Board selects prison site at Burley

By The Associated Press and The Times-News

BOISE — Putting aside a recommendation from Public Works Director Brian Chase, the Idaho Board of Corrections on Friday unanimously selected a site in Burley as the location for a new medium-maximum security state prison.

The three-member board also chose a site near the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport as an alternate location in case engineering or other problems arise in Burley.

The decisions were made during a telephone conference call after members toured Chase's top five recommendations for the proposed 500-inmate facility.

"It's what we've been working for," Burley Mayor Ken Frink said after hearing of the decision. "It's the biggest thing that's happened here since they started building potato processing plants back in the '50s."

The site covers 50 to 55 acres in an undeveloped industrial-park located south of the Snake River on the northwest side of the town of 8,700. The land lies along the Burley Bypass Route, a highway for trucks now in the bypass design stages. Part of the land is owned by Amalgamated Sugar Co., which once operated a factory nearby, Frink said.

Twenty-five communities had sought the prison during a nine-month selection process because of the hundreds of jobs and millions of dollars it would inject into their flagging local economies.

"I would hope they'd give us credit for the fact that we didn't make a snap decision," said board member Chuck Hall of Boise.

Chase said he still planned to tell the state Permanent Building Fund Advisory Council on Monday that Boise would be the most economically sensible site. If it agrees, the issue could be settled by the Legislature when it approves construction funding.

Board member Wendell Miller of Idaho Falls agreed with Hall's top three choices, but Boise (fifth). Board Chairman Bob Anderson, Post Falls, did not give an order of preference, but agreed with Burley as the best site.

Two state bodies still must consider the choice. The Advisory Council will meet on Monday to consider the issue.

The Idaho Legislature also "must appropriate the $30 million needed to construct the prison. With action in the coming session, groundbreaking could occur in late summer or early fall. Construction would take three years, Frink said.

Burley businessman Dennis Curtis headed a volunteer committee to secure the prison. "We courted them with facts," he said. The group assembled a packet of site facilities and economic advantages, with descriptions checked by engineers, he said.

U.S. to shut down, modify aging graphite-shielded Hanford reactor

The Associated Press

RICHLAND, Wash. — The only U.S. nuclear reactor with a design similar to the Soviet Chernobyl plant will be shut down for six months to make safety improvements recommended by an expert panel, the Energy Department said Friday.

During the shutdown, which will last three weeks, $50 million in modifications will be made to the aging N Reactor at the Hanford reservation, Energy Undersecretary Joseph Salgado said.

Also Friday, the department awarded a $5 billion, five-year contract to Westinghouse Electric Corp. of Pittsburgh to be the contractor for management work at Hanford.

Two of the expert panel's six members recommended that the 23-year-old reactor be shut immediately and permanently unless its plutonium is needed for national security, Salgado said. The other four consultants said the reactor could be operated for the next five years. If the modifications were made, the panel in its 88 recommendations also said graphite warping might lead to the N Reactor's permanent closure within five years.

"I will tell you today that national security reasons do not allow the permanent shutdown of the N Reactor," Salgado said. "N Reactor is a critical and unique facility in the nation's defense program. We do not have the excess capacity in our weapons production system that would allow us to shut down N Reactor permanently at this time."

The N Reactor, operated for the Energy Department by UGC Nuclear Industries, is the only one in the United States to be graphite-moderated and water-cooled, like those at the Chernobyl plant in the Soviet Ukraine near Kiev. A second reactor in Colorado uses graphite but is not water-cooled.

One of several reactors at Chernobyl exploded and burned April 26, sending a radioactive cloud around the world. More than 30 people have died from radiation exposure there in the world's worst nuclear plant accident.

Like the Chernobyl plant, the N Reactor lacks the thick concrete and steel containment dome used on most U.S. commercial reactors. The N Reactor produces plutonium for nuclear weapons.

Sen. Mark Hatfield of Oregon, ranking Republican on the energy and water subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee, urged that the N Reactor be shut down immediately and permanently, despite the wishes of the energy or defense departments.

"One is forced to wonder just how much danger those people would be willing to allow in the absence of public and political pressure," he said. "They are addicts. They are addicted to nuclear weapons, and they will apparently go to any length and take any risk to get more."

Following the Chernobyl disaster, Energy Secretary John Herrington assembled the panel to review safety at Hanford.

Louis H. Roddis Jr., panel chairman, said the N Reactor should be shut down permanently "unless a positive determination is made" that national security interests require the plutonium. Roddis, a consulting engineer, is former president of Consolidated Edison Co. of New York.

PUC grants fraction of power rate sought

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission still says Idaho Power Co. is entitled only to a tiny fraction of a record rate increase requested last year.

The commission announced here Friday that after a second round of hearings, it will grant Idaho Power only $1.9 million in higher rates. Together with a rate increase just under $1 million approved in July, the decisions raise the average power bill for residential customers by less than $1 per month.

Idaho Power last year asked for a $4 million rate increase, a bid later scaled down to $665 million. That would have added $11 to the average residential customer's monthly bill, the PUC said.

In a key element of the Friday ruling, the PUC again refused to let Idaho Power, southern Idaho's largest utility, add the $165 million it paid for its share of a Nevada coal-fired generating plant to its base rate.

As it ruled in July, the PUC said company officials should have known the plant's electricity wasn't needed, isn't needed now, and shouldn't be charged against ratepayers until the extra generating capacity actually is needed.

Commission President Perry Swisher said it's almost a certainty that the ruling will be appealed to the Idaho Supreme Court.

But Larry Crowley, director of planning and regulatory affairs, said that decision hasn't been made yet. He said company attorneys only received the ruling late Friday afternoon.

The company's board of directors meets next week and probably will decide if it appeals the ruling.

Crowley said the decision appears to be about the same as the one issued in July, despite Idaho Power's testimony at rehearings.

"It is in much the same light as the July order," he said. "I would like to fit the pattern of orders from the PUC for this company. We feel that the commission probably was just trying to keep our rates artificially low," Crowley said.

He said the PUC is ignoring the fact Idaho Power hadn't asked for a general rate increase for four years prior to last year's filing; that Idaho Power now is spending $28 million per year to purchase generation power, something ordered by the PUC and the fact Idaho Power invested $165 million in the Valmy II plant in northern Nevada only after the PUC granted its approval in 1979.

"I put us in a very difficult position when we rely on commission orders to make investments needed to continue to provide service to our customers," he said.

In part of Friday's ruling, the PUC ordered Idaho Power's rate of return, or profit level, to fall from 12.75 to 12.25. The PUC said the current economic climate cuts the company's cost of operating funds and that should be reflected in the rate of return.

Crowley said the commission at

Reagan vows arms crisis won't stall administration

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan vowed Friday not to let the Iran arms crisis cripple his administration, as the chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee angrily accused Reagan's former national security aides of "deserting the country" by refusing to testify about the affair.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., went on the offensive in a variety of forums, strongly urging the former White House aides to divulge all they know so the Reagan administration won't be paralyzed for months to come.

The White House confirmed, meanwhile, that Reagan met privately last week with two prominent elder statesmen that former aide Michael K. Deaver said to have recruited in a campaign for the ouster of White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Deaver arranged the meeting in the White House family quarters Dec. 4 between Reagan and his wife, Nancy, and former Democratic National Committee chairman Robert S. Strauss and former Secretary of State William P. Rogers, to discuss the widening crisis.

Reagan reiterated Friday that "no doubt mistakes were made" in carrying out his decision to secretly sell arms to Iran, and said he would not be satisfied "until all the facts are before the American people."

But, discussing his forthcoming domestic initiatives with a group of newly elected state legislators at the White House, Reagan declared "we cannot and we will not, let this stop us from getting on with the business of governing."

It was the refusal, he testified by a third White House national security aide, Marine Lt. Col. Robert Earl, that prompted Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn.; Intelligence Committee chairman, to charge that the three military men, praised as "national heroes" by their supporters, weren't heroes in his book.

"If they're such heroes, then why are they deserting the country when put to the true test?" Durenberger asked.

"Somebody is going to have to define what a national hero is," he added. "A national hero doesn't come in here and stiff the whole country."

Earl refused to testify under the Sixth Amendment of the Constitution, which guarantees the right to legal counsel.

'Nuclear winter' blaze set in mountain brush

The Associated Press

SAN DIMAS, Calif. (AP) — A helicopter spewed flaming napalm-like gasoline on a brush-covered mountainside Friday, lighting a long-awaited fire to test whether atomic war may threaten the extinction of humans.

The "nuclear winter" theory that smoke from such a war might block the sun, disrupt agriculture and obliterate life from Earth got its first test in the mountains 30 miles east of downtown Los Angeles.

The $750,000 experiment had to be halted last week when the fire-starting helicopter, crashed after its dangling torch tangled in telephone wires. The pilot escaped injury.

On Friday a new "heli-copter" dropped a thickened gasoline called Aluminol, a chemical relative of napalm, on the San Dimas Experimental Forest, said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Earl Clayton.

Flames leaped 50 to 80 feet into the air, but the fire burned slowly in green brush swelled by rainfall earlier in the week, and there was no wind to spread it quickly.

A towering plume of smoke hung over the San Gabriel Mountains, obscuring snow-capped, 10,864-foot Mount Baldy, a few miles away.

About 55 scientists in five aircraft monitored the pillar of reddish-brown smoke that rose straight up. Lord Canyon toward Johnsons Peak, where about 50 reporters and photographers gathered.

Income taxes in 33 states will increase

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Residents of 33 states will see their state income taxes increase, in many cases considerably, unless legislatures adjust their laws for the effects of federal tax changes, a bipartisan commission said Friday.

The Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations said the impact of the new federal tax law will be so broad that, in reality, many states are likely to alter their income tax structures in response to federal tax reform.

Louisiana, with a 28 percent rise, would see the biggest percentage impact on individual state taxes as a result of the change, the study said. Colorado was listed next at 22 percent.

The commission said 10 states would experience a net decrease in individual income taxes. The biggest decline, 11 percent, would be in Rhode Island and Vermont, followed by 10 percent in North Dakota, it said.

States have known since plans for overhaul of the federal income tax system were being discussed in Congress that the changes could trigger dramatic consequences in their state revenues because of the way states tie their taxes to the federal code.

Some states, including New York and Maryland, are considering major tax reductions to compensate for the federal tax changes. Some of the tax-loss states are also taking steps to change.

The commission's report provides a specific percentage estimate for nearly every state based on projections of 1986 income and fully phased-in effects of the new tax laws.

Carolyn Lynch, author of the report, said the estimates were based on the assumption that states will conform to the new tax law as

Prison

Although located in Burley, the prison will benefit the entire area by generating construction jobs immediately and payroll in operation, Curtis said.

The penitentiary is expected to employ about 200 staff, and experts say economic spin-off benefits could create another 200 jobs in the Magic Valley, Frank said.

Officials in Twin Falls had shown the Board of Corrections a 200-acre site at the city-run regional airport, south of town, earlier this week.

"Although we would have loved to have it located here for the economic impacts, we're extremely happy that a community within the Magic Valley area was chosen," said Lewis, president of the Board of the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce. "It's going to create jobs throughout the valley and the opportunity for business throughout the Magic Valley to sell services to themselves."

Twin Falls Mayor Doug Vollmer said the city is "glad" and will lobby alongside Burley before the state Legislature for the construction money.

"We'll just jump in and help Burley at this point," he said. "As second choice, we don't want to stand by like vultures and hope they don't get it."

Public Works Director Chase had told the Corrections Board during its Dec. 4 meeting that a site immediately adjacent to the existing Idaho State Penitentiary, south of Boise, would be the most cost-effective location to build the prison, citing millions of dollars in potential savings.

But because only a few percentage points had separated all 25 sites, the board decided to take a closer look at the top five.

Chase's recommendation drew the hails of protest from local leaders in northern and eastern Idaho. Many said it was an example of state spending being directed on politics and being concentrated near the capital city.

"You'd have a hard time accusing me of that," said Hall, the one board member from Boise and the one who moved that Burley be its selection.

Before the vote, Corrections Director Al Murphy reviewed his findings that most states nationwide locate the locations of their prisons throughout the state, and virtually none locate penitentiaries in their capital cities.

Murphy also discounted Chase's argument that the state could save a significant amount of money by locating the prison in Boise and sharing support services and personnel with the existing state penitentiary.

"You're going to need a full staff, no matter what site you go to," he said.

Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, and Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, had cited their Fifth Amendment rights in refusing to testify.

North's name, CBS News reported Friday, Swiss authorities were unable to keep the account frozen because they had not received required information from the U.S. government, including the nature of the crime the U.S. believed occurred, CBS said.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., a potential contender for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1988, said in an NBC interview he didn't think he should take six months to tell a very simple story.

Gephardt said Reagan "has the responsibility to lead and to tell the people the truth and let the chips fall where they may."

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., accused the White House of violating the Arms Export Control Act, which requires notifying Congress of arms shipments valued at more than $14 million.

