Blackened hotel yields 95 bodies

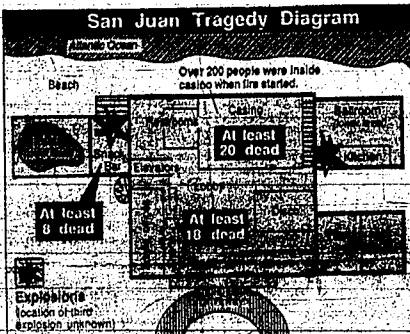

By KERNAN TURNER
The Associated Press

Kin wait quietly — A7

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Investigators searching for evidence of arson concentrated Friday on a blackened corner of the Dupont Plaza Hotel where the ballroom was located. Police said search teams had found 95 bodies. The head of a union representing casino workers charged that the death toll in the New Year's Eve fire was so high partly because hotel security agents locked the access door to the casino, located directly above the ballroom, and another door leading to a conference room. Police Superintendent Carlos Lopez Feliciano told reporters outside the darkened hotel Friday night as searchers quit for the night that 95 bodies had been found. "They consider that 95 is a complete count, but tomorrow they are going to search again just in case. At this moment, 95 is the final total, I hope," he said. It apparently was the second-worst hotel fire in U.S. history. The Winecoff Hotel fire in Atlanta on Dec. 7, 1946 left 119 people dead. Officials at times have given conflicting casualty estimates of the number of dead. Shortly before Lopez Feliciano spoke, Gov. Rafael

Hernandez Colon said 93 had died. Earlier Friday, officials reported the death toll at 60, then 53, and then 52. Victor Villalba, president of the casino employees' union at the hotel, said at a news conference Friday that many people died pushing up against a locked door leading to the pool area on the west side of the hotel. He called for an investigation by federal and Puerto Rican authorities. "If those doors had been open or if the hotel security services would not have controlled access to casino entrances in the way they did, the number of victims would not have been so high," said Villalba, president of the Association of Casino Employees. Other hotel employees said earlier in the week that it is common for doors to be barred during emergencies to prevent robberies of the casino cashier. Hotel spokesman Rissig Licha would not comment on the report that the doors had been locked. Investigators focused their attention on the ground-floor corner of the building where the ballroom was located. Witnesses at the nearby swimming pool reported hearing explosions and said the ballroom and the casino directly above it virtually exploded in flames Wednesday afternoon. Searchers have hunted for bodies through the tangle of burnt furniture, twisted cables and collapsed ceiling for two days. Undersecretary of Health Emilio Davila said bodies were found from the mezzanine-level casino up to the fourth floor. The corpse of a woman was

Shultz says Japan must open market

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George F. Shultz says trade problems will dominate U.S.-Japanese relations during 1987. In a year-end interview with the Japanese newspaper Yomiuri Shimbun, Shultz emphasized that Japan must open its market to more imports, from developed and developing nations alike. Shultz emphasized the change that has occurred as a result of the victory of the Democrats in Senate elections last November. Shultz linked this need to his country's long-range Asian strategy by noting that Japan and the United States can better counter Soviet advances in the Asia-Pacific region by encouraging exports of Asian nations, and correcting multilateral trade imbalances.

Immigration law boon for forgers

By CAM ROSSIE
The Associated Press

MONTERREY, Mexico — The new U.S. immigration law has been a boon to shysters who forge documents for Mexicans seeking to cross the border, but it won't stem the flow of illegal aliens, officials in northern Mexico say. "The black market for forged documents is booming, mostly in the United States but also with agents in the Mexican border cities," said Jorge Bustamante, director of the Tijuana-based Colegio de la Frontera Norte.

The Immigration Reform and Control Act, signed by President Reagan Nov. 6, seeks to contain the flow of illegal immigrants to the United States by penalizing employers who knowingly hire undocumented workers and increasing the Immigration and Naturalization Service budget. Under an amnesty provision, aliens who have lived continuously in the United States since before Jan. 1, 1982, are eligible for permanent resident status.

The law requires employers to verify the residency status of all new workers by examining documents such as a U.S. passport, a U.S. birth certificate, a Social Security card, a driver's license or other state-issued identification. Bustamante said the law has created "a new industry of so-called lawyers," whom he described as scrupulous individuals who claim they can "fix things for a fee." They offer to forge documents and to help Mexicans through the amnesty proceedings for a fee ranging from $1,000 to $5,000, Bustamante said.

The daily newspaper El Norte of Monterrey expressed its disdain of the law in an editorial cartoon showing Uncle Sam at a carnival shooting gallery. The targets were Mexicans lined up on a shelf. "Shoot an undocumented. Three for $1," the caption read. "An El Norte editorial said, 'The law is not a country that presumes to be the vanguard of civil rights, liberty and justice' but that the law 'strikes a hard blow to the Latin minority that lives there.'"

Mexican newspapers have complained the law could result in the deportation of millions of Mexicans living in the United States. The measure so angered one federal official from Monterrey, northern Mexico's largest city, he toured the border area to criticize it. "The real and imaginary barriers they think to set up will not control the flow of illegal immigration," Romeo Flores Caballero, chairman of the commission on border affairs in the Federal Chamber of Deputies, said while in El Paso, Texas.

The mayor's office said Ciudad Juarez, just south of El Paso, reports the only noticeable effects of the law is "a bombardment" of radio and newspaper advertisements of

Students in Peking cheer release of detainees after demonstration

The Associated Press

PEKING — About 200 students at Peking University gathered on Friday around banned posters heralding the release of students detained in a pro-democracy demonstration and urging top Chinese leaders to take a public stand on the unrest. One poster called for a news conference at which the students could tell the story of their Thursday protests, which were in defiance of an official ban on unauthorized demonstrations.

A student who spoke on condition of anonymity said all 24 students whom protesters claimed were detained by police were released and returned to campus. Other students said they were not certain whether all were released.

The students had been detained Thursday when more than 1,000 protesters marched onto central Peking's Tiananmen Square and engaged in a shoving match with police who had blocked the area off. About 5,000 students marched that night to demand the release of the detained students. Officials agreed, but only 11 students were seen returning to campus to heroes' welcomes. The official Xinhua News Agency reported the students were freed, but it did not say what happened to several other "troublemakers" it said were detained. The number of marchers dwindled along the 10-mile route to Tiananmen because of sub-zero cold and icy streets. About 1,000 students made it to the square on Friday and staged a sit-in in front of the Monument to the People's Heroes. Police urged them to leave but did not try to physically remove them, even though demonstrations at the 100-acre square were banned under new regulations. The students finally agreed to board buses provided by officials and left, according to sources who spoke on condition of anonymity. The sit-in capped nearly 24 hours of tense confrontations between thousands of protesters and police.

About 200 students milled around the Peking University bulletin board area Friday afternoon, reading a half-dozen posters advocating democracy and supporting the demonstrations. They listened to speeches on democracy made in low, earnest voices.

The pro-democracy demonstrations spread to at least 10 cities after an extensive government campaign to initiate political reform, including more democracy, resulted in free-wheeling discussions at universities. Chinese youths have been exposed to the West during top reformer Deng Xiaoping's open-door policy, leading to widespread acceptance of some aspects of Western culture.

Scientists going aloft to see how chemicals reach ozone

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — Scientists announced on Friday plans to use a high-flying jet to study how chemicals at the Earth's surface reach the ozone layer, where they present a long-term threat to life on the planet. The experiment will test a theory about how air is exchanged between the troposphere, the layer of air closest to Earth, and the higher stratosphere, where the ozone damage is occurring, said Philip Russell, project manager for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Scientists believe man-made chemicals called chlorofluorocarbons, used in refrigerants and in manufacturing, deplete the ozone layer, which shields the Earth from dangerous ultraviolet radiation. More radiation could mean an increase in human skin cancer and destruction of aquatic plants and animals, essential to the food chain. The law requires these questions first came up a decade or so ago, the scientific community was really unable to answer them because our body of solid scientific information about the stratosphere was limited at that time," Russell said. "It's an important question in the functioning of the stratosphere, but we do not expect any great breakthroughs in being able to discover anything that would make a major change in stratospheric ozone depletion."

Instead, he said, the project's aim is basic research that will expand the volume of knowledge about the mysterious stratosphere. The scientists will use a NASA aircraft called the ER-2, a larger, advanced version of the U-2 spy plane, to carry 16 automated scientific instruments aloft. The instruments will sample air, water vapor and ozone at the tops of giant cumulonimbus thunderclouds along Australia's northern coast. The 100 or so researchers who will accompany the ER-2 to Australia will stay on the ground when the plane makes its flights more than 10 miles above the Earth's surface. Russell said the ER-2 will leave for Darwin, Australia, on Tuesday and begin its research flights about Jan. 14. Other long-flying aircraft from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the National Science Foundation will fly experiments in the lower portions of the anvill-shaped thunderclouds and radar networks will be provided by Australia and China. The theory by Edwin Danielson of NASA — Ames holds that air, water vapor and chemicals are carried into the stratosphere by the clouds in tropical areas. The tops of the clouds are cooled by space, while the lower crests are warmed by the Earth's heat, creating an upward-flowing convective current.

Russell said the theory also would explain why the stratosphere is so dry. Under the theory, water vapor freezes as it hits the cold air at the top of the troposphere and the heavy ice crystals drop back into the cloud. "The dryness of the stratosphere has been a mystery for decades," he said. "We really won't understand how the stratosphere operates completely unless we find the reasons behind the freeze-drying."

State functions familiar territories to incoming first lady

By MARILYN HAUKE ESSEX
The Associated Press

BOISE — Being hostess at state dinners, mingling with top dignitaries and giving her home a final inspection before drives of people shuttle through her private living quarters will be a familiar role for Carol Andrus.

On Monday, Mrs. Andrus starts her second stint as Idaho's first lady when her husband, Cecil, is sworn in as the state's 28th governor.

Mrs. Andrus, who turned 54 the day after Christmas, said she recently met with Lola Evans, wife of outgoing Gov. John Evans, at the house on North 21st Street, Boise, that the state provides for its top executive.

CAROL ANDRUS
Begins 2nd stint

"I had some real pangs of nostalgia," said Mrs. Andrus, who lived there from 1971 through 1976 after her husband's first term and a half year after the second.

Looking back to her school days in Eugene, Ore., where she and Andrus were high school sweethearts, "I cannot think of any point... where I envisioned being anything more than an average citizen.

But in 37 years of marriage, 26 have been dominated by politics. Andrus served three terms in the state Senate before an unsuccessful bid for governor in 1968. He came back for another state Senate term before claiming Idaho's top-elected position in 1974. Re-elected in a landslide four years later, he resigned halfway through that second term to serve as Interior Secretary for former President Jimmy Carter.

"I was never happy living in the East," says Mrs. Andrus. After just a few months in Washington, she said during a visit to Sun Valley that the only good thing about the nation's capital was that "Everybody is a somebody so therefore everybody is a nobody."

Wearily from a long campaign season she desisted as particularly nasty, she hasn't had time to contemplate changes she might make the second time around as first lady.

Used to doing her own cooking and some of the housework, Mrs. Andrus sees her role as primarily supporting her husband and representing the state, and she maintains an active relationship with her three daughters and two grandchildren.

But she had some definite opinions on the inaugural festivities, pushing the inaugural ball to be held Saturday night and state lawmakers to immediately assume his old job.

