Force Base, Texas, the first B-1B is now standing constant alert. Fourteen other B-1B's are also at Dyess, an operational unit of the Strategic Air Command. Achieving this initial operational capability in only five years is a major accomplishment."

The B-1 is the first long-range strategic bomber to be developed by the United States in 30 years. The swing-wing, four-engine jet can fly at supersonic speeds and is also equipped with sophisticated navigation and radar systems that allow it to hug the ground and evade radar.

Starting in the late 1980's, the Air Force plans to begin retiring the aging B-52 bombers that now form the heart of the nation's bomber force. They will be replaced by 100 B-1B's and 132 of the new, radar-evading "Stealth" bombers, which are now in the final stages of development.

More rain drenches flooded midlands

By The Associated Press

More rain fell Wednesday across the Midwest and Plains, where flooding has left more than 3,500 people homeless, and Oklahoma's National Guard was asked to help in one county where "some people are cut off and trapped."

A partially ruptured dam in Wisconsin remained standing but leaking, and hundreds were left still away from their homes in flooded northeastern Montana, but the water was receding at some communities.

One man died Wednesday when he was swept from his stalled pickup on a bridge in Oklahoma, and another was missing and presumed dead in Illinois. One person died last week in Montana.

One Kansas man spent the night in a tree after his car was washed away.

Flood-ravaged northeastern Illinois got gentle rain Wednesday, but 2 to 3 inches fell during the morning in hard-hit Oklahoma, and southern Missouri got 5 inches. Heavy rain also fell in Indiana and Ohio. The National Weather Service reported three-day totals of up to 15 inches in parts of northeastern Oklahoma, nearly half the usual annual precipitation.

A hole in the earthen portion of a dam on Lawrence Lake near Westfield, Wis., expanded Wednesday, then stopped growing as the lake level dropped after flood gates were opened.

Nearly 200 residents of Westfield, a town of about 1,000 people, were allowed to return home Wednesday, ordered out again in the afternoon, then let back home again after the hole stopped growing. They were first ordered out Tuesday out of fear that the concrete slab forming the lake side of the dam would not hold.

In Oklahoma's Cherokee County, the National Guard has been requested for rescue work, as some people are cut off and trapped, said a statement issued by the state Highway Patrol. "A large area of Tahlequah is under water and it is still raining very hard."

Flood stage on the Illinois River in Tahlequah is 11 feet and the weather service said the river could hit 25 feet.

The city of Bixby also summoned the National Guard to rescue people from dozens of houses surrounded by high water.

Up to 100 people were forced from their homes in Guthrie in central Oklahoma, 100 were evacuated in Skiatook near Tulsa, and most of the 300 evacuees in Kingfisher remained out of their homes. Dozens were evacuated in Bartlesville. Authorities evacuated 54 residents of a nursing home at Miami.

Test of air-raid siren shatters calm as Reykjavik prepares for summit

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — The day after the Reagan-Gorbachev meeting was announced, Reykjavik's glacial calm was shattered Wednesday by a monthly test of air raid sirens — a timely reminder of how close this North Atlantic island feels to the realities of superpower tension.

As the first U.S. and Soviet advance parties prepared to head for Iceland to begin the logistics of bringing together President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the island of 240,000 was dazed at having been chosen as the summit site.

But the country was bursting with pride and determined to put its best face forward. "The eyes of the world will be focused on Iceland," proclaimed Morgunblaðið, Iceland's biggest newspaper. "It is vital for our prestige that this meeting go without a hitch. We must do nothing to jeopardize it."

A long-standing member of NATO, equidistant from New York and Moscow but firmly Western in ideology, Iceland feels due for some attention. And the summit promises to be the biggest superpower event in Reykjavik since Bobby Fischer and Boris Spassky fought it out on the chessboard in 1972.

The first Icelandic to get the news was Prime Minister Steingrímur Hermannsson. The Soviet and

EDWARD PERKINS
Not first black, Botha says

U.S. envoy selection no worry

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Foreign Minister R.F. Botha was quoted Wednesday as saying the government was not concerned about the fact that Edward Perkins, nominated as the next U.S. ambassador to South Africa, is black.

The South African Press Association said a spokesman for Botha quoted him as saying there were already five black ambassadors in South Africa, from Malawi and the four black homelands that Pretoria considers independent — Ciskei, Transkei, Bophuthatswana and Venda. Other countries consider the homelands part of South Africa.

Perkins, 58, the U.S. ambassador to Liberia, will replace Herman W. Nickel if the appointment is approved by the U.S. Senate.

According to the spokesman, Botha said he hoped South Africa would eventually send a black ambassador to the United States.

Bhadra Gulu Ranchod, a law professor of Indian descent, was named envoy to the Common Market two weeks ago, becoming the first non-white ambassador ever to represent South Africa.

Botha was rebuked in January by President P.W. Botha after telling a group of foreign reporters that social changes might allow a black to become president of South Africa some day.

The two Bothas are not related.

Hijackers planning on suicide

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Four gunmen who seized a Pan Am jumbo jet last month may have been on a suicide mission, planning to blow up the plane in midair with their 400 captives aboard, a Pakistani official said Wednesday.

"There is now an indication they would have blown up the plane in the air," said a Foreign Ministry spokesman who spoke on condition of anonymity. He said he could not reveal details because the investigation was still in progress.

The four gunmen, whom Pakistani officials have said are Palestinian, were apprehended at the bloody end of the 17-hour hijacking at Karachi's international airport Sept. 5, and a fifth man was arrested several days later.

The official said a sixth person had been arrested in the case and was believed to have assisted in setting up the hijacking. He would not give further details.

The gunmen, disguised as airport security guards, seized the Pan Am 747 on the tarmac as it was loading passengers for a scheduled flight to Frankfurt, West Germany, and New York.

The stand-off came to an end when the plane's flights failed and the hijackers detonated hand grenades and opened fire on the passengers with semi-automatic weapons, according to dozens of passengers and witnesses.

Twenty people died.

The three-man flight crew escaped at the start of the hijacking, and the gunmen demanded a new crew to fly the plane to Cyprus in an attempt to free jailed Palestinians.

The Foreign Ministry spokesman said the government was correct not to give the hijackers a new flight crew.

Pakistani security officials reported recovering grenades and other explosives from the plane following the hijacking.

The investigators have not achieved a breakthrough because the hijackers were maintaining "a hard silence" or deliberately misleading their interrogators, the spokesman said.

Effect of force lingers

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov suffers from body tremors as a result of being thrown to the ground, tied up and forced, his wife, Yelena Bonner, wrote in book excerpts that were published Wednesday.

In the excerpts carried by the weekly magazine Stern, Mrs. Bonner wrote that she and her husband feel degraded because the KGB secret police constantly films them.

"I think we are both psychologically sound people, but I feel fear at having to live my life before a camera," wrote Mrs. Bonner, who lives with Sakharov in internal exile in the Soviet city of Gorky, 250 miles east of Moscow.

"No human being, however stable he thinks he is, is immune to collapse under such conditions," she wrote of depression or suicide.

Aquino rejects release demands

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government Wednesday rejected rebel demands for the immediate release of a top communist leader and placed the army on alert to guard against reprisal attacks.

President Corason Aquino discussed with her advisers the leftist's demands that Rodolfo Salas be released before peace talks to end the 17-year insurgency continue, presidential spokesman Teodoro Benegas said.

Salas, 38, has been identified by the military as commander of the rebel New People's Army, which is estimated to have between 16,000 and 22,000 members.

Salas was arrested Monday night with his wife and driver in front of a Manila hospital where he had undergone treatment.

P&Z favors rezoning for nursing home

By BONNIE BAIRD-JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Members of the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission are asking the City Council to approve a zone change and special-use permit that will allow a new 60-bed, $2.2 million nursing home facility in Twin Falls.

Unanimous votes on both matters followed public hearings Tuesday night that brought out only one objection.

Richard Drake, owner of Sky View Nursing Home on Filer Avenue West, told the P&Z commissioners that state officials have reported 110 vacant beds in existing Magic Valley-area facilities.

Commissioner Tom Moore explained, in casting his vote to support the requested zone change, that the commission's function is only to maintain proper zoning measures.

Moore cited the new Magic Valley Mall, opening this month, saying that although there was strong opposition from some business interests, there was no basis for zoning denial.

The property which Brent Brocksome of Boise has selected for a new nursing home is located on Eastland Drive, just north of and behind the new Twin Falls Senior Citizens Center. He said after the hearing that while he was not aware of plans for the center's relocation when he selected his site, it should make for a compatible situation.

Brocksome said he chose the location because he wanted to be in the east part of the city, away from the hospital, where there is already a large nursing home.

Brocksome, a Republican state representative from Boise, said the Twin Falls nursing home will be built and owned by him and his wife, a registered nurse. He also operates other nursing homes in the Boise area and is a partner of the operator of Mountain View Care Center in Kimberly. He is also a part owner of Capital Care Center of Boise and is employed by that firm. Capital Care Center owns and operates facilities in the Boise area.

Brocksome presented a drawing of his plans for the Twin Falls facility, showing wings that can be expanded in the future as needed.

State official explains water policy proposals

By MARK PRATER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Department of Water Resources official explained proposed changes in state water policies affecting depletion and contamination of groundwater at a workshop Wednesday night.

The proposed state water plan says depletion of groundwater should not exceed the expected rate at which the water is replenished. Many of Idaho's citizens depend on groundwater for drinking and about 30 percent of Idaho's acreage is irrigated by groundwater, according to the Department of Water Resources.

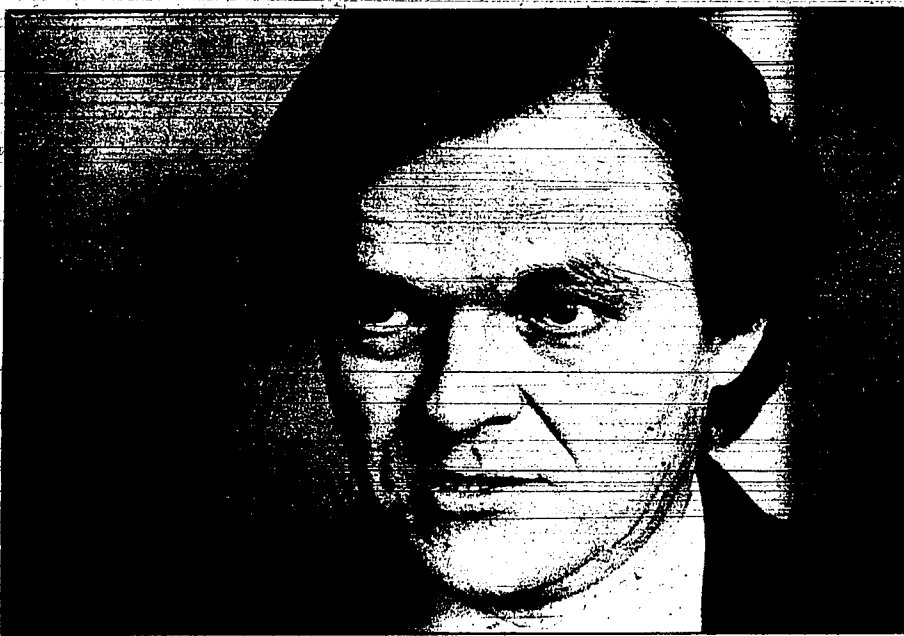

It takes an overextraction of groundwater to start a decline in groundwater. If you don't shut off the decline, it continues," said Frank Sherman, a state water planning supervisor. Sherman said this is the case in the Salt River Valley though new water permits have not been issued there in 20 years.

He spoke to about a dozen people, including state Sen. Laird Noh and legislative candidates at the Canyon Springs Inn.

He said it is hard to know when too many groundwater permits are issued. "You recognize it when you see a groundwater drop," Sherman said. A recent study by the U.S. Geological Survey showed groundwater levels in the Snake Plain Aquifer have dropped in the last 25 years and in some places declines of

Stan Crow, chairman of Help Idaho Thrive, says a lottery in Idaho would result in an economic loss for the state

Group: Lottery not practical

Help Idaho Thrive claims initiative would spur private lotteries

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — As the time draws near for Idaho voters to decide whether or not to allow a state lottery, the Boise-based organization called Help Idaho Thrive is concentrating its efforts to convince lawmakers that the lottery is an economically bad choice for the state.

Stan Crow, chairman of Help Idaho Thrive, visited Twin Falls Wednesday in order to relate to the public the economic dangers of voting in favor of the lottery initiative.

Crow says the lottery would result in lower employment, a loss of support for public school funding, an outburst of private lotteries, and would endanger the constitutional rights of Idaho citizens.

"We're opposing the lottery on economic, practical grounds. We're not getting into the morality of this issue," he said.

Crow said that despite the seductiveness of the initiative, there is "no way Idaho can make money on a lottery."

Proponents of the lottery say that it would generate net revenues of $10 million. According to a recent study funded by Help Idaho Thrive and conducted by Brian McGrath, an associate professor and economic consultant at Boise State University, generating a net of $10 million would take gross revenues of $40 million.

Half of that $40 million would be spent in prize money, and $10 million would be spent on administrative costs, he said.

To come up with this kind of money would take every man, woman and child in Idaho spending $40 annually on lottery tickets, Crow said. The net revenue that would realistically be raised by a lottery comes to $2.24 million to $2.78 million, he said.

Using these figures, the study came to the conclusion that lottery revenue, after prizes and costs, would have an insignificant effect upon the state's budget.

The initiative also contains features that are unique to other state lotteries, he said. In order to allow the state lottery, the initiative repeals the statutes which make private lotteries illegal.

Idaho would become the first and only state in the nation to have unregulated private lotteries, Crow said.

The Idaho Supreme Court defines a lottery as any situation in which a person pays a price to take a chance to win a prize. Devices such as slot machines and punchboards are simply mechanical lotteries, Crow said.

Due to other restrictions against gambling, Crow said, he does not expect private citizens to open up casinos such as those found in Nevada, but an abundance of private lotteries will be operating even before the state lottery is in effect, he said.

"If the new initiative is passed, organizations will be able to override prior laws. They can avoid specific prohibitions," he said.

Other study findings indicated that most of the revenue burden of the lottery would effectively fall upon the "lucky" and lower-middle-income groups, as well as the least-educated.

Also, because some aspects of a lottery cannot be handled within the state, an estimated 20 percent of the lottery's gross income would "leak out" of Idaho's economy. The lottery could cause an ultimate decline in state income of $4 million to $7.2 million, according to the study.

The study also denies lottery proponents' claims that having a state lottery would stop Idaho citizens from spending money in other state lotteries.

The evidence is that a state lottery tends to increase activity in all types of gambling, so an Idaho lottery might actually encourage more citizens to participate in Oregon and Washington

Jurors view duty as burden, privilege

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Imagine a room with 12 people of differing views and backgrounds. Their goal: render a judicial decision.

In personal-injury cases, jurors decide negligence and innocence, hurt and responsibility.