Simon said the replacement cost of the arms shipped to Iran totaled $80.3 million rather than the $12 million figure used by the White House.

Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said recent testimony indicates the Reagan administration has lost control to "a private attorney, Teicher," testimony was delayed until Tuesday.

House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski said in Miami he figures granting immunity to major figures in the Iran-Contra arms affair.

The House Armed Services' arms control subcommittee met in a closed-door session Friday afternoon to hear Adm. William Crowe Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, discuss administration arms control proposals.

Crowe refused all comment on the Iran-Contra controversy as an emergency from the 30-minute meeting.

Bodies of missing girls found

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The bodies of two Salt Lake City teenagers were found Friday near the wreckage of their vehicle, the apparent victims of a fatal accident, authorities said.

Utah Highway Patrol Sgt. Mike Johnson said the bodies of Leslie Willard, 17, and Erika C. Adams, 15, were spotted by aircraft off Interstate 15 at the south entrance of the Willard Bay Marina. Their four-wheel-drive vehicle was overturned.

Johnson said the truck was southbound when it swerved to the left, overcorrected and went down a steep embankment on the right side of the road, where it was hidden from view. Both girls were ejected, he said.

Fliers waiting for right wind

MOJAVE, Calif. (AP) — Pilots who want to fly the Voyager around the world non-stop without refueling have to take to the skies Sunday if the winds are favorable.

Air Force veteran Dick Rutan and Jeana Yeager on Friday prepared the craft in anticipation of a Sunday takeoff for the 27,000-mile journey, said Voyager spokesman Peter Riva.

The fragile-looking craft can lift more than five times its own weight and was designed for only one purpose: to circle the Earth at a little more than 110 mph without refueling.

Meteorologists forced the Voyager crew to scrub plans for a Saturday departure.

Possible accident cause cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — An aerospace consultant, who conducted an independent analysis of videotapes from the latest Challenger launch, has raised the possibility that a leaking rocket booster joint may not have been the only cause of the accident that destroyed the shuttle and killed its crew.

The analysis by Ali F. Abutaha indicates external components of the vehicle's right booster may have broken off 18 seconds before the shuttle began to disintegrate, the magazine Aviation Week and Space Technology says in its Dec. 15 issue.

Abutaha is to meet next week with L. Michael Weeks, NASA deputy associate administrator for space flight, to discuss his findings.

Judge orders cross turned off

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A federal judge Friday ruled the display of a 20-story lighted cross on a state building is unconstitutional — and ordered — an end to the nine-year Christmas tradition.

"The display of the cross endorses the Christian religion and is an unconstitutional action," U.S. District Judge William H. Barbour Jr. said in making his ruling. "The fact that the state has added secular symbols does not make it constitutional."

The state, seeking to avert concerns it was favoring a religion, also displayed the form of a Christmas tree and the words "joy" and "peace" on the Walter Sillers building, Gov. Bill Allain had testified earlier Friday.

the same time was basing part of its order on the 1984 operating costs and in another part, on 1986 economic conditions. He said the 12.75 percent rate of return was one of the lowest in the country for electrical utilities.

Altonna General Manager Jim Jones whose office intervened in the case to urge a rate reduction, not an increase, said he was generally pleased with the ruling, particularly the part directing Idaho Power shareholders to bear some of the cost of the unneeded Valmy plant.

Jones said he was disappointed that the PUC did not order company stockholders to bear the cost of an operating agreement with Sierra Pacific, co-owner of the plant.

The agreement says that if Idaho Power does not need electricity from the plant, Sierra Pacific may take it by paying direct operating costs of the plant.

Jones said that agreement is bad for Idaho Power ratepayers. He said if the utility appeals to the Supreme Court, he will consider cross-appealing on the Sierra Pacific issue, contending that Idaho Power rates should be cut $3 million per year because of it.

Tax

they did not to the previous system, without taking steps to offset anticipated gains or losses.

"The results of this analysis suggest that the potential impact of the new tax legislation on state personal income tax liabilities would vary substantially among the states," the report said.

"Individuals in 24 states (including the District of Columbia) would experience fairly large increases in income taxes. Taxpayers in 10 states would face a moderate rise and income would decline in 10 states," the report said. "Seven states would not be directly affected by federal reform."

In six of the states where taxes would decrease, the effect was estimated at 1 percent or less.

The changes would occur because most state income tax codes couple their taxes to the federal tax law. Since the new federal law eliminates many deductions in exchange for lower rates, application of the current state tax rates to the broadened tax bases would result in higher income tax yields.

States that would experience large decreases apply their taxes as a percentage of federal income tax liability. States with only small losses tie their taxes to federal law in small ways or not at all, and the decrease was based on anticipated changes in how taxpayers will handle capital gains and consumer debt, the report said.

The report made "middle-of-the-road" estimates about how people will respond to the new federal law. Taxpayers are expected to respond to higher capital gains rates by increasing the length of time they hold assets, and thus will realize fewer gains in any given year.

Repeal of the deduction for personal interest payments, aside from home mortgages, was expected to prompt people to increase payoffs of consumer loans and to forego some interest income in order to do so.

The effects vary by state because of the different ways states conform to the tax provisions that will be altered by the new federal law. Also, some states have no personal income tax, or tax only interest and dividends and not earned income.

The Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations is a bipartisan commission established by Congress to monitor the federal system and recommend changes.

Crowd protests spy flights

WASHINGTON (AP) — A large crowd of demonstrators gathered Tuesday in front of the American diplomatic mission in Cuba to protest alleged U.S. spy flights over the island, State Department officials said Friday.

The officials said they had seen unconfirmed reports that as many as 100,000 were involved in the Thursday night protest.

Smaller scale demonstrations began Tuesday following the reported spy flight, which the officials refused to confirm or deny.

The officials, who asked not to be identified, said school children were section as part of what they maintained was a government-orchestrated protest campaign. There were no reports of violence.

Court reinstates damage award against Fatima Crusade

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Supreme Court on Friday reinstated part of a $1 million judgment given a Montana man in his lawsuit alleging a religious organization turned his wife and five children from him.

The Supreme Court by a 3-2 vote reversed a previous decision against the damage award. But after that 4-1 ruling in July, attorneys for Jerry Bryant O'Neil and his children asked for a rehearing, which was held in October.

Justices Allan Shepard and Robert C. Huntley ruled with Justice Stephen Bistline, the lone dissenter in the July decision, for the new majority.

A 1st District Court jury in 1983 awarded O'Neil and his children $1 million from members of a "fundamentalist" Catholic Church organization, known as the Tridion Church of the Latin Rite Church, also known as the Fatima Crusade, headquartered at Coeur d'Alene.

But the presiding judge, Watt Prather, dismissed the $1 million judgment despite the jury's verdict. On the original appeal, rehearing, said that judgment is final.

In the original decision, the court issued a precedent-setting ruling that "alienation of affections," one of the complaints listed in O'Neil's lawsuit, henceforth is abolished as a legal cause of action in Idaho.

Because of many legal uncertainties associated with such claims, the court said, the many ill effects of the suit for alienation of affections outweigh any benefit it may have.

In the earlier ruling, the court went against O'Neil's second claim, invasion of privacy.

But the court majority ruled Friday that church officials and members, including O'Neil's former mother-in-law, violated the family's privacy and reinstated part of the award on that basis.

Judgment of $50,000 to each of the five children was reinstated. Attorney M. Denn Tridionne Latin Rite Church, led by Bishop Francis Shuckardt, who was a defendant in the lawsuit.

On the $20,000 awarded to O'Neil, the court said it was impossible to separate the amount awarded for alienation of affections, which was thrown out, and the amount given for invasion of privacy.

The case was sent back to district court for new proceedings on the husband's claim for invasion of privacy.

The court directed similar treatment for the $500,000 in punitive damages awarded to O'Neil and the children. From the wording of the decision, Jellison said it appears the damage claim of O'Neil will have to go to trial again.

O'Neil and his wife married in 1965, and in 1973 had five children. Mrs. O'Neil was raised Catholic, but her husband was not.

Court records said Mrs. O'Neil's mother, Alvin Urban, became active with the Tridionne Latin Rite Church, led by Bishop Francis Shuckardt, who was a defendant in the lawsuit.

It holds to Catholic beliefs observed prior to the Vatican Council II which concluded in 1967, and does not believe the Pope is the true head of the Catholic Church, court testimony said.

O'Neil testified that starting in 1974, his mother-in-law and other relatives misrepresented the church to his wife, recruiting her to do things in the name of the faith which were intended to break up the marriage and alienate the children.

Among other things, O'Neil testified, church officials told his wife that since her husband was not of the faith, they could not live together as husband and wife.

In an Idaho divorce that followed, O'Neil was awarded custody of the children. The decree provided that Pauline O'Neil was restrained from imposing on her children her religious or philosophical beliefs in the Fatima Crusade.

A lawsuit over alienation of affections and invasion of privacy was filed in 1975 and went to trial eight years later.

In a key part of Friday's ruling, the Supreme Court noted that at least one member of the religious group, Mrs. O'Neil's sister, Sister Mary Bernadette Janet Urban, from Indianapolis, had children in her religious beliefs. Since one member knew of the order, it was reasonable to assume that other members of the church knew about it, yet violated the order by proselytizing the children, the court said.

Justices Charles Davidson and Robert Bakes continued to oppose the judgment on the ground the church's activities were protected under religious freedoms guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

within a couple of years to pay for this retirement system, that would cost the taxpayers of the state $8.21 million annually.

The four banks responsible for managing those assets — Idaho First National Bank, Idaho First Security Bank, Idaho Bank and Trust and First Interstate Bank — had been warned during the past four years that their performance had been substandard, Vassar said.

The transfer prompted criticism Wednesday from the banks and from Gov.-elect Cecil Andrus, who asked that the board hold off making a final decision until he takes office next month. Andrus said he was disappointed that Idaho money was being moved out of state.

Pension funds transfer out of state defended

MOSCOW (AP) — Retaining management in Idaho of about $464 million in public employee pension funds probably would have required a tax increase, says a member of the state board responsible for managing that fund.

Richard Vassar of Lewiston said the transfer of the public employee pension funds will likely preclude a tax increase and possibly earn enough money to reduce the amount public employees contribute to the pension plan.

"Our consultants told us if we don't improve the rate of return the system gets on its investment, we may have to increase the contribution rate," Vassar said. "If we have to increase that by 1 percent, which we possibly would have had to do

10 arrested in raid

PAYETTE (AP) — Ten people were arrested and drugs and stolen property were seized by Oregon and Idaho law enforcement officers in a raid Thursday morning on five houses in two counties, officers said.

Payette County Sheriff's Lt. LeRoy Cordes said the raid was the culmination of a three-month investigation by Payette County and Malheur County, Ore., officers.

Narcotics seized included cocaine, methamphetamine, quaaludes and marijuana.

Wine surtax ruled unconstitutional

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Legislature's attempt to help the state's fledgling wine industry with a tax break has been struck down by an attorney general's opinion.

In response to a query from the state Tax Commission, an attorney general's opinion made public Friday ruled unconstitutional the 25-cent-per-gallon surtax charged on wine made out of state.

In an opinion prepared by Deputy Attorney General Daniel Chadwick, the ruling holds that Idaho must refund the extra tax, which was imposed in 1984.

State Tax Commission Chairman Larry Looney said it will be difficult to estimate the amount of the refunds, because that will depend on how many companies make valid refund requests.

Idaho collects about $80,000 per month from wine taxes, including the 20-cent per gallon charge on Idaho wine and the 45-cent tax on wine produced elsewhere.

Looney said the Legislature could tax all wine at 45 cents per gallon, which would increase revenue, or could reduce the tax to 20 cents for all wine, which would result in a significant loss in revenue.

Imposing a tax on out-of-state products and not on in-state products violates the U.S. Constitution, the opinion said. That argument was made to the House Revenue and Taxation Committee, which originated the proposal in 1984, but it was approved anyway based on an attorney general opinion which allowed it.

Imposing a tax on Hawaii wine was almost identical, the opinion held, since the purpose of the tax was to promote in-state sales, not to inhibit those in other states from selling in Idaho, the tax was proper.

But the new ruling this week says that the U.S. Supreme Court struck down the Hawaii law, and the same principle applies in Idaho.

The Supreme Court rejected Hawaii's argument that it could enact taxes on liquor, regardless of their impact on interstate commerce, because states can pass temperance laws, banning the sale of alcohol completely.

"When the law was amended, the purpose was quite clear," the Idaho opinion says. "Preferential treatment was given in order to aid the growth and development of the Idaho wine industry."

"Furthermore, no claim can be made that the preference was enacted to combat the perceived evils of alcohol... since the express purpose was to aid the Idaho wine industry," it said.

The opinion said normally, a tax found unconstitutional does not result in refunds for taxes previously paid, unless they were paid under protest.

In this case, the state allows refunds going back three years, covering any tax improperly imposed or collected.

