NATO envoy named special Iran counselor

Reagan picks Abshire to coordinate responses

By W. DALE NELSON
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, turning outside the White House for help in a time of political turmoil, named NATO Ambassador David Abshire on Friday to coordinate responses to probes of the Iran-Contra affair.

In giving a Cabinet-level post to Abshire, Reagan bypassed White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, who has been interviewed by congressional committees exploring arms sales to Iran and the transfer of proceeds to Nicaraguan rebels.

And on the eve of Reagan's departure for a weeklong vacation in California, a spokeswoman at Georgetown University Hospital said CIA Director William J. Casey "is fully conscious and able to sit up in a bedside chair" following surgery to remove a cancerous brain tumor.

At the White House, spokesman Mark Weinberg said Abshire, 60, will report directly to the president, not to Regan. The spokesman said the new counselor would "coordinate with senior members of the White House staff," including the chief of staff.

with Don Regan and he told me when we first talked how anxious he was to see this separation. . . . Speaking to CBS-TV, Abshire called creation of the new post "a common sense solution to the management of a very difficult situation, so that there is no distraction at the White House from its major business—whether it is foreign policy, defense policy or domestic policy, at a very important time."

Some members of Congress have suggested that Regan should step down or be dismissed in the wake of disclosures of the clandestine arms sales and diversion of money to the Contra rebels.

In fact, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas reacted quickly to Friday's announcement of Abshire's appointment, calling it a signal that Regan should step down and to the American people that President Reagan is determined to stay on top of this controversy until it has been fully resolved."

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., vice chairman of the Intelligence Committee, said, "It's good that they're going to have one person in charge of things because virtually everything they need to know can be found out now at the White House. This appointment will save them from asking committees in Congress for a report which will tell them what they have in the White House." "I hope they will use Mr. Abshire's"

Story of a shootout in the sky told

Bullets and bombs precede fiery crash

By JOHN RICE
The Associated Press

AMMAN, Jordan — The cabin crew on Iraqi Airways Flight 163 had just cleared away the lunch trays when a man holding two grenades charged into the first-class compartment. Bullets flew, two explosions were heard and the plane eventually crashed, killing at least 62 people.

"It was a battle," Salim Abdel Dado, a Jordanian passenger told The Associated Press in an interview Friday.

"You can't imagine . . . nine pistols shooting in an aircraft at 28,000 feet, two grenades and fire," he said at his home in Amman the day after the plane crashed in northern Saudi Arabia.

"God gave me two new lives," he said, referring to his survival of the

Five groups claim responsibility

By The Associated Press

DHARRAN, Saudi Arabia — Five groups claimed responsibility Friday for the attempted hijacking of an Iraqi airliner that crashed, killing at least 62 people, after grenades exploded during a shootout with sky marshals.

There remained conflicting accounts of what happened, how many people were on the plane, the number of hijackers and the number of people killed.

One claim made in Beirut, which was at odds with passengers' accounts and other claims of responsibility, said the plane was forced down by Saudi air force after hijackers took control of it, and that many people died when Saudi forces stormed the plane.

A Saudi official said either the pilot or the co-pilot died shortly before the crash, but said he did not know the circumstances.

The Iraqi Airways Boeing 737 reportedly split in two and burst into flames a half-mile from the desert airstrip at Arar, northern

'People's war' invoked

Philippine rebels scorn ties to U.S.

By ROBERT H. REID
The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — Rebels on Friday accused President Corazon Aquino of being subservient to foreign interests and called for a "people's war" as they celebrated the 18th anniversary of the Communist Party of the Philippines.

The party's central committee said the government's plan for ending Marxist insurgency "leaves unchallenged the continued role of U.S. imperialism" in the Philippines, a former American colony.

A cease-fire in the nearly 18-year-old rebellion has been in effect since Dec. 10. Government and rebel negotiators who worked out the truce are to meet Jan. 6 to begin substantive talks on ending the fighting, Asia's last major Communist insurgency.

A party statement also claimed that a draft for a new national constitution, completed in October by an Aquino-appointed commission, "reinstates the old fetters to the achievement of national liberation and democracy."

The Communist Party controls the rebel New People's Army, estimated to have 23,500 combatants.

Gen. Fidel V. Ramos, armed forces chief of staff, placed the Philippine military on full alert for Friday's anniversary celebrations. A military statement said the order was "to ensure that we will not fall into the same fate suffered by Vietnam, Cambodia and Nicaragua."

Gen. Ramon Montano, commander of the Capital Region, told state television there had been several rebel meetings and rallies to commemorate the party's founding but none could be considered a violation of the 60-day cease-fire.

Because of the truce, Friday's celebrations were the first to take place before reports.

At a rally near Orton on the Bataan peninsula about 30 miles west of Manila, between 50 and 70 guerrillas raised their rifles as a speaker read a manifesto declaring the Aquino government "anti-nationalist, anti-people and pro-imperialist."

Filipino reporters who attended the rally said the estimated 2,000 people in attendance sang the internationalist, the Communist anthem, and other revolutionary songs.

"The Filipino people's problems can only be solved through a people's war," the manifesto said. "Let us defend and protect the revolutionary movement and ex-

Active-Chinese press takes aim at student demonstrators

By JIM ABRAMS
The Associated Press

PEKING — University students who've taken to the streets to demand democratic reform have also insisted on more press coverage of their movement. They're getting the ink, but it's an orchestrated onslaught of criticism.

For the fourth straight day Friday, the People's Daily and other major newspapers carried front-page editorials extolling political stability. The articles hall the leadership of the Communist Party and warn students they will suffer if China plunges again into the kind of chaos wrought by the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution.

The commentaries demonstrate both how seriously the government is taking student protests in Shanghai and at least eight other cities this month, and the formidable power of the official press in directing public opinion.

The press, like other aspects of Chinese life, has become more open in recent years. Airplane crashes are reported on the same day, and major cases of crime and corruption are divulged, sometimes in detail by the many tabloids on newstands.

The Shanghai demonstrations have been described in detail from the largely critical official point of view. After student protests last year, the press carried editorials calling for stability but no specific mention of the demonstrations.

The main role of the 5-million circulation People's Daily, the voice of the all-powerful Communist Party, and other major dailies is still to inform and instruct the nation on the party line.

Dong Ligu, a senior party official and former head of the propaganda department, said at a recent conference that a major function of papers is to report "experiences and paragon to bring out their exemplary and guiding roles."

Propagating the party line, principles and policies is a duty of all party paper journalists, he said.

Even occasional articles on the execution of criminals or the exposures of economic scams are meant as warnings or lessons. Crimes that don't lend themselves to moral instruction usually don't get printed.

Hu Yaobang, the head of the Communist Party, has said newspapers should print 80 percent good and 20 percent bad news.

Those in power who want more information about controversial issues or about what the Western press is reporting about China must turn to the Reference News, internal publications of limits to most Chinese.

Student activists, in demanding "press freedom" during the recent demonstrations, spoke mainly of a desire for a press that would give them information rather than lectures.

"The issue is mainly freedom of the press, that's what the students really want," said one student marcher. "They think that reporting should be more accurate and complete."

Some newspaper makers have agreed. "A free press can ensure people the right to criticize individuals or the government and voice their ideas," said the China Legal News, which despite its prosaic name is one of the more lively Chinese publications.

While press freedom is a long way off, some individuality has crept into Chinese journalism. The Guangming Daily, considered a paper for intellectuals, is slightly more positive on such issues as democratic reform than other national dailies like the Workers' daily.

Basques give heartfelt calls of 'Ori!' during festive holiday ball

By CHARLES HILLINGER
Los Angeles Times

BOISE — "Gabon on bat eta urte Bari Aai," everyone shouted in the packed auditorium as Jim Jausoro's Basque band struck up the first tune at the 48th annual Sheepherders' Ball at Euzkaldun-Etxea, America's largest Basque club.

Five hundred Basques were greeting one another with heartfelt "Merry Christmas and Happy New Year" in the ancient language of their forefathers, a language with no linguistic relatives, so old and so different from all others that its origins have been lost in antiquity.

For Boise's 10,000 Basques, the largest Basque community in America, the Sheepherders' Ball held each Christmas week is the biggest social event of the year. Band leader Jausoro's first song was "Aitor Aitor Mutill Etxera" (Come, Come, Come Back Home), a favorite Christmas carol. The song is about a mother and father calling their sheepherder son back home from America to the Basque country of Spain and France for the Christmas holidays.

Colorful banners from the four Spanish Basque provinces and the three French Basque provinces in the Pyrenees hung from the ceiling of Boise's big Basque Center in the shadows of Idaho's capitol.

A giant Basque flag, red field with green X and white cross, hung from a wall, a huge map showing the seven Basque provinces: Araba, Benaarra, Bizkatala, Zuberoa, Gipuzkoa, Nafarroa and Zuberoa adorned another wall.

Basques had come to the Sheepherders' Ball, as they do each year, from throughout Idaho, Nevada, Oregon and Utah, a few from as far away as California and Hawaii.

Bobbie of us drove over in a van from the Salt Lake area," explained Jim Sangronis, 25, an engineer from Midvale, Utah, son of a sheepherder. "We came for the good time, for the dancing, to see old friends we haven't seen since the last Sheepherders' Ball, to get together with other Basque 'cousins' we haven't seen in years. There is nothing like this in Salt Lake City."

Sangronis and his friends drove 350 miles just to go to the ball. They arrived a few hours before the dance. They would leave the next morning to return to Utah.

It was the liveliest, noisiest, happiest, most free-spirited ball imaginable. First the widely acclaimed Bojje Basque Oinkari dancers got everybody in the mood. The Oinkari dancers (meaning people who do something with their feet) have performed throughout America and in the Basque Country of France and Spain as well.

For a solid hour non-stop the 80-member troop in colorful costumes did a series of centuries-old Basque dances accompanied by rousing cheers, claps, whistles and shouts from the crowd in the auditorium.

"Ori, Ori," shouted the dancers and the spectators. "Ori, Ori" means "that's the way to go."

Dancers spun, kicked, climbed castanets as they took each of the groups. The haunting sound of the listiu, the ancient Basque flute, brought somber moods. Next came the traditional auctioning of a lamb. The same animal was auctioned appointment to make as complete and as public a report as soon as possible, Leary said in a telephone interview from his home in Middleburg, Ill.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., vice chairman of the Senate committee established to investigate the controversy, praised the appointment as "an excellent move by the president, because many of us felt that it was important to have someone who was not involved with the policy making at the beginning of this policy."

Dole and others had suggested the appointment of a special counselor to deal with the Iran matter, leaving Regan to oversee other White House activities.

Regan, who knew about the arms sales but says he was not aware of the diversion of funds to Nicaragua, has vowed to remain on the job. The president has not indicated any plans to resign.

The Georgetown University Hospital statement of Friday was the first significant departure from a series of statements which merely described Casey's condition as stable following the Dec. 18 operation.

Payes said in a prepared statement that Casey remained in stable condition. Asked whether Casey was able to talk, she said, "This is all we have so far."

A source in the intelligence community, however, said Casey remains "in very bad shape and is recovering very slowly" from the surgery.

"It appears that he is retaining only a few motor functions," said the source, who spoke only on the condition of anonymity. "You have to be very careful when considering this."

That he is a 75-year-old man who has just had an extremely serious cancer operation.

In announcing Abshire's appointment, the White House said the ambassador "will head a team that will coordinate White House activities in all aspects of the Iran matter."

Both the House and Senate have named select committees to focus on the Iran-Contra affair when the 100th Congress convenes in the week starting Jan. 4.

one who would come in and who could immerse himself in all the details of this Iran controversy — the dates, when the arms went, who said what on the radio."

"I really is a detail job and the rest of the White House staff, which was not involved in the controversy, has got to get on with the State of the Union and we simply don't have the expertise," Buchanan added in an interview taped for the Cable News Network's "Evans and Novak" show.

"This is the president's man," Buchanan said. "He's going to look into it and he's loyal to the president of the United States. But he's going to provide this information. He's got to be the president's man if you're going to work with the president's communications chief, his press secretary and his chief of staff."

Weinberg said the president spoke with Abshire by telephone shortly before making the announcement.

Abshire has been U.S. representative on the Council of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization since 1983.

Before that he was president of Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, which he helped to found in 1962.

several times bringing $3,400 for the Basque Club's charities in coming months.

"Proud people, aren't they?" mused auctioneer Dick Davis, 46, of Emmett, one of the few non-Basques at the ball.

After that the sheepherders and descendants of Basques danced with as much enthusiasm and exuberance as the Olankari dancers, leaping, kicking, clapping, throwing their arms into the air to the spirited music.

It was the late Jon Ashabal, who had one of the biggest sheep outfits in the West, who came up with the idea to have a Christmas dance for Basque sheepherders. The year was 1928.

"When I was 8 years old I went to the first Sheepherders Ball and I haven't missed but one or two since," said Ramon Ysursa, 67, an elderly man wearing a red trapella (Basque beret).

pot, selling Basque sausages wrapped in hot dog rolls for the Basque Club's charities.

In 1928, recalled Ysursa, "99 percent of the Basque people in Boise worked with the sheep. The men were sheepherders out on the mountainside, and the women ran the boardinghouses for the sheepherders when they came to town on occasional visits for a good Basque meal, for a day or two of rest."

During the early years of the Sheepherders Ball the sheepherders were rounded up and driven into town for the big event with a few less fortunate sheepherders left tending the flocks.

"The sheepherders would shower and they would go to the dance. At the time they would get all the news from the old country, meet other sheepherders wearing a red trapella (Basque beret)."

Ysursa manned a steaming chorizo of the House for three terms before retiring that post and a member of the House 17 years.

At midnight, two hours before the party ended, Esperanza Gollanda, 54, whose husband was a sheepherder, started preparing Berakitz Sopá — strong garlic soup, the traditional nighttime for the Sheepherders Ball.