To some, jury duty is a burden. For others, it is a privilege.

REWARDING — AND DISAPPOINTING

For Dale Ray Anderson, his first time on jury duty was at once rewarding, interesting and disappointing.

Anderson, a Sun Valley Co. employee, served on a Hailey jury in October 1985 on the case of Michael Ross, whose legs were amputated below the knees due to injuries he received when the mast of his catamaran, sailboat hit power lines above Magic Reservoir in June 1984.

Anderson, who was a juror in the accident, sued the Idaho Power Co. and the boat manufacturers, Coleman, Inc., and its subsidiary, Coast Catamaran.

The trial lasted almost a month. In the end, the jury ruled that Ross deserved more than $2 million in damages and found Idaho Power 75 percent responsible for the accident. But, before the trial, Ross already had reached an undisclosed out-of-court settlement with the power company.

The jury also ruled that Ross was 10 percent at fault; Coleman, 5 percent; and Coast Catamaran, 10 percent. At a post-trial hearing, the beal manufacturers claimed they owed Ross nothing because the jury found their individual negligence was equal to or less than Ross.

A judge ruled, however, that Ross deserved $400,000 for the combined faults of the boat manufacturers. The case is on appeal to the Idaho Supreme Court.

"The jury felt everybody was at fault," said Anderson, who was a juror in the accident.

Then came the post-trial activity.

Anderson was surprised that there were no television-type dramatics during the trial. "In the real world, if a lawyer asks you a question, you can pause and take your time."

"I was very impressed with that. I kept thinking about Raymond Burr who played 'Perry Mason.' But it's very much down to earth," Anderson says.

While Anderson, 41, enjoyed work.

"That makes you feel worthless. I spent about two months on that thing, for zilch," he says. "I just shook my head and said, 'Here we go again.'"

He says he had sacrificed by taking vacation time to serve on the panel. But when Ross didn't abide by the jury's findings through his post-trial requests, it made him feel his jury duty was all for nothing, Anderson says.

Still, the jury experience was interesting.

He says he got on the jury because "I had no idea about this man (Ross). They (the lawyers) said, 'Could you be honest?' and I said, 'Sure.'"

Judges applaud efforts to reduce court delays

By PAT MARCANTONIO

TWIN FALLS — From the bench, it's a different perspective on personal-injury lawsuits.

Fifth District Judge Douglas Kramer of Hailey sees the frustration "people experience in long delays the years it sometimes takes to resolve a case."

District Judge Phillip Becker of Coalinga says memories of witnesses fade with delays. Some may die or become unavailable.

Time may become an enemy to plaintiffs unable to work because of injuries, but who must still wait for settlement or award.

"I've seen people go financially broke while going through one of these cases," Becker says.

Delays also are important to some lawyers, for whom time is money.

Alleged delays cases played a role in the defeat of 5th District Court Judge Ronald Bruce of Rupert in the May primary.

But Kramer says the courts are battling delays.

In 1984, the Idaho Supreme Court set time guidelines for judges to follow in civil and criminal cases.

Becker says the effort to fight delay has helped the image of the courts considerably.

On tort reform, the judges see many potential effects.

"Tinkering with the entire system to solve a problem with a fairly limited scope may end up not helping at all," says Hurlbutt.

Limits on damages might override the principle of setting responsibility for fault.

Hurlbutt also says, "the danger is that it doesn't change the fact that someone who is hurt still has suffered and isn't being compensated for those injuries."

Becker shares Hurlbutt's concern that if damages are limited, a severely injured person may not receive adequate compensation.

Becker says he uses those powers sparingly, however, because juries do a good job of dispensing justice.

"I'm real pleased with the jury system. They take their responsibilities so seriously. I've never been disappointed with a jury," he says.

He is concerned, however, that prospective jurors who read about

He could have — on the advice of friends and acquaintances — asked for more money, but he "didn't want to make a federal case out of it," he says.

"It was not my purpose to make money. It was simply for the purpose of having them bleed a little bit," Anthony says.

He hoped they would have learned from the mistake so it wouldn't happen again.

But if he would have been placed in jail, he would have gone to court, he says.

Now, says Anthony, he's attempting to forget the trauma of that night. He feels vindicated, but he's still waiting for apology directly from the city and county

Sewage spills from new line

TWIN FALLS — The installation of a new Grandview Interceptor sewer line got off to an unsteady start when the spillage occurred from the new line. The spillage occurred Sept. 23, said Jim Leichter, a J-U-B Engineers, contracted by Twin Falls City, to inspect the construction work. The city project includes the replacement of a large section of the main sewer line.

The spillage occurred when the baffle became dislodged and blocked the outflow line of the manhole causing the sewage to spill over the side, Leichter said.

By the time the pump was shut off, an estimated 300 gallons of sewage had spilled over the side of the manhole. The material was absorbed into the dirt in the canyon, so there was no need for a cleanup, he said.

Although the spill was considered small, the Environmental Protection Agency was contacted, Leichter said. No EPA official inspected the site, but the city was expected to file a report on the incident.

Summit Construction is working on the project, which will encompass about five miles of line.

P&Z seeks applicants

TWIN FALLS — There are two vacancies on the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission. The city would like to fill later this month.

Community Development Director Lamar Orton is asking anyone interested in serving on the commission to contact the city office for an application. The commission would like a letter of application stating the background of the applicant and reasons for seeking the position.

The appointments must have lived in Twin Falls County for at least five years and must currently be a resident of the city. Applications should be submitted to Orton at the city hall by Oct. 22. Applicants will be interviewed by the commission on Oct. 22 and recommendations made to the Twin Falls City Council, which will make the appointments.

Orton said the vacancies were created when two former members were transferred or moved to other cities. Frank King was transferred out of Twin Falls after serving about one year. Chris Valencia vacated the other position when she moved away.

The appointments will be to complete the two terms, and the appointments may then seek another term. The next P&Z meetings will be held Oct. 14 and Oct. 28.

AFB signs power contract

MOUNTAIN HOME AFB (AP) — Mountain Home Air Force Base has signed a $13.5 million contract with Idaho Power Co. for construction of facilities to serve the base's anticipated heavier electrical load next year.

The Air Force's new $5.8 million heater over the base's heating system is being built at Mountain Home, bringing with it the need for more electricity by November 1987.

The base's existing 14-megawatt load is served by a 60,000-volt transmission line and a 14-megawatt substation.

To meet the base's expected 25-megawatt load, Idaho Power said it has agreed to build a transmission line from Mountain Home to its closest 138,000-volt grid, 6.2 miles away. The utility also plans to upgrade the base's substation to 30 megawatts.

Construction should begin soon after the first of the year, the company said.

Cyprus mine to shut down for month

CHALLIS (AP) — The Cyprus Thompson Creek molybdenum mine near here closed Wednesday for a month, although no layoffs are scheduled.

Alex Jacobs, CTC general manager, said the shutdown is necessary to complete a contract with the unusually high productivity during the last six months. The shutdown is intended to bring production and sales in balance, Jacobs said.

During the month-long suspension of milling, crews will perform routine annual maintenance duties. The shutdown will result in a reduction of output of over a million pounds of concentrate.

Jacobs said CTC planned to close down in July. "We elected to continue full operation in July because at that time we needed the cash flow," Jacobs said. "This shutdown is not much different than what we would've done then."

The scrapper-junk was held Saturday and involved collecting street markers, mail boxes and even a car from the new development. The tree was cut off, the students are required to purchase an identical tree and replant it in the downtown area.

Hall said most of the items had been returned by Wednesday, but another work session was planned Wednesday evening to replace and return the remainder of the items.

The funeral will be conducted at 2 p.m. Monday at the Carey LDS Church. Interment will follow in the Carey Cemetery.

Chartered flights to make Hailey ski runs

by DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — In what one chamber of commerce official calls a possible significant step for the future of Sun Valley, a California travel agency will fly chartered jets for skiers directly to Hailey this winter from one of the ski area's best markets.

The flight will fly the chartered plane, booked through Sportours of 1st Canada, Callisto, to Friedman Memorial Airport from John Wayne International Airport each Saturday from Dec. 27 to March 21.

Most chartered flights to Sun Valley land in Twin Falls because older jets are too large for the Hailey airstrip.

Air Cal, however, will fly a new, 85-seat tri-level-made plane capable of landing in Hailey.

"It is the first time we have had non-stop services from Southern California, which is our largest single market."

Dick Fenton

Although the small plane will not bring large numbers of skiers to Sun Valley this year, the new chartered flight, if successful, may be important in determining how future skiers get to Sun Valley, says Dick Fenton, a member of the Sun Valley-Ketchum Chamber of Commerce's marketing committee.

"It is the first time we have had non-stop services from Southern California, which is our largest single market," Fenton says, "We think it is the start of something that could be significant."

"We believe that Orange County is the prime opportunity in Southern California for the flight," he says.

The flight is part of a week-long skiing package to Sun Valley that Sportours will market this winter, says Ed Baltz, owner of the agency.

The flight will leave Santa Ana at 10:40 a.m. each Saturday, arriving in Hailey at 2 p.m. The return flight will depart at 3 p.m. Saturdays and land at 4:10 p.m., taking the previous week's passengers back home, land the jet safely between the steep mountains of the Wood River Valley.

Like Fenton, Baltz sees a potential for expanding the flights if this winter's are successful.

"It depends. If more airplanes are available, we want to do it. We definitely think this is the trend of the future and we want to exploit it," he says.

Sportours already flies Sun Valley-bound skiers aboard larger chartered aircraft into Twin Falls and to other ski resorts, Baltz says.

Fenton says chartered flights to Twin Falls have more than 600 available passenger seats each week in the winter. Also, Horizon Airlines flies about 2,000 available seats into Hailey each week on regularly scheduled flights from several Western cities, he says.

Buhl board backs rule on C-average

By TERESA Z. TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Buhl School Board members say the State Board of Education's C-average policy needs some revision, but have agreed to give the policy more time in the district's schools.

At a Tuesday night board meeting, Superintendent Gus Spriopulus reported approximately 50 percent of the district's 9th- and 10th-grade students are not maintaining the required C-average needed to graduate.

Spriopulus said letters have been sent to parents of these students. Responses indicating concern for the students have been received from about half of the parents contacted, he said.

The board's discussion stemmed from a letter from Twin Falls School Superintendent Carl Snow requesting Buhl's endorsement of work to repeal the C-average policy. Snow asked that Buhl join the Twin Falls, Wendell and Castleford districts in seeking legislative help to repeal the policy.

Board member Barbara Weaver said she disagreed with the policy. It is unfair to some students who may not be college-bound, she said. She suggested one alternative may be a second type of diploma for students unable to maintain a C-average who may not be seeking higher education.

Spriopulus said statewide 30 percent of students are not maintaining the required C-average, and the policy may need some modification. But, he said, the intent is to raise standards, and if students are going to be given the opportunity to do that, "we may be thinking of bailing out a little too soon."

The rule requires a student to have at least a C-average in core classes in order to graduate. Core classes are math, English, speech and reading.

Board members moved not to endorse Snow's proposal and to give the existing policy more time.

In other business, Tom Fleming of the Buhl American Legion presented the board with a petition that he said indicates an interest in the community for a high school baseball team.

Fleming told the board the program could be funded completely from private donations, and that while there would initially be difficulty in finding suitable teams to play, that problem could be resolved once a team was organized.

Arguments raised against the program included inadequate funds, potential conflicts with the track program and game scheduling problems.

The board voted, however, to give Fleming a one-year trial period in which to organize and fund the proposed team. Board member Lila Bell said the program would be in accordance with Idaho's Athletic Association rules for baseball.

Enrollment in the district is down by 43 students from last year. Spriopulus said this would not effect school funding unless enrollment continues to drop.

Tuition was waived for 33 out-of-district students.

Sun Valley Co. sued on child abuse charge

By BARBARA NEIWERT
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — A $9-million civil lawsuit has been filed by a Ketchum woman against the Sun Valley Co., alleging physical, mental and sexual abuse of a child by a former employee of the Sun Valley Playhouse.

Willard Abbott, the Magic Valley manager for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, says, however, that department officials don't see a reason for parents of children at the playhouse to be concerned.

Health and Welfare has not received any other complaint about the facility, he says. The department has investigated the matter, but he declined to comment on the investigation.

The civil suit was filed Sept. 12 in 5th District Court in Hailey by plaintiff Karen Vaughan for damages to herself and a minor child, against the Sun Valley Co., Sun Valley Playhouse employee Michele Bott and other unnamed employees.

The suit alleges that while the child was under the care of Bott from the last week in March 1986 to July 15, 1986, Bott "intentionally inflicted great mental distress" upon the child.

The suit further alleges Bott permitted the child to be "slapped, pinched and otherwise assaulted and battered; sexually fondled, touched and abused; forced to participate in acts and activities of a lewd, lascivious, perverse and corrupt nature, and subjected to mental abuse by suggestions and representations."

Lemman Messley hung up his badge as police chief and will be donning ministerial robes for the Christian Church

Burley police chief returns to ministry

By RONDA TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — In 1980 the Rev. Lemman Messley agreed to fill in as police chief for the city of Burley until city law enforcement services could be consolidated with the county six months later.

But the consolidation hit snags and six months stretched to six years. It was only Wednesday that the consolidation became fact and Messley hung up his badge.

He leaves the city convinced that crime prevention is the only real solution to criminal problems.

"Incarceration rarely changes lives," he says. "Where lives get changed and patterns are set up are in preventative things." Criminals must continue to be arrested to protect society, but until criminal patterns are changed, crime will continue to be a problem, he says.

From time to time over the years different law enforcement problems caught the community's interest, he says. Currently burglary, personal injury crimes such as child abuse and battery, and drug and alcohol abuse are the main concerns of residents, he says.

Burglaries are a "real problem," he agrees. "They have a certain implicit anger against society."

The personal injury cases are "the most alarming thing I've seen in the community," he says. Although he believes that these crimes have been committed all along, public awareness has brought more cases to the attention of police, he says.

Drugs are "a real blight on our society," he says. But efforts to stop drug abuse have been frustrating, and Messley is even headed in the right direction.

"I don't think we've made any significant impact, except made a game out of it," he says. Burley police officers have made a good dent in decreasing the number of drunk drivers, however, he says.

"This town has a reputation: Don't drink and drive in Burley," he says. Some officers hired in the expanded sheriff's department seem to have a "sixth sense" in selecting which cars to pull over for DUI, he says.

The force has been less effective in ridding the town of street people, although Messley is uncertain whether the responsibility belongs

Consolidation takes effect without hitch

BURLEY — There is no longer a police department in Burley, but law enforcement is not taking a break.

As of midnight Tuesday the Burley Police Department closed its doors and turned city responsibilities over to the newly reorganized Cassia County Sheriff's Office.

Capt. Terry Bingham said everything went smoothly and the new system of county law enforcement for the city was introduced to the public at 9 a.m. Wednesday when all of the uniform and other personnel for the expanded county department appeared in the parking lot for a review.

