Alleged Iran deal criticized by lawmakers

By JILL LAWRENCE
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congressional leaders accused the Reagan administration Sunday of keeping them in the dark about reported White House deals to send arms to Iran and some suggested its power to conduct such operations should be curbed.

The criticism came amid speculation that Secretary of State George Shultz, who also apparently knew little about the contacts that reportedly produced arms deliveries in return for hostage releases, could resign over the matter.

Shultz called an unusual meeting of State Department experts Sunday at his suburban Washington home, but officials said the session on Syrian-sponsored terrorism was unrelated to questions about Iran.

Reports could undercut crackdown on Syria

By BARRY SHWED
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The U.S. appeal to the European Community to press down on Syria could be undercut by reports that the Reagan administration is considering a deal to sell arms to Iran.

Analysis

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he had spoken to Shultz on Saturday. "In my judgment, he will not resign," Lugar told interviewers on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley."

News reports last week said former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane traveled to Tehran earlier this year and arranged to ship arms to Iran in exchange for the release of U.S. hostages kidnapped in Beirut.

An embargo on arms shipments to Iran, which is at war with Iraq, has been in effect since 1979. The official U.S. position on the war is neutrality.

If the press reports are true, said Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd, the arms trade was "a major blunder" that guarantees hostage-

Shultz aides raising the possibility of a Shultz resignation "is pure speculation, as the story itself says," spokeswoman Sondra McCarty said.

Shultz himself, asked as he left his house whether he planned to resign, replied "No," "NBC-Nightly News" reported Sunday night.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he had spoken to Shultz on Saturday. "In my judgment, he will not resign," Lugar told interviewers on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley."

taking will continue and could tip the balance of power in the Middle East.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., told a conference in Atlanta Sunday that it would be a "terrible mistake" to cut an arms deal with Iran. "We all want the hostages home," he said. "But I don't think we want to deal with (Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini in an effort to do that."

But other Republicans defended the reported administration activities, saying it is desirable to improve relations with Iran and attempt to moderate its extremism.

"The wider goal here is to try to bring about a more moderate group of leadership in Iran... We've made some strides in that regard," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, appearing on CBS' "Face the Blunder" that guarantees hostage-

Feds to distribute $10 million for AIDS education

Money will be used to design programs for classroom use

WASHINGTON — Federal health officials will award $10 million this fiscal year to state education agencies to help them design and introduce comprehensive AIDS sex and drug education programs into the classroom — the first government funding for AIDS education in the schools, the Los Angeles Times has learned.

AIDS education is implemented as quickly as possible in the schools. The Institute of Medicine, calling for an immediate escalation of AIDS education on all levels, also recommended an annual expenditure of $1 billion on education alone by 1990, most of it coming from federal sources.

"Society cannot wait to begin to do this," said Dennis Tolsma, an official with the Atlanta-based Centers for Disease Control, which is sponsoring the program. "There is a lot of urgency here. People must be convinced that this is needed — and needed now."

He added: "Many health behaviors are adopted early in life. We have to deal with them when young people are still learning about themselves and making decisions."

The program, part of the augmented AIDS budget request, was already in the planning stages before Surgeon General C. Everett Koop and the independent Institute of Medicine, an affiliate of the prestigious National Academy of Sciences, issued recent AIDS reports, both of which urged that Disease Control's office for health promotion and education, said that he expected the two reports to accelerate such efforts. "The scientific world has closed ranks," he said. "We will take that message out to the schools. A year from now you'll see things being taught in schools that aren't being taught now."

Tolsma said that the centers would be available to assist state education departments, working in conjunction with state health agencies and local school authorities, in drawing up programs for teaching youngsters about AIDS.

"The schools are a very important vehicle for transmitting information," he said. "There are 47 million kids in the nation's schools, as well as several million faculty and staff who also need to understand about AIDS."

Further, he said, such education

Reward offered for stolen infant

By DAN BLAKE
The Associated Press

SELLERSVILLE, Pa. — A $22,000 reward is being offered for the safe return of a newborn taken from his mother's arms as she lay in a hospital bed.

West Rockhill Township Police Chief Frederick Crean said Sunday authorities have no concrete leads in the snatching of Philip Worthington.

"This appeal is to the person who took the child," Wimmer said at a news conference at Grand View Hospital as the boy's mother, Barbara Worthington, 26, of Silverdale, sat in a wheelchair and cried, her tearful husband, Neil, 27, at her side.

"Please return baby Philip to this hospital, the nearest medical facility or authorities who will be in a position to see that the baby is returned to this location," Wimmer said.

The reward is for the baby's safe return to a medical facility, said hospital spokeswoman Dorothy Gehres. She said it is not for "information leading to the arrest and conviction. We're not interested in that."

A woman, described as heavyset and in her 40s, with dark blond hair, entered the second-floor nursery ward at the hospital Friday afternoon and went into Mrs. Worthington's room, police said.

The woman, who was wearing a white lab coat, claimed the baby needed an examination and walked off with him, said Bucks County District Attorney Alan M. Rubenstein.

"This is the type of situation that outrages us all. We are working hard on this case and we will leave no stone unturned. But right now, we don't have a lot of stones to turn over," Rubenstein said.

The baby had jaundice and "without care, it could be life-threatening," Ms. Gehres said.

The Worthingtons have one other child, Elisha, age 16 months.

Mrs. Worthington, who had given birth Thursday morning to 6-pound, 5-ounce Philip, was talking with Wimmer when the woman walked into the room.

"Almost as soon as the woman left the room, the reverend became suspicious," Rubenstein said. "He heard a door close across the hall. He knew that was an exit."

Rubenstein said, "Whoever did this was familiar with the layout of the hospital and was familiar with the hospital procedures and visiting hours."

Panel calls for massive effort to combat undereducation

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A national commission headed by former Education Secretary Terrel H. Bell called Sunday for a massive effort to nearly double the number of college-educated adults by the turn of the century.

And the commission took a sharp stab at members of the Reagan administration and other politicians for "unthinkingly abetting an act of national suicide" by trying to cut aid for college students.

Bell's 22-member panel prepared the report for the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, which represents 372 four-year campuses that enroll 2.5 million students and award a third of all bachelor degrees.

It urged states to keep college tuitions as low as possible, in part to help recruit more minority students and stop the growth of "an American underclass."

Nothing short of a creative state-by-state effort at all levels, comparable to the Marshall Plan in scope, cost and dedication, can ensure the preservation of our democratic legacy for the 21st century.

— The Bell Commission

"America has far too many people whose abilities are never awakened," declared the 22-member National Commission on the Role and Future of State Colleges and Universities in its 56-page report. "To Secure the Blessings of Liberty," Bell was to address the association Monday at its annual meeting in Phoenix.

The commission included Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton and former Mississippi Gov. William Winter, as well as a half-dozen college presidents, the heads of both national teacher unions and the chancellor of New York City's schools.

The pungent language echoed "A Nation At Risk," the 1983 critique of U.S. schools by the National Commission on Excellence in Education, which Bell appointed. That report warned of a "rising tide of mediocrity" in the schools and likened their condition to "a unilateral act of disarmament." It spurred many states to raise graduation standards and boost school budgets.

Bell's new report said, "With a high school dropout rate ranging from 25 to 50 percent and with

Hundreds stranded by storm that killed at least 5 persons

By The Associated Press

Road crews worked to clear highways and hunters rescued missing deer Sunday after the northern Plains' first major snow storm of the season stranded hundreds of travelers and killed at least five persons.

The storm had moved into Canada on Sunday, after spreading wind-blown snow and low temperatures from the northern Rockies to the Great Lakes.

A stretch of Interstate 95 south of Drayton, N.D., remained closed Sunday, and a state highway near Eagle Butte, S.D., was still blocked by drifts.

Traveling is probably the worst hardship you've had. The roads are really bad, said Lee. Deer hunter Marvin Boss of Clark, S.D., said Sunday at a cafe in Faith, in northwestern South Dakota.

However, he added: "If you're going to hunt you got to be where they're (deer) at. We're used to that type of weather. Winter is winter."

A cold blast from Canada dropped 2 1/2 inches of snow Sunday over parts of Michigan's Keweenaw Peninsula on Lake Superior. Snow gusts made driving tricky and formed foot-deep drifts one day after Michigan basked in the unusually warm temperatures in the 60s.

The heaviest snow was in North Dakota, with 23 inches at Devils Lake. Bismarck got 18 inches, a record for any November storm and just short of the 22-inch single-storm record set in March 1968. Earlier, Red River reported 18 inches.

November snowstorms are not unusual in North Dakota but this is a bit much," said National Weather Service meteorologist Rich Van Es. Wind gusts to 65 mph at Grand Forks, N.D., and police in Minot reported snowdrifts up to 5 feet high.

A gust to 86 mph was recorded at the Twin Cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn., and trees and utility poles toppled, cutting power to more than 6,000 customers around the cities. About 1,500 remained without power late Sunday afternoon, said Northern States Power Co. spokesman Sam Macalus.

It was the first weekend of deer hunting season in Minnesota and the Dakotas.

On Sunday, rescuers set out after four hunters reported missing during the storm in northeastern Minnesota and found them all, said Sgt. Tom Pearson of the St. Louis County sheriff's office. Five others were found earlier.

The last one found was a 15-year-old boy reported missing 15 miles north of Duluth, he said.

"Once he knew he was lost, he apparently gathered up some pine boughs and covered up and waited for the duration," Pearson said. The boy was unhurt except for cold feet.

Three hunters were rescued Saturday night and Sunday in northwestern Minnesota: the Marshall County sheriff's office said.

Temperatures dropped to 14 degrees overnight in the Duluth area, with a wind chill of 25 to 35 degrees below zero.

Hundreds of people got stranded in cars on Interstates 94 and 29 in North Dakota but most got rides to shelters, said Lytle Gallagher, director of state Radio Communications. Two Minot deer hunters stranded for 38 hours in their vehicle 13 miles north of Tower were rescued after a snowplow was used to open the road Sunday morning, said Jim Boehm, communications supervisor for state radio. The men were unhurt.

"We did a lot of cuddles" last night, said Jeff Hardy, 24, who was stranded with Greg Tompkins, 24. "I was freezing. We almost gave up hope last night. We just kept talking to each other. ... Our legs were really numb."

Ward County, N.D., dispatcher Dan Strandberg in Minot said 50 cars got stuck west of Tower Saturday and had to be rescued by police with four-wheel drives and moving at a snail's pace.

About 15 truckers and a couple families waited out the storm at the Minot Standard Truck Stop, said cafe manager Irene Jendrich. People who didn't get motel rooms watched television and "drank coffee and told their old stories," she said.

By late morning Sunday, she said, "The trucks are starting to fill up and pull out."

On Saturday, the North Dakota Highway Department closed 94 miles of Interstate 94 and advised no travel in much of the state. And blowing snow cut visibility and closed airports at Minot and Bismarck for much of the day.

A farmer in his 60s died during the storm near Devils Lake, N.D., after his vehicle got stuck in snow. "He got stuck about 1 1/2 miles from his place and tried walking home. I am sure he died from hypothermia," said McEntzie County Sheriff Paul Larson.

Iran

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, appearing with Lugar, said improving relations with Iran in general is desirable. But he added: "When it degenerates into a trade-for-hostages, I have the gravest doubt ..."

"To negotiate for hostages makes it more likely that other hostages are going to be taken. To trade arms in a war is tantamount to a victory against our national interest is unwise," Kissinger said.

White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan in an interview on "John McLaughlin's One on One," taped Friday and broadcast Sunday, said, "If as usual, what we're not breaking any laws, we're not doing anything illegal or immoral. And I think that when we can tell the story, the American public will appreciate the need for these releases."

Lugar said he had discussed the administration's activities at length with National Security Adviser John Poindexter, but in his television appearance he did not disclose details of those activities.

Byrd and Lugar is expected to be Senate majority leader next year. Top interviewers on NBC's "Meet the Press" that he had repeatedly requested, a briefing without success.

Democratic, including Sen. Sam Nunn, Sen. Patrick Leahy and Rep. Richard Gephardt, said they still had not received any information.

"It would appear the White House is trying to do a back door way to get away from any congressional oversight," Leahy, D-Vt., said on "Face the Nation."

"In an effort to cut Congress out, they have also set the CIA, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the State Department, the Defense Department. And if so, who is making the decisions?" asked Nunn, D-Ga., a military expert who will head the Armed Services Committee next year.

"Congress is going to be asking a lot of questions," Nunn said on the Brinkley program. "The newspaper reports, and they have not been denied, indicate the Reagan administration is not standing tall on this one."

Byrd and Gephardt, D-Mo., chairman of the House Democratic Caucus and a potential 1988 presidential candidate, said. Congress should look at whether the White House-based National Security Council is overstepping its bounds.

"Congress has to really begin asking, do we want foreign policy run out of the White House?" Gephardt said on the NBC program. "At the very least we have to know what's happening."

Byrd said Congress should consider changing laws relating to security council authority and making the national security adviser a position subject to Senate confirmation.

According to Lugar, the White House played his hand very close to his chest because it considered the stakes in the future of the Middle East and U.S. ties with Iran — so high. He said Poindexter told him many countries, including allies and Middle Eastern nations, were notified of the White House activities but he did not specify what these activities were.

Shultz's spokesman said, "We're not negotiating for us this is the right policy," but he said reporters should be kept in the dark.

Apparently embarrassed by the news, Shultz's spokesman made a comment to the White House and said he had been ordered to keep still. "I don't particularly enjoy it. I like to say what I think about things," he said.

Shultz's spokesman prompted speculation that he might quit. The New York Times quoted an unidentified official Sunday as saying "if the secretary is going to resign over anything, this would be it."

Conary McCarty, a State Department spokesman, said "the story is pure speculation, as the story itself says. And I am not going to have further comment."

Shultz, meanwhile, called L. Paul Bremer, head of the department's counter-terrorism office, Michael H. Armacost, the undersecretary for political affairs; Richard W. Murphy, assistant secretary for Near Eastern Affairs; and other officials to his home in suburban Bethesda, Md., for a meeting.

The meeting was held in a private home in Bethesda. The department's chief spokesman, said afterward, "You know, we've been having consultations, and this was a chance for the secretary to meet" with his advisers.

The Reagan administration has accused both Syria and Iran of supporting terrorism. On occasion, Syria was credited with helping capture Americans. But Iran has never won U.S. approval.

In fact, the administration has tilted toward Iraq in its six-year war with Iran by trying to organize an arms embargo against Tehran.

Shultz told a meeting of Arab foreign ministers Oct. 1 that the United States was doing everything it could to halt weapons shipments.

Bur, according to reports, the United States more than a year earlier had begun secret contacts with Tehran in order to provide military equipment on a Danish ship through Israeli intermediaries.

This would appear to be in direct conflict with the policy U.S. officials were stating during the period. Only "dialogue" about the well-being of American hostages was permissible, State Department spokesmen said repeatedly. Negotiations were prohibited.