Detectable levels of pesticide found in wells

BOISE (AP) — Detectable but not necessarily harmful levels of the pesticide Dacthal have been found in residential wells in Fruittland, New Plymouth and in Ontario, Ore., health officials in both states said.

In Idaho, tests made in Fruittland and New Plymouth this summer found that 80 percent of the homes tested had well water with detectable levels of Dacthal, Cheryl Brower, a water quality analyst with the Idaho Division of Environmental said Thursday.

The levels found are not considered a health hazard by the Environmental Protection Agency, she said.

Levels from the 16 wells tested ranged from undetectable to 10 parts per billion, far below the federal health guideline of 500 ppb, she said.

But David Leland, with the drinking water section of the Oregon State Health Department, said Thursday the Dacthal guideline of 500 ppb was based on a person drinking contaminated water every day for one year. The effects of drinking water contaminated with Dacthal for more than one year are not known, he said.

Ms. Brower said that although the tests showed low levels of Dacthal, it is possible that other areas in Idaho have high levels. "We may not have hit the hot spots."

"Maybe we should be backing up and saying, 'Can the job be done on onions without having this type of impact on the groundwater?'"

Leland said the state was studying the Dacthal problem, but he reiterated that the pesticide currently did not present a health threat.

Residents of 35 homes in Ontario also have been warned that their well water contains high levels of nitrate, Leland said.

In Idaho, tests done in Fruittland and New Plymouth this summer found two homes that had wells with nitrate levels exceeding federal standards, Ms. Brower said.

Loggers tired of blame

LEWISTON (AP) — Loggers are tired of taking the brunt of criticism for water quality problems caused by everything from mining to city storm drains and farm runoff.

Dale J. McGreer, a hydrologist for Potlatch Corp., told a Lewiston hearing on proposed changes to state water quality regulations that the debate has been improperly characterized as a choice between timber and fish.

"We in the timber industry are really very tired of being singled out," McGreer said.

But he said the industry generally supports plans to require it to use "best management practices" to prevent pollution.

Anti-DUI week set

BOISE (AP) — Drunken driving accidents cost $35 million in Idaho last year, and were a factor in more than half the accidents where blood-alcohol levels were tested, says Gov. John Evans.

He signed a proclamation Friday declaring next week as "Drunk and Drugged Driver Awareness Week" in Idaho, matching a national effort to discourage driving while drinking.

The proclamation said law enforcement officers made more than 11,000 arrests for drunken driving last year.

The proclamation urges "all citizens to become aware of the problem of driving under the influence and to make a personal commitment to refrain from such activity."

Service honors victims

FORT CAMPBELL, Ky. (AP) — A cannon fired and air-raid sirens wailed before all fell silent for a moment Friday at Fort Campbell as friends and relatives remembered the 248 U.S. soldiers killed one year ago in a plane crash in Gander, Newfoundland.

A light snow swirled as Chaplain Ben Nass led about 200 people in the outdoor service for the members of the 101st Airborne Division who died in the crash as they were returning home for the holidays from a tour of duty with the Multi-National Peacekeeping Force in the Middle East.

Nass said their survivors had worked together to carry on after the tragedy. "You and I know the picture was not all that rosy," he said. "But the world could see and the world can tell that roses are growing out of the ash."

After the moment of silence, an honor guard fired 27 rounds, each round representing a unit that suffered losses in the Dec. 12, 1987 crash.

The soldiers died when their overloaded DC-8 crashed on takeoff from the Canadian field, the last leg of their journey home from a six-month tour of duty. Investigators have said ice on the jet's wings may have been responsible for the tragedy.

After the 40-minute ceremony, Nass said the tragedy was magnified by the closeness of people in the military feel, as well as the timing of the disaster.

"Coming as it did, right before Christmas and as they were on their way home, it was a double slap," he said. "That was the last leg of the trip. And many of the guys had called home, so the next thing the families knew, they heard on television that there was a crash."

The memorial brought back painful memories for Darci Ocasio, whose husband, Sgt. Francisco Ocasio, was one of the victims.

"When you get down here on the fort, it's real hard," said Mrs. Ocasio, who drove from Stevensville, Md., on Thursday with her 3-year-old daughter, Rachel.

Some relatives visit the shopping strip across U.S. 41 from the main entrance of the post. In the line of stores catering to the 23,000 military personnel, they try to find keepsakes.

Many of the stores feature clothing, keychains and other items bearing the head of a bald eagle, representing the 17,000-member division's nickname, the "Screaming Eagles." "We do have the families coming back," said Effie Weaver, a day manager at Brick's Men's Store across from the post. "They can't let go of it. They want to talk about it."

At the Fort Campbell Memorial Park, north of the post, wreaths and roses had been placed in tribute. The park has the names of the victims engraved in stone tablets around the base of a 7 1/2-foot copper statue of an Airborne soldier.

Spec. 4 Adam Richards, who lost his roommate and a squad leader in the crash, and Pfc. Kyle Rousseau found the names of their friends on the memorial.

After a while, the two returned to Richards' pickup truck to listen to a country-music tribute to the crash victims called, "The Day the Eagles Came Home."

Richards, promoted to squad leader since returning from the Middle East, had tears in his eyes as he stared out the window of the truck when the ballad ended.

"It's really hard to listen to that today," he said.

Advisers propose welfare remedies

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential advisory group, saying the present welfare system "fails the people it is designed to serve," recommended Friday that state and local governments should have more leeway in structuring government aid to the needy.

A working group of the cabinet-level Domestic Policy Council recommended to President Reagan that states be authorized to conduct five-year demonstration projects adopting new approaches. Federal authorities would then decide which ones to continue.

The announcement was denounced as insufficient by spokesmen for welfare rights groups.

"Just before Christmas, the White House is saying to the poor, 'Let them eat demonstrations,'" Robert J. Fersch, executive director of the Food Research and Action Center, said.

The administration recommendation resulted from a study ordered by the president in his State of the Union message in January. Administration officials maintained that efforts to revise the system from Washington would be futile.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan will meet with governors, welfare experts, key members of Congress and others before deciding on the recommendations he will make when he again goes before the lawmakers for his State of the Union address next month.

The group recommended a change in the law to permit waivers so state programs "may differ in whole or in large part from established rules and procedures."

The report said states should be authorized to determine, among other things, benefit levels and rules of eligibility; education, training and work requirements; how earnings from work will be treated when benefits are determined; and the extent of social services.

It said the federal government would "articulate the goals and define the parameters for any reform experiment" and would maintain the level of current federal financing.

"The experiments should be designed to last five years, but exceptions for longer and shorter periods could be granted," the report said.

At the conclusion of the five years, the report said, the federal government would "recommend and expand those initiatives which succeed in reducing dependency."

"We are asking the federal government to develop a process for discovering new ways of reducing dependency, rather than to design a specific federal program," the working group said.

Pilot pushes jet to dodge small aircraft

WASHINGTON (AP) — A pilot for Alaska Airlines had to push his jetliner to full power to avoid colliding with a small, private plane during a takeoff from Long Beach, Calif., a report to the Federal Aviation Administration revealed Friday.

The incident, Thursday involved Alaska Airlines Flight 107 which was carrying 38 passengers and six crew members on a flight from Long Beach to Seattle with an intermediate stop at Portland, Ore. No one was reported injured.

FAA spokesman Bob Buckhorn confirmed that the pilot of the McDonnell Douglas MD-80 reported that he had to take evasive action to avoid the small plane, believed to be a Beech Bonanza, at about 2,500 feet three miles northwest of the Long Beach airport.

Later the pilot decided to pass up the scheduled landing at Portland and flew directly to Seattle, where Alaska Airlines has its maintenance facility so the engines could be checked for possible overheating because of the evasive maneuver, airline spokesman Jim Johnson said.

He said in a telephone interview that no damage was found to the engines.

Air Force opens more air crew slots to women

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force has decided to open to women more than 1,600 job slots that involve crew assignments to reconnaissance and electronic warfare airplanes, Secretary Edward C. Aldridge Jr. said Friday. The decision means that "more than 95 percent of all Air Force positions are open to qualified women," Aldridge said in a speech to the Washington chapter of an organization known as Women in Defense.

Aldridge said many people had been surprised by the revelation earlier this spring that women had flown some of the tankers used in April to refuel F-111 bombers that raided targets in Libya.

The secretary said the latest decision would affect 1,645 positions "for women flyers and technicians" involving crews for EC-130 reconnaissance aircraft and EC-130 electronic warfare, or radar-jamming planes.

In the case of the EC-130s, officers and enlisted women will be eligible to apply for only certain missions undertaken by those planes.

Weinberger lashes Soviet 'hypocrisy'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, launching a new rhetorical attack on what he called "Soviet hypocrisy," said Friday the United States could not allow itself to be wishful thinking about Russian intentions to withdraw from East Germany.

Weinberger underlined its resolve to maintain a strong military. "Throughout the Soviet bloc, respect for life and liberty suffers the same fate as Moscow's regard for truth."

In a biting, often sarcastic speech, the secretary told a group of Republican women he had been astonished by the irony of a recent faration by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev during a visit to India.

Gorbachev called for a nuclear-free and non-violent world, Weinberger noted, endorsing the League of Republic Women of the District of Columbia, appeared to signal the start of his latest campaign to win budget hikes for the Pentagon from Congress.

"We must ensure that our citizens understand the security threat we face and that they demand that we base our defense spending on that threat, not on short-term fiscal yardsticks," he said.

On Friday, Weinberger switched his attention to other examples of "hypocrisy," citing Gorbachev's calls for peace and disarmament.

"Here you have armed aggression denounced by a regime that not only has accumulated the violent world, Weinberger noted, endorsing the League of Republic Women of the District of Columbia, appeared to signal the use it whenever it is convenient," he said. "Are three major values — human rights, peace and disarmament — values that, as we all know, the District of Columbia, appeared to signal the use it whenever it is convenient," he said. Woman talks wrong-number caller out of suicide attempt BREMERTON, Wash. (AP) — A suicidal man who dialed a wrong number reached a woman who kept him on the line long enough for authorities to trace the long-distance call and send police in Augusta, Ga., to rescue him.

For two hours Wednesday, Stacie Cummings kept the man on the line while Bremerton authorities worked with telephone companies and Augusta police to trace the call.

At one point, the man hung up. But he again dialed Ms. Cummings' number and she accepted collect charges to keep trying to talk him out of taking his life.

"He said he wanted to kill himself, so I asked him why," Ms. Cummings said. "He said he was just out of a drug center or something and that he had a gun and he'd just shot up an eight-ball, whatever that is, and that he'd done two loads."

"At first he was real groggy, and it was real hard to understand him, but he slowly got louder."

The man apparently was trying to reach his sister, who also lives in Bremerton, but had written down Ms. Cummings' number instead.

STACIE CUMMINGS
Signaled police for rescue

Ms. Cummings returned to her caller.

"That gal—deserves—a lot of credit," said Ms. McDewitt, who listened for a time to the conversation. "She really hung in there and stayed with the guy. She told him all the things he needed to hear."

Ms. McDewitt dispatched Officer Bruce Carver to Ms. Cummings' house.

"She was doing a fantastic job," he said. "All I could do was offer some emotional support. After two hours, she was getting a little strung out."

The caller said he had a gun. He told Ms. Cummings that if she was having the call traced, "he'd blow the police away when they came through the door," she said.

"I talked to him for a while about that, and asked him to take the bullets out of the gun. He put the phone down, and I thought I heard a shot. Then he came back and said he'd taken the bullets out."

The man also threatened to jump out the window of his hotel room. "I asked him how he could turn his back on me; wasn't I his new friend?"

The man said he had nothing to live for. She tried a different tactic.

"You think you've got problems? I'm 26 years old, and found out three weeks ago I've got cancer," she told him.

She wasn't making it up. She's waiting for welfare officials to finish processing paperwork to pay for the needed surgery.

Challenger pictures in orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A veteran Soviet-cosmonaut said Friday that he and a colleague carried into orbit the pictures of the Challenger crew because they "wanted those seven brave astronauts to go to outer space."

"I've got to express my sympathy for the tragedy that January's shuttle tragedy," Vladimir Soloyov told a news conference in connection with a Kennedy Space Center tour by 10 Soviet Young Cosmonauts.

Soloyov said he and Leonid Kizlm, who were launched six weeks after the space shuttle Challenger exploded, had taken along the pictures of the astronauts and that they had paid tribute to them in space.

Soloyov and Kizlm spent four months aboard the new Soviet Mir space station. Soloyov has logged 375 days in orbit on three flights, more than any other space traveler.

Asked about the safety of space flight, Soloyev replied through an interpreter, "I believe that anything new which is moving toward another kind of future is bound to involve a certain kind of risk and this cannot be avoided. At the same time, both my American colleagues and the Soviet technicians and engineers are doing their best to minimize the risk."

He said the Soviet Union was researching a space shuttle-type vehicle but said he did not expect it to fly until after 1988.

The cosmonaut toured the space center with the Soviet Young Cosmonauts who are spending 12 days in the United States as part of an exchange in which American Young Astronauts made a visit to the Soviet Union earlier.