All calls for law enforcement assistance or reports will now be made to the Cassia County Sheriff's Office, and the sheriff's staff will be responding to calls within Burley City and handling regular patrol and other duties.

Under the new system, the city will pay an annual contract fee to the county for law enforcement services, allowing a reduction of $44,000 in the city's budget during the fiscal year that began Wednesday.

County and city officials say the merger will allow better utilization of manpower and less duplication of services.

to government or society. Burley has "at least its share" of the transients, he says, but he believes the problem will be unsolved until the general community decides to act.

Agricultural migrant workers passing through Burley are also subject to certain criminal factions, he says. "There are always those "coyotes" that feed and prey on the migrants," he says.

He and his wife, Inez, have sold their house in Rupert, are auctioning off many possessions, and will be moving throughout the Intermountain region with Messley's new job as an interim minister for the Christian Church.

Can't be too picky when you're clod picking

There used to be an old television program called "What's My Line," in which a celebrity panel tried to guess the occupation of a contestant. The contestant's line of work was always unusual.

I was just thinking that I would have made a great contestant for "What's My Line."

Question: "Do you work with your hands?"

"Yes."

Question: "Do you work in dirt?"

"Yes."

Question: "Does your work require the intellectual capacity of a goat?"

"Yes!"

And then they would be only one small step away from guessing my line: I am a clod picker! Yeah! Yeah!

Everyone would clap in the audience, but no one would know what a clod picker was. Living in the city, most of the audience would probably assume a clod picker was some kind of police detective who picks bumps and raists out of a line-up or something.

Real clod picking is a lot more exciting than that. You stand atop a roaring, roaring potato digger and madly grab at dirt clods as if they were nuggets of gold among the potatoes on the conveyor belt. This is the kind of job that grows on you. Which is another way of saying: The longer you do it, the less it bothers you.

Diana Hooley
Country neighbors

I didn't realize what I was getting into the first time I picked clods. I remember being on the digger and watching the potato belt move slowly before me. It creaked and scraped along like its ball bearings had been soaked in water instead of oil. I smiled at my fellow clod pickers. I think they smiled back. It was hard to tell. Labor relations were hampered because we had to wear bandanas on our law style over our mouths to keep us from breathing the dust.

At first I thought climbing the corporate rungs of the potato digger was going to be easy. In my search for excellence and job performance I became a perfectionist, even obsessive about picking off the tiniest mud clump on the belt. My motto? We will dump no potatoes before they're declodded.

When the tractor sped up, the conveyor belt followed suit. Could I maintain my standard and keep the speed, I wondered? Sure. Sure. I started slinging dirt and rock — and occasionally a potato or two by mistake — like a road grader. Then one clod slipped by me. And another. I lunged to grab it, lost my balance, and almost became the biggest clod ever to take a ride on a potato conveyor belt.

My momentum started to break down as I missed more and more dirt and debris. I was determined, though, to keep this job. I mean if you are fired from clod picking where do you go from there? Clod sorting? My clod-picking partners encouraged me to slow down because they said they didn't know cardiopulmonary resuscitation. "Relax, you'll get more done that way," they told me. This was a very profound thing to say, worthy of being in the Bible or at least in Bartlett's Familiar Quotations.

Despite the rough start I managed to keep my job as clod picker and ended up even enjoying it. That is, once I finally learned the difference between quality clod picking and quantity clod picking. There really is a difference. Honest.

Clinic to build new Buhl facility

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

BUHL — The Family Health Services Corp. will be moving its non-profit Buhl clinic to a new location, where construction of a new facility has just begun.

Tom Machala, executive director of Family Health Services, says that the new clinic is being built to replace the organization's current facility in Buhl.

The building has been limiting our services in Buhl. It's a converted dentist's office, and patients have been uncomfortable with it," he says.

The new facility should be open and operating by March, he says, at which time the older building will be closed. The new building is being raised on Fair Avenue next to Safeway.

The building area will take up 3,100 square feet, Machala says, and will not be designed in the

Medicare premiums to climb

WASHINGTON (AP) — The monthly premium that the nation's 30 million Medicare patients pay for physicians' services will climb on Jan. 1 from $15.50 to $17.90, the government announced Wednesday.

The $2.40-a-month, or 15.5 percent increase, will come at the same time that the elderly face steeper charges for their first day's stay in a hospital in 1987.

It also will hit as the nation's Social Security beneficiaries are getting their lowest annual cost-of-living adjustment ever. The exact amount has not yet been set, but Social Security spokesman James M. Brown said it is likely to be in the range of 1 percent to 1.5 percent.

However, that small COLA will mean that about 600,000 retirees with low Social Security benefits will not have to pay the full $2.40-a-month increase in the Medicare Part B premiums.

The law guarantees that their monthly checks after the Medicare premium is deducted cannot be lower in 1987 than they are today, Brown said.

Congress is expected to waive a trigger that allows Social Security benefits to go up each Jan. 1 only if the Consumer Price Index has risen 3 percent or more. Inflation has been running at less than half that rate in the past year.

If Social Security benefits did not go up in 1987, the Medicare Part B premium also would remain frozen at $15.50, and the $42,000 ceiling on wages subject to the payroll tax also would not budge.

Before Congress adjourns for the fall elections, it is expected to waive the 3 percent cost-of-living trigger and to cut back the scheduled $80 increase in the amount Medicare patients must pay for their first day in the hospital. That hospital fee is now $92.

Double burn: Burglar steals gear from survivor of grizzly mauling

KALISPELL, Mont. (AP) — A victim of a bear mauling in Glacier National Park has been victimized again, this time by a burglar who stripped the lock on her pickup-topper and stole her camping and hiking gear.

"It's kind of a doubly bad blow," said Officer Frank Garner of the Kalispell Police Department, who investigated the theft from Patricia Duff's pickup truck Tuesday.

Duff, 23, and her companion Jeff Brown, 25, both of upstate New York, suffered serious injuries during the grizzly attack Sept. 11.

Both have been hospitalized at Kalispell Regional hospital since then, and the small truck has been parked in a lot near the hospital for several weeks.

Garner said camping equipment, including a backpack, tent and hiking boots worth a total of about $400, were stolen. He said it appeared that a screwdriver or chisel was used to strip the lock.

"They had some idea what they were doing," he said of the burglar. "It was a pretty slick job."

Garner said the department's detectives are following up on a few leads, and they are hoping to recover the stolen items before Duff leaves for her home in Kingston, N.Y., on Friday.

B'nai B'rith official warns Utah against neo-Nazism

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah dignitaries are denouncing neo-Nazism and bigotry, but it must remain vigilant, it was stressed in a recent address by a B'nai B'rith official.

"We've tried to be very cautious in watching if there's any spill-over effect from Idaho's Hayden Lake Aryans-Nazis Church activities," said Richard S. Hirschhaut.

The ADL also has been fingered as recently reconstituted Populist Party in the United States as an effort to bring a political amalgam of the far right wing in America, an array of organized political extremists and agents of bigotry to cloak themselves in the seeming respectability of nationwide electoral politics.

Hirschhaut noted that a Populist Party candidate is seeking a House seat from Salt Lake County in the Utah Legislature this year.

A league report issued last year said the Populist Party is "a vehicle launched to promote the agenda of Liberty Lobby, the most professional and successful anti-Jewish propaganda organization in the United States," which is headed by a "shadowy admirer" of Adolf Hitler.

"All it really takes is a bigot with a couple of dollars and somebody to listen, and you've got a public relations problem," said Hirschhaut, director of the ADL's Central Pacific Regional Office in San Francisco.

"Although (the Populist Party) is in its incubation stage, it could potentially cause some problems and chaos," he said.

The league continuously tracks Ku Klux Klan activities. While the KKK has dwindled to around 6,000 "card carrying" members in the country, Hirschhaut said there is fear that it has cultivated a "hard-core radical" following. He also alluded to white supremacist "offshoots," such as the Aryan Nations, and a violent splinter group called The Order.

Hirschhaut said Utah's law enforcement agencies and community leaders have been sensitive and receptive to ADL's concerns.

He periodically tours Utah and just completed a visit here to meet with state school administrators, officials of the Salt Lake County Sheriff's Office and public relations staff of the Mormon Church.

'Mountain man' sheriff seeks write-in votes

VIRGINIA CITY, Mont. (AP) — Madison County Sheriff Johnny France, who was defeated by a deputy in the Republican primary in June, has announced a write-in campaign to keep his job in November.

France, who gained national recognition for the capture of two "mountain men" fugitives, will be the third candidate in the race.

Deputy Richard Noorlander, who defeated France in June, is the only candidate on the ballot, but Deputy Lee Edmiston of Sheridan also is a write-in candidate.

In a press conference Wednesday, the 48-year-old France said citizens should not risk the county's security by turning to an untried, uncertain and inexperienced county law enforcement program.

The sheriff said he believed it was his duty to seek re-election, and he said he would work harder than he did in the primary.

"To withdraw and become a spectator would be simple, but it would also be irresponsible, not to offer the expertise I have obtained while working here," he said.

France said Edmiston is an excellent deputy but inexperienced in law enforcement administration.

and he said educational qualifications for the office will be a main campaign issue.

"The only issue of this campaign is basic — Who is best qualified to serve the law enforcement and security needs of our county?" he said.

France tried to fire Noorlander after losing the primary, contending that the deputy did not have a high school diploma as required by state law — Noorlander maintains he was hired before the law was in effect, and France later reinstated him. Noorlander has filed a lawsuit over the firing.

The sheriff has 15-year background and law enforcement experience, six years as sheriff, and his specialized training, and he said Madison County has become safer since he was first elected. He also said he was hired before the law was in effect, and France later reinstated him. Noorlander has filed a lawsuit over the firing.

Before the primary, France was criticized for taking time from his sheriff's duties to run a summer ranching business and to promote his book, "Incident at Big Sky," which is his account of the search for Don and Dan Nichols, wanted for kidnapping a young athlete and killing one of her would be rescuers.

customary "train station" formation, with one long hallway and rooms along that hall. The building will be designed in a circular way, with hallways forming a square around the middle, which will hold a nurses' station and reception area.

The building will house six exam rooms, a procedure room, a conference room, and offices for the doctors. The clinic will also feature many conveniences for the handicapped, he says.

The Farmers Home Administration was a major source of funding for the new clinic, providing a $225,000 loan. In total, the project will cost $320,000, Machala says.

Machala says that the past two years have been spent meeting all the requirements for the building. Several groups were involved in approving the facility, including the clinic's own board of directors and the Family Health Administration, he says.

The old clinic has been operating in the Buhl area since January of 1983. Originally, a nurse practitioner worked there part-time, he says. After increasing the nurse's services to full-time, the clinic began to have physicians rotating through the facility, he says.

Currently, the clinic has lost the nurse practitioner, and the clinic is operating on the basis of rotating physicians, Machala says. The old clinic is located at 120 9th Ave. North in Buhl.

The clinic is non-profit and charges patients on their ability to pay. Machala says the facility was started to serve migrant workers and other low-income people.

The clinic offers the care usually provided by a family doctor, but refers patients needing more extensive care to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. The Buhl clinic will be able to treat minor ailments, as well as perform very minor surgical procedures, Machala says.

The Family Health Services Corp. also has clinics in Twin Falls and Burley. Machala says he has "positive feelings" about the Buhl clinic.

"It's a good facility. There are a lot of good people involved," he says.

sentations regarding parental love, care and affection.

The suit also claims the alleged acts resulted in the need to hire medical therapists, and psychotherapists for the child, requiring loss of earnings and expenses incurred for trips to Boise.

The suit is seeking damages of $2 million to the child, $2 million in general damages to Vaughan and $5 million for punitive damages.

The suit includes Sun Valley Co. on grounds of negligence, alleging the company did not provide proper supervision, adequate care, standards or proper solicitation of employees for the Sun Valley Play School.

Sun Valley Police Chief Capt. Daggett says no report of criminal wrongdoing had been filed in his office and no criminal investigation was under way. Daggett also said there have been no other cases of alleged child abuse reported with his office against the Sun Valley Play School.

Vaughan's attorney Keith Roark said Friday this lawsuit "does not preclude the state from filing a criminal complaint." He also said he could not comment on why Vaughan had chosen to pursue civil rather than criminal action.

Sun Valley Play School Director Julie Thomas said Bolt is no longer employed with the daycare center after having returned to school.

Chuck Webb, assistant general manager of Sun Valley Co., declined any comment on the allegations of the lawsuit.

Bangerter considering raising taxes

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Gov. G. Bangerter, beset by lack of adequate funding for Utah's schools and a sagging economy, is looking at plans for implementing state tax increases and a state income tax.

But while Bangerter is "looking at models that propose rebracketing the state income tax," he has made no final decisions on the type of state tax hike he wants for education, said press secretary Fracine Dec. 17.

He also has not decided whether he will propose a state income tax reform package to legislators in January, she said.

However, state tax commissioners confirm they are preparing several income tax proposals for the governor's consideration. Bangerter will announce his recommended 1987-88 budget plan and any tax plans on and the Democratic legislative minority.

Bangerter has been saying for about a year that taxes must rise to support a financially strapped school system swaying under the pressure of heavy enrollments.

A slow Utah economy and disappearance of one-time revenue surpluses have only heightened the need for "tax hikes" by both Bangerter's Republican colleagues and the Democratic legislative minority.

National Park Service Ranger Gary Cox examines pictures of prehistoric beasts in canyon.

Prehistoric mural a mystery

Park wall surrealistic, inaccessible

By CHARLES HILLINGER
Los Angeles Times

HORSESHOE CANYON, Utah — After a drive of 70 miles over nearly impassable dirt roads, a precarious hike down a steep cliff, then a five-mile walk along a creek bottom in a narrow canyon flanked by towering walls, the Great Gallery is finally encountered.

Who were the artists? How long have the figures been there? For how many centuries have the bug-eyed drawings been staring into space? What is the message the giant sandstone billboard conveys? Archeologists theorize that the prehistoric mural is the work of ancient Indians dating as far back as 1,500, 2,000 or 3,000 years.

"You can read whatever you want into it," said Gary Cox, 26, National Park Service ranger, who leads visitors in this seldom-visited slice of Canyonlands National Park in southeastern Utah.

Resting after the strenuous hike on the hot summer day, Cox sat on a rock at the foot of an 8-foot-high bug-eyed pictograph, a figure with a huge head and triangular-shaped body surrounded by seven monkey-like creatures.

The Great Gallery, a giant sandstone wall with hundreds of eerie human and animal forms is a "long-to-be-remembered highlight of a visit to the Canyonlands National Park, one of the most remote and inaccessible regions in the continental United States.

Here are considered the finest examples of prehistoric rock art in America.