Some experts believe dealing with terrorists is not only immoral but it emboldens them to take other Americans captive and up the ante.

What Shultz declined to verify the reports or to say whether he approved of shipments to Iran, the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee suggested Shultz was unaware of any arrangements.

Sen. Richard G. Lugar, R-Ind., said Sunday on ABC's "This Week" with David Brinkley, "show that he had talked with Shultz and Shultz does not have a great deal to say about the events, does not know a great deal about the events."

Lugar described Shultz as "not conversant" and "not a helpful source of information" about the reported deal with Iran.

Polmer said there are a fair number of educational materials being developed around the country. We will be acquiring these and reviewing them and we will let people know where they can get them.

"School curriculum, for example, has some quite good educational films."

The Centers for Disease Control will also fund teacher organizations, local school boards and parent-teacher groups "to get them involved in promoting quality AIDS education in the schools," he said.

Tolsma said he expected little resistance to the introduction of AIDS education in the schools. The National School Boards Association, he said, has already adopted a position "saying that schools need to provide AIDS education" which he called "an indication that we'll get good response at the leadership level."

almost 10 percent of our total population are functionally illiterate, so we can deny that we have a massive population of undereducated people."

"Public officials who propose budget reductions in education at a time when the republic is handicapped by the burden of an undereducated populace are unthinkingly abetting an act of national suicide," the Bell commission said. "Their priorities are wrong."

"Tragically for the American people, the federal student financial aid program today is on the chopping block in Washington," said the report, adding that the real value of federal aid has fallen 25 percent since President Reagan took office in 1981.

He served in Reagan's Cabinet for four of those years and went before Congress to defend the president's requests to cut college aid by a third or more. But Bell said in a telephone interview that he always battled inside the administration with the budget director David Stockman over those cuts.

Bell's step at politicians over student aid drew a sharp rejoinder from his successor, Secretary of Education William J. Bennett.

"This is the kind of rhetoric that reminds me of the old church: 'How dare you even question the efficiency, cost and anything else of higher education?'" Bennett said in an interview. "There are no closed questions in an open society. This is taxpayer money and we have a right to ask how it's being spent."

Bennett's chief of staff, William Kristol, called it "silly, overblown rhetoric." He said real spending on higher education has doubled in the last 20 years while enrollments soared and "it's not that the quality has kept up with quantity."

Former hostage Jacobsen arrives home

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Former hostage David Jacobsen came home Sunday to California, embracing his aged father and other relatives and friends who haven't seen him since his capture by terrorists 17 months ago.

His long journey home ended when a small private jet carrying the captive, his three children and their spouses touched down at 1:05 p.m. at John Wayne Orange County Airport. Jacobsen, who wore a tiny American flag on his lapel, warmly embraced his 82-year-old father, Jacob, after stepping off the jet on the tarmac.

About 20 family members and friends, clutching red and white balloons, held a long banner that read: "Welcome Uncle David. We Love You." About 30 reporters stood a dozen yards away to document the reunion.

Yellow ribbons graced trees and lampposts in Huntington Beach, where Jacobsen lived for 17 years, as his family and friends celebrated his freedom.

Details about the 55-year-old Jacobsen's return home were being kept quiet by family members seeking a quiet reunion.

Jacobsen read a brief statement to reporters, saying he recognized their interest in what has happened to him but asking for time alone to spend with his family.

Tour bus wrecks; 1 killed, 31 hurt

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A bus carrying tourists to Walt Disney World overturned Sunday on a slick highway, killing one person, injuring 31 others and closing part of the road for more than three hours, police said.

The 49-seat Galaxy Tour bus was carrying Central Americans to the amusement park, said Highway Patrol Lt. Jim Lee.

GM closures heavy blow to Michigan

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp.'s decision to cut 17,450 jobs from its Michigan workforce will deal the state's economy a $1.5 billion blow felt from the auto towns of Flint and Pontiac to the resorts of the Upper Peninsula.

The loss threatens to return Michigan's unemployment rate to double digits, and may force the state and some cities to tighten their belts.

estimate likely will remove $750 million more, Verway said. "We're not looking at a catastrophe at a state level, but we are looking at a revenue reduction," said Nick Khouri, economist with the state Senate Fiscal Agency in Lansing.

Report disputes danger of family fights to police

WASHINGTON (AP) — Contrary to popular belief, responding to family fights is a relatively safe job for police officers to perform and statistics suggesting it is a high-risk assignment are misleading, the federal government said Sunday.

4 claim to be missing millionaires

CHICAGO (AP) — The deadline for claiming a year-old $2.9 million Illinois Lottery jackpot has brought out at least four people who each say they're the missing millionaire, although they can't produce the winning ticket, officials said Sunday.

The lottery office claiming to be the overdue winner were ruled out because they gave the wrong location when asked where the winning ticket was purchased.

"We're instructing them to file a claim and provide us all the pertinent information like where and when they purchased the ticket," he said.

Diversity of thought needs to be cultivated, not shunned

The human mind is a marvelous thing, capable of things far beyond the ability of the most sophisticated computer; yet it has some serious flaws — one of the worst being its capacity for making assumptions.

This, of course, is a gray area. Many, probably most, of the decisions we make during the course of a day are based on certain assumptions. We flick a light switch, assuming the light will come on. We answer a ringing phone, assuming there'll be a voice at the other end of the line. We come to work, assuming we still have a job.

Life, as we know it, would be difficult without making some reasonable assumptions.

But there's a line, albeit a faint one, where assumption-making becomes a risky enterprise.

Rule No. 1 in the newspaper business is "Don't ever assume anything." If that idea isn't formally passed on early in a reporter's career, it becomes apparent after the first major blunder appears in print.

It's a valuable lesson. Reducing assumption-making to matters of some certainty and making sure about the rest by asking questions can prevent some embarrassing situations.

Consider these examples:

- Virtually every day, Magic Valley drivers mistakenly assume that cross traffic ahead of them will stop and yield right-of-way. The cost of this mistake is often several hundred dollars in auto repair expenses.
- A fair number of Republican politicians around the country this year assumed that the voters who elected them on Ronald Reagan's coattails also gave them a mandate to do whatever they pleased while in office. The last two elections showed the error of that assumption, with the notable exception of Sen. Steve Symms — who survived the Nov. 4 day of reckoning.

Naive newsmen balfastly assume that the character flaws which worry them in their spouses will eventually disappear, only to find out later that they get worse.

- Gossips assume that everyone enjoys exchanging trivial bits of negative information about other people.
- But, worst of all, some people assume that everyone else should think the way they do.

The worst assumptions usually involve people. It seems inconceivable that, on the eve of the 21st century, so many educated people fail to understand that diversity of thought is an inherent part of the human condition.

Genetics, environment, experience all tend to color our opinions. Each one of us, in some small way, is totally unique. There's a movement in America today to homogenize the population, to accentuate and stamp out the differences between people. Some would like to do it through the legal system.

Others are not concerned with the legality of their actions, feeling that they're acting upon orders from some higher authority.

Diversity is one of America's strengths, not a weakness. Throughout our history, we've welcomed immigrants from other nations less free and less tolerant than our own.

Now some people, including the attorney general of the United States, are reinterpreting the Constitution, telling us what they think was in the minds of the Founding Fathers when they drafted that wonderful document.

The same attitude exists among some religious zealots, who insist on interpreting portions of the Bible that are subject to varying interpretations in a manner that fits their particular beliefs.

Both groups assume that we don't know any better, that we must be educated to their way of thinking.

I get the feeling that there are people among us who long for a return to powdered wigs and satin breeches; others might prefer the dour garb of puritans. They all seem uncomfortable with the democracy and religious liberty of today and apparently prefer a simpler time, when people knew who was in charge — them.

Outside America, there are billions of people who don't think the way we do at all about many things, including politics and religion. Rather than trying to convert those people to our way of thinking, sometimes forcefully, why not acknowledge the differences and work to find common ground?

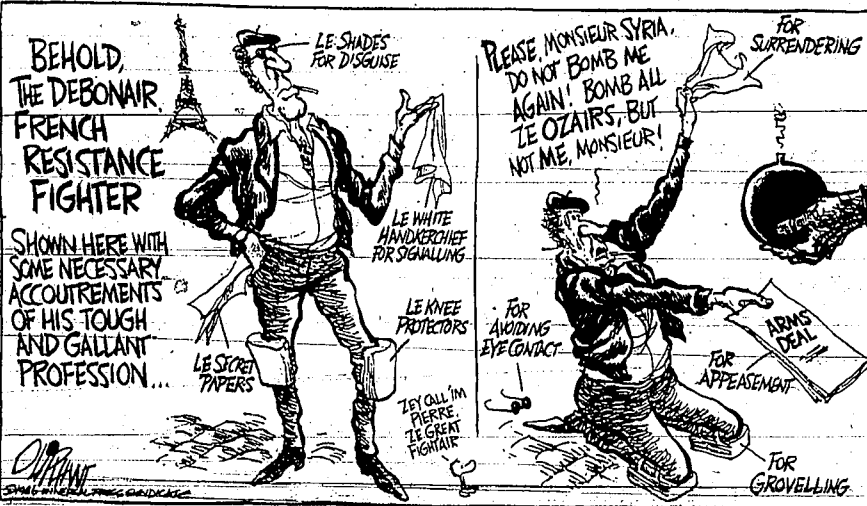

If what we offer is truly the best, intelligent people will discover it and, like the Japanese, work it into their own culture. Perhaps we might even learn something from them.

To assume that our own way is the best way for everyone is the height of arrogance.

Opinion

State mobilization of 'silent majority' an electoral factor

BOISE — Labor's determined get-out-the-vote effort got most of the attention. But Idaho's "silent majority" apparently decided many of the state's major elections Tuesday night.

In what was expected to be a close vote, right-to-work instead was approved by more than 30,000 votes, a result that surprised many Republican Party leaders.

When right-to-work went on the ballot, party leaders from Sen. James McClure down were predicting that the huge labor effort to defeat it could lead to defeat of many GOP candidates.

Instead, the reverse happened. Right-to-work, plus the lottery issue, apparently stirred Idaho's conservative majority into action, luring many to the polls to vote on what they considered very important issues.

And along the way, instead of what many Democrats felt would be "their" year, Republicans maintained firm control in state politics — except for failing to elect one of their own as governor.

The results were interesting, and show that it will be extremely difficult to dislodge the winners in Tuesday night's election.

Popular Democrats Cecil Andrus and Joe Williams barely won election and Marjorie Reut Moon, a fixture in public office in Idaho for the past quarter-century, went down to defeat at the hands of C.L. "Butch" Otter of Caldwell, in the race for lieutenant governor.

Sen. Steve Symms had been saying for weeks that he was convinced he had a majority support in Idaho, and that if he got his supporters to the polls, he would win big.

It turned out he knew exactly what he was talking about, because a record nonpresidential election turnout gave him a margin of nearly 12,000 votes in what was widely expected to be a much closer race.

Most of the national attention on the Idaho election was focused on the Evans-Symms race, considered crucial to whether Democrats recaptured control of the U.S. Senate.

As it turned out, it was not. Despite losing in Idaho, Democrats swept to victory in most of the key races, winning a 55-45 majority that will remove McClure from his job as chairman of an important Senate committee.

But other veteran political observers felt heading into the race that most Idaho residents were more concerned about the governor's race. Idaho Republicans very badly wanted to capture the office that has eluded them for the last 16 years.

More votes were cast in that election, a combined total of more than 385,000, than in any other head-to-head race.

By the biggest total, more than 385,000 ballots, was cast on the referendum on right-to-work.

Quane Kenyon

Blake Hall, GOP party chairman from Idaho Falls, said he also was concerned that right-to-work would defeat Republicans. But although the GOP lost a few legislative races, he's convinced that RTW did not contribute to the defeat of any GOP candidate.

The strong Republican surge also showed up in another race — state auditor. Richard Williams of Blackfoot campaigned under almost every handicap imaginable. He had little money, no political identity and no experience whatsoever in running a major political campaign — running against Joe Williams, who has been state auditor so long that most people can't remember when he wasn't in office.

Yet the Republican Williams led most of the night, and it wasn't until the returns came in that Democrat Williams pulled it out.

The election also indicates 1986's major winners could be around for a long time.

Republicans tried hard to dislodge Congressman Richard Staggs in the 2nd District, figuring 1986 would be their best shot at him. But Staggs won rather handily over Republican Mel Richardson, and his support in traditionally GOP areas such as the Magic Valley indicates it will take a far above-average Republican to defeat him in the future.

When Democrat Pete Busch was killed in a spring airplane crash, the last serious threat to Rep. Larry Craig was removed. Democrat Bill Currie jumped in, although he acknowledged often during the campaign that he was running mainly to get the name identity he would need for a serious bid two years from now. Craig won his fourth term easily.

Democrats also conceded it's going to be very difficult to defeat Symms. If a well-financed incumbent office holder such as Evans couldn't do it.

Andrus also may be hard to defeat four years from now. If he seeks another term, because David Leroy was a well-known candidate who ran a great campaign, received substantial financial support, and still couldn't get the job done.

But Evans thinks there will be no shortage of good candidates two, four and even six years from now. "There are always fresh faces showing up on the horizon. They'll surface. There are plenty of them out there. It's a matter of finding them, convincing them they are the candidates of the future," he said.

Recent events raise questions on Iran

The release of American hostage David P. Jacobsen and the purported visit to Tehran by Robert C. McFarlane, former national security adviser, raise important questions about events in Iran and U.S.-Iranian relations.

Are moderates in the ascendant in Iran? Has the United States changed its policy toward the Islamic republic?

Most important are Iran's internal power struggle and economic stress during the past year. The Islamic regime is deeply divided along ideological lines. The hard-line left-leaning elements want a totally state-controlled economy and closer links with the Soviet Union and the Eastern bloc. They advocate an aggressive policy of exporting revolution, including subversion and terrorism.

By contrast, more moderate elements support a larger role for the private sector. They are anti-communist and favor a more flexible and open diplomacy, both in the region and toward the West.

The regime's ideological divisions are further complicated by personality clashes and ambitions of key figures who look to the post-Khomeini era. The ayatollah's periodic interventions have not resolved these conflicts, nor has he clearly favored any one faction. Instead, he maintains a delicate balance, supporting different groups depending on the circumstances.

The power struggle has become particularly acute because of economic problems. Saudi Arabia's price-war strategy has cut into Iran's oil revenues. Iraq's successful bombing of Iranian oil terminals has at times cut exports to a trickle.

In recent months the Iranian government has had to cut imports to the bone. The lack of raw materials is threatening many industries with closure and thus unemployment above today's 30 percent. Food and fuel are in short supply and prices are soaring — along with a rise in popular discontent, anti-regime sentiments and even agitation. Iran's war efforts have also been hampered. The "final offensive" against Iraq has been postponed indefinitely.

