Improving ties with Iran goal, Reagan says

President defends secret diplomacy in address

By W. DALE NELSON
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan confirmed Thursday night he undertook 18 months of secret diplomacy with Iran and said he sent it "small amounts" of weapons to improve relations, not to ransom American hostages in Lebanon. He said it was not his intention to lift U.S. policy toward Iran in its bloody six-year war with Iraq. "Due to the publicity of the past week, the entire initiative is very much at risk today," the president told the nation in an address broadcast from the Oval Office. Saying he was being forced to speak out by widespread rumors about his dealings with Iran, Reagan acknowledged he sent former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane on a four-day mission to Tehran last spring "to raise the diplomatic level of contacts" with moderates in Iran. "Since then," Reagan said in his broadcast address, "the dialogue has continued, and step-by-step progress continues to be made." The president spoke in the midst of clamor from Capitol Hill, and demands from many of his conservative political allies, for a detailed defense of the administration's heretofore secret arms dealings with Iran. After Reagan spoke, Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia called the president's Iranian initiative "a major foreign relations blunder" and questioned its impact "on our own credibility with our friends and within our own country." Said Rajala-Khorassani, Iran's ambassador to the United Nations, said of Reagan's speech: "To me it was a very optimistic statement and to some extent a constructive statement." He said Iran has "made certain conditions" for a continuation of the diplomatic efforts, and said that if these conditions are met, a "mutual

Democrats criticize 'blunder,' late explanation

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd said Thursday that President Reagan's secret diplomacy with Iran was a "major foreign policy blunder" and described the president's explanation of his actions as a self-serving "public relations game." Democrats were joined by Republicans in their criticism of the president's actions and in their call for congressional hearings into the shipment of arms to Iran. And members of both parties lambasted the president for refusing to inform Congress about the efforts to improve relations with Iran. Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said, "The president made a judgment that the security of the hostages, the security of the new relations that we were fashioning with Iran, justified a very close circle, and there it was kept. I think this is debatable." Responding to Reagan's Oval Office address, Byrd said, "It seems to me here that what we're seeing is a public relations game right here at the last, last, last minute and I don't think putting a spin on tomorrow morning's news is the important thing." Byrd said, "It's where we go in relation to these questions that have been raised by this major foreign relations blunder."

Byrd, who is to become majority leader when the Democrats take control of the Senate in January, said he believes the administration's overall strategic objective of probing the possibility of improved U.S.-Iranian relations was laudable. But he said that he doubted the wisdom of linking that goal to the fate of the U.S. hostages being held in Lebanon. And he said that when the United States asserts that it did not trade arms for hostages, one is reminded that when the Soviet Union released jailed U.S. journalist Nicholas Daniloff for a spy, "we said we didn't swap Mr. Daniloff for a spy." Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., a member of the House Republican leadership, said that to him the "heart of the matter" was Reagan's

Bishops seek help for poor

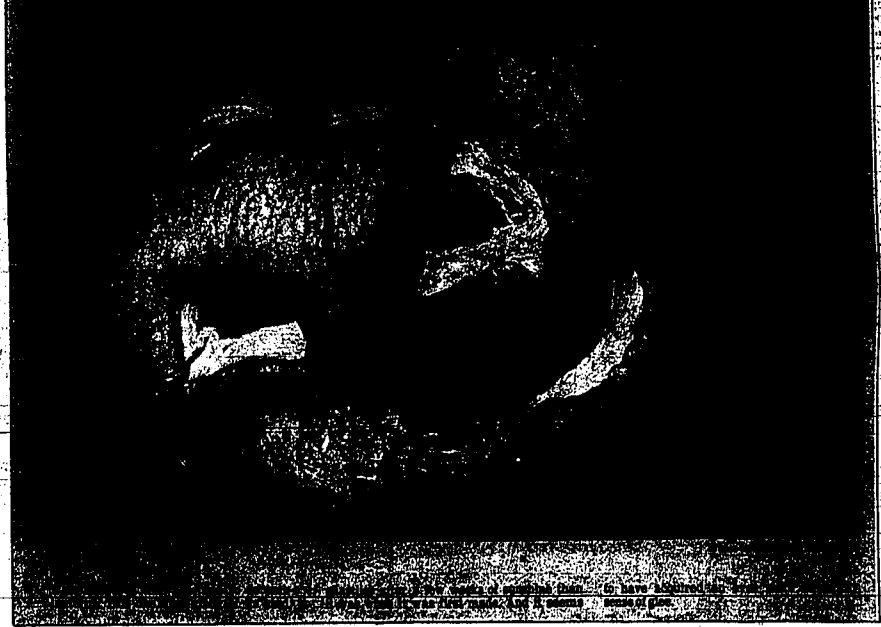

Poverty in U.S. a 'scandal'

By ROBERT FURLOW
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — America's Roman Catholic bishops called Thursday for major changes in national economic policies to fight "the social and moral scandal" of widespread poverty in a nation so blessed with riches. The lopsided 225-9 vote, giving final approval to a long-pending statement on the U.S. economy, also signaled the bishops' determination to keep forging into national policy issues, despite criticism from inside and outside the church that they're venturing too far from religious matters. In particular, supporters of President Reagan, though not the president himself, have publicly taken the bishops to task in recent years — first for a 1983 pastoral letter criticizing U.S. nuclear-weapon policy and then for the economic proposal that recommends job programs, welfare increases and military cutbacks Reagan staunchly opposes. But the size of Thursday's vote, which could grow larger when 70 or so bishops are polled by mail, indicated they have not been swayed by such criticism. "That so many people are poor in a nation as rich as ours is a social and moral scandal that must not be ignored," says the new economic broadsheet. The bishops have refused to tone down such stinging rhetoric or to modify their proposals significantly through two years of discussion and minor revision since the 115-page letter was first proposed. Though the letter won't be binding on American Catholics, it will serve as a basis for teaching and preaching and thus could have a significant effect on views of the 52 million men, women and children who make up the nation's largest religious denomination. Passage of the document gave the bishops a chance to applaud themselves and leave their week-long annual meeting in a positive frame of mind after spending much of the week dealing with a painful intramural controversy. In the economic declaration, the bishops acknowledge the U.S. version of capitalism has raised standards of living for millions of people

Researchers term AIDS worst epidemic of past 50 years

Los Angeles Times

AIDS "now ranks as the most serious epidemic of the last 50 years," an international group of researchers, declare in a report that urges global cooperation to head off the spread of the deadly acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Noting that several million people around the world now are infected with the AIDS virus, the researchers called for "a major international commitment, not only in terms of providing financial help but also in providing scientific, educational and technical assistance."

Between 10 percent and 30 percent of those infected with the virus are expected to develop the disease within the next five to 10 years, according to the report, to be published today in Science magazine. "Worldwide cooperation is now a necessity," the researchers wrote. Their report is the latest in a recent barrage of exhortations for more public health efforts to combat the spread of AIDS. In Washington earlier this month, U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop and the Institute of Medicine separately urged that AIDS education be implemented as quickly as possible in the schools.

Cases of AIDS now have been identified in 74 countries, including more than 25,000 cases in the United States, 3,000 in Europe, nearly 3,000 in other countries in the Americas, and many thousands in Africa, according to Dr. Thomas C. Quinn of Johns Hopkins University Medical Center, principal author of the report. The study was prepared in conjunction with officials of the World Health Organization in Geneva and the U.S. Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. It focused on the "major health problem" caused by AIDS in Africa, where many researchers believe the AIDS virus originated. With estimates of "several million" Africans infected with the AIDS virus, Quinn and his co-authors said they fear the disease may overwhelm the limited medical resources of many African countries. For example, they point out that screening blood to prevent AIDS virus transmission would likely cost "approximately 30 times the annual per capita health budget" in many of the countries. Such an effort in the U.S. last year cost about $60 million — an amount that is, they noted, "many times greater than the entire health budgets of many African countries." Furthermore, they added, "The costs of caring for 10 AIDS patients in the United States (approximately $450,000) is greater than the entire budget of a large hospital in Zaire, where up to 25 percent of the pediatric and adult hospital admissions have (AIDS virus) infection."

The report called for the creation of national committees in African countries that would coordinate the public health efforts against the spread of AIDS — a proposal that is being discussed this week at a WHO meeting in Brazzaville, Congo.

Task force suggests tax breaks to encourage child rearing

By JAMES ROWLEY
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A Reagan administration study group, charging that the "fabric-of-family-life" has been frayed by the abrasive experiments of two liberal decades, on Thursday called for tax breaks to encourage government policies to encourage child rearing. "Intact families are good. Families who choose to have children are making a desirable decision," said the report entitled "The Family: Preserving America's Future." "Mothers and fathers who then decide to spend a good deal of time raising those children themselves rather than leaving it to others are demonstrably doing a good thing for those children," the report said. Education Undersecretary Gary Bauer, who headed the 22-member task force, denied that the report implied any criticism of couples who decided not to have children or who put their youngsters in day care.

"All this report does is praise families who decide to have children." But he said child rearing should be encouraged to reverse population trends that will eventually result in a shortage of young people. The report charged that the "fabric of family life has been frayed by the abrasive experiments of two liberal decades." Accusing courts, schools and government programs of undermining family authority, it recommended that welfare benefits be given to teen-age mothers only if they live at home with their parents. "Government should not provide incentives — or more make things easier — for teen-agers tempted to promiscuity," the report said. While acknowledging that there was no statistical evidence to support the view that welfare encourages teen-age motherhood, the report said single mothers under age 21 should not be allowed to collect benefits under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program or live in subsidized housing unless they reside with their parents. "These steps would go a long way toward making illegitimate motherhood less attractive in the poverty culture," the report said. Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., simply an endorsement of the conservative agenda of the Heritage Foundation. "The document is less a policy paper than a tantrum. Worse, it is an embarrassment," said Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan, D-N.Y., who will chair the Senate's Social Security subcommittee in the new Congress. Moynihan said that despite the report's assertion to the contrary, AFDC benefits have declined 30 percent in real terms, since 1970. "What world does these bureaucrats live in?" Moynihan said. "Certainly not the world of the children they were supposed to be thinking about, even caring about."

The task force's conclusion that they do "show the weakness of the report," Hawkins said. "The report itself has no research findings to back up what they are saying. It not being able to obtain an award, while a small number accepted a property settlement instead of support or said a ruling was still pending. Winning a court award doesn't always mean collecting the money as the study found that nearly 24 percent of the nearly 4 million women scheduled to receive money in 1983 didn't receive a penny. Mothers on own lack financial help from absent fathers

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More than half of the mothers raising children on their own do so without any financial help from the fathers, many of whom either can't be found or refuse to pay, according to a new Census Bureau report. Of the nearly 8.7 million American women trying to raise children whose father is not present in the home, 53 percent were receiving no help from the father, according to the Census Bureau study, "Child Support and Alimony: 1983." Some 8.7 million had not been awarded child support, and another 958,000 were unable to collect their award, according to the study. Of the women without a court award of child support, about one-fourth said they didn't want the help. The vast majority cited inability to locate the father or to establish paternity as reasons for

Briefly

Gold breaks records in plains states

Record-breaking gold rainfall has hit the plains states on Thursday as Indians were hit by the first major snowstorm of the season and another storm made roads hazardous in the Southwest.

By noon Thursday, the weather service had reported records broken or tied in 46 communities. The lowest temperature reported, Thursday was 20 degrees below zero at Chadron, Neb.

Freeze warnings were posted for parts of Virginia, the Carolinas, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana.

The weather service forecast more record cold overnight in sections of Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Virginia, and the coldest night of the season in Rhode Island.

3 Idaho escapees recaptured

PENDLETON, Ore. (AP) — Three men who escaped from the Washington County Jail at White, Idaho, were captured near Pendleton when officers stopped a truck belonging to a man who had been robbed and shot in Idaho, Oregon State Police said.

Senior Trooper Marcus Powell said the pickup was spotted by a trooper who followed the vehicle while Pendleton police dispatched three patrol cars.

The officers stopped the vehicle on Interstate 84 about six miles west of Pendleton and arrested the three men without incident about 10:45 p.m. Wednesday, Powell said.

Quake shakes Salt Lake area

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A small earthquake measuring about 2.8 on the Richter Scale briefly rattled the Salt Lake Valley 14:16 Thursday but caused no injuries or damages, a University of Utah seismologist said.

University seismograph stations reported the tremor at 4:16 p.m. The quake's epicenter was located in Magna, said Ethan Brown, senior staff seismologist.

The quake occurred at approximately the same location as a 1993 quake that registered 5.2 on the Richter Scale, he said.

understanding will develop.

McCarthy, interviewed Thursday by NBC's "60 Minutes," said he did not think anyone would have the effect of forcing the possibility of further relations.

"Don't think they have," he replied, "and yes, I think that to be realistic, we should be more realistic about those who hold our people captive in Lebanon — and we will not."

That, we can best say by quiet a lot of discretion and seriousness on our side."

Arms shipments had been cut off by the President Jimmy Carter after radicals seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and took dozens of Americans hostage.

Reagan said it was "utterly false" that the weapons shipments to Iran had stopped when the United States moved to President Ronald Reagan after radicals seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and took dozens of Americans hostage.

of States "indirectly its allies and security-related American policy against trafficking with terrorists."

"We did not repeat, did not track anyone or anything else for hostages," Reagan said. "We will not. We have not, nor will we, capitulate to terrorists."

In another passage, he said, "The United States has not been more 'some degree' in access and influence" with Iran. He said Iran's geographical location, near the Soviet Union, and its rich oil reserves give the Islamic nation key significance to the United States.

Reagan likened the diplomatic move by President Richard M. Nixon's 1971 decision to send Henry Kissinger on a secret mission to China.

Reports of the administration's dealings with Iran "occurred earlier. This was not the case with Jacobson, one of the Americans held hostage in Lebanon, was released earlier this year, the Rev. Benjamin Weale and the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco, who also had been held in captivity, were released."

By other Americans, Associated Press Middle East correspondent Terry Anderson, and Thomas Sutherland, dean of agriculture at the American University in Beirut, are still being held by the pro-Iran Islamic Jihad in Lebanon.

In authorizing the transfer of what he called "small amounts of defensive weapons and spare parts for defensive systems to Iran," Reagan said he was trying "to convince Tehran that our negotiators were acting with my authority."

And he said he wanted "to send a signal that the United States was prepared to replace the animosity between us with a new relationship."

attempt to improve the long-range security interests of the United States, not whether he should have consulted with the congressional leadership.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, disagreed.

"The concern is that this has been handled in a way where the White House has been more willing to trust some of the factions in Iran than had anyone in this Democratic and Republican leadership of the House and the Senate."

"I think the White House has got to understand that if they want to conduct... very, very high risk diplomacy with very little guarantee of ultimate success, they're going to have to form a bipartisan coalition behind them before they do it."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. blasted the administration for doing business with Iran. "They took our diplomatic hostage and used them to humiliate this country. To send them arms adds to that humiliation. It encourages further blackmail."

O'Neill, D-Mass., said he had advised the chairman of the House Intelligence Committee to "go forward with a complete investigation" and to use subpoena if necessary. He said those hearings could begin as early as Nov. 24.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said hearings would not be aimed at producing confrontation or at embarrassing the administration and that they would not be used to "point the finger of scorn."

"But if an error was committed or a mistake was made," he said, "we ought to seek ways to correct the error and correct the mistake."

Meanwhile, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said he is considering convening his Judiciary subcommittee for hearings on constitutional questions stemming from the administration's actions. Hatch loses his chairmanship when Democrats take control of the Senate in January.

Before the speech, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said Reagan should ask for the resignation of Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, his national security adviser.

Moynihan cited Poindexter's reported lead role in helping Iran obtain military supplies, a move the senator said gave Iran "the biggest propaganda victory" it has enjoyed in the course of its six-year war with Iraq.

But they also say that "alleviating poverty will require fundamental changes in social and economic conditions — perpetual-gloring inequalities."

They insist that all economic decisions should be based on moral answers to the questions: What does the economy do for people, what does it do to people and how do people participate in it?

On various points, the letter says:

- While government leaders talk of economic recovery, "as pastors, we have seen firsthand the faces of poverty in our midst. Homeless people roam city streets in tattered clothing and sleep in doorways on subway grates at night... Millions of children are so poorly nourished that their physical and mental development are seriously harmed."
- There are "appalling inequities" between poor nations and the United States. "A threatening world order as well as raising moral concern."
- "Some elements of the military budget are both wasteful and dangerous for world peace... Careful reductions should be made in these areas to free up funds for social and economic reforms."

had been awarded child support and still receiving the payments prior to 1983 or were not scheduled to begin receiving payments until the following year. Therefore, they were not counted as either receiving payments or among those who were unable to obtain payments.

Of the 858,000 women unable to collect their payments the largest share, 51.5 percent, said the child's father had simply refused to pay.

In addition, 20.7 percent said they were unable to locate the father, 7.9 percent didn't know why they hadn't been paid and the rest listed a variety of reasons, the study said.

The 76 percent of women who were able to collect at least part of what their children were due is a slight improvement over 1981, the last time such figures were compiled. In 1982 percent collected all or part of the money.

The federal government has launched efforts in the last few years to help mothers collect the support they are due, including a 1984 law aimed at getting states to use such techniques as withholding from fathers who fall behind.

Male vote dooms ERA in Vermont

Ellen Goodman

BOSTON — When I first heard that the Equal Rights Amendment was going on the ballot in Vermont, I felt a small instinctive groan rumbling up from the pit of my stomach. Not again. Not now.

The conditions were pretty good in Vermont. I was told by the equal rights forecasters: The candidates at the top of the ticket were all in favor of the ERA. There was a core of activists. A state amendment wouldn't encounter the anxiety about drafting women unless Vermont suddenly decided to go to war with New Hampshire.

But when the ballots were finally tallied up, the amendment went down. The referendum lost by 5,000 votes out of 200,000, the smallest margin in recent state races. But it lost.

I could list all the official reasons for this defeat. If you like. The anti-ERA crowd are long-running experts in negative campaigning. It's too bad an amendment can't sue for slander. Those who favored the ERA to AIDS made this year's Senate candidates look positively genteel.

The amendment also lost because men voted against it. The popular mythology still holds that the ERA is a war between women. The CBS exit polls showed that 61 percent of the women voted for it and only 39 percent of the men.

Nevertheless, in the final count, proponents of ERA weren't able to convince a majority of Vermont voters that their lives would be improved by an Equal Rights Amendment to their constitution.

What happens now? Days before the election, Eleanor Smell, president of the National Organization for Women, sent out a letter telling members, among other things, that NOW has begun planning for the introduction of a federal ERA in the next Congress. She wrote, "I believe that the time is ripe for a new Equal Rights Amendment."

The time is ripe? I could feel that groan rumbling up again. Will we end up dragging this ideal from one losing contest to another?

Is the ERA to become the Harold Stassen of amendments? How much energy should be invested today in the ERA and at what cost to smaller, winnable changes for women's lives?

Smell, whose leadership is empowered by a very clear sense of movement politics and of history, compares the fight for ERA to the fight for suffrage: "We will lose until we win."

It took more than a century to get the vote. At the time of Susan B. Anthony's death, women had only won that right in 35 states. There is no "movement," unless people keep pushing the edges.

She disputes the idea that the fight for ERA has come at the cost of other changes. The amendment is, rather, she says, the number-one fund-raiser, the single cause that rallies and recruits activists across the age spectrum.

It draws women in. "We don't just talk about ERA as an abstract way as if it were a symbol," says Smell. "As we fight for it, women learn about pension discrimination and comparable worth and discrimination in divorce laws."

Smell's historic perspective is compelling because much of human progress is measured by the impractical: the stubborn pursuit of justice. People who wait for the right time may do nothing but wait.

Yet it is also fair to ask: When have you sustained enough losses? Can you make better headway by taking another route for a while? These are questions being debated in the feminist community.

There are choices to be made. In polls, Americans support the ERA; in legislatures and polling booths, too few have signed on the dotted line.

With a Democratic Congress on the way in, it is possible to introduce a new ERA, possible to mount a strenuous campaign. But is it really possible to do so successfully through the Congress, through the state legislatures?

The 100th Congress will grapple with an important women's agenda: the Civil Rights Restoration Act to resurrect Title IX, the parental leave bill, and a wide-ranging program for children.