A final playing of the popular "Dancing Dron" (We're getting together and having a good time), then the celebrants said their goodbyes, wished one another "Gorbon on bat eta ure Bar Asi" and headed for their cars and pickup trucks parked along the icy, snow-blanketed Boise streets in the crisp 15-degree air.

The death toll was thought to be the highest in a hijacking or attempted hijacking in the history of air piracy.

Anonymous telephone callers in Beirut claiming to speak for five terrorist factions all claimed responsibility for the action.

One caller claimed responsibility for Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, a fundamentalist Shiite and security man — and said 62 people died.

ly about a two-hour flight to Amman. He said the pilot announced the airliner would be cruising at 28,000 feet.

Both Abdel Dado and former Jordanian Interior Minister Sulaiman Arar told the AP the flight's first half-hour was uneventful.

Abdel Dado said he glanced at his watch after lunch. It was 12:50 p.m. when the trouble began.

"Suddenly I see and hear a young man come forward with his hands around two grenades," he shouted.

Both men said the young man, chased by some men, waved the grenades above his head as he rushed forward.

Abdel Dado, who sat in a second-row aisle seat, described the gre-ned as pear-shaped plastic devices. Arar, sitting in front of Dado by the window, said they appeared to be about the size of cigarette packs.

"One of the security guards in the economy section shot him in the right shoulder," Abdel Dado said.

That was the first of what he said were "more than 100 shots over four or five minutes."

Idaho statistics show rise in illegitimate births in '85

BOISE (AP) — A recent survey shows that the rate of illegitimate births rose sharply in Idaho in 1985, according to a report by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

The report, published in 1986, shows that the rate of illegitimate births in Idaho rose from 17.7 percent in 1984 to 19.2 percent in 1985. This is the highest rate in the state since 1979, when it was 18.5 percent.

The report also shows that the rate of illegitimate births in Idaho is higher than in most other states. In 1985, the rate in Idaho was 19.2 percent, compared to 18.5 percent in Nevada, 18.1 percent in Oregon, and 17.8 percent in Utah.

Court OKs settlement statements as limited evidence in civil actions

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Supreme Court has approved a limited use of statements made in settlement of lawsuits as evidence in civil trials. The court said that such statements are not required to be given in court.

The court said in a ruling handed down Friday, "A trial court may admit evidence of settlement negotiations when contrary testimony has been given at trial, but the court is not required to do so."

Both state and federal law prohibit as evidence in civil trials the use of settlement offers to prove liability or challenge the invalidity or amount of a claim.

But the court's ruling deals only with whether to allow statements from a settlement offer that impeaches comments made during trial.

"Some commentators believe that allowing impeachment could defeat the policy of encouraging settlements," the court said, adding that others think determining the truth must take priority over settlements.

In allowing limited use of statements made in settlement offers, the court said, the trial judge must weigh the value of the evidence against the risk of the jury improperly using the evidence to evaluate the merits of a claim.

The ruling stemmed from a lawsuit filed by Howard Davidson, doing business as D&E Construction, against Beco Construction Co. and owner Doyle Beck.

According to court records, Beco Construction Co. owed D&E Construction money, and Beco contended the other company had agreed to erase the debt in exchange for a tractor.

However, Davidson contended that an agreement was made to repay the approximate $10,000 debt with monthly payments, according to court records.

However, in a settlement offer Beco Construction said that an offer had been made to settle the debt with a tractor, but said the offer had been refused, the court said.

The court affirmed the decision of Seventh District Judge Reynold George to find Beco Construction liable for damages, but sent the case back to George with instructions to remove Beck from personal liability.

Commerce director Hawkins seeking support for a $400,000 budget hike

LEWISTON (AP) — Getting a price tag of $600,000 with the unanimous vote out of a state legislature is nearly impossible, especially when it involves spending money.

But Jim Hawkins, new director of the Idaho Department of Commerce, hopes to get all 126 state legislators to support his request for a $400,000 supplemental appropriation. It would triple the department's current budget.

"I'm looking for a unanimous vote, and that's tough," Hawkins conceded. But legislators statewide ran campaigns pledging to provide adequate funding for economic development and education, he said.

"I'm just there to support their program," he said.

The program would have a total price tag of $600,000 with the supplemental appropriation, and cost somewhere around $1.5 million for the next fiscal year, which starts July 1. Details are being worked out, but we will only ask for what we feel is justified," he said.

One staff person is employed full time on attracting the Superconducting Super Collider, a multi-billion dollar project, to eastern Idaho. Success may hinge on whether President Reagan throws his support behind the project in his State of the Union address next month, Hawkins said.

Hawkins said he can't imagine either of his budget requests being turned down by the Legislature, which is considered to be substantially more moderate than one year ago.

Even Sen. James Risch, R-Boise, president pro tem of the Idaho Senate, jumped on the bandwagon. Hawkins said, "I'm excited about Risch because he ran on education and economic development," he said.

Hawkins said he doesn't want to commit himself this early to a specific budget request for next year. First, he needs the supplemental money to hire additional staff to help develop an overall plan. That plus other activities and advertising will start the process of bringing in new business.

It will involve "tremendous traveling on my part," Hawkins said. "I really consider this department as the marketing and sales arm of the state of Idaho."

Panel begun to screen malpractice suits faces huge backlog of cases

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A State Department of Business Regulation panel, created to screen mounting court caseloads of malpractice lawsuits, now has found itself facing a huge backlog, officials say.

In 1985, the Legislature passed a law requiring the department to establish the committee, which consists of a doctor, a lawyer and a lay person. However, the panel did not begin to screen malpractice cases until this year.

Following his appointment in August, David Robinson, director of the Division of Professional Licensure for the Department of Business Regulation, ordered the reviews to begin.

He said when he set up a procedure to hear the cases, the backlog numbered between 100 and 150 cases. But it has continued to grow, with an average of 30 new cases filed each month, "far more than anyone ever expected."

The panel's current budget is less than $83,000 following a state-ordered 6 percent reduction. That does not come close to meeting the needs, said Robinson.

He said he will ask the Legislature to boost the budget to $134,000 for the coming year, $40,000 more than originally appropriated for the hearings.

"Those hearings are expensive, at least $400 for each one. We are currently subsidizing the pre-litigation hearings by cutting from other parts of the division," Robinson said.

The pre-litigation screening panels began hearing cases from the backlog Nov. 17.

The division schedules two hearings a day, five days a week, in an effort to whittle away at the backlog, said Robinson. But with 30 new cases being added each month and only 20 working days, they aren't making much headway.

The Utah Medical Association, the Utah State Bar, and attorneys for plaintiffs and defendants have all expressed concern about the backlog.

Jackson Howard, of the law firm Howard, Lewis and Petersen, Provo, was critical of the way the department has been handling the pre-litigation cases and defendants have all expressed concern about the backlog.

"It seems to me that the system is not working in a number of areas, all to the public's detriment," he said.

Howard said the department seems to be violating the pre-screening process because it is using administrative law judges, at least one of whom is a Department of Business Regulation employee.

The law calls for non-professionals to hear the cases — that is, people who are not permanent members of the panel.

Robinson acknowledged three administrative law judges are used to screen cases. He said they do have some state connection because they contract with the state to serve as administrative law judges for other state agencies.

He defended the use of judges as a means of getting cases heard and "aggressively attacking the backlog."

The law judges are not paid state salaries for their work with other agencies, he said, but are paid fees under the terms of their contracts. They are also paid a fee for their work on the malpractice cases.

Salt Lake pumping project is on schedule

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah's West Desert pumping project is on schedule to get all 126 state legislators to support his request for a $400,000 supplemental appropriation. It would triple the department's current budget.

The lake, fed by years of heavy spring runoff, has risen about 12 feet since 1982.

Feb. 26, 1987, is the goal for turning on the first pump. Whether that deadline is actually met depends on many factors, including equipment being delivered on time.

The first 80-ton pump engine already is on its way cross-country from Interoil-Rand Corp.'s Horseheads, N.Y., plant, and should arrive in Utah in about two to three weeks. Utah has ordered two of the massive engines, each capable of pumping 450 gallons per minute.

It will involve "tremendous traveling on my part," Hawkins said. "I really consider this department as the marketing and sales arm of the state of Idaho."

Dry winter could lead 1988 drought if pattern continues

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — An unusually dry fall and early winter has water management and weather officials beginning to worry about prospects for drought — not this coming year, but possibly in 1988.

In 1988, Utah has had an abundance of precipitation in the autumn and winter months and heavy snowfall has been a boon to mountain ski resorts and a plague to crews trying to keep roads open. And in 1983-84, spring runoff from that month triggered widespread flooding and mudslides causing hundreds of millions of dollars in damage.

Officials reflecting on the lack of snow at the beginning of this winter year — refer back to the last drought suffered by Utah. It began in the winter of 1976 and stretched into a dry and thirsty 1977.

And officials say it started just like the current dry spell: No snow in December and little in January.

The below average precipitation forecast for December, January, and February this year already has sparked some concern about the status of water resources for this summer. But more striking is the concern for 1988.

Following on the heels of several above normal water years, weather officials say there won't be anything to worry about this time around. But if the dry trend continues through 1987, the summer of 1988 could be a parched one.

"Due to all the dry years before this one, the groundwater is in good shape and the reservoirs are in good shape," said Meteorologist-In-Charge at Salt Lake International Airport, William Alder.

"I wouldn't call it a drought, but a dryer pattern," Alder said. "We're in much better shape to handle it with minimal problems."

Alder said levels of Utah's 800 reservoirs are the highest in many years. Even without the snowmelt that provides a large percentage of water for the state's culinary and agricultural uses, there is plenty of stored water and groundwater to pick up any slack come spring.

Of the water used in Utah, "60 to 65 percent comes from snowmelt," said Bob Hilbert, Salt Lake County Water Conservancy District general manager. "But Hilbert said that percentage can easily be drawn from another source for one season."

"A lack of snow so far this year is of concern to us, but it is relatively early in the water year and a storm that lasts one or two days can wipe out the deficit," he said.

The water year runs from October until September of the following year.

Farm officials already are monitoring the water situation this winter, with an eye towards 1988.

"What could be serious is if this happens two years in a row," said Utah Farm Bureau spokesman Vic Saunders.

"The last winter we had like this was in 1976-77 and it was January before it snowed," Saunders said.

"If we don't have snow by February, people will start to get lousy," he said. "(But) most people still think it's going to snow."

Asbestos in school's boiler room confirmed

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

GOODING — Cancer-causing asbestos was found in a boiler room at the Idaho School for the Deaf and Blind after two boilers were removed from a heating building in early September, according to a consultant overseeing asbestos removal on the campus.

Industrial Resources Inc., of Meridian, received that confirmation Oct. 13, nearly a month after samples were taken and 5 weeks after the boilers were removed.

While the investigations have been unable to confirm that the boilers or their brick foundations were contaminated with asbestos, the carcinogen's presence in the boiler room leads Industrial Resources' investigators to believe the materials were contaminated.

Special precautions must be taken while disposing of material contaminated by asbestos because its harmful particles become airborne and inhaled. The boilers were removed despite warnings that the asbestos might be present and before tests could be run to confirm those suspicions.

Investigators said contamination appeared limited to the boiler room and immediate surroundings to the heating building, Steven Lee, an industrial hygienist with the National Institute of Occupational Health and Safety, said low-level asbestos exposure did not represent the direct threat of cancer. Lee said that when asbestos is inhaled in greater quantities, it increases chances of contracting cancer five times.

The site has since been cleaned up, on Oct. 25, and neither the EPA nor the U.S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration has detected any remaining asbestos.

But ongoing investigations are seeking to determine whether procedures for removing the boilers were violated.

Neither Industrial Resources nor the EPA has been able to trace where the contaminated materials were disposed.

Harry Beaulieu, senior scientist for Industrial Resources, said lab tests and microscopic tests confirmed there was asbestos residue inside the boiler room and on the grounds directly outside the building.

Lab results were returned following the samples being gathered at the site Sept. 21 and 22, about 2 months after a subcontractor, White Heating and Plumbing, of Twin Falls, apparently removed the boilers without authorization, Beaulieu said.

"The plumbing contractor just decided on their own to do their own removal," said Beaulieu, whose company directed all asbestos removal at ISDB. "Before we knew it, the plumber had ripped it out without our approval."

Steve White, owner of White Heating and Plumbing, declined to comment on construction at the school.

Industrial Resources, the EPA and OSHA were each tipped in mid-September by a contractor at the site to the alleged mishandling of the boilers and their brick foundations. Investigators from the three organizations said it was difficult to "piece together" what happened, because the boilers were apparently removed before the tips.

An EPA asbestos specialist, Al Odmarr, said he was unable to confirm during his investigation that asbestos was present. But he didn't contact Beaulieu about the problem until Sept. 25, 3 days after Industrial Resources gathered its samples.

Odmarr said he has performed no tests to determine health risks to students or workers at the school. The heating building, where the boilers were removed, lies about 300 yards from the populated campus and is closed off for construction work.

Neither Industrial Resources nor the EPA has been able to trace where the contaminated materials were disposed.

EPA's investigation is continuing.

OSHA's investigation was closed after no evidence of asbestos was found in mid-November, a spokesman said.

The brick foundations, measuring about 2 cubic yards, were suspected of being contaminated with asbestos because the material had insulated the boilers and piping, Beaulieu said. "This was one of those things where we were assuming there was asbestos inside," Beaulieu said.

Neither Industrial Resources nor the EPA has been able to trace where the bricks were disposed of, but part of one boiler that wasn't contaminated was found in a Gooding landfill.

The two coal-burning boilers in question, and one that was removed later, were replaced with ones that burn natural gas, according to Don Ormond, of the general contractor Ormond Builders of Idaho Falls.

But before the boilers were removed, concerns were raised at a monthly construction progress meeting that the boilers should not be removed before tests were run to see whether asbestos was present.