"By the time it was over, I was probably one of the few people who didn't enjoy the ball," she said of the first inaugural gala. A week's activities were crammed into a single day, she said, "I'm not going to be on my feet all day."

She hoped to wear a dress she discovered on a wholesale-buying trip to Dallas with her daughter Tracy Andrus-Shane, who opened a dress shop in downtown Boise months ago.

Mrs. Andrus ordered the dress from Beaverton, Ore., the region's nearest retail outlet. But when the gown arrived, "it didn't fit anywhere," she said.

Alterations were begun, but she was going to enjoy it this year because "I'm not going to be on my feet all day."

Once the inaugural festivities are over, Mrs. Andrus faces what she called the dreaded task of packing and moving to the old governor's home. But state lawmakers will be immediately asked for a reprieve from the state requirement that the governor live there.

When the Andrus returned from their home in McLean, Va., in 1980, they built-in the home, footholds which characterize as a pseudo-rustic mansion with views of the Owyhee Mountains and Idaho's capital city.

It offers privacy — considered a rare commodity at the official governor's residence. She recalled getting up one morning while first lady and "looking out at a second-story bedroom window to see a crew of unexpected window washers peering back in."

If living in the public eye becomes occasionally unnerving, "I may escape to my little house up here" in the foothills.

Mrs. Andrus also will be able to put behind her what she describes as a campaign that took a sharp turn from previous ones.

"This for me was the most difficult, the most negative campaign I've ever been involved in," she said. "I hate to see politics take its course. If negative campaigning works, it's going to be used more."

Andrus did not respond to personal attacks that were used increasingly by the David Leroy camp in the waning days of the campaign. "The reason he feels he came so close to losing is because he didn't respond in kind," Mrs. Andrus contended.

"I felt he should have been more aggressive in attacking his opponent on issues — but not on a personal basis," she said. However, Mrs. Andrus anticipates no changes in her husband's campaign style in any future bids for office.

Although politics was not on the agenda when she married her husband in 1949, she hasn't regretted her life preparing for, resting from and being actively involved in political campaigns.

"I probably did a better job of picking a husband than many people do at that tender young age."

PUC orders gas rate cut; largest chunk to big users

BOISE (AP) — Idaho utility regulators have approved a $4.1 million reduction in the rates Inter-Mountain Gas Co. charges its customers, but they have also agreed to give commercial and large-volume users a bigger share of the rate cut.

The decision by the Public Utilities Commission reflects the continuing reduction in the price Inter-Mountain Gas must pay for the energy it distributes to its 100,000 northern Idaho customers and will not affect its overall financial picture.

The commission allocation of a greater share of the cut to nonresidential customers was intended to eliminate the subsidy those users have been provided for residential rates.

Under the PUC order, residential customers using gas for both water and space heating will see bills drop 8.8 percent. For the average customer, the savings will be about $35 a year. Residential customers using gas for only one or the other will get a 2.3 percent rate cut.

For commercial users, the rate decrease will total 4.1 percent and for large-volume users it will amount to 8 percent.

The utility, southern Idaho's largest natural gas distributor, had also asked for changes in the way it calculates customer bills, but the PUC rejected that request. The commission said it did not want to consider rate restructuring in the middle of the winter heating season.

"On another matter, the commission agreed to reinstate an interim $16,000 rate increase for Capital Securities Water Corp., which serves about 1,300 customers in west-central Boise.

The PUC had revoked that interim increase two months ago after determining that customers with water meters beginning with "S" through "Z" had not been billed for over two years.

It restored the hike after determining the utility was making progress on those billing problems.

The higher rates will remain in effect until the PUC finishes a complete investigation of the Capital Securities rate structure. At that time, a refund could be ordered if the commission determines all or part of the increase was not warranted.

Racketeering, unfair trade charges fly in Northern Idaho court fight

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Two Panhandle electronics industry companies have taken their battle for a share of the increasingly lucrative market to court in a dispute that has escalated into charges of racketeering and unfair restraint of trade.

Transactor Systems Inc., the 15-year-old Hayden company that has 75% share of the manufacture of devices to protect sophisticated electronics and computer equipment from damage due to power surges, has sought more than $1 million in damages against fledgling competitor Northern Technologies Inc. of Coeur d'Alene. Transactor claims its victim of racketeering.

But Northern Technologies, a two-year-old company that claims its fighting for its commercial life, has countered with a $1.7 million damage claim, accusing Transactor of trying to run it out of business by forcing it to cough up huge sums of money to defend itself in court.

Neither side is commenting on the legal fight, although Northern Technologies chief Stephen Baker said, "We still keep running into each other in the marketplace even with it as big as it is. So it makes for an interesting situation."

At the center of the controversy is the fact that Northern Technologies, which has sales hit $2.5 million in just two years of operation, has hired over a dozen former Transactor employees in what Transactor claims is a breach of a contractual provision prohibiting employees from working for a competitor for at least two years.

Transactor, which posted its first profit on more than a year last summer on just over $2 million in sales, has sued, accusing Northern Technologies of violating anti-racketeering laws by raiding its workforce and has used proprietary information to unfair advantage. The company has also sued four former workers now employed by Northern Technologies — for breaching the "non-compete" clause in their contract.

One of those workers, Rick Varnell, has filed a countersuit, accusing the company bid businesses that he was guilty of criminal acts and should or would be in jail.

Those workers contend, however, that the "non-compete" clause is an unreasonable restraint on their right to hold a job and that it is not necessary to protect Transactor's interests.

Northern Technologies has denied the allegations against it, claiming Transactor's business is not unique and does not rely on trade secrets, and in his counter damage claim, the smaller company accused Transactor of harassing it and interfering with its customers as well as trying to put it out of business through unfair competitive practices.

Northern Technologies contended its rapid growth was not due to information it got from former Transactor employees but from economic and assurance advantages it has.

Leroy informs his unpaid creditors that campaign treasury is broke

BOISE (AP) — Outgoing Republican Lt. Gov. David Leroy has advised dozens of unpaid creditors from his unsuccessful bid for governor that his campaign treasury is broke and those outstanding debts may never be completely paid off.

"It had been our intention to have everything paid in full by this time," Leroy said in a Dec. 30-dated letter over his signature that was apparently sent to people and businesses his campaign still owed money.

"Although we consider the recent campaign a success, the committee finds itself in a position of owing over $50,000 to 46 creditors," the letter said, adding, "At this point, the campaign fund has no money as the fundraising letter we mailed recently was only modestly successful. It is uncertain that the committee will ultimately be able to pay all the bills."

Although considered the underdog in the state, Leroy mounted a vigorous campaign that got a last-minute boost from a presidential visit and made the race all but even by election day. But out of more than $80,000 in votes cast, he fell 3,500 votes short of defeating former Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Andrus pumped nearly $1 million into the campaign, ending it with no debt and a small balance. Leroy spent nearly $300,000 while raising just under $850,000.

"We do tentatively plan to put on a special big name toast or fundraiser in the spring and hopefully will raise enough money to make partial restitution," Leroy said in the letter to creditors. "We sincerely appreciate your support during the campaign and trust that support will continue as we work to resolve this matter."

Among the debts listed by the Leroy campaign on its most recent financial report was nearly $15,000 to a Caldwell printing company and almost $10,000 to a Boise printer.

Other bills covered travel, lodging, telephone, printing, and campaign supplies, the oldest a $500 bill for video productions dating back to May.

ISP figures show decline in fatalities

BOISE (AP) — Despite the bloodiest four-day holiday in six years over Christmas, traffic deaths on Idaho highways in 1986 were down fractionally from the previous year, according to preliminary figures from the Idaho State Police.

Through New Year's Eve, the State Police reported 253 deaths. The last was on Dec. 28, the end of the Christmas holiday that saw six people die. The total figure, however, could still be revised upward as statistics are refined.

Although just two deaths below the 1985 level, if the preliminary figure holds it would mark 1986 as the second-safest year on Idaho highways in two decades, spokesman Rick Owens said.

Owens credited the controversial 55 mph speed limit, better and safer built vehicles and increased use of seatbelts, which was bolstered last summer by a new state law authorizing a fine for failure to wear a seatbelt if a motorist is stopped for some other violation.

Traffic deaths in Idaho peaked at 349 in 1973, the year before the reduced speed limit was mandated. That was 142 more deaths than recorded just a decade earlier.

But since 1974, traffic fatalities have been on a downward slide, hitting their lowest level in 1984 at 242. The increase in 1985 was blamed in part on an unusually large number of multiple-fatal accidents.

Judge: Speculation hindering trial

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The judge who is to preside over Mark Hofmann's trial on charges of plotting bomb-making charges says speculation about the possibility of a plea bargain has hurt Hofmann's chances of receiving a fair trial.

Third District Judge Kenneth Rignup, who met privately with prosecutors and defense attorneys Wednesday, said afterward that Hofmann had not changed his pleas of innocent to the murder charges and 28 other felony counts.

Rignup said he was concerned that speculation about a plea bargain had hindered Hofmann's chances of receiving a fair trial because of the difficulty in finding jurors with no opinions on the case.

Hofmann, 32, is charged with capital homicide in the Oct. 15, 1985, pipe-bomb deaths of Steven Christensen, 31, and Kathleen Sheels, 40. He also is charged with 28 felonies, counts of bomb-making, fraud and theft by deception.

Prosecutors contend Hofmann, a dealer in rare documents, killed to cover up transactions in which allegedly fraudulent historical documents, some of which challenged Mormon Church doctrine, were sold to the church and other collectors for hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Attorneys are to argue a defense motion to admit as evidence polygraph tests taken by Hofmann and his wife in a hearing Jan. 29. Arguments on other motions, including requests for a change of venue, sequestration of jurors and suppression of evidence, are scheduled for Jan. 12.

Earlier this week, a Salt Lake City television station quoted Chief Deputy Salt Lake County Attorney Bud Ellett as saying that a deal could be struck by the end of the week.

However, Ellett later told The Associated Press he had neither confirmed nor denied that a plea bargain was being arranged.

Ellett said he was asked by a reporter if a plea bargain was being worked out, and replied, "If you're sure of your sources, I guess you'll be sitting around this weekend."

However, he said, the comment was misconstrued to infer a plea bargain would be finalized over the weekend.

Meanwhile, Ellett said he had received several telephone calls from angry citizens opposing a possible plea bargain.

Hofmann is to stand trial March 2 on the two capital homicide charges, which carry a maximum penalty of life imprisonment or the death penalty.

Attorneys on both sides have said discussing any plea bargain negotiation before it is finalized violates the professional code of conduct for attorneys and can result in disciplinary action.

In a related development, the Deseret News reported in Wednesday's editions that unnamed officials in New York had said they mailed a letter to the Salt Lake County attorney's office guaranteeing they won't prosecute Hofmann on fraud charges involving "The Oath of a Freeman" if Hofmann pleads guilty to similar charges in Utah.

The newspaper said earlier that former prosecutor Gerry D'Elia had confirmed that he had recently discussed fraud evidence with New York law authorities.

He said the evidence involved Hofmann's attempts to sell the "out" purported to be one of the oldest documents printed on a hand press in North America. Utah prosecutors contend the document is a forgery.

6 to retain jobs under governor

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus has announced he will retain six top people from the outgoing administration of Gov. John Evans.

The announcement on Friday was the first involving appointees that did not include at least some new faces on the incoming governor's management team.