The surrealistic figures on the sandstone cliffs of Horseshoe Canyon are baffling and enigmatic. Human figures without arms or legs. Some holding snakes. Some wearing what appear to be shields. Others holding spears. Numerous "bighorn sheep. Deer. Bison. Birds. One huge panel nearby shows figures holding sicklelike implements and bent over as though harvesting grain.

In the Great Gallery are 275 6-inch human forms lined up in two rows side by side in a marching formation.

Francis Ford Coppola visited Horseshoe Canyon and was so taken by the mural on the sandstone wall when producing "Koyaanisqatsi" (Hopi for "life out of balance"), he introduced and ended the one-of-a-kind 1983 film with footage of the Great Gallery.

"Koyaanisqatsi" has no actors, no plot, just 87 minutes of sound and imagery — clouds racing by mountains, Lake Powell, Black Mesa, skyscraper canyons of New York City, people pouring out of subway shafts, Los Angeles freeway traffic, offices and factories, atomic bomb blasts, the frenzied pace interspersed throughout with Hopi chants.

Horseshoe Canyon is a world of mysterious rock art of kangaroo rats, bats, deer, whiptail lizards and rock wrens that warble a weird song of descending notes.

He hiked the High Sierra, the Cascades of Oregon and Washington and several peaks over 14,000 feet in Colorado, then wandered down into Utah's Canyonlands.

"I liked it so well here I decided to stay. I tried to hire on with the National Park Service but there were no openings. District Ranger Ed Forner permitted me to be a $3-a-day volunteer ranger.

"I'd rather be making $3 a day out here than $20,000 a year in the city." The volunteer ranger is provided housing in a trailer at remote Maze Ranger Station. Cox lives on whole grain rice, corn, beans, squash and trail mix. He patrols Horseshoe Canyon in the Maze, a jumble of canyons described as a 30-square-mile puzzle in sandstone. He works 10 days on, four days off. But his four days off are like his 10 days on, hiking through the wild country as much as 25 to 30 miles a day.

He is forever looking for new art work on the sandstone walls, in hidden caves, and for remnants of ancient Indian dwelling sites, for baskets, pottery, arrowheads and other artifacts.

Recently he discovered three series of pictographs (prehistoric paintings on rocks, cliff and cave walls using mineral and vegetable pigments). One life-sized drawing looked like two humans shaking hands.

Horseshoe Canyon has a number of pictographs and petroglyphs (images cut, pecked or scratched into rocks).

"It is generally believed two prehistoric cultures were responsible for the petroglyphs and pictographs in Canyonlands," Cox explained. "The Anasazi and the Fremont Indians, both groups mysteriously vanished from this area 800 to 900 years ago. That is the latest dating on artifacts found here."

Cox said he envisions Indians gathered in Horseshoe Canyon at ceremonial sites and hunting camps. "As I hike alone I feel the presence of the spirits of these departed people. In my mind I see shaman artists painting the figures on the sandstone cliffs."

Man's story of music in ears has the definite ring of truth

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing that letter from "Hearing Things." For years I've been hearing "Old Man River" over and over again, just as I had heard it sung in "Showboat."

Once in a while I hear old-time gospel music, which I have always loved. And during the holiday season I hear "Silent Night" sung by the Mormon Tabernacle Choir. These songs are always heard in exactly the same way — as though they were recorded in my brain.

I suppose I should be grateful I am not hearing rock music, which I hate. I have never told anyone about this, because I honestly thought they would carry me off and lock me in a mental ward.

— CELIA IN DALLAS

DEAR ABBY: "Hearing Things" wrote that in addition to continuous ringing in his ears, he sometimes heard musical compositions. The ringing in his ears could be, as you suggested, "tinnitus," but the music is an entirely different problem.

"Hearing Things" is having seizures or spasms in the part of his brain that stores musical memories. He should see a neurologist who will prescribe anti-convulsants to stop these seizures, which are otherwise known as musical epilepsy.

The complaint is a valid one. Those with this problem, like "Hearing Things," are afraid to talk about it

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

for fear others will think they are "crazy."

— PAM WINEGAR, OAK RIDGE

DEAR ABBY: The problem described by "Hearing Things" sounds remarkably like two case histories described by Dr. Oliver Sachs, a professor of clinical neurology at Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York.

Dr. Sachs described two women with similar problems, one of whom was having epileptic seizures in the temporal lobes of her brain. She was placed on anti-convulsants and the "musical seizures" stopped.

The other patient went to her otologist who, after finding nothing wrong except usual deafness, referred her to a psychiatrist who, upon finding nothing psychiatrically wrong, sent her to Dr. Sachs — who discovered she had had a small stroke in her right temporal lobe. As her body recovered from the stroke, the music subsided.

By the way, I am not partial to any specialist. I am married to a psychiatrist and formerly worked as a secretary for a group of neurosurgeons. "Hearing" may want to ask his family physician about a referral to a neurologist. I just hate to see patients go from doctor to doctor trying to pinpoint their problems. It's a waste of time and money.

— MELISSA FARBER, NORFOLK, VA.

DEAR ABBY: I just read your column in which "Hearing Things" complained of hearing music in his head. I have just finished reading a book titled "The Man Who Mistook His Wife for a Hat," by Dr. Oliver Sachs. The author told of more than one patient who heard entire "concerts" in his head.

They were not hallucinations, but real — memories triggered by a neurological problem. These patients are not "crazy," some are epileptic, and a few may have tumors that trigger the stored music memories.

I am not a doctor, but this person who is hearing things should see a neurologist.

— ANNA F. JACOBS, TUSCALOOSA, ALA.

CONFIDENTIAL TO J— IN LEVITTOWN, Pa. Money isn't everything. Sometimes it's not even enough. Think it over.

Radical idea of 1870s now viewed as the start of tradition for women

GREENCASTLE, Ind. (AP) — It was a radical idea in its day, independent-thinking women starting a fraternity for women. More than a century later, though, it's considered the start of a tradition.

Kappa Alpha Theta, which proudly boasts of being "the first Greek-letter fraternity known among women," was founded in 1870 at Asbury University, now DePauw.

The oldest sorority in the nation, the Thetas have grown from the four women who started the first, or "alpha," chapter to 127,000 members and 100 chapters in the United States and Canada.

"I think there's a great deal of pride just being a Theta," said Sue Supple of Indianapolis, the international president. "I'm extremely proud to be from alpha chapter."

The Theta membership includes Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum of Kansas, actress Mario Thomas, singer Amy Grant, author Kate Millett and 12,000 undergraduates. They trace their fraternity heritage to Bettie Locke Hamilton, who spun the idea of wearing a male friend's fraternity pin if she could not belong to the group herself.

When her search for an existing fraternity for women failed, her father, an Asbury professor, encouraged her to start her own. After initiating herself before a mirror on Jan. 27, 1870, she then inducted three other women.

"She was a very brave, ingenious woman," said Catherine Tillotson McCord, 89, who was initiated into the alpha chapter by Mrs. Hamilton in 1915.

"There were so few girls on the campus. They were just admitted (to Asbury in 1867), and they were shunned because the fellows didn't like the idea of girls on campus," Mrs. McCord said.

Mrs. McCord, the daughter of a Methodist minister from Lafayette, decided early in her life she would pledge a sorority and selected the Thetas after learning that an older acquaintance was a member. "I had always supposed I would belong to one and picked out Theta when I was in the sixth grade," she said. "And I never gave it up, never."

gave up the idea I wanted to be a Theta.

After graduation, Mrs. McCord took a job as a cashier with the university and stayed in Greencastle. "That put me right here on campus with the girls," she said. "For 62 years I have initiated all of the girls in the Theta chapter."

Among them is Tricia Sparenberg, 22, of Muncie, a former vice president of the chapter. She said its members had service obligations that include an annual Christmas party for an orphanage, involvement in the Big Sisters program and a charity tennis tournament. "It's not a requirement, but it's encouraged," said Miss Sparenberg, who graduated last spring and now works in alumni relations for DePauw.

From the national level, the sorority has endowed DePauw with a collection of 1,500 books written by or about outstanding women. Since 1946, it has also given $1 million to the Institute for Logopedics in Wichita, Kan., which treats people with speech and hearing handicaps.

The friendship that bonds Theta women, however, is probably their strongest link. Barbara Lane, who's just resigned as national conference chairwoman, graduated from Purdue in 1967 and now manages a children's clothing store in Greencastle, where she also heads historic restoration efforts.

"It's a wonderful way to meet people when you go to a new city," Ms. Lane said.

Tear gas grenade set off, 1,600 students evacuated from school

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A tear gas grenade exploded Wednesday at a high school, forcing the evacuation of 1,600 students and the closing of school. There were no serious injuries, but nearly 200 students were taken to hospitals.

The grenade was detonated in a hall and the fumes soon permeated East High School, said police Lt. Tom Brown.

"We have the names of two boys and a third party," Brown said. "They are not in custody, but it's just a matter of locating them. We know who they are and where they live."

Brown would not identify them but said the two boys were students at East High.

Brown said early speculation that the tear gas grenade came from a school ROTC program was being discounted, because "ROTC training devices are usually dummies."

Fire Battalion Chief Don Hill there were no serious injuries, but 35 students were taken immediately to hospitals. None was in serious condition, authorities said.

More than 50 other students were taken by bus to hospitals for evaluations and "precautionary treatment," he said. Some students complained of eye and skin irritation, nausea and scratchy throats.

Salt Lake School District spokesman Robert Wakefield said East High was closed for the rest of the day.

'Stonewalling' may lead to disposal of stock

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Stanford University panel has recommended the school sell $370,000 worth of stock in a company which responded with "polite stonewalling" when asked about its business activities in South Africa.

New York-based Grey Advertising did not cooperate with requests from the Commission on Investment Responsibility for further information about its operations in South Africa.

Jurors see footage of fatal accident

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Jurors in the "Twilight Zone" manslaughter trial went to an 1,100-seat theater Wednesday and viewed footage that showed parents screaming in horror as a helicopter rotor blade was clearly visible and the parents of Renee Chen, 6, and Myca Le, 7, were restrained by the crew.

The panel sat silently as it viewed scenes in which the bloody rotor blade was clearly visible and the parents of Renee Chen, 6, and Myca Le, 7, were restrained by the crew.

In the footage director John Landis, who is on trial along with four associates, appeared horrified as he ran to wreckage of the helicopter, which crashed as Morrow, 33, and the children crossed a stream.

The unusual court session took place at the Samuel Goldwyn Theater at the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences, usually the site of special screenings of movies nominated for Academy Awards.

Africa, according to a report released Tuesday.

"Corporate responsibility includes, at a minimum, responding to the inquiries of concerned shareholders," said the report from the committee, which is reviewing Stanford's investments in companies with business in South Africa.

The commission recommended no further investments in Grey until the company "provides solid evidence of an anti-apartheid commitment or terminates its investments in South Africa."

Grey Advertising did not return a telephone call Wednesday.

The recommendation by the 12-member commission, which includes faculty, students, alumni and staff, was its first action since it advised the trustees in May to sell $4 million worth of stocks in three other companies that do business in South Africa.

Stanford reportedly has $180 million worth of stocks in companies that do business in South Africa.

The committee also recommended no further purchases of Loctite stock because of the company's "hostile unresponsiveness" to requests for information. Loctite makes chemical sealants and adhesives for industrial and commercial use.

Factory orders take nosedive

Single-family homes push construction spending for August

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Orders to U.S. factories in August took their biggest nosedive in five months as demand for defense equipment plummeted.

The Commerce Department said orders for manufactured goods declined $2.8 billion to an August total of $191.8 billion. The 1.4 percent decrease erased a 1.4 percent gain in July that had come from a boom in demand for military equipment.

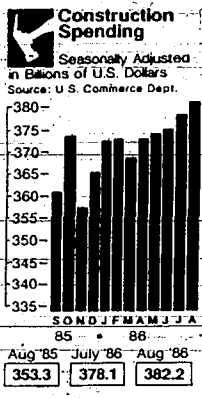

The highly volatile defense category shot up 40 percent in July, only to fall 26.6 percent in August as orders for military aircraft, ships and tanks all declined.

Without the big movement in defense, orders would have been unchanged in August and would have dipped 6.1 percent in July.

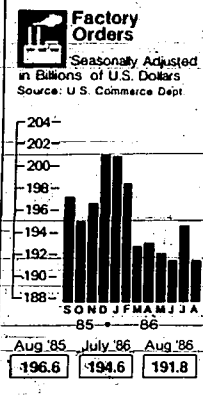

The Commerce Department said construction spending shot up 1.1 percent in August, the best showing since a 1.6 percent rise in April. Strength in single-family home construction and non-residential building pushed spending to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $382.2 billion, 8.2 percent higher than a year ago.

However, analysts said this year's construction boom is likely to fade in coming months as widespread overbuilding of offices and apartments, and office construction was down 8.3 percent from a year ago.

analysts said, coming from the huge trade deficit. As American manufacturing jobs have declined by 168,000 since January as U.S. plants have laid off workers in the face of stiff import competition.

Doug Handler, an economist for Wharton Econometrics, said that despite the weakness in August, economic growth would strengthen considerably in early 1987.

"We think there will be a pickup in the first half of the year. We are reflected continued weakness, starting to see signs the trade sector is coming around." Handler said, noting a report Tuesday that the U.S. trade deficit declined 26.2 percent in August from an all-time high in July.

Wharton is predicting the economy, as measured by the gross national product, will grow at around a 3 percent rate in the first half of 1987, almost double the sluggish growth rate of the past two years.

The August decline in total orders was the "sharpest one-month drop since a 2.8 percent decrease in March.

Orders for durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, fell 3.4 percent in August. This was a weaker showing than an advance report a week ago that put the decline at 2.6 percent.

Orders for non-durable goods climbed 0.6 percent after a 0.8 percent drop in July.

The key category of non-defense capital goods fell 4 percent in August following a 3.7 percent increase in July. This category gives clues to industry plans to expand and modernize production facilities.

The Reagan administration is counting on a strong rebound in business capital investment to help propel growth in the months ahead, but private economists see little chance for strength given the low operating rates at most industries and the negative impact on investment from the new tax bill.

Orders for electrical machinery fell 6.1 percent, with the biggest decline in defense communication equipment. Orders for non-electrical machinery dropped 3.3 percent.

Orders for many metals bucked the general downward trend, posting a 12.9 percent gain, with the steel industry accounting for two-thirds of the increase.

Shipments of manufactured goods dropped 0.2 percent in August to $193 billion, the second month in a row that shipments have fallen.

Stock market rises for 2nd day in row

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed ahead for the second straight session Wednesday, aided by hopes for further declines in interest rates.

Airline stocks posted notable gains in a fairly active session. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up 12.38 points Tuesday, climbed another 15.32 to 1,782.90.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange stepped up to 143.55 million shares from 124.88 million the day before.

Prices of long-term government bonds moved up modestly Wednesday as interest rates declined. The rally in the credit markets has been spurred by economic statistics showing less strength in business activity than had been expected.

Airline stocks responded to word of fare increases being proposed by major carriers, which feared the Justice Department's fierce price competition in the industry over the past several years might be easing.

