Court to re-examine '42 detention

By RICHARD CARELLI
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, 42 years after it condoned the government's mass detention of Japanese-Americans in World War II prison camps, said Monday it will re-examine that episode in American history.

zens and resident aliens from their homes and placing them in the camps.

Japanese-Americans said they were disappointed, but not surprised, by the court's action.

"I'd have to say that I'm disappointed, but I certainly haven't given up," said Bill Hohri, chairman of the National Council for Japanese-American redress. "One learns to be patient with the court system."

Hohri said he expected the government's petition to be granted and he said his group is prepared to continue the legal battle.

"We will respond very vigorously to the government's arguments before the court," he said. "Other than that, we must simply wait."

A federal appeals court said the government must defend itself at trial against claims for compensation of property losses suffered by those interned. The losses are estimated in the billions of dollars.

In other matters Monday, the court:

• Limited the rights of employees to win paid leaves of absence for special religious holidays by ruling 8-1 in a Connecticut case that employers need not accommodate all of a worker's religious demands.

The court said granting an employee unpaid leave for religious holidays generally is adequate unless paid leave is provided for all purposes except absences for religious observances.

• Refused to allow the display of an illuminated cross above the St. Charles, Ill., firehouse during the Christmas season. The justices let stand a ruling that the display is an impermissible government endorsement of Christianity.

• Agreed in a Pennsylvania case to consider making it more difficult for women to win paternity lawsuits against the men they say fathered their children.

• Refused to block use of critical evidence in the New York City trial in progress of former U.S. Secretary of Labor Raymond Donovan and seven co-defendants accused of business fraud.

• Gave Kentucky communities, and perhaps others across the nation, broader power to ban nude and nearly nude dancing in bars and nightclubs that serve liquor. The court, by a 5-4 vote, ruled that Newport, Ky., officials may impose such a ban.

Arnetta Boyd, a Wirching Avenue resident, spoke against annexation plans at Monday's Twin Falls City Council meeting

Benefits not worth higher taxes, City Council told

Public says 'No' at annexation hearing

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council asked for public comment Monday on its proposed annexation of several parcels of land into the city.

The answer from the public was a resounding "no." No one spoke in favor of annexation at a public hearing Monday night, as a steady stream of county residents strode to the podium and opposed the idea.

Although they expressed it in different ways, most of those who testified said basically the same thing — the benefits of annexation weren't worth the increased taxes they would pay.

Jack Wright, owner of Kimberly Nurseries on Addison Avenue, characterized the testimony. He said his property taxes would increase $1,827 a year if annexed into the city.

"I can't see I would receive $2,000 worth of benefits," he told council members.

The City Council will accept more public comment on annexation at its Dec. 1 and Dec. 15 meetings. Council members will make a decision on Dec. 15.

Before the council heard the public comment and accepted several petitions opposing annexation, City Manager Tom Courtney explained to the audience why the city was considering expanding the city limits. A recent change in state tax laws allowed the city to realize additional revenue from increased growth, and assessments through annexation.

A homeowner with a $50,000 home would pay $224 more in city taxes if annexed, Courtney reported.

But the homeowner would receive the benefits of city residence, such as police and fire protection, parks and recreation programs, free library privileges, street maintenance and animal control. Sewer and water services were not considered in annexation because they were paid by user fees and not property taxes.

There also was a question of equity, because nearby county residents use the city's parks and streets, yet don't pay for them, Courtney said.

"The people who pay are the existing city residents," he said.

Annexing the parcels recommended by city staff would bring in an added revenue of $38,000 of which the city would pay about $32,000 to provide services to the new city property, he also said.

Jean Emerson, who opposed the annexation, said she couldn't believe the city would annex all the property under consideration for the $6,000 remaining after expenses.

Kim greets Mongolians, ends rumors

By EDWIN Q. WHITE
The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — North Korean President Kim Il Sung, said in some reports to have been slain in a shootout, greeted a Mongolian delegation at Pyongyang's airport Tuesday, North Korea's official media and an Asian diplomat said.

Reports from Pyongyang, the North Korean capital, that Kim welcomed the delegation led by Zhambyn Batmunkh dispelled rumors about the fate of the 74-year-old Kim and about a struggle for control of his communist country, of 19 million people.

An Asian diplomat in Pyongyang, contacted by telephone from Peking, told The Associated Press that he had seen Kim at the airport.

"The president was there and he is absolutely good health. There seems to be nothing correct about these reports... It is absolutely normal, there is nothing wrong, he is absolutely normal, he is in good health," said the diplomat, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Japan's Kyodo News Service reported from Peking at 6:31 p.m. MST Monday that Kim had "welcomed a Mongolian party delegation Tuesday on its arrival at Pyongyang airport." It quoted North Korea's official Korean-Central News Agency. The official Pyongyang radio, monitored in London, also reported that Kim had met the Mongolian delegation.

Pyongyang radio said, "The great leader of our party and people, comrade Kim Il Sung, went to Pyongyang airport and warmly greeted comrade Zhambyn Bat-munkh."

Radio Press, a Tokyo-based private monitoring service, quoted the official Chinese news agency Xinhua as saying Kim "appeared well and talked to those around him."

No Western reporters are known to be in North Korea, where Kim has built one of the world's most closed societies.

Radio Press quoted broadcasts as saying Kim was accompanied at the airport by Deputy Premier and Foreign Minister Kim Yong Nam and officials of the ruling Korean Workers Party.

It said 100,000 people lined roads leading from the airport to the city to welcome Batmunkh, who is communist Mongolia's head of state.

South Korea's Defense Ministry reported Sunday in Seoul that broadcasts from North Korean loudspeakers along the demilitarized zone that separates the two Koreas said Kim, leader of his country since it was created in 1948, had been killed in a shooting incident.

In Seoul, the capital of pro-West South Korea, the Defense Ministry reported that early Tuesday the loudspeakers on the demilitarized zone were saying North Korean Defense Minister O Jin U had seized power.

But in Peking, Kang So Yong, first secretary of the North Korean Embassy, said that was untrue. "He's the defense minister, nothing more. He's a member of the supreme presidium. Don't believe what the South Korean ministry says," she said.

There was no mention in any of the reports on the welcoming ceremony of O Jin U or Kim Jong Il.

Hawkins nominee for economic post

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Cecil D. Andrus will become Idaho's governor in January. But he said Monday he doesn't want to wait that long before starting on one of the major goals of his administration, economic development.

So he announced that Coeur d'Alene businessman James Hawkins, 50, will serve as his director of the Department of Commerce.

Andrus also announced he plans to ask the Idaho Legislature to immediately put more money into the state's economic development effort. Hawkins told a news conference the amount hasn't been settled yet, but will be between $400,000 and $500,000, which would more than double the current budget.

"Jim Hawkins has superb credentials that will enable him to immediately direct Idaho's economic development efforts," Andrus said.

"He really has done it all in business. He has started and managed his own business and done it very successfully. He has firsthand knowledge of the financial and marketing aspects of business. And, of particular importance to me, he is keenly aware of the importance of a quality educational system to our economic development efforts," Andrus said.

Andrus, in announcing the first three appointments of his new administration, held his news conference at a Boise manufacturing plant. The announcement was made at Santa Clara Plastics, and Andrus said the small, new company is an example of the kind of companies Idaho hopes to attract and foster.

President Robert Bilow, who was a Boise lawyer before opening the manufacturing company, said it makes equipment for the manufacturers of microchips and other computer components.

Andrus also announced that Larry Meierotto, who served as chief of his election campaign, will serve as his personal chief of staff. Marc Johnson, who served as press secretary during the campaign, will have a similar assignment when Andrus becomes governor in January.

"This is one of the key appointments this administration will make," said Andrus. "Jim Hawkins has superb ability in his own right."

Hawkins said his priority will be forming a strategic plan for economic development. But first, even before he goes on the state payroll, Hawkins will visit the economic development agencies of Massachusetts and Washington state, which Andrus said have been very successful in recent years.

"Idaho's Department of Commerce needs to be properly funded," said Hawkins. "Idaho ranks 50th in funding, and the 49th state has twice as much as we have," he said.

Hispanic groups fear job losses as result of new immigration law

By LARRY MARGASAK
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Hispanic groups fear that the new immigration law could lead to widespread firings of workers with Spanish accents, but a random survey finds little evidence that large numbers of Hispanics are losing their jobs.

"There are definitely rumblings in (Hispanic) neighborhoods" about job losses, said Amin Davd, president of a Hispanic rights group, Los Amigos of Orange County, Calif. "There's no question that employers are very edgy and concerned."

But "while reports of firings haven't gone beyond the rumor stage, David predicted employer sanctions will harm the Latino community "because skin color will determine the employability of an individual — regardless of the documents that person can provide.

"It will unfortunately be a knee-jerk reaction, and we're very worried about that," he said.

Even before President Reagan signed the bill to overhaul the immigration laws and make it a crime to hire an illegal alien — there were some indications in Houston and Dallas that employers might move to fire Latino workers who may fall into that category.

Trying to assess the extent of problem, The Associated Press surveyed selected cities. It found that while confusion reigns, job losses have been held in check as Hispanic organizations worked hard to explain the bill's employer sanctions provisions.

The immigration law has two cornerstones: amnesty for illegal aliens who arrived before 1982 and lived in this country continuously since then and penalties against employers who knowingly hire illegal alien.

For the next six months, the Immigration and Naturalization Service is to conduct a public information campaign on the sanctions program, during which no enforcement actions can be taken.

After the six months, a one-year period would follow in which first offenders would only receive warnings. But the full effect of the program would allow civil fines ranging up to $10,000 for illegal alien and a criminal penalty of six years in prison.

In related news Monday, Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said he plans to introduce an amendment to the recently passed immigration bill calling for creation of a telephone system to verify the validity of new "tamperproof" Social Security cards.

Gramm said the system would serve as an insurance policy for employers.

"As of now we really have no effective means to try to help

No plans to provide more arms

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan has no plans to provide more arms to the Contras in Nicaragua, a senior administration official said Monday.

Bundy gains execution stay

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A federal appellate panel in Atlanta on Tuesday halted the execution of suspected mass slayer Theodore Bundy less than seven hours before he was to die for the murder of a 12-year-old girl.

A three-judge panel of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said there was insufficient time before Bundy's scheduled 7 a.m. electrocution to consider his attorney's arguments, and that "a stay of execution is mandated."

The ruling came less than three hours after U.S. District Judge George Sharp in Orlando refused to halt the execution, and after the Florida Supreme Court unanimously rejected Bundy's last-ditch appeal.

Sharp, who issued his 19-page order after almost seven hours of consideration, wrote that Bundy "failed to make a substantial showing of a denial of a federal right" in claiming that he was mentally incompetent to stand trial and act as his own attorney in the 1980 trial.

"The bottom line was that he denied all the claims and petitions," District Court spokesman Al Donahue said.

Bundy's attorney, James Coleman, declined to comment on Sharp's decision.

The appeal had gone to the state high court after Circuit Judge Wallace Jopling, who presided over Bundy's original trial, refused Monday for the second time in less than a week to halt the execution, which is set for 7 a.m. Tuesday at Florida State Prison near Starke.

The death warrant, signed by Gov. Bob Graham, was the first issued in the 12-year-old's case, and no inmate in Florida has been executed on a first warrant since the state resumed capital punishment in the 1970s.

"We could take up a collection and give you that much," said Emerson.

Emerson, who resides in the annexation-targeted Jonathan Heights Subdivision, said her family moved to the area years ago to be in the country.

"I don't think we need any of your services," he commented.

Mike Cowan, who also resides in Jonathan Heights, said, "I don't relish the thought of paying more taxes."

Several older residents also said the additional taxes from annexation would hurt because they live on fixed incomes.

Kent Darrington, a Farmstead Subdivision resident, said of annexation, "The only thing I see as any advantage is a library card."

Linda Wormshaker, a resident of the Carter Subdivision, said she fears further development will follow annexation. The result will be more traffic to threaten the several children of the 20 homeowners in the development. The neighborhood, she added, gets along fine without the city.

"Let the city just leave us alone out there," Wormshaker said.

After the meeting, her husband

CJJ said he would return to the next meeting to protest the annexation.

"We're going to be there in force," he said.

Other parcels under consideration for annexation are the Candrigde and Washington Park subdivisions; Keagans Key; Twin Falls Labor Center; Bill Workman Ford; Longview Fiber Co.; and several parcels in the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce Industrial Park.

City staff members said they had recommended annexing several parcels for administrative reasons, such as adding to the city islands of county property completely surrounded by the city.

Camps

New Orleans whether a federal trial court may limit licenses to only those lawyers living or maintaining an office within the state where the court is located.

The internment case has its roots in the wake of the Japan war attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941. The federal government forcibly removed from their homes citizens and resident aliens living in California and parts of Arizona, Oregon and Washington.

Some spent as long as four years in the camps. One of them was the Hunt camp, located in the eastern part of Jerome County.

Such action was authorized by President Franklin D. Roosevelt after the loyalty of Japanese-Americans was questioned.