"There was some discussion relative to concerns we were discussing to taking out the coal fire boilers," said project architect Vic Hestford. "There was some concern the bases might contain asbestos."

He said representatives of Ormond Builders and White Plumbing were present at the meeting. However, Ormond said no construction meetings he attended included warnings against removing the boilers.

Industrial Resources' on-site investigator Brian Newbill, an industrial hygienist, said he pieced together an account from construction workers at ISDB of how the boilers were removed.

Newbill said that White Plumbing employees apparently dismantled the boilers the first weekend in September and demolished the brick foundations with sledgehammers.

The materials were then carried out of the heating building in wheelbarrows and carted away in a truck, Newbill said.

"It shouldn't have happened. It still blows me away," Newbill said. "The attitude it should be... See ASBESTOS on Page A5

Postal workers cheerful despite yule deluge

This year there was a 10% increase in mail volume over that handled during last year's Christmas season

By CLAUDINE CHAMBERLAIN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Christmas is celebrated as a time for wishing cheer and good tidings to relatives, loved ones, and friends far away — a custom made possible by local postal workers.

Starting about 2 weeks before Christmas Day, the number of pieces of mail handled at the Twin Falls Post Office increases about 30 percent, said Delivery Supervisor Mike Dulin.

Since the Christmas season began, 4,331,765 pieces of mail have been handled, Dulin said. Mail at this time of year, though, increases for more reasons than just Christmas cheer, he added.

"Businesses do a lot of advertising through the mail during Christmas," he said.

Though mail sees a 30-percent increase during the season, parcel post goes through a 300-percent increase. Ten extra hours a day have been spent this season to make sure local families get their Christmas presents on time, he said.

One thing that has really made a difference in Christmas delivery this year was the lack of snow, Dulin said. "Carriers have been able to handle the increase better because they don't have had weather to deal with," he said.

There was also a 10-percent increase from the amount of mail handled during last year's Christmas season, Dulin said.

Christmas tidings are being sent from the Twin Falls Post Office to many different places in the world, but not the North Pole. Dulin said about 30 "letters to Santa" were received this season, which are not answered by post office employees.

A group of local people had been interested in answering the letters to Santa received by the post office, but did not follow up on their offer, Dulin said. This service will probably be available next year, he added.

Christmas spirit helps the mail carriers overcome the increase in duty, Dulin said. "They enjoy doing it. Sometimes they'll get cookies or other treats, which they really appreciate. It gives them a sense of knowing that someone cares," he said.

Mail carrier Lora Bird agreed. "The mail load is heavy, but I still enjoy it," she said this week. "It's the spirit that makes it worthwhile. It's fun to drop off a parcel and wish the people a merry Christmas."

Carrier Art Weisman, who has been with the post office for 28 years, said that before United Parcel Services began operating locally, the mail load was even heavier.

"Before UPS, we used to have

'Carriers have been able to handle the increase better because they don't have bad weather to deal with.'

— Mike Dulin, delivery supervisor to rent trucks from the National Guard and Army Reserve to deliver packages," he said.

Weisman also agreed that Christmas is a special time to be delivering mail. "People are glad to get that kind of mail and are really friendly this time of year," he said.

Various changes around the post office itself helped to make this Christmas a more efficient one for mail carriers, Dulin said. Hours were longer since Memorial Day and the office was open for the last three Saturdays, which gave people more time to pick up their packages.

Thirty-one city carriers, six rural route carriers and 35 clerks all put extra effort into their work for the Christmas season. "Speaking for the rest of the management, we feel we've been doing a fantastic job," Dulin said.

"People have really been pitching in. They know how important this season is," he added.

ICL poll: Wastes concern lawmakers

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — State legislators believe present regulation of hazardous waste in Idaho is inadequate, according to an Idaho Conservator League study just released.

However, the same survey also found that legislators were hesitant to sponsor legislation to correct problems.

The ICL sent approximately 200 questionnaires to state legislators and legislative candidates last summer, and 64 responded.

Of the 64, nine were from the Magic Valley. Only four incumbents responded to the survey — Rep. Mack Nelbaur, R-Paul; Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly; Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey; and Rep. Wade Martens, R-Terome. The others who responded were unsuccessful legislative candidates.

The study, published in the December issue of the ICL newspaper, found that 89 percent of the respondents believe there is a threat to the public's health when hazardous waste is transported. Another 58 percent believe current laws do not adequately protect the public.

The survey also revealed that 95 percent of the respondents felt more information should be made available on hazardous chemicals in the environment.

When asked if they favored a revision of the Hazardous Waste Management Act to allow stricter regulations than the federal government passed, 64 percent said they did. But only 53 percent said they would be willing to sponsor such a measure.

The survey also revealed that respondents were mixed on who should be forced to disclose information on hazardous waste material. Ninety-one percent said manufacturers of hazardous chemicals should be required to disclose information, but only 33 percent said farmers should disclose what materials they use.

There was strong support to require an environmental impact statement before approving construction of any PCB incineration plants, with 73 percent saying they favored such a statement. Again, there was less support to actually sponsor the necessary legislation, with only 50 percent saying they would sponsor the legislation.

However, there was strong support to fund training for emergency personnel.

Water users back DWR in F&G flap

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Water Users Association, which lists as an adviser the director of the state Department of Water Resources, announced Tuesday it is siding with DWR in a dispute with the state Fish & Game Department over minimum stream-flows in the Big Wood River.

The association asked F&G to drop its lawsuit over DWR's denial of a permit rehearing request.

A. Kenneth Dunn, DWR director, is listed as an adviser on the association's letterhead. The association represents about 2 million acres of irrigated land.

Asked if he urged the association to take a stance against F&G, Dunn said, "those positions are theirs." He said that many times they take stances against DWR.

Steve Goddard, a deputy attorney general for F&G, could not be reached for comment on whether F&G would drop the suit.

Sheri L. Chapman, the association's executive director, says the conditions attached to the Oct. 17 permit protect existing water-right holders and ensure that the public is protected in the future. DWR filed the permit on behalf of F&G.

The permit sets a minimum stream-flow of 70 cubic feet per second, which is supposed to protect the river from drying up 18 miles, from between Warm Springs Creek near Ketchum downstream to the Bellevue Canal Diversion.

"It is important that we recognize that the public interest may change in the future and that we may need Idaho's water for purposes other than that of an instream flow," Chapman said in a press release.

He said the association supports protecting minimum stream-flows, "but without protection of existing water-right holders, the system will provide countless opportunities for conflict over our water resources."

F&G contends in its lawsuit in 4th District Court in Ada County that DWR is making the Big

Wood water right one of lower priority than other water rights. Another objection is that F&G doesn't want the permit reopened after 15 years. "We want it to stay. That happens with other water rights," said Steve Goddard, a deputy attorney general for F&G.

The DWR in November gave unrecorded water rights priority over the minimum stream-flow requirements and directed the permit to be reviewed in another 15 years to determine whether the state has adequately protected stream values.

Department spokesman Norm Young told The Associated Press Friday that the unrecorded water rights were established before 1980, when Idahoans could either get a permit or take advantage of a constitutional right to water use.

Both Dunn and Chapman have called F&G's suit a waste of money.

The issues in the Big Wood stream-flow permit could apply to other minimum stream-flows — including one at Minnie Miller in the Thousand Springs area, according to DWR.

Blaine gets grant for sewage study

By JIM McPHERSON
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Blaine County has been awarded a $4,849 grant by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare to determine how to deal with sewage.

The grant, provided by the department's Division of Environment, will be used for "engineering studies" to evaluate the best method for disposing of sludge removed from sewage treatment plants in Hailey and Ketchum, according to the announcement by Gov. John Evans

Friday.

Chuck Corwin, assistant to the Blaine County Board of Commissioners, said Friday that he expects the study to recommend doing about the same as the county is already doing.

Former Twin Falls surgeon pioneered use of hypnosis

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A former Twin Falls physician and surgeon, Dr. Fred T. Kolouch, 72, died Dec. 21 in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Dr. Kolouch came to Twin Falls in 1948 and continued to practice medicine until 1952, when he enlisted in the U.S. Army, serving as chief of general surgery in the U.S. Hospital at Ft. Benning, Ga. He returned to Twin Falls in 1954 and continued his private practice of general surgery until 1965, when he moved to Salt Lake City.

While in Twin Falls, he was active in community and medical organizations. He served as chief of staff for the clinic at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and was also a member of the Idaho Board of Medicine from 1956-1962. He was active in Kiwanis Club, Twin Falls Toastmasters and was a member of the Sun Valley Ski Club. He remained an active skier until a year ago, when heart problems forced him to give up the sport.

His son, Tom Kolouch of Twin Falls, said his enthusiasm for skiing and his appreciation of the Sawtooth Mountains probably kept him in Idaho and Utah. He came to Idaho from his native Nebraska to look for a place to practice medicine and raise a family.

He was a pioneer in the field of hypnosis as applied to surgery. In 1962, the Twin Falls doctor was the subject of a Time magazine article about his application of hypnosis to ease the stress of surgery for his patients. His practice that has since become fairly common.

Dr. Kolouch was born March 8, 1914, in Lincoln, Neb. He married Helen Paulson in Nebraska, and attended Doane College of Creston, Neb.

He is survived by his wife of Salt Lake City; three sons, Fred Kolo of New York City, Thomas Kolouch of Twin Falls and Victor Kolouch of Santa Cruz, Calif.; two daughters, Karina Kolouch Fowler of San Francisco, Calif., and Margaret Kolouch of Twin Falls, and three grandchildren.

He attended the University of Minnesota where he obtained a number of degrees, graduating with a Ph.D. in surgery in 1948. He served at the University of Minnesota, an instructor in surgery in general surgery in 1946 and 1947. He then became assistant professor of surgery there, prior to moving to Idaho.

He practiced medicine with his father, Dr. Frederick Kolouch in Schuyler, Neb., briefly. In 1965 he entered the University of Utah College of Medicine to complete residency in psychiatry. From 1963 until his retirement in 1977, he held various faculty positions at the University of Utah, including assistant professor of surgery and assistant professor of psychiatry. At the time of his death he was associate professor emeritus in psychiatry at the Utah school.

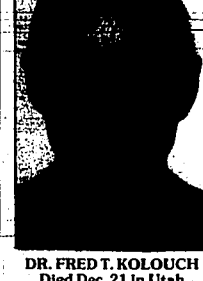

He specialized in the care of patients with complex physical and psychological problems. He was also instrumental in the development of mental health care clinics in Southern Idaho and served as clinical director of the Wood River

Mental Health Clinic in Sun Valley from 1968-1971.

He was a member of Sigma Xi, awarded the Rollins Cutts prize for undergraduate surgical research in 1939, received the Lucretia Wilder award for research in surgery and the Builders Award of Doane College in 1971.

A memorial will be held in Our Lady of the Snows Catholic Church in Sun Valley Jan. 3 at 1 p.m. with a long-time friend, Dr. B.L. Krellkamp, officiating. The family suggests memorial contributions in the name of Dr. Kolouch be made to the Filiztas Trail at the College of Southern Idaho, c/o Inc. First National Bank, P.O. Box 1766, Twin Falls.

A service is also planned in Salt Lake City today at 1 p.m.

Stolen red Corvette found

Court says Sivak shouldn't be released

—BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Court of Appeals says convicted murderer Lacey Sivak shouldn't be released from prison because he remained incarcerated between death sentences.

In a ruling handed down Friday, the court said Sivak contended he should be released because of an alleged illegal incarceration.

The Supreme Court in March 1984 vacated Sivak's death sentence for the 1981 slaying of Garden City gas station attendant Dixie Wilson because neither Sivak nor his attorney were present when the sentence was handed down.

Fourth District Judge Robert Newhouse resentence Sivak to death in early April 1984. Sivak contended in a lawsuit filed in February that he was incarcerated illegally because he wasn't being held under any specific sentence between the 1974 court actions.

A magistrate judge ruled the issue was moot when Sivak filed the court action, and a district judge denied Sivak's petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

Appellate Judges Jesse Walters and Roger Swanstron agreed with the district court that the issue was moot, while Justice Donald Burnett said Sivak's petition was fatally flawed because it failed to establish any material issue.

Sivak filed the suit in February in the Idaho Supreme Court overturning his death sentence on grounds that 4th District Judge Robert Newhouse failed to allow testimony on Sivak's good behavior in prison. Newhouse is to sentence Sivak for a third time.

Supreme Court upholds settlement

By The Associated Press

BOISE — A divided Idaho Supreme Court has approved the $17,924 lump sum settlement given a laborer in a construction accident in the Twin Falls area.

Tommy Harmon asked the Industrial Commission to set aside the settlement 18 months after he received the money, contending the $500 set aside to cover future medical costs was insufficient.

But the Supreme court voted 3-2 on Friday to uphold the Industrial Commission's refusal to change the agreement. Justices Stephen Bistline and Robert Hunley dissented, saying the Industrial Commission should not have approved the settlement, because it did not give enough consideration to nonmedical factors.

Harmon was injured in 1980 while working as a hole digger for Lutes Construction Co., Inc. After subsequent operations failed to cure a back problem, Harmon asked for and received a lump sum settlement.

In dissenting, Bistline said he was convinced that the settlement was misrepresented to Harmon, and "this sorry tale" probably involved over-reaching, bad faith and constructive fraud.

done right."

Special precautions are usually taken during asbestos removal, because it has been found to cause lung cancer and other fatal diseases when inhaled. The asbestos is usually sealed off with plastic and the air is vacuumed and filtered during asbestos cleanup to prevent particles from being inhaled. Asbestos is also usually soaked with water to prevent its harmful dust from escaping into the air.

Beaulieu said those precautions were taken in cleaning up the vacated boiler room after the asbestos was found. He said the boiler room was cleaned by the same firm that handled Marie Bruce of Mechanical Insulation, of Garden City, that removed asbestos from the rest of the campus.