The Iranian government has adopted a policy of extreme austerity. It has also shown considerable flexibility and pragmatism in its foreign relations, trying to gain economic advantages.

The first targets were the Soviet Union and France. Iran has agreed to resume natural gas exports to the Soviet Union. In return, the Soviets have agreed to resume sending technical experts to work the steel mills and power stations in Iran. The technicians were withdrawn in 1983 because of the strain in Soviet-Iranian relations and the Iraqi bombings. Franco-Iranian rapprochement has led to the settling of a long-running disagreement over a $1 billion loan made to France under the shah. In the Persian Gulf, a bargain seems to be shaping up between Iran and Arab states, including Saudi Arabia: Iran will moderate its regional behavior in exchange for the gulf states' cooperation on raising oil prices.

Indeed, there is danger that the latest U.S.-Iranian contacts will generate a radical backlash as did the Algiers meeting in 1979 between Mehdi Bazargan and the national security adviser at that time, Zbigniew Brzezinski.

Yet the current situation is different, because Iran is in deep economic straits and the regime's survival is threatened by war conditions. For the fledgling dialogue not to falter, the U.S. government must exercise great restraint in responding to Iranian statements likely to be provocative.

More important, the United States must not revert to a policy of ignoring Iran. The strategic and political value of Iranian moderation and, in due course, normalization of U.S.-Iranian relations is too great to risk being jeopardized by overreaction.

Ouster reason simple: Yamani miscalculated

PARIS — You do not need to dig deeply into geopolitical theory or ponder Persian Gulf politics to understand why Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani lost his job as oil minister of Saudi Arabia. He turned out to have been wrong, and that was enough for his boss, King Fahd.

A year ago, Yamani undertook an ambitious drive to regain control of oil marketing for OPEC and Saudi Arabia by abandoning the cartel's production quotas and putting as much Saudi oil on the market as customers would buy. The result: a spectacular price plunge that brought OPEC oil down from $30 a barrel to as low as $10 last summer.

Conventional economic wisdom told the sheik and the rest of us that such a plunge would change the world. It would exert irresistible pressure on high-cost non-OPEC producers such as Britain and Norway to come to a deal on pricing or get out of the market. Moreover, cheap oil would stimulate global consumption and economic growth and, the Saudis hoped, hook the West again on growing oil imports.

We can see that it did not turn out that way. While prices dropped 50 percent or more, consumption has increased only 3 percent in 1986. The big boosts in growth of Western economies did not materialize. And in the North Sea, Texas and elsewhere, producers who supposedly would find their oil

"uneconomic" to produce at $15 a barrel found they could make out enough profit at $10 a barrel to continue producing and selling anyway. It is likely that no more than 300,000 barrels a day of global production have been shut in as a result of price, almost all of it in the United States.

In short, the oil trade turned out to be far less "elastic" than the economists and Yamani figured. What the sheik wound up proving was that at low prices, oil is not much of a factor in today's global economy, which has already made structural adjustments to the end of the cheap-oil era. That was not a finding to warm the heart of Fahd, who was already itching to put his own man in charge of the kingdom's only important economic resource, and who has seen oil revenue drop from a high of $100 billion a year to an estimated $20 billion this year.

But the king and the rest of us should not ignore the fact that Yamani turned out to have been wrong in the end because he was right in the beginning. It was Yamani who fought for a producer-consumer compact in the early 1970s that would have tied small but steady increases in the price of oil for the rest of the century to economic advances for oil producers in Western economies. The alternative, he predicted, would be wild fluctuations of price and supply that would alternately damage the economies of the industrial world and OPEC, and create chaos in marketing. The West and Japan, he warned his fellow oil exporters, would find ways to avoid using expensive oil.

Resistance from price hard-liners in OPEC and from the Nixon and Ford administrations stymied his effort, forcing him into the last desperate gambit that failed. Indeed, it is possible that the effort to recapture market share was not Yamani's idea, that he may have been forced into it by Fahd and others on the Supreme Petroleum Council. But in the Saudi system, it was Yamani who bore the responsibility for the effort's success or failure.

Because of his visibility, his country's vast reserves of oil and his own brilliance, Yamani was the bridge from the ordered world run by the Seven Sisters — the American, Dutch and British companies that administered the oil business and much of the Middle East for four generations — to the chaotic, cut-throat situation of the 1980s. By dismissing him so abruptly, Fahd is sending notice that Saudi Arabia has decided that it has to play by the new and rougher rules of the trade.

College food service professional, caring

I see from last week's luncheon for some political personages that the college no longer has a food service that can handle special events as in previous years.

I took two contract catering companies to handle what the CSI food service used to do — as a unit. They did and could handle anything that was done on campus.

To all the old food service employees, there are some who appreciate your professional and caring attitudes.

I, for one, as an ex-student will miss hearing the good things that the food service did for the college. They deserve it to be any caring about students or the people who work at the college anymore.

Poll: Limit smoking, not ads

NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans do not believe cigarette advertising should be banned, although they favor broad restrictions on smoking, according to poll results issued Sunday by three anti-smoking groups.

The findings contradict a recent American Medical Association survey in which 64 percent of the respondents favored a cigarette advertising ban.

In the new poll, conducted for the American Cancer Society, the American Heart Association and the American Lung Association, 62 percent of those questioned said cigarette ads should be permitted in magazines and newspapers.

A report accompanying the poll said the results differed from the earlier survey because the AMA prefaced its question by telling respondents that the AMA supported a ban on cigarette advertising.

A spokesman for the Tobacco Institute, Scott Stapf, said the new results prove that the AMA "doctored" its results. He said the new poll was "pretty damaging" to the anti-smoking groups.

However, it contained strong indications of public support for limits on cigarette smoking.

Nine of every 10 people questioned for the survey support "no smoking" sections in public places, two out of three believe that smoking indoors is harmful to non-smokers in the vicinity, and six of 10 believe that cigarette advertising causes youngsters to start smoking.

Eight of 10 believe employers should be allowed to limit smoking locations in the workplace.

Whaling boats sunk

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Saboteurs opened the bottom valves on two Icelandic whaling boats early Sunday, sinking the vessels in Reykjavik harbor, police reported.

The U.S.-based Sea Shepherd Conservation Society claimed responsibility for the attacks. Sea Shepherd leader Paul Watson, in an interview broadcast on Icelandic state radio and television, said a team from his organization based in Los Angeles sank the boats because, "The Icelanders were hunting whales illegally."

Injuries were reported in the attacks, which were believed to have occurred about 2 a.m. when no crew members were aboard. A guard on a nearby boat told police that at about 5 a.m. he noticed the two vessels taking on water but he was unable to save them.

Iceland agreed to abide by an International Whaling Commission decision to cease whaling from 1986 until 1990. Although its commercial whaling stopped, the government permits the Hvalur Whaling Co. to carry out what-is-called scientific whaling in cooperation with the National Oceanic Research Institute.

Under a plan to gain information on the diminishing numbers of the great sea mammals, the company is permitted to catch 200 whales a year.

Environmentalists, however, accuse the government of using science as a shield behind which they say commercial whaling continues.

Watson, 38, said a Sea Shepherd team went to Iceland several days ago, "and they had patrolled the harbor and watched for an opportunity" to sink the boats. "As we don't want to cause bodily harm we therefore prepared the act very carefully."

He said the team "was given instructions not to cause injuries and therefore explosives were out of the question. Instead a bottom valve was opened on one of the boats and, as they were chained together, the sinking boat pulled the other one down with it."

But police said bottom valves on both vessels were opened.

Mother allegedly throws newborn out of window

BRENTWOOD, N.Y. (AP) — A 29-year-old woman was arrested for allegedly throwing her son out a second-floor window shortly after his birth, fatally injuring him, police said Sunday.

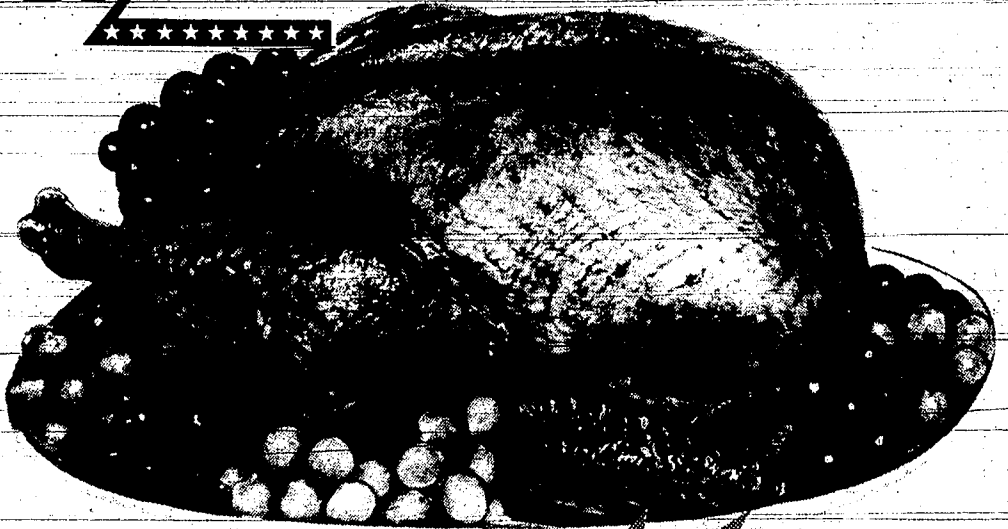

The infant survived the fall Saturday night but died of head injuries Sunday at Stony Brook University Hospital, said Maxine Simpson, a hospital spokeswoman.

Carol Washington of Brentwood called Saturday night for an ambulance, saying she was hemorrhaging, said police Sgt. Vincent Ellsworth. She did not mention a baby, he said.

When medics arrived, they discovered Ms. Washington had recently given birth and later found the infant on a concrete walk outside the second-floor window, the sergeant said.

Ms. Washington also was taken to Southside Hospital, where she was arrested and charged before the baby's death with second-degree attempted murder, Ellsworth said. She was listed in fair condition.

Khomeini says his death will not end Islamic revolution

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's 66-year-old spiritual leader, said Sunday his death would not end the country's Islamic revolution. He apparently was trying to defuse a power struggle within the clergy-led regime.

Khomeini, who has been established as the Islamic Republic's "understanding" and is not dependent on any person, but on the people and the armed forces," Khomeini said in a speech to military men at his residence in Jamaran, north of Tehran.

The speech was carried by Tehran radio and was monitored in Nicosia. Widespread reports said Khomeini, who had a heart attack in 1980, recently suffered two or three more attacks. Rumors that he is in declining health are common, but this time people in power seem to be taking the reports seriously.

They come at a time when academic, diplomatic and business sources say a struggle for survival is under way in Iran's leadership, nearly eight years after uprisings inspired by Khomeini ended the reign of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

"Every day there are rumors that this and that has happened, that so-and-so has had a heart attack, that so-and-so is on his death bed. So let it be," Khomeini said.

"Of course, death comes to everyone, and to me too," he said. "They (Iran's enemies) should not rejoice. This is something that happens and you will see that, God willing, the Islamic Republic will remain, whether or not I stay."

The struggle for power in Iran is not a simple affair, between right and left or moderates and hard-liners. Numerous groups are involved, and some switch sides frequently.

"They say one thing in the morning and another thing in the evening," said Ahmad Madani, who was detained in the early days of the revolution and now lives in exile in Paris.

Iran specialists say at least two hardline groups of clergy men are pitted against each other, each claiming to speak for Islam and the revolution.

The hard-liners include such uncompromising figures as Seyyed Mohammad Musavi Khomeini, 45, who was in charge of militants who occupied the U.S. Embassy in Tehran for 44 days in 1979-80 and held 53 Americans hostage.

Other hard-liners are Ayatollah Ali Meshkini, head of the Assembly of Experts which rules on appointments to government posts, and Khomeini's son, Ahmad.

"Ahmad is very ambitious and feels intimidated by his father, who has reduced him to a secretary or gives him such menial jobs as acting as an intermediary between himself and the outside world," said Saeed Haeeri, a Paris-based Iranian journalist.

There are reports that Ahmad was the help of such hard-line friends as Information Minister Ayatollah Mohammad Mojtahed Rezaehri, arranged for the arrest of rival hard-liner Mehdi Bazargan, an aide to Ayatollah "Hussein-Ali Montazeri," Khomeini's designated successor and trusted friend.

Common Market expected to agree on sanctions against Syria

LONDON (AP) — Western European foreign ministers met in London Monday to consider for a second time in two weeks Britain's demands for joint measures against Syria for its alleged support of terrorism.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac said after conferring Sunday in Oggersheim, West Germany, that they expect the 12-nation Common Market to agree on sanctions against Syria at the meeting.

A British official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the government is "quite optimistic" that a four-point package will be adopted by all nations of the Common Market.

The four proposals on Monday's agenda are a ban on arms sales to Syria, the indefinite suspension of visits to Syria by high-level Common Market officials, stepped-up surveillance of Syrian embassies in market countries, and lightened security arrangements in connection with operations of Syrian-Arab Airlines.

France has had some arms deals with Syria, so of the four measures a cut in arms sales would probably have the most punch.

Britain broke diplomatic relations with Damascus on Oct. 24 after Nezar Hindawi, a Jordanian journalist, was convicted and sentenced to 45 years in prison for attempting to use his pregnant girlfriend to smuggle a bomb onto an Israeli-El Al jumbo jet at London's Heathrow Airport on April 17.

Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe said there was "conclusive evidence of Syrian official involvement with Hindawi."

Britain circulated its evidence to its Common Market partners but at an Oct. 27 foreign ministers meeting in Luxembourg, there was no agreement on joint sanctions, only a statement of outrage. Britain blamed the lack of results on the fact that only six ministers showed up. The rest were represented by deputies.

The United States and Canada withdrew their ambassadors from Damascus for consultations in a show of support for Britain. Last Monday, Belgium also recalled its ambassador in Syria, but he is to return this week.

At the Oct. 27 meeting, Greece refused to join the other Common Market nations in signing a statement expressing a "common sense of outrage" at the alleged Syrian involvement. Greece said it was not convinced by Britain's evidence.

But looking ahead to Monday's meeting, the British official said regarding Greek support: "We're hopeful. We've spoken to them. We want them there."

The official also discounted any problems with Bonn or Paris because of a U.S. newspaper report. It quoted Chirac as saying Kohl and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher told him the Israeli intelligence service apparently engineered the bomb plot and planned evidence pinning the conspiracy on Syria.

France and West Germany denied the report and Israel called it ridiculous.

Chirac refused to comment as he left his meeting with Kohl in Oggersheim.

Aquino issues strong statement on rumors of coup

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corason Aquino slammed "self-appointed messiahs" in the military on Sunday that they will call people into the streets if needed to defend her rule.