The Roosevelt administration decided to end the internment program in late 1944 but the Supreme Court earlier that year had upheld the program, ruling it was a constitutionally acceptable military necessity.

Government documents discovered since 1980, however, indicate there was, in fact, no military necessity and that government lawyers knew as much when offering that justification to the Supreme Court.

In 1983, 19 people — prison camp survivors and descendants of those interned — sued the government. The suit was thrown out by a federal judge but partially reinstated by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here last January.

The appeals court dismissed claims seeking monetary damages for alleged constitutional violations and seeking to have the government admit it fraudulently declared the internment a "military necessity."

The appeals court said the government may have to pay "just compensation" for property losses suffered by those imprisoned who did not receive benefits under the 1948 law, but is immune from being sued for alleged violations of constitutional rights.

Both sides appealed to the Supreme Court, but the justices took no action in the appeal filed on behalf of the Japanese-Americans.

Reagan administration lawyers said the lawsuit is "plainly without merit," was filed too late and was filed in the wrong court.

Congress in this year considered but did not enact a bill that would establish a $1.2 billion fund to pay $20,000 each to the 65,000 internment camp prisoners still living.

Rep. Robert Matsui, the California Democrat who helped sponsor the legislation, said of Monday's court action, "I'm disappointed because a well-established rule in the law is that individuals can have recourse in the courts if the government seizes property without due process."

But Matsui added he is hopeful the court will agree to "consider the question of violations of constitutional rights."

Arabic. The United States supplies arms to all of these countries.

Speakers said, however, that supplying any additional arms to Iran clearly awaits more positive developments," which he said included an end to the Iran-Iraq war, a halt of support to terrorist activities and release of U.S. hostages held by groups believed to have ties to Iran.

Reagan's disavowal of any intention to sell arms to Iran came on the heels of Secretary of State George P. Shultz's blunt criticism of a highly secret 18-month White House effort to open contacts with Tehran and to send shipments as a demonstration of American good faith. Shultz, appearing Sunday on CBS's Face the Nation, said that providing arms to Iran to send this signal was "debatable" and indicated unhappiness with the White House.

employers who are trying to comply with the law and not hire illegal aliens," Gramm said at a news conference.

The immigration law only applies to new hires, not those working before the bill became law. Some workers may have been victimized by employers' early confusion on this point.

Salvador Nelson, 22, born in El Salvador and living in Dallas, appears to be one of the unlucky ones.

He was fired from his construction job because he didn't have the proper documents.

"With this new law, they told us we couldn't work here and that was the reason. They left me without money, without food," he said.

In a different way, the law also has caught up with Rene Martinez of Dallas, an 18-year-old who fled El Salvador in 1983 with his 16-year-old brother and his mother, a maid.

Martinez has been unable to find a job in Dallas because he can't produce a birth certificate showing he was born in the United States, or a Social Security card.

"I feel bad because I'm not working and because I had the idea of not having my mother work," he said.

"You can't make ends meet."

At Ecumenical Immigration Services in New Orleans, attorney Cathy Lampard said, "We have not yet had anyone say, 'I applied for a job and I look Hispanic and I was simply turned away. I think that's acceptable, though.'"

Martinez said a worker reported the staff at his hotel was told to bring in "green" (legal residency) cards or be fired.

However, a personnel official at the hotel denied the report.

Rubio, head of the ecumenical agency, said about a dozen people said they were fired because they didn't carry green cards or working papers.

"We tried to tell our clients at least that they still have time, but they said, 'Our employers, they don't believe so. I told one client to have his employer explain the law. But they don't call. They don't like to bother.'"

Even without a firm indication of the job impact, Bronx City Councilman Fernando Ferrer said in New York the law has had a "chilling effect" on hiring anyone with a foreign name or appearance.

"You see it in the coffee shops, you see it everywhere in this city," he said.

Hawkins was owner, president and chief executive officer of Statewide Auto Supply before selling the chain of stores to Lucky Stores, Inc., in 1982, which now operates them as Checker Auto Parts.

He has been director for a number of companies and organizations, including the University of Idaho Foundation, the College of Business and Economics at the Moscow school, the St. Alphonsus Hospital Foundation and the Idaho Council on Economic Education.

He is chairman of the Education Coalition for Idaho, Inc.

Andrus also said:

- He will make most appointments to other state departments later, probably announcing most between Thanksgiving and the first part of December. Although there will be some carryovers from the administration of Gov. John Evans, basically there will be "a fresh start in Idaho government."
- Andrus probably won't make the mid-December presentation of his budget that Evans has made in recent years. Andrus said he might not have the budget fully prepared by that time, and likely will hold his budget presentation until the Legislature convenes.
- If Idaho keeps the sales tax rate at 6 percent, and adopts the new federal income tax laws without changing state tax brackets, there should be enough money to fund education properly and pay for economic development. Those will be the top priorities in his budget, Andrus said.

Panel approves water measures

BOISE (AP) — A legislative interim committee will recommend two proposed bills to the 1987 Idaho Legislature dealing with Idaho water laws.

But the panel voted Monday against recommending a third bill, because of fears it would run into constitutional problems.

The next Legislature will consider an 18-page measure making a variety of changes in state water laws. And it will take up a bill calling for a fee on all water users, to be used to manage state water resources.

At the outset, the committee voted to restrict the state's jurisdiction to ban surface pumping to protect water levels in wells.

The interim study committee was headed by Rep. Walter Little, R-New Plymouth, and Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly.

An 18-page bill gives the director of water resources authority to determine what is "reasonable" ground water pumping levels by considering the impact on water levels on wells. A second bill imposes a water use fee of 2 cents per acre-foot. The money is to be used for administering ground and surface water laws.

The committee voted to restrict the "reasonable" pumping restriction to the impact pumping has on geothermal wells. The original bill called for the director to consider the impact of pumping on all well levels, including cold water wells.

Sen. Lynn Tomlinaga, R-Paul, said it wasn't the intent of the interim study committee to go that far.

The department is going to have an awful lot of lawsuits it didn't have last year," with broad restriction on pumping, said Sheri Chapman, director of the Idaho Water Users Association.

Mary Lou Reed, D-Coeur d'Alene, cast the only dissenting vote as the committee voted to change the proposal to consider only the impact on the levels of geothermal wells.

Held without recommendation was a proposal to create ground water management districts in "critical ground water areas," where there isn't enough water to go around, or where there are conflicting uses.

Ward to step down as state regulator

BOISE (AP) — Conley Ward, the veteran member of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission, has decided to step down as a utility regulator after a decade in job.

Commission officials said Ward has not set a specific date for his departure from the three-member panel but would soon be joining the Boise law firm of Glivens, McDevitt, Pursey, Webb & Buser.

Ward was attending the annual convention of the National Association of Regulated Utility Commissioners in Phoenix with Commission President Perry Swisher. He had no immediate comment, saying he would make a formal statement about his future early next week.

Ward, 38, had made no secret over the past two years of his intention to resign from the panel before the end of his second six-year term in early 1989. He was a deputy attorney general assigned to the commission when he was first appointed to the regulatory panel in early 1977 by Gov. John Evans.

His successor will likely be named by Gov.-elect Cecil Andrus.

Swisher was just confirmed to a new six-year term last winter, but the term of the third commissioner, Richard High, expires in early January.

Phone project cover-up for charges, group says

BOISE (AP) — A consumer group says Mountain Bell announced a $65 million equipment upgrade program last week only to disguise the fact it is overcharging Idaho customers.

But a Mountain Bell spokesman says the allegations have no basis. "Our goal has been to provide good service at a reasonable cost," said Mountain Bell spokesman Steve Guerber.

Mildred Howard, Hansen, and Joanne Smith, Boise, who said they represented the Campaign for Fair Telephone Rates, issued a statement on Monday, accusing regional systems.

Mountain Bell in dealing with half-truths.

Mountain Bell on Friday announced a five-year, $65 million program to convert all major switching centers to digital, computerized equipment.

Ms. Howard and Ms. Smith alleged that national studies show Mountain Bell and all Bell companies have been overcharging customers since 1983, when the Justice Department won their representation of the Campaign court orders breaking up the national Fair Telephone Rates, issuing regional systems.

PUC should stick with rate ruling, Jones says

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Power Co. has failed to justify the need for a large rate increase, and the Public Utilities Commission should stick by its decision denying most of it, Attorney General Jim Jones says.

The attorney general's office on Friday filed a legal brief with the PUC, arguing that Idaho Power failed to justify its need for a rate increase.

The PUC last month held hearings in Twin Falls on Idaho Power's attempt to overturn a commission decision granting the utility only $1 million of a rate increase request that started at $84 million.

Jones said in a statement Monday that Idaho Power failed to back up its argument that denial of the rate increase has hurt the company's financial stability.

Jones said Idaho Power stock has moved about the same as the stock market in general and the utility index in particular, and has outperformed both.

In his earlier decision, the PUC discussed Idaho Power's agreement with Sierra Pacific to build a coal-fired generating plant in northern Nevada. As part of the agreement, Sierra Pacific agreed to take Idaho Power's share of the electricity generated, for the payment of operating expense, if Idaho Power had no use for the power.

The PUC held Idaho Power committed a "remarkable error in judgment" by allowing Sierra Pacific to take the power for operating cost only, with no consideration for Idaho Power's fixed expense.

Jones argued that because of that arrangement, Idaho Power should lower its rates about $3 million per year because Idaho customers are paying too much for operating the Nevada plant.

"We are asking the PUC to follow up on its earlier holding that the Yaimy contract is unfavorable to Idaho Power customers," Jones said.

"Since the contract is not in the best interest of Idaho ratepayers, they should be granted additional rate relief," he said.

The first segment, including the chapel and four classrooms, cost about $260,000, said architect Jerry Teal, who donated his services to design the chapel. Still on the drawing board are a library, counseling rooms and more classrooms.

"I hope this will provide a place of refuge (for inmates)... a place to come in times of need," said Rob Edwards, an inmate who helped in the construction project spearheaded by Don Stephen, chaplain and director of volunteer services.

The chapel was paid for with funds raised by church groups, civic organizations and individuals.

About 40 percent of the labor involved was supplied by the inmates. The project was held back through most of April when prison officials discovered that cutting tools used in the chapel were not properly accounted for.

The first service in the completed facility — a Catholic mass — is scheduled for tonight.

Prison chapel in use

BOISE (AP) — Some of the members of Boise's newest chapel wear prisoners' uniforms and are under the watchful gaze of guards.

The Inter-Faith Chapel at the Idaho State Penitentiary was dedicated Sunday. The first part of a two-phase project was completed after about six years of fund-raising and building delays.

The first segment, including the chapel and four classrooms, cost about $260,000, said architect Jerry Teal, who donated his services to design the chapel. Still on the drawing board are a library, counseling rooms and more classrooms.

System tells story in coloring book

POCATELLO (AP) — Facing a city council ultimatum to reverse the decline in ridership or see the bus system fold, Pocatello Urban Transit Director Ron Binggell has turned to "Buster the Bus" for help.

"Buster" is the star of an 11-page coloring book the system has started distributing throughout the city in hopes of bolstering annual ridership that has dipped from 100,000 at its peak two years ago to just 74,000 this year.

"This is just one of the marketing ideas being developed which I hope brings people back," Binggell said. "I'm optimistic we can reverse our ridership decline."

Using a cartoon format, the book follows Buster the Imaginary bus through his first day as a "novice bus" hoping to gain his colorful green and blue transit system stripes. It offers lessons on safety and how the bus system works, but the overriding message is that mass transit saves time, money and energy.

"Response has been unbelievable. Binggell said. "People are asking for extra copies to send to their friends."

Reagan not first president to face hostage-weapons swap

WASHINGTON — The deal was the same: arms for Iran for hostages.

But the year was 1980, and the complications extended not only to the worlds of Ronald Reagan and Jimmy Carter, but to the presidential candidacy of Independent John B. Anderson.

Within weeks after war erupted between Iran and Iraq in September 1980, Tehran was growing desperate for military supplies. The shah's departure had thrown the Iranian military into disarray. Because of their previous close contact with the American military, officers were finding it difficult to overcome the suspicions of the ayatollahs and the revolutionary guards. Thus Iran's military capacities were in sharp decline.

WHEN THE COMPLETE IRAN STORY IS TOLD, YOU'LL ALL UNDERSTAND.

plane load of the most urgently needed supplies. But there was an even more forthcoming offer. To demonstrate their good faith, the Iranians would release American captive d'affaires Bruce Laingen in advance of any deliveries. These developments, too, Rogovin and I reported to the State Department.

When reports of a possible swap of weapons for hostages began to surface in the press, our suspicions flared, for we knew that we were not the source. Bani-Sadr was obviously trying to use the option to bolster his standing in Tehran, and we speculated that Carter might manage to turn the possibility into an "October surprise" with decisive impact on the election. Failing that, we worried that our role as messengers might be used against Anderson. If the deal went sour, The Irony did not escape us that the overtone conveyed by the Anderson camp might rescue Jimmy Carter, even if it did not save the hostages.