These are winnable. In American communities, the front line of need today is for family supports, especially child care. These demand energy.

I am not suggesting that we dump ERA. It is a path to change, a guarantee against retreat. In the history books of the future, people will shake their heads, bewildered at the resistance. But what we need first, now, is to concentrate on a few wins.

Next year, 1981, will mark the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution. Two hundred years, and women are still excluded. It is a vintage year to talk about women's rights and lack of rights, about ERA.

But is it a year to mount another full-fledged battle for its passage? Not by my reckoning.

Try your hand at making this decision

WASHINGTON — Let me ask you to take part in a decision-making exercise such as takes place in your government often.

This theoretical problem will involve whether or not to take a risk that if successful will provide enormous benefits for the country, but which if unsuccessful and misunderstood could result, at a minimum, in great embarrassment and, more likely, in a considerable setback to U.S. relations with allies and to your relations with Congress.

This kind of situation — where the potential gain is very high but where information is incomplete and risks are high — is not uncommon in government. But let's get on with the scenario.

It begins with the arrival in your office one day of a foreign diplomat who reports that a third government of great strategic importance with whom you have no relations has expressed an interest in a dialogue to determine whether or not common interests exist that may make possible a modus vivendi, a revivification of stable relations. You are concerned, for this involves a country whose government has recently gone through a very violent revolution in which the government killed literally hundreds of thousands of its own people and where there is no certain basis for confidence that the people you might deal with carry real authority, or will deal in good faith, or will be able to make good on their commitments.

Furthermore, it is a government that at this very moment is involved in supporting elements in third countries that are engaged in killing Americans. And the diplomat urging you to do this also makes clear that there will undoubtedly be a quid pro quo involved — you will have to pay something for this, probably in the domain of security assistance of some kind, for the country in question is locked in a strategic struggle with its neighbor. At the same time, there is no question but that if such a dialogue were to develop and be kept clandestine for long enough to identify a set of milestones for renewing stable relations, the strategic interests of the United States would benefit enormously.

The question for you is: "Would you agree to go to a first meeting as suggested by this foreign diplomat?"

It isn't too presumptuous to assert that most of the readers of this column, given the events of the past few days, would cluck self-assuredly at this scenario and say, "Of course not, what do you take me for?"

Of course the scenario isn't theoretical; it has happened, and the government decided to go ahead with the clandestine contacts. The country was China, and today most people credit the secret diplomacy of Dr. Henry Kissinger with giving us one of the most dramatic diplomatic triumphs ever achieved in our history.

My point here is not to assert the China experience as a perfect analogue to recent efforts toward Iran. But the basic issue was the same. Nurturing a strategic reorientation in a country's policy requires discretion, judgment and patience. And it is never risk-free.

Pair of events sprouted from the same bad seed

Talk about dark days: The Magic Valley must have been a cosmic slink hole with the opening of the malignant mail and the visit of Ronald Reagan in the same week. Was this perhaps high holy week for those of the materialist theology, who worship money, find spiritual fulfillment in consumerism, and see man's creations at some sort pinnacle in the higher order of things. Or was it merely the high priest of trickle down stopping by in dedicate another temple of doom?

There are those who will claim the two events are unrelated. I say they were seeds sprouted from the same shallow soil of the honky mind. The popularity of both are based on illusion of good times and artificial values — the best of idol-worship and false religion.

Air of partisan confrontation poisoning political climate

WASHINGTON — Immediately after the midterm election votes were counted, dramatically weakening Ronald Reagan's command of the nation's agenda and altering the political landscape, the pragmatic side of his camp floated an idea.

The president should move swiftly to assert his leadership, it was suggested. He should summon new congressional leaders of both parties for a Camp David-type summit. Together, they should strive for agreement on how to approach key issues facing the 100th Congress.

This was seen as a good move for several reasons.

It would put Reagan "out front" in the pending debate on critical issues. It would establish a tone of bipartisanship for his last two years in office and allow him to capitalize on his greatest political asset, his popularity.

It would be good politics, placing public pressure on Democrats to continue cooperating with him. It would still inevitable talk about his sudden lame-duck status and potential political irrelevancy. And it would be in the nation's best interests, matching the mood of voters clearly more interested in practical results than in political wrangling.

Given political realities, this idea probably never had much of a chance. Whatever hopes existed for pursuing such an approach have been dashed. In the new post-election world of Washington, it is to be confrontation instead of cooperation, and confrontation with a vengeance.

That harsh message has become clearer each day since the election.

The first signal of greater acrimony ahead came when Reagan killed the Clean Water Act passed unanimously by both chambers in the last Congress. His "pocket veto" of the act in the hours just after the election guarantees immediate congressional passage of a similar new bill and confrontation with the White House.

It also poses the possibility that Congress will override a second veto, establishing a negative precedent for other legislative battles in the remainder of its term.

This struggle pales beside the way the administration has responded to disclosures of its extraordinary, and on the face duplicitous, hypocritical and self-destructive trading with Iran of arms for hostages.

Far from seeking to calm that controversy by explaining itself or attempting to place its actions in perspective, the administration has seemed to relish being combative about it.

To critics in Congress, media and the public, it breathes open defiance. Not since the Nixon days has the Washington political climate been so poisoned by an air of partisan confrontation.

Take, for example, the cantankerous White House briefing Friday when reporters questioned spokesman Larry Speakes about U.S. dealings with Iran. Here are excerpts:

Q. Who in the administration . . .

A. We will prevail against "no comment" to all questions. What we have done and what we will do has the goal of gaining the release of the Americans held hostage. What we have done and what we will do is right and is in the best interest of this country.

Where we say anything, it's whatever you report . . . In doing this, we all run the risk of endangering the process that could lead to the freedom for American hostages.

Q. Even when the administration's credibility is called into question.

A. Called into question by those who don't know what they're talking about.

Q. Can you at least assure us that the administration is not divided on the policy, and that the secretary of state is in support of the president's policy?

A. I'm not playing any of those games. If you want to find out if the secretary of state is on board, ask him.

Q. Is this detrimental to our national interest because we are doing what we are making allies not to do.

A. The reporting on this subject which is uninformed and speculative is running the danger of affecting the sale . . .

The ensuing days have intensified that sense of combativeness and set the stage for greater confrontation. If that occurs, not only will the politicians suffer, so will all of their fellow citizens.

Constitution is still the paramount law of United States

WASHINGTON — On Oct. 21, I gave a speech at Tulane University titled "The Law of the Constitution." Its main theme concerned the distinction between the Constitution, which, in its own words, is "the supreme law of the land," and constitutional cases.

Oct. 29 The Washington Post commented that what I said was "self-evident" and something "everyone knows." Nonetheless, The Post was worried about what I did not say, and asked: "Why did that speech?" I believe it is important not only to put these concerns to rest but also to emphasize again the point of the speech — that our Constitution is the supreme or paramount law of the land.

Supreme Court decisions do, of course, have general applicability. In addition to binding the parties in the case at hand, a decision is binding precedent on lower federal courts as well as state courts.

Constitutional decisions by the court are not "the supreme law of the land" in the sense that the Constitution is. But they are law, as I said at Tulane, and they are the law of the land in the sense that they do indeed have general applicability and deserve the greatest respect from all Americans.

Edwin Meese III

To the degree government officials and private citizens publicly discuss these issues, we will encourage the people of our nation to focus on that most basic question: what is the Constitution? This surely will help make the upcoming bicentennial celebration one that truly honors our fundamental law.

Perhaps the easiest way to understand the necessary distinction between the Constitution and constitutional law is by reflecting on a key difference in respect to how each may be changed. Article V of the Constitution provides the only means for changing the Constitution; the amendment process, which the American people have used 26 times in almost 200 years. While this "solemn and authoritative" process is the only way to alter the Constitution itself, several means, including litigation, are available for seeking change in an erroneous constitutional decision by the court.

Obviously, if this were not the case, the court itself would be straitjacketed, unable to reconsider its previous constitutional holdings and then change its mind, as it has done many times. Obviously, too, parties wishing to raise previously decided cases wouldn't be able to do so, having no chance of prevailing.

The Constitution thus is different from constitutional law: it stands on a higher plane. As such, it is the measure of all decisions that interpret it. This is why, as Justice Felix Frankfurter once remarked, "the ultimate touchstone of constitutionality is the Constitution itself and not what we have said about it."

At Tulane, I also pointed out that just as the Constitution stands above the court's decisions regarding it, it also stands above interpretations of the Constitution made by Congress and presidents. As I said, the Constitution "is the standard against which all laws, policies and interpretations must be measured."

Emphasizing the central place of the Constitution in our political life by discussing "The Law of the Constitution" enables us better to understand the relationship between our fundamental law and the government as a whole, for each branch is charged with the duty of conforming its conduct to the Constitution in performing its assigned function.

Thus, courts, in deciding lawsuits, must apply the law, including the "supreme law," and must give it effect when it conflicts with other law, including acts of Congress and Members of Congress. In voting on legislation, are bound by the oaths they take to act in a constitutional manner. Similarly the president, in exercising his veto and in enforcing the laws, is bound by his oath to respect the Constitution.

Still, in the final analysis, only the Constitution is our paramount law. Not what the three branches say about it. Daniel Patrick Moynihan has asked: "what does one do when one believes the Supreme Court is wrong? That question applies as well to interpretations by the other two branches."

With respect to Congress and the president, the answer is simple: try to persuade them and, if that fails, replace them.

The situation is more complicated with respect to the Supreme Court, which by design is insulated from ordinary politics. The process of amending, litigating and legislating in response to a constitutional decision one thinks wrong has been an important part of our legal tradition.

It has been used by political liberals and political conservatives alike — one thinks of President Roosevelt's introduction of New Deal legislation as well as laws regulating abortion and statutes providing for the death penalty. This process demonstrates that dialogue among our political institutions and among the American people helps us follow our supreme law, the Constitution.

This administration stands proudly in this tradition. We have expressed our disagreements with certain Supreme Court decisions, especially those that disregard that right prerogative of the states and that establish equal rights that have no foundation in the text or history of the Constitution. Accordingly, we have debated, litigated and legislated.

But our interest is not the crude self-interest of partisan inclination, for the importance of the distinction between the Constitution and indeed all interpretations of the Constitution transcends party politics. Simply put, our interest — our agenda — is the integrity of the Constitution and its preservation as the supreme law of the land.

Doctors taking on new jobs during Kaiser hospital strike

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Flat on a stretcher, a tube in his nose and groggy from a respiratory ailment, John Figueroa applauded his doctors and the strike-bound hospital where he was being treated.

"Patient care at Kaiser has not suffered," he wheezed while approving physicians looked on.

But Maureen Anderson, a spokeswoman for the union that launched a walkout 2½ weeks ago against the nation's largest health maintenance organization, disagrees. She said Thursday that Kaiser has turned away some patients with serious health problems.

Kaiser was struck on Oct. 27 by 9,000 clerks, housekeeping employees, licensed vocational nurses, X-ray technicians, nursing assistants, EKG technicians and licensed respiratory therapists.

In addition, about 30 percent of the nursing staff at Kaiser facilities in San Francisco and Oakland are honoring strikers' picket lines, said Kaiser spokesman Bob Hughes.

In San Francisco, as at most of the 26 Northern California Kaiser Permanente hospitals, clinics and one laboratory affected by the strike, doctors have had to answer phones, mop floors, file charts, clean bathrooms and make beds.

In addition to the doctors, physicians' wives and former patients have volunteered to do odd jobs, said Kaiser spokeswoman Jennifer Cross.

"Everyone has a spirit of camaraderie unique to a strike," she said. "Everyone is pulling together as a team. There is a sense of pride — this is your ship and you are sailing it."

Routine appointments postponed at the beginning of the strike are being rescheduled, as is most elective surgery. Cross said, adding that the number of patients in the hospital has been cut to less than half the normal figure.

Hughes disputed Anderson's statement about patients with serious health problems being turned away during the strike.

"We are unaware of any cases that require medical care that have been turned away," he said.

"We've had some patients admitted to other hospitals and paid for it, but I wouldn't call that turned away," he said.

In addition to the cases Kaiser routinely refers to other hospitals, he said there had been about 150 "strike-related" referrals.

Kaiser officials and union representatives broke off talks on Wednesday without reaching an agreement.

Citing sharp competition in the health care field, Kaiser has proposed a pay freeze and a two-tier wage system that would pay newly hired employees 30 percent less at facilities in certain regions.

Local 258 of the Hospital and Institutional Workers Union is asking for a 5 percent raise in each of the next two years. The union also seeks the establishment of a monitoring committee, with management and union representatives, that would check patient care.

Newborn found safe in parking lot; pair held on kidnapping charges

BALTIMORE (AP) — A baby believed to be the newborn taken from his mother in Sellersville, Pa., last week was found alive and well Thursday, and a man and a woman were arrested on kidnapping charges, the FBI said.

Charged with kidnapping were Ramona Joan Thompson and George Stanley Soustek, said Andy Manning, a spokesman for the FBI in Baltimore.

FBI agents arrested the two with the baby in a parking lot near a suburban Baltimore shopping mall. The woman was in a car with the baby.

The week-old infant was believed to be Phillip Worthington, born Nov. 6 in Sellersville, Manning said.

"We have not positively identified that child. We are printing the baby's feet and making all efforts to positively identify him," Manning said.

Agents were analyzing his footprints Thursday evening. He said the Worthingtons were being notified and that the FBI hoped for a positive identification.

The baby was examined by a doctor and given a clean bill of health," Manning said. "The baby was well cared-for. There's no question about that, but not by the right mother," he said.

Jim Dearborn, an FBI agent in Baltimore, said no ransom had been involved in the abduction.

Ms. Thompson, 44, of Ellicott City, and Soustek, 42, of Baltimore, appeared before a city hall bond commissioner, where both were denied bail. They were scheduled to appear before a federal magistrate Friday.

The FBI had received a tip about the baby's whereabouts Wednesday and put together information to track down Ms. Thompson and Soustek overnight, said Joseph Cor-less, head of the FBI's Baltimore office. Agents conducted a one-hour surveillance of the two after following the woman out of her home before making the arrests.

When agents confronted Ms. Thompson, she said the baby was hers," he said.

Corless declined to discuss the motive for the abduction.

Phillip's father, Neil Worthington of Sellersville, Pa., reached by telephone at his home, told a reporter, "I can't talk right now. We're trying to keep the (telephone) lines open."

The Worthington baby was taken from Grand View Hospital in Sellersville on Friday, a day after Barbara Worthington gave birth to the six-pound, five-ounce child.

The FBI on Monday issued a nationwide alert for the woman and for a silver car seen speeding from the hospital parking lot shortly after the kidnapping.

Actor found dead in condominium

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Roger Carmel, the round actor who played the bumbling, scheming Harry Mudd on "Star Trek" and also was the voice of Smokey Bear on television ads, died of an apparent drug overdose, police said Thursday.

Carmel, 53, was found dead in bed at his Hollywood Boulevard condominium on Tuesday evening, police Lt. Ed Hocking said. The body was discovered by the building manager after friends said they hadn't seen him for several days.

In "Star Trek," Carmel played the character Harcourt Fenton "Harry" Mudd.

Cut lead levels in water, group says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing dangers to developing children, an environmental group said Thursday the government should cut, even further than it envisions, the level of lead concentrations in drinking water.

Lead poisoning is the "most prevalent environmental disease today," Ellen Silbergeld, toxicologist for the Environmental Defense Fund, told a news conference.

She called for the Environmental Protection Agency to lower the drinking water lead standard from the present 50 parts per billion to 10 ppb. The EPA has proposed to issue a 20-ppb standard to take effect in 1991.

A 20-ppb concentration would bring the median concentration in blood to 10 micrograms per 100 milliliters, the level EPA now believes defines lead poisoning, she said. The median is the concentration exceeded by half the people. At present, 38.1 million people drink water containing more than 20 ppb of lead, according to the EPA's own estimates.

But a 10 ppb standard would permit the median concentration to fall to 7 or 8 micrograms per 100 milliliters, Ms. Silbergeld said.

About 60 million people drink water with lead concentrations above 10 ppb.

Lead is a poison, and in recent years, hemoglobin has been found at lower blood concentrations than before.

Lead also is ingested by children eating lead-based paint flakes.

Bundy's stay appeal denied

LAKE CITY, Fla. (AP) — A judge Thursday turned down convicted killer Ted Bundy's appeal for a stay of execution, scheduled for Tuesday, in the 1978 abduction-slaying of a 14-year-old girl.

Judge Wallace Jopling, who presided over Bundy's 1980 trial in the death of Kimberly Diane Leach, spent no more than five minutes reviewing the arguments before rejecting the appeal.

Bundy's attorney, Polly Nelson of Washington, D.C., said she was considering a number of options in continued efforts to win a stay.

"It certainly isn't over," Ms. Nelson said.

In asking for the stay, she said Gov. Bob Graham had arbitrarily denied Bundy's clemency hearing in the case, Graham's office said it has a policy of granting only one clemency hearing for multiple killers, and Bundy had one in a Tallahassee double murder, the Jan. 15, 1978, killings of two sorority sisters at Florida State University.

Bundy also is suspected in a string of killings in the Northwest.

Feelings in this North Florida town still run high against Bundy.

Ex-museum piece launched

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — A $13 million satellite that spent eight years as a museum piece soared skyward Thursday on a twice-delayed mission meant to improve communications between ground stations and other spacecraft.

The Polar Beacon Experiments and Auroral Research satellite, called Polar BEAR, blasted off from Space Launch Complex-3 at 5:22 p.m. MST, said Air Force spokeswoman Lt. Sharon Walker.

The Air Force satellite was carried toward a 625-mile-high polar orbit by a 75-foot-tall Scout rocket, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's smallest space booster.

The 275-pound Polar BEAR carried three experiments designed to photograph the Northern Lights and sample electrical particles and the magnetic field over Earth's poles, said Short.

Iran mission details outlined

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Reagan ordered secret arms shipments to Iran last spring after being told that it was the only way to get Tehran's help in freeing five U.S. hostages then held in Lebanon by pro-Iranian terrorists, informed sources said Thursday.

In making his decision, the president disregarded warnings from Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger that such action would undermine his public counterterrorism policies, according to the sources, who provided many details of the covert operation that Reagan described sketchily in his televised speech Thursday night.

Even Reagan's own top officials in the Iranian negotiations, former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane, objected to the arms shipments, according to one source familiar with his views. Other officials, however, said McFarlane supported the idea.

Although Reagan had agreed in January that the United States would shun arms-for-hostages bargaining, the president was unhappy with that position, largely because he was under pressure from the hostages' families to take action, sources said.

White House officials say they hope Tehran will free some of the remaining American hostages believed held in Lebanon by the pro-Iranian Islamic Jihad group. Administration officials acknowledge, however, they are not certain who kidnapped three other Americans within the past two months or how they will be freed.

The secret diplomatic gambit with Iran had its origins nearly 18 months ago during the June 1985 hijacking of TWA flight 847, according to current and former U.S. officials. Congressional sources and knowledgeable Israelis.

After the White House realized that only the intervention of Iranian officials led to the freeing of some of the hijacking hostages, McFarlane explored the possibility of new channels to Tehran through Iranian exiles and U.S. allies.

At that time, the director general of the Israeli foreign ministry, David Kimche, and some Israeli arms dealers suggested to McFarlane that the Reagan administration could "show good faith" with Iran by approving shipments of arms and military spare parts to that country. The shipments, they suggested, would help the United States reestablish Iranian contacts and expedite the hostages' release, sources said.

Reagan and his top aides found the idea intriguing, despite the administration's well-publicized neutrality in the six-year war between Iran and Iraq, its policy of not paying ransom for political hostages and its global efforts to embargo arms to Iran. One issue the administration never was willing to consider was the demand of the pro-Iranian group holding the Americans that 17 terrorists in Kuwait prisons be freed.

The first plane load of U.S.-built military equipment was shipped in early September by the Israelis, with U.S. officials aware but not interfering with the plan. The Iranian response was that they needed additional arms, and a second plane load was dispatched.

On Saturday, Sept. 14, the second plane left Iran; Weir was released that day. The White House, according to sources, had expected all five Americans held in Lebanon by the pro-Iranian Islamic Jihad. A sixth U.S. diplomat, William Buckley, had been killed earlier according to Islamic Jihad statements.