It was her strongest statement yet on persistent coup rumors and came during a televised speech on the eve of her four-day visit to Japan.

The president said she ordered the military to "repel any attacks against our units or centers of government as well as any threat to the security of our people" while she is gone.

Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, the chief of staff, put the military on maximum alert. Guards increased security at the Defense Ministry and at armed forces headquarters at suburban Camp Aguinaldo.

The Manila Chronicle newspaper

meanwhile said a threat continued from officers linked to Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, who were disenchanted with Mrs. Aquino's government and its peace policy toward communist rebels.

Bayan, an umbrella organization of labor, professional and other groups, on Sunday threatened a nationwide general strike if a coup occurs. Bayan claims 1 million members and led street protests against President Ferdinand E. Marcos before a military-civilian revolt ousted Marcos in February and he fled into Hawaiian exile.

At a downtown rally Sunday attended by about 15,000 government supporters, Mrs. Aquino's brother-in-law, Agapito Aquino, called for diligence against any attempted takeover of state radio and television by the president's foes.

In her speech, at a dentists' convention, Mrs. Aquino, 53, vowed to spare no means to defend "my commitment to my people."

She promised to prevent the destruction of the armed forces by "a few misguided elements" and said a soldier's duty was to "fight the enemies of government and not fight the very government it is ordained to serve."

"If it should be necessary, I shall once more ask you to take to the streets," she said, alluding to the popular revolt that overthrew Marcos.

"I am the president of all our people," she said. "They have put their trust and faith in me. I shall protect and do all in my power to preserve their rights and freedom and the democracy they restored."

Coup rumors grew last week with publication in Business Day newspaper of a reported plan, codenamed "God Save the Queen," to take over the government, dump "inept and left-leaning" ministers and keep Mrs. Aquino as a figurehead.

"These rumors, fueled by a few self-appointed messiahs, are an insult to the integrity of the majority of the new armed forces of the Philippines," Mrs. Aquino said in her speech. "I shall oppose any attempt from any quarter to dictate to my government."

Philippine newspapers credited Ramos with heading off the coup.

But The Manila Chronicle said the threat would persist until Mrs. Aquino takes a tougher stand against the communists and fires several ministers.

Coup rumors followed warnings to reporters by some officers linked to Enrile of an upcoming psychological warfare campaign to pressure the government and test Mrs. Aquino's resolve.

PG-13 Rating Introduced

A new rating category is in place as of July 1. This new category is inserted between the current PG and R ratings. It is designated PG-13. Parents are strongly cautioned that some material may be inappropriate for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children. Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

The revised classification system of the voluntary film industry rating program was announced by the National Board of Motion Picture and Video Rating, an independent, self-governing body.

Parents should be advised that special features material may not be suitable for children.

Israel admits arrest

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel revealed Sunday that Mordechai Vanunu, a former nuclear technician who allegedly leaked state atomic secrets, is in detention and will be tried. But it denied that secret agents kidnaped Vanunu in England to bring him to justice.

The brief government communique ended weeks of speculation about Vanunu's whereabouts. He disappeared in London nearly six weeks ago, after the Sunday Times of London published photographs and information he reportedly supplied about an Israeli nuclear weapons plant.

A senior government official said the 32-year-old Israeli could be tried for treason, a crime punishable by death. The official spoke on condition of anonymity.

The communique, read to reporters by Cabinet secretary Elyakim Rubinsten, appeared designed to prevent damage to Israel's ties with Britain and ease pressure on the government from the news media and Parliament.

Many questions unanswered, including how or when Vanunu got from London to Israel.

"All rumors as if he was kidnaped on British soil are baseless," the statement said.

In London, the Observer newspaper reported Sunday that then Prime Minister Shimon Peres called Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain on Sept. 23 to warn her that Mossad, Israel's intelligence agency, planned to kidnap Vanunu and request that British security agencies not interfere.

"These reports are completely unfounded," Sunday's communique said.

Mrs. Thatcher told Parliament on Friday that neither she nor any members of her staff had been in contact with Israel officials about Vanunu or a request for her office repeated the denial Sunday when asked about the Observer report.

A spokesman for Israel's Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir insisted that Vanunu was arrested "according to law" and will be tried "according to law."

The spokesman, Yossi Ahimeli, told The Associated Press the government decision to speak out about Vanunu was made out of a "desire to balance the wave of James Bond stories that were being published."

The announcement said Vanunu was ordered held by a judge after a hearing conducted in the presence of a lawyer chosen by Vanunu.

Well-timed GOP push betrayed Idaho polls

Reagan MV trip cited as key factor

BOISE (AP) — Politicians have a favorite saying: "The poll that counts is on Election Day." In last Tuesday's election, that was strikingly true as Republicans fared much better at the ballot box than on the telephone.

Idaho saw far more political polling in 1988 than ever before, and the results looked promising for Democrats and labor.

But an 11-hour push by Republicans helped Sen. Steve Symms win re-election and tightened the race between Gov. elect Cecil Andrus and Lt. Gov. David Leroy.

Right-to-work proponents also benefited from the surge, which included President Reagan's visit to Twin Falls four days before the election and a barrage of advertising.

Gary Moncrief, a pollster and political science professor at Boise State University, stressed that polls measure opinion only at the time they are taken.

"Most of the polls were taken 10 days to two weeks before the election," Moncrief said. "A lot of things happened in the last 10 days."

"First, Ronald Reagan came to the Magic Valley," Moncrief continued. "It helped Republicans, and it helped Steve Symms."

"Second, there was a tremendous amount of money spent in the last week, and much of it was spent by Republicans. I was counting ads over the weekend — they were running 10 to 15 for Republicans over Democrats."

Moncrief said the late push worked. "The Republicans had a very good strategy of holding a fair amount of their resources back until the end."

Kathi Rogers, campaign manager for Symms' opponent, Democratic Gov. John Evans, said, "The Republicans went home (to their party), and there are a lot more of them in this state."

Symms bested Evans by 11,668 votes, carrying 51.6 percent of the vote to Evans' 48.4 percent.

"We were getting (support from) more Republicans earlier on," Rogers said.

"The Evans campaign did daily tracking polls, and the last poll, on Sunday night, showed Evans down 1 percentage point, Rogers said.

An Idaho Statesman-KTVB poll, released a week before the election, showed Evans ahead by 2.2 percent. The poll had a 3.2 percent margin of error.

Symms said his performance was just what he expected after he consulted his polls. On Election Day, Symms said, "I wrote down on a piece of paper '34-48,'" Phil Reberger, Symms' campaign manager, said the campaign conducted polls every Tuesday and Thursday in October. The polls showed Symms ahead by as much as 5 percent and behind by as much as 4 percent. Reberger said. The final poll showed a 4 percent lead among those likely to vote, he said.

Reberger said the proliferation of polls may have affected their accuracy.

Symms said, "Certainly, the president's visit was a plus."

Marc Johnson, Andrus' press secretary, said the last poll taken by the Andrus cam-

Johnson said the Andrus camp expected to win by a bigger margin. Asked to explain the vote, Johnson said, "I could take a lot of stabs in the dark."

He said polls may not have been precise. "I think the folks in Idaho are an awfully independent lot, and some of them don't want to tell people how they vote."

A high rate of refusals — voters who declined to answer questions — reported by pollsters may be one indicator the polls were less than accurate, Johnson said.

Also, Reagan's visit was well-timed, he showed him within 3 percent.

"Our momentum was good," Vogt said. She questioned the validity of the Statesman-KTVB poll because the refusal rate was above 20 percent. "When the non-response rate is 20 percent or more, you've got a problem."

Vogt also said Republicans traditionally do well in Idaho in the final week. She pointed to 1980, when Symms trailed Sen. Frank Church by 9 percent in a Statesman poll released the Sunday before the election but came on to win by a little more than 4,000 votes.

"I don't think you can underestimate the importance President Reagan had. He is an immensely popular man in Idaho, and his message was awfully powerful for some..."
—Andrus press secretary Marc Johnson

paign, in late September, showed him leading "in the upper teens" in percentage points.

The Statesman-KTVB poll showed Andrus leading Leroy, 50.6 to 34.7 percent. Andrus won by just 0.8 percent and 3,356 votes. He took 49.9 percent of the vote; Leroy 49 percent; and Independent James Miller, 1.1 percent. "I don't think you can underestimate the importance President Reagan had. He is an immensely popular man in Idaho, and his message was awfully powerful for some people."

Leroy's press secretary, Diana Vogt, said she'd predicted a closer race for weeks. She said Leroy's tracking polls and other polls

The right-to-work victory was wider than predicted. The Statesman poll showed proponents ahead by 3.5 percent to 45.3 percent.

Right-to-work organizer Gary Glenn said his polls showed the referendum, "dead even" when the question was "How would you vote on Referendum 1?"

But proponents took a 5 percent lead when the question was "How would you vote on right-to-work?"

The poll campaign's strategy in the final week. "We knew if they figured out an immensely popular man in Idaho, and his Referendum 1 was right-to-work, we had a 5-point lead," he said.

So advertisements concentrated on "clarification," Glenn said, pounding home the connection. "That was the whole ball game the last week."

Sheriff Elza Hall in his new office, part of a recently completed 2,600-square-foot expansion of the Jerome County Courthouse

New look Courthouse addition unveiled in Jerome

By TERESA Z. TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — A 2,600-square-foot addition to expand office space at the Jerome County Courthouse had its first public showing Friday.

The addition, which adds office and storage space on three floors, cost approximately $67,000 and was built by Clark and Becker Construction Co. of Gooding.

County Clerk Cheryl Watts said at an open house Friday that the basement in the new addition is used primarily for storage, the first floor assigned for Sheriff Elza Hall's office, and the second floor being used to expand 5th District Judge Philip Becker's chambers.

Hall said the addition served to consolidate the offices assigned people in his department and served to make his operation more efficient. Included in the 225 square feet of space are a records room, file room, a room for deputies to store personal items and do paperwork; and a new office for Hall.

The layout of the new facility allows key department personnel to coordinate their activities more easily, he said.

Included in the addition on the second floor are an office for Becker and one each for a court reporter and a law clerk. Watts said. Shelves built into the wall allow for storage of law books, and there are work areas included in the layout of the suite.

The addition to the courthouse was built with a computer-controlled heating device that can be programmed to shut on and off for maximum energy savings.

The construction, which was completed in early October, was paid for primarily by federal revenue sharing money and partly by district court funds for capital improvements, Watts said. There are no plans at this time for any other additions, she said.

Lights to fill tree

By ADELL HARVEY
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — Work on Rupert's annual "Christmas City" celebration has begun with the Rupert City Council, at the request of the Christmas decorating committee, designating a blue spruce tree in Rupert city square as a Living Memory Tree.

A four-foot-diameter, lighted star will be placed on top of the tree, and 1,000 soft blue bulbs purchased by the public in honor of loved ones will light the tree.

The lights may be purchased for $5 each with the money going into a special memorial account to buy a meditation bench and to finance a perpetual maintenance fund. The bench, with a rod-iron, curved design, will bear a plaque on which a poem by local poet Shirley Paoli is engraved.

"We expect to sell hundreds of the lights in memory of loved ones who have passed away, and hundreds more to people who wish to honor living friends and relatives," says decorating committee member June Dornbeck.

She said the lights on the star have already been purchased in honor of the decorating committee members and that Mayor Bill Whitlom has purchased lights honoring each City Council member.

The living memory tree will be dedicated and lighted for

Consultants to present management proposals

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — In a series of four meetings, the results of a study on the management of Blaine County's two hospitals will be presented to hospital boards and the public next week.

Amherst Associates, a California consulting firm, will present its proposals for the most efficient way to manage Blaine County Medical Center in Hailey and Moritz Community Hospital in Sun Valley following discussions to consolidate the two hospitals.

Specific times for the four meetings haven't been set. The firm will present its findings to each of the hospitals' boards of trustees and in two public meetings, one in Hailey and one in Ketchum.

A committee made up of the county Board of Commissioners and representatives of the two hospitals commissioned Amherst to make the study earlier this year after talks of consolidation and the sharing of services broke down between the two hospitals, and after the city of Sun Valley intervened to stop an attempt by the county hospital to create a hospital district to support itself.

Following a petition drive by the county hospital board, the Board of Commissioners had established a date for the election, but Sun Valley filed a suit to stop the election. A hearing on the matter is scheduled for early December in 5th District Court.

BLM range specialist Ken Fuller talks about different species of desert plants

Field trip comes to school

By ADELL HARVEY
Times-News correspondent

HEYBURN — One hundred fourth graders at Heyburn Elementary School learned hands-on about archaeology, land management, wildlife and other outdoor topics at a stay-at-home field trip Thursday.

Five specialists from the Burley District of the federal Bureau of Land Management "brought the field to the school."

"This is a way we can teach land management in an interesting way without the expense of transporting the children on long field trips," said Lynda Boddy, forester with the BLM.

Originally planned for a nearby park, inclement weather forced the specialists to bring the outside in. They transformed four classrooms into miniature field laboratories, giving the children hands-on experience in many different areas of land and wildlife management.

Linda Parsons, wildlife biologist, displayed antlers, badger pelts, pheasant eggs, a killdeer's nest and some of the equipment she uses in her job of wildlife management. A chorus of "ooh's and ah's" accompanied her wildlife slide show — evidence that the children were enjoying it thoroughly.

Watershed specialist Kirk Koch, archeologist Pete Leudemann and range conservationist Ken Fuller also gave 35-minute presentations, with the classes attending on a rotation basis.

In one afternoon, the children handled Indian artifacts and forestry tools, learned about water cycles and rock formations, ecosystems, range plants.

Hearing things is common

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing all those letters from people who keep hearing music in their heads.

I am one. I am now 76, and never told others because I was afraid of what they might think. I have been a nurse for more than 50 years and had never heard of this condition; I feared that maybe I was experiencing senility. I was truly relieved after reading in your column that many others had the same experience.

During my waking hours I hear hymns and waltzes. All the waltzes I loved to dance to are drifting through my mind. Now I can tell my doctor about it and not be afraid that he will look at me, shake his head and think, "Poor soul. She is really falling!"

EMILIE IN BUCKS COUNTY DEAR EMILIE: You would not believe the number of letters from readers who had also been hearing things and doubted their sanity.

One man said he nearly went crazy because he heard bees buzzing continually in one ear — night and day. Another said he heard constant crackling sounds, like bacon frying. A woman heard "chirping" of crickets. Still another said it sounded like a freight train was roaring through her head. All thought they were going mad.

The constant sounds are due to a condition called "tinnitus," but the musical hallucinations are yet another matter. Read on.

DEAR ABBY: It was interesting seeing all the letters sent to you by people with musical hallucinations. The two cases I describe in my book, "The Man Who Mistook His Wife for a Hat," were rather rare and special examples of musical epilepsy associated with damage to the brain.