PMI previously removed insulating "jackets" surrounding the coal-burning boilers and piping in the heating building in June, Beaulieu said. No asbestos was left in the boiler room after the jackets were removed.

"It had been certified there was no asbestos particles in the air or on the surfaces when they (jackets) were removed," Ormond said. "We got a clean bill of health."

Fifteen contractors, with about 65 toll-free workers, are now working to complete $3 million in improvements to ISDB. Construction included the building of new sleeping quarters, renovating existing buildings, and enclosing corridors between buildings.

tell us is to spread it (the sludge) out on the ground," said Corwlin. When asked what was now being done, he replied, "We're spreading it out on the ground."

The hazardous situation referred to by the state agency, he said, was resolved by adding more acreage to the county landfill, where the sludge is disposed of.

"At one time there was a bit of a problem, when we didn't have much land to work with," said Corwlin. "We were dumping the stuff in what amounted to a pit." But the size of the dump was increased more than 7 years ago, according to an employee at the landfill.

Corwlin said the study might tell county officials to develop two different areas for the sludge and alternate them, or to make some other minor change, but he didn't expect any major changes to be required.

The county's share of the bill of $1,616 will come almost totally from the cities of Halley and Ketchum, which host the treatment facilities, said Corwlin. County government will contribute "a very small portion," probably less than $200, he said.

Polish government, church invite pope to visit next June

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski and Roman Catholic Cardinal Jozef Glemp issued a joint invitation Monday for Pope John Paul II to visit his native Poland next June.

An official statement released by the state-run PAP news agency said Jaruzelski and Glemp "discussed the direction of preparations for the third visit of Pope John Paul II to Poland in June 1987."

"The chairman of the State Council," Jaruzelski and the "primate agree that the state and church authorities will send an invitation to the pope," the statement said.

Jaruzelski is expected to personally issue the invitation when he makes an official visit to Italy in mid-March, sources close to the church said.

Glemp and Jaruzelski, who last met in April, also called for an improvement in church-state relations prior to John Paul's visit.

About 90 percent of Poland's 37 million people are Roman Catholics.

The statement said Glemp and Jaruzelski "emphasized that proper conditions, and first of all a favorable climate in church-state relations should be created ... so the visit can bring profits for the fatherland."

"The visit will be another occasion confirming John Paul II's strong involvement in the problem of the defense of peace, which is worth respect," it said.

It added that leaders of the communist government and Catholic leaders agreed on "the need to speed up work" on a bill regulating the church's legal status in Poland.

The church has said approval of the long-delayed bill is a prerequisite for establishing full diplomatic relations between Poland and the Vatican.

"The visit will be another occasion confirming John Paul II's strong involvement in the problem of the defense of peace ..."

— joint invitation

The church has asked the Polish-born pope to visit Poland to open a Catholic religious congress in June. The pope previously visited Poland in 1979 and 1983.

Sources close to the church have said the itinerary for what is expected to be a five-day trip by the pope is set.

They said that in addition to visiting Warsaw, the shrine city of Czestochowa and Krakow, where John Paul was formerly archbishop, the pontiff will make a first-ever trip to Gdansk, cradle of the now-outdated Solidarity free trade union.

Meanwhile, it was announced state-run television will broadcast for the first time ever the pope's Christmas Eve midnight Mass from St. Peter's Basilica at the Vatican.

The church has been refused permission to have Masses broadcast regularly on television.

The Lewises to play gospel music concert

Have performed with Crouch, the Boones

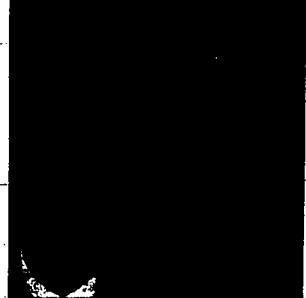

TWIN FALLS — Larry and Joetta Lewis will perform in gospel concert Sunday at 6 p.m. at the First Assembly of God Church, 189 N. Locust in Twin Falls.

The Lewises are involved in a ministry of gospel music across the United States. They have served as ministers of music in various churches on the West Coast and at the First Assembly of God Church in Twin Falls.

Larry is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. Leslie Lewis of Jerome. Joetta was runner-up in the Miss Oklahoma beauty pageant in 1967.

Their music is contemporary in style. They have performed in concerts with Andre Crouch, Debbie Boone, Sandi Patti, The Imperials, Pat Boone, The Happy Goodmans and The Blackwoods. They have been featured in Expo '72 in Dallas, Texas; at Knott's Berry Farm, Monrreal Expo and Washington for Jesus in Washington, D.C. In addition, they have ministered on the campuses of many colleges and universities.

The public is invited to attend the concert. Admission is free; a free-will offering will be received. For more information, call 733-5349.

Worshippers robbed at Christmas service

MURFREESBORO, Tenn. (AP) — Four men were charged with armed robbery Monday in the holdup of scores of worshippers at a Christmas pageant in a church where one of the thieves said, "Forgive me, Jesus," as he fled.

The robbers, wearing stockings and ski masks, had burst into the service at King's Chapel on Sunday night armed with a .38-caliber revolver, a sawed-off shotgun and a baseball bat, said Jerry Brown, a dispatcher for the Rutherford County Sheriff's Department.

The Rev. Ralph Scott, the pastor, said the congregation was preparing for its annual Christmas program and participants had begun lining up to enter the rural church through the back door when the bandit Grant Shreve, 30, of Murfreesboro; and Mancele Lee Wilson, 24, of LaVergne.

They were charged with seven counts of armed robbery and jailed in lieu of a $105,000 bond each after they appeared before a magistrate Monday, Davis said.

Authorities seized weapons believed to have been used in the robbery, he said. Between $1,500 and $2,000 in cash and nearly all the other valuables taken have been recovered, he said.

Davis estimated the value of the cash, jewelry and other items taken at $10,000.

Two churchgoers, Elizabeth Batey and Minnie Jones, suffered chest pains and were taken to Middle Tennessee Medical Center, said emergency room nurse Cathryn Driver.

Ms. Jones, 80, was treated and released, and Ms. Batey, 55, was admitted to the hospital's coronary care unit after suffering what doctors say may have been a mild heart attack.

The men fled the chapel, located eight miles northeast of Murfreesboro, in a car, authorities said.

Scott said he did not recognize the robbers.

"When something like that comes in with a pair of pantyhose stuck down over his head and a gun looking out over your face, you just want to get out of it as easy as possible."

Catholic parish still strong with no priest

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — Sacred Heart Catholic Church is as strong as ever 18 months after it was threatened with a shutdown because the diocese couldn't provide it with a full-time priest, a lay leader said Wednesday.

"I think things are very much alive here, very much more alive than a year ago," said Ken Berger, who operates the church with his wife, Pat Robertson. "A lot of that is because of the people. Pat and I are just the facilitators."

"We've had a lot of growth in the last year," he said. "Since the beginning of September to mid-October, 19 new families have joined the church. Many had been Catholics but had stopped going to church at all."

The Rev. Kenneth Povish, bishop of the Lansing Catholic diocese, considered closing Sacred Heart in June 1985 when its full-time pastor was assigned to a church in Hartland, Berger said.

But the 30-member church, located in one of the poorest sections this town, didn't want to give up its parish.

"Some deacons and lay Catholics have been put in charge of parishes elsewhere, so Povish decided to try the same with Sacred Heart."

Berger and Robertson, who were married in 1982 after meeting on a church outing, learned about the job through a Catholic publication and took the position in July 1985. They are called pastoral administrators.

Berger, 32, is a Ballimore native who left a New York Catholic seminary in 1980 shortly before he was to be ordained. He later moved to Lansing, where he met Robertson, a 30-year-old Alma native.

The couple, along with their 1-year-old son, Danaj, lives in the 79-year-old church's rectory, which normally would be occupied by a priest. They share a salary that is lower than what a priest would be paid.

"Basically, what we're responsible for is the day-to-day spiritual and temporal welfare of the church," Berger said.

He said he and his wife perform most of the same duties that a priest would, except administering the sacraments. They also are responsible for overseeing the neighboring parishes and oversee the church's budget.

He said parishioners haven't cared that he and his wife aren't priests, and they have received calls in the night when people came close to death, in jail or just lonely.

"In the last year, it's been a lot of growth and learning in our own lives and spiritual growth, too. The people support us, and their trust in us have grown."

Flea market offers religion with variety of goods

BENTON, Ind. (AP) — At Little Shopsy, you can get a car, get a brass chicken or get saved.

John Allison is the operator of Little Shopsy, a roadside flea market in Benton, three miles south of Gibson, U.S. 33. He just runs the place, he says. God is the owner.

Allison is a businessman who grosses more than $30,000 in the flea-market business during an average year. All of his decisions, prices and deals are made through the spirit of God, he said.

"That kind of partnership apparently works for him. His business has been a success through sales of used cars, antiques, odds and ends, "whatnots, yum yum and zu-zus," he said.

Spread out over the three-acre flea market are five log cabins and three fishermen's boats, filled with typical flea-market wares. The landscape is dotted with old machinery, used tires, signs praising God — and junk.

"If we don't have it, we have nothing," he said. "We get about anything you can mention. We can sell anything."

Allison, 63, began his business in 1972 shortly after he and his wife, Fannie, were married. He was a member of the Mennonite Central Committee, and she belonged to the Amish church. The couple and their six children, ages 7 to 15, live in one of the log cabins at Little Shopsy.

"We just throw it in here anywhere and let them have at it."

Pope requests effort to heal divided world

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II Monday pledged an all-out effort by the Roman Catholic Church to help heal divisions in the world.

In his traditional year-end address to Rome-based cardinals, the pope said that one concrete way to promote unity in the world is through the inter-faith dialogue he initiated in Assisi on Oct. 17.

The meeting in the birthplace of St. Francis of Assisi brought together representatives of the world's major religions, including Christianity, Islam, Buddhism and Judaism for a day of prayer and fasting for world peace.

The pope said the Assisi encounter yielded "precious elements for reflection" by all concerned with world peace.

He said the need for unity is more important than ever because "peace is always fragile and always threatened, and perhaps more so today than ever before."

The pontiff said the differences among the various religions become less important when viewed in the light of "the imperative for unity that is total, fundamental and decisive."

The church should first of all promote unity within the Christian community, John Paul said.

He also stressed the importance of harmony with Jews, who are "united with us in a spiritual link," and Muslims, "who also recognize God the Creator."

"The church is called to operate with all its force to put back together fractures and divisions of men," the pope said.

Casey is reported 'conscious'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Georgetown University Hospital officials Friday issued their most optimistic report yet on the condition of CIA Director William J. Casey, but a source in the intelligence community said he remains "in very bad shape and is recovering very slowly" from brain cancer surgery.

Hospital spokeswoman Robin Payes said Casey was "fully conscious and able to sit up in a bedchamber" as he recovers from 5 1/2 hours of surgery on Dec. 18.

It was the most optimistic statement thus far on Casey's recovery. Asked to provide details, she said, "this is all we have so far."

Previously, the hospital said only that Casey, 73, was in stable condition, and officials had refused to provide details amid reports that Casey's recovery has been slower than expected.

Envoy boosted Contra airstrip

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. ambassador to Costa Rica helped secure Costa Rica's permission to build a secret airstrip for the Contras and was deeply involved in overseeing its use, The New York Times reported Friday.

The Times said its report about the ambassador, Lewis Tamba, was based on a senior government official in Central America whom it did not further identify.

The Times said the official told Tamba asked at least seven times that the airstrip be reopened for use by Contra supply planes after the newly elected Costa Rican government of President Oscar Arias Sanchez closed the airstrip this summer.

Survivor wants driver charged

NEW YORK (AP) — A survivor of a racial attack last week in which a gang of whites chased three blacks will not help prosecutors unless they file charges against the motorist who killed his fleeing stepson, his lawyer said Friday.

The development could complicate the prosecution of three youths who have been arrested in the case and charged with murder. Without the witness, "it would not be our finest case," said District Attorney John J. Santucci.

No charges have been lodged against Dominick Blum, driver of the car that hit Michael Griffith, 23, as he and his stepfather, Cedric Sandford, 36, fled from a gang of white teenagers wielding sticks and baseball bats in the predominantly white Howard Beach section of Queens on Dec. 20. A third person with the pair was able to escape.

Fire kills 6 in home for elderly

LAWRENCEBURG, Tenn. (AP) — A fire that gutted a home for the elderly, killing six people in Tennessee's worst blaze of the year, apparently began in the room of a man with a history of playing with lighters, an arson investigator said.

However, Jim Crawley, state senior arson investigator, said the cause of the fire Wednesday had not been pinpointed.

Eight people died in four-house fires on Christmas Eve and Christmas in New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts and Texas, authorities said.

The deadliest blaze that killed two in Boston was charged with arson and murder in a blaze that killed two in Boston.

In Lawrenceburg, the dead were five residents and the 16-year-old son of the proprietors of the J&D Residential Home for the Aged. Six people were injured, including a firefighter who sustained second- and third-degree burns while trying to rescue trapped residents.

Actress Lanchester dies at 84

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Elsa Lanchester, the elfin actress who portrayed "The Bride of Frankenstein," and who was paired with husband Charles Laughton in 1930s films like "The Private Life of Henry VIII" and "Rembrandt," died Friday. She was 84.

Miss Lanchester died of bronchopneumonia at the Motion Picture and Television Country House and Hospital in Woodland Hills, said hospital spokeswoman Jean Ferris.

Incapacitated by heart problems since suffering a stroke in 1984, Miss Lanchester was admitted to the hospital Dec. 17. Ms. Ferris said.

She had no living close relatives and lived in the Los Angeles area, Ms. Ferris said.

Abshire no stranger to covert disputes

By LEE BYRD
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — David M. Abshire, named by President Reagan to coordinate White House responses to multiple investigations into the Iran-Contra affair, is no stranger to controversy over covert national security operations.

