Military says coup against Aquino aborted

Officers told to ignore Enrile orders

By MIGUEL C. SUAREZ
The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — The armed forces chief of staff has directed military commanders to disregard all orders from Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile and his staff following reports of a plot against President Corason Aquino, the government radio station and a private one said Sunday.

DZRH, a private radio station, said military officers revealed the order by Gen. Fidel V. Ramos during a news conference in Cebu City following a night in which troops took control of radio and television stations in Manila and some other cities and tightened security for Mrs. Aquino.

He quoted Brig. Gen. Romulo Querubin, commander of the Cebu region, as saying Ramos issued the order after receiving intelligence reports of an anti-government plot

"but the plan was aborted and we are returning to normalcy."

"The (armed forces) stand behind the government of President Aquino, having been elected and installed by the people, and whose government is duly recognized by the international community," Querubin said. "We must not betray our country and our people."

"The whereabouts of Enrile, who has figured prominently in recent coup rumors, were not immediately known."

DZRH also said Ramos had received intelligence reports that supporters of deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos planned to reconvene the dissolved National Assembly and declare former legislative speaker Micanor Yniguez acting president pending new elections.

He quoted unidentified military officers as saying Ramos had ordered troops to secure government centers and communications stations to prevent such a move.

The government-run radio station in Manila, which was among those sealed off by troops, broadcast the same report and attributed it to senior commanders in Cebu.

More than a dozen military trucks lined the street leading to the presidential palace. A light tank was parked inside one of the main gates of the compound, and an armored personnel carrier was stationed in front of Mrs. Aquino's residence in the palace guesthouse.

In Bacolod, a major provincial city some 300 miles south of Manila, soldiers entered at least four radio stations.

DZRH's news director in Cebu, Jane Paredes, said the order from Ramos directed commanders "to secure all government centers, all seats of government and all radio and television stations and communications stations."

"First is to disregard any order from the Minister of National Defense or Col. Honasan or any of the MND staff," she quoted Ramos as saying in his order.

Col. Gregorio Honasan is Enrile's security chief.

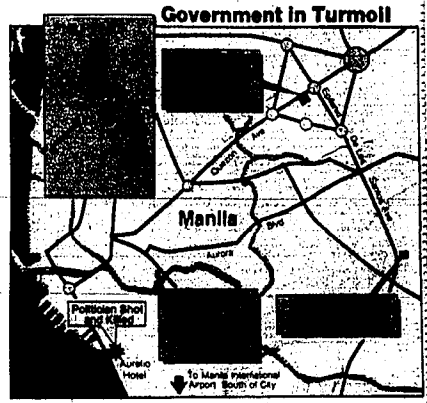

Ramos went to the presidential office at Malacanang Palace on Sunday for an early morning meeting with Mrs. Aquino and other officials following the military moves. Enrile was not among those seen entering the palace grounds for meeting.

Attempts to reach Enrile or his senior aides for comment were unsuccessful. Enrile aides were said either to be unavailable or refused to come to the phone.

Army troops began securing radio and television stations following lengthy meetings at suburban Camp Aguinaldo, the headquarters of the Defense Ministry and the armed forces. Ramos and Enrile were at the meetings.

Magic Valley gets unexpected snow

By MARK PRATTIER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A blizzard storm area in the Northwest region added additional precipitation to the area, which was predicted to be a heavy snowfall. The snow may have been the cause of the avalanche that occurred in the area, according to the National Weather Service in Boise.

Two people were killed in the avalanche. One was a woman who was killed when she fell from a cliff. The other was a man who was killed when he was struck by a tree.

The driver of one vehicle, Alan Lee White, 31, of 101st St. in Kimberly, was killed in the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center after being hit out of her compact car by authorities. She was transferred to St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise in critical condition, according to a MVRHC spokesman.

A passenger in White's car, Lisa Lancaster, 16, of 804 Mountain View Drive in Twin Falls, is listed in fair condition at MVRHC, according to a nursing supervisor.

The other two people killed by Bill Pullin, 46, of Hansen, who was injured to the accident. His wife Mary Pullin, 46, a passenger, was treated and released at MVRHC. She was killed in the accident. The sheriff's office said.

The storm brought a two-inch accumulation in Twin Falls and an inch to Burley Saturday, changing the barren November landscape in the first days of winter. The Wood River Valley also received some light snow.

A Pacific cold front which moved through the area Saturday traveled in a more southerly direction than expected, intensifying as it went along, said Jack Sams of the National Weather Service in Boise.

There were minor injuries in a one-vehicle rollover Saturday morning in the Cedar Dump Area on Highway 30 in Buhl, the Twin Falls Sheriff's office and Buhl Police said.

Volcano's lava flow slowly moves toward town

By LESLIE BRODY
The Associated Press

TOKYO — Dozens of earthquakes shook nearby abandoned Oshima Island into the early Sunday hours, but the lava flow from a spectacular volcanic eruption slowed down after threatening the main town and forcing more than 11,000 people to flee.

News reports said the lava stream Saturday was about 500 feet from the town of Motomachi, several miles west of the volcano, but was moving at only three feet per hour.

The island's streets were empty, with some house doors left open and porch lights left on in the haste of departure, the reports said.

Only 255 people, mostly police, researchers and firefighters, remained on the island by Saturday night, an official at the Tokyo metropolitan government's Disaster Prevention Headquarters said.

The island's 10,300 residents and about 1,000 tourists were taken by boat to nearby Izu peninsula and to Tokyo after Mount Mihara cracked open Friday and began spewing flames, lava and black smoke into the air.

Hundreds of earthquakes shook the island from Friday through early Sunday. The strongest, at 9:41 a.m. Saturday, measured 6.1 on the Richter scale and could be felt in Tokyo and surrounding areas, said the Central Meteorological Agency, signaling a quake capable of causing severe damage.

Officials said about 60 emergency centers were set up in Tokyo, about 70 miles to the north, for volcano refugees. Many of the tourists had flocked to the island to witness the awesome eruption, the second in a week.

After an all-night boat ride from Oshima, about 2,000 evacuees were taken Saturday to Tokyo's Minato Ward Sports Center, where they camped out in a gymnasium. A ward official estimated it would be a week or 10 days before they could return home.

Some evacuees tried to call relatives or friends to reassure them. Others searched long lists to find out where their relatives were placed.

Tokie Kimura, 66, said her 72-year-old husband at first refused to leave their Oshima home.

"He wouldn't sleep one foot away from the house. He said the lava would not reach the house and got angry at me for packing to leave," she said. "I tried to stay with him until the end, but finally I got so scared I had my grandchildren take me away."

Demos charge administration with cover-up

By JILL LAWRENCE
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's arms sale to Iran continued under siege Saturday, with Democratic Party officials accusing the administration of duplicity, cover-up and "dangerous doublespeak."

The charges were contained in a resolution adopted by the executive committee of the Democratic National Committee. The full DNC, which is meeting here this weekend, was expected to approve the resolution Sunday.

"Our position in the world has been weakened, our credibility on the issue of terrorism is now virtually non-existent, and other American lives have been put at risk," the resolution said.

The Democratic National Committee today expresses its outrage at the duplicity, and apparently illegal actions of the administration and pledges our support to our colleagues in the House and Senate as they peel away the layers of coverup, ill-conceived policy and dangerous doublespeak," it said.

Democrats also criticized Reagan's policy in their weekly radio address, with Rep. Tony Bellenson, D-Calif., calling the arms sale a "terrible blunder" that has "thrown the administration's anti-terrorism policy into disarray."

"The president broke the law, he broke faith with our friends and allies around the world and he broke his word to the American people," Bellenson said in the address.

"The sad fact of the matter is that our anti-terrorism policy is now in shambles," Bellenson said.

"Let us hope that this tawdry chapter is at an end. Let us hope our president manages our foreign policy during the next two years in a competent and constitutional manner."

Controversy has engulfed the administration since the disclosure of its covert contacts with Iran during the past 18 months, and arms shipments made shortly before the individual releases of three U.S. hostages held in Lebanon.

Reagan advised to admit that Iran arms sale an error

By DAVID ESPRO
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Many senior members of Congress are telling President Reagan to reverse course and concede his secret arms sale to Iran was an error, then revamp his White House staff to meet the challenges of his final two years in office.

That's the advice from his friends.

Reagan's natural critics, the Democrats who will take control of the Senate in January and who hold power in the House, are eagerly picking at the Iran controversy in hopes of tearing away great chunks of the "Teflon coating" that they claim has insulated the president from lasting political damage in prior controversies.

"Now there's a feeling the bear is bleeding," said one senior House Democrat, speaking on condition he not be identified.

Since Reagan's news conference Wednesday night, the White House has maintained an official silence on how the president intends to further deal with the controversy.

Whatever advice he takes, whether from his top aides or from the people outside government to whom he periodically turns for help, the president is embattled in a way that neither he nor Democrats are accustomed to.

As Reagan boarded his helicopter Friday for a weekend trip to his Camp David retreat, he ignored shouted questions from reporters and left behind warring aides who seem intent on trying to stress their own opposition to the policy he is defending.

He has twice tried to put the Iranian arms sale controversy behind him, and has twice failed, judging by the public opinion polls and the incessant criticism in Congress. In recent days have produced the following:

- Following his nationally televised speech Nov. 13, a public opinion poll published by ABC and Newsday Times reported that only 14 percent of those surveyed found Reagan's statement that he did not trade the weapons for American hostages in Beirut essentially true.
- An ABC News poll released on Thursday reported that 57 percent of the public approve of the way the president is handling his job, a decline of 10 points since September.
- The network said that was the sharpest drop in five years. The poll also reported that 89 percent of those surveyed did not think the president has told the truth about the Iran operation.
- In the 24 hours after Reagan's news conference Wednesday, Republicans and Democrats alike in Congress were calling the secret arms sale a mistake, and said the president may have broken the law by not telling Congress about the shipments. At his news conference, Reagan defended the sale and said he violated no law.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., who lost his chairmanship of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee when the GOP lost its Senate majority in this month's elections, told reporters Friday that the Reagan administration "is not falling apart."

But at the same time, Lugar, who has worked closely in the past with Secretary of State George Shultz, advised Reagan to remake the line-up of his administration.

"It needs to be strengthened. They need to bring in some big leaguers to run things," Lugar said, without mentioning names.

He added, "The Republican Senate gave them a good deal of protection these last six years. But that shield is gone."

Outgoing Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said of Reagan's aides, "I think they need to sort of have a meeting. I hear a lot of statements coming from people who were apparently involved, sort of pointing the finger of blame at one another. I don't believe that will be very helpful." Added Dole, "I think most people would agree there was a mistake in judgment."

As Lugar pointed out, Reagan will face a Democratic-dominated Congress come January for the first time since he became president in 1981. And while Democrats emerged from the election professing a willingness to cooperate with him, they have not hesitated to criticize his Iran secrecy.

"The situation is really creating a creeping paralysis that is going to continue to sap the energies, the time of the administration — and the credibility of the nation is at stake," said Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

Except to call for a major shift in Congress' budget-writing process, the president has yet to lay out a legislative agenda for the coming months.

Democrats already have served notice that they will move swiftly to draft trade and farm bills, and challenge Reagan's policy of aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Group pushes for staff shake-up

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of President Reagan's California supporters is seeking a shake-up of the White House staff in the wake of criticisms of secret U.S. arms shipments to Iran, according to a published report.

The Washington Post, quoting sources in Sunday's editions, said the group is calling for the replacement of Secretary of State George Shultz, White House chief of staff Donald Regan and Adm. John Poindexter, the national security adviser.

The group is pushing for Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger to replace Shultz, and Drew Lewis, the former transportation secretary, to replace Regan, the newspaper said.

However, a White House spokesman and one of the California supporters listed by the Post, denied knowledge of any impending shake-up.

The newspaper quoted sources who said it was not certain whether the group would succeed in persuading the president to undertake the shake-up, but the sources said both Lewis and Weinberger would accept the positions if offered.

Holmes Tuttle, a wealthy California businessman who helped launch Reagan's political career, said he has had no conversations with Regan concerning a staff shake-up, would not provide such advice unless asked and has not been asked.

Such a shake-up "would be totally out of character" for the president, said Holmes, who was reached at his home by telephone Saturday night.

Roman Popadiuk, a White House spokesman, had no comment on The Post's report Saturday night, saying, "I don't know of plans for a shake-up. I've heard no talk or mention of a shake-up."

The group, described as "California

nians inside and outside the administration," is working with the encouragement of First Lady Nancy Reagan, who has privately been critical of Regan and Shultz, the newspaper reported.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III and former secretary of the interior William P. Clark, two members of the group, have contacted Lewis in recent days about becoming chief of staff, the newspaper said.

Some members of the group have suggested former U.N. ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick as a possible replacement for Poindexter, the Post said.

Lewis, who is president and chief operating officer of Union Pacific Corp., could not be reached for comment Saturday night. Amy Brown, a Justice Department spokeswoman, declined to telephone Meese Saturday night.

Turkish consulate hit by car bomb, 1 dead

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — A car bomb exploded early Sunday in the basement garage of the Turkish consulate, killing one person and causing considerable damage to the five-story structure and nearby buildings, police said.

A police spokesman, who demanded anonymity, said officers found human remains scattered over a wide area, and it was believed the body could be that of the person who was arming the bomb.

A 27-year-old student studying in an office on the third floor received cuts and was in shock, the spokesman said. Authorities evacuated 38 residents of the building, some of them elderly women.

"The building is located in the fashionable suburb of South Yarra. The consulate is on the ground floor. Gas leaking from the consulate building was quickly brought under control while 70 firemen tackled fires that had broken out in shops and offices. Nineteen shops in nearby Toorak Road were damaged, one completely gutted.

The bomb contained nearly nine pounds of explosives, police said.

An anonymous caller to a news organization in Sydney claimed responsibility for the bomb attack on behalf of a group called the Greek-Bulgarian-Armenian Front.

The caller read a list of grievances against Turkey, including Turkish occupation of part of Cyprus, and said there would be more attacks.

Emergency services raced to the scene after residents were woken by the explosion.

already had failed, citing Secretary of State George Shultz's comments that Iran continues to sponsor terrorist acts and has been implicated in the recent kidnappings of three more Americans in Beirut.

"How can we even pretend to wage a war against terrorism while we are providing arms to terrorists?" Bellenson asked his radio audience.

Bellenson said Reagan had violated the Intelligence Oversight Act by failing to inform House and Senate leaders of the covert activities. He said congressional advice and input would have helped him "avoid terrible blunders like this one."

Nizar Hamdoun, Iraqul ambassador to the United States, said he did not think the Reagan administration could have been in contact with Iranian moderates without the knowledge of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

"I really feel that this contact was maintained with the government of Iran. I don't see how this thing could have been run for 18 months without the approval of Khomeini. Khomeini is still in control there," Hamdoun told interviewer John McLaughlin on the syndicated television show "One on One," taped Friday night.

Hamdoun said the U.S. weapons would not make it possible for Iran to win the war but would prolong it and give Iran a psychological advantage.

"This will leave them with a feeling that they can benefit from this blackmail or this sort of games," Hamdoun said. "Therefore, they find themselves more in a winning position — not over Iraq, but over the overall politics in the region and abroad."

According to House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Tex., the Iranians deposited more than $12 million in a Swiss bank to pay for the U.S. weapons they received. The arms, including 2,008 anti-tank weapons, were transferred from the military to the CIA for shipment to Iran, Pentagon sources told The Associated Press last week.

Roads in Twin Falls and Camas County were getting slick Saturday night as temperatures in the Magic Valley hovered near freezing.

The Idaho State Police reported a four-wheeler accident about 6:45 a.m. that forced the closing of three lanes of U.S. 93, three miles north of Hollister, for several hours early Saturday.

Police said the accident was not related to the weather and there were no injuries. A lumber truck involved in the accident spilled its cargo on the highway, forcing the closing, state police said.

Chance of Nevada fallout called small

SANTA CLARA, Utah (AP) — The likelihood of any radiation exposure to off-site populations from nuclear testing at the Nevada Test Site is measurably small, a Department of Energy official says.

However, said Robert W. Taft, assistant manager for engineering and safety at the Nevada Operations Office of the U.S. Department of Energy, "I don't want people to get the idea that anyone has guaranteed there won't be another event."

"That is why we go to such an enormous amount of trouble to make sure that everything is just right and that all safety precautions are met before a test is carried forward," he said.

Taft and officials involved in underground nuclear weapon testing and other DOE programs discussed the test site and the agency's Community Radiation Monitoring Program during a town meeting Thursday night.

Bruce Church, deputy assistant manager for the Nevada DOE office, said the agency occasionally delays tests for days to make sure the atmospheric conditions are just right, in case radiation is discharged from the underground test site. He said conditions are controlled for maximum safety of communities downwind.

DOE officials discussed measures taken in conjunction with the Environmental Protection Agency to protect the public from any above-normal radiation. The program started in August 1981 when 15 residents of communities around the test site were hired and trained to be station managers for the program.

The managers work equipment locally to detect airborne radioactivity, and filters showing amounts of radiation are sent regularly to the Nevada Operations Office at the University of Nevada.

Utah monitoring stations are located in St. George, Cedar City and Salt Lake City, with the others in small Nevada communities near the test site. The stations measure very low levels of radiation, well below the occupational limits set for workers at the test site, who come in contact with higher-than-normal amounts of radiation.

Church said normal levels of radiation received by people living close to the test site would be many times less than the 5,000 milliroentgens per year. Between 45 and 50 milliroentgens would be roughly equivalent to two or three chest X-rays.

Taft said the most-asked question he gets is why does nuclear testing continue, even after all the tests that have taken place.

"As long as nuclear weapons remain the cornerstone of our national defense and as a deterrent to war, we must continue to test," he said.

Taft also said the testing program is done with congressionally approved resources, and if people want the testing stopped, the answer is to get Congress to stop appropriating the funding.

The last time the Nevada Test Site had a radiation accident was the Balmberry Test in 1970, when a small amount of radiation was vented into the atmosphere, he said.

Taft said the Mighty Oak incident last April was not a radiation accident, but was misconstrued in the press.

Church said that less than 10 percent of the tests conducted at the site are secret for national security reasons, but that the unannounced tests are small and use less sensitive equipment in the western United States would detect large tests.

Ex-deputy sentenced in manslaughter case

BOISE (AP) — A former Ada County sheriff's deputy has been sentenced to six months in jail for the vehicular manslaughter of an Emmett woman.

Michael Valda, 31, Meridian, told 6th District Judge John Varin he may have experienced narcolepsy before the Aug. 21 accident, a sleeping disorder where the individual may fall asleep at any moment, and was "more or less unconscious at the time."

A car driven by Gary Griffiths, 44, Emmett, was rear-ended by Valda's car and burst into flames near Boise. Griffith's wife, Linda, 34, died at the scene from internal injuries.

Valda was arrested two hours after the accident and charged with one count each of vehicular manslaughter and failure to render aid at the scene of an accident, both misdemeanors. He pleaded guilty to both charges.

Valda was sentenced to 180 days in jail, beginning Dec. 15, with work release privileges after 30 days. Another 30-day jail sentence, to run concurrently, was imposed for leaving the scene of the accident. Valda also was sentenced to two years probation.

Valda's blood-alcohol content was .07. According to Idaho law, a motorist is considered drunk if his blood-alcohol content is 0.10 or above.

Canyon County Prosecutor Richard Harris was appointed special prosecutor to replace Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bower to avoid any appearance of conflict of interest involving another county employee.

"I think this allegation of narcolepsy is a red herring," Harris said. "The record reflects there was never any suspicion up until the day in question."

Ada County Undersheriff Dee Pfeiffer said the sheriff's office would appeal a court order requiring them to incarcerate Valda in Ada County Jail, if one is issued, because Valda would be incarcerated with people with whom he had worked.

Chavez claims grapes carry unsafe chemicals

BOISE (AP) — Farm union leader Cesar Chavez says it's a "national disgrace" that the federal Environmental Protection Agency allows grape growers to market their products with unsafe levels of chemical residue.

"It's a disaster, a national disaster. This is no laughing matter," said Chavez, president of the United Farm Workers.

In a weekend trip to southwestern Idaho to drum up support for the United Farm Workers' boycott effort against grapes produced by growers in California, Chavez alleged Saturday that the EPA has adopted weak standards for chemicals used in the production of grapes because it is a political arm of the growers.

"It's terrible that the American consumer places so much emphasis on pesticides that aren't protecting them," Chavez said.

He spoke Saturday to about 50 people in Boise. Most were Hispanics and union leaders, with a handful of Democratic state legislators attending.

Chavez, who is on a 24-city tour working on support for the grape boycott, planned to meet with Hispanics in Canyon County later in the day and then planned a fundraising event at Caldwell sponsored by the Idaho Migrant Council.

Chavez said vineyard workers and consumers are endangered by what he said is the reckless use of deadly poisons in agriculture.

He said every time the United Farm Workers test grapes, residue from pesticides and herbicides is found at levels unsafe for humans.

He said West German bans concentrations higher than five parts per million from Captain, a fungicide, in food designed for human consumption. The EPA standard is 50 parts per million.

Chavez said the union "totally disagrees" with many of the "tolerance levels" set by EPA.

In a statement issued earlier in the week, the Grape Workers and Farmers Coalition, Los Angeles, alleged Chavez is making the trip to start a new "chemical scare campaign" against non-union grape growers.

The coalition said Chavez wants to ban Methyl Bromide, Phosdrin, Parathion and Caplan from grapes, but says nothing about hundreds of other commodities across the U.S. also registered for their use.

"The Environmental Protection Agency and the California Department of Agriculture have year after year certified that California grapes are clean and wholesome," said coalition spokesman Adam Ortega.

He said Chavez' claims are politics, because he is saying nothing about the use of chemicals such as Caplan on other crops, such as Idaho potatoes.

C of I plans to establish Smylie archives center

CALDWELL (AP) — College of Idaho plans a $500,000 fundraising campaign to establish a historical center for one of its most famous graduates, former Idaho governor Robert E. Smylie.

The private, four-year liberal arts college announced Friday it is creating the new Robert E. Smylie Archives.

President Arthur DeRosier said it will serve as the center for the state and the federal government, and of the Idaho governorship. It also will serve as a repository for items of local and regional history, he said.

"The archives will house a rich collection of historical materials available nowhere else," DeRosier said. "It will add dimension to the historical understanding of the College of Idaho, the city and the region."

Smylie has donated his papers and memorabilia from 20 years of public service, DeRosier said.

Smylie, a 1938 College of Idaho graduate, was Idaho's attorney general from 1947-54. In 1954, he was elected to his first of three terms as Idaho governor. He served until 1967, after was defeated in the Republican primary in 1966 in his bid for a fourth term.

The 12 years Smylie served as

Idaho governor is the longest in state history. Gov. John Evans will leave office in January with nearly 10 years in the Statehouse.

"The College of Idaho has been part of my life for more than 50 years," said Smylie. He has served on the college's board of trustees for 18 years, including seven as chairman and a term as the college's acting president.

Smylie, a Boise lawyer, is an adjunct professor of political science at the college and chairman of the college's honorary committee.

"I hope the archives will grow to be a true center for the study of state and local government, for that facet of government truly touches the lives of every one of us," he said.

DeRosier said about 24 percent of the $500,000 goal already has been raised through private donations.

He said Mrs. David Rosenthal, Ketchum, and the Hearst Foundation, San Francisco, have made significant contributions and the Smylie family has pledged support.

In addition to Smylie's papers, the center will catalogue and preserve the writings and papers of politicians and others important to the region, including those of Inez Robb.

An Idaho native, Ms. Robb became a nationally syndicated columnist. Among her journalistic accomplishments, she was the only woman the Allied Command accredited to cover the European front during World War II, DeRosier said.

Nez Perce site discovered

AHSAKKA (AP) — A 4,000-year-old Nez Perce Indian site near Ahsakka has been discovered by University of Idaho archaeologists who hope to excavate the site before a boat ramp is built over it.

The six-acre site, contains articles from two time periods, according to David Chance, acting director of UI's anthropology laboratory. Some articles are at least 4,000 years old, while others are about 1,400 years old, he said.

Chance said archaeologists hope to excavate a home, a pit that apparently was used by Indians for cooking, and several animal bones.

The site, located on the banks of the Snake River, is important because other Nez Perce sites have been destroyed by development and flooding, he said.

"We only know of three or four that are in real good shape for archaeology work," he said.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers plans to build a boat ramp near the site over the river, but Chance said UI officials are working with the corps to determine whether excavation can be done first.

Excavation of the site, discovered in September, will be expensive, Chance said. He's contacted the National Park Service and tribal officials to determine whether either agency could help with funding.

Tanker accident closes highway

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Interstate 80 was closed for more than two hours Saturday after an oil tanker's cargo trailer was punctured, spilling some 4,500 gallons of crude oil onto the highway, fire officials said.

The tanker was traveling west-bound on I-80 near 13th East when the rig's tire blew and a section of steel from an overpass punctured a tank, said Varnel Parkinson, battalion chief for the Salt Lake City fire department.

The driver, Tommy W. Lay, of Vernal, was uninjured and managed to get the vehicle off the road near the 7th East exit, he said.

Firefighters worked for about 2 1/2 hours to stabilize and mop up the spill. Crude oil is transported in a heated state and is considered a fire hazard until it cools and gels, Parkinson said.

Some of the oil flowed down an off-ramp and into a sewer system and cleanup operations were continuing late Saturday, Parkinson said.

The tanker belonged to the W.S. Hatch Co. of Woods Cross and was believed to have been carrying the crude from eastern Utah oilfields to Salt Lake for re-refining.

The Interstate was reopened about 1 p.m. Saturday.

Parkinson said no one was injured, although several accidents occurred on eastbound lanes of I-80, mostly involving motorists who slowed down to gawk at the tanker accident.

BITING THE HAND THAT FEEDS

QUESTION: We have a beautiful, lovable, and gentle five month old puppy. The problem is he growls and bares his teeth if anyone approaches him when he is eating. How can we break him of this ugly habit?

ANSWER: First of all, it's not actually a habit, in the sense that it is something your puppy learned. One of a dog's ancestral instincts is to guard his food, and many a child has been bitten for getting too close to a feeding dog. Even the gentlest puppy may defend his food. So, probably the wisest and safest course is to leave him alone when eating. Also, you might try using a bone or dog biscuit for training. Give it to your puppy and take it away until some trust has developed.

Reagan

He has twice tried to put the Iran arms sale controversy behind him, and has twice failed, judging by the public opinion polls and the incessant criticism in Congress. Recent days have produced the following:

Following his nationally televised speech Nov. 13, a public opinion poll published by the Los Angeles Times reported that only 14 percent of those surveyed found Reagan's statement that he did not trade the weapons for American hostages in Beirut essentially true.

An ABC News poll released on Thursday reported that 57 percent of the public approved of the way the president is handling his job, a decline of 10 points since September. The network said that was the sharpest drop in five years. The poll also reported that 59 percent of those surveyed did not think the president has told the truth about the Iran operation.

In the 24 hours after Reagan's news conference Wednesday, Republicans and Democrats alike in Congress were calling the secret arms sale a mistake, and said the president may have broken the law by not telling Congress about the shipment. At his news conference, Reagan defended the sale and said he violated no law.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., who lost his chairmanship of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee when the GOP lost its Senate majority in this month's elections, told reporters Friday that the Reagan administration "is not falling apart."

But at the same time, Lugar, who has worked closely in the past with Secretary of State George Shultz, advised Reagan to remake the lineup of his administration.

"It needs to be strengthened. They need to bring in some big leaguers to run things," Lugar said, without mentioning names.

He added, "The Republican Senate gave them a good deal of protection these past six years. But that shield is gone."

Outgoing Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said of Reagan's aides, "I think they need to sort of have a meeting. I hear a lot of statements coming from people who were apparently involved, sort of pointing the finger of blame at one another. I don't believe that will be very helpful."

Added Dole, "I think most people would agree there was a mistake in judgment."

As Lugar pointed out, Reagan will face a Democratic-dominated Congress come January for the first time since he became president in 1981. And while Democrats emerged from the election professing a will to cooperate with him, they have not hesitated to criticize his Iran secrecy.

"The situation is really creating a creeping paralysis that is going to continue to sap the energies, the time of the administration — and the credibility of the nation is at stake," said Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

Except to call for a major shift in Congress' budget-voting process, the president has yet to lay out a legislative agenda for the coming months.

Democrats already have served notice that they will move swiftly to draft trade and farm bills, and challenge Reagan's policy of aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Group pushes for staff shake-up

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of President Reagan's California supporters is seeking a shake-up of the White House staff in the wake of criticisms of secret U.S. arms shipments to Iran; according to a published report.

The Washington Post, quoting sources in Sunday's editions, said the group is calling for the replacement of Secretary of State George Shultz, White House chief of staff Donald Regan and Adm. John Poindexter, the national security adviser.

The group is pushing for Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger to replace Shultz, and Drew Lewis, the former transportation secretary, to replace Regan, the newspaper said.

However, White House spokesmen and one of the California supporters listed by the Post, denied knowledge of any impending shake-up.

The newspaper quoted sources who said it was not certain whether the group would succeed in persuading the president to undertake the shake-up, but the sources said both Lewis and Weinberger would accept the positions if offered.

Holmes Tuttle, a wealthy California businessman who helped launch Reagan's political career, said he has had no conversations with Regan concerning a staff shake-up. Regan would not provide such advice unless asked and has not been asked.

Such a shake-up "would be totally out of character" for the president, said Holmes, who was reached at his home by telephone Saturday night.

Roman Popadiuk, a White House spokesman, had no comment on The Post's report Saturday night, saying, "I don't know of plans for a shake-up. I've heard no talk or mention of a shake-up."

The group, described as "Callfornians inside and outside the administration," is working with the encouragement of First Lady Nancy Reagan, who has privately been critical of Regan and Shultz, the newspaper reported.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III and former secretary of the Interior William P. Clark, also members of the group, have contacted Lewis in recent days about becoming chief of staff, the newspaper said.

Some members of the group have suggested former U.N. ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick as a possible replacement for Poindexter, the Post said.

Lewis, who is president and chief operating officer of Union Pacific Corp., could not be reached for comment Saturday night. Amy Brown, a Justice Department spokeswoman, declined to telephone Meese Saturday night.

Turkish consulate hit by car bomb, 1 dead

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — A car bomb exploded early Sunday in the basement garage of the Turkish consulate, killing one person and causing considerable damage to the five-story structure and nearby buildings, police said.

A police spokesman, who demanded anonymity, said officers found human remains scattered over a wide area, and he believed the body was that of the person who was among the bomb.

A 22-year-old student studying in an office on the third floor received cuts and was in shock, the spokesman said. Authorities evacuated 38 residents of the building, some of them elderly women.

The building is located in the fashionable suburb of South Yarra. The consulate is on the ground floor.

Gas leaking from the consulate building was quickly brought under control while 70 fire-fighters tackled fires that had broken out in shops and offices. Nineteen shops in nearby Toorak Road were damaged, one completely gutted.

The bomb contained nearly nine pounds of explosives, police said.

An anonymous caller to a news organization in Sydney claimed responsibility for the bomb attack on behalf of a group called the Greek-Britain-Armenian Front.

The caller read a list of grievances against Turkey, including Turkish occupation of part of Cyprus, and said there would be more attacks.

Emergency services raced to the scene after residents were woken by the explosion.

of both parties have criticized the administration for creating the perception that the United States swapped arms for hostages.

Many critics have said Reagan violated the law by keeping Congress in the dark, violated a U.S. policy of neutrality in the Iran-Iraq war, and undercut his own drive to keep other countries from selling arms to terrorist nations.

Reagan, whose actions first came to light in a Syrian publication in Beirut, has said his goal was and continues to be to establish ties with moderate Iranian officials.

White House Chief of Staff Don Regan compared the Reagan policy to President Nixon's secret initiative in 1972 that led to a reestablishment of ties with China.

"I think the jury is still out on whether the operation itself was conducted correctly," Regan said in an interview published in Saturday's Washington Post.

"Will it succeed? I don't know. I don't think the final chapter has been written on that."

But, Belleson said the policy

already had failed, citing Secretary of State George Shultz's comments that Iran continues to sponsor terrorist acts and has been implicated in the recent kidnappings of three more Americans in Beirut.

"How can we even pretend to wage a war against terrorism while we are providing arms to terrorists?" Belleson asked his radio audience.

Belleson said Reagan had violated the Intelligence Oversight Act by failing to inform House and Senate leaders of the covert activities. He said congressional advice and input would have helped him "avoid terrible blunders like this one."

Nizar Hamdoun, Iraq's ambassador to the United States, said he did not think the Reagan administration could have been in contact with Iranian moderates without the knowledge of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

"I really feel that this contact was maintained with the government of Iran. I don't see how this thing could have been run for 18 months without the approval of Khomeini. Khomeini is still in control there," Hamdoun told interviewer John McLaughlin on the syndicated television show "One on One," taped Friday night.

Hamdoun said the U.S. weapons would not make it possible for Iran to win the war but would prolong it and give Iran a psychological advantage.

"This will leave them with a feeling that they can benefit from this blackmail or this sort of games," Hamdoun said. "Therefore, they find themselves more in a winning position — not over Iran, but over the overall politics in the region and abroad."

According to House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Tex., the Iraqis deposited more than $2 million in a Swiss bank to pay for the U.S. weapons they received. The arms, including 2,000 anti-tank weapons, were transferred from the military to the CIA for shipment to Iran, Pentagon sources told The Associated Press last week.

Marcos spokesman Gemma Trinidad said Saturday evening in Honolulu that the former president had no comment on the latest developments in the Philippines.

Marcos, who fled to Hawaii after his ouster, was trying to gather information on the situation, Gemma said.

On Saturday night, a Moslem politician who supported Mrs. Aquino, Ubert Ulama Tugung, was killed outside a Manila hotel. Tugung, 47, was the third political figure assassinated in the Manila area in 10 days.

Enrile has criticized Mrs. Aquino's efforts to negotiate peace with Communist rebels. Ramos is widely credited with heading off a planned military move against the government earlier this month.

Tugung, chairman of the Western Mindanao autonomous government, was shot at about 9:45 p.m. by gunmen in a car as he waited in front of the Aurelio Hotel in central Manila. He had come to the capital to declare his support for rallying a

And there was another minor accident about two miles west of Grandview on Highway 30.

Roads in Twin Falls and Camas County were getting slick Saturday night as temperatures in the Magic Valley hovered near freezing.

The Idaho State Police reported a four-vehicle accident about 6:45 a.m. that forced the closing of three lanes of U.S. 92, three miles north of Hollister, for several hours early Saturday.

Police said the accident was not related to the weather and there were no injuries. A lumber truck involved in the accident lost its cargo on the highway, forcing the closing, state police said.

SANTA CLARA, Utah (AP) — The likelihood of any radiation exposure to the population from a nuclear testing at the Nevada Test Site is measurably small, a Department of Energy official says.

However, said Robert W. Taft, assistant manager for engineering and safety at the Nevada Operations Office of the U.S. Department of Energy, "I don't want people to get the idea that anyone has guaranteed that we won't have another event."

"That is why we go to such an enormous amount of trouble to make sure that everything is just right and that all safety precautions are met before a test is carried forward," he said.

Taft and officials involved in underground nuclear weapon testing and other DOE programs discussed the test site and the agency's Community Radiation Monitoring Program during a town meeting Thursday night.

Bruce Church, deputy assistant manager for the Nevada DOE office, said the agency occasionally delays tests for days to make sure the atmospheric conditions are just right. In case radiation is discharged from the underground test site, he said conditions are controlled for maximum safety of communities downwind.

DOE officials discussed measures taken in conjunction with the Environmental Protection Agency to protect the public from any above-normal radiation. The program started in August 1981 when 15 residents of communities around the test site were hired and trained to be station managers for the program.

The managers work equipment locally to detect airborne radioactivity, and filters showing amounts of radiation are sent regularly to the DOE's Nevada Operations Office at the University of Nevada.

Utah monitoring stations are located in St. George, Cedar City and Salt Lake City, with the others in small Nevada communities near the test site. The stations measure very low levels of radiation, well below the occupational limits set for workers at the test site, who come in contact with higher-than-normal amounts of radiation.

Church said normal levels of radiation received by people living close to the test site would be many times less than the 5,000 milliroentgens workers are allowed to receive in one year. Between 45 and 50 milliroentgens would be roughly equivalent to two or three chest X-rays said every time the Nevada Test Site had a radiation accident was the Banberry Test in 1970, when a small amount of radiation was vented into the atmosphere, he said. Taft said the Mighty Oak Incident last April was not a radiation accident, but was misconstrued in the press.

Church said that less than 10 percent of the tests conducted at the site are for national security reasons, but that the unannounced tests are of small yield because sensitive equipment in the western United States would detect large tests.

Taft said the most-asked question he gets is why does nuclear testing continue, even after all the tests that have taken place.

"As long as nuclear weapons remain the cornerstone of our national defense and as a deterrent to war, we must continue to test," he said.

Taft also said the testing program is done with congressional approval and resources, and if people want the testing stopped, the answer is to get Congress to stop appropriating the funding.

Ex-deputy sentenced in manslaughter case

BOISE (AP) — A former Ada County sheriff's deputy has been sentenced to six months in jail for the vehicular manslaughter of an Emmett woman.

Michael Valda, 31, Meridian, told 5th District Judge John Varin he may have experienced narcolepsy before the Aug. 21 accident, a sleeping disorder where the individual may fall asleep at any moment, and was "more or less unconscious at the time."

A car driven by Gary Griffiths, 44, of Emmett, was rear-ended by Valda's car and burst into flames near Boise. Griffiths' wife, Linda, 34, died at the scene from internal injuries.

Valda was arrested two hours after the accident and charged with one count each of vehicular manslaughter and failure to render aid at the scene of an accident, both misdemeanors. He pleaded guilty to both charges.

