No fund diversion authorized, Regan says

McClure says panel should concentrate on facts

SEN. JAMES MCCLURE
Senate committee member

The Associated Press

BOISE — Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, named Tuesday to a special Senate committee investigating the Iran arms sale, says the panel shouldn't consider itself looking for a crime to prosecute.

Instead, McClure said, the panel should concern itself with finding the facts and deciding whether U.S. foreign policy and the procedures need to carry it out need to be changed.

McClure, who started his political career as county prosecutor at Payette, is one of five Republicans named Tuesday to an 11-member Senate committee headed by Sen. Daniel Inouye of Hawaii.

When Congress convenes in January, McClure said the Senate's first task will be organizing the special investigating committee and deciding its assignment.

"This committee isn't intended to be a prosecuting panel," said McClure. "Our job is not to find evidence of a crime and to punish somebody."

"Our job is to determine whether or not there are any policy changes that need to be made," he said.

In an earlier interview, McClure said he wasn't surprised that Republicans turned on President Reagan. During the Nixon-Watergate proceedings a decade ago, he said, politicians learned, "It's easier to attack than to defend, that's a good way to get headlines. Some of our friends are of that mold."

But McClure said the nation will be well off to determine the facts in the Iran arm sale, and then get on to other things.

"The sooner we get this behind us, the better we will be," he said.

A major question arose Tuesday whether key witnesses should be granted at least partial immunity from prosecution for testimony they give before the investigating committee.

"It's premature for me to judge whether it should or shouldn't be done in this case," McClure said. "There's a conflict between the desire to prosecute and the desire to get the information made public as quickly as possible."

"People are trying to protect themselves from criminal prosecution," he said. But McClure noted that limited immunity "is certainly something we will have to look at."

He said the 10 other senators on the committee offer a cross-section of backgrounds, experience and philosophy.

McClure said the special panel doubtless will take a great deal of his time, but that shouldn't be a problem next session because he no longer is chairman of a Senate committee.

"I don't think we're going to complete our job in just a few days," he said. "I think it's going to go well into next year before we are able to conclude fully."

WASHINGTON — White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan declared Tuesday that no one was ever authorized to divert money from Iran arms sales to Nicaraguan rebels, while President Reagan urged Congress to grant limited immunity to force testimony from two former administration officials.

Emerging from more than four hours of testimony to the Senate Intelligence Committee behind closed doors, Regan told reporters he did not know of the transfers of money; and said, "I do not believe the president of the United States" knew about it either.

He cited that Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, fired recently as National Security Council staff deputy, would have been given top-level authority to conduct a program of assistance to the Contras.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III said Nov. 25 that only North knew precisely of that operation, but that national security adviser, Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, had been aware of its existence.

Senate leaders, meanwhile, announced the makeup of a special Watergate-style committee, headed by Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, to conduct a comprehensive investigation of the entire Iran-Contra affair when

Odor closes new wing of Paul school

By ADELL HARVEY
Times-News correspondent

PAUL — The new wing of the Paul Elementary School was evacuated Tuesday after several teachers complained at a Monday night board meeting of a mysterious foul odor and numerous ill students in the new wing.

"We're doing everything humanly possible to locate the source of the problem," said Superintendent Gene Snapp Tuesday. "We had the building checked for methane gas this morning, and the levels were so low it didn't register on the meter."

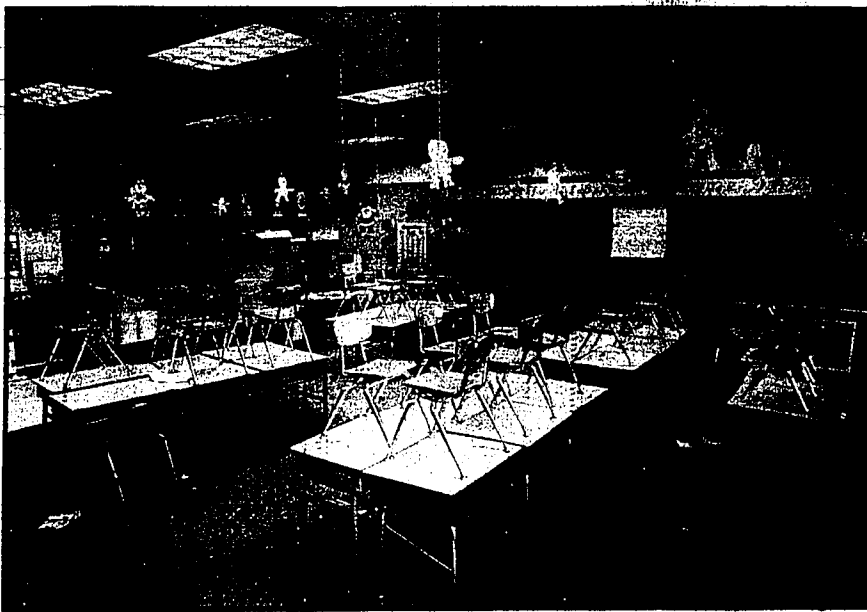

He said formaldehyde had been suggested as a possible source of the problem; and that metering equipment was ordered from Pocatello Monday.

"It was supposed to arrive by UPS yesterday," he said. "But it still isn't here. We sent a man over to Twin Falls today to try to trace the package, and they can't locate it."

He said that Mindoka County Health Department officials and doctors he has called have assured him that formaldehyde is an irritant, but not a serious health hazard in the levels which would be present in the new building.

The new wing was in use all of last year, with no complaints. "Most people I have consulted say a problem with formaldehyde would have been more apparent in the first year of use," Snapp said.

Units for radon testing have been installed, but Snapp said results from those tests take three months to check. However, safety inspectors, architects and consultants

The 100th Congress convenes early next month.

Regan said Tuesday: "I can tell you that Colonel North or nobody else was ever authorized to divert funds... to the Contras, or anyone else."

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said that after listening to Regan and Secretary of State George Shultz during Tuesday's closed-door session, "It's clear... that whoever pulled it off did it without proper, appropriate or other authority, and that person is Ollie North."

Asked who he believed came up with the plan to divert proceeds from the sale of arms to Iran to the Contras, Durenberger replied: "I'm convinced this is Ollie North's plan. This is pure Ollie North."

"It is clear to me that he acted totally without proper authority in this matter, and it's up to him to come forward now and produce the rest of the piece of the puzzle, and we'll have it done," Durenberger added.

According to congressional sources, who spoke on condition that their names not be used, Regan's testimony to the Senate panel contradicted McFarlane's public testimony last week before the House Foreign Affairs Committee that the president gave his authorization for the indirect shipment of "small levels of arms to Iran."

McFarlane did mention any other country by name, but Israel has been identified as having sent American arms to Iran during the summer of 1987.

The congressional sources quoted Regan as saying the president never gave such approval. Regan also testified that North never met alone with the president.

However, the sources said, Regan admitted that Poindexter could get access to the president without Regan's knowing and that Poindexter could have taken North to meet alone with the president.

Shortly before Regan spoke to reporters, Regan appealed to the Senate Intelligence Committee to grant limited immunity to obtain

Voyager drones on

MOJAVE, Calif. — Voyager threaded its way through the spiraling arms of Typhoon Marge Tuesday and headed toward the Philippines in a bid to become the first plane to circle the globe non-stop without refueling.

"We just shot the curtain and dodged the bullet," chief meteorologist Len Snellman said after directing pilot Dick Rutan through the northern fringe of the storm.

Snellman placed Voyager between two of the typhoon's spiral arms, picking up 40 mph tailwinds to aid it on its world-record quest.

At 48 hours into the flight from California, the lightweight plane with the accidentally clipped 109-foot wingspan had gone 6,200 miles on its planned 25,000-mile flight. It passed the Marianas traveling at 145 mph, 7,600 feet over the Philippine Sea and was due to reach the Philippines later Wednesday, Pacific time.

Rutan, 48, went to sleep after the 12-hour ordeal of flying through turbulence from the storm, and copilot Jeana Yeager, 34, took over.

At 3 p.m. MST, the duo shut down the front engine to improve fuel economy, spokesman Larry Candler said in a statement.

Nicaragua keeping Hall locked up

The Associated Press

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — President Daniel Ortega said Tuesday that Sam Nlesley Hall, identified by Nicaragua as the American caught near an air base with maps stuffed in his sock, is a "mentally unbalanced person."

He also said Hall brought explosives into the country to help U.S.-backed Nicaraguan rebels, known as Contras, fight the Sandinista government.

Nicaragua says the man it identifies as Hall, 49, of Dayton, Ohio, was arrested Friday morning in a restricted zone near the Punta Huete air base, 13 miles northeast of Managua. Reports in the United States say he is the brother of Rep. Tony P. Hall, D-Ohio.

In a brief meeting with reporters, Ortega said "Hall admitted that he brought explosives to combat and to help the mercenaries. Also, he came to find out about our bases and our helicopters as part of the plans by United States leaders to bombard Nicaragua."

He refused to elaborate on Hall's alleged smuggling of explosives, or provide other details.

Nicaragua has refused repeated requests by the U.S. Embassy to send a diplomat to visit the prisoner and determine his identity. No journalists have been allowed to talk with the suspect and there was no independent verification of the Nicaraguan claims.

In response to a question, Ortega said, "Clearly, the activities of Hall were a function of the North American government. He was working indirectly with the North American government."

The president said Hall's case would be handled in the same manner as Eugene Hasenfus, who is serving 30 years in prison after being convicted of helping fly arms and weapons to the Contras.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Al Laun said earlier in the day the embassy had made requests since Saturday for a representative of the consular section to be permitted to visit the prisoner. He said Nicaraguan officials had ignored the requests and refused to discuss the case with U.S. diplomats.

"We expect direct answers, not just floating answers through the press," Laun said.

Non-smokers victims of others' smoke, annual report says

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Inhaling smoke from other people's cigarettes causes lung cancer and other diseases in non-smokers, findings that should spur more restrictions on smoking in public places, the surgeon general said Tuesday.

In his annual report on smoking, Dr. C. Everett Koop, surgeon general of the U.S. Public Health Service, said passive or involuntary smoking is a major health hazard that affects millions of non-smokers.

"It is now clear that disease risk due to inhalation of tobacco smoke is not solely limited to the individual who is smoking, but can also extend to those individuals who inhale tobacco smoke in room air," Koop told a news briefing on the report.

Smoking is responsible directly for more than 300,000 deaths annually in the United States, about 15 percent of all mortality, Koop said. While there are proven risks from involuntary smoking, his report said, there is not enough data to estimate accurately the sickness and death it causes.

The report did not specifically suggest any further restriction or ban on public smoking, but Koop told reporters that "measures to protect the public health are required now" and he endorsed more restrictions.

Koop, a longtime anti-smoking advocate, urged state and local governments, businesses, industry and others to restrict smoking in public places because the 30 percent of the adult population and increasing concerns about the health of non-smokers, he said.

The report also spotlighted the relationship between parental smoking and health problems in children, particularly those smokers. Smoking is becoming more and more socially unacceptable in public places."

Koop said 40 states and the District of Columbia have enacted some form of legislation to restrict smoking in public, and he urged more states and local governments to follow suit.

These laws reflect a decline of smokers to 30 percent of the adult population and increasing concerns about the health of non-smokers, he said.

The report also spotlighted the relationship between parental smoking and health problems in children, particularly those under age 2. Infants of smoking parents are at increased risks of bronchitis, pneumonia and other problems, Koop said, and that with children at home should stop smoking there.

Entitled "The Health Consequences of Involuntary Smoking," the report was immediately condemned by the tobacco industry as being based upon inadequate research and embraced by anti-smoking groups as a "landmark" document to bolster efforts to restrict smoking.

A tobacco industry spokesman attacked testimony by North and Poldexter to "get the facts out before the American people as quickly as possible to get this matter behind us," said presidential spokesman Larry Speakes.

 Such a move, he said, would not preclude criminal prosecution for illegal activities.
 But the proposal was greeted with little enthusiasm, as Durenberger and Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., the ranking members of the Intelligence Committee, scoffed at the idea.

"They need to come forward on their own," Durenberger said of North and Poldexter.
 Durenberger said the committee will discuss the president's immunity proposal today because the panel "should respond in some way to the president's request."
 Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said that while special select Senate panel going into business next month would carefully consider Reagan's request, there were several important conditions that could not be met quickly.
 Nunn said the committee would have to retain an attorney experienced in this aspect of the law, would have to go far enough in its investigation to know the immunity grant would produce truthful testimony, and would have to clear any such grant with the independent counsel, who has not yet been named.

 Durenberger told reporters the problem surrounding the secret contacts to Iran, the sales of arms to that country and the transfer of money to Contra rebels was caused by "a deliberate effort on the part of a handful of people, including the president of the United States, deliberately avoid congressional oversight."

 "The contrivance failed," he added. "Now the president is being held to account for it and I think the disaster were facing right here today should be evidence of the fact that oversight, when used properly, is a pretty good tool."
 Shultz answered Senate Intelligence Committee questions until late Tuesday, but he left the committee room without speaking to anyone. Howard Teicher, who resigned earlier Tuesday, effective March 31, from the National Security Council, was the committee's next witness. Teicher is a Middle East specialist who is reported to have been a "key figure" in the U.S. plan to sell arms to Iran.

Smoking

 the report, saying its conclusions went beyond the data presented and imply that further smoking restrictions are desired despite little objective evidence of substantial harm to non-smokers.
 "Obviously, there is only one step beyond restrictions — and that is to ban smoking," said Scott Stapf of the Tobacco Institute. "This is clearly a political document, not a scientific one. They just don't have the evidence."
 Some labor unions expressed concern that the report's emphasis on the health of non-smokers will draw attention away from more hazardous pollutants in the workplace.

 The five unions — the Machinists, Carpenters, Sheetmetal Workers, Firemen and Oilers and the Bakery, Confectionary and Tobacco Workers — said the report "seriously undermines our efforts to protect our members effectively from a host of other toxic substances" regulated by the government.
 But Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Rep. James H. Scheuer, D-N.C., announced they would introduce legislation to prohibit all smoking on public transportation, including all scheduled airline flights.

 have all said they doubt very much that the issue is being resolved.
 "We called OSHA (Occupational Safety and Health Administration), the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) and everybody else who might be able to help," said Snapp.
 "We've done everything we've been advised, and so far nothing has tested out as a health hazard," he said. "We're concerned about the safety and welfare of all our children and staff, and are trying to get this resolved with as little disruption for the children as possible."
 At Monday's board meeting, Jim Norton, president of the Minidoka Education Association, presented a number of letters from Paul teachers, claiming a serious health hazard exists in the wing. He said that teachers reported from eight to 20 students per class who chronically complained of stomach cramps, headaches, and eye, nose, and throat irritations.
 Snapp told the teachers the district's maintenance people had checked the school thoroughly to discover the source of the foul odor. He said they found a broken cap on a sewer line, which could have caused fumes to come back out of the system. A new cap was installed, and extensions added to keep down drafts from the air pipes.
 Robin Anderson, a second grade teacher at the school whose classroom is not in the new addition, said, "My class is unusually sluggish and lethargic. I get at least four students per day who complain of no 'wellness!'"

 She said the symptoms leave when the children are outside the building for recess, and return after they have been back in the classroom for about an hour. In an emotional appeal, she begged the board to dismiss the classes at Paul until the problem can be found and corrected.
 "I had seven children absent today," she said. "Nine others complained throughout the day, and two were so ill I had to send them home."
 We teachers are very concerned about the students."
 Some of the board members said that all kids get sore throats and colds this time of year. "We want to make sure there's a real problem out there before we start evacuating rooms. We don't want to push the panic button," said Trustee Warren Snyder.
 Norton challenged the board, saying, "We would rather err in favor of the kids, not the school district. This merits our concern. We recommend that we not wait for testing to get those kids and teachers out of the classroom. Something needs to be done immediately."
 Snapp said part of the problem could be the envelope system of the energy efficient building, which traps air irritants. He said that the fresh air intake had been increased to maximum circulation levels, and that teachers were encouraged to leave doors and windows open until the problem could be found.

 Frank Peterson, principal of the school, said they had followed the Health Department guidelines to improve fresh air circulation, but that the children had to wear their coats in the classrooms to keep warm.
 Anderson said several of her students had been out of school with the chicken pox. "Their resistance is already down, and then we have to seat them in a cold, drafty classroom," she said. "How many sick kids are we going to have before something is done?"
 "If there's any possibility we do have a toxic substance, it's our responsibility to get those kids out of there," said Trustee Larry Burbank.
 "But I think it's an administration decision. We should leave it up to the administration to monitor the situation and make appropriate decisions."
 Snapp said he polled the teachers involved, and none of them wanted to transport the children into Pershing School, the only space available in the system.
 Snapp said parents are checking out the school's ventilation system, and that everybody is being helpful in searching for an answer.
 In the meantime, the four classes that use the new wing will meet in the school library and multi-purpose room.

Deaver conflict-of-interest probe looks into obstruction

WASHINGTON (AP) — A conflict-of-interest probe of former deputy White House chief of staff Michael Deaver widened Tuesday to include allegations that the Washington lobbyist may have lied to Congress and that witnesses may have tried to obstruct the investigation.

MICHAEL DEAVER
Court approves charge

A three-judge federal appeals court panel authorized independent counsel Whitely North Seymour Jr. to investigate and prosecute Deaver for "any willfully false testimony" he might have given on his lobbying activities last May to a House Energy and Commerce subcommittee.

The judges also authorized Seymour to prosecute "any person or entity" who obstructed justice or lied since the independent counsel's probe of Deaver began six months ago. The judges raised the possibility that obstruction could have occurred during a preliminary Justice Department investigation last spring that led to Seymour's appointment.

Broadening the scope of the investigation will reinforce Seymour's authority "to pursue all possible violations of law by Mr. Deaver, his associates and others," said Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the subcommittee on oversight and investigation.

"Mr. Seymour has clearly made considerable progress in his investigation," Dingell added.

In addition, the judges authorized prosecution was authorized for anyone who "aided and abetted" Deaver in violating federal criminal laws.

Randall J. Turk, an attorney for Deaver, said the lobbyist "has cooperated fully with the investigation," as have members of Deaver's firm. Turk predicted that Deaver would be exonerated and said that broadening the scope of the investigation is a routine matter that in no way suggests the independent counsel necessarily suspects obstruction or lying is occurring.

Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., a senior member of Dingell's subcommittee, said, however, "I assume the other shoe is about to drop... A prosecutor wouldn't request such a clarification unless he intended to pursue these areas very vigorously."

"The impression I have is that there are serious questions of whether the truth has been told," Wyden said.

Seymour has been examining whether Deaver violated federal conflict-of-interest laws in representing Canada, Puerto Rico and other clients since leaving the government in the spring of 1985 and setting up a multimillion-dollar lobbying firm in Washington.

The order gave no hint of whom Seymour might suspect of possible obstruction.

Because of Deaver's position, the investigation has involved testimony from several current and former prominent Reagan administration officials.

U.S. trims back foreign aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. foreign aid for most countries has been cut heavily, with many nations to receive less than half the amounts originally proposed by President Reagan, according to figures released Tuesday.

Turkey, Greece and the Philippines will receive much less in aid than they received last year, while Israel, Egypt and Cyprus will be spared the budget-cutters' knife.

The aid amounts announced Tuesday were for the fiscal 1987, which began Oct. 1.

Congress specified what amounts a number of countries would receive, and the State Department decided how much other countries would get from the amount that remained for economic and arms assistance in the $13.37-billion foreign aid bill.

The foreign-aid package is $1.15 billion less than the amount for fiscal 1986 and $2.1 billion less than Reagan proposed.

"Secretary of State (George)

Shultz and other spokesmen have spoken clearly on the inadequacy of foreign aid appropriations," Charles Redmen, a State Department spokesman, said Tuesday. "Clearly the large reduction in foreign assistance will adversely affect our ability to support important economic and military programs."

Israel is to receive $3 billion in economic and weapons grants, the full amount sought by Reagan, but less than the $3.6 billion received last year, when it was extended extra emergency aid.

Egypt, which is favored because it is the only Arab country to have made peace with Israel, will receive the full $2.15 billion sought in economic and arms grants. Last year, Egypt received $2.28 billion, including extra emergency aid.

Cyprus is to get $15 million in economic aid, five times more than the $3 million sought by Reagan. Cyprus, still divided since the 1974

Turkish invasion of the northern part of the island, benefits from lobbying support by the Greek-American community. Last year, Cyprus received $14.4 million.

While aid amounts were lower for the remaining countries, some countries benefited from a change in policy that is making more of the aid either outright grants or low-interest loans rather than market-rate loans.

Leading aid recipients include Pakistan, which will receive $312.5 million in low-interest weapons loans. That is an improvement over the $311 million it received in market-rate loans last year, but less than the proposed $340 million in market-rate loans.

Pakistan, which Congress is supporting because it borders on Soviet-occupied Afghanistan, will receive the full $250 million in proposed economic aid, up from $229 million last year.

50 more MX missiles sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger has forwarded to President Reagan a recommendation calling on him to request congressional approval for another 50 giant MX missiles that could be deployed on rail cars, administration sources said Tuesday.

The president has also been urged to proceed with development of a much smaller, mobile Midgetman missile that could be carried on specially configured trucks, the sources said.

Weinberger's recommendation essentially tracks the advice he received last month from the Air Force, which had been ordered by Congress to conduct an extensive review of both the MX and Midgetman programs, said the officials, who requested anonymity.

Unlike the Soviet Union, the United States currently does not have any type of land-based intercontinental ballistic missile that is mobile.

Robert Sims, the Pentagon's chief spokesman, acknowledged Tuesday that Weinberger's recommendation had been forwarded to the White House within the past few days, but declined to discuss its contents.

Sims said it would be up to the White House to announce Reagan's decision on the recommendation.

Prison site decision isn't made quite yet

It was probably inevitable, but now it seems that the Idaho Legislature will have to decide whether to put a proposed new 500-inmate maximum security prison in Boise, where the cost is apparently cheaper, or in Burley, where the Board of Corrections has recommended.

The Boise site, adjacent to the existing prison, has the approval of the state Permanent Building Fund Council, which makes recommendations to the Legislature on state construction projects, and from an economic perspective, it would probably be the most cost-effective.

The Burley site is a good one, but there are others nearly equal to it, including at least one in Twin Falls County.

The issue here seems to come down to a Boise-versus-somewhere else choice. Out here in rural Idaho, where times are tough, an "anywhere but Boise" attitude is strong.

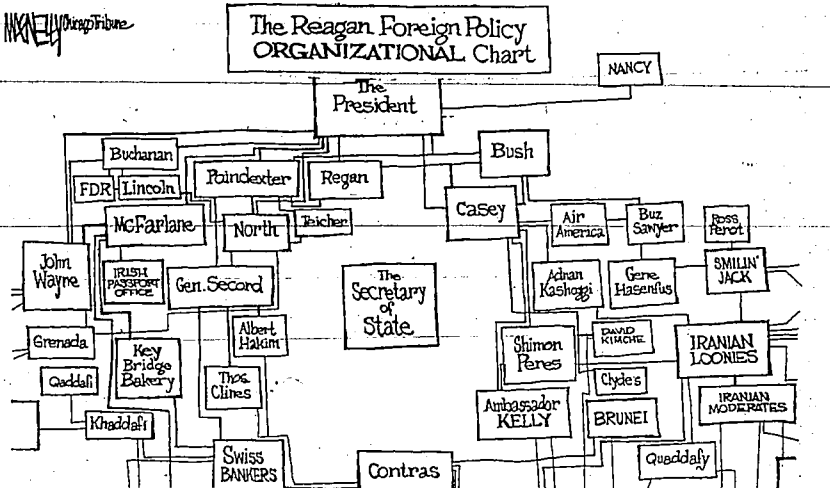

For the Magic Valley as a whole, we think the Burley site is a benefit. It would provide an economic anchor at the East end of the valley, but because of its already industrialized location, would not have much more negative impact on home values or valley communities.

Twin Falls would also benefit from a Burley location, in that a good share of the prison staff would probably live in Twin Falls, and a fair amount of the retail trade would find its way here too.

We doubt many people would really want a maximum security prison in the backyard, if they had the choice. But tough economic times have made people hungrier.

Once in the legislative arena, all bets are off on whether Burley would be the final choice. The Magic Valley delegation is a strong one, but even if it is completely united, the choice could go elsewhere.

In short, no one ought to get their hopes up on this. The odds seem against the Burley site. Remember, as Yogi Berra says, the game ain't over 'til it's over. And this one isn't over yet.

Nicaragua visitor notes inaccuracies

There were many inaccuracies in the opinion of Steven Edwards, particularly concerning a recent trip to the Magic Valley.

He intimated that our trip was a "peace group" sponsored by the "Ortega Marxists." In truth, there were five of us from the Oregon/Idaho Conference of the United Methodist Church who traveled to Nicaragua on our own. Our entire itinerary was planned at our request and the interviews were arranged by church leaders in Nicaragua.

We were not on a visit "orchestrated" by the Nicaraguan government and no one made sure that we "saw the right things, and spoke with the right people." We met with a representative of the U.S. Embassy in Managua, a spokesman for the Roman Catholic Archbishop, and a variety of leaders among the many Protestant churches of Nicaragua.

We heard claims before we left concerning the persecution of the churches in Nicaragua. We attended a peace rally in Managua sponsored by a group of Protestants and estimated that well over 5,000 people were in attendance. We were in the Marwan Church and spoke with people from the Atlantic coast region where Miskito Indians are now working with the government for more autonomy in regional affairs.

Up country in Jinotega, we worshipped with a group of peasants in a small Pentecostal Church. Again, we were not "shown" these places by the government. We found them on our own through our own contacts in the country.

Rev. Tom Tucker

We were told by the U.S. Embassy that we would not find widespread support of the government among the people. We found exactly the opposite! Even among the government's critics within the church, we could find no support for the Contras.

You can, of course, believe whatever you choose to believe. As for the "supposed" Contra attack which Mr. Edwards calls a part of a disinformation campaign, we visited with two local pastors who were seriously injured in that particular incident.

It was the little daughter of one of the pastors who had her leg amputated as a result of that mining. Had I been on the truck with them and lived, I could give you a first-hand account. It was enough for me to talk with them and with two Presbyterian doctors from the United States who were working in the hospital that day.

These Americans in Nicaragua told us: "There are no words to express the depth of shame, frustration, pain, and outrage one feels when confronted with this type of violence against people who simply want to be able to live in peace, to claim their land, and develop their own country."

The truth is, Mr. Edwards, that church leaders have been targeted by the U.S.-sponsored Contras for death. We spoke with one Baptist lay minister who is a life-long Sandinista. He has worked in the church most of his life and is now on the Contra death list announced by a radio broadcast from within Honduras.

We visited with a woman whose husband was killed by the Contras. He was a Catholic layman who worked in a village clinic. Asked why he had not fled with his family prior to his death, she told us it was "because of the children." For the first time they had health care in their village. The Contras destroyed the clinic and killed the church worker who was helping that village.

You want a first-hand report. Go to Nicaragua and live with these people. As for Mr. Edwards' statement "we hear the Magic Valley has absolutely nothing in common with the Nicaragua of today," nothing could be farther from the truth. We felt very much at home among the people.

I do agree with Mr. Edwards that we should allow them to determine their own destiny. That may be the only thing we agree on.

I wish to sign this as "Mr. Tucker in case anyone thinks seriously that I am 'hiding behind the title of reverend.'"

Some answer the call to guard organic world

Thank you. Thank you for electing me president of our living planet. As president Life, I promise to protect the interests of cocoa beans and mint, fir trees and wild birds, grasshoppers and armadillos, beetles and snakes, mockingbirds and if you breath, I'll protect you.

First of all, we have to identify our enemies. Life's No. 1 enemy is president Death. He represents the interests of all inorganic materials because according to him, they have been abused and misused by living creatures.

What the inorganic world has done is to rally some of us to its protection. Those of us most severely affected are the whiter race of the human species. Poor things! They have been brought up to believe that inorganic material, or better known as materialism, is the proper course for the pursuit of happiness.

President Death has assigned tasks to them, tasks like converting everything into unusable form for living creatures and like perverting and altering races by behavioral conditioning.

It is natural for you to bring to my attention the good things done by the whiter race. I will not dispute that. Every living organism, in order to survive, has to practice the widest variety of activities possible to maintain stability. The evilist people on earth have a louch of goodness, and alternatively, the impeccable have a shot of evil. What is important are the prevailing attitudes. Unfortunately, our enemy is doing a very good job of destroying the habitability of our planet and it is my obligation as a living creature, and as president Life, to stop them.

Please do not become alarmed because now that we have isolated the main problem, all we need is the angle of attack. For the next six months, I'll be accepting suggestions from anyone concerned. The one with the best suggestion will be my vice-president.

Some time ago Rupert had a "splash" in the newspaper that they were checking to see what goes on in the sewer by using a television camera. My guess is what they see in the sewer is no different than one third of the programs we get on our set.

Ideas require observer's full attention

Some ideas are born of the land. They rise out of plains, or valleys, or mountain country like the plants which seed and nourish there. These ideas belong to a geography. They add to the quality of light of a particular place, to its aura.

And the people, who also seed and nourish in those places and are close to the land, accept these concepts without having been taught them. As if these ideas had been ingested and digested along with the fruits of the land.

Eighteen years ago, I left New York City to tour America by bus, taking nearly three months to complete a circuit, writing every day, stopping every other day to linger in a particular place. The gathering miles and I composed the first draft of what would be my first book of poetry. It was during this writing tour that I had my first indication that landscape creates its own intellectual climate.

I ended that early book with a statement about destructiveness which act on our lives. Clearly, looking back on the book, the concept of resonance with forces around us had become a minor theme, tentatively explored.

In Wyoming, "clouds curl thinly over mountain tops; the mountains seen snow capped — resonance with the coming season. . . Here, resonance expands into an event which has yet to occur, but which occur seasonally. Resonance forewarns.

And in another chapbook of poetry, I describe how the sea returns to this land "as snow frozen into wind tossed waves. . . sun glints off ice as once it must have sparked off warm blue waters." Here again a resonance, this time without naming it, this resonance projects back to the geological past when Wyoming and the Great Plains were covered by the Sundance Sea.

The concept of resonance between major natural forces and those in close proximity has been expanded in the same way.

I sense it more than I have ever written about it. And I sense that the dimension of it is much greater than I have written or hinted. One might criticize the idea as merely some poetic, metaphorical perception of reality which has no counterpart in the actual world. One might.

A good friend recently gave me a copy of Barry Lopez's "Winter County." The short essays are moving and rich with an ancient tribal wisdom about life on this planet. I read portions of some of the essays aloud in order to savor the language. When I reached the final essay in the book, "The Location of the River," I found myself both startled and gratified.

Based on fragments of journals and other records, Lopez describes a brief segment of the life of Benjamin Foster, an historian who lived among various Indian tribes in western Nebraska, about 150 years ago. But, more to point, Lopez indicates that Foster and some of the tribes he lived among believed in a similar resonance.

Foster was searching for the upper Niobrara River which the Pawnee told him had disappeared. After exhaustive searching, Foster turned to the belief that the history of the Earth was repeated in the shapes of storm clouds during each spring.

After watching patiently from the first thunderstorm until the first prairie grass fire, he would undoubtedly see what had happened to the Niobrara River. Foster's journals tell us that he did see the river's disappearance played in the clouds. A resonance between past events in nature and storm clouds?

Later in that same essay, Lopez tells readers that the explorer George Gulliver used a sextant and chronometer to cross the prairie's tall grasses, as though fire were at sea. And that people used to speak of the "coasts of Nebraska." Is all this a dim reflection of the Sundance Sea? A variation on a theme, millions of years later?

Looking after a rise overlooking a small valley, which cups a field of flax, a prairie grass, the light suddenly changes and has the same luminous quality light as at sunset — golden. And the blue in portions of the sky become translucent, as if you might see beyond it, if you looked more closely, more patiently. I stop, turn off the engine, let the light surround me in my stillness, in my silence. The light rises out of this landscape. It requires one's attention to notice.

Some ideas, like a quality of light, belong to a geography; they require the same attention.

Time to demand disclosure about special isotope facility

Plutonium is one of the most toxic and deadly substances known. A piece of plutonium the size of a pinhead would be enough to cause lung cancer; a larger exposure would cause immediate death. Plutonium remains lethally radioactive for more than 25,000 years. Plutonium is the primary ingredient in nuclear bombs.

There are different isotopes of plutonium. Plutonium-239 is the isotope that goes "bang" in the best and is one used for U.S. nuclear bomb production.

The Department of Energy has developed a new technology called Special Isotope Separation (SIS) which will increase the amount of plutonium-239 available for building nuclear bombs. SIS is a process which uses high energy dye lasers to separate the plutonium-239 from spent nuclear fuel and use it for nuclear bombs.

The DOE has chosen the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory (INEL) as the site to build a Special Isotope Separation facility.

The SIS facility is not needed to provide plutonium to maintain our current arsenal. The plutonium produced in the SIS would be used to support an increase in nuclear bomb making that has been requested by the Reagan administration.

Liz Paul

The catch is that many of Reagan's proposed weapons systems have not been approved by Congress yet, and considering the nuclear arms race, it is doubtful they may never be approved, eliminating the need for more plutonium and the SIS facility. We should not be building a $500 million facility to enable us to build more bombs unless there is a clear public mandate to support it.

The development of the SIS technology raises another issue; that of the use of commercially produced plutonium for nuclear bombs. The greatest source of plutonium is in spent fuel from commercial nuclear power plants. SIS will make it possible to recover the plutonium-239 from the spent fuel providing material for tens of thousands of nuclear weapons.

Congress, with the support of the nuclear power industry and arms control advocates, voted overwhelmingly in 1983 to outlaw the transfer of spent fuel from commercial to weapons use. Therefore the DOE does not have access to commercial sources of plutonium now. Building an SIS facility would provide pressure to repeal this law, militarizing the nuclear power industry and destroying any distinction between peaceful and violent uses of nuclear energy.

America's use of commercial spent fuel for weapons may be interpreted as an abrogation of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty of 1968, clearing the way for other nations without nuclear weapons to divert fissionable material from their civilian nuclear programs into weapons use.

There would be negative environmental impacts from the operation of an SIS facility. Plutonium would be transported in large amounts into and out of the facility on the local roads and railroads. A transportation accident involving plutonium would cause unthinkable damage.

The actual processing of plutonium in the SIS facility would be extremely dangerous with the ever present danger of a spontaneous nuclear explosion. The fast neutron process poses dangers to the workers, and uses toxic chemicals that would have to be stored, and disposed of, with great caution.

Radioactive wastes would be created by the barrelful, many containing high concentrations of plutonium. These wastes would need to be stored in isolation forever.

At other DOE plutonium processing sites there are reports of higher cancer rates among workers and nearby populations, of inadequate security, noncompliance with environmental regulations, and numerous releases of radioactive and toxic materials. There is nothing to suggest the DOE would operate the SIS facility in any better fashion.

Whatever a new project is under public review, the issue of jobs often overshadows any other concerns. The SIS will create jobs, but a close look doesn't paint such a bright picture.

If the SIS were to be built in Idaho, there is a good chance that most of the jobs will not go to Idahoans. Nuclear professionals, will, most likely, be imported from other areas, as will the construction workers. No relief will be felt by our ailing farm or timber industries.

Weapons production is an unstable industry which changes in response to public and congressional sentiment. The U.S. public supports a nuclear freeze, and hopefully there will be no demand for nuclear bombs or the SIS plant shortly.

Efforts should be made to find stable, long-term solutions to unemployment. Five hundred million dollars could create many more jobs if it were spent in any of a number of socially beneficial areas such as education, or health care. People deserve jobs that improve the quality of life, not threaten life itself. The prospect of jobs must not be used to justify the building of the SIS plant.

The Department of Energy is preparing an environmental impact statement on the SIS facility which will be available for public review and comment this fall. It is imperative that the public be involved.

Public pressure on the DOE will increase the likelihood that they will disclose all possible consequences of building, operating and decommissioning of the SIS facility, as well as all of the consequences of increasing our nuclear arsenal. It is up to us to raise these issues, and demand answers.

Written comments or suggestions on the environmental impact statement of the SIS at INEL should be sent to Carl P. Gertz, SIS project manager, Idaho Operations Office, 515 S. Denton, P.O. Box 1600, 785 DOE Place, Idaho Falls, Idaho 83402.

Liz Paul, Kelchum, is coordinator of a statewide education project of the Snake River Alliance on the special isotope separation facility.