We now know that a number of factors were converging to produce a measured offer by the Carter administration that ran in a broadly parallel direction to that suggested in the approach we conveyed. In mid-October the president approved a message offering to make available $150 million in aircraft parts and other equipment previously ordered by the shah's government, but being held in U.S. warehouses. As Carter put it in the debate with Ronald Reagan on Oct. 28, "If the hostages are released safely... we would make delivery on those items which Iran owns."

Strangely, the Iranians never acknowledged the offer. Then, as now, in bargaining with fanaticism, pragmatism has little leverage.

Alton Frye is Washington director of the Council on Foreign Relations.

Alton Frye

Now Iran's need for spare parts and other supplies interested the protracted negotiations to free Americans then held hostage in Tehran.

Signals of a possible "arms-for-hostages" trade came from an Iranian who had served as an agent in earlier sales of F-4 aircraft to the shah's government. Apparently acting on behalf of Iranian President Bani-Sadr, the man sought unsuccessfully to make contact directly with senior officials of the Carter administration. A few days after the war began, he turned to an American attorney with whom he had dealt previously — Mitchell Rogovin.

At that point the situation became a volatile mixture of international intrigue and domestic politics — for Rogovin was serving as general counsel in the presidential campaign of John Anderson.

Rogovin immediately came to me as Anderson's director of policy planning. The accident of Rogovin's prior acquaintance with the Iranian intermediary presented us with an extraordinary dilemma. To involve Anderson in negotiations regarding the hostages — directly or indirectly — was too delicate to contemplate. Yet, if the overtone had any substance at all, it had to be brought to the president's attention. With Anderson's approval we met with Harold Saunders, the assistant secretary of state handling the hostage crisis.

Saunders heard us out and asked the right questions. How could we be sure the agent represented those for whom he claimed to speak? Previous maneuvers to release the hostages had collapsed when contacts in Iran proved incapable of carrying out their commitments. But we can speak for authorities who could actually deliver the Americans to freedom? Rogovin and I took no position on the merits of the proposed exchange, but we undertook to determine if the approach was valid and reliable.

We conveyed the parts list to Saunders for review within the government. On Oct. 5 CIA Director Stanisfield Turner briefed Anderson on the war situation and indicated that it would be difficult for the United States to provide Iran anything so potent as the Phoenix missiles, but we inferred that supplying some materiel might not be out of the question.

Meanwhile, we probed for a better sense of the agent's ability to guarantee results, if the United States were willing to meet the request. A series of exchanges, interrupted for communications with Tehran, produced a straightforward offer to fly the hostages to Pakistan or another mutually agreeable location, where the Iranians would pick up a

Jayhawkers pour a long-standing tradition down the drain

On the Election Day just past, the voters of Kansas, thinking about God only knows what, passed a referendum legalizing liquor as the drink in the Sunflower State. County option, of course.

Forgive them, Lord, for they know not what they do. They obviously aren't thinking about the history and tradition of the state of Kansas. Frankly, I don't think Kansas is ready for liquor by the drink. I think Carrie Nation knew what she was doing when she took the hatchet to the saloons.

Drinking in Kansas doesn't involve some lounge lizard with slicked-back hair holding a sissy glass by the stem, trying to impress some alcohol in a strapless evening gown with his chatter about the Riviera and his stock portfolio.

Drinking in Kansas involves a bunch of good old boys preparing to get a thrill-packed Saturday night of watching the hair-cuts and snooker games under way by chipping in to buy a jug.

It used to be that this involved walking till after sundown to go to the town bootlegger's house under the cover of darkness. In my town, this was the grade-school janitor who bought and sold scrap metal (and illicit booze) on the side and whose wife, a pillar of the Baptist Church, had a world view that Cotton Mather would have appreciated.

About 35 years or so ago, however, the Kansas electorate legalized package sales, also by county option, which meant that the janitor had to buy a license, rent a building on Main Street and put a couple of neon signs in the windows.

But the rest of the ritual, including the inventory, remained the same.

We started out on such brand names as Four Roses and Three Feathers, partly because they were cheap — but mostly because we didn't know any better. You drank these brands with Coke or Seven-Up, for excellent reason.

Known generically as blends, they were distilled from the last of the suds in the barrels, it was explained to me in later years, with some sort of flavorings and other ingredients added.

I was always curious as to what "flavorings" these were, because it was impossible to drink these blends straight — I was 25 years old before

I learned that they made whiskey that you could drink neat without gagging.

If you had to take a shot of Four Roses, say, straight out of the bottle, it was imperative to have a bottle of pop at hand to do battle with the whiskey's taste before your stomach turned over. This, however, was not considered suave.

Suave was driving down to the gas station, with each member of the party hauling his soft drink of choice, or "mixer." Out of the bottom of the red cooler cabinet and buying a package of salted peanuts to go with it.

Suave was pouring half the pop out on the gravel driveway with a non-chalant flick of the wrist. Real suave was managing to eye exactly half the bottle without appearing to look or interrupting the conversation, which generally involved comparing blots of the brandies; John Deere to Internationals, Hank Williams to Hank Snow and Billy Vessels to Kyle Rote.

Then you added the blend, poured in half the pack of peanuts, shook the bottle vigorously using your thumb as a stopper, sprayed the back of your throat with the carbonated fizz and took your first drink, chewing whatever peanuts had come out with it.

The cocktail hour — complete with hors d'oeuvres and the traffic whizzing by on U.S. 36 — was under way.

That's how it was 30 or 35 years ago, and things haven't changed all that much — until this past Election Day.

On a visit home, a cousin and I decided to visit a friend out in the country, and to take along a jug as an offering.

Remembering the blends of my adolescence, I made a strenuous effort to make the buy, but my cousin got the angle on me and is bigger than I am.

To my astonishment, he asked for Wild Turkey, which is to Four Roses what a Rolls Royce is to the Demolition Derby. "Well," I thought, "we've come a long way in western Kansas."

the evening and repeatedly assured me that he had plenty of pop on hand and I was welcome to it.

A couple of years later I was at a presidential nominating convention, standing at the bar next to a delegate who caught my attention when he handed his drink back to the bartender. The bartender took a sip of it.

"That's club soda," the bartender said.

"I know," the delegate responded. "I asked for sweet soda. You know, Seven-Up or ginger ale or something like that."

The bartender nodded, got a fresh glass, poured a shot of 12-year-old Chivas Regal and added ginger ale. The delegate nodded approval, and I couldn't resist.

"I'll bet I know what state you're from," I said.

"How did you know?" he asked after I'd guessed.

"I don't know, you just have that certain je ne sais quoi," I explained.

On second thought, maybe they didn't vote that much of a change back home after all.

America's youth cult has reached into the canine culture

BOSTON — My dog Samantha recently became a senior canine.

I don't know exactly what this new station in life will mean for her. A discount on the subway? A membership in Vellicore? An early-bird special at the local restaurant? It's still too early to tell.

The news came as something of a shock to me. Until last week, I had assumed that Sam was an old dog. A good old dog to be sure, but an old dog. The food she ate was even labeled "For Old Folks."

But when I got to the supermarket Saturday, there was a new social message on the package. It read: "Tailored Nutrition for Senior Dogs."

Older dogs were out. Senior dogs were in. Just like that.

It isn't clear whether Sam understands the significance of this event in her life as a chow hound. Does she feel a bit more magical moment in American family life when parents delude themselves into believing that "the children are old enough to take responsibility." Sam was six weeks old. My daughter was five years old. It was old enough to know better.

I bought her for the sake of the child, and I bred her for the sake of the child. For ten unforgettable weeks in 1976, I lived with puppy nip-tuniplets, something that made me as nervous as fertility drugs. Now, 13 years later, the child has gone to college and the dog has arthritis. It's your basic national life cycle graffiti.

When I thought about it at all, I assumed that Sam — having accomplished the job of being a pet to a child — would be allowed to retire and age gracefully. For a while it looked like that. Her black hair has started to turn gray. Her bark, which was worse than her bite, is about equally benign these days. She has even been to Florida a couple of times.

Three years ago, Sam gave up her favorite sport, catching the mail as it went through the slot and eating it. Her eye-mouth coordination has waned. Occasionally, though, like an old-timer, she turns over the contents of a wastebasket just to let you know she still can.

But this is modern America and it couldn't last. The youth cult reached into the canine culture. Sam has been drafted into the golden-age, older, senior-citizen superman club. The friendly product manager for my senior dog food called the change from older to senior by a mild name: "updating." "People," she responded to my telephone inquiry, "always have trouble thinking of their pets getting older."

That, I suppose, is the problem with life as a pet. You are subject to your owner's neuroses the way you are subject to their children. One year you are dressed up as a reindeer and attached to a five-year-old's wagon. A few years later you are being fed a low-calorie diet and forced to jog on the end of a leash.

What will happen to a country full of senior canines when they are all forced to chase golf balls when they're roller roll on the green? Will they be given collars too young for them? Will they be fed calcium supplements and drafted into aerobics classes, when they want to lie in the sun?

At the moment, the greatest accomplishment of Sam's old age is her imitation of a rug sprawled on a rug. She does it wonderfully. But just this week, I have been imagining what she would look like with a touch of Grecian Formula. And I wonder: Can you teach a senior dog new tricks?

Letters/ Fitness evaluation called a smoke screen to get rid of employees

Spend the money on raises

The city council members approved funding of a fitness evaluation for employees as a step toward controlling health insurance costs.

Being an active union member and steward in my local, I smell a rat in the working of the city council.

This so-called fitness evaluation for the city employees is nothing but a smoke screen to get rid of older employees that have been with the city for a long time. It makes for a good excuse to terminate a man or woman that might have 10 or 15 years seniority built up, all because he or she may have high blood pressure or is over weight.

This gives the people running the city more control over the work force. As if they don't already have enough as far as an incompetent fitness evaluation is immoral and unjustified.

The city council will tell you that they can save the city thousands of dollars on insurance costs. This may be true, but it doesn't make what I believe they are getting ready to do to many of the city employees right.

We live in a time of economic uncertainty. With the Gramm-Rudman era of tight budgeted, it's been the working men and women that suffered the most.

I would hope the city council would remember that the city employees are people with families to feed and clothe, and children to send to school and educate — yes, all these things cost money, but it would be money well spent if the city council would spend as much time trying to figure a way of giving their employees a raise instead of trying to do what I believe they want to do and that is to get rid of the older employees.

Baloney on Blue Lakes Blvd.

The elections are over and once again Idaho has settled into a no-hum run. To paraphrase F. D. R., 1988 is a year that will go down in infamy both here and nation wide.

First off my mulberry tree was frozen this spring and consequently I never had the millions of ripe mulberries to fall on my lawn as in previous years. Secondly, my team lost the World Series. In fact they lost the American League playoffs. Thirdly, my main man isn't going back to that great squirrel cage long side of the Potomac as the new junior senator from Idaho. And now, today, I found out that Marie Osmond has remarried.

Dear God, how much pain can a mere mortal stand?

Now do you want to hear the clincher? I have it from a reliable source that the present mistress of the White House has signed a deal with Harmony House to publish her memoirs in two years after her husband has vacated the White House. Why wait two years you ask, well I suppose it's to give all us senior citizens the incentive to live two years more. For that I'm thankful, I would like to suggest she entitle her missive,

"Let's Make A Deal," and have it printed on choice fooscap and have it bound in top grade Moroccan leather.

You must excuse me now for I'm taking my wife to a well-known fast food outlet on Blue Lakes Blvd. where they have introduced a new sandwich called Big Ron. I'm told it is a thick wedge of baloney with special sauce on a hoagy bun. I wonder if they will hold my mayo? Heartburn you know.

Beware of false gods

It doesn't hardly seem possible that in this day and age the world is still so divided over religious teachings.

By keeping an open mind, the spirit of truth can lead into all truths.

Take our American Indians. They had no books and the spirit taught them morals right from wrong, and especially not to bear false witness.

It is quite clear that some people don't seem to know anymore about the God they worship than what they read in books, where untruths were able to creep in, even before they were written.

Communicating with a just and merciful God is very easy, for this God is ever present, helping people, and holds life very precious, and could never have stooped so low as to do some of the things that are written.

Communicating with false gods, is like talking to a brick wall, and these idols can neither hear, see, nor talk, and exist only because false prophets created them.

There was a time when men gave burnt offerings and even sacrificed their children, just to please their gods, and many customs are still practiced for the same reason.

But as people become more humane, so also do their gods.

Session on arms planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior U.S. and Soviet arms control negotiators have tentatively agreed to meet early next month in Geneva on the stalemate over nuclear weapons reductions and the American "Star Wars" anti-missile program, a Reagan administration official said Monday.

The talks were requested by Moscow and represent a "de facto" extension of the formal negotiations round that ended last week in the Swiss city without an agreement, the official said.

"It's kind of perplexing, because basically they gave us stonewalling through the last round," the official, who demanded anonymity, told the Associated Press.