Valda was sentenced to 180 days in jail, beginning Dec. 15, with work release privileges after 30 days. Another 30-day jail sentence, to run concurrently, was imposed for leaving the scene of the accident. Valda also was sentenced to two years probation.

Valda's blood-alcohol content was .007. According to Idaho law, a motorist is considered drunk if his blood-alcohol content is 0.10 or above.

Canyon County Prosecutor Richard Harris was appointed special prosecutor to replace Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bower to avoid any appearance of conflict of interest involving another county employee.

"I think this allegation of narcolepsy is a red herring," Harris said. "The record reflects there was never any suspicion until the day in question."

Ada County Undersheriff Dee Pfeiffer said the sheriff's office would appeal a court order requiring them to incarcerate Valda in the Ada County Jail, if one is issued, because Valda would be incarcerated with people with whom he had worked.

Chavez claims grapes carry unsafe chemicals

BOISE (AP) — Farm union leader Cesar Chavez says it's a "national disgrace" that the federal Environmental Protection Agency allows grape growers to market their products with unsafe levels of chemical residue.

"It's a disaster, a national disaster. This is no laughing matter," said Chavez, president of the United Farm Workers.

In a weekend trip to southwestern Idaho to drum up support for the United Farm Workers' boycott of red agallifol grapes produced by non-union growers in California, Chavez alleged Saturday that the EPA has adopted weak standards for chemicals used in the production of grapes because it is a political arm of the growers. "It's terrible that the American consumer places so much emphasis on agencies that aren't protecting them," Chavez said.

He spoke Saturday to about 50 people in Boise. Most were Hispanics and union leaders, with a handful of Democratic state legislators attending.

Chavez, who is on a 24-city tour working on support for the grape boycott, planned a meet with Hispanics in Canyon County later in the day and then planned a fundraising event at Caldwell sponsored by the Idaho Migrant Council.

Chavez said vineyard workers and consumers are endangered by what he said is the reckless use of deadly poisons in agriculture. The United Farm Workers test grapes—residue from pesticides and herbicides is found at levels unsafe for humans.

He said West Germany bans concentrations higher than five parts per million from Caplan, a fungicide, in food designed for human consumption; the EPA standard is 50 parts per million.

Chavez said the union "totally disagrees" with many of the "tolerance levels" set by EPA.

In a statement issued earlier in the week, the Grape Workers and Farmers Coalition, Los Angeles, alleged Chavez is making the trip to start a new "chemical scare campaign" against non-union grape growers.

The coalition said Chavez wants to ban the use of national security pesticides, Phosdrin, Parathion and Caplan from grapes, but says nothing about hundreds of other commodities across the U.S. also registered for their use.

"The Environmental Protection Agency and the California Department of Agriculture have year after year certified that California grapes are clean and wholesome," said coalition spokesman Adam Ortega.

He said Chavez' claims are politics, because he is saying nothing about the use of chemicals such as Caplan on other crops, such as Idaho potatoes.

C of I plans to establish Smylie archives center

CALDWELL (AP) — College of Idaho plans a $500,000 fundraising campaign to establish a historical center for one of its most famous graduates, former Idaho governor Robert E. Smylie.

The private, four-year liberal arts college announced Friday it is creating the new Robert E. Smylie Archives. President Arville DeRoster said it will serve as the center for the study of state and local government, and of the Idaho governorship. It also will serve as a repository for items of local and regional history, he said.

"The archives will have a rich collection of historical materials available nowhere else," DeRoster said. "It will add dimension to the historical understanding of the College of Idaho, the city and the region."

Smylie has donated his papers and memorabilia from 20 years of public service, DeRoster said.

Smylie, a 1938 College of Idaho graduate, was Idaho attorney general from 1947-54. In 1954, he was elected to his first of three terms as Idaho governor. He served until 1957, after he defeated in the Republican primary in 1956 in his bid for a fourth term.

The 12 years Smylie served as

Idaho governor is the longest in state history. Gov. John Evans will leave office in January with nearly 10 years in the Statehouse.

"The College of Idaho has been part of my life for more than 50 years," said Smylie. He has served on the college's board of trustees for 18 years, including seven as chairman and a term as the college's acting president.

Smylie, a Boise lawyer, is an adjunct professor of political science at the college and chairman of the college's centenary committee.

"I hope the archives will grow to be a true center for the study of state and local government, for that facet of government truly touches the lives of every one of us," he said.

DeRoster said about 24 percent of the $500,000 goal already has been raised through private donations.

He said Mrs. David Rosenthal, Ketchum, and the Hearst Foundation, San Francisco, have made significant contributions and the Smylie family has pledged support.

In addition to Smylie's papers, the center will catalogue and preserve the writings and papers of politicians and others important to the region, including those of Inez Robb.

An Idaho native, Ms. Robb became a nationally syndicated columnist. Among her journalistic accomplishments, she was the only woman the Allied Command accredited to cover the European front during World War II, DeRoster said.

Nez Perce site discovered

AHSAHKA (AP) — A 4,000-year-old Nez Perce Indian site near Ahshahka has been discovered by University of Idaho archaeologists who hope to excavate the site before a boat ramp is built over it.

The six-acre site contains articles from two time periods, according to David Chance, acting director of UI's anthropology laboratory. Some articles are at least 4,000 years old, while others are about 1,400 years old, he said.

Chance said archaeologists hope to excavate a home, a pit that apparently was used by Indians for cooking, and several animal bones.

The site, located on the banks of the Snake River, is important because other Nez Perce sites have been destroyed by development and flooding, he said.

"We only know of three or four that are in real good shape for archaeology work," he said.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers plans to build a boat ramp near the site onto the river, but Chance said UI officials are working with the corps to determine whether excavation can be done first.

Excavation of the site, discovered in September, will be expensive, Chance said. He's contacted the National Park Service and tribal officials to determine whether either agency could help with funding.

Tanker accident closes highway

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Interstate 80 was closed for more than two hours Saturday after an oil tanker's cargo trailer was punctured, spilling some 4,500 gallons of crude oil onto the highway, fire officials said.

The tanker was traveling westbound on I-80 near 13th East when the rig's tire blew and a section of steel from an overpass punctured a tank, said Vernel Parkinson, battalion chief for the Salt Lake City fire department.

The driver, Tommy W. Lay, of Vernal, was uninjured and managed to get the vehicle off the road near the 7th East exit, he said.

Firefighters worked for about 2 1/2 hours to stabilize and mop up the spill. Crude oil is transported in a heated state and is considered a fire hazard until it cools and gels, Parkinson said.

Some of the oil flowed down an off-ramp and into a sewer system, and cleanup operations were continuing late Saturday, Parkinson said.

The tanker belonged to the W.S. Hatch Co. of Woods Cross and was believed to have been carrying the crude from eastern Utah oilfields to Salt Lake for refining.

The interstate was reopened about 1 p.m. Saturday.

Parkinson said no one was injured, although several accidents occurred on eastbound lanes of I-80, mainly involving motorists who slowed down to gawk at the tanker accident.

BITING THE HAND THAT FEEDS

QUESTION: We have a beautiful, lovable, and gentle five-month-old puppy. The problem is he growls and bares his teeth if anyone approaches him when he is eating. How can we break him of this ugly habit? ANSWER: First of all, it's not actually a habit, in the sense that it is something your puppy learned. One of a dog's ancestral instincts is to guard his food, and many a child has been bitten for getting too close to a feeding dog. Even the gentlest puppy may defend his food. So, probably the wisest and safest course is to leave him alone when eating. Also, you might try using a bone or dog biscuit for training. Give it to your puppy and take it away until some trust has developed.

Two alternatives to state C-average rule

The state Board of Education has asked for alternatives to its C-average rule, which requires students to earn a C-average in their core subjects to earn a high school diploma. Here are two:

Attendance certificate. The Board could give "attendance" certificates to those students who successfully attend high school but who are not able to make a C average in their core courses.

We do not buy the argument that students are entitled to a high school degree just for showing up. Establishing the C average rule was one attempt to have the high school diploma mean something.

It could accomplish that objective by giving those students who do the work the diploma they have earned, while giving others an "attendance" certificate.

That way, local boards would get to keep their attendance numbers — and the state money they are concerned about losing — but the high school diploma would be worth more than depreciated paper.

Reinstate curriculum tracks. When we were in high school, classes were divided for students of different abilities. Typical divisions were one track for college-bound students, one for business and vocational-bound students and a third for general education students.

A modified system of this type — with plenty of opportunities for students to move up — would go a long way to improving educational quality. The degree would state which "track" the student has completed.

It is neither elitist nor anti-democratic to create opportunities for those students who want and can use them.

Public schools have a duty to help those students who need it. But they also have a duty to create challenging opportunities for the best and brightest students.

It is just as important that local boards not cheapen the degrees of students who work for their grades as it is that boards provide ways for less talented and less motivated young people to get through school.

Attendance certificates and tracked curriculums would help establish both goals.

President Reagan should relinquish his grip on fantasy

There he goes again. That amiable, affable, lovable guy in the White House. He's so cute and sweet you want to hug him all the time, just like your favorite uncle.

If only he could tell the truth. Then he'd be perfect.

There he was at his press conference on national television Wednesday night, all racy-cheeked and cheerful, calling all the reporters by their first names. Helen and Mike and Sam and Bill and Trudy. One big happy family. That's why America loves him so.

And then he began doing it again. He began lying. He lied about arms shipments to Iran and about Secretary of State George P. Shultz and about Israel and about American hostages in Lebanon. He really told some whoppers. Some people thought they saw his nose growing.

After a while, the press conference began to wind down, everyone thought it was because he had run out of cock-and-bull stories. But just as they relaxed and started putting their notebooks away, he pulled another one out of his sleeve.

It happened when Sarah McClendon, a reporter who has a wonderful habit of asking crusty, unexpected, embarrassing questions, asked the avuncular old gentleman why his government wasn't doing more for all the hungry and cold homeless people who are multiplying in cities across the country.

First he said, "I think ... we are still spending more than has ever been spent before, trying to help the needy."

It was such an outrageous bit of taradiddle, coming from a president who has dedicated himself to cutting off aid to the helpless so as to compel them to help themselves and thereby restore the nation's traditional values, that I thought maybe the press corps would burst into boos and laughter. But they're a polite bunch and chose not to interrupt him.

So, encouraged, he went on to spin an even wilder yarn. He said that just that morning he had happened to read a newspaper story about a homeless family in New York City who were being sheltered in a welfare hotel at a rent of $37,000 a year. What puzzled him, he said, was "I wonder why somebody doesn't build them a house for $37,000."

Wow. Of all the tall tales this affable president has told at his press conferences, this was the lolapalooza of them all. Because, you see, the reason somebody doesn't build a house for this homeless family is that this very president and his band of merry men have decreed that the $37,000 cannot be used to create permanent housing for the poor. It can only be used to pay for temporary housing, like mass shelters and welfare hotels.

It was just such a welfare hotel whose rent he found appalling. It is in that dingy, drug-ridden hotel that the family he spoke about — Carmen Motta and her four children, ages 5 through 12 — live in two rooms on the sixth floor with no elevator and no kitchen but lots of mice. Rarely can they afford meat, and then it is only a few hot dogs, which Carmen Motta warms under the tap water.

Never mind that the general president exaggerated the rent of this particular family by more than $9,000. Never mind that he forgot to mention that a few months ago he cut the food stamp allowance of such families from $152 a month down to just $61.

Never mind that even after the city and state increased their portion of the food benefit to compensate partially for the federal reduction, this family of five, who were burned out of their apartment in Brooklyn, have to feed themselves on $3.61 per person per day. Never mind that this president has helped create the country's swelling homeless population by killing nearly all the programs of federal aid to put up low-income housing.

These are but minor fibs and omissions for this grand master of the tall tale. He doesn't trouble himself about such inconsequential disinformation. He's got the big lie, with the grand punch line. He wants you to remember him as the Great Dissimulator. President Catch-22.

I hate to bother him with some facts, but they do press themselves forward for attention. At the moment in New York City, 25,155 homeless human beings are receiving government shelter. Many thousands more are living on the streets, in doorways, on benches, under bridges. The numbers will rise as winter sets in.

Of the 26,155, 9,614 are individuals who live in group shelters, for whom the federal government provides no money for housing. The rest are families with 16,541 members — 5,659 adults and 10,882 children. Their costs at present amount to about $16 million a year, and the federal government pays half of this — apparently because it believes in family values. That's $80 million, provided under a program known as EAF — Emergency Assistance to Families. But, remember, the catch is that the money set down by the lovable uncle in Washington says that the $80 million can be used only for "emergency" shelter and never to provide permanent homes.

So our President Tall-Tale can stop whoppers. If he ever gets a momentary hankering for reality — why somebody doesn't build them a house for $37,000."

But I kind of doubt that he'll relinquish his grip on fantasy. After all, isn't he the affable fellow who told us not long ago that "the people who are sleeping on the grates ... are homeless, you might say, by choice."

Thank you, Mr. President.
Sydney Schanberg writes for Newsday.

Iranian episode radiates incompetence

WASHINGTON — If, as is said, there is nothing like a calamity to take your mind off your troubles, the administration can console itself with this thought about the mishandling of the aftermath of its Iran misadventure: No one is talking about the deficit.

The misadventure now has the familiar attribute of Washington's consuming obsessions: The result of each attempt to put it to rest is an exponential growth in the number of questions about it.

A presidential speech and news conference have been devoted to it, and all they have accomplished is to put the President on the edge of a precipice.

He seems defensive, evasive, ill at ease — in short the one thing he of all leaders dare not seem: out of character. We may be about to see realized the potential volatility of public opinion that has been fixed on an intensely personal affection for a President's personality.

Today the nation's mind is ambivalent, unformed — soft wax ready to receive fresh imprints. Hence Bushy notes that 20 percent of those who voted Nov. 4 did so in eight states (Alabama, Alaska, California, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, New York, Pennsylvania) that elected four Democratic and four Republican governors, with in each case choosing a senator of the other party.

Another clue to the country's mood is this: Of the 13 new senators, nine have served in the House, one has served there and in a Cabinet office (Brock Adams, Washington Democrat), three others have been governors (Democrats Sanford of North Carolina and Graham of Florida and Republican Bond of Missouri). The electorate is in no mood for amateur hour in Washington. It craves competence.

George Will

The Iranian episode radiates incompetence — in its substance, execution and apology. This, after the Daniloff and Iceland episodes, has encouraged this judgment: The aides in close contact with President Reagan today are the least distinguished such group to serve any President in the postwar period.

The nation's disposition regarding Reagan may be quite changeable, not because the nation is unusually volatile, but because of the nature of Reagan's relationship with the nation. After the loss of the Senate, his people deflected the suggestion that he is a lame duck, arguing that no one enjoying such a high job approval rating, and a personal popularity unrivaled since Eisenhower, can be lame.

But the bolting of Iran policy will take a toll on job approval. Even more important, his personal popularity will decline, perhaps precipitously, unless he and his administration quickly put an end to the treachery, sophistry, score settling among rivals trying to keep their skirts clean, and grudging over-lawyered explanations. The presidency is an inherently, meaning constitutionally, weak office. There is little a President can do on his own — except sway the country and by doing so move Congress. Thus, the power of the presidency, unlike, say, the power of the office of the British prime minister, varies substantially with the qualities of the occupant. And the power of a particular President can vary radically with swings in the public's perceptions of him.

Reagan's hold on the country's affection rests to a remarkable degree on his reputation as a politician of clear principles clearly spoken. The average citizen, seeing the only slightly attentive citizen, values Reagan as a leader precisely because we need not listen closely to him, lest we be tricked by him.

Clarity and consistency, important to any President, are especially so to this one because the average citizen, rather than rely on reputation for expertise, form an unusually large part of the foundation on which approval of him rests.

What caused scalding criticism of the President from some usually sympathetic persons during the Daniloff affair was the words — meaningless — whatever we choose abuse of language: The swap was no swap, the summit not a summit.

Similar intellectual corruption has seeped into administration statements about Iran, evasive statements that have been too-clever-by-half concerning who U.S. officials are dealing with in Iran and why.

George Will writes for Newsweek.

Expansion of developed economies hurts the Third World

BARCELONA, Venezuela — It is ironic that Americans' renewed optimism about their prosperity comes at a time when the economies of our Third World allies are in disarray and their futures increasingly bleak. Actually, the concurrence of good fortune and bad is not entirely coincidental. Expansion of the developed economies has been made possible by the relentless downward trend in the prices of oil and other Third World raw-material exports.

Acute stagnation and recession are sorely testing both recently established democracies like Argentina and longstanding ones like Venezuela, which in scope of effect has been the Latin American country most pained by falling export prices.

In the 1970s, as oil prices skyrocketed from $2 per barrel to $4, Venezuela adopted a course of "sowing the oil" — injecting large sums into economic diversification. The centerpiece of this ambitious program was the Orinoco Steel Works, the state-run steel industry. Ten years later, not only has the project had its budget slashed, but also accusations of dumping lodged by U.S. steel companies in Washington have forced it to "voluntarily" restrict exports to its most important market.

In the 1970s Venezuela viewed the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries as the vehicle for overcoming underdevelopment in the short-term future. When oil prices nose-dived in the 1980s, these hopes were dashed, and political and business leaders began to question the organization's efficacy. Fedecamaras, Venezuela's equivalent of our Chamber of Commerce, at its last national convention called for a "new strategy" that would "alter our presence within OPEC, without signifying actually dropping out."

Still, most Venezuelans cling to OPEC as the only real hope for raising sufficient capital to promote development and stabilize the nation's share of the world market. The alternative, reaching an agreement with the United States in order to achieve these same objectives, is generally considered unlikely. For decades Venezuelans have argued that the United States should give their oil preferential treatment in recognition of their nation's reliability, proximity and democratic system — all of which contrast with the Middle Eastern producers. Washington periodically recognized the validity of this claim and has pledged to take it into consideration, but the promises have never materialized. In fact, they have been upended.

Venezuela was stunned and infuriated last month when, contrary to insiders' predictions of a veto, President Reagan signed the toxic-waste cleanup bill that included a tax on imported oil. Venezuela is already reeling from a $100 billion foreign debt on top of a 40 percent decline in oil income — virtually its only source of foreign exchange.

Next month OPEC will consider a return to a uniform fixed price — $18 per barrel, about $3 above October's average. (In July, Venezuela registered the lowest of published members' prices: $7.55.)

Should OPEC fail to recover its strength, Venezuela will be forced to fall back on purely defensive measures. This is the approach being pursued by other Latin American nations whose main attention is focused on budgetary cuts to raise enough money to make good on their foreign debts. Naturally such a rear-guard action does not engender widespread support, enthusiasm and hope, and thus serves only to undermine democratic regimes.

Venezuelans are anything but apologetic about their nation's membership in OPEC. Former President Carlos Andres Perez told me in an interview: "OPEC is no different from the oligopolies that control the economy of the developed nations and set prices on commodities ranging from steel to pocketbooks. That OPEC's agreements are formal rather than tacit, as are those of the oligopolies, does not make them any the more binding or effective." If ever the unrelenting rhetoric against OPEC was unjustified, it is now that the prices of oil have plunged to half their previous levels. OPEC should be viewed not as a conspiracy to bilk the countries of the developed world but as part of a strategy designed by oil-producing countries to deal with pressing economic problems — the same ones that are faced by all developing nations.

The faltering behavior of oil prices in recent years is just the most extreme case of other common afflictions that represent the lifeline of Third World economies. Those in the United States who advocate restriction of imports and reprisals against OPEC would do well to keep in mind that, while protectionism is not likely to destabilize our European allies, it may make the difference between democracy and dictatorship in many Third World nations.

Restricting the National Security Council is a poor idea

WASHINGTON — The White House handling of the Iranian arms sales blunder has led to talk of curbing the power of the National Security Council staff. It is this means restrictive legislation. It is a bad idea and it won't work. The president needs a national security adviser who can give him advice without being encumbered by formal reporting requirements to Congress. But the president should have a stronger, more effective staff capable of implementing a coherent foreign policy. This, for two reasons: the president himself and the changing role of the United States in the world.

The intricacies of foreign policy, especially in an area so laden with Machiavellian undercurrents as the Middle East, has never been the president's strong point. Even if George P. Shultz were given more formal power in the decision-making process, he cannot, from his office, be President Reagan's alter ego all the time. The job of secretary of state is to run foreign policy on a day-to-day basis and, in this capacity, he is often out of the country, sometimes for weeks on end. Yet the president must have immediate access to the best possible advice on all national security matters, including those not formally under State Department control — for example, military and intelligence matters. It is the prerogative of the president to make foreign policy and to override his subordinates if he sees fit.

The president must be able to organize the White House the way he wants. His advisers must be able to act on occasion without going through normal channels, provided no laws are violated. All modern presidents have used their staff for sensitive missions — as distinct from operations — and should continue to do so. If Congress, in a fit of pique over the Iranian affair, were to introduce new laws constricting the NSC adviser, the president can and should appoint somebody else to be his confidential aide on sensitive matters, while choosing a fit candidate for the national security adviser job. With regard to the NSC staff, the problem is more complex. There are over 40 substantive staff members covering the entire range of national security affairs. They can be divided into two categories: regional specialists and functional specialists. The former include those with responsibility for a geographic region — for example, Africa or East Asia. These jobs dovetail with regional bureaus at the State Department and the Central Intelligence Agency. Functional specialists cover such subjects as international economics, intelligence, political-military affairs and arms control. In addition to their designated areas of responsibility each staff member spends a certain amount of time being part protocol officer — signing off on presidential thank-you letters — and part diplomat — meeting with foreign ambassadors and specialists.

Unlike people of equivalent rank in other agencies, the day-to-day agenda of the NSC staff is often quite flexible. Aside from specific tasks relating to the President's schedule, each staff member has considerable discretion as to what issues to become deeply involved with or not. Since it is impossible to keep abreast of all the issues going on in your country, you have to make a judgment as to what is important and what can be left to the bureaucracy. By inference, this usually means that you focus on two categories: First, those that directly affect the president. Second, those that are either intrinsically important — for example, nuclear strategy — or those that command the headlines. Just as different presidents use their staff in different ways, so does each national security adviser. Four recent advisers: Richard V. Allen, William B. Clark, Robert C. McFarlane and John M. Poindexter have had very different managerial styles and, most important, different relationships with the president and his chief domestic advisers.

For many staffers, the golden age was the tenure of Clark, who would bring staff members to the morning briefings of the president and let them have their say. However, such routine access to the Oval Office for staff members is very unusual.

Where into this scheme of things does my former colleague, the now legendary Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, fit? According to my judgment, right in the middle. That is to say he has been an effective staff because of his hard work, dedication and longevity on the job — he is approaching his sixth year at the White House. If I were a hostage I would want Oliver as my case officer. Effective "can-do" staffers are invaluable and for this reason become key players in any organization. However, responsibility for ensuring that their actions are in tune with overall policy must rest with their bosses.

In this day and age the role of NSC staff is bound to be important and cannot be "downgraded" no matter what the individual quirks of personalities involved. There is one good reason for this. The business of managing national security policy is too complex a matter to be left to individual Cabinet officers. Unlike the 1950s, when John Foster Dulles, cool, indeed, he Dwight D. Eisenhower's "vicar" of foreign policy, today new global realities have made international economics, finance and trade key elements of our world position. Foreign policy decisions not only need input from State, Defense and the CIA, but also the Treasury, Commerce and Agriculture departments, the Special Trade Representative and the Department of Justice.

As foreign policy becomes more complex, it inevitably becomes more divisive. The president is forced more and more to choose between different, and sometimes bitterly fought-over, options. By default, a weak NSC staff encourages inter-agency squabbles and paralyzes coherent decision making. What is needed is a strong, professional staff that has good relations with other agencies and, above all else, good judgment.

How then can one reconcile these arguments for a strong NSC with the mess caused by the Iranian caper? There is no easy answer. The decision to ship arms to Iran was clearly a colossal error that compromised an otherwise sensible plan to make contact with the Iranian government. But since it appears the key Cabinet officers — Shultz, Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger and CIA Director William J. Casey knew about it, it is reasonable to ask why they were so passive in opposing the plan? And if they were not, and did speak up forcefully and have their day in court, then, although the president's ultimate decision was a bad one, the system worked. So what, if anything should be done? The preferred remedies cannot be legislated. Iranian-type operations should not be planned, let alone carried out, without the active participation of representatives from State, Defense and the CIA. If we cannot trust our own colleagues, we should not attempt operations which, on the face of it, assume a group of Iranians, or whoever, will be more reliable. As it turns out the Iranian operation was known to a motley assortment of Iranian revolutionaries, international arms merchants and the Israeli government, while being kept from key leaders in Congress. This was the silliest mistake of all.

The president blundered. This goes with the job and there can be no guarantees he will not make more mistakes. But to reduce such risks he must strengthen the existing NSC system not weaken it. He needs more Iranian experts not fewer, and better advice on what really counts — common sense.

Geoffrey Kemp, who served as Special Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs from 1981-85, is a senior associate at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

NSC should not run secret operations

The National Security Council is in the news for reasons that can only startle old NSC hands. It is caught up in controversy over its role in conducting a series of covert operations, notably the program of military aid to Iran in exchange for help on release of Americans held hostage in Lebanon.

Capitol Hill is calling once again for drastic measures to rein in the president's assistant for national security affairs accountable to Congress. Both the administration's actions and congressional proposals are badly in error.

How did the National Security Council, a presidential policy advisory body, get into the business of conducting secret operations? In the period from its establishment in 1947 to the end of the Eisenhower administration in 1961, the NSC was what it appeared to be: a Cabinet-level committee designed to advise the president on issues involving the integration of military, foreign and domestic policies relating to U.S. national security.

Beginning in 1961 with the Kennedy administration and continuing to the present time, the emphasis has shifted from the role of the council to the role of its staff. An active NSC staff became, in effect, the White House staff for national security matters, and the president's assistant for national security affairs became the manager of the president's national security business. The council itself became a less important body.

Until 1969, however, the emphasis was overwhelmingly on the advisory role of the staff. The staff and the assistant sought to ensure that the issues were addressed by the president on the basis of the best advice available. But they did not themselves, with some very minor exceptions, conduct foreign policy. Their roles were also largely played behind the scenes instead of in front of the cameras.

President Nixon, however, wanted to run foreign policy directly out of the White House. His assistant for national security affairs, Henry A. Kissinger, crossed two key lines — first between policy adviser and diplomat, maker, implementer, and later between confidential assistant and public defender of policies. With Kissinger involved in secret Vietnam negotiations, back-channel diplomacy on strategic arms limitation, secret trips to China and arrangements for the Moscow summit meeting, the NSC apparatus went operational.

Since the days of Nixon and Kissinger, the NSC's staff has acquired its own press relations office and — especially under Robert C. McFarlane — has become actively involved in lobbying on Capitol Hill.

The addition of a responsibility for covert operations, while a further extension of this historical role, for several reasons it is a very bad one. It is one of the first precepts of covert operations that you keep them far away from the president's office. The president should be able to honestly deny knowledge of specific activities (President Reagan, of course, severely bent this rule when he began to make presidential speeches on behalf of "covert" aid to the Nicaraguan con-

Robert H. Johnson

As most administrations have learned, the covert operators must be kept on a tight rein because they often come up with ill-thought-out proposals for action. Linking such operations directly to the president's office and eliminating State Department review of covert-action proposals enhances the prospects for disaster, as we have been learning.

There is, moreover, a basic incompatibility between the NSC staff role in ensuring that the president hears a wide range of policy views and its involvement in implementing a particular set of policies or programs. The apparent immediate reason for this new departure is also bad: It reflects a kind of hubris about the political invulnerability of the president; it is possible because the NSC staff now has its own covert operations specialist — Martin L. Oliver North: It is a way of bypassing congressional oversight; it permits the White House to pursue certain favorite causes — such as contra aid, the overthrow of Moammar Gadhafi and the release of hostages — in a more unrestricted way, but in dissociation from broader foreign-policy concerns.

If the practice is not stopped, it could seriously damage a system for the development of confidential policy advice that has been successful in meeting the varying needs of presidents since Harry S. Truman.

Congress ought not to act to make the president's national security assistant subject to senatorial confirmation and require him or his staff to testify publicly on Capitol Hill. That would undermine their confidential advisory role and destroy their raison d'être. Rather, Congress should consider revising the National Security Act of 1947 to make it as explicit as possible that the role of the National Security Council and its staff must not include responsibility for conducting operations. Kissinger came to regret the shift to an operational role for the NSC; it is time to reverse that action.

Past 100 days have been trying for Schultz

By GEORGE GEDDA
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Last Aug. 15, Secretary of State George Schultz was relaxing with aides during an official visit to the Dominican Republic and looking forward to a California vacation that was to begin the next day.

Since he had no more appointments scheduled, Schultz smirked and said as far as he was concerned, his vacation had already begun.

That was 100 days ago. The period since then has been perhaps the most trying of his stewardship, a time in which Schultz has often found himself attempting to make the best of bad situations involving adversaries both abroad and within the administration.

Analysis

deterioration of Schultz's relations with the White House.

Successes haven't been easy to come by for Schultz. Just to get Daniloff's release required 20 hours of arduous negotiations with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze. And some felt Schultz paid too high a price when, in return for Daniloff, he agreed to Zakharov's release.

Many have wondered over the past three months — perhaps including Schultz himself — whether, after 4½ years, it was time for him to retire to less burdensome pursuits.

In recent weeks he has been torn by his desire to do what is right and to be loyal to President Reagan, and sometimes the gap between the two has seemed unbridgeable, those close to him say.

The administration's credibility has been repeatedly called into question over the past two months. And Schultz's spokesman, Bernard Kaib, resigned last month because of the administration's reported attempt to weaken Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi through a disinformation campaign.

The Iceland summit produced its own set of credibility problems. Many did not buy the administration's argument that the summit really wasn't a summit after all but merely a prelude to a full-blown summit.

Possibly the most memorable moment of Schultz's tenure as secretary occurred on Oct. 11 at Reykjavik when, with grit etched on his face, an exhausted Schultz spoke of his "deep disappointment" over the superpowers' inability to make an arms control breakthrough.

This was followed by a media blitz, led by Schultz himself, aimed at erasing the image of failure at Reykjavik and portraying the summit as a success — the meeting that set the stage for an eventual arms reduction agreement with Moscow. Three weeks ago in Vienna, however, Schultz's attempt during meetings with Shevardnadze to build on the Reykjavik talks ended in a stalemate.

But the biggest setback for Schultz and the administration has been Iran. Schultz was faced with the unenviable task, once the arms sales to Iran became public, of explaining to America's allies what had happened.

After all, the allies had been assured that the United States favors neither side in the Iran-Iraq war, that it opposes arms sales to either side from all sources and does not buy the freedom of American hostages.

Once the overtone became public, the White House ordered Schultz to say nothing about it. In effect, the chief foreign policy spokesman for the administration was muzzled, a humiliation with few precedents.

Schultz also has concluded that he was virtually excluded from the Iran initiative — only to be contradicted by former national security adviser Robert McFarlane, one of the chief architects of the plan.

If there is any mitigating factor in this for Schultz, it is that he opposed a policy that appears to have backfired on the administration. His standing among his colleagues at the State Department appears never to have been higher, but at the White House the anti-Schultz sentiment is increasing.

Few qualities are more highly prized at the White House than loyalty of the president, and Schultz, by implying the president's Iran policy was mistaken, has run afoul of most of Reagan's senior staff.

Schultz angered the White House last December by opposing Reagan's proposal for widespread use of polygraphs for government officials and this past summer the reaction was the same when Schultz objected to subsidized grain sales to the Soviet Union. And now, by disassociating himself from the Iran initiative, Schultz has "outdone himself," said one White House critic, speaking on condition he not be identified.

Reagan himself said Wednesday night he wants Schultz to stay on. But his endorsement of Schultz was tepid at best, suggesting he has his own reservations about the secretary.

Officials acknowledge that it is not easy to replace a man with Schultz's credentials — he is a former secretary of the departments of Labor and Treasury, a former director of the Office of Management and Budget and a former president of the Bechtel Group, a major transnational construction corporation. No recent secretary of state has had as kept a grasp of international economic policy as Schultz. Schultz, who assumed his duties in July 1982, appears intent on remaining in his job. But given the turmoil of the past few months, it seems certain that he has asked himself the same question Reagan used to ask in a different context: "Are you better off than you were four years ago?"

Arms sale unlikely to tip war balance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran buys about half its weapons from Soviet allies and another third from China, receiving the remainder from gray and black market sources in the West and developing world, according to administration officials.

The figures support the assertion by President Reagan that U.S. arms shipments to Iran, via Israel and possibly other countries, would not tip the tide in the six-year-old Iran-Iraq war, a see-saw conflict waged largely by infantry forces.

"Remember this has largely been an infantry war fought with lightly armed foot soldiers," said one source who closely monitors the war. "The Iranian arsenal has been badly depleted," leaving Iraq with about a 4-to-1 edge in tanks and a similar advantage in warplanes, said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

It was not clear how the administration, by shipping anti-tank and anti-aircraft weapons to Iran, intended to help end the war, as Reagan contended in his news conference Wednesday night.

The Iraqi ambassador to Washington, Nizar Hamdon, said that the U.S. shipments to the Iranians "will help them to continue the war."

"Any policy that tries to appease the Iranian government is quite dangerous, no matter what the intentions behind it were," Hamdon said in an interview with The New York Times. U.S. officials have "publicly and privately entreated" China, the Soviet Union and other nations to stem to flow of weapons, but these efforts may be undercut by disclosures of the secret American arms sales, administration sources said.

Iran appears to have intensified its stockpiling of weapons in recent months, in apparent preparation for a long-awaited "final offensive" pledged by the nation's spiritual patriarch, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, sources said.

The onset of the rainy season in the Persian Gulf may further delay the Iranian offensive, according to Pentagon and State Department sources.

The imported weapons are believed to have been distributed more or less evenly between the armed forces, which contain many officers who were commissioned before the 1979 revolution, and the Revolutionary Guards, which consist largely of ground forces intensely loyal to Khomeini.

Some reports have suggested that the U.S. shipments were earmarked for the armed forces, which have long-standing if clandestine ties with Israel. One administration source, however, discouraged such speculation, saying "we have no way of determining exactly who received the weapons."

Despite the U.S. sales, said to have included 2,008 TOW anti-tank missiles and 25 Hawkeye anti-aircraft missile units, Iran apparently has been unable to obtain spare parts for aircraft it needs to overcome the substantial Iraqi advantage in the skies.

Contras and Sandinistas dig in for a long war of attrition

EDITOR'S NOTE — Formed in 1981 by a handful of former Nicaraguan national guardsmen of the Somoza regime, the anti-Sandinista Contra guerrillas today claim a fighting force of 18,000 men, bolstered by $100 million in U.S. aid. With the money flowing in, a roving Central American correspondent of The Associated Press writes of where the Contras are likely to go from here.

By REID G. MILLER
The Associated Press

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — As new U.S. aid begins to flow to the Contra rebels, both they and the Sandinista government of Nicaragua are digging in for a costly war of attrition. Sandinista leaders stockpile Soviet-bloc arms, speak confidently of containing the enemy but no longer boast of a quick victory.

The Contras talk of a long campaign and openly acknowledge the $100 million they are getting from the United States will not be enough to assure triumph over the left-wing government.

"It would be an illusion to think that that's going to be enough," Alfonso Robelo recently told reporters in San Jose, Costa Rica. "We are going to have to ask for more."

Robelo is one of three top leaders of the United Nicaraguan Opposition (UNO), through which the aid is being channeled by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency. The Contras, who claim a force of 18,000, are the largest, best equipped military power in Central America, an army of some 100,000 regulars and reservists armed with Soviet-bloc weapons.

Robelo, fellow Contra leaders, and diplomatic and other sources interviewed by The Associated Press in Central America and Washington paint this picture of the rebels' strategy over the next six months:

The training by U.S. Army Special Forces (Green Berets) of a cadre of Contra officers and non-commissioned officers in leadership, tactics, special weapons and communications, with an emphasis on respect for human rights.

This likely will be done at one of several possible military bases in the southern United States, with the cadre then returning to train and lead Contra forces now based primarily in camps scattered across Honduras' southern border with Nicaragua.

Acquisition with $70 million in U.S. aid of better, more secure communications gear, planes and helicopters for supply and medical evacuation, and new weapons, including hand-to-hand missiles like the Stinger, the Sandinista army's Soviet-made attack and supply helicopters.

A gradual expansion of the rebels' presence and fighting ability inside Nicaragua, coupled with programs aimed at establishing clandestine guerrilla cells in Nicaragua's major cities and winning popular support.

Nicaraguan officials in Managua speculate that the Contras might attack or even try to seize the ports of El Bluff and Puerto Cabezas along the country's isolated, lightly populated Atlantic coast. They also expect attacks along the Pacific coast, including strikes at the important port of Corinto.

Both Robelo and Adolfo Calero, head of the largest Contra combat force, the Nicaraguan Democratic Front (FDN), have urged a slow, steady buildup, although they acknowledge some political pressure in the United States for quicker, more dramatic gains.

"There is tension in Washington between politicians who want big victories and professionals who advocate a prolonged war of attrition," said one of the diplomats interviewed. "The campaign to refund the Contras will begin in February of next year, and it could be an even tougher ball game with the Democrats back in control of the Senate."

The establishment of an office in San Jose, Costa Rica, of a new human rights commission to monitor compliance by Contra troops with new guidelines of conduct. This would be financed by part of the $30 million of the U.S. aid package set aside for non-military use. The commission has already been named but is not fully functioning.

Although he insists most reports of Contra atrocities are untrue or exaggerated, Robelo acknowledges that "we are going to have to change our image" before asking for more money from Washington.

The possible creation of a commission to draft a provisional constitution for Nicaragua. Sources said current plans call for the commission to take testimony from constitutional experts in Latin America, North America and Europe. The Sandinistas plan to put their own new constitution into effect in late December. It, too, was drafted after the government invited recommendations from constitutional authorities from around the world. Establishment of a new, more powerful radio station to help win popular support. It would be funded privately, sources said, and replace the Contra's current clandestine station, Radio 15th of September, which cannot be heard clearly in many parts of Nicaragua.

