'Indirect' shipments OK'd, McFarlane says

By CLIFF HAAS
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Robert C. McFarlane, President Reagan's former national security adviser, contradicted previous accounts from administration officials on Monday, testifying under oath that the president approved an "indirect" shipment of arms to Iran in August 1985.

As the public accounting of the Reagan administration's foreign policy fiasco began on Capitol Hill, Secretary of State George P. Shultz — also under oath before the House Foreign Affairs Committee — denied involvement in the transfer of Iranian arms sale profits to Nicaraguan rebels, saying that "zero" knowledge of the "illegal" diversion of money.

Shultz, en route to London to consult with U.S. allies, later retracted his accusation that the diversion of some profits was an illegality, because "I don't know the facts and I don't know who did exactly what."

As Shultz and McFarlane appeared separately before the committee, the Justice Department released the text of its application to a federal appellate court panel in Washington, seeking appointment of an independent counsel to probe possible criminal activity in the affair.

The request raised the possibility that the granting of immunity from prosecution may be necessary to get to the bottom of the affair. It was not immediately clear when the three-member panel would act to name the counsel.

Marine Lt. Col. Olivier L. North, fired as a top National Security Council aide, and "other U.S. government officials" were mentioned as likely targets of the investigation.

And on the Senate side of the Capitol, Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said at the end of another day of closed-door hearings Monday "The puzzle's coming together and the result does not justify dismantling of the republic or (the removal of) the current occupant of the White House."

"If anyone expected that this committee was going to come up with the evidence to justify toppling this government or impeaching this president, they're looking at the wrong set of facts," Durenberger added. "There isn't that kind of evidence around this investigation."

McFarlane, who had testified last week in secret before Senate Intelligence Committee, testified publicly Monday before the House panel — saying the president gave his authorization for the indirect shipment of "small levels of arms to Iran for the purpose of strengthening elements against terrorism."

McFarlane did not mention any other country by name, but Israel has been identified as having sent American arms to Iran during the summer of 1985.

McFarlane said the president gave oral authorization for the transfer of U.S.-supplied weapons to Iran in August 1985.

The decision followed consultation and advice by the president with his Cabinet officers — the secretary of state, defense, the chief of staff, the director of central intelligence, myself," McFarlane said.

Asked to whom this oral authorization was given, McFarlane said, "To me and as well to his Cabinet officers in separate but related talks directly with them, either one-on-one or in groups."

He added that the committee could assume that every statutory member of the National Security Council was made aware of the authorization.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III, who made a preliminary inquiry into the matter at Reagan's request, said on Nov. 25, "Our information is that the president knew about it probably after the fact."

Asked whether the Israelis made the shipment on their own authority, Meese said, "That's my understanding, yes."

Last Friday, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said he had "not found anyone who has a recollection of the president approving" the Israeli shipment in advance. He declined at the time to say which officials he had talked with, or whether the president was among them.

Asked about the transfer of profits

McFarlane, who resigned as national security adviser in December 1985, said the president "did not know of and did not approve such actions."

When asked to speculate on who might have approved such action, McFarlane said, "I wasn't there."

Honduran troops hunt for stragglers

The Associated Press

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — Honduran troops, flown by U.S. helicopters, hunted Monday for stragglers from a Nicaraguan force that Honduran officers say crossed the border during the weekend and burned three deserted villages.

A military intelligence source said the troops also were acting as a guard against further incursions.

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said about 20 Honduran air force planes had bombed and strafed retreating Nicaraguans, who he said were pursued by three Honduran infantry battalions.

Nicaragua's left-wing Sandinista government denied that an incursion took place and claimed that warplanes from the Honduran side of the border bombed two villages in Nicaragua, killing 12 Honduran and two civilians and wounding 12 other people.

Honduran military officials said Sunday that 18 Honduran soldiers were wounded in intense fighting in the border area over the weekend and there were "heavy" casualties among the Nicaraguan invading force.

Sunday, Honduras estimated there were 700 Nicaraguan invaders but on Monday, a government statement said there were 2,500 invaders.

It said "troops of the Honduran army continue arriving in the theater of operations, located at the Jamastran airstrip, with the aim of dislodging some 2,500 elements of the Sandinista army that invaded Honduran territory."

In another development, U.S. Army Maj. Robert King said some 100 Florida National Guardsmen taking part in joint U.S.-Honduran military exercises were withdrawn from the border region and would soon return to the United States.

"My country desires to avoid an unusual situation that would help the propaganda campaign of Nicaragua," he said.

The Florida National Guardsmen began routine exercises Dec. 1 outside the town of Zamorano, some 20 miles east of Tegucigalpa and more than 85 miles from the Honduran-Nicaraguan border. The maneuvers were to end Saturday.

Last week Nicaraguan radio stations claimed the joint exercises were preparing for an invasion by American troops.

American and Honduran forces have conducted joint military maneuvers here over the past four years.

U.S. Embassy and Honduran military sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified for security reasons, said 14 U.S. helicopters ferried hundreds of Honduran troops to the border site on Sunday after the Nicaraguan force crossed into Honduras the day before.

The helicopters, all unarmed, provided transportation from Palmerola, an air base where U.S. forces are headquartered 30 miles northeast of Tegucigalpa, to an air strip called Jamastran, about 90 miles east of the capital, they said.

The Jamastran air strip is 30 miles from the border, in line with standing instructions to American troops to avoid possible clashes with the Nicaraguans.

No Americans were reported hurt.

Critic of hospital revamp quits staff

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A doctor who practiced "Magic Valley Regional Medical Center resigned Monday over differences concerning its proposed reorganization.

"I think we have reached the point where the relationship between me and the hospital administration is no longer tolerable," said Dr. Roy Shaub, a consistent critic of the reorganization. Concerns about influence exerted for today's election on the issue prompted his departure, he said.

"The last straw was when the information got back to me that someone in the (MVRMC) administration was asking whether I was going to force any of my employees not to vote for the hospital transfer," Shaub said. "I just felt I didn't have to endure this any longer."

MVRMC Administrator John Bingham said he was unaware of those questions being asked. He didn't feel the hospital's relationship with Shaub was that bad.

"To tell the truth, I was surprised by his resignation," Bingham said.

Shaub retaliated in his resignation letter to the alleged questioning of his tactics.

"I would also like to inform my critics at your medical center, that I have no intention of forcing any of my employees to vote against the restructuring of the hospital, nor do I intend to attach any filters to their paychecks or Christmas bonuses," Shaub wrote.

A message on Friday's MVRMC paycheck stubs read, "Vote yes for restructuring December 9! Your vote counts!"

An advisory election today will direct the Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners on whether to reorganize the hospital from county ownership to that of a non-profit corporation. The commissioners and the Hospital Board have argued that the reorganization is necessary for MVRMC to survive, by allowing the hospital to enter into lucrative ventures not allowed under county ownership.

Bingham said MVRMC has provided information about the transfer to its employees throughout the push to implement a proposed change in ownership.

"All along, we have been giving our employees all the information

Many Americans share opinion of Robertson on divine guidance

By ROBERT FURLOW
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A new survey of religious attitudes shows there is little point in attacking or ridiculing a political candidate just because he says he is being guided by God, pollster George Gallup Jr. suggested Monday.

Many Americans have felt the same divine guidance, so "the public understands when a leader says God has spoken to him or guided him to take a specific course of action," Gallup said.

The new poll by the Gallup Organization was sponsored by the Christian Broadcasting Network, whose founder, the Rev. Pat Robertson, has said he will run for the Republican presidential nomination if he feels confident enough next year.

Some opponents have made television evangelist Robertson a target of satire or criticism because of his statements that he was being guided by God in his decision whether or not to run and that his praying had helped keep a hurricane away from the Virginia shore where his operation is based.

However, Gallup said in an interview, his new poll found that 69 percent of adult Americans questioned said God has led or guided them in making decisions and 59 percent said God has spoken directly to them.

Neither Robertson nor politics in general are mentioned in the actual survey, and Gallup said his organization is strictly neutral and doesn't do political polling.

However, when asked about possible political significance of the survey, Gallup said, "The public is perhaps more open to a person saying he is specially being guided from God than the press has indicated, and not just in terms of Pat's statements about hurricanes and so forth but also in a broad sense."

"It strikes a responsive chord, not just in terms of Pat Robertson but in any area of life — business, cultural, athletic. The public doesn't reject that concept, that's what these figures say in me basically," Gallup said.

Also of possible significance to Robertson was the survey's finding that 31 percent of adult Americans identify themselves as "born-again" or "evangelical" Christians.

Such people, the survey said, are significantly more likely than the sample as a whole to live in the South, to be black or Hispanic, to have less than a high school education, to earn less than $20,000 a year, to be Protestants, and to identify with the Republican Party.

More broadly, the survey said 64 percent of adult Americans believe in God or some universal spirit, and 44 percent believe that "God is a heavenly father who watches over us and can be reached by our prayers."

Driver suffers stroke, taxi plows into crowd, injures 13

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — A taxicab ran a red light when the driver suffered a stroke and plowed into a crowd of pedestrians on a downtown street at lunchtime Monday, injuring 13 other people and 13 other people, two critically, police said.

"I was walking across the street with the rest of the people when I heard screams. I heard 'bump, bump.' I turned around. There were bodies all over the place. It was terrible, ugly," said Carmen Martovitch, 25, a downtown office worker.

The taxicab ran a red light, struck the pedestrians at the corner of State and Monroe streets in the Loop and then hit an unmarked police car parked in front of the Palmer House hotel, according to Patrolman James Miller and witnesses.

The impact of the crash left the unmarked squad car partially on the sidewalk. Its rear end destroyed.

The injured were transported to four hospitals.

Hospital authorities later determined that the driver, Willie Evans, 56, suffered a stroke although they did not know whether he was stricken before or after the accident.

"Our first CAT scans were inconclusive because he kept moving around compulsively," said Greg Clayton, assistant director of nursing at Mercy Hospital. "The second set of scans confirmed stroke and internal bleeding."

Clayton said Evans was admitted to the hospital's intensive-care unit in critical condition.

Abdul Rashid, whose cab was parked at the Palmer House and was dented slightly by the collision, said the driver apparently "couldn't control the cab."

Rashid, 49, and Nathan Louis, 67, of Los Angeles, said they helped police lift the taxicab that ran the light and remove a man who was pinned underneath.

"He was calm and collected, but he was in bad shape," said Louis.

Evans was cited for running a red light, striking pedestrians in a roadway and damaging city property, said Police Capt. John Colter. Officers added, though, that such citations were routine in the case of a major accident, and charges against Evans might be dropped if it is determined that a stroke or unforeseen seizure caused him to lose control of his cab.

Seven patients, including a family of three, were being treated at Northwestern Memorial Hospital, said spokeswoman Lida Vaughn.

One man, Patrick Conway, 31, was reported in critical condition with head and leg injuries, she said.

Three of the injured, including a man in critical condition and one in serious condition, were being treated at Cook County Hospital, said spokeswoman Claude Brandon.

Three women were being treated at University of Illinois Hospital, but their injuries were not serious, said spokesman Mike Maggio.

Senate committee to have unprecedented subpoena power

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Senate select committee that will investigate the Iran arms affair will be given unprecedented power to subpoena top-secret documents from the National Security Council, according to legislation being drafted by the Democratic leadership.

The committee will receive broad authority never previously given to a Senate select investigating committee to "enforce" the president's claim of executive privilege over pertinent documents held by the White House National Security Council staff, sources said.

Senate aides familiar with the draft legislation said that the committee, whose members are expected to be appointed as early as next Monday, will be empowered to subpoena witnesses, grant immunity from prosecution in exchange for testimony and take possession of highly classified materials bearing on national security issues.

The legislation, which is still the subject of negotiations between Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia and Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas, is expected to be passed by the Senate when Congress reconvenes Jan. 6. Sources said the bill, as currently drafted, will require the committee to make its final report within eight or nine months. Unlike normal legislation that requires concurrence in the House and signature of the president before it becomes law, this rules-setting legislation need only win approval of the Senate. It then will govern the procedures of the select committee that will investigate the Iran-contras scandal.

Meanwhile, Sen. Howell T. Heflin, D-Ala., one of the leading candidates to chair the select committee, acknowledged that he would discuss the matter later this week with Byrd.

In its probe, sources said, the Senate will contend that it has the right to subpoena White House documents which are almost always protected by executive privilege. The Senate will argue that its investigation centers on covert activities by NSC staff members and that Congress has the power to oversee covert activities by the government. Although Dole is expected to object to some aspects of the Democrats' draft legislation to create the Senate select committee, aides said that the Republican leader supports the notion that the committee should have the power to subpoena NSC documents. Dole has told his staff that he does not expect the president to assert a claim of executive privilege to impede the Senate investigation.

and it's out of place for me to speculate." In related news Monday, ABC News reported that a Swiss bank, Credit Suisse, has frozen the account of an American company, Lake Resources Inc. The network said it learned that Lake was named on account used in transfer of money from Iran in the payment of weapons.

ABC also reported that Iran paid a total of $34,050,000 for arms, of which $12 million was passed on to the U.S. The remaining money was put into the Lake Resources account. The network said the account was managed by retired Pentagon official Gen. Richard Secord, who worked with North.

During closed-door testimony to the House Foreign Affairs Committee, McFarlane identified by name the principals he dealt with in Iran, committee chairman Dante Fascell, D-Fla., said late Monday. But Fascell declined to make those names public.

Fascell also said that Vice Adm. John Poindexter, who succeeded Casey as Reagan's national security adviser, had asked that television cameras and radio microphones be barred from the Foreign Affairs Committee room during Poindexter's testimony, scheduled for this morning.

In an airborne press conference, Shultz said CIA director William Casey did Poindexter, who was then national security adviser, had told him in May that the United States had ceased shipping arms to Iran even though the controversial military airlift was still going on.

Shultz stopped short of accusing Casey and Poindexter of lying to him. "I don't know what happened here," Shultz said. "Maybe they had told them to 'stand down' and then maybe it just got started again. I don't know, I don't have the information."

An ex-Marine, Shultz used the military term "stand down," which generally means suspended or discontinued.

NBC News reported that Casey struck back at his critics Monday, insisting that neither he nor the CIA had done anything wrong in the Iran-CIA operations. Casey told his harshest critics from Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., who has called for the CIA director's resignation.

"I'm deeply disappointed that a U.S. senator of Diego's stature would have seen fit to rush to judgment without the benefit of the information which I and other CIA officers are making available to our oversight committees," Casey told the House Defense Appropriations subcommittee.

But Rep. Toby Roth, R-Wis., referring to Casey's agreement to testify before the House Foreign Affairs Committee Wednesday on condition it be behind closed doors, said, "If we have a scandal like this, and the CIA director won't come up here (and testify in public), we need another CIA director."

The Senate Intelligence Committee began its second day of closed-door hearings Monday on the Iran-CIA connection. Robert W. Owen, a conservative activist who reportedly assisted North in contacts with Contra-rebels and private individuals sympathetic to their cause, declining to testify.

McFarlane undertook a secret mission to Iran after he left the White House, and in a prepared statement he submitted to the Foreign Affairs Committee, but did not read, McFarlane said he was advised while returning from Tehran at the end of last May "that the U.S. government had applied part of the proceeds from arms transfers carried out in 1986, to support the Contras."

"I received no details," McFarlane added. "In context, I took it from the summary reference that his action was a matter of approved policy sanctioned by higher authority."

"It did not seem to me at the time a matter where the authority did not rest with me," McFarlane said in answer to a question.

Shultz, meanwhile, declared: "My role in that was zero, I knew nothing about it until it came out. . . . From what I have seen and what the attorney general has said, something took place that would be illegal." McFarlane said a key architect of the initiative to open contacts to public figures. In Iran, opened his appearance with a lengthy, scholarly rationale for seeking improved relations with Iran.

In his prepared statement about the contacts with Iran, McFarlane said that by November 1985 "it seemed to me that the purpose of the undertaking was not being fulfilled."

"We were not dealing with the Iranians directly at all and such dealings as were taking place were being skewed toward the hostages alone," McFarlane said.

With the president's agreement, a meeting was arranged in London on Dec. 9, 1985, to deal directly with the Iranians. McFarlane said that during the meeting — acting on instructions approved by the president — he made clear the United States remained open to discussing a political agreement with "competent Iranian officials" and that "we would not engage in arms shipments nor (would we) encourage others to do so."

He said he was told by the Iranian delegate at the meeting that his superiors, while willing to engage in political discussions, "could not afford to take these risks under present circumstances." McFarlane said he was told they could do so, only if strengthened by arms shipments.

McFarlane said he returned to Washington, informed the president he had read and followed the instructions, "and that there was no basis for carrying the matter further."

"I then left the government assuming the matter was closed," he said.

Shultz and McFarlane testified during the first of three days of hearings in the House committee scheduled.

Shultz said flatly he was "opposed and skeptical" about the president's decision to sell arms to Iran although he supported an effort to improve relations with that country.

Dr. Allan Frost, president of the MVRMC medical staff, said staff change through a medical executive committee to a quarterly staff meeting and then are approved by the Hospital Board. In the case of a resignation, if the person is intent on leaving, that request is honored, he said.

Sarcasm also appeared in Shaub's letter to MVRMC administration in reference to today's transfer election. "Finally, the thing that I feel most about is the fact that I will be unable to attend the victory

"I expect some of my patients will leave, but I think most will stay with me," he said.

Bainbridge draws life term

BOISE (AP) — Randall Bainbridge, 32, again has been ordered to serve a fixed life imprisonment term for the 1981 slaying of a Garden City gas station attendant.

Fourth District Judge Robert Rowett on Monday ordered life imprisonment, without the possibility of parole. Bainbridge was one of two men convicted of the April 6, 1981, slaying of Dixie Wilson, the mother of five children, in a bungled robbery attempt.

The other, Lacy Sivak, is appealing his death sentence.

In a precedent-setting ruling, the Idaho Supreme Court overturned the original conviction of Bainbridge because police used hypnosis to enhance the testimony of key witnesses.

But in a retrial, Bainbridge was convicted again in September of this year, and Rowett's fixed-life sentence was the same as the original one.

GOP stalwarts eye open seat

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Former Republican state Sen. Dan Watkins and defeated GOP congressional challenger Mel Richardson are among at least five eastern Idaho Republicans expressing interest in the Idaho House seat left vacant by last week's resignation of veteran Republican Linden Bateman of Idaho Falls.

Others who have indicated they might want the seat are Greg Crockett, who lost the May primary to Bateman; Con Mahoney, also a primary election loser to now-Sen. John Hansen, R-Idaho Falls; and Dwight Johnson, who worked for Richardson during his unsuccessful campaign to unseat Democratic Congressman Richard Stallings.