Retaining their jobs after Andrus is inaugurated on Monday will be Water Resources Department Director Ken Dunn, state Adjutant General Darrell Manning, Labor and Industrial Services Department Director Gary Gould, Disability Determinations Director Stan Kees, state Insurance Fund Manager Merle Parsley and Division of Insurance Management Administrator A. Wayne Mitteldeier.

Judge drops felony charges, blames Gause

Jerome County prosecutor failed to bring case to court in allotted time

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Six felony charges brought in Jerome County against Timothy Vernon Alger, 27, have been dismissed because the Jerome County prosecutor failed to bring the case into court within the time required for a speedy trial.

Fifth District Judge Phillip Becker said that by failing to notify the court that Alger was available for trial, Prosecutor Mark Gause violated the defendant's rights.

Alger, a resident of the state of Washington, was charged with the six felony counts in 1984, after he and Jeffrey Morris, also 27, from Washington, led police officers to a running gun battle from Twin Falls into Jerome County. During the chase, Twin Falls Police Officer Larry Stroberg was wounded and several police cars were hit by gunfire.

Alger fled on foot after the car in which the two men were riding crashed into a dairy corral, east of Jerome.

Alger remained hidden in the desert and farm area and allegedly broke into a Jerome County farm home where an automobile was stolen. He was arrested when he abandoned the vehicle and again fled on foot, falling from a rock ledge in the Snake River Canyon, just north of Twin Falls.

In issuing the order dismissing all of the charges involved locally, Judge Becker said the initial complaint against Alger was filed on March 28, 1984, and he was arraigned in court April 17, 1984, pleading innocent.

Alger and Morris escaped from the Jerome County jail on May 20, 1984. They were arrested in Missouri, early in June, and returned to Idaho.

Becker said then that Jerome County did not actively pursue efforts to return Alger to Idaho, but elected to "sit back" and wait for Ada County authorities to bring him back to face charges in Boise, a move that did not take place until November 1985.

Becker pointed out that delays in getting the man into court were not delays made at Alger's request. He said Alger was available for court appearances in Jerome during a 9-month period beginning in November 1985, during which he was held in the Ada County jail, awaiting trial there.

"The Jerome County prosecutor was aware, or certainly should have been aware, that the defendant was available for trial in Jerome County on his criminal charges," Becker wrote in his decision.

Gause failed to inform the court that Alger was available for trial in Jerome, Becker said.

Becker concluded that Alger was available for a "little more than 10 months, during which Gause neglected and failed to inform this court, this being a violation of the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy public trial."

Becker said the lack of action also constitutes a violation of the state code. This left the court with only one remedy — to dismiss the six felony counts in Jerome County, the order explained.

The dismissal doesn't mean Alger will be free to walk away. Both he and Morris have been sentenced to prison terms in Boise and the state of Washington for armed-robbery convictions. It does mean there will be no trial and no sentences in connection with the crimes in Jerome County.

Gause said Friday that he is being blamed for the dismissal of the charges, and that may be true. However, he said that because Ada County authorities returned Alger from Oklahoma after the escape, he felt that county had prior right to prosecute. He concluded some time ago, he said, that probably too much time had elapsed for prosecution on the felonies other than escape.

"I was basically interested in the escape charge," Gause said. "This was an unusual case, with (Alger) wanted in the state of Washington and Boise prior to charges filed against him here. Some of these things had happened a year and a half ago before I became involved," he added. "We did apply to bring him here, but Boise applied first and was allowed to return him here," Gause said.

Gause said he was not aware of Idaho Statute 19-3501, which Becker quoted as requiring dismissal of the charges. The code states that if a defendant, whose trial has not been postponed at his or her own request, is not brought to trial within 6 months from the date the indictment or information is filed, the action may be dismissed.

At long last, snow: Skiers enjoy a big dump

TWIN FALLS — Many Magic Valley motorists fell victim to sudden winter driving conditions Thursday night and Friday morning, but the first major snow storm since Nov. 23 left skiers and resort owners smiling.

The forecast calls for another storm today of about the same magnitude as the New Year's Day storm, but the 30-day forecast is for more cold, dry weather.

Many traffic accidents were reported early Friday morning, as motorists headed for work on ice- and snow-covered roads.

Idaho State Police officers reported that several vehicles slid off Interstate Highway 84, U.S. 39 and U.S. 93 early Friday morning, but there was no serious injury. Twin Falls city police reported only one minor injury in a collision on Washington Street North. More numerous were the dented fenders and hurt feelings resulting from vehicles sliding on icy streets.

Roads in Magic Valley were clear of ice by early afternoon, but police warned drivers to be prepared for changing road conditions from today's storm.

Around the area, ski resorts reported new snow ranging from 5-12 inches.

Pomerelle, south of Burley, was listing a foot of new snow Friday morning. Resort officials said the storm began just after noon Thursday and continued most of the night. Winds that accompanied the storm blew snow from some of the upper ridges. In some open areas the total depth to 8 inches, but on sheltered runs there was a good foot of powder, they said.

Sun Valley Co. officials said about 4-5 inches of snow fell on Baldy and Dollar mountains, which improved conditions greatly. Snowmaking is continuing and officials said they were hoping to open additional runs if current weather conditions continue. The storm brought total depths to 22 inches on the Baldy trails where snow was made.

Clouds were moving in across the mountains Friday afternoon.

Soldier Mountain officials reported 8 inches of new snow, saying it may now be possible to open the bowls for weekend skiing. Like Sun Valley, Soldier has been operating largely on man-made snow on lower runs.

Magic Mountain received about 6 inches, but resort co-owner Gary Nebeker said more is needed for an opening of just waiting to see what develops."

Several Burley officials said the city is sending material supporting its prison application to Brown's committee along with a request for reconsideration of support for Boise as a prison site.

Burley was among 24 communities statewide seeking the prison, which is expected to provide 200 jobs.

December snow measurements from the Blaine County Soil Conservation District show both snow depth and water content are near record lows on most of the snow courses. The overall average of water on the Big Wood Drainage this year is 31 percent of normal.

Gale Roberts, conservationist in the Halley SCS office, said the Galena Summit snow course has a record dating back to 1949. As of Jan. 1, it had only 18 inches of snow, the second-lowest reading on record. The lowest report was 7 inches, measured Jan. 1, 1977.

This year's measurement also shows 3.6 inches of moisture, or 24 percent of normal. Last year at this time there were 9.3 inches of snow and 9 inches of water.

Vienna Mine in Sawtooth Valley had 26 inches of snow and 6.4 inches of water, or 43 percent of normal. Last year there was a reading of 14 inches of water on that course on Jan. 1.

On the Little Wood River drainage, Muldoon reported no snow or water, compared to 14 inches of snow and 8 inches of water last January.

Advisory council delays stance on prison site

BOISE (AP) — The state Permanent Building Fund Advisory Council will take a wait-and-see position on a site for a new maximum-security prison until the Idaho Legislature comes to town, one member says.

"There's a total state of disorganization right now," Drury Brown, Blackfoot, a retired newspaper publisher, said. "We (the five council members) serve at the pleasure of the governor and we don't know if we'll be reappointed.

Unofficially, we've been told that we will stay for the time being."

The council on Dec. 15 voiced strong support for building a new prison facility near the Idaho State Prison south of Boise, which was the choice of Public Works Director Brian Chase. But the state Corrections Board several days earlier unanimously chose Burley as the site for a new prison.

Meanwhile, Gov. elect Cecil Andrus, who will be sworn in Monday, didn't retain Chase, and Andrus has raised questions about the need for a new prison facility.

"I can't imagine anything more confusing than the present situation," Brown said. "There's a new person being appointed to replace Director Brian Chase. But the state administrator, and we haven't heard anything from that person as to when a meeting will be called."

Brown said that Andrus questioning the need for another prison facility

"puts us even more in the position of just waiting to see what develops."

Several Burley officials said the city is sending material supporting its prison application to Brown's committee along with a request for reconsideration of support for Boise as a prison site.

Burley was among 24 communities statewide seeking the prison, which is expected to provide 200 jobs.

Nampa facility to house troubled girls

Former McAuley's Girls Home in Buhl didn't bid for state contract

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Troubled girls from Magic Valley in need of structured living arrangements away from their own home will soon be going to the Plantation Home in Nampa.

The facility, which is expected to open about Feb. 1, has been leased by the Northern Idaho Children's Home (NICH) of Lewiston, which last month was awarded a state contract to provide a secure environment for girls who cannot function in foster homes in their own community.

Steve Woodworth, Boise, chief of social services for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, said the contract was awarded to NICH, a private, non-profit facility, in competitive bid.

Bids also were received from the Idaho Youth Ranch, Rupert, which has operated a girls home in Boise, and Ed Burlington, who operates a boys home in Kimberly. His bid proposal was to use the former McAuley's Girls Home in Buhl, Woodworth said.

The decision by the Health and Welfare Department to consolidate available funds for one more security-conscious facility has resulted in ending state contracts with both the Youth Ranch home for girls in Boise and the McAuley Home at Buhl.

The Youth Ranch closed its Boise girls home

Jan. 1, but its boys homes in Rupert, Nampa and Boise are not affected, a spokesman at the Rupert ranch office said.

Jean Dowd, Kimberly, who was administrator of the former Buhl home, said board members did not want to bid for the new contract as they were not comfortable with the new concept of more security.

The McAuley home, which opened about 10 years ago under leadership of Sister Rosemary Boessen, now of Twin Falls, functioned in an open, homelike atmosphere, with girls attending school in Buhl.

There was much support not only from school personnel who worked with individual girls, but also from many individuals and groups in the Buhl community, says Florence Pierce, board president.

She said board members were pleased that upon the demise of the facility, instead of having outstanding debts, they had some $8,000 to distribute among many civic organizations which had helped the home.

The money was obtained from an auction, held after the facility closed Nov. 15, of some of the furnishings which had been donated to the girls home and from sale of a van also owned by McAuley's.

The building, which is owned by the Buhl Catholic Church, has reverted to use by the church for some classes and also now provides living quarters for Johnny Johnson, the church custodian and his family.

Pierce said the board did not want to disclose the amount of the gifts, but donations are being sent to the Buhl Catholic Church for its youth program; the Buhl High School in recognition of help from Judy Ware with former students; the Buhl Library; the Buhl Quick Response Unit and the Buhl Senior Citizens Center. Funds also were donated for restroom improvements at the Buhl Swimming pool.

Also benefiting from the funds are the Castelford Quick Response Unit, Harra's Nursing Home, Magic Valley Farm, Hotline, the Salvation Army, United Way of Magic Valley, Volunteers Against Violence and West End Ministerial Association.

There were only three girls at the Buhl home when it closed, Dowd said. They were transferred to foster homes or other local living arrangements were made.

Over the decade of its existence, the Buhl home has housed probably 100 girls, she estimated. The facility was named for Mother Katherine McAuley of Ireland, who took in homeless girls outside of Dublin, Ireland.

Dowd, who now works with Camp Fire Inc., in Twin Falls, says the state no longer needs the kind of environment provided at the former

Twin Falls boy joins aunt as 1st baby of year

By CHAUNDE CHAMBERLAIN

TWIN FALLS — The first baby of the year, born in 1987 for the Twin Falls area, arrived at 12:18 p.m. at the Magic given to 1987's first baby in Twin Valley Regional Medical Center Falls, Cheryl said.