"More importantly, it would offer professional programming and news aimed at attracting and holding an audience," said an American source who frequently advises the Contras. "One of the biggest problems the Contras have is that they haven't been able to get their message across."

Some critics, however, suggest an even bigger problem is that the Contras have not had a viable message to offer, that they have not yet given Nicaraguans a clear, attractive alternative to Sandinista rule. "Until they think the Contras can win, nobody is going to stick his head out," another Western diplomat in Managua said. "People are not happy—they are struggling. But this doesn't translate into support for the Contras." The Sandinistas constantly portray the rebels as "mercenaries," "puppets of the CIA," and killers of innocent men, women and children through indiscriminate mining of roads and attacks on rural farm cooperatives. Many Sandinista reports of innocent civilian deaths have been independently verified by reporters and human rights organizations. But perhaps the worst epithet the Arturo Cruz said in a recent interview is the term "Somocistas," which true that we are Somocistas or that means followers of the Somoza family that ran Nicaragua for nearly 40 years before the Sandinistas' revolutionary victory in 1979.

"Nobody would ever want to return to those days," Contra leader, Sandinista can hurt at the Contras view. "And it is of course simply not is the term 'Somocistas,' which true that we are Somocistas or that means followers of the Somoza family that ran Nicaragua for nearly 40 years before the Sandinistas' revolutionary victory in 1979.

Police arrest man charged in attack of Calif. official

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A parolee charged in the ax-attack robbery of California's secretary of state was arrested after being tracked down by a gold-toothed German shepherd in Beverly Hills, police said Saturday.

Gregory Lee Moore, 27, of Los Angeles, who was arrested last Friday about two miles from the home of Secretary of State March Fong Eu, has been linked to 19 other break-ins since mid-September, including one shortly before the arrest, said Assistant Police Chief Robert Vernon.

Eu was badly battered by the blunt end of an ax while dragging her by the hair through her home in the exclusive Hancock Park area Nov. 10.

Fingerprints helped investigators identify Moore on Wednesday as Eu's attacker. He was charged with murder.

Moore was charged on Friday, after the arrest, with three counts of residential robbery, including an allegation of great bodily injury, and five counts of burglary, district attorney's spokesman Al Albergale said.

Moore was paroled in August after serving about nine months of a 2-year sentence for possession of stolen property. His arrest record dates back to 1975, and he was jailed briefly for five prior convictions, Vernon said.

"I hope this time they put him away for a long time," Vernon said. "This guy is dangerous to our community."

Investigators believe Moore may be responsible for as many as 14 identical robberies in Hancock Park, including the Nov. 10 attack on Eu, and six in Beverly Hills, Vernon said. The police official alleged that Moore supported a cocaine habit through burglaries and break-ins.

Autoworkers vote in favor of contract

KOKOMO, Ind. (AP) — Autoworkers at a key parts plant voted overwhelmingly in favor of a new contract Saturday, ending a six-day strike that forced the layoffs of 37,550 General Motors Corp. employees nationwide.

With about 3,000 votes cast, approximately 99 percent of the striking Delco Electronics plant workers approved the new contract, said Mike Thayer, shop Chairman of United Auto Workers Local 292.

The 7,700 UAW workers at the GM subsidiary, which makes and ships parts used in all GM cars, walked off the job Monday in a dispute over job subcontracting and transfer of some radio work to Mexico.

By Friday, the ensuing parts shortage had forced 37,550 layoffs at other GM plants. By Monday, more than 47,000 workers at 16 assembly plants nationwide will be laid off, Jim Mueller, a GM spokesman in Detroit, said Saturday. Those plants are in Missouri, Louisiana, Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky, Kansas, Indiana and Delaware.

"What has to happen is that we have to get the pipeline filled up again. We have to get the parts from Kokomo to those places before they're called back to work," Mueller said.

John Grix, another company spokesman in Detroit, said the firm was working to determine how long it would take to return the affected plants to full production once the Kokomo strikers return to work.

Thayer estimated the first full shift of Delco employees would return to work around midnight Sunday.

Thayer said the new contract keeps radio production at the Kokomo plant. In return, employees promoted to a new radio product line would not transfer to other units for 12 months, saving the company training costs.

He said that during negotiations, which ended early Friday, GM offered to keep the radio lines in Kokomo if UAW negotiators could find $25 million in cost-cutting measures.

The two sides also agreed to eliminate some management positions by requiring hourly workers to take more responsibility, including some budget planning.

"It's what we're going to come to eventually some day," Thayer said. "The Japanese work that way and we have to do it to compete."

The automaker also agreed to phase out gradually its older radio lines, thereby forcing fewer employee layoffs.

Thayer said GM agreed to provide about $1,000 in back pay for about 400-tool and die workers at the plant for past violations of an existing subcontracting agreement.

GM also agreed to expand its jobs bank, which provides benefits to laid off employees.

Earlier in the day, Delco workers and their families linked hands to form a human chain along U.S. 31 outside the Delco plant in a show of union solidarity, and Local President Ron Cassis predicted ratification.

"I don't think the negotiating committee would have accepted anything less than what we were looking for," Cassis said.

"Hands Across Delco" fell short of its goal of stretching 2 miles around the plant. Officials said between 2,000 and 2,500 people participated, sending the chain about two-thirds of the way around the plant.

Delco employee Sandra Hogan waved an American flag as she stood along the highway. "We want to keep our jobs in America," she said.

Blanche Stewart, who stood in line nearby, said she believed the settlement showed the union's strength.

"We put an awful lot of people out of work," she said. "I don't think we wanted to go out on strike. We just had to."

Copter company grounded

NEW YORK (AP) — A helicopter company has been grounded because a chopper that plunged into the Hudson River last month, killing a traffic reporter, was unsafe to fly, the Federal Aviation Administration said Saturday.

The FAA released an emergency order, issued Friday, in which it charged that Spectrum Helicopters Inc. of Ridgefield, N.J., conducted faulty repairs on the three-seat helicopter 20 days before the Oct. 22 crash.

India sues company over Bhopal gas leak

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Indian government on Saturday sued Union Carbide Corp. for $3.12 billion in damages stemming from the 1984 gas leak at the company's Bhopal plant that India said killed 2,347 people.

It was the first time the government specified the damages it is seeking in the world's largest industrial accident. India rejected a company offer of a $350 million out-of-court settlement.

State-run All-India Radio said the suit was filed Saturday in Bhopal District Court in central India.

In its court papers, the government put the death toll in the Dec. 3, 1984 accident at 2,347. Earlier official estimates ranged from more than 2,000 to more than 3,000.

India said 39,000 to 40,000 people were seriously injured and 220,000 claims were filed with the Madhya Pradesh state government.

Union Carbide spokesman Kurt Mazurosky, "Reached-at-home in Woodbury, Conn., read a statement saying, "The $3 billion amount is without foundation and totally inconsistent with the government of India's previous demands."

"As its counselor in the Indian consulate in New York, Talmiz Ahmed, said recently, "At no stage had we thought in terms of billions of dollars. The Indian government's claim has been significantly lower than a billion dollars, and in fact is only slightly more than Carbide's last offer to us," the statement said.

The Indian government filed earlier suits against the Danbury, Conn.-based company in connection with the leak of deadly methyl isocyanate gas, but none specified a damage figure.

"Taking into account the expenditure incurred by the state government and damages to property and environment and likely long-term effects of exposure to MIC, it is likely that the amount of damages would exceed $3 billion," Saturday's suit said.

South Carolina man gets tax bill surprise

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — Ted Schifley was a little surprised to learn that he owes Richland County $2,038,627.43 in taxes.

"I am trying to see when I last gave blood to see if I have some left for the county. And I'm hoping that they will take my firstborn as payment," said Schifley, a power company engineer. He and his wife, Celeste, are expecting their first child.

"When I told my wife, I thought she was going into labor early," he said.

Schifley lives in upstate York County but owns a house in Richland County that he rents out.

The bill on the house, which cost $60,000, was carefully itemized so the Schifleys know precisely where their money goes — and goes and goes.

"The county library system is getting $73,535, and I owe $20,363 for fire service," Schifley said. "I've got to pay more than $32,000 for indigent care — and I think I will probably need indigent care after this."

But the Schifleys don't have to worry. Help is on the way.

"If there is anything I do not want, it's a new baby," said Richland County Auditor Pat Antley before the bill to them. "I just hope of Schifley's offer to send his firstborn as payment. She blamed the bill on computer error."

"We will soon get a real, live tax bill to them," she said. "I just hope of Schifley's offer to send his firstborn as payment. She blamed the bill on computer error."

Rivers sues movie company

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Joan Rivers is suing Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for more than $6 million, alleging the film company granted her rights to a literary work without informing her the rights would expire eight months later.

In the Superior Court suit filed Friday, Miss Rivers alleged that MGM owed $150,000 to her company, Shinto Productions, and agreed to repay it by giving her $100,000 and a one-year option on a literary work called "The Big Kiss," her attorney, Bertram Fields, said Saturday.

Miss Rivers said in the suit that the option was to begin in August 1985, but MGM didn't tell her that the author claimed that the rights would revert to the previous owner if filming didn't begin by April 6. The entertainer said she learned of the deadline April 7.

An MGM spokesman could not be reached for comment in calls made to the company's Culver City headquarters Friday evening and Saturday.

Two Sam and Daves touring the country

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — If the legendary soul singing duo Sam & Dave is supposedly appearing in this seattle area city this weekend, how can Sam be appearing in Dallas, too?

The answer is that another Sam has joined up with Dave, and they're not supposed to bill themselves as Sam & Dave, said Gary McRae. She looks shows for Sam Moore, who is appearing with the Blues Brothers at the opening of the Hard Rock Cafe in Dallas.

Moore's former partner, Dave Prater Jr., and Sam Daniels are the original Sam & Dave at the Sands Hotel and Casino here.

But under an injunction issued last year, the two "are not to allow themselves to be advertised or billed by or through booking agents as the original Sam and Dave in any form or fashion," Ms. McRae said.

Gary Serafine, a spokesman for Sands, said the hotel-casino was notified late Friday that advertisements must be changed so the billing reads "The New Sam & Dave." Such signs have been posted around the casino, he said.

Sam & Dave, who split up in 1981 after 20 years, is known for such songs as "Soul Man," "Hold On, I'm Coming" and "I Thank You."

Farm Aid III to be held at Univ. of Neb.

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Farm Aid III will be held at Memorial Stadium unless University of Nebraska officials object, Gov. Bob Kerrey said Saturday.

Singer Willie Nelson told an audience in Austin, Texas, on Friday that he wants to hold the benefit concert in the 73,650-seat NU football stadium, adding with a chuckle that "this may come as news to the people in Lincoln."

Kerrey, who had talked to Nelson on Thursday, said that if the university gives its approval, "that's what will be."

"It doesn't hurt at all to get some enthusiasm going and have people pay some attention to the farm crisis," the governor said.

University of Nebraska-Lincoln officials have not reviewed the proposal but will consider it carefully, said university President Ronald W. Roskens. "Cooperation is our motto," he added.

Originally, Nelson said, organizers had considered Washington, D.C., as the site for Farm Aid III. "But the more I thought about it, the more sense it made to go to the heart of the country, where people are suffering and need help," he said. Nelson said he hoped the concert would be held in late September 1987. The first Farm Aid was in September 1985 in Champaign, Ill., while the second was in Austin last July.

Louise Vanderbilt must pay rent for apartment

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Louise Vanderbilt must pay $6,000 in back rent on an apartment she leases in a "Millionaire's Row" mansion, a judge ruled.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, contacted Friday at her residence in Hawaii, declined comment on the ruling last week by District Court Judge John J. Capelli. The heiress is the widow of a grandson of transportation magnate Cornelius Vanderbilt, who built Newport's most famous mansion, the "Breakers."

The owners of Sherwood, a mansion converted into apartments, had accused her of not paying her August and September rent. The judge said other disputes between the two sides are still pending.

It was not the first time Mrs. Vanderbilt has been involved in a rent dispute. Eight years ago, she joined other, mostly low-income tenants to fight the tripling of her rent for an apartment in another converted mansion.

At one point, Mrs. Vanderbilt barred rickied herself in the apartment to keep from being evicted. She eventually moved from there, although a judge ruled that her landlord could not evict her.

Hussein criticizes U.S.-Iran arms deal

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan met with Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak for talks on Saturday, with U.S. arms deliveries to Iran one likely topic. Hussein has denounced the shipments as an insult to all Arabs.

Hussein and Mubarak met privately for two one-hour sessions at the presidential, Kubbah Palace, but declined comment on what was said.

A third session was set for Sunday, said sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Saturday marked the fourth time this year that Hussein and Mubarak have met.

Hussein told Egyptian reporters in Amman on Friday that he and Mubarak would talk about "recent developments on the Arab and international scene."

Delegations from both countries convened in separate sessions. Prime Minister Arafat said those talks dealt with Egyptian-Jordanian relations.

Hussein was the only Arab head of state to react publicly to U.S. arms deliveries to Iran. Mubarak has not commented, though Egypt's state-owned newspapers have published strong editorial criticism.

The state-owned Cairo newspapers al-Ahram, Al-Nahd al-Yom and al-Gomhouriya on Saturday quoted Hussein as saying, "The American position uncovered in recent days came as a shock and a big disappointment. ... One finds it incomprehensible and fails to understand what is behind it."

Hussein was quoted as saying he has been trying to explain to Washington that the arms deal is an insult to all Arabs ... an attitude that is not positive with regard to terminating this (Iran-Iraq) war."

Jordan and Egypt support Iraq in the 6-year-old war. Since 1981, Egypt has supplied Iraq with arms valued by Western diplomats at about $1 billion.

President Reagan has said defensive weapons were shipped to Iran to strengthen ties with moderates in the Islamic fundamentalist government.

Reagan has denied the arms were meant to buy freedom for American hostages held in Lebanon by underground Shiite groups believed loyal to Iran.

In Washington, House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas said the Iranians paid $12 million for the weapons, including 2,008 anti-tank missiles.

It was the 13th meeting between Mubarak and Hussein since Jordan restored diplomatic relations with Egypt in September 1984. Jordan, like its Arab neighbors, cut ties after Egypt's 1979 peace treaty with Israel.

Jordan was the first of 17 members of the Arab League to resume relations with Egypt. Since then, it has been joined only by Djibouti.

Pope meets with Moari tribal leaders

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Saturday touched noses with Maori tribal leaders in a traditional greeting ceremony and praised the values of the Maori culture.

The pope reached New Zealand on the fifth day of a two-week tour of Asla and the Pacific. He arranged to leave for Australia on Sunday.

The Maoris, who came to New Zealand from the central Pacific about 1,000 years ago, make up about 320,000 of New Zealand's 3.3 million people. About half the Maoris are Christians.

White opposition party debates constitution

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The white opposition party ended its national congress Saturday undecided over the role whites and other minorities should play once apartheid has been abolished in South Africa.

The Progressive Federal Party also reaffirmed its opposition to any sanctions against South Africa.

In the troubled black homeland of KwaNdebele, meanwhile, Chief Minister Simon Mankosha was buried Saturday in a lightly guarded ceremony attended by members of President P.W. Botha's all-white Cabinet.

The Progressive Federal Party, which holds 26 of the 166 seats in Parliament's dominant white chamber, is committed to ending the country's race segregation policy. Its current blueprint for a future South Africa, however, includes a provision for whites and other minority groups to have veto power over national policy.

Blacks get the veto provision as an undemocratic means of protecting white privilege, and the left-leaning wing of the party tried Saturday to scrap the provision.

However, less than the required two-thirds of the 260 delegates voted against the provision. The congress then decided to form a committee to review constitutional policy and report to the next party congress in 1988.

In his closing address, party leader Colin Eglin said he personally favored scrapping the veto provision, saying it has acquired "a negative, divisive connotation."

Eglin also said that sanctions would only toughen the resistance of Botha's governing National Party. He said such measures aimed at the government inevitably would affect essential public services like health and education.

"I would also like to punish Mr. Botha," said Eglin. "But my obligation is to South Africa."

One speaker at Saturday's session was Ntshongwana, a prominent anti-apartheid activist in Johannesburg's main black township of Soweto.

Responding to calls for black support for the Progressive Federal Party, Mankosha said blacks would never support the election of a white transitional government even if pledged to negotiate a non-racial constitution.

The KwaNdebele legislature is scheduled to meet Thursday to choose a successor to Mankosha, who died of diabetes Monday.

Soviet leader to visit India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — When Mikhail Gorbachev arrives in New Delhi on Tuesday, he will bring the same message he recently sent to an Indian schoolgirl who wrote to the Soviet leader about her desire for peace.

"Dear Pravara," Gorbachev replied, "Soviet-Indian friendship really could set an example of good relations for other countries. Fruitful today, it promises to be even more so tomorrow."

The Khabarovsk chief comes to India just one month after a visit by U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger. The back-to-back visits testify to competing American and Soviet interest in India's economic potential and strategic location.

But India's relations with the Soviet Union have been less erratic than with the United States. Moscow is India's major arms supplier, and the countries have many common interests that Gorbachev will draw on during his four-day stay.

The Indians are treating the visit as a major event, and Soviet and Indian diplomats have been shuttling back and forth between New Delhi and Moscow to make sure all goes well.

As part of a publicity blitz, the Indian news media reported widely this month on Gorbachev's reply to 13-year-old Pravara Kalyava of Cuttack, the daughter of a retired air force officer.

Amidst a rushing flood of adventure they learned more about love and courage than most people do in a lifetime.

Vietnam reporters stage rowdy reunion

NEW YORK (AP) — Correspondents who covered the Vietnam War got together this weekend to swap yarns, toast the dead, argue about what it all meant and laugh about those official briefings they called "the 5 o'clock follies."

The party, sponsored by the Overseas Press Club, was sometimes raucous, sometimes reverent as old acquaintances and smoldering arguments were renewed. There were even some demonstrators.

"You could call this party the 10 o'clock follies."

It was at that hour Friday night, during a speech by Robin Moore, author of "The Green Berets," that the decorum of these professionals cracked.

Moore began speaking about Vietnam but turned to recounting his adventures in Africa over the growing muttering of his audience.

"You are the first certifiable loony! We're talking about Vietnam!" bellowed George McArthur, former correspondent for The Los Angeles Times and before that an Associated Press bureau chief in Saigon. "Get out!"

When Moore held his ground, McArthur called him a seven-letter word and called for a voice vote on the aptness of the description. The house was divided.

"If you don't want to hear any more," Moore said in voice barely audible over the hubbub, "I'll leave."

For the 400 or so people at the 7th Regiment Armory, the moment brought back those free-wheeling days in Vietnam when they sometimes shared the danger of the battlefield and often clashed with official spokesmen.

Now some correspondents such as Morley Safer and Ed Bradley of CBS' "60 Minutes" have become stars, and a camera crew from "Entertainment Tonight" worked the cocktail reception.

It has been 11 years since South Vietnam collapsed, and 14 years since the last U.S. ground forces were withdrawn. Some of the correspondents went back to 1954, when the French were defeated at Dien Bien Phu.

The Pentagon has never counted the number of reporters accredited at one time or another in Vietnam, but H. L. Stevenson, former editor in chief of United Press International, offered a somewhat facetious figure of 3,468.

For those who attended Friday night's dinner, Vietnam was not only a public issue but a family affair. Their jokes about "Mimh the tailor," who produced those multi-pocketed suits beloved by TV correspondents, and their jibes about the "follies" and a certain laundry-brother in the boonies were for insiders.

Vietnam was the biggest story many of these reporters will ever cover, and one which doesn't go away.

WASHINGTON (AP) — While most Democratic presidential aspirants wooed party officials Saturday, the Rev. Jesse Jackson demanded that the national party quash a political revolt against Chicago Mayor Harold Washington.

"The national Democratic Party must take a stand" against a primary challenge to the black mayor, Jackson told Democratic Party officials.

Party Chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr. said he wanted to discuss the Chicago dispute with Jackson and added that the "whole situation hasn't gelled yet."

"My position all the time has been that the Democratic Party itself should not inject itself in intra-party primaries," Kirk said.

Jackson contended that white Cook County Democratic Party leaders are conspiring to defeat the black mayor next year. He said an end to that revolt was "almost a litmus test of the ability of the Democratic coalition to stay together."

Jackson and other potential 1988 presidential candidates had come to mingle with party officials at a meeting of the Democratic National Committee.

The 362 members of the national committee will all be delegates to the 1988 nominating convention, a bloc larger than any state delegation.

Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, and Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona were making appearances at the meeting.

Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado offered the party officials coffee, donuts and a little rhetoric on Thursday.

Jackson has renewed his complaints that party rules cost him delegates in his 1984 presidential campaign and also has criticized Kirk for trying to lead the Democrats on a more conservative course.

"If Jesse Jackson might be a candidate for president, he'll get equal treatment with everyone else," said Kirk "no special favors, no slights along the way."

At a meeting of state party leaders, Kirk reflected the upbeat mood among Democrats when he opened his remarks by saying, "It's a lot more fun to win, isn't it?"

He said that after a "very, very tough 1984," the party had rebounded to regain control of the Senate in the 1986 elections. Two years earlier, President Reagan carried 49 states to bury a challenge by Democrat Walter F. Mondale.

"We can look back on these last two years with pride and say, we did it," said Rick Wiener of Michigan.

Panel seeks input on hazardous wastes plan

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A state panel is calling for designated routes for the safe transportation of hazardous wastes, principally interstate highways.

Local government approval should be required when non-state highways are used to transport hazardous wastes, according to the panel.

"I don't think this is unreasonable," said Twin Falls City Manager Tom Courtney on Friday. He said he would have to study the proposals and talk to public safety officials before giving a more detailed reaction.

Local governments should also be given authority by the state Legislature to collect a permit fee to help offset costs of having a hazardous waste facility in a community, the panel said.

These proposals are part of the Idaho Hazardous Waste Management Plan, which was discussed at a public meeting Thursday night attended by a handful of citizens at the Holiday Inn here.

It was one of five meetings scheduled around the state before the plan is presented to the next session of the Legislature.

The panel of 17 citizens appointed by the governor did not give a total on what it would cost to put all the recommendations into effect. The plan did say the state would have to spend $177,000 more in the Department of Health and Welfare to carry out parts of the plan.

However, a considerable volume of hazardous and radioactive wastes and materials passes through Twin Falls County on trucks traveling Interstate 84. The rule of thumb is that 12-15 percent of the trucks are carrying hazardous materials, said Idaho State Police Sgt. Robert Lockett.

The amount of radioactive material is increasing, according to the State Police. It is expected to increase by another 15 truckloads per day, should Hanford, Wash., be selected as a permanent nuclear waste depository by the federal government, Lockett said.

One part of the plan calls for the Legislature to give H&W the power to adopt emergency regulations more stringent than federal regulations. The purpose would be to be able to react to unforeseen serious public health threats from hazardous waste not adequately covered by federal regulations.

The state panel also is proposing steps to prevent Idaho from becoming a dumping ground for unreasonable quantities of hazardous waste.

However, the panel said the state should not erect barriers to the treatment, storage and disposal of hazardous waste. The aim is not to undermine efforts to develop regional waste management.

New hazardous waste dumps should be built with more than a 5,000-foot buffer between the dump and a house or apartment, the plan said.

It also calls for at least a three-mile buffer from schools, airports, hospitals or churches.

The recommended distances for locating hazardous waste sites from residential areas, wells or rivers are part of technical criteria in the plan.

"We developed a technical criteria. Many states steepest and won't put it in. We tried to come up with a balance of numbers," said Jack Barraclough, a geologist on the panel. He is a scientific specialist with EG&G in Idaho Falls.

There is a requirement that no new hazardous-waste land-disposal facility be located where there is less than 100 feet separation from the lowest point of disposal and the groundwater.

State Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, asked Thursday how the panel arrived at keeping a hazardous waste site more than 1,000 feet from irrigation wells.

"These are minimums. A starting point. That doesn't say the actual criteria wouldn't be something greater, depending on the circumstances," said Tom Korpalski, a panel member who is environmental manager for Hewlett-Packard in Boise.

He said a threat to a body of water is not as great as in the past because now government regulations do not allow disposal of liquids in landfills.

Pam Shropshire of Idaho Neighbors Network asked where problems with waste oil and polychlorinated bi-phenyls (PCBs) were addressed.

PCBs aren't hazardous waste under state and federal law, said Dr. See WASTES on Page B2

Inmate housing costs rise sharply

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Transporting and housing Twin Falls County Jail inmates in other jails during October cost $19,771, an increase of about $7,000 from the previous month, reported Sheriff Jim Munn.

For months, the total costs of room and board and transportation for the inmates had been decreasing. The county spent $12,501 on transportation and boarding during the month of September.

But in October, the jail population exploded. On the average, 77 inmates were held in other jails each day, while the total jail population averaged 52 inmates daily.

The daily population averaged 44 inmates during September, while the county transported an average of 19 inmates each day to other jails.

Although October was a busier month than September, it wasn't as busy as last year, when there was an average of 60 inmates each day in the county reported.

The county must transport inmates daily to comply with a 30-inmate cap on the jail. The cap is part of a court agreement reached in a lawsuit filed by two former inmates over the aged jail, located in the Twin Falls County Courthouse. November in the jail started out with a high 69 inmates one day, but fell to about the mid-40s later in the month, Munn said.

The trend in the past has been a decreasing population in November and December, compared to October. In November 1983, however, the jail population was "higher than anything."

"I just can't predict anymore," Munn said.

In his new 1986-87 fiscal-year budget, the sheriff estimated jail transportation and boarding costs at about $16,500 a month. While one month may be higher, it will even out with some lower-population months, he said.

In a few weeks, work should start on several improvements at the jail. The remodeling — such as changing the locks and installing a separate fire-alarm system — also were part of the agreement the county commissioners signed Feb. 11.

Commissioner Judy Felton said the commissioners are reviewing resumes to find an architect to design a new jail. Placing a bond issue before the public to finance a new jail was another part of the agreement.

Firefighters contract includes wage study

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — In the new Twin Falls Firefighters Association contract, the city has agreed to study the salaries and job classifications of the consolidated Public Safety Department.

Association President Ron Clark said the city should be applauded for its step toward looking at some of the concerns raised by consolidation, such as financial inequities among the different classifications of employees.

The 1988-87 contract was approved Monday by the Twin Falls City Council and previously accepted by the association's bargaining agent for the firefighters within the Public Safety Department.

In the contract, the city agreed to complete the study by March 1, 1987. City Manager Tom Courtney said the study is a look at redefining the classification of entry-level officers within the consolidated public safety program, and at compensation for the employees to make sure the salaries are adequate.

When the consolidated system was adopted about two years ago, police officers and firefighters kept the salaries they had under the separate departments, Courtney said.

While it is difficult to compare the salaries of police and firefighters, no comparison had been made in the past, he said.

The new contract, however, now requires all entry-level officers hired after Sept. 30 to cross-train as firefighters and police officers, Courtney said. Previously, the cross-training was voluntary and those who took the training earned a $1,000 a month bonus. The new officers, however, will not receive the bonus.

The contract specifies that ranks above entry-level, such as a corporal in the fire division or a driver in the fire division, are considered specialists. At the point of promotion, a cross-trained officer will decide if he or she wants to make a career in the police or fire division, Courtney said.

Bob Gillespie's plane is a 'canard' design, meaning the horizontal stabilizer is located forward of the wing

'Quickie 2' kit sends plane buffs aloft

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The "Quickie Two," an example of the latest in aerodynamic engineering for private airplanes, is now ready for flight. The small, experimental plane was built by local plane buffs Bob Gillespie and Jack Sears.

The plane has been finished for about a week and has been up in the air for a few trial flights, said Gillespie, co-owner of the plane.

The plane's design is what is called a "canard" and was designed by Burt Rutan, designer of the Voyager spaceship, Gillespie said.

The plane is small, yellow and "racy-looking," said Gillespie. "It's like the Porsche of airplanes."

The craft is a single-wing plane with a propeller on its nose. "The plane the Wright Brothers flew is much like the canard design," Gillespie said. Little wind resistance and stability are the major advantages of this design, he added.

Gillespie explained that the plane was built using composite construction, the latest technique in airplane building. The body is constructed with only foam and fiberglass, whereas planes had previously been built with either wood and fabric or just aluminum.

"This is virtually a lifetime plane because of composite construction. In other planes, the wood and material would rot and the aluminum would rust away. This plane was easy to build and is a lot stronger than other planes," he said.

It took the two men four years to build the plane, he said. The average amount of time needed for a project like this is three years, but this took longer because the pair did most of the work during the winter and hot summers off, he explained.

Most of the construction took place at Sears' workshop, but some construction was also done at Gillespie's house. He said the plane is now being housed at the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport.

Gillespie estimated that about 3,000 hours of labor went into the project. "It took practically all of my spare time," he said.

The kit was purchased for $30,000 and additional equipment for the plane, such as radio equipment, cost about $6,000, he said.

Although the craft was built from a kit, "what you end up with is pretty much your own baby," he said. Things such as radio equipment, electrical wiring and a velvet interior were all added by Gillespie and Sears.

Certification from the Federal Aviation Association will be possible after 40 hours of flight in the experimental aircraft, Gillespie said. Those 40 hours must also be within a 20-mile radius of the Twin Falls or Jerome airports.

"They (the FAA) certify the plane for the first 40 hours, and then they come back to reinspect and recertify the plane for regular use," he said, adding that he is also forbidden to take passengers in the plane until the second certification.

Gillespie has about five hours worth of flight-time on the plane. "It shouldn't be hard to get the rest (of the required hours)," if this weather holds up," he said.

So far, the plane has flown "flawlessly," he said. Due to the technology of composite construction, the plane is "spin-proof." The craft See PLANE on Page B2

United Way campaign winds up short of goal

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The United Way of the Magic Valley fall campaign will be $10,000 to $15,000 short of its $240,000 goal but the campaign's president said the 1988 drive was a successful one.

A number of donations from large commercial contributors will have to come in, Jeff Harris, president, told a United Way Victory Celebration at the Canyon Springs Inn Friday night. About 50 people attended.

He said when contributions are totaled they should be about $225,000 to $230,000, approximately the same level that was collected in each of the last two years.

Peterson: Idahoans will pay less taxes

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A majority of Idahoans will be better off under the new federal tax code even if state taxes go up, but wealthy Idahoans may be driving their Mercedes on empty, according to projections by the state's director of financial management.

"When you add federal and state taxes together, by and large, people are going to see a net tax reduction," said Martin Peterson, state director of financial management in Boise.

The wealthy taxpayers and corporations will "shoulder the difference," he said.

Not all agree, and a fight is expected in the Legislature over whether lawmakers should lower tax rates in addition to conforming to federal tax code changes.

Peterson released a report on Friday prepared by the Economic Research Council, along with state tax analysts, projecting a cut in federal income taxes that will more than offset a rise in state income taxes — if Idaho lawmakers adopt federal tax codes and do not change the state tax rate.

If there is no change in the state tax rate, the state will see an additional $21.5 million from personal and corporate income taxes. Of the $21.5 million, $13 million will come from an increase in individual income taxes, he said.

If lawmakers lower the state tax rate 1 percent, the state will lose $47 million from personal income taxes, Peterson said.

Because most state income tax laws are tied to the federal law, 34 states in addition to Idaho are expected to gain revenue if they make no change in their own tax rates. That's because the federal law will reduce tax rates for most taxpayers, but increase their taxable income. If the federal income figures are used as a base for state taxes, the taxpayer will pay more — unless the state rate is lowered.

Making the case for no change in state tax rates, Peterson said that Idaho taxpayers will see a $65 million drop annually, beginning in 1987, in their federal income taxes that will "more than compensate for the $13 million a year increase" in state income taxes.

Although people such as Russ Westerberg, president of Associated Taxpayers of Idaho, are gunning for lawmakers who refuse to cut taxes, Peterson said the state income tax burden will "not be that severe." See TAXES on Page B3 palgo: We have worked extremely hard," said Harris, who is manager of United First Federal Savings in Twin Falls.

He said the allocations will be announced in the next few weeks. Last year—organizations receiving United Way allocations included the American Red Cross, McAuley Girls Home in Buhl and the Twin Falls Seniors.

Harris said people active in the campaign are considering steps to make it more effective next year.

He said he will ask the board of directors to reorganize itself. "With 60 people on the board, it is hard to get direction from that many," Harris said. "We will conduct this more as a business than it has been (conducted) in the past," Harris said.

President-elect Bob Thomas said some board members are receptive to the idea of reorganization.

Support for different businesses stepped up with last year's support, said Sandy Thomas, United Way executive director. "The ones that were struggling were unable to give," she said. "The problems in the farm economy have put a damper on United Way drives in recent years, United Way officials said.

The large corporations give the largest amount of money. "There are still too many corporations helping instead of employees," she said.

"Here corporations pay for most of the services. In most other United Way campaigns it is employees" who carry the greatest burden, Thomas said.

One bright spot was a good increase in contributions in the Jerome area, she said.

A number of businesses and individuals were honored for their contributions and work in this year's campaign.

The "Special Outstanding Award" was given for work in the Jerome area to Verna Marie Raymond of Roy Raymond Ford and Bob Campbell, chairman and chief executive officer of St. Benedict's Family Medical Center in Jerome.

They made numerous presentations for United Way to area business and industry. The awards were each given to cars in recognition of their trips on the road.

Zoe Ann Schaub of Twin Falls, chairman of the allocations committee, was named "Outstanding Individual" of the campaign.

The people attending the victory celebration gave Sandy Thomas a standing ovation for her work in the campaign and presented her with a silver bowl.

Albertson's was given the "Pacesetter" award for donating more than $3,000 to the campaign.

Companies with 100 percent participation in the campaign were: Roy Raymond Ford; Cain's Furniture; Willie Motors; Idaho First, downtown Twin Falls; Twin Falls Bank & Trust; Idaho First, Jerome; and Washington Elementary teachers, Jerome, said Sue Summers, master of ceremonies.

Businesses contributing a significant amount more than last year were: The Times-News, Pillsbury Green Giant, Ernst, United Parcel Service, Intermountain Gas, United First Federal Savings, KMYT-TV, Kmart, Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, Upperware, De-Do-Ho Specialties and Longview Fibre Co.

Businesses contributing more than $5,000 were: First Federal, Idaho First, Idaho Power Co., Mountain Bell, Roy Raymond Ford, Sears, Twin Falls Bank & Trust, Universal Frozen Foods, Moore Business Forms and Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

supposedly will not spin, one of the main causes of airplane accidents, he said.

Now that the plane is finished, it will be used for private flying and shared between himself and Sears, Gillespie said. The construction of the plane has been an equal effort on the part of both men, he added.

Building kit planes is a relatively popular pastime for airplane enthusiasts in the area. There is one other canard-design plane in the Twin Falls area and about four or five other general kit planes, he said.

The "Quickie Two" plane weighs about 500 pounds and will carry 500 pounds, he said. It gets about 65 miles per gallon and can travel at speeds up to 180 miles an hour. At 64 horsepower, the plane is more efficient than most, Gillespie said.

"Most planes like this get only one hour for each horsepower. This plane is almost three times more efficient," he said.

Gillespie said his choosing of the canard-design plane was the result of a "progression through aviation." He has flown quarter-size planes of this kind in competition and decided it was time to build a full-size private plane. "This design just caught my eye," he said. "It has proven to be a very worthwhile project."

Lee Stokes, director of the state Division of Environment and a panel member. He said PCBs were regulated under the federal Toxic Substances Act. PCBs are suspected cancer-causing chemicals.

"Maybe the Legislature would agree to regulate PCBs under the same law as hazardous wastes," Stokes said.

Waste oil will be regulated to the extent it is hazardous waste, according to state officials.

Asked how the state could get a better handle on radioactive materials moving through the state, Stokes said, "The state could probably require notification of each shipment as it goes through. It isn't helpful in terms of emergency response."

"The only thing you can rely on is the integrity of the package," Stokes said. "We have enough information to operate a rational (emergency) response system right now," he said. Packaging of radioactive materials is regulated by the federal government.

The plan came about after the Idaho Hazardous Waste Management Act was passed in 1983 by the Legislature. The Legislature saw the need for a plan to review and manage the siting of new hazardous-waste facilities.

The 17-member panel started working on the plan in April 1986, said Cheryl R. Koshiba, chief of the hazardous materials bureau, state Division of Environment.

There are no total estimates of what it would cost to put the plan into effect. "I don't know if I would be able to come up with a number. A lot of it depends on private government initiatives and local participation," said Koshiba.

There are eight chemical treatment and waste disposal facilities in Idaho. None are in Twin Falls County, according to the plan.

Other members of the panel were: Richard Bass, of Murphy; Larry Bledsoe, of Nampa; Carl Cadwry, of Simplot in Pocatello; Doug Christensen, of Boise; Bill Daneworth, of Lewiston; Ken Dunn, director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources, represented by Darrell Cline; Dennis Gratton; of Boise; Diane Johnson, of Moscow; Bill Gregory, of Boise; Mary Kelly, executive director, Idaho Conservation League; Don Kramer, of Castleford; a former state Water Board chairman, Doug Kraemer, of Boise, represented by Doug Benson; Dr. Dale Releston, of Moscow; and Jack Peterson. Peterson is with the Idaho Mining Association. He said he was not representing the association on the panel.

The true consolidated positions will be at the entry level, area training officers, fire captains and levels, such as the director of the consolidated program or in records, for example.

In its study, the city will use information from other cities about salaries for different types of employees in consolidated departments, he said.

Employees within the Public Safety Department will be given the opportunity to comment.

The study was a sign the city might become more flexible in the consolidation, Clark said. It should address more than salaries, such as promotions and other aspects of employment. Clark would like to elaborate on what he saw as salary differences among employees.