Bateman, who was just elected to his sixth term in the House last month, resigned last Friday after failing to obtain the chairmanship of the House Resources and Conservation Committee.

Auto dealer ordered to pay

BOISE (AP) — A U.S. District Court jury here has ruled that a Canyon County automobile dealer must pay the $111,184 awarded an Oregon woman following a 1983 traffic accident in which she was injured.

A jury last week ruled accepted an argument by Susan E. Harrison, Ontario, that Happy Day Ford, Inc., Caldwell, told the purchaser of a vehicle that he was covered for seven days under a company liability insurance policy.

Ms. Harrison sued Dean Evans, Ontario, after a 1983 traffic accident near La Grande, Ore.

She claimed that Evans purchased a vehicle from Happy Day Ford a couple of days before the accident, and was told by the company that he could drive the vehicle home even though he had no liability insurance of his own, because he was covered by the dealer's policy.

Ms. Harrison and Evans went on a trip a couple of days later, and Ms. Harrison was injured.

In an Oregon lawsuit, a jury awarded her $147,327 from Evans but ruled she was 25 percent negligent, reducing the award to $111,184.

DeLeon receives prison term

AMERICAN FALLS (AP) — An eastern Idaho man has been sentenced to a fixed term of 15 years in prison for the slaying of a farm worker last May.

Jose DeLeon, 29, had pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of voluntarily manslaughter this fall after originally being charged with first-degree murder in the slaying of Tomas Bravo, 41.

DeLeon and Mauro Vasquez, 26, were both originally charged with first-degree murder in the Bravo death, which authorities said occurred after an argument involving all three and a fourth man over the use of a cassette tape player.

Bravo apparently shot and killed the fourth man, Hilario Torres, 24, before he was stabbed several times. Both bodies were found May 10 in a farm laborers trailer in the Arbon Valley.

Welfare examiners want system fixed

BOISE (AP) — State welfare eligibility examiners say the new computer system for delivering benefits to welfare families is in a terrible mess, and they're getting the blame for it.

But Health and Welfare Director Rose Bowman said Monday the problems are being worked out, and the system is improving every day.

While she wasn't ready to say there will be no future problems in the Eligibility Programs Integrated Computer System, EPICS, Ms. Bowman said by February, all foreseeable problems should have been encountered and corrected.

"By Feb. 15, I'm going to breathe a lot easier," she said, "it's going to run better all the time."

"At the same, Warren Lundquist, business agent for the Idaho Service Employees' Union, presented regional Health and Welfare officials with petitions from about 100 eligibility examiners.

The petitions, from H&W offices at Boise and Caldwell, urged the state to put the resources necessary into solving the problems which have created backlogs in delivery of welfare benefits since November.

Although Ms. Bowman said the problems are being worked out, Lundquist said the people on the firing line, the eligibility examiners, said they feel the problems are no better than last month, when they first surfaced.

Ms. Bowman said the complaints from the eligibility examiners may stem from the fact they're working with computers for the first time, and may not understand the entire system.

She said as of last week, her agency has taken a different approach to the problem.

Instead of trying to get welfare benefits out, and solve programming and other problems that crop up in the computer system, first priority now will be given to getting the benefits out. Problem-solving will take lower priority, she said.

Most of the funding for the $8 million EPICS system came from the federal government. It's designed to streamline the process of determining eligibility and getting benefits out to recipients.

Court rejects appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court says it will not accept an appeal from an Idaho man convicted of first-degree murder in a Canyon County slaying.

The court notified Idaho officials on Monday it has refused to consider an appeal filed by attorneys for Michael Shawn Scroggins, who was 18 at the time he was charged in the rape-slaying of Mondt Lenger, 13, in 1983.

That leaves Scroggins' conviction intact. The Idaho Supreme Court earlier upheld Scroggins' conviction.

but overturned the death sentence ordered by 3rd District Judge Edward Lodge.

The Supreme Court ruled that since Scroggins was an 18-year-old below-average intelligence at the time, and there was evidence that he only indirectly took part in the girl's slaying, it was not appropriate to sentence Scroggins to the same penalty as a codefendant convicted of killing the girl.

The Idaho Supreme Court ordered Lodge to resent Scroggins to life imprisonment, but Lodge refused and withdrew from the case, saying he was convinced that the death penalty was appropriate.

Idahoan on panel

BOISE (AP) — An employee of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission has been named to a national committee to set up a joint federal-state monitoring system of radioactive waste shipments.

Bob Horton of the PUC's Regulated Carrier Division has been appointed to the High Level Radioactive Task Force by its chairman, Clark Morensen of Illinois.

The task force will develop a national standard for waste transportation, including a model for an inspection system of interstate shipments.

EPA seeking penalties against plant

BOISE (AP) — The federal Environmental Protection Agency is asking for penalties up to $10,000 a day against a Nampa meat packing plant it alleges violated water pollution laws by dumping material into Indian Creek.

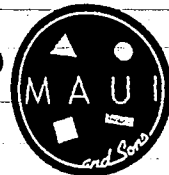

It asks a permanent injunction against the company and civil penalties of up to $10,000 per day.

Limiting use of foreign language a serious mistake

E. Richard Brown

With three-fourths of California's voters casting their ballots in favor of Proposition 63, public officials may think that they have a mandate to eliminate languages other than English from public communication. But in at least some areas of government activity, that would be a serious mistake — and one that voters may not have understood.

Proposition 63 allows anyone in the state to sue government officials and agencies to block any activity that "diminishes or ignores the role of English as the common language." That sounds innocuous, but unless it is clarified by the Legislature, there's nothing to stop anyone from trying to keep foreign languages out of public and public health communications. The possibility is not far-fetched. Many California counties deny low-cost or free health care to indigent undocumented immigrants, even if they must go without necessary medical care.

Successful health promotion and disease prevention programs require the communication of information that can be easily understood and acted upon by all groups. According to the 1980 census, 1.25 million Californians cannot speak or understand English; they are probably much more than that.

Communicable diseases do not respect language differences. They can spread from those who do not speak English to those who do, and vice versa. Some immigrants, both documented and undocumented, come from areas in which living and working conditions have bred higher rates of tuberculosis than prevail in the United States. Some of them face living and working conditions in this country that exacerbate their vulnerability to this disease. Who can deny the importance of identifying persons with active tuberculosis and treating them? The same can be said for sexually transmitted diseases.

To fulfill their responsibility, public health officials rely heavily on printed information and education in languages that people can easily understand, posted in places where there may be concentrations of infected people.

Children and babies especially need the protections that public health programs provide. Nutrition education and food supplements for poor families may be essential to ensure optimum growth of children. Safety and health education is important to prevent accidental poisoning of children by household products, injuries from falls and burns, electrocution from appliances and adverse reactions from many drugs. All these efforts would be far less effective if they were not communicated in a language clearly understood by parents.

Twin Falls golf course policy explained

Thomas J. Courtney

This letter is in response to Larry Hovey's article on Sunday, Nov. 23, concerning the management of the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course. The purpose of this letter is to clarify the city council's and Golf Advisory Board's policies concerning the financial management of the course and to correct misrepresentations made by Mr. Hovey.

First it is the policy of the city to manage the golf course on a self-sufficient basis. We expect that the revenues from the course will be sufficient to cover operating and capital costs. Not too many years ago, the course was subsidized with property tax. In recent years, this has not been the case.

Keep in mind that weather in southern Idaho can have a large impact on course revenues. One or two good years can be offset by lost revenues from a wet, cold spring. Effective management must be based on multi-year planning in order to maintain self-sufficiency over a period of time.

Second, it is the policy of the city to set fees which are competitive with neighboring courses and which allow a wide range of citizens to participate. In other words, we try to maintain rates as low as possible while covering costs.

the long term.

Briefly, lets put these policies into perspective. Last year the revenues generated from the course where $173,250. This was a record setting revenue figure caused primarily by a warm, dry spring. Golf course operating expenses totaled $105,937. Capital expenses in the form of a principal and interest payment to the general fund for the new building totaled $39,000. This leaves a surplus of approximately $28,313 which will be applied against the building principle. Contrary to Mr. Hovey's statement, the surplus was not $50,000. With regards to the building, the construction expenses were paid with general fund reserves. Each year for the next 8-12 years the golf fund will make a payment to the general fund to reimburse this expense. The golf fund will pay interest at the average rate earned on investments by the general fund. This protects the interests of the taxpayers who do not play golf while giving the golfing community a new clubhouse facility. Our commitment to the golf players was to repay the principle on the building as soon as possible and to reduce fees accordingly. We intend to keep this commitment.

Mr. Hovey's article omitted one very important issue — green fees. While we have not surveyed neighboring courses lately, we have been told by our competitors that our fees are significantly lower than competing courses. Even with the relatively small increase adopted by the council last week, our fees will still be lower than the competition. This is a practice we hope to continue because we believe a municipal course should be affordable for as many people as possible.

Finally, we believe the condition of the course speaks for itself. Don Hamblin, Kevin Packard and other employees of the club have done an excellent job of maintaining the course in a good, playable condition. We are also pleased that we have been able to improve the course with automatic sprinkler systems and a new clubhouse. Our recent fee increase will be dedicated to replacement of equipment. Equipment is necessary to maintain the condition of the course. The new fee will allow us to replace the equipment on a scheduled rather than breakdown basis. We believe this is in the best interest of the course and those who use it.

In conclusion we thank you for your article. It has given us an opportunity to tell our side of the story.

Thomas J. Courtney is city manager of Twin Falls.

Letters/ Contras are terrorists funded by the United States

War, death and moral decay

It happened twice on national television. President Reagan came to the word "Contra," and gagged. He said, "I'm not sure I understand that." He then said, "The forces opposing the Sandinistas."

The reason was simple. The Contra. Those blood-thirsty mercenaries hired by the CIA to conduct a war in Mr. Reagan's name, have a bad reputation. Once again, their very presence speaks of death and moral decay. In behalf of the Contra, the shadowy people held up in the National Security Council office in the White House basement have been making deals with Iran. Now the news is out, oozing corruption foul enough to cling even to a felon president.

Or maybe Mr. Reagan gagged because he read the article that appeared in the Dec. 1 issue of the Times-News, describing a Contra attack on a Nicaraguan farm cooperative. The victims were only farmers who wanted to make a living for the families. Very much like the farmers in Magic Valley. Crops were destroyed, houses burned. Three women and a dozen children sat in a terrified huddle, and told about six men taken prisoner, and three young women. Any guess about what happened to the young women?

Could someone please explain to me what such a brutal outrage has to do with "opposing the Sandinistas"? The Contras are terrorists, pure and simple. Paid for by the U.S. Trained by the U.S. Are the people behind such things any less guilty than the Libyan or Syrian terrorist-masters who send maniacs out to hijack airplanes and bomb restaurants? Mr. Reagan wants to stop terrorism. Does he plan to raid the White House basement?

An Old Testament prophet might watch the troubles besetting the administration; and look toward heaven with a gentle smile. Sometimes things even themselves out. Small consolation for three terrified young women who learned all too well what the Contras had in mind.

Evolution not a proven fact

Today's Sunday edition has this front-page headline: "Supreme Court set to hear argument on the evolution case." A law requiring schools to teach "creationism" alongside "evolution" goes before the U.S. Supreme Court this week. "The parentheticals are mine for the following reasons:

1. There are two sides to the question of beginnings, both lacking final, irrevocable proof. No one witnesses the beginning of life on earth. Scientists remain at odds at the interpretations given many disturbing facts — which lead to opposite conclusions. The final answer on true or false is not in, so why call evolution by its proper name while calling the opposing theory an ISM?

Definition, ISM (Webster's Collegiate Dictionary) 1A, act, practice, process; 1B, Manner of action or behavior characteristic of a person or thing.

Creationists act and practice by a set of proofs available from the same source as evolutionists: nature and the record left on and in the surface of our planet — they are characterized by their findings — also the same as evolutionists. Why creationism and not evolutionism? There is a bias here.

2. The article by David McCormick states: The ACLU states the issue is the same that confounded John Scopes "who argued in 1925 to challenge a state law prohibiting the teaching of Charles Darwin's theory that man evolved from lower life forms over millions of years." This is an error. The issue here is the denial of man's rights to look at and study all proofs found to date — for either theory — neither of which has been scientifically proven. Fact is, the so vaunted "academic freedom" to look at any proofs for creation has been denied the students in our schools. Evolution and creation both require a certain amount of faith, dogma, or religious premises, irrevocable final proof lacking. Science not based on absolute proof must

Man acting like children

I am certainly glad that President Reagan isn't a Democrat. We'd never hear the last of it in this locality, as it is you hear very little about this issue. It is quite laughable. Now Symms comes out with the idea that Senator (Laxalt) needs to be in Reagan's place, as if that would help.

Well, it seems we haven't killed enough of our wildlife to satisfy some landowners, we're having another archery season, their wintering areas. I would like to see how you can keep the animals out of landowners places when hunters are on "their" wintering grounds.

I'm hoping that all our poachers enjoyed themselves. It wouldn't surprise me if more animals were taken than poachers than were taken legally.

It is going to be quite interesting when the hunters start squaking about the fact that the deer and elk are no longer here to hunt. But after the complete misuse of hunting privileges and the contempt the Fish and Game has shown for our wildlife this year, it is very doubtful that it will be any wild to be found. They are following the demise of our pheasants and salmon and can never be replaced by artificial means. If you don't believe me, read the article in last Thursday's paper written by Mike Harrop.

How lucky the conservationists were not to have David Levy elected governor, he had already, through political arm twisting, had the BLM state director summoned to Washington, D.C., to force the proposal building of the Egin-Hamer Road through vital elk wintering grounds. It would appear the BLM, Forest Service, etc. are making a very definite push to remove all habitat for wildlife either through roads, mining or lumbering interests. Isn't the four lane highway they are starting in Jerome interesting. It will be more so when it goes into the Stanley area. I wonder how many more of our wildlife they can manage to do this to. Our coyote hunting buddies are at it again. Poor souls have to have that pelt money to Correct tax, spend policies

The Idaho socialists have cleverly outwitted the conservatives. They have used the news media to plant seeds of doubt about legislators with proven records of loyalty to sound, conservative, principles. They then have provided candidates with a firm commitment to uphold enlargement of socialist governmental practices, posing as conservatives.

With the support of many educators, news media, and using their votes in the primary to cross lines, their candidates have successfully gained the seats held by the conservatives. The result will be further erosion of quality government, and infusion of more and more taxes.

The receipt of 1986 tax notices is infuriating everyone. It also has imposed hardship on many who are already distressed financially. How could our public officials even dare to impose gigantic increases in property taxes when farms are operating in the red, owners of income properties are struggling to survive, and few people have the funds to pay the already overburdening taxes, which exceed yesterday's mortgage payments?

When one analyzes the property tax, it is easy to see that we are now subject to two percent or three percent of the fair market value of our property, not one percent. While property values have dropped 25 to 50 percent, which should have caused taxes to reflect these fallen values, our irresponsible public spenders have raised many taxes 25 percent in one year, and with depression amongst us. Shame on them.

It was the intent of the framers of the Constitution that only property owners should vote. Why should anyone who is not subject to paying, have the privilege of obligating someone else? Voting by the non tax payer should stop. Are you aware that the state Legislature is starting to fill up with teachers, who are receiving full teaching salaries while sitting in the legislative sessions, plus the salaries given them as legislators? Have you considered that their votes and influence conflict with their position as teachers. When they vote yes for all the increases and advantages being given to the educators, we should realize that they will be on the receiving end of the pay checks. It is called, "Conflict of Interest."

Capital punishment is wrong

I strongly concur with Governor Anaya of New Mexico in substituting life imprisonment for capital punishment. One reason I government wrongs do not make a right. The survivors of the victims of crime who seek the death penalty for the criminal are themselves propagating a crime. Capital punishment is revenge refigured in the pillars of our laws and therefore an abuse of power by a select few.

More than likely, the proponents of capital punishment also believe in social Darwinism (survival of the fittest). In justify their war-thirsty lives, in the overthrow of the Sandinista government of Nicaragua to forcefully spread their dogmatic political ideologies, and are professed anti-abortionists to masquerade their growing hate with love.

There is a trending American consensus to support every one of these beliefs. Yet they conflict because how can a person truly believe in the survival of the fittest while fighting a very fit people like the Sandinistas? How can one fight a legitimate government wrongs do not make a right. Others to fight us? How can one person advocate against abortion on the grounds of taking innocent lives while voting for the death squads of President Reagan?

Clearly, anyone who supports all these beliefs are the friends of greed and lust. They are the enemies of fairness and the love that has moved life throughout the ages. Governor Anaya has taken the risk of being ridiculed but at least he found his heart is guided by love.

Shultz says ambassador to Lebanon acted behind his back

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz told Congress on Monday that the U.S. ambassador to Lebanon — acting behind Shultz's back — discussed with White House officials the use of arms sales to Iran "as an inducement" for the release of U.S. hostages.

Ambassador John H. Kelly, a 21-year veteran of the foreign service, notified the department over the weekend that between July and November he had been in private communication with White House officials about "hostage negotiations with Iran." Shultz told the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

"I am, to put it mildly, shocked to learn this," said Shultz, who for weeks has been trying to distance himself and his department from involvement in the transfer of arms to Iran and diversion of the proceeds to U.S.-backed rebels in Nicaragua.

Shultz repeated assertions that his awareness of the fund diversion was "zero" and that his receipt of information about the Iranian end of the affair were only "fragmentary and sporadic."

His testimony, however, revealed for the first time that at least one department official — Kelly — could have had more than a passing knowledge of what was going on through briefings on the arms deals

JOHN KELLY
Involved in Iran negotiations with White House operatives.

Kelly was ordered back to Washington "to be available to the FBI and other appropriate investigative bodies," Shultz said. The ambassador also was to meet with his superiors at the State Department, although Shultz departed for Brussels after the hearing Monday to hold his annual year-end talks with Western European foreign ministers.

In Beirut, a Lebanese official close to the U.S. Embassy said Kelly left Lebanon on Sunday enroute to the United States.

At the White House, spokesman Larry Speakes said President Reagan "didn't know about Kelly's role and that the episode was a surprise to the White House."

Shultz said he learned of back-channel communications when Kelly responded to a State Department telegram sent to embassies asking them what they knew about the Iranian arms dealings. The query was prompted by a Nov. 23 Justice Department request for all U.S. agencies to provide information useful in a probe of the affair.

Shultz told the committee the ambassador responded by saying, "I met in Washington in July or August, 1986, with (former national security adviser) Robert McFarlane, who briefed me on the hostage negotiations involving arms to Iran as an inducement" to free the hostages.