Along the same lines, Secretary of State George Shultz said Monday night that the Soviets had decided to block any agreement to reduce nuclear missiles until there was "agreement on everything."

Shultz outlined the tough Soviet stance on arms control in a speech prepared for delivery at the University of Chicago. The 27-page address made no mention of the double Shultz has raised about President Reagan's decision to ship arms to Iran.

But in response to questions afterward, he said the United States should "keep exploring" for changes in Iran while maintaining an unequivocal stand against terrorism. He said "trading something of importance" for hostages would only lead to the taking of more Americans captive.

On the Soviets, Shultz said in his speech:

"Make no mistake about it. Tough, and probably drawn-out negotiations will still be required if we are to nail down any formal agreement on offensive force reductions," Shultz said. "For example, the Soviets are now linking agreement on anything with agreement on everything."

Chief U.S. negotiator Max M. Kampelman and his two principal deputies, Ron Lehman and Maynard Giltman, will hold the Dec. 8 session with a Soviet delegation headed by Viktor P. Karpov, the chief Soviet negotiator.

The two sides also are considering holding a meeting of U.S. and Soviet experts in early January, prior to the opening of the next round of formal negotiations in mid-month, the official said.

FAA clears ban on flights into canyon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration, concerned about possible aerial collisions, has tentatively approved a ban on sightseeing flights into the Grand Canyon, pending a review of the new curbs by the Transportation Department, officials said Monday.

New rules that would prohibit flights below the rim of the popular canyon and restrict flights 2,000 feet above the rim have cleared the FAA and been sent to Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, the officials said.

FAA spokesman Stephen Hayes said while the agency has made its desire for the new curbs clear in the proposed regulations, a final rule is still under review by Mrs. Dole's office as well as the Office of Management and Budget.

An estimated 50,000 flights carry hundreds of thousands of tourists over the Grand Canyon every year and most pilots dip below the canyon's rim for a better view. Last June, a helicopter and a sightseeing plane collided several hundred feet below the canyon rim, killing all 25 people aboard the two craft.

The accident prompted renewed calls for restrictions on air traffic over and into the northern Arizona canyon.

Astronauts board shuttle for testing

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronauts will board a space shuttle today for the first time since the Challenger accident for a practice countdown that will help launch teams maintain proficiency during a long flightless period.

Five veteran space travelers will settle into the cabin of Atlantis, perched on launch pad 39B, for the final two hours of a rehearsal that will end with simulated ignition of the main engines.

The countdown started on time at 5:40 p.m. MST.

On Thursday, a team of seven rookie astronauts will board Atlantis to participate in an emergency crew escape exercise.

The drills will conclude seven weeks of launch pad tests for Atlantis, which will be moved back to a hangar on Saturday.

What's what

To smoke was vulgar; to dip snuff, genteel. That was 200 years ago. A practical matter. To light up, you had to put tongs to live coals or mess around with the candles. You could burn a hole in your world. Then came matches. So to dip snuff was vulgar; to smoke, genteel. Again, a practical matter. To dip snuff, you had to sneeze, which made you look like a jackass. Besides, nobody could wash enough handkerchiefs to keep up with a snuff dipper.

Recent elections suggest it's no longer enough to paraphrase the likes of Will Rogers and Mark Twain by saying, "We have the best legislators money can buy." You need to paraphrase Winston Churchill, too: "Never before have so many paid so much to buy so few."

LOVE AND WAR

Seventy-seven percent of the husbands tell pollsters they'd marry their current wives, if they had it to do all over again, but only 50 percent of the wives say they'd marry the same husbands. Our Love and War man is analyzing these statistics. Does it mean wives are less satisfied? Or husbands are less honest?

Gephardt sets up exploratory panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Richard Gephardt moved closer Monday toward a bid for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination as he established an exploratory committee to help him test the waters for a possible campaign.

"I will be traveling across the country in the next two or three months and I hope to make up my mind at the end of that time whether I want to mount a full campaign," Gephardt told a news conference while attending the Southern Legislators Conference on Children and Youth in Nashville, Tenn.

Called the Gephardt Presidential Exploratory Committee, the organization will handle fund-raising, travel and other political expenses for the 45-year-old congressman from Missouri in the coming months as he decides whether to become a presidential candidate.

Don Foley, Gephardt's press secretary, said he does not expect the congressman to make an announcement of his intentions until late 1987.

Gephardt notified the Federal Election Commission here of his plans for the exploratory committee, although filing with the agency was not required at this point.

Called itself a moderate Democrat, Gephardt said he considered his major competition for the presidential nomination to be Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., who ran unsuccesssuccessfully in 1984, departing Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, and Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware.

Hart, who is retiring from the Senate to pursue an expected run for the White House in 1988, announced Monday that he will join a Denver-based law firm next January.

In addition, an announcement is expected shortly that Hart will teach at an undisclosed Southern law school beginning next semester.

Arraignments of escapee, lover delayed

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A woman snatched from prison in a helicopter by her fugitive lover is the more dangerous of the two and may have manipulated him, authorities said, but the two said Monday they still loved each other.

Convicted car man Ronald J. McIntosh and bank robber Samantha Dorinda Lopez were arrested by U.S. marshals Saturday at a suburban jewelry store as they tried to pick up a wedding ring set, apparently just as they were about to leave Northern California, U.S. Marshal Arthur Van Court said at a news conference.

McIntosh had disappeared Oct. 28 while on an escorted trip from the Federal Correctional Institution at Pleasanton to another prison. Eight days later, on Nov. 5, authorities say, he stole a helicopter, landed it at the Pleasanton prison and flew off with Lopez.

McIntosh was charged Monday with air piracy, which carries a minimum penalty of 20 years in prison. He and Lopez also have been charged with escape from prison.

The overwhelming evidence presented to this court shows there is nothing to fear from this child," said U.S. District Judge Altemaric Stotler in granting a preliminary injunction sought by Ryan's parents and the American Civil Liberties Union.

Gunmen kill head of Renault

PARIS (AP) — Georges Besse, president of the state-run Renault automobile company, was shot to death Monday night near his Paris home and police said left-wing terrorists "very probably" were the killers.

Besse, 58, was shot several times in the head and chest in the attack at about 8 p.m. Paris time on Boulevard Edgar Quinell, police reported.

Although there was no claim of responsibility, police said they suspected the Direct Action terrorist group had killed Besse. Direct Action has carried out dozens of attacks in France in recent years, including the January 1985 assassination of Gen. Rene Audran, responsible for French arms sales.

In the last known Direct Action attack, the group claimed responsibility for three bombs that exploded in Paris on Nov. 11, with one blast slightly wounding one person. Direct last week.

Besse's chauffeur had dropped him off about 50 yards from his home after driving him there from Renault headquarters in suburban Boulogne-Billancourt.

"Witnesses gave different accounts of the attack. Some said they heard four shots, and others told reporters there were six."

Some said they saw two women and a man approach Besse on foot, shoot him and flee, while others said the shots were fired from a passing car containing a man and a woman.

Besse died instantly, police said, and member of his family came running from the house after he fell to the sidewalk.

Premier Jacques Chirac and top police officials went to the scene.

Chirac said he was "horrified by the bestial murder."

"Nothing can justify or explain such a gesture," he said.

Appeal out for Hasenfus, lawyer says

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The defense attorney for Eugene Hasenfus said Monday he would not appeal the American mercenary's 30-year prison sentence on a conviction of terrorism and crimes against the state.

Hasenfus, 45, of Marinette, Wis., was convicted Saturday by a People's Tribunal for his role in supplying weapons to U.S.-backed Contra rebels fighting to overthrow the leftist Sandinista government.

"He was captured by Sandinista troops on Oct. 6, the day after his C-130 cargo plane filled with arms and supplies for the Contras was shot down over southern Nicaragua. Three other crew members, including two Americans, died in the crash. Hasenfus parachuted to safety."

"I am not going to appeal. We are not going to appeal because I do not believe in these tribunals," attorney Enrique Soto Borgen told The Associated Press. "They had the opportunity to give justice but they did not do it."

The lawyer said, "I have no case to appeal. His sentence was a planned thing. I think there's no other way out."

Soto Borgen said he had five days to appeal to another tribunal.

Christians criticized

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Fundamentalist Moslems said Monday, two days before Pope John Paul II arrives, that Christian missionaries undermine Islam and take advantage of misery and ignorance in this desperately poor country.

Most Islamic leaders, however, said the pope was welcome in Bangladesh, which counts only about 200,000 Christians — among its 103 million citizens. Most Moslems, who make up 86 percent of the population, appeared either indifferent to the visit or mildly approving.

Strike has little effect

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A Movement and the left-wing Partido ng Bayan, or People's Party, following the unsolved shooting death last week of their leader, Rodolfo Olalla, 52. The two groups represent the legal left in Philippine politics.

More than 2,000 workers, chanting for Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, marched Monday to the presidential palace in one of several rallies staged as part of the protest. The rally broke up peacefully after more than an hour.

Throughout the day, groups of workman students staged impromptu rallies in widely scattered factory and working class districts to denounce Enrile.

Two charged with murder of Gooding woman in California

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

GOODING — A young Gooding woman who moved to California seven months ago has been abducted and murdered, police in Redlands, Calif., reported Monday.

Corinna Novis, 23, disappeared Nov. 7, and after charges and two others in connection with the death.

Those being questioned in connection with the murder reportedly confessed to the crime and guided officers to a shallow grave where the body was recovered.

Officers said Novis disappeared from a supermarket parking lot in Redlands after she left the store. She was last seen at 7 p.m. in the store and officers believe she was abducted when she went to her car.

The car also was taken, and police say her abductors used it to drive to a beach resort near Redlands a few days later, where another young woman was abducted and killed. The second body also was recovered after the arrest of the suspects.

City Police in Redlands said four transients were in custody Monday night and complaints were being prepared to take them to court today. James Gregory Marlow, 30, and Cynthia Lynn Coffman, 24, are being charged with first-degree murder.

Officers also joined the search when Novis failed to show up for work on Nov. 8.

Mrs. Novis said her granddaughter was to have gone to a party at the college in Redlands the night of Nov. 7. When she failed to show up, a girlfriend called her apartment and was answered by a recording machine. She checked again two hours later and the recording was not working, leading authorities to believe she could have been followed from the parking lot to her apartment or was taken there by her abductors.

Mrs. Novis said her granddaughter was in Gooding for a visit three weeks ago and had told the family about a young woman living in her neighborhood who had recently been kidnapped and killed.

Redlands officers said they obtained sufficient evidence to make an arrest on Saturday.

The suspects confessed and guided officers to a vineyard outside the city, where the victim's body had been hastily buried.

Corinna Novis was born in Gooding and attended school here. She was a cheerleader from 7th grade through high school. She also attended the College of Southern Idaho for a short time and was active in cheerleading there.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Novis of Gooding. The parents were in California Monday to make arrangements for returning the body for services in Gooding on Thursday. A brother, Bill Novis, is serving with the U.S. Marine Corps in California and is also with the parents.

Agreement nears for the purchase of Walker ACT

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

GOODING — Walker ACT's Director Galt said Monday that an agreement should be reached by Nov. 28 to sell that substance-abuse treatment center to one of two bidders.

Ater said the finalists were Hospital Corporation of America, of Nashville, Tenn., and Parkside Hospitals, of Chicago, Ill.

HCA, which manages Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, and Parkside were the only "serious bidders" willing to operate the center at its present location, adjacent to Gooding County Memorial Hospital, Ater said.

Ken Diebert, administrator of Canyon View Hospital, said Wednesday that his company wanted to buy Walker ACT and move it to Twin Falls. He said he was knocked out of the bidding the previous week.

Ater said he would personally ensure that the new buyer kept Walker ACT and its services in Gooding. Rumors of Walker ACT losing a state contract for its alcohol rehabilitation program because of the sale are greatly exaggerated, Ater said.

He said he is confident the contract for about $70,000 will transfer to the new ownership, because both prospective buyers are familiar with state guidelines for a contract award.

Ray Winterrowd, chief of the state Bureau of Social Services, said the assistant attorney general for the Department of Health and Welfare is researching whether the state contract would continue after a sale. A decision is expected today.

Winterrowd said the question of transferring the contract was raised by officials of Port of Hope, a substance-abuse treatment facility in Twin Falls that competes with Walker ACT.

Ater questioned the motivation of those who raised the issue. He said "self-serving people" at Port of Hope raised the issue to again contest a state contract awarded jointly to Port of Hope and Walker ACT.

Port of Hope and Walker ACT split the state contract of about $140,000 for area alcohol treatment in a negotiated court settlement reached Nov. 5. That settlement ended six months of maneuvering between the organizations in which funding amounts shifted four times.