Andrew, the new baby, is the MVRMC spokesman, said son of Cheryl and Andrew Summers said the tradition of presenting the first baby of the year with special gifts is the idea of local merchants and is something organized by the hospital.

Cheryl Albanese began labor at 9 p.m. Tuesday, and quickly checked into the hospital. Labor pains continued until New Year's Day, and doctors decided to perform a Caesarean section at 10:30 a.m.

Surgery lasted until 11:18, when Andrew Anthony made his appearance as the new year's first baby. Andrew will be joining the Albanese family of parents Cheryl and Andrew, 6-year-old sister Christy, and brothers Michael and Steven, ages 3 and 2 respectively.

It was difficult, but everything's fine now," Albanese said.

This is not the first new year's baby in the family, she said. Her mother had the first Twin Falls baby of 1974, who is Cheryl's younger sister.

Both Cassia County Memorial Hospital in Burley, where 1987's first baby of the year was born, and the Blaine County Memorial Center have not had a baby of 1987 yet, officials say.

SAC puts 1st group of MX missiles on alert in Wyoming

E.E. WARREN AIR FORCE BASE, Wyo. — The United States took a technological edge over the Soviet Union in the arms race Friday as the Strategic Air Command officially took control of the nation's newest intercontinental ballistic missile, Air Force officials said.

"Today has a monumental significance for the security of our nation and for the continent of North America," said Gen. Chairman J.F. "SAC" in ceremonies at E.E. Warren Air Force Base the commander accepted control of the first 10 MX missiles from Gen. Lawrence A. Skantzis, who heads the Air Force Systems Command that presided over the research to launch the missiles, said the MX gives the United States a "technological superiority" over the Soviets. That edge is important "because we'll never outnumber them" in sheer missile numbers, he said.

Chain said the missile, which can carry up to 10 warheads to separate targets, greatly increases the nation's ability to inflict damage on the Soviet Union.

It also sends a message to the Kremlin that the United States is resolved to maintain an arms balance. By increasing its nuclear arsenal the country also encourages the Soviets to remain at the bargaining table, said Chain.

"Over the years the Soviets have been allowed to develop an unequal balance," he said, adding that the country can't again not be representative of the nation's stance on the weapon.

"Mr. and Mrs. America are the ones who support the MX because they realize if we're not strong it could lead to a war," Chain said. "Our strength we can remain alive and free."

Skantzis said the weapon was developed on schedule and "several hundred million dollars" under budget. The missile also is 30-35 percent more accurate than originally planned stage missile, the Peacemaker stands 71 feet tall and weighs 195,000 pounds with its 10 warheads.

Chain shrugged off small protests against the missile held off and on again in Cheyenne valley since the Air Force decided to base the weapon at E.E. Warren, saying they were representative of the nation's stance on the weapon.

Earlier this month the Reagan administration announced it would ask Congress to authorize deployment of another 50 MX missiles by building them for launching from rail cars. Making the missile mobile is the missile held off and on again in Cheyenne valley since the Air Force decided to base the weapon at E.E. Small fire shuts down nuke plant

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — Oil-leaked-onto-insulation-at-the-Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant's Unit One turbine Friday night, causing a smoldering fire that lasted about an hour, a spokesman said.

The 5:40 p.m. fire caused the plant to be shut down, but there were no injuries or evacuations, said Jim Kilpatrick, a spokesman for Pacific Gas & Electric Co., which runs the plant on the coast about 130 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

There was no release of radiation or venting of radioactive steam as a result of the fire, he said.

"About 10 gallons of oil leaked on some insulation," Kilpatrick said. "Because it was areas it is being smoldered. There were no flames."

"It did shut down the plant... so the turbines will be stopped," he said.

Plant firefighters extinguished the blaze about 6:30 p.m. It ignited on the main turbine for Unit One, located three buildings away from the Unit One reactor, Kilpatrick said.

"This was on an area of the turbine that was about 10 feet long," he said. "The turbine itself is about the length of a football field."

Tribes seek federal funds to build juvenile facility

FORT HALL (AP) — Shoshone-Bannock tribal officials are applying for federal funds to build a 100-bed juvenile detention center on the reservation and neighboring counties see the proposed facility as a possible way of solving their own juvenile jail problems.

Mike Ostlie, Fort Hall police chief, said federal legislation approved last October gave Indian tribes more law enforcement jurisdiction on reservations.

"Congress realized that with increased jurisdiction and penalties, reservations would need additional facilities to hold offenders," he said.

The government has committed $10 million per year for the next three years to build "state-of-the-art" facilities, Ostlie said. The $30 million will be divided between reservations across the country.

"Fort Hall is a natural choice for a regional facility," Ostlie said. "We are in the Idaho, Washington and Oregon district and this would be a good central location."

Bannock County commissioners facing increased fees to house juveniles at the Power County jail, said they are interested in the possibility of using the proposed Fort Hall jail.

"If they can house our juveniles for a reasonable fee at Fort Hall it is certainly worth looking at," Commission Chairman Tom Katsilometes said. With increasingly stringent state requirements, "we can't afford to keep up with everything needed to legally house juveniles."

State law requires that juveniles be housed out of sight and sound of adult prisoners. But most counties in southeastern Idaho do not have enough room and have been paying $21 per day each to house juveniles in the Power County Jail in American Falls.

However, the Power County Commission recently said it would need more money to hire additional jailers if the arrangement was to continue in 1967.

Bimbeck and Power County commissioners agreed on Tuesday to increase fees to $40 per day to reserve four juvenile spaces in the jail through the end of the county fiscal year Sept. 30.

Bannock County will pay the fee whether or not youth offenders are being held, and each cell beyond that reserved will cost an additional $40 a day.

"Hopefully, we will have another solution by then (Sept. 30)," Katsilometes said. "I am not happy about it, but there is nothing else to do right now."

Ostlie said a Fort Hall juvenile facility might provide a better solution for the state as well as for tribal members could solve a lot of problems, and each cell beyond that reserved will cost an additional $40 a day.

"Making this a regional facility for the state as well as for tribal members could solve a lot of problems, and each cell beyond that reserved will cost an additional $40 a day."

Spokane dam still not on line

SPOKANE (AP) — Spokane's Olympic Dam scheduled to begin producing power this week following the dam is used to run pumps at a May washout, was not in operation Friday as crews worked to send the water past two turbines in one of the dam's powerhouses.

The dam was scheduled to start producing power Thursday after WWF, the city loses about $10,000 for a million in repairs, but Water Director John Burch said crews were unable to reconnect the dam's generators to their electrical control systems.

Bjork said the dam probably would be operating sometime Saturday. Some of the electricity produced by the dam is used to run pumps at city water wells, and the rest is sold to Washington Water Power Co. The city has been purchasing power to run the water pumps.

Under a power sales contract with WWF, the city loses about $10,000 for every day past Jan. 1 that the dam does not generate electricity, according to City Manager Terry Novak. That money goes to WWF behind the dam and burst through the embankments before the gates could be opened by hand.

Earlier embankments around the powerhouses were washed out and equipment damaged after an electrical storm knocked out power to the dam's gates. Water built up behind the dam and burst through the embankments before the gates could be opened by hand.

O'Connor apologizes to Israel over flap

Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — Cardinal John J. O'Connor, New York's Roman Catholic archbishop, publicly apologized here Thursday for any offense to the Israel people and their leaders because of his cancellation, at the Vatican's orders, of scheduled meetings with government officials.

O'Connor's comments came within hours of his arrival here at the beginning of what is now being described as his "most private" trip. He has admitted continuing deep strains in relations between the Jewish state and the Vatican.

"I think it is imperative to let you know very honestly and forthrightly that because of the haste of my preparations for this visit, because of my awareness of my current responsibilities, and particularly — in my newness as a member of the College of Cardinals, I failed to familiarize myself with that protocol which normally surrounds visits of O'Connor, sacred College of Cardinals, O'Connor said after celebrating Mass at St. Saviors' Church in Jerusalem's walled Old City.

"Because of that error on my part, unfortunately, it is quite understandable that the people of Israel and those who govern them might have construed some kind of deliberately intended offense. Nothing could be further from the truth. . . I deeply regret and certainly apologize for any offense that might have been perceived."

O'Connor was invited to come to Israel as a guest of the government, and his itinerary was to have included meetings with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, the alternate prime minister — and foreign minister, Shimon Peres, and President Chaim Herzog.

But last week, under orders from the Vatican, O'Connor ruled out official meetings with top Israeli leaders for fear that to go ahead with them would imply acceptance of Israel's claim to sovereignty over Jerusalem.

Israel claims united Jerusalem as its political capital, having captured the eastern half of the formerly divided city from Jordan in the Arab-Israeli War of 1967. Most Israeli government offices are now located here.

Pope slates 'Year of Mary'

Vatican City (DPA) —

Pope John Paul II declared 1987 the "Year of Mary" in his New Year's mass in St. Peter's Basilica Thursday.

The year of special worship of Mary, mother of Jesus Christ, will start with Pentecost June 7, and last until the day of Mary's ascension on August 15, 1988.

Leaders for fear that to go ahead with them would imply acceptance of Israel's claim to sovereignty over Jerusalem.

But the Vatican's position is that Jerusalem should have a special, internationally agreed status as a Holy City for Christians, Moslems and Jews. It has withheld diplomatic recognition of Israel pending resolution of Jerusalem's status.

The position taken by the Vatican in the O'Connor incident has touched off a furor here, given Jewish sensitivities that date far beyond the creation of the Israeli state to centuries of religiously motivated persecutions of Jews generally and Roman Catholics specifically.

Shamir and Peres daily rejected suggestions that they meet with O'Connor privately, away from their offices.

"On this there can be no compromise," a Shamir spokesman said. "Israel has one official, and that is where official meetings are held."

O'Connor privately would be 'tantamount to joining the boycott of our capital'

The newspaper concluded: "We should not regret it if the high-ranking guest decides that under these conditions he will forgo the entire visit to the Holy Land."

Some Catholic officials here accused the Israeli government of trying to exploit O'Connor to gain recognition that it cannot win directly — from the Vatican. One quoted anonymously in the English-language Jerusalem Post, said that Israeli officials want to talk about relations with the Vatican. New York "is not the address."

Vatican relations with the Zionist movement have been rocky from the beginning. According to Sergio Minervini, an Israeli agent and author of a Hebrew-language book entitled "The Vatican, the Holy Land, and Zionism," Pope Pius X, in a meeting in 1904 with Zionist pioneer Theodore Herzl, advised that Rome could not recognize the "movement for a Jewish state."

"Pius X also said that Jews who emigrated to Palestine would find Catholics there waiting to convert them to Christianity."

This would be Shenuodah's first foreign trip since President Hafeez Mubarak ended his compulsory secular two years ago. Shenuodah, spiritual leader of the Coptic minority in Egypt, was banished to a desolate monastery on orders of then-president Anwar Sadat in September 1981.

Church officials have denied that any effort ever occurred.

Church Universal move sparks unease among Paradise Valley residents

Paradise (AP) —

The Francis said the estimated 300 members of the Church Universal and Kingdom of Christ have moved there because of the scenic beauty of the area.

But on the minds of many Paradise Valley residents is the expansion of Antelope Valley, a small town in the county, just north of Yellowknife National Park. The town, which was later named Balmaceda, is located in the mountains of the area.