In hopes that others would be freed, the president waited until Thursday, Sept. 18, to announce Weir's release.

In succeeding months, the Israeli arms dealers suggested another try at freeing the hostages. In December 1985 and January 1986, an interagency review of U.S. policies toward Iran was conducted because McFarlane believed that Iran, strategically located near the Persian Gulf, was threatened by Soviet expansionism and perhaps ready to tilt back toward the West.

At a January meeting in the White House, Reagan approved a secret plan to explore contacts with Iran but agreed to cut off discussion of an arms deal. By April, however, Reagan had changed his mind and ordered an arms channel to be opened.

Although the shipments were relatively small, the items were considered critical to Iran. Although the military supplies have repeatedly been called "defensive" by administration spokesmen, one knowledgeable official said they included some offensive munitions.

In approving arms shipments, Reagan also ordered that, with the exception of Shultz and Weinberger, officials of the State and Defense departments be kept unaware of the program. Furthermore, the Central Intelligence Agency was to be bypassed in order to keep Congress in the dark.

In May, McFarlane was told by his successor, Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, that contacts since his departure from the White House had paved the way for a trip to Tehran and face-to-face talks with top officials of the Khomeini regime.

McFarlane traveled to Tehran with Lt. Col. Oliver North of the National Security Council staff, who had supervised the resumed arms shipments for the White House. They flew in a cargo plane carrying military spare parts, although one source said McFarlane was not aware prior to that time, of Reagan's resumption of arms shipments.

McFarlane mistakenly thought that all the U.S. hostages would be freed before his plane landed. He thought talks would be totally focused on such political goals as ending Iran's support for terrorism, searching for a way to conclude the Gulf war and discussing resumption of relations.

Instead, he found the Iranians wanted to discuss terms for releasing the hostages, including not only arms but U.S. help in getting the terrorists imprisoned in Kuwait freed.

Additional secret shipments were sent in July. Late that month the Rev. Lawrence Martin Jenco was released. In late October, another shipment was sent, and on Nov. 2, David Jacobson was released. The secret diplomacy became public last week when an Iranian official leaked a version of the McFarlane visit to a Lebanese magazine.

David Jacobson displays writ bands inscribed with names of two Americans held captive in Lebanon.

Jacobson pleads to former captors

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Ex-hostage David Jacobson appealed to his former captors Thursday to release other Americans held in Lebanon.

"I want to talk directly to the people who held me as a captive. And they will be watching this," Jacobson said at a crowded news conference, his first meeting with reporters since returning home to California.

"I trust, He, that you will release Terry Anderson and Tom Sutherland and assist in the release of hostages held by other groups," Jacobson said. "In my conversations with you about democracy, peace and education and the future of your people, my feelings have not changed."

Jacobson, 55, the administrator of the American University Hospital in Beirut, was released Nov. 2 after 17 months in captivity by members of Islamic Jihad.

ed, but had said previously he was kept in chains and moved frequently during the first few months of his captivity. The captors treated Jacobson, Anderson, Sutherland and Jenco to birthday cakes, he said.

"My captors were not cruel to me, (but) I guarantee you, I am not a victim of the Stockholm Syndrome, a psychological condition in which kidnap victims sometimes come to sympathize with their captors, he said.

Jacobson said he survived because of his faith in God, and because, "I never lost faith that I would be a free man. I was valuable property. They were not going to kill me. The people that suffered were my family and friends."

Jacobson said he was surprised by the news media's handling of some incidents during his captivity, especially a television report about a videotaped message from Jacobson in captivity. The TV report speculated the videotape contained a boy's message from Jacobson when he offered sympathy to the widow of purportedly slain hostage William Buckley. Jacobson delivered the message in the mistaken belief that Buckley was married and had four children.

Jacobson said he later saw the TV news report.

"When I saw that word floating on the television screen—hidden message," I said, "Oh, my God," Jacobson said. His captors reacted with anger and embarrassment over how they might look to the other Muslim groups, he said.

As the furor over the covert operation intensified this week, the White House has sought to portray Reagan's authorization of arms to Iran as principally an effort to win the good will of factions in Tehran that might become important in a government succeeding Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Despite 18 months of continuing disappointment at what they consider Iranian duplicity in promising more than was delivered, some "Flanked by his son, Eric, and a long-time friend, Episcopal Rev. Harold Hultgreen, Jacobson refused to discuss any aspect of his release or comment on reports that arms deals were made by the Reagan administration with Iran to obtain his release and those of Revs. Lawrence Martin Jenco and Benjamin Weir.

"Mere speculation can be misinterpreted and frighten the people—holding the remaining hostages in Lebanon. Their captors might overreact and kill Terry, Tom and the others," Jacobson said.

In a newspaper interview published Thursday, Jacobson said his captors urged him to stay in Lebanon after his release and return to the helm of the hospital.

"They assured him 'that I would be perfectly safe and they would protect me, and that they needed me,'" Jacobson said in an interview with the Orange Coast Daily Pilot.

Jacobson said he never was harmed.

He criticized the news media's handling of some incidents during his captivity, especially a television report about a videotaped message from Jacobson in captivity. The TV report speculated the videotape contained a boy's message from Jacobson when he offered sympathy to the widow of purportedly slain hostage William Buckley. Jacobson delivered the message in the mistaken belief that Buckley was married and had four children.

Jacobson said he later saw the TV news report.

"When I saw that word floating on the television screen—hidden message," I said, "Oh, my God," Jacobson said. His captors reacted with anger and embarrassment over how they might look to the other Muslim groups, he said.

There was no secret message, said Jacobson, "and I knew that irresponsible speculation on the part of that individual member of the television media was being viewed by my captors... Whoever it was in the media committed the grossest, most irresponsible speculation possible."

Missiles to reappear

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon, citing the "ongoing" movement of North Korean forces closer to the South Korean border, said Thursday it had decided to deploy a battery of Lance artillery missiles with the Eighth U.S. Army in South Korea.

The decision will result in the restoration of a medium-range missile capability in South Korea for the first time in eight years and the deployment of a missile that is capable of carrying a nuclear warhead.

The Lance battery will be deployed to the Eighth Army from Fort Sill, Okla., and "will provide a medium-range missile system that has been lacking" since the United States withdrew its much older Honest John and Sergeant missiles from South Korea in 1978, the Pentagon said.

The Pentagon and Army refused to discuss whether the Lance missiles being sent to South Korea would carry nuclear instead of conventional warheads, citing their standing policies of neither confirming nor denying the presence of nuclear weapons.

The Lance is an older surface-to-surface missile but one that is still deployed with the U.S. as well as NATO armies. The missile, developed in the early 1970s, has a range of up to 75 miles depending on the warhead. It is fired from a mobile, tracked launcher that can fire one missile at a time and then be reloaded.

Family who left U.S. wants to return

MOSCOW (AP) — A family of emigres who returned home this week after 10 years in America because they felt like "eternal immigrants" want to go back because the teen-age boys are unhappy in the Soviet Union, the mother said Thursday.

Faina Gonta said the U.S. Embassy told her that she and her family could leave Saturday on a British Airways flight to London, but they had not yet obtained tickets or been given exit visas.

Gonta said she had nothing against the Soviet Union. Neither the decision to return to the Soviet Union nor the desire to leave again was politically motivated, she said.

"Everything is fine except the children," she said in a telephone interview. "They grew up in the U.S.A. and they want to continue their education in America."

The Gontas, who lived in Jersey City, N.J., arrived here Monday.

Government permission is necessary for the family to leave. Mrs. Gonta said the request had been relayed to the Obshchestvo Rodina (Motherland Society), which sponsored their return to the Soviet Union.

"They think we're going back to my native city in the Ukraine, but we are going back to the United States and that is final," she said.

A Soviet official visited them at their hotel Thursday, Mrs. Gonta said, but she would not identify the official or describe the meeting.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Jaroslav Verner confirmed that the Gontas had been in touch with the mission seeking to return to the United States. His office said later there would be no further comment because of rules about individual privacy.

Mrs. Gonta and her husband David emigrated 10 years ago with their two children and her mother. They returned Monday and said they had felt like "eternal immigrants."

Thatcher, president to meet

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher flies to Washington today for talks with President Reagan expected to be dominated by her concerns about nuclear arms control following the Iceland summit.

Mrs. Thatcher believes the West's strategy should be based on nuclear deterrence and that, if the number of nuclear missiles is to be reduced in Western Europe, the Soviet bloc's superior conventional forces also must be cut.

Mrs. Thatcher will voice these concerns when she meets with Reagan in Camp David on Saturday, according to her aides, who spoke on condition of anonymity. She also was scheduled to meet Friday with Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Vice President George Bush.

Mrs. Thatcher will take with her a recent update on Moscow's position on arms control.

Soviet Ambassador Leonid Zamyatin called on Mrs. Thatcher Thursday to deliver a personal message from Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The Soviet Embassy said the message dealt with "certain ideas and considerations in connection with the Reykjavik package and the post-Reykjavik situation."

Part of the package Reagan and Gorbachev tentatively agreed to during the summit was a proposal to eliminate European-based intermediate-range nuclear missiles. The negotiations eventually collapsed because of a dispute over the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, a space-based missile defense.

Britain and some other West European countries have expressed concern that if the package were adopted, they would be at the mercy of the Soviet bloc which has superior conventional forces.

For instance, NATO has about 20,000 battle tanks in Europe, while the Warsaw pact has about 46,000.

Thatcher aides said she favors an eventual cutback in nuclear forces but Soviet conventional forces should be reduced at the same time.

Syrian bases not ruled out, Shamir says

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Thursday Israel would not exclude attacking guerrilla targets inside Syria if the Damascus government continued to support terrorism.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Shamir also said Israel had no immediate plans to retaliate for Syria's alleged involvement in the attempted bombing of an Israeli passenger plane.

Britain severed ties with Syria last month, saying it had proof the Arab state was behind the April attempt to blow up the El Al jumbo jet in London. Israel had long contended that Syria was responsible, and Britain said it had evidence of Syrian involvement.

Shamir, referring to Israel's 1985 attack on Palestine Liberation Organization bases in Tunisia, said Israel might carry out a similar raid against guerrilla bases in Syria but had no immediate plans to do so.

"I do not exclude it, but I do not say we are going to do it tomorrow," said Shamir, 71, who became prime minister three weeks ago amid expectations that he would adopt a harder line than his predecessor, Shimon Peres.

Asked to clarify, Shamir said: "Please don't understand that we're going to do it. Theoretically, we don't exclude it."

On the subject of arms deals allegedly involving Israel, Iran and the United States, Shamir added that Israel sold arms to Iran, but he did not rule out the possibility that Israeli arms might be delivered to Iran through middlemen.

Turner takes to stage to play courtesan

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Film star Kathleen Turner said Thursday she will take the stage at a regional theater for a month to portray a courtesan in the American premiere of the British play "Camille."

"They'll not ask me to be a femme fatale for my whole life. So I'll do it now," said Miss Turner, 32, who also has appeared in "Body Heat," "Prizzi's Honor," "Romancing the Stone," and "Jewel of the Nile."

Miss Turner, star of the film "Peggy Sue Got Married," will play Marguerite Gaudier, a mid-1900s Parisian courtesan whose story was told in the like-named Alexandre Dumas classic and in Verdi's opera "La Traviata."

Miss Turner came to Long Wharf Theatre here from Trieste, Italy, where she completed filming "Julia, Julia." She said "Camille" cast begins previews Nov. 29, and opening night is Dec. 5. The play runs through Jan. 11.

Python, 17 feet long, judged too big for show

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Rock star Alice Cooper gave a would-be performer in his stage show a fair audition, but it turned out that 17-foot, 150-pound Monty the python was just too much snake to prance

It also turns out that Monty is a she, not a he, and will return to this Detroit suburb to breed future generations of big, non-poisonous Burmese pythons.

Cooper in Detroit for a Halloween concert, decided to audition Monty for his stage show after Monty's owner, Jim Wilson, was forced to give her up because of Pontiac ordinances against exotic pets.

Cooper returned Monty to Wilson after she proved too big for the show, and Wilson traded her to pet store owner Jeff Gee for some aquarium equipment. Gee said Monty actually is a female and will be used for breeding.

"We're not going to sell her, and we'll probably keep that name," Gee said Wednesday. "She made her name as Monty."

Jewish Nobel winners honored at anniversary

NEW YORK (AP) — Forty-eight Jewish recipients of Nobel prizes, including Elie Wiesel and Isaac Bashevis Singer, were honored by the Jewish Academy of Arts and Sciences at its 60th anniversary celebration.

"A Jew who doesn't learn cannot be fully Jewish," said Wiesel, winner of the 1986 Nobel Peace Prize and one of the 12 laureates present at the lavish dinner at the New York Historical Society. "Our passion for learning is unmatched since our appearance on the stage of history."

Singer, winner of the 1978 Nobel prize—for literature, provoked laughter from the audience of about 200 when he said with a smile that Yiddish, the language of his stories, "will be a dying language for the next 2,000 years." Also receiving a special award Wednesday night was Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres.

The Jewish Academy of Arts and Sciences was founded in 1927 to encourage the advancement of knowl-

Sign removal postponed

LODI, Wis. (AP) — The Lodi School Board has indefinitely postponed a decision to remove the high school's Blue Devil symbol, which opponents charge is satanic, from floors and gymnasium walls.

Students have said they like the symbol and want to keep it. The Rev. Chef Okopnik of the Lodi Presbyterian Church proposed several months ago that the symbol be removed, but that the school keep the name for its athletic teams.

The board voted 4-3 Monday to table the issue, thus retaining the symbol.

"The board isn't going to take any action to remove it," said board member Richard Schmidt. "If anyone still feels they want to take some action, it's going to have to be legal—through the courts."

Information line becomes erotic

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — People calling the Madison Teletel Line over the weekend to find out what was happening in the city found themselves listening to a dial-a-porn recording instead.

Police said Monday they are trying to find the practical joker who changed the Greater Madison Convention and Visitor's Bureau message from an entertainment agenda to an erotic message from a woman.

Bureau employees set a tape-recorded message to play after 5 a.m. Friday, but found the erotic message Monday morning.

Police said someone may have discovered a code that allows bureau employees to call and update the message and substituted a recording on a dial-a-porn service.

Guilty plea entered by hurler on charges

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Padres pitcher LaMarr Hoyt, winner of the American League's Cy Young Award in 1983, pleaded guilty to misdemeanor drug charges Thursday.

Hoyt, 31, was scheduled for sentencing on Dec. 16 and will spend at least 60 days in federal prison under the terms of a plea bargain submitted to the court during a hearing Thursday.

He faces five years' probation, regular drug testing, a fine of up to $5,000 and forfeiture of his $33,000 1986 Porsche 944 sports car, seized after his arrest Oct. 28 on suspicion of smuggling charges at San Ysidro.

Hoyt, who had nearly 500 pills in his possession when arrested, pleaded guilty to possession of Valium, a tranquilizer, and propoxyphene, a painkiller.

Hoyt, who has pitched two seasons for the Padres, won the Cy Young Award with the Chicago White Sox.

The Padres have not revealed their plans for Hoyt, who was arrested twice previously on charges involving possession of marijuana.

Meals program aided by star-studded input

NEW YORK (AP) — Helen Hayes, Hal Linden, Loretta Swit, Neil Sedaka, Robert Lindsay and the cast of "Me and My Girl" kick off of the fund raising Monday for the annual City meals-on-Wheels Restaurant Week.

The celebrities will highlight a star-studded cocktail party at the Seagram Building. The fund raising continues at various New York City restaurants through Sunday night.

Swedish royal couple tours preserve in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — King Carl XVI Gustaf and queen Silvia of Sweden are visiting the Brazilian highlands on vacation. The Swedish Embassy in Brasilia said Thursday.

The royal couple arrived last week and went to the huge western wildlife preserve known as the Pantanal, as guests of Swedish filmmaker and naturalist Arne Sucksdorff, who lives in Brazil, said charge d'affaires Lillie Haook said.

The royal couple also was to travel next week to the Amazon jungle in the far north, and to Sao Paulo state in the southeast, where the queen, the former Silvia Sommerlath, lived as a girl and where she still has relatives.

Haook said the visit was "strictly private" and it was not known when the royal couple would return to Sweden.

Changes mark Chiang birth centennial

By ANNIE HUANG
The Associated Press

TAIPEI, Taiwan — Taiwan is celebrating the 100th birthday of the late President Chiang Kai-shek as the island's Nationalist government begins easing tight political controls he imposed nearly 40 years ago.

Among the pending changes is an end to martial law, which has existed since Chiang and his fellow Nationalists fled the Chinese mainland in 1949 after being defeated by the Communists in a civil war.

Chiang, who died in 1975, was born on Oct. 31, 1887. By traditional Chinese reckoning, which adds one year at birth, this year marks his centennial birthday.

Concerts, exhibitions, military parades and seminars evaluating his role in Chinese history have been conducted almost daily for the past month.

Chiang viewed Taiwan, located about 100 miles off China's east coast, as a temporary base from which the Nationalists would return to the mainland.

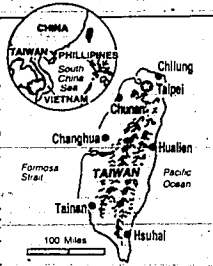

With renewed civil war in mind, Chiang imposed martial law and outlawed the establishment of new political parties. Next year, upon the recommendation of the Nationalists' Central Standing Committee, the Legislative Yuan is expected to finally end both measures.

Both the Nationalists and their political opponents have claimed credit for the reforms.

The Nationalists say Chiang intended to move toward constitu-

Taiwan

Official name: Republic of China
Population: 17.9 million (1981 estimate)
Geography: 13,822 square miles: the size of Maryland and Delaware combined
Religions: Buddhism, Taoism, Confucianism, Christianity
Language: Mandarin Chinese, Taiwan and Hokkienese, Japanese
Head of state: President Chiang Ching-kuo
Literacy rate: 85 percent
Capital: Taipei
Minerals and major industries: Coal, gold, marble, copper, sulfur, oil, textiles, clothing, mechanical and electronic equipment, processed foods, chemicals, glass, machinery
Chief crops: Rice, bananas, pineapples, sugar cane, sweet potatoes, wheat, soybeans, peanuts History: Chinese immigration to Taiwan began in the 17th Century. The Dutch ruled from 1624 to 1662, after which the mainland dominated the island. From 1895 to 1945, the Japanese ruled Taiwan. After the Communist takeover on the mainland in 1949, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and many of his followers fled to the island.

Constitutional democracy once Taiwan was stable and economically prosperous. Opponents say they forced the Nationalists to act by escalating their agitation for democratic reforms.

There is little likelihood the reforms will cause any immediate weakening in the Nationalists' strength. If anything, the moves could win the party new public support in next month's elections for the National Assembly and Legislative Yuan. Opponents of the Nationalist Party are mainly native Taiwanese, many of whom still refuse to accept control by an exiled mainland party. In past elections, opposition candidates have captured 25 percent of the popular vote even though they've been forced to campaign without any party organization.

Once allowed to form political parties, the opposition forces could campaign more effectively, but analysts say they remain seriously divided.

The government has said martial law will be replaced by less restrictive security regulations, apparently in order to placate still influential senior Nationalist hardliners opposed to relaxing the old controls.

"With martial law gone and the ban on new political parties removed, even the harshest critics would find it difficult to brand the Republic of China "government as authoritarian," the pro-government English daily China News said in an editorial.

But it said — Taiwan remains threatened by the Communist government on the mainland, and added, "Under these circumstances, some extra precaution is absolutely necessary."

The dream of regaining control of the mainland still is cherished by Chiang's fellow exiles. His political heirs, led by his son and successor, 76-year-old President Chiang Ching-kuo, insist they are the legitimate government of all of China, even though they govern only Taiwan and a few other islands.

The government therefore continues to reject opposition demands that it abolish seats in the legislative assemblies reserved for representatives of mainland districts.

If the assemblies were reorganized as the opposition demands, more native Taiwanese could win office, threatening Nationalist control.