"Between the dates of Oct. 30 and Nov. 4, 1986, I had numerous conversations with Lt. Col. Oliver North and Richard V. Secord relating to the hostage negotiations with Iran," Shultz quoted Kelly as saying.

"During that period I received and sent numerous 'back channel' messages to and from the White House, Admiral (John) Poindexter, concerning the hostage negotiations. Those messages were transmitted and received in what is referred to as the 'privacy channel,' using CIA communications facilities," Shultz further quoted Kelly as saying.

All those mentioned by Kelly have been identified as the prime movers of the Iranian deal. Poindexter succeeded McFarlane as President Reagan's national security adviser and has since resigned in the flap over the Iranian arms deal. North, an National Security Council staff operative has been fired from his post.

Retired Air Force Gen. Richard V. Secord is a private businessman who has advised the Pentagon and has been identified by congressional investigators as playing a role in funneling arms sales profits to Nicaraguan rebels.

Shultz said that following routine practices, Kelly's messages were destroyed in Beirut. "I would assume that copies may be available at CIA headquarters or at the (White House) situation room."

At the time Kelly said he received his briefings on the situation from McFarlane, he was preparing to take up his post in Beirut, arriving there on Aug. 27. Since the seizing of U.S. hostages began in Lebanon in 1984, the embassy has been in the forefront of efforts to secure their release.

Kelly's response to Shultz, using the term "negotiations" to describe the effort to win the hostages' release, was in stark contrast to the Reagan administration's assertions for two years that it would never bargain with terrorists.

A State Department official, one of several who discussed the affair on condition they not be identified, said the department was looking in to whether previous ambassadors to Lebanon knew about the affair. Kelly's predecessor was Reginald Bartholomew, another career diplomat.

Meese raises immunity possibility

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese III is raising the possibility that immunity from prosecution might be granted to some people in the Iran-Contra scandal threatening to engulf the Reagan administration.

Meese brought up the subject in a broadly worded, four-page application calling for an independent counsel to investigate the activities of "Lt. Col. Oliver L. North," other unidentified U.S. officials and other individuals dating as far back as January 1985.

The document, filed last Thursday with the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington, contains no details of the controversy. The application was released Monday by the Justice Department with the consent of the court. The only proposed investigative target named in Meese's document is North, who was fired from his National Security Council job. The application makes no reference to former national security advisers John Poindexter and Robert McFarlane, both of whom were aware of diversion of money for the Contras.

McFarlane has testified at length before congressional committees investigating the Iranian arms sale and transfer of funds, while both North and Poindexter refused to answer questions, invoking their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

Meese's document, unlike some previous requests for appointment of independent counsels, cites no specific criminal laws that might have been violated. Meese's application mentions a "diversion" of funds, but does not state that it was in connection with the Contras. "A complete investigation of all information in this matter will in all likelihood require the issuance of subpoenas, consideration of granting immunity to certain individuals and the exercise of other customary prosecutorial powers," said the application.

He proposed that an independent counsel be given flexibility to investigate "any and all violations of U.S. law" regarding North, other U.S. officials or other individuals dating "from January 1985, the exact date being unknown, to the present."

Buchanan criticizes Republicans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Patrick J. Buchanan, the feisty White House communications chief, blasted Republicans on Monday for deserting President Reagan over the Iran-Contra scandal, saying that with a few exceptions "the whole damn pack has headed for the tall grass."

Buchanan also compared Oliver North, a White House aide who was fired in the wake of the scandal, with Americans who have broken the law for good cause over the course of history and eventually were regarded as heroes.

Buchanan voiced his complaints in a column published in the Washington Post in the aftermath of widespread criticism from GOP leaders over the sale of American weapons to Iran and the skimming of profits for the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

"Is this how they repay the leader who has done more for the Republican Party than any American since Theodore Roosevelt, who brought us back from Watergate to become the party of vision and opportunity, the party of Middle America and the young," Buchanan wrote.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said the article had not been cleared in advance by the White House. "I don't have any comment on it," Speakes said.

For weeks, Reagan has been hammered by GOP demands for the firing or resignations of White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan and CIA Director William Casey.

Demos unanimously choose Wright new House speaker

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats on Monday selected Jim Wright of Texas as their majority leader for the past decade, to become the chamber's 48th speaker. Wright accepted the unanimous nomination of his party colleagues with a promise to move quickly a legislative agenda that will include — but not be dominated by — investigation of the Reagan administration arms sales. Democrats "hope to demonstrate to the American people... that we Democrats have our act together, and that we can govern," Wright said. The speaker of the House holds a constitutional position, in line of succession to the presidency after the vice president. Wright's nomination requires ratification by the full House on Jan. 6, when the 100th Congress convenes.

Chamber's 48th speaker

Democrats will hold a 258-177 majority, and party allegiance in such a vote is nearly absolute. The Democrats, in their open party caucus, also unanimously chose Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., currently the majority whip, to move up to become majority leader. Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., was picked as House Republicans, meanwhile, reinstated their seasoned leadership team of Minority Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois and Minority Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi. "Wright said the House will move quickly to establish a special committee "to get all the facts of the Iranian arms misadventure on the table." But Wright said Congress should not allow the Iran fiasco "to preoccupy us, nor to paralyze us, nor to distract us from the important work we have to do." Wright promised speedy action in January to again pass the clean-water legislation — vetoed by President Reagan after the 99th Congress adjourned, and said a highway construction bill was also on the early agenda. He said achievable objectives for the new Congress included legislation to cut the trade and budget deficits, welfare reform and more help for farmers. Wright, known for his spicing his syrupy rhetoric with flashes of anger, told the Democrats they were doing well by teaming him with the cautious Foley.

"Sometimes I'm too prone to shoot from the hip," Wright said. Foley "makes me pause before stepping in a gopher hole," he said. Soon after the caucus recessed, Wright told reporters he was ready to use a tax increase if necessary, and slow the military buildup, to help tackle the chronic high budget deficits. Wright proposed putting off future scheduled tax cuts "for the wealthiest Americans under the income tax overhaul law approved last year. He also suggested stretching out Pentagon weapons procurement and military construction projects as another way to help balance the budget.

The leadership race requiring a vote, was for the job being vacated by Foley, majority whip, the third-highest House leadership post. The party whips and their deputies count votes and lobby members on behalf of the leaders.

Coelho, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, was rewarded for the work done for others' campaigns with a 167-78 victory over top challenger Charles Rangel, D-N.Y.

Rep. Bill Hefner, D-N.C., was a distant third and his vote total was not announced.

Both Rangel and Hefner will remain deputy whips. The caucus named Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., as chief deputy whip, replacing Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark. Other deputies include Reps. Marty Russo, D-Ill., Joe Moakley, D-Mass., Norman Y. Mineta, D-Calif., Dennis Eckart, D-Ohio, Pat Williams, D-Mont., and Steny Hoyer, D-Md.

Republican whip Lott was expected to name his deputies later this week.

Both parties voted to stay with their current House party chairmen, both of whom are possible presidential candidates. Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., was unanimously approved as chairman of the House Republican Conference and Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., won another term as chairman of the House Democratic Caucus.

She told reporters that she had watched "five minutes" of Secretary of State George Shultz's testimony earlier in the morning before the House Foreign Affairs Committee and that she thought his performance was "very good."

"As reporters continued to question her, she entreated, "No, now come on, this is Christmas."

The first lady, dressed in a Christmas red-satin blouse and wool skirt, tried to turn the press corps' attention to the new Christmas decorations in the state rooms of the White House, brilliantly arrayed with evergreen boughs, holly, poinsettias and bedecked Christmas trees.

Nancy denies quarrel with Ron over Regan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Reagan acknowledged Monday that she and President Reagan disagree sometimes, but denied that she and her husband quarreled over whether chief of staff Donald T. Regan should be fired and that her husband told her to "get off my... back." Mrs. Reagan, leading a press corps tour of the White House Christmas decorations, was asked about the report that had appeared over the weekend in the Washington Post. Asked whether the president had made such a remark, Mrs. Reagan shook her head and replied sternly, "No."

"We — disagree sometimes; everybody disagrees," said Mrs. Reagan, who is regarded by White House insiders as having great influence over the president's personal decisions. She told reporters that she had watched "five minutes" of Secretary of State George Shultz's testimony earlier in the morning before the House Foreign Affairs Committee and that she thought his performance was "very good."

Court to rule on rights of child-abuse defendants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former Army sergeant who was given LSD without his knowledge 23 years ago in secret chemical warfare tests.

• Allowed to attend pretrial hearings in which the child is questioned.

• The court will review a ruling that threw out a Kentucky man's sodomy conviction because he was excluded from a hearing held to determine his alleged victims' competence to testify at trial.

• The Kentucky attorney general says the ruling, if upheld, could increase "traumatization and intimidation of child victims by the criminal justice system."

• In other matters, the court:
 • Agreed to consider killing a lawsuit against the government by a

• Let stand a $26,500 invasion-of-privacy award against a Greenville, S.C., newspaper for an article that correctly identified a teen-age boy as the father of an illegitimate child.

• Said it will judge the validity of how eligibility is calculated for benefits under the federal Aid to Families with Dependent Children welfare program.

In the sex-abuse case, Sergio Sincer was accused of sodomizing three young children in Christian County, Ky., in October 1983. Prosecutors said Sincer sexually abused two sisters, ages 8 and 7, and a 5-year-old boy after the children's mothers left his home to shop for his birthday party.

Gray apologized in expense flap

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edwin J. Gray, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, apologized Monday for "flawed judgments" in accepting reimbursement for thousands of dollars of travel expenses, some of them personal.

"In retrospect, I can only say that I should have paid significantly greater attention to such matters," Gray said in a letter to Senate Banking Committee Chairman Jake Garn, R-Utah.

Gray has repaid $24,000 in personal expenses.

David Armstrong said courts in four states — Arizona, Illinois, Minnesota and New Mexico — have ruled that defendants do not have to be allowed to attend competency hearings in such cases.

"The importance of this question in child sexual abuse cases cannot be overstated," Armstrong said.

"Legislatures all across the country are recognizing the widespread incidence of abused children and are rapidly enacting reforms to reduce the traumatization and intimidation of child victims by the criminal justice system," he said.

Armstrong said the Kentucky court's ruling would only increase such — trauma and intimidation, "with no positive impact on the fairness of trial."

Thrills at Stanford
What thrills you the most? Scholars put that query to a sizable sampling of Stanford students. And "listening to beautiful music" came out 26 percentile points ahead of "loving." "Our Love and War man does not buy these findings. Stanford students are not that weird, he says. Must be something wrong with the survey.

SCOTS
Do you believe a 30-pound dog can get knee-walking drunk on two tablespoons of whiskey? Such is the claim in a publication for veterans. It also contends one tablespoon of liquor will kill a live pound cat. Maybe so, maybe so. Still, I've seen TV tape which pictured a perfectly healthy hound lapping up a whole dishful of beer. Shrug.

Q-What's the indigenous religion of China?
A. Except for ancestor worship, there isn't any. Buddhism, Islam and Christianity were all introduced from other countries. Confucianism and Taoism are regarded not as religions but as moral and political philosophies.

TEN-DAY CURE?
Writes an experienced client:

A. That wild conjecture has not been covered. All the medical wards at this time is that there's a higher rate of lung cancer in Glasgow, new drinkers. Most alcoholics don't recover. The relatively few who do get it under control don't do it in 10 days. They devote much of the rest of their lives to it."

Ingrid Bergman's children donate collection to Wesleyan

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — The children of Ingrid Bergman have donated their late mother's collection of memorabilia to Wesleyan University.

The collection, which will be part of the Wesleyan Cinema Archives, includes photographs from the actress' earliest Swedish films, studio portraits and letters from Ernest Hemingway and John Steinbeck.

"It's a remarkable collection, lovely and touching, in that mother saved everything," Pia Lindstrom said in a statement announcing the gift from her and Roberto, Isabella and Ingrid Rossellini.

"She knew from the time she was a child that these things had value," she said. "Instead of dividing it among us, the family felt that the collection was valuable to film history, and we wanted it accessible to scholars."

The collection will be open to researchers next year after the material has been catalogued, registered and installed in the film and television research center opened earlier this year at the small, liberal arts college.

Syndicated columnist dies at 69

CHICAGO (AP) — Author and syndicated columnist Sydney J. Harris, who died at age 69, could be tough or gentle in his writing, but in either case was someone "who made people think," a friend and colleague said.

Harris' whose column, "Strictly Harris," appeared in more than 100 newspapers, including the Chicago Sun-Times, died at a hospital Sunday. He had suffered heart problems and a recent stroke.

As author of 11 books and numerous columns, Harris was best known for his humorous approach to social and philosophical questions.

He was a lover of classical literature, and was involved in the Great Books Movement launched in the 1930s by philosopher Mortimer Adler and Robert Hutchins at the University of Chicago.

Harris was syndicated by News America Syndicate owned by Rupert Murdoch. Murdoch bought the Sun-Times on Jan. 9, 1984, and sold it last summer.

Telephone calls to the syndicate's offices in Orange County, Calif., went unanswered late Sunday.

In a column that appeared in the Sun-Times two days before his death and taken from his latest book, "Clearing the Ground," Harris wrote of his opposition to capital punishment.

Born in London on Sept. 14, 1917, Harris came to Chicago as a boy and attended the University of Chicago. He began his newspaper career in 1944 with the Chicago Herald and Examiner and was drama critic and a columnist for the Chicago Daily News from 1941 to 1978.

Farmer finds unexploded WW II bomb

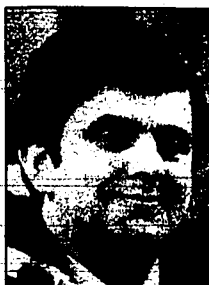

CLYDACH, Wales (AP) — A farmer said he carried an unexploded World War II bomb off his land because "he didn't want bomb disposal experts trampling his newly sown grass seed."

"I know it was a silly thing to do, but it was just on the spur of the moment," 46-year-old Gordon Griffiths said Monday, after bomb experts defused the device and found its detonator still intact.

He said his plow struck the bomb while he was working on his 100-acre farm near Swansea in south Wales during the weekend. He called the bomb squad, but then picked up the 30-inch-long projectile and carried it 60 yards to the edge of the field.

VLADIMIR SOLOVIOV
On tour of space facilities

Herbert von Karajan, who has been suffering from a virus infection for two months, has recovered and plans to direct the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra in February, a spokeswoman said Monday.

Karajan, 78, is still too weak to conduct a concert scheduled for Sunday in Berlin. Sabine Jahnke, the orchestra's spokeswoman, said.

However, Karajan is determined to conduct on Feb. 1 and to make-up for the Berlin cancellation with another concert later, she said.

Last September, a 25-year-old Japanese music student directed the orchestra in a Sunday matinee performance in Berlin when Karajan suddenly developed a fever and was told by his doctor to stay in bed.

Karajan left Berlin the next day for Salzburg, Austria, to recuperate and has not directed the orchestra since then. He did not accompany the orchestra on a concert tour of the United States and Japan in October.

Young Soviets tour U.S. space facilities

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) — Ten young Soviets, accompanied by the Alabama and Texas.

The visit is the second leg of an exchange agreed upon by President Reagan and Soviet General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev at the 1984 Geneva summit. The first leg was completed earlier this year when 10 members of America's Young Astronauts program visited the Soviet Union to tour space facilities there.

The Soviet Young Cosmonauts, scheduled to begin their U.S. visit Tuesday in Washington, will be accompanied by cosmonaut Vladimir Soloviev. He holds the record for the most time spent in space — 237 days.

"We believe this exchange is a milestone in U.S.-Soviet relations," T. Wendell Butler, executive director of the Young Astronaut Council in Washington, said in a prepared statement.

The group will tour NASA headquarters, the National Air and Space Museum and the White House before flying to Orlando on Thursday.

On Friday, they will tour the Kenedy Space Center. Next week they will visit NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., and the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

West African orphan to become U.S. citizen

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A West African orphan adopted by a couple who saw him on the television program "60 Minutes" will be sworn in as a U.S. citizen here Tuesday.

Mohammed ag Albakaye was living in a West African hunger camp in 1985 when Diane Sawyer interviewed him for the CBS program.

Charles and Cheryl Shotts adopted him after watching a rerun of that program. His age was estimated at about 13 when he arrived here last December.

"He really wants his citizenship because, as an educated adult, he wants to go back to Africa to become a diplomat and help with the famine," Mrs. Shotts said.

Pilot of downed plane can't recall descent into grainfield

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A California computer consultant whose private plane crashed into a grainfield 11 miles east of the Twin Falls Sun Valley Regional Airport Saturday evening is so far unable to shed light on what caused the plane to go down.

"I haven't the slightest idea of what happened," said Paul VanAlstyne, 56, of Van Nuys, Calif., Monday afternoon. "It's just like I pulled the curtain and turned out the lights. I can't remember anything from the time I started the final approach to the airport until I was on the ground."

VanAlstyne said he was on his way to Sun Valley, accompanied by his wife Doris, 57, and their 7-year-old son, Kevin.

"We could not land at the Halley airport

(because of fog), so I turned back here to land," he said. "I was on ILS (instrument landing system) and had just lined up on the final approach. I was flying on the localizer beam at 5,900 feet, which is the recommended elevation for the approach to the airport," he said. "I can't remember anything from that point."

VanAlstyne said there was no indication of any trouble and no warning that anything was wrong. He wonders if he may have passed out at that point.

The California businessman said he has flown for some 20 years, has owned the 1978 Cessna 414 aircraft the past 4 1/2 years and has never had any problem with the plane. During that time, he has had many instrument landings, he added.

"It was a good plane and I had never put a scratch on it. I'm sick about it," he said Monday.

The owner said the plane was worth about $250,000, but would sell new for over $500,000.

The major concern of VanAlstyne Monday was not his plane, but the recovery of his wife — who is in critical, but stable, condition in St. Alphonsus Hospital in Boise. She had not regained consciousness by late Monday but hospital officials had indicated she was making some slight improvement, he said.

She was flown to the Boise hospital Saturday night for treatment by neurosurgeons, after suffering head and face injuries. Because she was in the seat next to the pilot's seat, VanAlstyne said he is hoping that when she regains consciousness she may be able to recall something about the last few seconds of the flight.

The couple's son, the only other occupant of the plane, escaped injury and was able to get out of the wreckage and go for help when the plane went down. He had been riding in one of the seats farther back in the aircraft.

VanAlstyne said his two older daughters by a previous marriage, Stephanie and Cindy, flew to Idaho from Southern California Monday. Stephanie was with Kevin Monday afternoon and another daughter, Cindy, remained in Boise with Doris VanAlstyne.

The three were on their way to Sun Valley, where they own a condominium, and planned on one day of skiing.