The youths, aged 14 to 18, were welcomed by Lt. Gen. Forrest S. McCartney, the center director, and then set off on a tour that included briefings as a space shuttle launch pad, the launch control center, the shuttle assembly building and an astronaut training facility.

They were accompanied by members of the Young Astronaut Council—from a junior-high school in Cocoa, Fla., and by Young Cosmonaut and Young Astronaut officials.

The exchange of visits is part of an agreement signed at the Geneva summit in 1985 by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

The American Young Astronaut program, introduced in 1985 by Reagan is business-financed and involves youths aged 6-16.

The Young Cosmonauts began their trip Tuesday in Washington, D.C., and will visit Disney World in Orlando, then go to NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston and New York City.

Soviet airliner crashes, about 70 die

BERLIN (AP) — A Soviet Aeroflot jetliner crashed in heavy fog while approaching East Berlin's Schoenefeld airport Friday evening, killing most of the 81 people aboard.

The official news agency ADN said 12 survivors were pulled from the wreckage. Earlier the news agency had said there were 17 survivors, but it did not explain the discrepancy.

It said the exact number of victims "was not yet possible to determine."

Most of the people aboard were killed and the identification of the victims was "exceptionally" difficult because the bodies were burned, the news agency said.

ADN said most of the victims were East Germans. The plane was arriving from Minsk, the capital of Soviet Byelorussia about 600 miles to the east.

The news agency said the plane carried 73 passengers and a crew of eight. Initially, it reported that nine crewmembers had been aboard the plane.

There were no Americans aboard the Soviet Tupolev-134 jet, a U.S. Embassy spokesman in East Berlin told The Associated Press by telephone. East German authorities released no immediate information on the passengers' nationalities.

AP photographer Elke Bruhn-Hoffmann drove to within a half-mile of the crash site before being stopped by police. She said the plane appeared to have crashed in a wooded area just beyond East Berlin's city limits — about two to three miles from Schoenefeld.

Ms. Bruhn-Hoffmann said local residents told her the crash occurred at about 5:30 p.m. Berlin time, after nightfall, in heavy fog.

Hundreds of East German police were deployed to restrict access to the crash site to official rescue vehicles, arriving from downtown East Berlin, Ms. Bruhn-Hoffmann said.

East German television news said eight survivors were brought to East Berlin's Koepenick Hospital and that two were in "critical condition."

The television reports showed the jetliner in pieces, with firemen hosing down smoldering wreckage. A report by the Soviet news agency Tass referred to "flaming debris."

Pieces of the airplane also were scattered among nearby trees.

OPEC close to agreement on production cut

GENEVA (AP) — Most OPEC members agreed in principle Friday to cut the cartel's oil production at least 5 percent in hopes of boosting oil prices to $18 a barrel from the current range of $13 to $16, two senior delegates said.

No final accord was reached, however, and the cartel leaders were scheduled to open a third day of talks today, officials said.

Fernando Santos Alvim, the deputy Ecuadoran oil minister, told reporters that Saudi Arabia and some other delegations were consulting with their governments overnight on the proposed production-cut, which he said would take effect Jan. 1 if approved.

Libyan Oil Minister Fawzi Shakhshuki said that most of OPEC's 13 member countries, including his own, had accepted the proposal.

"This will be confirmed tomorrow," he said without elaborating.

Santos said Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest oil producer, and Kuwait were among the members that withheld immediate support for the proposed cut from OPEC's current output of about 17 million barrels a day.

The prospect of the production cut by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries triggered a sharp rise in prices of oil futures contracts traded on financial markets.

West Texas Intermediate, the main grade of U.S. crude oil, for delivery in January climbed 60 cents to $16.0 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange after gaining 37 cents Thursday.

But some analysts said that even if OPEC cuts production by 5 percent to 10 percent as proposed, world oil prices would climb toward $18 a barrel only gradually because of continued supply.

"This kind of proposal will help make sure oil prices will not go down, particularly in the first and second quarters next year," said Bruce Lazier, oil analyst for the investment firm Prescott, Ball & Turben in New York.

"But I see little prospect that this kind of a (production) cut will push up prices rapidly," Lazier said.

Sources in Geneva, speaking on the condition they not be identified, said Iraq probably would be excluded from the production cuts. Iraq is not part of OPEC's current production-quota agreement because of irreconcilable differences with its war enemy, Iran.

The current $13-$16 price range for a 42-gallon barrel of oil sold in the open market is about half its year-ago level, and a huge oil glut could push prices lower unless OPEC cuts supplies, economists believe.

OPEC's current system of production limits, which succeeded in boosting oil prices from summertime lows of below $10 a barrel, is due to expire Dec. 31.

Iran, Libya and some other delegations have said they favor a 5 percent cut in the current level of production, to be shared equally among the 13 members. Others, however, have expressed doubt that cuts are needed to boost oil prices, sources said.

Saudi Arabia had not yet made it clear whether it is willing to reduce its own production as part of an OPEC-wide cut, according to sources.

Shultz advocates speedy arms disclosure

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Friday that Reagan administration officials should "get things out as rapidly as possible" about secret U.S. arms shipments to Iran and diversion of funds to Nicaraguan rebels.

Shultz told a news conference in winding up a two-day meeting with NATO foreign ministers that he had not found it necessary to rebuild the ministers' confidence in the United States and its handling of foreign policy.

But he said the facts of the weapons purchase and the secret fund should be "set out on the table" for the American public and all the world to see.

The secretary said President Reagan wants full disclosure, and compliance with his wishes would facilitate the conduct of U.S. foreign policy, including the pursuit of agreements with the Soviet Union to reduce nuclear weapons.

Lord Carrington, NATO secretary-general, said at a separate news conference he had found

Shultz' description of the Iran-Contra affair in a private report to the foreign ministers "very encouraging."

Sir Geoffrey Howe, Britain's foreign secretary, observed that democracies "run into periods of turbulence" from time to time.

"What emerges... quite clearly," he said, "is that the alliance with the leading role being played, as always, by the United States, remains firmly in business, trying to make headway control agenda."

A final communique by the NATO ministers made no mention of Reagan's proposal to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, at their Iceland summit last October for elimination of all U.S. and Soviet ballistic nuclear missiles.

The communique, however, endorsed the pursuit of a 50 percent reduction in U.S. and Soviet long-range nuclear bombers, submarines and missiles by 1991 and elimination of intermediate-range missiles in Europe immediately.

Truce violations charged

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The military accused Communist rebels Friday of violating a three-day-old truce.

Defense Minister Rafael Ilo also expressed concern that civilian leaders lose their resolve in the fight against communism.

The national cease-fire monitoring committee met two hours Friday but failed to resolve gray areas in implementing the truce, including whether the rebels violated the accord by bringing armed men to a village rally Thursday.

Ilo and Chief of Staff Gen. Fidel

V. Ramos described the display of force by about 50 members of the New People's Army in San Juan, 25 miles west of Manila, as a provocation and a violation of an understanding that armed guerrillas would stay away from "population centers."

"That particular incident is a very clear violation of the agreement," Ilo remarked after a speech to the American Chamber of Commerce.

"We hope that the public is becoming aware of these things because we in the military will not be the first to violate (the cease-fire)."

Commissioners approve dump permit for Universal Foods

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners Friday unanimously upheld a Universal Foods dump permit for a site on Grandview Avenue.

The permit was appealed by a group of residents living near the proposed site who were concerned about contamination of the water table, odors, and insects.

The site is about 1 1/2 miles south of Addison Avenue West.

The county Planning and Zoning Commission approved a conditional use permit Oct. 9 for the site, despite the residents' objections. At that meeting Lee Taylor, Twin Falls County zoning administrator, presented the P&Z commission with a petition which he said contained the signatures of 93 people opposed to the site.

Twin Falls County Commissioner Judy Felton said that those who objected before appeared satisfied with the outcome Friday. During the commissioners' meeting numerous changes were made in the dump's operating regulations.

"With all the people against it, a lot of restrictions were put on it. The people will watch it," said Beryl Griffith, of Grandview Drive South.

He said he won't object if the odor and files remain under control, but he questioned whether the potato processor could control the odor. "I'll wait and see. That's all I choice I have," he said.

Universal wants to dispose of soil, small potatoes, vines and trucks on 3.4 acres of a 120-acre site. Randy Roberts, Universal's manager of Environmental Affairs, said the company received support at Friday's meeting from people who formerly opposed the project. "We're very pleased," he said.

The commissioners are to receive a final copy of the operating conditions for the dump by January. The dump could begin operation by late January or early February, Roberts said.

According to a draft of the conditions, the length of the permit would be three to five years, depending on how quickly the site fills up, said Taylor.

Universal will be required to post a $10,000 performance bond to ensure the firm will comply with the operating conditions, Taylor said.

Many of the conditions relate to how often the site will be covered with soil, a method of controlling odor.

According to the draft terms, Universal will not wait more than seven days after depositing material to cover it. If the company can't cover because of foul weather or equipment failure, it will hire a licensed pesticide contractor to spray the material, the draft said.

Throughout the life of the facility, Universal has to keep records of waste volumes, delivery dates, times and dates of covering. The draft said Universal will allow on-site inspections at least once per week by Darrel Heider, Twin Falls County solid waste director.

Universal also agreed in the draft to respond to a complaint about odor in the "minimum time possible."

The company said that using an abandoned railroad right-of-way cut the site will shorten its disposal haul and save an unspecified amount of money.

In the past the waste was disposed of at the county landfill, south of Twin Falls. Universal also disposed of these wastes at another site, but switched to the county landfill, said Mike Johnson, plant manager.

Stallings: Hammering on Reagan hurts country

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Unlike his Eastern counterparts, U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, said Friday he is unwilling to beat up on President Ronald Reagan, who is on the ropes over Iran.

"We've got some radical members of Congress, some Eastern friends, who smell blood and who would really like to hammer on the president," said Stallings, who was in Twin Falls on Friday. "It's interesting; it's caused a split in the Democratic Party."

Stallings told The Times-News that within the Democratic caucus in the U.S. House of Representatives "there have been heated discussions" on how the Democrats should handle the unfolding Iran scandal. He declined to name other congressmen who wanted to "hammer on the president," although he did name National Democratic Chairman Paul Kirk as one who supports a harder line against Reagan.

Stallings does not see the president as not going to help solve the problem, is not going to help politically, he said. "What we should do is encourage the White House to do the right thing, reveal the facts and be honest."

And if the facts are not forthcoming, Stallings said, then Congress and the Democrats should hammer on the president.

"If the evidence leads to the White House directly, then Congress has a constitutional duty, not a political duty, to ask hard questions," he said.

Stallings, who has made few public comments on the Iran-Nicaragua scandal up to now, said he believes America was set up and "screwed" by Iranians who wanted to further embarrass the United States.

"There are no moderates in Iran," he said. "Absolutely, they saw us coming, just like at a Persian bazaar. We were able to get goods so they could get spare parts for their war and embarrass 'The Great Satan.'"

Stallings was referring to comments by Iran's ruler, Ayatollah Khomeini, who has repeatedly called America "The Great Satan."

Stallings said that up to now he has agreed with Reagan's hardline stance against negotiating with terrorists for American hostages.

"I think the U.S. needs to be concerned about its citizens, but if you or I go into trouble spots around the world, I don't think we should expose our government to be responsible for our safety," Stallings said. "You're there at your own risk."

Stallings just said the Iran-Contra aid scandal will kill future aid to Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

"I never supported lethal aid to Nicaragua, Contra, and there's no question, this scandal will kill future aid to the aid."

In rolled-back comments, newly elected state Rep. Cella Follings, R-Buhl, was among about 100 state legislators from around the country who were briefed Friday by President Reagan in Washington.

Follings, along with former Idaho House Speaker T.W. Stivers and newly elected Republican Rep. Russ Newcomb, attended a conference sponsored by the American Legislative Exchange Council.

In a phone interview, Follings said the president admitted "mistakes were made," and added the situation would not affect his ability to govern.

Stallings' assessment was less favorable, however.

"The White House is going to be consumed by it, especially with the Congressional investigations," he said.

Stallings believes the White House will be "consumed" by the scandal and find it difficult to deal with other issues

Testimony in police case heard by judge

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

BOISE — No time element was defined in an oral agreement made between the U.S. Attorney's Office and the city of Twin Falls regarding disciplinary action against a city police officer charged with falsifying a federal witness expense voucher.

This came out during testimony in an evidentiary hearing Friday afternoon in U.S. District Court here in advance of the trial of Police Commander Pat Bermingham. Bermingham was indicted by a grand jury on charges of falsifying an expense voucher. He is alleged to have claimed $137 for meals and one night's motel costs in Boise, although he drove back to Twin Falls for the night.

There was never a written agreement nor a time element for fulfilling the terms of the agreement, testimony showed.

The hearing before U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan in Boise lasted 2 1/2 hours Friday and was adjourned until 9:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Ryan is scheduled to open the trial for Bermingham on Thursday.