In 1970, as assistant secretary of state, it was Abshire's job to try to enlist congressional support for then-President Nixon's military raids in Laos and Cambodia, at a time the public was demanding that the war in Southeast Asia be wound down.

In 1975, he served on a commission that investigated the government's foreign policy machinery and recommended that Henry A. Kissinger's dual roles as national security adviser and secretary of state not be repeated.

Abshire, about to leave Brussels as U.S. Ambassador to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, will begin his new duties Jan. 5.

As special counselor to the president, it will be his job to direct the White House response to inquiries over how and why arms were sold to Iran, with profits diverted to the anti-government forces in Nicaragua at a time direct U.S. aid to the Contras was barred by law.

In that role, Abshire presumably will be providing information on the activities of a man — former national security adviser John M. Poindexter — whose "job" Abshire might have had himself. He long has been mentioned prominently as a contender for that post, dating to Reagan's election in 1980, when Abshire headed the national security "issue cluster" for the president-elect's transition team.

But those Abshire is said to get along well with Secretary of State George Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, and White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan, he once again was passed over when also. But he has a great deal of depth. He's so polite and nice one the wake of revelations over the doesn't see it immediately."

Iran-Contra matter.

Abshire, 60, is regarded as a moderate conservative and a pragmatist who gets along well with people throughout the Washington establishment. Some conservatives have criticized him as being too agreeable and question his depth as a foreign policy thinker.

"He is an amiable, fund-raiser type," according to Robert Schuttlinger, president of the Washington International Studies Center. Schuttlinger also describes Abshire as "somebody with no scholarly credentials."

But a longtime colleague, former Ambassador Robert G. Neumann, says Abshire is "a man of great sensitivity . . . very politically astute with a fine touch for the whole range of the Washington scene. He is not deep? That was my first impression also. But he has a great deal of depth. He's so polite and nice one the wake of revelations over the doesn't see it immediately."

A native of Chattanooga, Tenn., Abshire is a 1951 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point and earned a Ph.D. in history from Georgetown University in 1959. He is a founder of the Center for Strategic and International Studies, which until October was affiliated with Georgetown University officials severed those ties with the center was more attuned to the news media than to serious research.

Hacksaw blades free mercenaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three American mercenaries who used hacksaw blades to escape from Brazilian prison where they had been held on gun-smuggling charges were flight agents South America.

"If we hadn't had hope, we never would have made it," said Timothy Carmody, who is now turning his attention to freeing four colleagues still jailed in Brasilia, Brazil.

U.S./Mexico relations worse

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and Mexico are facing a crisis of confidence that is aggravating efforts to resolve issues ranging from drug trafficking to illegal immigration, according to officials from both countries.

Mexican officials maintain the Reagan administration has waged a systematic campaign to discredit their country while U.S. officials insist Mexico is intent on undercutting American foreign policy, especially in Central America.

State Department officials, asking not to be identified, said one reflection of the mistrust occurred last month when Secretary of State George P. Shultz snubbed Mexican Foreign Secretary Bernardo Sepulveda at an Organization of American States meeting in Guatemala.

Shultz is said to have been irritated when Mexico introduced a resolution at the U.N. General Assembly criticizing El Salvador's human rights record.

Shultz feels El Salvador's rights performance has improved markedly and thought there was an understanding that the country would be spared that issue at a time it was coping with the effects of a devastating earthquake, officials said.

of the men still in prison, said she was worried sick about her husband, a retired Army major.

"He is very depressed," said Mrs. Sosa, adding that since the escape, the men left behind have been denied any privileges and have had their mail and telephone calls monitored closely.

The men, all Vietnam veterans, were arrested March 14 aboard a Panamanian-registered tug loaded with machine guns, grenades, inflatable rafts and other military hardware.

The seagoing vessel was loaded with weapons in Argentina and was headed across the Atlantic Ocean to the West African nation of Ghana where the men were told they were to help in a mission to overthrow the government of Jerry Rawlings.

Holiday highway deaths near 200

CHICAGO (AP) — California, Texas and Florida reported the most holiday traffic deaths Friday as the nationwide toll climbed toward 200 midway through the four-day weekend.

The National Safety Council estimates that between 500 and 600 people could die on the nation's highways before the close of the long holiday weekend.

The Chicago-based council estimates that between 2,900 and 2,600 people will receive disabling injuries on the nation's highways during the holiday period.

As of 2 p.m. EST Friday, 160 people had died on the nation's highways.

Marcos feels no 'grievance' against anyone on Christmas

FERDINAND MARCOS
Attends private yule Mass

By The Associated Press

HONOLULU — Former Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos and his wife, Imelda, spent their first Christmas in exile by attending a private Mass at the home of a friend.

"I wish everybody a Merry Christmas," Marcos said before leaving his house for the Mass. "I have no feelings of grievance against anyone on this happy day, on the birth of our Lord."

"I hope that everybody be blessed with good health and happy intentions," he said. "Not even against my enemies do I have a word. For them I have nothing but forgiveness, and prayer that they will see what is right."

The Marcoses fled to Hawaii last February when Corazon Aquino came to power.

Asked if he thought he would celebrate Christmas next year in the Philippines, Marcos said, "Well, I hope so. I pray for it. It is something out of my hands."

Motor Madman Nugent keeping busy with kids

JACKSON, Mich. — Singer Ted Nugent, once known as the Motor City Madman, says he has started a children's reading club, organized field trips and one year was even named Father of the Year by his children's school.

"I always stop working in September, because as a father I want to be more than a visitor," the 38-year-old Nugent said in a recent interview.

The rock star, who still wears his hair to his shoulders, says he spends much of his time off-stage in the company with his children. He and his wife spent a week on a four-day hunting trip just before Christmas.

Each year, he said, "We cut the Christmas tree together. We cook a turkey that I killed. And in the spring, the family plants a Christmas tree near their redwood farmhouse."

Nugent says he's working hard to bring his children up sensibly, despite some tragic experiences. He and wife divorced in 1979, and she died of a drug overdose four years later.

Nugent started his career in 1965 with the Amboy Dukes, who produced the hit "Journey to the Center of the Mind." He went solo in 1975 and came up with several hits including "Cat Scratch Fever."

Sitar player Shankar in New York for tests

NEW YORK — Ravi Shankar, the composer and sitar player who popularized Indian music in the West, said Friday he has come to New York for a medical checkup of a heart condition.

Shankar said he has suffered from angina for some time and the condition has been kept under control with medicine. Recently the distress had increased "and I want to make sure I do everything necessary," he said in a telephone interview.

He said he probably would undergo tests Monday.

Nigerian monarch Oji celebrates 72-year reign

LAGOS, Nigeria — Eze Kano Oji, leader of the Aro people of southeastern Nigeria and one of the longest-reigning monarchs in Africa, is celebrating a 72-year-long reign this week.

The 85-year-old monarch is the eldest male descendant of the founder of the Aro Chuku kingdom. Eze Kano Oji ascended to the throne at 14 years of age.

Both Queen Elizabeth II and her father, King George VI, awarded him certificates and medals in recognition of service to his homeland.

Aro Chuku, the Aro people's home village, is most famous for its resistance to British colonial rule.

Post-holiday shoppers flood into nation's stores

By The Associated Press

Shoppers crowded into stores across the country Friday, looking for bargains on everything from furs to wrapping paper in the annual rite of post-Christmas sales.

They lined up outside before the stores opened, ready to make a beeline for marked-down items. Some retailers opened earlier than usual to accommodate the rush.

Stores reported that most customers were buying merchandise, not returning it.

Among the departments most mobbed by bargain-hunters were those selling heavily discounted Christmas cards, wrapping paper and tree decorations.

At the crowded Christmas shop at Macy's flagship store in midtown Manhattan, customers pulled down the store's own decorations and bought them.

"We opened at 9 (an hour early), and they were lined up around the block," said Sally Sargent, a spokeswoman for Bloomingdale's in New York. "Trim a Tree is mobbed."

The temperature in Chicago was around 30 degrees, but shoppers apparently had the arctic temperatures of January and February in mind as they lined up for Marshall Field's fur sale. The store discounted furs up to 70 percent, said a Marshall Field spokesman, Doug Dome.

"Traffic is incredibly high" throughout the 27 Marshall Field stores in Illinois, Wisconsin and Texas, Dome said.

Saks Fifth Avenue's Manhattan store was "close to a mob scene," said general manager Joseph Gronow.

But some retail chains found their downtown stores relatively quiet while business boomed in the suburbs, as many offices were closed and customers shopped at store branches near their homes.

In the Washington, D.C., area, Woodward & Lothrop's suburban stores were very busy, with customers waiting outside before the doors opened, said spokeswoman Robbie Snow. Woodie's downtown store had a slower start, she said.

In Atlanta, shopping was a breeze at Rich's giant downtown store and employees had a chance to catch their breath.

"I've spent most of the day cleaning up the mess from before Christmas," said Jeff Pilgrim, assistant manager in the boys' department.

That was an attraction for some shoppers, who avoided the throngs by traveling from the suburbs into downtown Atlanta.

"I'm trying not to get in those crowds," said teacher Barbara North of suburban DeKalb County, Ga., shopping at the downtown Rich's. "I could have gone to the malls, but I decided the crowds would be too much."

Some California stores reported a slightly slower start.

"We're not too morning-oriented here, but we're going to start seeing the after-Christmas crush sometime after noon," said Gayle Kanro, marketing director for the Beverly Center mall in West Los Angeles.

The sales gave the retail industry, which overall had lackluster pre-Christmas sales, a chance to revive its December performance, said Walter Loeb, an industry analyst with the Morgan Stanley investment firm.

Kmart Inc., the nation's second largest retail chain, reported before Christmas that sales were slow at its 2,100 stores, and Zayre Corp., with 362 stores in 26 Eastern and Midwestern states, said before the holiday that it was disappointed by its performance.

Other stores, including Bloomingdale's, Marshall Field, Bullock's-Wishpre on the West Coast and the Wal-Mart chain based in Benton, Ark., reported strong sales.

Residents watch as an early morning fire consumes their boats in a Hong Kong cove. AP Laserphoto

Fire hits 170 junks in cove

HONG KONG (AP) — Fire destroyed about 170 junks Friday in a cove popular with tourists for its floating restaurants, slightly injuring two people and leaving about 1,700 people who lived on the boats homeless, firemen reported.

The fire officials said they used five fireboats and a helicopter to put out the blaze in four hours.

Efforts to put out the fire were hampered by strong winds, which spread the flames quickly in the congested Aberdeen cove.

Firemen said their boats were hindered by fleeing junks and countless mooring lines. None of the floating restaurants, built on large barges, were damaged.

Iran claims troops kill 3,000 Iraqis in attack

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran on Friday claimed its troops killed 3,000 Iraqi soldiers in an offensive on the southern front.

Iran reported heavy fighting starting Wednesday night but said Iraqi troops repulsed the Iranian attack and wiped out "thousands" of Iranian soldiers.

The fighting appeared to have eased Friday. But Iran accused Iraq of using poison gas shells against Iranian forces and said artillery duels thundered in the central and southern sectors of the 730-mile front of the six-year-old Persian Gulf war.

There was no way to independently verify the conflicting claims. The two sides rarely allow correspondents or observers at the front.

In a Friday statement, Iranian President Ali Khamenei vowed that his country's long-heralded "final offensive" to end the war will be unleashed "at the appropriate time." He said the attacks on the southern front, codenamed Karbala-4, were part of a "limited offensive" to strike a blow at Iraqi forces.

The Iranians claimed they stormed four islands on the Iraqi bank of the Shatt al-Arab, destroying most of six infantry brigades of the 3rd Army Corps.

The wording of the Iranian communiques indicated their forces withdrew from the islands Thursday.

apparently because they were too exposed to hold.

Baghdad radio, monitored in Nicosia, said Iraqi forces have regained control of Umm Rasas, one of the islands.

It said Iranian forces also landed on the Iraqi side of the waterway but were "annihilated."

Kremlin hints at bringing army soldiers home

MOSCOW (AP) — Seven years after Soviet troops intervened in Afghanistan, Mikhail S. Gorbachev's Kremlin is hinting that it wants to bring Red Army soldiers home.

But there has been no sign of an unconditional withdrawal, despite a much-publicized pullout in October of 8,000 of the 118,000 Soviet soldiers there estimated to be in Afghanistan.

The Soviets have insisted — most recently at a Dec. 19 news conference on Afghanistan — that there will be no troop pullout without guarantees that other nations stop what Moscow calls interference in Afghan affairs.

In 1988 there have been a number of changes, both in Soviet statements on Afghanistan and in the Islamic nation itself.

Former secret police chief Najibullah took over the leadership from Babrak Karmal last May in a move widely viewed as an attempt to reduce the impression that the Kremlin ran the country. Karmal had been in Moscow for years before he was installed as leader after Soviet troops moved into the neighboring country on Dec. 27, 1979.

The Soviet Union moved troops into Afghanistan to protect a Marxist government that is opposed by Moslem insurgents.

Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze last week told visiting U.S. Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., that some changes are in the works on Afghanistan.

The Kremlin also sanctioned the return to Moscow of dissident Andrei D. Sakharov, who was banished to the closed city of Gorky in January 1980 after criticizing the Afghan intervention.

Sakharov immediately told reporters that he still considered Afghanistan "the most painful part of our foreign policy."

Asked to comment on that remark, senior diplomat Yuri Kashlev said he saw nothing wrong with it. "Indeed," Kashlev added, "our leadership has numerous times stated that it seeks to resolve the situation in Afghanistan as soon as it is possible."

The Washington Post reported Friday that Yevgeny Primakov, head of the Soviet Union's top foreign policy institute, has suggested the Soviets plan to withdraw their troops from Afghanistan even if current U.N.-sponsored efforts for a political solution fail.

Primakov was quoted as saying that "there will be a withdrawal of Soviet troops" in any case "even though it would take place only after a longer period required to stabilize the situation" in Afghanistan.

Gorbachev himself made clear this year that he is interested in getting Soviet troops out of Afghanistan.