Middle East specialist resigns as NSC staff still in turmoil

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House said Tuesday that Howard Teicher had resigned from President Reagan's embattled National Security Council staff, an announcement that came a few hours before Teicher was scheduled to testify before Senate investigators about the Iran arms controversy.

Teicher, a Middle East specialist who is reported to have been a key figure in the once-secret U.S. plan to sell arms to Iran, was to follow Secretary of State George P. Shultz before a closed session of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Teicher, director of the NSC's office of political-military affairs, was stepping down "for what he describes as personal reasons," effective in March.

Speakes confirmed that Rodney B.

McDaniel, executive secretary of the NSC, also was resigning.

"I'm sure there will be others," Speakes said, apparently referring to plans for a wholesale shake-up of the White House agency by Frank Carlucci, the newly appointed NSC director who will succeed Navy Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter.

Meanwhile, officials said Jose Sorzano, a Cuban exile who is a close associate of former U.N. ambassador Jean Kirkpatrick, will be named senior director for Latin American affairs at the NSC. He will replace Raymond Bognard.

Sorzano, who is known for his conservative foreign policy views, was Mrs. Kirkpatrick's chief deputy for four years at the United Nations. He is a Georgetown University professor and president of the American National Foundation, a private group which opposes the Cuban government.

The agency is reported to be in turmoil since Poindexter resigned and Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North was fired on Nov. 25, when Attorney General Michael D. DeLoach disclosed that $10 million to $30 million in profits from the Iran arms sales were diverted to U.S.-backed rebel forces, or Contras, in Nicaragua.

Sources close to Carlucci, who spoke only on condition of not being identified, said he is "shocked at the level of mediocrity" he had found during his pre-leave review of the NSC staff.

However, a statement volunteered by an administration official, who said he was authorized to discuss the matter but who refused to give his name, said Carlucci "has expressed his displeasure with various inaccurate and unauthorized press reports alleging his dissatisfaction with the NSC staff."

"Mr. Carlucci has strongly emphasized that he holds the NSC and its staff in the highest regard and is acutely aware of their dedication and professionalism," the administration official said.

The official did not dispute that there would be numerous staff changes.

Pressed for the reason behind Teicher's departure, Speakes said members of the NSC staff were leaving because they believed Carlucci would "like to appoint his own staff."

Teicher accompanied North and former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane on a clandestine flight to Iran last May aboard a plane loaded with military equipment destined for the Iranian armed forces, McFarlane has testified. The arms were flown to Iran in the hope of winning the release of U.S. hostages held in Lebanon by pro-Iranian extremists.

Although Teicher headed the office in which North worked, Speakes said Teicher "was not Oliver North's supervisor," because North reported directly to Poindexter "when he reported."

In an earlier appearance before the Senate Intelligence panel last week, Teicher was given additional time to hire a lawyer and arrange a security clearance for the attorney to be briefed on highly classified information.

Teicher previously had worked at the State Department under Secretary of State Alexander Haig.

HOWARD TEICHER Key figure in arms deal

Iran-Contras at a glance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are the latest developments in the controversy over U.S. arms sales to Iran and the diversion of the resulting profits to Nicaraguan rebels:

IMMUNITY SOUGHT: President Reagan is urging congressional committees investigating the Iran arms sales to grant limited "use" immunity to former national security aides Vice Adm. John Poindexter and Lt. Col. Oliver L. North to obtain their testimony, said White House spokesman Larry Speakes.

CONGRESSIONAL REACTION: Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., chairman of the Intelligence Committee, said Poindexter and North need to come forward on "their own" and tell their story to Congress. Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., the panel's vice chairman, also urged the idea of immunity. Poindexter and North have refused to testify, citing the Fifth Amendment.

COMMITTEE CHOSEN: Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, was chosen to head a special Senate committee to investigate the Iran arms sales. Democrats and Republicans there will be formed in the next Congress to look into the Iran-Contra affair. Inouye was a member of the 1973 committee which investigated the Watergate scandal.

REGAN TESTIMONY: White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan told the Senate Intelligence Committee that he had authorized the diversion of money from arms sales to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels. Following more than four hours of closed testimony, Regan told reporters he did not know of the transfers, and said, "I do not believe the president of the United States" knew about it either.

NORTH-MONEY: According to documents and sources, North participated behind the scenes in an April 1985 dinner to aid Nicaraguan refugees that netted only $1,000 to help refugees but paid more than $100,000 to "consultants." Meanwhile, Regan denied that North, recently fired as a NSC staff deputy, would have privately opposed the authority to conduct a program of assistance to the Contras.

JAPAN CONNECTION? In Tokyo, former Justice Minister Akira Hatano said Japan secretly sent an envoy to Iran and Syria in August 1985 to gain the release of American hostages held in Lebanon by pro-Iranian extremists. Hatano dispelled a report in Tuesday's edition of the Washington Post that President Reagan had asked Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone in July 1985 to intervene in the hostage issue.

SHULTZ-ARMS SALES: Secretary of State George P. Shultz interviewed on a government-sponsored telecast to Europe, ruled out any further U.S. arms sales to Iran, which he privately opposed in past discussions with Reagan and which were carried out largely without the participation of the State Department.

ARRESTED AMERICAN: In Managua, Nicaragua, officials said one of the maps found in the sock of an arrested American they identified as "Sam" Kestey-Hall "showed areas around the port of Puerto Cabezas, a major mercantile port in the Hasenluff's serving 30-year sentence."

DETENTION CAMPS: The Reagan administration, disputing allegations in a civil lawsuit, said it has no program to detain illegal aliens from Central America at U.S. military installations. However, officials said the Federal Emergency Management Agency has plans to build detention camps for refugees, illegal aliens and immigrants during a time of crisis.

Shultz says Suriname leftists commit violations of rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz accused Suriname's leftist military government Tuesday of engaging in gross violations of human rights and of restoring a "restoration—of democracy in that country."

Another official said "atrocities bordering on genocide" were committed during a military offensive two weeks ago in a bush Negro tribal area in eastern Suriname, which has been dominated by a rebel group.

Estimates of the death toll range from 50 to 180 and some of the victims were women and children, the official said. Suriname has claimed its military forces acted in self-defense.

Shultz was asked about the situation in the former Dutch colony during a USA-sponsored trans-Atlantic press conference involving reporters from several European countries.

He said Ambassador Robert Barbour cited reports of "brutality, of what amounts to murder—of gross violations of human rights. We cannot believe the reports are, unfortunately, credible."

Shultz said the situation is of "great concern" to the people of Holland and others around the world.

Later, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said, "We hope that the international community will join in condemning these actions and that the government of Suriname will allow international observers to visit the region where the fighting between the insurgents and the army is going on.

Suriname was under a democratic rule until 1980 when a military faction led by Desi Bouterse seized power. Shultz called for the initiation of a new system of government that reflects the wishes of the people.

in eastern Suriname in July.

The week-long military counter-offensive in that region got underway on Nov. 28, the official said, adding that the government forces "laid waste" to at least three villages.

When Bouterse took power, he quickly established close ties with Cuba. But, apparently fearful of an attack by the United States, Bouterse expelled the Cuban advisers shortly after the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada in October 1983. Grenada is located about 250 miles from Suriname.

Military help for Iraq, arms deals hurt credibility of U.S.

By BARRY SCHWEID
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Recent disclosure of secret U.S. military assistance to Iraq and undercover arms sales to Iran put the Reagan administration in the curious position of helping both sides in their protracted war, at the risk of harming American interests.

The move is forcing U.S. satellite surveillance data to help Iraq knock out Iranian petroleum installations to induce Iran to seek a negotiated settlement, American officials said. But this appeared to conflict with another, longstanding U.S. goal of keeping Persian Gulf oil flowing to the West.

The Reagan administration's credibility, already damaged by controversial weapons shipments to so-called "moderates" in Tehran, could slip even further lower.

Only last April, Vice President George Bush was sent to the region to affirm the administration's intention to keep the Persian Gulf open.

He said the United States had "common security objectives" with countries in the area and pledged to help them combat aggression.

Together, Iraq and Iran, both members of the international oil cartel, produce about 11.5 percent of the petroleum imported by Western Europe. Iranian supplies are roughly at the prewar level of about 1.4 million barrels a day, while Iraq sloped from 3 million barrels daily to 1.6 million barrels last month. The world is floating in an oil glut today, forcing prices down for industries and individual consumers. Further reductions in supply, as contemplated by the oil-producing cartel, could send prices ratcheting upward again.

The U.S. assistance to Iraq, confirmed by administration officials Monday, took the form of satellite reconnaissance photography of Iranian defenses. The secret reports helped enable Iraqi pilots in their bombing raids on Iranian oil terminals and power plants.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, on a government-sponsored telecast to Western Europe, said Tuesday that a week and a half ago he was willing to negotiate with Iraq.

While Shultz said he was not free to comment on intelligence-sharing questions, he criticized Iran as "the principal recalcitrant party," and said that "to the extent that Iran's military capabilities can be reduced, that presumably would bring them to a frame of mind where they are willing to sit down with Iraq and try to reach an agreement."

Shultz said the administration was in favor of an agreement that maintains the territorial integrity of both countries "and doesn't have, so to speak, a winner or a loser" weapons sales to Tehran.

He said President Reagan thought it was worthwhile "to send a small signal" to Iran that he wanted an improvement in relations. "No further signals are necessary or will be given," Shultz said.

"The question of any further arms sales to Iran from the United States has been settled and there won't be any more under the present circumstances," he said.

The disclosure of U.S. aid to Iraq by The Washington Post Tuesday added an ironic twist to the Iran arms controversy. In effect, the United States was helping both sides in the six-year-old war while officially proclaiming its neutrality.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said Tuesday that neutrality never meant "that we are uninterested in the outcome of the war, that we refuse to act in a way to help end the war, or that the U.S. was doing nothing to protect its interest."

Redman added: "In that sense, neutrality did not mean neglect."

Asked if there was a conflict between depriving Iran of its war-making capability by organizing an arms embargo without taking similar action against Iraq, the Redman replied, "Absolutely not."

Convicted spy Pelton draws life in prison

BALTIMORE (AP) — Ronald W. Pelton, a former National Security Agency employee convicted of selling defense secrets to the Soviet Union, was sentenced to life in prison Tuesday by a judge who said he had betrayed a "special position of trust."

U.S. District Court Judge Herbert F. Murray, rejecting defense pleas for a sentence of 30 years, sentenced Pelton to life in prison Tuesday by a judge who said he had betrayed a "special position of trust."

Pelton, 45, was convicted of four counts of espionage in June for selling information about signals intelligence to the Soviets between 1980 and 1985 for $35,000 plus expenses. He was one of a record 13 Americans arrested on espionage charges in 1985.

The judge said Pelton had occupied "a special position of trust critical to the security of our country," and by his actions had damaged U.S. intelligence programs, compromised citizens of the United States, and endangered U.S. agents.

Murray sentenced Pelton to three life prison terms plus 10 years, all of them to run concurrently. He could be eligible for parole after 10 years. The sentence also included a $100 fine.

Casey still stable
WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director William J. Casey remained in stable condition at Georgetown University Hospital on Tuesday, undergoing a second day of tests, after suffering what doctors described as a minor cerebral seizure.

Casey was stricken Monday at his office by a seizure that caused spasms in his arms and legs, then suffered a second seizure after being taken to the hospital by ambulance. The hospital's medical director, Dr. John Stapleton, said.

Revolutionists took over France, and King Louis XVI in 1792 lit out. At Vincennes, he stopped at an Inn for dinner, paying amply for same with a gold coin, bearing his own likeness. Alerted by the sizable sum and recognizing the king from the coin, the innkeeper said, "So that's who you are, your royal pig!" Or words to that effect. Ceremony shows apartheid opposition

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Blacks switched off lights and lit candles Tuesday evening in a mass gesture of opposition to apartheid, despite new government rules that forbid most peaceful protest.

Two newspapers, one serving the huge township of Soweto outside Johannesburg, were barred from publishing appeals promoting the Dec. 16-26 "Christmas against the Emergency" campaign.

Restrictions imposed last week under the 6-month-old nationwide emergency laws, statements advocating the consumer boycotts that were intended to be the heart of the Christmas campaign.

Protest organizers asked blacks to use only candlelight between 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. Tuesday.

A Soweto resident said the only lights he could see at 7:30 were streetlamps. Another said bars in his neighborhood, which usually operate long after midnight, heeded the call to close by 8 p.m.

Tuesday also was the anniversary of two opposing historical milestones: the defeat of the Zulus by white settlers in 1838 and the start of the guerrilla war against white rule in 1961.

Government officials presided at ceremonies around the country for the Day of the Vow, a national holiday marking the settlers' victory at Blood River in Natal Province over an army of Zulu warriors.

There were no known events commemorating the first sabotage attacks by the outlawed African National Congress on the same day 23 years ago, nor were there reports of serious politically related violence.

Security operations during the day could not be reported under emergency press restrictions.

Residents of Soweto said the township of two million people seemed quiet. They said special services were conducted at some churches to pray for detainees and mark the start of the Christmas protest.

Several hundred whites and some blacks gathered at St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church in Johannesburg for an evening service. They lit candles, prayed for peace and justice and ended by singing "Nkosi Sikelel' iAfrica" (God Bless Africa), anthem of the anti-apartheid movement.

The Day of the Vow is a cultural focal point for Afrikaners, the whites of Dutch descent who control the ruling National Party.

Guerrillas come down from the hills for meeting

Pakistan hopes to head-off rioting

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Soldiers and police struggled Tuesday to head off further rioting in Karachi, where a curfew embracing most of the city was widened and where deaths from three days of ethnic bloodletting reached 148.

At least 549 people have been injured.

A government announcement said security forces shot and killed two men Tuesday for violating an around-the-clock curfew—banning people from the streets.

Hospital officials said 20 bodies were recovered during the day from riot areas. Twelve bodies, completely charred, were brought to Civil Hospital in downtown Karachi.

The usually chaotic streets were largely deserted in much of this city of 7 million people. Mosques, which normally use loudspeakers to broadcast the Islamic call to prayer, blared warnings to guard against attacks on homes.

The rioting, the worst since Pakistan's independence in 1947, began Sunday with Pakistani Pathans going on a rampage against immigrant Mohajirs and Biharis.

Hospital sources, who demanded anonymity, estimated 90 percent of the victims were immigrants, from neighboring India.

Despite continuing tension, the government said Tuesday night it would head pleas from poor people in riot areas who complained they could not get milk or food for their children because of the curfew. It said the restriction will be relaxed for two hours Wednesday morning and again for two hours in the evening.

City authorities put Landhi and Korangi neighborhoods under curfew Tuesday after scuffles broke out on the streets. That raised to 23 the number of areas under curfew, covering almost two-thirds of Karachi.

Official says bases will remain open

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — U.S. bases will remain in the Philippines until the lease ends in 1991 despite Communist rebel demands that they be closed, a member of the government team negotiating with the insurgents said Tuesday.

A regional spokesman for the National Democratic Front, which represents the guerrillas, told reporters at a rebel camp that the bases must be closed now. Before he spoke, armed men chanted, "Dismantle the U.S. bases!"

The front's three official negotiators have insisted that the bases be dismantled eventually, but they have not given a timetable.

Teofisto Guingona of the government negotiating team said the two sides will meet Dec. 23 to present agendas for a round of talks on "substantive issues," blocking settlement of the 17-year-old rebellion.

The first round resulted in the cease-fire that took effect last Wednesday.

Guingona told a news conference the government wants agreement from the insurgents on plans for reviving the economy and promoting rural development.

He did not mention changes in the government structure or any power-sharing formula. President Corazon Aquino has ruled out a coalition with the Communists.

For the government side, the program is: one, quick economic recovery; two, social amelioration programs; three, economic and social reforms within the constitution of 1986, which hopefully will be ratified Feb. 2, and then fourth, amnesty "with honor," Guingona said.

He noted that the draft constitution to be submitted to the February referendum permits foreign bases after 1991 only if they are provided for in a treaty subject both to approval by the voters and ratification by a two-thirds majority of the Philippine Senate.

The lease on Clark Air Base, Subic Naval Base and several smaller facilities expires in 1991.

"We have to work within the framework of the constitution," Guingona said. "All the solutions to the military bases are already there. We cannot go beyond what the constitution has provided for."

A commission appointed by Mrs. Aquino completed the draft charter in October. After Ferdinand E. Marcos fled the country Feb. 26, she scrapped his constitution and disbanded the Marcos-dominated National Assembly.

Mrs. Aquino has pledged to honor the lease on the bases but has not said what she will do about them when it expires.

Negotiators for the rebel National Democratic Front have said their next goals are agreement on land reform, social and economic changes and ultimate closing of the bases. They have not insisted on a government coalition.

One negotiator, Antonio Zume, claimed Tuesday that the United States was pushing the Aquino government into a "massive counter-insurgency program."

The rebel front's spokesman for central Luzon, who gave his name as Manuel Quizon, told reporters Tuesday the insurgents want the American bases closed immediately.

He spoke at a news conference in a forest in Pampanga province, about 10 miles south of Clark Air Base.

Manuel Quizon was an alias. Underground leaders rarely give their real names.

Expressing views more militant than those of the highly visible negotiators in Manila, Quizon suggested Mrs. Aquino break up her family's 15,000-acre estate in Tarlac province to demonstrate her commitment to land reform.

He appeared at the jungle news conference with representatives of the Communist Party of the Philippines and the guerrilla New People's Army.

Afghans hit Soviet planes

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan guerrillas shot down two Soviet military transport planes and eight helicopters and heavy casualties were reported in fighting in several Afghanisthan areas, Western diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

In addition, a rebel missile brought down a plane of Bakhtar, Afghanistan's domestic airline, at the end of November near Bagrami, close to Kabul, killing 30 people, said the sources in Islamabad. They spoke on condition of anonymity.

The sources said it could not be determined if the 30 were civilians or military personnel. Civilian aircraft also are used to transport troops.

Guerrillas downed one Soviet An-12 transport with a missile on Dec. 9 within 6 miles of Kabul airport, and there were no survivors, said the sources. They said the number of troops aboard the plane was not ascertained.

Another An-12 was shot down Nov. 19 at Khost in eastern Pakista province, near the Pakistan border, but no details were available, they said.

Vietnam seeks better relations with China

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Vietnam wants better relations with China, but Peking has rejected overtures and tension is growing, a senior official said Tuesday.