The trial was originally scheduled for Monday, but was postponed to Wednesday by the evidentiary hearing and moved to Thursday by Ryan when it became apparent all testimony could not be completed Friday afternoon.

Thomas McCabe, a Boise attorney representing Bermingham, called four witnesses Friday, including U.S. Attorney Maurice C. Ellisworth and assistant U.S. Attorney Dana Bleh, who were subpoenaed earlier this week. This made it necessary for Joanne Rodriguez, another assistant U.S. attorney, to take over on behalf of the prosecution during the hearing.

Ryan did not, however, require Bleh to leave the courtroom when other witnesses and he was able to assist with the case when not on the stand.

The key issue of the hearing Friday involved an agreement between Bermingham and Twin Falls Public Safety Director Tim Qualls that Bermingham would not be prosecuted if he were given certain re-

Inspection team says Sky View nursing home improves conditions

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A full inspection of Sky View-Hazelde found the nursing home is continuing to remedy health complaints against it, said an official with the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

Jean Schoonover, manager of the H&W facilities standards program responsible for inspecting nursing homes, said some health problems remain, but its state certification will continue.

Sky View's owner, Richard Drake, said the inspection is another step toward getting the facility back on its feet. "We are pleased to be getting somewhat back to normal," Drake said.

Schoonover condensed the findings of a three-person inspection team that visited Sky View for a full inspection between Dec. 1-4. She said the remaining problems centered around rehabilitative therapy for the residents.

That treatment involves nurses moving patients' limbs to maintain joint flexibility. Symptoms of the immobility also can show up as bed sores, Schoonover said.

Therapy also includes retraining control of bowel and bladder control where necessary.

Schoonover said the problems can't be taken lightly.

"We don't view it as something that needs to be continually worked on," she said. Drake said a registered nurse and three aides have been hired, since the threatened closure at the end of August, to improve patient care.

"When you're dealing with people, there are always going to be challenges," Drake said. "We think we're headed in the right direction."

Sky View is licensed for 185 residents, but had been limited to 145 after an inspection the first week of September — when health violations

Water Board to draft legislation on cost of minimum-flow permits

BOISE (AP) — The state Water Resources Board has directed its staff to draft legislation clearly imposing a financial obligation on state agencies obtaining minimum stream-flow permits, despite a warning that the move could stop public interest actions.

The board approved the directive Friday, after Water Resources Director Ken Dunn said the current law, requiring agencies to pay full shares to water districts for administration of minimum flows, is not being enforced. He said that situation has put his local water masters in the position of violating their bonds.

Under the concept unanimously endorsed by the board, the assessment against state agencies such as the Parks and Recreation and Fish and Game departments would be significantly below the full shares private water consumers pay to water districts, because the effort to administer a minimum flow is much less.

At the same time, however, the plan would also proportionately reduce the voting rights of the state agency in each district.

Dunn said that if the state agencies do not bear the costs, limited as they are, other water users would be forced to subsidize them.

But Parks and Recreation spokesman Todd Graeff, noting the fact that agencies pay no water district fees now, warned that imposition of any financial obligation could likely deter agencies from seeking future minimum stream-flow permits to protect fisheries, recreation and other public uses.

Chairman Gene Gray said that the decision to draft legislation was an indication that the board opposed minimum flows.

"We are anything but against the minimum stream-flow concept," he said.

On another minimum flow matter, the board approved the hiring of a private attorney to defend its interests in the Fish and Game Department's appeal of Dunn's decision on a minimum-flow request for the Big Wood River running through the Sun Valley area.

Although Dunn approved a 70-cubic-foot-per-second flow as requested by the department, he added two requirements — one that it be open to review after 15 years and that the in-stream minimum recognize all other water rights, including unrecorded rights.

The department objected to both conditions, contending that its water right should not be subor-

Zoning board OKs permit for hydroelectric project

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Plans for the construction of a $5 million hydroelectric plant on the Low Line Canal near Kimberly cleared zoning hurdles on Thursday.

The Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission approved a conditional-use permit requested by the Bonneville Pacific Co. of Salt Lake City, which is developing and will build and operate the plant under an agreement with the Twin Falls Canal Co.

When P&Z Commissioner Max Rector asked if the canal company stockholders would be footing the bill for construction of the plant, attorney Gary Slette, who represents the canal company, said the profits from the sale of the power will pay for the project.

The canal company is supporting the project to provide revenue to "keep down" its maintenance and operating costs, Slette said.

The canal company will receive part of the revenue from the sale of power to the Idaho Power Co. Under the agreement, the plant will eventually be turned over to the canal company.

The plant, expected to produce 2.8 megawatts of power from a single generator, will be located about four miles south and one mile west of Kimberly, near the crossing of Rock Creek and the Low Line Canal. The property is zoned agricultural.

Clements said the project had already completed the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission application process.

With the plant, the water flow will be reduced from 10 to 15 feet-per-second to between 10 and 12 feet-per-second, Clements said. As a result, water quality will be improved and erosion minimized, he said.

No one at the public hearing opposed construction of the plant, although board members and neighbors expressed concern over the proposed blasting of at least 30,000 yards of rock out of the bottom of the canal. Clements said blasting procedures and guidelines developed by adjacent landowners will be followed. The rocks will be removed from the site.

There will be no blasting at night, he said. And, nearby private property will be photographed before the blasting begins to compare with conditions after the blasting, to determine if there has been any damage.

Doug Howard, representing the Twin Falls Highway District, said he hadn't seen the final agreement concerning the blasting. But the district will insist on having an engineer inspect the rock removal, he said.

Clements said that a road and bridge about 1,000 feet from the site of the proposed plant.

Speaking as just a county resident, Howard said the project was "excellent" because Clements said the plant should be completed by the end of June.

Another hydroelectric plant is located on the canal, about four miles away upstream from the site of the proposed plant.

In other business, the P&Z Commission approved a conditional-use permit requested by Larry D. Olsen to build a 20- to 25-unit park for recreation vehicles about 3.4 acres at its present business, Miracle Hot Springs near Hagerman.

Olsen asked the commission to waive the ordinance requirement to pave park-service roads and place lights at each unit. He didn't want to pave the purpose of camping, he said. In addition, he has sufficient lighting.

The commission allowed the paving requirement to be waived. After discussion, Olsen withdrew the request about the lighting when zoning members pointed out the ordinance required only small-wattage lights.

Olsen said he will also build a 5,000-square-foot structure to house an office, convenience store and greenhouse, heated by hot water.

Corps to test ice jam barriers

SALMON (AP) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has $1 million to field test a permeable barrier to prevent ice jams from forming in the Salmon River and flooding the town of Salmon. But the tests will have to wait for a cold snap that lasts at least a week to form enough ice in the river, said Greg Graham of the Corps' Walla Walla, Wash., district office. "We are now waiting for some colder weather," said John Zuffelt, a hydraulic engineer with the Corps' Cold Regions Research and Engineering Laboratory in Hanover, N.H. "We hope to do testing before Christmas, but if the weather does not cooperate it will be sometime after Christmas."

BLM seeks applicants for jobs

SHOSHONE — The U.S. Bureau of Land Management is seeking applicants to fill a limited number of summer seasonal positions, primarily between May and September 1987. Almost all of the positions will be in the far Western states and many will require a duty station in a more remote area. Reservoir road to be improved

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Bureau of Land Management received $23,950 in grants to improve a road at Magic Reservoir, said a BLM spokesman Thursday. The work on the rough road will begin in the spring and be completed in about two weeks, the spokesman said. The road goes from west shore lodge to the east shore lava point. A $10,000 grant was provided by Twin Falls County Waterways and $13,950 is a special grant from the State Parks Department.

The Dec. 21 program will feature the Magic Valley Chorale, the Magichords, and a visit from Santa.

VanAlstyne listed as stable

TWIN FALLS — Dori VanAlstyne, 37, of Van Nuy, Calif., who was injured in a light plane crash near Hansen last Saturday, remains in serious, but fairly stable, condition at the St. Alphonsus hospital in Boise. Her husband, Paul, 56, has been released from Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. Dori suffered head and other injuries when the plane, flown by her husband, crashed on an instrument approach to the Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport.

Hearing

He testified that the letter that Qualls sent was accurate, but he was not fully satisfied with it as it did not reflect the "spirit" of the agreement. He said it did not include the Elliott retaliation matter, but he was not concerned enough to ask that it be added. He said he felt Qualls knew what was wanted and would carry it out.

ter as a "post script" agreement. Ellsworth and Biehl said they never prepared a copy of an agreement, but Ellsworth said he asked them to confirm it in a letter. He testified that the letter that Qualls sent was accurate, but he was not fully satisfied with it as it did not reflect the "spirit" of the agreement. He said it did not include the Elliott retaliation matter, but he was not concerned enough to ask that it be added. He said he felt Qualls knew what was wanted and would carry it out.

Home

Continued from Page B1 threatened to close it. The limit was removed after a follow-up survey in late October, but Drake said resident totals have hovered between 136-145 since then and treatment has remained stable. "We don't recommend renewing the region," Schoonover said.

He and Biehl testified that someone, probably a Twin Falls-area law enforcement officer, informed Biehl shortly after the agreement was made that Qualls had no intention of living up to it. Neither man could recall who made the comment. They also said Biehl, who has not been in this area long, could not recall who first notified him that the agreement had been broken. Later, Frank Chidichimo, then FBI officer in Twin Falls, testified that he mentioned it to Biehl in a telephone conversation. He said Biehl did not comment on it at that time.

The nursing home has been inspected several times by state management and treatment problems were discovered last May. A 22-page survey in May cited inadequate nursing staff and a lack of response to patients' needs.

Birmingham was called back to work by Qualls after completing two weeks of the month's suspension, then sent to Chicago for a week-long seminar on police and fire department consolidation. After the seminar, he returned to the Twin Falls police force and worked for several weeks. Qualls then ordered Birmingham to serve the remainder of the suspension.

Officials from H&W and the healthcare Financing Administration, which oversees Medicare and Medicaid payments, avoided closing Sky View last August in the residents' interest by instead setting a manageable limit of 145 residents. They said many elderly residents die when forced to move from one home to another.

Qualls, who was on the stand when court recessed Friday evening, said Birmingham is one of two men who are trained and certified in carrying out the city's fire consolidation and had been scheduled for the seminar prior to the expense voucher incident.

Schoonover said another full inspection is scheduled for five or six months from now. Instead of the customary annual visit, to keep a watchful eye on the home and its residents, she said the inspection would coincide with a Medicare and Medicaid inspection required in the spring.

Qualls said he said he had six officers off duty when he called back Birmingham and Don Walden, another officer who is also alleged to have submitted a padded expense voucher, back to work. Two men were on vacation and the others were trained and certified in carrying out that job at his department at that time, Qualls said.

that the men were back to work because it was temporary. He did not, in the matter, he said, because he made press releases saying they had been temporarily recalled. The terms of the agreement have now been completed and the pay reaction is still in effect, Qualls said. Walden, who is not charged with any offense, has not yet completed his suspension time because there are still injuries and men gone from work in the detective department, Qualls said.

Under cross-examination, Biehl and Ellsworth both said it is not the policy of their office to monitor to see whether or not an agreement such as this is being followed. Ellsworth said that when he was told the agreement had been broken, his feeling was that he would wait and see if that were the case.

Ellsworth said he could not recall the time limit in the agreement for when the suspension, reprimand and pay reduction should be completed. But Biehl said he was at least thinking in terms of three to four months. The reprimand was first discussed about May 15, and the suspension began May 19. The grand jury summonses were issued Sept. 12 and the grand jury investigation held Sept. 17. Both were by indictment.

In Qualls' testimony, he said he was told by Biehl at the time the agreement was being formulated that if a charge was filed it would be a misdemeanor. He said he remembered that because his superior, City Manager Tom Courtney said if it involved a felony, he would probably terminate both officers.

At the time court recessed Friday, Qualls was testifying about a meeting between Twin Falls officials and Ellsworth and Biehl in Boise which was held at Qualls' request when he received a grand jury subpoena. It was requested to learn why the grand jury was called, Qualls said. He described it as heated, with a lot of shouting on the part of Ellsworth and Biehl, saying it was difficult to talk to the attorneys or obtain information. He said they told him the grand jury investigation was called because he had violated the agreement. At that time, he said, he was told for the first time that the agreement should have been completed in two to four months time. Qualls said he and Commander Gary Corder, who accompanied him to the meeting, made a report immediately after returning home. Judge Ryan said he felt whatever may have been said at the meeting would be of utmost importance and when he received a grand jury subpoena Wednesday during the hearing continues.

Water

Continued from Page B1 dinal to any others. But Dunn said state law requires recognition of all existing rights, and it is the department's long-standing policy to do so.

"We're acting in the public interest," he said, contending that imposition of payments at any level would frustrate the intent of the law that public in-stream uses be preserved.