"Actually, we were going there to pick up some things from the condominium that we needed for a trip we had planned to Europe later this month," he said. "I guess that's all of now."

Twin Falls County Sheriff James Munn said he had talked with National Transportation Safety Board officials Monday and was told that when the crash investigation reports are available they will be sent to him. As of Monday a cause of the crash had not been determined.

Munn said the plane was on a direct line with the center of the airport's east-west runway when it went down, about 7 p.m. Saturday.

The plane was released to Northwest Warbirds Inc., for removal from the grainfield. It will be taken to the airport and held for the owner's disposition.

Munn said it may be necessary to disassemble the plane in order to get it out of the field.

Benefits of hydro projects detailed

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Backers of a $59 million proposed hydroelectric project at Auger Falls, northwest of Twin Falls, say it will help the Magic Valley by adding $1.8 million annually to the tax rolls.

The economic benefits "greatly outweigh" the negative environmental effects, according to Rockcreek Joint Venture and Shorock Hydro, which hold land and royalty rights on the project.

A federal hearing on the environmental impact of Auger Falls and three other hydro projects planned for the Snake River in the Magic Valley will be held Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Room 117 of the Shields Building at the College of Southern Idaho.

According to Rockcreek Joint Venture and Shorock Hydro, economic benefits include 300 jobs — with a $12 million annual payroll — during construction period.

The other projects are the $39 million Twin Falls Canal Co. Milner Dam project, the Western Hydropower 1, Ltd. Royal Cattfish project in Jerome County, and Bishop Beymer's $45 million Star Falls project near Murtaugh.

Auger Falls would produce 157.6 million kilowatt hours, according to the royalty holders.

Among the potential environmental effects of the Auger Falls project are a negative impact on mallard ducks and possible damage to quail habitat on the 23 acres of the site which touches Bureau of Land Management land, according to BLM and the state Fish & Game Department.

Other possible impacts are canal bank erosion, reduction of river water quality due to erosion, and sedimentation and temporary decreases in river flow, according to a Nov. 25 report by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. The report also states that the effects of other rapids would be reduced by the project, the report said.

Similar environmental impacts have been noted from the other projects, according to the report.

John B. Block, regional director of J.U.B. Engineers, said the Auger Falls project will have minimal environmental impacts. Effects on wildlife will be mitigated, he said. Similar statements about minimal impacts made by parties close to the other projects, except for Royal Cattfish whose Newport, Calif., applicant could not be reached for comment.

Block said plants on the river near the project site are in areas not used by the public or much wildlife.

According to Rockcreek Joint Venture and Shorock Hydro, other economic benefits include 300 jobs — with a $12 million annual payroll — during the construction period. Once the plant is operating, it will be run by three employees, earning a total of $90,000 annually, firm officials said.

The project is likely to be built for at least a year and construction will take about two years or more, according to Block. The projects are planned at a time when Idaho Power Co. officials say there is a surplus of electricity in the Northwest — an assessment which parties involved in the Auger Falls and Star Falls dispute.

Block said there is a market for the output of Auger Falls among out-of-state utilities or plants interested in securing a 33-year supply of power at 1980s prices.

Sun Valley voters to decide local-option tax issue

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Voters here will decide today whether or not the city's local-option tax should be lowered and then expanded to include all retail sales.

Voting will take place at the Sun Valley City Hall from noon to 8 p.m. Voters also must be registered and must be Sun Valley residents.

Today's election will allow voters to decide whether the current 5 percent tax on hotel/motel rooms and 3.75 percent tax on alcohol-by-the-drink should be changed to a broader-based 2 percent tax on all retail sales subject to taxation under the Idaho State Sales Tax Act.

A 60 percent approval is needed to pass the measure. If passed, the tax could become effective by Dec. 18 and would last for five years. If the proposal is not passed, the city's tax would remain in its present state until fall of 1987.

In proposing the tax, City Council members cited the need to lower the overall tax charged to tourists in order to keep Sun Valley competitive with other major resorts.

At the present time, a total 10.75 percent tax is added to the bills of Sun Valley hotel/motel guests. This includes a state sales tax of 5 percent and a state bed tax of 2 percent, in addition to the local option tax charged by Sun Valley. If the broad-based tax were passed, the total hotel/motel tax would decline to 9 percent.

However, the tax on retail sales would increase from the current 5 percent to 7 percent.

This is the second time in two years the city has attempted to broaden the tax base and lower it to 2 percent. One year ago, city voters rejected the same proposal when only 53 percent of the voters supported the plan.

Then alpine ski lift tickets were exempt from the tax at the request of the Sun Valley Co. This time the council has refused to consider any other exemptions.

Chuck Webb, assistant general manager for the company, has said that although the firm still wants to exempt lift tickets, it prefers to have the lower general sales tax that includes tickets.

The city hopes to raise $500,000 or more from the 2 percent tax, on an estimated $27 million in retail sales. If revenue greatly exceeds that amount, the City Council has said it will lower the tax.

Jerome man in critical condition after flash fire

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

JEROME — A 70-year-old Jerome man was listed in "extremely critical" condition Monday night in the burn unit of the University of Utah Hospital in Salt Lake City, after a flash fire Sunday in his home.

Murrel White suffered burns over 70 percent of his body Sunday morning at the home he shares with a son, at 324 E. Ave.

Jerome Fire Chief James Auclair said his department has not been able to determine what caused a "flash-over," which is deep burns over the victim's body; but it is apparent that some flammable materials in the house somehow ignited, burning White's face, legs and upper body.

Firemen found White in the bathtub, where he had apparently been trying to put out the fire in his clothing or to cool his burned body.

"He was not really unconscious and could not respond to voice communication other than to move his eyes," Auclair said.

The clothing was burned from his lower body, legs and chest. Emergency Medical Technicians from the fire department removed remaining clothing and covered him with a burn blanket.

White was taken to St. Benedict's Hospital and then flown to the burn center in Salt Lake City.

Auclair said the department was called at 11:33 a.m. On arrival, firemen found the smoke was too intense to allow them to enter without oxygen masks.

"We know what was involved," Auclair said, "but we don't know what the man did to cause the flashover. The force and heat was enough that it blew out windows in the house and pushed debris away from where White was standing."

White's son, who was away from home at the time, is an artist and there were paint materials in the room. Although the room contained a wood stove, it did not appear to be a factor in the explosion, Auclair said. White may have pushed over some flammable liquid, Auclair said, and he may have been smoking.

A package of cigarettes was found in the room.

"Although no actual fire broke out, there was extensive smoke damage throughout the house and enough heat to damage the living room furnishings and melt some plastic objects in the room although an actual fire did not appear as though the flash burned all of the oxygen in the house and then continued to smoke."

BPA delays plan for conservation surcharge

BURLEY (AP) — A controversial plan to slap a 10-percent surcharge on Bonneville Power Administration electricity sold to areas falling to adopt conservation-intensive construction codes has been indefinitely delayed, the chairman of the Northwest Power Planning Council has confirmed.

Robert Saxvik said the delay in the 10-percent surcharge penalty was prompted in part by the need for further evaluation of the method for determining how successful utilities have been in fostering conservation and because of questions raised by BPA on the cost-effectiveness of some elements of the BPA Conservation Standard Building Code the council has proposed.

Saxvik, a former Idaho state senator from Burley, said, however, that he remained committed to the general concept of energy-conservation-intensive building codes to reduce power demand throughout the Northwest into the next century.

The program, intended to preclude the need for extremely expensive power plant construction in the future, would require local govern-

TWIN FALLS — Ken Heller of Twin Falls found his missing outdoor concrete sculpture and he says it was pure fate that they were reunited.

The 40 to 50 pound concrete creature that looks like a cross between a Halloween spook and "E.T.," had been lost for about six months.

The garden ornament, which police were at a loss to further identify, was purchased by the Hellers about three years ago from Kimberly Nurseries and was used to adorn the flower beds at the front of the Heller rural home.

Last July someone kidnapped the little fellow and Heller reported the theft to the Twin Falls County sheriff's department. But until Saturday morning the Hellers had all but given up hope of seeing the creature again.

Heller said when he opened the Times-News Saturday morning, then staring at him from a local news page was his missing statue, which he calls an elf. It had been auctioned off with other unclaimed objects in the Twin Falls Police Department's sale of surplus or unclaimed items Friday night.

Police Commander Bill Stonemets said Heller arrived at the police department early Monday armed with plenty of proof that the strange looking object was his. He brought a copy of the newspaper, a copy of the stolen property report from the sheriff's office and a photograph of his front yard in earlier times when the creature sat peacefully in the flower beds.

Stonemets said the statue, which Heller said cost

Pilot of downed plane can't recall descent into grainfield

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES

TWIN FALLS — A California computer consultant whose private plane crashed into a grainfield 11 miles east of the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport Saturday evening is so far unable to shed light on what caused the plane to go down.

"I haven't the slightest idea of what happened," said Paul VanAlstyne, 56, of Van Nuys, Calif., Monday afternoon. "It's just like I pulled the curtain and turned out the light—I can't remember anything from the time I started the final approach to the airport until I was on the ground."

Agencies clash over Big Wood permit

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The state Fish and Game Department went to court Monday to seek the reversal of a decision by the Idaho Department of Water Resources regarding minimum stream-flows in the Big Wood River.

The issues in the Big Wood stream-flow permit could apply to other minimum stream-flows, including one at Minnie Miller in the Thousands Springs area, according to the DWR.

The DWR approved a request on Oct. 17 for a 70-cubic-foot-per-second stream-flow between Warm Springs Creek near Ketchum downstream to the Selway Case Diversion. This would allegedly protect trout habitat over a distance of 18 miles.

F&G officials asked for a rehearing on the permit request, which was filed by the DWR on behalf of F&G.

The DWR denied the rehearing request on Nov. 17.

Fish and Game officials are now asking 4th District Court in Ada County to reverse the decision, on the grounds that the Big Wood stream-flow must be treated like any other water right. F&G's position is that DWR is making that water right a lower priority than other water rights, said Steve Gopdard, a deputy attorney general for F&G.

Another objection is that F&G doesn't have the permit reviewed in 15 years, he said. "F&G doesn't want the permit reopened. We want it to stay. That happens with other water rights," he said.

DWR Director A. Kenneth Duan called the appeal "a waste of money."

along a snow-covered mountain roadway when the accident occurred.

ATLANTA — Lyle Potthast, 48, who has operated the general store at Featherville for the past several years, died in a snowmobile accident Sunday, about a mile west of Atlanta.

Elmore County Sheriff Roy Layher said Potthast and eight riders who were traveling on snow machines between Featherville and Atlanta Sunday afternoon.

Witnesses told investigating officers that Potthast and other snowmobilers were traveling at speeds of 50 to 75 miles per hour.

"I'm sure glad the paper used that picture. Otherwise, I would never have known what happened to it and I wouldn't have it back," Heller said.

Stonemets said the sale of bicycles, picnic tables, park benches, and the concrete figure, brought just over $1,900. The old city park benches sold for a high of $22 and a low of $18. Stonemets said the picnic tables brought $8 to $18 while bicycles sold for a high of $50 down to only a few dollars each. A wooden wagon wheel brought $18. Stonemets said it was a successful sale including reuniting Heller with his elf.

Judge to consider change of venue

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — U.S. District Judge Robert J. McNichols said Monday he will decide next week whether news coverage of recent bombings in northern Idaho will make it impossible for three defendants to receive fair trials on counterfeiting charges.

David Ross Dorr, Edward Wade Hawley and his wife, Olive, all of Athol, Idaho, are scheduled to face a jury trial beginning Jan. 6 on counterfeiting charges.

A change of venue ruling likely would delay the trial.

Federal authorities say the three, who have ties to the Church of Jesus Christ (Mormons) in Hayden Lake, Idaho, were running a race war begun by the militant group The Order.

Dorr, Edward Hawley and Robert Pires, who became an FBI informant, face state charges for Sept. 15 and Sept. 29 bombings in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, that authorities allege were part of the conspiracy.

McNichols said at Monday's hearing that he will decide on the change of venue motion Dec. 18.

Briefly

Police report several thefts

TWIN FALLS — Someone should have a good Christmas this year if the list of thefts at the Twin Falls Police Department means burglars and other thieves are doing their holiday "shopping" early.

Police reports Monday showed several thefts that included some expensive sound and video equipment, probably in connection with the gift giving season.

Under investigation Monday was the theft of nearly $1,300 worth of video and sound equipment from Mel Quakes Inc., at 1730 Kimberly Road.

The firm reported someone apparently shipped the equipment from the store between Friday morning and Saturday evening.

The First Baptist Church at 910 Shoshone St. E., was broken into Saturday night or early Sunday morning. A wireless microphone valued at $200 was taken along with $75 in cash. Damage to the building amounted to about $150 after a window was broken to gain entry and a door to the pastor's office was kicked and broken open.

Another theft was reported by Gary Molner who said someone took a metal box of tools and equipment from his vehicle Saturday night while it was parked at 215 Shoshone St. S., the loss was estimated at $470.

Yule tree permits distributed

ALMO — The Burley District of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management has distributed all of its 1986 permits for cutting Christmas trees.

Burley District Forester Linda Boody said all 500 permits for taking trees from the City of Rocks area were issued by mid-afternoon Saturday. BLM officials had been distributing them at a station 1 1/2 miles south of Almo.

The City of Rocks permits were the only ones available in the district for 1986, she said.

Phantom music has many causes

DEAR ABBY: Thanks to your column regarding audio hallucinations (hearing music in one's head), I consulted a neurologist, per your suggestion, as I have had this problem. After giving me all the tests (EEG and MRI), she discovered a brain tumor!

Thank God it's operable. Had I not been a devout daily Dear Abby reader, I probably never would have looked into this matter, and it could have been a disaster.

God bless you, Abby. You have my permission to publish this letter to encourage other people who hear music in their heads to consult a neurologist. I'm signing my name, but call me...

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

—A GRATEFUL READER

DEAR READER: Your letter made my day. Call me, "A Grateful Columnist." Read on for another letter concerning that item:

DEAR ABBY: Regarding "Hearing Things," I am reminded of this story:

Years ago, a man went to Europe, and being a fan of Mozart for years, he wanted to visit his grave. He found the town and the cemetery and went to visit. He was quite perplexed, because while standing at the grave, he heard music.

He went back into town to discuss this with a noted Mozart scholar who, in turn, went with him to the grave to hear his "music."

Once there, they stood very quietly and soon the scholar turned to the man and said, "Yes, you are right, I hear music, too, except it's quite strange—the music is backward!"

Then he knowingly shook his head and added, "He must be decomposing!"

—YOUR FAN, THERESA, N.M.

DEAR ABBY: All my life, and I am 80 years old, I have been awakened with a hymn, which I enjoyed singing the first thing in the morning. About six or seven years ago, I began hearing organ music—always hymns I knew. This could happen any time of the day and even in the middle of the night when I went to the bathroom.

At first I thought it was coming from the neighbors' radio or TV. I even turned on my TV and radio trying to find the station. I would say to my husband, "Can't you hear that music?" And he'd answer, "No." I finally figured it was a gift from God, and I would feel robbed if it were taken away.

I am in perfect health and I have been happily married for 54 years. I certainly would never call this music a nuisance. Last week I heard a hymn I learned maybe 70 years ago, and I remembered every word! I think the singing of hymns is the reason for my good health.

—THERESA PLETTENBERG, DUVENIDIN, IZ.

DEAR THERESA: Even though you regard the music you hear as a "blessing," for continued good health, do consult a neurologist.

TV spawns terminology

NEW YORK (AP) — You think you know a lot about television, but do you know the difference between a "flipper," a "zapper," and a "grazer"?

A flipper is a person who changes TV channels by remote control just to see what else is on. A zapper is a person who changes channels so as not to be exposed to an advertising message.

A grazer is the same as a flipper — a person who just wants to see what's on the tube.

Chinese study

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A comparison of college students in the United States and in China finds that Chinese students tend to be less gregarious and more family-oriented than their American counterparts.

University of Rochester professor Ladd Wheeler says Chinese students study more than American students and place extraordinary emphasis on their families. In China people who interfere with family duties are called "fox friends and dog cronies."

Study finds more corporate child care

Los Angeles Times
NEW YORK — American corporations have shown a dramatic increase in the development of child-care programs since 1978, a report by the Council on Economic Priorities indicates.
 In 1985, about 2,500 U.S. corporations had child-care programs, compared with 110 in 1978, a "Child Care Update" by council project director Steven D. Lydenberg disclosed.
 But Danna Friedman of the Project on Work and Family Information Center at the Conference Board here put the figure even higher, saying that "about 3,000" corporations are now addressing the issue. The council is a nonprofit research organization, based mainly of its conclusions on numerical information provided by the Conference Board.

"Our child-care study shows that American businesses are tackling the important issue of child care in creative and useful ways," council executive director Alice Tepper Marlin said.
 On-site day-care centers were found to be the least popular of corporate child-care options. By contrast, the use of flexible benefits — letting employees choose from a selection of benefits — and resource and referral services were found to have grown markedly.
 Between 1984 and 1985, Lydenberg said, company flexible benefit programs doubled from 75 to 150. For example, involves a broad coalition of state, local and business representatives and offers a variety of child-care programs that includes a voucher-system for welfare parents entering that state's employment and training program.

One unexpected benefit of this development, Lydenberg said, is that "in doing so, making sure they have a network of reliable child care, they often get involved with support for the local centers. The corporations become a kind of local communities" for child care in communities.
 Another growth area in the child-care arena was parental leave policies. A small, but increasing number of cities and states also are now initiating public-private partnerships, Lydenberg said. A partnership of this kind in Massachusetts, for example, involves a broad coalition of state, local and business representatives and offers a variety of child-care programs that includes a voucher-system for welfare parents entering that state's employment and training program.

"It is a dramatic growth in a relative sense," Danna Friedman said, "but there are a lot of companies out there that haven't addressed this issue."
 More than 44,000 companies in this country employ more than 100 workers, Friedman said. "The scope of the problem is so large that much more needs to be done... to responsibly meet the needs of the millions of children under age 18 whose mothers work outside the home," the Council on Economic Priorities' Marlin agreed.
 As of March, 1985, 49 percent of women with infants under one year of age were working, up from 31 percent in 1975 and 24 percent in 1970. Of 6.3 million single-parent mothers, 61 percent of those with a child between three and five years of age hold a job.

Case against lawyer dropped

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A judge has dismissed two counts of sexual harassment against Salt Lake County Attorney Ted Cannon, saying the charges are unconstitutionally vague and without legal standing.

Still pending are two counts of forcible sexual abuse, a second-degree felony, six other counts of misuse of public monies, two counts of official misconduct, and one each of unauthorized use of public monies, criminal defamation and using official position for personal privilege.