In his keynote speech to the Communist Party congress last February, Gorbachev stated that "we should like in the nearest future to withdraw the troops stationed in Afghanistan at the request of its government."

Tanker hits rock, sinks; 12 men lost

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — A British tanker ran onto a rock off the east coast of Iceland early Friday and sank, killing all 12 crewmen, Iceland's National Rescue Organization said.

It was the second fatal sinking of a ship in the North Atlantic in as many days.

An Icelandic freighter, the Sudurland, sank midway between Iceland and Norway on Thursday. Five crewmen were rescued by a Danish helicopter, three were killed and three more were missing and presumed dead.

In the second disaster, the 1,260-ton British-owned Syneta sent a Mayday distress call saying it had run aground and couldn't launch any of its life rafts because the tanker was too close to a steep, rocky outcrop.

The crew of 12 — six Britons and six Cape Verde Islanders — apparently jumped into the sea when the ship began to sink, said Rescue Organization spokesman Johannes Briem.

Rescuers later found a life raft torn to shreds, a spokesman said.

The rescuers recovered six bodies, all in life jackets. Two other bodies slipped out of their life jackets and sank as the searchers tried to pull aboard trawlers.

One crewman was found alive but he died shortly afterwards, Briem said.

The other three crewmen were missing and presumed dead though the search continued. Hundreds of volunteers combed the beaches.

The Syneta was smashed to pieces.

French rail management makes offer

PARIS (AP) — The management of France's national rail system said Friday it will negotiate with striking workers if they go back to their jobs. The nine-day-old strike has cut train service by 25 percent across France, with management using buses to replace trains on many routes.

Jean Dupuy, director of the railroad, known as the SNCF, said he was ready to negotiate on the two main points of contention in the strike: working conditions and a new pay scale that emphasizes merit ratings at the expense of seniority. Management originally had refused to discuss these issues until January and March.

"As soon as the trains are rolling, the overtures that I just made, which are very large ones, can be made concrete," Dupuy said.

The French Democratic Federation of Workers, one of the major striking unions, said it was disappointed by the railroad's refusal to negotiate immediately. Andre Bergeron, head of the Workers' Force, said it was inappropriate to demand a return to work before negotiations open.

Other bowl contests preliminary to Fiesta

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

TEMPE, Ariz. — Isn't it ironic that the bowls themselves, so united in their opposition to a college football national championship playoff, may have come up with a solution.

"If the bowl system can allow for Number 1 and Number 2 to meet most years, then perhaps there will not be any more playoff talk," says Bruce Skinner, executive director of the Fiesta Bowl.

The Fiesta is shelling out almost $5 million — $2.4 million to each team — for the first such national championship showdown ever held somewhere besides the Rose, Sugar, Orange or Cotton bowls.

It will be No. 1 Miami of Florida, 11-0, against No. 2 Penn State, 11-0, on Friday night in 70,021-seat Sun Devil Stadium on the campus of Arizona State University (NBC-TV, 6 p.m., MST).

town, the Mr. Perfect of college football who is referred to by numerous writers as St. Joe and who recently was named Sportsman of the Year by Sports Illustrated.

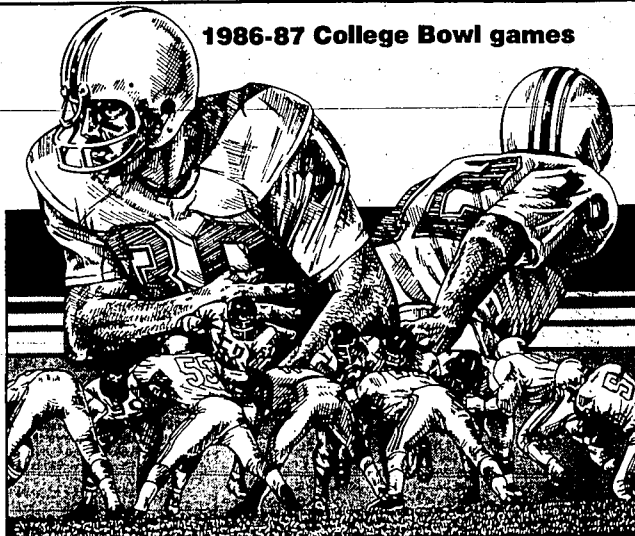

In the black hats — and the orange, green and white getup — is Miami, also known as Miami Vice because of a number of brushes with the law and the NCAA. But it also has Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback Vinny Testaverde, so wholesome he almost makes Paterno look like a hardened criminal. Its coach is Jimmy Johnson, of Port Arthur, Texas, who took his first head coaching job at Oklahoma State for the bright lights, the warm sun and the sandy beaches of south Florida. In the vernacular of the Southwest, Johnson is sometimes referred to as a wild horse rider.

1986-87 College Bowl games

Oklahoma-Arkansas match now just a consolation prize

By JOEY HOLLEMAN
The Associated Press

MIAMI — After three years of bowl season supremacy, the Orange Bowl only can offer a repeat of one of its most memorable games in recent years when underdog Arkansas came out of nowhere to defeat Oklahoma on New Year's night.

The last three Orange Bowls either decided the national championship (Miami over Nebraska 31-30 after the 1983 season and Oklahoma over Penn State 25-10 after the 1985 season) or pitted the two teams many considered the best in the land (Washington over Oklahoma 28-17 in 1985).

Brigham Young won the national championship after the 1984 season despite playing what many considered the best game of the year when they beat Michigan in the pre-New Year's Holiday Bowl.

All of the other college postseason contests will take a back seat this time around to the Jan. 2 Fiesta Bowl clash between No. 1 Miami and No. 2 Penn State, the only two unbeaten major college teams. But the Orange Bowl has an interesting appetizer to the Fiesta feast.

Oklahoma, 10-1, has lost only to top-ranked Miami and has rolled up impressive numbers against the rest of their opponents. Arkansas, 9-2, was shocked by Texas Tech 17-7 early in the season and later lost at Baylor 29-14. The Razorbacks rebounded from the Baylor loss to beat Texas A&M 14-10 and rout Southern Methodist 41-0.

"We were playing our best ball at the end of the season," said Coach Ken Hatfield.

Hatfield is in his third season with Arkansas, so he wasn't a part of the Razorbacks' surprising 31-6 victory over Oklahoma in the team's only other Orange Bowl appearance in 1978.

"We owe them one," said Switzer, who has talked with his team about how the Razorbacks kept the Sooners from winning a national title eight years ago.

Similar to this year, Arkansas entered that game a decided underdog. Oklahoma was ranked No. 2 going into the game and could have moved up to No. 1 with a victory, but the Razorbacks overcame the loss of their starters for disciplinary reasons to romp past the Sooners.

"Eight years later, people are still talking about it," Hatfield said.

"The question is, can the Razorbacks repeat that effort. Hatfield thinks yes."

"I think it will be a much more exciting game than people who are going to look at it from the outside believe," Hatfield said.

As in 1978, the statistics favor the Sooners. They have outscored their opponents 456-73 while Arkansas has a cumulative 303-142 in scoring in its games.

Big 10 seeks to smell Roses vs. newcomer Arizona State

By TIM LIOTTA
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The exchange was light-hearted and brief, but it captured an underlying frustration that Big Ten Conference coaches must be feeling towards the Rose Bowl.

Arizona State Coach John Cooper, who will be coaching in his first Rose Bowl Jan. 1, turned and said to Michigan State Coach Bo Schembechler, "I need all the help I can get, Bo."

A smiling Schembechler replied: "In light of my record here, I'm not going to be giving out any advice."

Schembechler is 1-6 in Rose Bowl games, which is actually a better percentage than Big Ten teams have fared over the past 17 years on New Year's Day in Pasadena, Calif. They have won twice.

"I recognize that the Big Ten has not done well here," Schembechler said. "I don't know why. We're going to do everything we can to win this game. I think every team that comes out here loses."

The fourth-ranked Michigan Wolverines, 11-1, will meet Arizona State, 9-1-1, and ranked seventh, in the 73rd Rose Bowl.

This New Year's Day football game, which pegs itself as the "Granddaddy of All Bowl Games," has been making old men out of the coaches from the Big Ten, who have yet to unlock the key behind the Rose Bowl.

Since Ohio State defeated Southern Cal 27-16 in the 1969 Rose Bowl, the Big Ten representative has been virtually unbeatable.

"There's no doubt they have been dominant," Schembechler said. "Maybe it wouldn't look so bad if the scores haven't been so high."

The Pac-10's last five victories have included victories by UCLA over Illinois, 45-9 in 1980, and Iowa, 45-28, last year, and Washington's 28-0 victory over Iowa in 1981.

Southern Cal has led the Pac-10's 17-year parade, winning seven times in eight appearances since 1970, and UCLA is perfect in four Rose Bowl appearances over the past 11 years.

"When you play UCLA and USC, you're playing the home team," Schembechler said.

There will be 18 major college football bowl games in December 1986 and January 1987. The Fiesta Bowl, on January 2, will feature the country's two top-ranked teams — Penn State and Miami, both with identical 11-0 records — fighting for the No. 1 spot. Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde will lead Miami against Penn State. In another major game, Arizona State, in its first Rose Bowl, will play against Big Ten champion Michigan.

Cornhuskers, LSU seeking to put distractions aside in Sugar Bowl

By AUSTIN WILSON
The Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — His players have the resilience of youth, Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne says. He has the resilience of age.

Sixth-ranked Nebraska meets Arizona State in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day. Osborne said the Huskers have conquered the feeling that they're playing in a consolation game after losing the season finale to Oklahoma, 20-17.

"When you're 18 and 19 years old, you bounce back," Osborne said. "When you're 49 and you've been doing it for a long time, you still bounce back." Nebraska lost to Oklahoma on a field goal with 11 seconds left. It not only cost Nebraska the Big Eight title but any chance to contend for the national championship. That title will be decided a day later in the Jan. 2 Fiesta Bowl pairing of top-ranked Miami against No. 2 Penn State.

"To some degree, that's good," Osborne said. "It's a day later, but it's not a bad idea. It puts some of the emphasis back on the other bowls."

"I know they did it for selfish reasons," he deadpanned. Both Nebraska and LSU had off-field distractions leading up to the Sugar Bowl.

Ohio State takes Big 10 to Dallas

By DENNIS H. FREEMAN
The Associated Press

DALLAS — The 51st Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day may not be a national championship matchup, but the clash between Ohio State and Texas A&M is intriguing.

The Buckeyes, 9-3, will become the first Big Ten team to play in the Cotton Bowl. Ohio State's 21st bowl game also means the school becomes the first Big Ten team to play in the Cotton, Rose, Orange and Sugar bowls.

In the last 11 years, Ohio State has gone to nine different bowl games. The Buckeyes are 10-10 in the post-season clashes.

The co-champions of the Big Ten lost to Alabama and Washington to start the season, won nine straight and then fell to Michigan in the finale.

Texas A&M, the Southwest Conference champion, was 9-2 overall and the Aggies are 9-5 in bowl games, including last year's Cotton Bowl victory over Auburn. It's the first time since 1941-1942 that the Aggies have appeared in consecutive Cotton Bowls.

Ohio State defeated A&M the two other times the teams met. The Buckeyes won 17-0 in 1963 and 56-13 in 1970. Both games were played in Columbus. Ohio State also is 15-2-2 against SWC teams.

This game has become one of the hottest tickets in Cotton Bowl history.

"I believe it's our toughest ticket since Arkansas-Nebraska in 1965," said Cotton Bowl Executive Vice President Jim Brock. "Both schools have taken their allotments and asked for some more. We were sold out to the public a long time ago."

"There's a lot of excitement about this game. You have two great schools with two great traditions. You've got the Big Ten Conference in here for the first time."

Capacity of the Cotton Bowl is 72,000 but could be exceeded with the installment of temporary seats. The record Cotton Bowl crowd of 75,500 in 1976 for the Arkansas-Georgia game could be in jeopardy.

BYU-UCLA game gives bowl a boost

By JOHN NADEL
The Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Tom Starr, the executive director of the Freedom Bowl, believes the third time is definitely going to be the charm for the postseason game.

"This catapults us into what we've wanted to be, teams that have been ranked No. 1, teams that are popular," Starr said of the Brigham Young-UCLA matchup. "We might not be with the New Year's Day people yet, but we wouldn't trade our matchup for anybody's outside of New Year's Day."

The third Freedom Bowl will be popular choice.

"UCLA, ranked 15th nationally, was 7-3-1 during the regular season and finished in a tie for second in the Pacific-10 Conference.

"On the other side, in Brigham Young we've got the team who was the national champion two years ago," Starr said. "Their great tradition at quarterback makes them a great team to have. The Church of the Latter Day Saints is very popular in our area. Plus we have the Outland Trophy winner in our game in Jason Buck.

"It just seems the two teams provide a great chemistry. This will be the rubber game in their series and they've had two great games."

BYU was 8-4 and was second in the Western Athletic Conference this season. The Cougars had won or shared the WAC championship for 10 straight years before being supplanted by San Diego State this season.

As Starr said, the Bruins and Cougars have met twice before. On Oct. 7, 1985, quarterback Steve Bono set a UCLA record by passing for 399 yards, but Brigham Young had 535 yards in total offense in winning a wild 37-35 decision at the Rose Bowl. BYU quarterback Steve Young passed for 270 yards and rushed for another 54 yards in the game.

The Bruins ended the series in their 1985 season opener, defeating the defending national champion Cougars 27-24 at Provo, Utah.

Matt Stevens, who will start at played Tuesday at Anaheim Stadium. Kickoff time is 6 p.m. MST and, according to Starr, a crowd of more than 55,000 is anticipated.

In the first Freedom Bowl two years ago, Chuck Long threw an all-time bowl record six touchdown passes as Iowa crushed Texas 55-17. The game, played in a driving rainstorm, was watched by only 24,093 fans. There were 37,877 tickets sold.