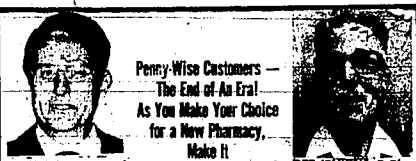

New Miss World chosen

LONDON (AP) — Miss Trinidad and Tobago, 24-year-old Giselle Jeane-Marie Laronde, was crowned Miss World late Thursday in the 38th annual beauty pageant at London's Royal Albert Hall.

The 5-foot-5 secretary from Marabella was chosen tops among the 77 contestants. The pre-contest favorite, Denmark's Pia Rosenberg Larsen, was first runner-up and Austria's Chantal Schriberer was second runner-up.

Miss Laronde was declared winner over some of the world's most-glamorous women in such categories as looks and personality. She will succeed title holder Haimour "Hoti" Karisdotir, a 5-foot-8 nursery school teacher from Reykjavik, Iceland.

Other leading contenders included Halle Berry, the first black American to compete in Miss World, Chile's Margot Montt, Maria Mateo of Venezuela, Catherine Carew of France, Britain's Alison Slack, and Maja Kucic of Yugoslavia.

Honduras rips Nicaraguan policies

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Honduras' foreign minister on Thursday accused Nicaragua of sabotaging peace talks in Central America and of "fostering a climate of insecurity, subversion and terror in neighboring countries."

His accusations against the leftist Sandinista government came as the Organization of American States considered rival resolutions dealing with stalled Central American peace negotiations.

Speaking to the OAS General Assembly, Carlos Lopez Contreras said Nicaragua had unilaterally abandoned the Contadora peace process.

The 16th General Assembly of foreign ministers, meeting this week in Guatemala's capital, was expected to choose late Thursday or sometime today between the two competing resolutions on the Central American crisis.

One, from the eight nations of the Contadora Group and its Support Group, called on the five Central American nations to resume peace talks that broke down last June.

The other resolution, proposed by Costa Rica, Honduras and El Salvador and supported by the United States, urges Nicaragua to drop a suit it has filed against Costa Rica and Honduras in the International Court of Justice in The Hague.

Activist tries to quiet furor, condemns PLO

JERUSALEM (AP) — Human rights activist Anatoly Shcharansky condemned the PLO on Thursday in an attempt to quiet the furor he caused by meeting with Palestinian nationalists.

Palestinians accused him of bowing to pressure from Israeli right-wingers.

Outraged reaction to reports about his meeting with PLO supporters Monday forced Shcharansky to take a public stand on Middle East questions for the first time since he came to Israel last February after nearly nine years in Soviet prisons.

He placed an advertisement in two newspapers, calling the Palestine Liberation Organization "a pestilence threatening all civilized people" and saying "both the purpose and the barbarous methods of this organization of culturots violate every human standard."

Shcharansky said he had not known the Arabs he met were identified with the PLO. "Had I known this fact in advance, the meeting would never have taken place," said the advertisement, signed with his Hebrew first name Natan.

Area canal firms voice opposition to change in plan

BY MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Officials from Magic Valley Canal companies said Thursday they oppose a change in the state water plan which asks local governments to require fencing and other safety measures in or near canals.

The cost of doing this on the thousands of miles of canals, laterals and ditches owned by the Twin Falls Canal Co. would rival the original $7 million cost of building the system in 1905, said Robert Reichert, chairman of the Twin Falls Canal Co. board of directors.

Reichert testified at state water plan hearings at Twin Falls City Hall. Members of the Idaho Water Resources Board attending were Gene M. Gray, chairman and a Payette insurance agent; James Shawver, secretary; Eden and William J. Lanting of Twin Falls.

Reichert said the cost of the canal company's liability policy premium jumped from $20,000 to $200,000 in the last three years. He told board members that if a safety directive from local government were issued, both the canal company and the local government could be sued in the event of an accident.

"He said grounds could be provided where safety measures were provided were inadequate because the accident happened anyway."

The cost... would rival the original $7 million cost... in 1905, said Robert Reichert...

Ted Diehl, manager of the Northside Canal Co. of Jerome voiced similar concerns. He said a public education program would be a better way to handle concerns about canal safety.

Diehl said one person drowned in a Northside Canal several years ago. Reichert said there had been no water-related injuries in the last three years but there was a drowning in the last five years.

"Another policy in the water plan calls for managing groundwater and surface water as a single resource. Where it can be shown, there is a connection between the two."

"We encourage the efforts toward joint management, and we caution that we will resist violently any attempt to deal with the ground and surface-water problems on a basis other than the priority system," Reichert said. The priority system protects the person with the earliest water right. Reichert also said he was concerned about a policy in the water plan calling for local governments to prepare lake and reservoir surface management plans.

He said the Twin Falls Canal Co. is a co-owner of the Milner Dam and is a shareholder in American Falls Reservoir. Depending on the facility, Twin Falls Canal Co. has differing responsibilities for operation and maintenance.

"We are concerned that direction to local government to prepare management plans may result in conflicting plans which are not feasible for water user organizations in this time of distress in the farming economy," Reichert said.

John Rosholt, a Twin Falls attorney representing the Milner and King Hill Irrigation districts, said he sensed a deviation from the priority system in a proposed policy which calls for naming of critical groundwater areas.

Instead of requiring an immediate stop of all pumping, the policy would allow junior pumpers a set period of time to recover part of their investment.

"If they want to see a lawyer they (junior pumpers) knew they were at risk — that they had 10 permits ahead of them or what," Rosholt said.

Rosholt said it was paramount to protect the person with prior rights.

Rosholt said a proposed requirement that the water resource board review allocations of more than 500 acre-feet per year from federal reservoir was "a redundant layer of bureaucracy which doesn't accomplish anything."

Rosholt said the policy calling for the state to set up a process for determining locations of new hydro plants would lead to a conflict with the federal government which the state would lose.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission licenses hydroelectric plants. "Perhaps you are getting into territory," Rosholt said.

Rosholt also represents the two canal companies which offered testimony.

The hearing lasted 38 minutes. There was no other testimony other than from Rosholt and the two canal companies.

The hearing was one of five hearings scheduled around the state on the water plan. The plan, which is state policy but not state law, covers other issues such as protecting groundwater from pollution.

The plan also puts part of the Swan Falls water rights agreement into effect. The plan will be reviewed by the state Legislature.

Date for execution is set

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — A Dec. 10 execution date was set Thursday for convicted murderer Jaimi D. Charboneau, but Charboneau's attorney filed an appeal to the Idaho Supreme Court to delay the sentence.

Charboneau, 25, made a final appearance in Fifth District Court in Jerome and heard Judge Phillip Becker read the death warrant.

JAIMI D. CHARBONEAU
Convicted in shooting of ex-wife

Charboneau's attorney, James May of Twin Falls, said the matter is automatically appealed to the Idaho Supreme Court and that appeal action would probably continue for some time.

Thursday's session was called for Becker to rule on a previous objections by the defense. Becker reviewed appeal proceedings which have now been exhausted at the district court level.

Charboneau, a former rodeo performer, was found guilty in May 1985 of the shooting death of his former wife, Marilyn Arbaugh, 36, Jerome. She died of rifle wounds in the chest on July 1, 1984. Testimony in the case indicated Charboneau ambushed her in the barn of her rural home and killed her when she came to put her horses in the corral.

Charboneau was sentenced to death by Becker in January 1986, and the execution date was originally set for February 24.

Since then, Charboneau has appealed in District Court on several grounds and all appeals have been denied. Thursday's appearance closed the door on further contention in the district court.

Before the reading of the death warrant, Charboneau said he wanted to make some comments on his own behalf which he said he had never had an opportunity to make. May said the comments were not related to the present proceedings.

Judge Becker denied the request, explaining that Charboneau had been given numerous opportunities to speak in appeal hearings since the sentence was first pronounced.

Becker told Charboneau in January that, on the day Marilyn Arbaugh died in the barn behind her home, he had an opportunity to make an important point.

Becker said Charboneau had about two minutes in which to decide if he would save Arbaugh's life or end it.

The judge said testimony showed that Arbaugh would probably have survived initial wounds inflicted by Charboneau.

When the victim's daughter, who had come to the barn after hearing the first shots, went for help, Becker said, Charboneau could have walked away.

Instead, the judge said, he made the decision to fire the killing shots.

This, the judge said at that time, constituted sufficient aggravating circumstances for a death penalty for the convicted murderer.

Special prosecutor in the case, Marc Haws of the Idaho Attorney General's office, again represented the state on Thursday.

Becker also denied a civil action Thursday morning involving an objection to a previous denial for post-conviction relief.

In the courtroom for his final Jerome appearance were his mother, Misty Hamilton, and the mother of the murder victim, Mary Arbaugh.

Charboneau was brought from death row at the Idaho State Penitentiary late Wednesday for the Thursday court session and returned to Boise immediately after the court session ended.

Attorney: No Piler appeal

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The attorney for Gary Piler, former Twin Falls superintendent of schools, said Thursday that Piler will not appeal a bankruptcy judge ruling which gave Piler's creditors the money from a civil suit settlement with the Twin Falls School District.

James Meservy, Jerome, said Piler and his wife Susan decided not to appeal because U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Alfred Hagan's ruling closed the door on issues they could raise to keep the money.

Hagan ruled after a hearing Nov. 3 that about $85,000 in settlement money belonged to Piler's creditors.

Attorney Jim Pappas, who represented Piler's creditors, said if an appeal were not filed by the deadline today, "the process of paying back Piler's unsecured creditors will begin."

Pappas said he suspected the appeal wasn't filed because money from the settlement may be left over and available to the Pilers after the unsecured creditors are paid. That money might have been lost in the cost of appeal, he said.

"Even after all their debts are paid, they (the Pilers) would be getting back a substantial amount of money, about $10,000," said Pappas. Pappas said a plan to pay back the creditors must now be filed with the bankruptcy court and after each creditor agrees with it, the plan is put into effect.

He said, "The closing process usually takes between 60 and 90 days because of all the hoops you have to jump through."

The Pilers filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy in November 1985, to liquidate their assets. They listed more than $111,000 in debt.

The figure includes more than $46,000 in unsecured loans, consisting mainly of credit card obligations and short-term lines of credit.

The secured loans consist of the Piler's home at 803 N. Locust St., Twin Falls, and a vehicle.

Piler sued the Twin Falls School District for firing him as superintendent in October 1984.

He claimed in the $2.8 million suit that the district had breached his contract and violated his constitutional rights.

Piler settled that suit last August for $100,000. Attorney's fees and court costs reduced the $100,000 to about $85,000, which continues to earn interest in a trust account until the bankruptcy is settled.

Evans to interview 3 for judgeship

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

BOISE — Gov. John Evans will interview three candidates Monday for the Blaine County-based district judge position being vacated by 5th District Judge Douglas Kramer of Halley, who retired Nov. 1.

The candidates are Twin Falls attorney James J. May; 5th District Magistrate Judge Varin of Fairfield; and 5th District Magistrate Judge Nathan Higer of Burley.

Evans' appointment to the judgeship probably will be made a few days after the interviews, said Jean Terra, Evans' press secretary.

The names of three men, who were the only candidates for the job, were submitted Tuesday to the governor by the Idaho State Judicial Council, said council director Bob Hamlin of Boise.

Jack D. Swofford, a Magistrate Court judge in Caldwell, earlier had applied for the position, but withdrew his name last week before the council made its recommendations.

He practices in Twin Falls with the firm of May, May, Sudweeks, Shinduring, Stubbs and Mitchell.

Higer, a native of Emmett, graduated from the University of Washington Law School. He had a private practice in Emmett and the Boise-area until his appointment to the bench in 1977.

Higer also has served as prosecutor and public defender in Gem County.

Varin was born and raised in Gooding. He received his law degree from the University of Idaho. Following graduation, he practiced with the Gooding firm of James and Hobday and became a partner in 1974.

Varin also served as Cassia County prosecuting attorney and deputy city attorney for Gooding, Woodell, Hagerman and Fairfield. He was appointed to the magistrate bench July 1, 1985.

District court

TWIN FALLS — The following criminal cases were heard recently in 5th District Court in Twin Falls: Ronald Felter, 40, was charged with first degree arson and malicious harassment. The defendant entered a plea of guilty to malicious harassment and the charge of first degree arson was dropped. The case will be set for sentencing.

Peter E. Horndy, 33, Jerome, was found guilty of a probation violation. Fifth District Judge Daniel Mehl ordered the defendant to continue his previously ordered probation and to pay the remainder of the restitution. Vernon Harry Hensley, Jerome, entered a plea of guilty to obtaining a controlled substance by misrepresentation. The defendant was sentenced to one year in the Twin Falls County Jail.

However, the sentence was suspended for the defendant was placed on two years probation. The court ordered the defendant to consume no alcohol or illegal drugs, to enter a drug treatment program, and to submit upon reasonable request of his probation officer to tests of his blood, breath and urine and to search without warrant of his person, residence or automobile. Rebecca Rose McCauley, 31, Buhl, entered a plea of guilty to a misdemeanor-possession of a controlled substance. The court ordered a withheld judgment for two years and that the defendant be placed on two years probation. The court ordered that the defendant consume no alcohol or controlled substances, submit to tests of blood, breath or urine, submit to searches of automobile, residence and her person, submit to lie detector tests, follow treatment as recommended by the Walker Center, pay $50 supervision fee and to pay $15.50 court costs.

Group seeks support for anti-porn campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of religious leaders is seeking White House support for its campaign against child and hard-core pornography that is "devastating the lives of so many people," the head of the group said Thursday.

The Rev. Jerry Kirk, chairman of the Religious Alliance Against Pornography, and several others in the group of 200 religious leaders are scheduled to meet Friday with President Reagan and Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

Kirk, who also heads the National Coalition Against Pornography, told reporters at a news briefing he was conducting a nationwide anti-pornography campaign, which Kirk said would focus on educating citizens on obscenity laws.

Bruce C. Hafen, dean of the Brigham Young University law school, said the regulation of obscenity is consistent with constitutional values.

Pigeon shooting slaughter, not sport

DEAR ABBY: Your letter about "killing two birds with one stone" had a special meaning for me.

Recently we visited our son and his fiancée in New York. On Labor Day weekend we drove to Higgins, Pa., to protest a live bird shoot. Thousands of pigeons are brought in cages to a park where they are released to be shot by "sportsmen." These birds, which are semi-domestic, have to be encouraged (forced) to fly into the air so the "sportsmen" can shoot them down!

To make matters worse, when the birds are shot but not killed, children are sent out to wring their necks and finish the job!

You could do a truly humane service by contacting the governor of Pennsylvania and trying to get this barbaric spectacle outlawed as it is in many states.

children to my place. I discourage that lately because the noise is too much for my husband.

My children think it's a treat for me to have the grandchildren; they don't realize it is a strain on me because I am responsible for their well-being.

I used to hold down a full-time job outside the home, but I retired four years ago to stay home and take it easy.

Abby, please tell me how I can refuse to be a sitter for my grandchildren without offending their parents. I have even considered going back to work so I'll have an excuse. It's easier, and my old boss keeps calling and begging me to come back.

— TAKEN FOR GRANTED

DEAR CAT LOVER: Communication is at its best when one says exactly what one means in the most direct and simple way, so when stating that something can be done in more ways than one, there is no reason to drag a cat into it.

DEAR ABBY: The letter in your column from the man who complained because his 30-year-old "college-educated wife of eight years" continually used his toothbrush brings to mind this old family story told to me by my mother. (I am now 67.)

Grandfather Walker was a pioneer in Fort Ransom, N.D., building his mill there in 1880. It was common to have Scandinavian immigrant girls work in the home as maids. (My grandmother was also one — from Oslo, Norway.)

One particular girl kept using Grandfather's toothbrush. One evening as they all sat around the fire (it gets bitter cold in North Dakota), Grandfather left the room and returned with a pan of water and his toothbrush. Without comment, he removed his shoes and socks, soaked his feet in the water and used the toothbrush to very carefully scrub each toenail!

The maid never used Grandfather's toothbrush again!

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William N. John and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Larry R. Speirs, all Twin Falls.

A reception was held the evening of the wedding. Danette Higgins, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor and Sharylyn Speirs, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid.

Michael Speirs attended his brother as best man, with Mark John, brother of the bride, as groomsmen.

Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lewis, Boise, and Mr. and Mrs. David John, Shelley, grandparents of the bride; Mrs. Loine Speirs, Twin Falls, and Mrs. Irene Ferguson, Nampa, grandmothers of the bridegroom.

Donna Speirs, sister of the bridegroom, was guest book attendant. Jack Van Buren, Earline Reed, Kathy Peck, Byron McCurdy and Randy Thorne provided music.

Following a trip to the Oregon coast, the newlyweds reside in Boise.

Gap in wealth tied to education, age

WASHINGTON (AP) — The rich are becoming richer, but the growing gap in distribution of America's wealth is related more to education and age than to race and household makeup, a new report says.

The report acknowledged an increase in income inequality but said it has been greatly exaggerated by the media.

"There has been a remarkable rush to judgment, to the conclusion that the Reagan administration is responsible for increasing inequality," said the report presented Monday at a seminar sponsored by the American Enterprise Institute, a conservative-oriented policy group.

Authors John Weicher of the University of Pennsylvania looked at Federal Reserve Board surveys between 1977 and 1983, and concluded that "inequality increased because of changes in the relationships between education and wealth and between age and wealth. The elderly and the well-educated have gained; the middle-aged and the uneducated have lost."

Among their findings, in 1977 constant dollars:

- Those with a college degree had a mean net worth of $71,190 in 1977 and $92,700 in 1983. People with only a high school education had a net worth of $27,401 in 1977, up to only $37,680 six years later.

— Based on age, "the dividing line comes at age 55," it said. Those aged 55-64 had a net worth of $61,598 in 1977 and $92,115 in 1983 and people aged 65-74 saw their mean net worth grow from $53,514 to $84,499 six years later. Below 55, the mean dropped off in every category: From $6,842 in 1977 to $4,531 in 1983 for 12-24 year olds; $18,894 to $16,651 for 25-34 year olds; $44,359 to $40,710 for 35-44 year olds; and $59,725 to $56,320 for 45-54 year-olds.

— By race, the AEI report showed net worth of white households increasing from $44,817 in 1977 to $52,820 in 1983. Blacks improved slightly, from $12,064 to $16,766.

Hispanics overall saw a tiny drop in their net worth, from $15,642 to $15,218.

The AEI study was undertaken following the release of two other surveys this year that showed a disproportionate share of the nation's wealth held by fewer people, with minorities the big losers.

Birth defect drive launched

WASHINGTON (AP) — The March of Dimes on Wednesday unveiled a nationwide advertising campaign to prevent birth defects, featuring a young child pleading "Mommy Don't!" use drugs, alcohol and tobacco while pregnant.

The ads reinforce the research-proven connection between birth defects and mothers-to-be who think, smoke or take drugs.

Some 250,000 babies are born each year with birth defects and another 250,000 get a poor start in life by being born underweight. Nancy G. Kimbly, executive vice president of William R. Russell told a news conference.

Russell said there was no way to estimate how many birth defects can be attributed to pregnant women who take drugs or smoke. But he said the links have been proven by research.

He said the March of Dimes, a voluntary health organization, is running the 18-month advertising campaign now because of the growing American consciousness about the dangers of drugs.

"Are we whistling in the dark? We think not. We think we can have an impact," Russell said.

The March of Dimes said the most serious threat to the unborn is the dramatic rise in cocaine use. The group cited a Los Angeles medical center that saw a 10-fold increase in 1985 of the births of cocaine-addicted babies, who suffer withdrawal and brain damage.

Snow favored in regional volleyball tourney

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Utah Tech of Provo is the two-time defending champion but the Snow Badgers rate as the favorites in the Junior College Region 18 Women's Volleyball tournament opening this morning in the CSI gymnasium.

The first-round losers meet in a last-out battle at 5:30 p.m. with the championship semifinal slated for 8 p.m.

Concluding action resumes with a loser bracket game at 1 p.m. Saturday with that winner going against the undefeated team for the title at 3 p.m.

CSI has good records against Ricks (4-1) and Utah Tech (4-0-1) but Coach Ben Stroud expects a battle royal. "We're playing as well as we're going to play. The girls are executing our offense, jumping out of the gym and just generally at the peak of their game. So if we get beat, we get beat by someone who is better," Stroud said.