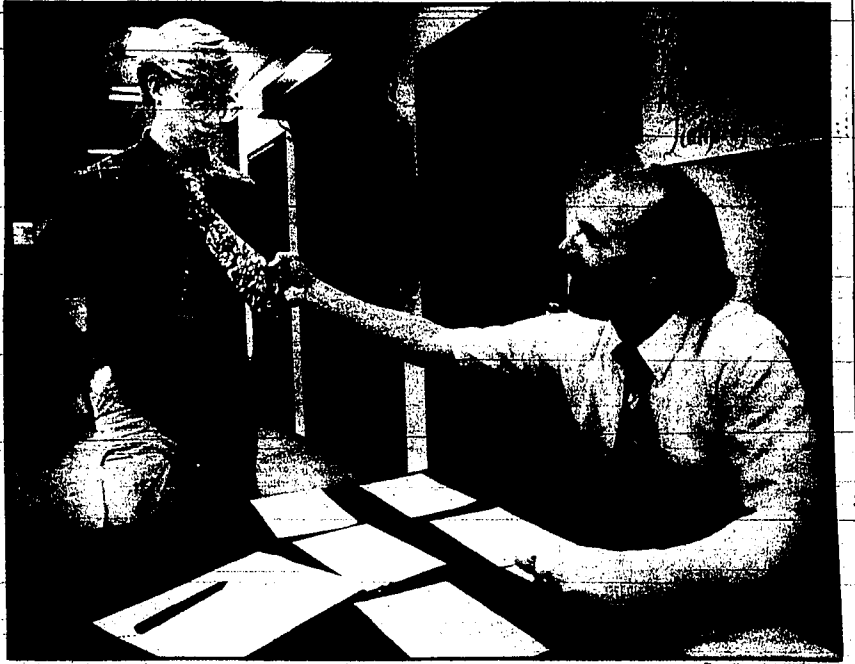

Ater noted that the entire state contract was initially awarded to Walker ACT by a H&W recommendation committee. But a H&W official ignored the recommendation and split the contract, with 75 percent going to Port of Hope and 25 percent going to Walker ACT.

On appeal, an independent hearing officer decided in favor of Walker ACT for the full contract amount. Finally, before a district court appeal, the two organizations decided to split the money evenly.

"Every impartial observer associated with this case has awarded us the money, and we intend to provide the service," said Ater. "I've been dealing with self-serving people throughout these proceedings and I expect them to continue to dispute the decision."

Barry Meyers, director of Port of Hope, said the state would have examined the transfer question without his center's nudging.

Idaho wool growers consider bolting national association

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — The Idaho Wool Growers Association, lauded by a national industry leader as one of the two most influential groups in the country, is considering bolting from the National Wool Growers Association because of industry ineffectiveness.

IGWA President Marvin Cox of Buhl told the state's sheep ranchers Monday that power struggles and dissension had reduced the NWGA — the industry's lobbying arm — to "a dormant organization."

"I see no hope to get any work done at the legislative level until February," Cox said. The national group's annual meeting is scheduled for February in Reno.

Cox said leaving the organization is as many as six other state delegations with it. Cox said he did not identify the state associations supporting the Idaho Wool Growers.

In his speech to Monday's general session, attended by about 90 Idaho sheep ranchers, Dan Murphy, the

Liberalist Tax reform may raise rates in Idaho

Idahoans could pay as much as $20 million more in 1987 state taxes because of federal tax reform, says a state tax expert.

Barry Meyers, director of Port of Hope, said the state would have examined the transfer question without his center's nudging.

businesses and individuals," said Tom Fuller, executive director of the Governor's Office.

Federal tax reform may mean more income taxation by closing loopholes and repealing deductions. At the same time, the new law shifts tax burdens to businesses and to wealthy individuals, resulting in a tax cut for many individuals.

If the Legislature were to follow the state's lead without implementing the tax cuts, Idaho taxpayers automatically will be paying $20 million to $30 million more in their 1987 tax returns, Westenberg estimated. The state will take in $15 million to $20 million more in income taxes the following year, he said.

Westenberg's figures are higher than the state's forecast. Using the same scenario, Fuller said state officials now expect the state to take from 1987 income taxes would rise about $21 million.

At the same time, Fuller said, the burden would be distributed so that many low-income taxpayers would pay less on both state and federal taxes. Single workers and wealthy individuals would find state tax bills higher, he said.

But the overall tax burden, including state and federal taxes, would be lower for individuals overall, he said.

Meanwhile, corporate taxes will be higher, Fuller said.

Idaho legislators will be under pressure to take the automatic increases and new provisions of the federal law off-budget, he said.

However, the lawmakers also could cut taxes if they could take the money out of the state's general fund, Fuller said.

Westenberg said the state's annual meeting, also made several other forecasts.

He said he expects the new Legislature to make the 5-percent sales tax permanent. He also said legislators will be under intense pressure from local taxing bodies such as school districts to allow override votes every more than one year; and to lower property taxes.

Fuller said the Legislature will be under pressure to pass bond issues from two-thirds to a simple majority of voters.

American Sheep Producers Council — the promotional arm of the industry — with the NWGA. The check-off is a mandatory fee ordered by an industry-wide referendum.

State promotional organizations will receive part of the fees next year for the first time, but the ASPC made no provision for sharing them with the national organization for uses unrelated to lobbying, which is prohibited. It did take the advice of the NWGA and set the fee below its allowed maximum.

The fee will be 5 cents for each pound of wool sold and 25 cents per head of unshorn lamb marketed, beginning next year. Much of the controversy has swirled around the level and the use of those fees. The NWGA legally could use about $300,000, or one-third cent per pound of wool, Cox estimated.

Continuation of two separate organizations, one for promotion and one for legislative affairs, at least for the time being, Cox acknowledged, sooner or later, the sheep industry most likely will be consolidated under an "umbrella" organization for efficiency.

The health of the Idaho industry depends on NWGA lobbying on federal legislation, because most major producers graze their flocks on public lands, Cox said. Government wool price supports and importation of foreign lamb also are major legislative thrusts.

College to bill GOP for some expenses of presidential visit

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho plans to present a bill to the local Republican party for costs incurred during President Ronald Reagan's visit Oct. 31, a college official said Monday.

CSI President Gerald Meyerhofer reminded the college's board at its meeting Monday night that there is no such thing as a free lunch.

He prefaced his remarks by reminding the board of the excitement of the visit. "I'd like to say we consider it very much an honor to host the president of the United States," he said.

Then he listed the damages. Reimbursement for staff such as custodial, janitorial and electricians' salaries would not be included in the bill because those workers were simply working at the college as usual.

Costs of modifying the Exposition Center, such as setting up bleachers, would also be discounted because the changes would have been necessary for groups scheduled the following week.

New administrative judge named

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

GOODING — District Judge Phillip M. Becker of Gooding has been named administrative judge for the 5th Judicial District, succeeding District Judge Douglas Kramer, who has retired.

Becker, who presides over District Court for Gooding and Jerome counties, said he will maintain chambers in courthouses there while handling court administrative duties for the eight Magic Valley counties.

He was selected for the position by his fellow district judges and assumed the added duties on Nov. 1. Becker was nominated by District Judge Daniel Hurlb of Twin Falls. Hurlb has agreed to continue as trial court administrator for the district.

Carl F. Bianchi, Idaho administrative director for the two courts, announced the two selections. He pointed out that Becker, a former trial court administrator, has participated in the administrative conferences for Idaho court officials for many years.

"As a lecturer on calendar management at our New Judge Orientation Programs," he brings a wealth of knowledge and commitment to the Supreme Court's statewide delay reduction program," Bianchi said.

Becker, who previously served as magistrate in Gooding County, was elevated to the district position in September 1983 and assigned to the Gooding and Jerome counties' portion of the 5th District.

The two district judges in Twin Falls prior to that time traveled to Jerome on an alternating basis to cover District Court.

Becker said Monday he will be taking on some additional responsibilities, working with the other judges in the district to keep the courts operating smoothly, and will be assisting in any problems that arise in the district.

Counties in the 5th Judicial District include Camas, Blaine, Lincoln, Gooding, Jerome, Twin Falls, Cassia and Blaindoka.

Retailers push for liability reform

BURLEY (AP) — Facing skyrocketing liability insurance premiums and continued threats of ruinous lawsuits, the Idaho Retailers Association has made revision of state laws governing damage liability its top priority.

"Our retailers are not saying that people should not be justly rewarded for damages when they occur," said Association Chairman Chuck Skaggs of Burley. "But people shouldn't try to get rich off insurance companies because some lawyer tells them they can."

Skaggs was recently elected chairman of the association, which represents hundreds of retail businesses.

Skaggs said the retailers would work closely with the Idaho Liability Reform Coalition, which has launched an all-out effort to change the civil claims system in Idaho. The association's board of directors will discuss tort reform and other issues on its legislative agenda when it meets later.

Over 30 states have already revamped their tort systems and revision legislation is pending in the rest. A series of bills to revise the Idaho system is sponsored, but not acted on, during the 1988 Idaho Legislature.

The push for change has been fueled by the fact that liability insurance has become either unaffordable or unaffordable for local governments—in Idaho—and that crisis, spilling over into the private sector, has made the state less attractive to new businesses.

Premiums have tripled in just the last two years for businessmen, Skaggs said, and insurance has reached the prohibitive level for farmers and heavy industry.

Skaggs, expecting some opposition to revision legislation from attorneys, said details of the association's legislative plan will be worked out in the coming weeks, but he said it would probably include a cap on the amount of punitive damages that can be awarded in a lawsuit over amounts to compensate for actual losses.

"I'm aware of businesses in Idaho that have lost as much as $500,000 where the insurance would not cover the entire claim," Skaggs said.

Rash of burglaries reported to police

TWIN FALLS — A rash of house, vehicle and business burglaries were reported to Twin Falls police during the past weekend, although most involved a small loss, or entry without damage or theft.

Someone entered an unlocked vehicle parked at 458 Sunrise Blvd. N. late last week and removed a gym-bag filled with karate equipment and clothing and also took a full-length coat. Police said the loss was around $500.

Someone also broke into Thelsen Motor Co., at 701 Main Ave. E., where they opened the firm's safe and the coin boxes on a cigarette machine. Nothing was taken from the safe, but the cigarette machine was damaged and a small amount of cash was taken.

A window at Morningside School, at 600 Morningside Drive, was broken during the weekend when someone threw a beer can through it. No entry was made and nothing was missing. Damage was estimated at $200.

Another window was reported broken sometime prior to 8:45 a.m. Sunday at the Norge Landramal, 556 Main Ave. N. Police said someone threw rocks through the window, causing $350 damage.

"Frankly, if you can sell a state contract, it opens up a lot of questions about the program with a contract with the state then has another asset they can sell — which I don't think was the state's intent," Meyers said.

Winterwood echoed that H&W wanted to examine the question of transfer, regardless of Port of Hope's interest.

After estimated the sale wouldn't be finalized for at least two months after the agreement is reached, so the director isn't concerned about paperwork that still has to be filed with the state.

Walker ACT will have to notify H&W of its intent to sell 30 days before the actual sale, to assure continued state and federal reimbursements are paid to the center.

But, Ater said, "I would be surprised if this sale were finalized before February." He added that notifying the state was simply "a hoop" on the way to consummating the deal.

And no rent was charged for use of the Expo Center because of standing CSI policy, he said.

"We have never charged political committees rent for use of our facilities," Meyerhoefer said.

But there are three poles for a chain-link fence that were uprooted during preparations for the visit that represent the college's out-of-pocket expenses in the venture, Meyerhoefer said. Once the cost of replacing those poles is assessed, a bill will be presented to the local Republicans.

In other business, the board considered bids for a two-year contract to print 13,000 copies of its catalog. The bids from six companies were opened Friday and Glenn Pring of Arkansas City, Kan., represented the lowest, at $18,142.

The second-lowest bidder was a Boise company, Graphic Arts Publishing, at $18,277. Since the amounts were so close, the board decided to go to bid on a decision until peripheral costs of the competitors, such as the costs of adding pages, were assessed.

College student living with her lover is also living with guilt

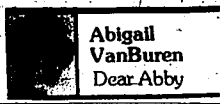

DEAR ABBY: I am a 20-year-old, third-year college student with a big problem. Four months ago I moved in with my boyfriend, and since that time my family has thrown more guilt my way than a person can deal with in a lifetime.

My mom says I will "roast in hell" and she will never accept my boyfriend as a son-in-law. (We plan to marry next year.) The last time my mom called, she begged me to move out, saying my sinful action is killing my grandparents — that my grandfather has removed all my pictures from their house and refuses to speak my name.

My mom says my grandparents cry all the time and will never let me in their house again. Also, their 50th wedding anniversary party has been called off because I chose to live with my boyfriend.

Don't you think I am old enough to make my own decisions for my life or should I allow my family to "blackmail" me into a decision made by them? I want to do the right thing.

— LOST IN PORTLAND
DEAR LOST: You are indeed old enough to make your own decisions, but unless you can live with those decisions, you will reap more grief than joy. It's to your credit that you care enough about your family's feelings to have written to me, and even though you'd be submitting to emotional blackmail to move out, I think for now you'd be happier moving than staying.

DEAR ABBY: Re the poem in your column that went: "Married in white, you've chosen right."