Last year, Washington nipped Colorado 20-17 before a crowd of 30,361 on a pleasant night. There were 37,833 tickets sold.

Iowa, Texas, Washington and Colorado are all prestigious schools from major conferences.

But, as Starr pointed out, they aren't UCLA or Brigham Young, especially UCLA.

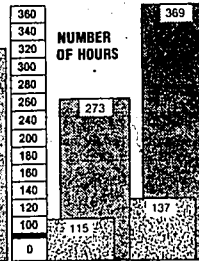

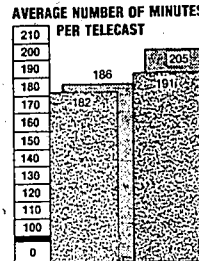

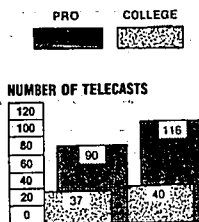

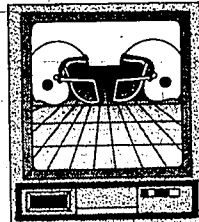

"UCLA and BYU do so much for us," he said. "We've always felt UCLA and Southern Cal are very important to us because they're the local teams and have great traditions."

"UCLA has won four straight New Year's Day bowl games, they have just a great tradition. They've got a lot of their student-athletes from this area. It's the highest-ranked team we've ever had in our bowl game. I'm convinced UCLA is a very

Football dominates the TV

In 1985, Americans were able to spend 560 hours watching college or professional football on network TV, 118 hours more than in 1980. The number of pro football telecasts increased by 28, due primarily to the USFL which did not exist in 1980. The average length of a football telecast increased by almost 20 minutes for college and nine minutes for the pros.

quarterback for UCLA in the Freedom Bowl, came off the bench to throw a 62-yard pass to set up the winning touchdown, a 2-yard run by Gaston Green with 1:02 remaining. Green rushed for 1,139 yards this season.

The WAC champion usually plays in the Holiday Bowl at San Diego. That's where BYU appeared for seven straight years before facing Ohio State in the Florida Citrus Bowl last winter.

BYU Coach LaVell Edwards didn't sound too disturbed that the Cougars will be about 100 miles north of the Holiday Bowl site this year.

"We're looking forward to playing in the Freedom Bowl," he said. "We've got a lot of guys from the Los Angeles area.

"We've had two great games with UCLA, hopefully this will be another one. I've got a lot respect for Terry. It's a first-class operation. We're just looking forward to being out there."

Big Eight surprise UC to test Baylor

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Baylor, with its 9-3 record and No. 14 national ranking, won't be scoffing at the 6-5 record Colorado will bring into the 25th Budweiser Bowl at Rife Stadium New Year's Eve.

The Buffaloes lost their first four games of the season but then finished 6-1 the rest of the season for a second-place finish in the Big Eight.

Colorado's charge included a 29-10 victory over Nebraska, the Buffs' first victory over the Cornhuskers in 19 years, and a 13-10 loss in Cotton Bowl-bound Ohio State.

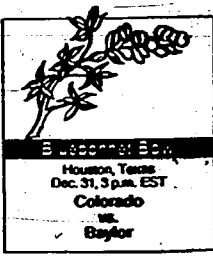

"We could easily be looking at a 9-3 team being here. We lost three games they could have won," Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said. "We lost three close games too, but that doesn't lessen the kind of football team you are."

"They've played some great football this year in the Big Eight."

The Buffaloes were stunned in the season opener by Colorado State, 23-7. They lost the next three games by a total eight points, 33-30 to Oregon, 13-10 to Ohio State and 24-21 to Arizona.

"After four games we didn't think we were going anywhere this year so we're happy to be in a bowl game," said Buff tight end Jon Embree, who has started 34 straight games, the longest current streak on the team.

"But we knew we were better than "Nebraska ran to his side eight or nine times for 22 yards," Colorado Athletic Director Bill Marolt said. "Oklahoma came to town and ran to the other side."

Baylor lost heart-breakers to Southern Cal, 17-14, Southern Methodist, 27-21, and SWC champion Texas A&M, 31-30.

Southern Cal's Don Shafer kicked a 32-yard field goal with two seconds to play and the Aggies scored in the final 3:48 for the victory after Baylor had led 17-0 earlier.

"The thing about a football team is you have to improve as the season goes along," Teaff said. "They have done that by winning six of their last seven games."

"They are a better team than their record indicates and so are we."

The Bears did improve as the season progressed. They stood at the crossroads with a 4-3 record after their loss to the Aggies and they won four straight, including a 29-14 victory over Orange Bowl participant Arkansas.

Baylor finished the season as the No. 5 total offense team in the nation, averaging 438 yards per game and the Bears are third in the nation in total defense, allowing 247.9 yards per game.

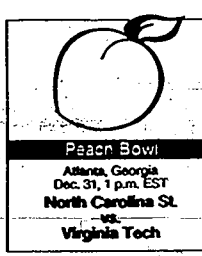

Cody Carlson, Baylor's All-SWC quarterback, operated the Bears' well-balanced attack.

Virginia Tech's Dooley will bow out against N. Carolina St.

ATLANTA (AP) — Bill Dooley ends his nine-year stint as Virginia Tech's football coach and Dick Sheridan completes a surprisingly successful first year at the helm of No. 18 North Carolina State when the two teams collide in the Peach Bowl on Wednesday.

Both teams carry 9-2-1 records in the 11 a.m. MST contest, which will be televised nationally by the Mizion network from Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium, where a crowd of more than 55,000 is expected.

Dooley and Virginia Tech are parting company in the aftermath of the school's decision to take away the athletic director's job Dooley also held. Dooley sued the school, and the parties reached a $3.5 million out-of-court settlement.

Dooley, brother of Georgia Coach Vince Dooley, has posted a 62-38-1 record during his stay at the independent school.

North Carolina State, a member of the Atlantic Coast Conference, had struggled through a 3-8 campaign in 1985 before Sheridan was lured away from Furman to rebuild the Wolfpack.

Sheridan had logged a 69-23-2 record in eight years at Furman, where he won six Southern Conference championships.

"Virginia Tech is a sound, physical, hard-nosed football team," Sheridan said. "They present as tough a test for us as any team we've played. It's very difficult to win the ball against them. We're certainly looking forward to the game."

Sheridan said he wants his team to be prepared to be successful in the game and also wants the bowl trip to be an enjoyable experience.

"We believe that you can work hard and have a good time," he said. "We want to do both of those."

The two teams haven't met since 1964, when Virginia Tech posted a 28-19 victory to build its series lead to 20-16-3.

Besides identical records this year, the two teams are averaging almost identical yardage per game — Tech 358.7 yards, and State 358.5.

The Wolfpack is led by All-ACC quarterback Erik Kramer, who completed 145 of 277 passes for 2,022 yards and 14 touchdowns.

Virginia Tech quarterback Erik Chapman threw for 1,627 yards and 10 scores, hitting on 113 of 222 attempts. The Hokies were more successful on the ground where two tailbacks, Maurice Williams and Eddie Hunter, were equally effective.

Williams rushed for 1,029 yards and six touchdowns, averaging 6.2

only 169.6 yards per game, while the offense has rolled up 470.6 yards per game. Arkansas has given up 299.7 yards while gaining 308.9.

Both teams run the offense and revolve around their quick quarterbacks. Oklahoma's Jamelle Holloway is the better runner, with 811 yards compared to 461 for Arkansas' Greg Thomas. But Thomas has better passing statistics, 67-of-109 for 1,032 with six touchdowns and only one interception. Holloway is 30-for-63 for 541 yards with four touchdowns and six interceptions.

Oklahoma has four players with more than 500 yards rushing. Lydell Carr with 548, Earl Johnson with 537 and Spencer Tillman with 519 and Holloway. Greg Thomas is the Razorbacks' top runner, just edging halfback Derrick Thomas, who has 456 yards.

Oklahoma has a special weapon in All-American tight end Keith Jackson, who averaged 16.3 yards on six reverses and 28.5 yards on 14 receptions.

Oklahoma All-America linebacker Brian Bosworth, banned from playing in the Orange Bowl because anabolic steroids were detected in an NCAA-required drug test, came to Miami on his own Friday to clear his name and cheer his teammates. He also was expected to discuss whether he would give up his final year of college eligibility and make himself available for the NFL draft in spring.

"Oklahoma would have to make a strong case to convince him to stay," said a source who had been in contact with Bosworth's family. "I don't think he has made a definite decision, but what does he have to gain by staying at school?"

Should the 6-foot-2, 240 pound linebacker opt for the NFL, he will have to undergo testing for steroids and other drugs next month, along with all draft-eligible players, a league spokesman said. It will be the first time that testing for steroids will be done.

"Misuse of prescription drugs, including anabolic steroids, has been prohibited for years by NFL policy," said Joe Browne, the league's director of communications.

Browne said testing for steroids will be done on all NFL players in the preseason drug test allowed under the league's collective bargaining agreement with the players' union.

As the team was about to leave

Norman, Okla., the school announced that the Bosworth, offensive guard Gary Bennett and defensive tackle David Shoemaker had tested positive for steroids.

High-test offenses to collide in Gator

By RON WORD
The Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Two high-powered offenses with contrasting styles will take the field Saturday as Stanford and Clemson meet for the first time ever in the Gator Bowl football game.

Stanford, coming off a 9-3 season, will be without the services of starting quarterback John Payne, who underwent surgery Monday on his right shoulder, and two other starters who were left behind for undisclosed reasons.

Clemson, which finished the year 7-2, and won the Atlantic Coast Conference title with a team that combined power running and strong defense, will be trying to get back into the win column after two season-ending ties.

The bowl game is a chance for us to come back and do something positive to end the season. It's another chance to play and win," Clemson Coach Danny Ford said.

"Getting to the bowl game is the biggest thing because there are only so many teams playing in bowl games," Ford said. "We're excited about playing Stanford because we've never played them before and they're a highly visible team."

"It'll be a big challenge for our players," Ford added. "And considering we've tied the last two games we've played, it's a game we'd like to win."

Clemson's offensive attack is centered around two excellent running backs, both from Florida. Senior tailback Terrence Pligler ran 180 times and gained 1,176 yards this season, while senior tailback Kenny Flowers gained 323 yards on 109 carries despite missing part of the season with injuries.

"We'll run over any team," Bob Bradley, Clemson's sports information director, said.

Bradley also said the Tigers have an excellent offensive line.

"Other teams only got to our quarterback three times, but we don't pass that much," he said.

powered defense with Michael Dean Perry, the 6-foot-2, 270-pound fullback of William "The Refrigerator" Perry of the Chicago Bears; cornerback Delton Hall and bandit end Terence Mack. All three won All-Conference honors.

The Tigers mostly play a 3-4 defense.

"We're going to have to tighten up to play Stanford's passing attack," Bradley said.

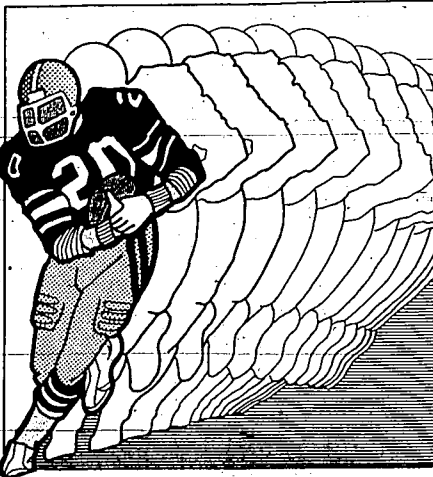

Stanford of the Pac-10 Conference will be hoping that substitute quarterback Greg Ennis can guide the Cardinal aerial attack. Ennis played sparingly this season, mostly in mop-up roles.

In Stanford's 29-24 win over Arizona in Toyo, Ennis completed five of seven passes for 75 yards. He scored off a fake field goal and later added the winning score with a quarterback sneak.

"I feel good about having Greg," Stanford Coach Jack Elway said. "He's throwing very well and accurate. I'm very happy with the way he's looking."

Two other starters for Stanford did not make the trip.

School officials have refused to say why offensive right tackle John Zentner and defensive right tackle Tony Leiker are absent, but Zentner's father said his son's use of steroids may have shown up in a drug test, making him ineligible for the bowl game.

'Cats still looking for initial bowl win

By KEN PETERS
The Associated Press

HONOLULU — Arizona made its first college football bowl appearance in 1921, losing 38-0 to Centre College in the East-West Christmas Classic at San Diego.

Sixty-five years later, the Wildcats still are looking for their first bowl victory.

They'll try to end that unhappy tradition Saturday when they face North Carolina's Tar Heels in the Aloha Bowl in the first football meeting ever between the two schools.

Arizona, the Pac-10 Conference, finished the regular season 8-3 and is ranked 16th going into the nationally televised, 4 p.m. EST, game at Aloha Stadium.

Unranked North Carolina, which will be appearing in a bowl game for the first time in three years, went 7-4 this season.

The Atlantic Coast Conference's Tar Heels own a 6-9 record in postseason play, including a 23-3 loss to Florida State in the 1983 Peach Bowl.

Prior to that, however, the Tar Heels had won four bowl games in a row, beating Michigan in the 1979 Gator Bowl, Texas in the 1980 Bluebonnet Bowl, Arkansas 31-27 in the 1981 Gator Bowl, and Texas 26-10 in the 1982 Sun Bowl.

While spending the holidays in Hawaii might make it difficult for the players to concentrate on football, both Arizona Coach Larry Smith and Dick Crum of North Carolina said they intend to keep their teams fully focused on the game.

Smith, still smarting from the Wildcats' 29-24 loss to Stanford in the regular-season finale, said he's told his players that they were coming to Hawaii to play football, not just to play.

"We'll have some fun and let them have some fun," Smith said, "but

"I'm not going to end the season with a lousy performance like we had against Stanford."