"Changes in the land are troubling to one who came to live with the land," said Hank Barbee, a land surveyor whose property is adjacent to church land.

"They're drilling, too, well-logging. The thermal services of that area," Barbee said in an article published Friday.

Coptic pope: 'Israelites' not chosen

CAIRO, Egypt (DPA) —

The Egyptian people of God, Egypt's Christian patriarch Shenoudah III said in an interview published here Thursday.

"This year we inaugurate 36 Coptic churches."

Shenoudah, in an interview in the leading weekly magazine Al-Mussawwar, also said he planned to visit West Germany, the United States, France, Britain, the Netherlands, Canada and Australia this year to inaugurate 36 Coptic churches.

Shenoudah ended his compulsory secular two years ago. Shenuodah, spiritual leader of the Coptic minority in Egypt, was banished to a desolate monastery on orders of then-president Anwar Sadat in September 1981.

Suit filed against Church of Scientology

Los Angeles Times

Between 1972 and 1982, more than $100 million of church funds were "illegally and secretly diverted" for Hubbard's personal use to overseas bank accounts he controlled. Part of the money allegedly was siphoned off by Hubbard through a "profit-making" corporation in London, known as Author Services Inc. Hubbard's literary representative, which is staffed by Scientologists.

The suit charges that Author Services "embezzled" church money by submitting "overtly false or exaggerated billings" to Scientology organizations — Hubbard defrauded others by claiming he received only a small amount of money for his Scientology work and research, according to the suit.

Surveys show apparent drop in binges, driving as drunk

ATLANTA (AP) — Studies in 11 states and Washington, D.C., indicate a possible decline in drunken driving and in drinking binges, federal health researchers said Friday.

The surveys, conducted in 1983-85 and 1985, asked respondents whether they had in the previous month driven after having too much to drink or whether they had recently had five or more drinks on one occasion.

The national Centers for Disease Control said Friday that while "caution must be exercised in interpreting changes" in behavior based on limited surveys, the findings would appear to indicate decreases in drunken driving and binge drinking, at least among some groups in some states.

"I think these numbers suggest that there may be some change going on in the prevalence of these two types of alcohol use," said Dr. Robert Anda, a researcher with the Atlanta-based CDC. "They suggest there's a trend, especially in binge drinking."

Among males between 18 and 34 — the group with the highest prevalence of binge drinking and drunken driving, according to the CDC — Washington, D.C., and nine other states reported decreases in binge drinking between 1983 and 1985. The largest drop was in Kentucky, where 14.9 percent of the men 18-34 reported binge drinking in 1985, compared to 36.9 percent in the previous survey.

But no similar trend was apparent in the drunken driving surveys. In drunken driving surveys of men aged 18-34 in nine states and Washington, five surveys found increases between 1983-85 and 1985, and five reported decreases.

Patterns were evident in surveys of drunken driving among middle-aged men and young women. All 10 surveys found drops in drunken driving among males 35-54, and seven out of 10 found drops in drunken driving among women 18-34.

Patterns were even more noticeable in the surveys in 11 states and Washington on binge drinking. Decreases were reported in 10 states among males 35-54, eight states among men 55 and up, 10 states among women 18-34, nine states among women 35-54 and seven states among women 55 and up.

In previously reported statewide totals, 11 of 18 states reported drops in binge drinking and seven out of 10 reported decreases in drunken driving.

The surveys still rely on voluntary acknowledgment of drunken driving and binge drinking, and people may be reluctant to admit those activities, especially drunken driving, the CDC said.

Surveys on both topics were taken in Arizona, California, the District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Kentucky, North Carolina, Tennessee and West Virginia. Montana and Ohio added surveys on binge drinking.

They were taken as part of the CDC's Behavioral Risk Factor Surveys program. More detailed reports are expected in the future, beginning this month. 35 states will be taking part in the survey program, Anda said.

President and Mrs. Reagan wave from Air Force One ramp before taking off for Washington

Reagan returns to capital; readies for visit to hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan returned from a week-long California vacation Friday, predicting his upcoming prostate surgery and tests would be "a breeze" and urging Americans not to "waste any sympathy" on him.

As Reagan prepared to enter a military hospital this weekend for the surgery and tests for any recurrence of colon cancer, he spent Friday evening watching college football.

"Really what I'm going in for is kind of a breeze," the president said from the White House in a nationally televised interview on NBC-TV during the Fiesta Bowl halftime.

"I've been there before so don't waste any sympathy," Reagan added. "I don't feel ill at all."

There has been no indication during Reagan's holiday with his wife Nancy in Los Angeles and at the desert resort of Palm Springs that he has spent any time dealing with the Iran-contras affair that enveloped his presidency in the final weeks of the year.

As the Reagans boarded Air Force One for the trip home, a reporter shouted, "What will '87 be like?"

"Great," Mrs. Reagan replied. "Better than '86," the president added.

Reagan made only one public appearance after leaving Washington, an awards presentation ceremony for the designer and crew of the globe-circling Voyager aircraft. And in the privacy of his Los Angeles hotel suite, he recorded a year-end radio address to the nation and a New Year's message to the Soviet people broadcast by the Voice of America.

Frank C. Carlucci, the president's new national security advisor, formally assumed control of the National Security Council staff Friday, but aides said Reagan had no immediate plans to meet with him.

Carlucci succeeds Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, who resigned after Attorney General Edwin Meese III discovered Poindexter knew about but did not move to stop the funneling to Nicaraguan rebels of millions of dollars in profits from secret U.S. arms sales to Iran. Reagan had approved the weapons sales despite an arms embargo against Iran but has said he knew nothing of the diversion of Iranian payments to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Before leaving for California, Reagan appointed outgoing NATO Ambassador David Abshire to oversee the White House response to various investigations of the matter, and Abshire will assume his duties on Monday.

On Sunday morning, the president is scheduled to be admitted to Bethesda Naval Hospital outside Washington for a series of tests, followed on Monday by surgery to relieve discomfort caused by an enlarged prostate.

The tests to be performed Sunday include a colonoscopy, in which doctors use a flexible instrument to visually examine the entire length of the lower intestine. Reagan's first such exam in July 1985 revealed the presence of a large tumor, which was removed surgically and found to be cancerous.

In two follow-up examinations since, smaller, non-cancerous polyps were found and removed to prevent them from growing into potential malignancies.

Meghann's prostate surgery, relatively common in men of advancing age, involves removal of tissue from the prostate gland that has encroached into the urethral canal, interfering with normal urination and causing occasional pain. Reagan, 75, had similar surgery 20 years ago.

The tissue removed during the procedure will be examined to determine whether the president has cancer of the prostate, which also tends to occur more often among elderly men. But even if cancer is discovered, specialists say it is unlikely to be life-threatening.

A medical team assembled by the Mayo Clinic of Rochester, Minn., at Mrs. Reagan's urging will perform the various tests and surgical procedures.

Doctors say the operation, which will take place under local anesthesia,

Young girl gets 4th transplant

CHICAGO (AP) — The parents of a 7-month-old girl who has undergone four liver transplants in 32 days said she was feeling better Friday, and that was lifting their spirits.

"When your kid's getting worse, then you feel awful," said Frank LaRocco. "When your kid's feeling better, then you've got something to feel better about."

Meghann LaRocco was listed in critical but stable condition Friday after receiving the new liver on Tuesday at Wyler Children's Hospital of the University of Chicago. Doctors have said the first several days after surgery are crucial.

"She looks real good," said hospital spokeswoman Gretchen Flock. "Her yellow color has gone down. She is real playful. She's playing more with her tubes... which is a good sign that she's comfortable."

The tubes include those used to feed Meghann intravenously and to help her breathe.

LaRocco said he decided not to shave his beard while his daughter was in the hospital because he wanted to stand out among all the adults she sees wearing surgical masks and gowns.

"She'll grab me by my beard," he said. "She feels my beard, she knows who I am."

After the first operation, LaRocco said, Meghann acted as if she did not want to look at her mother, Shirley, as if she blamed her for the pain.

"She was real mad at Shirley," he said. "For two days, she would not look at Shirley."

But after the other three operations, LaRocco said, the child seemed more accepting.

"It's like Meghann really understands that she depends on Shirley to save her," he said.

McClure in Hanoi for talks on issues

The Los Angeles Times sources said.

HANOI, Vietnam — A U.S. Senate delegation left here Friday for Burma after a 24-hour visit and talks with senior Vietnamese officials, including Premier Pham Van Dong, diplomatic sources said.

Republican Senators Mark Hatfield of Oregon and James McClure of Idaho discussed problems in the orderly departure program for Vietnamese wanting to emigrate to the United States and raised the issue of U.S. troops still reported missing in action from the Vietnam war, the sources said.

The U.S. senators also discussed the Vietnamese economic situation with Communist Party officials and met with Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach, the Egyptian and Portugal.

Hatfield told diplomats here Thursday that he hoped U.S. Vietnamese relations would improve and stressed Washington would be able to help Vietnam overcome its economic problems.

After arriving in Rangoon, where the delegation is to spend three days, Hatfield paid a courtesy call on Home and Religious Affairs Minister Min Goung and discussed Burma's program to control drug abuse, an announcement said.

Burma has been using U.S.-supplied aircraft to spray herbicides on opium poppy fields, and some 24,000 acres were destroyed last year.

The senate delegation is on a nine-nation tour that also includes visits to Japan, Hong Kong, Nepal, Thailand, India, and Egypt and Portugal.

Musician enters plea

PASADENA — Call — (AP) — Defendants Richard Griffin of Los Angeles, Eddie Coleman Jr. of Alhambra, and Willie Whitley of Pasadena, said court clerk Carol Turner pleaded innocent Friday to charges he conspired to sell 10 ounces of cocaine to an undercover officer.

Turner, 55, appeared before Superior Court Judge Melvin Grover and pleaded innocent to one count each of possessing cocaine for sale, conspiring to sell the drug and maintaining a residence for the purpose of selling cocaine.

Also pleading innocent Friday to the felony cocaine charges were co-defendants Richard Griffin of Los Angeles, Eddie Coleman Jr. of Alhambra, and Willie Whitley of Pasadena, said court clerk Carol Turner.

The defendants, free on bail, were ordered to appear March 20 in Superior Court for pretrial motions.

Turner, whose career nosedived in the late 1970s, once toured the country with former wife Tina Turner as the "like and Tina Turner Revue." He recently acknowledged having a problem with cocaine use.

Thurmond moves up to 2nd in line

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., will be second in line for the presidency for 72 hours beginning at noon today — the day before President Reagan enters the hospital for tests and prostate surgery.

Thurmond's brief step up from third to second in presidential succession is due to a three-day gap between the end of the 99th Congress and the start of the 100th Congress.

The timing of the president's hospitalization, with surgery scheduled Monday, is coincidental.

Thurmond, as president pro tempore of the Senate, would normally be behind the vice president and the speaker of the House.

But outgoing Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., will lose his title at noon today and new speaker Jim Wright of Texas won't be elected to succeed him until noon on Jan. 6.

If by some amazing coincidence Reagan and Vice President Bush died during Thurmond's short absence, the South Carolina senator would become president for two years.

But when the Democrats take over the Senate on Tuesday, Thurmond won't even be president pro tempore anymore. That job will go to a Democrat.

With only one-third of his members up for re-election every two years. Since Thurmond did not have to run last November, he retains his position as president pro tempore over the 72-hour gap.