Stroud says there are two reasons Snow has been buffering the rest of the region around. "They talk and they can play," he said. "The only weakness I've ever seen — and that's only been at times — is they can be a little erratic with their serving. But I've seen other times their serving has been great so I don't consider them to have any real weak spot at all." And, he says, the main reason Snow is so consistent is "Kathleen Reed, she's 5-11 and she can hammer the ball major league. She gives Snow that one dominating player the rest of us don't have." Stroud has one reason to believe that he and his Eagles can put themselves into a position to play Snow that they may have a chance at the Badgers. "Lisa Resch missed two of the later Snow matches," Stroud said. "She's our setter and we are a lot different team with her."

Stroud says the CSI opener will be difficult because "I think Utah Tech can be the surprise of the tournament. They have Frances Lupo (5-9 Texan) and she can crank it. They go to her in the front row almost every time. The rest of the team is very young but they are tall and they can jump. I worry about Utah Tech because they could be the most improved because they are the youngest. Ricks is a pretty young team too."

The prospect of CSI winning and taking the trip to nationals leaves Stroud with a traveling problem. "If we'd happen to go to Miami, I'd have to figure out a way to fly into Rock Springs, Wyo., because our basketball team opens in a tournament at Western Wyoming Nov. 27," laughed Stroud, who is handling both head assignments this year.

SMU may be first to taste death penalty

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist could be the first to get the "death penalty" a two-year suspension of its football program, if the most recent allegations about cash payments prove true, an NCAA official said Thursday.

The penalty, which has yet to be imposed on any school, is part of a 1985 sanctions package adopted by the National Collegiate Athletic Association. SMU now is serving three years' probation mandated in 1985 because of illegal cash payments to players by boosters and other NCAA violations.

Linebacker David Stanley, who dropped out of SMU last December, told Dallas' WFAA-TV in a report aired Wednesday that he received $750 per month in payments that continued after the NCAA sanctions. Stanley also told the station he was paid $25,000 to sign with the Southwest Conference school in 1983.

Athletic Director Bob Hitch and head coach Bobby Collins denied SMU's department of athletics, Shields said.

NCAA Enforcement Director David Best said Thursday he was told of Stanley's charges Oct. 27, the day WFAA confronted SMU officials.

"If there is a penalty, that will be left to the discretion of the committee on Infractions," Best said. "The 'death penalty' can be imposed, but it is not mandatory. There also could be no action."

The last time the NCAA took drastic suspension action was in early 1976, when Southwest Louisiana's basketball program was halted for two years because of "repeated, substantial and broad violations," Best said. Stanley could not be reached for comment by The Associated Press, which was unable to find a telephone listing for his family in Angleton.

News of Stanley's allegations rumbled across the campus Thursday, stunning students and faculty. "I don't think we're ready to lose our football," student body vice president Tracey Haley said. "But it came as a complete surprise. We thought the university had cleaned up its act, and the university thought it had too. We'll work through this like anything else."

SMU President L. Donald Shields said he will call a special meeting of the university's board of governors to determine what steps to take. "I am deeply disturbed and distressed at all allegations by a former student athlete concerning improprieties and violations of NCAA regulations by some past and present members of the SMU department of athletics," Shields said.

SMU officials will make no other comment until after the board meeting, he said. One SMU football player who asked not to be identified told the SMU Daily Campus he has known Stanley since high school and did not think the allegations were true.

Stanley admitted to WFAA that he is bitter about his early departure from SMU because it cost him a chance at a possible professional football career.

sive basketball all night long and worked hard on both ends of the floor," said Bruin Coach Paul Stover. "We just didn't accomplish a whole lot on the offensive end. We were out from the field and 5-22 from the line and neither of those is a very impressive statistic."

Twin Falls, which lost the preliminary 52-34, will entertain Minico on the home court next Thursday.

Pilots claim Jerome invitational title

Glenns Ferry puts down late surge to beat Vikings

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Glenns Ferry Pilots held off a late Valley Viking rally to win the Magic Valley Invitational 48-39 Thursday night. Buhl took third place with a 48-38 victory over Oakley while Jerome won the consolation title with a 24-26 victory over Filer.

In the other game of the evening, Bliss won its first game of the tournament edging Gooding 22-21.

Before the start of the championship game, Valley Coach Frank DeHoney was trying to figure out how to keep the Pilots' Pam Pember from scoring.

The Viking defense shut Pember down in the first quarter, but left senior Kelli King open. King scored 13 in the first quarter including a trio of shots from the three-point line as Glenns Ferry took a 19-10 lead.

After trailing by 13 points at the half, the Vikings started chipping away at the Pilots' lead. Lori Reed got the hot hand in the second half scoring 15 of her game-high 21 points and brought the Vikings within four points of the lead with four minutes left.

Glenns Ferry shut the door on the Viking rally when King and Pember hit baskets in the next minute and Glenns Ferry put the game out of reach.

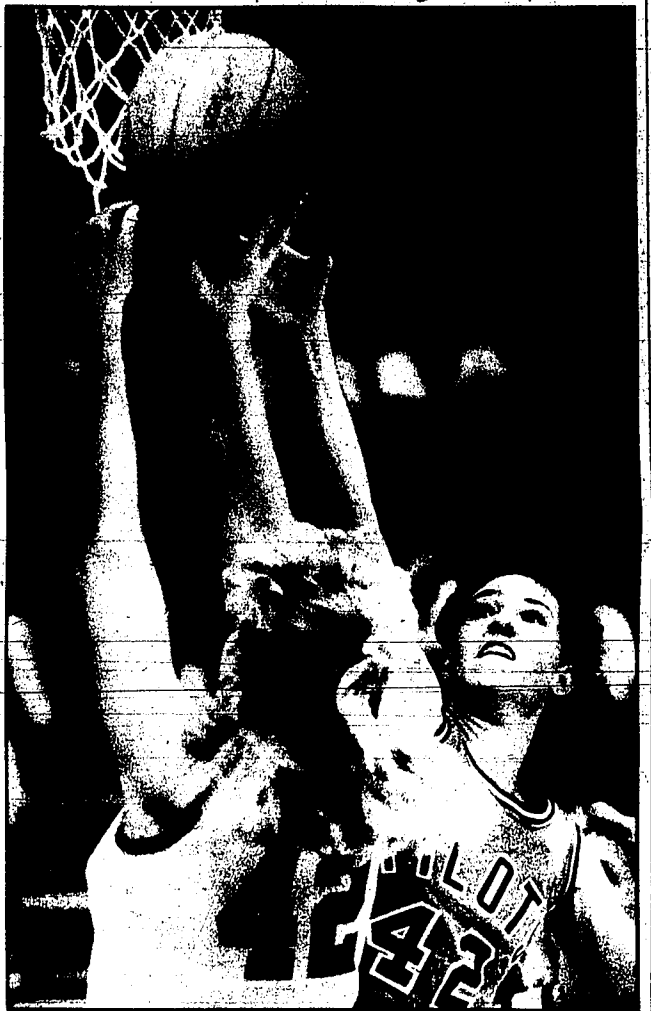

Valley might have had a shot at winning the game but failed on 16 attempts from the charity stripe.

Buhl had its troubles with Oakley in the first half.

The Hornets and Indians traded leads and Buhl only led by a basket at intermission.

Senior Nancy Stevens then took over, scoring nine points in the third quarter to put the Indians up by eight points and Oakley could never get closer.

Jerome and Raft River shoot for state football titles today

Wallace's skill position players worry Tigers

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — The Joe Mattie theory of winning football approximately 9 p.m. in the Idaho state final Friday night when his Jerome Tigers try to repeat as the Idaho Class A-2 football champions against the No. 1-ranked Wallace Miners.

That game, which starts at approximately 9 p.m. in the Idaho state final Friday night when his Jerome Tigers try to repeat as the Idaho Class A-2 football champions against the No. 1-ranked Wallace Miners.

So far that has worked through a 9-2 record, seven shutouts and a No. 3 ranking in the final Associated Press prep poll. But the problems Wallace presents give the coach pause. Not only will the Miners be considerably bigger than Jerome, they will give the Tigers more talented players in skill positions to contend with than they've seen this year.

That combination leads Mattie to suggest that the 10-1 Miners will be

A-2 Prep playoffs

Jerome's toughest A-2 test of the season.

"What we are telling our players is that from an ability to move the ball point of view, Wallace will be very much like Mountain Home. Now they might not have the individual talents of a (Maury) Toy or (Gary) Taylor but Wallace has five talented skill people and we have to be able to cover them all or any one of them will kill us."

Leading Mattie's list is 6-foot, 185-pound junior flanker Brock Jones, who, Mattie says, is "their all-world" guy. He's their best receiver, he returns their punts and kicks off, he runs sweeps and counters and he'll throw. I don't know how fast he is but he definitely is a deep threat.

"But," Mattie continues, "their tight end (Phil Seward) is 6-2, 190 and maybe the best tight end we've seen this year, and then they have Rob Mesa (a junior wideout) who is an excellent receiver. They have a 175-pound sophomore (Reiff Panke) at quarterback and a sophomore wideout back in this (Darr) LeVigne who showed us he can catch the ball.

"The problem is that with all that talent, skill and size, they can attack you anywhere," Mattie said. "They like the power game and I think if they can get four yards a burst on first down, they're going to try to run the ball down our throats. I think first down is always going to be a key. If they can get four or five every time, your offense is not going to get on the field."

"The other problem," Mattie added, "is they can throw and catch well and they throw everything off play action." Mattie said Wallace shows one

Trojans face biggest size differential of year

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — It is a bigger variation of an old them for the No. 2-ranked Raft River Trojans as they prepare for the biggest moment in the school's football history Friday afternoon.

At 3:30 p.m., the Trojans will kick it off against top-ranked and undefeated Kendrick for the Idaho Class A-4 11-man championship in the Idaho State University Minidome. It will be the first of six games slated Friday afternoon and evening and Saturday morning and afternoon that will crown all of Idaho's divisional kings.

The Trojans, on extra point away from an undefeated season, will be using their proven pluses — speed, depth and desire — against a team that is bigger, perhaps deeper and was turned back by Oakley in last year's A-4 final. That also gives them, as Raft River Coach Tom Harrison points out, a hunger that Raft River has to contend with.

"We don't know a lot about them, but we do know they're big and powerful and have a good defense," said Harrison, whose team will go into the game with a 9-1 record. They have 12 seniors off last year's second-place team, so they have the experience. They do everything and do it well."

Raft River has faced some negatives before, but nothing like it will in the line this time around, according to Harrison. Kendrick has the Hatcheson brothers, Brent and Brian, at 260 pounds each and another lineman in the 225-pound range.

"That should be a real test for our linemen," understated Harrison. "Hopefully our quickness will offset some of their size but with kids that big, it still takes a while to run around them and put pressure on the quarterback."

And Harrison expects Kendrick to throw the ball because it has two good wideouts, the most dangerous being Brian Parks. "He's tall and catches the ball extremely well," Harrison said.

The other problem for Raft River will be 160-pound running back Jim Woods. "We have to stop him," Harrison continued.

"But Harrison added that his team doesn't come into this with all negatives. "We got (quarterback) Robb Hitch back this week, so we can move Steve Fredrickson to his usual running back position along with Wayne Anderson. That gives us our best running attack."

"Our offensive linemen are going to have quite a test," he continued. "We're just emphasizing to them to stay low and drive and not try to fight them up top, because you can't move people that size up there. We don't worry a lot about our line because it has done a tremendous job all year."

"We're certain this is the toughest test for the year," Harrison said. "We're certain this is the best team we've played this year. After the

Reno likes being home for Big Sky football title showdown

By QUANEKENYON Associated Press Writer

The Big Sky Conference football regular season ends for four league teams on Saturday, and two of them are expected to be in Reno for the title game.

Montana State fires Arnold

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — Dave Arnold will not return as head football coach at Montana State University next year, it was announced Thursday.

Arnold, 41, was fired after a 19-33 record. He took over as head coach in 1983 and the Bobcats went 1-10. The next season, Montana State won the NCAA Division I-AA title.

If Reno wins, the Wolf Pack's 11-0 record and No. 1 ranking will assure a tournament spot and probably the right to play most of the games at home.

opening-season loss to an NAIA team. Idaho could finish 8-3, but the selection committee might find it hard to look past the fact NAU demolished Idaho 24-0 just a couple of weeks ago.

Heading into his final game as head coach on Saturday against Eastern Washington, Arnold has next week against archrival Idaho. The Broncos, 4-5, must win both games, barring a tie, to keep from becoming the first Boise State football team to post a losing record since 1946.

Heading into his final game in four seasons as Bobcat coach, Arnold said he's still looking for a complete football game from MSU on the road.

as starters or backup on offense and nine on defense. Montana's Don Read says he never played a team twice before, and doesn't know what to expect.

Turmoil threatens Colorado year

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Just two days ago, the talk on the University of Colorado campus was about the upcoming football game with Oklahoma.

An old-fashioned pep rally was planned as the resurgent Buffaloes, who earlier upset Nebraska, prepared for their biggest game in a decade, with an "Owl Bowl" theme.

In the wake of the disclosures, the players and coaches were left to worry about how much their concentration on Saturday's game would be disrupted.

athletes two years ago, then adopted a sinner plan Aug. 16 that included random testing. The program is being challenged by the American Civil Liberties Union.

Athletic Director Bill Marolt said the university has completed 683 tests since August involving all team members, and all have shown negative results.

Stars-Stripes back in race

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) — Dennis Conner, skipper of Stars & Stripes, finished the second challenge round of the America's Cup on Thursday with the wind a strong wind — at his back.

The victory served to quell speculation that Stars & Stripes might not be a serious contender to challenge the defending champion Australia and return the Cup to the United States.

Criner's legacy for Iowa St. appears to be long probation

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State University President Gordon Eaton said Thursday that school probes have shown the university is guilty of major athletic violations and will surely be punished by the NCAA, whose infractions committee considers the case Friday in Kansas City.

Earlier, in a tearful appearance before an army of news reporters, Criner wouldn't talk about the NCAA probe but said he was proud of his four-year tenure.

Eaton said the university first thought the NCAA charges were minor and easily defended.

Eaton also said no other athletic officials, including Athletic Director Max Urick or basketball Coach Johnny Orr, are at risk.

Criner compiled a 16-24-2 record at Iowa State. This year's team is 5-4, and a victory over Kansas State on Saturday would guarantee the Cyclones their first winning season since 1980.

Criner wouldn't elaborate on the nature of the violations.

"I'm much more concerned with this inconsistency involving Braswell than trying to mitigate the NCAA penalties," he said.

Criner wouldn't elaborate on the nature of the violations.

Eaton said that when "it began to be clear we were going to have to have new leadership in the program," he originally planned to wait until the end-of-the-season to fire Criner.

Stock prices plunge in computer trading

By JOHN C. GIVEN
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stock prices plunged sharply amid heavy computerized program trading toward the end of business Thursday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down from 5 to 18 points for most of the session, wound up the day at 1,862.20, 31.50 points lower than Wednesday's close.

Losers outpaced gainers by about a 7-to-3 margin, with 1,098 losers, 476 gainers and 440 issues remaining unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume totaled 163.95 million shares, against 162.19 million in the previous session.

Earlier, analysts had attributed some of the morning trading to profit-taking, in response to the failure of the Dow Jones Industrial Index to break through the 1,900 barrier.

They also said continued uncertainty about the direction of the economy was dampening investor enthusiasm.

Analysts said traders were looking ahead to today's release of October government reports on producer prices, retail sales and industrial production.

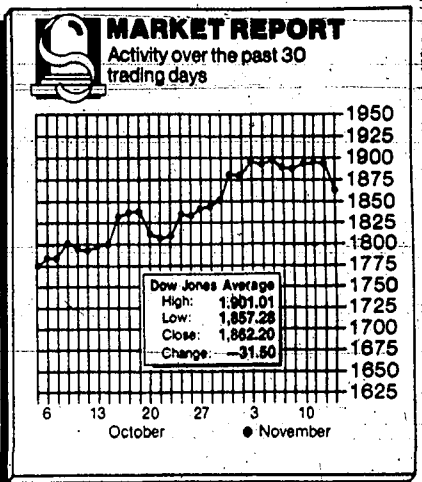

If these indicate more strength in the economy, bond prices could decline amid diminished prospects that the Federal Reserve Board would ease interest rates. This, in turn, could put a damper on stocks, they said.

Bond prices move in the opposite direction of interest rates.

Lockheed Corp. gained 2% to close at 47%, while Ford Motor Co. closed at 58, down 1%, after a rumor swept the market that Ford was interested in acquiring Lockheed.

Eastman Kodak was up by 1/4 at 66%. On Wednesday the company predicted higher 1987 sales and earnings.

Mesa Petroleum was up 1/4 at 34%.

Bally Manufacturing was up 4% at 52. Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in these stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 200.17 million shares. The NYSE index was down 1.86, at 140.03. Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial stocks fell 4.12 to 270.62 and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 3.82 to 243.02. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 1.89, at 268.76.

Chinese press says wage head with share of stock

The Associated Press

BEIJING — Chinese labor unions are pushing for a new system of wage distribution that would allow workers to share in the profits of their companies, according to a report in the Chinese press.

The report, published in the Communist Party's official newspaper, the People's Daily, says that the government is considering a new system of wage distribution that would allow workers to share in the profits of their companies.

The new system would be based on the amount of work done by each worker, and would allow workers to receive a share of the company's profits.

Book dealer will purchase ex-CBS site

The Washington Post

STAMFORD, Conn. — Waldenbooks announced Wednesday that it will buy the recently closed CBS Technology Center adjacent to the bookstore chain's headquarters.

Neither Waldenbooks nor CBS would disclose the sale price, but local real estate brokers said CBS had been asking $17 million for the center's two buildings on 23 acres.

Charles A. Gupta, vice president of administration for Waldenbooks, said the purchase provided the "ideal solution" to the company's pressing need for more space.

He said Waldenbooks will expand its headquarters and together with Houston-based developers Gerald D. Hines Interests will build an office building on the site.

Located in Stamford since 1958, the Technology Center had established a global reputation for its broadcasting innovations.

List of Conrail sale brokers pared

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department on Wednesday narrowed to 12 the bidders under consideration for handling the $1.7 billion sale of Conrail, the government-owned freight railroad that is to be sold in a public stock offering next year.

The department is scheduled later this month to select four to six brokerage firms as co-managers of the Conrail sale, which could earn the companies commissions as high as $50 million.

Twenty-five investment companies had filed bids to handle the sale.

Among the 12 companies still under consideration are Morgan Stanley & Co., which led an attempt to develop a private stock offering of Conrail when efforts were under way to sell the railroad to the Norfolk Southern Corp. and Goldman Sachs, which served as the Transportation Department's adviser on the Norfolk Southern proposal.

According to the Transportation Department, the other firms remaining in the competition are: Bear Stearns & Co. Inc., Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., E.F. Hutton, First Boston Corp., Lazard Freres Co., Merrill Lynch, Paine Webber, Prudential Bache, Saloman Brother Inc. and Shearson Lehman Brothers.

The four to six investment companies finally selected are to manage the Conrail sale jointly and share commissions equally, though one company will be chosen to coordinate the sale, officials said.

Congress in the final days of its session approved the sale of the government's 95 percent interest in Conrail, hopefully for $1.7 billion. The government is expected to get another $200 million to $300 million in a cash transfer from the railroad.

Copper mining moves closer to Arizona

PHOENIX — A major copper mining project in Arizona is moving closer to the start of construction, according to a report from the Arizona Department of Economic Security.

The report says that the project, which is being developed by Phelps Dodge, is expected to start construction in the next few months.

The project is located in the Phoenix area and is expected to produce a significant amount of copper for the state's economy.

The report also says that the project is expected to create a significant number of jobs for the state's workforce.

Statistics about Americans cover warning about spending

NEW YORK — On hearing the report, average Americans probably let out a cheer for themselves.

Why not? It related that Americans are increasing their standard of living at a rate of more than 20 percent every decade.

In fact, said the Conference Board in an effort to underscore the magnitude of the great leap forward, it now takes only 17 minutes for the average American to earn a six-pack of beer, compared with a half-hour in 1969.

Progress can be measured in many ways, depending on how it is defined, and the Conference Board and the Bureau of the Census, which cooperated on the report, undoubtedly came up with some stunning examples of material affluence.