AMR gained 2 1/2 to 58 1/2. UAL 2 1/2 to 45 1/2. The Justice Department said it wouldn't oppose the company's plans to acquire People Express and Frontier Airlines.

Texas Air, traded on the American Stock Exchange, rose 3 1/2 to 25 1/2. The Justice Department said it wouldn't oppose the company's plans to acquire People Express and Frontier Airlines.

and the Department of Transportation approved its merger with Eastern Airlines.

Eastern shares rose 1/2 to 9 1/2. USX led the active list among Big Board issues, up 1 1/4 on turnover of more than 11 million shares. In recent sessions, takeover speculation focusing on the stock had been waning, but rumors revived Wednesday that financier Carl Icahn was building up a position in the stock.

A Morgan Mohawk Power (elc) 2 1/2 to 17 1/2 after a Wall Street Journal article asserted that the company might have to reduce its dividend. The company said it had no plans to do so.

Some prominent computer and technology issues were laggers. International Business Machines dropped 1 1/2 to 133 1/2. Digital Equipment was unchanged at 89 1/2.

In the overall tally on the Big Board, gainers outnumbered losers by nearly 2 to 1. The exchange's composite index added 1.25 to 134.99.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 172.71 million shares.

A S&P 500 index of 400 industrial rose 2.45 to 258.51, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 2.28 to 233.60.

Texas Air expansion plans moving ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Air's takeover of Eastern Airlines won final government approval Wednesday and its plans to buy People Express moved a step forward when the Justice Department said it won't object to the acquisition on antitrust grounds.

The Transportation Department, which gave the Texas Air-Eastern merger its tentative endorsement Sept. 18, announced final approval of the $276 million merger, saying all competitive problems had been resolved.

The acquisition of Eastern by the Houston-based Texas Air Corp. would not substantially reduce competition in any market, the department said.

Texas Air, which already owns Continental Airlines and New York Air, will become the largest airline holding company in the country with nearly 20 percent of the air travel market with the purchase of Eastern and the expected approval of the People Express acquisition.

The Transportation Department said its only concern with the Texas Air-Eastern deal — competition in the Washington-New York-Boston shuttle market — had been resolved.

With the emergence of Pan American World Airways as a direct competitor to the Eastern shuttle.

Pan Am on Wednesday began 15 flights a day in the Washington-New York-Boston market in direct competition with Eastern.

"We look forward to our association with (Texas Air chairman) Frank Lorenzo and Texas Air Corp., a synergistic that bodes well for the employees of Eastern, our shareholders, members of the travel community and the traveling public," said Transportation Secretary Leonard said in Miami.

Eastern spokesman Glenn Parsons said while there may be some route adjustments down the road, no immediate changes were in the works.

The Transportation Department also will have final say on whether to approve Texas Air's purchase of People Express and the assets of Frontier Airlines. Frontier, a subsidiary of People Express, is no longer operating.

The Justice Department's antitrust division said it would not oppose the Texas Air-Eastern merger in a letter from Deputy Assistant Attorney General Charles Ryle to the Transportation Department.

Conflicting complexities in new tax law

Summing up this series of tax column on the blacked-out 1986 tax "reform" law (the column marks are mine), one thing becomes clear: What started out as a sincere stab at simplicity and fairness has become a virtual monstrosity. The legislation is loaded with hundreds of conflicting complexities.

One thing is becoming more and more apparent as I keep reading the bill: The new law is a mess. Millions of American taxpayers are going to need more tax advice and more tax help than ever before. And in their infinite wisdom, our lawmakers have decided that just now — in this law — the cost of such help will not be fully deductible for 1987 — on the tax return you file in 1988. It still will be fully deductible as a limited deduction in 1986.

The more I hear from outside experts, the more close to Capitol Hill, the people around me I find that work after the congressional Conference Committee supposedly agreed on a tax bill, top tax experts (and many, many people in Congress) are still struggling to figure out what this all-encompassing legislation really says.

Sylvia Porter
Last in a series

Nevertheless, with the help of Eli J. Warach, senior vice president of Prentice-Hall Information Services (who has been following this particular tax bill's progress on virtually an hour-by-hour basis), I have been pointing out key techniques for you on how to deal with things for your top tax benefit in 1986 and 1987.

Let's wind up this series with some short answers to the most often asked questions that have been directed to me. In recent columns, I've gone into much more detail — to tell you how to handle the new provisions for top tax savings in many of these areas.

Q. Won't the tax law be much simpler with just two tax brackets, 15 percent and 28 percent?

A. Probably not. With phase-ins and phase-outs of various tax items. Even more important, forget about 15 percent and 28 percent for now. Those rates are scheduled to go into effect in 1988. You must be more concerned now about 1986 and 1987. Besides, some astute tax people are predicting that by the time 1988 rolls around, many things, including tax rates and the economy, could be drastically changed.

Q. Will I still be able to take medical expense deductions in 1987?

A. Yes, if that's a big if. As you may know, there's a 5 percent floor on medical expenses for 1986. That simply means that you can take an itemized deduction for medical expenses that exceed 5 percent of your adjusted gross income. Starting in 1987, that floor is increased by 50 percent. The 5 percent

There's another little beauty here. Starting in 1987, for many people the new law will result in the same overall income but a "higher" adjusted gross income. That, simply put, means your medical expense and some other itemized deductions (union dues and employee business expenses, for example) will be more difficult to use to reduce your taxes.

Q. I've been told that starting in 1987 I no longer will be able to deduct the real estate property taxes on my home. Is that true?

A. Not at all. State and local income taxes and property taxes will continue to be deductible as itemized deductions.

And there's an art to decorating them

Those big rigs are poetry in motion

By JUDY MCCONNELL STEELE
The Associated Press

BOISE — They're sleek, they're powerful. And they're moving down the highway in blinding reds, luscious mauves, bold geometric patterns and delicate pinstripes.

They're the semis, the big trucks in the long haul. They may carry the same cargo as the monotonous trucks of yesterday, but these monsters are poetry in motion.

Many are owned by companies. Others are the property of their proud owner-operators. And some of them are getting their gorgeous paint jobs and colorful designs from Rod Elsie.

Elsie's business, Northwest Truck Painting and Design, is brisk.

One garage is occupied by a large truck cab, and a tractor, that has been repainted in a dusty rose metallic paint. A man with a tiny paint brush is tracking delicate looping lines of contrasting paint on the tractor's doors.

Elsie is beginning work on another tractor, a new vehicle that arrived from the factory with a panel smashed in. With a yard stick and pencil, he is laying out the truck's five-tone design from one side into the new panel on the other side.

A white tractor from Simplot Co. has just been driven into the lot to have a new doorsill painted. And a black tractor waits outside to be stripped and then repainted.

Elsie recommends stripping a vehicle "if it's been painted quite a few times."

Unlike most artists, Elsie spends a lot of working time in a respirator. To strip a vehicle down to the metal, he uses a self-etching primer that contains phosphoric acid. He protects himself from the acid by donning coveralls, as well as the respirator.

Spraypainting a truck also requires a respirator.

"I wet down the dusty floors, close the doors, wet the filters in the doors and put on a respirator," Elsie said, before spraying on a primer coat and then one of more than 3,000 available colors.

The painter also can mix colors to match a truck's trailer or an operator-owner's dream. No matter what color is chosen, he usually uses a polyurethane enamel.

"A lot of guys think they're hard to spray, but they're not. You just have to put enough paint on," Elsie said.

He pointed to the dusty rose tractor as a good example. "I defy you to find a run on this truck. There aren't any dry spots either."

Once the coats of paint have been sprayed on, the fun begins.

Colors can be pearlized by adding a pearl tone in gold, red, green, blue or silver to the clear finish coat of paint. The pearlized colors give the paint a luminescent shine.

Or metallic paint can be applied as an overall coat or in stripes.

Contrasting color can be laid on in wide bands the length of the truck, narrow pinstripes or overlay stripes that follow the outline of a fender, hood or door.

Albrushed murals also are a possibility, although Elsie says he hasn't had requests for scenes or figures.

"Most of that kind of thing is done down in Los Angeles. All over the California area, there are guys hanging around the truck stops, waiting to do murals," he said.

"A lot of the truck owners (here) are going to single colors with pinstriping. I don't know if it's because it's cheaper to repair or it's a fad."

Pinstriping, delicate wisps of swirling color, break up a (one-color) truck, give them something that's their own style.

Elsie doesn't do pinstriping himself, but hires painters from Signs by Smith to provide the steady hands needed. His specialty is large geometric patterns.

When a recent truck owner came in, he knew he wanted the stripes from the trailer to come forward onto the tractor. Elsie came up with a zigzag design that included stripes of several widths.

"I sketched it out on paper, and he said, 'Let's go with it,'" Elsie said. The sketch was first transferred onto paper that is printed with a truck to scale, and then onto the truck itself.

The geometric designs are not cheap. To duplicate one damaged panel on a truck cost $700, Elsie said, because it used five colors. A solid color paint job would have cost the owner about $200.

But when the average new truck costs $80,000, owners are willing to spend a little extra to give their babies some flash.

ed deductions. But, as one column in this series pointed out, taxpayers are not home-completely free on state and local taxes. Let me repeat for you that sales taxes which have been longstanding favorite deductions will no longer be permitted as deductions. You may get to refer back to the column in this series that tells you how to get maximum dollars and cents benefit from sales tax deductions by beginning now — in 1986.

Q. How about interest on a mortgage on my home. Is that fully deductible?

A. Generally, yes. However there are some very special rules that come into play here. For example, suppose someone buys a house for $60,000 and gets a mortgage of $48,000. The interest on the $48,000 is fully deductible. However, if the mortgage goes up in value and you decide to refinance, you'll have to watch every step.

Assuming you haven't spent any money on improvements, the top mortgage on which interest would be fully deductible would be $50,000 — the purchase price of the house. There are special provisions that would permit additional interest deductions of mortgage interest if the extra money is used for medical or educational purposes.

Q. Does the new tax bill have any great impact on investments? Do some get better and do some get worse?

A. Absolutely. There are new, higher tax rates for long-term capital gains and new lower rates on short-term gains. New rules on investment interest may call for a shift of investment strategy. There are crackdowns on tax shelters and on some municipal bonds.

Q. I'm a grandparent and I keep hearing that even under the new law I can make a gift of income-producing securities to my under-14-year-old grandchildren. What's more, the income from those securities will be taxed at the children's tax rates — not mine or the parents' tax rates. On the other hand, if parents make the gift to the children, the income is taxed at the parents' rate. Is that correct?

A. That's what everyone thought — and, according to Eli J. Warach, that's what it says in the tax bill passed by the House and the bill passed by the Senate. But all that was changed in the Conference Report (and that's what makes this law so terribly confusing and frustrating). The Conference Report would have unearned income (dividends, interest, rents, etc.) of children under 14 taxed at the parents' rate no matter who made the gift.

S. Korean firm places plant order

WASHINGTON (AP) — The South Korean electric utility has ordered two nuclear power plants from a Connecticut company, the first order for a new U.S. nuclear plant in eight years, the Energy Department announced Tuesday.

Korea Electric Power Co. has ordered reactors from Combustion Engineering Corp. of Windsor, Conn., electrical generators and turbines from General Electric Co. and has designated the firm of Sargent & Lundy as architect-engineers, said Energy Secretary John S. Herrington in a statement.

"This is a much-needed and welcome boost for our domestic nuclear industry," said Herrington.

The last order for an American plant was in 1978, also from Korea, to Westinghouse Corp., according to the Atomic Industrial Forum, an industry group. That became Korea Electric Power Corp. Unit 5. The new plants will be the company's Units 11 and 12.

The Three Mile Island accident in 1979 caused many cancellations already rising because of reduced electricity demand.

Though more than 20 plants are still under construction, many U.S. utility company executives have said they could never order another nuclear plant of present design because of high and uncertain costs.

The explosion of the Chernobyl plant in the Soviet Union last April — a plant with a different design — reinforced the view that U.S. suppliers might never get another order.

Scott Peters, spokesman for the forum, said Tuesday, "We're very pleased that someone has ordered a U.S. nuclear plant."

Neither Peters nor Jim Myrna, Energy Department spokesman, had details on the size of the plants, in terms of their cost or generating capacity.

Combustion Engineering makes a pressurized water reactor in which the nuclear chain reaction heats water under pressure, which in turn heats other water to make steam for turbines.

A 1,000-megawatt plant, if built in the United States, might cost $2 billion — if all goes well — at $2,000 per kilowatt of capacity. Duke Power Co. completed a plant recently at about $1,800 per kilowatt.

Not everything goes well — the Shoreham plant in New York and the Seabrook plant in New Hampshire are estimated to cost more than $5,000 per kilowatt.

Investments in new hands

BOISE (AP) — A Tacoma, Wash., company has been appointed investment manager for Idaho's Public Employees Retirement System.

The Retirement Board voted Monday to hire the Frank Russell Trust Co. to manage the retirement fund, said Chairman Maria Eschen.

She said a new investment manager will be able to deal more effectively with the increasingly complex investment alternatives now available.

THE ACES

Dear Mr. Wolff: We play a convention (Landy) that entails a two-club overall over a one-club opening. The six-club opening is a massive pre-empt promising a freak hand with lots and lots of clubs and no defense against any contract.

ANSWER: No. Had partner been interested in Aces, he would have found a way to use Blackwood. The six-club opening is a massive pre-empt promising a freak hand with lots and lots of clubs and no defense against any contract.

Dear Mr. Wolff:

Partner opens on spade and next hand overcalls one no-trump. Do I go strength and expose a certain bluff overall by making a jump shift?

ANSWER: No. You do not. You must start by doubling for penalties to tell partner the hand belongs to your side. All other bids, including the jump shift, show a long suit and an inability to double for penalties.

Dear Mr. Wolff:

If RHO doubles my partner's one-spade bid for takeout, what do I need to redouble?

ANSWER: In general, 10 HCP or more. The redouble asks opener to pass the next bid to the redoubler for a possible penalty double. With good support for spades, the redouble might be offered with as little as eight or nine HCP.

Dear Mr. Wolff:

If partner deals and opens six clubs, am I justified in raising to a grand slam if I hold two aces outside the trump suit?

ANSWER: I would consider a run-out only with a worthless hand and diamonds and with a heart suit good enough to win four or five tricks as the trump suit (e.g., Q-10-9-8-7-5).

Dear Mr. Wolff:

THE ACES

BOBBY WOLFF

"Each believes easily what he fears and what he desires."
— La Fontaine.

South had an easy game against any 3-2 diamond division. And the odds were with him when he played for it (68 percent). Unfortunately for him, diamonds didn't behave, and worse yet, South never realized he had thrown away his game.

South won his spade king and tried a diamond finesse to dummy's jack. East won and returned a spade to knock out dummy's ace. South led a diamond to his queen, intending to win four diamond tricks, but West's discard spoiled that show. The 4-1 break spelled disaster, and South could win only eight tricks.