Mauna Loa sent a 16-mile lava flow toward the state's second-largest city, Hilo, which has a population of 40,000. The flow stopped before any homes were destroyed.

When Kilauea's east rift zone began erupting Jan. 3, 1983, lava that flowed from a vent area soon destroyed a rain forest.

Over the next 3 1/2 years of eruption, a volcanic cone of rock over the vent grew to about 800 feet in height, feeding lava in all directions.

The latest drama created by Kilauea began July 20, when eruptive activity shifted from the volcanic cone two miles eastward to a lava lake. From there, lava flows crept down through the hillsides on south Hawaii Island.

Kilauea's eruption, scientists say, is only the latest episode in the island-building process that caused these pinpoints of paradise to emerge hlsing and steaming from the vast Pacific Ocean over millions of years.

U.S. supports plan on exiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department welcomed on Friday the Chilean government's announcement that most exiles will be allowed to return home.

Deputy spokesman Phyllis Oakley was responding to an announcement Wednesday by President Augusto Pinochet that all except those who constitute a "serious threat" will be admitted back to Chile.

"We welcome the announced reduction in the list of Chilean exiles and hope it will be followed by greater relaxation of these restrictions as has been promised by the Chilean government," Mrs. Oakley said.

She had no comment on Chile's plans not to renew the state of siege, saying she did not have the full text of the announcement. The state of siege is due to expire on Saturday.

44 homes buried by volcanic flows

KALAPANA, Hawaii (AP) — Since Kilauea Volcano began erupting four years ago Saturday, it has buried under a black blanket 44 homes that were once surrounded by palm trees and lush foliage.

Damage from the volcano's eruptions has been estimated at $10 million to $12 million by Hawaii County officials, who have warned residents that the threat to their homes has only abated, not disappeared.

"It's a hard thing to realize you are losing your home, but they (the residents) are being understanding, understanding that there is a power larger than yourself that is causing this," said Hawaii County Mayor Danie Carpenter.

"We just pray, we're hoping everything will hang tough and everything will come out OK," said Carpenter.

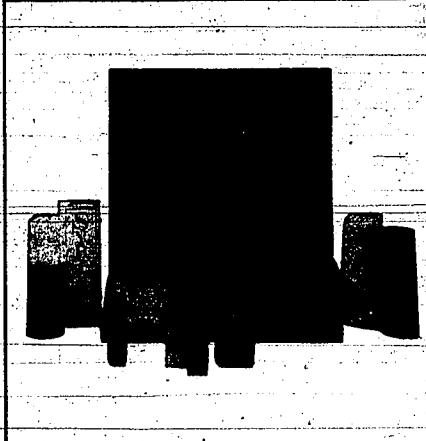

Gov. John Waihebe has pledged to assist displaced homeowners in getting low-cost loans and to quickly repair roads that have isolated residents of a remote area.

Kalapana Gardens, a subdivision to the west of the village created in the 1950s during a real-estate boom here, could be endangered by future volcanic flows, civil defense officials and geologists have said.

Three days before Christmas, about 400 residents of the tiny village of Kalapana returned home after they had been evacuated for four days.

Kilauea claimed 28 homes in the final six weeks of 1986. It was the most damage since volcanic flows in 1984 buried 16 homes in the Royal Gardens subdivision, after numerous evacuations, and caused an estimated $4 million damage.

During the spring of 1984, Kilauea was joined briefly by the much larger Mauna Loa volcano, upon whose massive flanks Kilauea sits. During three weeks of eruption,

What's what

When you shed tears

Nobody yet has figured out what all happens to your body when you start to cry. Some researchers say more glands than the tear glands go into action. Secretions of the others equip you in ways not yet fully understood to deal with the emergency moment. Belief is crying bouts have warded off hives, headaches and heart attacks.

Most of the people who list their marriages as "very happy" in the psychological surveys use the same phrase to describe their parents' marriages.

GOPHER

Q. Why is a gopher called a gopher?

A. French settlers named it "gaufre" meaning "honeycomb" after the structure of its den.

A French investigator tried to figure out how Egyptians without wheels could transport those huge pyramids. Along with rope and a one-ton block of limestone, he learned that: If a track were turned to mud with Nile water, and if a rope were harnessed properly around the boulder, and if the rock's underside were first ground smooth, then, surprisingly, one man could easily move the thing.

SNACK CONTROL

That great snake known as the anaconda seizes its prey with its teeth, then wraps its coils around said victim and slowly tightens them: You can break the snake's grip by squeezing hard at the back of its head at the base of the jaws. Should work. If it doesn't, call for detailed instructions.

Red-eyed kin wait for final bad news

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Red-eyed and weary-looking more than 80 relatives and friends waited for bad news Friday in a cordoned-off room of the government hospital where experts tried to identify charred remains from the Dupont Plaza hotel fire.

The anxious group had searched lists of the 41 people still hospitalized with injuries and lists of people given rooms in other hotels after the Wednesday afternoon blaze but did not find the names of their loved ones.

"She must be in there," a gray-haired man from Cooper City, Fla., said, pointing to a forensics room where badly burned bodies were being examined by pathologists and an eight-member FBI team flown in from Washington, D.C.

A hospital official called out a Hispanic name said a well-dressed man rose from his folding chair and left with the official.

"I wonder how I'll feel when they call your mother's name," the Florida man said, turning to his son.

He asked that his name not be used until the fate of his wife was known. He said she was 70 years old and had gone with her sister, who lives in Puerto Rico, to the Dupont Plaza casino. Her sister was also missing, the Florida man said, pointing out two fearful young women and a young man he said were her children.

Officials say the intense heat and flames caused the bodies of those trapped in the casino, on the 20-story hotel's mezzanine level where the fire started, to be burned charcoal black.

Hospital officials had relatives fill out forms asking descriptions of nearly anything — jewelry, clothing, old broken bones or dental plates — that could help the identification process.

They also provided telephone lines for relatives to call dentists to ask for X-ray records.

Only nine bodies had been identified at the hospital by midday Friday.

Hospital officials said at least 60 families reported they still had loved ones missing, and government officials said the death toll could eventually rise to 100.

Most of the people inside the room were Hispanic, but there were also families from New York and Connecticut. The brother of Susan Lawrence, still missing, flew here Thursday from the United States because her husband was hospitalized with burns and fractures.

The brother, who wouldn't give his name or those of other relatives, said he had obtained his sister's dental records the night before.

Puerto Rican Secretary of Health Luis Iguiero Mora came to answer questions and promise help. A Puerto Rican man raised his hand and expressed frustration: "I've been waiting here 24 hours. When will this be finished?"

"We have the best pathologists in Puerto Rico working 24 hours a day," Iguiero Mora replied calmly. "The great majority of these bodies are terribly burned. It is a very difficult task. But it will be done."

"They are progressing. We are doing this with the very best care, with the very best dignity. We know you are suffering."

Hotel lobby a tangled mess in wake of blaze

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Two days after a deadly New Year's Eve fire swept through the luxurious Dupont Plaza Hotel the smell of smoke still wafted through the air.

The 20-story hotel's lobby was a tangled mess of burned furniture, twisted cables and collapsed ceilings.

On the floor below, a charred palm tree, blackened liquor bottles and strands of blue tinsel left over from Christmas remained at the bar where vacationers had relaxed just days before.

The nearby pool area was scattered with paper cups and litter, along with a melted Frisbee and a single sandal. Two lounge chairs bobbed in the hotel's swimming pool.

Elsewhere, there was evidence how people had tried to flee the flames. Most of the blackened balcony window panes of the first level of rooms were smashed. Curtains flapped once in a while, and a lone pillow was on one balcony.

The scene was made stranger by the hotel's loyally setting on the palm tree-lined beach. Ocean smoke wafted through the air as workers milled around, some resting near a hut that advertised scuba diving and deep-sea fishing.

Reporters had been kept well away from the hotel for two days, but on Friday they were allowed within 100 feet of the building.

Photographers flashed and tagged the charred remains of victims still being pulled from the rubble.

Most of the 53 bodies recovered by early Friday were burned beyond recognition. FBI and local forensic experts worked several miles away at the State Medical Center to identify the remains through dental records and other methods.

Human remains in heavy plastic bags were wrapped in blankets and carried on stretchers by civil defense workers to waiting ambulances, which were escorted by motorcycle police to the Medical Center.

The emergency workers wore masks and gloves to ward off contamination. Emilio Davila, Puerto Rico's undersecretary of health, said rodents were being trapped and the area around the hotel had been fumigated.

Moslem guerrillas reject cease-fire bid

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Moslem guerrilla leaders Friday rejected an Afghan leader's offer of an indefinite cease-fire, saying they could do no peace while Soviet troops were in Afghanistan.

Rebel leader Mohammed Nabi Mohammed, head of the Movement for Islamic Revolution in Afghanistan, said in a statement, "The cease-fire offer is not acceptable to us. It is a sham and a deception."

Several other guerrilla leaders, all of whom are based in Pakistan, voiced similar responses to a report carried by the official Soviet news agency Tass on Thursday that Najibullah called on the guerrillas to observe a truce beginning Jan. 15.

Tass said that the Afghan government made the offer in hopes of opening a dialogue with the guerrillas and that Najibullah threatened to retaliate against those who continued fighting.

Moslem tribes have been fighting a guerrilla war since April 1978 when a Marxist government was installed in the Central Asian nation. In December 1979 Soviet troops entered Afghanistan to support the government, and an estimated 115,000 Soviet soldiers are still there.

Mohammed, who also is spokesman of an alliance of the seven biggest guerrilla organizations called Islamic Unity of Afghan Mujahideen, said "We cannot trust the Soviet puppets in Kabul."

"The Afghan mujahideen and the people of our country will never give up the fighting which aims at a complete victory and ousting the Soviets and their Communist henchmen out of our Afghanistan," he said.

GENERAL NAJIBULLAH Afghan leader rebuffed

"How can there be a cease-fire when the Soviets still in Afghanistan, and fighting?" he asked.

Gulbaddin Hikmatyar, president of the Islamic Front guerrilla group, said in a statement that the insurgency will continue "until the expulsion of the last Soviet soldier from Afghanistan."

"A cease-fire could have been meaningful if it was announced by the Soviet troops, because they are the real force fighting and killing the Afghan people as well as the mujahideen," Hikmatyar said.

Alghan government troops "are doing nothing, because they are ineffective and irrelevant as far as the fighting in our country is concerned," he said.

Tass gave no indication whether the Afghan leaders, whom it said attended an extraordinary meeting of the ruling People's Democratic Party, discussed the presence of the Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said efforts by Kabul "to subvert resistance commanders have been ongoing since the start of the war, so it is not surprising that the leaders have rejected the offer."

"Clearly any serious process of national reconciliation will have to include representatives of the Afghan resistance," she said.

The Soviet Union wants Najibullah, who has been party chief and Afghan leader since May, to broaden the base of his government by bringing in people from outside the party.

The indirect talks between Pakistan and Afghanistan "are scheduled to resume Feb. 11,"

Aquino government rejects coalition

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government on Friday rejected a coalition with Communist rebels and said negotiations to end the insurgency should focus on land reform and industrialization.

Communist-led Front for the People insisted the rebels respect the "people's power" mandate of President Corason Aquino. Mrs. Aquino took office last February following a civilian-military uprising that ousted the 20-year rule of Ferdinand E. Marcos.