The communist neighbors fought a brief border war seven years ago.

Vo Dong Giang, minister without portfolio in the Foreign Ministry, spoke at a news conference for reporters covering the Communist Party's sixth congress.

Reports were prevalent at the congress, which began Monday, that party chief Truong Chinh, 79, Premier Pham Van Dong, 80, and key Politburo member Le Duc Tho, 75, would resign before it ends Thursday.

Retirement of the three old revolutionaries would be the most dramatic leadership change in the party's 56-year history.

Lo Xuan Dong, main press spokesman for the congress, said he could not confirm the reports from Vietnamese government officials and foreign diplomats. Giang gave no indication in his meeting with journalists that there would be any dramatic move to end the occupation of Cambodia.

CSI ponders funding for new projects

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Financial considerations, including bond payments and bid awards, dominated Monday's meeting at the College of Southern Idaho Board of Trustees.

A bond issue from 1966 will be retired next spring and the board is pondering whether to ask for continued county taxation to fund future projects.

The U.S. government is asking that another bond debt the college owes at low interest be sold back, which apparently could allow the college to retire that debt faster and at less expense.

The board decided to begin studying the prospects of asking for continued tax support from Twin Falls and Jerome counties next year, after the 20-year bond issue is retired. The 1966 bond issue for an initial $3 million amounts to about $137,000 in principal and interest payments each year, said CSI Treasurer Karl Black.

Taxes from the two counties cover those payments, but the need for the taxes will end April 1, when the bonds are paid off.

"We've got to think about going to taxpayers to see if we can continue with that type of funding," said CSI President Gerald Meyerhofer. He suggested the money could finance a new wing for the Fine Arts building or a new economic development building to house science, agriculture and University of Idaho extension programs.

Another set of bonds, totaling a debt of $1.23 million in principal and interest during the next 23 years, may be paid off more quickly than that. Black said the government is asking CSI to refinance those bonds because of their low interest rate — about 3 percent.

The government would like to refinance the bonds to cut its losses on low-interest rates, and CSI may benefit from the apparent lower total debt, Black said.

The total debt would shift to about $542,000, due in a shorter payment time-frame that may save the college money, Black said.

"On the surface, it sounds very good," said Black, adding the college would pay off in six years instead of 23 and realize savings for the students and institution.

He said he would examine the proposal to determine what money could be saved at present interest rates.

In other business, the board approved three bids for college catalogue printing, car leasing and buying piping supplies.

Gilliland Printing, of Arkansas City, Kan., was awarded a contract to print 13,000 copies of CSI's catalogue for use during the next two years. Their bid of $18,142 was the lowest of six received.

The next two low bids came from companies within Idaho, but Black recommended Gilliland because it has printed the last two editions of the catalogue, thus representing a known product.

Graphic Arts Publishing, of Boise, bid $18,277 and Moore Publishing, of Jerome, bid $18,940 for the contract.

Board trustees Bob Blastock and Bill Babcock leaned toward awarding the contract to a local printer, but agreed in the decision to stick with Gilliland.

In another contract, Thiesen Motors was awarded a lease of five cars for the next three years. Its Mercury Topaz models at $200 per month beat out low-bidder Roy Raymond Ford's Tempos at $189 per month.

The primary advantage board trustees saw in Thiesen's bid was unlimited mileage offered, as opposed to Raymond's limit of 15,000 miles per year.

A contract for piping and supplies was awarded to the lone bidder — Norman Supply. The $28,870 worth of materials was to be used to retrofit CSI buildings to accommodate heating by the college's geothermal wells.

Black told the board the single bid shouldn't be scoffed at, because it was $10,000 less than expected.

"It was considerably under what our maintenance people estimated it should be," Black said.

Magic Valley enveloped by thick fog Covers Northwest; strands air travelers

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Due to stagnant weather conditions and moisture at low levels, the fog that Magic Valley residents woke up to Tuesday morning is expected to last into the weekend.

The fog is caused by low-level moisture and high pressure above the moisture, which prevents the air from mixing. As the weather cools during the night, the moisture condenses to form fog.

"Because of the currently stagnant conditions, it's really hard for the fog to burn off," said Steve Hughes, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Boise.

It is also this condensing moisture that causes frost on trees and cars. Sometimes, if fog is thick enough, drizzle from it will cause icy road conditions, Hughes said. Apparently, Tuesday's fog was not thick enough locally to cause these conditions and no traveler's advisories were issued.

"Visibility is low... people will just have to drive a little slower," he said.

Most highways were reported to be dry Tuesday afternoon, but Interstate 84 from Boise to Bliss was reported as having icy spots and fog.

The fog, extending across much of the Northwest and Intermountain West, also was stranding air travelers. Several airports, including Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport and the fields at Spokane, Boise, Pocatello, Idaho Falls and Salt Lake City were shut down for extended periods. Crew chief Paul Wiley at the Twin Falls airport said the airport was closed periodically all morning, but around 2:15 p.m. the fog lifted enough to keep the field open.

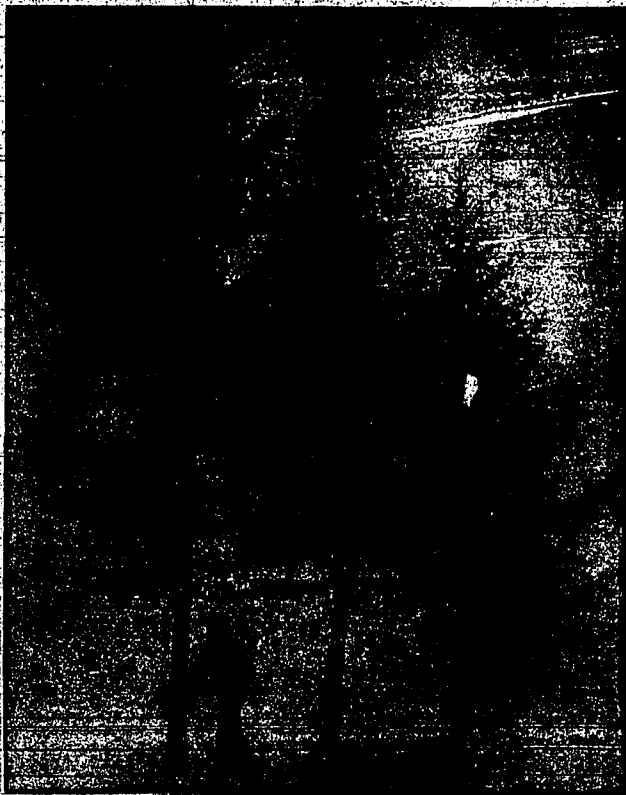

The Boise airport was open all day Tuesday, but was closed Monday morning and at times during the night, Hughes said.

Fog is not unusual at this time of year, Hughes said. "It's fairly normal, especially in the valley areas," he said.

There were holes in the fog, however. There was no fog in Burley Tuesday, Hughes said.

Operating a wood-burning stove can sometimes be hazardous during foggy conditions, because the stagnant conditions will keep the air from mixing. Magic Valley residents should be cautious, especially about these health hazards, however, said Tim Little of the state Department of Health and Welfare's Division of Environment office in Twin Falls.

"In an area like Boise, where they're in a valley, it would cause problems, but I don't think people here should worry about it," Little said. "This probably won't last long enough to cause those problems."

Fog still surrounded Sawtooth Elementary School at the noon lunch break.

Board creates fund for new produce building

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Fair Board voted Monday to create a fund — starting with $45,000 from this year's budget — to construct a new Produce Building.

It may take a few years to save enough for the project, but board members said they didn't want to borrow the money.

"In two years we can build a new building," Board member Emmett Harrison said.

The summer the 10,000 square-foot Produce Building, which is more than 70 years old, last summer was found to be in violation of county building codes because of problems with its roof. The roof sagged and didn't meet present requirements for load capacity, reported an engineer who suggested a replacement of the roof or major repairs.

The inspection was initiated by the county commissioners at the request of the county's insurer. The insurer was paying for the replacement of the old Merchants Building No. 1, which collapsed last December under the weight of snow. The Produce Building was similar in construction to the felled building and an inspection was required before coverage was extended.

The Fair Board voted later to make minor improvements in order to use the building during the 1986 fair.

At the Fair Board's request, another engineer, Scott McClure, inspected the building. McClure reported to the board on the way that the building could be used, but not during "critical stress periods," such as winter. Board Chairman Stan Snow said, McClure also suggested regular inspections.

After McClure's report, Harrison suggested diverting $45,000 out of $94,000 in the fair's operating budget and locking it into a building fund. The remaining money, plus expected revenue from the rental of the fairgrounds, should be enough to operate until the end of the fiscal year in September, he said.

Snow estimated a new Produce Building would cost about $100,000, the cost of the new concrete-block Merchants Building constructed next to the Produce Building.

During the discussion of Harrison's proposal, Board member Carl Grinstead said $45,000 might be too much, based on prior years.

"Based on last year, $35,000 is what's there. I'm saying you're going to run out of funds," he said.

Snow said the board could vote to free the funds in case of an emergency.

Board member Don Kramer said, "I'd like to build next year for the revenue it would bring in."

Kramer said the rent of the new Merchants Building for storage of boats and recreation vehicles had raised more than $1,500, and there was room for more vehicles.

Snow said the board had to use more local and national sponsorships at the rodeo to generate revenue. Dodge sponsored last year's event.

"We have got to change the whole concept of the rodeo," said Snow, who recently attended the national finals of the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association in Las Vegas with some other board members.

The board agreed to sell advertising space on the rodeo gates and sponsorship of the events. Snow said Dodge wanted to return, and other national advertisers had shown an interest.

Harrison was appointed chairman of a new advertising committee. His first job will be reviewing how the fair spends its advertising budget.

While in Las Vegas, the board members met with PRCA officials and Cotton Rossier of Marysville, Calif., who produced last year's event and wanted to return this year.

"But if we can't improve Cotton's... See FAIR on Page B2

Ore-Ida Foods plans to boost production at Burley plant

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Ore-Ida Foods Inc. will boost production at its Burley plant and buy more potatoes in Southern Idaho next year because of the closure of a sister factory in Michigan.

The company announced Tuesday that it will close the Greenville, Mich., plant this spring and split its production among Ore-Ida's three remaining frozen potato plants. The factory, which employs 550 workers, is the smallest of Ore-Ida's 500 operations.

Ore-Ida President and Chief Executive Officer Gerald D. Herrick attributed the move to slower-than-expected growth in demand for frozen potato products and to available ton-capacity systems.

The Burley factory, along with plants in Ontario, Ore., and River, Wis., will ship its output of the retail products now made in Michigan. Ed Osborne, vice president of finance, told The Times-News.

"What it will mean is a longer processing season, fewer shutdowns and more potatoes processed at each of the other three places," he said, "but probably no more jobs."

Osborn could not estimate Tuesday the impact on the Burley plant's production or potato buying. The Greenville factory processes 25 million pounds of raw potatoes yearly. However, Osborn said Tuesday that he could not yet estimate the impact on the Burley plant's potato buying or its production.

The Greenville plant was the most expensive in Ore-Ida's network because of its small size and because its retail products — the company's Tater Tot potato, suggests, Golden Crinkle french fries and Lito fries — are manufactured elsewhere.

Although it had been modernized with several new systems as recently as 1985, the 21-year-old factory was the least flexible in Ore-Ida's network, Osborn said.

The closure will last at least from spring 1987 until the fall of 1988, because Ore-Ida has stopped contracting for Michigan potatoes. The plant will use about 2 percent of the state's crop, according to most recent estimates.

However, the company intends to mothball the facility, keeping it in an "state-of readiness," Herrick said.

Ore-Ida said it will work with Michigan's state employment agencies to help workers find jobs. Workers and farmers in Greenville received the news Tuesday morning, said Bob Herron, economic development coordinator for the city of Greenville, a town of 8,450 50 miles east of Muskegon, in the southwestern part of the state.

The Ore-Ida potato operation is the third-largest employer in the surrounding county of 50,000 people, ranking behind a refrigerator assembly plant and a bearing manufacturer, Herron said.

The plant's $5 million payroll is an important factor in the local economy, Herron said. "However, the major impact will be on the potato farmers in Montcalm and Mecosta counties," he said. "That is the major crop within these two counties."

Speculation was raised about the plant earlier this fall when Ore-Ida's plant manager sent letters to farmers telling them their contracts were being re-evaluated and they should keep expenses to a minimum, he said. About a month ago, the city confirmed that some decision about the plant was due in mid-January.

Ore-Ida employs 4,300 workers nationwide. It manufactures and markets a wide range of frozen food products.

The Burley factory has 994 employees and can process 3 million pounds of potatoes daily.

Liquor-license ordinance adopted

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — With the passage of a new Twin Falls city ordinance, the procedure for beer, wine and liquor-by-the-drink licensing should be easier to swallow.

The ordinance, adopted Monday by the City Council, will expedite the process and make it more efficient, say city officials.

City licenses for beer, wine and liquor-by-the-drink should be renewed by Jan. 1, said City Manager Tom Courtney. Before the city provides a license, it requires proof of state and county approval.

But a number of people weren't acquiring their city licenses by the first of the new year because of the wait for state and county approval, he said.

In addition, "it (the licensing procedure) is a big rush for the finance office at the end of the year," Courtney said.

Under the new ordinance, the council retains final approval of the licenses. But the new city law also allows the council to approve the licenses prior to state and county approval, Courtney explained. The actual issuance of the license would be delayed until state and county approval are received, he said.

Notifiers of license renewals will be mailed to businesses in the fall to expedite the process.

The ordinance switches many of the duties of the council to the city clerk's office, said City Attorney Shane Bengochea, who drafted the ordinance at the request of the City Council.

The ordinance also requires the City Council to act on the application for a new license or transfer within 30 days of the time it is filed with the clerk's office.

Area voters return to office two incumbent CSI trustees

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two incumbent trustees at the College of Southern Idaho were ushered back into office Tuesday in an election where neither candidate faced opposition.

Trustees LeRoy Craig, of Jerome, and Dr. Charles Lehman, of Burley, will each return for a third six-year term.

Results trickled in to CSI administrative offices from 11 polling places across Twin Falls and Jerome counties, which support the community college with taxes. Of 232 voters cast, Craig received 229 and Lehman got 228.

Craig waited at CSI with President Gerald Meyerhofer and Secretary Karl Black as the votes were tallied.

Craig characterized the low turnout, compared to more than 1,100 votes cast in a trustee election in 1984, as showing support for the board, which he chairs.

"I would think it is generally an indication that people are satisfied with what's going on out here," Craig said. Meyerhofer added that he thought fewer voters turned out because of the candidates' lack of opposition to retain their positions.

Lehman couldn't be reached for comment on the election, but Craig summed up the interest both men have expressed in working on the board.

"I'm very pleased to be on the board and I know Chuck is too; he enjoys it as well," Craig said. Black estimated the election cost between $600 and $700 for personnel, travel and advertising. Despite the lack of competition, the election had to be held in case a write-in candidate emerged.

Police plan holiday patrols
TWIN FALLS — This is the season for travel and parties but for the Idaho State Police it will be a time for a little more effort on the job.
 State Police district offices, such as the one in Twin Falls, will be fully staffed during the holiday period with a number of "saturation patrols" planned for dangerous highways.
 These groups of officers, working together on short stretches of highways, will be watching closely for traffic law violations.
 ISP Superintendent Rich Humphreys says officers throughout the state are ready to deal with the annual holiday traffic problems.
 He suggested that motorists adopt the right attitude, especially if driving on snow- or ice-covered roadways.
 "Safe driving is as much a matter of attitude as it is of knowing how to handle a car in snow," Humphreys said. "Knowing what to do if your car goes into a skid is important, but more important is adopting the kind of attitude that keeps you from getting into that kind of a situation."
 Humphreys said a driver who becomes frustrated by following a slow-moving vehicle or with someone's habits as other drivers may react in an unsafe manner. Often, such a driver takes added risks to get past the slow driver, he said.
 "Our officers see motorists who regard driving as some kind of competition in which getting there first and fastest is a sign of success. These drivers often pass in dangerous spots or cut other drivers off in order to be first," Humphreys said.
 Drivers need to realize that losing in this kind of a gamble can mean a loss of life, not only to the gambler but to other innocent people, he said.
 Over-confidence, often on icy highways, is another fatal mistake, Humphreys said.
 He urged all motorists to assess their driving attitudes for the coming holidays in an attempt to hold down the financial rate.

Financial aid workshop set
TWIN FALLS — A student financial aid informational workshop will be held at 7 p.m. Jan. 14 at the College of Southern Idaho's Taylor Administration Building cafeteria for all students planning to attend college this coming fall.
 These sessions are for students of all ages and parents, if they want to attend. Representatives from the CSI Financial Aid Office will be on hand to answer questions about assistance which is available. Anyone wanting more information can call Dave Perkins at 733-9554, ext. 216.

CSI offers geology class
TWIN FALLS — "Historical Geology," Geology 110, will be offered from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Wednesdays at the College of Southern Idaho during the spring semester.
 The four-credit course will be taught by Brian Mahoney and Mike Luessen, graduate students from Idaho State University. They plan to place local emphasis, use examples of area historical geology and include field trips in the course.

 The course will include a study of the origin of the earth, its geological history and the evolution of plant and animal life. Students can register Jan. 7-9 in the Taylor Administration Building.

College closed for holidays
TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho will be closed from noon Tuesday Dec. 23 until Jan. 5. This closure allows personnel time for a Christmas vacation and enables maintenance crews to take care of routine maintenance and cleaning.

Former jailer sentenced to jail
GOODING — A former Twin Falls County jailer is getting some first-hand information on the Gooding County jail.
 Tom Norris, 39, was sentenced in 5th District Magistrate Court in Gooding Tuesday afternoon to 2 days in jail and fined $100 on charges of battery on a police officer and disturbing the peace.
 The charges resulted from an incident Nov. 29 in Gooding in which Norris was charged with battery on a Gooding city officer who attempted to break up a fight and take Norris into custody.

Norris resigned his jailer's position in Twin Falls following his arrest.
 He was sentenced Tuesday to 45 days in jail, with 43 days suspended, on the battery charge and fined $100 on the second count. Judge Thomas Cushman also fined Norris court costs of $15.50 and a $10 victim recovery fee. He placed him on 2 years probation with the stipulation that he report to the Alcohol Treatment Center in Gooding for evaluation and help. He is also required to pay $30 a month to support probation costs.