"Married in blue, you will always be true."
 "Married in green, ashamed to be seen."
 "Married in red, you'll wish you were dead" etc.

I have a better ending: "Married in pink, your marriage will stink."
 I was. And mine did.
 — ANNABELLE IN SPARKS, NEV.

DEAR ABBY: This is a plea for help from all the hooked cigarette smokers — myself included. I started smoking at 17 to lose a few pounds. I'm 39 now. Twenty-two years ago, there were no health warnings, so I didn't know how addicting nicotine could be. Quitting is not just a matter of will power. If it were that easy, very few people would be smoking. This year, so far, I have tried a video stop-smoking program; hypnosis and the Shick Center — all to no avail.

It appears to be the "in" thing today — to pick on smokers. Does it anyone realize that a little pity would go a lot further? We aren't criminals; we're victims. Most of us are considerate and try not to offend non-smokers.

We smokers get unsolicited advice from strangers — even children. One child said to me, "Why do you smoke so much? Don't you know you're killing yourself?"

Would you instruct your child to approach an obese person and say, "Why do you eat so much? Don't you know you're killing yourself?"

Please, don't get me wrong. I'm not trying to justify smoking. I'm just asking for help and understanding, not abuse and humiliation. The worst day of my life was when I lit my first cigarette. You may use my name.

— MARCIA EDGERLY, SIMI VALLEY, CALIF.
DEAR MARCIA: As for "picking on smokers," I have led the way, but I'm not short on compassion or understanding. Watch this space tomorrow for my Annual Great American Smokeout Day column.

And don't buy any more cigarettes between now and then.

Industrial operating rate dips

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The operating rate of American industry fell in October to the lowest level since 1983 as activity in mining hit an all-time low and U.S. manufacturers continued to suffer from foreign competition, the government reported Monday.

The Federal Reserve Board said the nation's factories, mines and utilities operated at 79 percent of capacity last month, after holding at 79.2 percent from July through September.

In a separate report, the government said the level of business inventories fell 0.3 percent in September, a somewhat smaller decline than had been expected given strong auto sales that month. Analysts said retail inventories were still at high levels, meaning that consumers were likely to benefit from pre-Christmas sales and a return of auto financing incentives.

The 0.2 percentage point decline in production in October put the operating rate almost three percentage points below its peak in the current recovery in mid-1984. It was the lowest level since industry operated at 78.3 percent of capacity in December 1983, one year after the recovery from the 1981-82 recession began.

In the past two years, U.S. manufacturing has been beset by widespread production cutbacks and job layoffs as a huge trade deficit has cut into sales both at home and abroad.

"Manufacturing has been going down for the past two years because of the trade deficit," said David Wyss, an economist with Data Resources

Inc. of Lexington, Mass. "We have been selling a lot of manufactured goods, but we have been buying them from Taiwan rather than our own industry."

Wyss said the trade deficit has declined in the past two months which could signal better days ahead for American manufacturers.

But Michael Evans, head of a Washington center, said that while the trade deficit will help better, demand will be hurt by slack growth in consumer spending and business investment.

This weakness will keep the operating rate near its current level and will mean no improvement in the unemployment rate, which is stuck at 7 percent, Evans predicted.

Contributing to the weakness last month was a further drop in the operating rate in the mining industry, which fell to 72.5 percent of capacity, the lowest operating rate for mines since this series began in 1967. The report said further declines in coal mining and oil extraction offset a slight gain in drilling of exploratory oil and gas wells.

Even with the small rise in oil and gas well drilling, this activity remained at less than half the level it had been just a year ago as the energy industry remained in a severe slump due to falling prices.

American manufacturers operated at 79.4 percent of capacity in October, down from 79.6 percent in September.

The decline included a 0.3 percentage-point drop in the operating rate at factories making durable goods, who were producing at 75.9 percent of capacity last month, and a 0.1 percent decline at nondurable manufacturing plants, which operated at 84.7 percent of capacity.

The drop in the manufacture of durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, stemmed from cutbacks in September and plants operated at 75.8 percent of capacity last month, down from 80.6 percent in September.

Evans said he expected little increase in auto production in coming months as automakers try harder to keep inventories more in line with output.

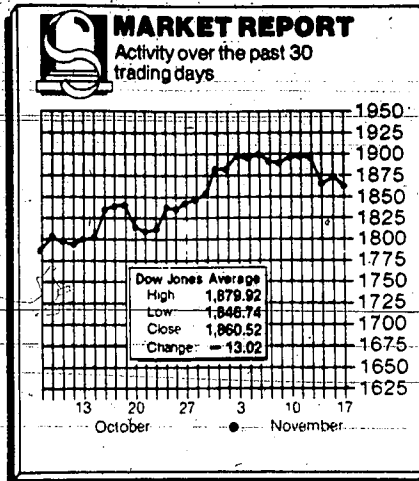

Wyss said consumers may even see a return of cut-rate financing incentives if sales fail to improve from their dismal performance during October.

Analysts also predicted that retailers will be forced into pre-Christmas sales again this year in order to reduce high inventories of merchandise.

The report said inventories in September stood at a seasonally adjusted $58.4 billion; retail inventories were at an unusually high $171.7 billion, 6.6 percent above the level of a year earlier.

The nation's utilities operated at 81.3 percent of capacity, down from 80.7 percent in September.

During the 1981-82 recession, the industrial operating rate declined steadily, hitting a low of 69.5 percent in December 1982. It then began improving, reaching a high in the current recovery of 81.8 percent in July and August 1984 before trade problems began cutting into production.

Scandal felt early

Stock losses tied to lack of interest

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stock prices suffered broad losses Monday, recovering from an initial setback attributed to the insider trading scandal, then slipping amid lack of buying interest, according to the close, analysts said.

Profits on shares related to takeover activity.

Such issues have tended to lead the market at late, and when U.S. trading opened, stocks also fell, stung by the same fears, analysts said.

Prices recovered to post small gains by early afternoon, only to plunge again toward the close.

"It was more of a lack of buying than a selling panic," said Brian Luedtke, an analyst at the securities firm of Piper Jaffray & Hopwood Inc. in Minneapolis.

Among most active issues on the Big Board, Lockheed closed down 2 1/2% at 52%, Over Thursday and Friday, the stock had gained $10.50 per share amid rumors that it might be a takeover candidate.

Lockheed issued a statement saying it was unaware of any reason for its stock's recent activity.

Gillette was down 1/2% to 67 1/2%; Bally Manufacturing was up 1 1/2% at 22 1/2%; USX Corp. was off by 2 1/2% at 21 1/2%; E.F. Hutton was down by 2 1/2% at 42 1/2%; and Borg Warner was down 2 1/2% at 33%.

All have been involved in takeover activity or speculation.

Among other issues, IBM was up 1/2% at 122 1/2%; CPC International was down 2 1/2% at 65 1/2%; and Eastman Kodak was down 1 1/2% at 65 1/2%.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 155.5 million shares.

The NYSE index was down 0.82 at 139.90.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks lost 13.07 points to settle at 1860.52.

Losers outpaced gainers by almost 2 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,029 stocks declining, 538 stocks advancing and 417 remaining unchanged.

Volume totaled 133.25 million shares, compared with 172.06 million shares Friday.

The session was affected by overnight trading in Europe, where U.S. stocks fell in reaction to Friday's post-closing announcement by the Securities and Exchange Commission that one of the market's best-known arbitrageurs, Ivan F. Boesky, had agreed to pay $100 million to settle Securities and Exchange Commission charges of insider trading.

Boesky also agreed to plead guilty of a felony count, which carries a penalty of up to five years and which would result in his being barred from the industry for life.

European dealers said traders feared that institutions and other large investors would use the latest development as an excuse to take

Boesky case to reduce trading on rumors

By JAMES F. PELTZ
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Ivan Boesky insider-trading case will reduce stock trading based on takeover rumors but is unlikely to dampen takeover activity in general, merger specialists predicted Monday.

Some Wall Streeters said takeover speculation, which had been accelerating before Boesky's case was disclosed Friday, immediately dropped off along with overall trading volume when investors returned to the market Monday.

Boesky, who agreed to pay a record $100 million penalty to settle government charges that he engaged in illegal insider trading, was the most successful and famous of Wall

Street's risk arbitrageurs, or professional takeover speculators.

Many arbitrageurs spend huge sums investing in stocks involved in takeover situations that have been publicly disclosed. They generally hope to buy the shares for less than what the acquirer ultimately pays for the stock when the merger is completed.

Some arbitrageurs, however, also invest in stocks that are only rumored to be takeover targets. And that often fuels heavy trading in the stocks before any public announcement of a takeover bid is made.

There is nothing illegal about that, provided the arbitrageur does not trade on the basis of confidential information not yet made available to the general public, which Boesky was charged with doing.

Yet Boesky's downfall will make arbitrageurs and other investors think twice about trading in unconfirmed speculation and investing on the basis of rumors, hunches or legitimate information left they gave even the appearance of using improperly obtained inside data, merger expert said.

As a result, "there will be, at least for some time period, a significant falling off in the rumor mill," predicted Robert S. Pirle, president of Rothschild Inc., an investment firm that specializes in advising clients on takeover strategies.

Arbitrageurs and others "are going to think twice about calling everyone in America trying to find out whether it (a rumor) is true," he said. "You're running the risk of getting inside information."

Kenneth Blaikin, a takeover attorney at the law firm Willie, Farr & Gallagher, said, "There is no doubtedly going to be that fear you don't know if the one you talk to is a tainted source, and the sources will be much more careful about what they say and to whom."

One leading arbitrageur who deals only in takeover situations that have been publicly announced, and who agreed to discuss the Boesky case only if the condition he not be identified, said he hoped the rumor mill dries up because it would help his business.

Currently, if a stock soars on takeover rumors, this arbitrageur must pay that much more for the stock after an announcement is made — thus narrowing his potential profit if he invests in the stock.

But takeover specialists agreed that while there will be a decline in trading volume, merger activity will be little affected.

Redskins triumph 14-6 over Montana's prolific passing

By DAVID GINSBURG
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — George Rogers rushed for 104 yards and a touchdown as a Washington Redskins overcame a 441-yard passing effort by San Francisco quarterback Joe Montana to record a 14-6 victory over the 49ers Monday night in the NFL.

The triumph enabled the Redskins to improve their record to 9-2 and stay in first place tie with the New York Giants in the NFC East.

San Francisco, 6-4-1, missed a chance to take over the top spot in the NFC West from the Los Angeles Rams.

first quarter gave the Redskins the only points they needed. The only other touchdown of the night came in the third quarter when Washington quarterback Jay Schroeder hooked up with Gary Clark for a 27-yard score to make it 14-3.

Montana, in only his second game since returning from an eight-week layoff following back surgery, completed 33 of 60 passes but suffered three interceptions. Rice caught a career-high 12 of those throws for 204 yards.

Although the 49ers had little trouble moving the ball, they repeatedly hurt themselves. San Francisco was called for 15 penalties for 118 yards and committed four turnovers in the game that lasted nearly four hours. Also, Montana missed a wide-open Jerry Rice in the end zone in the third quarter and running back Joe Cribbs dropped what appeared to be a sure touchdown pass in the final period.

Montana's yardage and number of attempts were 49ers' team records.

After Montana ended the 49ers' initial possession of the game by fumbling at the Washington 33, the Redskins marched 67 yards to take a 7-0 lead. A 19-yard pass from Schroeder to Clark on third and 10 moved the ball to the San Francisco 16, and three plays later, Rogers pounded into the end zone from the 1-yard line.

Washington 17 on the ensuing drive, but Ray Werschching missed a 35-yard field goal try.

Werschching got another chance in the second quarter following the Redskins' first turnover of the night. Seven plays after Don Griffin intercepted a Schroeder pass at the Washington 42, Werschching kicked a 34-yard field goal to make it 7-3. 47 seconds into the period.

The kick enabled the 14-year veteran to become only the 12th player in NFL history to score 1,000 career points.

Although Montana passed for 194 yards in the first half, he threw two interceptions and fumbled once.

Washington needed only two minutes of the third quarter to extend its lead to 14-3. Three plays after the Redskins' Ken Green returned a 49er punt 33 yards to the San Francisco 37, Clark slipped behind Griffin in the left corner of the end zone and caught the scoring pass from Schroeder.

San Francisco immediately bounced back driving 60 yards in 12 plays to cut the gap to 14-4. A 39-yard pass from Montana to Rice moved the ball to the Washington 15, but the 49ers then missed a certain touchdown when Montana overthrew a wide-open Rice in the end zone. Two penalties and a sack by Dave Butz moved the ball back to the 33 and San Francisco had to settle for Werschching's 38-yard field goal.

Eagles get an easy one over E. Oregon

135-46 victory ties CSI record for single game

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The one object lesson College of Southern Idaho learned Monday night in its 1986-87 men's basketball season opener is that it's hard to keep a team tripped.

The Eagles, going liberally and often to the bench, smote the Eastern Oregon junior varsity 135-46. In fact, that ties the CSI record for a single game, but in truth, it could have been a whole lot more and shouldn't be considered as record worthy.