White government negotiator Aristio Guingona distributed copies of the letter at a news conference.

Government officials had previously rejected rebel demands for what the leftists termed a "transitional coalition government" Friday's letter, which promised general economic and social reform, was the first document spelling out the government position.

"This government got its mandate through people's power," said the letter of the revolt that toppled Marcos after a five-year photograph taken both Marcos and Mrs. Aquino claimed they had won.

"This government will continue that unfinished revolution, to recover from the depths of crisis and to take the necessary steps to right the wrongs of the past... But it will not do so through an unfounded and illogical demand for a coalition government," it said.

Neither the National Democratic Front rebel spokesman had any immediate comment on the letter. But they have complained the administration was rejecting their demands before substantive peace talks began and warned that prospects for ending the 18-year-old insurgency would be slight if the government's position hardened.

A 60-day cease-fire has been in effect since Dec. 10.

The two sides agreed Dec. 23 to exchange position papers by Jan. 3. The National Democratic Front expected to release its paper Saturday.

Guingona told reporters the government also rejects a rebel demand for the abrogation of an agreement allowing the United States to operate military bases in the Philippines and a demand for integration of the rebel New People's Army into the national armed forces if a peace settlement is worked out.

The government believes the issues of land reform and how best to promote industrialization should be the main initial focus of negotiations, Guingona said.

"Insofar as the (U.S. military) bases are concerned, we have to refer to the 1950 constitution," he said.

The charter, which is to be the subject of a Feb. 2 plebiscite, allows the bases to remain after the current lease expires in 1991 provided they are covered by a formal bilateral treaty.

30 feared dead as boat sinks

The Los Angeles Times

LIMA, Peru — More than 30 people were feared dead after the sinking of an overloaded river boat on the Amazon, Peruvian authorities reported Friday.

A Peruvian newspaper said one of the reasons for the boat's excess load was the hundreds of crates of smuggled whisky it was transporting.

Five corpses, including the bodies of four children, have so far been recovered. The boat sank New Year's Day along a half-mile stretch of the river between the Peruvian towns of Cahallococha and Iquitos near the Brazilian border.

The accident occurred at dawn Thursday when a large drifting tree trunk smashed against the boat and split part of the wooden hull under the waterline, survivors said.

Magazine labels Hitler tax evader

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Adolf Hitler was a tax evader who became the richest man in the Nazi hierarchy, a West German magazine said Friday.

The Munich-based Quick magazine said the Nazi dictator got officials to write off his tax debts while amassing a fortune through payments from industrialists and sales of his book, "Mein Kampf."

Quick based its article on a book called "Hitler's Money," written by W.G. Schwarzwald.

The magazine said that when Hitler became German chancellor in 1933, he told the public he would decline his yearly salary of 29,200 marks, and an annual expense account of 18,000 marks. At the time the average German worker earned an annual salary of about 1,200 marks.

Hitler quietly had his salary and allowances reinstated in 1934, Quick said.

That same year he also convinced Fritz Reinhard, president of the Reich's Finance Ministry in Munich, to write off his tax debt of 405,494 marks and exempt Hitler from paying any future taxes, Quick said.

The sum was easily worth a small fortune.

"The people did not know that the 'Fuehrer' who used the political slogan 'public benefit before self' worked boldly from the time he took power to free himself from all taxes," the weekly magazine said in the issue that went on sale Friday.

It said one source of Hitler's fortune was royalties from "Mein Kampf," which outlined his goals for more German territory and his hatred of Jews.

The book was practically mandatory reading for everyone in the Third Reich, and newswires were presented a copy paid for by the state after Hitler took power, the magazine said.

By 1934, Hitler was earning up to 2 million marks in royalties annually, Quick said.

It said the Third Reich's postal ministry paid Hitler 50 million marks to use his picture on postage stamps shortly before the start of World War II. In addition, Hitler received about 100 million marks annually for his private use as German industrialist, the magazine said.

Kampi," which outlined his goals for more German territory and his hatred of Jews.

F-16 hits boar during takeoff

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — A Pakistan air force F-16 exploded after hitting a wild boar on the runway during take-off, The Nation newspaper said Friday.

The accident happened Thursday at the air force base at Sargodha, 120 miles southeast of Islamabad, the English-language newspaper said. It did not say whether the pilot survived.

A Pakistan military spokesman said the report was "incorrect" when he was asked for comment, but he refused to elaborate. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Nation said the fighter plane's nose wheel was knocked off after hitting a wild boar. Sargodha is in the agricultural region where wild boars abound.

The plane skidded along the runway, caught fire, "turned into a fire ball and was completely destroyed."

Linebacker U. turns back Hurricanes

Penn State 14, Miami 10

By HERSCHEL NISSENON
The Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — The numbers lied. Top-ranked Miami outrushed Penn State 160 yards to 109 and outpassed the Nittany Lions 285-53 for a total offense advantage of 445-162.

But second-ranked Penn State won the game — and the 1986 national championship of college football — with a 14-10 victory in the Fiesta Bowl on Friday night.

"This is the greatest game in Penn State history," linebacker Trey Sauer said after the Nittany Lions nailed down their second national crown in five years.

Coach Joe Paterno didn't go that far, but he did call it "one of the biggest" and said that despite the yardage it yielded, "our defense played as good a football game as I've ever seen."

D.J. Dozier's 6-yard run with 3:13 remaining, two plays after Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde threw the fourth of his five interceptions, brought Penn State from behind for the second time.

Miami had one final shot, driving from its own 23 to the Penn State 6 inside the final minute. Testaverde completed six consecutive passes for 67 yards during that drive.

On second down at the Penn State 6, Testaverde was sacked for the fourth time, this time by tackle Tim Johnson for a loss of seven yards.

After a third-down pass fell incomplete, the national championship came down to one play — and Penn State made it. Linebacker Pete Giffopoulos intercepted Testaverde's fourth-down pass at the one, and the title belonged to the Nittany Lions.

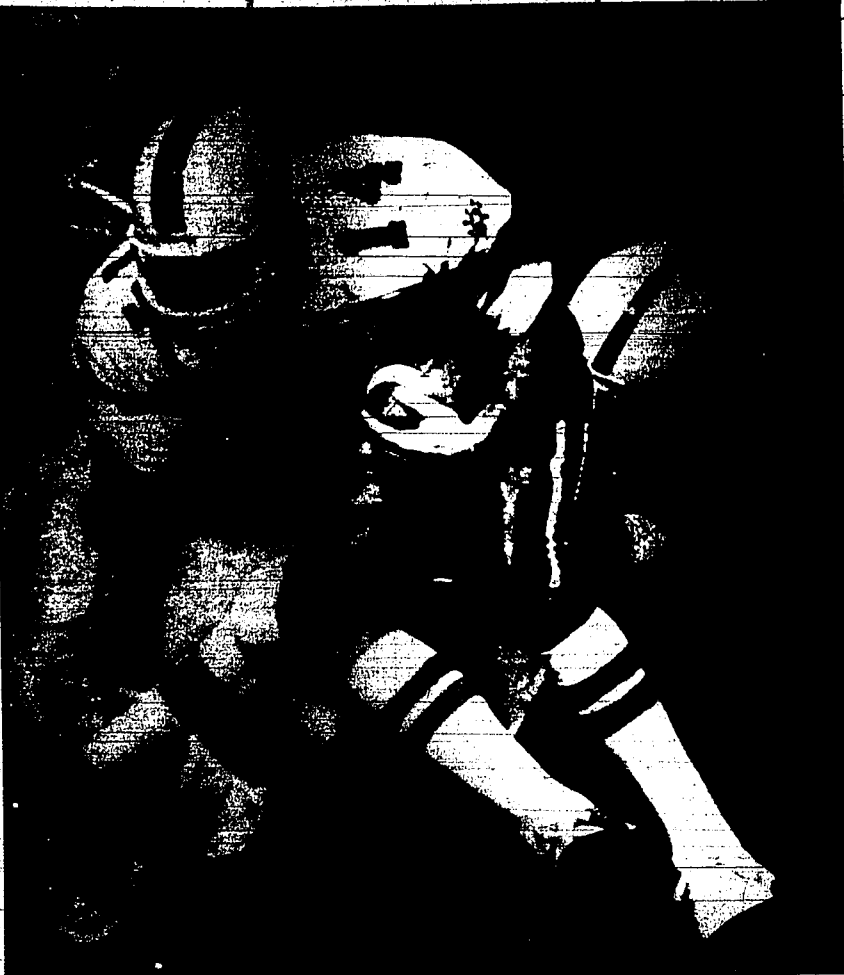

Penn State — sometimes called Linebacker U. for the number of professionals it turns out — let Miami move the ball up and down the field but yielded only one touchdown by Melvin Bratton's 1-yard run midway through the second period; that came after the Nittany Lions fumbled at their own 23.

Despite the five interceptions, Testaverde completed 26 of 50 passes for 285 yards, but his receivers heard footsteps all night as they dropped five passes and fumbled away two others after receptions.

"The main thing we did was to knock the receivers out of their routes," said cornerback Duffy Cobbs, who made the first interception. "All the teams they played this year did not put pressure on the receivers. He gets all the time in the world to throw."

"Once we started knocking off his receivers — Vinny got most of his — we were in."

Penn State's secret? Intimidation on defense

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The big reasons for Penn State's 14-10 victory over Miami for the college football championship Friday night were two of the smallest players in the game.

Penn State linebacker Shane Conlan, voted the game's most valuable defensive player, tossed the credit to cornerbacks Eddie Johnson, 5-foot-10, and Duffy Cobbs, 5-11.

Conlan said the two made the No. 1 Hurricanes easy pick.

"This week, Miami talked a lot about how small were Johnson and Cobbs and how Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde would pass them out of the stadium. Well, they (Miami receivers) had never been hit by them. After they were, they didn't want to catch the ball. That was the key to the game," Conlan said.

Those intimidating hits might

have been on the minds of Miami's receivers when they dropped five passes — and they fumbled away two other receptions, putting a severe crimp in the Hurricane's passing game.

Conlan had two interceptions, the last setting up the winning touchdown in the fourth quarter when he ran it back 43 yards to the Miami 5.

"My knee had snapped when I was hurt in the first quarter, and it was weak the rest of the game. I couldn't really run with that intercepted pass. I had nothing left," said the All-American linebacker. Then at the end, Miami had the ball, fourth-and-goal at the 13 and nine seconds remaining. Linebacker Pat Giffopoulos stepped in front of a receiver and intercepted Testaverde at the 1, the fifth Penn State theft.

Conlan said he was thinking "somebody has got to make a play, and I had a gut feeling someone was going to make a big one."

Giffopoulos said he caught the ball and thought, "We're No. 1. I didn't want to fumble the ball. That's why I sat on it."

Penn State Coach Joe Paterno, celebrating his second national title in four years, said his defense was out of this world.

"Our defense played as well as I've ever seen a college football team play defense," said Paterno.

Paterno, demonstrating feeling for the losing Hurricanes, observed, "when a game like this comes down to just one play you hate to see one team lose."

Paterno said of the defense that forced five Testaverde interceptions and recovered two fumbles, "we just changed up on our zones. We disguised what we were doing. But without those front people applying pressure (on Testaverde) we couldn't have done it."

Paterno also said his defense tackled hard when a Miami receiver caught the ball.