But musical hallucinations are relatively common, especially in older people, and though they should be checked out, nearly always turn out to be benign — a nuisance, but not necessarily a sign of neurological disease.

Readers should be assured about this. Yours sincerely, OLIVER SACKS, M.D., PROFESSOR OF NEUROLOGY, ALBERT EINSTEIN COLLEGE OF MEDICINE, BRONX, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to my son who lives in Alaska and told him that I appreciated his thoughtfulness in sending me flowers twice a year (on Mother's Day and my birthday) for the last 25 years, but I would prefer instead subscriptions to magazines dealing with science and psychology.

When he called last week to wish me a "Happy 70th birthday," I said, "I hope you were not offended by my request."

His reply: "Wrote to Dear Abby." Was I out of line with my request? If so, is there a tactful way to make things right again? Your column runs in The Anchorage Times, and he appears to be a fan, so maybe you can put in a good word for me.

MOTHER IN NEW JERSEY DEAR MOTHER: You were not out of line for stating your preference. Your son is too big (and far away) for you to spank, but I think he owes you thanks (not criticism) for your honesty. Write again and let me know if this helps. And if I've made matters worse, I'll try to patch things up in person when I go to Anchorage next spring.

CONFIDENTIAL TO A CONVICTED FELON WHO HAS SERVED HIS TIME IN CALIFORNIA: You may vote if your offense did not relate to any violation of the voting laws, and you are not on parole.

Before registering, you will be asked:

1. Are you 18 years old or over?
  2. Are you an American citizen?
  3. Have you lived in the county 29 days before the election you want to vote in?
  4. Are you on parole for a felony?
- If you have any further questions concerning voting, call your registrar-recorder's office.

Man seeks more horse meat eaters

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Ron Corn sees it as his duty to educate people about horse meat.

He thinks Americans should eat horse meat.

Corn has sold horseburgers in Manhattan, horse steaks to Navy commissaries and horse roasts in the West. But due to pressure from U.S. humane societies, his main market is abroad.

Corn, the owner of M&R Packing Co. and Marco International in Hartford and South Carolina, said: "Nationwide, I would guess 25 percent would eat it (horse meat) without advertising. An educated public would eat more."

He said less than 5 percent of the meat inspected by the USDA's New England division was from horses. He also said most of the horses selected for slaughter were old, and the meat was generally sold to Europe.

"The Europeans will pay good money, $7 to $8 a pound for horse meat," he said.

Dr. Phillip Ray, with the U.S. Department of Agriculture in South Laconia, N.H., says Corn's operation is one of two horse meat plants in the state. Officials at the other, Amfran Packing Co. Inc. in Plainfield, declined to be interviewed.

"I've eaten horse meat, and you really can't tell much of a difference from beef. It's a little sweeter," he said.

Corn said Americans had one of the few cultures with a taboo about eating horseflesh. He said the taboo was "steeped in church history. It goes back to the 8th century, when there was a religious ban. It wasn't lifted until Napoleon. This country was founded in between the ban and the lifting of the ban, and we never got the word."

Corn would love to educate the public on the benefits of eating horses, saying he's probably the most knowledgeable person in the United States on horsemeat.

"I am a horse lover," he said. "At one time I wanted to be a vet. I've owned horses. If you told me that I would get into this business I would have said you were crazy. We've grown up with an attitude that needs correcting."

Corn moves from slaughtering cows to horses when the beef market fell in the early 1970s. A European friend suggested he try butchering horses and selling the product abroad.

Corn initially was skeptical, believing the only market for horse meat was in dog food. But he did some sleuthing and discovered horses bound for packing were treated better than those destined for dog food plants.

"You aren't going to get any money from a malnourished horse," he said. "I had to convince myself I

Corn treasures pictures of New Yorkers lined up to buy horseburgers on Lexington Avenue. He put his picture there as an experiment in 1982. He also sold horse meat to the Navy for a while for resale in post-commissaries.

K.C. crushes Seattle playoff hopes

By DOUG TUCKER
The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — A dejected Bill Kenney tried to apologize after throwing two interceptions to the Seattle Seahawks with his first four passes. But his Kansas City teammates would not let him.

And then, bolstered by the confidence they were showing in the veteran quarterback, Kenney went on to throw three touchdown passes to lead Kansas City to a 27-7 victory over Seattle on Sunday and give the Chiefs their best 10-game record in 15 years.

The Seahawks, 23-17 winners over Kansas City in September, lost for the fourth time in five games, dropping to 5-5 and virtual fall out of the race for one of the AFC's two wildcard berths in the playoffs. Seattle had only 36 net yards in the first half and veteran quarterback Dave Krieg, replaced the week before by Gale Gilbert, started the second half. Gilbert played the fourth quarter.

"I threw two bad passes. They were all my fault," Kenney said. The Chiefs also fumbled Seattle's first punt, but the defense refused to let the sidelines and said, "I'm sorry, fellas, I blew it," Kenney said.

"You're always telling us that we're a team, that we win and lose as a team," guard Mark Adickes told him. "We know you can get the job done."

A knot of red-shirted Chiefs yelled their agreement.

"When they said that, and when I saw that the defense had held them to no points despite the three turnovers, then I just had a feeling it was going to be our day," Kenney said.

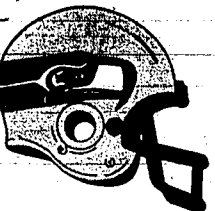

The Seahawks got only 14 total yards and a missed field goal from the three turnovers as the Chiefs raised their record to 7-3, their mark at this stage since a 7-1 start in 1971 led to their last playoff appearance.

The Seahawks managed only 133 net yards.

"We didn't have any offense at all today," Seahawks coach Chuck Knox said. "We were emotionally right to play. We got a turnover right in the end, but we gave it right back to them. I thought we would play better than this."

Kenney tossed a 3-yard scoring pass to tight end Walt Arnold early in the second period, then moved the Chiefs 51 yards in 11 plays to set up Nick Lowery's 35-yard field goal.

Stephens-Falge tumbled in an 8-yard scoring pass from Kenney, with one minute remaining in the first half to cap a 72-play drive and give Kansas City a 17-0 halftime lead. Carlos Carson scored a 25-yard scoring pass in the third period and Lowery added a 37-yarder in the fourth.

Kenney opened the game by intercepting Kenney and returning the ball 10 yards to the Kansas City 31.

Moments later, Dave Brown intercepted a poorly thrown Kenney pass and put the Seahawks in business on their own 35. Vince Gamba punted after the Seahawks failed to get a first down, but Emile Harry fumbled and Mike Tice recovered for Seattle on the Chiefs' 35.

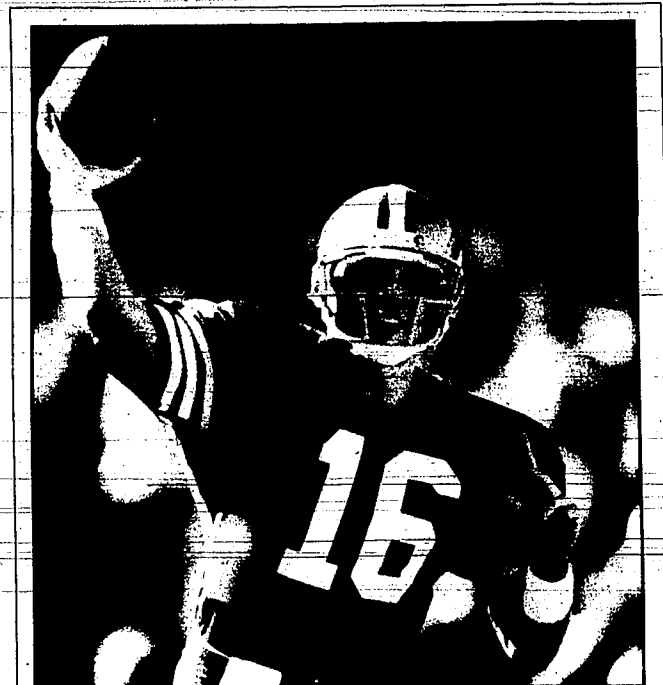

Three plays later, Norm Johnson tried a 51-yard field goal that was short by inches.

Joe Montana tosses a pass during the first half of Sunday's victory over St. Louis AP Laserphoto

Joe's back

Montana returns with 270-yard, 3 TD outing

By ERIC PREWITT
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Joe Montana was back, and so was the spark in the San Francisco 49ers' offense.

"It boosted my spirits, having him in there again," said Jerry Rice, who played the top supporting role in Montana's spectacular comeback performance Sunday.

Montana hit Rice on three long touchdown passes and totaled 270 yards passing, leading the 49ers to a 43-17 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

"Having Montana back got the fans and everyone else excited. He's the reason the 49ers have had a lot of success," Cardinals Coach Gene Stallings said.

Montana returned to action 55 days after undergoing back surgery, and he said he came out of the game "with no soreness, no pain and no stiffness."

He was driven to the turf several times by pass rushers, two of whom drew personal fouls for roughing the passer.

"I got hit hard enough, at times, to test me," Montana said.

"I don't think he took any real hard shot," said St. Louis nose tackle David Galloway, who registered the only sack of Montana.

"If the doctors let him play, he must be healthy. But, to come back so fast, he must really love the game," he added. "He did a great job. He's a great quarterback."

The Montana-directed offense also got a season-high 164 yards rushing, 64 over the team average. Joe Cribbs had a 100-yard day as the 49ers rebounded from a 23-10 loss to New Orleans last weekend.

The 43 points also was a season high.

"Joe Montana played beautifully, as did most of our players," Coach Bill Walsh said. "Things were back in sync."

Offensive lineman Randy Cross said, "There are guys who can throw longer, but they're not any better at leading a team."

The touchdown passes to Rice were for 45, 40 and 44 yards. St. Louis pass rushers decked Montana an instant after he released the ball on the first two touchdown passes, but the quarterback got up smiling.

Rice, who leads NFL receivers in touchdowns and yardage, accumulated 156 yards on four catches. He has 12 TDs and 1,030 yards through 10 games.

Montana completed 13 of 19 attempts in three periods of passing and allowed only one interception in his first appearance since the NFL season opener.

The 49ers improved their record to 6-3 and moved to within a half game of the Los Angeles Rams, the NFC West leaders. St. Louis fell to 2-8.

St. Louis quarterback Cliff Stoudt, making his first NFL start since 1983, threw a pair of touchdown passes to J.T. Smith but was intercepted three times. An end-zone interception by linebacker Jim Fahahorst in the third period killed a Cardinals' scoring threat when they trailed by only 13 points.

Montana handed off to running backs on the 49ers' first six plays of the game, then threw an incomplete pass before Werschinger's first field goal.

His next pass, on the team's second possession, was for 27 yards to Rice, and his first TD pass came three plays later.

Charged-up defense shocks Broncos, 9-3

By JOHN MOSSMAN
The Associated Press

DENVER — An inspirational pre-game pep talk, a "cool as a cucumber" quarterback and five crucial Denver turnovers carried the beleaguered San Diego Chargers to a 9-3 NFL victory over the Broncos on Sunday and gave new Coach Al Saunders his first victory.

"I'm-so-proud-I-can't-even-tell-you how it feels," said Saunders.

Raiders win — C2

who took over the head coaching position 11 days ago when Don Coryell resigned. "We have 20 players with two years or less experience in the NFL and a coach a little wet behind the ears."

"To win in Denver, against a great team — against what we thought was the best team in the NFL — is a tremendous accomplishment. This is the biggest thrill of my life."

Saunders was credited by his players, with getting them in the proper frame of mind.

"Al told us in the pre-game talk about the legless Vietnam War veteran who completed the New York Marathon on his hands," said place-kicker Rolf Benirschke. "It took him four days, but he finished."

"He told us that anyone who has belief in himself can achieve what he wants. And he said if that guy can accomplish that feat in four days, we could pull together for 60 minutes of football."

Benirschke kicked three field goals and safety Jeffrey Dale intercepted two John Elway passes deep in San Diego territory to spark the victory.

"Any time you get the defensive players in your face, you've got to be frustrated," Dale said. "We made (Elway) throw some passes that shouldn't have been thrown..."

Saunders also gave credit to third-string quarterback Tom Flick, who was making only his second start as a pro.

"Talk about a guy who played a whole lot of 'football' game," Saunders said. "He was cool-as-a-cucumber and made plays when he had 'em."

Denver Coach Dan Reeves said his team was "surprised" by the Chargers. "Their pass rush was very good, they played well on the defensive side of the ball and they controlled the ball offensively. I was not pleased with the way we played."

The upset snapped an eight-game losing streak for the Chargers and raised their record to 2-8. Denver, the AFC West Division leader, fell to 8-2 and was just one game ahead of Kansas City, next week's opponent.

San Diego showed ball-control capability behind Flick, starting in place of the injured Dan Fouts and Mark Herrmann. Using mostly short passes to his tight ends and runs by Gary Anderson and Curtis Adams, Flick led the Chargers on long drives for all of their scores.

Dale's interceptions, meanwhile, thwarted two serious scoring threats — by the Broncos. Late in the first half, Anderson fumbled a punt and Denver recovered at the 35-yard line. But on the next play, Elway overthrew his intended receiver and Dale returned the interception 39 yards to midfield.

It was the first of four costly turnovers in the game for Elway. Midway through the third period, Elway ran 10 yards on a quarterback draw for an apparent first down but fumbled at the San Diego 10.

Five minutes later, Dale picked off a pass in the end zone and

Superdome Saints half L.A. Dickersons, 6-0

By AUSTIN WILSON
The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Rickey Jackson predicted, then helped make it come true, a 6-0 shutout of Los Angeles Rams and the NFL's premier back held to less than half his usual average by the New Orleans Saints.

When Jackson predicted just such an outcome a week ago, people chuckled.

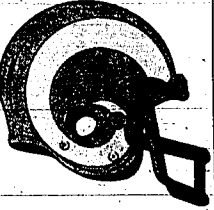

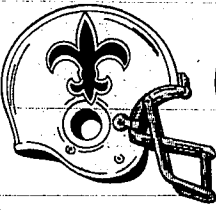

"I told everybody I didn't look for him to get 100 yards against us. Nobody gets 100 yards on us," Jackson said Sunday after the Saints' victory.

Linebackers Sam Mills and Joe Staley combined to stop three Clark led a defense that stopped the Rams' powerful running game, holding Eric Dickerson, the league's leading rusher, to 57 yards on 21 carries.

Saints kicker Morten Andersen provided all the scoring on a pair of second half field goals, one from 20 yards out in the third quarter and the other from 27 yards in the fourth quarter.

"It's nice when they can get you that close," Andersen said. "They should have come out a little braver even though the first one wasn't that pretty."

Cornback Dave Waymer clinched the victory, picking off Steve Dils' pass with 2:52 left in the game on a drive that appeared to be headed toward a winning touchdown for the Rams.