South missed a much better way to play today's diamonds. Since he needed only four minor suit winners, a safety play in diamonds was best. South should start with dummy's ace of diamonds and then a low one toward his queen. East must duck (otherwise South has four diamond winners) and South's queen wins. With two diamond tricks, dummy South can switch to clubs to develop two more winners, and instead of down one, he scores nine tricks.

The suggested play in diamonds also works when West holds the four diamonds. In that case, when West wins South's queen with his king, South has a marked finesse to dummy's J-9 to win four diamond tricks.

CSI proceeds with plan to reserve 546 seats in gymnasium

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho will proceed with making a maximum of 546 gymnasium seats available on a reserved basis and for a fee.

The school's board of trustees reached that decision during a Wednesday luncheon meeting that attracted more attendance than its recent $7 million budget hearing.

Under the plans thus far adopted, the entire western floor section of the gymnasium will be dedicated to reserved seating. For the first year at least this will consist of the bleacher seating as currently exists but each seat blocked off at 24 inches. The cost will be $100 for a package deal that will include an admission ticket for 19 home games plus the reserved seat.

Proceeds in excess of $40 per package will be escrowed by college and used if the reserved seat program is expanded to include individual theater seats.

While some expressed concern that 546 reserved seats would not meet demand, Lane Clow, Golden Eagle Booster president, said just over 300 season tickets were sold last year. Clow said the booster income broke down into about $6,000 in season ticket sales and $14,000 in season ticket sales. The largest of that was the $6,000 contributed by Cactus Pete's as part of its "dollar-per-point" backing of the CSI program.

However, Clow said he couldn't predict whether any of the other "donated" money might now be

— Board Chairman Leroy Craig

rechanneled into the booster program through reserved seat purchasing, maintaining the income but decreasing the number of reserved seats available.

Representatives from Jerome and Wendell predicted ease of selling 20 and 12 reserved packages in each city and noted the demand could be expected to reach the Wood River Valley.

The method of awarding and distributing the seats, if demand exceeds supply, also developed some

Longtime booster workers, who have carried the spears in all the tickets and booster campaigns for the past many years, said they felt such dedication should be rewarded with a first-chance option at buying the reserved seat packages rather than lump them with the "Johnny-come-latelies" who would jump into a lottery and a chance for prime seating.

Should the seating be over-subscribed, one lottery could perhaps be used to allot seats and another to make final site selections.

The trustees stressed that the reserved seat program is being initiated to accommodate complaints from people who were unable to compete for seats last year. All seats went on a first-come, first-served basis. In several instances the gymnasium was filled by 5:30 p.m. For the bi-regional playoff against Arizona Western, fans began lining up at 3:05 p.m.

In most instances, a few people blocked off dozens of seats with blankets and coats. Those who had no seat-saving friends or couldn't get to the gymnasium before lockup, demanded the right to buy reserved seats.

Referring to similar seating problems in major universities across the nation, Board Chairman Leroy Craig defended the reserved seat program.

"We have a good product and people are ready to pay to see it," he said. "I think our real danger is we might set our sights too low (on the number of seats and the prices made available).'

"But by limiting the reserved seating to this one section, we leave more than 75 percent of the seating available to general admission and first-come, first-served fans," he said. "I think it is a fair way to deal with all our fans."

Fernando needs no interpreter

As the Dodgers' ace matures, his grasp of baseball improves

By TIM LIOTTA
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Five years ago, the baseball world met Fernando Valenzuela through an interpreter.

Pudgy and baby-faced, the 20-year-old from a tiny Mexican village spoke little English when he made his debut in one of major league baseball's biggest cities.

Yet he pitched for the Los Angeles Dodgers with the confidence of a seasoned veteran and threw a screwball that earned him the Cy Young Award. It also earned him NL Rookie of the Year and the hearts of fans who were wild about the Anaheim way of life without forgetting his traditional Mexican customs.

Five years later, an interpreter is no longer his constant companion. Valenzuela has become very comfortable living in America, financially, socially and linguistically.

He is a millionaire, a married man and the father of three.

And as his command of the English language grows, so do the dimensions of his personality.

"Things are coming out like his great sense of humor," Dodgers pitching coach Ron Perranoski said. "He's always had the poise, he's a little more comfortable around his teammates and the public because he has a chance to express himself verbally."

As far as Valenzuela is concerned, he's still the same old Fernando who grew up playing baseball in Elchihuahua, a desert town of 300 about 300 miles south of Tucson, Ariz.

"The only change is that I have more responsibilities," he said. "I don't feel comfortable about the city. I know a lot of people."

"I come from the small town to the big city. It's a big change, but I have tried to stay the same, do the same things. Sometimes it's hard to be in the big city."

Valenzuela, who has earned $1 million or more in each of the last three seasons, has moved his family into a spacious home with a swimming pool in a community close to Dodger Stadium.

Before that, the Valenzuela family lived in a three-bedroom condominium with a panoramic view of the city — a far cry from the four-room house he once shared with his parents, six brothers and five sisters.

"Even though he's so successful in everything he does and is successful financially, he's basically keeps living like a normal person," said Tony DeMarco, Valenzuela's agent.

He's not "ostentatious," he said. "He doesn't buy a lot of gold or expensive jewelry. He owns a beautiful, comfortable house without being Beverly Hills, he said. He shies away from playing the big shot, and he said if he wanted to."

Of course, DeMarco has noticed changes in Valenzuela, other than the loss of the baby fat from the rookie days.

"He's more mature," he said. "The knowledge of the language is another asset on his side. Another thing is that he's adjusted more to the American way of life without forgetting his traditional Mexican customs."

Family life had a lot to do with that adjustment.

Valenzuela credits his wife, Cin, whom he married after the first season, his sons, Fernando Jr., 3, and Ricardo, 2, and daughter, Leticia, 1, as helping him get over the two points.

He's still working to improve his English.

When he answers questions from the media, he speaks slowly, choosing his words carefully. When he doesn't understand something, he asks for an explanation.

"Now with the press, it's all right," he said. "I was tough, I was tough, I was tough."

"I was on my game and then I had to sign the (and) signing of my first contract. My first contract was a million dollars. I didn't know people."

"Sometimes I would not say anything because I would not know the meaning. Now I try to be more comfortable. Now I try to talk more to the press in English. I'm trying all the time."

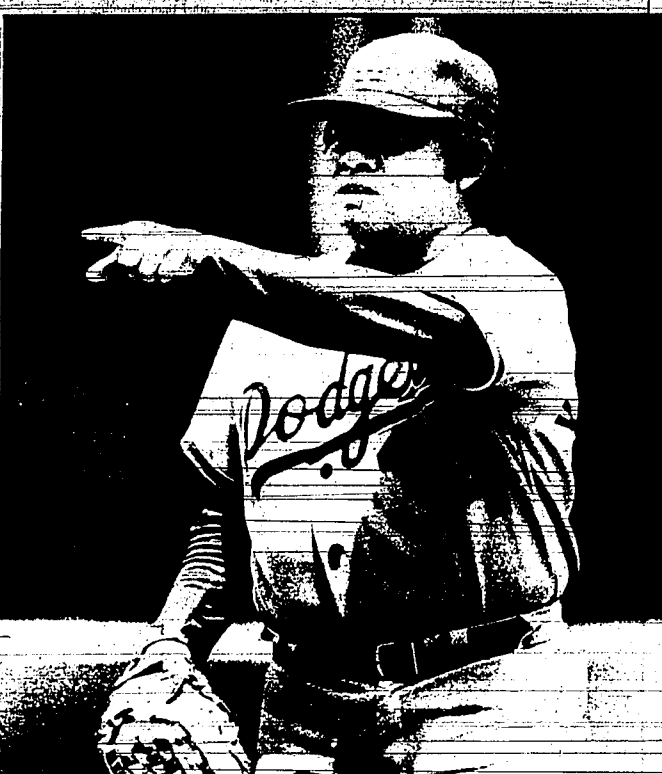

For the past four years, he also has been talking to Los Angeles sports writers, getting them to get their questions to him. "I don't know people."

One phrase he has mastered is "I'm sorry, I'm sorry."

As part of the program, each year 2,000 tickets to a Dodger game are allotted to the students with the best attendance records, with their parents and teachers. The group recently saw Valenzuela win a 14-5 victory over the Houston Astros.

The left-hander, a 19-game winner, is likely to become the first run like Meridian. Highland throws the ball very well.

"Highland is just like the Highland of 10 to 15 years. It never runs out of quarterbacks and that amazes me," Jones continued.

Five years later, Dodger hurler Fernando Valenzuela still has fun on the mound

And though it has been a trying, injury-riddled season for the Dodgers, Valenzuela says, "I think this is my best year."

"He's been great every year he's been in the league," Perranoski said. "The only difference I've seen from the beginning is that he's gained more experience and he's more knowledgeable about the hitters and that makes him an even tougher pitcher."

Valenzuela agreed.

"I pitch smarter. I know the league. I know the hitters. I know what situation I have to use my best pitch, the screwball. In 1981, would just go out and throw the ball to a spot, but now I try to combine my pitches," he said.

"That's just the natural process any pitcher goes through," Dodgers catcher Mike Scioscia said. "I guess he's gotten smarter. He knows the hitters better. He definitely knows how to pitch."

And he is a definite in what are referred to as "probable" pitchers. Valenzuela has never missed a start in his six years with the Dodgers.

"I don't do anything special," he said. "I just work hard in spring training because I know it's a long season. I do weights, but not heavy, and I stretch my muscles."

The last time he can recall missing a start was in the Mexican League eight years ago. "I missed five or six starts," he said, "but that was when I was playing first base and right field in between starts."

Life has changed a lot for Valenzuela since those days, but one thing is constant.

"I still have fun playing this game," he said, breaking into a big smile.

No action is taken against Pankratz

By The Associated Press

BOISE — District Three high school football officials have voted not to take any action against Borah High School following the election of Borah Coach De Pankratz from a losing game with Minon on Sept. 12.

The action was put on probation last fall by the District Three Advisory Board because of an incident between Pankratz and an official during and after the Boise-Borah game last season.

At the time, the board said any further incidents would result in the officials' organization refusing to provide officials for Borah sports activities.

Monday's decision, said Todd Barnes, the director of football officials, was based on the fact that the incident occurred in District Four, Borah is in District Three, and no report was forwarded from District Four to District Three officials.

Barnes said a letter was sent to various governing bodies in District Three and to the Idaho High School Activities Association. He said the letter warned that any further incidents involving the Borah team would result in officials withholding their services.

Clemens, hit by line shot, not hurt badly

By The Associated Press

BOSTON — Boston right-hander Roger Clemens, making his last start before the American League playoffs, suffered a bruised right elbow Wednesday night when he was struck by a line drive during a game with the Baltimore Orioles.

Clemens, 24, apparently escaped serious injury less than three hours after being hit by Manager John McNamara that he would start against the California Angels here Tuesday night in the opener of the AL Championship Series.

Dr. Arthur Pappas, the Red Sox team physician, reported that X-rays disclosed no broken bones. He said that Clemens suffered a bruise and his status was "day-to-day."

Clemens was struck by a ball hit by Baltimore catcher John Stefroff, with runners on first and third and two outs in the second.

The Red Sox reported that the ball struck for the Tigers. Mountain Home right elbow as he turned away on his follow through.

Bruins squad faces the challenge of the season: Highland

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — It's the biggest game on the Twin Falls High football schedule this fall — and it's against probably the best football team on the schedule.

That's the view the 23 Bruins and Coach Bill Jones face this Friday night in the Idaho State Minidome against the undefeated and Highland Rams, ranked third in the Associated Press Class A poll.

The game is the second half of the Gem State Conference doubleheader in the "Dome," following a battle between Pocatello and Blackfoot. The Twin Falls-Highland game is expected to start about 8:45 p.m. or as the contract says "25 minutes after the end of the first game."

"For us it's simply the biggest game of the season," says Jones. "Either we win it or we're not in the playoffs this fall."

To win, the Bruins will have to have a supreme effort apparently because Jones says "I would put Highland in the same category defensively as Meridian (which defeated Twin Falls 49-3). Offensively, I believe Highland is a little better as it does not rely solely on the run like Meridian. Highland throws the ball very well."

"Highland is just like the Highland of 10 to 15 years. It never runs out of quarterbacks and that amazes me," Jones continued.

This year's starting quarterback is Andy Beilla, a 6-foot-2, 160-pound senior, who saw considerable action last year. His backup is 6-2, 175-pound junior Chris Hoge, a familiar Pocatello football name — who starts at tight end while awaiting his turn at signal-calling.

Jones says that isn't the limit of Highland's ability.

"They have probably the two best linebackers in the conference — John Hall and Nate Long — who fly to the ball and hit well. And they have Mike Empey, who is 6-2 and 220 pounds, and everyone tells me the premier lineman in the state this year," Jones said.

"But it's more than just their individuals," he continued. "Highland does many things very well. With their rushing and passing they can keep great offensive pressure on your defense. They don't have the burner (speed back) as in the past a receiver or the dominant running back. But they use their balanced offense very well."

"We've played them tough the last five or six years using the blitz and mixing up our defenses as much as we dare," he said. "We can't sit and go toe-to-toe with them this year. But if we can get them a little confused, we might be able to give them a battle."

Helping somewhat in that department will be the return of three defensive players who were sidelined in the loss to Idaho Falls.

Jones welcomes back Brent Knapp, Shane Jeff and Jerry Kepner. Defensive end-punter-placemaker Dave Glenn will still be sidelined unless he is able to kick a little. He's been out for three weeks.

Center Jason Laforgue may be available only for long snaps as a position continues to be an injury problem for the Bruins.

Elsewhere in the Magic Valley Friday, one state playoff berth will be on the line while two other teams that are still unbeaten in their respective conferences will face challenges from teams that still have playoff aspirations.

In Burley, the 2-3 Bobcats, coming off a 16-7 victory over Buhl in their South-Central Idaho Conference opener last week, will host Mountain Home (5-0 and 2-0) in a 7:30 p.m. contest that could wrap up the SCIC title for the Bruins.

In the Canyon Conference, third-ranked Gooding (4-1 and 3-0) will host Kimberly (3-2 and 1-1) in a crucial contest at 7:30 p.m. Gooding is looking to keep its league mark perfect in anticipation of a season-ending confrontation with the other unbeaten team in the league, Wendell.

In the Magic Valley Conference, fifth-ranked Oakley (4-1 and 2-1) will come calling at Shoshone (3-2 and 3-0) at 7:30 p.m. as the Indians seek to keep their unbeaten conference

Jackson loses no-hitter as K.C. tops Angels

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kansas City left-handed Danny Jackson carried a no-hitter into the ninth inning against the California Angels Wednesday night, but had to settle for a two-hit, 2-0 shutout victory.