He also said a review after 15 years would not be improper to ensure that the decision was still in the public's best interest. Gray also contended that a review might result in the minimum flow being increased, rather than decreased, as critics of the requirement fear.

In other action, the board approved a $1 million bond issue to underwrite repairs at the Oakley Dam, where emergency channels had to be constructed two years ago to avoid the dam being breached.

Williams said in backing the board's decision to fight the appeal. But Gray also indicated that if the board would lose the court test, it may completely withdraw the Federal water litigation and begin the process all over again.

The unanimous board decision came after the panel agreed on a 5-2 vote to subordinate repayment of the $22,000 loan it has outstanding to the Oakley Canal Co. to the company's repayment of the bond.

Church leaders rip Christian Identity

NEW YORK (AP) — Leaders of Jewish and Catholic protests on Thursday condemned the Christian Identity movement as a racist "virus that has already infected" more than 20,000 Americans.

"The ideology, teachings and activities of this movement constitute a perversion of authentic religious values, and are a source of bigotry, racism and anti-Semitism," the group said at a Manhattan news conference.

Signing the statement were the Rev. Lynn P. Clavin of the Southern Baptist Convention; the Rev. J. Bryan Hehr of the U.S. Catholic Conference; the Rev. Patricia McClurg of the National Council of Churches; and Rabbi A. James Rudin of the American Jewish Committee.

Also signing was C.T. Vivian of the Center for Democratic Renewal, which conducted an NCC-sponsored study of Christian Identity released Thursday.

Leonard Zeskind, author of the study, said Christian Identity has become "the theological undergirding for the entire range of white supremacist groups," ranging from the Ku Klux Klan to the Aryan Nations.

Basically, Christian Identity preaches that white Christians are descendants of the 10 lost tribes of Israel, and are thus blessed by God. Jews are the progeny of a mating of Satan and Eve; blacks are pre-Adamite; "false starts before God got going and made a white Adam," Zeskind said.

Believers — some of them drawn from the ranks of farmers who have been hit hard by the depressed farm economy — say they are in the biblical time of troubles, and are "holy warriors in a war between God and the forces of evil," blacks and Jews.

Some believe the U.S. Constitution is God-given, but only applies to white Christians; others seek to create a new nation in the Pacific Northwest. Some are violent, and authorities have raided Christian Identity camps and found them heavily armed. Others merely spout racist sentiments, he said.

Zeskind estimated that 20,000 Americans are involved on a regular basis with a myriad of Christian Identity groups and tens of thousands are involved more peripherally. He said the movement had become a powerful recruiter for racist groups, making religious inroads where political arguments have failed.

He said the best-known Identity leaders — such as Richard Butler of Hayden Lake, Idaho, and Robert Miles of Cochrane, Mich. — preach violence, but are not as successful in gaining converts as other, more soft-spoken leaders.

"We don't preach violence," Butler said from the headquarters of his Church of Jesus Christ Christian-Aryan Nations in the Idaho Panhandle. "I do preach the right of self-determination for the white race and along with that the right of self-preservation for our white heritage. If that's violence, of course that's our enemies' view. ... We just awaken our race. We don't make converts of them. They were born that way are."

Butler called the National Council of Churches a communist organization, accusing his religious critics of being the ones guilty of perversion.

"We hold to what our forefathers knew, understood and practiced," he said.

Butler, whose church has been linked to radical splinter groups, has repeatedly tried to distance himself from violence of groups like The Order. Its members have been convicted of a conspiracy to overthrow the government that included murder and robbery.

He said the four had planned to hike toward the Pahute Mesa area about 100 miles north of Las Vegas, where the nuclear device was to be detonated Friday morning.

The test was delayed on an hour-to-hour basis because of unfavorable wind conditions, according to Department of Energy spokesman Jim Boyer.

Anti-nuclear protesters have on several different occasions over the past year tried to infiltrate the test site in efforts to delay tests.

Boyer said nine protesters showed up at a cattle guard about four miles from the test site gate Friday morning, then left a short time later.

On Oct. 16, six protesters infiltrated the site for a test, and the blast was delayed 20 minutes while one protester was plucked by helicopter about a mile from ground zero.

Department of Energy officials have said they will not chase protesters across the 1,350-square-mile site, but will arrest them if they get near sensitive areas. The DOE has ground sensors, other electronic equipment and armed guards in helicopters and all-terrain vehicles guarding test sites and areas where sensitive equipment is stored.

Protesters give up site infiltration

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Four protesters trying to reach ground zero to halt a nuclear test have given up, while fierce winds Friday forced a delay in the shot at the Nevada Test Site.

The four walked onto the adjoining Nellis Test Range on Wednesday in an effort to infiltrate the site, said Steve Rohl of Greenpeace. The four radioed Thursday night that they were giving up.

Prints tested for Dallas

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Jackson police say it probably will be next week before they receive the results of fingerprint tests taken to solve if fugitive killer Claude Dallas was in a local cafe.

Two state game and fish department biologists reported a possible sighting of Dallas, who escaped from prison in Idaho in March, at a cafe here Wednesday. Police Sgt. Bob Zimmer said.

Drinking glasses used by the man were confiscated for fingerprint tests, but the results won't be available until next week, police said on Thursday.

Dave Lockman and Lee Wollrab, state biologists, said a man who resembled Dallas was sitting in a booth behind them at the cafe, but they lost track of him when they tried to follow him out of the restaurant, Zimmer said.

Dallas, on the FBI's list of 10 most wanted fugitives, was serving a 30-year prison term for manslaughter in the killings of two Idaho game wardens.

Shepard elected chief justice

BOISE (AP) — Justice Allan G. Shepard has been elected chief justice of the Idaho Supreme Court for the third time. He will succeed Charles R. Donaldson on Jan. 3.

"My goal will be to continue the policies and efforts of Chief Justice Donaldson, who brought Idaho's judicial system to its position of fourth best in the nation in management and organization," Shepard said in a statement issued Friday. "Idaho is now a leader in the nation in reduction of delays in court process and jury management."

Shepard, 64, is an 18-year veteran of the high court and was re-elected on Nov. 4 to a fourth six-year term. He previously served two terms in the Idaho

House of Representatives from Ada County and was state attorney general for six years, making him the only person in Idaho history to serve in all three branches of government.

Shepard was elected to the Supreme Court in 1968 and was chief justice in 1974 and from Jan. 1978 to July 1979.

The step up to chief justice will increase his pay from $54,770 to $56,270 annually.

Donaldson was elected chief justice in 1983 under an amendment to the Idaho Constitution eliminating the previous system of rotating the position among the court's five members.

Eagles patiently wait for CEU to self-destruct, win 116-66

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — For a few minutes there, College of Eastern Utah provided a good semblance of a basketball team. The Eagles were patient offensively, rebounded neatly and hid their defensive inadequacies in a 3-2 zone.

Then they blew the whole impression by trying to play man-to-man defense. In a three-quarter game, Southern Idaho had blown out to a 30-point lead and the only suspense left was whether this was a Wendy's night.

It wasn't. CSI couldn't hold CEU to under 60 and had to be content with a 116-66 victory.

And so for the 11th straight night CSI has walked off the floor with barely a test. Whether that remains true will be seen tonight when Colorado Northwestern comes to call for another Region 10 double-header that will begin with the women's game at 5:45 p.m.

CEU, making its first appearance under new Coach Ron Stubbs since the surprise resignation of veteran Curt Jensen over the past weekend, won within three points over the first six minutes as its zone gave CSI some pain. But Ed Drenwjak and Erick Newman made sure the Eagles stayed ahead. CSI spurred into a seven-point lead momentarily, then watched CEU claw back to within three on six straight points by William Allen, a Chicago freshman.

That's when it all came to an end. Bill Wirsky started it with a tip and quickly was followed by a Newman crippler on CSI's first break. Over the next 2:25, Joey Johnson — hit — four — points — Reynolds and Keith Jackson two and Mauro Games a pair of free throws.

That took CSI into a 33-17 advantage and Coach Stubbs changed his team to man. You could hear the door clank shut within seconds. Quickly Mauro, Sean Lasher and Newman picked up points before Allen ended the six-minute drought for CEU. In the closing three minutes, Johnson racked up eight more points and Pat Clark and Newman helped CSI into a 51-23 intermission advantage.

Early squabbling in the second period saw Allen single-handedly dueling Johnson and Jackson on the scoreboard until it reached 61-37. Then CSI quickly mushmored the lead to 40 points, then 50. Clark turned the 100 mark with a pair of charlies with 4:54 left and CEU broke the crowd's bid for a free

Wendy's single burger — the BYU Jayvees cost the hamburger joint over 1,000 earlier in the week when Erik Huybons of The Netherlands hit a close-in shot to make it 108-60 with 1:49 to play.

The home team shot 56 free throws as the visitors amassed 42 fouls — 21 in each half.

What CSI musters against the Coloradoans tonight is another question as both Mauro Games and Gerald Collins left Friday's game with leg injuries. Coach Fred Trenkle said Collins had a deep calf bruise and seemed the most likely to miss tonight's game. Games' woe was traced to an ankle.

Trenkle's Impression of Friday's win stemmed from early defense. "The first seven or eight minutes we played really tough. The points they got were in transition and they weren't getting much off their set offense. They stayed in that 3-2 and we kinda stumbled around for a while but once we started going to the offensive board you could see the cracks developing and when they went to man, it was all over," he summarized.

BYU Jayvees' 100-point effort was a record for the school. The team shot 56 free throws and made 42 fouls. The game was played at the Idaho Falls Civic Center.

Minico's strength too much for Tigers

Rebounding a key in 67-52 decision

By ALAN PHILLIPS
Special to The Times-News

IDAHO FALLS — Minico used superior rebounding strength and good inside passing to run past Idaho Falls, 67-52, in a Gem State Conference boys' basketball game here Friday night.

The Spartans, ranked fourth in last week's Associated Press Class A-1 poll, pulled ahead 36-27 in the second period with three consecutive baskets coming off offensive rebounds. Thomas Jones, Laylen McKenzie and Robert Greener controlled the boards in the second quarter as the Spartans came back from a 17-15 deficit.

Meanwhile, the Minico defense forced the Tigers to the outside where Idaho Falls found very little net. The Tigers hit just 33 percent from the floor for the game.

By the end of third period, Minico had the game well in hand with a 56-34 advantage.

"Our kids did a real good job with the transition offense," said Minico Coach Craig Dexter, whose Spartans are now 2-0 for the season and in conference. "We were able to spread their defense and get the ball down for good shot."

David Duff was the major beneficiary with 18 points for the night. Robert Greener tallied 12 and McKenzie finished with 10. Junior point guard Jack Bagley, who scored 15 points in the Spartans' season-opening victory over Highland last weekend, hit just four points for the night, but took only seven shots from the floor.

"I thought our kids played exceptionally well on defense," Dexter said. "We kept them out of their offense and made them shoot from the perimeter."

In the first quarter, that appeared to be enough. Idaho Falls hit seven of 12 attempts from the floor.

"I told the kids at the end of the first quarter that that was the best quarter Idaho Falls had played," said Dexter. "Just keep making them shoot from the outside. They can't keep hitting that well."

Referring to the second-quarter collapse of the Tigers, Idaho Falls Coach Garry Buell said his ballclub became undisciplined on offense.

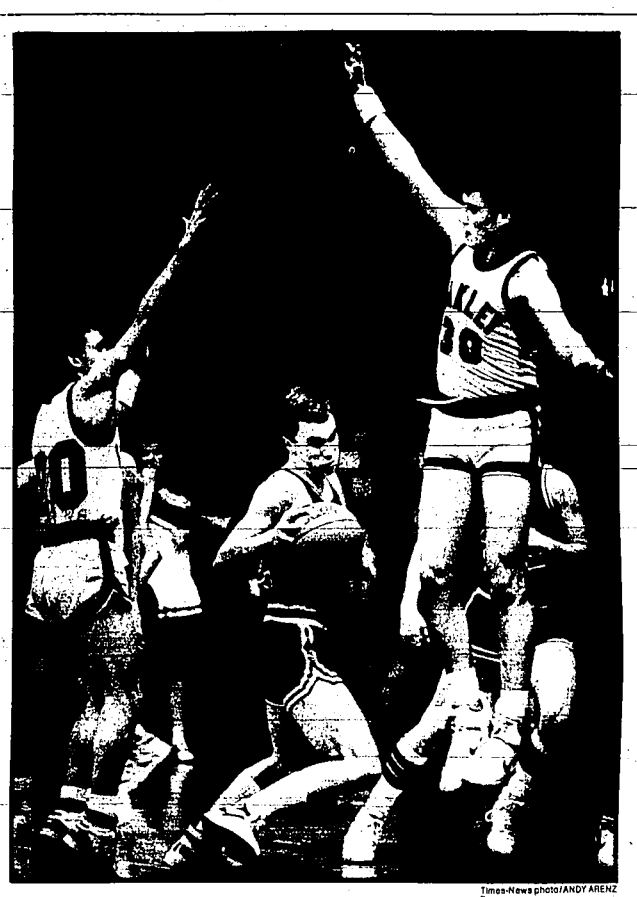

"We made a few turnovers and then our kids began to force some shots," he said. "Our shot selection was poor and then the kids just simply quit rebounding."