"It is," intoned Coach Fred Trenkle, "hard for a team to adjust from probably the toughest team (Poland) it will play one night to maybe the easiest two nights later."

The victory gives the Eagles, who are ranked third in the preseason National Junior College Athletic Association poll, three days to prepare for its first junior college competition Friday and Saturday night. The Eagles will entertain Northwest Community College of Powell, Wyo., Friday night and Columbia Basin Community College of Pasco, Wash., on Saturday. It will mark the first time CSI and Columbia Basin have squared off in several years although they formerly were annual home-and-home competitors.

The Eagles put seven players in double scoring figures Monday. The three-point goal wasn't a factor.

Trenkle couldn't find much to complain about. His Eagles simply dominated, regardless of the alignment.

"I thought we passed very well tonight. In fact, at times I thought we overpassed the ball. We were pretty loose," he said. "We shot our free throws well and had good intensity defensively throughout the game."

"I think the passing really showed up in the first half when they tried the zone. We scored quickly against the zone and put them back in the man," Trenkle added.

After the opening moments saw Eastern Oregon stay within 6-4, things started unraveling quickly. Mauro Gomes and Joey Johnson hit two field goals apiece and Erick Newman hammered home three more. Bill Wirskey and Gomes capped the spurt with two-pointers that blew things into a 31-4 disproportion.

By halftime the Eagles had stretched that to 75-22 and then hit the first eight points of the second half.

The century mark was accomplished on a fast-break slam dunk by Gomes at the 10-minute, 37-second mark.

Eastern Oregon — Hillier 4-0-18, Doctor 4-1-14, Frank 2-0-19, Neil 1-0-22, Passick 3-0-14, Cooper 2-0-14, Winter 2-0-0-4, Jamieson 0-0-2, Mitchell 3-0-2-8, Totals 21-19-46. Three-point goal — Doctor.
Southern Idaho — Clark 1-0-2-10, Jackson 3-0-1-10, Johnson 3-7-17, Lasher 1-0-0-2, Reynolds 5-0-2-11, Collins 2-4-1-8, Newman 10-1-1-21, Gomes 11-1-11, Drevwala 4-3-4-11, Wirskey 5-3-4-12. Totals 56-19-28-118. Three-point goals — Gomes.
Halftime score — Southern Idaho 75, Eastern Oregon 22.

Prop 48 puts blue-chippers on the bench

Players must make the grade

By DICK JOYCE
The Associated Press

Who's missing, rather than who's who, is the key to reading college basketball's freshmen crop this season. And where is Arizona's "Big Horford" fact or fiction in Miami where, barring any more controversy, he should miss only five games, and start for the Hurricanes on Dec. 20.

Some 142 athletes were declared ineligible this season because of new NCAA academic standards — Proposition 48 — which require minimum grade-point averages and test scores for incoming freshmen.

That means some of the nation's blue-chippers are either on the sidelines and prohibited from practicing, or in junior colleges.

Even in prison, guys work out." St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca said.

Michigan's chance to repeat as Big Ten champion this season was lessened as soon as two of its top freshmen — 6-foot-10 Terry Mills and 6-2 Rumeal Robinson — were declared ineligible.

Pittsburgh, expected to contend in the Big East Conference, had four academic casualties who later left school. At Cincinnati, six players were declared ineligible under the new standards.

Other key ineligibles include Chris Brooks, West Virginia; Anthony Pendleton, Southern California; Earl Duncan, Syracuse; Neilson Anderson, Illinois, and Keith Robinson, Notre Dame.

But if anything stands out this season, it is the long-awaited debut of the 7-1, 250-pound Horford. It should come off unless the NCAA decides some wrongdoing was committed during his whirlwind odyssey of college campuses since leaving his Dominican Republic homeland.

Horford is expected to be on the program at Miami, which fielded its first team in 14 seasons. He landed there last winter, enrolling Jan. 21 after brief, controversial stopovers at Houston and Louisiana State and after receiving overtures from dozens of colleges along the way.

He will be ineligible for the first five games, including a clash with North Carolina, to satisfy the NCAA's two-semester residency requirement. He is scheduled to play his first game on Dec. 20, against Dartmouth.

Horford, who attended high school in Houston, was recruited by LSU, Kentucky and UCLA, but signed with the University of Houston in 1985.

"I'll be crawling up the front steps of the (LSU) Assembly Center, I wouldn't take him," embittered LSU Coach Dale Brown said at the time.

But Horford was declared ineligible when Houston admitted two recruiting violations, and he headed for LSU, where there was a welcome mat waiting. It was another short stay, though, before Brown dropped him from the team for missing a practice and an intrasquad game in early November.

Houston twice appealed Horford's ineligibility, and he appeared ready to return, but the last NCAA denial came on Jan. 12. Several top schools, including UCLA, Kentucky and Louisville, fearing an NCAA investigation, said they wanted no part of Horford. So he headed for Miami.

Big bowls take back seat to Fiesta's Miami vs. Penn State

By The Associated Press

The Fiesta Bowl's coup in landing a likely Miami-Penn State national championship game has taken the glitter of the so-called major bowls and left some college football people wondering where the sport is headed.

The traditional Jan. 1 bowls — Rose, Cotton, Sugar and Orange — probably will take a back seat to the Jan. 2 Fiesta Bowl, which switched its date from Jan. 1 for prime-time television and boosted its fee to $2.4 million for each team, an increase of $1.2 million over last season's payoff.

The Fiesta Bowl deal, announced over the weekend, involves the nation's only undefeated and undefeated team in Division I.

The Jan. 2 deal is contingent upon Penn State beating 5-4-1 Pitt on Saturday. Miami is a heavy favorite to defeat East Carolina, 2-3, on Thanksgiving night. There is an escape clause by which a Penn State loss to Pitt and a Nebraska victory over Oklahoma would enable Miami to stay home and play Nebraska in the Orange Bowl.

Miami and Penn State are independents who can choose their bowl, while the Cotton, Sugar and Orange bowls have conference commitments which provide the host team and the Rose Bowl has conference tie-ins for both teams.

In arranging the contract, the Fiesta outbid the Citrus and Gator bowls.

"One thing the bowls don't want is a playoff, but the greed of the bowls is going to create a playoff," said Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer, who

Top teams headed for championship game

College football is two games away from the 21st confrontation between the No. 1 and No. 2 teams since the Associated Press poll began in 1938.

Penn State, which slipped from second place to third last week, recaptured the runnerup spot Monday thanks to Michigan's 20-17 upset at the hands of Minnesota which dropped the Wolverines from second to sixth and out of the national championship race.

If Penn State beats Pitt on Saturday and No. 1 Miami beats East Carolina on Thanksgiving night, they will meet for the national championship in the Fiesta Bowl on the night of Jan. 2. Both teams are 10-0.

Miami defeated Tulsa 23-10 Saturday night and received 16 of 60 first-place votes — the Hurricanes were second on the other four ballots — and 1,196 of a possible 1,200 points. Miami is No. 1 for the eighth week in a row.

Meanwhile, Penn State turned back Notre Dame 24-19 and received three first-place votes and 1,119 points.

Oklahoma, a 29-0 winner over Colorado, jumped from fourth to third with 1,083 points while Arizona State routed Wichita State 52-6 and climbed from fifth to fourth. The Sun Devils received the other first-place vote and 1,025 points.

Nebraska, which plays Oklahoma on Saturday for the Big Eight championship and an Orange Bowl berth, crushed Kansas 70-0 and received 964 points in rising from sixth to fifth.

Previously unbeaten Michigan was sixth with 855 points. The Wolverines were followed by Ohio State, Saturday's opponent in the Big Ten showdown. The Buckeyes ran their winning streak to nine games by beating Wisconsin 30-17 and vaulted from ninth place to seventh with 842 points, replacing Texas A&M.

Auburn, last week's No. 8 team, lost to Georgia 20-16 and fell to 15th place. That paved the way for LSU to jump from 12th to eighth with 730 points after trouncing Mississippi State 47-0.

Alabama, which dropped from sixth to 11th last week, moved back into the Top Ten. The Crimson Tide beat Temple 24-14 and went up to ninth place with 707 points.

Southern California rounded out the Top Ten. The Trojans beat California 28-3 and climbed from 13th to 10th with 641 points. Washington, No. 10 a week ago, fell to the Second Ten along with Texas A&M and Auburn. Texas A&M lost to Arkansas 14-10 while Washington and UCLA tied 17-17.

The Second Ten consists of Arkansas, Washington, Texas A&M, Arizona, Auburn, Stanford, Baylor, UCLA, Clemson and Georgia.

Last week, it was Alabama, LSU, Auburn, Cal, Arizona, Clemson, Stanford, Arkansas, Baylor, UCLA and Mississippi.

has always been opposed to a playoff. "It's amazing to me that NBC, which is not a part of the college football package during the season, is handling the three biggest bowls."

NBC televises the Fiesta, Orange and Rose Bowls, and approved the date switch with the Fiesta, moving it to prime time.

At Orlando, Fla., Chuck Rohe, the Citrus Bowl's executive director, claimed the Orange Bowl "orchestrated" Miami's decision to play in the Fiesta in order to keep the national championship out of its backyard.

"They got stuck," Rohe said. "They could have Arkansas or Texas A&M against Oklahoma and it's going to be a blowout."

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff is opposed to bowl bidding wars.

"Can you believe the bidding got up to $25 million?" Teaff said. "That could open a big can of worms. I don't like it. I think the NCAA should step in."

"There is just something about that's distasteful. This isn't what the bowls should be getting into."

"We've got to stop the shopping, bidding business we're in today," said DeLoes Dodds, athletic director at Texas and a member of the NCAA Postseason Football Committee.

"We need to get some sanity back into it."

South: Tar Heels lost big, yet still might win

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
The Associated Press

With much of last year's senior class now playing in the National Basketball Association, the race for supremacy in the South will be won by the team doing the most with the players left behind.

"I'd say it's pretty wide open. I think there's no question that the balance is a much deeper than it's ever been before," says Crum. "Looking around, there are a lot of teams on paper who look a little bit stronger."

class was rated among the best in the nation, good enough to earn early recognition as the nation's best team. But Smith "thinks he'll have trouble getting by in the Atlantic Coast Conference."

The Yellow Jackets, a preseason No. 1 last year, lost the outside touch of Mark Price and the inside power of John Salley. But returning starters Bruce Dairymple and Duane Ferrell kept the attack which could get Coach Bobby Cremins his second league title.

The Cardinals, Crum says, are in search of a backcourt that might bear even a slight resemblance to the Wagner-Hall duo. That search alone is needed to help Louisville compete in its own Metro Conference, a league which like the ACC lost a lot of talent at the end of last season.

Seminoles lost only one player from a 12-17 team and look to be stronger with returning forward Randy Allen. Southern-Mississippi was picked to finish last in the Metro last year, but closed at fourth with a 6-6 league mark and a 17-12 overall slate.

East: Prestige era of BEC basketball could be at an end

By DICK JOYCE
The Associated Press

In seven years, the Big East built its reputation on large doses of television exposure and standout players like Patrick Ewing, Chris Mullin, Ed Pinckney, Walter Berry and Dwayne Washington.

Johnathan Edwards to take over in the middle and more production from Junior guard Perry McDonald. Hoya frosh to watch: guards Dwayne Bryant and Mark Tillmon, forwards Anthony Allen and Sam Jefferson.

"The Big East looks as close as it's ever been," Boehme says. "In past years there were bigger gaps between the top teams and the others. There's more parity that ever before."

Until the NCAA lifted its ban of 6-11 sophomore Marco Baldi over expenses paid by his Italian club, St. John's looked to be in line for a long season following the departures of All-American Walter Berry and Ron Rowan. Point guard Mark Jackson, Willie Glass and Shelton Jones will carry the offensive load.

Boehme said that Coleman and Thompson "at this stage are the most advanced freshman we've ever had."

Conversely, the Atlantic 10 has received little TV exposure in the past but it has been better paced this season. St. Joseph's Temple and West Virginia reached the NCAAs last season and should be contenders again this season.

But getting through the Atlantic Coast Conference is the first challenge and within the league's ranks, Georgia Tech and North Carolina State could join the chase for the Final Four in New Orleans.