"Anybody who messes around and does anything, I've got a handful of tickets and I'm going to send them back."

While Smith was looking back to the loss to Stanford, Crum was looking ahead to next season as he prepared his team for the Aloha Bowl.

The Tar Heels play a beefed-up schedule in 1987, including games against Oklahoma and Auburn.

"With the schedule we're going to play next year, we need to have a good, tough opponent in a bowl game to start getting ready—for what we're going to face this coming fall," Crum said, adding that Arizona certainly fit the bill.

The Aloha matchup figures to be a high-scoring affair.

The Wildcats have an explosive offense led by 5-foot-6, 167-pound David Adams at tailback, and quarterback Alfred Jenkins. Adams gained 1,175 yards rushing this season, and Jenkins threw for 1,573 yards and 10 touchdowns.

North Carolina's offense suffered a blow this week when it was announced that tailback Derrick Fener would not make the trip to Honolulu because of academic problems, and Penn State wear dark uniforms, plain white and blue, and your first impression is that they're a slow bunch of guys. They're anything but that."

But uniforms don't decide national championships, and this, Paterno says, is "a legitimate national championship game. I don't think anybody can dispute that. The two undefeated teams are going to play each other and we're going to do it in a setting and at a time that's unique for college football."

The 18-year-old Fiesta Bowl has been a New Year's Day game for the last five years and has never featured this kind of attraction. In a masterful move, one which helped sway Miami and Penn State to bring their show to suburban Phoenix rather than the Citrus or Gator Bowls in Florida, the Fiesta Bowl talked NBC-TV into a prime-time telecast on Jan. 2, one day after the New Year's bowls.

And read into this what you will, but while in Arizona January, Ar. will work out at Arizona State University. Miami has been assigned the USFL Arizona Outlaws' practice facility.

Among the Miami players who have been involved in off-the-field escapades — an off-the-field escapade — are defensive end Daniel Stubbs, wide receiver Michael Irvin and halfback Melvin Bratton.

In addition, fullback Alonzo

Highsmith, defensive tackle Jerome Brown, linebacker Winston Moss and reserve running back Cleveland Gary were named in a school investigation about cars leased in possible violation of an NCAA rule. Moss was suspended for the season opener, the others were cleared.

"I think the media has unfortunately labeled us as the bad guys," says Johnson, whose temper has grown short at times because of one incriminating headline after another. "I think it's a false perception of what we really have on our football team. From articles I have read, Penn State could very well be labeled the bad guys."

"We're in a metropolitan area, a very competitive media market, we're in the home of the popular TV program 'Miami Vice,' and a lot of it has to do with where we are, the publicity about the crime rate, etc.," Johnson says.

Playing without a "home field" advantage, Stanford won consecutive Rose Bowls in 1971-72 and Washington has gone 2-for-3 since 1978.

Ohio State and Michigan have born the brunt of the Pac-10's domination, each losing six times during the Big Ten's skid with Iowa losing twice and Illinois once.

"We've always been close, but we've seldom won," Schembechler said of Michigan. "That's not right. It's our job to do something about that."

The years of losing have left Big Ten coaches throwing their arms up in frustration. Cooper tried to get some tips on how to prepare for the game from his friend, Iowa Coach Hayden Fry, who has been to the Rose Bowl twice, but lost each time.

"I don't know how to approach the game," said Cooper, whose team will be making its first Rose Bowl appearance ever. "I've talked with Hayden Fry, who's a good friend. He said he let (his team) stay loose one time and held the reins the other and lost both times.

"We plan to take in all the activities." The Big Ten teams have tried all different types of strategies — arriving early and enjoying themselves; arriving early, but avoiding the pre-game hoopla; staying home as long as possible — without much success.

"We're loose. We don't let all of that stuff bother us," Hodson said. "We just go about our business." Arnsperger, 60, said he will approach the Sugar Bowl the same way he has approached every game in rolling up a 26-7 record over three years at LSU. And he said he doesn't 1981 game. High-test offenses to collide in Gator

By RON WORD
The Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Two high-powered offenses with contrasting styles will take the field Saturday as Stanford and Clemson meet for the first time ever in the Gator Bowl football game.

Stanford, coming off an 83 season, will be without the services of starting quarterback John Payne, who underwent surgery Monday on his right shoulder, and two other starters who were left behind for undisclosed reasons.

Braden, who finished the year 7-2 and won the Atlantic Coast Conference title with a team that combined power running and strong defense, will be trying to get back into the win column after two season-ending ties.

"The bowl game is a chance for us to come back and do something positive to end the season. It's another chance to play and win," Clemson Coach Danny Ford said.

"Getting to the bowl game is the biggest thing because there are only so many teams playing in bowl games. And we're really excited about playing Stanford because we've never played them before and they're a highly visible team."

"It'll be a big challenge for our players," Ford added. "And considering we've tied the last two bowl games we've played, it's a game we'd like to win."

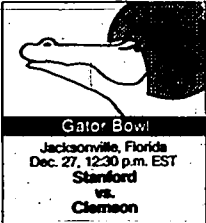

Clemson's offensive attack is centered around two excellent running backs, both from Florida. Senior tailback Terrence Flagler ran 180 times and gained 1,176 yards this season, while senior tailback Kenny Flowers gained 528 yards on 109 carries despite missing part of the season with injuries.

Bradley also said the Tigers have an excellent offensive line.

Stocks score another gain in slow trade

NEW YORK—The stock market posted moderate gains Friday in the slowest trading session in two years. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 3.52 to 1,930.40, bringing its gain for the week to 1.55 points.

In the broader market, advancing issues outpaced decliners by more than 8 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 626 issues higher, 489 lower and 547 unchanged. Activity slowed sharply on Friday: Big Board volume fell to 48.86 million shares from 95.41 million on Wednesday. It was the quietest trading day since 46.79 million shares changed hands exactly two years earlier, Dec. 26, 1984.

Trading was mixed within a narrow range for much of the day, with prices moving higher in afternoon activity as the markets thinned out. As on the day before Christmas, many market participants left work early or were taking a long holiday weekend.

In financial markets were closed Thursday for Christmas. Analysts said much of the tax-related selling of the early week — when many investors sold holdings to take profits under this year's more favorable capital gains tax rate — likely was over, and market gains and losses were reflecting seasonal factors rather than broad trends.

Some market watchers expected moderate advances through year end as investors bought stocks they believed remained bargain priced, or as portfolio managers added well-performing issues, such as drug issues, to their holdings to close out 1986.

Southern California Edison led the NYSE most active list, rising 1/4 to 35 on volume of 3.97 million shares. The stock begins trading ex-dividend on Monday.

Other active issues included AT&T, down 1/4 at 25 1/2; IBM, unchanged at 122; Federal National Mortgage, up 1/4 to 41 1/2; Goodyear, up 1/4 to 41 1/2; and Navistar, down 1/4 to 4 1/2.

Among other blue chips, USX fell 1/4 to 21 1/2; Eastman Kodak fell 1/4 to 69 1/2; American Express rose 1/4 to 59 1/2; General Motors rose 1/4 to 67 1/2; and Exxon was down 1/4 to 72 1/2. Merck rose 5/8 to 129 to lead the blue chips and a strong drug sector. Among other drug issues, Pfizer rose 1/4 to 62 1/2; SmithKline Beckman 1/4 to 94; Warner Lambert 1/4 to 60 1/2; and Upjohn 1/4 to 95 1/2.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials rose 0.23 to 275.13, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 0.17 to 246.92.

The NYSE index was up 0.14 to 141.14.

Hearst acquires syndicate

IRVINE, Calif. (AP) — Hearst Corp. says it agreed to acquire King Features Syndicate, a distributor of newspaper features, from News Corp. Ltd., the international media company controlled by publisher Rupert Murdoch.

The acquisition would solidify the position of Hearst's King Features Syndicate as the world's largest syndicator of comics, editorial cartoons, advice columns and opinion-page essays.

Another dark holiday season in Minnesota

Many meatpackers remain out of work

By JEFF BAENEN

The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Minn. — The Jaycees' sign on the outskirts proclaims "the good life is here to stay" in this town where hundreds of meatpackers face a second straight Christmas without work and the bitter aftermath of the long Hormel strike.

"It's hurt, definitely. It's split families, it's split friends," said Robert Foss, 71, a resident of this southern Minnesota town of 22,000 since 1954. "I don't think I'll live long enough to see this set-"

In September, union members at Geo. A. Hormel & Co.'s flagship plant ratified a contract ending the strike that began Aug. 17, 1985, but got no guarantee of recalls for those who refused to cross the picket line.

"(With) 26-20 hindsight, I would have crossed it in a minute," said Richard Auer, an 18-year Hormel employee who refused to return to work when the plant reopened in January. He has not been recalled. About 1,400 members of Local P-9 of the United Food and Commercial Workers walked out over wages and working conditions. Hormel, saying it needed to stay competitive, cut the base wage 23 percent, to $8.25 an hour, in October 1984.

When the plant reopened in January, about 550 employees crossed the line and the company hired 550 replacement workers.

Today the plant employs 1,015 — 461 returnees and 554 new hires — and 666 workers are recall list, said Hormel Senior Vice President Chuck Nyberg. The rest apparently have retired or left the area.

Hormel officials said they have no immediate plans to expand the workforce at the 4-year-old Austin plant, which could employ up to 2,000. At its peak, the $100 million plant employed 1,700 in the fall of 1983.

"It's terribly unfortunate and I feel badly because we still have some people out there who are good people," said Richard L. Knowlton, Hormel's president, board chairman and chief executive officer.

"We do not have the work for them," he said. When Local P-9 refused to end the strike, the parent union forced the local into trusteeship, suspended its officers and negotiated a contract that boosts the plant's base wage from $10 to $10.70 an hour over three years.

Suspended P-9 President Jim Guyette has appealed a federal judge's decision upholding the trusteeship and says he will take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court, if necessary.

The strike's scars run deep and vandalism that boosts the plant's base wage from $10 to $10.70 an hour over three years.

"We've got an awful lot of vandalism and no matter who did it, it's still a crime," said Police Chief Donald Hoffman, reporting 275 complaints on the picket line.

Japan's auto exports take record plunge; surplus shrinks

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's motor vehicle exports fell a record 15.1 percent in November from a year earlier, and the politically sensitive surplus in its overall trade balance shrank from October's level, reprisal said Friday.

The contractions were linked to the sharp rise in the value of the Japanese yen, which makes Japanese products more expensive to foreign customers and has caused trouble in export-oriented manufacturing industries.

The strong currency also contributed to a 10 percent decrease from a year earlier in overtime hours worked in Japanese factories, the Labor Ministry said.

The Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association said the decrease in exports of cars, trucks and buses in November, to 516,926 vehicles, was the sharpest year-to-year drop since the group adopted its current method of keeping records in 1979.

It followed a 9.4 percent decline in October over the same month the previous year and marked the fifth consecutive monthly decline.

Japan posted a November surplus of $8.144 billion in its current account, the broadest measure of foreign trade, the Finance Ministry announced.

The surplus, a major cause of trade friction with other countries, reached a record $9.106 billion in September but then shrank to $8.283 billion in October.

Although it was off from the previous month, the November total was far larger than a $4.518 billion surplus a year earlier.

After seasonal factors were taken into consideration, the current account surplus came to a record $8.749 billion, growing from $8.141 billion in October.

The current account measures not only trade in merchandise, but also in services, primarily investment earnings, and transfer payments such as foreign aid.

Japan's overall balance of payments registered a record $9.333 billion deficit in November, exceeding the previous record of an $8.081 billion shortfall in October. A year earlier, the balance was in the red by $290 million.

The balance of payments is in deficit month because of heavy purchases by the Japanese Treasury bonds, which count on the books as an import of an IOU.

However, Finance Ministry officials said they could not explain why the deficit was so much higher than the month before.

Japan's merchandise trade surplus totaled $8.504 billion in November, falling from a record $9.333 billion in October, though it November, exceeding the previous record of an $8.081 billion shortfall in October. A year earlier, the balance was in the red by $290 million.

New onion in demand for dry eyes

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - A new variety of onion has an odd name but is in big demand because it won't bring tears to your eyes, its developers say. Texas Grano 1015Y onions weigh about a pound, are about the size of a softball, were developed at the Texas A&M University System and "won't bring tears to your eyes when you cut it and eat it," said Leonard Pike, a professor of horticulture.

Humphreys terms changes mostly result of re-regulation

LEWISTON (AP) - The outgoing chairman of Moore Financial Group says Franking in Idaho has changed more in the last six years than it did in his first 30 years in the business. Fred C. Humphreys of Boise is stepping down at the end of this month as chairman of the board of Moore Financial, which operates the Idaho First National Bank chain and other financial institutions. Moore Financial has assets of $3.2 billion and 111 offices in several states.

Cotton fields still unpicked

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's cotton harvest continues to drag in some areas because of poor weather conditions, according to weekly government survey reports. As of Dec. 20, an estimated 86 percent of the 1986 cotton acreage was harvested, compared with a 91 percent progress normally at this time, said the Joint Agricultural Weather Facility.

MCA discussing acquisition of Motown's record business

Los Angeles Times. LOS ANGELES - MCA is holding discussions with Motown-Records Corp. to acquire its recorded music business, industry sources said. The sources indicated that if the deal is completed, the purchase price is not likely to exceed $75 million. MCA, parent of the Universal Studios complex, has stepped up efforts to expand its music business since 1983, when the company recruited former rock star manager Irving Azoff to run its Universal City-based records group. Shortly after Azoff was hired, the company negotiated the right to distribute Motown's records for five years in the United States, and later tried unsuccessfully to buy Polygram Records.

Idaho meat output down

BOISE (AP) - Red meat production in Idaho dropped 8 percent from the month before, a federal reporting agency says. The Idaho Agricultural Statistics Service said red meat production in November was 43.8 million pounds. That's down from October's harvest of 47.5 million pounds and the 45.6 million pounds processed one year ago.