Smylie warns against hasty decisions on windfall

BOISE (AP) — Former Republican Gov. Robert Smylie, warning that hasty decisions could wreck economic havoc, has proposed that the state put off spending any of the proposed windfall Idaho would receive from adopting federal tax code changes until next September.

"By next fall we will know more about what the real revenue effects of the so-called federal windfall will be," Smylie said. "The governor and the Legislature will have been able to measure whether people are willing to pay for the services they obviously want. We will know how much of a shortfall our wobbling economy will have produced."

million in income tax receipts in the year that begins next July if it adopts the sweeping changes Congress approved for the federal income tax code last fall. The bulk of the additional revenue, which would grow to $34 million by the beginning of the next decade, would be paid by high-income Idahoans and corporations. Democratic Gov.-elect Cecil Andrus has called for taking advantage of at least some of that windfall in the budget lawmakers will draft this winter to meet pressing needs for education, economic development and other state services. But there is division in the new 49th Legislature over just how to handle the issue.

Compounding the outlook were indications that some critical revenue sources were lagging behind expectations and could produce as much as a $10 million shortfall in the current state budget, double the reserve in the treasury. "No one can say with certainty what the effect of all those changes in the federal tax code will be on Idaho's economy and revenue structure," Smylie said. "None of us can guess weather and the marketplace. Late summer would permit greater accuracy in estimating the effect of the federal tax reform."

Smylie made his observations in his weekly column published by The Idaho Statesman on Sunday. Trying to assess and then allocate the potential windfall to the state from the federal tax overhaul could spell another fractious legislative session this winter, Smylie said, while concealing the need for additional state spending on schools and other services. He pointed out that in 1953 the state faced a huge surplus following the Korean war and inflation and moved quickly to cut income taxes by 10 percent only to find two years later that the tax structure could not handle the cut. Taxes had to be raised in 1955 by 25 percent, he said, just to keep state spending at the level it was two years earlier. "The federal windfall may just be adequate to permit rational restructuring of the entire revenue system, state and local," the former chief executive said. "You cannot get tax reform out of robbing Peter to pay Paul. There has to be extra money that can ease the pain."

Board OKs experimental use of new Utah artificial heart

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Experimental human implants of the new Utah 100 artificial heart have been approved by the University of Utah's Institutional review board and will next be reviewed by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, school officials say.

University Health Sciences Center spokesman John Dwan said on Monday that it was not known when or if FDA approval for the experimental surgeries will be given. He said the center will not use the heart in human patients without the FDA's go-ahead.

Dr. Donald B. Olsen, director of the school's Institute for Biomedical Engineering and the Division of Artificial Organs, said the Utah 100 differs from the fist-sized Jarvik-7 in both its shape and size.

"The Utah 100... is elliptical in shape. It is three centimeters longer, two centimeters narrower and two thinner than the artificial heart implanted (in Clark) a little more than four years ago," Olsen said.

The Utah 100's blood volume capacity and weight are nearly identical, at 100 cubic centimeters and 280 grams respectively, to earlier models. However, the new device has "smaller inflow and outflow valves and fits easily into a smaller chest cavity," he said.

"It doesn't interfere with the lungs or large blood vessels," Olsen said.

Gay said there were two goals driving the university to human experimentation with the new heart.

"First, to gather more information about the performance of the device in humans, and second, to use the device as a bridge to transplant," he said. "We want to have it available to us to support critically ill heart transplant patients until a natural heart is available."

Dr. William A. Gay, chief of surgery at the center, will be the principal investigator for the proposed research project.

The Utah 100 is the latest modification of a series of plastic air-driven artificial hearts under development at the university since the arrival of artificial organs pioneer Dr. Willem J. Kolff in 1957.

The U of U made medical history on Dec. 2, 1982, when a surgical team led by Dr. William DeVries implanted the Jarvik-7 model into the chest of Dr. Barney Clark, a Seattle-area dentist. Clark, the first human to receive a permanent artificial heart, died 112 days later of multiple organ failure.

DeVries left Utah in 1984 for Human Hospital Audubon in Kentucky, where he continued human implants of the Jarvik-7.

The Utah 100 has been used for the past three years in animal ex-

Singing prompts police to BYU

PROVO, Utah (AP) — A small army of police officers rushed to Brigham Young University early Monday when about 300 students began roaming the campus, shouting and singing Christmas carols, authorities said.

However, an official of the Mormon Church-owned school said the incident was simply a case of "students feeling their oats."

A Provo City police car sustained minor damage and a dormitory window was reportedly broken, but no injuries were reported and no arrests were made, said BYU spokesman Paul Richards.

Richards said students from the Helaman Halls residential complex began walking the campus about midnight, and arrived at the residence of BYU President Jeffrey Holland, where they were met by campus police and asked to return to their dorms.

The crowd sang a few Christmas carols and left without incident, and after returning to the student housing area, dispersed about 2:30 a.m., said BYU Police Chief Robert Kelschaw.

In all, about 35 law enforcement officers, including personnel from university, Provo and Orem police departments, were called to the campus. Provo officers, having erroneously been told the disturbance was more serious than it was, showed up in riot gear, Kelschaw said.

"There was no confrontation and no tear gas, although there were reports there had been," Richards said, noting the incident became "a media event" when members of a Salt Lake City television crew turned cameras and lights on them.

"Everytime the TV camera turned on its lights, they started shouting and jumping," he said.

White House asks group to return, sing carols

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — "Crystal Reflection," a Salt Lake Christmas caroling group that last year became the first west of the Mississippi to sing at the White House, has been invited for a return performance.

The group's seven singers will perform for the congressional staff and their families in the White House Dec. 18, said Crystal Reflection founder Katie Dastrup.

She said the group also is seeking security clearance to perform in the Capitol Rotunda as a "singing Christmas card" from the state of Utah to President Reagan and people of Washington, D.C.

The Utah's petition is before the Senate, and Dastrup is optimistic it will pass.

"When we sing, people are touched by the spirit of Christmas. Anytime you can light that spirit, everyone cares," she said.

Dastrup was a member of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir, and Marilyn Smith, another group singer, is now a soloist for the choir. The other singers of the group are Marla Romney Crofts, Ryan Dastrup, Lorie Smith, Rick Smith and Meredith Sneiderger.

The group's performance last year at the White House was followed by several encores.

Feud over dog believed key to killings

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A man and a woman stormed a house Monday and killed six people, including two young girls, in what may have been a feud over ownership of a pit bull dog, police and relatives said.

Two people later surrendered. "These people were executed. They didn't have a chance to defend themselves at all," said police Lt. Richard Brierly. Three others survived the attack.

Less than nine hours later, a woman and then a man surrendered to police several hours after officers surrounded a barricaded house a few miles away.

Police had been seeking the woman, whose name was not released, and a man identified as David Welch since shortly after finding the bodies.

The woman burst through a side window, suffering cuts from broken glass. She was quickly handcuffed and led away.

About 15 minutes later, a man identified as Welch left the house and also was arrested. He also was injured, apparently by a gunshot although no shots were fired by officers, police said.

Welch, 28, whose last name is the same as one of the survivors, has an "extensive criminal record, violent criminal record," Brierly said. The second person sought was not identified.

Brierly said officers had an idea where Welch had gone and had called the house. A woman answered, but quickly hung up when officers identified themselves, he said.

Two men, two women and two girls aged 2 and 3 were slain at about 3 a.m. when a man and woman kicked in the front door of their home. Both were taken under guard to a hospital for treatment. Police and relatives reported.

"The motive would appear to be so senseless and trivial that most of us couldn't even understand it," Brierly said, calling it the worst murder case he had ever seen.

"It appears to be some kind of dispute," he said. "We saw nothing to indicate any kind of drug activity."

Utah council balks again at new policy

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — For the third straight month, the State Child Abuse and Neglect Advisory Council has refused to endorse a new policy requiring minimum $109-a-month payments from natural parents of children in foster care.

The State Board of Family Services approved the policy in September without first seeking comment from its advisory panel. After the matter was brought to the attention of the board by council Chairwoman Marilyn Sandberg, the board agreed to receive council comments.

Action by the board, which sets policy for foster care and other child welfare services, irritated some council members who have questioned the need for a minimum payment. Further, critics ask what overall effect the policy will have on the foster care program and on collection efforts by the Office of Recovery Services, the collection arm of the Utah Department of Social Services.

At a recent meeting, Council Vice Chairman Donald Kline said he felt uncomfortable voting on the policy because of the many complex financial and other federal matters that affect foster care.

Sampson finishes out of money; still leads

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Texas bull rider Jim Sharp won his second event in five tries Monday night, while Charles Sampson of Los Angeles finished out of the money for the first time in the $1.8 million National Finals Rodeo.

Sharp of Kernell, Texas, ran his NFR winnings to $21,000 by scoring 83 in the bull riding event, as the rodeo reached the halfway point of its 10-session run.

Sampson, who had placed in the first four events with one win, failed to win any of the bull-riding session with his score of 73. He still retained his NFR lead with earnings of $24,150.

Tying for second in bull riding with scores of 75 from the judges were Lane Frost of Lane, Okla., Wacey Cathey of Big Spring, Texas, and Dale Johnson of Alberta, Can. Lewis Field of Elk Ridge, Utah, held on night's seven events earned $8,400, while the payoff in each of the other two events, team roping and barrel racing, was $5,200.

Leaders after all 10 rounds are completed Saturday will get an extra $18,770 or $11,484 in the team roping and barrel racing. Some 115 cowboys earned their way into the finals, which end the rodeo season and determine the overall champions for the year.

In barrel racing, the only women's event, Charmayne James of Clayton, N.M., won for the first time in the finals with a 13.80 second clocking.

James, the dominant force in the event after being kicked in the face by his horse. He was treated for bruises and a cut chin and was expected to compete again Tuesday.

C.R. Kemple of Durango, Colo., won the barrel riding with a 76. Field tied for second with Steve Dunham of Alberta, Can., with scores of 74. In the team roping, defending champions Jake Barnes of Bloomfield, N.M., and Clay O'Brien Cooper of Gilbert, Ariz., won for the first time in the five sessions with a 5.1 second clocking.

Rusty Wright of M. Pleasant, Texas, and Rick Stock of Sho Low, Ariz., took second at 6.4 seconds, while David Motes of Fresno, Calif., and Dennis Gatz of Modesto, Calif., took third at 6.6 seconds.

Steve Duhon of Opelousas, La., captured the evening's steer wrestling with an arena-record 3.0 seconds. Duhon, winning his first prize money in the NFR, ran his season-leading money total to $81,565.

Finishing second at 3.4 seconds was John Jones of Morrow Bay, Calif., while Ote Berry of Gordon, Neb., was third at 3.8 seconds.

Stays in playoff hunt — Seattle buries the Raiders

By JIM COUR
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE — Dave Krieg passed for a pair of touchdowns, Curt Warner ran for two more scores and Seattle's defense recorded a team-record six sacks Monday night as the Seattle Seahawks kept their NFL playoff hopes alive with a 37-0 victory over the Los Angeles Raiders.

The loss dealt a harsh blow to the Raiders' playoff chances and meant they no longer were in control of their own destiny with two regular-season games remaining. Both the Seahawks and the Raiders now are 8-6. Both teams trail Cincinnati, 9-5, in the race for the last wild-card berth.

It was the first time the Raiders had been shut out since Oct. 11, 1981, when they were blanked by Detroit, Denver and Kansas City in successive games.

The Seahawks' victory also gave Denver a loser Sunday, the AFC West championship.

Krieg, benched for two games this season for poor play, passed 12 yards to Ray Butler and 10 yards to Steve Largent for touchdowns in the first half, as the Seahawks grabbed a 24-0 lead. Krieg completed 14 of 21 passes for 243 yards and two touchdowns and also had five carries for 23 yards.

Warner, who rushed 23 times for 116 yards, scored on runs of 5 and 3 yards while Norm Johnson added had field goals of 53, 51 and 46 yards.

A noisy Kingdome crowd of 62,923 watched the Seahawks record their third straight victory and their second shutout of the season. It was the Raiders' second loss in a row.

The Seahawks recorded their club record 11 sacks against three Raiders' quarterbacks; Jim Plunkett, Marc Wilson and Rusty Hilger.

Plunkett completed four of 11 passes for 61 yards while Wilson was five of 10 for 55 yards.

Seattle scored touchdowns on its first two possessions for a 14-0 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Takes Becker in straight sets

Lendl leaves little doubt as to ranking

IVAN LENDL Triumphs in Masters tourney

By BOB GREENE
AP Tennis Writer

NEW YORK — After brushing back a young pretender to his throne, Ivan Lendl said his victory Monday night "was one more turn for the old guy."

Tennis

Even West Germany's Boris Becker, who fell to Lendl in straight sets in the final of the $500,000 Masters tennis tournament, agreed.

"For tonight, I have to take my hat and go home," the 19-year-old Becker said. "Ivan was too good of a player today."

It was teacher vs. pupil — and Becker, the student, found he has a lot to learn as Lendl pounded-out a 6-4, 6-4, 6-4 victory.

At one point, completely befuddled by the world's top-ranked player, Becker asked the Madison Square Garden crowd: "Does anybody want to play tennis for me?"

Lendl, standing at the far baseline, ready to serve again, raised his hand in reply. "It was another learning lesson for me," Becker admitted.

The victory gave Lendl his ninth title of the year, but his first since September, when he won the U.S. Open for the second straight time. Becker had come into the Masters riding a three-tournament winning streak.

"All those people ready to make Becker No. 1 will have to wait a little bit more," Lendl said.

By systematically thrashing Becker, Lendl settled any question as to who is No. 1 in the world — if any question existed. The 19-year-old from West Germany found out the hard way the varied dimensions of Lendl's solid game.

The victory in this winner-take-all final was worth $100,000 for Lendl, who earned a total of $210,000 this season-ending event at Madison Square Garden. Becker collected $110,000 for the victories that got him into the final.

Lendl added the Masters title to the eight other crowns he has won this year, including the French Open and the U.S. Open. The only major championship he lost in 1986 was Wimbledon, in which he lost to Becker in the final.

It was billed as a classic confrontation between the veteran who now makes his home in Greenwich, Conn., and the youngster who entered the Masters final riding a 21-match winning streak. Lendl made sure it wasn't a classic as he dominated the 2-hour, 29-minute clash.

Ueberroth tells owners to watch spending

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. — Commissioner Peter Ueberroth renewed his call for baseball to spend wisely while a "high-stakes" battle over free agents began brewing Monday.

Ueberroth, in his "State of the Game" speech at baseball's winter meetings, brushed aside the issue of expansion and also said the 1987 season should be dedicated to the memory of Jackie Robinson since it will be the 40th anniversary of the year he broke the major league color barrier.

A few trade rumors, most of them involving Philadelphia pitcher Charles Hudson and New York Yankees catcher Butch Wynegar, made the rounds and nine players were selected in the major-league draft.

But most of the scramble for talent concerned free agents, particularly ones who cannot sign with their 1986 teams until May 1.

Ray Knight, the Most Valuable Player in the World Series with the New York Mets, 300-game winner Tom Seaver, Dave Kingman, Gary Ward and John Denny were among those looking for new employment. Their teams neither re-signed them nor offered the option of salary arbitration, thereby losing the right to re-sign them before May.

"We've had conversations with a number of clubs," said Knight's agent, George Kalafatis. "It's clear that some teams have certain needs. Ray could fill it."

Kalafatis declined to identify the teams showing interest, although one may be the Chicago Cubs.

UNLV rises to top

By JIM O'CONNELL

Nevada-Las Vegas took over the No. 1 spot in The Associated Press college basketball poll Monday as previously top-ranked North Carolina fell to fifth, behind three teams from the Big Ten.

The Runnin' Rebels, 5-0, moved up from last week's No. 2 ranking with 39 first-place votes and 1,236 points from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters. UNLV's only game last week was an 80-77 victory at Memphis State.

"I don't know that we're the best team in the country, but I know we've beaten five of the better teams in the country," Nevada-Las Vegas Coach Jerry Tarkanian said when told of his team's new poll position.

In the preseason National Invitation Tournament, the Runnin' Rebels posted victories over Arizona, Oklahoma, Temple and Western Kentucky. All but Temple have been ranked this season.

College basketball

"I don't think anybody in the country has played five games like we have so far," Tarkanian said.

Tarkanian praised his players but also felt there were other reasons for the perfect record.

"We've won so many close games," Tarkanian said. "We have great kids, they work hard. All our kids say no one works harder than we do."

"We've been lucky too. You can say all you want about character. Indiana has to bounce your way sometimes. We hit the clutch free throws, the clutch baskets."

The last time Nevada-Las Vegas held the No. 1 ranking was in February 1983. However, that lasted just one week as the Runnin' Rebels, then 24-0, lost road games at Fullerton State and West Virginia.

Nevada-Las Vegas' next game will be Saturday at Nevada-Reno. Indiana is second with 14 first-place votes and 1,147 points, followed by Purdue, seven first-place votes and 1,129 points, and Iowa, which had 1,029 points.

Indiana, 3-0, beat Notre Dame and Ohio State, 13 Kentucky last week while Purdue, 2-0, registered victories over Illinois State and Connecticut. Iowa beat Missouri-St. Louis before winning the Amana-Hawkeye Classic, which it hosts.

North Carolina, 4-1, fell from the top spot in the poll in the preseason and first regular-season poll as it won two of three games last week. The Tar Heels, who had one first-place vote and 1,012 points, lost 88-84 at UCLA before posting home victories over Seton Hall, 100-84, and Miami, Fla., 122-77.

Illinois, the fourth Big Ten team in the poll, jumped from last week's No. 9 ranking with a 99-97 road victory over then-No. 2 Pittsburgh. The Fighting Illini, 4-0, had one first-place vote and 857 points.

Rounding out the Top Ten were Auburn, which also received one first-place vote and 779 points; Western Kentucky, 683 points; Oklahoma, 627 points; and Navy, 547 points.

Western Kentucky, 6-1, and Oklahoma, 5-1, jumped from 14th and 11th, respectively. Both schools' only loss was to Nevada-Las Vegas in the preseason National Invitation Tournament.

Leading off the Second Ten is UCLA, 3-0, which received one first-place vote and 517 points.

Following UCLA in the Second Ten were Syracuse, Georgetown, Kansas, North Carolina State, Georgia Tech, Pittsburgh, Alabama, Kentucky and Arkansas.

Last week's Second Ten was Oklahoma, Pittsburgh, Kentucky, Western Kentucky, Georgia Tech.

Big Sky OT wins a matter of survival

By The Associated Press

Three overtime victories for Big Sky Conference basketball teams on Saturday night pretty much summed up the way most league teams have fared against nonconference competition so far this season — they've survived, sometimes.

conference teams will be trying to notch a few more wins early this season, with four games last night and three more tonight.