- In the past 35 years the goods and services consumed by the average American have doubled.
- In 1915, it took about 60 cents of a household's dollar just to buy the necessities of life — food, clothing and shelter. Now it is 45 cents.
- About 40 percent of all American households now own two or more automobiles, up from 15 percent 25 years ago. The telephone is in almost every home; but

John Cunniff

In 1950, two out of every five homes were without a phone.

- Last year alone, shipments to the nation's retailers included 9 million microwave ovens, 14 million electric coffee makers, 21 million television sets, 7 million video recorders, 23 million portable tape players, 19 million hair dryers and 20 million home security devices.
- While most people will question the latter's suitability as an indicator of an advancing lifestyle, others who probe more deeply into life might be even less impressed, since consumption to them doesn't necessarily mean progress.
- Consumption, it is argued by economists of all persuasions, often is at the expense of production, and some of them have hollered in frustration as the great consumer movement roars.

That movement stalled during the big reports acknowledged that, looking out that the output of the average American worker more than doubled during the first half of the century. It increased not just from hard work but from smart work — innovation, invention, more efficient management — and capital.

Savings were invested — poured — in more productive plants, machinery and processes, and all three were kept up to date by the need to meet competition. As a result, output of the average worker doubled in the century's first half.

The report notes that it more than doubled again during the past 35 years, but that can be deceiving. Much of that gain was before the time it was put on the consumer's head. More recently, productivity growth has been lagging.

Because of the great consumer spurge, consumers are deep in debt. And so is the government, which has sought to serve the consumer appetite for services not directly available in the marketplace. Budget deficits are a way of life.

Many economists contend that because of government and consumer borrowing there is less money available for investment in productivity, which is the engine of a consumer society.

Government borrowing did something else that doesn't get much publicity. The Tax Foundation, another not-for-profit educational and research organization, points out that it cuts the gross savings rate by one-third.

In the second quarter of this year, the tax foundation people say, gross private savings of individuals and businesses were accumulated at an annual rate of nearly $719 billion. But federal red ink reduced that by $237 billion.

Such figures for savings, productivity and debt point up what some of the more frustrated economists have been swallowing for lack of an audience. Much of our affluence, they say, is at the expense of yesterday and tomorrow.

They explain that yesterday's productivity increases made possible the great consumer society, and borrowing from future generations — through government debt has helped sustain it.

You can hear their voices raised in gratitude now for one aspect of the new tax law, the part that discontinues the deductibility of interest on most consumer loans. That, they point out, might encourage consumers to pay as they go, and maybe even save some money that can be invested in productivity.

But they groan too, because the same tax law eliminates many of the tax incentives for business to fund funds back into better equipment and plants.

They maintain that without those investments by earlier generations, today's quick-glittering consumer market never would have been and probably cannot continue to be.

THE ACES®

BOBBY WOLFF

"There is repetition everywhere, and nothing is found only once in the world."

— Goethe.

Today's South didn't find his best game, but he did rest in one that was mauling. Three no-trump has no change when the opponents start the diamond suit.

Four spades would be best in today's layout; South has 10 top tricks after he ruffs the third diamond. At four hearts, South spent more time guessing about the final contract than he did in planning his play.

East overtook West's diamond king and returned a diamond to West's queen. A third round of diamonds forced South to ruff, so what was South to do?

Seeing only the hope of a 3-3 trump break, South cashed three rounds of trumps, running into bad news. South then tried spades and East ruffed the third round. A club came through and South ducked, grasping at one last straw for 10 tricks. West won his king and cashed two more diamonds, sending the game down three.

After ruffing the third diamond, South makes his game if he takes time to dummy's heart queen to ruff another diamond and then draws two more rounds of trumps, discarding his small club. The spades are run and East can ruff whenever he wishes. However, South gets the lead back with his ace of clubs and the defenders are held to only three tricks.

Springsteen's live LP battles expectations

By STEVE POND
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — The expectations surrounding Bruce Springsteen and the E Street Band Live 1975-1985 may have been impossibly high. After more than a decade of legendary tours and genuinely legendary concerts, the album had to be just about the greatest live rock collection ever released, or else it would be viewed as a letdown.

Sure enough, the 40-song five-record set does capture brilliantly some of rock's greatest live performances. And, perhaps inevitably, it is something of a letdown. Perhaps no album could quite convey the visceral "punch" and spontaneous abandon of Springsteen's most memorable evenings.

But then, "Live 1975-1985" does not try to capture a single concert. Instead, it is a bold attempt to summarize 10 years of remarkable performances, a strategy that makes it a far riskier undertaking than such classic live LPs as James Brown's "Live at the Apollo" or Otis Redding's "Live in Europe" or Bob Dylan's "Before the Flood."

So how is the music? From lively piano-backed "Thunder Road" from '75 that opens the album to the wholly different thunder of Springsteen's 1985 stadium shows, the album presents some of the most moving rock songs of the past decade in versions that, often as not, make even the toughest original studio recordings sound like rough blueprints.

The songs are mostly from Springsteen's seven albums, along with tunes recorded by others (a casual version of "Fire" from "Because of the Night") and four outside songs: the Eddie Floyd-Stevie Cropper-Alvertis Isbell Stax hit "Raise Your Hand," Woody Guthrie's "This Land Is Your Land," Barrett Strong and Norman Whitfield's angry "War" and Tom Waits' "Jersey Girl."

The order is roughly chronological. The LP starts out acoustic in 1975, then brings in the E Street Band for the first time in 1978, 1980-81 and, especially, 1984-85.

Near the end, there is a bit-jazzed solo version of "No Surrender" — another rock tune turned acoustic — and then Springsteen brings it all back home by serenading his home state of New Jersey with a brassy "Tenth Avenue Freeze-Out" and, finally, a hugging "Jersey Girl," the album's only previously released track.

Springsteen has been rocking all over the world for years, but this record comes from the coasts: 17 of the songs are from two Los Angeles locations, while 21 come from three New York-area concert facilities. The only off-the-beaten-track locale represented is Tampa, Fla., where a ferocious 1980 version of "Badlands" was Springsteen's explicit reaction to the previous day's election of Ronald Reagan.

Overall, the set tells a tale of maturation: from the romantic, wistful "Born to Run" to the sober, economical punch of "Born in the U.S.A." From the giddy teenage escapades of "Spirit in the Night" to the unsettling, violent story of "Nebraska." From a brash, funny 1976 monologue about family clashes to a 1985 narrative that covers similar ground but makes touching points about parental concern. The later songs are clouded with the realization that the romance and escape "Springsteen" sang about in 1975 are not always possible 10 years down the road, but the sheer force and majesty of the E Street Band make everything stirring; super-charged rockers like "Candy's Room" and "The River" are monumentally heartbreaking. "Racing in the Street," grim acoustic songs like "Johnny 99." And placing the youthful bravura of "Born to Run" next to the sobering "My Home Town" does not diminish either song. Instead, it gives both of them added poignancy and punch.

The album's most riveting sequence, however, moves from "Born in the U.S.A." to the harrowing new rocker "Seeds" to the ballad "The River" to Edwin Starr's '70s soul hit "War." Springsteen's own liner notes say that these are the songs that prompted the idea of a live album; and between fearsome performances and eloquent spoken introductions, they make up the most pointed, bitterly political statement of Springsteen's career. They are required listening for anybody who still thinks that "Born in the U.S.A." is a patriotic anthem.

The "Born in the U.S.A." sequence is vintage live Springsteen, using monologues and concert patter to give the songs new, telling contexts. And that, surprisingly, is where some of the album falls short.

It is not just that the record makes it seem that Springsteen's stage presence. In a way, "Live 1975-1985" also seems like a failure of nerve on the part of the artist who would expect to have last, because it leaves out many of the things that make Springsteen's concerts special: his introductions, his versions of other people's songs, his own unreleased tunes, the sense of reckless unpredictability.

The song selection bypasses surprises in favor of six songs from "The River," eight from "Born in the U.S.A." In addition, tunes were edited to more closely resemble their original versions: a haunting introduction he used at Giants Stadium was left off "I'm on Fire," for example, while "Backstreets" completely omits a lengthy, semi-improvised interlude that at the Roxy in Los Angeles, was this rendition's most striking feature.

It is not a sellout. If Springsteen wanted to do that, he would have made a two- or three-record set and included versions of the hit singles "Dancing in the Streets" and "Glorious Year." More likely, he decided that the best way to summarize his first decade was with the songs that made his reputation. But that does not make it any less disconcerting to find trifles like "Darlington County" or "Set This City on Fire" on the album. More likely, he decided that "Prove It All Night," "Point Blank" and the exquisite, unreleased ballad "The Promise."

Every Springsteen fan will have a different list of musts, and they do not call him the Boss because he makes records to please everybody else.

Hagerman potter can claim Snake River clay as his turf

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — Snake River Pottery first opened in 1947, with artists Aldrich and Di Bowler determined to make a living at their craft.

Their pottery was mostly cups, pitchers, sugar bowls and other useful tableware. But it was unique because the Bowlers dug the local Hagerman Valley clay and fired it in a low heat kiln with their own homemade glazes.

After a few years of experimenting with this grumpy Hagerman clay and blending it with another clay from central Idaho, the Bowlers produced a distinct line of earthenware and sold it from their home overlooking rapids of the Snake River. Aldrich supplemented the family income by teaching school and selling clay to colleges and universities.

Through word-of-mouth advertising, Snake River Pottery gradually became a successful business, he says. Glazes were handmade from lava rock, copper oxide, iron and cobalt, some dug locally "right off this road cut up here" and milled to a fine powder.

When Di Bowler died earlier this year, he closed the pottery shop. Last month, Aldrich re-opened the shop and is now working to build up his inventory.

"We have exploited the native materials, and this area is particularly rich in them," Bowler says. "The lower your temperature, the more variety you get in your glazes. We do pebbled (grinding) and formulate many of the native materials that are used in our glazes. Clay is everywhere, he explains, because the valley is an ancient volcanic and lakebed area. Grit, ash and sand were washed into the lakes and even today, the Snake River often appears milky because of its huge deposits of clay. "It's the same thing a volcano spits out," he says.

"It's a terrible struggle to make this 'clay work,'" Bowler says. "It cracks and shrinks as it dries. But sometimes it can be excitingly wonderful. . . It's very, very different."

The yellow, brown, blue and white glazes are fairly unstable, he says, and the same combinations can produce very different colors on different days. "Kiln opening is always a new experience," Bowler says. He is making a large high-fire kiln and plans to do new art pieces in addition to practical earthenware. Bowler, who turns 71 today, says he is anxious to try new techniques.

Working as an apprentice with Bowler is Diane Elastick, 31, of Hagerman. She says the pottery selection may soon include tiles and a variety of art pieces using primitive Indian to modern collage techniques.

"We're going to turn it into a more creative line," Elastick says. Scout dens and other children's groups are welcome to visit for pottery demonstrations, Bowler says, and visitors may "drop in" in the morning and early afternoon. The shop is about two miles west of the Malad Bridge north of Hagerman.

Write Hemingway, try

TWIN FALLS — Harry's Bar and American Grill of Los Angeles has announced its 10th International Imitation Hemingway Competition. The winner will be flown to Florence, Italy, with a friend for dinner at Harry's Bar and American Grill in Florence. If the winner lives in Europe, he or she will be flown to Los Angeles with a friend for dinner at the restaurant's California location. Contestants are asked to write one page of imitation Ernest Hemingway. It must mention Harry's Bar and American Grill, nicely. "It must sound like Hemingway, read like Hemingway, and it must be funny," say contest rules.

Entries must be postmarked by Feb. 16. The decision of the judges will be final and will be announced before May 1. All entries become the property of Harry's Bar and American Grill. Jack Hemingway, Ketchum resident and son of the late Ernest Hemingway, will be one of the contest judges. Entry blanks may be obtained by writing to Harry's Bar and American Grill, 2020 Avenue of the Stars, Los Angeles, CA 90067. Last year more than 2,600 entries were received from throughout the world. The winner was Mark Silber, 23, of New York, author of "The Sports of Killmanjaro."

MGM

Studio splitting ends an era

By DAVID T. FRIENDLY
Los Angeles Times

CULVER CITY, Calif. — On a recent crisp and cloudless afternoon, women perched on a crane high above the Culver City lot removed the last letter of the landmark 100-foot-wide MGM sign. It was probably just another job for them, but to Shirley Englander, a secretary who has been there for the last 43 years, it meant the end of an era for the studio that was home to such movie classics as "Gone With the Wind" and "The Wizard of Oz."

"It's sad," she said, staring out the window near her desk in the facilities building, "the way the place has just been sort of carved up. It was once just a big happy family here."

The removal of those giant names, "Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer," and finally the famous mascot — logo — Leo the Lion from the facility here signals a hard reality that has tapped an emotional response from those who grew up with the studio.

Once the dominant studio of the majors with dozens of high-powered stars and directors under contract, MGM Pictures Inc. is now merely a collection of studio executives with a slate of movie projects housed in a gleaming high-rise office building a block away.

The separation of MGM — which is still an ongoing entity — from the lot and the parceling of the company was only recently completed. Last March, media baron Ted Turner purchased MGM-UA Entertainment Co. for about $1.25 billion after his bid to purchase CBS failed. From the start, cynics insisted that Turner was not interested in the whole company, just the valuable MGM library of film which he hoped to acquire. See MGM on Page D3

Herrett earns accreditation

TWIN FALLS — The Herrett Museum at the College of Southern Idaho has become the second museum in the state to receive accreditation from the American Association of Museums.

Jim Woods, museum director, said there are about 400 museums in the United States which are accredited and the only other one in Idaho to receive the honor is the Idaho State Historical Museum in Boise.

An accreditation team headed by Dr. Raymond Thompson, director of the museum at Arizona State University and assisted by Dr. Frank Norvick, assistant director of the Lowie Museum, University of California, Berkeley, visited the Herrett Museum this past summer.

Woods said the team was complimentary of the museum's relationship with the college. He said they were impressed with its stability, organization and overseeing by the board of trustees, the quality of exhibits and overall appearance. The director said the accreditation process has involved the entire staff and involved extensive work on the record-keeping system and security.

CSI President Jerry Meyerhoffer said, "We are very pleased with the recognition of quality of the Herrett Museum. I'm sure Norman Herrett and Dr. Tavior, who worked together to get it here, would also be pleased. Our board of trustees would like to compliment Jim and the museum staff for their quality work."

Herrett and his wife, Lillie, built a planetarium and observatory behind their jewelry business on Kimberly Road in 1958. Herrett, an educator, had seen students helping classmates grasp new ideas. The student lecturer program, which he started in the planetarium, grew out of this insight and is continued at the museum today.

By 1962 the Herrett Arts and Science Center was founded to display the Herretts' growing collection of pre-Columbian Indian artifacts.

Buhl band trumpets ensembles

BUHL — Buhl High School's Band of Indians will perform for the State School Boards Association banquet in Boise tonight.

The band will present a variety program featuring two of the "Tuxedo Ensembles"—a saxophone quintet comprised of Cynthia Castro, Heidi Ambrose, Tim Fleming, Mike Hopwood and Jim Winkle and a trumpet trio — Pat Evans, Carl Kohntopp and Brian Murphy.

Clavinova accompanists are Janelle Hansen and Lori Schlaick. Their presentation will also feature Ben Carson, a seventh-grader, singing "America, the Beautiful" with band accompaniment.

The "Tuxedo Ensembles" are various quartets or similar small groups drawn from the concert band's personnel. These ensembles have nine program appearances for November in Buhl and Twin Falls.

Band director Wayne Skeem says the small ensemble playing develops confidence, pride and performance savvy. "It's a band-builder, any way you look at it, and besides that, it's fun!"

on WTBS, his Atlanta-based super station.

The cynics were proved right: On the same day the MGM sale was announced, Turner Broadcasting System Inc. sold the United Artists subsidiary for about $480 million to financier Kirk Kerkorian who had been the majority stockholder at MGM. Today, United Artists' studio without a lot, is housed in offices in nearby Beverly Hills.

Last June Turner also sold the MGM Entertainment Co.'s television production and distribution business and Home Entertainment Group to United Artists Corp. for $200 million in cash.

Finally, last month Turner completed the sale of the 44-acre, 24 sound stage production facility along with the Metrocolor Lab to Lorimar-Teletelvisions Corp. for another $100 million.

The net result of all of that: Turner wound up with the 4,500-film library owned by MGM and managed to keep under control what would have been a staggering debt level.

In the transition, about 200 MGM employees, primarily administrative and maintenance staff, were laid off, according to Barbara Broglitti, senior vice president at Lorimar.

Because of the complicated nature of these financial arrangements, observers seemed to have lingered about the sale of the lot to Lorimar-Teletelvisions Corp.

"This is not just an acquisition," said Merv Adelson, chairman and chief executive officer of Lorimar. "It's a commitment to preserving a tradition. This is not the end of a wonderful film history, it is the beginning of a new studio."

It could have been worse. Turner began selling the studio as one would sell off a car for parts, looking for buyers for the pieces he no longer wanted. A handful of developers expressed an interest in knocking down all of the buildings and replacing them with condominiums. Fortunately, we will probably never see Para Towers or Ozland or any similar development on the lot.

"Atlanta burned on that site and Citizen Kane," was shot there," says Denver City Mayor Paul A. Netzel.

This studio has always been a main force in the community and the industry. You just don't go from that type of relationship to the community to turning it off and turning it out to pasture."

From "He Who Gets Slapped" (1924), the first film entirely produced by MGM, to "Running Scared" (1966), the last film completed there before MGM executives moved, MGM has been a studio laced with history and a rich sense of tradition. Employees who worked there and continue to work for the new owners still love to recall the days when you could find yourself seated next to Clark Gable at the commissary or Elizabeth Taylor at the studio ice cream parlor.

"MGM always had a whole different aura to it," says Peter Bart, an executive who worked there for several years when Frank Yablans was the head of production. "You could just soak up the history if you walked around the place."

BLUE LAKES CENTER

Chances of failure for would-be high along Music Row

Encounter after accident spurred Judgs

By JOE EDWARDS
The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The would be superstars, newly tuned guitars slung over their backs, are greeted with this sign the moment they step into the lobby of RCA Records on Music Row.

"Unlabeled Material Not Accepted."

For new talent trying to break in to the music business, it's often a discouraging experience that tests pride, perseverance and shoe leather.

"Despite a few famous stories about country music stars becoming overnight successes, there are hundreds of performers who've failed. For most, the thunderbolt-quick success of the Judgs is only a dream. The phenomenal rise of the mother-daughter duo began by coincidence when mother Naomi, a nurse, met record producer Brent Maher after his daughter was hurt in a traffic accident.

"He heard the duo singing on a cassette tape and helped them win a recording contract with RCA. The contract was offered after the two singers were given a rare audition at the RCA boardroom.

Naomi Judd tells concert audiences today: "Believe me, if these two crazy redheads can make their dreams come true, you can make your dreams come true also. I don't care what it is, just trust in the Lord, and ask yourself, 'Hey, why not me?'"

It's that lure of fame that draws young performers to Nashville seeking one of the approximately 100 spots on the rosters of the major recording labels and the 60 slots on the Grand Ole Opry.

Lorna Greenwood and Kathy Shepherd, duo known as "MonReve," have been striving to build a career for about two years.

"We work on this all the time," Ms. Greenwood said. "We live on egg salad sandwiches. . . Thank God for chickens. I handle the telephone work and Kathy handles the correspondence because she types and I don't. Together, we make one good person.

"Financially, we've lived on our savings and borrowed some to get through these times. It's frightening at times, but we see progress and we know we'll make a lot of money one day soon."

She's hired an attorney to contact record companies about landing the duo a recording contract. They've lined up an investor and the three of them have spent $65,000 on their career so far. Of that, $12,000 went to make a music video to show record companies and others who can help them.

"It's been a battle," Ms. Greenwood said. "We've had some interest by different people in the industry. We've been offered some deals but we felt they weren't right for us."

Martha Sharp, a vice president at Warner Bros. Records, is one of three people at the label's artist and repertoire department involved in recruiting new talent.

"We look for that indefinable something — something unique something visually intriguing as well as vocally intriguing," she said.