Police report many burglaries
TWIN FALLS — Several vehicle and house burglaries have been reported to Twin Falls police in the past few weeks, and officers say that in many cases the homes and cars have been left unlocked.
 Dennis Eslinger, of 809 Apache Way, reported his 1986 van was entered between 1 a.m. and 7 a.m. Monday and about $250 worth of photo and sound equipment was taken. Police said a door on the van was unlocked. Eslinger told officers three other vehicles in the same area had been left unlocked and were gone through about the same time. Nothing was taken from the others, police said.
 With many homes now containing Christmas gifts, often displayed under trees, police say it is a prime time for burglaries and thefts. Police reports show that most of the vehicle burglaries occur during night-time hours, when the cars are parked on driveways or at the curbs in front of the owners' homes.

Police charge man with robbery

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
 Times-News writer

JEROME — A 19-year-old Jerome man was arrested and charged with armed robbery Tuesday, less than half an hour after the state liquor store attendant was held up at knife-point and robbed of an undetermined amount of cash.
 It was the second robbery at the store in less than a month, and Jerome police were investigating a possible connection between the two incidents.
 Capt. Mito Alonzo of the Jerome Police Department said the store, at 229 1st Ave. E., was entered at 1:20 p.m. by a young man wearing a nylon stocking over his face and displaying a 10-inch knife. He demanded the money in the cash register, and the clerk on duty cooperated. Cash and one bottle of liquor were taken by the robber, who then led the woman clerk to the bathroom and told her to count to 100 before she came out. He left the store on foot.

 He was spotted by officers a few minutes after the alarm was turned in, and Jerome city and county officers joined the chase, assisted by a state officer and a Twin Falls police officer who happened to be in the area.
 Alonzo said officers arrested Chad Wahl within 10 blocks of the liquor store, and still on foot. He said some money had been recovered, along with a 10-inch knife with a 6-inch blade.
 Wahl was being held in the Jerome County jail under $10,000 bond pending arraignment this afternoon.
 There were no customers or other store personnel in the building Tuesday, and there were no injuries.
 On Nov. 28 another clerk at the store was also held up at knife-point by someone wearing a nylon-stocking mask. The loss in the initial robbery was listed at around $700. The clerk was also placed in the bathroom with orders to count to five before turning in an alarm.

 Meanwhile, Twin Falls police continued to look for a suspect in an armed robbery at the Save-on-Drug Store Monday night. The Twin Falls robber wore no mask and displayed a hand gun.

Use of seat belts increases

BOISE (AP) — A recent study released by the Idaho Department of Transportation shows that seat belt use is increasing in the Gem State.
 The statewide average of 23.43 percent of motorists using safety restraints reflected an increase in a full percentage point over October, when 22.47 percent of Idahoans buckled up.
 In the region that includes Ada, Adams, Boise, Canyon, Elmore, Gem, Owyhee, Payette, Valley and Washington counties, usage rates have increased to 25.7 percent during the last six months.

A poll of Idaho residents showed that 68 percent of Idahoans support the use of seat belts, according to the Idaho Safety Restraint Coalition.
 "We are encouraged by the increase in usage, but we have a long way to go to reach our goal of having all Idahoans buckled up," said Rae Tway, coalition administrator.

State non-farm employment figures dispute Fed estimate

BOISE (AP) — State employment analysts are agreeing that Idaho has lost some nonagricultural jobs in the 1980s.
 But while the Department of workforce is significantly less than the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics has estimated.
 The bureau announced on Tuesday that Idaho was one of six states in the nation to see its nonfarm workforce decline by over 2 percent during the 12 months since October 1985.

 Employment analysts concede the state's weak economy has been a factor in the nonagricultural sector the drop has actually been only about three-quarters of a percent. Analyst Janell Hyer said the disparity between the federal and state figures resulted from the fact that the state has updated its information for October 1985, making it more accurate.
 But the state figures still show the state's nonagricultural payroll declining by 2,400 jobs in that period to 342,400.

Man arrested for tree topple

CALDWELL, Idaho (AP) — He may not be the Grinch who stole Christmas, but Michael Watson has people in Caldwell up in arms after he was arrested for topping the city's Christmas tree.
 Watson, 19, was charged with felonious destruction of property after he was seen cutting through the cables that anchored the tree early Sunday.
 "I don't know when I've seen people so riled up," police department spokesman Shirr Danish said.
 Two witnesses said they saw the 35- to 40-foot tree fall and then a man emerge from underneath it, apparently unharmed.

McDonald starts hunting for work

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Department of Employment Director Scott McDonald has notified a legislative panel that he is losing his job and that members of Gov.-elect Cecil Andrus' transition staff asked him to stop talking publicly about his legislative proposals.

"They indicated all public discussion of that by me should stop," McDonald said. He initially declined to appear Monday before the six-member panel set up partly to examine Employment Department operations. Later, he appeared and answered pointed questions from legislators.

Transition staff members said McDonald never was asked not to address the legislators.

McDonald, who was appointed director in 1979 by Gov. John Evans, will not keep his job when Andrus' administration takes over Jan. 5. His replacement has not been announced.

Last summer, McDonald proposed that the Legislature cut by $26 million unemployment insurance taxes paid by employers. Under rules now in place, the taxes employers would pay next year would increase sharply. He also planned to ask the lawmakers to create a new tax to help pay for the Department of Employment's overhead, now funded by the federal government. Revenue from the new tax would be taken out of the tax that employers already pay.

The committee headed by Sen. Rachel Gilbert, R-Boise, and Rep. Boyd Hill, R-Meridian, said McDonald did not show up for the Monday morning information-gathering meeting, the legislators called the Employment Department director who Andrus' staff not to attend.

The lawmakers then met with two Andrus transition staffers who "did mention that they had requested that Scott McDonald discontinue his efforts around the state in advocating his legislation," Hill said.

McDonald appeared soon after. "I'm not part of the new administration," McDonald told the legislators. "So, I'm not privy to the inside decision-making that's going on right now."

"No one in this office instructed him not to appear before the committee," Andrus press secretary Marc Johnson said. "He was told that we wanted to review all the legislative programs that are going on."

"The size of the proposed tax — an average of $91 per employee — was excessive, she said.

Smoking foes plan drive for wider ban

BOISE (AP) — Bolstered by their success with the limited Idaho Clean Indoor Air Act, a coalition of health agencies opposed to smoking, will launch a campaign this winter for legislative extension of the act's restrictions to the workplace.

"Smokers may choose to ignore the warning labels on cigarette packages, but nonsmokers can no longer ignore those warnings," the group of physicians representing health agencies in the coalition said Tuesday after U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop released a report they said provides solid evidence that secondhand smoke is a detrimental to nonsmokers.

"There's a health hazard here, and we're here to see what we can do about it," said Dr. Al Klotz of the American Cancer Society. The health agencies said Koop's report is "the most credible testimony in favor of a workplace Clean Indoor Air Act for Idaho."

The proposed changes to the current law, according to Idaho Lung Association spokesman Bill Smith, would effectively ban restrict smoking in all places of employment with some exemptions. Smith and state Rep. Dean Sorensen, R-Boise, the medical doctor who led the successful 1985 campaign for the Clean Indoor Air Act, said details of the bill must still be worked out. But Smith indicated it would likely follow laws now on the books in states like Minnesota, where smoking is banned in all workplaces except those occupied exclusively by smokers. Seventeen states have passed laws restricting smoking to at least some extent in the workplace.

Under the current law, which took effect this year, nonsmoking areas must be provided in restaurants, arenas, hospitals, nursing homes, schools, auditoriums and meeting rooms and is banned in elevators and grocery and retail stores.

"We don't want to make it inconvenient for employers, and we don't want to make it expensive," Sorensen said. "It shouldn't be that hard in terms of compliance because 80 percent of the people in Idaho don't smoke and many of the rest agree with this."

But Sorensen conceded that there would be a tremendous amount of resistance to the extension of smoking restrictions to the workplace, even though he called the issue one of an attitude more than anything else.

Attempts to cover the workplace were initially included in the original inquiries he has received about drafts of the current state law and have been from employees and dropped because of opposition. But employers asking about coverage of the law have pointed out the workplace.

that despite original warnings that it would create problems and additional costs, there has been little upsurge since it took effect over 11 months ago.

Dr. Fritz Dixon, the state health officer, said implementation of the current law has gone smoothly, adding that the bulk of the telephone inquiries he has received about drafts of the current state law and have been from employees and dropped because of opposition. But employers asking about coverage of the law have pointed out the workplace.

Boise woman dies in traffic mishap

BOISE (AP) — A Boise woman died in an Owyhee County accident apparently caused by fog and icy roads.

Sarah Ann Desanto, 23, died instantly Monday when her vehicle slid off U.S. 95 in Owyhee County 10 miles from the Oregon border and hit a cement retaining wall, a county dispatcher said. Black ice and fog were reported on the stretch of highway.

A passenger, Kim Jennifer Desanto, 3, was not injured, said a nursing supervisor at Twin Valley Medical Center in Caldwell.

Longer lunch period sought

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — About 350 Bonneville High School students protested what they contend is an inadequate lunch period by staging a sit-in next to the cafeteria.

The students remained next to the cafeteria Monday for more than an hour, twice the length of the lunch period.

In a petition submitted to school administration Monday, students requested a 15-minute lunch period rather than a half-hour to eat.

Assistant Principal Dean Welker said no arrests were made during the incident.

"They just sat down," he said. "They weren't rowdy. They weren't tearing things up."

Welker said that he doubted that the students' demands for a longer lunch period could be met. Lunches are restricted by accreditation requirements and the district bus schedule, he said.

PBS affiliates short of goal

POCATELLO (AP) — Two Public Broadcasting System affiliates in Idaho fell short of goals in fund-raising efforts last week.

KISU in Pocatello raised $31,193, short of its $40,000 goal, while KUID in Moscow raised $17,752 toward its $20,000 goal.

A week-long effort concluded Sunday at the two stations. KAID in Boise, the third PBS affiliate, did not participate.

"I think what it (missing the fundraising goal) means is that we're going to have to look to other activities in these markets to make up the difference," said Ron Fistrach, PBS director of public information in Idaho. "Particularly the March festival. If it doesn't happen in March festival, then during the auction coming up next spring."

Tribe given zoning powers

BLACKFOOT (AP) — The Shoshone-Bannock Tribes will have zoning authority over portions of Bingham County inside the boundaries of the Fort Hall Indian Reservation under an agreement reached between the county and a tribal commission.

The agreement was approved Monday between Bingham County commissioners and the Fort Hall Land Use Commission.

Formal approval is pending a review by the county attorney and the Fort Hall Business Council, said Dale Arave, commission chairman.

Arave said the agreement may cause some consternation with other counties, but defended the decision.

Home preservation aid offered

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Farmers Home Administration is taking applications for housing preservation assistance, to be paid by a $184,000 federal grant.

Bill Norberg, state FmHA administrator, said Tuesday the grants will be distributed through qualified public and private nonprofit organizations. The money can be used to assist rural or low-income home owners repair and rehabilitate dwellings.

The organizations involved will administer the grants through loans, grants, interest-reduction payments or other forms of assistance. Applications will be taken through March 2 at FmHA district offices at Coeur d'Alene, Caldwell, Twin Falls and Blackfoot.

FAA to investigate crash

POCATELLO (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration was to begin an investigation this week into a Skywest commuter plane that crashed Monday during landing.

The 18-passenger, twin-engine plane was attempting to land at Pocatello's municipal airport about 8:30 p.m. when its left main landing gear collapsed, according to an FAA spokesman here.

None of the four people aboard the plane was injured.

Skywest officials said the landing gear collapsed shortly after the plane touched down, causing the aircraft to skid nearly 1,000 feet before sliding off the runway.

The plane was enroute from Salt Lake City, officials said. It originally left Idaho Falls and was scheduled to land at the Salt Lake airport, but adverse weather forced the pilot to turn back and make the unscheduled landing in Pocatello, said Ron Reber, Skywest's marketing vice president.

Hawkins starts bid

BOISE (AP) — Jim Hawkins, new director of the Idaho Department of Commerce, writes personal memos on a pad headed, "Go For It."

He's going for it starting Wednesday — beginning his quest for business growth and expansion with a trip to Massachusetts, which has done a good job of it.

Weather permitting, Hawkins will fly to Boston to start two days of reviewing the state's largely successful efforts to stimulate economic growth.

Hawkins' new boss — governor-elect Cecil Andrus, arranged for the trip through Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis.

And Hawkins says he's taking a message to other parts of the country. "It's that Idaho wants new business, and we're going to go after it," said Hawkins.

He was the first major appointment by Andrus. He's been working since Nov. 18, even though he won't go onto the state payroll until Andrus and other new officials are sworn into office Jan. 5.

"It's exciting to me to be offered an opportunity to go to a state where there is such strong support of education, and industry has come in because of it," said Hawkins.

Dallas sighting investigation continues

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — Jackson police, stymied in their efforts to trace fingerprints left in a cafe to escaped killer Claude Dallas, now are hoping palm prints might be used to track the fugitive.

Dave Foster, chief investigator for the Jackson Police Department, said Tuesday that fingerprints possibly left on a glass by Dallas were unreadable. He said a palm print that might be readable will be studied if Ada County, Idaho, authorities can produce a palm print from Dallas.

Last week two Wyoming Game and Fish Department biologists thought they saw the 36-year-old Dallas sitting in a restaurant booth behind them. However, Dave Lockman and Lee Wollrab lost track of the man when they tried to follow him out of the restaurant.

Lockman said the man was wearing a hat and wire-rimmed glasses and had a full black beard and mustache.

Foster said Tuesday that a 10-year-old daughter of another Game and Fish officer also thought she saw the fugitive in Jackson last week.

Dallas, who is on the FBI's list of the 10 most wanted fugitives, was serving a 30-year sentence for manslaughter in the killings of two Idaho game wardens when he broke out of prison last March. Testimony in his trial indicated that the self-described mountain man killed the wardens when they tried to arrest him for poaching at his camp in southern Idaho.

Authorities scoured southern Idaho and northern Nevada for weeks after Dallas escaped. He is believed to have a number of sympathetic supporters who may have helped him avoid capture.

On June 13 Wyoming authorities were told that Dallas might have been spotted in Yellowstone National Park, and in September there were reports that the convict was in Sublette County.

Authorities in Bozeman, Mont., said last week that they were investigating a possible sighting of Dallas in the area between Bozeman and Butte. Foster said the two sightings in Jackson last week were about four hours apart and within several blocks of each other.

However, he also noted that police have received tips that Dallas might be in the area before and that several area residents resemble the fugitive.

The investigator said the fact that one of the two sightings last week was made by two Game and Fish Department biologists added some credence to the report since they would have had more access to Dallas' wanted poster than most citizens.

Plant site sought

SODA SPRINGS (AP) — The former manager of financially-troubled Beker Industries' southeastern Idaho phosphate fertilizer plant has purchased a small New York phosphate plant through a new corporation and is looking for a location in southeastern Idaho.

Gary Greer, who left Beker last summer to form Evergreen Resources Inc. in a so-far unsuccessful attempt to obtain the firm's Conda plant, has presented a proposal to the Soda Springs City Council for the new plant but is also considering several other sites in the area.

Greer, who put the assets of the new company at $600,000, said he hoped to have the relocated Long Island, New York, plant in operation by February. The facility would employ about 20 people when production begins with the workforce increasing to as many as 30 later on.

He said the company has a 10-year contract with Kerr-McGee Corp. for feed stock for the facility with prospects for several additional years of operation after that.

The plant would produce three or four phosphate-based granula fertilizer products to be marketed throughout the West, he said.

Auto sales on rise despite GM slump

DETROIT (AP) — Domestic auto sales by General Motors Corp. fell 12 percent in early December compared with the previous year, the nation's largest automaker said Monday.

Industrywide, however, gains by Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. helped boost U.S.-made car sales by 5.2 percent during the Dec. 1-10 period a year ago, the automakers reported.

GM's car sales were down 2.1 percent for the year to date compared with the same period of 1985. The December period was GM's sixth straight declining sales period in a slump marked by the absence of deep-discount financing incentives.

Car sales during the period moved at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 7.6 million, compared with 7.2 million a year ago.

Light-duty truck sales fell 6.3 percent industrywide for the period compared with a year ago, with only Ford and Chrysler showing improvements over last year.

Total domestic-made car and truck sales rose 1.3 percent for the period compared with last year, again reflecting gains by No. 2 Ford and No. 3 Chrysler as well as increased U.S. production by American Honda Motor Co. Inc. and Nissan Motor Corp. in U.S.A.

Ford's sales of domestic-made cars were up 33.5 percent over the year-ago period and Chrysler's rose 24.7 percent.

Sales comparisons for the early December period were done on a straight percentage-based on an average daily selling rate.

There were nine business days in the early December period and eight days a year ago, but GM still sold fewer cars this year: 94,120 versus 95,073 a year ago. So far this year, GM has sold 4,301,015 cars, compared with 4,391,863 a year ago.

For Ford, it was the fourth consecutive period showing strong recovery following a brief post-incentives slump. It was the third strong post-incentives showing for Chrysler.

Ford sold 40,158 domestic-made cars in early December 1986 versus 40,046 in the year-ago period. For the year to date, Ford sold 1,918,781 cars, down 2.4 percent from 1,965,089 a year ago.

But GM has not been able to induce buyers to return to its showrooms without the 2.9 percent financing it offered from late August to early October. GM suffered a $338 million operating loss in the third quarter, which it blamed on the costs of the incentives program.

Christmas time highlights the magnetic effects of home

They are all heading home for Christmas. Every year I think this will be the last time they all get to come, but here they are again.

They are our fledglings, who spread their wings this year and flew far away. But that irresistible magnet of home has brought them back.

In some ways Christmas is much easier than when they were little. I don't think they snoop through the house looking for their gifts (do they?). They all have cars and eagerly run errands. They even put a load of their own dirty clothes in the machine, turn it on, and later when the clothes are dry, fold them. Now that is a major breakthrough.

But there is a dark side to their coming home. They are still siblings and a bit green-eyed, counting the presents under the tree (and size still matters). And they are traditionalists. They remember everything we ever did during the holidays and want to do it again, even if it was a monumental flop the first time (we're much better humming than carolling).