Minico was successful in spreading the Idaho Falls defense and in getting the ball to the baseline, followed by a quick pass into the key for an easy shot. That particular maneuver accounted for the majority of the Spartans' offense.

"We didn't play as well on defense as we have," said Buell. "Minico did a good job of spreading us out, and we couldn't get back down low to stop them."

Idaho Falls, which has lost all four of its games this season and stands 0-2 in conference, was led by Logan Kant with 14 points, Brian Hart scored 11, and guard Darren Mock scored 11.

Minico, which leads the GSC after two weeks of competition, will have its hands full keeping that station next week. Smith shocks Witherspoon three times

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — James "Boncrusher" Smith shocked Tim Witherspoon in one round Friday night and then wondered, "Who's Mike Tyson?"

Smith knows very well that Tyson is the unbeaten World Boxing Council heavyweight champion, and he'll get a chance to test Tyson as the World Boxing Association champion on March 7.

Smith, who got his chance against Witherspoon as a substitute, knocked Witherspoon down three times, and won with 48 seconds left in the opening round at Madison Square Garden. The three-knockdown rule was in effect.

Smith, who lost a decision to Witherspoon 19 months ago, hurt the defending champion with a right with the fight just seconds old, and stayed on top of him until the end.

"It was a wonderful punching performance," said Tyson, who was at ringside, presumably to scout Witherspoon, who most people felt would be Tyson's next opponent.

"Tyson is a hard puncher," Smith said. "He hasn't been in the ring with a big hitter like me. I have to hit him early with some good shots to slow him down."

That big right in the opening seconds slowed down Witherspoon, who could have lost even sooner. With the fight less than a minute old, Smith hit Witherspoon with a combination and he went down to one knee. But Witherspoon got up so fast that referee Luis Rivera didn't see it and didn't call it a knockdown.

There was no doubt about the other three knockdowns. "Witherspoon is a good fighter, but his mind was on too many other things," Smith said.

Witherspoon spent most of the week complaining about past fight purses with promoter Don King and trying to get out of his manager's contract with King's son, Carl.

"I have no excuses," Witherspoon said. "He got me good. He's good fighter."

The third knockdown came with 48 seconds left in the opening round, and when Witherspoon hit the canvas, Rivera stopped the fight.

Smith, who got his second title chance when Tony Tubbs withdrew, claiming an injured left shoulder, came out firing, and Witherspoon never had a chance to adjust.

Smith, who says he is about 31, charged off his stool and hit Witherspoon with a right hand. Smith then flailed away for 30 seconds before he fell down.

Smith stormed back to the attack and landed a right that put Witherspoon down to one knee. Witherspoon got up so quickly that Rivera didn't notice he was down and failed to call it a knockdown.

Smith then scored a knockdown with a left-right to the head. Rivera said after the fight the three-knockdown rule was in effect.

Witherspoon got up quickly and took a mandatory eight count, but went down moments later after a right to the head. Again he rose quickly.

The third knockdown came when Witherspoon was down for the third time with a right to the head. Rivera quickly waved for a halt to the bout.

During the short time the bout lasted Smith landed 28 of 59 punches and Witherspoon, looking heavy, landed only seven punches.

Smith, 228½, of Lillington, N.C., had lost a 12-round decision to Witherspoon on June 15, 1985, when Witherspoon was the North American Boxing Federation heavyweight champ.

A last verbal swing on the Muni money matter

TWIN FALLS — To the surprise of no one, there is opposition to our expressed views of the new clubhouse and its mortgage repayment at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course.

The counterpoint was provided by Twin Falls City Manager Tom Courtney. Mostly, his rebuttal revolved around how the amounts of money being given were arrived at and described.

Our original amounts came from the previous Monday's City Council meeting in which a return of $167,000 to the general budget from the city course was reported. That report carried the amount of something around $107,000 for appropriated expenditures.

We changed the latter because we (with witnesses) had inquired of City Greenskeeper Kevin Packard if expenditures had exceeded the budget. Packard said he didn't think so, but in any case he doubted the amount would exceed $100,000. That was the figure we used.

Larry Hovey

Commentary

since the original travel was about paying of and for the clubhouse, the average reader would understand that the profit would go against the mortgage.

We came up with a figure of $56,000 profit on that basis. The city's, on our basis, is $67,000. — But the city sees no "profit." The city figure is in the mortgage and interest as expense to trim $39,000 of that difference. The rest is called "surplus" which, as expected, will be returned to the general fund and deducted from the "principal" balance.

But it answers exactly the question we asked of why the city has again increased various fees and rents for next year to pay for an $8,000 golf mower.

It was, and remains, our contention that contingency funds are budgeted annually to accommodate usual wear-and-tear expenses, and, indeed, some throw in a little extra for the unexpected.

This way, you avoid what the rebuttal called "breakdown basis" provision for replacing equipment. These mowers didn't break down — they wore out over an eight-year use period. But if there is — in their words — a "surplus" of $28,313, why not take the gang mowers out of that "surplus?"

The golfers already have met the general fund mortgage demands. An "additional" tax (50 cent daily greens fees, $5 per season pass) isn't really necessary, is it? And $200,000 is left over to apply against the loan.

seen as a "good investment" for the general fund.

Rather like the millionaire-making, cost-plus-10 percent, World War II defense contracts, isn't it? The more you can spend, the more you make.

It should be pointed out that this area didn't deny the quality of clubhouse design and construction or the innumerable changes from foundation pouring to final touches. And to this day, we only thank God that there were some people around who were knowledgeable enough to get what we got rather than the monstrosity first suggested. But until Thompson's statement on "good investment" for the general fund, we misread the malleability of the municipal position. Was it silly of us to presume golfer benefit was placed first?

The other expressed reasons for daily greens fees increases are hardly compelling. First, that the city course wasn't keeping up with neighboring fees begs the question — compared to what? If you consider Elkhorn and Sun Valley as neighboring, then yes, "Muni" is one private or daily cost. But Buhl is private, Jerome is private, Bluff

Church leaders rip Christian Identity

NEW YORK (AP) — Protestant, Jewish and Catholic leaders on Thursday condemned the Christian Identity movement as a racist "virus that has already infected" more than 20,000 Americans.

"The ideology, teachings and activities of this movement constitute a perversion of authentic religious values, and are a source of bigotry, racism and anti-Semitism," the group said, at a Manhattan news conference.

Signing the statement were the Rev. Lynn F. Clayton of the Southern Baptist Convention; the Rev. J. Bryan Hehr of the U.S. Catholic Conference; the Rev. Patricia McClurg of the National Council of Churches; and Rabbi A. James Rudin of the American Jewish Committee.

Also signing was C.T. Vivian of the Center for Democratic Renewal, which conducted an NCC-sponsored study of Christian Identity released Thursday.

going ad made a white Adam," Zeskind said.

Believers — some of them drawn from the ranks of farmers who have been hit hard by the depressed farm economy — say they are in the biblical time of troubles, and are "holy warriors in a war between God and the forces of evil," blacks and Jews.

Some believe the U.S. Constitution is God-given, but only applies to white Christians; others seek to create a new nation in the Pacific Northwest. Some are "violent," and authorities have raided Christian Identity camps and found them heavily armed. Others merely spout racist sentiments, he said.

Zeskind estimated that 20,000 Americans are involved on a regular basis with a myriad of Christian Identity groups, and tens of thousands are involved more peripherally. He said the movement had become a powerful recruiter for racist groups, making religious inroads where political arguments have failed.

He said the best-known Identity leaders — such as Richard Butler of Hayden Lake, Idaho, and Robert Miles of Coconah, Mich. — preach violence, but are not as successful in gaining converts as other, more soft-spoken leaders.

"We don't preach violence," Butler said from the headquarters of his Church of Jesus Christ Christian-Aryan-Nations — in the Idaho Panhandle. "I do preach the right of self-determination for the white race and along with that the right of self-preservation for our white heritage. If that's violence, of course that's our enemies' view. We just awaken our race. We don't make converts of them. They were born what they are."

Butler called the National Council of Churches a communist organization, accusing his religious critics of being the ones guilty of perversion.

"We hold to what our forefathers knew, understood and practiced," he said.

Butler, whose church has been linked to radical splinter groups, has repeatedly tried to distance himself from violence of groups like The Order. Its members have been convicted of a conspiracy to overthrow the government that included murder and robbery.

Shepard elected chief justice

BOISE (AP) — Justice Allan G. Shepard has been elected chief justice of the Idaho Supreme Court for the third time. He will succeed Charles R. Donaldson on Jan. 3.

"My goal will be to continue the policies and efforts of Chief Justice Donaldson," who brought Idaho's judicial system to its position of fourth best in the nation in management and organization," Shepard said in a statement issued Friday. "Idaho is now a leader in the nation in reduction of delays in court process and jury management."

Shepard, 64, is an 18-year veteran of the high court and was re-elected on Nov. 4 to a fourth six-year term. He previously served two terms in the Idaho

House of Representatives from Ada County and was state attorney general for six years, making him the only person in Idaho history to serve in all three branches of government.

Shepard was elected to the Supreme Court in 1968 and was chief justice in 1974 and from Jan. 1978 to July 1979.

The step up to chief justice will increase his pay from $54,770 to $56,270 annually.

Donaldson was elected chief justice in 1983 under an amendment to the Idaho Constitution eliminating the previous system of rotating the position among the court's five members.

Fort Hall man dies in 'cycle collision

FORT HALL (AP) — A Fort Hall man has died in a motorcycle collision with a freight train, authorities report.

The victim was identified as Clarence Preacher, 29. Authorities said Preacher died immediately after he turned his motorcycle onto the Union Pacific Railroad crossing from U.S. 91 late Thursday and was hit by a southbound freight train traveling at about 45 miles an hour.

Leonard Zeskind, author of the study, said Christian Identity has become "the theological underpinning for the entire range of white supremacist groups," ranging from the Ku Klux Klan to the Aryan Nations.

Basically, Christian Identity preaches that white Christians are descendants of the 10 lost tribes of Israel, and are thus blessed by God. Jews are the progeny of a mating of Satan and Eve; blacks are pre-Adamic; "false starts before God got

Protesters give up site infiltration

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Four protesters trying to reach ground zero to halt a nuclear test have given up, while fierce winds Friday forced a delay in the shot at the Nevada Test Site.

The four walked onto the adjoining Nellis Test Range on Wednesday in an effort to infiltrate the site, said Steve Rohl of Greenpeace. The four radioed Thursday night that they were giving up.

Rohl said the four had planned to hike toward the Pahute Mesa area about 100 miles north of Las Vegas, where the nuclear device was to be detonated Friday morning.

The test was delayed on an hour-to-hour basis because of unfavorable wind conditions, according to Department of Energy spokesman Jim Boyer.

Anti-nuclear protesters have on several different occasions over the past year tried to infiltrate the test site in efforts to delay tests.

Boyer said nine protesters showed up at a cattle guard about four miles from the test site gate Friday morning, then left a short time later.

On Oct. 16, six protesters infiltrated the site for a test, and the blast was delayed 20 minutes while one protester was plucked by helicopter about a mile from ground zero.

Department of Energy officials have said they will not chase protesters across the 1,350-square-mile site, but will arrest them if they get near sensitive areas. The DOE has ground sensors, other electronic equipment and armed guards in helicopters and all-terrain vehicles guarding test sites and areas where sensitive equipment is stored.

Prints tested for Dallas

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Jackson police say it probably will be next week before they receive the results of fingerprint tests taken to see if fugitive killer Claude Dallas was in a local cafe.

Two state Game and Fish Department biologists reported a possible sighting of Dallas, who escaped from prison in Idaho in March, at a cafe here Wednesday. Police Sgt. Bob Zimmer said.

Drinking glasses used by the man were confiscated for fingerprint tests, but the results won't be available until next week, police said on Thursday.

Dave Lockman and Lee Wollrab, state biologists, said a man who resembled Dallas was sitting in a booth behind them at the cafe, but they lost track of him when they tried to follow him out of the restaurant, Zimmer said.

Dallas, on the FBI's list of 10 most wanted fugitives, was serving a 30-year prison term for manslaughter in the killings of two Idaho game wardens.

Eagles patiently wait for CEU to self-destruct, win 116-66

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — For a few minutes there, College of Eastern Utah provided a good semblance of a basketball team. The Eagles were patient offensively, rebounded pretty well and hid their defensive inadequacies in a 32 zone.

Then they blew the whole impression by trying to play man-to-man defense. In a three-quarter game, Southern Idaho had blown out to a 30-point lead and the only suspense left was whether this was a Wendy's night. CSI couldn't hold CEU to under 60 and had to be content with a 116-66 victory.

And so for the 11th straight night CSI has walked off the floor with barely a test. Whether that remains true will be seen tonight when Colorado Northwestern comes to call for another Region 16 double-header that will begin with the women's game at 5:45 p.m.