Dick Schofield broke up the no-hitter by Jackson, 11-2, with a ground single to right field leading off the ninth. One out later, Doug DeCinces singled, and Rick Burleson walked, with two outs before Gary Pettit hit a fly ball to right field to end the game.

Jackson — nearly handed the American League West champions their second straight defeat in less than two weeks. Jackson struck out five and walked three.

Before the ninth, the closest the Angels came to hitting against Jackson was an attempted bunt by Devon White with one out in the eighth. Jackson gave up only one fly ball out in the first eight innings. The Royals scored both of their runs in the third inning against Vern Riffe, 1-3, on a double by Lonnie Smith, an RBI single by Kevin Seitzer, an error by center fielder Pettit and Frank White's run-scoring single.

Boston 11 Baltimore 7

BOSTON — The Boston Red Sox had their playoff hopes joined Wednesday night when 24-year-old Roger Clemens was hit on the elbow by a line drive in a 11-7 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Clemens, named earlier to start against California in the American League Championship Series opener here Tuesday, was hit on the right elbow by a drive off the bat of Baltimore's John Stefo in the second inning.

After the ball ricocheted over second baseman Marty Barrett's head for an RBI single, Clemens grabbed his elbow and was escorted, immediately into the clubhouse.

He was taken to a nearby hospital, where X-rays disclosed no broken bones.

Rob Woodward, 23, who replaced Lollar in the fifth, was the winner.

Tony Arund, the second of four Baltimore pitchers, was the loser in his first major league decision.

Toronto 3 New York 0

NEW YORK — Jesse Barfield connected for his 38th and 39th home runs of the season and threw out his 20th runner, while Jimmy Key and Tom Henke combined on a six-hitter Wednesday night as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the New York Yankees 3-0.

Barfield led off the second inning with a high drive just over the left field fence for the first run of the game. Two outs later, Ron Shephard doubled and scored on a single by Buck Martinez against Ron Guidry.

Barfield, who also led off major league outfielders in assists, got his 20th of the year in the fourth inning when he threw out Don Mattingly from right field trying to stretch a single into a double. Barfield's hit — his second homer of the game in the ninth.

Mattingly, trailing Boston's Wade Boggs in the at-batting race, went 2-for-4 and raised his average to .350.

Detroit 2 Milwaukee 1

MILWAUKEE — Chet Lemon's RBI double in the eighth inning boosted the Detroit Tigers to a 2-1 victory Wednesday night over the Milwaukee Brewers, spoiling the debut of Manager Tom Trebelhorn.

Lemon's second extra-base hit of the night helped the Tigers overcome a 10-strikeout performance by Ted Higuera, 20-11, who pitched his 15th complete game. Higuera's strikeout total this season is 207.

Frank Tanana, 12-9, pitched seven innings, giving up three hits and five walks, plus a hit batter. Eric King relieved Tanana to start the eighth and gave way to Willie Hernandez, who got the last five outs for his 21th save.

Chicago 3 Seattle 1

CHICAGO — Reid Nichols drove in three runs, including the tie-breaker with a homer in the sixth, as the Chicago White Sox defeated Seattle 3-1 Wednesday night, handing the Mariners their sixth straight loss.

Nichols drove a 3-1 pitch off Mike Trujillo, 3-1, into the left field stands to snap a 1-1 tie.

Nichols drove in three runs in Chicago's doubleheader sweep over the Mariners Tuesday, and has six RBIs in two nights. He had just 10 going before Tuesday.

Bob Jones, 5-1, who had been sidelined since Aug. 4 with a torn triceps muscle in his right arm, relieved Neil Allen after five innings. Allen had not pitched since July 25, also suffering a muscle injury to his pitching arm.

James was replaced by Bill Dawley, who pitched the final three innings for his second save.

Seattle set an American League strikeout mark in the third inning when second baseman Harold Reynolds took a called third strike, the 1,125th of the season for the Mariners.

Oakland 9 Texas 7

ARLINGTON, Texas — Pinch-hitter Terry Steinbach hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning, rallying the Oakland A's to a 9-7 victory over the Texas Rangers Wednesday night.

Steinbach's second homer of the year came after the Rangers, who had a four-game winning streak snapped, scored four runs in the sixth and three in the seventh to lead 7-5 after trailing 5-0.

Steinbach's homer came off reliever Mitch Williams, 16-5, who relieved Dale Mohr with one out and a runner on base. Williams walked Alfredo Griffin before Steinbach hit his game-winning homer.

Reliever Jay Howell, 3-6, pitched 2 2/3 innings for the victory.

Cleveland 12 Minnesota 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Cleveland Indians right-hander Tom Candiotti 15-12, rallied the Minnesota Twins and struck out a career-high 12 in Cleveland's 12-3 victory Wednesday night.

Joe Carter hit a three-run homer to highlight Cleveland's 15-hit attack. Pat Tabler added a single, double and triple and Julio Franco delivered four singles and two RBIs for the Indians.

Boston's Roger Clemens clutching his arm after a line drive off the bat of Oriole Ken Gerhart struck his elbow last night.

Daugherty makes $6 million deal with Cavaliers

By CHUCK MELVIN
The Associated Press

Pro basketball
RICHFIELD, Ohio — Brad Daugherty, the first player chosen in the 1985 NBA draft, became the highest-paid player in Cleveland Cavaliers' history Wednesday, signing a guaranteed six-year, $6 million contract.

The 7-footer from the University of North Carolina reportedly will be paid $500,000 in the first year of the deal, with annual raises until reaching $15 million in the sixth year.

"The whole situation of signing and money was not that unusual," said Daugherty. "I'm not a very materialistic person—I have other things in my life that are very important to me, and money's not one of them."

Cleveland's highest-paid player previously was center Mel Turpin, who is in the third year of a four-year deal worth an estimated $2.5 million.

The Cavaliers traded with Philadelphia on draft day in June to obtain the first pick overall, sending veteran forward Roy Hinson and $800,000 cash to the 76ers.

They used the selection to take Daugherty, who can play both center and power forward.

"I'd rather play forward but either one's fine," he said. "I think I can play both positions."

Lenny Wilkens, Cleveland's new coach, said he has not decided how he will use Daugherty.

"It's a little early to say," Wilkens said. "It's safe to say he's going to play both center and forward, but which way we'll open the season with him, we don't know."

Daugherty averaged 14.2 points and 7.4 rebounds per game in four years with the Tar Heels, including 20.2 points and 9.0 rebounds per game as a senior.

He is the only one of Cleveland's top four draft-day acquisitions to sign for four years.

Ron Harper, a guard-forward from Miami of Ohio, chosen by the Cavaliers with their own first-round pick, the eighth overall, said this week he expected to be signed by the start of training camp Friday, although his agent was less optimistic.

Also unsigned are Mark Price, a guard from Georgia Tech obtained in a draft-day trade with Dallas, and Johnny Newman, a forward from Richmond, taken in the second round.

Cavaliers General Manager Wayne Embry said negotiations were continuing with all three players, as well as with veteran guard World B. Free, who became a free agent after last season.

"I think it's very important for rookies to be in camp, because rookies have an adjustment to make," Embry said. "Veterans who are a little bit more experienced and know what the NBA is about don't take so long to get adjusted."

In addition to Harper, several first-round draft picks still are unsigned. They include Kenny Walker with New York, Roy Tarpley with Dallas, and Reggie Miller with Chicago.

John Williams and Anthony Jones with Washington, Walter Berry with Portland and Dell Curry with Utah.

Also, Ken Barlow, the Los Angeles Lakers' No. 1 selection, has signed to play in Italy; Portland's other first-round pick, Arvidis Sabonis, is remaining in the Soviet Union, and Len Bias, Boston's No. 1 pick, died of cocaine intoxication in June.

North Gem rolls over Panthers, 55-30

By The Times-News

CAREY — The North Gem Cowboys stunned Carey with a 28-point first half and went home with a 55-30 Sawtooth Conference victory Wednesday afternoon.

The Carey defense had trouble containing Dan Argyle, who finished with 20 points. Carey's offense was held in check until Lane Kirkland and Dave Parke began clicking in the second half.

North Gem broke on top when Dan Urbe blocked a punt and fell on it in the Carey end zone in the first quarter. The Cowboys then added three scores in the second with Argyle scoring on a 21-yard run and then hitting Keith Greenwood with a 39-yard pass. Greenwood wound that up with a 61-yard romp.

Carey appeared getting back into the game when it scored on its first two third-quarter possessions. Matt Neal capped two drives on runs of one and two yards and Kirkland hit Parke with a two-point conversion to close the first half.

But just as suddenly, North Gem re-established its momentum as Jenkins took the ensuing kickoff and romped 85 yards. The stunned Panthers then gave up a 30-yard scoring strike to the Argyle-Scott Greenwood combination before Kirkland and Parke collaborated on a three-yard scoring strike for Carey early in the fourth quarter.

After that Greenwood scored on a 15-yard run and Urbe hit from five out for North Gem while Kirkland and Parke replied with a 66-yard touchdown pass for the Panthers.

The victory moved the Cowboys back into contention for one of the two playoff berths from the conference with a 2-1 league record; 3-2 overall. Carey is now 1-4 and 1-3.

NCAA execs veto ad hoc committee's reforms

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The NCAA Presidents' Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics has vetoed a broad range of controversial cost-cutting measures at the NCAA convention in January but promised to keep the issues alive and possibly present them to a special meeting of colleges next summer.

Dr. John Slaughter, chancellor of the University of Maryland and chairman of the NCAA Presidents' Committee, said at a news conference that the commission was "in harmony" with the proposals set forth by an ad hoc committee of other university heads.

"I have appointed (Chancellor) Mike Heyman of Cal-Berkeley as chairman of a special committee to study these cost-cutting measures and they could be brought up at a special convention of the NCAA in June of 1987," Slaughter said.

The controversial measure which the Presidents' Commission tabled for further study included: eliminating spring football practice; reducing the number of football and basketball games; cutting football scholarships from 95 to 80 and basketball scholarships from 15 to 12; cutting the number of assistant football coaches by two, and basing scholarship assistance on a student's financial need.

Those measures are certain to encounter strong resistance if ever brought to a vote of NCAA schools.

"Academics must take precedence over athletics," Slaughter said.

The victory moved the Cowboys back into contention for one of the two playoff berths from the conference with a 2-1 league record; 3-2 overall. Carey is now 1-4 and 1-3.

Packers sign former USFL quarterback Fusina

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The struggling Green Bay Packers signed former USFL quarterback Chuck Fusina on Wednesday, said Coach Forrest Gregg said his team wasn't abandoning its pursuit of 1984 Heisman Trophy winner Doug Flutie.

"We saw in Doug Flutie the same thing we saw in college" at Boston College, Gregg said. "We have an interest in him."

Gregg said he talked to the Los Angeles Rams, who own the NFL rights to the 5-foot-9 Flutie, "but not in a serious manner."

Pro football

Flutie played his rookie professional season for the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League. He is trying to work out details that would get him released from the personal services contract with Generals' owner Donald Trump.

"That has not been concluded," Gregg said. "Therefore, we cannot go any further."

Flutie and Fusina worked out with the Packers on Tuesday, as Gregg searched for a quarterback who could move his new ball control offense. The 6-4 Packers have scored only two touchdowns with third-year pro, Randy Wright, and veteran backup Vince Perfegano leading the offense.

Both declined to comment on the quarterback situation.

Rookie Robbie Brown of Brigham Young has been an injured reserve the entire season, and Gregg said he doesn't know when the third-round draft pick will return.

Fusina, 29, who played at Penn State for the NFL for three seasons before playing for the USFL's Stars. The Stars were based in Philadelphia then Baltimore and won two USFL championships with Fusina.

"He's been there, and he's done the job," Gregg said. "We liked what he says. We think he has a chance of helping us."

Fusina accepted a one-year contract with an option, according to an agent, Jeff Briscoe. "I'd be lying if I said I wasn't pretty excited about it," said Fusina, who passed for more than 10,000 yards in his three-year USFL career.

Senators return to AP's top five in Class A-3

By The Times-News

It's getting so gaining top spot in Class A-2 in the weekly Associated Press Idaho high school football poll is the kiss of death.

The No. 1 position changed hands for the fifth time in six weeks in the latest survey of the state's sportswriters and broadcasters following the loss by last week's top team, Wallace, to Moscow last Friday.

Lakeland High School of Rathrum thus became the fifth team this season to be selected at the top of the class in A-2. The Hawks earned that distinction by virtue of their 4-1 record, including a 33-0 shutout of Kellogg last week, and moved up from the No. 3 spot.

But Lakeland shouldn't relax. In addition to Wallace, it has been preceded in the No. 1 spot this season by Boise's Bishop Kelly High School, Shelley and Vallivue High of Caldwell. The Knights, Russells and Falcons only lasted a week there; Wallace, which had a bye the Friday after it was elevated to the top spot, made it two weeks.

There were no changes at the top of the other four divisions, with Meridian and Homedale continuing their season-long domination of Classes A-1 and A-3, Mullan staying in charge in A-4 for the second consecutive week and Richfield keeping the No. 1 position in the eight-man rankings for the fourth week.

In A-1, the 5-0 Warriors received 71 of a possible 80 points and 10 of 16 first-place votes cast, followed in order by Coeur d'Alene, 4-0; Highland of Pocatello, 5-0; Boise, 4-1; and Mountain Home, 5-0. That was the same order in which the top five A-1 teams were ranked last

In A-2, Lakeland received 69 of a possible 80 points and 10 of the 16 first-place votes, finishing ahead of Wallace, now 4-1 for the season, and Kuna, also 4-1, which were tied for the second spot. The Kaveners moved up from fourth place last week following a 14-7 victory over Emmett.

Orofino, the only undefeated A-2 team in Idaho at 5-0, finally moved into the rankings in the No. 4 position, followed by Shelley, 3-2, which had been absent from the ratings last week. St. Anthony's South Fremont High School, a 35-12 victim of

In A-3, Homedale, 4-0, continued its comfortable lead with 75 of a possible 80 points and 13 of the 16 first-place votes. The put the Trojans ahead of Malad, at 5-0 the only other unbeaten A-3 team in the state. The Dragons moved up from fourth place following a 26-0 romp last week over fifth-ranked Aberdeen.

Gooding, absent from the rankings since a loss to Buhl three weeks ago, moved up to No. 3 with a 4-1 record, followed by Challis. The Vikings, now 4-1, fell from No. 2 last week following a 12-0 loss to Teton High of Driggs.

Spinks' promoter says boxer may shun unification series

NEW YORK (AP) — Promoter ut Lewis, said Wednesday that Michael Spinks would not be involed in a boxing match on HBO television heavyweight title unification series the World Heavyweight Association to sever its ties with South Africa.
WBA officials already have said at action will be taken at its convention, opening Oct. 23 at Reno-, to take away South Africa's sting power in the organization and refuse to sanction title fights in South Africa until that nation abolishes its racial policy of segregation.
"I'm optimistic," Lewis said after news conference. "I don't want to overly optimistic."