Waymer said he had seen the Rams use the same play in beating Chicago last week and was ready for it. He said he gambled on going for the ball rather than playing it safe.

"Every time they throw the ball I'm going for the big play," said Waymer, who had picked off four passes this season prior to Sunday.

"A scared man can't win. No guts, no glory."

"One of the things that makes for a good defense is a defense that's willing to take chances," he said.

Dickerson said he was too exhausted to talk to reporters after the game Sunday, but Mills and his teammates had plenty to say about Los Angeles' star running back.

"When you've got a guy like Eric Dickerson across from you, it's no work to get up for the game," Mills said. "He is a great back. I saw him hit a few holes that a average back couldn't have got to."

"Today was a great victory but I didn't think we could shut them out," Mills said.

He said Jackson is a great leader on the field but he didn't think much of his ability as a prophet until Sunday.

Eight Magic Valley girls' teams collide in Jerome

By The Times-News

JEROME — The first of the Magic Valley's invitational girls' basketball tournaments of the season will begin its four-day run tonight, with eight teams from District 4 playing at least three games apiece through Thursday night in the Jerome Invitational. The games, which is 1-0 so far this season, will open up against Bliss, 8-0, at 5 p.m., while 2-0 Buhl and 0-1 Filer will get together at 6:30 in the Jerome High gym. Jerome, which has yet to play a varsity game this season, will take on 1-0 Glenn Perry at 8 p.m.

On Tuesday, Gooding, 0-1, will meet Oakley, 2-0, in the 5 p.m. contest, with action to continue Tuesday night, Wednesday and Thursday in the double-elimination format.

High-flying Jets run win streak to eight

By ED SHEARER
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Ken O'Brien wasn't taking much credit for himself, but Wesley Walker didn't agree.

"It's unbelievable what he can do," Walker said after being on the receiving end of two of O'Brien's three second-quarter touchdown passes that "carried the New York Jets" to their eighth victory in a row, a 28-14 triumph over the Atlanta Falcons Sunday.

O'Brien, who finished with 322 yards in the air, hit on a club record 17 consecutive passes during one stretch, and was 13 for 13 for 195 yards in the second quarter.

"I think the offensive line deserves the credit," O'Brien said. "When I've got that much time, I can get things done."

"I'll tell you what, over the years I've played with a lot of quarterbacks," Walker said. "No one throws like he can. He loves to throw the ball, but he doesn't take any unnecessary chances. He's a big reason we're winning."

It was the Jets' fifth consecutive victory on the road.

"O'Brien had a hot hand and we gave up some big plays that we haven't given up before," Atlanta Coach Dan Henning said. "And that was the story."

O'Brien's 17 consecutive completions tied for the fifth best string in NFL history, breaking the Jets' record of 15 set over a two-game span by Joe Namath.

It was only three shy of the all-time record set by Kenny Anderson of the Cincinnati Bengals against Houston on Jan. 2, 1983.

O'Brien broke a scoreless tie on the first play of the second quarter when he connected with Al Toon on a 59-yard scoring pass and he threw two more TD passes later in the same period to Walker covering 46 and 16 yards.

The victory lifted the AFC East-leading Jets winning streak merely adding to their club record.

O'Brien, who hit on 26 of 33 passes, was perfect in the three second-quarter scoring drives — completing three for 75 yards in the first, five for 75 in the second and seven for 61 in the third.

AFC West: L.A. moves back into contention

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Old pro Jim Plunkett showed Sunday why the Los Angeles Raiders still keep him around at the age of 35. The 16-year veteran came off the bench at halftime to throw two touchdowns versus the Dallas Cowboys. Steve Pelluer for a 17-13 NFL victory over the Dallas Cowboys.

Pro football

Five interceptions and six sacks of Pelluer kept Los Angeles in the game until Plunkett could get warmed up. Pelluer was starting in place of Danny White, who suffered a broken wrist last Sunday. "Raiders Coach Tom Flores said Plunkett amazes him. "Jim is a remarkable guy," Flores said. "He's able to come in and do confidence to come in during tough situations. That's one of his strong points. He's able to come in and do the job."

JIM PLUNKETT Beats Dallas

Flores said he decided to make a change after Marc Wilson's poor first-half performance. "We played poorly and that's an understatement," Flores said. Plunkett said his relief performance is what he's paid to do and praised Williams. "Dokie made two tremendous catches," Plunkett said. "The last one could have very easily been intercepted, but it just outjumped the Cowboys. Good receivers make a quarterback look good. "Sometimes it's easier coming off the bench," he said. "You've had a chance to look at the other team's defense. I just did my job." But Plunkett added that he nevertheless feels he should be starting. "I've proved it all year," he said. "It's no fun to be on the bench." Dallas Coach Tom Landry said, "We beat ourselves. We had two touchdowns called back by penalty. It's simple. It was a frustrating game." Landry said the Cowboys went into the game wary of the Raiders' deep passing attack. "We were worried about the long passes," Landry said. "That's Plunkett's specialty and he hurt us."

Landry defended Pelluer, saying, "I don't think he lost his poise. He just had some passes he wished he had back. I think any young quarterback will have games like this. He's an excellent prospect and will overcome this game." The Cowboys' offense revolved around Tony Dorsett because Herschel Walker was used sparingly after he was sprained. Walker only carried the ball three times for 3 yards and caught no passes. The Raiders improved their record to 6-4 in the AFC West. The Cowboys dropped to 6-4 in the NFC East.

Plunkett tied the game 10-10 in the third period. He flipped a 20-yard scoring pass to Williams after linebacker Jerry Robinson's interception of Pelluer at the Dallas 22. With Dallas leading 13-10 early in the fourth period on Rafael Septien's 20-yard field goal, Plunkett hit Williams with a 40-yard scoring pass after Vann McBreary's second interception of the game. Dallas led 19-3 at halftime with both the Raiders' Wilson and Eller suffering three interceptions each. The Cowboys had two apparent touchdowns called back by penalties. Ron Fellows' interception of Wilson at the Raider 32 led to Dorsett's 13-yard touchdown run which gave Dallas the lead after a tradeoff of field goals. Dorsett passed O.J. Simpson in the fifth-sprint on the NFL's all-time rushing list. He rushed 22 times for 101 yards Sunday, for a total of 11,282 yards to 11,236 for Simpson. Dallas dropped two games behind the New York Giants and Washington Redskins in the NFC East. The Raiders edged to win two games of Denver in the AFC West.

The second touchdown from Williams, who recorded five catches for 107 yards, came with 10:15 left when he out-leaped three Dallas defenders for the ball. The five Raiders interceptions tied a Dallas club record held by Danny White and Eddie LeBaron. Dallas took a 3-0 lead on Rafael Septien's 20-yard field goal in the first quarter, but the Raiders countered early in the second period on Chris Bahy's 45-yarder. The Cowboys blew three other chances to score touchdowns in the first half, and Septien missed a 44-yard field goal attempt.

AFC Central: Oilers derail Cincinnati

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Coach Jerry Glavin said his team was ready to explode before Sunday's game against Cincinnati, and it was quarterback "Boomer" Anderson who led the Oilers to a 23-10 victory. Drew Hill who finally lit the fuse. The Oilers bolted to a 19-0 first-half lead and held off a second-half rally led by Cincinnati's Boomer Esision and Ken Anderson for a 23-10 victory, ending an eight-game losing streak. "I think today (the team showed) what we know we could be," Houston Coach Jerry Glavin said. "Amen — it's been a long dry spell." Moon, who has thrown 18 interceptions and suffered 23 sacks this season, hit his first seven passes of the game as the Oilers averaged a 31-28 loss to the Bengals on Oct. 19. "I think we can win six or seven games, but the playoffs may not be realistic," Moon said. "We could have gone down the tubes if they'd scored and whipped us." Moon had complained after last week's game about the Oilers' run-oriented game plan. "I don't want to blow my own horn, I just want to use my philosophy. I believe in the philosophy, but I'd like to mix in more gadget plays." Hill and Moon were on target throughout the game. "We felt we could throw against Cincinnati the first time we played them, but the coaches wanted to establish the run," Hill said. "Why, I don't know." The Oilers defense, ranked 26th in the NFL against the run, held the Bengals, ranked No. 3 in the NFL in rushing, to 42 yards on the ground. Cincinnati Coach Sam Wyche started Anderson in the third quarter but Esision returned when Anderson suffered a shoulder bruise later in the period. "It was a time in the game when I wanted to get the team juiced up with a change," Wyche said. "Kenny is a poised pro. Boomer came back and kept his head up." Trailing 29-28 late in the game, Wyche elected to try for a first down at Houston's 27 rather than attempt a go-ahead field goal. Esision was tackled for no gain and Houston took over for the closing seconds.

AFC East: Levy-led Bills edge Steelers

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Mary Levy credited "45 stout hearts and the north wind" for making his debut as head coach of the Buffalo Bills a success. Actually, 43 Buffalo Bills and a strong west-southwest wind were involved Sunday in the Bills' 16-12 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers. But Levy could be forgiven for his miscequating of the unsettling circumstances of taking over a 2-7 team in midseason. "A person comes into a situation very apprehensive about what might happen the first time out there and his team does not have a good record," said Levy, who replaced the fired Hank Buhlough as Bills head coach on Monday. "But the Bills, maybe because they handled the steady 35-mph wind at Rich Stadium better than the visiting Steelers, overcame the uncertainty before a crowd of 72,000 fans. "Obviously, the wind was a factor, maybe more for us than for them," acknowledged Steelers Coach Chuck Noll, whose team is also 3-7. "It was tough to control the ball going either way." Rob Riddick rushed for 108 yards and a touchdown to key the Bills' victory that snapped a two-game Pittsburgh winning streak. "I feel good about getting 100 yards," Riddick said. "We knew that for Buffalo, particularly in the first half. The Steelers won the coin toss and elected to take the ball, but couldn't move for a first down against the stiff gust. The wind then helped give the Bills good field position when Newsome's 29-yard punt into the wind rolled off at the Pittsburgh 49. Using a roll-out pocket, Kelly passed Buffalo downfield before finding Reed for the 3-yard touchdown strike that put the Bills on top. A bad snap on the ensuing punt-er attempt caused Buffalo to miss the extra point. The Steelers continued to have offensive troubles throughout the first half, finally getting their initial first down with 2:16 left in the half. At that point, the Bills already had 13 first downs. When the Bills had to work into the wind in the second quarter, they found they had little trouble running on the Steelers. Aided by three Pittsburgh offside penalties — one on third-and-4 — the Bills marched 71 yards for their second score, Riddick's 11-yard run. The Bills led 15-0 at the half but quickly allowed the Steelers back into the game when Eric Richardson fumbled — Pittsburgh's second-half kickoff. Mike Merriweather recovered for the Steelers at the Buffalo 5, and Jackson burst through the middle on the next play for a touchdown. But

New England 30 Indianapolis 21

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tony Esion passed for 240 yards and a pair of third-quarter touchdowns Sunday as New England, giving Indianapolis an early 13-point lead, beat the Colts 30-21 and kept them the only winless team in the NFL. The Colts, trying desperately to gain their first victory, surprised the favored Patriots with the passing of rookie quarterback Jack Winters and two first-half touchdowns. But repeated penalties on the Colts and four pass interceptions by New England, including two by Steve Nelson, halted every Indianapolis thrust until the closing minutes of the game.

Newsome dropped the snap for the extra-point attempt to keep it at 13-0. Another wind-inhibited punt — this one by Buffalo's John Kidd — set up the Steelers' second touchdown early in the third quarter. Kidd's 5-yard punt gave Pittsburgh the ball at the Buffalo 29. Four plays later, Malone threw the 11-yard touchdown strike to the 6-foot-6 Thompson, who was being covered by 5-foot-8 Rodney Bellinger.

THE ACES® BOBBY WOLFF

"Man like every other animal is by nature indolent. If nothing brings him on, he will think and will behave from habit like an automaton." — Einstein.

The decliner who plays today's spades from habit will have much to regret. The one who expects a little thought brings home the plus score. West leads the spade queen and a cursory look points toward a habitual holdup play. What happens if South ducks the lead in dummy? East overtakes the queen with his king to unblock the suit and returns his deuce to dummy's ace. South now has only seven tricks without the hearts, and when he plays that ace, West wins his ace and cashes three spades for one down. Let's examine that spade suit more closely. South is in danger only if the spades are 5-2. If they are 4-3, the most he can lose is three spades and a heart. (If they are 6-1, it makes no difference, what dummy does at trick one.) If they are 5-2, South must prevent a free unblock of East's king. He plays the spade ace at trick one, and East is stuck. If East jettisons his king under the ace, South has a second stopper with his 9-8-6. And if East keeps his spade king, West cannot run his suit when he wins the ace of hearts.

Alcoholism: America's major health problem

By SALLY SQUIRES
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The political spotlight may be on illegal drugs, but the biggest problem with abuse of chemicals and addiction involves alcohol.

"We consider alcoholism probably the major public-health problem in Americans to 11.4 million by 1995. "The figures of other drug users clearly pale compared to that number," says Dr. Martin Linnella, Clinical Director of the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

The costs, moreover, of alcohol abuse are staggering, overshadowing all illicit drugs in terms of

The price in human misery and sickness is also great. Liver cirrhosis, which accounts for three every four deaths from alcoholism, now is the fifth leading cause of death nationwide — surpassing even deaths from diabetes. In large urban areas, alcohol-related liver cirrhosis is the third leading cause of death for men and women ages 25 to 65 years.

In addition, an estimated 25,000 Americans die in alcohol-related traffic accidents each year. Another 75,000 men, women and children are permanently disabled. These statistics underscore alcohol's toll on society. At the same time, there is a growing consensus among physicians that alcoholism is a very treatable disease. Although it was once viewed as a hopeless condition, today experts believe that an increasing number of alcoholics can be helped on the road to sobriety.

"We do better in (treating) alcoholism than in (treating) obesity, smoking or most forms of drug abuse," says Dr. Peter Nathan, a clinical psychologist who is director of alcohol studies at Rutgers University.

Today's alcoholic has a wide choice in getting help. A growing number of employee-assistance programs, inpatient and outpatient clinics and support groups such as the well-known Alcoholics Anonymous offer medical and psychosocial support to alcoholics and their families.

Most significant, doctors are finding that the chances of recovery have never been better — particularly for those who are still married or are involved in a relationship, have a job, and are covered by health insurance.

"Most of the studies I have seen say that 50 percent or more of alcoholics will stay dry a year or more," said Dr. Marc Schuckit, professor of psychiatry at the University of California School of Medicine at San Diego.

But because many people who abuse alcohol deny that they have a problem, they never get the treatment they need. As a result, overall statistics on recovery from alcoholism are not encouraging. A Rand Corp. study in the late 1970s found that only 20 to 30 percent of alcoholics are still sober 18 months after giving up drinking. For many says Rutgers' Nathan. "I think we know better how to predict treatment outcomes and who is likely to be patient whose prognosis is better."