Last night, Idaho took its 4-0 record on the road against New Mexico, 2-2 Montana hosted Southern Oregon State, 1-2 Montana-State entertained San Diego and 2-2 Northern Arizona took on in-state rival Arizona.

Tonight, 2-2 Idaho State will try to come back from Friday's loss at Wyoming, hosting Southern Oregon in the Mindome. Montana State remains at home against Houston Baptist, and 2-2 Nevada-Reno hosts San Francisco in a rematch of the Wolf Pack's 117-93 loss to the Dons last week.

In Saturday's games, NAU dropped Air Force 86-77 in overtime.

UNR slipped past San Diego, which beat Boise State at the buzzer on Thursday, 81-80 in overtime; 1-4 Weber State, after losing 92-90 in overtime to Southern Utah on Thursday, allowed Oregon some revenge for the Ducks' upset loss to Big Sky Idaho State earlier in the week, falling 75-57, and Montana looked tough in an 80-65 thrashing of Fresno State.

The Grizzlies, came back from an eight-point deficit in the first half with a 28-4 scoring blitz, then held off Bulldog runs in the second half.

"We had just an excellent week on defense," said Montana guard Craig Zanon, who hit four three-point shots and paced the Grizzlies with 20 points. "We just stressed hustling, our blitz off and having everybody blocking out, the guards especially. That was our savior."

Vandals drop first of season to New Mexico

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — The free-throw shooting of guard Kelvin Scarborough and the outside touch of forward Hunter Greene carried New Mexico to a 74-70 non-conference college basketball victory Monday night over Idaho.

Scarborough led New Mexico with 23 points, including a 19-0-17 effort at the free throw line. Greene added 24 points, most of them outside jumpers that consistently found the net, and came up with a career-high 14 rebounds.

Idaho, taking its first loss after four straight wins, was led by junior guard Vinson Metcalf with 22 points, including a trio of three-point goals.

The Vandals also got 13 points from forward Ken Lockett and 11 second-half points from senior center Brian Coleman.

New Mexico hit six straight shots and outscored the Vandals 12-2 over a four-minute stretch in the first half en route to a 32-21 halftime lead.

The Scarborough-Greene combination, plus two second half technicals from first-year Idaho coach Tim Floyd, allowed the Lobos to hold off the Vandals.

Scarborough hit four free throws in the final minute to seal the victory.

The win improved New Mexico's record to 5-2.

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Senior Steve Vanek scored a career-high 22 points and grabbed 10 rebounds Monday night as Montana defeated Southern Oregon State 77-49 in a non-conference basketball game.

Montana had trouble early, but Vanek then began dominating the smaller Raiders. The 6-9 center had 16 points and all of his rebounds in the first half as the Grizzlies moved to a 33-24 halftime lead.

Starting the second half, Montana outscored the Raiders 14-4 for a 47-28 lead with 14:20 remaining.

Also in double figures for Montana, now 3-2 for the season, was Todd Powell with 13 and Tony Reed with 10.

Wilbur, Fleming topped the Raiders, now 5-1, with 13 points followed by Randy Rose with 11.

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — The brother duo of Shaan and Kral Perch combined for 39 points to help Montana State to a 76-66 nonconference basketball victory over the University of San Diego Monday night.

The brothers helped MSU even its season record at 2-2, while handing San Diego its second straight road loss to move the Toreros to 2-2 for the season.

MSU's Bobcats pulled into the lead midway through the first half and had as much as a 9-point lead, 29-20, with 5:28 to play. By intermission the score was 34-28.

Behind the three-point field goals of Shaan Perch and Ray Willis, the Bobcats moved to a 14-point lead, 65-51, with 6:13 left in the game.

San Diego closed within seven points on two occasions but could get no closer.

Shann Perch had 20 points for MSU, including three 3-point field goals, while brother Kral had 19 points. Willis also was in double figures with 16 points.

San Diego was paced by Nils Madden with 17 points, which included 8-of-8 from the floor. Paul Leonard added 12 points.

San Diego's 7-foot center Scott Thompson was held to just nine points, 12 below his season average.

Arizona 76 N. Arizona 69

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona forward Sean Elliott pumped in 24 points, including two free throws with just over a minute remaining, as the Wildcats defeated Northern Arizona 76-69 Monday in a basketball matchup of defending conference champions.

Arizona, 2-2, went on a 17-2 run to open the second half, stretching a 33-29 halftime lead to 50-31 with about 15 minutes to play.

Sophomore guard Ken Lotton keyed the Wildcat spurt with two three-point baskets and a steal which produced two Anthony Cook free throws, while Elliott and Cook shut down the Lumberjacks inside.

NAU, the defending Big Sky Conference regular-season champion, edged back to within three points at 72-69 with 1:04 to go. But Elliott was fouled and converted both shots of a one-and-one opportunity, and the defending Pacific-10 champions shut out the Lumberjacks the rest of the way.

NAU, 2-3, was led by Rob Matasi with 16 points and Terrence Sims with 15.

Boilermakers' 'D' pressure bottles up Wichita State, 77-61

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Third-ranked Purdue's tough defense hampered Wichita State in a 77-61 victory Monday night, Shocker Coach Eddie Fogler said, but he might get an argument from the Boilermakers' Gene Keedy.

"The pressure defense and size wore us down," said Fogler, whose squad shot just 36 percent. "Their defense puts great pressure on the ball and makes you do things you don't do in practice."

But Keedy, who saw his team called for 27 fouls while improving its record to 4-0, disagreed.

"You play defense with your feet and your head," Keedy said. "We're not seeing the ball. It's ridiculous to play defense and feech."

"I'm always happy with a win, but my concern is improvement," the Purdue coach added. "We're not really improving. Our free-throw shooting (16-29) was poor and we fouled too much. We're not doing the things the way I think things ought to be done."

finished with 20 points, keyed the scoring streak that gave Purdue the lead for good.

Syracuse 83, Cornell 76

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Syracuse had their first real score of the season as Cornell closed a 17-point halftime deficit to four with the 52 seconds left before the 12-ranked Orangemen prevailed, 83-76, Monday night.

Syracuse was led by sophomore point guard Sherman Douglas, who scored 22 points and added six assists.

The Big Red took full advantage of the three-point line, scoring 18 second-half points from that range.

"At that stage of the game, if we didn't hit them (three-point attempts) it would not have even been a game," Cornell sophomore guard Josh Wexler said.

Wexler, made four of five three-point attempts in the last 6 1/2 minutes, but missed his final attempt, which would have closed the margin to two points with 25 seconds to play.

Illinois 85, E. Illinois 51

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Senior forward Ken Norman scored 21 points Monday night to lead sixth-ranked Illinois to an 85-51 victory over Eastern Illinois.

No other Illini player reached double figures as Coach Lou Henson substituted early and often en route to the victory that improved Illinois' record to 5-0.

Eastern Illinois, 2-1, was led by Dave Stein who scored 11 points and Norm Evans with 10.

Illinois, which led 42-19 at halftime, jumped to a quick lead against the undermanned Panthers behind the scoring of Norman, who had 17 first-half points.

Except for Norman, Illinois had a balanced scoring attack. Forwards Phil Kunz and Lowell Hamilton scored nine points each, while four players — Tony Wyszynski, Doug Gill, and Glynn Blackwell — contributed eight points each.

Pitt 99, Xavier 76

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Coach Paul Evans said it may not have been perfect, but his Panthers' convincing victory over Xavier was enough to help them forget their two-point loss to Illinois last weekend.

"Sometimes you like to play another game as soon as possible to get the taste of the loss out of your mouth," Evans said after the Panthers beat Xavier on Monday night. "We played well and did some good things but we still did some stupid things. We have to be more consistent."

Charles Smith and Demetres Gore each had 23 points and all five starters scored in double figures to lead the 17th-ranked Panthers, who lost 99-77 to No. 9 Illinois.

Curtis Alken had 21 points while Jerome Lane added 11 and Mike Goodson contributed 10 for the Panthers, 3-1.

Pitt came out playing a man-to-man defense, even though Evans usually uses a zone. The pressure seemed to work against Xavier, which doesn't have a senior starter.

Navy 92, St. Leo 57

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — It isn't easy taking a team seriously that lost its last game by 75 points.

Navy apparently didn't Monday night.

After five minutes of play, the 10th-ranked Midshipmen found themselves trailing St. Leo, a team that three nights ago was manhandled 128-51 by Georgetown. But David Robinson, who scored 30 points, led Navy back to a 92-57 college basketball victory before about 2,500 people at Halsey Field House.

"I thought (St. Leo) showed a lot of heart," Herrmann said. "They played very hard and effective early in the game, but once we got running in the second half and played better at the defensive end, we were able to extend the lead."

Robinson, who has a history of playing poorly against lesser opponents, was Navy's most productive player in the early going.

Axe finally falls on USC's Tollner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ted Tollner has been dismissed as the head football coach at the University of Southern California, effective next month, it was announced Monday.

"Without getting into specifics, we considered all the areas involved with the direction of the program and we decided we needed new leadership," Southern Cal Athletic Director Mike McGee said at a campus news conference.

University President James Zumberger stressed he thought the future of the football program at the school would be better served under a new coach.

Tollner, who met with the press afterwards, clearly disagreed with the decision.

"It's hard to face the reality right today because I am a little bit, in addition to being disappointed, shocked because I personally think the decision is wrong — based on criteria I think a football program should be judged," he said.

Zumberger called the decision to dismiss Tollner a "judgement call" and said that only time will tell if it was the correct move to make.

Despite the criticism he's endured for the past four years, the 46-year-old Tollner said his experience at Southern Cal was a good one.

obvious reasons," he said. "This is a great university and a great job. Believe it or not, it's been a lot more enjoyable than you might think. It really has been."

McGee said a search for a coach would begin immediately and that he expected a number of top-flight coaches will be considered.

"I think this is one of the top three jobs in the country today ... with that in mind, I think we'll attract a strong pool of candidates," McGee said, adding that a coach would be named as soon as possible but there was no time frame involved.

In Tollner's four years as head coach, the Trojans had a 26-19-1 record with one Pacific-10 Conference championship and three appearances in post-season bowl games, including the 1985 Rose Bowl. The Trojans finished the 1986 season at 7-4 and will play Auburn in the Florida Citrus Bowl on New Year's Day. Southern Cal was ranked 10th prior to losing its final two games, 45-25 to UCLA on Nov. 22 and 38-37 to Notre Dame a week later.

Tollner's four-year record was 1-7 against Notre Dame and UCLA, the school's two biggest rivals.

"Over the four-year period, the fact that the record of the current coach (against Notre Dame and UCLA) is 1-7 — while his predecessor was 11-2 — was taken into consideration. But no one game was responsible," McGee said.

Zumberger said that he reached the decision Saturday and informed Tollner of his decision Monday morning.

"A decision of this magnitude is not arrived at without considerable personal pain and agony," the statement continued. "These considerations, however, must be set aside when the best interests of the university are at stake. Those interests are related to the high expectations that the university has with respect to its football program."

After going 4-4-1 his first season, Tollner led the Trojans to a Pac-10 championship in 1984 and a 20-17 victory over Ohio State in the Rose Bowl.

Arnsperger named AD at Florida

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Bill Arnsperger, who coached Louisiana State to the Southeastern Conference football championship this season, was named Monday as athletic director at the University of Florida.

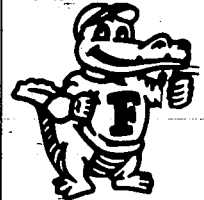

The appointment by Florida President Marshall Criser ended weeks of speculation that Arnsperger, 60, would leave the Baton Rouge, La., school to accept the position.

Arnsperger, who has announced his retirement from coaching effective after LSU's Jan. 1 appearance in the Sugar Bowl, was interviewed for the job last fall but withdrew his name from consideration when Florida decided it would not name a successor to Bill Carr before the start of football season.

Carr, who served as athletic director for seven years, submitted his resignation June 9 to pursue outside interests. He left the job in early October.

The LSU football program prospered under Arnsperger, compiling a three-year record of 26-7-2. The fifth-ranked Tigers finished the 1986 regular season with a 9-2 record and were surprise winners of the SEC championship.

Senior Associate Athletic Director Jeremy Foley has served as interim director since Carr left to accept a was a "recent decision" to take the Florida job, adding that among his other options was staying at LSU in some other capacity.

Arnsperger said he was never offered the athletic director's job at the Baton Rouge school, but acknowledged that there had been some discussion about the possibility of him continuing as coach there.

"That was talked about at one time," Arnsperger said, adding that he has no interest in returning to the sidelines in the future.

"I have no other desires to coach," he added. "If I wanted to coach, I'd stay at LSU."

Terms of Arnsperger's contract with Florida were not announced. He said he intends to coach LSU against Nebraska in the Sugar Bowl, and then begin work in Gainesville some time after Jan. 1.

Arnsperger, a graduate of Miami of Ohio, has served as an assistant coach there and at Ohio State, Kentucky and Tulane. He was an assistant to Don Shula with the Baltimore Colts of the NFL before both moved to the Miami Dolphins in 1970.

He stayed with the Dolphins through 1983 when he accepted the head coaching job at LSU. The Tigers posted records of 8-3-1, 9-2-1 and 9-2 under him.

Ex-Terp head Driesell to guide East at Festival

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Ledy Driesell, who resigned from his position as head basketball coach at Maryland last month, was among eight basketball coaches named for the 1987 U.S. Olympic Festival, the Amateur Basketball Association of the USA announced Monday.

Driesell, who accepted a post as assistant athletic director at Maryland following his resignation after 17 years at the school, saw his program publicly examined after the cocaine-induced death of graduated All-American Len Bias in June.

Tom McGrath, associate executive director of AUSA, said Monday night that Driesell's resignation had no bearing on the association's decision to choose him as a coach. McGrath said Driesell was selected because of the number of years he served as a coach in the college ranks, and for his contributions to collegiate coaching ... and he's had great success at Maryland."

The other men's coaches named for the festival were Eddie Sutton of Kentucky, Jud Heathcote of Michigan State and Andy Russo of Washington.

The four women's coaches named were Leon Barmore of Louisiana Tech, Jorja Hoehn of Indiana, Ceal Barry of Colorado and Deborah Ryan of Virginia.

Sutton, who guided Kentucky to a 32-4 record last season and a spot in the NCAA final eight, will coach the South squad in the festival, while Driesell, who compiled a 349-159 record with the Terrans, will head the East squad.

Heathcote, whose 1979 Spartans won the NCAA championship, will direct the North team with Russo, who led Washington to a 19-12 record last year, leading the West squad.

In the women's competition, Barmore, whose teams boast a 117-14 record, will lead the North team. Hoehn, national coach of the year in 1983 and 1985, while at Central Missouri State, is the South's head coach.

Barry, whose Colorado team was 21-9 last season, was named to coach the East squad and Ryan, a three-time coach of the year whose Virginia team went 26-3 last year, will head the West team.

The 34-sport Olympic Festival will be July 17-26 in the North Carolina cities of Raleigh, Durham, Chapel Hill and Greensboro.

Who's Who of injuries pass through Kerlan-Jobe Clinic doors

By AVI ARDITTI
Associated Press Writer

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — When the superheros of sports break down, Robert Kerlan and Frank Jobe put them back together.

The two surgeons, founders of the Kerlan-Jobe Orthopedic Clinic, have mended practically everybody who's anybody from Will Chamberlain and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar to Pedro Guerrero and Bill Shoemaker.

Next up, Jim McMahon.

On Friday, Jobe will perform arthroscopic surgery on the Chicago whose painful knee injury was operated on by both Kerlan and Jobe, inscribed on a photo hanging in Kerlan's office.

"Dr. Jobe and I put him back together in November 1969. He came back in record time and played in the championship series in 1970," Kerlan said with a note of pride.

Another patient is the NBA's oldest player and highest scorer: 39-year-old Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Los Angeles Lakers.

"We've done a lot of things with Kareem. The most important thing is to help him keep him going to his ripe old age," Kerlan said, adding he's treated Abdul-Jabbar for several hand fractures and a severe ankle sprain.

In 1973, Jobe, who has created a series of widely used shoulder and arm exercises for baseball players, gained attention when he transplanted a tendon from one of John's arms to the other to repair a torn ligament in his elbow — and save his pitching career.

"The operation was one we developed. He had to have an operation because he couldn't pitch the way he was. The principle (transplanting a tendon) was good; it's been used on polo patients," Jobe said. "He recognized there was no other option if he was going to play."

"The field of sports medicine is becoming more sophisticated in its approach to diagnosis and treatment," said Kerlan, team doctor for the Lakers, the Los Angeles Rams and the California Angels and consultant to several other organizations.

One of the biggest medical bones of recent times has been the arthroscope. By inserting a fiber optic tube down a one-quarter inch incision, doctors can study elbow or knee injuries, for example, without surgery. If an operation is needed, surgeons guided by the scope generally can perform it on an outpatient basis.

"When I first started doing sports medicine, any pitcher who had a scar on his elbow was through. It just seemed like they didn't want to be operated on for any reason," said Jobe, physician to the Los Angeles Dodgers and the PGA. "Now they're more willing to accept it as one of the options."

As a reward for keeping him whole through thousands of races, the 55-year-old Shoemaker presented Kerlan with one of his original whips. The brown-leather whip hangs in the doctor's office, alongside autographed game balls, ceremonial World Series bats, hockey sticks and team trophies. An old photograph shows Shoemaker, on crutches, and Kerlan standing together.

Among other injuries, Shoemaker fractured his femur in 1968 and his pelvis the following year, when a horse fell on him.

Injuries and illness also are involved in the players' complaints.

Thirty years ago, when a whitebe got knocked out, "they put you back in whenever you woke up," the 64-

In 1965, Kerlan found his focus on stream of sports figures from across treating athletes in such demand the country and as far away as Japan. They also see their share of school athletes and for the Biomechanics Laboratory that performs research at next-door Centinela Hospital.

Another facet of the clinic, the National Athletic Health Institute, has found, among other things, that the off-season holds the secret for extending an athlete's career, Kerlan said.

"It used to be you never saw an athlete until the beginning of training. Now the whole idea they're beginning to understand is that they're getting paid like executives, or better than executives, and therefore they should take a reasonable vacation, three or four weeks, and then get back into working hard."

"We don't find a lot of guys coming in as they used to with a big belly. They know if they come in that way they're going to have difficulty in competing at a level where they can even save their job. So it's become a part of their competitive edge."

Despite advances in medical techniques, sometimes the advice an athlete receives from doctors is that it's time to retire.

"It's particularly hard when it's a young person who can't go on," Kerlan said. "But most of the time it's easier because it's older people who've gotten to that point where they want guidance."