At the news conference, Lewis said, "I will no longer associate myself with any activities with which the World Boxing Association is involved," adding that he considered apartheid the "modern day Holocaust taking place in South Africa."

Lewis, who is promoting the C ght-fight series with Don King

ke part in the promotion of the fight between champion Tim Witherspoon and Tony Tubbs for the BA title, expected Dec. 6, or in the promotion of a fight between the

BA and WBC champions next year. And—if the WBA does not act against South Africa, or unless the BA plays no role in the sanctioning the fight, Spinks, the International Boxing Federation champion, will not meet the winner of the WBC-WBA fight for the undisputed Lewis said he would involve himself in the fight between champion Trevor Berbick and Mike Tyson on the WBC title Nov. 22.

Lewis expressed disappointment at King and representatives of HBO, which paid about $20 million for the series, and the Hilton Hotel Corp., which paid in excess of $10 million for five fights of the series, not share the deals with him Wednesday in his call for action against the WBA.

Pioneer Cabin hike offers breathtaking view

A steep ascent brings hikers through pines to special spot

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — A couple of miles south on Corral 3 off Trail Creek Road lies the trailhead to the Pioneer Mountains, surrounded by snow-covered peaks of great majesty and power.

It is a two-hour climb on a steep but passable dirt trail to a vista which unfolds like an unbelievable landscape scene. Now is the time to go before the weather gets worse.

For the first quarter hour, the trail lined by lodgepole pines rises gradually. You cross mountain brooks and see fallen tree limbs, some scorched by lightning. In case you lose the trail because of snow, you can check for hatch marks on trees to pick it up again.

The switchback trail becomes much steeper and if the hiker looks up, the slope and the towering trees along its face, at times it may seem the climb is nearly insurmountable. At bends in the trail there are good spots to catch a breath and take a sip of water.

The views from these spots of the canyon and some snow-covered mountain peaks get the adrenalin going again.

The hiker will need hiking boots or hard-soled shoes and a backpack to carry water, trail food and a poncho would be helpful. Wear warm pants not jeans. Gaiters to keep pant legs dry would be a good idea at this time of year.

On a recent visit, we passed a trio of mule deer and a pair of elk. They spent half their time pushing their machines on foot. It was just too steep to pedal. We passed a party on horseback, and although someone in our group said they distrust these four-legged creatures on the narrow trail, the horses, an Appaloosa and a quarter horse, seemed sure-footed to me.

Three hikers enjoy a rest stop and a panoramic view of the Pioneer Mountains, following an ascent of 2,400 vertical feet through lodgepole pines.

There was a physically-fit man about 50 wearing a jersey, walking shorts and running shoes. We thought he might get caught in one of the abrupt weather changes in these regions.

It is a good idea to wear warm clothes including a ski hat. If one gets too warm, layers of clothing can always be peeled and stowed in backpacks. Bring at least two water bottles and drink before you get thirsty and drink often.

When you get above the tree line, it is a sign of progress. Beyond is an open mountain meadow where the incline is relatively shallow for a while. To the north, stand some snow-covered peaks giving a preview of what is in store for the persevering hiker.

There are iron washed rocks of orange, brown and black at this level. Some have flecks of quartz in them.

One formation near the trail juts out towards the valley and the hiker who sits on the stones can look out and see a panorama of mountains and the road leading to the trailhead.

This area is well above the tree line and should there be low lying clouds the day you go up, it will seem you can almost touch them. The day we went there were no clouds and the trail melted away to be replaced by a scene worth keeping in mind for a while.

The cabin has been there since 1937 when the Sun Valley Co. used it for ski tours in the Pioneers. It is maintained by volunteers and next year there are plans to put a new foundation in the cabin has bunks, a new wood stove and a guest book with entries such as "she said yes."

There is a moment in the hike when the memory of all the huffing and puffing up the trail melts away to be replaced by a scene worth keeping in mind for a while. You have climbed 2,400 vertical feet to the 9,500-foot level in a couple of hours. Across a snow-covered ridge rises the range of freshly-powdered Pioneers. The range is sculpted by a master with huge parts of the face scooped out. Craggy peaks form crescent shapes at the pinnacle. Some of the clouds had cleared by the time we were a few hundred yards from the cabin. With a blue backdrop and puffy clouds, the range seemed to sparkle. We were minute figures in an expansive scene that has inspired visitors for decades.

Registration cash, gas tax to be used to fund new trails

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Over the past several years, government land agencies had had to become more adaptive to new methods of managing federal lands. This is primarily due to the federal budget cuts, and added financial restraints, along with environmental considerations.

The Ketchum Ranger District of the Sawtooth National Forest has been working on two next approaches in the management of the district's trail system.

First, it is recruiting the help of concerned local users and, second, it is utilizing funds available through the Idaho state Off-Road Motor Vehicle (ORMV) Program for specific projects.

The ORMV fund was created by the Idaho Legislature for maintenance and construction of trails and related facilities that are open to ORRVs, both snowmobiles and motorcycles. One percent of the gasoline tax collected by the state is allocated for this use.

In addition, beginning in January, stickers will be sold to motorbike owners at yearly registration time when the owner declares the bike will be used on trails or sold through the local motorbike shops. Cost of the stickers will be $1.00.

This additional money will be used for motorbike trails only. These two funds are administered by the state ORMV planner of the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation. Public land agencies, non-profit organizations or just about anyone can submit an application for a specific trail project which could be partially or totally funded by the ORMV program.

An application is graded by a number of criteria. If granted, funds are then appropriated for the project. The state collects an average about $300,000 per year with a variety of projects being done throughout the state.

The Ketchum district has completed two projects utilizing the ORMV funds. The first project was heavy maintenance and repair of the trails in Greenhorn Gulch south of Ketchum, and the second was building a new trail at the head of Ketchum Creek, connecting into Camp Creek and Wolfstone Creek, west of Holley.

John Barton, recreation assistant, said the ORMV fund has been very instrumental to our trail program. With federal funds being cut each year, the state is picking up the slack, giving us a better opportunity to manage and improve trails open to motorbikes, which benefit all trail users. The state of Idaho is responding to its own needs. Very little money is lost in administration, most goes directly to the ground.

'With our limited personnel and with an increase in trail users, we just can't cover the trails like we used to. Our quality we'll still maintain but quantity, no way, unless we get some additional help.'

— John Barton, recreation assistant

"Also, volunteers are becoming an important addition to the district trail program," Barton continued. "With our limited personnel and with an increase in trail users, we just can't cover the trails like we used to. Our quality we'll still maintain but quantity, no way, unless we get some additional help."

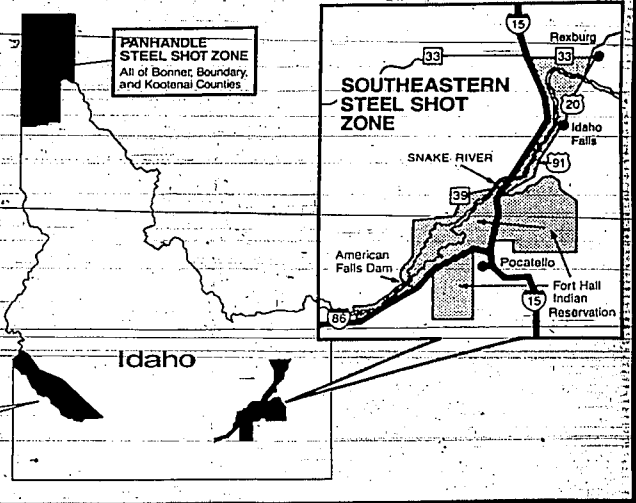

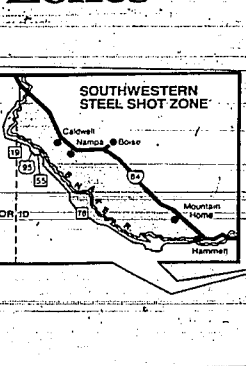

This summer he and local motorbike riders have been out almost every other Sunday clearing and repairing trails. To date more than 75 miles of trails have been cleared of deadfall, snowdrift debris and trees. The local motorbike riders are concerned and conscientious in realizing the opportunities this area has for backcountry riding.

Barton said "our work rides are organized through the Proline shop in Ketchum. The Forest Service is grateful for their help. In past years we'd try to cover about a third of the 300-plus miles of trails in the district."

"Last year we barely got through," he continued. "With this added help, we can cover more miles. The problem areas are better protected. This has been a tremendous addition to our trail maintenance program."

Steel introduction may make season a memorable one

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

JEROME — The introduction of steel shot should make the 1986 duck season opener a little more memorable for area hunters Saturday.

But by and large, hunters can expect to find things about normal. Locally produced populations will provide a little surge of harvest success and then things will drop off until the northern flights begin arriving.

Goose hunters are reminded that their favorites do not become legal targets in most of the state until Oct. 11. And the bulk of Magic Valley's goose hunting — the Mini-Cassia area — stays on the back burner until Oct. 25.

There isn't a lot of good news surrounding this year's duck opener. The federal government has reduced the daily bag limit, and hunters will have to pay strict attention to what they are shooting at because mallard and pintail hens have joined canvasbacks and redheads as limited targets.

The daily bag limit is five, a total that may not include more than four mallards, four pintails, one mallard hen, one pintail hen, two canvasbacks or redheads or one canvasback and redhead.

Merchants must be counted as part of the five. These restrictions are doubled for possession limits after the first day.

Coots remain at 25 per day, and common snipe may be taken at a rate of eight per day. Most of Idaho will have a split.

They suggested we pool our gas and that I fish with them.

I agreed and climbed into the back seat of their boat, belatedly noting that the little plastic hull was powered by two 50-horse outboards.

About five minutes later, we were five miles upriver on the Salmon. We put to rest the rig our fishing rods. "It is do you tell these steelhead anyway?" asked one of the spud farmers.

"I dunno," I replied. "I've never caught one either."

"Whopop you would be our guide," said his friend.

I rigged up my bobber and prawn and made a cast from shore while I waited for my companions to do the same.

A steelhead struck. I was so surprised that I failed to set the hook.

I cast again, and the fish came back. This time, I brought the fish to shore. The spud farmers stopped believing me.

"Never caught a steelhead before, huh?"

They rigged as I had, using some of the best tackle. We went out to Future looks brighter for yet-endangered northern grizzlies

WEST GLACIER (AP) — The future may look brighter for the threatened grizzly bear in the northern Rockies, but it still is too early to remove grizzlies from federal protection, Glacier National Park officials say.

Biologists throughout the region are still trying to come up with more reliable ways to estimate grizzly numbers and monitor population trends, noted Gil Lusk, Glacier superintendent.

An environmental impact statement on grizzly management in Montana, completed earlier this year by the state Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks, has prompted the state agency to begin exploring the prospects for dropping the grizzly from the federal list of threatened species.

The state's impact statement concluded that the estimated grizzly population in the Northern Continental Divide ecosystem is already higher than the population recovery goal.

But there are no hard counts on the number of grizzlies, and there may never be, he suggested.

"It is appropriate to be talking about delisting and to be working in that direction," Lusk said Tuesday. "But we certainly don't think we're there yet."

Lusk is a member of the grizzly management subcommittee for the Northern Continental Divide ecosystem, but he spoke during an interview on behalf of the park rather than the subcommittee.

Kate Kendall, park bear researcher, recently said in Kalispell that she is not yet convinced it would be appropriate to take the grizzly off the list in the northern ecosystem.

Echoing recent remarks by the regional director of the federal Fish and Wildlife Service, Kendall noted that closer population estimates may still be needed, along with evidence that the population growth trend is at least stable.

Kendall told the Flathead chapter of the Montana Wilderness Association that her research has tended to support the park's long-standing population estimate of about 200 grizzlies, or one every eight square miles.

The state's impact statement estimated that 349 to 813 grizzlies inhabit the Northern Continental Divide ecosystem.

Fichter flashed a picture of sagebrush with a transition stand of mountain mahogany shrubs leading to a forest of pine, noting that there is the greatest biological diversity in these transition zones.

When fields of native grasses were shown waving golden before mountain ranges, Fichter chanted: "Oh world, cannot hold these close enough."

He showed fragile scenes of fawns and rabbits and spoke of the alchemy of existence in which a rabbit which is hunted by a hawk becomes a hawk.

"What would the world be without wilderness — no timeless place where progress doesn't count," he asked.

Diversity is worth a very great price to keep, he said. Those with the foresight to preserve it will be remembered for longer than those who destroy it. This statement drew strong applause from the conservation-minded audience.

How long can man strip the strands of life's web and still survive? He spoke of life as a web broken, each strand attached to another.

The world exists in old, lonely, immortal splendor, Fichter said.

The hours when the mind is absorbed by beauty are the only hours when we are truly alive.

Fichter slides depict nature's 'Sweet Diversity'

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In the solitude of wilderness man understands his relation to the earth and all life. Such moments are worth waiting for.

So says Dr. Edson Fichter in his many annual slide presentations, including one before the Idaho Conservation League meeting in Pocatello recently.

The retired Idaho State University professor of animal behavior shared his photographs of the state and a lyrical narrative on nature in a presentation called "Sweet Diversity."

Nothing stands alone: no individual, no species, no community, no rainbow trout or snowflake.

He spoke of everything being in a cycle connected with everything else.

Showing crystal-clear color slides of Idaho flowers, he spoke of how flowers are survival itself. Insects live off them, and when the petals and stems wither they become food for bacteria.

"Once you have seen what happens to a simple flower, the meadow never looks the same," Fichter said.

Most of the photographs were taken by the 76-year-old Fichter, mainly in Idaho's Panhandle Valley. In a tone reminiscent of a Sunday preacher, he described the meadow as the symbol of all relationships in nature. He called it "ecology's story in a bound edition."

Salish-Kootenai tribal council closes river to halt overfishing

PABLO, Mont. (AP) — The Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribal Council has decided to close the Jocko River to all fishing on the Flathead Indian Reservation in an effort to give the trout population some time to build back up.

Tribal fisheries biologists said in early September that trout numbers in the Jocko are only about one-tenth of what the river should be able to produce.

Tribal Council chairman Ron Theriault said Monday the closure will apply to both tribal members and others.

"Fishermen and sportsmen can appreciate when it comes to times like this, that we have to leave it alone," he said.

Theriault said that catch-and-release fishing had been considered, but there was concern that even that could injure and weaken the relatively few spawning-sized trout in the river.

He said the closure will become effective as soon as tribal fish and game chief Frank Acevedo posts signs and gives official notice.

Tribal fisheries biologist Dave Cross told the council three weeks ago that the Jocko is supporting only 26 to 59 trout 10 inches or larger per mile. He said it has the potential to be one of western Montana's premier trout streams, with 350 to 500 trout per mile.

Cross blamed the current situation on overfishing, dewatering for irrigation, channel work, and poor streambank management by landowners that has resulted in erosion and siltation.

Cross told the council that similar rivers have recovered in as little as two to three years.