A year ago, she signed former catfish cook Randy Travis to a recording contract and he responded with the hit record "1982."

"I went looking for a specific kind of act, someone who had a great country voice, loved country music and wanted to be country. I put the word out and found him in 24 hours," she said.

Travis had been in Nashville since 1981, singing in a nightclub and doubling as the cook for much of that time. Prior to that, he sang for 12 years in North Carolina.

Mike Hyland, a public relations executive who has worked for four record companies, says getting the first break is a matter of hard work.

"The thing to do is blitz as many people as you can, especially the publishers and the record companies," he said. "Join the songwriters organizations, make sure your songs are copyrighted and stay away from the stakes in the grass who charge you to make records."

But he says approaching the record companies is frustrating because "most of them are so jaded they don't want to hear from anybody." He suggests hooking up with a reputable record producer who can do the legwork and whose reputation helps open closed minds.

It's long been the goal of most country singers to perform on the Grand Ole Opry — the live country music show that just celebrated its 61st birthday.

The Opry has a regular cast with little turnover. The newest Opry performers are Reba McEntire and Mel McDaniel, both established recording artists. Guest spots on the show are usually reserved for those who already have recording contracts.

Wheat weavers vying for $150 grand prize

TWIN FALLS — The first annual Wheat Weaving Contest will be held in conjunction with the Idaho State Wheat Growers Association Convention at the Red Lion/Downtown Inn in Boise Nov. 20-22.

Prizes will be awarded in categories of wreaths, corsages, centerpieces and wall and mobile hangings. The entries will be judged on appearance, quality of wheat, pliability, technique and originality. Participants do not have to be ISWGA members, and may enter the contest as many times as desired.

The entries will become the sole property of the ISWGA, and will be sold at auction on Nov. 21. Twenty percent of the auction price will go to the participants.

The following prizes will be awarded at the Convention: Overall Grand Champion $150; 1st Place in each category $50; 2nd Place in each category $30.

All entries must be delivered or mailed to the ISWGA office by 5 p.m. Nov. 19 or taken to the Red Lion/Downtown on Nov. 20 by 2 p.m.

The contest is being sponsored by Hoechst-Roussel Agri-Vet. For further information on the contest, call the ISWGA office at 345-0706.

Moore of many hats gives performance to help Philharmonic

By MARY CAMPBELL
 The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dudley Moore has reached the point where he thrives on panic.

"It was a very pleasant ordeal," he said, after playing piano at the New York Philharmonic's annual luncheon in the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf.

Moore played, and sometimes sang, eight parodies of tunes he wrote in 1959. "I started doing parodies years ago because I was too scared to do the real thing. I did it out of envy, fear and lust for money. I was able to use these parodies in 'Beyond the Fringe.' I don't seem to have written any more since." His parodies for the Philharmonic's patrons and benefactors included a Beethovenesque piano concerto.

"It's a piece of Beethoven's recently discovered in a museum of his underwear in Munich," Moore said as he introduced the piece. "It's still to this day slightly mystifying. It's written on a tune that was written after his death. I think you will see the usual Beethoven strengths and sense of humor. It's based on the 'Colonel Bogie March' from 'The Bridge on the River Kwai.'"

His playing imitated the Beethoven technique: There were two rests in the first line; a solemn opening statement; strong chords; a second theme, "Hernando's Hideaway"; development with trills, and a long and thundering finish.

He also poked fun at a more modern composer. "Benjamin Britten wrote some very beautiful settings of folk songs. Being a great admirer, I think you might enjoy this version of 'Little Miss Muffet.'"

Moore proved that he not only knew Britten's style but, singing from the back of his teeth, he also parodied Britten's favorite tenor, Peter Pears.

There also was a dedication to Brecht and Weill, "The Ballad of Gangster Joe," sung in mock German.

The 51-year-old actor, who went to Oxford on a scholarship to study organ music and who received a second bachelor's degree there in composition, said he appeared at the luncheon to help the Philharmonic.

"It was slightly alarming," he said. "You know a lot of the musical jokes will be understood. On the other hand, these people are around

DUDLEY MOORE
 Played eight piano parodies music so much it is slightly daunting."

When Moore left Oxford he intended to compose, play jazz and do cabaret. He got into acting through performing in "Beyond the Fringe," a British satirical review from the early 1960s.

"In recent years I haven't done as much music as I might; acting has taken over," he said.

Still, he continues to play piano. "Why continue breathing? I can't imagine not having music in my life, playing for myself or for other people. I was asked, 'Which would you give up, I'd have to say acting.'"

Moore will start shooting his next movie in January. It is a comedy called "Like Father, Like Son."

There's also talk of turning the hit movie, "Arthur," in which Moore starred as a wealthy drunken playboy, into a Broadway musical.

"I'm interested to see what they'll do. I don't have any great hopes of it working out. Drunken songs — I can't imagine it."

"I've never done musicals; I don't have any desire or ambition to do one."

Moore has been living in Los Angeles with model Brogan Lane. "We just moved into a house; we've only been in three days," he said. "There's a lot to do there. She has a son, also, at school for commercial art. We left the house in January for it to be renovated; we're just getting back. I spent that time not doing anything."

Entry forms on hand for Nevada exhibition

TWIN FALLS — Entry forms are now available for the Northwestern Nevada Museum's 13th statewide touring — photography — exhibition, NEVADA 87. Deadline for entries is Jan. 19.

Project coordinator Michele Herzog said that photographers intending to enter Nevada's most-attended art exhibit should obtain entry forms and rules by the middle of December.

Howard Hickson, director of the museum in Elko, said "The exhibition and sound slide show will travel to 14 Nevada communities to be shown 16 times. The exhibit has become extremely popular and now tours for a full year. We have a waiting list of cities that want it. Last year's production was seen by almost 100,000 people."

The exhibit, he added, opens at the museum in Elko on March 1 and will be on public display to March 30. Three days later it opens in Winnemucca to begin a tour that includes Lovelock, Reno (two places), Carson City, Genoa, Fallon, Hawthorne, Tonopah, Las Vegas (two places), Valley Fire, Shoshone, Nevada Museum, Attn: NEVADA 87, Park, Ely and Pioche. After closing at Pioche the display will return to Elko to be shown with NEVADA 88.

The current display, NEVADA 86, is presently in Tonopah at the Central Nevada Museum, its tenth stop, with four communities to go.

Last year, 210 photographers from Nevada, California, Massachusetts, Georgia, Switzerland, Arizona, New Jersey, Iowa, Washington, Oregon, Utah and Colorado entered 854 prints and slides for competition. Of the entries received, 121 color slides, 95 color prints and 28 black and white photographs were selected by the judges for the exhibition and slide show. Cash awards totaled $1,000.

Judges for NEVADA 87 will be C.J. Hadley, professional freelance photographer and writer; Roche Bush, professional photographer and owner of Fox Photo Shop in Elko; Hickson, a professional photographer. Nevada Magazine, Nevada Museum, Attn: NEVADA 87, and the museum are sponsors of the annual competition.

Entry forms and rules are available at many Nevada photography stores or by writing or calling the museum: Northeastern Nevada Museum, Attn: NEVADA 87, Post Office Box 2550, Elko, NV 89801, telephone (702) 738-2418.

'Maltese' director blasts color process

By BOB THOMAS
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Director John Huston, whose color-enhanced vintage film "The Maltese Falcon" was shown on cable television this week, said Thursday his black-and-white classic had been made the victim of "mindless insipidity."

The 80-year-old director, vocally vigorous though in a wheelchair and breathing from an oxygen tank because of emphysema, said he stopped watching the tinted version of "The Maltese Falcon" after about seven minutes.

The movie was shown on Ted Turner's WTBS superstation Wednesday night.

"Last night I looked for as long as I could bear it at a colorized print of 'The Maltese Falcon,'" the Academy Award-winning director said in an appearance with fellow filmmakers at the Directors Guild of America.

"I asked myself if such an example of mindless insipidity is worthy of our attention in this threatened world..."

In response to reporters' questions, Huston said that he considered the colorizing "like a child's tins," adding, "It's not color, it's like pouring 40 tablespoons of sugar water over a roast."

The filmmaker remarked that film in color have become an art only in recent years, citing his own "Moulin Rouge" as a milestone and an example of how color could be employed to enhance a film.

Huston suggested the only way to combat colorizing was if consumers refuse to buy the sponsors' products advertised in commercials during the broadcast.

Huston said he opposed anything

JOHN HUSTON
Calls colorization of classic 'mindless insipidity' that smacks of censorship, saying, "But freedom does not entitle people to, as the cliché goes, hand-tint drawings by Leonardo da Vinci." "The Maltese Falcon" is the detective classic starring Humphrey Bogart and Mary Astor, was the first film directed by Huston. He has had a distinguished career, and his other films, including the Academy Award-winning "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre," "The Asphalt Jungle," "Key Largo," "The African Queen" and last year's "Prizzi's Honor." Huston's criticism of the controversial computer color process comes a day after the Screen Actor's Guild western regional board voted 36-0 to oppose the computer coloring of black-and-white films.

The vote, in which three board members abstained, has put the board in line with other entertainment unions, including the Directors Guild of America and the Writers Guild of America West and the American Film Institute.

The controversy erupted when Turner recently began tinting more than 100 black-and-white movie classics, including "Casablanca," "Yankee Doodle Dandy," "The Postman Always Rings Twice" and "The Maltese Falcon."

Critics say the coloring can affect the overall mood of a film and note that critical production design choices, such as the color of a suit, are left to the technician's imagination.

Coloring films by computer is detested by proponents as a way to give new life to films which are increasingly refused in television syndication packages because they aren't in color. Purists, they say, can always turn down the color knob on their sets if they wish to see the movie in black and white.

The U.S. Copyright Office is considering whether companies that market color versions of older classics can get copyright protection, a decision that will prove lucrative if copyrights are granted.

Lingo lover revived by call on 'chroma'

By DEBORAH CAULFIELD
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — When I first began reporting on Hollywood and everything was new and interesting, my greatest fascination lay with Hollywoodese, that mixed-up mélange of techno-Yiddish blurbology spoken by anybody who finds themselves a true industry "insider."

I savored every new piece of slang, from "multi-pic-pac" (multiple picture deal) to "turnaround" (when a project's progress at a studio is suddenly thrown into reverse).

I schmoozed, I schlepped, I did lunch (one "takes" meeting, "does lunch"). I would have had my girl call their girl, but they still haven't given me a girl. I studied that Hollywoodese touchstone — Variety — until I could speak like one of its heads.

"Well, Boss, I nixed the H'W'D' prem of the Aussie pic, Heard Col's prod preyed eye it and anked quik. Sounds like B.O. poison to me."

(I didn't go to the Australian movie because I heard Columbia's president of production walked out of the premiere. Must be a flop.) — "Yeah, yeah, I reveled in it — until there was nothing left to revel in — I'd heard it all. It hit me like a bad lead — the fun had evaporated from my job. Without new slang to fuel me, how was I ever going to listen to the same old lies from the same old sources? It took someone as prolific as "Miami Vice" or "Crime Story" producer Michael Mann to renew my lust for lingo. He did it in spaces the other day as we talked by phone. In the middle of detailing the changes in this year's "Vice," he let it drop: "Well, I got tired of looking at the same old pastels, so I decided when I deepened the chroma that I would..."

Deepened the chroma? Excuse me? — For a fleeting second I tried to persuade myself that he merely had undernourished "changed the format," but in my heart I knew better. It was a genuine, bona fide, almost-virtuoso tidbit of Hollywoodese.

Better yet, I thought I knew what he meant. I stopped him mid-sentence. "Um... Michael... you mean when you changed the color scheme?"

"Yeah, yeah, I deepened the chroma. We went from pastels and daylight to blue and lots of night-shooting."

I don't even remember what he said after that. I was a dog with a new bone. I chewed on it, I tossed it around, buried it and dug it up again. Hell, I even ran it up the flagpole to see if anybody saluted (and I hadn't used that phrase in years).

I fantasized about its use. — I could see a TV producer summoned before the network chief to talk about his struggling new series.

Network chief: "Say, babe, we've decided to uhnh, deepen the chroma on 'Bad Henry and the Heroin Bandits'."

Producer (whining): "Deepen the chroma? But it's already deep fuschia!"

Network chief: "Sorry, pal, we're deepening to black — you're cancelled."

I tried it out on a friend later that night when he asked if my steak was satisfactorily cooked.

"Actually, can you deepen the chroma just a little...?"

When he finally understood, he offered to re-chroma an area around my eye instead.

I can't wait to tell the boss that he won't have that story he wants so badly for yet another week.

"Bossman, it's that damn chroma."

A colleague chuckled when I relayed the lingo and noted that Mann "uses 'palette' a lot too when he talks about the colors."

That left me pondering whether Michael had gotten a deeper chroma'd palette this season.

For all his chroma, Mann didn't want to talk about the new fashion colors, per se. "Nah, that's something you press guys jumped on last season. I'm not talking about the colors anymore, I'm more interested in plots."

And chroma. Guess I wouldn't get a chance to tell him how much I HATE the ugly shirts he's putting on the van guys this year.

Couldn't he find deeper chroma'd Hawaiian shirts? (No wonder one of them has asked to be killed later this season.)

Despite your taste in shirts, I owe you one Mike. You've restored me to my old healthy, jaded self once more. I now know that Hollywood lingo isn't a finite art form. It just hibernates occasionally.

So, say "pal" to Don for me and listen, may your shows be high in ratings this season, and up to their credits in chroma.

On the cover

As satire of prime-time soaps, 'Fresno' walks a very thin line

BY ANDY NOBLE

Admittedly, the real prime-time soap, verge-pretty close to satire, for sheer silliness, who can top the Bobby Ewing bad-dream steam perpetrated on "Dallas" viewers?

When CBS airs "Fresno" this week, a five-part miniseries that satirizes that venerable dinosaur of the prime-time soap, it will have to walk a very fine line.

Even the CBS press release sets the tongue-in-cheek tone of the miniseries. "Fresno" rips apart the surface gloss and glitter of the nation's 44th largest city to reveal the unquenched passions and frenzied hearts of wealthy raisins (y-corns) as they wage a life-and-death battle for money, power and control of the vital raisin cartel."

"Fresno" centers on the conflict involving the Kensingtons, an old, but prosperous financially imperiled raisin-producing family, and its arch rival, Cane Enterprises. The Kensingtons develop a new raisin product that can restore their faded glory, but Cane fights back.

"Fresno's" scheduling also represents a departure for the network miniseries. It airs — just like a prime-time serial — over five nights — Sunday, Nov. 16; Monday, Nov. 17; Tuesday, Nov. 18; Wednesday, Nov. 19; and Friday, Nov. 21. Each segment is one hour, except for the two-hour Sunday episode.

"Fresno" marks the return to comedy of Carol Burnett. She plays the title character, Charlotte Kensington, the widowed matriarch of the Kensington clan. But don't expect a saber-toothed vixen like Alexis GARRINGTON.

"Charlotte is something of a ditsy," says Burnett. "She's not really evil. It's just that she never thinks much about anything but money and clothes and jewelry. She affects kind of a Southern accent and thinks of herself as a Southern belle, even though she was born in the North."

And what would a prime-time soap be without a scheming son? In "Fresno," Charles Grodin ("The Heartbreak Kid," "The Lonely Guy") takes care of that archetype in his role as Charlotte's scheming son, Cane.

"He's evil, everything he does is terrible," says Grodin. "But he sees

DABNEY COLEMAN
The anti-hero rival himself as a heroic figure. He decides the most important thing is to save his raisin business and once he makes that decision, everything he does is justified in his own eyes, no matter how rotten it is."

"Fresno" was created by Barry Kemp, who developed the CBS sitcom "Newhart." The cast also includes Gregory Harrison as Torch, the "mysterious, shirtless stranger" who has designs on the Kensington women; Teri Garr as Talon Kensington, Cane's voluptuous wife; and Dabney Coleman as Tyler Cane, a businessman, and the Kensington's arch rival.

Joel's bad period ended quickly

BY ROBIN ADAMS STODAN

Q I heard a shocking story that Billy Joel was committed to a mental hospital when he was 21. How could a terrible rumor like that get started or could there possibly be any truth to it? — J.D.

A There is a grain of truth: Around the time Billy was 21, a love affair he was having collapsed and his career hit a dead end. As a result of all this emotional stress, he fell suicidal. Knowing this was a dangerous state of mind, he checked himself into a hospital for help, but the period of depression passed quickly and he was released.

Q Can you tell us whatever happened to that wonderful Greek ac-

Athens—the cultural center of Europe, she travels all over the world.

Q. We're fans of Bruce Boxleitner, handsome star of the TV adventure series, "Scarecrow and Mrs. King." Having read that he's been tapped as spokesman and model for a new line of men's cosmetics, I wonder, has he had time to get to use them all yet? — E.H.

A. Of course he has. Boxleitner, who's 36, first became acquainted with the products last summer, selecting them because of a skin dryness resulting from TV makeup plus life on his ranch, plus hot camera lights. Appearing at a company meeting, Bruce kidded, "If I'm a little late this morning, it's only because I was trying on each of your products — after I convinced my wife to let me have first crack at the mirror for this early meeting!"

Q. Hayley Mills has always been a great favorite of mine, but she seems to have vanished. Any idea what the story is? — C.F.

A. Hayley, now 40, lives in London with Maxwell Caulfield's younger brother, Marcus. (Maxwell happens to be married to her sister Juliet.) Hayley has two sons aged 13 and 9 from her marriage to her former husband, the director Roy Boulting. For several years she has devoted herself to raising her sons, but now is anxious to resume her career. So we may be seeing Hayley once again.

Q. What's this about fashion designer Calvin Klein getting married? — V.F.

A. Klein, 43, married his longtime girlfriend and design assistant, 29-year-old Kelly Rector, on Sept. 26, in Rome, Italy. It's her first marriage. Klein was married at age 20 — "a child," he says — and was subsequently divorced. He appears delighted with his new bride, who says of the designer: "Calvin is a regular man, fun to be with."

GOLDFINGERS: A super-famous macho movie star has privately become known from N.Y. to L.A. as the Plimp, caused by his increased proclivity for sporting gold rings, chains, tie clasps, cuff links — you name it; especially if the designs are ostentatious. The actor's taste is governed strictly by vulgarity. Recently, he's been taking his wife along on his jewelry-hunting expeditions in the fancier shops, and she, too, is getting hooked on the good-as-gold syndrome, to the amusement

Q. Watching a Susan Hayward film festival on the TV late show, I was mesmerized by Susan's beauty, along with her throaty speaking voice. Was her delivery always this sexy, or was this a result of special voice training? — F.A.

A. Both. When first signed as a starlet at Warners, Susan (real name Edythe Marrener) was put through the usual grooming, with voice, pitch and proper projection the prime requirements. Interestingly, a classmate of Susan's at Brooklyn's Erasmus High recalls that the red-haired actress, though very attractive, was invariably cast in school plays in boys' roles, only because of her low register, which was ideally suited to portraying male leads.

Q. We found "Nice Guys Sleep Alone — A Guide to Dating in the Difficult Eighties," a real hoot, and couldn't get enough of Bruce Feirstein's fast and funny observations. Can you find out for me why he sidesteps referring to names of real people? — P.K.

A. Feirstein tells me that original plans called for a chapter full of celebrity nice guys, but this idea was scrapped. Interestingly, a reference to Gary Hart originally went, "Gary Hart is neither a nice guy nor a real man. In fact, Gary Hart is Jimmy Carter in cowboy boots!" I've learned that this, too, was cut from the book at the mutual agreement of the author and his editors.

Q. Listening to the terrible stories coming from South Africa, it seems there should be a film of the lives of

MELINA MERCOURI
Now a Greek official

Nelson and Winnie Mandela. Is there such a project in the works? — H.C.

A. Right now it looks like there's a battle brewing between the Cosbys and the Belafontes over rights to rush to the screen first with authorized stories on the Mandelas. Each claims rights to do the South African nationalist leaders' story — with Camille Cosby producing one for the big screen and Belafonte setting his for a mini-series with Sidney Poitier portraying Nelson.