The contract also says that jobs of persons not interested in cross-training will not be jeopardized.

Another addition to the new contract is a 2-percent salary increase for firefighters, something the majority of the city workers also received.

The agreement also clarifies the city's intention to pay overtime through the use of compensatory time. The section was added to comply with the Fair Labor Standards act as a method of compensating overtime.

The new contract is effective immediately.

Taxes

To illustrate the point, Peterson gave a series of hypothetical families and conditions and the tax rates they can be expected to pay if the state conforms to the federal code.

For example, a family with two children making $90,000 a year, on one salary, who itemize and put $2,000 into an Individual Retirement Account, and who have a $100,000 mortgage with 10-percent interest who make $10,000 in capital gains income will pay $2,713 less in federal taxes. However, their state taxes will go up $457, Peterson said.

For a hypothetical working couple with one child, who have a combined income of $40,000, a $50,000 mortgage with 10-percent interest, who itemize and who put $4,000 in an IRA, their federal tax will drop $437, while their state tax will drop $67, he said.

and itemized deduction, their federal income tax will decrease by $349, and their state tax will decrease by $214.

Peterson said with the bulk of the changes come with a change in investment tax credits — two areas he said wealthy individuals and corporations utilize more.

"Those two areas are not used by the general run-of-the-mill taxpayer," he said.

Thomas Condie, a certified public accountant in Twin Falls, agreed with Peterson that people in the investment community and in business will be affected more by the changes in tax codes.

However, Condie also pointed out that the tax bracket for the wealthy has dropped dramatically in seven years, from 70 percent in 1980 to 28 percent in 1987. As an example, a wealthy individual who made $500,000 in interest in dividends, which was all taxable, paid $250,000 in taxes under the new code, that person will pay $140,000, Condie said.

"Because Lifeline can electronically alert the hospital emergency staff in case anything ever happens. You'll feel a lot more secure. After all, you do live alone, you know."

Wood River flooding draws funds

Waterworks bill authorizes nearly $3.4 million project

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — In 1948 and again in 1952 the residents of Lincoln and Gooding counties asked for federal help with flood control. Funds for the request were authorized Monday when President Ronald Reagan signed the Water Resources Development Act of 1986.

Several studies of the Big and Little Wood Rivers have been conducted by the Army Corps of Engineers in the intervening years, including a partial evaluation in 1969-71 and a comprehensive study begun in 1976. The 1976 study resulted in a "flood damage prevention" project plan for the Little Wood River. The plan was presented in Public Workshop Brochure Number 3, prepared by the Army Corps in late 1975, and is the basis for the authorization of approximately $3.4 million dollars to the project.

Two Idaho projects were included in the federal waterworks bill adopted last week: the Little Wood project and an ice removal project on the Salmon River estimated at $1 million.

The bill is not a windfall, however, local officials say. The measure has been stalled in Congress for over a decade because of conflicts over the extent of local participation. The newly adopted federal measure requires local governments to participate in a cost-sharing arrangement by providing 5 percent of the project cost in cash, and contributing "all lands, easements, rights-of-way and relocations necessary for construction," to equal 25 percent of the project cost.

A second consideration for the Little Wood project was described by Gooding City Mayor Gene Heller, who said "much of the work outlined in the first plan has already been completed by local people."

The 1975 plan calls for substantially increasing the capacity of the Dietrich Diversion, near Richfield, which draws water out of the Little Wood system and dumps it into the Snake River above Shoshone. Improvement of the diversion was completed in 1982 and paid for by Lincoln and Gooding counties and Gooding and Shoshone cities.

The same four entities would be required to participate in any further flood control prevention plans on the river, and the four were asked by the Army Corps to sign "letters of assurance" that they were still interested in the project last July.

Both counties and the city of Shoshone did so, but Heller said Gooding has not because of concerns over what the plan will be and how much money Gooding taxpayers would be required to provide.

The 1975 plan also calls for diverting water from the Miller-Gooding canal into the lava beds between Gooding and Shoshone as a flood control measure and requires authorization from the Irrigation district.

Watermaster Reid Newby of Shoshone said Saturday he was not aware of the new bill and his office had not yet been notified. But he said a Snake River aquifer re-charge district already exists in the area, with water diverted into the lava beds just north of Shoshone, when it is not needed for irrigation.

Newby also explained there are three "private" hydro-electric generating plants on the Little Wood between Gooding and Shoshone, two more on the South Gooding Main Canal and three more at the lower end of the Little Wood system east of Gooding.

None of the projects existed when the 1975 study was done and all have various "non-consumptive" rights to use water flows.

"I would think they (Army Corps) would want to update their information," Newby said.

Heller said the hydro-electric plants on the South Gooding Canal have created additional flood problems due to ice buildup in the city of Gooding, because the water is routed around the Gooding Safety Way, a flood diversion canal that takes water out of the Little Wood channel before it gets to Gooding.

Airport project planned

By TERESA Z. TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Three Idaho engineering firms have proposed plans for a taxiway expansion and sealcoating project at the Jerome Airport.

The project, which will cost from $350,000 to $400,000, will enlarge one of the existing taxiways and will repair and preserve other pavement at the airport.

Jerome County Commissioner Pam Smith says the taxiway needs to be lengthened for safety reasons.

"When the project is complete, planes will have more room in which to maneuver, and this will serve to make the airport more safe," she said.

The nature of the project qualifies the county to apply to the Federal Aviation Administration for a grant that will pay 90 percent of the cost of the work. The remaining 10 percent will be paid for by the county with money already budgeted for the construction. This money was obtained through a user fee on airplane fuel.

J-U-B Engineers Inc., Dale L. Riedesel, and Sawtooth Engineering have each submitted extensive proposals to the board of commissioners detailing how their companies would handle the project.

J-U-B Engineers and Riedesel provided board members with a plan that specified the type of materials they propose to use for the project. The two companies also plan to use Intermountain Materials Testing Inc. as a consultant for testing the materials used in the construction process.

Sawtooth Engineering also submitted a detailed plan as to how the firm would accomplish the project, but specified that the company has the capability to do its own materials testing and would not be employing any outside consultants.

The project is expected to expand the airport's capabilities and strengthen the pavement for the next several years. Each of the companies projected a possible project completion date of mid- to late summer if funding and paperwork requirements can be completed without delays.

The Board of Commissioners is expected to make a decision on which firm to hire Monday. After that, the county will apply to the FAA for the grant.

Wendell stoplight awaits state signal

By FERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — A traffic stoplight at the Wendell Elementary School will be allowed if the plan for it is approved by the state traffic engineer, even though opinion on whether it is needed is divided.

George Oberle, traffic engineer for District 4 of the Idaho Transportation Department in Shoshone, met Saturday with Wendell Mayor Otto Burke, U.S. Engineer Scott Bybee, fund-raising Chairman Bob Burks, school Superintendent George Crawford and city superintendent Charlie Doty to discuss details of the proposed traffic-control light and settle some confusion about permission for the light. Oberle said he does not think the light is warranted. This opinion, he explained, is based on 10 warranty factors, including traffic count, gaps, delays and number of accidents.

Lenke and Burks said the light is warranted because of traffic congestion and near-accidents when school starts and ends. However, Burks asked if the fund drive should be temporarily suspended.

Oberle said the local fund-raising drive should not be stopped, but that the State Highway Department will not help fund a light that it deems unwarranted.

Sometimes, he said, a school traffic light creates a hazard because children look only at the light instead of watching the cars.

"Part of the danger comes from the signal," Oberle said. Local residents, he said, get used to driving through the flashing light when no students are there and so may not bother to look when children are crossing.

Left turns across crosswalks, poor visibility conditions and drivers' confusion are other hazards, Oberle said.

Burks and others at the meeting said the light is necessary because cars are not yielding the right-of-way to pedestrians and students cannot get across Idaho Street. Also, Crawford said, buses have to wait too long for a break in traffic to drive onto Idaho Street.

Burks said the community has shown very strong support for the safety light. The fund-raising committee is made up of some 30 leaders of the city, local churches and clubs in Wendell, he said, and the community has already raised $5,000 in funds, donated material and volunteer labor.

Local residents realize there is a serious problem at the school, he stressed, and this light is actively supported by school officials, city leaders, teachers and many parents.

Burks said the estimated $14,000 cost of the light could be met within a year.

Kimberly studies middle school plan

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly School Board is studying the possibility of switching to a middle school system.

"Kimberly's growing and we're running out of space," Trustee Mary Ann Fisher said at the Thursday night board meeting.

Fisher has been studying the possibility as a solution to Kimberly's problem of limited space. The school would be somewhat like a junior high, housing students in grades 5-8 or 6-8.

Possible problems with a middle school would be resistance to such a new and different concept and inability to find teachers with middle school experience, she said.

"There aren't that many middle schools in Idaho, and that causes these problems," she said.

Advantages of a middle school could be solving the space problem, providing a more gradual transition from elementary school to high school, helping students develop their individual potential to a greater extent, and improving attitudes of the students at that age.

Superintendent Richard Bauscher, who once served as principal of a middle school in Pullman, Wash., said, "People seem to prefer the atmosphere of a middle school."

The board agreed to further study the idea.

Also at the meeting, the board agreed to have an energy efficiency study conducted to make the district eligible to participate in a grant program being offered by the state.

McClure Engineering was chosen as the company to do the study, which will consist of studying ways to conserve energy in the various Kimberly School District buildings.

Bauscher said the elementary school will probably be the main building targeted for improvements. Windows in the district might be replaced with inserts or double-pane glass, he said.

The Bureau of Energy Resources of the Idaho Department of Water Resources recently announced that $700,000 in matching federal funds is available to schools and hospitals for energy conservation projects.

The board also approved a proposal to install new lighting in the Kimberly Junior High School auditorium. Parts for the project will cost $215, Bauscher said, which would be covered completely by donations.

School board to compensate music fund loss

By CAROLYN DILWORTH
Times-News correspondent

GLENN'S FERRY — The Glenns Ferry School Board has agreed to compensate a student group for fund-raising money the district transferred to cover transportation costs.

Parents at a school board meeting last week said that music students raised money at "Pie and Pop" concerts last year. But when they prepared to use their earnings to attend a musical event at the Morrison Center in Boise this fall, they found the account had been "zeroed out."

According to school officials, the funds had been transferred — as had the money in many other accounts that had not been decanted by advisors — to the transportation account. All the money was then used to pay for busing costs incurred for activities last year.

It is school policy that groups that can raise funds for their activities do so in order to help defray the costs involved, school officials said.

Several parents attending the board meeting said a transfer of funds should not have been made without notifying the advisor and asking the advisor whether the funds had been placed in the account for a specific purpose.

Superintendent Jim Garroll made the recommendation that student funds be replaced by giving them a transportation credit for the '86-87 year in the amount that had been transferred. The students would be allowed $1.02 per mile credit for the use of the bus system for transportation.

Money the music students would have had to use for this purpose this year could then be put back into their fund-raising account, he said, and a loan could be granted until the account was built back up again.

Under this plan the "kids will know we're sup-

Burley High students train as classmate counselors

By JAMES H. ROYCE
Times-News correspondent

ROBLEY — Burley High School students are being trained as classmate counselors. The program is designed to help students deal with personal problems and to provide support for those who are experiencing difficulties.

Participants in the two-day training program were selected from the school's student body. The program was developed by the school's guidance counselor, Mrs. Martin (Lester) Williams.

The program consisted of three four-hour sessions. The first session focused on identifying personal children in the school.

Keynote and listening skills were emphasized during the program. "It was stressed that if your friend is having a problem, you should not give them advice, but rather listen to what they have to say," Williams said.

Using peer listening techniques is just a way to be a better friend, Williams said. "It's evident they already had a lot of experience with these techniques," she said.

Students who are having personal problems at Burley High School are encouraged to seek help from their classmate counselors. The program is designed to provide a supportive environment for students who are experiencing difficulties.

The school survey was taken some time that had been completed by the school's guidance counselor, Mrs. Martin (Lester) Williams. The survey was designed to identify students who were having personal problems at Burley High School.

Identified in the survey as being good listeners, health and physical education teacher Steve Jensen and vocational agriculture instructor Taylor Snyder. Both attended the program along with Martin, Lloyd, Roberts and Blissett.

Blissett said they ended up with a "core" group of kids, but they all had a lot in common — they were good listeners.

became cohesive, almost like a family unit, she said.

Three BHS students who took part agreed. "We were like a family up there," John Almazada, a BHS junior, said.

"We were all brothers and sisters, a team," said BHS senior Kirt Melling, who thought that the "meat" part of the trip was when the group spent time together in the woods.

Ammie Pope, a sophomore, said she was initially nervous about attending the retreat with older students, some of whom she said she

Famous Dionne mother dead

NORTH BAY, Ontario (AP) — Elzire Dionne, mother of the quintuplets whose birth and survival surrounded the world 52 years ago, died Saturday at North Bay Civic Hospital. She was 77.

Hospital officials released no further information on her death, nor did family members.

Mrs. Dionne had been living in a seven-bedroom home the Ontario government built for the celebrated family in North Bay in 1941.

She was 25 when she gave birth to five identical girls — Annette, Cecile, Yvonne, Emilie and Marie — in the family's isolated log farmhouse in nearby Callander on May 28, 1934.

The babies' combined weight was 13 pounds, 6 ounces, and odds against their surviving were judged astronomical. But all lived to become adults, something described by doctors as unprecedented in the history of mankind.

The Dionne quintuplets were born before the era of fertility drugs, which were developed in recent decades for treatment of hormone-related infertility. The use of such drugs has significantly increased the incidence of multiple birth.

In their later years the Dionne daughters, who had to cope emotionally with worldwide celebrity that deprived them of their privacy, became alienated from their parents.

Emilie died in 1954 and Marie died in 1970. But the surviving three attended the funeral of their father, Oliva, in 1979.

As youngsters, the dark-haired girls were dressed in identical outfits for public viewing almost every day. Nearly 3 million people visited "the Quints" between 1934 and 1943, as many as 6,000 on a single day.

"I resented everyone for the way we were brought up; disgusted," Cecile Dionne Langlois said in a rare 1983 interview with La Presse of Montreal.

Two months after the births, the Ontario government appointed a board of guardians to protect the health and interests of the girls. One guardian was the doctor who delivered them, Dr. Allan Dafeo. Another was grandfather Olivier Dionne.

Dafeo was given nearly complete control and refused to allow the girls to live in their family home or to play with their other sisters. A hospital-nursery was built for the quints across the road from their home, and nurses and teachers were hired to care for them. The parents could visit whenever they wished, but had hardly any say in the girls' lives.

Oliva Dionne eventually succeeded his father on the board of guardians, but boycotted meetings in his battle to regain custody. It was nine years before the family was reunited under one roof.

It was estimated that the Dionnes brought in $20 million in tourist revenue for Ontario in 1937 and 1938. The girls did not leave the nursery grounds until 1939, when they were presented to King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in Toronto.

Oliva Dionne regained sole guardianship of the girls in 1941 and the government built a new brick home for the family, which by then had 12 children.

Reagan lauds giving spirit

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, devoting his weekly radio address to a Thanksgiving theme, said Saturday one of his proudest accomplishments has been stimulating voluntary giving instead of "bureaucratic plans and federal programs" to help the needy.

"The spirit of volunteerism is deeply engrained in us as a nation," the president said, speaking from Camp David, his weekend retreat in the Catoctin Mountains of Maryland.

"Maybe it has something to do with our history as a frontier land. Those early Americans who gave us Thanksgiving Day itself had to help each other in order to survive — joining together to plant crops, build houses and raise barns. And perhaps they discovered that in helping others their own lives were enriched."

"In our own day," Reagan said, "a poll showed most Americans believed that no matter how big government gets and no matter how many services it provides it can never take the place of volunteers. We Americans understand that there are no substitutes for gifts of service given from the heart."

There was a same not long ago when this spirit seemed endangered — when philanthropy and personal involvement were giving way to bureaucratic plans and federal programs," the president added. "So when our administration took office we made it one of our main aims to encourage private sector initiatives — to reinvigorate the American tradition of voluntarism."

"And I have to admit our success in this area is one of the accomplishments of which I am most proud," he said, adding that in recent years there has been "an unprecedented outpouring of the volunteer spirit, a tremendous reassertion of good will and neighborliness."

The president said that last year individuals, corporations, bequests, and funds gave a record of nearly $80 billion to good causes.

"Of course we must do more, striving always to give of ourselves to those less fortunate," Reagan said. "But it's good to reflect that here in America, perhaps more than any other nation on earth, we have a tradition of giving, of neighbor helping neighbor, that makes life better for tens of thousands every day."

The president and First Lady Nancy Reagan will spend Thanksgiving with family members at their ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains north of Santa Barbara, Calif.

Two of the president's children will join them at the White House said Ron Reagan will be there with his wife, Doria, and Maureen Reagan with her husband, Dennis Kozell.

The president's son Michael and his daughter Patti Davis are spending the holiday with their in-laws, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said.

Also joining the Reagans at the ranch will be the president's brother, Neil, and Neil's wife, Bees.

of the students' lives. "Self-esteem is one for us," Kirt said.

Listening to a friend's problems and using understanding or reflective statements like "I can see why you're angry," can help.

Both Ammie and Kirt have heard friends discuss suicide before. Although neither has a friend carry out threats, both think that they have learned helpful techniques to prevent suicides if the matter comes up on another occasion.

Ammie feels that the end result of the program and how it can affect the rest of the student body depends on how the trained students end up using these new skills.

"It's all up to us," she said.

Psychologist Martin believes that the training was successful and that the availability of the trained students will help the entire school.

River

through town rather than through the diversion, he explained. As a result the Northside Canal Co. has volunteered men and equipment to deepen the safety way, with the work being done this month. The deeper channel will take more water out of the Little Wood, leaving room for the canal water when it comes back through the city.

"We will have to see more detailed plans on what the corps plans to do before the city (Gooding) could get involved," he said. A meeting for all entities will be held Dec. 16 in Gooding.

Shoshone Mayor Tim Riddinger said Saturday it was his understanding some of the money was to be used to conduct an updated study of the canal situation on the Little Wood and "size the project down to a workable, affordable project."

He says he sees no way any of the four city and county governments could participate in a $3.4 million project, and says a project that size may not be needed.

"I certainly don't want it reported porting their efforts," Garrett said.

He also said that the school had changed some "policy and accounting procedures, and the kids got caught in the transition."

High School Principal Len Penner and school board members agreed with the recommendation, and school officials will meet with music advisors Kevin and Cynthia Gilman to work out the problem.

Penner stressed the importance of advisors remembering to dedicate their funds if they are to be used for a specific purpose.

Bus Superintendent Bill Rogers said that groups would now receive a transportation bill at the end of each activity rather than at the end of the year as in the past. This would "save any surprises at the end of the year," and groups could better evaluate what funds they still had available, he said.

Light

system needs a light," Oberle replied. "If it's that big a problem, then maybe you should fund it."

Many schools have requested traffic control lights, Oberle said, and the state's former policy of denying them "creates ill will." So, he said, the highway department now allows cities and schools to put up their own traffic lights, subject to approval of the state engineer.

Standards for a traffic light are not set and the state engineer decides each case on an individual basis, Oberle said. For example, he said, steel poles are preferred, but wooden poles "might be accepted." Standards are classed from minimum to desirable, Oberle said.

"We consider wood poles temporary," he commented. "We just don't think it's a maintenance-free installation." Burks said Idaho Power Co. has already donated wooden poles.

"Revenue sharing was authorized but not appropriated, so we'll have to wait and see," Riddinger said. The Army Corps memo sent to each agency last July indicates that financial feasibility and overall benefit as well as continued local support for the project will have to be evaluated before anything is done. Riddinger said he would have to see an "affordable plan" and hold public hearings before Shoshone could participate.

Minimum acceptable standards for poles "aren't identifiable yet," Oberle said. The district engineer stressed that he is not an authority on what the state engineer will decide.

Bybee later met with Oberle for about an hour to discuss details of the plan for the light and what is needed to get the project approved.

At the City Council meeting Thursday evening, the engineer said he will submit a plan requesting a wooden pole installation, and he is optimistic it will be approved.

Oberle predicted the state engineer will make a decision on the Wendell light within a month after the plan is received.

Tax reform just scratched most of your interest deductions. Here's a way to get them back.

Starting January 1, the new tax code will steadily scratch away the tax deductibility from interest paid on most consumer credit. You lose 35% of the deductibility next year, 64% in 1988, 80% in 1989, 90% in 1990 and 100% thereafter. But much of this loss can be avoided with a First Security Home Equity Line of credit.

Since most debt tied to your home is largely unaffected by tax reform, you can use your Home Equity Line to finance a new car, your 401(k) and still have the opportunity to deduct your interest payments come tax time. (Certain IRS restrictions apply.)

Whether you're financing something new or paying off old loans or balances on credit cards and charge accounts, the First Security Home Equity Line is there to give you credit you need and the deductibility you count on. In fact, you may never need to apply for a loan again.

Deferred set-up charges for accounts opened before December 31

Open your First Security Home Equity Line of credit before December 31, 1986, and postpone the appraisal, title insurance and filing fees until you actually use your credit line. When you do, these charges will be financed as part of the line.

What's more...we don't charge an annual fee and we'll waive completely the loan origination fee and probably save you several hundred dollars. That means you can set up your First Security Home Equity Line with no out-of-pocket cash.

Special introductory rate of 5.9% APR

First Security is offering a special introductory annual percentage rate of 5.9% through December 31, 1986 on its Home Equity Line — a rate lower than you're used to paying on most consumer loans and credit cards.

Even when the introductory rate ends (December 31, 1986), our standard Home Equity Line variable interest rate is just 3% above the prime interest rate as published in The Wall Street Journal — still way below what you're probably paying now. For example, the rate on November 7 would have been 10.5% APR.

Interest-only payments for up to 10 years

If you want to keep your payments as low as possible, you may delay payments on principal and pay only the interest due on your credit line for up to 10 years. And remember, you may deduct the majority or all of those payments from your taxes.

Easy to open, easy to use

The dollar amount of credit for which you may qualify depends on how much equity you have in your home and your creditworthiness.

You'll receive special checks you can write just like you do on your regular checking account. You can transfer funds by phone to your checking account, or you can stop by any First Security banking office for person-to-person service. And you'll be kept up to date by a monthly statement itemizing all account activity.

Call today. Introductory offer ends December 31, 1986

Call 1-800-538-1133 today. We'll send you a Home Equity Line application and information outlining the opportunities and limitations of tax reform and how it will affect you. Or just call or visit your nearest First Security Bank office, and we'll get your application underway immediately.

For maximum savings you must act before December 31, 1986. Call 1-800-538-1133 today and we'll send you a Home Equity Line application and information outlining the opportunities and limitations of tax reform.

Moose on the loose

Maxwell fends for himself

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Maxwell, a roving bull moose on the loose, has shown he can fend for himself, said a state conservation official who refused an offer to return the pricker to its Minnesota range.

"He has moved through two-thirds of the state and crossed three interstates," said Al Farris of the Iowa Department of Natural Resources in declining the offer. "I think he's doing pretty well on his own."

Iowa's errant moose is on a southbound trek

The Huntsmen's Club, a newly organized sportsmen's group, said if the state could capture the bull moose, it would take care of the moose, nicknamed "Maxwell."

Maxwell first was spotted in usually mooseless Iowa early this month and at one time covered as much as 15 miles a day. On Friday, he was in the Strasser Woods in east Des Moines, more than 400 miles from normal moose habitat in northern Minnesota.

Maxwell created a traffic jam Tuesday as he wandered near Interstate 80 in central Iowa and motorists paused to rubberneck. The television station dubbed the moose Max-erl has set up a moose hot line.

Jack Kirstein, a radio host and spokesman for the Huntsmen's Club, said Friday that his organization wanted to prevent harm to the errant beast.

Only a handful of moose have trekked through Iowa in recent years, and the animal is endangered by hunters, he said. "You know what happens to them when this happens — they die," Kirstein said.

"We don't want that moose to die in Iowa or anywhere else, and since we are hunters and avid conservationists, we believe it is our duty to be at the forefront of any effort to humanely protect and care for this hapless animal," a club statement said.

The group had offered to pay for transportation, veterinary care and any other cost associated with the venture, assuming state or federal game officials could somehow tranquilize the beast or get him aboard a trailer without harm.

Farris said tranquilizing the moose would require a precise dosage, and that a mistake could be fatal to the animal. Using vehicles to corral the moose would not work either, he said.

"We are kind of short on cowboys around here," Farris said. "It could cause the moose to panic and we could have it running all over the countryside."

Conservation officials said curious people also could scare the moose, and advised onlookers not to approach the animal.

Some officials say they believe the moose may be lost because it is ill, perhaps with a brain parasite. But Kirstein said he believes the moose was chased from its territory by young bulls.

Camp provides home for homeless

CHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Like the overseer of some aristocratic estate, John Holley looks with satisfaction over his domain of gentle hills, solid brick buildings and harvested fields.

"In the summertime it's really nice, with all the green and the leaves and the flowers in bloom," Holley said. "It's really a nice place."

The place Holley has been allowed to call home for 3 1/2 years is Camp La Guardia, 40 miles northwest of Manhattan, a peaceful country haven since 1935 for the homeless men of New York City.

"This is a place where you can get your head together; this is the correct place, out here in the country," said Wilfred Marria, 32, who said he's been "floating around on the street for the last four years."

Each night, buses arrive from the city with men down on their luck. Most stay the night and go back to the city after breakfast. Some stay for the rest of their lives; the oldest resident, at 96, has been there for about 25 years.

Camp La Guardia is one of 21 shelters for the city's homeless, but the only one outside city limits. The spartan accommodations bear some resemblance to its urban counterparts, but Camp La Guardia feels more like an old age home or a work camp than one of the city's notorious human warehouses.

"For one thing ... we have a little more time to be caring," said Donald Siegel, the camp's social services director.

For another, he said, "You're away from the Bowery, you're away from the violence, you're away from the predators on the streets. This takes a lot of the pressure off a man when he comes here. He has all his needs taken care of. ... We give the men back their dignity and their self-esteem."

Violence at Camp La Guardia is rare, say residents and staff members. "The men from the city are provided three hot meals and a cot ... and they become pretty civilized," said Bill Paglia, one of the camp supervisors. "There's pressure from the other men to conform."

Residents must be at least 22 and cannot be active drug users. Seventy-five percent have a history of alcoholism or multiple substance abuse.

The 268-acre camp has a capacity of 1,185, which it now approaches nightly. By mid-December, it will be filled with regular residents. Its ranks begin thinning out in April and reach a low of about 850 in July and August.

The men are housed in one main building, built as a women's prison in 1917, and five immaculate barracks with rows of cots and lockers.

The most prized accommodations are the one-man cells in the former prison. Many are decorated with curtains and pin-up pictures; some have televisions or radios.

The camp has its own laundry, its own newspaper and its own bar, the Tap Room, where men are allowed up to a dozen 15-cent glasses of beer a night. No other alcohol is allowed.

High school-level courses and vocational training are also available.

"I find it most exciting," said Abe Apontes, 45, who is learning to read and write. "I'm just so happy to be learning. I'm going to keep struggling and make it."

All able-bodied men are required to work, everything from cleaning and cooking to clerical jobs and working in the four-acre garden, and most seem to enjoy the opportunity to be useful.

Holley, a former accountant who "had some bad luck," has been at the camp for 3 1/2 years and now oversees gardening, landscaping and maple syrup production — the camp taps about 40 maple trees every winter.

Rare rhino dies

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A Sumatran rhinoceros, one of only three in captivity, died in a mishap at Bangkok's Dusit Zoo, a zoo official said Saturday.

The 4-year-old female rhinoceros, named Linchong by Queen Sirikit, got her head caught in the iron bars of her cage Thursday and broke her neck trying to free herself, said Keyoon Srirumug, a senior zoo official.

Keyoon said Linchong became caught in the bars when she was frightened by university researchers who entered her cage as she ate.

The 440-pound, twin-horned rhinoceros was given to King Bhumipol Adulyadej by King Al Mutawakkil 'Abdullah Sultan Iskandar of Malaysia last December, Keyoon said.

He said that Sumatran rhinoceroses are nearly extinct, and the only two remaining in captivity are in Indonesia and Malaysia.

Idaho Power Temperature Comparison Table

When you look in the bottom left corner of your bill and find that your actual electricity consumption this year compared to last year is not what you expected, it might be explained by the difference in temperatures. No matter how hard you work to conserve electricity, your actual use may increase simply because of an extra-cold winter or an extra-hot summer. The temperature comparisons below can help explain those unexpected differences. The information compares average temperatures during October, 1986 and October, 1985.

| Location   | This year is:      |
|------------|--------------------|
| Boise      | 4.3 degrees warmer |
| Twin Falls | 2.4 degrees warmer |
| Pocatello  | 2.4 degrees warmer |

This information is based on a calendar month. Since your bill is based on a cycle month, it probably won't coincide exactly with the information given above. If you would like to find out exactly how temperatures this year compared with last year during your particular billing cycle, call the energy management representative at your local Idaho Power office.

Tyson hook puts out Berbick's lights in the 2nd

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
The Associated Press

Boxing

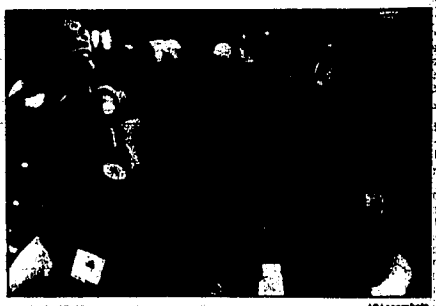

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — It took Mike Tyson a little more than 5 1/2 minutes Saturday night to become the youngest man ever to win the heavyweight boxing championship. He overwhelmed Trevor Berbick, knocking him down twice and stopping him at 2:35 of the second round. It was a devastating performance that left a crowd of about 8,800 at the Las Vegas Hilton gasping. "I told everybody I expected an early knockout, because I believe in myself," Tyson said. Doubters of Tyson's ability might be very hard to come by. "It's the moment I waited for all my life," said Tyson, whose life boxing tried to get up, but fell into a corner. He tried once again to rise, but once again fell. Finally, he gained his feet at the count of nine. But he was wobbling like a drunk and starting blakly. Referee Mills Lane stopped it. "I'm the champion of the world. I'll fight any man alive," Tyson said. "I refuse to get hurt, to lose. They will have to carry me out."

The next man who will get a chance at beating Tyson, something no one has done in his 21 months as a pro, will be either Tim Witherspoon or Tony Tubbs. Witherspoon will defend the World Boxing Association title against Tubbs on Dec. 12 at New York's Madison Square Garden. The winner of that match will fight Tyson at the Las Vegas Hilton on March 7. After his stunning victory, Tyson said he dedicated it to the late Cus D'Amato, D'Amato, who died last year, first met Tyson when he was a 13-year-old reform school inmate. The man who guided Patterson's career watched Tyson spar and said that, if he listened and worked hard, he would become a world champion. "I'm sure he was up there watching," Tyson said of D'Amato, who became the fighter's legal guardian in 1981. Asked if he recalled his thoughts when D'Amato said he could be a champion, Tyson said: "I thought he was a crazy of 'white dude.'" Tyson and Berbick both wore black

BSU reels in the wake of a 21-14 drubbing

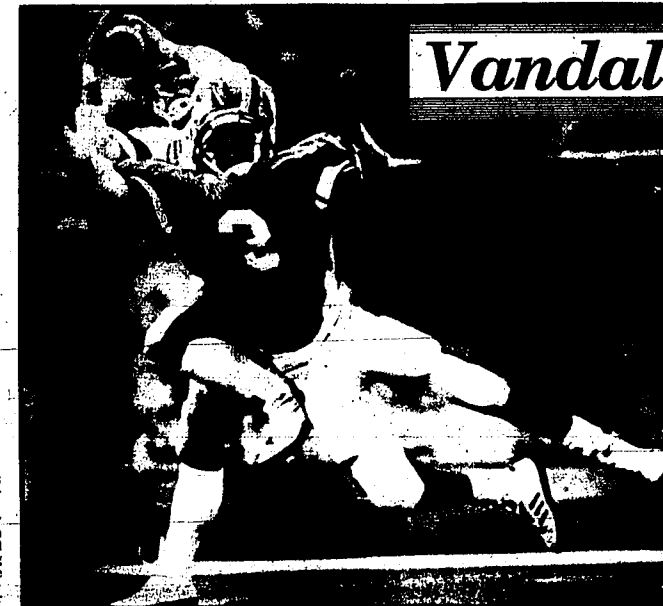

By SCOTT PEYRON
Special to The Times-News

BOISE — Boise State's once-dominant football program was staggered by another damaging blow Saturday — a fifth successive loss to upstate rival University of Idaho. The Vandals' 21-14 victory, staged before the fifth-largest crowd in Bronco Stadium history — 21,275 kept Idaho in contention for an NCAA Division I-AA playoff berth. The Vandals, 8-3 overall and 5-2 in the Big Sky Conference, will find out today if they are to gain their third post-season berth in four years. Idaho's lockerroom bubbled with euphoria.

"I hope we get a chance to go," said Keith Gilbertson, the Vandals' first-year coach. "I'll take an 8-3 season, but we want to play another game."

Boise State's situation is starkly different. The Broncos were left with a 3-4 Big Sky record and overall mark of 5-6 — their first losing season since 1946, when Boise State was Boise Junior College.

Boise State's head coach, John Kelsner, said last week that he and Athletic Director Gene Blyemeyer would assemble today a group of advisors to consider the state of Boise State football. Lyle Setenich, the Broncos' fourth-year head coach, said following the game that he wants to do some soul-searching before deciding whether he'll seek another season as BSU coach. "I'd like to go home and think about," said Setenich, whose four-year record as head coach at BSU is 24-20. "I'm not in a real good frame of mind right now to maybe do some things."

The Broncos, haunted by near-misses in Setenich's four seasons, doubled Idaho in first downs, rushing yards and time of possession, yet lost their fourth game in their last five. "Things were not good for us," said Setenich. "We dropped some balls, and yet we played a pretty tough ball game."

"All week we kept worrying that it would be the 1982 game all over again," Gilbertson said, recalling Idaho's 10-point fourth-quarter rally that edged the Broncos 24-17. "And it was the 1982 game all over again, only this time we got up early and held on."

The two teams played the decisive first half almost entirely on Boise State's terms — that is, the Broncos controlling the ball with their talkback-based offense and numbing the opposition's attack with a relentless defense. Still, it was all Boise State could do to stay in the game.

"I don't think we had our running game going," said Setenich. "Once we got inside the red zone (Idaho's 20-yard line), we couldn't score."

Idaho, outgained 244-154 in the first half, piled up a 21-11 lead, primarily on the strength of two huge plays: a 93-yard interception return by cornerback Virgil Paulson and a 52-yard Scott Linehan-to-Brant Bengen touchdown connection. Paulson's pickoff and Bengen's return, which carried a 33-yard touchdown return, which carried a sideline, halted an impressive Boise State drive and staked Idaho to a 14-0 lead. He broke to the ball between Bronco quarterback Keith Jarrett, who was throwing for the wide side of the field, and split end Corby Bedard and raced untouched to score.

"It may have been bracket coverage or it may have been four-man coverage," said Setenich. "It's something I think a young quarterback had some problems with in that situation. Some things that we wanted to do we weren't able to do at the proper time."

BSU responded, though, and got itself back into the game. Robert Moran kicked field goals of 52 and 45 yards and defensive tackle Peter Kwiatkowski buried Linehan in the end zone for a safety. Jarrett's lunging catch on the snap saved Moran's successful chance at the 45-yard field goal and the Broncos drew to within 14-8.

Vandals win!

Prospects better for playoffs

By The Times-News

The University of Idaho ranked 20th in the NCAA Division I-AA poll, saw its prospects of making the postseason playoffs brighten Saturday with losses by several teams ranked above the Vandals.

Aside from Idaho's 21-14 victory over Boise State Saturday, the most important result was (as the Vandals are) concerned was second-ranked Arkansas State's 26-21 victory over unranked North Louisiana for the Southland Conference championship. Had Arkansas State, 6th-1-1 for the season, lost the game, 5-4-1-1 would have claimed the league title and its automatic playoff berth and, in all probability, damaged the chances of a second Big Sky team gaining the postseason selection committee's attention. Arkansas State would have received an at-large invitation.

Idaho is now 8-3 for the season. The four-man NCAA postseason selection committee will announce the postseason field following a conference call this morning.

Top-ranked Nevada Reno, Big Sky champion, is already assured a playoff game next week.

"We don't want to go to Reno," said Idaho Coach Keith Gilbertson Saturday. "That would just like another conference game. We'd rather play somebody new."

Elsewhere Saturday, 18th-ranked Massachusetts, now 8-3, lost to Connecticut 20-17, endangering the Minutemen's chances of the postseason playoffs. Eleventh-ranked

Hailey cowboy wins a rope title

Regional coupokes sweep calf roping

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Hailey cowboy Kim Kawamura posted a ten-second time in calf roping that, while good for only third place in Saturday's final go-round of the Idaho Cowboys Association Rodeo Finals, combined with a good showing on Friday to give Kawamura the title in his specialty.

Idaho Cowboys Association Finals

And it was a sweep for Magic Valley cowboys in that event as Kirk Webb of Jerome improved his performance to take second overall, just ahead of first-round leader Walter Prewitt of Gooding.

Shoshone's Pat O'Maley registered a two-night best time in Saturday's breakaway roping round, but watched Arlee, Mont., cowgirl Shari Shell — the early pacesetter — win that title on average.

In bull riding, Kington wrangler Scotly Brown, who entered the rodeo second in ICA winnings, was awarded an 80, as was Gooding's Doug James. That second-place showing vaulted Brown into a tie with Phil Maxey of Missoula, Mont., for the overall crown at 155.

Boise's Bruce Pape captured Saturday's bareback riding go-round, but his 146 overall total fell one point short of champion Marty Bennett.