CEU, making its first appearance under Coach Ron Stubbs since the surprise resignation of veteran Curt Jensen over the past weekend, hung within three points after the first six minutes as its zone gave CSI some pause. But Ed Drewniak and Erick Newman made sure the Eagles stayed ahead. CSI spurted into a seven-point lead momentarily, then watched CEU claw back to within three on six straight points by William Allen, a Chicago freshman.

That's when it all came to an end. Bill Wirskey started it with a tip and quickly was followed by a Newman cripple on CSI's first fast break. Over the next 2:25, Keith Johnson hit four points, Keith Reynolds and Keith Jackson two and Mauro Gomes a pair of free throws. That took CSI into a 33-17 advantage and Coach Stubbs changed his team to man. You could hear the door clank shut within seconds. Quickly Mauro, Sean Lasher and Newman picked up points before Allen ended the six-minute drought for CEU. In the closing three minutes, Johnson racked up eight more points and Pat Clark and Newman helped CSI into a 51-23 intermission advantage.

Early squabbling in the second period saw Allen single-handedly quell Johnson and Jackson on the scoreboard until it reached 61-37. Then CSI quickly mushroomed the lead to 40 points, then 50. Clark turned the 100 mark with a pair of charlies with 4:54 left and CEU broke the crowd's bid for a free

Wendy's single burger — the BYU Jayvees' cost the hamburger joint over 1,000 earlier in the week — when Erik Huybens of The Netherlands hit a close-in shot to make it 108-60 with 1:49 to play. The home team shot 56 free throws as the visitors amassed 42 fouls — 21 in each half.

What CSI musters against the Coloradoans tonight is an under question as both Mauro Gomes and Gerald Collins left Friday's game with leg injuries. Coach Fred Trenkle said Collins had a deep calf bruise and seemed the most likely to miss tonight's game. Gomes' woe was traced to an ankle.

Trenkle's impression of Friday's win stemmed from early defense. "The first seven or eight minutes we played really tough. The points they got were in transition and they weren't getting much off their set offense. They stayed in that 3-2 and we kinda stumbled around for a while but once we started going to the offensive board you could see the cracks developing and when they went to man, it was all over," he summarized.

Minico's strength too much for Tigers

Rebounding a key in 67-52 decision

By ALAN PHILLIPS
Special to The Times-News

IDAHO FALLS — Minico used superior rebounding strength and good inside passing to run past Idaho Falls, 67-52, in a Gem State Conference boys' basketball game here Friday night.

The Spartans, ranked fourth in last week's Associated Press Class A-1 poll, pulled ahead 36-27 in the second period with three consecutive baskets coming off offensive rebounds. Thomas Jones, Kevlen McKenzie and Robert Greener controlled the boards in the second quarter as the Spartans came back from a 17-15 deficit.

Meanwhile, the Minico defense forced the Tigers to the outside where Idaho Falls found very little net. The Tigers hit just 33 percent from the floor for the game.

By the end of third period, Minico had the game well in hand with a 56-34 advantage.

"Our kids did a real good job with the transition offense," said Minico Coach Craig Dexter, whose Spartans are now 2-0 for the season and in conference. "We were able to spread their defense and get the ball down low for good shot."

David Duff was the major beneficiary with 18 points for the night. Robert Greener tallied 12 and McKenzie finished with 10. Junior point guard Jack Bagley, who scored 15 points in the Spartans' season-opening victory over Highland last weekend, hit just four points for the night, but took only seven shots from the floor.

"I thought our kids played exceptionally well on defense," added Dexter. "We kept them out of their offense and made them shoot from the perimeter."

In the first quarter, that appeared to be enough. Idaho Falls hit seven of 12 attempts from the floor.

"I told the kids at the end of the first quarter that that was the best quarter Idaho Falls had played," said Dexter. "Just keep making them shoot from the outside. They can't keep hitting that well."

Referring to the second quarter collapse of the Tigers, Idaho Falls Coach Garry Buell said his ballclub became undisciplined on offense.

"We made a few turnovers and then our kids began to force some shots," he said. "Our shot selection was poor and then the kids just simply quit rebounding."

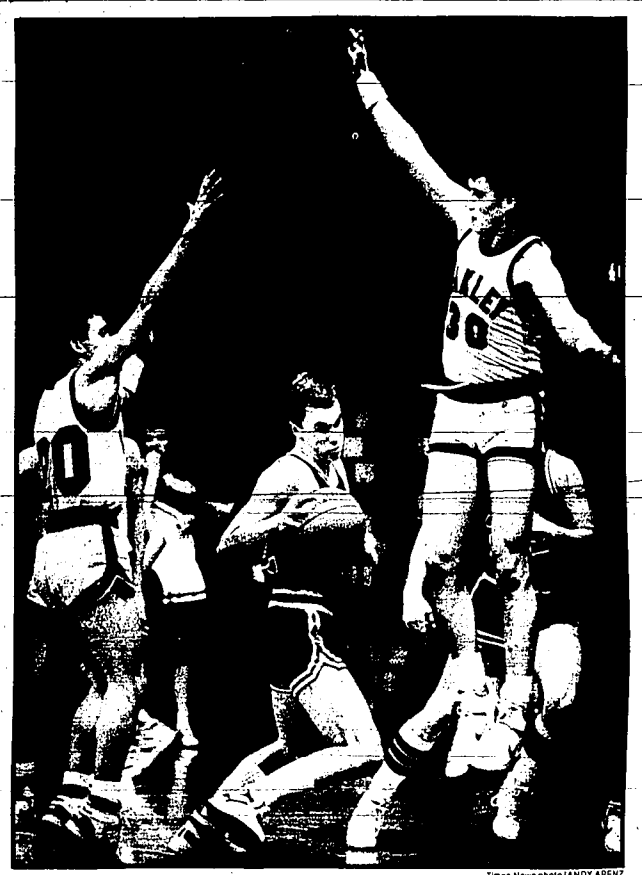

Minico was successful in spreading the Idaho Falls defense and then getting the ball to the baseline, followed by a quick pass into the key for an easy shot. That particular maneuver accounted for the majority of the Spartans' offense.

"We didn't play as well on defense as we have," said Buell. "Minico did a good job of spreading us out, and we couldn't get back down low to stop them."

Idaho Falls, which has lost all four of its games this season and stands 0-2 in conference, was led by Kegan Kane with 14 points, Brian Hart added 12 and guard Darren Mock scored 11.

Minico, which leads the GSC after two weeks of competition, will have their hands full keeping that station next week. The Spartans have three games scheduled, starting with a non-conference Region III contest at home against Burley on Tuesday. The counterpart was provided by Twin Falls City Manager Tom Courtney. Mostly, his rebuttal revolved around how the amounts of money being used were arrived at and described.

Now the city revises its figures with a $175,000 increase against $108,000 expenditure. We described this as "profit" and specified "we are discussing here the return of greens fees, cart storage, locker rentals, etc., in total against the amount of money appropriated for the course by the council." (We assumed that since the original column was about paying of and for the clubhouse, the average reader would understand that the profit would go against the mortgage.)

"We came up with a figure of $56,000 profit on that basis. The city's, on our basis, is $67,000. — But the city sees no "profit." The city figures in the mortgage and interest as expense to turn $38,000 of that difference. The rest is called "surplus" which, as expected, will be returned to the general fund and deducted from the "principal" balance.
Now, we never used the term surplus funds because when you owe $350,000 it seldom seems applicable.

But it answers exactly the question we asked of why the city has again increased various fees and rents for next year to pay for an $8,000 gang mower.
It was, and remains, our contention that contingency funds are budgeted annually to accommodate usual wear-and-tear expense and, indeed, some throw in a little extra for the unexpected.

The golfers already have met the general fund's mortgage demands. An "additional" tax (50 cent daily greens fees, $5 per season pass) isn't really necessary, is it? And $20,000 is left over to apply against the loan.
How this type of bookkeeping self-serves became more meaningful three days after the original column on a BMK-TV news program with city financial officer Rick Thompson.
Thompson was asked why the city had allowed the new clubhouse to run $107,000 over budget. And Thompson simply replied it was seen as a "good investment" for the general fund.

Rather like the millionaire-making, cost-plus-10-percent, World War II defense contracts, isn't it? The more you can spend, the more you make.

It should be pointed out that this area didn't deserve the quality of clubhouse design and construction or the innumerable changes from foundation pouring to final touches.

And to this day, we only thank God that there were some people around who were knowledgeable enough to get what we got rather than the monstrosity first suggested.

But until Thompson's statement on "good investment" for the general fund, we missed the malleability of the municipal position. Was it silly of us to presume golfer benefit was placed first?
The other expressed reasons for daily greens fees increases are hardly compelling.
First, that the city course wasn't keeping up with neighboring fees begs the question — compared to what? If you consider Elkhorn and Sun Valley as neighboring, then yes, "Muni" is one-third the daily cost.

Browns-Bengals game could be key in AFC

Why not the Browns or Bengals? The Cleveland and Cincinnati meet at York Giants and Washington Redskins here Sunday in a game that should decide the winner of the wild-card playoff berth.

While the Chicago Bears, New York Giants and Washington Redskins have already clinched NFC playoff spots and the Los Angeles Rams are on the verge, the only AFC team in contention is the Pittsburgh Steelers. Cougar Akeo placed on probation for year

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Brigham Young University senior linebacker Ladd Akeo has been placed on academic probation for the remainder of the school year due to alleged involvement in altering drug prescriptions, but will be allowed to play in the Dec. 30 Freedom Bowl, BYU officials say.

"Akeo, of Pearl City, Hawaii and two other starters, linebacker J.C. VanCollin and tight end Trevor Molini, were charged with altering prescriptions for two linebackers, Percodan and Percocet. However, school spokesman Paul Richards said Thursday night that Akeo was not seriously involved in the altering of prescriptions.

Both VanCollin and Molini have voluntarily admitted themselves into a drug rehabilitation program at Utah Valley Hospital. Richards said the academic status of Molini and VanCollin will not be decided until the players are released from the rehabilitation program in about three weeks.

"I want to make it clear," said Richards, "Akeo did not take the drug. He is not addicted to either Percodan or Percocet. His attitude has been great since the incident and the university has decided to allow him to stay in school."

"I don't think Ladd realized the seriousness of what he did," added Richards. "He was charged with one count of altering a prescription. Our investigation found he was not hooked on the drug."

Richards also addressed questions as to whether BYU team doctors had been issuing prescriptions for Percodan and Percocet, both Class 2 narcotics.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Kent Cooper of Albion finished in a tie for third place in the eighth round of the saddle bronc riding competition Thursday night at the National Finals Rodeo here Thursday.

Cooper tied with PRCA saddle bronc leader Clint Johnson of Spearfish, S.D., with a score of 75 Thursday night. That kept Cooper in fourth place in the overall PRCA standings in his event, about $19,000 in earnings behind Johnson.

Skeeter Thurston of Haymis, Neb., and Bud Munroe of Valley Mills, Texas, tied for first place with scores of 77. Finishing second was Butch Small of Dubois with a 76.

Small is the overall average leader in the saddle bronc riding after eight rounds.

Winning the bareback riding was Clint Corey, who used the victory to vault past Lewis Field of Elk Ridge, Utah, for the overall lead in the event. Corey, of Silverdale, Wash., has earned $94,255 in bareback riding this year, including $19,950 in the NFR.

Duhon, who won only $22,864 all last year, pushed his season earnings to $96,285 with the win — with $23,100 of that coming this week in the world's richest rodeo.

Defending champions Jake Barnes of Bloomfield, N.M., and Clay O'Brien Cooper of Gilbert, Ariz., won the team roping with a time of 4.3 seconds to keep their lead for another world title in the event. Barnes and Cooper have won three times and finished second twice in eight NFR sessions.

Paul Tierney of Rapid City, S.D., finished second at 8.1 seconds followed by Chris Lybbert of Arroyo, Texas, who was timed in 8.3 seconds. Tierney, who has won $29,350 in the rodeo, leads for the world title in the event after being in fifth place going into the finals rodeo.

In women's barrel racing, Charmayne James of Clayton, N.M., won for the second night on a row to continue her season-long domination of the sport. James, who ran her season earnings to $124,540, was timed in 13.81 seconds. She edged Ginny Pat Smith of Mexia, Texas, who was timed in 13.85 seconds.

A total of 115 cowboys qualified for the finals, held in Las Vegas after the second year after being lured from Oklahoma City by a doubling of the prize money. Thursday's session was a sellout at the 16,500-seat campus arena at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas.

In bull riding, defending champion Ted Nuze of Manteca, Calif., won while Wacey Calthey of Big Springs, Texas finished second.

Nuze moved to within $1,000 of Tuff Hedeman of Gainesville, Texas, in the race for the bull riding title. Charles Sampson of Los Angeles finished out of the money, but still managed to remain the only rider to ride all his bulls in the rodeo.