Part of that knowledge comes from a new battery of psychological scales now being tested by Stanford University researchers. But only these new scales can target who will recovering alcoholics, treatment then becomes a series of remissions, each one hopefully longer than the last, until total sobriety is achieved. Accurate diagnosis is important to allow doctors to try to offer tailor-made treatments. "We know better where to look and what to measure," do best in which type of treatment program. Once physicians believed that only 28-day hospitalization could help alcoholics stay sober. But now, comparisons between 14-day outpatient treatment and 28-day hospitalization. See ALCOHOLISM on Page D2 the United States today," said Dr. Charles S. Lieber, director of the Alcohol Research and Treatment Center at the Bronx Veterans Administration Medical Center.

treatment and direct costs to society. According to the "Fifth Special Report to the Congress on Alcohol and Health," published by the Department of Health and Human Services, the total bill for medical care and lost income due to alcohol abuse is $49 billion a year.

Contact lenses play host to unwanted guests

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Contact lenses enable those of us with less than perfect vision to put our eyeglasses aside, and the soft ones make this alternative a more comfortable experience. But if the lenses are not properly cared for, it is possible for the wearer's eyes to play host to an unwelcome guest.

It is called an Acanthamoeba, a big name for a little one-celled organism that lives in water, soil or air. And, it can be found in non-sterile saline or distilled water.

According to Twin Falls

ophthalmologist, Dr. Robert Welch, the soft contact lenses are mostly water, and soak up anything in the saline. "The organism can live in the contact lens," he says, "but of course, that doesn't damage the eye."

"It's only when the organism leaves the saline solution or the contact lens, and actually gets into the cornea, that you have the problem. Then, it's a very progressive disease."

It is called Acanthamoeba keratitis, or infection of the cornea, and it starts out with a red, irritated eye. The vision can be fairly normal at first, but the cornea gradually gets cloudy, and the eye starts to have discharge.

"Then, when we see them in the office," he says, "there can be a sort of a ring of cloudiness on the cornea. Eventually, if the process continues untreated, the vision can be lost completely, and even the entire eye can be lost. The disease is still rare, but increasing in frequency, and the loss of an eye is even rarer."

Dr. Welch says the condition is difficult to treat, and so, prevention is far and away the most important thing, using extreme care in handling, cleaning and disinfecting the lenses. He recommends using either the thermal (boiling) or a new hydrogen peroxide disinfection system.

Acanthamoeba keratitis can occur as a result of the use of a homemade saline solution, made by mixing salt tablets in distilled water. He says a lot of people were taught to do that in the past, because they were allergic to some of the original soft contact lens solutions. But nowadays, there are low-allergic commercial saline solutions, and the hydrogen peroxide disinfection system is one of them.

He also advises those who wear these lenses to avoid exposing them to brackish water, and if they have hot tubs, to properly maintain them.

The Acanthamoeba can also affect hard contact lenses, but this is less common than with the soft ones. He says this is probably because not as much of the contaminated solution is soaked up by them, so there is less chance for the organism to get into the cornea.

Initially, Dr. Welch says, this condition was described in 1974, but it seems like over the last two or three years, it's been found in increasing numbers. It seems to be becoming more prevalent, and it's been seen mostly in people that wear soft contact lenses and use distilled water. But, it has been reported in quite a few people that do not wear contacts at all, so some people have been exposed to it through some sort of contaminated water.

He says the medical profession is not absolutely certain why they are seeing such an increase. "The best we can come up with," he says, "is that there are more and more people wearing soft contact lenses, more people making their own saline solutions, and possibly people have developed something of a cavalier attitude about it, and they're just not taking the care with them that they used to." With the increase of Acanthamoeba, it is wise for people to wear soft contacts? Dr. Welch says he thinks if they are managing the lenses properly, and disinfecting an appropriate basis, frequently enough, soft contact lenses can still be worn safely.

They are more comfortable, and there are some that can be worn for an extended time. Even so, Dr. Welch advises his patients against wearing them any longer than a week at a time between cleaning.

Another advantage to soft lenses is if a person wants to go three or four days without wearing them, he can return to using the lenses without discomfort. This is not the case with the hard ones.

And now it is possible to have a cosmetic effect along with the soft contacts. "You can actually enhance eye color, and actually alter it some. Usually what you're going to do is take a lighter blue or grey eye, and make it a deeper blue. It's pretty hard to take brown eyes and make them blue. It's not going to look quite right," he says.

Doctors urge use of the HIB vaccine

By WARREN E. LEARY
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A new vaccine against a — potentially deadly — children's disease should be used aggressively despite its ineffectiveness in some cases, a medical expert said Tuesday.

Dr. Robert S. Daum of Tulane University in New Orleans said the effects of the hard-to-treat disease, known as Haemophilus influenzae b or HIB, can be so severe that a vaccine which protects only some children is still important.

"The vaccine does not protect the children at highest risk, and is not 100 percent effective in those who do get it, but it still is very important," Daum told a news briefing at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

Daum is chief of the infectious diseases section of Tulane's department of pediatric medicine, and has conducted clinical tests of anti-HIB vaccines.

"The new vaccine has been used in the United States for about a year and a half. When it was first tested in Finland, it was effective in preventing the disease in 80 percent of cases. It uses a sugar coating that surrounds bacteria to spur antibody production against the organism."

About 5 million children have been vaccinated in the United States, and efficacy studies being compiled by the Food and Drug Administration should be ready by the end of the year, Daum said.

"Even if efficacy is only 60 percent, I believe the vaccine should still be used because the disease is so nasty," said Daum, who is the HIB expert on the academy's committee on infectious diseases.

HIB is a bacterial disease. The organism, which causes whooping cough, is the source of viral influenza when it was discovered during turn-of-the-century flu epidemics.

Daum said the disease, which strikes 20,000 American infants and children annually, primarily afflicts those between the ages of 3 months and 4 years, with most victims in the 6-month to 12-month age groups.

Quick takes

Male birth-control testing begins

Worldwide testing of a male birth-control injection is to begin by year's end, and if it works, a pill for males may eventually follow. "Nobody knows how low you have to get sperm production in a normal male to make him infertile," said Dr. William J. Bremner, a member of the World Health Organization committee overseeing the project. The aim of the experiment is to find that level.

Physicians have known for years that injections of the male hormone testosterone can suppress sperm production. The brain and pituitary gland interpret the presence of testosterone in the blood as an indication that the testes are actively producing sperm. In response, the pituitary orders the testes to stop sperm production.

But so far, only one-third to one-half of men have reached "essentially zero sperm production," said Bremner, chief of endocrinology at the Veterans Administration hospital in Seattle. "The approximately 350 couples in the new study" — to be conducted in the United States, China, Australia, Great Britain, West Germany and other countries — will continue having regular intercourse as the male receives weekly injections. This, Bremner said, will be a true test of fertility.

Side effects of the injections may include worsening of acne and slight weight gain, usually in muscle, but testosterone levels are well controlled, he said.

Washing hands when watched

From the Things You Didn't Want to Know department: Psychology Today did some spying recently to see if people wash their hands after using the bathroom. When they knew someone was watching, 18 out of 20 women washed their hands. But when no one was around, only three out of 13 washed, the magazine reports.

Child-resistant caps often fail

A survey of accidental drug ingestions by children suggests that child-resistant caps often fail.

The federal Consumer Product Safety Commission contacted the families of 2,015 children under age 5 who took medicine accidentally. All the families had called poison-control centers.

Interviews revealed that between 70 and 80 percent of the containers were of child-resistant design. Two reasons were cited for the lids' failure to deter children. Liquid medicines led a sticky Kool-Aid around the rim, preventing the top from closing properly. And cap bottles — the push and turn variety — appeared to be non-functional due to wear, says the Product Safety Letter, an independent report on regulation of consumer products.

Children found almost half of the medicines in the kitchen, most frequently in the refrigerator, the report said.

New treatment OK'd for psoriasis

The Food and Drug Administration has approved a new treatment for the most severe and disfiguring form of psoriasis. But government officials warned the drug can produce serious side effects, including severe birth defects.

"The drug, acitretin — a chemical relative of Vitamin A — could help patients suffering from the two forms of the disease that are most difficult to treat: erythrodermic psoriasis and pustular psoriasis. The agency said about 80,000 Americans whose psoriasis does not respond to any other treatment may be candidates for the new drug.

"This drug provides a treatment for people whose skin lesions are so severe that they are unable to work and, in some cases, unable even to tolerate clothing touching their skin," said FDA

Commissioner Dr. Frank Young

Side effects of the drug can include liver damage and symptoms of Vitamin A toxicity, including bone and joint pain, skin rash and hair loss.

Cases of syphilis in newborns up

After declining for almost a decade, the number of cases of syphilis among newborns has more than doubled since 1973, the Centers for Disease Control said last week.

Eighty percent of the 268 cases in 1985 occurred in Texas, Florida, California and the New York City area, the CDC said in the Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, an update on disease affecting Americans.

Syphilis, a sexually transmitted bacterial infection, can usually be treated with antibiotics, but it is important to detect its presence in the mother during pregnancy to protect the infant. Untreated, about half of infected fetuses die shortly after birth. In some cases, symptoms don't show up until months or years after birth, and the prognosis is better.

In any case, the doctors stressed, early prenatal care makes it possible to detect syphilis and protect both the mother and infant.

Young girls prone to dieting

Almost 90 percent of 10- and 11-year-old girls have gone on diets to lose weight, according to a University of California at San Francisco study.

Diетitian Laurel Meillon, who conducted the study of about 600 girls, said it reflects society's distorted views about body size and proper eating, an attitude that can lead to anorexia and other eating disorders. "The results, which are ... alarming, underscore the need for preventive education in the very early school years, possibly even pre-school," she said.

Motherhood burnout: Are you a candidate?

Do you:

- Tend to compare yourself unfavorably to other mothers?
- Find yourself constantly on edge and snapping at your children?
- Feel like you're under constant pressure — too much to do and too little time?
- Wish you had more time to yourself?
- Feel guilty about your lack of goodness as a parent?
- Feel unappreciated at home?
- Wish your kids would leave you alone?
- Feel irreplaceable as a parent?
- Feel your kids are out to get you?

If you've answered yes to most of these questions, you could be on your way to "motherhood burnout." And if the phrase sounds like just another flake word, according to Dr. Joseph Proccacci, author of Parent Burnout, "Burnout," this author says, "It's a state of physical, psychological and sometimes spiritual exhaustion."

Jo Ann Larsen

In its early stages, Proccacci observes, burnout may seem like nothing more than feeling tired all the time or feeling guilty for not doing even more for your children. More advanced burnout produces irritability, forgetfulness, temper flare-ups and a sense of worthlessness. At the extreme end of the spectrum, burnout can take the form of abusing your children, even destroying yourself. Fortunately, few mothers reach that point, but most mothers suffer from the burnout syndrome to some degree at one time or another.

Mothers who are burnout candidates often carry around a set of subconscious beliefs about being a parent that can lead to extreme stress. Inoculating yourself against "motherhood burnout" requires that you analyze your own notions about your role as "mother" and make sure your thinking is realistic and good for your own and your children's health. Here are a sample of beliefs that can get in your way.

- "I have to be perfect." Do you feel you can't make a mistake, or that it's "your fault" if things go wrong? If so, you may need to reduce the extraordinarily high standards you have for yourself.
- "It is an error to believe you can have an ordered life (especially with kids) in an unordered world or, with all the details you have to manage, together. You will always have your act together. You'll reduce your stress considerably if you give yourself permission to be "a day late and a dollar short" when you just simply can't get to meet all the needs and demands coming in.
- "My children have to be perfect. (And if, perchance, they behave bad, or don't do well, or other people criticize them, then I am a bad mother).

- Connecting too much of your worth to the responses of your children jeopardizes your self-esteem. The facts are that children will sometimes misbehave or not do well and that other people will sometimes be critical. Try as you might, you do not have much control over these things so why not while on them happening once in a while (which isn't your fault) and reduce your stress.
- "Giving 100 percent every day to my children is barely good enough; it is what all good parents do."
- Overinvesting in your children at the expense of taking care of yourself and your own growth can have disastrous results. In your zeal to do more and more for your family, you may constantly put out more energy than you receive. You'll suffer "energy bankruptcy." In your depleted condition, you may find yourself asking others for "helping more" and in a cycle of lashing out and then feeling guilty.

"I'm not as (smart) (good) (competent) as other mothers." If you measure your own achievements (and worth) by the achievements of other mothers, you're in trouble. There will always be another mother who has accomplished something you haven't. The only viable position is to compare you to yourself. Focus inward and measure your own growth and accomplishments as a mother — the distance you've come since you last gazed upon your progress.

- "Other mothers have their acts together. What am I doing wrong?"
- You may think the world is populated with obedient children and contented adults, but not so! Behind closed doors, every mother has her share of struggles getting kids to take responsibility, to share, to say "yes, mom," to not yell, fight and name-call, and the like. And every family has its struggles with members emotionally colliding with each other and having to work out ways of peacefully co-existing. You just don't see those struggles, and you may tend to think that everybody but "Nobody appreciates what I do. (So why should I try?)" If you suspect your kids don't appreciate all you do, you're probably right. Kids are notoriously unappreciative — being appreciative usually comes later in their lives). The mistake you can make is expecting appreciation when there isn't going to be much, and then thinking and saying things like "If you really loved me, you would..." or "I can't believe how ungrateful you are..." It's a good way to depress yourself.

Combating the "nobody appreciates me" feeling requires that you find other supportive adults and fulfilling activities in your own life so that you don't depend heavily on acknowledgment from your own children to "fill you up."

Jo Ann Larsen, D.S.W., is a Salt Lake City family therapist and a daughter of Dr. Ivya M. and Alice Jackson of Kimberly.

Chromosome defect linked to dyslexia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A form of dyslexia that may affect one out of every 100 Americans has been linked to an inherited chromosome defect, researchers said Tuesday.

Based on a study of 15 families with a history of dyslexia, scientists concluded that one out of three inherited cases of the reading disorder is linked to a defect on chromosome 15, one of the 23 paired chromosomes that carry human genes.

The finding, published in conjunction with the annual meeting in Philadelphia of the American Society of Human Genetics, should allow better detection of afflicted individuals, said Herbert Lubs of the University of Miami, one of the study's authors.

"In a few years, we could probably predict at birth which child will have dyslexia," Lubs said in an interview.

Such children could then be given special training to help them cope with the disorder, in which the brain seems unable to correctly process series of letters or numbers. Although dyslexics are of normal intelligence, they often fall behind in school or are misdiagnosed as learning impaired because of trouble reading.

The finding is also important because of the light it sheds on the workings of the brain, Lubs said.

"It enables you to show that one gene is affecting a specific brain function and its development," he said.

Lubs said he believes that most dyslexia is inherited, although researchers do not know that for certain.