Although a breakdown with the barrier slowed competition in team roping, leaving results incomplete at press time, the Declo tandem of Kelly Munsee and Marlow Eldridge led the first section with a time of seven and 17/100 seconds. That mark bettered their winning time from the previous night and left a margin that appeared safe with a half dozen teams still to ride.

1. Bruce Pape, Boise 120; 2. Marty Bennett, Missoula 115; 3. Kelly Munsee, Marlow 110; 4. Marlow Eldridge, Declo 105; 5. Walter Prewitt, Gooding 100; 6. Phil Maxey, Missoula 95; 7. COACH LYLE SETENICH Suffers losing year at BSU

CSI falters, steadies, coasts to 101-63 win over Columbia

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News sportswriter

TWIN FALLS — For Coach Fred Trenkle it was more like pulling teeth than coaching basketball, but in the end his College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles had secured a 101-63 decision over the Columbia Basin Hawks Saturday night.

The Eagles never trailed, but they struggled with their offense and defense through the larger part of the game. They were propped up in the first half by steady Erick

Newman, who tanked 22 of his 30 points during that time. Struggling along with a 15-point advantage, the Eagles started hitting their collective stride four minutes into the second half, when Gerald Collins wound up two authoritative fast breaks. From that point on, it was the question of whether this was a Wendy's Night (a single burger for each time CSI holds a foe to less than 60 points) and if the Eagles could get to 100. The latter question was emphatically answered with 49 seconds left when Joey Johnson created an under-the-leg-to-the-opposite hand and left-hand-over-the-head slam to the delight of the several hundred still in attendance.

"We had a different team in each half," agreed Coach Trenkle afterward. "In the first half, the Eagles alone or simply trying to keep a lawn around his own house knows that, inevitably, mowers must be replaced. Allowances are made within budgets. This is high-handed tax levying.

If you hear that the golf course has actually lost money (not bookkeeping mumbo-jumbo, now) in the last 17 years, you are being lied to.

We are discussing here the return of greens fees, cart storage, locker rentals, etc., in total against the amount of money appropriated for the course by the Council. Remember now, until the last two years, all that "extra" golf money has returned to the general fund and not been used at the course. An added tax, as it were, and there wasn't a lot of it, but we suspect, the politicians miss it.

Now for the Council and/or its advisory board to come up with suggestions that season ticket holders pay a buck extra for each visit more than borders on the ridiculous.

And to suggest it is being done in the name of something called "to expand" the golf course is totally ridiculous. Expand what to where? It strikes us as being a place that is bounded by a highway on one side, a railroad track on another, a canyon on a third.

Anyone naive enough to fall for that one should apply for membership on the advisory board immediately. They need such people. The amazing thing about the golf advisory board — a unit that is newer than our former participation on the city recreation advisory board — is that it doesn't really try to save for the golfer. Its history actually would show it instrumental in rubber-stamping fee hikes on several occasions in the name of "the demand for increased service" and at someone else's suggestion. Or maybe

Economic shenanigans at golf course are questionable, at best

Open question. Why does Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course have to make a profit?

To pay for itself, to pay for the new clubhouse and to pay for what must be considered a sewage system so adequate for that new clubhouse that it veritably could service an entire subdivision.

If that answer is acceptable and we think it is while the clubhouse mortgage continues for the next four years, then here's another question. Why has it become necessary for the new clubhouse to be paid off in five years?

With the decidedly heavy increases the city voted in last year plus these latest additions to buy new equipment to replace old and/or worn-out stuff, the total financial burden falls on within 3 percent of the same people. Once again the famed "future generations" miss the tab. But what the heck. Congress is leaving them a doozie, anyway.

For the City Council to increase fees to purchase $8,000 worth of something as mundane but integral as mowers for next year would be similar to a trucking firm adding on to its freight charges every time it needs gas. Any fool concerned with running a golf course or simply trying to keep a lawn around his own house knows that, inevitably, mowers must be replaced. Allowances are made within budgets. This is high-handed tax levying.

If you hear that the golf course has actually lost money (not bookkeeping mumbo-jumbo, now) in the last 17 years, you are being lied to.

Another real problem is that every time a council member or board member is a golfer without a cart space in the municipal-owned barns, there immediately is (a) a suggestion that more barns be raised and/or (b) the rent be raised in the name of higher electricity bills but more truly in the hope that higher rents may cause some carts to be withdrawn, thus opening up possible spaces.

I've personally seen that happen four times now. A couple got things accomplished, others didn't. But I used to enjoy then Superintendent Howard Johnson's comment that went "when I go deer hunting, no one puts up a garage in the mountains for me to leave my pickup in."

Warriors rally from 16 down to beat Knicks

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Joe Barry Carroll scored a game-high 22 points and Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, who sparked a 12-0 spurt to start the third quarter, added 18, as the Golden State Warriors overcame a 16-point deficit to defeat the New York Knicks 97-93 Saturday night in the NBA.

The Warriors, who trailed 39-23 at the 7:11 mark of the second quarter, snapped a four-game losing streak on the road. Floyd started the comeback by opening the third quarter with a 20-foot jumper from the left side.

The Warriors reeled off 10 more unanswered points, five by Chris Mullin, and took a 55-50 lead. They never trailed thereafter.

Golden State entered the fourth quarter with a 75-67 advantage, but the Knicks fought to a 94-91 deficit with less than a minute remaining on a three-point goal by Gerald Henderson.

But a pair of foul shots by Carroll and another by Ben McDonald put the game out of reach.

Rory Sparrow topped the Knicks with 21 points, and Bill Cartwright added 20.

Atlanta 97, Boston 96

ATLANTA — Dominique Wilkins scored 38 points, including two free throws with 24 seconds left, leading Atlanta to a 97-96 NBA victory over Boston Saturday night, the Hawks' first home victory against the Celtics in nearly five years.

The Celtics managed the last shot, but did not have Larry Bird on the court. Bird fouled out with 1:11 to play, the first time in 465 regular season games he had been disqualified by fouls.

Spud Webb added 17 points for the Hawks, and Kevin Willis had 10 points and 13 rebounds.

Kevin McHale paced the Celtics with 25 points. Bird had 18 and Danny Alinge 16.

Boston scored six straight points to take a 9-40 lead before Bird fouled out. The Hawks followed with a three-point play when Wilkins hit a free throw but missed the second, and Willis rebounded the miss and scored.

Chicago 93, Washington 84

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan was held to 22 points, his lowest total of the season, but his supporting cast came to the rescue as the Chicago Bulls captured a 93-84 NBA win over the Washington Bullets Saturday night.

Jordan, who entered the game the league's leading scorer with a 38.6 average, was the leader for the Bulls, but he was closely followed by Charles Oakley with 21 points and Earl Cureton with 17. It was the sixth straight loss on the road for the Bullets.

Jordan had his previous season's low of 28 against the Bullets in Washington on Nov. 12.

minutes, with Bill Hanzik contributing eight of his 22 points. In all, the Nuggets routed Phoenix 41-9 margin in the period after the teams were deadlocked 62-62 at the half.

Utah 96, New Jersey 78

SALT LAKE CITY — Kent Benson, John Stockton and Thurl Bailey sparked a 21-2 Utah burst in the final minutes of the fourth quarter and the Utah Jazz went on to defeat the New Jersey Nets 96-78 in an NBA game Saturday night.

The Jazz never trailed, and they led 73-64 going into the final period. But Benson then scored nine of his 12 points and Stockton and Bailey added six apiece while the Jazz held the Nets to just one field goal, by Mike Gminski, during the nine-minute spurt.

Detroit 93, Cleveland 84

PONTIAC, Mich. — Reserve guard Vinnie Johnson scored 18 of his game-high 30 points in the second half Saturday night, leading the Detroit Pistons to a 93-84 NBA victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The victory was the Pistons' second after three consecutive losses. The Cavaliers have lost their last seven games.

Two jump shots by Johnson and a layup by rookie Dennis Rodman, who scored a season-high 12 points, gave the Pistons a 75-59 lead with 10:15 left in the game. The Cavaliers then closed to 86-77 as Mel Turpin with a 2:11 remaining.

trunks but Tyson was the gun-fighter. He threw 106 punches and landed 50 while Berbick landed only 13 of the 38 punches he threw.

"If he attacks me, he's going to attack a wall," Berbick said before the fight.

Tyson attacked and attacked, and the wall began to crumble late in the first round, when Tyson hurt Berbick with a four-punch flurry to the head with about 20 seconds left. Then he crashed home a left and right. Berbick was on wobbly legs at the bell.

After the first knockdown in the second round, Berbick tried to clutch and hold Tyson but he simply didn't have the artillery to hold the challenger off. The 6-foot-2½ Berbick, who weighed 218½, had a seven-inch reach advantage over the 22½-pound Tyson, whose height is listed at 5-11 but appears to be closer to 5-9.

Berbick would have needed a whip and a chair to keep Tyson off Saturday night, and even that might not have been enough.

"I was throwing hydrogen bombs," Tyson said.

The 33-year-old Berbick's purse was $2.1 million, but more than $700,000 of that has been ordered added by a Nevada judge in connection with two breach-of-contract suits involving Berbick.

Tyson was fined $3,000 for wearing black trunks. The champion gets the choice of colors, and Berbick chose black. But Tyson, who always wears black, decided to keep his winning color scheme.

Bruin girls defeat Madison, 45-37

By MICHAEL VANAUDELN Times-News writer

That is, until Mindy Gilbert tipped in a rebound and Rachael Carter sank two free throws to stop the last of several Bobcat rallies, giving the Twin Falls Bruins a 45-37 victory over Madison Saturday night.

For the Bruins, the game ran in spurts. Carter started the first one in the opening buzzer by scoring straight 10 points in the first quarter, six of them layups, and shooting Twin Falls out to a 18-9 lead.

But Madison bounced back with Chanette Sharp coming off the bench to score six points, bringing the Bobcats to within five points 27-22 at the half.

The Bruins came out in the third quarter a patient team — opposite of the run-and-gun team they were in the first half — working the ball inside to Gilbert, but the 5-11 junior ran into foul trouble and the Bobcats took advantage of the suddenly smaller Twin Falls club.

Controlling the boards, Madison won one basket from tying the score when Sharp, again, ignited the Bobcat fast break, scoring a bucket and two free throws. With Gilbert gone, Carter and Shelly Wageman showed their rebounding skills, scoring key buckets of their own during the fourth quarter, and again, the Bruins staved

FILER — Jill Parrott and Susan McCandless carried free throws coming to the wire in the closing minutes Saturday night that allowed the Filer girls to fend off the Jerome Tigers 36-34 in girls non-conference play.

Filer led the only seemingly comfortable lead of the game in the first quarter, opening up a six-point lead. But Jerome closed to within two early in the second period and after that it was an airtight battle.

In addition to the crucial late free throws by Parrott and McCandless, Filer benefited from 12-22 free throw shooting. The ringleader there was Debra Peters, who was 6-7.

Memphis State slams Cleveland State, 70-66

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Vincent Askew had 20 points and 11 rebounds and teammate John Williams hit 28 points while Memphis State raced to a 70-66 Cleveland State in an NIT Classic first-round game Saturday night.

It was the season's opener for both teams. The Tigers defeated Michigan in a second-round game Monday night in Memphis.

the helm when Kirk was fired in September. Finch led the losers with 28 points, while Clinton Ransey had 11.

The Tigers outscored the Vikings 10-2 with eight minutes remaining in the game and extended a 55-54 lead to 65-54 at 4:00.

Sylvester Gray came off the bench to score 10 points and grab eight rebounds for Memphis State. Eight of his points were in the second half.

Gray also had a key steal and two layups.

Cleveland State closed the gap to 67-64 with three minutes left, but Tiger Kenneth Moody scored on a jumper to offset a pair of free throws by McFadden.

Memphis State outbounded Cleveland State 40-37 and outshot the Vikings from the field 48 percent to 39 percent. Memphis State shot only 44 percent at the free throw line, while Cleveland State hit 80 percent.

Penn St. knocks off Pitt; OU shocks Huskers

By The Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Blair Thomas' 91-yard touchdown kickoff return and D.J. Dozier's 28-yard scoring run in the first half triggered second-ranked Penn State to a 34-14 victory Saturday over Pittsburgh in the Fiesta Bowl with No. 1 Miami.

Penn State's (11-0) triumph made Joe Paterno only the second coach in modern college football history to produce six regular-season undefeated, untied teams. The late Paul "Bear" Bryant is the all-time leader with seven.

Miami still has to dispose of East Carolina. Thanksgiving night — to remove the last obstacle to the seventh meeting of two top-rated teams for the national title. The 10-0 Hurricanes are overwhelming favorites to defeat the Pirates, 2-0.

Massimo Manca's 44-yard first-period field goal started Penn State toward its 22nd straight regular season victory and 24th bowl appearance in the university's 100th year of football.

Pitt, 5-5, threw a momentary scare into the Nittany Lions when the Panthers drove 80 yards on nine plays to go ahead 7-3 with 2:12 left in the opening period. Craig Heyward drove one yard for the score.

But the Panthers hadn't finished celebrating when Penn State's Thomas, behind four key blocks, returned the kickoff 91 yards for a touchdown that gave the Lions a 10-7 lead.

Penn State never looked back. It boosted the lead to 17-7 at halftime on a 78-yard drive, with Dozier shaking off six tackles on a twisting 25-yard scoring run.

Pitt's final score came with 6:35 remaining on an 82-yard interception return by free safety Troy Washington.

Oklahoma 20 Nebraska 17

LINCOLN, Neb. — Tight end Keith Jackson caught a 49-yard touchdown pass with 1:01 remaining and made a one-handed 41-yard catch to set up Tim Lashar's 31-yard field goal with six seconds left as third-ranked Oklahoma stunned No. 5 Nebraska 20-17 Saturday. The Sooners won the Big Eight championship and a third straight trip to the Orange Bowl.

The Sooners, who trailed 17-7 entering the final period, began their comeback on Lashar's 22-yard field goal with 10:39 left to play. Oklahoma committed three turnovers in the final 18 minutes and appeared doomed to defeat when a punt by Nebraska's John Kroeker was downed at the Sooners' 6-yard line with 4:10 to go.

Jamelle Holloway completed three of four passes for 60 yards as the Sooners stormed the length of the field to tie the score, which was all they needed to snatch the Orange Bowl bid away from Nebraska.

Jackson outgave cornerback Brian Davis for Holloway's touchdown pass at the goal line. The Sooners got the ball back one last time at their 35 with 50 seconds to go after Kroeker's 46-yard punt and Derrick White's 55-yard return.

On third-and-12 from the Oklahoma 37, Jackson made a sensational grab of Holloway's pass at the Nebraska 35 and lumbered to the 14. Lashar then drilled his second field goal to give the Sooners their 12th triumph in the last 16 meetings with Nebraska.

Oklahoma finished with a 10-1 record — 7-0 in the Big Eight — and will play either Texas A&M or Arkansas in the Orange Bowl, though the bowl game said it would invite No. 2 Penn State if Miami loses Thursday to East Carolina and runs a 1-2 matchup in the Fiesta Bowl.

Nebraska, 9-2, settled for a trip to the Sugar Bowl against either LSU or Alabama.

Arkansas 41 SMU 0

IRVING, Texas — Quarterback Greg Thomas ran for three touchdowns to power 11th-ranked Arkansas to a 41-0 crushing of Southern Methodist in the Southwest Conference finale for both teams Saturday.

The win keeps alive Arkansas' hopes for a Cotton Bowl bid. The Razorbacks, who finished the season with a 9-2 overall record and 6-2 in SWC play, will be in Dallas New Year's Day if Texas defeats Texas A&M in Austin Thursday.

If the Razorbacks do not earn a Cotton Bowl berth, they are assured of a spot in the Orange Bowl.

SMU, which is barred from postseason play because of NCAA probation, finished the year at 6-5 and 5-3. It was the first time since 1964 that the Mustangs have been shut out, twice in a season. SMU opened the season with a 30-0 loss to Arizona State.

Texas A&M 74 TCU 10

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — Texas A&M's Roger Vick scored four touchdowns, including two in a 40-point first half, as the 13th-ranked Aggies defeated Texas Christian by the second largest victory margin in league history, 74-10, Saturday and clinched a tie for their second consecutive SWC title.

The Aggies, who extended the nation's longest NCAA Division 1A home winning streak to 14 straight games, have a 6-1 SWC record going into Thursday's game against the Texas Longhorns.

A&M's 64-point victory margin ranks behind Texas' 65-point 81-16 victory over TCU in 1974.

The Aggies, 8-2, who beat Auburn 36-16 in the 1986 Cotton Bowl, hammered the injury-weakened Horned Frogs from the opening series when Vick completed a 70-yard drive with his first score.

Baylor 18 Texas 13

WACO, Texas — Senior quarterback Cody Carlson, Baylor's all-time passing and total offense leader, accounted for three touchdowns and cornerback Ron Francis intercepted three passes Saturday as the No. 17-ranked Bears defeated Texas 18-13.

The Southwest Conference victory raised Baylor's season record to 8-3 and earned it an invitation to play in the Bluebonnet Bowl at Houston on Dec. 31.

Texas fell to 5-5 and must defeat Texas A&M on Thanksgiving to avoid its first losing football season in 39 years.

Baylor scored its first touchdown after Texas receiver Everett Gay fell down and Francis intercepted, returning the ball 16 yards to the Texas 29.

Carlson threw 11 yards to Bobby Jack Gofforth on third-and-4 for the score with 8:24 left in the first quarter.

Clemson 21 South Carolina 21

CLEMSON, S.C. — David Treadwell kicked a 31-yard field goal with 2:50 left as No. 19 Clemson rallied to tie the South Carolina 21-21 in college football Saturday.

The Tigers, 7-2-2, were expected to receive an invitation to the Gator Bowl against Stanford.

It was the second tie in as many weeks for the Tigers, who rallied last week to tie Maryland 17-17 to clinch the Atlantic Coast Conference title.

Donnell Woolford returned a 30-yard punt 12 yards to the Gamecocks 48 to set up the Tigers' final drive. The march was sparked by Rodney Williams teaming with a leaping Ricardo Hooper for a 29-yard pass reception on third down and 13 yards to go from the Clemson 49.

But three runs gained just nine yards before Treadwell came on to boot his second field goal.

Michigan 26 Ohio State 24

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Tailback Jamie Morris rushed for 210 yards and two touchdowns as No. 6 Michigan earned a trip to the Rose Bowl with a 26-24 victory over Ohio State in a Big Ten Conference football game Saturday.

Michigan, 10-1 overall and 7-1 in the Big Ten, shares the conference championship with Ohio State, which saw a nine-game winning streak end. Ohio State 43 and 7-1, accepted a bid to the Cotton Bowl.

Morris, a 5-foot-7, 179-pound junior, scored on a 5-yard run at the 8:53 mark of the third quarter, complete, but a scoring run by Morris of pleting an 83-yard drive. Mike Gillette's extra-point kick narrowed lead with 3:53 left in the third

Warriors rally from 16 down to beat Knicks

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Joe Barry Carroll scored a game-high 22 points and Eric "Stumpy" Floyd, who sparked a 12-0 State Warriors overtime, added 18, as the Golden State Warriors overcame a 16-point deficit to defeat the New York Knicks 97-93 Saturday night in the NBA.

The Warriors, who trailed 39-23 at the 7:11 mark of the second quarter, snapped a four-game losing streak on the road. Floyd started the comeback by opening the third quarter with a 20-foot jumper from the left side.

The Warriors reeled off 10 more unanswered points, five by Chris Mullin, and took a 55-50 lead. They never trailed thereafter.

Golden State entered the fourth quarter with a 75-67 advantage, but the Knicks fought to a 94-91 deficit with less than a minute remaining on a three-point goal by Gerald Henderson.

But a pair of foul shots by Carroll and another by Ben McDonald put the game out of reach.

Atlanta 97, Boston 96

ATLANTA — Dominique Wilkins scored 38 points, including two free throws with 24 seconds left, leading Atlanta to a 97-96 NBA victory over Boston Saturday night, the Hawks' first home victory against the Celtics in nearly five years. The Celtics managed the last shot, but did not have Larry Bird on the court. Bird fouled out with 1:11 to play, the first time to 465 regular season games he had been disqualified by fouls.

Spud Webb added 17 points for the Hawks, and Kevin McHale paced the Celtics with 25 points. Bird had 18 and Danny Ainge 16.

Boston scored six straight points to take a 94-90 lead before Bird fouled out. The Hawks followed with a three-point play when Wilkins hit a free throw but missed the second, and Willis rebounded the miss and scored.

Chicago 93, Washington 84

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan was held to 22 points, his lowest total of the season, but his supporting cast came to the rescue as the Chicago Bulls captured a 93-84 NBA win over the Washington Bullets Saturday night. Jordan, who entered the game the league's leading scorer with a 38.6 average, was the leading scorer for the Bulls, but he was closely followed by Charles Oakley with 21 points and Earl Cureton with 17. It was the sixth straight loss on the road for the Bulls. Jordan had his previous season's low of 22 against the Bullets in Washington on Nov. 12.

Denver 132, Phoenix 120

DENVER — Lafayette Lever had 29 points and 17 rebounds and Alex English scored 30 points Saturday night, leading the Denver Nuggets to a 132-120 NBA victory over the Phoenix Suns.

Lever, the NBA's leading rebounder among guards, was in double figures in rebounding for the fourth straight game.

The Nuggets broke open a close game in the third quarter after trailing 77-70 early in the period. Denver outscored the Suns 28-8 over the next five minutes.

Utah 96, New Jersey 78

SALT LAKE CITY — Kent Benson, John Stockton and Thurl Bailey sparked a 21-2 Utah burst in the first nine minutes of the fourth quarter and the Utah Jazz went on to defeat the New Jersey Nets 96-78 in an NBA game Saturday night. The Jazz never trailed, and they led 73-64 going into the final period. But Benson then scored nine of his 12 points and Stockton and Bailey added six apiece while Gminski, during the nine-minute spurt.

Detroit 93, Cleveland 84

PONTIAC, Mich. — Reserve guard Vinile Johnson scored 18 points on 10-of-16 free throws in the second half Saturday night, leading the Detroit Pistons to a 93-84 NBA victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The victory was the Pistons' second after their last seven consecutive losses. The Cavaliers have lost their last seven games.

Two jump shots by Johnson and a layup by rookie Dennis Rodman, who scored a season-high 12 points, gave the Pistons a 76-59 lead with 10:15 left in the game. The Cavaliers then closed to 86-77 on a basket by Mel Turpin with 2:41 remaining.

Tyson

trunks but Tyson was the sun- lighter. He threw 10 punches and landed 59 while Berlick landed only 13 of the 38 punches he threw.

"If he attacks me he's going to attack a wall," Berlick said before the fight. Tyson attacked and attacked, and the wall began to crumble late in the first round, when Tyson hurt Berlick with a four-punch flurry that led to a head with about 20 seconds left. Then he crashed home a left and right. Berlick was on wobbly legs at the bell.

After the first knockdown in the second round, Berlick tried to clutch and hold Tyson. But he simply didn't have the artillery to hold his challenger off. The 6-foot-2 1/2 Berlick, who weighed 218 1/2, had a seven-inch reach advantage over the 216 1/2-pound Tyson, whose height is listed at 5'11 but appears to be closer to 5'9.

Berlick would have needed a whip and a chair to keep Tyson off Saturday night, and even that might not have been enough.

"I was throwing hydrogen bombs," Tyson said.

The 33-year-old Berlick's purse was $2.1 million, but more than $700,000 of that has been ordered attached by a Nevada judge in connection with a Nevada judge in connection with two breach-of-contract suits involving Berlick.

Tyson was fined $3,000 for wearing black trunks. The champion gets the choice of colors, and Berlick chose black. But Tyson, who always wears black, decided to keep his winning color scheme.

Bruin girls defeat Madison, 45-37

By MICHAEL VANAUDELN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Like Freddy from Nightmare on Elm Street, the Madison Bobcats just kept coming back.

That is, until Mindy Gilbert tipped in a rebound and Rachel Carter sank two free throws to stop the last of several Bobcat rallies, giving the Twin Falls Bruins a 45-37 victory over Madison Saturday night.

For the Bruins, the game ran in spurts. Carter started the first one right from the opening buzzer by shooting straight eight points in the first quarter, six of them layups, and scoring Twin Falls out to a 19-9 lead.

But Madison bounced back with Chantelle Sharp coming off the bench to score six points, bringing the Bobcats to within five points 22-17 at the half.

The Bruins came out in the third quarter a patient team — opposite of the run-and-gun team they were in the first half — working the ball inside to Gilbert. But the 5-11 junior ran into foul trouble and the Bobcats took advantage of the suddenly smaller Twin Falls club.

Controlling the boards, Madison won one basket from tying the game when Sharp, again, ignited the Bobcat fast break. Sharp hit a layup and two free throws. With Gilbert gone, Carter and Shelly Wageman showed their rebounding skills, scoring key buckets off of offensive rebounds, and again, the Bruins stayed of a Madison rally. Early in the fourth, though, with the game seemingly at hand, the Bruins lost their lead when Melanee Sutton and Pam Jensen scored two quick baskets for the Bobcats and Stover had to call a time out to settle his team down.

"But we were a little down," he said. "But give Madison credit, they worked hard and brought themselves back."

But it was the clutch free throw shooting of Carter that put the brakes on the last Madison rally after Nikki Baldwin hit a jumper to bring the Bobcats back to within one.

In the last two minutes of the ballgame, with Madison coming back like a bad dream, Carter was sent to the line twice and made three out of her four free throws, and helped by Gilbert's tip-in, the Bruins, finally, had their win.

"I'm sure the confidence level was like before the game," said Stover, "and we had a number of chances to fold but we made the plays and the free throws we had to."

Filer 36 Jerome 34

FILER — Jill Parrott and Susan McCandless cannot free throws coming to the wire in the closing minutes Saturday night that allowed the Filer girls to fend off the Jerome Tigers 36-34 in girls non-conference play.

Filer had the only seemingly comfortable lead of the game in the first quarter, opening up a six-point lead. But Jerome closed to within two early in the second period and after that it was an airtight battle.

In addition to the crucial late free throws by Parrott and McCandless, Filer benefited from 12-22 free throw shooting. The ringerler there was Debra Peters, who was 6-7.

Shoshone 49 Murtaugh 15

MURTAUGH — The Shoshone girls held Murtaugh scoreless while romping into a 15-0 first-quarter lead and rolled on to a 49-15 Magic Valley Conference victory Friday night.

Delaware 83, Clemson 78

Delaware, also 8-3, claimed the Yankee Conference championship and an automatic berth in the playoffs despite losing to Boston University.

Of the 19 teams ranked above Idaho in the last poll, 16 have better records than the Vandals following Saturday's action. Still three of those teams, second-ranked Holy Cross, sixth-ranked Pennsylvania and 15th-ranked Cornell won't participate in the I-AA playoffs because of conference institutional rules.

Seven teams will receive automatic berths, meaning the NCAA committee will probably distribute the remaining nine berths among Idaho, Delaware, eighth-ranked Tennessee State (10-1), 13th-ranked North Carolina A&T (9-2), 14th-ranked Sam Houston State (9-2), 16th-ranked Nicholls State (9-2), 19th-ranked Furman (7-2), unranked Howard (8-3) and unranked Connecticut (8-3).

Idaho limited BSU to only 125 yards in the second half, and Bronco tailback Chris Jackson, after a 102-yard first half, was held to just nine more.

The Broncos' only second-half points came on a 35-yard Moran field goal early in the third quarter. Idaho linebacker Tom Hennessey, who had a sack on Jackson, said:

"I was just glad to see him get the ball out of his hands. He was running the ball very well. He was running the ball very well. He was running the ball very well."

Golf

These ideas really don't have Twin Falls Municipal's interests foremost in mind. I think they are just trying to establish their handicaps at other courses?

Anyway, it is still a confounding fact here that a supposedly nonprofit, even fee-supported, facility can show $55,000 profit on $100,000 total revenue. That percentage, ladies and gentlemen, is a license to steal — and here they are, back again planning to ask for more. Conary is popular perception, not all golfers are on unlimited family stipend.

But the majority of you will nod your heads and say "by dog, why should we taxpayers have to pay for someone else's golf?"

Well, putting things equally, then: play golf. Knothole league players pay $3.

Men and women in the slowpitch softball leagues pay $45 each. Adult must pay $185 ($190 max/years) for season pass, $350 for a family pass or $190 on the weekends to play.

Knockers bring their various outdoor games and accountments to seven city parks free. Golfers must pay $25 "pull on" fee to rent their privately-owned cart on the course or $35 per season to store it there.

Remember, by their own figures, one of each three of those dollars is profit (currently being used to pay for the new clubhouse but very unlikely under a fee schedule ever to be reduced).

What has been overlooked here is that an estimated 3,500 to 4,000 individuals are members of the municipal golf course each year at a profit. It defies logic to say that children or young adults are entitled to recreation tax dollars while older citizens should not only subsidize those other and receive their own recreation tax dollars but return a profit. Loss-preventing use fees are one thing, 35 percent profits another.

Now, if the council and its advisory board was to start earning their money, here's a suggestion made to us by a golfer that can study and survey.

This fellow (who for obvious reasons shall remain nameless) said he'd be happy to pay the $1 per round over and above his season ticket fare provided that money go into a dedicated fund to be used solely for a women-only golf course.

Any one want to take that on? I was going to, but Mrs. Hovey dissuaded me. Rather quickly, too.

Larry Hovey, a hacker, is a sportswriter for The Times-News.

Memphis State slams Cleveland State, 70-66

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Vincent Askew had 20 points and 11 rebounds and teammate John Wilfong hit 13 threes as Memphis State rolled to a 70-66 victory over 20th-ranked Cleveland State in an NIT Classic first-round game Saturday night.

It was the season's opener for both teams. The Tigers will meet Michigan in a second-round game Monday night in Memphis.

The victory was the first for Memphis State's new coach Larry Finch, who replaced Dana Kirk at the helm when Kirk was fired in September.

Ken McCadden led the losers with 28 points, while Clinton Ransey had 22.

The Tigers outscored the Vikings 10-2 with eight minutes remaining in the game and extended a 39-34 lead to 66-56 at 4:00.

Sylvester Gray came off the bench to score 10 points and grab eight rebounds for Memphis State. Eight of his points were in the second half.

Gray also had a key steal and two layups.

Cleveland State closed the gap to 67-64 with three minutes left, but Tiger Kenneth Moody scored on a jumper to offset a pair of free throws by McCadden.

Memphis State outbounded Cleveland State 40-37 and, outshot the Vikings from the field 48 percent to 39 percent. Memphis State shot only 44 percent at the free throw line, while Cleveland State hit 80 percent.

Penn St. knocks off Pitt; OU shocks 'Huskers

By The Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Blair Thomas' 91-yard touchdown kickoff return and D.J. Dozier's 26-yard scoring run in the first half triggered second-ranked Penn State to a 34-14 victory Saturday over Pitt, unofficially setting up a Jan. 22 contest in the Fiesta Bowl with No. 1 Miami.

Top 20 roundup

For other Top 20 scores, see Pac-10 roundup on C-4

Penn State's (11-0) triumph made Joe Paterno only the second coach in modern college football history to produce six regular-season undefeated, untied teams. The late Paul "Bear" Bryant is the all-time leader with seven.

Miami still has to dispose of East Carolina. The Hurricanes might to remove the last obstacle to the seventh meeting of two top-rated teams for the national title. The 10-0 Hurricanes are overwhelming favorites to defeat the Pirates, 29.

Massimo Manca's 44-yard first-period field goal started Penn State toward its 22nd straight regular season victory and 24th bowl appearance in the university's 100th year of football.

Pitt, 5-5, threw a momentary scare into the Military Lions when the Panthers drove 80 yards on nine plays to go ahead 7-3 with 2:12 left in the opening period. Craig Heyward drove one yard for the score.

But the Panthers hadn't finished celebrating when Penn State's Thomas behind four key blocks, returned the kickoff 91 yards for a touchdown that gave the Lions a 10-7 lead.

Penn State never looked back. It boosted the lead to 17-7 at halftime on a 78-yard drive, with Dozier making off six tackles on a twisting 25-yard scoring run.

Pitt's final score came with 6:35 remaining on an 82-yard interception return by free safety Troy Washington.

Oklahoma 20 Nebraska 17

LINCOLN, Neb. — Tight end Keith Jackson caught a 17-yard touchdown pass with 1:18 remaining and made a one-handed 41-yard catch to set up Tim Lashar's 31-yard field goal with six seconds left as third-ranked Oklahoma stunned No. 5 Nebraska 20-17 Saturday. The Sooners won the Big Eight championship and a third straight trip to the Orange Bowl.

The Sooners, who trailed 17-7 entering the final period, began their comeback on Lashar's 22-yard field goal with 10:39 left to play. Oklahoma's three turnovers in the final 18 minutes and an apparent doomed to defeat when a punt by Nebraska's John Kroeker was downed at the Sooners' 6-yard line with 4:10 to go.

Jamelle Holloway completed three of four passes for 69 yards as the Sooners stormed the length of the field to tie the score, which was all they needed to snatch the Orange Bowl bid away from Nebraska.

Jackson outflung cornerback Brian Davis for Holloway's touchdown pass at the goal line. The Sooners got the ball back one last time at their 35 with 50 seconds to go after Kroeker's 46-yard punt and Derrick White's 5-yard return.

On third-and-12 from the Oklahoma 35, Jackson made a sensational grab of Holloway's pass at the Nebraska 35 and lumbered to the 14. Lashar then drilled his second field goal to give the Sooners their 12th triumph in the last 16 meetings with Nebraska.

Oklahoma finished with a 10-1 record — 7-0 in the Big Eight — and will play either Texas A&M or Arkansas in the Orange Bowl, though the bowl game said it would invite No. 2 Penn State if Miami loses Thursday to North Carolina and ruins a 1-2 matchup in the Fiesta Bowl.

Nebraska, 9-2, settled for a trip to the Sugar Bowl against either LSU or Alabama.

Arkansas 41 SMU 0

IRVING, Texas — Quarterback Greg Thomas ran for three touchdowns to power 11th-ranked Arkansas to a 41-0 crushing of Southern Methodist in the Southwest Conference finale for both teams Saturday.

The win keeps alive Arkansas' hopes for a Cotton Bowl bid. The Razorbacks, who finished the season with a 9-2 overall record and 6-2 SWC play, will be in Dallas New Year's Day if Texas defeats Texas A&M in Austin Thursday.

If the Razorbacks do not earn a Cotton Bowl berth, they are assured of a spot in the Orange Bowl.

SMU, which is barred from postseason play because of NCAA probation, finished the year at 6-5 and 5-3. It was the first time since 1964 that the Mustangs have been shut out twice in a season. SMU opened the season with a 30-0 loss to Arizona State.

Thomas, who gained 116 yards on 16 carries, scored on runs of four and one yards in the first quarter and added a 23-yard scoring jaunt in the second quarter to cap a 98-yard Razorbacks scoring drive.

Texas A&M 74 TCU 10

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — Texas A&M's Roger Vick scored four touchdowns, including two in a 40-point first half, as the 13th-ranked Aggies defeated Texas Christian by their second largest victory margin in league history, 74-10, Saturday and clinched a tie for their second consecutive SWC title.

The Aggies, who extended the nation's longest NCAA Division IA home winning streak to 14 straight games, have a 6-1 SWC record going into Thursday's game against the Texas Longhorns.

A&M's 64-point victory margin ranks behind Texas' 65-point 81-16 victory over TCU in 1974.

The Aggies, 9-2, who beat Auburn 36-16 in the 1986 Cotton Bowl, hammered the injury-weakened Horned Frogs from the opening series when Vick completed a 70-yard drive with his first score.

Baylor 18 Texas 13

WACO, Texas — Senior quarterback Cody Carlson, Baylor's all-time passing and total offense leader, accounted for three touchdowns and cornerback Ron Francis intercepted three passes Saturday as the No. 17-ranked Bears defeated Texas 18-13.

The Southwest Conference victory capped Baylor's 5-2 season record and earned it an invitation to play in the Bluebonnet Bowl at Houston on Dec. 31.

Texas fell to 5-5 and must defeat Texas A&M on Thanksgiving to avoid its first losing football season in 29 years.

Baylor scored its first touchdown after Texas receiver Everett Gay fell down and Francis intercepted, returning the ball 16 yards to the Texas 29.

Carlson threw 11 yards to Bobby Jackson for third-and-8 for the score with 8:24 left in the first quarter.

Clemson 21 South Carolina 21

CLEMSON, S.C. — David Treadwell kicked a 31-yard field goal, with 2:50 left as No. 19 Clemson rallied to tie the South Carolina 21-21 in college football Saturday.

The Tigers, 7-2-2, were expected to receive an invitation to the Gator Bowl against Stanford.

It was the second tie in as many weeks for the Tigers, who rallied last week to the Maryland 17-17 to clinch the Atlantic Coast Conference title.

Donnell Woolford returned a 30-yard punt 12 yards to the Clemson 46 to set up the Tigers' final drive. The march was sparked by Rodney Williams teaming with a leaping Ricardo Hooper for a 29-yard pass reception on third down and 13 yards to go from the Clemson 49.

But three runs gained just nine yards before Treadwell came on to boot his second field goal.

Michigan 26 Ohio State 24

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Tailback Jamie Morris rushed for 210 yards and two touchdowns as No. 6 Michigan earned a trip to the Rose Bowl with a 26-24 victory over Ohio State in a Big Ten Conference football game Saturday.

Michigan, 10-1 overall and 7-1 in the Big Ten, shares the conference championship with Ohio State, which saw a nine-game winning streak end. Ohio State 9-3 and 7-1.

accepted a bid to the Cotton Bowl. Ohio State's lead to 14-13. Morris, a 5-foot-7, 179-pound junior, scored on a 5-yard run at the 8:53 mark of the third quarter, complete but a scoring run by Morris of 83-yard drive. Mike Gillette's extra-point kick narrowed lead with 3:53 left in the third quarter. The Wolverines then moved 86 yards, and backup tailback Thomas Wheeler scored a touchdown on a 7-yard run with 12:46 left in the game. Gillette's kick made it 26-17. The Buckeyes drew to within two points on wide receiver Chris Carter's second touchdown reception of the day from quarterback Jim Karsatos, this one covering 17 yards at the 9:42 mark.