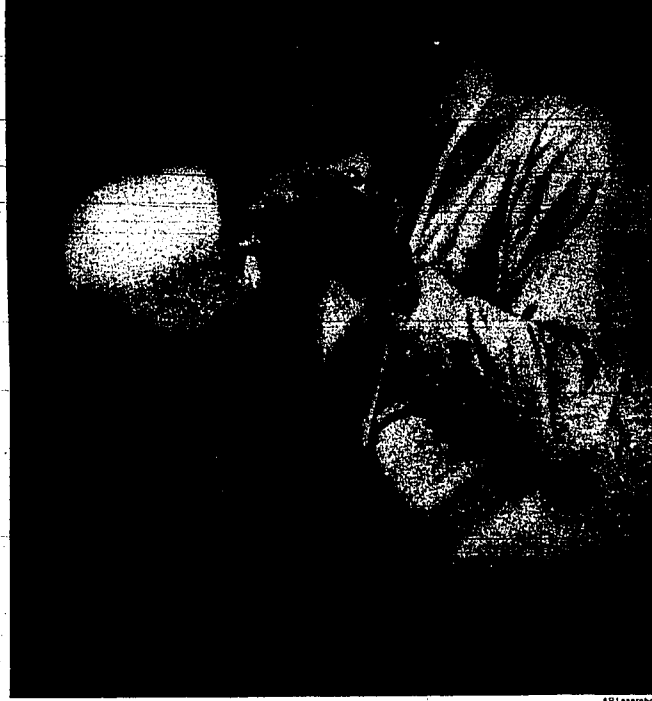

The Wolfpack will be improved because of backcourt addition Kenny Drummond, who might be the answer to Valvano's annual search for a consistent point guard.

Louisville will look to Pervis Ellison for leadership — and points — in the middle. Mark McSwain has assumed the sixth man's role, but after that, Crum says it's a toss-up as to who will help guide his team.

Southwest: '87 may be TCU's year

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
The Associated Press

The Southwest Conference should be a stronger basketball league from top to bottom this year with the spotlight on new Houston Coach Pat Foster, who succeeds the retired Guy Lewis.

Dean Smith's Tar Heels have a prayer of winning NCAA championship this season.

Lewis ended his 30-year career with 592 victories and five Final Four appearances — 1967, 1968, 1982, 1983 and 1984.

"I'm excited about the possibilities of this year's team," Foster said. "I think that the combination of seniors like Winslow and Anderson as well as youngsters like Jerry McGee, combined with newcomers such as Rolando Ferreira and Jerome Brewer, should make for an exciting team to watch."

West: UNLV could crack the Final Four, but Pac-10 won't be far behind

By TIM LIOTTA
The Associated Press

Although the Nevada-Las Vegas Runnin' Rebels may be the best team in the West, the Pacific-10 Conference has made some strides in improving its basketball product.

The Rebels practically own their conference, the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. They've won it four straight years.

However, the Wildcats will be minus their floor leader, guard Steve Kerr, who suffered a knee injury that required reconstructive surgery over the summer and is lost for the season.

Seven-foot center Christian Welp (19.4 ppg, 8.5 rpg) makes a contender of Washington, while sharp shooter Reggie Miller makes UCLA a longshot.

center Jose Ortiz will lead an inexperienced Oregon State team that comes off a 6-10, 12-15 season.

Ricky Berry (18.6 ppg), teaming up with 6-7 junior Reggie Owens, the conference's top rebounder (6.7 rpg) last year. The Spartans should be their 9-9 conference mark and figure second behind the Runnin' Rebels.

Gastineau's gone, maybe for season

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — The New York Jets defense, already severely undermanned on the line, will be without Pro Bowl end Mark Gastineau for at least six weeks, the NFL team said Monday.

Gastineau injured his left knee on the next-to-last play of the first half Sunday in a 31-15 victory over the winless Indianapolis Colts. Arthroscopic surgery was performed Monday and Gastineau's injuries were diagnosed as a slight tear of the anterior cruciate ligament and a partial tear of the meniscus cartilage.

The Jets have not decided whether to place the eight-year veteran on injured reserve.

Gastineau has suffered through a mediocre season. He has only two sacks this year after averaging more than 15 a season for six years. He was bothered by a pulled muscle in his abdomen and a pelvic injury that limited the moves he could make.

After being hurt Sunday, Gastineau said it could be a blessing in disguise if he got a chance to rest the abdominal injury as well. But he didn't indicate he expected such a lengthy hiatus.

Stevens gets 21 points as Buhl tops Gooding

BUHL — Buhl High's girls' basketball team ran its season record to 5-1 here Monday night with a 62-51 non-conference victory over Gooding.

Buhl — Stevens 21, Smalley 12, Easton 12, Jagels 4, Adams 3, Biley 2, Korte 2. Totals: 25 12-9 17-6.

Fouled Out: None. Three-point goals: None. JV score: Gooding 41, Buhl 11.

Those injuries were repaired and Gastineau will be fitted with a decorative brace.

"It all goes well," Jets spokesman Ron Cohen said, "he can be back in six weeks."

There are only five weeks left in the season but, if the Jets make the playoffs, Gastineau could return in time.

Texas women ranked first in preseason poll

By MEL GREENBERG
The Associated Press

The University of Texas women's basketball team has been chosen to repeat as national champion in The Associated Press' 1988-89 preseason poll, announced Monday.

The Longhorns, who have held the No. 1 spot in the poll for 24 straight weeks, since the end of January 1985, received 57 first-place votes and 1,277 points from a nationwide panel of 64 women's coaches.

Texas, which had a 34-0 record last season, needs a 21-2 start to break Louisiana Tech's mark of 54 consecutive victories. But Coach Jody Conradt, whose team hosts this year's NCAA final, isn't thinking about shattering marks.

College basketball

"As far as I'm concerned, last season was the end of a book," she said of the Longhorns' first title. "Now, we're starting a brand new volume."

The Longhorns have been ranked 153 times more than any other team; since the poll began in 1976.

Louisiana Tech, the former two-time national champion, finished second in the preseason poll with two first-place votes and 1,091 points. It was the Techsters' 114th top five appearance and 131st straight top 10 ranking dating back to January 1979.

Southeastern Conference teams look the next two spots. Tennessee was third with two first-place votes and 1,045 points, followed by Auburn with two first-place votes and 1,039 points.

It was the highest ranking for Tennessee since placing second in the preseason poll for the 1981-82 season, while the fourth-place position was Auburn's highest ranking ever.

Southern California, which lost star Cheryl Miller through graduation after the team finished second to Texas in last season's NCAA tournament, was fifth—with 952 points. Rutgers, gaining its highest ranking since Feb. 14, 1982, placed sixth with 854 points.

Long Beach State got the remaining first-place vote and 818 points for seventh place, ahead of Iowa, which made its top 10 debut in eighth place with 750 points.

Virginia was ninth with 752 points, and Georgia completed the top 10 with 657 points. The Lady Bulldogs return Katrina McClain, one of the nation's top players, but the graduation of Olympian Teresa Edwards helped drop Coach Andy Landers' team to its lowest ranking since being 12th in February 1983.

Virginia was ninth in order, were Louisiana State, Old Dominion, Western Kentucky, Penn State, Mississippi Ohio State, Maryland, San Diego State, James Madison and Texas Tech.

Maryland's appearance was its first since the second week of the 1984-85 season, while perennial power

Old Dominion returned for the first time since last December when it began slumping to a 15-13 record following a series of injuries.

Texas Tech returned for the first time since the end of the 1984-85 season, while San Diego State was back for the first time since early last season.

Missing from last season's final poll were North Carolina, Southern Illinois, Vanderbilt and Oklahoma.

James Madison made its first appearance in the preseason poll, while North Carolina State was absent for the first time in 10 years.

The Southeastern Conference maintained its usual strength, with five teams in the preseason poll, including three in the top 10. The Atlantic Coast, Atlantic 10, Big 10, Southwest, Sun Belt and Pacific Coast each placed two members.

The Associated Press' preseason poll of women's basketball coaches ranked the top 10 teams in the nation. The poll is based on the opinions of 64 women's coaches from across the country. The poll is conducted by telephone and is the most comprehensive poll of its kind.

"Foster figured that Miami was the right place for him," Coach Bill Foster said, "because of the tropical environment, the large Spanish-speaking population and this was the closest place to his home."

The NCAA, meanwhile, still is trying to determine whether there were any irregularities involving Horford and his Dominican team, Naco, or any involving the colleges that wooed him.

Coming out of high school, Horford was considered a better prospect than Louisville's Pervis "Never Nervous" Ellison, who helped lead the Cardinals to the NCAA title last season.

Foster looks for Horford to improve the Hurricanes, who were 14-14 last season, but tempers his praise of the Dominican.

"Time and patience are the two key words with him," Foster said. "He's not our best player right now. He may be our best prospect, but he's not our best player. He may be an impact player for us this year on the defensive end. But he still has a lot to learn on offense."

Louisville also landed a king-sized player in 7-1, 270-pound Felton Spencer, a local product. Spencer figures to be a backup for the 6-9 Ellison and may in time prompt a move of the slender sophomore to forward.

Louisville Coach Denny Crum, who lost his starting backup, may call on freshman Keith Williams — red-shirted last season — to be the starting point guard.

North Carolina probably did the best recruiting job, landing three blue-chippers in the 6-9 range who figure to supply immediate help up front, where the Tar Heels could use it.

J.R. Reid, a 250-pounder from Virginia Beach, Va., generally was regarded best high school big man in the country. He may step right into the center spot vacated by Brad Daugherty. Reid averaged 25 points and 14 rebounds as a senior.

Scott Williams of Haclanda Heights, Calif., and Peter Chlieff of Tuscaloosa, Ala., are other new Tar Heels.

Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim, who needed replacements for Rafael Adison — and — Dwayne — Pearl Washington, said 6-9 Derrick Coleman of Detroit and 6-3 Steve Thompson of Los Angeles were two of the most fundamentally sound freshmen he's ever had.

Kentucky's 6-4 Rex Chapman, from Owensboro, Ky., is among the freshmen guards who should make an impact this season. With long-range shooting ability and outstanding leaping ability, he averaged 25 points and eight rebounds as a senior.

Other frosh guards include: Dwayne Bryant of New Orleans, one of a slew of Georgetown recruits, and a likely successor to Michael Jackson as point guard.

Kevin Pritchard, named a starter at Kansas because "we need outside shooting and he's the best shooter" we've recruited," Coach Larry Brown said.

Louisiana State's Pess Irvin, a point guard-scorer from Gonzalaz, La.

Georgia Tech's Brian Oliver, who averaged 31 points as a senior in Smyrna, Ga., and could be the next Mark Price.

Other leading freshmen include 7-1 Dwayne Schintzius of Florida; 6-9 Chris Munk of Southern California; 6-6 Ron Huery of Memphis State; 6-8 Mark Randall of Kansas; 6-8 Larry Rembert of Alabama-Birmingham; 6-6 Ricky Jones of Clemson and 6-6 Steve Hood of Maryland.

Bowls

Bruce Skinner, executive director of the Fiesta Bowl, said of the Miami-Penn State matchup: "We're hoping it will happen. Official bids cannot be extended until bid day on Saturday. The deal cannot be made until Nov. 22. But we're hopeful it will come off. If it does happen, we'll be College Football Town USA."

"It makes a lot of sense to move the game (to Jan. 2) for the networks, the institutions and for us," Skinner added. "We want to showcase No. 1 against No. 2. With six games already on TV on New Year's Day (the Fiesta originally was scheduled for Jan. 1 and the Citrus moved to that date this season), it makes a lot of sense to move it. Unless there's a national championship game involved, there would be no reason to move it. This is a special case. It's for the best of college football."

The Gator and Citrus Bowls also had bid for the Miami-Penn State game but they couldn't work a backup deal with the Orange Bowl, according to Miami Athletic Director Sam Jankovich.

The Orange Bowl, while still hoping for a Miami-Nebraska pairing, lined up the Southwest Conference runner-up to meet the Oklahoma-

Nebraska winner, "provided it is Texas A&M or Arkansas. The Aggies and Razorbacks, along with Baylor and Texas, still have a chance at the SWC crown."

Miami refused to play Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl because the Hurricanes beat the Sooners 28-16 this year to move into the No. 1 spot and beat them 27-14 last year.

The winner of Saturday's Ohio State-Michigan game will win the Big Ten title and a berth in the Rose Bowl, against Pacific-10 champion Arizona State. The loser will become the first Big Ten team to appear in the Cotton Bowl.

The Citrus Bowl will match season II against Southern California, while the Gator Bowl will pair Clemson and Stanford.

The Sugar Bowl host will be either LSU or Alabama and the visiting team will be the Oklahoma-Nebraska loser. LSU or Alabama will play Washington in the Sun Bowl.

Georgia and Boston College will play in the new Hall of Fame Bowl at Tampa, Fla., and Florida State will accept a berth in the All-American Bowl against Indiana.

Other likely bowl pairings include: Peach — North Carolina State-

Virginia Tech; Holiday — Western Athletic Conference champion (Air Force, Brigham Young or San Diego State) vs. Iowa; Freedom — UCLA vs. Air Force or BYU.

The California Bowl, which matches the champions of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association and Mid-American Conference, is set with San Jose State and Miami of Ohio.

If Baylor doesn't win the SWC, the Bears will go to the Bluebonnet Bowl. Arizona is headed for the Aloha Bowl.

Saturday's Kentucky-Tennessee winner will face Minnesota in the Liberty Bowl, according to published reports. Bud Dudley, the Liberty Bowl's executive director, would not deny the pairing.

Texas Tech is likely for the Independence Bowl, which also would like the Mississippi-Mississippi State winner.