But we are eagerly awaiting their arrival. We have the traditional music ready. At our house, during the holidays, we always cook to the sound tracks from "The Sound of Music," "Tom Sawyer" and "Fiddler on the Roof." They are getting a bit scratchy and static-ridden but we loudly sing every word of every song.

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

I can't wait! And so am I cooking ahead a bunch because no matter how much I have ready, it's not enough.

I'm hoping that my youngest son will bring authentic Boston recipes home. But he's my picky-picky eater and probably survived on rice-crispy treats and cans of chili. My eldest daughter will be sporting a Southern Californian tan and, as my greatest critic (next to her father), will want to try all the new things I've invented.

I'm really trying to cook fast so there is plenty in the freezer.

I really can't remember when there was an easier time for all of us in preparing meals in a hurry. Even though I love to cook, I also am a realist and actually like several of the ready-to-eat items at the grocery store. In fact, I like them much better than a lot of the fast foods, and they are for the most part healthier.

Here are some of the items that I like to keep on hand in the freezer or in the refrigerator. These all require something be done to them, but they sure come in handy.

First of all, check in your produce section and grab a package of wonton skins and egg-roll wrappers. These can be frozen and make great appetizers and main dishes in a hurry.

Check the dairy case and you can find ready-to-bake pie shells (or check on the shelves by boxed desserts), and also look for pie shells that are ready to put in your own pie pan. You can try making shepherd's pie with leftovers.

The freezer has lots of goodies. There are rolled sheets of puff pastry that are ready to cut. Also there are the puff shells that make even the old chipped beef taste elegant. If you have ever tried to make puff pastry, you'll know how great these products are.

Also get a roll of filo dough. It is a great product, and I like it because you can put it in your refrigerator to thaw in the morning, use what you want that night and re-freeze the rest.

Yes, I know these cost, but they also save lots of time and make your dishes look and taste very elegant with a minimum of work. Don't forget the old standbys of flour and corn tortillas. These can be made into many interesting dishes.

Check the bakery for pita breads, bagels, English muffins and different sizes of French breads like deli rolls, round loaves and buns. All of the above can be topped with meats, veggies and cheeses and broiled or baked.

Don't forget to check the packaging on these items. Lots of them have really good and unique recipes that often don't call for unusual items. And you can get the rest of the ingredients while you are at the store.

For your holiday cupboard, I also think you need cream cheese, cottage cheese and a couple of other cheeses like Monterey Jack or mozzarella and a cheddar.

Here is a good dip for those watching their calories but not their cholesterol. It keeps about five days to a week in the refrigerator.

PROTEIN DIP

- 6 hard cooked eggs, chopped a bit
 - 1/2 cup lowfat (1 percent) cottage cheese
 - 1/4 cup skim milk
 - 2 teaspoons instant minced onion (or fresh onion minced, green or yellow)
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 teaspoon basil leaves
 - 1/2 teaspoon lemon juice
 - 1/2 teaspoon prepared mustard
 - 1/4 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
 - 1/4 teaspoon red-pepper sauce
- Place all ingredients in your blender or food processor. Cover and blend until creamy. Cover and chill to blend flavors. Store in refrigerator.

This is good, even if you opt to eliminate the egg yolks to make it a low-cholesterol dip. If you do, you'll want to jazz up the seasonings to your taste.

This next recipe was sent by Shirley Harris of Twin Falls. It's easy, and a good twist on the usual mixed cheeses.

CHEESE CHUTNEY SPREAD

8 ounce package cream cheese
16 ounces of sharp cheddar cheese (New York is good)

- 1 tablespoon prepared curry powder
- 2-3 ounces dry sherry (cooking sherry will work)
- 1 bottle prepared chutney
- 2-3 green onions, chopped

Get cheeses to room temperature, cube and mix together in blender or food processor and then add curry powder and sherry.

When well blended, remove and form into a large (or two smaller) disks about 1-inch thick and refrigerate.

Just before serving, cover with prepared chutney and sprinkle with chopped onions. This keeps for a couple of weeks in the refrigerator. It's good.

For other appetizers, don't forget mushroom caps, cherry tomatoes, mild peppers and other produce items. All can be filled and baked or broiled for easy appetizers.

You notice I use the word "appetizers." It's because horse-does is a term on it's way out because it is the most commonly misspelled word in the language! Enjoy!

During Yule season UPS driver is Santa Claus to everyone

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Charlie Lockwood doesn't look or dress like Santa Claus, but he's the next best thing for many of the people he visits during the Christmas season. It matters not that his suit is brown, instead of red and white, because he's a United Parcel Service driver, bearing presents from loved ones.

He says everyone is glad to see him and his co-workers.

"We've got 'er made," he says. "We're Santa Claus to everybody. If it isn't a warm smile, it's usually cookies or candy or ten pounds every Christmas."

On the other hand, he says his job prevents him from gaining too much weight, because as he works, he burns off calories.

"I'll be delivering anywhere from a hundred-and-some odd packages to 175 stops," he says, "so that is in and out of your truck 175 times and running back and forth to the building."

Lockwood says he usually does not take his allotted lunch break. He works straight through, which gives him more time to be with his family in the evening.

He says that once in a while, when he comes home from work, and his wife, Joanne, "is absolutely exhausted and can't figure out what to fix" or if she asks, "Do you want to fix dinner, or take me out?" then he fixes dinner.

Otherwise, Lockwood prepares breakfast every morning and one meal a weekend. He says he likes to cook and has done it since he was a child.

"My mom raised three boys, and believed they should be able to take care of themselves. So, she taught us all to cook," he says.

On his way to becoming proficient in the kitchen, he did have one failure. "I can remember melting all the cookies in the bottom of a cookie sheet. I mixed too much molasses in them and ruined one of mom's good pans," he says.

In addition to the guidance his mother gave him, his father provided him with a role model.

"He always fixed breakfast and sometimes dinner," he says. "And I remember waking up on Sunday mornings and having fried chicken, biscuits and gravy for breakfast. I'm — not — quite — that — ambitious."

Now, Lockwood's own children — 6-year-old David, and 4-year-old Lora — are taking an interest in culinary art. "They insist on helping," he says. "Whatever I fix — they help."

Slavish adherence to a printed recipe is not for him. "What's the point of cooking if everybody else can do the same thing?" he asks. "I don't use a recipe when I cook. I add things until I like the way it tastes."

When he makes waffles, using a pancake mix, he uses the standard mixture for four people. But he separates 3 eggs, makes a merengue out of the whites and folds the egg yolks into the batter. Then he folds the merengue into the batter with the oil.

"It makes a much, much lighter waffle," he says. "It makes excellent waffles."

Lockwood often makes apple pancakes using an adaptation of a recipe given to him by one of his college roommates. "I don't think I make it quite the way the recipe is, but it turns out pretty good every time," he says.

APPLE PANCAKES

- The batter:
- 3 eggs
- 4 tablespoons milk
- Pinch of salt
- 1/4 teaspoon baking powder
- 5 tablespoons flour
- 4 tablespoons sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Separate eggs. Beat whites into a merengue. Add 2 tablespoons sugar and vanilla. To the yolk, add milk, salt, baking powder and 2 tablespoons sugar. Fold batter into the merengue.

The apples:

Peel, core and slice 2 large or 3 small apples. In a 10-inch cast-iron skillet, saute apples in 3 tablespoons butter and 3-4 tablespoons brown sugar. Sprinkle with cinnamon (to taste) and add 1 tablespoon lemon juice (optional). Saute 3-4 minutes until apples are coated. Simmer until cooked. Pour batter over apples in the frying pan. Bake at 400 degrees for 18 minutes, or until golden brown. Serve hot out of oven. Top with whipped cream or serve with ice cream. The amount of sugar in the recipe may be adjusted to suit taste.

 a soufflé, and Lockwood makes them for breakfast, as a main dish or for dessert. "The family loves it, and it's really easy, and real fast to fix, and it's exceptional," he says.
 The next recipe is for an apple cake, which is heavy, but really good.

RAW APPLE CAKE
 ¼ cup butter
 1½ cups white sugar
 2 eggs, well beaten
 2½ cups sifted flour
 1½ teaspoons soda
 ¼ teaspoon salt

¾ cup strong coffee, cold
 1 teaspoon vanilla
 3 cups chopped apples
 ½ cup brown sugar
 1 teaspoon cinnamon
 ½ cup chopped nuts
 Cream butter with white sugar and eggs. Add sifted flour, soda, salt, coffee and vanilla. Fold in chopped apples. Pour into a 9x13x2-inch pan. Mix brown sugar, cinnamon and nuts. Sprinkle over batter in pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 45-55 minutes.

 The next recipe is one he made up, in total. It has no name, so we'll call it...

CHARLIE LOCKWOOD'S SEAFOOD DELIGHT
 3 tablespoons butter
 Clove of garlic, minced, or a half a medium diced onion
 6 large mushrooms, sliced
 Juice of half a lemon
 ¼ cup white wine (optional)
 2 tablespoons Russian dressing

¼-¾ pound small scallops or imitation crab meat
 Sauté crab in the butter. Add mushrooms and scallops (or imitation crab). Continue to cook for 2 or 3 minutes. Add lemon juice, wine and dressing. Simmer till scallops (or imitation crab) are cooked. Salt and pepper to taste. Serve with rice. Serves two.

Gardening/home

Learn the tricks of watering plants

The most common question about a newly purchased plant is, "How often should I water it?" That is a little like asking how often to fill the gas tank on a car. Unfortunately, there is no gauge on the pot to tell when the soil is "empty" or dry.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain
gardening

However, you can stick your finger slightly into the soil and feel if it is dry. That is the most reliable method to determine when to water any plant. Most plants grow best if the soil dries out on top before watering. There will still be some moisture deeper in the soil to sustain the plant for another day or two. However, for this method to work, you must check plants frequently. People who check their plants regularly are usually the ones who have the best success growing them. An easier and quicker method of judging soil dryness is by appearance. Moist soil is darker than dry soil. However, growers do not all use the same kind of potting soil. Some soils are darker than others. You may have to feel the soil a few times to verify the color change that indicates dryness. Of course, plants dry out at different rates. A large plant in a small pot will dry out quickly compared to a small plant in a large pot. After some observation, you will be able to predict how long it will take for a particular plant to dry out. If you treat each plant as an individual and water according to its particular need, you will have more success growing plants.

Why is it so important to let the soil dry on top before watering? Because plant roots need air as much as they need water. If all the soil pores are constantly filled with water, there is no room for air. Roots without adequate air literally suffocate. Once some of the roots have been damaged, the top quits growing and then the plant deteriorates. Some plants can tolerate wet soil better than others. Some potting soils drain water away faster than others, which provides air more quickly. Plants which prefer dryer soil, such as cactus, are often planted in sandy soils. It is this relationship between water and air which helps determine the proper pot size for a plant. If a plant dries out very quickly, it may need repotting into a larger pot. A plant which goes long periods with wet soil probably should be in a smaller pot. Watering and caring for plants according to their individual needs rather than according to our own convenience, results in much better success in plant growing.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College.

Homemade jam makes a holiday gift

Homemade jam is always in season for gifts. There's still time to make several batches of this sparkling jam.

BANANA-CRANBERRY JAM
12 ounces fresh cranberries, chopped (3 cups)
1 1/2 cups water
7 cups sugar
2 cups mashed banana
1/2 of a 6-ounce package liquid fruit pectin

Combine cranberries and water in a 5-quart Dutch oven or large kettle. Simmer, covered, 10 minutes. Stir in sugar and banana. Bring to boiling. Boil hard 1 minute. Remove from heat. Stir in pectin. Skim off foam. Spoon mixture at once into clean, hot half-pint jars, leaving a 1/4-inch headspace. Wipe jar rims; adjust lids. Process in boiling water bath for 15 minutes (start timing when the water boils). Makes 8 half-pints.

Spirit of the season won't soothe this party guest's rancor

DEAR ABBY: I have one of those awkward "don't want to hurt anyone's feelings" situations, and I don't know quite how to handle it. I have a very good friend (I'll call her Mary) who tends to get depressed over the holidays because her family is scattered across the country, and she's alone. My parents are planning a Christmas dinner for family and friends, so I asked my mother if I could invite Mary. She said, "Certainly." I invited Mary, and she was thrilled to accept. It seems Mother had invited her friend, "Rita," for that evening. Yesterday Mother saw Rita. She asked Mother who else was coming to her party, and Mother told her, adding, "My daughter's friend, Mary, will be there." Rita said, "I'm sorry, I am not coming. I know Mary, and I refuse to be in the same room with her!" You can see the quandary. I didn't know that Mary and Rita even knew each other. Mother said she tried to persuade Rita to tolerate Mary's presence for the one evening, but she flatly refused. My mom and I are caught in the middle. I don't want to rescind the invitation to Mary because of Rita, and my mom feels terrible that Rita will not come because of Mary. Help! Comfort, consolation, or some workable solution, please.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

—IN THE MIDDLE
DEAR IN: The solution is simple. Mary is in, and Rita — by her own refusal to attend if Mary does — is out. No guest has the right to dis-vile another guest. I don't know Rita, but I'm sure the party will not suffer for her absence.

DEAR ABBY: My nephew and I have this bet on, and we need you to help us settle it. If a gentleman invites a lady to go to the dog track with him, isn't it only proper that he pay for the lady's betting costs? I say it is.

Please rush your answer, because I am going to the track as soon as I win this bet.

—V., COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA
DEAR V.: There is no need for me to rush my answer because you've lost the bet.

When a gentleman invites a lady to the track, Monte Carlo, Las Vegas or anywhere else people go to gamble, he pays the admission fee — if there is one — but unless he has agreed in advance to stake her, she's on her own.

DEAR ABBY: It seems that the more things change, the more they stay the same. As I was driving to work last week, I heard a young, pregnant girl (on the radio) talking about how her teen-age boyfriend talked her into it. She said he told her, "If you loved me, you would." Soshe did.

When I was a young girl (25 years ago), the same line was being used. In one of your columns I read the perfect comeback. I remember this one so well because I used it a few times.

He said, "If you loved me, you would," and I said, "If you loved me, you wouldn't ask me to." It worked every time.

—GOOD MEMORY
DEAR GOOD: Some of my advice is as good as new because it hasn't been used much. I'm glad this comeback came back to mind. Thanks for the memories.

It's crunch time for Bruin boys' team

Region III boys

By MICHAEL VANAUDELN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It's crunch time. If the Twin Falls Bruin boys defeat the Highland Rams tonight in Pocatello and the Minico Spartans here Friday, that would leave the Bruins in strong contention for the Region III title — but it's a shaky if.

Currently, the Bruins are 1-1 in league play, 1-2 overall, trailing the 2-0 Pocatello Indians and the 3-0 Spartans in Region III standings but leading the 1-3 Burley Bobcats and the 0-2 Rams.

It's definitely crunch time. "Our attitude is good right now," said Bruin head coach John Astorquia. "We're just now starting to mold as a team and we'll be competitive in both games."

And they will have to be. Led by Gabe Ostyn, Twin Falls has molded into a high-scoring machine, churning out over 66 points per game, including a 95-point outburst against Burley. But those numbers have come in short coughs for the Bruins, scoring an average of 25 points in the second quarter but only a meager 15 points in the deciding fourth quarter. For Twin Falls to develop those periodic coughs into whopping roars, they will have to gain some offensive consistency — and not just from Ostyn. Bruins such as J.D. Yergensen and 6-foot, 4-inch center Ken Fuchs will have to string the nets to weave the supporting baskets the Bruins need.

"We've been working on offensive execution in practice," Astorquia said. "That will be the key for us in both games. So far, we've had six good quarters, but we haven't been very good for the other six."

The Bruin coach has several things in mind to keep Twin Falls from falling into those frequent low-scoring pits and staying on level ground. Most importantly, the Bruin coach wants "more points off the offensive boards," he said. "Ostyn had definitely taken on the scoring role but we can't totally depend on him. Getting some production on some of our rebounds would do the trick, I think."

Rebounds would also do the trick for the Twin Falls fast break, a high-speed offense that "we plan to try up until Christmas," said Astorquia, "then we'll evaluate it. But it's a kind of offense I want to go with."

Getting those boards, though, will be quite a task when the Bruins face the taller Rams and Spartans this week.

Highland, despite its disappointing 0-2 record, gives Astorquia the willies, since the Rams "have historically started slow but ended up going to the state playoffs."

Another reason for the scare of going into Pocatello to face Highland is the Rams' 6-foot, 3-inch Jim Kolsen. "See PREPS on Page D4

WSU job may go to Gilby

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — First-year University of Idaho head football coach Keith Gilbertson is among the candidates to replace Jim Walden as the new coach at Washington State University.

The head coach's bench at Washington State was still warm when speculation as to potential successors to Walden began and the school announced it hoped to find one by Jan. 4.

"We need to move quickly," Cougar athletic director Dick Young told a news conference moments after Walden, Washington State's coach for the last nine years, had left after announcing in a tearful farewell that he's taking over at Iowa State.

Gilbertson, whose father was a Cougar assistant in the 1950s, took the Vandals to the Division I-AA playoffs and finished 4-7. Gilbertson said he had not thought about the WSU job.

Three members of Walden's staff — Jim Hughes, Robb Ross and Gary Gagnon — were expected to tell Young today they would apply for the Washington State job. Assistants Steve Morton and Ken Woody confirmed they would be candidates.

Four other assistants, Dave Elliott, Jon Fabris, Jimmy Burrow, and Mel Sanders, said they will join Walden in Ames.

Young said he invited any who wanted to remain in Pullman to stay, while Walden said all nine were offered jobs at Iowa State. The new Cyclone coach is giving the five who are unsure of their futures until the first of the year to decide if they want to move to Ames.

"I don't want to put any pressure on Dick, but I hope a couple try to get the job here," Walden said. "I feel they are quality coaches, strong coaches, who know what it means to be a Cougar."

Several other names have been mentioned within the athletic department, including:

- Former Cougar head Hugh Campbell, a former head coach in the Canadian Football League, the United States Football League and the National Football League, and currently general manager of the Edmonton Eskimos.

Fifth-ranked Minico routs 'Cats, 82-46

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Right in the middle of a basketball game, a blowout broke out.

After a first quarter tie, the Minico Spartans opened up a 10-point lead in the second period and outscored Burley 17-12 in the first four minutes of the third quarter as the A-1 fifth-ranked Spartans routed the Bobcats 82-46 Tuesday night in boys' Region III basketball action.