LSU 21 Notre Dame 19

BATON-ROUGE, La. — Freshman Tom Hodson threw three touchdown passes and nose guard Henry Thomas helped keep Notre Dame's offense out of the end zone until the final 3:32 of the game as eighth-ranked Louisiana State beat the Irish 21-19 Saturday night. Two of Hodson's touchdown passes were in the first quarter — a 13-yard completion to Wendell Davis on LSU's first possession and a 4-yard loss to Rogie Magee with 49 seconds left in the period.

After Notre Dame had closed to 14-13 on a 96-yard kickoff return by Tim Brown and two field goals by John Carney, Hodson drove LSU 78 yards and completed another 4-yard touchdown pass to tight end Brian Kinchen midway through the fourth quarter. Brown's kickoff return came after LSU's first score in the nationally televised game over ESPN.

Pac-10: Bruins humble Trojans, 45-25

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Gaston Green rushed for a career-high 224 yards and a school record-tying four touchdowns Saturday as 18th-ranked UCLA took command early and rolled to a surprisingly easy 45-25 victory over 10th-ranked Southern California.

After failing to move the first time they had the ball, the Freedom Bowl Bruins put their cross-town rivals away by scoring on their next six possessions to take a 38-0 lead after just 3:37 of the third quarter.

Green, who carried a school record-tying 39 times, scored on runs of 46 and 27 yards in the opening period, a 2-yard sweep of right end in the second quarter, and a 1-yard plunge in the third period.

Green's performance before a crowd of 69,370 at the Rose Bowl was the best ever by a runner against the Trojans. The previous best was a 212-yard effort by Jack Morris of Oregon in 1957.

UCLA, which will face either Brigham Young or Air Force in the Freedom Bowl at Anaheim Stadium on Dec. 30, finishes its regular season with a 5-21 Pacific-10 Conference record and a 7-31 overall mark.

Southern Cal, which will meet Auburn in the Florida Citrus Bowl at Orlando on New Year's Day, is 5-3 in Pac-10 action and 7-3 overall. The Trojans finish their regular season against Notre Dame next Saturday.

California 17

Stanford 11
BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Freshman Mike Ford set up California's first touchdown with a 61-yard pass reception and later ran 47 yards to score on an end-around play for the lowly Bears, who gave departing Coach Joe Kapp a 17-11 victory Saturday over 16th-ranked Stanford in one of the biggest upsets in the schools' 89-year "Big Game" football series.

College football

Kapp, whose firing was announced two weeks earlier, was carried off the field by his players after Cal ended an eight-game losing streak. The Bears finished the season 2-9 overall and 2-7 in the Pacific-10.

Stanford, 7-3 with one regular season game remaining, will play Clemson in the Gator Bowl on Dec. 27.

Cal got its first touchdown in four weeks, taking a 10-0 lead, when Kevin Brown hit wide receiver Wendell Peoples on a 5-yard pass midway in the second period. Four plays after the 61-yard bomb to Ford, Leland Rice kicked a 34-yard field goal for Cal in the opening period.

Arizona 34

Arizona State 17

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — David Adams, Art Greathouse and Chris McLemore scored on short runs, while Chuck Cecil returned an interception a school-record 100 yards for another touchdown — as 14th-ranked Arizona beat No. 4 Arizona State 34-17 Saturday.

The loss ended the Sun Devils' shot at a national championship and undefeated football season.

The victory was a pretty straight by the Wildcats over their archrival and earned them a berth in a Dec. 27 Aloha Bowl. Arizona is now 8-2 overall and 5-2 in the Pacific-10 Conference with one game remaining.

Arizona State already is bound for the Jan. 1 Rose Bowl after clinching the Pac-10 title on Nov. 8. But the Sun Devils, 9-1 overall and 5-1 in the conference, failed to notch their first undefeated regular-season since 1975, when they went 11-0.

The Wildcats turned two turnovers into a 14-10 halftime lead.

After a tackle George Hinkle recovered a fumble at the Arizona 3-yard line, the Wildcats drove 97 yards in six plays with Adams scoring on an 18-yard run with 7:14 remaining in the first quarter.

Greathouse, a freshman fullback, bulled over from the 5:12 in the second quarter to make it 14-0. The 11-play, 73-yard drive was set up by cornerback James DeBow's interception at the Arizona 29-yard line.

Jeff Van Raaphorst's 7-yard touchdown pass to split end Chris Garrett 7:59 before halftime cut the Sun Devils' deficit to 14-7.

Kent Bosstrom's 21-yard field goal on the final play of the half made it 14-10 after Arizona State couldn't score on three straight pass plays from the Wildcats' 4.

Derek Hill returned the second-half kickoff 68 yards and McLemore scored on a 6-yard run with 3:05 gone in the third quarter for a 21-10 Arizona lead.

Oregon 49

Oregon State 28

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Chris Miller, playing his final game for Oregon, passed for three first-half touchdowns Saturday as the Ducks rolled to a 49-28 Pacific 10 Conference victory over arch-rival Oregon State.

Fullback Calvin Berry rushed for three touchdowns in the second half as Oregon continued its mastery of the Beavers.

Oregon State hasn't beaten the Ducks in 12 years.

Miller completed 21 of 27 passes for 251 yards and was not intercepted.

Oregon, which finished the season at 3-5 in the conference and 5-6 overall, took control of the game with two touchdowns in the final two minutes of the first half.

Miller, who broke Dan Fouts' Oregon single-season total offense and passing records in the contest, hit Derek Loville with a 10-yard scoring pass with 1:57 remaining in the half to give the Ducks a 21-14 lead.

Moments later, Oregon's Anthony Newman intercepted an Erik Wilhelm pass at the Beavers' 25-yard line, setting up Miller's two-yard scoring toss to Tim Parker with one second left in the half to give Oregon a 29-14 lead.

Berry's scoring runs of 14 and 21 yards early in the third quarter boosted Oregon to a 42-14 lead.

Washington 44

Washington State 23

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Quarterback Chris Chandler threw four touchdowns, passes, including three to Brian Staler, set an NCAA career field goal record as 12th ranked Washington State 44-23 in a Pacific-10 Conference football game Saturday.

Chandler hit Weathersby rushed for 177 yards as the Sun Bowl-bound Huskies scored 27 straight points to overturn an early 10-7 Washington State lead.

Jaeger kicked three field goals to push his four-year total to 88, one yards from the mark set last year by UCLA's John Lee. The record-breaking kick was a 27-yarder with 3:16 left in the game.

Washington State fullback Kerry Porter scored twice late in the game.

Early in the third quarter, Chandler connected with Staler on a 37-yard strike for a 28-10 lead, and the same combination produced a 25-yard touchdown pass in the final quarter.

Fresno State's Sweeney gets off a pass against Utah St.

Sweeney tops Flutie's NCAA passing mark

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Fresno State quarterback Kevin Sweeney broke Doug Flutie's major college career passing record Saturday with a 41-yard toss to Stephen Baker in the second quarter against Utah State.

Fresno State won the Pacific Coast Athletic Conference game, 14-7.

The record pass gave Sweeney 10,580 yards, one more than Flutie's previous NCAA Division I mark of 10,579 set at Boston College between 1981 and 1984. The all-time collegiate record of 13,220 yards was set by Neil Lomax who played for Portland State, a Division I-AA team, from 1977 through 1980.

Sweeney passed for 216 yards in his final game as a collegian to finish his career with 10,623 and set Doug Flutie from first place on the NCAA Division I career passing list.

Sweeney also tied the NCAA record for 200-yard passing games with his 30th. That mark is shared by Flutie and Doug McClure, formerly of Bowling Green.

Even though the Bulldogs dominated first-half action on Sweeney's passes, they only led 7-0 at intermission. That score came on a seven-yard pass to flanker Ron Jenkins in the series before Sweeney set the passing yardage record.

Early in the fourth quarter, Fresno State's James Rivera kicked the Aggies' kicker on their goal line, and fullback James Williams scored the Bulldogs' second touchdown from one yard out.

Utah State's Timo Tagalon then scored on a slant over left tackle after two quarterback sneaks by Tom Ponich failed from less than one yard out. Most of the Aggies' 163 yards on offense were credited to Ponich who had 119 yards passing and 28 running.

Sweeney quarterbacked the Bulldogs of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association in every game of his four years of eligibility.

Many expected him to break the record well before this, his final game of eligibility. He needed 2,320 yards when the season began and picked up 1,278 of them in the first four games.

But Sweeney suffered a badly bruised right shoulder in the fourth game, hampering his throwing motion. His per game average slumped from almost 220 yards in the first four outings to a 149 average over the next six games.

WAC: BYU rambles past Utah, 35-21

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Brigham Young's decision to abandon the passing game that has been its trademark for more than a decade came as no surprise to Utah Coach Jim Fassel.

But Fassel was not alone in his awe at how successfully BYU ran the football in the Cougars 35-21 Western Athletic Conference victory over its arch-rival Saturday.

Fullback Lyle Hennul and halfback Robert Parker each ran for two touchdowns and Bruce Hansen dove for another as all three runners exceeded 100 yards rushing in the victory, which kept alive the Cougars' hopes for an 11th straight WAC crown.

"I thought the key in the game was that BYU controlled the line of scrimmage on both sides of the ball," Fassel said. "I wasn't surprised that they ran the ball. I knew that they would try to run on us going into the game."

In all, BYU gained 454 yards in 60 carries, while quarterback Steve Lindsey hit 12 of 15 passes for 119 yards. Hennul had 171 yards, Hansen 149 and Parker 121, as BYU came within 11 yards of breaking its rushing record for a game.

"We wanted to run the ball, which we did," said BYU Coach Lavell Edwards. "Except for a couple of turnovers in the first half, we did what we wanted to do."

BYU's dominant ground game allowed the Cougars to control the ball for 42 of the game's 60 minutes.

The victory left Edwards optimistic about BYU's remaining two games.

"We prepare ourselves emotionally like we did for this one, and if we play like this offensively and defensively, then we'll be in pretty good shape," he said.

Utah trailed 35-7 before quarterback Larry Egger threw touchdown passes of 35 and 16 yards in two conditions apart with less than three minutes remaining. He completed a two-point conversion pass to Loren Richey following the first score. Egger's 283 yards in total offense gave him a school record 5,026 for a career, pushing him past predecessor Mark Steven's 4,861.

Utah's only other score came on a 44-yard pass from Egger to Greg Holder late in the second period.

The victory by BYU in the 61st meeting between the two schools gave the Cougars a 7-3 season mark and boosted them to 5-1 in the conference. BYU must win its final two games against San Diego State and Air Force to take the title again.

The victory was BYU's eighth in a row over Utah, which nevertheless holds a 38-18-4 advantage in the series. After two straight victories, the loss dropped Utah to 2-8 and 1-6 in the WAC.

Parker bolted 41 yards for BYU's first score with 5:22 left in the first quarter.

Big Sky: Weber St. falls to Nicholls St., 34-30

THIBODAUX, La. (AP) — Doug Hudson passed for 327 yards and five touchdowns — three of them to Mark Carrier, to lead Nicholls State to a 30-23 victory over Weber State on Saturday in the final football game of the regular season for both. Nicholls State was in front 28-21 at halftime.

A 67-yard touchdown pass from Phil Cooper to Rick Justice with 3:26 left to play in the third period put Weber State on top 20-28. A 22-yard pass from Hudson to Brian Stropolo for a touchdown with 14:04 left in the fourth quarter clinched the victory for the Colonies.

Carrier's scoring catches, all in the first period, were for 31, 18 and 43 yards.

Alfred Dorsey also caught an eight-yard pass from Hudson, in the second quarter.

Cooper also ran for two Weber

State touchdowns, both from one yard, and Brian Larsen threw a 19-yard scoring pass to Wade Orton.

Nicholls State finished its season 9-2, the best in its school history. Weber State ended 3-8.

Portland St. 14

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Montana's Brent Preece passed for two touchdowns Saturday to lead the Grizzlies to a 35-14 non-conference football victory over Portland State.

The victory was a sweet one for first-year Montana Coach Don Reed, who led the Grizzlies against the Vikings for the first time since leaving Portland State for the Big Sky Conference.

Twin Falls' Mike Rice, a senior wide receiver for Montana, hauled in seven passes for 148 yards.

Reed finished his first year at Montana 6-4. Portland State's Pokey

Allen, in his first year with the Vikings, finished 6-5.

Portland State opened the scoring Saturday, taking the opening kickoff and driving 56 yards in 10 plays. Quarterback Chris Crawford scored on a 2-yard run.

Montana bounced right back on a 14-yard run by Jody Farmer, then took the lead on a 3-yard pass from Pease to Tony Lambert.

Montana's Greg Nygren then snugged an Grant Crawford pass, and four plays later John Huestis ran 5 yards to give Montana a 21-7 lead.

ONTARIO, Ore. — Suzanne Hansen scored 22 points and dished out a number of assists here Saturday night as the College of Southern Idaho's women's basketball team opened its season with a 78-40 non-conference victory over Treasure Valley Community College.

Hansen, a freshman from Grace playing her first game for the Eagles, shot 100 percent, according to Coach Ben Stroud.

"For only having two days of practice, we didn't play too bad," he said.

Filer freshman Terri Standlee added 11 points for the Eagles. Julie Hialer led TVCC with 20 points.

Dallas, Washington square off in NFC East

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

As the clock mercifully wound down a few minutes before 1 a.m. Tuesday, the fans celebrating Washington's 14-0 victory over San Francisco began shouting "We want Dallas!"

It's known as "Dallas Week" in Washington.

To the passionate Washington fandom, the New York Giants, with whom the Redskins share the NFC east decent — this may be the toughest of their five remaining games. Moreover, Minnesota may be without quarterback — Tommy Kramer, who bruised a thumb on Lawrence Taylor's helmet.

The Browns beat the Steelers 27-24 Oct. 5 for their first victory over at Three Rivers Stadium. Now they try to sweep Pittsburgh for the first time since 1963.

Cleveland has a distinct schedule edge over Cincinnati — aside from the Bengals and Steelers, their remaining games are against Houston, Buffalo and San Diego, who have a total of seven wins among them.

Guess who that bothers?

Sam Wyche.

"The Cleveland Browns are going to be playing teams, frankly, that are out of it," he says. "From what I am told, the Cleveland Browns are saying that's why they are going to win this thing, because they really don't have any opponents to play and the opponents that they do have probably will have quit by the time they play."

New York Jets (10-1) at Miami (5-6)

The fans who stayed up until 1 a.m. last week may get more of the same — the Jets won their first 51-45 in overtime and this looks like a repeat.

New York has been losing a Pro Bowl player per week — the latest casualty is Mark Gastineau, meaning the New York Sack Exchange is now Tom Baldwin, Barry Bennett and Ben Rudolph. That translates to a lot of time for Dan Marino to find Mark Duper and Mark Clayton.

But Miami's defense couldn't stop Bernie Kosar, Reggie Langhorne and Webster Stlaughter against Cleveland a couple of weeks ago. What does that say for its chances against Ken O'Brien, Wesley Walker and Al Toon?

Green Bay (2-9) at Chicago (9-3) How The Bears Turn, Week 12: Jim McMahon is scheduled to start.

Doug Flutie isn't.

Willie Gault's wife says she didn't mean to call McMahon a fool.

The Packers will show up.

Buffalo (3-8) at New England (9-3) The Patriots have a shot at the AFC East title should the injury bug finally do in the Jets. But it looks like they'll have to take the wild-card route to the Super Bowl again.

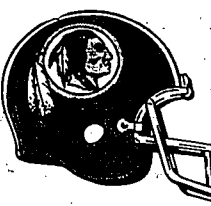

This looks like a relatively easy step even if they let down from the 30-28 win over the Rams on Tony Eason's "Hall Mary" to Irving Fryar. New England won the first 23-3 at Orchard Park.

Kansas City (7-4) at St. Louis (2-9) The Chiefs, who still have wild-card hopes, have been able to beat the bad teams but not the good ones. They step back into the former category in this battle of Missouri after having their hopes for an AFC West title squelched by Denver, 38-17, last week.

Neal Lomax returns at quarterback for the Cards after Cliff Stoudt couldn't do much in losses to San Francisco and New Orleans.

Philadelphia (3-8) at Seattle (5-6) Four weeks ago the Seahawks were 5-2. Then... Pool four straight losses in which they were outscored 119-34. In the process, they've shifted from Dave Krieg to Gale Gilbert at quarterback and back again.

Philadelphia's quarterback rotation stopped two weeks ago when warm weather after a 31-7 shellacking in Green Bay?

Their only road win in the past three years was a 24-20 decision over the Lions in Pontiac Sept. 21 and another here could mean their first division sweep since 1981. The Lions, who outgained the Bucs 379-253 in the first game but committed five turnovers, have been in most games but won for the first time in five by beating the Eagles 13-11 last week.

Indianapolis (0-11) at Houston (2-9) A dangerous game for the Colts, who could narrow their lead in the Vinny Testaverde race to one game with a win.

They played decently last week — within one point of the Jets in the fourth quarter before losing 31-16. Afterwards, several of the Jets suggested they'd beat someone yet, avoiding the stigma of being the NFL's first 0-16 team ever.

Ron Jaworski was lost for the season. Randall Cunningham, who had been replacing Jaworski on third down, now plays first, second and third. That's the problem — too many series of 1-2-3 punt.

Detroit (4-7) at Tampa Bay (2-9) Might this be another win for Tampa Bay, which is back in the

Pro football

East lead at 9-2 are... well, the New York Giants. The Cowboys are the despised enemy, making this a game to watch. The Redskins have a chance to knock Dallas out of the division race and cripple their playoff chances.

While the Cowboys beat the Redskins 30-6 at Texas Stadium six weeks ago, they are just 7-4, two games out of first. Moreover, while the Redskins and Giants are close to clinching a wild-card berth, a fifth loss could be devastating to Dallas.

It feels good knowing we can knock them out of the division race if we win this game," says Redskins linebacker Neal Oskewicz and tight end Don Warren adds:

"We don't like them and they don't like us. A win Sunday would be very sweet."

The Cowboys figure to throw a lot Sunday against a Washington defense that allowed 44 yards — but no touchdowns — to Joe Montana and San Francisco Monday night. Quarterback's best defensive back, Darrell Green, may be out with a bruised shoulder, leaving Vernon Dean, rookie Tim Morrison and second-year man Barry Wilburn on the corners.

But even a win won't solve everything for Dallas.

"We've got to be considered a long shot," says Coach Tom Landry. "It wouldn't be so bad if we were chasing one team, but we've got two teams ahead of us. We'll need a few miracles to win it."

Denver (9-2) at New York Giants (9-2) Denver returns to the scene of a 22-10 pounding by the Jets a month ago in which John Elway suffered a concussion. The Jets' barometer: Denver's offensive line is banged up and in the past three weeks the Giants have knocked out Danny White, Ron Jaworski and Tommy Kramer.

"I think it would be more a revenge type of deal if we were playing the Jets again," Elway says. "We have to go back there and play our football game because we want to go back there and win."

It's a mirror matchup.

New Orleans (6-5) at Los Angeles Rams (7-4)

Atlanta (5-5) at San Francisco (6-4)

Atlanta and New Orleans win the NFC West race in the first quarter of the season with four teams within half a game.

Both games are rematches.

The 49ers and Patriots played a 10-10 tie in Atlanta a month ago, but David Archer was at quarterback for Atlanta and Joe Montana wasn't.

Moscow asks not to play big schools

POCATELLO (AP) — Officials of the Moscow School District say they're concerned that high school athletes from small schools might be injured if their teams are forced to play teams from larger schools.

But Dick Stickle, executive director of the Idaho High School Activities Association, said a policy forcing smaller schools such as Moscow to play larger schools no longer is used. He said superintendents of the state's largest schools will be revamping the football system before next season.

Prep football

The Moscow officials appeared before the state Board of Education, which wound up a meeting here on Friday. State schools superintendent Jerry Evans described the scheduling problem as being "very deep and wide" but said the board may have to adopt some general rules.

He said the board would not act until hearing from the IHSAA.

Suplt. Alvin Fasolino, Board Chairman, Roger Wallins and attorney Cumer Green said previous regulations required Moscow, an A-1, Division II school with an enrollment of about 850, to play at least one football game with an A-1, Division I school from outside its district to qualify for the state playoffs.

The dividing line between Division I and Division II is 1,500 students. Twin Falls High School is a Division I school; Minico and Burley compete in Division II.

"The premise of the concern, based on experience, was that for every 100 students enrolled there are a certain number of students... that are faster, bigger and stronger," said Wallins.

for San Francisco. Archer is lost for the season with a separated shoulder and his replacement, Turk Schonert, also has a sore arm.

One drawback for the 49ers: they may be fatigued from Monday night's marathon in Washington.

The Rams-Saints game also features a change of quarterback — Jim Everett debuted for Los Angeles last week and was 13 of 19 of 193 yards and three touchdowns. That means the New Orleans defense, which shut out Los Angeles 6-0 in the Superdome two weeks ago and held Eric Dickerson to 57 yards in 21 carries, will have to play a little loose.

Minnesota (6-5) at Cincinnati (7-4) Pittsburgh (4-7) at Cleveland (7-4) Cincinnati, tied for the AFC Central lead with Cleveland, got the first of the six straight wins predicted by Coach Sam Wyche by beating Seattle 34-7 last week. But after Minnesota came the Broncos, Patriots, Browns and Jets.

But Cincinnati couldn't catch Minnesota at a better time.

The Vikings' last-second 22-20 loss to the Giants last week was a deflating kind of defeat, although Minnesota's wild-card chances remained intact.

More change may be in offing at SMU

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist University President L. Donald Shields' abrupt resignation has left the school caught between its lofty academic goals and the desire to build a top athletic program, university officials say.

Some faculty members said in the wake of Shields' retirement announcement Friday that the university must focus its focus for the future — whether athletics or academics will forge its reputation.

The 50-year-old president, who has held the post the past six years, resigned for health reasons just two days after the SMU faculty senate voted to ask the administration to change its approach to college athletics.

Shields has been fighting a severe case of diabetes and had recently spent three weeks in California trying to improve his condition. He said his doctor advised him last week that he was in danger of more serious health problems because of the recent pressures of his job.

After the resignation announcement, Frank Segundares, a biology professor who called for Shields' resignation earlier in the week at the faculty senate meeting said, "I hope that the board (of governors) will now pull back and look retrospectively at what's happened and analyze it and not make the same mistakes again."

SMU's football program is on NCAA probation, and recent revelations in the media about further alleged wrongdoing could result in a two-year suspension of the football program. The faculty's vote was for the university to abandon efforts at building what some faculty members termed a "pro sports" type program.

When SMU was put on probation last year, Shields called the NCAA's enforcement policy "selective" and "harsh." He also said the school's recruiting violations were "totally unacceptable."

When new allegations surfaced recently, Shields took "harsh criticism from some faculty members."

Peter Winship, a member of the faculty senate executive board who has called for changes in the athletic department said he believes Shields will one day be seen "as building steps to improve the academic quality of this university."

"But he added, 'Personally, I don't think they have been big enough steps.'

Athletic Director Bob Hitch, who was hired by Shields, described him as one of his "very best friends."

Hitch confirmed an earlier report the Dallas Morning News that he had offered his resignation to Shields if the president thought that was best.

"I'm sure a lot of people feel I need to be terminated. I told him if I was the problem I would step down..."

Hitch's fate may be determined at a special board of governors meeting on Tuesday.

Erickson says Wisconsin job still pending

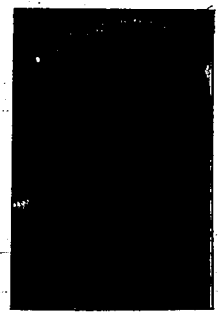

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — University of Wyoming football Coach Dennis Erickson says he hasn't been offered the head coaching job at Wisconsin and hasn't yet made up his mind whether he would accept it if the offer were made.

Erickson met Wednesday with Badger Athletic Director Eloy "Crazy Legs" Hirsch to discuss the position but neither side made any overtures.

Erickson, who left the University of Idaho a year ago to replace fired Coach Al Kincaid, said Saturday that he'd be foolish (not) to examine the Badgers' proposal.

Erickson is reportedly one of six finalists for the Wisconsin job, which was vacated when Dave McClain died of a heart attack last spring.

Jim Hillies, who has filled the job on an interim basis this season, is also a finalist.

NEW YORK (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova rallied to beat a determined Pam Shriver 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 Saturday for her 52nd consecutive victory and moved into the final of the $1 million Virginia Slims Championships tennis tournament.

Shriver played one of the best matches of her career, as she came close to repeating her upset over Navratilova in the quarterfinals of the 1982 U.S. Open.

"I thought it was over today," Navratilova said of her streak, the fourth-longest in modern tennis. Navratilova has strings of 74 and 34 matches, and Chris Evert Lloyd won 56 in a row.

But Navratilova, down a break and love-40 in the sixth game of the final set, rallied to win six of the next seven points and break Shriver's service to get even.

She then held her next two service games, and when she broke Shriver's in the 10th game at 30, Navratilova had a berth in the best-of-five sets final against No. 2 seed Steffi Graf, who beat Czechoslovakia's Helena Sukova in the other semifinal, 7-5 (7-3), 3-6, 6-1.

She may have won, except for a controversial point in the fifth game of the third set.

Serving at deuce, Navratilova hit a shot that nicked the net. Thinking she had missed the point, giving Shriver the advantage, Navratilova began to berate herself.

But the ball climbed over the net and dropped at Shriver's side. Shriver served to the ball, but she couldn't lift it back over the net.

Shriver complained to umpire Judy Popkin and tournament referee Les Jackson, claiming Navratilova's vocal outburst interfered with her play.

International adoptions gaining popularity

Cultural differences become less a barrier

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley's population is gaining a slight international flavor, with about a dozen children from other countries adopted by area families this last year.

Linda Chamberlain, of Twin Falls, an adoptive parent, says this indicates both the growing availability of children from Asia as well as a willingness on the part of ### Americans ... are increasingly turning to agencies which place children from other countries because there are fewer children available for adoption in the United States.

Americans to accept children with different backgrounds.

She has served as a volunteer contact for WACAP (Western Association of Concerned Adoptive Parents) of Seattle, through which many of the adoptions have been handled.

American parents interested in adopting children are increasingly turning to agencies which place children from other countries because there are fewer children available for adoption in the United States.

"People are becoming more open to accept an older child because of the difficulty of getting infants. And it doesn't have to be a blue-eyed blond either," says Carolyn Lewis of Twin Falls. She and her husband, Fred, have five Korean children, ranging in age from 11 to 17. There are two boys and three girls, who are natural sisters.

The couple began their adoption search while living in California and became discouraged when "no kids were available." They were advised to check with the Holt agency in Eugene, Ore., through which they adopted their first child.

"We were pleased with him," she says, "and decided we wanted more." After they adopted the three girls they felt "it wasn't fair to raise one boy alone" and adopted their last son.

The local WACAP parents point out that while getting children from abroad may seem more glamorous than a native adoption, it has its own hazards of cultural shock and language barriers.

In Carolyn Lewis' experience, the older the child when he or she arrives in this country, the more difficult the language problem will be.

The first boy was 4 when he came here and by the time he started school he had absorbed enough English to get along satisfactorily; but the girls, who were 6, 8 and 10 when they arrived, needed special help.

And their last boy, who was 9 when he arrived two years ago, also needed extra assistance provided by teachers at Lincoln Elementary School. But he is now reading at fourth grade level, thanks to the English as a Second Language program operated at Lincoln and several other local elementary schools. Lewis says the program was essential in helping her children to speak and comprehend English.

"At age 9 he had spent half of his life in an orphanage, and it was a difficult transition for him to adjust to a family," his mother says.

Adoptive parents of children from other countries often try to help their children retain touch with their own culture. In many cases, they must send reports back to the orphanage from which the child came.

"We make kimchee, the Korean counterpart to sauerkraut," Lewis says. "It is a highly seasoned relish made from Chinese cabbage, which the children love."

The family also gets books and talks frequently about Korea and the children's natural families. The father of the three Lewis daughters is dead, and when their mother lost her job, she was unable to support them.

The mother had a relative already happily settled in this country. Her love for her children allowed her to relinquish them, so they, too, could come to the United States.

Older children, not infants, more available

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley families who adopt a child in the coming year are unlikely to be changing diapers and mixing formula.

Kathy James, adoption specialist for the regional office of the Department of Health and Welfare in Twin Falls, says major emphasis has shifted from infants to placement of what are called "special needs" children — those who are older, may have physical handicaps and often come from troubled homes.

These primarily are children who have been under the agency's jurisdiction through its foster care program. They become eligible for adoption either when the court decides their homes are not safe to return to or the parents voluntarily decide to give them up.

Emphasis is changing, James says, from the traditional infant adoption to the special needs children, both because there are fewer babies to place and more older children available.

Officials from both Health and Welfare and private adoption agencies agree that the decrease in infant adoptions is due to both the availability of birth control and greater societal acceptance in recent years of unwed mothers who keep their babies.

Only one infant was placed through the state agency in this region last year, compared to 18 special needs children from this area, who were adopted by people in different parts of the state. Even with the more open attitude toward background records, adopted children are placed in a different geographic area than their blood families, the official says.

"The number of foster kids probably is not increasing," James says, "but there's more awareness of the importance of finding a home for every child, whereas years ago they simply grew up in orphanages."

Another change in adoption procedures is that social workers now put more importance on following the wishes of the blood parents than in exactly matching the ethnic mix of the child to the adoptive parents.

Only 1 infant was placed through the state agency in this region last year, compared to 18 special needs children from this area, who were adopted by people in ... the state

"If the natural mother wants her child raised as a Catholic or Mormon, we try to abide by that," James says. "The ethnic lineage is not as important as the parents' wishes."

Adopting a half-grown child who has been abused or neglected or suffered other trauma poses very different challenges than bringing home a sweet little bundle from the hospital does, she says. "Some prospective parents back away," even though they want a child.

"They have to be willing to accept a child's past," James says. Department personnel try to be open with prospective parents about the problems and offer continued counseling.

"Ninety-eight percent will need that," James says. She also tries to help adoptive parents analyze why they want to adopt a child and thus avoid adoptions prompted for superficial reasons such as saving a troubled marriage.

The Idaho Youth Ranch at Rupert is one local agency that does operate an adoption service for infants only.

Erma Shropshire, who helps run the Twin Falls branch office, says both the number of requests and number of babies available for adoption have dropped in the past year, possibly because of the economic slump.

Adoptive parents must pay for hospital and doctor fees for infants, plus the costs of home studies required under Idaho law for all adoptions.

These studies, designed to help make the best placement possible, are done prior to adoptions by both state and private agencies.

But in "independent" adoptions handled by doctors and lawyers, the home study is not done until after the child is already placed, Shropshire says.

"There is no law against such independent placements," James says, even though the subject long has been considered "hush-hush."

"But they certainly are faster and easier as there is less waiting time," James says. An adoptive parent wanting to get an infant through traditional agencies can expect to wait up to two years, she says.

While the independent adoptions can be arranged much more quickly than through an agency, the disadvantages, according to a local attorney, are the much higher cost and the lack of knowledge about the child's background.

Optimists collect winter clothing for needy children

No Twin Falls child will have to attend school this winter without a warm winter coat, if a Twin Falls Optimist club project is successful.

Members hope to provide children who are inadequately clothed with warm coats, boots and gloves.

But to do so they need donations of good useable items or money to assist in the project. Last year in the initial effort, more than 150 coats were provided for Twin Falls school children, according to Joel Brillhart, who with Ron Luke is co-chairman of the program.

Donated items should be left at KMTV, 1100 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., Twin Falls, between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays.

Elementary teachers will identify children who are inadequately clothed and contact club members who will bring the article requested to the school. Income guidelines and assessments will not be made, Brillhart says.

Donated coats will be dry cleaned, if needed, by the Optimists, and the club also has funds available to purchase some clothing items which are not donated. The chairman says ShopKo will assist in the purchase of such clothing. In another club activity, James Mastaniak, Twin Falls, won a new Remington shotgun in the recent turkey shoot. Proceeds from the annual fund raising event are used for the Optimists' youth fund. For further information about the Optimist club, contact Dennis Bowyer at 734-8633 after 5 p.m.

The downtown office of the Twin Falls Bank and Trust Company has been placed on the National Register of Historic Places.

A certificate representing the registrars of the 1908 building at the main intersection in downtown Twin Falls will be presented to Curtis T. Eaton, board chairman, and Curtis H. Eaton, bank president, at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

The bank will hold open house all day Tuesday and the public is invited to view displays of bank products. • See SPOTLIGHT on Page D2

Government urges safe toy shopping

By RANDOLPH SCHMID
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans will spend more than $7 billion on toys by Christmas, and Barbara Bush is urging that they make safety a major concern in choosing those purchases.

"We need to anticipate how youngsters will use a toy," the wife of Vice President George Bush said Tuesday at the Consumer Product Safety Commission's annual toy safety press conference.

Dangerous sharp points and edges, flying pieces and loud noises may not seem like Christmas concerns, but Safety Commission experts urged parents to keep those and other potential hazards in mind when shopping for gift toys.

"There is an unmistakable need for us to hear the message every November about the need for toy and holiday safety," said Mrs. Bush. "In spite of all that's been done through the years to make toys safer, the final responsibility always rests with the parents."

If this year is like 1985, about $7 billion worth of toys will be sold between Halloween and Christmas, said Safety Commission Chairman Terrence M. Scanlon.

That amounts to more than half of all toy sales during the year, making it an especially important time to concentrate on buying safe items, said Scanlon. He noted that 123,000 children were treated in hospital emergency rooms for toy-related injuries last year — mostly minor cuts and bruises. But some accidents were fatal, including incidents of children choking on small toys or parts, strangling on crib toys and being run over by vehicles while riding tricycles and other toys.

Elaine Tyrrell, Safety Commission project manager for children's products, stressed heeding the age label recommendations on toys.

Not all toys carry age labels, she said, but when they do, parents should pay attention to them both for safety reasons and because they can indicate a toy that the child will be interested in and able to understand.

In addition, Tyrrell pointed out that by balloons, either deflated or broken, can easily strangle a youngster. And she also warned against crib toys on strings for certain children.

When a child is able to crawl and push up on hands and knees, it can easily get its neck tangled in a crib toy. "Please take (these toys) out of the crib, don't have your child strangle," she said.

The Safety Commission's event stressed general safety concerns and was co-sponsored by the Toy Manufacturers of America, a trade group. In contrast, the consumer affairs committee of Americans for Democratic Action will hold its annual toy safety event in a couple of weeks.

Portrayals get mixed review

WASHINGTON (AP) — The portrayal of women on this season's new TV shows has "improved," although too many "TV women are affluent, very few are working class and no one is poor," the National Commission on Working Women said in a study released Wednesday.

"We can only speculate on the impact these distortions have upon viewers' perception of the world — both negatively and positively," said Alexis Herman, commission chairwoman.

The report was issued at a ceremony honoring programs that reflect "the great variety and rich diversity of women in the real world."

Ms. Herman rejected the notion that good stories cannot come from depicting realistic situations.

For example, awards went to a show that depicted women working to qualify for well-paying jobs as garbage collectors in New York. Another about a female high-school basketball coach in Massachusetts and a radio broadcast based on the diaries of women who made the trek to the West as part of the expansion of the United States.

Steve Avesson of WBZ-TV, Boston, said the real competition "is with our viewers to get them to watch important programs" that are not as fast-moving as the commercial messages that surround them.

Terry Louise Fisher, writer-producer for NBC's "L.A. Law," said that since advertisers pay $1 million to influence buying habits by placing a 30-second commercial on some top-rated broadcasts, "it would seem a bit disingenuous to argue that the other 48 minutes of programming time has no power to influence or change behavior."

A former assistant district attorney and novelist, Fisher said, "Now that I'm in a position to create the characters who are on the screen, I'm taking it on as a pretty daunting responsibility. I'm asking myself 'Does it make a difference that I'm a woman?'"

"I think it does," she said. She quotes her writing partner, Steven Bochco, as theorizing that "it's not so much that men don't know how to write about women; it's that a lot of men are afraid of women, which fear is translated into their not writing about them at all."

She said there have been complaints from "L.A. Law" viewers about the show's portrayal of women who don't have a law degree.

The letters are working, she said, and "if any of you have been upset by our portrayal of the 'L.A. Law' support staff — keep watching."

Her group's upcoming event has already drawn the attention of the toy makers, who have sent out letters to at least some news outlets suggesting questions to ask when toys are panned by consumer groups, such as how many hours of play have children enjoyed — with a toy being criticized.

To help parents and other adults buying toys, the Safety Commission has issued booklets with a variety of safety suggestions. These include:

- Check for sturdy toy construction, and when buying soft toys make sure the eyes, nose and other attached parts are secure.

- When buying for infants and toddlers, avoid items with small parts they may put in their mouth or long strings which could get twisted around the child's neck.

- Arrows or darts used by children should have soft cork tips, rubber suction cups or other protective devices. Make sure these tips are securely attached.

- Electric toys with heating elements should be given only to children over age 8, and then only with adult supervision.

- Avoid toys that shoot or propel objects which could injure eyes.

sumer Product Safety Commission, Washington, D.C., 20207.

Earlier this year, the Consumer Federation of America published "The Childwise Catalog," which combines advice on toy safety with a multitude of other child safety and care tips. It costs $7.95 from Childwise, Consumer Federation of America, 1424 16th St. N.W., No. 404, Washington, D.C., 20036.