Among Americans who suffered from dyslexia were President Woodrow Wilson and Vice President Nelson Rockefeller.

Dr. Albert Galaburda, a neurologist at the Harvard Medical School who studies dyslexia, agreed that most dyslexia is inherited. But he said it is wrong to assume therefore that there is a specific gene that causes dyslexia.

"It may be there is a gene that sets up changes to make a brain network and let it show dyslexia under certain circumstances," he said.

Galaburda estimated that 5 percent to 10 percent of the population, or about 10 million to 20 million Americans, suffer from what is strictly called dyslexia.

Some estimates say that dyslexia strikes as many as 15 percent of Americans, Galaburda said, but those estimates include children for whom the reading disability is part of a larger problem of learning disabilities.

James Kavanagh of the government's National Institute of Child Health and Human Development in Bethesda, Md., said that heredity "surely doesn't account for all reading failure, but it does account for some." The institute funded Lubs' research.

Kavanagh said that researchers are debating whether dyslexia is actually a "disease," caused by some brain abnormality, or whether it simply is an indicator of people who "for many reasons, including their upbringing, have little or no facility with language."

If that were true, people with dyslexia would be no more abnormal than gifted writers who have unusually strong language abilities, Kavanagh said.

The research by Lubs, in collaboration with Shelley Smith of the Boys' Town National Institute in Omaha, Neb., and Bruce Pennington of the University of Colorado Medical Center in Denver, suggested that one-third of inherited cases of dyslexia are linked to some defect on chromosome 15.

The other two-thirds are presumably linked to genetic defects on other chromosomes, Lubs said, but the researchers are now searching for those defects.

The disorder also can be caused by non-genetic factors, such as a head injury or brain disease.

Lubs said that if most of the 5 percent to 10 percent of Americans with dyslexia have inherited it and a third of those cases are linked to the chromosome-15 defect, then perhaps 1 percent of Americans — 2 million people — have the defect.

Toxic shock test developed

NEW YORK (AP) — A newly developed blood test to identify women susceptible to toxic shock syndrome could warn them in advance against using tampons, a researcher said Thursday.

The test, which checks for a rare condition justifies mass screening.

Dr. Richard Novick, director of the non-profit Public Health Research Institute, said in an interview he thought women of menstruating age should take the test and avoid tampons if it says they are susceptible. Tampon use has been linked to the potentially fatal condition.

Novick's institute, the University of Minnesota and Applied Microbiology Inc. of New York have developed the test and now are talking with companies to market it, he said. The institute would split profits with the other two developing organizations, he said.

Only a relatively small proportion of adults are susceptible to toxic shock, he said.

Toxic shock syndrome is characterized by a sudden high fever, a drop in blood pressure and, in severe cases, shock. In 1984, the researcher said, 100,000 cases were reported to the federal Centers for Disease Control. The fatality rate is 1 percent to 2 percent, Novick said.

In cases linked to tampons, which the CDC said accounts for about three-quarters of the total, the syndrome is caused by a toxin secreted by a microbe called staphylococcus aureus.

Most adults are immune because their bodies manufacture proteins called antibodies which disable the toxin. Novick's test identifies people who lack such antibodies.

Novick said the test is 90 percent accurate in identifying susceptibility, but that the figure is "a guess. It's not based on hard figures."

Alcoholism

tion suggest that "more treatment is not necessarily better than less treatment," says Nathan. What's more, alcohol experts now believe that friends and an alcoholic near supportive — but non-alcoholic — family and keeping an alcoholic from recovery.

Treatment is not cheap, running several hundred dollars per day for help. At Washington's Psychiatric Institute, a 28-day inpatient stay costs $15 to about $8,000. Depending on the plan, most of the inpatient costs are covered by health insurance.

For companies that offer alcohol rehabilitation programs "to their employees, treatment can pay off in lower long-term health care costs. A recent study of federal workers found that alcoholic-treatment programs paid for themselves within 18 months to two years with lowered medical costs," he says.

Whatever the treatment, the goal is always "absolute sobriety," says Linnola. The notion that alcoholics can engage in "so-called controlled drinking is falling by the wayside," he said. "It is extremely rare for an alcoholic to be able to do that."

Meanwhile, new research is uncovering more about the disease: what causes it, what can be done to detect it earlier.

"Alcoholism is really many different diseases that manifest themselves with the craving for and eventual dependence on alcohol," said Dr. Boris Tabakoff, scientific director of the NIAAA.

They seem to be two major categories of alcoholism — one that afflicts both men and women, and another more serious form of the disease that seems limited to men and is closely tied to anti-social behavior and violence. This second type of alcoholism is the one that "seems to be inherited from fathers to sons," says Linnola.

Why anyone becomes addicted to alcohol is not yet known, but researchers have some important clues.

Stacy by University of California's Schuckitt and colleagues suggest that some children of alcoholics metabolize alcohol more efficiently than children of parents without drinking problems. Having an increased tolerance of alcohol may make these sons and daughters of alcoholics more susceptible to becoming alcoholics themselves.

"I am confident that we will find genetic factors that increase one's predisposition to developing alcoholism," says Schuckitt.

Other evidence points to differences in the way the brains of some alcoholics produce the neurotransmitter serotonin. The violent, criminal group of alcoholics seem to have a significant decrease of serotonin, "This may be something that they are trying to remedy with alcohol. Initially alcohol releases more serotonin from the nerve cells in the brain, but with chronic usage, it depletes the stores and makes the program worse."

In other alcoholics, Linnola and his colleagues have found new evidence of abnormalities in the neurochemical pathways that affect an individual's response to anxiety and stress. "All of which would fit in with why people are overdosing in using a drug, which has anxiety-reducing effects," Linnola says. The problem is that "alcohol is not a very good drug. It quickly gets out of hand because it is an addictive substance that causes dependence."

What else makes the alcoholic different from other people? At the Bronx VA hospital, Lieber and his colleagues have found that chronic alcohol use causes the increase of an alcoholic specific liver enzyme called cytochrome p450. This enzyme not only increases the tolerance for alcohol, but also can change some harmless substances, including the painkiller acetaminophen, into potent toxic and sometimes cancer-causing agents. In addition, this particular form of p450 depletes the body of vitamin A. All this may help explain, says Lieber, why certain types of cancers are more common in alcoholics.

For the future, researchers are trying to determine which children of alcoholics may be susceptible to the disease and which youngsters are protected. "Finding biological markers that could identify people with increased susceptibility to alcoholism is the goal."

"If you catch alcoholism at an early stage, we do much better with recovery," said Lieber. "The key is early recognition and treatment."

Self-blood transfusions suggested

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Medical Association recommended on Thursday that people anticipating elective heart, chest or orthopedic surgery have their own blood collected in a six-week period before the operation.

The method, called autologous blood transfusion, eliminates the risk of contracting AIDS or other communicable diseases associated with receiving someone else's blood, said Dr. Ira Friedlander, a member of the AMA's Council on Scientific Affairs.

Friedlander noted that the AMA was not recommending that individuals with heart and orthopedic surgery have their blood stored.

"It's not like you live in a dangerous neighborhood and say, 'Gee, someday I might get shot' and go down and have some of your blood stored," he said.

The council's report on endorsing autologous blood transfusions adopted as general policy by the AMA in June, appears in Friday's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"To be effective, however, such blood transfusions must be used with about six weeks of collection, said Friedlander, a cardiologist at the University of Chicago. Blood that is frozen is good for about 10 years, but the freezing process is costly, he said.

"The risk for hepatitis and communicable diseases that you can get through blood transfusions — and that includes AIDS — is pretty much in the public's mind right now," Friedlander said, explaining why the AMA decided to adopt a policy on blood transfusion.

Of the 25,878 reported cases of AIDS in adults since 1981, 485 — about 2 percent — were contracted through blood transfusions, the national Centers for Disease Control says.

brain inflammation called meningitis, which can lead to mental retardation, seizure disorders, blindness and learning disorders, he said. Between 5 percent and 10 percent of those who come down with Hib meningitis die as a result, he said.

Another serious side effect of the disease can be swelling of the upper airway, which can obstruct the airway is obstructed. An estimated 5 percent or more of those with this complication also die, he said.

The main problem with the present vaccine is that it does not work in very young infants and children — those at greatest risk of the disease, Daum said.

The human body does not start to make antibodies in response to the vaccine until about 1 year of age, and children don't get effective levels of protection until they are about 2.

Because of this, the American Academy of Pediatrics does not recommend giving children the vaccine until they are 2 or after they are 6, by which time the incidence of the disease drops dramatically.

Daum said the federal Centers for Disease Control recommends vaccination at 18 months because of concerns about children in day care centers getting the disease.

The vaccine offers some protection, increasing with age of the recipient, from about 12 months and should be useful to many children even at 18 months, Daum said.

TWIN FALLS — The Association for Learning and Behavioral Problems, a recently formed non-profit corporation, meets at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the KMYT Conference Room, 1100 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. For more information, call 734-8324.

Using zippers instead of stitches

BOSTON (AP) — A maker of garment zippers says surgeons shouldn't substitute its products for stitches to temporarily close up patients. But at least one doctor says zippers work fine — as long as they don't pop open accidentally.

The doctor says zippers sewn into incisions are handy for patients whose incisions must be re-examined frequently, although he prefers a rival brand.

The exchange — headlined "If You Snip, Don't Zip" — was published in the letters section of Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, a forum that often explores offbeat corners of the medical world.

Bernard J. Rubin, an official of VICK-in-Macon, Ga., wrote: "It has recently come to our attention that at least one physician is using our zippers to close surgical incisions."

Rubin said his company's zippers were not designed for medical purposes and are not sterile. Indeed, they come in contact with oils, lubricants, detergents and other common chemicals while being manufactured.

"Illness or injury may result if this product is used for surgical purposes," he cautioned.

Typical hospital room now costs $212

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Spending one day in a typical American hospital room cost $212 last year, with California the most expensive state to be hospitalized in, and Mississippi the least costly.

Hospital room charges jumped nearly 70 percent over five years, on average, from a 1980 cost of $127 a day, according to statistics published by the Census Bureau. The figures were drawn from data compiled by the Health Insurance Association of America and the American Hospital Association.

Room charges were only part of the cost of a trip to the hospital.

Adding in doctors fees, medication and other charges raised the average daily cost of a stay to $369 as of 1983, the most recent detailed statistics available from the hospital association. At that rate the average hospital stay was estimated at $1,789 by the group.

The health insurance association's 1985 study of hospital room charges found that the average daily cost was $281 in the Golden State. That was up from a daily rate of $181 five years earlier.

Rounding out the five most costly states to be hospitalized were Alaska, $274 a day; Michigan, $270; Pennsylvania, $256 and Illinois, $247.

At the other end of the scale, a Mississippi hospital room averaged only $114 per day, up from only $67 a day in 1980.

The rest of the five least expensive states were North Carolina, $132 a day; South Carolina, $140; Arkansas, $141 and Tennessee, $142.

The group found 13 states averaged higher costs than the nation as a whole while room rates were below the average in 36 states.

Colorado hospitals managed to be exactly on the $212 national average. Idaho cost $199 a day, up from $110 in 1980.

The hospital association's 1983 studies counted 5,688 hospitals in the United States, with 1,350,000 beds. That was down from a peak of 7,174 hospitals in 1974.

California, with the most people, also had the most hospitals, 881 with 110,300 beds in the state. New York, with only 338 hospitals counted, had more beds available, 132,300.

Here is a state-by-state rundown of the average daily cost of a semi-

SACROILIAC STRAIN

You or someone you know may be suffering needlessly from back pain that could be effectively treated with corrective chiropractic adjustments. Sacroiliac strain is a common back injury involving slipping of the sacrum or tailbone, in relation to the bones of the hip. Movement usually aggravates the pain. If left untreated, this pain and strain may cause further complications. Why suffer when we can bring about rapid relief of the symptoms and correct the disorder? Make an appointment today.

New studies show how AIDS attacks

CHICAGO (AP) — Three new studies demonstrate for the first time that the AIDS virus attacks the immune system's first line of defense, a fluid that may explain how the virus can infect the lungs and brain, scientists said Thursday.

Scientists found in separate experiments that the AIDS virus attacks the body's monocyte-macrophage cells, which are the immune system's first line of defense and circulate throughout the body, said Suzanne Gartner at the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md., a researcher involved in one of the studies.

The findings represent "a major stride" in understanding that the AIDS virus not only destroys the immune system but also may itself cause diseases, said Dr. Howard Gisher, also of the cancer institute.

In two of the new studies, scientists at the cancer institute and the University of Rochester Medical School found the AIDS virus, called HTLV-III, infected monocyte-macrophage cells in the brain.

The third study, also conducted at the cancer institute, found the AIDS virus infected those cells in the lungs of a child AIDS victim.

The three studies appear in Friday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Presumably, the macrophages are picking-up the virus first when it enters the body and the T-cells are then picking it up from the macrophages," she said.

"They also can circulate throughout the body and infect a lot of tissues. They can remain infected in the body and can produce a lot of virus."

Patients need care after the hospital

By VICTOR COHN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — This is the Age of the Patient. The sick are now speaking up for themselves. Right? Wrong, says Louise Blayvelt, a nurse who is proprietor of HomeCall of Prince George's County, Md., a home health care service.

When they're having problems, she says, "most people back off. A lot of them feel their voice is not heard." They feel their voice is not heard. What can be done about it?

"Raise their awareness," she says. Readers, including doctors and health care officials, have been responding to recent articles on health care in the home, a service that is becoming today's "new hospital" as patients are shipped home with lightning speed, still needing care.

Richard Davidson, president of the Maryland Hospital Association, provided a new set of discharge planning guidelines "circulated widely to Maryland doctors and hospitals."

"As far as I know, these are the only statewide guidelines any hospital association has put together," he reports.

The guidelines are titled "Good Discharge Planning: Patient Advocacy at Its Best."

—Richard Davidson

Every hospital patient or prospective patient who may need further care — and almost all do — should know that a responsible hospital association, in cooperation with the Maryland state medical association, now clearly says:

As the American Hospital Association bill of rights states, "the patient has the right to expect reasonable continuity of care."

Discharge planning is "essential to outpatients (those hospitalized and those treated in day emergency clinics or "in-out" surgical suites) to receive appropriate and timely discharge planning ... Medical staff involvement in all phases ... Early family and patient participation in problems, such as nursing home evaluation and selection."

— And finally, "a pre-discharge checklist" as a permanent part of the patient's record.

A sample pre-discharge checklist for doctors, nurses and the hospital's discharge planners includes such questions as: "Has the patient been given written instructions regarding care? Does the patient have written instructions on arranging for follow-up care? Will family members be caring for the patient (or) have other suitable arrangements been made? Does the patient have all needed medications or prescriptions? Does the patient, family or other individual know whom to call if the patient's condition worsens or fails to improve?"