The victory for Minico, now 3-0 on the season and 2-0 in region, gives them an early edge on hosting the regional tournament in February. Burley in turn fell to 1-4 for the season and 1-3 in regional competition.

There were many reasons for Minico's large margin of victory. Start with an 11-for-12 performance from the charity stripe in the second quarter and then add to that, holding the Bobcats to just five second half field goals.

For Minico Coach Craig Dexter and Burley Coach Steve Jensen, Tuesday's game was a reflection of the past.

"The game was a lot like the Idaho Falls game," said Dexter, referring to the Spartans' 15-point victory over the Tigers last weekend. "They (Burley) came out and played really good basketball for eight minutes."

Like the Idaho Falls game, Dexter didn't have to make many changes.

"We just had to kick in the intensity," he continued. "They (Bobcats) knew they were in for a tough game."

For Jensen, depth was a problem.

"It was a lot like the game we played at Rigby," he said, referring to a 40-point loss 10 days ago at the hands of the third-ranked Trojans. "Their bench finally wore us down."

It looked like Burley would embarrass the home team in front of a jam-packed gym with fans from both Mini-Cassia schools.

The Bobcats took an eight point lead — midway through the first quarter. Just the start of the lead when Minico got hot from the field and sank a shot at the end of the quarter.

After that tie, Minico shut out Burley for the first three minutes of the second quarter taking a 25-21 lead.

With 35 seconds left, Dan Poulton hit a jumper and after a Burley turnover, Jack Bagley scored at the buzzer putting the Spartans on top 30-20 at the break.

The difference between the two teams in the first half was 12 free throws for the home team as they went to the line 14 times. Burley was five for seven.

The second half was pure disaster for the Bobcats, who only scored two points in the opening four minutes as Minico took a 57-32 advantage.

If that wasn't bad enough, Minico really nailed the coffin shut.

The Spartans outscored Burley 11-0 in the first three minutes to take a 72-37 lead.

Both coaches then unloaded the benches for the rest of the contest.

Robert Greener led the Minico attack with 27 points, nearly all were buckets from the inside.

Bagley had 20 points and Poulton added 10 for the winners.

For Burley, the David Budge hot streak was stopped by the defensive efforts from Greener and David Duff. Budge finished the game with eight points after a 31 point performance in his last outing. The Bobcats were led by Kirt Melling's 13 points.

By MICHAEL VANAUDELN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If there's one thing four of the Region III girls' basketball teams know about this season, it's that they must beat the Highland Rams in order to have any chance of wearing the regional crown.

And nobody knows that more than the Twin Falls girls, having lost to Highland 63-31 in the season opener — and learning "that we'll have to be a better team to beat them this time," said Twin Falls head coach

Paul Stover.

With the Region III standings showing Twin Falls right smack in the middle with a 2-2 regional record (6-3 overall), tonight's revenge-match against the 3-1 Rams (8-1 overall) becomes ever so important for the lady Bruins.

"It's a game we need," said Stover. "It's the last time we'll play them outside of the playoffs but we're going to have to play our best to beat them."

That earlier crushing by the Rams was mostly due to the height advantage Twin Falls gave to Highland.

With a front line of 6-1 Heather Williams, 6-foot Marcia Yastrop and 6-foot Carina Hoffman, the Rams dominated the smaller Bruins, controlling the boards and neutralizing Twin Falls' most prolific weapon — the fast break.

Now, with the lesson of that November game understood well, the Bruins will stay away from their fast break offense, despite its being effective in Twin Falls' last six games.

"We can't run on them," emphasized Stover, intent on a different strategy for his club. "We're going to have to be a controlled, patient team instead."

All this despite the fact the Bruins consider themselves a better team since winning six of their last eight games after the lopsided defeat to the Rams — and they are also considered a better team by the team that shook their confidence in the opener.

"I expect them to be a better team this time around," said Highland head coach Randy Rehner. "They looked like they had potential to improve and they seem to be doing that now."

But even if Stover says he is selling his team on a slowed-down offense, Rehner, for one, isn't buying.

"Their advantage is their quickness," said the Ram coach. "Do expect them to put some pressure on us with their running game."

But if Stover isn't bluffing and plays his cards the way he says, slowing the pace down against the taller Rams may not be any more effective than the fast break.

"We'll take whatever they give us," said Stover. "But we'll definitely have to hit our outside shots, especially at the beginning."

Riley's No. 1 challenge: Keeping basketball fun

By BILL BARNARD
The Associated Press

Pat Riley's biggest worry isn't Akeem Oluajwon and Ralph Sampson. Or Larry Bird and Kevin McHale. Or whether his trousers are wrinkled.

Pat Riley's biggest worry, he says, is keeping the Los Angeles Lakers from losing the joy of winning.

"I have no problems with egos," Riley said. "Everybody assumes that I do, but my main problem coaching the Lakers is keeping these guys away from the burden of having to win every time."

"The public, the media, fans and even management have such unrealistic expectations about winning that I have to deal with the possibility that the players will get no joy out of the season.

"No one can win all the time. When you're not only expected to win, but to win and look great, you're put in a position where you can never be satisfied. I tell the team that it's OK to lose 25 games — that should be our goal. I'll say, 'I will allow you to lose 25 times.' That means we win 27 and could have the best record in the league. If we're crushed every time we lose, we'll never feel any joy when we win."

The thrashing that Oluajwon, Sampson and the Houston Rockets handed the Lakers in the playoffs last season — keeping them out of the NBA finals.

CSI men advance to No. 5 in this week's juco poll

By The Associated Press

The College of Southern Idaho's men's basketball team, now 12-0 for the season, has advanced from seventh to fifth place in this week's National Junior College Athletic Association poll.

The Eagles, who slipped a notch last week before successive victories over the Brigham Young University Juniors varsity, the College of Eastern Utah and Colorado Northwestern Community College, picked up 77 points in this week's poll to finish ahead of Herkimer Community College of New York, which had moved ahead of CSI a week ago.

Defending national champion San Jacinto Community College of Texas remained the No. 1 team with 21 of the 23 first-place votes. CSI has taken a 2 1/2 week break from competition for the Christmas holidays and won't resume competition until they host the Eagle Invitational in Twin Falls on Jan. 23.

Tigers, Buhl square off in A-2 girls' showdown

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

BUHL — It's only December, but tonight's District 4 Class A-2 prep girls' basketball game between Jerome and Buhl will loom very large through the rest of the season.

The reason is that District 4 is now a three-team show, with the Tigers and Indians' South-Central Idaho Conference opponent Burley being kicked upstairs to Class A-1. This means that the district representative to the state A-2 tournament will be decided by what amounts to a round-robin playoff among Jerome, Buhl and Wood River.

"Sometimes I think it's harder with three than it was with four," says Buhl Coach Janet Smutny, whose 7-4 Indians will take on Burley, 6-6, at 8 p.m. tonight. "If Burley was still in A-2, you know they'd make their presence felt in this. Now it boils down to four games that mean a lot and a lot of other games that don't mean as much."

The winner tonight will get a leg up toward a first-round bye in the postseason district tournament, but it won't be out of the woods yet.

Buhl and Jerome meet again on the last night of the regular season, Jan. 31, in a game that could cancel out tonight's result.

For the moment, both teams are 1-0 in District 4 competition with victories over Wood River. Most of the starters tonight will remember that the Tigers took the Indians to an extra game in last year's district tournament.

Pistons hand Hawks first setback in Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — The Detroit Pistons didn't come to Atlanta with a plan, just a game plan.

"We had no game plan except to come in here and play basketball," said Bill Laimbeer, who scored 23 points as Detroit beat the floundering Hawks 111-100 Tuesday night, ending the NBA season's last home unbroken streak.

Pro basketball

"They were 9-0 on their home court. Everyone else in the league had lost one or two," said Laimbeer, who scored 14 points in the first quarter and scored on both ends of a double technical in the final minutes.

Laimbeer also grabbed 20 rebounds.

"I figured rebounding would be the key. They're second in the league and we're No. 4, so we figured if we could control the boards or hold our own, we had enough firepower to win," he said.

The Hawks, already missing guard Spud Webb with a knee injury, lost forward Dominique Wilkins to the flu. Wayne Rollins, Scott Hastings, John Koncak, Mike McGee and Randy Wittman all were ill but played. It showed as Atlanta scored only 11 points in the final quarter.

"We didn't have the extra energy we needed. Usually we are the team that has the extra spurt late in the game," said Atlanta's Cliff Livingston.

The Hawks' roster was cut further when Rollins, the starting center, and Detroit's Vinnie Johnson were ejected for fighting in the second quarter, and Glenn Rivers fouled out in the final period.

After an explosive first period, which ended at 33-33 on a desperation three-pointer by Hastings, Detroit led most of the way. The Pistons were ahead 70-62 at the half, but Atlanta tied it at 78-78. Then Laimbeer's baseline jumper gave Detroit the lead for good.

Thomas would end up with 18 points for Detroit. Adrian Dantley added 10 and Rick Mahorn 14.

Rivers led Atlanta with 24 points. Kevin Willis had 21 and Livingston 18, 10 of them in the first quarter.

Phoenix 106 Houston 102

HOUSTON (AP) — Walter Davis scored nine of his 24 points in the final 2:41 to lead the Phoenix Suns to a 106-102 victory over the Houston Rockets in the NBA on Tuesday night.

With his team trailing 98-94, Davis hit two field goals and connected on five of six free throws to secure the victory.

Akeem Olatunji led the Rockets with 24 points and 20 rebounds, while Ralph Sampson, had 22 points and 13 rebounds.

The Suns, who also got 20 points from Alvan Adams, scored 10 straight points early in the fourth quarter to cut Houston's lead to 87-81. After Houston led 92-86 with 5:06 remaining, the Suns outscored the Rockets 10-1.

Houston dominated the early play, leading 16-9 midway through the first quarter. The Suns battled back to lead 23-26 entering the second.

Sampson sparked Houston's second-quarter performance, scoring 14 points in the final seven minutes to give the Rockets a 37-46 advantage at the half.

Chicago 99 New Jersey 98

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Brown's last-second tip-in of a missed shot by Michael Jordan, who led Chicago with 41 points, gave the Bulls a 99-98 NBA victory over the New Jersey Nets on Tuesday night.

Jordan, who went over the 40-point mark for the 14th time in 22 games this season, took an in-bounds pass with six seconds left and drove the lane. His shot missed, but the 6-foot-8, 250-pound Brown was there to tip in the rebound.

Don Wood had given the Nets a 98-97 lead with two free throws with six seconds remaining after he stole the ball from John Paxson and drove the length of the court before being fouled.

The Bulls led 97-90 on a basket by Jordan with 3:57 left, but they didn't score again until Brown's game winner.

The Nets, who have lost 12 of their 13 road games this season, were led by Mike Gminski with 24 points and Buck Williams with 20. Steve Colter with 14 points and Brown with 10 were the only Chicago players in double figures besides Jordan, the NBA scoring leader with an average of 37.7 points per game.

The Nets led by as many as nine points on four occasions, the last at 77-68. But the Bulls rallied with an 11-1 spurt to gain a 79-78 advantage with 1:45 seconds left in the third period.

The Bulls scored nine of the first 11 points of the fourth in an 88-82 lead that held up until Woods' free throws.

Ex-NBA star Drew, banned for drug use, arrested again

ATLANTA (AP) — Former NBA All-Star John Drew, banned from the league for repeated drug problems, was free on $1,000 bond Tuesday after his second drug-related arrest in less than three months.

Atlanta police spokesman Kevin Forler said Drew, 32, was one of 33 people arrested Friday night at a "known drug location" in southeast Atlanta. Drew was charged with one count of criminal solicitation for the purchase of cocaine.

Forler said Drew attempted to buy cocaine from an undercover police officer.

He said Drew is free on $1,000 bond and has a trial scheduled for Jan. 16.

Drew was arrested in Fulton County on Oct. 7 on two counts of selling cocaine and one count of possessing the drug.

In January, the NBA banned Drew after he entered a hospital in Salt Lake City. The league said that constituted Drew's third entry into a drug treatment center, which under NBA policy required him to be banned from the league.

The ban is for life, but is revokable after two years.

Drew played for the Atlanta Hawks from 1974 until 1982, twice making the NBA All-Star team and never averaging less than 18.5 points per game.

The Hawks traded Drew, guard Freeman Williams and $1 million in cash to the Utah Jazz in 1982 for the negotiating rights to Dominique Wilkins.

Soon after the trade, Drew underwent eight weeks of drug rehabilitation at a Maryland clinic, after which he said he had been abusing cocaine since 1977.

changed punches with 2:24 left in the second quarter. Neither player was hurt and Ewing was assessed a double personal foul.

Bird, hitting 11 of 18 from the field, also had nine assists and 10 rebounds. He made two of his three-point shots and converted another three-point play in the last 6:07 of the third quarter.

The Knicks, who trailed by 15 points in the second quarter, charged back with 10 straight points in the opening minutes of the third to pull within 64-61. But after an exchange of baskets, Robert Parish, who finished with 20, sank 10-foot turnaround and Bird added six straight points for 74-63 lead with 5:27 left in the quarter.

Gerald Wilkins led the Knicks with 23 points and Bill Cartwright added 22. Ewing scored 17 points and fouled out with 10 seconds left in the game.

LA Lakers 121 Cleveland 116

RICHMOND, OHIO (AP) — Magic Johnson had 25 points, 14 assists and 11 rebounds to pace the Los Angeles Lakers to a 121-116 NBA victory Tuesday night over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar also scored 25 points and James Worthy clipped in with 22.

After a 59-59 halftime tie, Cleveland took a 73-66 lead on a stuff by Brad Daugherty with 8:38 remaining in the third quarter. The Lakers then outscored the Cavaliers 28-7 to take a 92-90 lead with 1:37 remaining in the quarter.

Worthy scored 10 points during the spurt and A.C. Green added 6.

The Lakers had five steals and five layups during the surge as they unleashed their vaunted running attack.

Los Angeles led 94-85 entering the final quarter and led by as many as 16 points on two occasions in the fourth quarter, the last time at 117-101 on a Byron Scott basket with 4:20 left.

Cleveland was led by John Williams with 22 points, Mel Turpin with 20 and Phil Hubbard and Ron Harper with 16 each.

Utah 109 Washington 106

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Darrell Griffith made a 26-foot jump shot for a three-point basket at the buzzer Tuesday night to give the Utah Jazz their seventh straight victory, a 109-106 decision over the Washington Bullets.

Griffith finished a season-high 27 points for the Jazz, leaders in the NBA's Midwest Division with a 147 record.

Utah had led most of the way until late in the third quarter when the Bullets scored seven unanswered points to take an 80-78 lead into the final period. Terry Catledge led Washington's third-period rally, scoring 17 points to help the Bullets erase a 55-48 halftime deficit. Catledge finished with 19.

Utah opened a 109-99 lead with 3:34 remaining, but Washington scored eight straight points before Kelly Tripucka broke the string on a three-point play with 43 seconds left.

Thurl Bailey's tip-in of a missed free throw with 25 seconds remaining put Utah up 106-100, but the Bullets hit six free throws down the stretch, the final two by Moses Malone with three seconds remaining, to tie the score.

Karl Malone had 24 points and Tripucka finished with 21 for Utah, which opened a six-game road trip.

Washington was paced by Moses Malone's 33 points and Jeff Malone's 23.

Milwaukee 103 Philadelphia 91

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Ricky Pierce led Milwaukee with 24 points and Terry Cummings added 20 as the Bucks beat Philadelphia 103-91 Tuesday night, handing the 76ers their third straight NBA loss.

Milwaukee opened the third quarter with a 10-3 run with Cummings scoring eight of his points.

The Bucks, whose largest lead was 67-47 at 7:58 of the third quarter, opened the fourth with a 6-2 run for an 82-58 lead at the 10:20 mark. Pierce had 10 of his 24 points in the final period.

The Bucks jumped out to a 7-0 lead in the first two minutes of the game and never trailed.

The 76ers, who were led by Charles Barkley's 27 points, narrowed the lead to two points twice in the first quarter. The last time was 15-13 with 3:51 left in the period.

Dallas 101 San Antonio 98

DALLAS (AP) — Derek Harper scored 22 points, and made a key steal in the final minute to lead the Dallas Mavericks to their ninth victory in 10 home games, a 108-98 decision Tuesday night that saddled the San Antonio Spurs with their fourth straight NBA loss and eighth in their last nine games.

Harper scored five of Dallas' last seven points and stole the ball with 53 seconds left to set up a basket by Rolando Blackman that increased the Mavericks' lead to 99-95.

Russets take Kellogg's place atop A-2 ratings

By The Associated Press

For the third time in five weeks, there's a new No. 1 team in Class A-2 of Idaho high school boys' basketball.

Shelley, which ran its season record to 4-1 last week with victories over Madison of Rexburg and American Falls, supplanted Kellogg in the Associated Press poll of sportswriters and broadcasters this week. The Russets moved up after last week's No. 1 team, Kellogg, fell from the undefeated ranks with a 47-45 loss to Sandpoint.

The other division leaders remained the same. Metlak and Layman were near-unanimous choices in Classes A-1 and A-3, while Genesee held on to its lead over Shoshone by a narrow margin in A-4.

In A-2, the Russets picked up just three of the 12 first-place votes cast and only 43 of a possible 60 points, but edged 3-1 Kellogg, with five first-place votes and 37 points. St. Maries, 3-1, moved up from fourth to third despite losing to Lewiston, while two teams — 4-0 Jerome and 4-0 Soda Springs — made their first appearances in the rankings this season. No. 2 Marsh Valley of Arimo, now 1-1, and No. 3 Snake River of Moreland, 2-1, fell out of the rankings after sustaining their first losses of the season last week.

In A-1, 3-0 Meridian got 11 of 12 first-place votes and 55 of a possible 60 points to retain its season-long lead in the No. 1 position. Boise and Rigby, both 3-0, remained in the second and third spots, followed by Borah of Boise, which moved up from No. 5 after improving its record to 3-0 with a victory over cross-town rival Capital. Minico High of Rupert, last week's No. 4 team, dropped a notch despite winning its second game of the season last weekend.

Boys' basketball

Here's how the state's sportswriters and broadcasters ranked Idaho's high schools boys' basketball teams this week (first-place votes in parentheses):

Pistons hand Hawks first setback in Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — The Detroit Pistons didn't come to Atlanta with just a goal.