And finally, "Toys That Kill," by lawyer Edward M. Schwartz has just been published by Vintage Books. This $7.95 look at toy safety and danger should be appearing in bookstores shortly.

Parents urged to start saving

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition led by a private college group launched a campaign Wednesday to convince the parents of seventh to 10th graders to start putting money aside for their college education.

The coalition maintains that even saving as little as $10 a week could make the difference in determining whether a student can attend the college of his or her choice.

The campaign will also try to convince parents and students not to write off the possibility of going to college because of low grades. It will offer advice on how many math, science, English and other basic academic courses a student must take in high school to keep options open.

The campaign, called "Paving the Way," is built around a 23-minute videotape that interweaves questions from real parents around campus film strips and an animated lecture on how to plan for college.

The campaign is spearheaded by the National Institute of Independent Colleges and Universities with support from several foundations and education groups, including the College Board, the American College Testing Program and the National PTA.

artifacts, including original ledgers, early checks and scrapbooks of historical significance, says Lane V. Clow, vice president and director of marketing.

The original purchase of the lot where the bank stands, known in the town's early days as the Perrine and Burton corner, was for $25,000, according to the Oct. 9, 1903, edition of the Twin Falls News. The first owners were L.B. Perrine, founder of the Twin Falls tract, and his uncle, Silas Burton, according to Virginia Ricketts, Jerome, local history instructor.

Under the headline "Top Figures for Twin Falls Lots," the 1908 news item describes the site as having 50 feet frontage on Main Avenue and 125 feet on Shoshone Street East. The lot had been owned by the late two men Aug. 25, 1904, for $1,750.

The old news item also said, "This is the most important transfer of realty that has taken place in Twin Falls and the fact that the purchase was made by an institution in which the leading men of this city are stockholders shows plainly the confidence they have in the town. It is also gratifying to know the corner is to have a building in keeping with its value as a location."

The bank was incorporated June 1, 1905, with a $5,000 investment by W.S. McCormick. The bank began operating with an Idaho banking license in 1906 under the name Twin Falls Bank and Trust Co. on Oct. 1, 1908.

Stephenie Canoy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Canoy, Twin Falls; and Kella Gruver, son of Fay Gruver, Buhl, have been awarded the national I Dare You leadership award by the Twin Falls County 4-H organization.

Wilma Southwick, 4-H official, presented the award at ceremonies held at the United Methodist Church in Twin Falls. She says both youths were selected for the "exceptional jobs" they have done in the 4-H camping program, especially acting as counselors at a camp for children from economically deprived backgrounds.

Canoy, a senior at Twin Falls High School, and Gruver, who attends Buhl High School, both have been teen-age leaders in their own 4-H clubs. The I Dare You award has been in existence since 1941 and recognizes thousands of outstanding young people representing every state.

Virginia Ash, Buhl, heads the Twin Falls chapter of the Idaho Writers' League. Other officers elected at the group's November meeting are Jan Wimberly, Buhl, vice president; Edna McGowan, treasurer; Gem Howard, re-elected secretary, and Betty Jo Olsen, courtney chairwoman. The last three officers are all from Twin Falls.

Three Magic Valley residents attended the fifth national conference of the National Federation of Parents for Drug-Free Youth recently in Washington, D.C. Lynn Flickinger and Pat Peeble, both Kelchum, and Castle M. Jervis, Halley, representing the Wood River-based Families in Action, were among the conference's 800 participants. Among the events was a luncheon with Nancy Reagan, who served as honorary chairman.

Lori Trail, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter (Rocky) Trail, Kirk Hill, has received a Youth Leadership and scholarship award. A sophomore in Glenns Ferry High School, she will attend a team conference on leadership this summer.

Parents who have adopted children through WACAP will gather for a celebration observance of National Adoption Week at 3 p.m. Nov. 30 at the home of Will and Linda Chamberlain, 205 Ninth Ave. N., Twin Falls.

The informal WACAP Adoption Support Group, composed of parents who have obtained children through the agency, meets several times a year for parents to exchange information and discuss shared problems, says Lewis.

The gathering also will serve to introduce new children who have arrived in recent months. Anyone who has adopted or who is interested in adopting children from other countries is welcome to attend.

Fear of flying: Program treats jumpy travelers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Four of the passengers aboard the DC-9 headed to Atlanta had been thinking about their 1-hour, 20-minute flight for at least five weeks. Some of them had dreaded stepping out of an airplane for years.

These four people about to fly to Atlanta and return to Indianapolis a few hours later had sworn they'd never fly again.

"They were among millions of people in the United States who are afraid to fly and believe boarding a plane is analogous to — if not synonymous with — suicide.

One person in 20 is afraid to fly, says Marty Midkiff, an Indianapolis psychotherapist who has been teaching the "Liberated Flying Program" for about a year.

"If you thought that the day you got on a plane would be your last, would you want to go?" she asks while waiting at Indianapolis International Airport for her group to attend its final class — aboard the skyward DC-9.

All four showed up — nervous, but no one seemingly ready to back out.

"I've been talking to myself all morning," says Jo Hackney, one of the students in the group therapy program. Mrs. Hackney is an Indianapolis housewife; also in the class are a businesswoman, a 17-year-old high school student and an Indianapolis television anchorwoman.

"I had a bad experience on a flight in April, but I've never liked flying," says Debbie Knox of WISH-TV. "But I've been going over all the statistics in my mind — that this is the safest way to travel, that it's much safer than driving," she adds, still not sounding fully convinced.

Despite an alarming number of accidents in the air in 1985, air travel remains remarkably safe, statistics show.

In 1985, about 45,000 people were killed on U.S. highways. In 1985, with more than 3 billion commercial aircraft miles flown, there were about 1,600 fatalities associated with air crashes.

Affair sparks revenge

DEAR ABBY: Fifteen years ago, when I was 43 and pregnant with my seventh child, I found some pictures of a pretty young girl in my husband's wallet. Steve swore he didn't know how they got there, but I'm not stupid. I had enlargements made and hung them all over the house. My kids thought I was nuts, and Steve and I have been fighting ever since.

Last year I had a tap put on our phone and I learned plenty. Steve and this girl, Jill, have been seeing each other for 15 years and they have a 9-year-old son together. Jill's married and has two sons with her own husband.

Steve and I own our business and if it weren't for me we wouldn't have anything. He can hardly read and write, and he needs me to do all the paperwork.

I called up Jill's husband and told him everything. He couldn't believe it. He said Jill was a perfect wife and mother. And get this, she never misses a Sunday at church. I called her minister and told him all about it, and all he said was, "If she were perfect she wouldn't need to go to church."

To make a long story short, Jill's husband is giving her a divorce because (as he told me) after 15 years, Steve and Jill must really love each other, and he wants her to be happy. He told me I ought to do the same for Steve. I said, "Over my dead body."

Abby, I hate my husband and want to make a divorce final. What should I do? I know he loves Jill, but why should I step aside after what he did to me?

DEAR HURTING: Don't make any decisions while you are in this bitter, vengeful state.

You desperately need to vent your anger and unload your hostility. See a counselor and try to get your emotions under control. Then decide if you will be better off with him, then without him, under the circumstances.

Living to make someone miserable will only make YOU a miserable old woman in the end. Think about it.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, a reader came down hard on you for using the term "Army brat" in your column.

For your information, that term is alive and well. As a matter of fact, at my husband's 50th West Point reunion last June, Gen. Bruce Palmer said, "Many of us were 'Army brats' — as my mother used to call us."

Since Gen. Palmer is over 70, that term has been around for at least that long.

My son, a retired colonel, was an Army brat, and his son was an Army brat, and we're proud of it.

MRS. R. J. QUINN JR.
DEAR MRS. QUINN: Finally! Many wrote to say that they were called "Army brats" and never felt that the term was offensive, but I had hoped that some high-ranking Army officer would use that term publicly, thereby officially confirming its respectability. Your letter made my day. And a 21-gun salute to Gen. Palmer.

DEAR ABBY: A family problem has arisen recently and I'd like your opinion. My parents' divorce was final a year ago. They had been married for 33 years.

Every year our family (parents and seven brothers and sisters) go to Colorado on a skiing trip. This year my dad wants to bring his girlfriend along, and our mother refuses to go. If the girlfriend goes...

My older sister says Mom and Dad are divorced so Dad has the right to bring anyone he wants, and Mom has no right to say about it. I say, this is a family trip, and Dad's girlfriend is not "family" — she's just a girlfriend — so she should stay home, especially since she and Dad would share the same cabin if she went along.

What is your opinion? And would your answer be any different if my Dad and this girlfriend were married?

DEBATING IN DALLAS
DEBATING: Dad's girlfriend? No. If she were his wife, Si.

Future homemakers dispelling old image

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Future Homemakers of America has its first male president, 17-year-old Ryan, said Friday, that home economics classes have pushed aside the "Susie Homemaker Image" and attracted more boys than ever.

"In my opinion, in the next decade or so it'll balance out more evenly, with more male participation," said Tom Lucas, a Milton, W.Va., high school senior chosen in July to lead the 315,000-member group.

Lucas said he learns money management, family psychology and teen-age health problems in his home economics classes, which he has taken since seventh grade.

Future Homemakers of America and such classes across the country are "dispelling a female-oriented image... what we call the Susie Homemaker image," said Lucas. In Knoxville for a three-day series of workshops and seminars that was expected to attract 1,800 members from 14 states.

He is not the only boy on the 415-year-old organization's executive board. The other, Stacey Schrank, of Mitchell, S.D., is among five regional representatives on the board, which is chosen from candidates at junior and senior highs schools across the country.

Katrine Ryan, spokeswoman at the group's Reston, Va., headquarters, said 11 percent of FHA's membership is male, compared with 6 percent in 1979, when there were 400,000 members nationwide.

"Teens today realize that in many cases they are going to be living on their own. Boys understand they're going to have to chip in and keep the household running, just as girls know they are going to have to go out and work," she said.

"When I was in high school, cooking and sewing is what they did," said Ms. Ryan. "But people don't so much need to be able to make a pile as to know basic nutrition and other skills."

Small investors have advantage

NEW YORK (AP) — Small investors have not just a chance but a real advantage over the big institutional investors, according to Wall Street expert Louis Rukeysser.

Rukeysser says in Family Circle magazine that "smallness gives you an edge. You can dart in and out of the market, making a profit here, a little more there, and not affect the price of a stock or create general hysteria."

The big investors can't do that. Many tend to stampede — buying or selling at the same time. Keep your head, says Rukeysser, and in the long run you can beat them hollow.

A final word from Rukeysser: "Don't put all your money in somebody else's hands. You can never really learn from somebody else's mistakes."

HOW TO TAKE SHELTER FROM THE NEW TAX LAW.

No, the new tax law for 1987 hasn't left you out in the cold.*

You can buy that new car you want. Or send your kid through college. Or take a cruise. And still deduct 100% of the interest on your loan. If you know how. Well, here's how.

Open a Home Equity Credit Line at Idaho First. Use the money to pay cash for your car. Pay off your credit cards and other consumer loans which are being phased out as tax deductions.

Then deduct all the interest on the home equity credit line from your taxable income.

There are some limitations you should know about. The new law lets you borrow a certain percentage of the original home purchase price, plus improvements, minus the mortgage still owed. You can spend the money on anything you like and deduct all the interest.

You can borrow even more against the current market value of your home. But to qualify for the full interest deduction, you have to use the money for medical or educational expenses.

Another great asset of a home equity credit line is its low interest rate. Usually a good deal lower than credit cards and other consumer loans.

So it really makes sense to take advantage of the loan that comes with a tax shelter attached.

The Home Equity Credit Line from Idaho First.

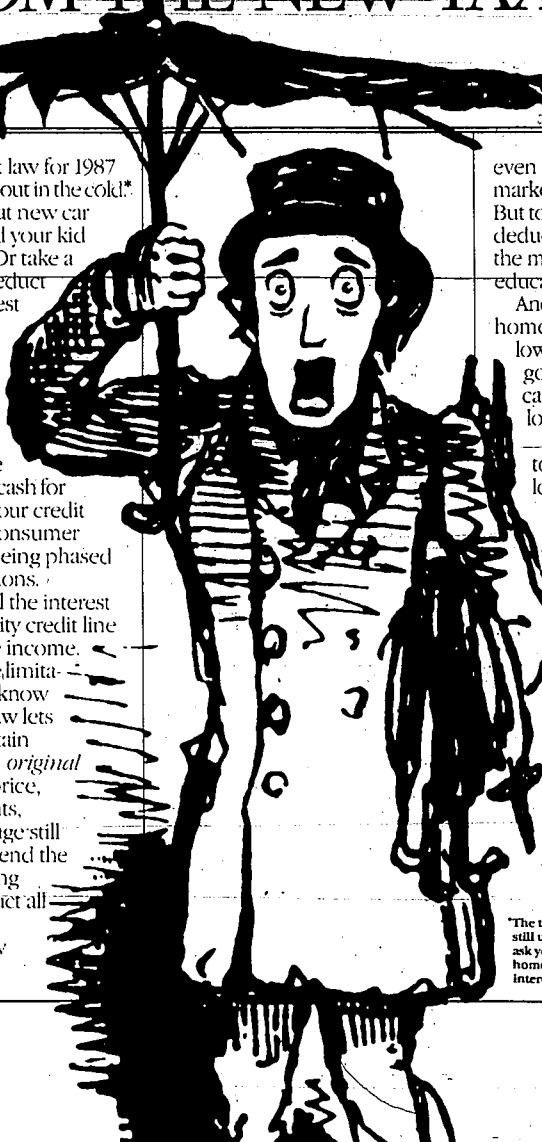

For a no-strings-attached talk about how to put one to work for you, come into your nearest Idaho First office soon.

Because 1987 is just around the corner.

Bring us your dreams.

*The tax reform, as signed into law, is still under final consideration. Please ask your tax advisor about how to use a home equity credit line and deduct the interest from your taxes.

Crop survey due in December

BOISE — The federal Agricultural Statistics Service will collect information about winter wheat plantings and livestock inventories from Idaho farmer and ranchers in the next month. Richard C. Max, statistician in charge of the Idaho Agricultural Statistics Service, said the poll is part of a national survey for three upcoming reports on crops and livestock. Individual responses are confidential. They are used only to develop broad totals, Max said.

The figures will contribute to the government's winter wheat report, which is scheduled for release in mid-January. They also will be used to develop estimates of hog and pig numbers in late December and the cattle inventory report in early February.

Ag seminar registration open

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho Agriculture Department is taking registration for its Agri-Education Seminar scheduled for Jan. 29-30 on campus.

The fee is $25 per couple, or $20 for a single if the registration is received before Jan. 16. After that date it will cost $40 for couples and $35 for singles.

For more information contact Dr. Rick Parker at 733-9354, ext. 30.

There will be information on the schedule of seminar events printed in the department newsletter and anyone not on that mailing list who wants to receive a copy should call Dr. Parker.

SkyWest boardings increase

ST. GEORGE, Utah — SkyWest Airlines boarded 26.7 percent more passengers at Twin Falls last month than in October 1985. The air carrier said 106 passengers left the Twin Falls-Salt Valley Regional Airport on its planes.

SkyWest's boardings also were up 18.7 percent to a record 72,787 passengers systemwide, the company reported.

Ron Reber, vice president of marketing, attributed much of the increase to joint marketing with Western Airlines. During the month, the carrier also opened three new routes, including one between Salt Lake City and Jackson, Wyo.

SkyWest operates in seven Western states.

Basic horseshoeing class set

TWIN FALLS — A one-credit class in basic horseshoeing begins Dec. 1 at the College of Southern Idaho.

Jack Robinette will teach the class from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday for two weeks in the Expo Center. The class will be limited to 15 and students can register in the Taylor Administration Building. The fee is $29.20.

CSI offers career workshop

TWIN FALLS — "Beyond the Horizon: Exploring All Job Opportunities," a workshop designed to investigate new choices in careers will be held Dec. 1-4 at the College of Southern Idaho.

This free workshop will meet from 1:30 to 4 p.m. in Room 1202 of the Canyon Vo-Tech Center.

The first afternoon will explore the topic of "choices" and the benefits of "choosing" new careers. The following two afternoons will give participants an opportunity to visit vocational classes, meet the instructors, and, in some cases, do actual hands-on activities. On the final day, opportunities in apprenticeship will be discussed and there will be tips on "how to get started."

This workshop is sponsored by the Center for New Directions. For more information call the center at 733-9354, ext. 361, or visit the staff at 1050 Washington St. N., Twin Falls.

Rexburg grain company sued

REXBURG (AP) — An eastern Idaho state representative and other farmers have sued a Rexburg grain company and its insurer for money they claim they are owed for barley and wheat they sold a year ago.

Rep. Golden Linford, R-Rexburg, and the other producers contend Jensen Grain Co. owes each of them balances for the grain sales of up to $150,000.

The farmers have asked the 7th District Court to order payment of those balances plus 12 percent interest since mid-January, or if Jensen Grain defaults they want at least 10 percent of their balances covered by the company's surety bond that is provided by Allied Fidelity Insurance.

Golden Linford in the suit were Val Schwendiman Farms, Dean Schwendiman and Sons, H&L Farms, Triple J Farms and Webster Deep Well Farms.

Wenstrand moves to Spokane

BOISE (AP) — Phil Wenstrand, news director of KTVB-TV Channel 7, will leave Boise in December to become news director of KREM in Spokane, Wash.

KREM and KTVB are owned by King Broadcasting Co. in Seattle.

Wenstrand, 41, said he did not know when his last day would be. His successor has not been announced.

KREM offered him the job after its news director went to work for a station in Seattle.

Wenstrand has been with Channel 7 for eight years. He worked for seven years at the CBS affiliate in Tucson, Ariz., before coming to Boise.

He also worked for KMVT in Twin Falls.

Physician rating book ready

BOISE (AP) — A Boise company says it has developed the first rating system in the country for consumers to evaluate physicians.

ProRate Inc. president Maughan Parkinson said Consumer Medical Guide will go on sale Dec. 9. The book evaluates Ada County's 216 doctors and other advises consumers to use the doctor or recommends against a physician.

Marketing director Shari Murphy said Thursday the book is the first of its kind in the country. It will sell for $19.95.

The book is designed to increase public awareness and involvement about health care, Parkinson said. It also contains health-related articles.

Briefings on new law planned

BOISE — Jim Bailey, alien certification officer for the U.S. Department of Labor in the Northwest, and a top immigration and Naturalization Service official will brief Idaho agricultural employers on immigration reform early next month in Twin Falls and Burley.

Food Producers of Idaho and the Shake River Farmers Association are sponsoring meetings on Dec. 2 to discuss implications of the new law. The sessions are scheduled for 1:30 p.m. in the Canyon Springs Inn at Twin Falls and for 7:30 p.m. in the Best Western Burley Inn, Burley.

Bailey will explain the new law's requirements. Marvin Moorhead, district director for the INS, and economic consultant James Holl, who was instrumental in starting Idaho's federal H-2 program, also will speak.

All farm employers are invited to attend the sessions, which are free, the sponsors announced.

An irrigator checks the supply of water to a field near Twin Falls. Recent federal and global developments relating to water resources could have dramatic impacts on agriculture and water use in Idaho and the Western states.

Events to alter uses of water

You have heard much about the events of the past that will play a role in the architecture of Idaho's future. What are those more recent events that will characterize our future vision of water resource use, management, and development in the Snake and Columbia-River systems?

Let's begin with a summary of recent events.

First, on Dec. 11, 1985, the Congress passed, and on Dec. 19, 1985, the president signed into law the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Deficit Reduction Act, known formally as the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Reduction Act of 1985. That sweeping action signaled the dawn of a "new era of federalism" in this United States.

Second, on Feb. 5, 1986, the Fiscal Year 1987 federal budget was issued by the executive office of the president. It called for the sale of the Bonneville Power Administration's transmission facilities and the power generating facilities located in 23 federally owned dams on the Columbia River system. If that recommendation is carried to its fruition it will have dramatic consequences on the future of the Columbia River and Snake River systems.

Third, on Feb. 21, 1986, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers announced to the city of Oroquieta, on the banks of the Clearwater above Dworshak Dam, that they must pay a charge of $50,000/year for the removal of water from the Clearwater above Dworshak — as it denied the federal government a quantum of federally reserved water which would have a value of $50,000 if it were allowed to flow through the federal government generators at Dworshak.

The foregoing actions represent a watershed in history which could have dramatic impacts on agriculture and water use in the Western states — and the relationship of the states to the federal government.

Their impacts on irrigation and reclamation practices in the Western United States could be revolutionary. The actions could also have dramatic effects on water-related institutions. Collectively, these actions signal a turning point in how we value, in how we manage and how we allocate water in the West.

There are other events that signal change in the future. One is changing global economics. And the other is advancing technology.

The Green Revolution has swept across the Third World with success far beyond that of the hopes of the geneticists and economists who brought it forth from the Rockefeller Institute in the 1950s and '60s. Countries that once were dependent upon the United States, Canada, Australia and Western Europe for food have now emerged as exporters of those very cereal grains and feed grains which we have long been exporting to them.

Mainland China has awakened from its 40 years of slumber and increased its agricultural production by an average of 10 to 15 percent per year. It is rapidly becoming the most significant exporter of agricultural products on the Pacific Rim. India is now a net exporter of grain. Mexico too is a net exporter of agricultural products to the U.S.

As the president's commission on industrial competitiveness reported in January 1985 in its report titled "Global Competition, The New Reality," American agriculture and industry must now face competition from all quarters abroad — often times with technologies that are more sophisticated than our own and with costs of labor and energy far below that of our own. This new reality is one of the great success stories of post World War II global economic development — led largely by U.S. owned or controlled development institutions, including USAID, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Ex-Im Bank and World Bank. And by U.S. based engineering and manufacturing firms such as M.K. Bechtel, John Deere, Caterpillar, etc. To a great extent our current dilemmas are largely the result of our own successful efforts.

As we struggle to readjust and restructure in this newly competitive and highly technological global environment, we often times spend enormous amounts of energy criticizing our Power Administrators rather than attempting to improve our own technologies and our own competitiveness. This is also the dawn of a "new era of global reality and global competition." We are still the largest marketer of agricultural products on the globe, but we must awaken to new realities.

The economic system that we established on this continent of North America never guaranteed anyone success. It called for the best of Yankee ingenuity, creativity and innovation. In exchange it offered enormous freedoms — including the freedom to take risks. We will remain going to assume that corporate taxes are significantly increased and corporate tax incentives are significantly reduced.

Next, I am going to assume that the long fought tax reform battle of 1985-87 are concluded and that federal tax incentives to develop agricultural land and to invest in agricultural developments and/or equipment have been extinguished. I am going to assume that corporate tax incentives are significantly reduced.

This scenario also includes increased competition from off-shore agricultural producers due to highly efficient, low cost agricultural practices resulting in increasing production and exports from Canada, Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Australia, India and the People's Republic of China.

To add some spice to the foregoing scenario, I will assume that in 1987 the Congress attempts to throw up a protectionist shield around the United States against imports of agricultural products, forest products, minerals, machine tools, electronics and automobile imports. It initiates a major global trade war, and immediately retreats — accepting global free market trade and international interdependence as a reality.

As a result of all the foregoing, I am going to assume that U.S. agriculture produces principally for domestic rather than export markets as we are not cost competitive in global markets for most products. Even at home we will be competing against foreign competitors next 15 years.

Second, I am going to assume that the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Deficit Reduction Act was fully implemented from 1986 to 1991: that all federally-owned reclamation projects are also privatized. The price per acre foot for delivery of water in the Snake River basin in 2010 will include in addition to usual operating and maintenance costs, 1) a new direct charge of $15 per acre foot for reserved federal water; and 2) a new debt reduction charge resulting from privatization. The price at the water users headgate will be $35/acre foot before any pumping or pressurizing costs are incurred.

Next, I am going to assume that the long fought tax reform battle of 1985-87 are concluded and that federal tax incentives to develop agricultural land and to invest in agricultural developments and/or equipment have been extinguished. I am going to assume that corporate tax incentives are significantly reduced.

Burley cites long-time business people

By RONDA TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The Burley Area Chamber of Commerce honored five area residents Tuesday night at its 20th annual Farmer-Business Appreciation Banquet at the Best Western Burley Inn.

Over 300 people attended, including special guests Jim May, president of the Greater Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, and Fred Bader, an international trade specialist with the Idaho Department of Commerce.

Jesse Parsons, 82, who recently retired after serving as a State Farm Insurance agent for 55 years. He installed the first sprinker irrigation system in Idaho in 1948. Dissatisfied with using gas engine pumps for the system, Newcomb purchased several electric transformers from the Bureau of Reclamation and established the Newcomb substation, three miles from his house, in 1948. He eventually sold the system to Southside Electric for $1 and their promise to maintain the station.

Executor of estate should know all about responsibilities

A close friend of mine has recently become ill and has asked me to be the executor of his estate in the event of his death. I know absolutely nothing about an executor's responsibilities. I am hoping you can tell me a little about them before I accept his request.

The responsibilities associated with being the executor of a person's estate should be taken lightly.

In some cases, the executor will be called upon to arrange for the burial or cremation of the decedent; search for such key documents as insurance policies and financial records; insure that such ongoing bills as mortgage and auto payments are paid on time; and ensure that the decedent's properties are properly insured until disposed of, as delineated by the will or the court.

Therefore, the Better Business Bureau recommends that anyone who is asked to be the executor of another's will should sit down with that person and get as much pertinent information as possible before agreeing to undertake the task. For example:

- Find out whether or not the will has been properly prepared and where it is located. Keep in mind that there might be several versions of a will, but you need the most recent and legal version.
- Are there life insurance policies and, if so, where are they located?
- Are instructions for memorial services and either burial or cremation of the body specified in writing and are the costs adequately covered?

What properties does the person own and what liabilities must be dealt with when the person dies?

If you agree to be the executor, don't make the common mistake of paying the deceased's bills out of your own pocket. As executor, you are not legally required to do so. You should count on the deceased's estate to pay these bills. Provide the financial institutions and insurance companies with copies of the death certificate and ask them to help you meet the deceased's financial obligations.

Q: More and more often I see the terminology "manufacturer's suggested retail list price, or suggested retail price" used in sale advertisements. Are these true price comparisons, or are they fictitious in nature?

A: When you see advertisements offering merchandise at huge discounts, watch out.

Be sure the savings are real. Some retailers are claiming reductions from fabricated retail prices, suggested retail prices, manufacturer's list prices, which have little relation to the retailer's previous selling price. Such price reductions have no real meaning and are simply designed to give the impression of a bargain.

When shopping for those items it is always wise to determine if the price reduction is actually from a previous selling price.

Q: The grocery store price war that is currently in our area is very intriguing. How can three or more stores truthfully advertise that they have lower prices than the others all at the same time?

A: These underselling claims can be confusing. Despite an advertiser's best efforts to ascertain competitive prices, the rapidly with which prices fluctuate and the difficulty of determining prices of all sellers at all times preclude an absolute knowledge of the truth of claims such as, "Our Prices are Guaranteed Lower Than Elsewhere," "Never Undersold," "We Guarantee to Sell for Less," "Highest Trade-In Allowances," "Lowest Prices."

Better Business Bureaus have always advocated that advertisers have proper substantiation for all claims prior to dissemination. Since underselling claims may be accurate at the time of the advertiser's investigation, but may not be accurate at the time of dissemination, such claims should be avoided.

The merger will expand Land Title's business in the Jerome area market. The closing of Pioneer's office also will increase efficiency by eliminating duplication of title listings and other costs, Roberts said.

Schwab Tire erecting new outlet in Twin Falls

The $600,000 project, now under construction at 421 Blue Lakes Blvd., will serve south-central Idaho through Les Schwab stores in Mountain Home and Pocatello, said Jerry Harper, vice president for marketing and sales. Les Schwab Tire Centers is a regional tire dealer operating on a supermarket concept, he said from the firm's office in Prineville, Ore.

The company carries a wide selection of brands and price ranges instead of specializing in a few labels. It carries tires for vehicles, ranging from riding lawn mowers to farm tractors.

The new, 12,000-square-foot store will include nine repair bays for brake, shock absorber and alignment work. The company also will offer on-tire service.

Based in Prineville, Les Schwab Tire Centers operates 173 stores in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. Itvenues a system-wide this year will exceed $200 million, Harper said. Les Schwab also is one of the nation's largest retreading businesses, adding new tread to 1,500 tires daily at its Oregon plant.

The company recently acquired a dealership in Pocatello, opened a new outlet in Blackfoot and purchased two stores in Idaho Falls.

"We're servicing our stores every week out of Prineville," Harper said. "It only makes it natural that we would fill up the freeway corridor down through here."

The Twin Falls store is scheduled to open between Jan. 1 and Jan. 15. It will open with six employees and add several more within a year, he said.

Byron Rosencrans, manager at Les Schwab's store in Post Falls, has been named manager of the Twin Falls store. Brian Lauterbach, sales and service representative at the company's store in The Dalles, Ore., has been appointed assistant manager.

Bankers see farm loan woes easing

WASHINGTON — Farm loans at agricultural banks deteriorated significantly in quality in the past year, but bankers now are projecting only small declines through mid-1987, according to American Bankers Association reports.

In its annual credit survey for the year ending this summer, the ABA found worsened loan conditions nationwide and many agricultural banks in weak positions. At the same time, bankers saw signs of a slowing in the farm finance crisis.

The 600 responding bankers reported:

- Nearly 40 percent of farm borrowers have borrowed to their practical limits, up from 37 percent in mid-1985.
- Five-and-a-half percent of farm borrowers were refused bank loans and had to seek credit elsewhere. The number could rise to 6.4 percent this year.
- More than 8 percent of loans were delinquent 30 days or longer.
- Land values fell nearly 16 percent during the year, and another 8 percent decline can be expected.
- Thirty percent of borrowers had debt-asset ratios of 61 percent or higher.
- The most common interest rate charged on farm operating loans was 11.5 percent, a 1.2-percent lower rate than in summer 1985.

Bankers now are split on outlooks for their farm loan portfolios, with about equal numbers expecting decreases in charge-offs as those expecting increases. Despite the troubles in farm financing, 80 percent of the agricultural bankers said they will continue to lend at the same level or increase lending during the next three years, the ABA reports.

Road King station owner shuts off pumps

TWIN FALLS — Lynch Oil Inc. of Burley will close its Road King gasoline station Wednesday at 243 Blue Lakes Blvd. N. in Twin Falls. "The station, which has been in business for decades under several owners, is a victim of continual gas price wars and rapidly increasing insurance costs, company Vice President James C. Lynch said.

"The Twin Falls market has been in a gas war for the past 30 months," he said. Low price margins could not keep up with expenses, he said. "The smaller operations that don't pump a lot of gallons... it's just not economical to keep them open any more."

Lynch also said the company's insurance coverage has quadrupled and coverage has been reduced in the past year. Liability and pollution insurance are based on the numbers and conditions of gas tanks and other facilities.

The company is trying to attract customers to its Mt. Gas station across the street with longer operating hours there. Road King is the first closing for the Burley-based oil chain. No others are anticipated immediately, Lynch said. It will continue to operate seven stores, including two Mt. Gas stations in Twin Falls, and other outlets in Burley and Rupert.

Trump buys stake in big game maker

NEW YORK (AP) — Real estate developer Donald Trump says he has bought a 9.6 percent stake in the World Manufacturing Corp., the world's leading manufacturer and distributor of electronic amusement games and operator of casinos in Atlantic City and Nevada.

Trump said Thursday in a news release that he held ownership and options on 2.96 million shares of World's approximately 30 million shares outstanding.

The statement did not disclose the price paid for the stake and did not rule out the possibility of a takeover bid.

Water

 Domestic prices will significantly increase with the fall of the value of the U.S. dollar. The American family will spend approximately 25 to 30 percent of their budget for water rather than a meager 10 to 15 percent. For domestic farmers the price increases will be welcome news as costs, too, will be driven upward.

Next, I am going to assume that Federal water rights become the focal point of legal struggles in the Columbia and Snake River basins and other Western river basins. Competition for water between hydro-power and agricultural interests increases significantly.

The price of water is pushed upward by implementation of water marketing schemes currently being tested by various Western states. In addition, the intrastate water marketing schemes when tested in federal court are found to be restrictive: Federally reserved water is ordered to be sold to all comers.

Water is indeed marketed and transported out of the Snake/Columbia basin indeed out of the state to southern California.

In furtherance of its free market and privatization goals the administration has succeeded in removing all subsidies, price supports and allotments for agricultural products including tobacco, cotton, feed grains, milk, cheese, butter, etc.

I can summarize the foregoing scenario by simply stating: In the 21st century everything you have traditionally known and were sure would never change with regard to Western water — has changed.

In that new environment, only the most technologically sophisticated and economically savvy producers will survive. Among that group the only survivors will be those who also have sophisticated management and marketing skills. In other words, what we will have before us in 2010 is a brave new world that will be quite unlike that which we have known in the past.

Irrigation as we know it in the Snake River basin will have significantly changed as we complete the 21st century and move into the 22nd century in Idaho.

The principal factors that will drive the change in our practices will be continuously increasing costs for energy and competition for water.

Because it will be more expensive to move water to a given field, and finally to the root zone of a plant, the methods will change. We will begin to adopt the arid land irrigation and water conservation techniques pioneered by agriculturists in southern California. To a certain extent we will have come full circle returning to the gravity systems of our forebearers, the pioneers who first settled these valleys and first irrigated from its once abundant waters.

To get a clear picture of the future one needs only to visit the fertile valley floors and foothills near Escudido, Calif. In San Diego County where both Colorado River and Feather River water are delivered to avocado and citrus groves and truck farms. Water delivered there for drip irrigation can run as high as $125 to $50 per acre foot. Or to the Imperial and Coachella Valleys of the inland deserts where an acre foot of Colorado River water has a value of $25 to $30 per acre foot at the headgate.

Recently, the metropolitan Water District of southern California offered to buy the Imperial Irrigation District's Colorado River water for $100 per acre foot. (MWD supplies water to communities in Los Angeles and Orange counties with a feeder to San Diego.) These examples are in-

The federal government will have asserted their "federal reserved water rights" and will be charging for reserved federal water which they began in 1986 when they set a precedent in charging the city of Orofino $60,000 a year for diverting water from the Dworshak reservoir for domestic purposes. As noted earlier, farmers will pay from $10 to $20 per acre foot for federally reserved water for their crops.

The writing is on the wall, the Reclamation Act, the Desert Entry Act, the Carey Act, the Bonneville Power Act and all of those similar actions that were designed to settle, civilize and develop the sparsely populated Arid West in the early 20th century will have been reversed in the 21st century — turned 180 degrees. We are so dependent on these systems and those institutions we will have a hard time readjusting. But we will. We will become more efficient than we ever dreamed.

Flood irrigation, furrow irrigation, border irrigation — all driven by gravity — were the principal methods of irrigating agricultural land until the last 30 years. Now we have become the prisoners of high cost pressurized systems. We pressurize our circuits and sidestep with expensive electricity and finance them with scarce capital. As you fly over the Snake river basin at mid summer you cannot help gasp at the circular and rectangular sprinkler irrigated fields that are beyond the reach of the gravity flow of main canals, main laterals and field delivery systems.

By 2010 energy costs will have increased by at least 400 percent. Water will become uneconomical and also attempt to extensively pressurize it. The sidersails and the circulars, to the extent that they are still used, will be redesigned and retrofitted for low pressure. Replacing many of these will be newly developed gravity and low pressure delivery systems. To conserve water because of the cost per acre foot we will begin using advanced forms of low pressure drip irrigation: We will attempt to reduce evaporation and deliver water closer to the plant and the root. We will focus on conserving energy, water and capital.

You won't see many people in the fields in 2010. Tractors will be controlled by electronic systems, micro-chips and computers. Each unmanned tractor module will be guided by radar and lasers and will be actually controlled by a computerized robot. The power system will be based on electrically motorized wheels drawing its energy from regional low head hydro systems. Equipment will operate around the clock as robots don't fatigue.

Drip irrigation systems will deliver water to the fields based on remote sensing of soil moisture, soil temperature and plant stress — all fed directly into an "Apple 21" computer. The farm control room will look like the control center for a TV station with multiple monitors displaying the variables from the fields — and the operating condition and location of unmanned equipment.

The push for more and more productivity per acre will take a new direction. We will no longer be junkies addicted to fertilizers, insecticides, fungicides and other methods of chemically inducing growth and suppressing disease.

We will have moved into the bio-organic and bio-genetic era of agriculture. We will suppress plant diseases genetically. Insects will be managed through biological methods — using user friendly insect species to eat species harmful to crops. We will monitor 600 acre games of agricultural pac man on cathode ray tubes receiving signals from strategically placed video cameras in the fields. Ladybugs will replace malathion. We will include plant growth by genetic and biological means. Soil fertility will be managed by rotation of new super legumes that quadruple nitrogen fixation. Production per acre will probably be double that of the present.

In the 21st century when you look across the Snake River Plain for the vast acres of feed grains and alfalfa produced for feeding livestock, you won't find them.

What you will find is large drip and gravity irrigated acreages of truck farming, grass and vegetable seed producers, sugar beets, potatoes — and vineyards. The current shift by less and less red meat and dairy products in the American diet will not only have continued but have resulted in beef and dairy production in the United States reaching all time lows per capita. Vegetable and cereal grain consumption and production will have dramatically increased as will lamb and fish consumption. Livestock feed lots will be converted to broccoli forests and asparagus farms.

Fish will have become a more important part of the American diet than ever in the past. In order to produce those fish in the quantity and quality that consumers demand the clean, cool, oxygenated waters of the Snake River will prove to be vital.

Mark your program with the foregoing observations and we'll revisit this occasion in 2010 to test the question: Will broccoli, lamb, fish or beef be more popular to Americans in 2010?