HAPPY ENDING: The marriage was rocky, but the Dean and Jeanne Martin divorce was a success. The couple have stayed friends, and have been dating quietly for the last four years. Rumors have it that Dino is tired of dating young girls and would like to remarry Jeanne. If the marriage does take place later this year it will be an "only in Hollywood" affair as Dean and Jeanne's daughter would like to make it a double wedding when she marries Carl Wilson of the Beach Boys.

Q. Why does Dee Wallace Stone's seemingly simple name intrigue me? Can you find out what the Dee stands for, and while you're at it, why she added the Stone to her already familiar name of plain Dee Wallace (with which she was known in such earlier movie hits and "10" and "E.T.")? — G.E.

A. Dee's first name is for Deanna Durbin, who was a favorite movie musical star of her mother. As for Stone, Dee tells me, "My husband, Christopher Stone, the actor, was the catalyst. I gave him Dee Wallace Stone as a Christmas present about three years ago. It was a very thoughtful, deeply personal decision on my part and I was able to finally Memories of a vampire's bride recall '60s soap 'Dark Shadows'

By JOHN N. GOUDAS

The memoirs of a vampire's bride — a slice of soap history — is selling like hotcakes. Author Kathryn Leigh Scott is the reason why. Actress Scott, seen a few weeks ago as the General's mistress on the CBS-TV movie "The Last Days of Patton," has been on the stands for just two weeks, yet the book is going into its second printing.

Because the lady, once known as Joëlle DuPres on the "Dark Shadows" soap is everywhere, stirring up memories of the late sixties serial.

Scott travels from Texas to Pennsylvania, then back to Chicago; up to Minneapolis for talk show appearances and book store dates, where "Dark Shadows" still airs in syndication on various stations.

Thanks to Kathryn Leigh Scott, the soap scrapbook becomes a premium for a PBS fund raising drive. It is also newsworthy, at least for "Entertainment Tonight" and Hour magazine, who did segments on it.

Such exposure beats $15,000 ads in the New York Times Book Review. And then, don't overlook the soap fan clubs. Some are still going. One fan club president is a kindergarten teacher, Marcie Robln, of Temple City, Calif. who fills out book orders in her garage. Who needs a major publishing house when you have such resources.

Another fan club newsletter on the boom pulled in numerous orders, two to one, in favor of hard cover, putting Pomegranate Press in business at 3336 Bennett Drive, L.A., a gazebo in the back of the Scott-Hollywood Hills home. It seems some soap fans do have time for reading.

And then there's Vincent Price and science fiction writer Ray Bradbury, easy touches for book-plugs, recalling the old days of the "Dark Shadows" fanzine. "The soap that broke the mold."

It all came out of the head of ABC producer Dan Curtis, who got a four and a half year run out of it. MGM followed with two movies "House of Dark Shadows" and "Night of Dark Shadows." Producer Curtis went on to prime time mystery hours before his dull and heavyhanded miniseries "Winds of War."

Scott was there at the beginning.

dummy. No matter how hard, they tried the camera wasn't fooled. I stood in the dummy. Thus Barnabus had a living bride! Later, I played all the historical roles from Rachel of Frummond to Lady Kitty Hampshire.

CHANNEL CHATTER:

One of the most popular actors ever to appear on "One Life to Live," Robert Woods, who portrayed Bo Buchanan for six years, has joined the cast of "Days of Our Lives." Woods, who was not only a hit with the fans but was also the recipient of a daytime Emmy on "One Life," left the show to pursue work in Hollywood. This handsome leading man wanted to spend more time with his actress-wife Loyita who was based on the west coast. His new role on "Days of Our Lives" is architect Paul Stewart. Making his debut earlier this month, Woods as Stewart has been brought to town to design the new wing at the Salem hospital, coming to town with wife Barbara (played by Elizabeth Burr).

A large contingent from "All My Children" is scheduled to shoot some special on-location footage at a prison which will air during the week of Thanksgiving. Former TV Hostess Virginia Graham will be on hand joining Erica (Susan Lucci) and Jeremy (Jean LeClerc) and other cast members including Phoebe (Ruth Warrick). Erica will be giving a press conference at the prison prior to her wedding to Jeremy who is incarcerated. Erica also has plans to use the wedding as a diversion to help Jeremy escape. Stay tuned.

PLOT PORTENTS:

Peter is rushed to the hospital in critical condition after being shot by Brittany on "Another World." Matthew runs away from home. Donna marries Michael but her medical condition worsens.

Frank confronts an angry Harlan on "Ryan's Hope." Erik comes to terms with Devlin. John feels Lizzie is pressuring him. Maggie and Della each set traps for each other.

Ross thinks Natalie is stealing company secrets on "All My Children." Tad has an instant attraction to Leslie, a sexy new secretary. Erica plans to marry Jeremy in jail.

Cord and Tina frolic on the island unaware that Col. Dimitri is holding an auction on world defense secrets to a bunch of terrorists on "One Life to Live." Clint hires a guard to keep an eye on Vicki which angers her. Dorian worries about Jonathan who is masquerading as a terrorist to stop Col. Dimitri.

In Ireland, Quinn continues to date Kate unaware that she is about to marry Malcolm on "Search for Tomorrow." Patty and Hogan reaffirm their love and begin searching for Quinn. In Henderson, Hobbs makes a confession.

achieve it only after much personal growth—as an expression of my love. It's really official — I'm now listed that way on my Screen Actor's Guild card, and I enjoy everything it conveys." For the record, the actress was billed as Dee Wallace Stone in the movies "Cujo," "Secret Admirer" and "Critters," plus TV appearances such as "Terror in the Sky" as well as "White Dragon," also featuring her husband.

new Broadway revue, "Oh Coward," intimates that he was notable not only for his many creative abilities, but also for his great haughtiness. It suggested that he could be impatient and condescending with those he considered lesser mortals. Can you please verify this? — W.N.

A. Sorry, but in fairness, I can't. My response is based on a vignette I witnessed some time back at one of New York's toniest hotel dining rooms, at which Sir Noel had arrived to claim a dinner reservation. The man at the desk incredibly failed to recognize the great playwright/composer/actor and, horror of horrors, asked him to spell his name. Sir Noel, the essence of composure, responded quicly, evenly and with absolutely no display of star temperament.

Q. A friend tells me Chris Evert's marriage to John Lloyd is on the rocks again. Was tennis competition the reason the first time and is that the trouble again? — T.K.

Gossip

A. First of all, the couple has denied that the marriage is over and they've just built a house in Boca Raton, Florida. Tennis might have been the basic cause of the breakup last time. John sank from his ranking of 25th in the world down to No. 331. (He has since climbed back up.) Christie started to look at other men and had a love affair with 42-year-old Adam Faith, the ex-rock star. But when Faith refused to leave his wife, the affair ended. Chris and John later reconciled, with Chris explaining that she was disenchanted with the dating scene and realized how important her marriage was.

Q. How has movie director Francis Coppola coped with the recent loss of his son? — B.P.

A. Coppola's son, 23-year-old Gian-Carlo, was killed in a boating accident last May while the director was making his latest flick, "Gardens of Stone." After finishing production, the badly-shaken Coppola immediately took off for Paris, presumably for some r & r and solitude. He now tells me he "feels blah." The loss of his son, who had been working for his father as a film technician, has sent Coppola into the family library. He's reading books about history and philosophy — "trying to understand what's been going on."

Q. Are ideal couple Mary Ann Mobley, the former Miss America, and her husband, TV personality Gary Collins, as compatible in everyday situations as their publicity image would convey? — R.L.

A. Certainly not on the basis of a recent taping session at a Manhattan production studio, where the pair came to do a public service message. Gary seemed irritated and bored, ready to bolt within minutes; while Mary Ann earnestly tried to get the whole thing together as professionally as she knew how. They clashed frequently on the delivery of her lines, with tension visibly mounting with each successive difference of opinion. Observers tell me that Gary insisted on directing his wife from a control booth, and his caustic comments were not appreciated by Mary Ann, who nevertheless attempted to make light of them for appearance's sake.

Search ends as NBC cuts oldest drama

NEW YORK (AP) — There is no tomorrow for "Search for Tomorrow" after the last episode of the series' longest-running soap opera next month, more than 40 years since its debut.

NBC announced last week it was cancelling the daytime drama, which has suffered from low ratings despite a revamping last spring.

The serial made its premiere on CBS on Sept. 3, 1951. It moved to NBC in 1982.

At the beginning of the series, executive producer David Lowell said "Search for Tomorrow" would get away from "melodramatic story lines represented on other soaps and do more romantic things."

Last month, Lawrence, who has several episodes were taped, began airing last week.

Lawrence said the serial is under the shadow of the past 40 years, so the announcement was a particular surprise.

NBC extends its winning streak; CBS suffers flop of 'Monte Carlo'

By ROBERT BARR
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Joan Collins' singing debut sounded a costly four note for CBS as her miniseries "Monte Carlo" opened far down in the ratings last week.

With former "Charlie's Angels" glamourpuss Jaclyn Smith also low on the list, the real pin-up in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings was that massive hunk of beefcake, Raymond Burr, who hit the top 10 with a Perry Mason movie on NBC.

Burr, reprising his role as the defense lawyer in "Shooting Star" on NBC, was in seventh place while Miss Collins, portraying a Russian chanteuse and secret agent, finished 48th.

"Monte Carlo," which reportedly cost $9 million, not only lost to Mason, but to ABC's movie "Splash," which ranked 29th in the list released Tuesday. "Rage of Angels," starring Miss Smith, ranked 34th.

Ratings points are the percent of 87.4 million TV households; shares are the percent of those households with sets on.

to seven and led the nightly news ratings by its biggest margin since 1975, when John Chancellor was the anchor.

"NBC Nightly News" with Tom Brokaw had an average rating of 12.7 last week. CBS was second at 11.9 and ABC was third at 10.9. It was NBC's biggest margin since December 1975, said Gerald Jaffe, the network's vice president for research projects.

That reflected the order of finish in the prime-time ratings, with NBC averaging 19.2 for the week, CBS, which scrubbed its prime-time schedule on Tuesday for three hours of elections coverage, was a distant second at 15.0 and ABC ran third at 13.9.

For the seven weeks of this season, NBC's average is 19.1, CBS' 15.9 and ABC's 14.4.

"Shooting Star," in which Barbara Hale returned as Della Street, had a rating of 23.6, compared to 14.6 for Miss Collins, who stars as the witchy Alexis Carrington on ABC's "Dynasty."

"It was a disappointment," said David Poltrack, CBS vice president for research. "I guess the only thing that makes it a little less of a surprise is that it was against the very strong 'Perry Mason' show.

"My own feeling," Poltrack added, "is that what I call a 'thinking person's' movie" as opposed to sheer escapism tends to be in vogue — not only in movies, but to a certain extent that's behind the great popularity of 'Murder She Wrote.'"

One further insult to "Dynasty" was its second-place finish behind CBS' "Magnum, P.I." on Wednesday night, the first time the soap opera had been beaten by a regular series, CBS said.

"Rage of Angels," with a so-so 16.5 rating, added to the suspicion that romantic fantasy isn't selling this year.

"It may be that newspaper reviews have an effect," said Curt Block, NBC Entertainment's top spokesman in New York. Previews of both miniseries were generally negative.

NBC had the top five programs, led as usual by "The Cooby Show," which tied its best rating this season at 38.8 and a 53 percent share of the audience, and "Family Ties," which had its best rating ever at 35.2 with a 50 share.

Each rating point represents one percent of the nation's 87.4 million homes with television; the share is the portion of sets in use during the time period.

The rest of the top 10 included "Cheers," "Golden Girls" and "Night Court" on NBC, "Murder, She Wrote" on CBS, NBC's Mason movie, "60 Minutes" on CBS, and a three-way tie for ninth including NBC's "Amen," CBS' "Dallas" and ABC's "Monday Night Football."

NBC's streak this season is the longest since ABC reeled off nine in a row in 1977, according to Jaffe. The standard, however, was set by CBS, which won every week of the season in 1963-64.

7 p.m. (KIVI) Professional Football San Francisco 49ers (6-3-1) at the Washington Redskins (8-2).

The doctors said that 49ers QB Joe Montana was crazy to return to the lineup last week against St. Louis, just 55 days after his back surgery. He proved the naysayers wrong by having an excellent day, throwing for 270 yards and three long TDs.

Montana's return to the field could make tonight's 49ers-Redskins game a real shootout. Both teams are ranked near the top of the NFC's offenses, both have strong receiving corps and both are stuck in heated races for divisional crowns. One clear point in Washington's favor is its rushing tandem of Kelvin Bryant and George Rogers. Rogers leads the NFC in touchdowns with 13, and is ranked fourth among the conference's rushers.

Comic Lily Tomlin aids PBS' 'Nova' in a search for extraterrestrial life

By ROBERT BARR
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The search for intelligent life beyond the Earth fires some people with grand hopes. Finding it, says astronomer Carl Sagan, would be "a matter of the most supreme importance."

But Lily Tomlin's work on NOVA, in a segment called "Is Anybody Out There?" scheduled for Nov. 18, raises some melancholy thoughts. Tomlin appears first as Trudy the bag lady, who wanders around New York, listening to intergalactic messages through an umbrella she wears on her head.

"The way I see it, we can't be the only things going, can we?" says the star, character of Tomlin's hit Broadway show, "The Search for Signs of Intelligent Life in the Universe."

And if we're not the only things going, are there other advanced civilizations which permit their most dazed and vulnerable members to camp out on city streets, foraging from garbage cans? If there are, do we need to get in touch?

That, of course, is not what this pleasant NOVA segment is about, and the scientists and people on the street who appear here are uniformly optimistic about the implications of finding extraterrestrial intelligence.

If nothing else, says astronomer Frank Drake, it will be a sign that a civilization can survive its technology — that knowing how to make nuclear weapons, for instance, doesn't inevitably mean you have to use them.

The arguments about whether there may be billions and billions of occupied planets or none at all, and about the value of seeking them out, are familiar fare. The search is now in the hard-slogging phase of systematically tuning in the heavens, and might have made for hard viewing save for Tomlin's clowning.

NOVA's focus is the Mega-channel Extra-Terrestrial Assay, or META for short, which started searching for radio signals in September 1985. META, a project of Harvard University and the Smithsonian Institulion, benefited from a $100,000 grant from Steven Spielberg, director of "E.T." and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

Tomlin appears again as Ernestine, the snotty, snorting telephone operator, to explain some of the difficulties of the search.

As the proprietor of a telephone answering service, Ernestine mangles an exchange between a man and his rich uncle. Unless the nephew is there to meet him, the uncle declares, he's out of the will.

Unfortunately, all Ernestine has bothered to jot down is that the uncle is coming sometime next month. He might be coming by train, or by air, Ernestine says.

"Yes, I suppose it is a little intelligence-test-for-you," she tells the exasperated nephew.

In some ways, Tomlin says, those searching deep space for signs of intelligence are in even worse shape than the poor nephew. "We don't even know if there is a rich uncle, let alone when or where he wants to meet," she says.

Narrowing the search to radio

LILY TOMLIN
E.T. gets a bad line

doesn't help much, the program notes. Although META is capable of monitoring 8.4 million radio channels as it makes an eight-month sweep of the northern sky, there are something like 100 billion channels to look in.

Again, Ernestine illustrates some of the practicalities.

"Oh those nudniks," she says, eavesdropping now on a radio telescope. "They think there's so great with their xeta waves. Too bad no one else has discovered them yet."

To another radio transmitter she barks, "Try 1420 megahertz and keep doing it."

In fact, 1420 mhz is a favorite place to search because that is the natural radio frequency of hydrogen. If someone is deliberately trying to send a signal, it seems like an obvious choice.

Otherwise, the clue might be anywhere in the radio band.

It's assumed that any civilization found by radio will be more advanced than our own, which has had radio for only a century or so. So, according to Phillip Morrison, a physicist at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the search for extraterrestrial life is a search for the future — a sort of archaeology in reverse, if you will.

"When you've got the spade, and you know the future is there," he tells a college audience, "it seems very wrong not to dig."

In the great swirl of the cosmos, is there another Shirley MacLaine?

By JOANNE OSTROW
The Denver Post

NEW YORK — Introducing the first metaphysical miniseries, a gamble for ABC and validation for anyone who believes in past lives, spirits, extrasensory perception or space aliens.

Whoever thought a message from benevolent extraterrestrials would turn up on network prime time, brought to us by a redhead possessed of expanded awareness and high-kicks.

In short, says Shirley MacLaine, "There are planets more advanced than this own."

In her five-hour autobiographical star search, "Out on a Limb," MacLaine's commercial karma has been repackaged from best-selling book of the same name to network two-parter. It is scheduled to air Jan. 18 and 19.

"The question of is there Satan, is there Hell, indeed is there Evil, is what I'm trying to decide," she said at a press conference here recently. She knows that debunkers will dismiss her spiritual adventuring

- SHIRLEY MACLAINE.
She's on a star search as mumbo jumbo, but she hopes there will be enough astral believers to even the cosmic score.

She is accustomed to people she calls "left-brain skeptics with bottom-line cynicism." Yet she does not hold back on the new-age jargon, even in a meeting with 80 deeply cynical reporters from around the United States.

Her dance training left her "well-grounded" for this journey as a "physical spiritualist," she says. Only her hands betray her 52 years: She does not get upset anymore because "everything that happens to me happens as it should."

These are the voyages of the Starship MacLaine . . . out on a limb around the bend. She knows she is taking a chance by going public with her spiritual quest.

In the film, she is a frequent elf in search of otherworldly wisdom between performances and romantic trysts. In London, Paris, New York, Stockholm, Hollywood, Hong Kong and Hawaii she encounters karma and agents, too. Ultimately, in the mountains of Peru at Machu Picchu the seeker is convinced that cosmic enlightenment and out-of-pajama experiences are no joke. The account is not bad, either.

Some viewers will scoff, but there are intriguing insights for those inclined. But even those who want believe may balk at spiritually delivered, not by a wise old guru, commercial-free, but by Warren Beatty's sister Shirley.

Buy it or not, karma does not come cheap.

"Spiritual enlightenment is getting too expensive," MacLaine told critics. Mediums get $50 an hour, she said, which is a bargain compared to shrinks. If only flight insurance covered the astral plane.

For the film, the medium's conversation with spiritual entities was shot with four cameras. Stan Margulies said, producer of "Roots," "The Thorn Birds" and now MacLaine's movie. They supposedly inhabit the medium's body and speak through him. They have no screen presence, but their accents are catchy.

"We had long rehearsals with the entities," MacLaine said. "We insisted that they keep to the script. The entities knew their parts much better than Kevin Ryerson (the medium) knew his."

MacLaine said the biggest ham was a spirit named Thomas Viersen, who comes from the Shakespearean era. "He went through some antics with acting himself," MacLaine said, "so he was very glad to act in a prime-time American television miniseries."

If they could see her now! — as MacLaine used to sing. But of course they can, from the star cluster of Pleiades or from below the ocean in Atlantis. She is in touch.

Reincarnation, karma, cosmic justice, zen and the art of the chorus line, it is all included. "Intelligence has become my new erogenous zone," she narrates on camera. "The kingdom of Heaven is within." She shouts into the ocean that she loves herself, that she is God.

Suppose people think she is a nut case?

"The art of sharing one's experience is what makes the difference.

between the accusation of nuttiness or not," MacLaine said. "It falls into the category of this is my experience, this is my reality."

She was dignified under questioning by dubious reporters. She answered coolly, ultimately sure of her errand. But why her? Why would E.T.s send a message through a show-biz personality like Shirley MacLaine rather than a politician, a member of the clergy, a bearded college professor.

"Maybe I heard it clearer," she said. "I don't think I'm the only one."

Luckily for the plot structure, MacLaine's revelations came into focus because of a love interest. Luckily for viewers, he is played by Charles Dance of "The Jewel in the Crown."

He is a kind-hearted socialist but his spirit is in the wrong place; so the affair flops. Likewise, the role is eminently forgettable. Come January, nobody will be talking about Dance's cosmic consciousness.

But they will wonder about claims by MacLaine and producer Margulies about their past-life connection. An entity told them they had worked together creatively before, during an ancient Egyptian period under the reign of the Pharaoh Akhenaton.

Remember, we're talking quantum physics here. The physics of the soul. You are the universe, the redhead says.

If an extraterrestrial asks, you heard it from Shirley MacLaine.