"There was Don Drysdale (former Dodger pitcher). We helped him make that decision when he had that torn rotator cuff. And there was Tom Mack and Merlin Olsen (both formerly with the Rams)."

"I helped (Joe) Theismann with his decision," Kerlan said of the pro quarterback-turned-broadcaster who suffered a broken leg in a grizzly play viewed by a national television audience last year.

Podiatric problems a NBA staple

By BILL BARNARD
Associated Press Writer

Picture a team with Michael Jordan, Darrall Griffith, Andrew Toney, Bill Cartwright, Bill Walton, Sidney Moncrief and Frank Johnson.

Sounds good, but if you're the general manager of such a team, the differences between victory and defeat might be the feet.

All seven of those players and others less prominent have missed moments, even years, because of foot injuries.

In the NBA, where players routinely have a vertical leap of 40 or more inches, feet take a constant pounding. Injuries can occur suddenly, or gradually, unexpected. It happened last year that an injury like that can ruin your season or even your career," said Jordan, who missed all but 16 regular-season games for the Chicago Bulls last season.

Scheduled for in the case of Boston's Walton and New York's Cartwright, a player is sidelined for weeks before the injury is diagnosed as a stress fracture.

"The signs of the game, the jumping ability of the players, the cutting, tripping, turning is much more than in the past," said Bulls Coach Doug Collins, whose high jumps caused him foot problems for much of his playing career.

"Fifteen years ago, there weren't any stress fractures because they didn't have the technology to detect them. They were treated as soft-tissue injuries. Today, with sophisticated equipment, we find these stress fractures."

Cartwright, who missed all but two games the last two seasons after sustaining a fracture in the left foot, said his problems started with a bruise that got worse and eventually the bone snapped.

Jordan was sidelined after a single misstep.

"My injury was freaky," he said. "I just came down on my foot wrong. It wasn't an injury that built up gradually."

Jordan, however, came back in just a single game, a playoff record of 62 points last April and averaged nearly 40 points per game in the first month of this season.

Moncrief, an All-Star guard for the Milwaukee Bucks, did not have a stress fracture, but he was severely hampered in the playoffs last season when he suffered torn tissue in his arch.

Moncrief says "wear and tear" caused his problems.

"That pounding accumulates," he said.

he said. "I believe more consideration should be put into court surfaces."

Meanwhile, with the advanced technology to find those tiny breaks has come an increase in preventative measures.

Orthotics—custom-made foam or plastic inserts for shoes, are considered a savior by some trainers and players. They are designed to take pressure off a weak part of a foot and transfer it to a stronger part. But Jordan says they are overrated as a preventive measure and could even cause more problems.

"I won't wear them," he said. "Some guys go 10 or 15 years with nothing in their shoes, then put orthotics in and they can't adjust to them."

It's difficult, after you've played without orthotics your whole life, to start wearing them because they change your gait," Collins said. "It depends on the player whether they prevent injury."

Among the players with foot problems, Cartwright is the strongest advocate of orthotic inserts.

"Without question, they are the key to keeping me healthy," the Knicks' leading scorer this season said.

Fatigue grips players

Rx for tennis: Rest

LONDON (AP) — As another Grand Prix tennis season nears its climax, many of the world's top professionals are dragging their racquets.

Some players blame the sport's authorities for their fatigue, saying they are forced by the rules to push themselves to unacceptable limits. Others say it's a result of a trend toward more muscular play, with power replacing finesse. Still others blame themselves.

The ruling body of men's tennis says the players are responsible for the long season, frequently crowded by exhibition matches that earn the top stars five-figure appearance fees no matter who wins. It says the tournament requirements cover less than half a year, giving players plenty of time to rest if they want to.

Whatever the reason, the players say they are tired and badly need a break from the game.

"When you play and play, eventually the body just says no," said Stefan Edberg of Sweden, ranked fourth in the world but a victim of late-season letdown.

Edberg was the top seed at this month's Benson and Hedges Championships at Wembley Arena, but was eliminated in the first round by Jacob Hasek of Switzerland, ranked 28th in the world.

The loss was hardly startling at Wembley. Of the eight players in the quarterfinals, only two were seeded, with the rest eliminated by unseeded opponents.

Edberg had never lost to Hasek in previous meetings, overpowering the Swiss with his all-around game. "This time, he was tired physically and mentally," Hasek said. "I could see it."

The Swedish star agreed.

"I've played a awful lot this year, almost non-stop since the French Open," he said. "I think that's far too much. People who make the rules are not tennis players and do not understand what it's like to play so much."

The head of the Men's International Professional Tennis Council said the players themselves may not understand that when they draw up their own schedules.

"The reason they say they're tired, and I'm sure many are, is that they constantly play special events," Marshall Happer, MPTC administrator, said in a telephone interview from New York. "Any time anyone offers them a dollar, year-old surgeon said. "That still happens. It shouldn't, though."

Kerlan considers Koufax to be the first patient to have focused attention to the special needs of athletes, explaining: "He had enough stature so that attention was brought to his care."

"I remember it was an April Fool's Day and they (the Dodgers) were in Florida and I was here and Buzzie (Bavasi, the club's general manager) called and said, 'Koufax's elbow is as big as a cantaloupe.' I said 'Yeah, April Fool' and hung up. He called back right away and said 'Look, this isn't any joke.'"

"They sent Sandy back here and we made the diagnosis of his arthritic elbow and treated it for several years while he continued to play."

A nine-letter man in high school in Minnesota, Kerlan's days as an athlete in UCLA were cut short when congenital — and ultimately crippling — arthritis began affecting him in the late 1930s.

"I got into orthopedics and wanted to subspecialize in sports medicine, but there wasn't any such thing. It was kind of primitive in those days," said Kerlan, who runs crutches and no longer performs surgery.

THE ACES BOBBY WOLFF

"To be alive at all involves some risk." - Harold Macmillan.

When facing danger in one suit, declarer tries to avoid creating danger in another suit.

A no-trump game was bid at both tables of a recent game.

West led the club jack to South's queen, and it was clear that the future lay with winning five diamond tricks.

One declarer placed all his bets on a 3-2 diamond break; which did not come home.

When Henry Bar, of Dallas played the game, he reasoned that he had to play hearts sooner or later and it might as well be sooner.

At trick three he led a low heart from dummy, and East was back.

ANSWER: Three no-trump. Hope for a little luck and nine tricks.

Send bridge questions to The Aces, P.O. Box 1284, Dallas, Texas 75233, with self-addressed stamped envelope.

White House trims GNP predictions for '87

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration on Monday predicted that the U.S. economy will expand by a modest 3.2 percent next year, up from this year's sluggish growth but a full percentage point below its earlier projection.

Derry Sprinkel, chairman of the president's Council on Economic Advisors, said the collapse in oil prices in early 1988 and anticipated short-term adverse effects of tax revision were factors in the lowered projection.

At the same time, a group of business economists projected growth for next year at an even lower 2.8 percent and some said that a recession may be looming in 1989.

But Sprinkel told reporters, "You can eliminate recession as a major risk."

The administration forecast projected six additional years without a recession, with growth in the gross national product rising to 3.7 percent in 1988 and then falling gradually to about 3.3 percent in 1992.

The growth figures used by both the administration and the business economists refer to "real" GNP growth, which is calculated after effects of inflation are removed. GNP growth is the broadest measure of economic activity.

So far this year, the GNP has risen at an annual rate of about 2.4 percent.

The new administration forecast projected civilian unemployment, running at 7 percent this year, to decline to 6 percent in 1987.

It said inflation, as measured by the consumer price index, would rise to the level of 3.8 percent next year — up from 0.7 percent inflation posted this year because of the drop in oil prices.

The administration projected that interest rates will decline by three months Treasury bills to 5.4 percent from this year's average rate of 6 percent and 10-year Treasury securities to 6.7 percent from the 1986 average of 7.7 percent.

Sprinkel said the reduced growth estimate would imply lower revenues than originally projected, making it even harder for the administration to meet the Gramm-Rudman deficit target of $108 billion that it had vowed to do in its budget for fiscal year 1989.

But the alternative, he told a White House news conference, was "having a high unrealistic forecast."

Although precise figures on the revenue impact were unavailable, government economists earlier have said that each percentage drop in the GNP causes revenues to fall and the deficit to rise — by roughly $6 billion.

The 3.2 percent growth estimate is lower than an earlier internal projection by top administration economists of 3.5 percent.

The lower figure was adopted in a meeting with Sprinkel, Treasury Secretary James C. Baker III and Budget Director James C. Miller III.

"We want a credible forecast — one we can believe in and one even some of you can believe in," Sprinkel said. Administration forecasts are usually far more optimistic than private ones.

Although the business economists issued no specific economic storm warnings, the forecasters seemed to think such sluggish performance couldn't go on forever. And a majority thought things would get worse rather than better.

"As the U.S. expansion begins its fifth year, economists continue to be concerned about a recession on the horizon," said Jerry Jordan, president of the 4,000-member National Association of Business Economists.

"Although only about 30 percent believe we will be in recession by the end of 1987, about 60 percent expect a downturn by the end of 1988 and over 90 percent anticipate a decline before the close of 1989," said Jordan, a former member of President Reagan's Council of Economic Advisors and currently senior vice president and chief economist of First Interstate Bancorp in Los Angeles.

In other specific forecasts, the surveyed economists said:

- Consumer prices will rise 3.8 percent in 1987, double this year's estimated 1.9 percent, but still below the big increases of the late 1970s and early 1980s.
- Unemployment will be 6.9 percent at the end of 1987, around the same 7 percent level where it has been stalled for 18 months.
- The prime interest rate charged by banks will decline slightly by midyear from the current 7.5 percent, but then will rise to 7.6 percent by yearend.
- The federal budget deficit will be $195 billion for 1987, up from the administration's projected $163 billion but down considerably from the record $211 billion for just-ended fiscal 1986.
- The major industries of home-building and auto sales will show declines next year, from 1.85 million to 1.72 million housing starts and from 11.3 million to 10.5 million cars, but overall corporate after-tax profits will rise 6.6 percent compared with 4.4 percent this year.

They're pitching for share of Boeing workers' bonuses

Seattle retailers, car dealers smile

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — Christmas will come 10 days early for Seattle retailers and car dealers, as 80,000 Boeing Co. employees receive $200 million and merchants angle for a piece of the action.

As part of new contracts negotiated this fall, Boeing workers will receive lump-sum bonuses ranging from 9 percent to 12 percent of gross pay. For a machinist earning $25,000 a year, that comes to a tidy $3,000; for a $60,000-a-year engineer, an even tidier $5,400.

"I don't know how much money it's going to dump in the Seattle area, but it's probably good news for retailers, car dealers and big-screen TV dealers," said Boeing spokesman Fred Kelley.

Boeing has 115,000 workers companywide and about 80,000 in the Seattle-Everett area.

All but administrative employees, who will have to wait until February, get their bonuses Dec. 15. But Seattle newspapers this past Friday were dotted with car advertisements pleading with Boeing workers to part with some of the money.

"Public Notice to Boeing Employees," said the inch-high letters in Performance Dodge's ad. "Before you purchase your new car or truck, you owe it to yourself to shop us LAST!"

"A lot of car dealerships will be going after their business," said Bill Cooper, executive director of R & W Chevrolet in Seattle. Cooper says his company, which also is a Nissan dealer, has been running radio spots asking Boeing employees to bring in their bonuses and make a deal.

He said he hopes to attract 100 to 125 serious shoppers this weekend.

Auto dealers' ads are pitched to bring in Boeing workers and "probably 20 to 25 percent of the cars we sell this weekend will be to Boeing employees."

Ken Lowe, sales manager at Michael's Buick-Toyota, said his dealership and a number of others offered a special three-day sale to Boeing Credit Union members, offering cars at fleet discounts or better.

"We expect to sell between 65 to 85 cars," Lowe said. "An average weekend for us in December would be 19 to 25 units. This should triple our production."

Lowe said the bonuses are part of the rationale for the sale, but dealers also are pointing out that state sales tax deductions for big-ticket items such as cars end this year under the new tax law.

Spokesman for some other retailers were unsure what effect the bonuses would have on their trade beyond the expected Christmas rush.

Most downtown merchants are not planning any special advertising aimed at Boeing workers, said Michael Hamilton, marketing director for the Downtown Seattle Association. But he said part of the bonus money undoubtedly will end up there.

"I'm sure if they have some extra money they probably will find a place to spend it," he said.

Boeing has had record sales of commercial aircraft part the past two years, with orders for 1986 expected to top $20 billion. In contract negotiations, union members demanded to share the wealth.

Kelley said he had no total figure for the bonuses, but noted that in 1985, Boeing paid nearly $3.5 billion in wages to about 98,700 workers.

Using a rough estimate of $4 billion total wages this year, and taking the lower 3 percent figure, Boeing would be paying out approximately $360 million in all bonuses, and roughly $250 million in Washington state. But that figure actually "would be higher, since 40,000 Boeing workers — the unionists — get a 12 percent bonus."

Jim Roller, Boeing Credit Union senior vice president, said about 45 dealers participated in the car promotion. He said credit union members were mailed information about the sale, along with a loan application.

Roller said he expected at least some employees will deposit part of their bonuses in the credit union, but it's difficult to gauge how many. "A lot of them have Christmas on their minds," he said.

Kelley, who gets his bonus next year, said that while Boeing has given out year-end bonuses before, "historically there hasn't been this type of thing."

"I think I'm going to try to reduce some of my consumer debt," Kelley said. "Anyway, my wife has some plans for it."

USAir, PSA set to merge in major deal

8th largest airline in offing

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — USAir joined the airline merger movement Monday, announcing the purchase of Pacific Southwest Airlines in a deal that will establish the carrier firmly on the West Coast and give it the size to compete in a rapidly consolidating industry.

The merger combines two carriers that have concentrated on developing successful short- and medium-haul markets at opposite ends of the country with a fleet of modern, fuel-efficient aircraft.

The combined airline will become the country's eighth largest once all the currently proposed mergers are completed. USAir now ranks seventh and PSA is 11th largest in terms of revenue passengers miles flown during the first six months of the year.

The boards of directors of both airline companies approved the merger during intensive discussions during the weekend and it was announced at a news conference by USAir Chairman Edwin Colodny early in the morning.

Colodny recently had expressed a desire to keep the West Coast airline independent.

Colodny said USAir has had "a long interest" in expanding into the West and that the purchase of PSA "obviously was dictated by their decision to sell."

Even in recent weeks, Paul C. Barkley, PSA's chairman and chief operating officer, had indicated that the airline expected to remain independent despite the frenzy of recent mergers in the industry.

But, according to industry analysts and sources within the airline, several recent developments had caused the PSA board to look for a buyer.

Among those developments was the recently announced purchase by American Airlines of Air California, the decision by United Airlines to sharply expand its operations at Los Angeles and the merger of Delta Air Lines with Western Airlines.

"As far as (the USAir and PSA route) systems go its a natural. It puts them in a position to really expand their east-west connections," said Louis A. Marcesano, an airline industry analyst for Janney Montgomery Scott Inc.

Colodny said USAir Group, the airline's parent company, would buy PSA for $17 a share with the total transaction value of about $400 million. USAir common stock closed at $11.25 a share over the counter on Friday.

Both of the airlines have been profitable with PSA, headquartered in San Diego, earning $112 million during the first nine months of this year. During the same period, USAir, which is headquartered near Washington, D.C., earned $59.6 million. The third quarter was PSA's most successful quarter in its history with earnings of $11.7 million.

The deal still must be approved by the Federal Reserve Board as well as the Transportation Department. Colodny said he expects no problems getting government clearance for the merger since the two airlines do not compete directly.

USAir, once known as Allegheny Airlines, has concentrated its routes east of the Mississippi River, funneling flights through its hub at Pittsburgh. While it has a small number of flights to the West Coast, the heart of its system is in the Northeast and south to Florida.

The acquisition is the latest in a string of airline mergers this year that has produced the rapid consolidation of major airline companies. Once the currently proposed mergers are completed, the combined USAir and PSA will rank behind Texas Air Corp., United, American, DeltaWestern, NorthwestRepublic, TWA-Ozark and Pan American World Airways.

PSA is concentrated along the West Coast with a total of 228 daily flights out of Los Angeles and San Francisco. It has flights as far north as Seattle and Bellingham, Wash., and south to San Diego and Tucson, Ariz.

Colodny said that USAir initially would operate PSA as a wholly owned subsidiary, maintaining the West Coast airline's management group, but that eventually the two airlines would be merged into one carrier. USAir has about 20,000 employees and PSA nearly 5,000.

USAir plans immediately to begin joint marketing programs that link some of USAir's transcontinental flights to PSA's flights in the West. USAir also plans to add two flights next year to Seattle and Las Vegas, which PSA also serves.

Colodny said "one of the beauties of this agreement is PSA's modern fleet of jetliners, which includes 31 McDonnell Douglas MD-80s and 20 British Aerospace BAe-146s. The two airlines together will have 202 aircraft.

Polish silver image, consultant advises

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Gold was the star of the Northwest Mining Association's 32nd annual convention, but a consultant and commodity researcher suggested silver miners polish the image of the depressed metal to boost its price.

American silver miners should form a producers' association to advertise silver to consumers, said Paul Sarnoff, author of 35 books and a former research director at the brokerage of ContiCommodity and Rushton Wolf.

A promotional investment of one cent on every ounce of silver mined in the United States would result in a boost in price of $2 per ounce, Sarnoff said.

Silver currently trades at about $5.40 an ounce. The price would rise because promoting silver would increase demand for jewelry and flatware, he said.

Sarnoff, who conducted a trading seminar at the convention, said a "distorted relationship" exists between the prices of gold and silver, with silver underpriced in relation to gold.

It is underpriced because, unlike gold, it isn't advertised to consumers, he said.

The Silver Institute failed in an effort this year to launch a silver promotion campaign because its South American members wouldn't back the program, he said.

"I have a dream — to get the price of silver back into line with its historical relationship to gold," he said.

Until recently, it took 33 ounces of silver to buy an ounce of gold. But since 1980, the ratio has stretched to 72 ounces, he said.

Sarnoff said American miners could follow the lead of South Africa's gold producers, who promote gold through cooperative advertising campaigns with jewelry makers and other gold fabricators.

Meanwhile, close to 1,000 miners — half of the conventioners — attended some of the sessions on gold, a convention official said. The convention ended on Saturday.

Gold's relatively strong recent price accounted for the interest. The metal has been trading at about $380 an ounce.

Managing risk is the right strategy for short-term gold trading, a New York metals trader said.

Traders must devote a set amount of time on a regular basis to their trading decisions, said Otto Boersma, manager of Cargill Inc.'s precious metals department.