And now some good news and some bad news. First, the bad news is that some of the millions of people who flocked to the sunbelt causing Phoenix's population to grow to five million, Tucson's to three million, and Los Angeles and Orange Counties' population to swell to nearly 20 million by 2010 will seek relief from the pressure cooker. These Californians and Arizonians will search for a higher quality of life — and will direct their attention to a place called southern Idaho. Yes, by 2010 we will finally inherit the migration of the clean, cool, oxygenated waters of California experienced in the '60s, '70s and '80s. The greater Boise area comprising Ada County will have grown to 500,000 compared with 197,000 people today. Boise State University and its new law and medical schools will have approximately 25,000 students compared with 10,000 today, and the College of Idaho will have some 3,000 students. Twin Falls will have a population of 75,000. Nampa and Caldwell will be cities of 100,000 each. Idaho Falls will boast 150,000 people as the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory becomes a science and technology center for the West.

The good news is that southern Idaho finally will have the population to sustain a diverse economy.

It's interesting to hear people in the current generation say that it's difficult to keep up with all of the technology. Yet it is that technology that got us to the point where we are today. Those of you who were farming just after World War II can reflect on the methods and equipment you used then — and compare them with what you are doing today, nearly 40 years later. I dare say that there is little resemblance — regarding your farm equipment, your planting methods, or even the appliances you have in your farm kitchens — between 1946 and 1986. The difference between the 40 years after World War II and today, 1946-1986, and the future, is that the same amount of change will take place in the next 20 years, and after that in the next 10 years, and after that in the next five.

Each new technological achievement that we are experiencing has a half life just half as great as the technological change before it. We will be forced into technological advances in the future by increasingly rapid obsolescence of currently equipment, farming methods and management practices — and fierce competition. New technologies will force recent technologies into obscurity at an ever increasing rate in an ever decreasing amount of time. These are the axioms upon which we must base our future plans and our future decisions. Accelerating technology, shorter half life to obsolescence and a need to maintain and/or restore competitiveness in the face of a harsh world competition will be, indeed are, the reality.

Eastern Idaho students clean up during fall potato harvest

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — There's money in those fields, and students who have spud harvest vacation are harvesting the green.

According to surveys conducted by eastern Idaho school districts, students who worked during the two-week spud pocketed a break in September and October pocketed thousands of dollars for their lot.

Working students in Jefferson County School District made $24,052 in their two weeks in the field, said Val Bush, district business manager. The amount came from a survey of returning students by Ririe High School Principal Roy Smith.

In a similar survey conducted by the Shelley School District, 869 students worked during the two-week harvest and earned $153,785. And while there are jobs in the fields, the earnings reported weren't exclusive to harvesting. Bush said in his district, students made an average of a little over $4 an hour, which included work that ranged from babysitting for other harvesters and driving trucks to the actual harvest.

In Shelley, other jobs accounted for over $40,000 of the earnings made during the two weeks, with students making an average of $245 for two weeks, Toy said.

Jefferson students were released Sept. 28 and returned to school Oct. 13. Those making the most in the district were in the sophomore class, whose working members took in $7,039 and worked 1,433 hours.

Of the seventh- through 12th-graders surveyed in Shelley, sophomores made the most money during the harvest, pulling in

Steve Toy, Shelley superintendent, said students began harvest break Sept. 25 and resumed school on Oct. 9. He said school districts try to correlate the harvest vacation with farming needs.

Bush said his district conducted the survey so that the board could determine whether the harvest vacation for the students was worth continuing. The practice of harvest vacation has come under fire in recent years and has been scrutinized closely since the implementation of the state's 90 percent attendance rule.

"There's always a question in people's minds," Bush said, adding the district had no plans to eliminate the harvest break.

"There are three reasons that the board has decided to keep on with harvest vacation," Bush said. "One is the kids can use the money; the kids that need the money would be out of school anyway, and that would jeopardize their credit with the 90 percent rule."

Fewer cattle in feedlots in 7 states

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Agriculture Department report shows that cattle being fed for the slaughter market as of Nov. 1 in the seven major beef states totaled 7.55 million head.

That is down fractionally from a year ago and 3 percent below inventories of two years ago.

Feedlot inventories were down from a year earlier in Arizona, California, Colorado and Texas, but were higher in Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska.

Marketings of "fed" cattle in October totaled 1.59 million head, up 1 percent from a year earlier but down 4 percent from two years before, the report said Friday.

The placement of cattle and calves in feedlots last month was estimated at 2.4 million head, down 14 percent from last year and 6 percent below October 1984. It was the smallest October placement of feedlot cattle since 1981.

Feedlot inventories as of Nov. 1 in the seven states, which account for about three-fourths of the nation's beef, and their percentages of a year earlier, included:

- Arizona, 303,000 head on feed as of Nov. 1 and 98 percent of a year ago;
- California, 388,000 and 81;
- Colorado, 935,000 and 97;
- Iowa, 560,000 and 104;
- Kansas, 1,480,000 and 103;
- Nebraska, 1,800,000 and 103;
- Texas, 2,080,000 and 99.

Production of milk off 1985 levels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Milk production since mid-year continues to drift downward from record levels of 1985, according to an Agriculture Department report.

The department's Agricultural Statistics Board said mid-year production last month in the 21 major dairy states was about 9.84 billion pounds, down 4 percent from October 1985.

Production per cow averaged 1,099 pounds in October, a gain of three pounds from a year earlier.

However, the number of cows in the 21 states, which account for 85 percent of the nation's milk output, declined 4 percent to an average of 8.93 million head.

Because of gains earlier in the year, department economists forecast 1986 milk production may rise about 1 percent from last year's record level of 143.7 billion pounds.

Production is dropping in the second half of the year because dairy farmers have sold off cows under the government's whole-herd buyout program, which was designed to help curb further increases in dairy surpluses.

Under the 18-month program, which began last April, more than 1.55 million cows, heifers and calves are being sold for slaughter or export.

Most winter grain planted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A weekly government report says farmers had planted an estimated 92 percent of their 1987 winter wheat acreage by mid-November, about in line with progress a year ago and the normal rate for this time.

"Seeding was finished in Idaho, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, South Dakota and Washington, and was nearing completion in Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Ohio, Oregon and Texas," the government's Joint Agricultural Weather Facility said Tuesday. "Seeding was unchanged from the previous week in Oklahoma and lagged 10 points behind normal. Only 60 percent of Missouri acreage was seeded, compared with 81 percent average."

The condition of winter wheat was reported as "excellent to good" in Kansas, the largest producer, with planting and development on schedule.

Make Thanks dinner a 'pitch-in' meal

Thanksgiving is a celebration of the sheer perseverance and determination of the first colonists to survive the harsh conditions in their new home.

The early homesteaders learned to adapt familiar European recipes and cooking methods to fit new foods and techniques. The first Thanksgiving dinner was a "pitch-in" meal with special dishes from each family.

Thanksgiving dinner for a house filled with relatives doesn't have to be a survival test for today's busy cooks. If they follow the colonists' customs of adapting traditional recipes to incorporate new eating trends and asking each family to contribute a favorite dish to the gathering.

Today's convenient, time-saving ingredients such as sweetened condensed milk, bottled lemon juice, ready-to-use thickened, low-fat chicken-flavor bouillon allow the cook to create recipes that are not only delicious but quick and easy to prepare.

Add hearty, rich flavor to the turkey stuffing and gravy, with instant bouillon or bouillon cubes, which are more economical than canned broth. "Pilgrimage" and "Insurrection" soups, and other cup boiling-water-in-any-recipe calling for one cup broth or stock.

HOT CRANBERRY CIDER

(Makes about 3 quarts)

- 1 quart apple cider or apple juice
- 1 (32-oz.) bottle cranberry juice cocktail
- 1/2 cup bottled lemon juice
- 1/4 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
- 2 whole cloves
- 2 cinnamon sticks

In large saucepan, combine ingredients; bring to a boil. Reduce heat; simmer uncovered 10 minutes. Remove spices. Serve warm.

SHERRIED CHERRY SALAD

(Makes 10 to 12 servings)

- 2 (16-oz.) cans dark sweet cherries, drained, reserving syrup
- 1 cup water
- 1/2 cup bottled lemon juice
- 1 (8-serving size) package black cherry or cherry flavor gelatin
- 1/4 cup dry sherry or water
- 1/2 cup chopped pecans
- Lettuce leaves
- Lemon Fluff Dressing

In small saucepan, combine water and lemon juice; bring to a boil. In large bowl, pour boiling liquid over gelatin; stir until dissolved. Add reserved syrup and sherry; mix well. Cool until partially set. Fold in cherries and nuts. Pour into lightly oiled 2-cup mold. Chill 4 to 6 hours or overnight. Serve on lettuce with Lemon Fluff Dressing.

Lemon Fluff Dressing
1 cup marshmallow creme
3/4 teaspoon bottled lemon juice
1 cup (1/2 pint) whipping cream, whipped

In small mixer bowl, beat together marshmallow creme and lemon juice. Gradually add whipping cream; beat until smooth and peaks form. Refrigerate.

*Tip: Dressing can be held in refrigerator 4 to 6 hours; stir before serving.

CORNBREAD PUFFING

(Makes about 3 quarts)

- 3 pound fresh or frozen corn, sliced (about 4 cups)
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1/2 cup margarine or butter
- 4 (2-ounce) chicken-flavor instant bouillon or 4 chicken-flavor bouillon cubes
- 1 1/2 cups boiling water
- 1 pound bulk sausage, browned and drained

The Day After: Can you still talk turkey?

By BETSY BAILEY
Los Angeles Times

One of the nicest things about the day after Thanksgiving is that you do not have to think about what to fix for dinner. You know perfectly well what you are going to do. You are going to repeat the previous day's extravaganza — on a slightly smaller scale, perhaps, but a good Thanksgiving meal is definitely worth repeating at least once. In the true nature of this particular holiday, the turkey carcass will be enough of everything left to feed a small army. It is not the day after Thanksgiving that is a problem. The problem comes later when the family frilly refuses one more bit of leftovers, no matter how good they are. The secret to a hassle-free post-holiday existence for the family cook is the freezer. If you have not already stripped the turkey carcass of its meat, do so as soon as possible. Leave out enough to provide a second go-around, then carefully package the rest of the turkey in meal-size amounts for the freezer. And while you are at it, package any excess stuffing or vegetables and freeze them, too. Then nobody can complain about the turkey lasting too long. (Be sure to mark each package with its contents and the date.) The carcass itself, and any small bits and pieces of meat that probably will not find a home elsewhere, should immediately be assigned to a large pot where it can simmer for hours with a few carrots, onions and maybe a green pepper to create a rich soup. Once done, the soup, too, should be frozen for future use. You might want to reduce it by boiling to intensify the flavor and then freeze at least a portion of it in an ice tray. That way you will have handy cubes of richly flavored stock to use in sauces or gravies when you need them. Here are recipes for some turkey-based dishes and others that make the most of the Thanksgiving bird as best as the original presentation.

- 11 corn tortillas
- 1 (10 1/2-ounce) can cream of chicken soup
- 1 (19 1/2-ounce) can cream of mushroom soup
- 2 cups milk
- 1 onion, grated or minced
- 1 to 1 1/2 (7-ounce) cans green chili salsa
- 3 tablespoons water
- 4 cups cubed cooked turkey

Raising your own tom turkey can be a dangerous operation

Sometimes I need reminding about all the pleasures of the table that have become so commonplace we really don't even think about having them. I can remember when a lot of folks raised their own turkey. Now that is really an unpleasant job. Once when I was about four, there was a tom turkey fattening up out in the yard of the house where we lived. He was cocky and prone to chasing us little people and pecking our calves and behinds if we were slow. We learned the safe spots in a hurry behind the gate and on the porch where there was a broom we waved in his face to shoo him away) but the still was the bane of our existence. I swear he lurked until we were totally engrossed in our play. Then he would come a-running right at us. If he couldn't peck us, he attacked our toys. It was just a matter of time before we had the show down. He charged, we all scattered and, when I looked back, he had my one-and-only-love-of-my-life-doll, Annabelle. He was pecking at her and tearing into her like something in one of those now-a-days massacre movies. I charged back. I think he was totally surprised at this bundle of maternal fury bearing down at him, and he gamely stepped aside as I scooped up Annabelle and a handy stick. Then we stared at each other, eyeball to eyeball. He won that contest, as of course, I had to blink. But then I started swinging the stick and actually chased him to the furthest reaches of the farmyard. By then the other kids had gathered behind me, and he was facing a miniature lynch mob and knew it. He ended the confrontation by scratching in the dirt, searching nonchalantly for goodies. I never liked to watch the annual slaughter, but that year was different. Every year I volunteer to do the family dinner at Thanksgiving, and I wouldn't dream of having anything else but turkey — tom turkey at that.

Nancy Joy Jones

I have some turkey facts to share. Do you know that turkeys were so named after Cortez took the bird, domesticated by the Aztecs, back to Spain? They became popular all over Europe. The English, however, didn't pay much attention to places they weren't colonizing. They began referring to this great tasting bird by the name of the country they thought it came from, Turkey, and the name stuck. The first turkeys that were cooked in the 1700s here in America were wild and often weighed in at 40 pounds. These huge birds were pretty stringy, with not much fat, so often incisions were made in the skin and bear fat stuffed in the slits. Then the birds were buried under glowing embers and roasted overnight. Turkey consumption is up over

Thanksgiving is a family feast when guests bring a specialty

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Vicki Storey is getting ready for the second year of what promises to become a new tradition for her family — having Thanksgiving dinner at her home. Around the table with Vicki and her husband, J.P., will be 5-year-old Tyler; 11-year-old Jay; 17-year-old Brian; their married son Jeff and his wife, Lori; and both sets of parents, Herb and Helen Storey and Lois and Jay Cobb. Also invited are Henry (Zip) and Irene Lemke. In addition to the turkey and other good things Storey will prepare, her guests will add favorite dishes of their own to the feast. She says she remembers this Thanksgiving custom from her youth, when her mother's family got together for the holiday. "We all had specialties," she says. "I think that's fond memories. I like to fix those things because of that. And, of course, I always had my favorites as a child." For example, one aunt brought a baked bean dish and my mother made a fruit salad, and so those kinds of things are what I usually work around." Several generations of her family have celebrated Thanksgiving in the Magic Valley. A great-grandfather, originally from Illinois, homesteaded near Castleford, and another grandfather owned an early mercantile store in Filer. Now along with passing down holiday traditions to her sons, she can share with them the stories told by grandparents who were local pioneers. One of these comes a mishap witnessed by her great-grandfather in 1903, upon his arrival in the area. She says he was riding in a stage behind a freight wagon, "and the brakes (of the freight wagon) either broke or failed, and he watched everything go down over the edge of the canyon. The horses and riders — all were gone." Her grandmother Beem, who died last year at the age of 90, told her about riding the ferry across the Snake River. Each year a group of families got together and looked loaded, supply carts to the backs of their cars, and crossed the river on the ferry, heading for a week of camping in the north hills.

It was this grandmother who always made the rolls for Thanksgiving dinner. "As a child," Storey says, "I remember getting to cut the pie shapes and curl them up. That was my part!" She says she thinks her children will help her make those rolls this year. Since she began working at the Filer Elementary School library this fall, the boys have been helping out by doing some of the cooking. ORANGE ROLLS Mix together 1 cup scalded milk, 1/2 cup shortening, 1/2 cup sugar and 1 teaspoon salt. Cool to lukewarm. Soften 1 package yeast in 1/4 cup water and add to the mixture. Add 2 beaten eggs, 1/2 cup orange juice and 2 tablespoons grated orange peel and beat well. Add 2 cups sifted flour and mix to a soft dough. Let stand 10 minutes, covered. Knead 5-10 minutes. Place in greased bowl with the greased side up. Raise until double (2 hours). Punch and let stand 15 minutes. Roll up lightly. Arrange on sheet and tuck ends under. Bake at 400 degrees for 12 minutes. Cool.

100 percent over the last 20 years, and younger readers might not remember, but they were available only once a year just a few years ago.

Benjamin Franklin proposed that the turkey be our national bird because it was more respectable than the bald eagle!

If you have any questions at all about cooking your turkey there is a hot-line of information provided by the Butterball people.
The hot-line number is toll free, 1-800-225-4848, and they are super friendly! The hours that follow have been adjusted to local time (Mountain Standard). From now through December 24, Mondays through Fridays, call between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. This weekend, November 22 and 23, you can call 7 a.m. through 5 p.m. and on Thanksgiving day from 5 a.m. to 6 p.m. The service ends on Christmas Eve at 5 p.m.

Since this bird comes in so many shapes - rolled breasts to single drumsticks - you can fix the ideal cut to suit your diet, your lifestyle or your family size.
Happy Thanksgiving to each of you. Sit a spell and write down 10 things you have to be thankful for this year, and then share one with someone else.
Enjoy!

Nancy Joy Jones welcomes comments or recipes. Her address is 1020 1st, Rupert 83350.

While chilling, combine:
1/2 cup apricot nectar
1/4 cup pineapple juice
3 heaping tablespoons flour
1 egg, beaten
A scant 1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons butter
Cook until thick and cool. When cold, add 1 cup whipped cream. Spread on the salad. Sprinkle grated cheese on top. Serves 16-20.

"It's one of my favorites. My family loves it, and I enjoy fixing it," she says.
Another possibility for the big dinner will be a tried and true old favorite.

24 HOUR SALAD

Combine:
1 cup pineapple
1 cup marshmallows
1 cup grapes
1 cup mandarin oranges
1 cup coconut
1 cup whipped cream or sour cream
Let set overnight. Serves about 10.

Lois Cobb will bring a beet salad.

BEET SALAD

One 3-ounce package lemon gelatin
1 cup boiling water
1 cup diced canned beets, drained (reserve 1/4 cup of the liquid)
312-ounce white vinegar
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons grated onion
1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
1/2 cup diced celery
Lettuce
Mayonnaise

In a bowl, dissolve gelatin in water. Add beet liquid, vinegar, salt, onion and horseradish. Blend well and refrigerate until partially set. Fold in beets and celery. Pour into wet ring mold and chill till firm. To serve, unmold salad on lettuce leaves and garnish with mayonnaise.

The Cobbs will also bring a cauliflower dish, and Irene Lemke's homemade jam will add a sweet accent to the dinner. J.P.'s mother bakes the pies; pumpkin and mincemeat, and a surprise pie - either chocolate or a cream pie of some kind.

"This is a group of people who don't stop to see each other very often, so after dinner, we generally have coffee and visit over dessert, and just have a quiet afternoon that way," Storey says.

COUNTRY-STYLE TURKEY PIE

Herb Pastry
 Butter or margarine
 3 cups sifted flour
 3 cups milk
 1 tablespoon chicken-seasoned stock base
 1 teaspoon salt
 1/4 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
 2 tablespoons dry Sherry
 3 drops hot pepper sauce
 2 cups diced cooked turkey
 1/4 cups sliced mushrooms
 1 cup diced cooked carrots
 1 (8-ounce) can small whole onions, drained
 1 tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese

Prepare Herb pastry. Melt 1/2 cup butter and blend in flour. Stir in milk slowly, then add chicken base, salt and Worcestershire. Cook, stirring, until sauce boils and thickens. Stir in Sherry and pepper sauce. Add turkey, mushrooms, carrots and onions and heat.
 Turn into 1/2-quart baking dish. Place pastry over dish, fluting edge of pastry against rim. Bake at 400 degrees about 20 minutes, or until pastry is almost done. Brush top with 1 tablespoon melted butter and sprinkle with cheese. Bake 10 minutes longer or until nicely browned. Cut 3 small slits in pastry crust and set baked pastry turkeys in place. Makes 6 servings.

Herb Pastry
 1 1/2 cups sifted flour
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 1/4 teaspoon poultry seasoning
 1/4 cup shortening
 1-3 cup cold milk
 Butter
 Grated Parmesan cheese
 Combine flour, salt and poultry seasoning. Cut in shortening until particles are size of peas. Sprinkle with cold milk, using just enough to hold together dough.
 For decorative turkey cut-outs, pinch off piece of dough. Roll about 1/4 inch thick and cut two small turkey shapes. Roll remaining pastry and cut to fit top of baking dish. Cut another turkey from center and bake cut-outs on ungreased baking sheet about 15 minutes, brushing with melted butter and sprinkling with cheese.

TURKEY EMPANADAS

1/2 cup chopped onion
 1 clove garlic, crushed
 1/4 cup butter or margarine
 1 (8-ounce) can tomato sauce
 1/2 cup water
 1 to 2 teaspoons chili powder
 2 cups chopped cooked turkey
 1 cup shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
 1 (2 1/2-ounce) jar sliced mushrooms, drained
 1 egg, lightly beaten
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 Pie crust mix or pastry (enough for 3 pie crusts)

In large saucepan saute onion and garlic in butter until onion is tender. Stir in tomato sauce, water and chili powder. Simmer 15 minutes. Add turkey, cheese, mushrooms, egg and salt. Stir well.
 Prepare pie crust mix or pastry according to package directions.

Divide dough into 12 portions. Roll out each portion on floured surface to 6-inch circle. Trim edges. Spoon 1/4 cup filling onto each circle. Moisten edges and fold in half. Seal edges by pressing with lines of fork. Pierce legs with fork in several places. Place on ungreased baking sheet and bake at 400 degrees 20 to 25 minutes. Serve with chile sauce, if desired. Makes 12 empanadas.

 1/4 pound spaghetti or linguini, cooked
 3 cups cubed cooked turkey
 1/4 cup soft fine bread crumbs mixed with 1-3 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Saute mushrooms, onion and celery in 1/4 cup butter until tender. Remove vegetables and set aside. Melt remaining 1/4 cup butter in saucepan and add flour and stock base. Mix until smooth and stir in chicken broth and cream. Cook, stirring constantly, until smooth and thickened. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Stir in Sherry and vegetables.
 Fold in spaghetti and turkey. Turn into buttered 3-quart casserole. Sprinkle with crumbs and cheese and

House plants need periodic grooming

House plants need periodic grooming to keep them looking their best. If done regularly it will only require a few minutes. A good time to check plants is at watering time.

When plants are near a window they grow toward the light. If turned a quarter turn each time they are watered, they will have a more uniform shape.

Check for dead or discolored leaves. It is natural for an occasional leaf to die of old age. However, if you see more than occasional brown or yellow leaf, it may indicate problems. When older or lower leaves turn yellow, it usually means a shortage of fertilizer.

It can also indicate that the plant is being over or underwatered. Mottled leaf color may indicate insects are feeding on the lower side. Shake the leaf sharply over white paper and see if you have some tiny crawling insects.

Plant leaves collect dust just like furniture. Of course turniture polish is toxic to plants, but plant leaf

cleaner and polish is available. Leaf shine products cannot be used on all plants.

For example, fuzzy-leaved plants and most succulent plants like cactus do not like it. If you are not sure, it is a good idea to test leaf shine on one leaf first and wait a day or two.

Plants that do not mind water on their leaves can even be washed with the spray nozzle on the kitchen sink. Some insect pests can be controlled fairly well by washing them off the plant.

As plants grow larger, they need to be transplanted to a larger pot. There are a few plants which grow better if their root growth is restricted. Most ferns and several flowering plants should not be transplanted too soon. If you are not sure, check a book on indoor plants or ask at the florist or nursery.

The best way to tell if a plant needs transplanting is to turn it upside down and gently tap it out of the pot. If there are several layers of roots around the soil ball, transplanting is probably needed.

Transplant to a container which is an inch or two larger in diameter than the present one. If you jump several pot sizes, the plant probably will not grow as well. Plants in over-size pots stay too wet and do not get enough air (oxygen) for good root growth.

By grooming plants regularly, you will discover problems sooner and they will be healthier and more beautiful.

Careful planning makes cooking less arduous

By CAROLYN DILWORTH
Times-News correspondent

GLENN'S FERRY — With Thanksgiving just around the corner, mouths are already beginning to water as we throw caution to the wind, push calorie counting to the back of our minds and promising to go back on our diet Nov. 28, sit down to plan our menu for the big day.

For some Nov. 28 will be more than "back to the diet" day, however. Having cooked ourselves into a frenzy to get that traditional dinner on the table in style, the day after is often one of total burnout.

Early settlers probably felt much the same way. Their feast included turkey — or other game if the turkey got away — squash, pumpkin, corn, fresh cranberries and baked beans.

The big difference now, however, comes not in the varied menus, but in the preparation of the meal. The saving appliances and modern cooking equipment have replaced iron pots and kettles over the fireplace, taking much of the work out of preparation.

There are ways for the "show me the shortcuts" cook to make a meal that won't leave guests feeling shortchanged. With some careful planning and modern convenience foods, the cook's day can be as relaxed and effortless as he or she chooses.

For starters, you might forgo the traditional turkey for a ready-to-eat turkey breast — usually available in the prepared meat case of your market.

To prepare, remove the skin and cut the breast into 1/4-inch slices. For a holiday touch, a little dried sage can be sprinkled on each slice, and the stack of slices may be topped with a tablespoon of butter. Wrap the entire stack in foil and bake for 30 minutes.

If you can boil water, pour and stir, you can have the stuffing under control with boxes of stove-top style, chicken-flavored stuffing mix. If you do want to make the traditional stuffed turkey, you can get a headstart by buying a box of seasoned bread cubes rather than drying and cubing the bread yourself.

Gravy also comes pre-prepared these days. Dry mixes are available, as are jars of prepared gravy that can be heated in 5 to 8 minutes in a saucepan over medium-low heat.

Vegetables for the holiday dinner can now be purchased in ready-to-cook bags. The bags — with vegetables and a ready-made sauce — can be dropped into boiling water to heat both at once. An added bonus is no messy pan to wash.

Or the shortcut cook can try an easy cheese sauce with frozen vegetables. Combine 2 cans of cheddar cheese soup and 1 cup milk in a large pan. Heat slowly, stirring until no longer lumpy. Add 2 packages of frozen vegetables — carrot, cauliflower and broccoli needleys are good. Turn down the heat and cook until vegetables are cooked through.

EQUI-LINE

WHAT IT IS: Equi-Line is a home equity revolving line of credit. For those who qualify, an Equi-Line allows you to tap the equity you've built in your home, and the interest portion of your payments can still be tax deductible — even if you're buying an automobile, boat, or simply paying off non-deductible items, such as credit cards. Federal tax laws list certain restrictions in order for interest on home equity loans to be deductible — our lenders can help you fully understand these restrictions.

HOW IT WORKS: When you apply, you do it once. There is no need to re-apply every year. Once your Equi-Line is approved, all we need is annually updated financial information. Equi-Line provides you with a checkbook of personalized loan requests. You simply bring or send in your check in the amount to be borrowed. IB&T charges your Equi-Line account and credits your checking account. It's that easy and efficient.

WHAT IT COSTS: Special Introductory Offer of 2.9% APR through January 31, 1987

With Equi-Line, you can establish your credit-line with no out-of-pocket expenses. IB&T will finance the origination, title insurance, appraisal, filing, and annual fees as part of the credit line. Even when the introductory rate ends (January 31, 1987), the standard Equi-Line rate is just 2 1/2% above the prime interest rate as published in The Wall Street Journal. Monthly payments on your Equi-Line are 2.5% of the average daily balance, but not less than $125.

Turkey tips: There is more than one way to cook that bird

By MARIE BIANCO
Newsday

Barbara Kafka found the best way to cook turkey purely by accident. Crank the oven up to 500 degrees and let it roast a turkey for 15 minutes. "Even the people who hate me say it's the best," confided Kafka, a food consultant with fiercely held opinions. She discovered this approach when, at the center-piece, turkey sat there raw; while photographers and assistants waited, she frantically tried the incendiary approach. And it worked.

O.K. That's one way to cook a turkey. And everybody knows the 350-degree, 15-to-18-minute-per-pound method. It's on the package, after all.

But there are other ways to approach the holiday bird, each designed to solve the basic dilemma: how to keep the breast meat moist while cooking the dark meat thoroughly.

For your consideration, we offer from 1 to 10:

1. Roasted at 325 Degrees. Rub turkey with melted butter or vegetable oil and place in lightly greased shallow roasting pan breast side up. Do not add water to the pan. Cover loosely with a sheet of heavy duty aluminum foil. Remove foil during last 30 minutes or so of cooking to allow turkey to brown. A 16- to 20-pound turkey will require from 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 hours, depending on the weather and the wind. Aromatic wood chips that have been soaked in water for 30 minutes can be added to the fire for a smokier flavor.

2. Roasted at 500 Degrees. This is Barbara Kafka's method. Place a 15-pound turkey in a roasting pan and roast in a 500-degree oven for 2 hours. Do not truss. Secure stuffing in the neck cavity with a skewer and simply make an "X" with skewers across the body cavity, lacing it with string if necessary. Baste with a pastry brush every 15 minutes with whatever fat was used in stuffing (bacon fat, butter, etc.) or pan drippings. Deduct 15 minutes of cooking time if turkey is unstuffed. Turkey will do some water to the wings. Allow to stand 10 minutes before removing stuffing and carving.

3. Roasted in an Oven Bag. Shake 1 tablespoon flour into bag first to prevent it from bursting. Slice a stalk of celery and an onion and place these in bottom of the bag; lay the turkey on top. Close the bag and make 6 half-inch slits to allow steam to escape. Place turkey in a 350-degree oven. A 16- to 20-pound turkey will take 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 hours. If stuffed, add 30 minutes. To remove turkey, carefully cut bag down center. Never use brown grocery bags for roasting turkeys because they contain chemicals.

4. Cooked in a Microwave. Because microwave cooking requires that a turkey be turned several times, use one under 16 pounds. Cover wing tips and ends of drumsticks with foil and remove foil halfway through cooking time. Place turkey in a microwave-proof baking pan, breast side down, making sure there are 3 inches of space between the turkey and the oven walls. A lot of fat flows down cooking in a microwave oven, so it must be removed as it accumulates. Turn turkey 90 degrees every 15 to 20 minutes, propping it up with glass measuring cups or similar microwave-proof stands. For extra color, the turkey can be basted with a mixture of 2 tablespoons melted butter and 2 heaping teaspoons paprika. Since cooking time varies with different ovens, it's best to consult manufacturer's directions. As a rule of thumb, a turkey cooked on medium high heat, in a 600- to 650-watt oven, should take 8 to 9 minutes a pound. At the end of the cooking time, remove turkey from oven and check with meat thermometer. It should read 15 to 20 degrees lower than 170 degrees for white meat and 180 degrees for dark. Cover turkey with foil for 20 minutes as it continues to cook outside the oven. Oven-roasting bags work very well in microwave ovens and turkeys cooked in these bags tend to be very moist and well-browned. If your oven has a removable glass tray, use this as the baking pan.

5. Roasted Upside Down. Some people try this method as a way to keep the breast meat juicy. However, it is difficult, since you have to turn a hot bird over to brown the top when cooking is two-thirds done. Another potential problem is that the skin has a tendency to stick to the rack (try a nonstick spray on the rack). If you believe, then go ahead; just be sure to insert a meat thermometer into the thigh and consider the bird done when it reaches 185 degrees.

6. Turkey Cooked in Parts. One method of assuring perfectly cooked dark meat and breast meat is to cook the parts separately. Once cooked, the parts can be arranged for the serving platter to look like a whole turkey. Calculate weights and cooking times and place the legs and breast in the oven so they will finish cooking at the same time. Dark meat takes 25 to 30 minutes per pound; white meat 15 to 20 minutes. Arrange the thighs and drumsticks in a roasting pan and cover lightly with aluminum foil and place in a 325-degree oven. At the appropriate time, rub breast in pan juices or butter, cover lightly with aluminum foil, and add to pan. Remove all aluminum foil 30 minutes before end of cooking time.

7. Turkey on the Rotisserie. Use only unstuffed turkey. Secure the neck skin with a skewer and the back the wings so they do not flop around. Tighten the rotating prongs. If the turkey does not rotate when the spit is turned, rearrange the tail and drumsticks to balance it. An 8- to 10-pound turkey will take from 3 1/2 to 4 hours.

8. Turkey on an Outdoor Grill. This method works only on a charcoal grill with a dome-like cover and adjustable air holes. Arrange briquettes in pyramid shape and ignite. When coals are ready, place a drip pan in center of fire bowl and arrange coals on both sides. Lightly grease the grate as well as the turkey. Place unstuffed turkey directly over drip pan and cover grill. Add additional charcoal every 45 minutes. An 8- to 12-pound turkey will be done in 2 to 2 1/2 hours depending on the weather and the wind. Aromatic wood chips that have been soaked in water for 30 minutes can be added to the fire for a smokier flavor.

9. Covered with Cheesecloth. This old-fashioned method eliminates the need for frequent basting and is especially popular for very large turkeys. Before the turkey is placed in the oven, soak a length of cheesecloth with 4-ounce melted butter and drape it over the breast. Baste the bird every 30 minutes. As the bird is basted, the butter is retained by the cheesecloth and doesn't drain off. This method should not be used with synthetics or containing chemicals. As the skin browns there is a tendency for the cloth to stick, so remove the cheesecloth about 30 minutes before the bird is done.

10. Topped with Bacon. A Southern favorite is to cover the turkey breast with strips of bacon. As the bacon cooks, its fat bastes the turkey. This also adds a smoky flavor to the drippings, which, in turn, affects the flavor of the gravy. Other Thanksgiving Truths:

Fresh vs. Frozen
According to Teresa Farney, director of consumer affairs for the National Turkey Federation, today's turkeys are bred differently from the ones 10 years ago. "Because of genetic engineering, they have more breast meat today," she said. And there is no difference between fresh and frozen turkeys, Farney said. "It's a matter of preference." Fresh turkeys should be ordered from butchers well in advance so you can get the size you want. According to the USDA, all fresh turkeys, unwrapped or in Cryovac bags, should be used within two days of purchase.

Don't wait until the night before Thanksgiving to buy a frozen turkey or you may find yourself eating out. Keep the original wrapper intact and allow one day of defrosting in the refrigerator for every 5 pounds of frozen turkey. If time is short, place frozen turkey, still in original wrapper, in sink or large roasting pan and slowly run cold water over the bird, turning every hour or so, and allow one day of defrosting in the refrigerator for every 5 pounds of frozen turkey. If time is short, see COOKING on Page E8

Cooking

 take the package of giblets out of the cavity (these are used in the gravy). Rinse turkey, pat dry and sprinkle with salt. If there are any pin feathers, remove them by squeezing between your thumbs or with a tweezers.

The Stuffing Controversy
 Though purists might argue the point vehemently, any dressing will taste just as good baked in a casserole alongside the bird. It will have a nice crunchy top and the messy job of removing stuffing from a hot turkey is eliminated. If you decide, on a dressing, do not stuff the bird until right before it goes into the oven. Fill the neck and body cavities loosely. More cooks are leaving their turkey untrussed, securing the stuffing by tucking in slices of bread to cover the body cavity opening or using loosely crumpled aluminum foil.

To add flavor to an unstuffed turkey, place a sliced onion, a quartered apple, a stalk of celery and a carrot inside the cavity. These will give the turkey a pleasant aroma and their juices will add to the pan drippings.
 Carol Owen, director of consumer service at Reynolds, has a new suggestion for the stuff-or-not-to-stuff controversy. She recommends placing the stuffing in an oven-cooking bag and placing the bag inside the turkey cavity. If 15 half-inch slits are made in both sides of the bag, she said, the turkey juices will flow into the stuffing as it cooks. "It's neater and easier to remove," she said.

The Basting Myth Shattered
 Today's turkeys do not require intensive basting; the skin is so tough that no fat or liquid could possibly penetrate it. The main purpose of basting is to avoid a bird with dry skin, and basting once or twice should be sufficient. Turkeys have a natural layer of fat covering the breast meat and this fat makes them self-basting. Frequent basting actually prolongs the cooking process because every time the oven door is opened, the temperature drops 25 degrees.

ULTIMATE RECIPE FOR TURKEY GRAVY
 Turkey drippings or 4 tablespoons butter or margarine
 6 tablespoons all-purpose flour
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 freshly ground black pepper
 3 cups turkey broth (see note)
 1 cup chopped giblets (see note)

In pan, heat fat (if using turkey drippings, make gravy right in baking pan). Add flour, salt and pepper. Stir until bubbly. Add broth slowly, stirring constantly, and cook until thickened. Stir in 1 cup chopped cooked giblets or gravy. Cook 2 to 3 minutes. Adjust seasoning. Makes 12 servings.

Note: Cook turkey broth the day before making gravy. Place turkey neck, heart and gizzard in saucepan.

Add 1 chopped onion, 1 chopped carrot, 1 stalk celery, spring parsley, bay leaf and several peppercorns. Cover with water and cook for two hours or until meat is tender. Add liver and simmer 5 minutes. Remove from heat and chill quickly. Remove congealed fat and strain broth. Chop giblets and neck meat.

THE ULTIMATE TURKEY STUFFING

1 1-pound loaf unaliced egg bread, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
 3 tablespoons butter
 1 cup chopped onion 4 ribs celery, chopped
 1 cup sliced mushrooms
 1 cup blanched and peeled chestnuts, chopped
 1/2 pound fresh pork sausage meat
 1 turkey liver, chopped
 1/2 teaspoon dried sage
 1/2 teaspoon dried thyme
 2 tablespoons fresh chopped parsley salt and pepper to taste
 3 cups chicken broth
 12 small oysters, with liquid
 1 egg, lightly beaten

1. Place bread cubes in a roasting pan and toast in a 250-degree oven until toasted, about 20 minutes, stirring occasionally.

2. In a large skillet, melt butter and saute onion, celery and mushrooms until onion is opaque. Stir in chestnuts. In a large bowl combine bread cubes and vegetables.

3. In same skillet brown sausage meat, breaking up meat with fork. Add liver and saute until it loses its color. Add to bread mixture along with sage, thyme, parsley, salt and pepper.

4. Heat the chicken broth and poach oysters. Add oysters to bowl along with egg. Stir in chicken broth.

5. Stuffing can be cooked inside turkey or baked in a pan at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Makes about 10 cups stuffing, or enough for 15-pound turkey.