"We had no game plan except to come in here and play basketball," said Bill Laimbeer, who scored 28 points as Detroit beat the floundering Hawks 111-100 Tuesday night, ending the NBA season's last home unbreak streak.

Pro basketball

"They were 9-0 on their home court. Everyone else in the league had lost and we wanted to make sure they had lost one, too," said Laimbeer, who scored 14 points in the first quarter and scored on both ends of a double technical in the final minutes.

Laimbeer also grabbed 20 rebounds.

"We figured rebounding would be the key. They're second in the league and we're No. 4, so we figured if we could control the boards or hold our own, we had enough firepower to win," he said.

The Hawks, already missing guard Spud Webb with a knee injury he lost forward Dominique Wilkins to the flu. Wayne Rollins, Scott Hastings, John Koncak, Mike McGee and Randy Wittman all were ill but played. It showed as Atlanta scored only 11 points in the final quarter.

"We didn't have the extra energy we needed. Usually we are the team that has the extra spurt late in the game," said Atlanta's Cliff Levingston.

The Hawks' roster was cut further when Rollins, the starting center, and Detroit's Vinny Johnson were ejected for fighting in the second quarter, and Glenn Rivers fouled out in the final period.

After an explosive first period, which ended at 39-39 in a desperation three-point play by Hastings, Detroit led most of the way. The Pistons were ahead 70-62 at the half, but Atlanta tied it at 78-78. Then Laimbeer's baseline jumper gave Detroit the lead for good.

Thomas wound up with 18 points for Detroit. Adrian Danley added 16 and Rick Mahorn 14.

Rivers led Atlanta with 24 points. Kevin Willis had 21 and Levingston 18, 10 of them in the first quarter.

Akeem Olatujun led the Rockets with 24 points and 20 rebounds, while Ralph Sampson, had 22 points and 13 rebounds.

The Suns, who also got 20 points from Alvan Adams, scored 10 straight points early in the fourth quarter to cut Houston's lead to 87-81. After Houston led 97-86 with 5:06 remaining, the Suns outscored the Rockets 10-1.

Houston dominated the early play, leading 16-9 midway through the first quarter. The Suns battled back to lead 28-26 entering the second.

Sampson sparked Houston's second-quarter performance, scoring 14 points in the final seven minutes.

He gave the Rockets a 57-46 advantage at the half.

Chicago 99
New Jersey 98

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Brown's last-second tip-in of a missed shot by Michael Jordan, who led Chicago with 41 points, gave the Bulls a 99-98 NBA victory over the New Jersey Nets on Tuesday night.

Jordan, who went over the 40-point mark for the 14th time in 22 games this season, took an in-bounds pass with six seconds left and drove the lane. His shot missed, but the 6-foot-9, 250-pound Brown was there to tip in the rebound.

Leon Wood had given the Nets a 98-97 lead with two free throws with six seconds remaining after he stole the ball from John Paxson and drove the length of the court before being fouled.

The Bulls led 97-90 on a basket by Jordan with 3:57 left, but they didn't score again until Brown's game winner.

The Nets, who have lost 12 of their 13 road games this season, were led by Mike Gbinigidi with 24 points and Buck Williams with 20. Steve Colter with 14 points and Brown with 10 were the only Chicago players in double figures besides Jordan, the NBA scoring leader with an average of 37.7 points per game.

The Nets had as many as nine points on four occasions, the last at 77-68, but the Bulls rallied with an 11-1 spurt to gain a 79-78 advantage with 14 seconds left in the third period.

The Bulls scored nine of the first-11 points of the fourth for a 88-82 lead that held — up — until — Woods' — free throws.

Boston 107
New York 96

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Bird, sinking a 29-point shot, punched his 29th points into the first three quarters and Kevin McHale also scored 29 Tuesday night as the Boston Celtics defeated the New York Knicks 107-96 in a tight-interrupted NBA game.

Knicks center Patrick Ewing and Boston reserve center Greg Kile exchanged punches with 2:24 left in the second quarter. Neither player was hurt and Ewing was assessed a double personal foul.

Bird, hitting 11-18 from the field, also had nine assists and 10 rebounds. He made two of his three-point shots and converted another three-point play in the last 6:37 of the third quarter.

The Knicks, who trailed by 15 points in the second quarter, charged back with 10 straight points in the opening minutes of the third to pull within 64-61. But after an exchange of baskets, Robert Parish, who finished with 20, sank a foul-turnaround and Bird added six straight points for a 74-63 lead with 5:27 left in the quarter.

Gerald Wilkins led the Knicks with 23 points and Bill Cartwright added 22. Ewing scored 17 points and fouled out with 10 seconds left in the game.

LA Lakers 121
Cleveland 116

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Magic Johnson had 25 points, 14 assists and 11 rebounds to pace the Los Angeles Lakers to a 121-116 NBA victory Tuesday night over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar also scored 25 points and James Worthy clipped in with 22.

After a 59-59 halftime tie, Cleveland took a 73-66 lead on a stuff by Brad Daugherty with 8:38 remaining in the third quarter. The Lakers then outscored the Cavaliers 26-7 to take a 92-80 lead with 1:37 remaining in the quarter.

Worthy scored 10 points during the spurt and A.C. Green added 6.

The Lakers had five steals and five layups during the surge as they unleashed their vaunted running attack.

Los Angeles led 94-85 entering the final quarter and led by as many as 16 points on two occasions in the fourth quarter, the last time at 117-101 on a Byron Scott basket with 4:20 left.

Cleveland was led by John Williams with 22 points, Mel Turpin with 20 and Phil Hubbard and Ron Harper with 16 each.

Ex-NBA star Drew, banned for drug use, arrested again

ATLANTA (AP) — Former NBA All-Star John Drew, banned from the league for repeated drug problems, was free on $1,000 bond Tuesday after his second drug-related arrest in less than three months.

Atlanta police spokesman Kevin Forier said Drew, 32, was one of 33 people arrested Friday night at a "known drug location" in southeast Atlanta. Drew was charged with one count of criminal solicitation for the purchase of cocaine.

Forier said Drew attempted to buy cocaine from an undercover police officer.

He said Drew is free on $1,000 bond and has a trial scheduled for Jan. 16.

Drew was arrested in Fulton County on Oct. 2 on two counts of selling cocaine and one count of possessing the drug.

In January, the NBA banned Drew after he entered a hospital in Salt Lake City. The league said that constituted Drew's third entry into a drug treatment center, which under NBA policy required him to be banned from the league.

The ban is for life, but is reviewable after two years.

Drew played for the Atlanta Hawks from 1974 until 1982, twice making the NBA All-Star team and never averaging less than 18.5 points per game.

The Hawks traded Drew, guard Freeman Williams and $1 million in cash to the Utah Jazz in 1982 for the negotiating rights to Dominique Wilkins.

Soon after the trade, Drew underwent eight weeks of drug rehabilitation at a Maryland clinic, after which he said he had been abusing cocaine since 1977.

Thurl Bailey's tip-in of a missed free throw with 25 seconds remaining put Utah up 106-100, but the Bucks hit six free throws down the stretch, the final two by Moses Malone with three seconds remaining, to tie the score.

Karl Malone had 24 points and Tripukeca finished with 21 for Utah, which opened a six-game road trip.

The Bucks beat Philadelphia 103-91 Tuesday night, handing the 76ers their third straight NBA loss.

Milwaukee opened the third quarter with a 10-3 run with Cummings scoring eight of his points.

The Bucks, whose largest lead was 67-47 at 7:58 of the third quarter, opened the fourth with a 6-2 run for an 82-68 lead at the 10:20 mark.

Pierce had 10 of his 24 points in the final period.

The Bucks jumped out to a 7-0 lead in the first two minutes of the game and never trailed.

The 76ers, who were led by Charles Barkley's 27 points, narrowed the lead to two points twice in the first quarter. The last time was 15-13 with 3:51 left in the period.

Dallas 101
San Antonio 98

DALLAS (AP) — Derek Harper scored 22 points, and made a key steal in the final minute to lead the Dallas Mavericks to their ninth victory in 10 home games, a 101-98 decision Tuesday night that saddled the San Antonio Spurs with their fourth straight NBA loss and eighth in their last nine games.

Harper scored five of Dallas' last seven points and stole the ball with 53 seconds left to set up a basket by Rolando Blackman that increased the Mavericks' lead to 99-95.

Milwaukee opened the third quarter with a 10-3 run with Cummings scoring eight of his points.

The Bucks, whose largest lead was 67-47 at 7:58 of the third quarter, opened the fourth with a 6-2 run for an 82-68 lead at the 10:20 mark.

Pierce had 10 of his 24 points in the final period.

The Bucks jumped out to a 7-0 lead in the first two minutes of the game and never trailed.

The 76ers, who were led by Charles Barkley's 27 points, narrowed the

Russets take Kellogg's place atop A-2 ratings

By The Associated Press

For the third time in five weeks, there's a new No. 1 team in Class A-2 of Idaho high school boys' basketball.

Shelley, which ran its season record to 4-1 last week with victories over Madison of Rexburg and American Falls, supplanted Kellogg in the Associated Press poll of sportswriters and broadcasters this week. The Russets moved up after last week's No. 1 team, Kellogg, fell from the undefeated ranks with a 47-45 loss to Sandpoint.

The other division leaders remained the same. Meridian and Lapwai were near-unanimous choices in Classes A-1 and A-3, while Genesee held on to its lead over Shoshone by a narrow margin in A-4.

In A-2, the Russets picked up just three of the 12 first-place votes cast and only 43 of a possible 60 points, and edged 3-1 Kellogg, with five first-place votes and 57 points. St. Maries, 3-1, moved up from fourth to third despite losing to Lewiston, while two teams — 4-0 Jerome and 4-0 Soda Springs — made their first appearances in the rankings this season. No. 2 Marsh Valley of Arimo, now 1-1, and No. 3 Snake River of Moreland, 2-1, fell out of the rankings after sustaining their first losses of the season last week.

In A-1, 3-0 Meridian got 11 of 12 first-place votes and 53 of a possible 60 points to retain its season-long lead in the No. 1 position. Boise and Rigby, both 3-0, remained in the second and third spots, followed by Borah of Boise, which moved up from No. 5 after improving its record to 3-0 with a victory over cross-town rival Capital. Minico High of Rupert, last week's No. 4 team, dropped a notch despite winning its second game of the season last weekend.

Twins fail to sign Morris; he'll talk to Yanks next

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jack Morris and the Minnesota Twins were unable to reach agreement on a contract Tuesday, and Morris' agent said the free-agent right-hander would now turn his attention to the New York Yankees.

Morris, who has won more games than any pitcher in the 1980s, offered the Twins two-, three- and four-year contract deals but the Twins rejected all proposals in an afternoon meeting, Richard Moss said.

Morris is scheduled to meet with representatives of the Yankees in New York on Thursday.

Baseball

Moss said he proposed a two-year contract for exactly the same salary as that of left-hander Fernando Valenzuela of the Los Angeles Dodgers, $1.85 million in 1987, and $2.05 million in 1988. Or, Moss said, Morris was willing to sign a three-year deal for $1.8 million a year or a four-year deal for $1.7 million a year.

"We said, and we believe, that those proposals are reasonable,"

Moss said. "We said that if there was any disagreement, we were willing to have the salary determined by impartial arbitration. We indicated over and over again that all we wanted to get was a fair and proper agreement."

"In the meeting in (Twins' owner Carl) Pohlad's office, (Twins' executive vice president) Andy MacPhail live-said we couldn't agree to that. The response we got was that anything we said was unacceptable," Moss said.

The Twins were the first team Morris met with after announcing he would choose from among four teams — the Twins, Yankees, Philadelphia Phillies and California Angels.

Morris, 31, who has a career record of 144-94 in nine seasons with the Detroit Tigers, said "I totally expected to sign a contract."

Morris, who was 21-8 last year, told the Tigers last week that he would not sign with them. When asked if Tuesday's developments would lead him to consider returning to the Tigers, he said, "It doesn't change a thing."

Morris, who was born and raised in St. Paul, had said all along that he wanted to return to the Twin Cities area.

"I think you all know my view on the Minnesota area," he said. "That will never change. New York is also a very good ball club. If I can get the chance to play for a winner I will."

"If I can display one emotion, it would be disappointment," MacPhail said. "There is no dispute to the talent that Jack Morris displays as a pitcher. We had the greatest intention in adding Jack Morris to the pitching staff."

Judge sends Hoyt to prison for 45 days for drug smuggling

SAN DIEGO (AP) — LaMarr Hoyt, who won the Cy Young Award in 1983, drew a 45-day term on a drug conviction Tuesday from a United States magistrate who could have put the Padres right-hander in prison for up to two years.

"It has nothing to do with him being a baseball star," Magistrate Roger McKee said of the lesser sentence. "As far as I'm concerned, this is the appropriate punishment."

Hoyt must surrender to federal marshals Jan. 5 to start serving the sentence, which also includes five years probation, a $10,000 fine and forfeiture to the government of his $33,000 sports car.

As part of his probation, Hoyt must undergo random drug testing, drug and alcohol treatment, and continue the psychiatric counseling he began after his Oct. 29 release on bond from jail.

"Assistant U.S. Attorney Pat Swan was visibly upset with McKee's decision, saying it violated a plea bargain in which Hoyt agreed to spend at least 60 days in prison. Hoyt pleaded guilty Nov. 13 to two misdemeanor drug counts, each carrying a maximum one-year term.

LaMARR HOYT

Swan, who had argued for a four-month sentence, said McKee's decision for a shorter term violated, the plea bargain and put the case "back to square one."

The prosecutor's attempt to revive a felony drug complaint against Hoyt also was rejected by McKee, who dismissed the charge in accordance with the plea agreement.

"The law is clear. The judge had the right to do what he did," said defense attorney Howard Frank.

Before the sentence was handed down, Hoyt spoke in remorseful tones to McKee.

"I've let a lot of people down with this situation," he said. "It's not something I'm very proud of. I'm very sorry for what I've done. I know what I did was wrong."

Hoyt, signed through 1989 to a contract paying him about $1 million a year, admitted in his plea that he tried to smuggle nearly 500 Valium tranquilizers and propoxyphene painkiller tablets across the U.S.-Mexico border.

Tampa police deny Gooden's charges about harassment

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A Tampa police official Tuesday labeled "totally untrue" Dwight Gooden's claim that officers were "laying for" him when they arrested the New York Mets pitcher during a weekend scuffle and placed him in wrist and ankle restraints.

"I am not aware of any policemen laying for him," Tampa Police Col. Earl Williams said. "He was handcuffed after several minutes of combat with police officers. He was a violent offender."

Williams reviewed records of the Saturday night incident and said at one point Gooden, 22, took off a gold necklace, stuffed it in his pocket and took officers: "You're not going to take me anywhere."

Williams then stated, "The stage was set. He was ready to fight," according to Williams, who called the police action appropriate.

Gooden, 17-6 during the Mets' world championship season, was arrested on charges of battery on a police officer, resisting arrest with violence, disorderly conduct and traffic infractions.

"The officer had no idea who it was when he was stopped on routine traffic violations," Williams said.

New MSU mentor eyes some changes

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — New Montana State University football coach Earle Solomonson, who led North Dakota State to two straight national titles, says he wants to continue his winning tradition in the Big Sky Conference.

"We're just excited about the new challenge," Solomonson said Tuesday. "There were a lot of things involved in coming to Montana State — the chance to move into a Division I-AA school that has had a tradition of being successful and being involved with people who know what it is to win."

College football

Solomonson, 39, a former North Dakota State assistant, compiled a 24-21 record as head coach. The Black Bears defeated South Dakota 27-7 Saturday for their third Division II title in four years.

He succeeds Dave Arnold, who won the NCAA Division I-AA national championship in 1984 but was fired this fall after his third losing season in four years. Arnold was 18-29 at MSU.

Solomonson, the 28th Bobcat coach and fourth coach in six years, was scheduled to be formally introduced at a news conference late Tuesday.

Speculation had swirled around Solomonson almost from the first day Arnold was fired Nov. 12. Solomonson never visited the MSU campus for an interview, but MSU officials made two trips to Fargo, N.D., to meet with him.

"We had a lot of success at Fargo in II — we won a couple of national titles in a row — but when I was contacted by Montana State and thought about it and we put a package together for all our people, I knew it was the right thing to do," Solomonson told a reporter earlier.

Solomonson said he had talked to Montana State athletic director Doug Fullerton about the job, and Fullerton was in Fargo on Sunday to offer the MSU job when Solomonson returned from the Division II title game in Florence, Ala.

The new MSU coach said he had played at North Dakota State Monday that he and four assistants coaches had "decided to go on to new things and new challenges."

Solomonson will be bringing coaches Lew Curry, Curt Jones, Tim Hermann and Kevin Donnelly with him.

At NDSU, Athletic Director Ade Spomer said he would begin the search for a new coach immediately, but no timetable had been set.

Solomonson said news that the Montana Board of Regents has mandated a 10 percent funding cut in athletics in the university system "was an area of concern."

"But we were assured the commitment to excellence would be there, and that came from Doug (Fullerton), as well as the president of the university (William Velez). We feel the commitment is there. We feel the people in Bozeman want a tremendous football program."

"The first priority for Solomonson and his staff will be to begin recruiting. North Dakota State's recruiting had been concentrated in Minnesota, Wisconsin and North Dakota, but 'we've got to immediately branch out,'" said Solomonson.

"Our No. 1 emphasis will be in the state with in-state athletes. Montana State is their university and will make a strong commitment to Minnesota, Wisconsin and North Dakota, but we've got to immediately branch out — to Seattle and the Denver area."

T.F. freshman Jones picked for BSC all-academic team

BOISE (AP) — Twin Falls' Todd Jones, a freshman wide receiver at Idaho State University, has been named to the Big Sky Conference's all-academic football team.

Jones earned a 3.92 grade point average in his major, arts and sciences, according to Big Sky Commissioner Nor Stephenson.

Montana State offensive tackle Don Leake has been named to the all-academic team for the fourth straight season.

The senior industrial arts major led the roster of 42 student-athletes announced by conference. Eighteen other players were repeat members of the squad.

To be eligible a nominee must have played in at least half his team's games, have a B or 3.0 average on a 4.0 scale career for the preceding academic year. Transfer students and freshmen must have at least one quarter or semester at their present schools.