Boersma advised miners to follow prices, rather than market predictions.

GM's sweet deal for Perot shares sours other stockholders

NEW YORK — When General Motors plucked a then named Ross Perot from its corporate hide on Dec. 1 it paid him twice the price for his stock that could have been obtained by lesser shareholders.

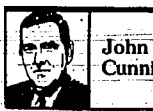

Included in the deal was an agreement to make similar payments to some top officers of Electronic Data Systems Corp., founded by Perot, purchased by GM in 1984 and operated since then as a semi-autonomous GM subsidiary.

In addition, the GM-Perot deal included a pact designed to prevent Perot from continuing his criticism of GM management, which critics, he insists, was for the future good of the company, the world's largest manufacturer.

It has other shareholders wondering. And, considering that the agreement follows a spate of public complaints of illegal insider trading and questionable investor and corporate maneuvers, it isn't just GM shareholders who wonder if they're getting a fair deal.

GM shareholders, however, have center owners and existing GM shareholders a special "Class B" common stock. The new stock provides dividends based on EDS profits; but it has only one-fourth the voting rights of regular GM shares.

John Cunniff

stage for the moment, and they are wondering:

1. Is it ethical to pay one investor more than another?
2. Is it in the shareholders interest to muzzle informed criticism?
3. Can a deal removing some of the top brains from EDS contribute to the value of GM's shares?

The Securities and Exchange Commission, already concerned with a series of revelations about illegal insider trading cases, is investigating in another aspect of the EDS-GM deal. Related matters, mainly arising out of insider trading and management behavior in takeover cases, are likely to be vented at another hearing, scheduled this month by the SEC.

William Proxmire, D-Wis., incoming chairman of the Senate Banking Committee.

Among festering questions that could be considered at that hearing are these: Are there further constraints needed on management's proclivity for expensive termination contracts, or golden parachutes, designed to ease their retirement should the company succumb to an unfriendly takeover?

Are so-called poison pills, in which management designs its board to thwart takeover, in the shareholder interest? Are pre-emptive buyouts, which occur when management ends a takeover threat by repurchasing a raider's shares at premium prices, in the shareholder interest? Is it in the shareholder interest to insist, as has been done in settling with a raider, that the raider refrain from purchasing a company's stock for a specified time in the future?

Other questions, some with even larger consequences, have arisen over the past year or so, and most have been left unanswered.

What constitutes insider trading, for example? Are these questions?

The SEC caught investor Ivan F. Boesky in a flagrant misuse of information not available to the trading public, which is the broad interpretation usually given to insider trading. Boesky paid for such information, further, he used it to buy low and, when the news became available to the public, sell high.

But where is the line drawn, for example, between information illegally obtained and information dug up through aggressive probing and analysis by a shrewd brokerage house researcher? Is that proprietary? Or public?

Such questions lead to more questions, many being asked by shareholders wondering if their marketplace rights are protected.

Trus Joist goes after door firm

BOISE (AP) — Trus Joist Corp. has begun negotiations toward purchase of Canada's largest wood window and door manufacturer that will allow the Boise-based company to get a hold in the stable home renovation market, President Walt Minnick has announced.

The purchase by Trus Joist of Dashwood Industries Limited of Centerville, Ontario, is contingent on a final investigation and audit and agreement on a purchase price, Minnick said.

The deal, which will not include Dashwood's Westcraft aluminum window manufacturing division on the West Coast, is expected to be concluded by mid-February.

Minnick said Trus Joist has been aggressively trying to expand its wood window business into the New England and upper Midwestern housing markets, and the acquisition of Dashwood, Canada's largest manufacturer and second largest distributor should boost Trus Joist sales by two-thirds.

Calling Dashwood's production line complementary to that of Trus Joist subsidiary Norco Windows Inc., Minnick said the acquisition would "provide the opportunity to diversify Trus Joist's products beyond new construction into the more stable and less cyclical home renovation market."

Dashwood owns a 370,000-square-foot plant and office complex on 52 acres in Centerville, Ontario, and employs some 400 workers. It also leases offices and distribution centers in Toronto and Ottawa.

The Treasury Department said that the November sales rate was more than six times higher than sales in November 1985 and surpassed the old record of $2.1 billion set in February 1984 during the World War II bond drives.

Officials said a large part of the total reflected bonds purchased in October but not processed by the government until November.

Palestinian woman walks past Israeli soldiers on street corner in occupied West Bank

Israeli soldiers open fire on Palestinian demonstrators

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Israeli troops fired on demonstrators in a Palestinian refugee camp Monday, killing a 12-year-old boy and wounding four others — people, Palestinian news reports said.

Soldiers also shot and wounded two other Palestinians, and stone-throwing Arabs injured two Israeli women in a fifth day of clashes in more than a dozen cities, villages and refugee camps in the territories Israel captured during the 1967 Middle East war.

Monday's death brought to four the number of Palestinian youths killed by Israeli soldiers since Thursday in the occupied territories, where about 1.4 million Palestinians and 50,000 Jewish settlers live.

More than 25 Palestinians have been wounded by Israeli gunfire, and at least 14 Israeli policemen and civilians have been injured by stones. Army and Palestinian reports say at least 100 Arabs have been detained.

In Monday's bloodiest clash, at the Balata refugee camp near Nablus, troops fired tear gas and opened fire on Palestinian youngsters who pelted them with stones, the army said.

Ramadan Mohammed Daoud Zeitun died of gunshot wounds in the head, said the Palestine Press Service, which monitors events in the occupied territories. The army said four protesters ranging in age from 14 to 20 were shot in the feet.

Although the army confirmed that a Palestinian boy died of gunshot wounds in the head, it said it could not describe the circumstances immediately.

Balata and the center of Nablus were ringed by soldiers and closed to traffic.

Military and Palestinian sources said the other two Palestinian injuries occurred during protests at a Jerusalem vocational college where dozens of students waved Palestinian banners, and at Sijjil, a Palestinian village north of Jerusalem.

Two Israeli women were reported hurt by stones in the West Bank town of El Bireh and the Jewish settlement of Psagot.

In a bid to end violence, Mayor Teddy Kolek of Jerusalem announced that $100,000 would be spent to repair a dozen Palestinian homes and shops damaged by Jewish extremists last month.

The Israeli government closed one of two Bir Zeit University campuses near Ramallah until Jan. 3. Bir Zeit, financed by Arab governments, has a student body of more than 2,000.

Witnesses in Ramallah said soldiers fired tear gas and shot into the air to disperse dozens of tire-burning protesters. A curfew was imposed on the town of 25,000.

Dozens of soldiers patrolled the deserted streets in jeeps and on foot, using bullhorns to order that stragglers return to their homes. Women carrying groceries ran for shelter.

At the nearby El Amari refugee camp, hundreds of protesters gathered in a narrow dirt street chanting slogans for the Palestine Liberation Organization. Police and soldiers used tear gas on chanting schoolgirls in Jerusalem and Gaza, witnesses said.

Negotiators for Communist rebels want bases closed in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Negotiators for Communist rebels insisted Monday that U.S. bases here be closed. They also pressed their challenge of the military's right to patrol and seize arms, threatening to delay this week's scheduled truce.

The government-run Philippine News Agency said the military was concerned over "mounting rebel atrocities in various parts of the country" before the cease-fire, which is to begin Wednesday.

Armed forces spokesman Col. Honesto Isleta said two helicopter gunships were sent Monday to Abra province of northern Luzon to help troops fight off about 200 Communist rebels besieging an army patrol there.

The Philippine News Agency said at least two soldiers were killed and dozens wounded in "two major anti-trucks" and three ambushes on Luzon island Sunday. Government peace negotiator Teofisto Guingona said he would seek a meeting with his rebel counterparts on condition a dispute centering on resolutions under which the army can keep up patrols and weapons seizures during the cease-fire.

He said he and Defense Minister Rafael Ileta reached an understanding on the issue, but he refused to give details until he met the rebels.

At a breakfast meeting with reporters, three officials of the Communist-led National Democratic Front, which negotiated the Nov. 27 cease-fire pact on behalf of the rebels, said they stood fast in opposing the U.S. bases.

They also objected to statements by Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel V. Ramos that the military would continue patrols in rebel areas during the cease-fire in the 17-year-old Communist insurgency and would arrest anyone carrying unregistered weapons.

The status of the U.S. military installations at Clark Air Base north of Manila and Subic Naval Base northwest of the capital is among "substantive issues" to be taken up during a second stage of negotiations to begin once the truce takes effect.

About 40,000 troops, U.S. civilians and dependents are at the bases, the largest U.S. bases outside the United States.

National Democratic Front official Bobby Malay-Ocampo said the bases "will have to go" eventually because "they are the cornerstone of American control and domination of the Philippines."

Front spokesman Antonio Zume called the bases "an affront to (Philippine) independence and sovereignty."

S. Africa jails children

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government said Monday that 256 children under 16 were in jail without charge, including one only 11 years old. Anti-apartheid groups reported a huge troop buildup in black townships.

Police Commissioner J.P. Coetzee made the announcement about children detained under the nationwide state of emergency imposed June 12.

Monitoring groups estimate the number of black children under 16 being held at 1,300-4,000 and have demanded they be freed before Christmas.

Coetzee gave no indication of how many people aged 16-18 were being held. One monitoring group, the De laanes' Parents Support Committee, called the omission "the most cynical sleight of hand."

"It is clear that the 16-, 17- and 18-year-old group are the prime target of state repression," it said. "Whatever the exact number may be, even one child in detention is too many."

The End-Conscription Campaign, an anti-draft group that opposes the use of white army draftees in black townships, said Monday there had been a "massive concentration of troops" in townships over the past week.

Soldiers were setting up roadblocks at the entrances to townships around Johannesburg area and conducting house-to-house searches for suspected activists, the organization said. It added that the army had mobilized thousands of conscripts in the past two weeks and was not granting leaves during December.

When asked for a response, the army issued a statement saying it "does not comment on troop strength and deployment."

NATO commander dies

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — U.S. Adm. Arthur S. Moreau Jr., the commander of NATO forces in southern Europe, died Monday of a heart attack, military officials said. He was 55.

Moreau, who also was commander of U.S. Naval Forces in Europe, died at a military hospital in this southern port city.

His death was announced by a U.S. Navy spokesman in London, Capt. Gordon Peterson, and confirmed in Naples by the Allied Forces in Southern Europe.

Moreau, who was appointed to the posts in September 1985, headed the largest of the four military regions under Allied Command Europe. His area of responsibility covered Italy, Greece, Turkey, the Black Sea and the Mediterranean.

From May 1983 to October 1985, he served as assistant to the chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff. His previous posts included deputy chief of naval operations for plans, policy and operation, and commander-in-chief of the U.S. Naval Station at Subic Bay, Philippines.

Moreau was born June 3, 1931, in Mount Rainier, Md. He graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1953. He was married with five children.

2 Soviet soldiers flee post

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A pair of 19-year-old Soviet soldiers serving in East Germany fled on foot across the heavily guarded border to West Germany, and authorities said Monday the defectors wanted to join their Estonian relatives in the United States.

Communist East German border troops did not open fire on the fleeing men, who wore civilian clothes and were unarmed during their escape Saturday, a statement from the West German border patrol command in Hanover said. It said the escape apparently caught the troops off guard.

While defections of East German citizens have been increasing, it is rare for Soviet soldiers to dash across the border and seek asylum. The last such escape was in 1984.

The defectors this past weekend follow recent reports in an Estonian youth newspaper of near-mutines among Estonian men who were drafted by the Kremlin for decontamination work at the damaged Soviet nuclear reactor at Chernobyl.

The defectors, both Estonians, escaped to the northern city of Wolfenbuettel at 7:40 a.m., West German officials said. Neither was injured.

The Soviets will stay in West Germany temporarily while waiting for entry visas to the United States, Interior Ministry spokesman Hans-Gunter Kowalski said.

"We would give them asylum here if they wanted it, but they do not. They said they have relatives in the United States and want to go there," Kowalski told The Associated Press.

Officials withheld the men's names and whereabouts, in line with West German practice.

In Munich, meanwhile, police said 13 Poles left their tourist group during a weekend visit to the Christmas market in the Bavarian capital.

The Poles were members of a 34-person group which went to Munich on a tour bus.

Police said 12 men and one woman, ages 18 to 37, failed to return to the bus after touring the downtown market.

The group had not yet applied for political asylum in West Germany.

University reforms withdrawn

Chirac delays revision measure

PARIS (AP) — Premier Jacques Chirac on Monday withdrew a bill to revise the state-run university system, giving in to a three-week campaign of sometimes violent protests by high school and college students.

In the Latin Quarter, the capital's student district, about 30,000 demonstrators marched peacefully through the streets to mourn the death of a 22-year-old student who had been beaten by police. According to an autopsy, the student died of a heart attack after he was beaten.

Throughout the country, people paused for a moment of silence.

Opposition to Chirac's center-right government has been snowballing since the protests began. Teachers, unions, leftist politicians and even government officials have spoken out against the university bill.

The government has said the measure would make higher education more competitive, but critics claim it is elitist and diminishes students' freedom of choice.

wearing black armbands, marched to Cochin Hospital where Malik Oussekinie died Saturday after being beaten by police during a demonstration.

There were no reports of violence during the march.

Millions of people throughout the country stopped for a moment of silence between 11 a.m. and noon to mourn Oussekinie. The service of the news agency Agence France Press stopped during that time.

"The immense victory of the student movement has a bitter taste after the death of Malik Oussekinie," one student group, the National Union of French Students, Independent and Democratic, said in a statement.

Mitterrand, a Socialist, on Monday visited Oussekinie's family at their home in Meudon-la-Forêt near Paris.

Oussekinie's death was followed by some of the worst clashes between protesters and police since Chirac took office in March.

Early Sunday in the Latin Quarter, several dozen people burned barricades and cars, hurled stones and bottles at police. At least 68 people, including 58 police officers, were injured and 23 people were arrested.

Mitterrand and several opposition leaders welcomed the decision to withdraw the bill.

"This conforms with the position expressed to the premier by the president," said a spokesman for Mitterrand.

Lionel Jospin, first secretary of the Socialist Party, said he was satisfied with Chirac's decision.

He said the government could "have avoided the violence, the serious injuries and one death" if it had dropped its plans sooner.

The university bill was aimed at giving state-run universities greater autonomy to make them more competitive and better prepare students for the job market.

The proposal would allow universities to offer their own diplomas, determine entrance standards and direct students into areas of study that correspond to their aptitudes, not necessarily to their grades.

Universities would also be allowed to increase the current $60 registration fee, the only fee students have to pay.

Under the current system, high school graduates are free to enter any university they wish. State diplomas do not give the name of the individual universities.

graduates guaranteed lifetime government jobs.

There are about 100,000 students in the Grandes Ecoles and died, all in the name of a conflict over proposed changes in the state-run universities.

French university system.

To those not directly involved, including many French parents, the changes seemed minor, but the education system in France has always been a tender issue, with proposed alterations likely to bring fierce reactions.

Just two years ago, huge protest marches forced the Socialist government then in power to abandon a bill asserting greater state control over private schools.

For the past three weeks, the target has been drawn up by Alain Devaquet, a university professor who became minister for higher education. The government on Monday accepted Devaquet's resignation.

Reports in the French press focus of the student protest, which largely to placate hard-line supporters of the conservative government who wanted a much with some institutions becoming more thorough revamping of the elite and others declining in quality.

Under the current system, French students who pass the difficult high school exit exam can choose the university they want to attend, within certain geographical restrictions, and the dependent departments within courses of study.

The diplomas do not show which university of the 76 state-run universities issued it.

Exempted from this system are the "Grandes Ecoles," the openly elitist schools, each specializing in a subject like engineering or law, student government administration. The deans, other staff and some professors have highly-competitive-resume-requirements from outside the entrance exams but offer their university.

Shamir says Israelis unaware of funds to Contras

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir told two U.S. senators Monday his government quizzed all Israelis favored in the Iranian arms deal and none of them knew about money transfers to Nicaraguan rebels.

But a U.S. official said in Tel Aviv that Justice Department officials were in touch with the Israeli Embassy in Washington and probably will ask to question Israelis who took part in the arms transfers. The official, who demanded anonymity, said no specific request had been conveyed to Israel.

Shamir also said Monday that if the Iranian arms deal had not been made public, Israel might have achieved the release of two of its soldiers held as prisoners in Lebanon, Israel Radio reported.

It quoted Shamir as telling a caucus of his Likud bloc that the attempt to secure the soldiers' freedom was included in the agreement with the United States. Shamir apparently was referring to two Israeli soldiers captured in February in an ambush in southern Lebanon by Iranian-backed Shiite Moslem guerrillas.

David Kimche, former director of the Foreign Ministry and an Israeli intermediary in the multinational arms transaction, said Monday he had not received any U.S. summons for questioning.

His brief comments on Israel radio marked the first time Kimche has spoken in public since news of the arms deal broke last month. He refused to answer other questions.

Shamir had met with Sens. Carl Levin, D-Mich., and Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., members of the Armed Services Committee. They are visiting Israel on a fact-finding tour that includes Europe, Jordan and Morocco.

An announcement issued by Shamir's office did not say how the Israelis were questioned, and the senators refused to speak to reporters when they left Shamir's office.

News reports say the government set up a special panel to investigate the Israeli involvement in the arms deal. The panel was reportedly headed by Shamir's military aide,

Brig. Gen. Azriel Nevo, and included representatives of the ministries of defense and foreign affairs.

Other Israelis known to have been involved in the affair are Amiram Nir, the prime minister's adviser on counter-terrorism, arms dealer Yaakov Nimrodi and Al Schwimmer, the former director of the Israel Aircraft Industries.

Shamir denied Israel was selling weapons to the U.S.-backed Contra insurgents fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

"Our policy is to sell weapons only to countries, not to organizations," Shamir told Levin and Bingaman, according to the announcement from his office.

Newspaper story sparks Moslem riots

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Moslems offended by a newspaper article they considered an insult to the Prophet Mohammed rioted in several southern cities Monday.

Six people were shot to death by police who tried to disperse the mobs.

The two-day death toll was 17 as rioting that began Sunday in Bangalore spread to several other cities in Karnataka state, state-run radio reported.

Scores of people were injured in the clashes, including more than 30 policemen, the radio and United News of India said.

The article which triggered the violence, published in the English-language Deccan Herald, was about a mentally handicapped youth named Mohammed and was printed below a headline that included the words "Idiot Mohammed." Islam's prophet Mohammed was mentioned in the story.

State radio said the newspaper's editor, M.P. Yeshwant Kumar, and its publisher were arrested Monday and charged with promoting communal enmity, but they were freed on bail.

An apology from the newspaper was broadcast by radio and television Sunday.