"We got what we wanted. We made sure they didn't let them get easy field position."

Testaverde had trouble reading what we were doing," said Paterno. "We didn't give them time to run secondary routes. We kept the pressure on."

Miami's lament: Can't win with seven turnovers

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The Miami Hurricanes' national championship chances were executed by their own lack of execution.

That word dominated the post-game discussions of disappointed Hurricanes. Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson had been prophetic early in the week when he said: "If we don't have any turnovers, I really like our chances."

Miami was victimized by five interceptions, two fumbles and nine penalties for 62 yards.

"We couldn't put a drive together," said quarterback Vinny Testaverde, who hit 28 of 50 passes for 285 yards but ended up the goat because of his interceptions. "We had too many penalties and turnovers."

Most of the questions were about the Penn State defense, deep zones. Four of the five interceptions were made by linebackers. But Testaverde said the Penn State defensive scheme didn't surprise him.

"They didn't do any tricks," the Heisman Trophy winner said. "They just played better football than us."

The Hurricanes made one last-ditch drive, moving from their own 23 to the Penn State 6, but Tim Johnson sacked Testaverde for a 7-yard loss on a second-and-goal play. Then, Testaverde look-

Battered Redskins face Bears in Soldier Field

By MARIO FOX
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — The Chicago Bears return to their wintry den today to play the Washington Redskins in a postseason NFL "rivalry" dating back a half century.

More NFL — B4

"There'll be a lot of electricity in the air," predicts Bears kicker Kevin Butler. "It's been a month since we've been at Soldier Field, so I think the crowd will be up for it."

Game time is 2 p.m. MST before a sold-out Soldier Field crowd of 66,000. The winner advances to the NFC title game next Sunday against either San Francisco or New York.

The Bears, hoping to become the first NFL team to repeat as Super Bowl champions since the 1970 Pittsburgh Steelers, finished the regular football season with a 14-2 record, tying the New York Giants with the best record in the league. Washington earned a trip to Chicago by eliminating the Los Angeles Rams 19-7 in the NFC wild-card last Sunday.

The Redskins, 12-4, beat the Bears 28-21 for the 1937 NFL title. But the most lopsided score in NFL playoff history was the 78-0 Chicago rout of Washington in the 1940 NFL championship. The Bears also beat the Skins in their last two meetings, in the 1984 playoffs and during the regular 1985 season.

Seven Redskins, including running back George Rogers and wide receiver Gary Clark — came out of the Rams' game with injuries, but all are expected to play against Chicago.

"Everybody's going to be ready to go," said Redskins offensive guard Russ Grimm, suffering from fractured ribs.

The Bears are near 100 percent healthy, with the exception of No. 1 quarterback Jim McMahon, who is out until next season after shoulder surgery.

"We have a few guys with nicks here and there but there is nothing going to keep them out of a game of this magnitude, and that's the same with their people," Bears Coach Mike Ditka said.

Five-foot-nine Doug Flutie, 1984 Heisman Trophy winner who finished the Bears' Nov. 4, will be making only his second start this year after winning the Bears' quarterback derby over Mike Tomczak and Steve Fuller.

"He has a strong arm, for someone so little," said wide receiver Willie Gault, Chicago's top pass receiver.

McNeil, Jets try to beat Browns in Cleveland

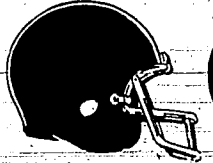

By CHUCK MELVIN
The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — All the attention given to the New York Jets' quarterback situation hasn't distracted the Cleveland Browns from what they consider their primary task in today's AFC playoff game: Stop Freeman McNeil.

"It's pretty hard to get a good, solid hit on Freeman," Cleveland linebacker Chip Banks said. "He presents a lot of shiftness, a lot of sliding and gliding. And he's somewhat like a Marcus Allen, because he has some power on his inside runs."

McNeil, who was on the injured list for four football games this season because of a dislocated elbow, has rushed for more than 100 yards in each of the Jets' last three games. He ran for 155 yards on 31 carries in New York's 35-15 wild-card victory over the Kansas City Chiefs last Sunday.

The performance was applauded less than might be expected because veteran backup quarterback Pat Ryan threw three touchdown passes while filling in for the slumping Ken O'Brien. The victory ended New York's season-ending five-game losing streak.

Ryan was expected to start the Cleveland game despite a slight shoulder bruise.

"They have the tools to hit at any level, running or passing, but Freeman McNeil is the key," Browns nose tackle Bob Golic said. "Hopefully our cornerbacks (Hanford Dixon and Frank Minicci) can shut down their wide receivers (Wesley Walker and Al Toon), and then we can concentrate on McNeil."

drug overdose in the off-season, and strong safety Al Gross, who missed most of the year with a knee injury.

Banks, however, said Cleveland's defense regained its effectiveness by the end of the year.

The Browns, who carry a five-game winning streak into the AFC playoffs, limited the Cincinnati Bengals' top-ranked offense to three points in the second-last game of the regular season. One week later, the Jets surrendered 52 points to those same Bengals.

"In the last six or seven games, we've been playing just as well if not better than last year," said Banks, who will be responsible for covering McNeil in some passing situations.

Eagles romp 108-52 in tourney opener

By LARRY HOVY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If the major worry of Coach Fred Trenkle has been the effect of the holiday layoff on his College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles' men's basketball team, it must have been a happy vacation.

College basketball

The Eagles, exploding into a 22-lead, overpowered the young College of Idaho Jayvees 108-52 Friday night in the first round of the Eagle Classic.

The victory ran CSI's season record to 13-0 and put six players in double figures doing it.

It came after the Weber State Jayvees erased an early 15-point deficit to overtake the Eagles by 63 in the first game of the tournament.

Treasure Valley and College of Idaho will meet at 7 p.m. today at the CSI gymnasium with Weber State and CSU, pulling at 9 p.m. Weber State reportedly will have two starters available tonight that it didn't have Friday since both were traveling with the Wildcat variety and will check into Twin Falls today.

With a key regional game looming against North Idaho in Coeur d'Alene next week, Trenkle is most apprehensive about the offensive timing of his charges. He noted the defense probably would be in the best condition and the early moments proved that to be true.

The Eagles came up with a handful of steals in the early going and rendered the condition of the offense moot with a succession of transition baskets.

Joey Johnson and Mauro Gomez started the game with CSI field goals before Dave Cook replied for the young Coyotes. But College of Idaho didn't score again for five minutes and with 14:04 remaining in the first half, CSI had stretched its lead to 22-0.

BYU reserve guard Brian Taylor scored two quick baskets to bring the Cougars within seven at the half. The Cougars, who improved to 9-4, whittled away at the lead in the second half and Capener gave BYU its first lead since early in the game when his hit-a-three-point basket with 2:59 left to put the Cougars ahead 54-53. Capener was four of five from beyond the three-point line.

Brigham Young led 57-55 with 12 seconds left in regulation time, but Pat Durham drove the lane and scored on a slam with one second left to send the game into overtime.

Turcotte led the Rams with 25, while Anthony Leach had 12.

Arkansas St. 57
MCKEAN, Okla. (AP) — Darryl Kennedy scored 28 points, 21 in the second half, as No. 13 Oklahoma defeated Arkansas State 77-57 in the opening round of the Sooner Invitational basketball tournament.

The game at Chicago State played McVey's State the championship and consolation games are scheduled for Saturday.

The Sooners, 8-2, led 52-41 midway through the second half, but Arkansas State closed to within 12 points with 2:45 remaining. Then Kennedy hit a jumper and a free throw as the Sooners capped the rest of the way.

Arkansas State 7-4 played a deliberate game, content to move the ball around while looking for the best shot. It worked in the first half, with Oklahoma leading only 33-23 at intermission.

Harvey Grant added 15 points and Steve Grier scored 10. Brad Goshien led the Indians with 14 points. Arkansas State's top scorer this season, Steve Wiedower, was held to nine; five below his average.

"We got off to a sluggish start," Oklahoma Coach Billy Stubbs said. "We played like we hadn't played for a week."

"We played the game they liked to play," but we had some brilliant defensive work and they could not get their shots off," Stubbs said, adding the Indians played six of seven shots from the field in the last 8 1/2 minutes of the first half.

Utah-Tech buries CSI's women 105-55 at Snow Invitational

By The Times-News

EPHRAIM, Utah — Utah Tech put five players in double figures here Friday night in drubbing the College of Southern Idaho women 105-55 in the opening round of the Snow Invitational tournament.

CSI, now 5-3 for the season, will take on the loser of Friday's late game between Snow and Dixie tonight at 6 p.m. in the consolation finals of the tournament.

Utah Tech, now 6-1, will play the winner of Friday's late game for the tournament championship.

Utah Tech's offense was the most impressive about the offensive timing of his charges. He noted the defense probably would be in the best condition and the early moments proved that to be true.

The Eagles came up with a handful of steals in the early going and rendered the condition of the offense moot with a succession of transition baskets.

The game at Chicago State played McVey's State the championship and consolation games are scheduled for Saturday.

The Sooners, 8-2, led 52-41 midway through the second half, but Arkansas State closed to within 12 points with 2:45 remaining. Then Kennedy hit a jumper and a free throw as the Sooners capped the rest of the way.

Arkansas State 7-4 played a deliberate game, content to move the ball around while looking for the best shot. It worked in the first half, with Oklahoma leading only 33-23 at intermission.

Harvey Grant added 15 points and Steve Grier scored 10. Brad Goshien led the Indians with 14 points. Arkansas State's top scorer this season, Steve Wiedower, was held to nine; five below his average.

"We got off to a sluggish start," Oklahoma Coach Billy Stubbs said. "We played like we hadn't played for a week."

"We played the game they liked to play," but we had some brilliant defensive work and they could not get their shots off," Stubbs said, adding the Indians played six of seven shots from the field in the last 8 1/2 minutes of the first half.

Kimberly beats Filer, climbs atop Canyon

By RON GATES

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly Bulldogs built a double-digit advantage early and built on that for a convincing 67-41 win over Filer in an early-season basketball game here Saturday.

Lionel Paul scored nine points in the opening minutes as the Bulldogs scored the first six points of the contest en route to a 21-9 lead at the first break. Filer, who's pulled the full-court press from the opening tip, added to their woes with seven costly turnovers in that span.

Fouls plagued the Wildcatters as well while Kimberly, in the bonus situation at the 3:04 mark of the first half, pulled out a 27-10 lead in the first half. And they needed those just before intermission as the taller visitors crashed the boards for several baskets on off-boards shots.

"I was really concerned about Filer's press," said Kimberly Coach Rich Thompson. "They put on that tight press all game long and they hustle. When they came back on us in the second quarter, that's what did it for them — hustle."

Dan Novak's follow off the offensive glass pulled Filer to within nine just over three minutes left in the half, and after a Jerry Tews free throw, Jared Conrad got free inside to cut the Kimberly lead to 29-23. But that's as close as they got as Tim Shaw closed out the first half scoring with a pair of baseline jumpers for Kimberly.

After a trade of baskets to open the second half the Bulldogs edged away behind strong basic basketball.

Filer tried to pull out the Filer zone since late in the first quarter, Kimberly began to find the open man cutting across the lane and five-foot-ten inch junior Billy Davis, who led all scorers with 19, picked that moment to get into the paint.

Davis was seven of nine at the foul line and tallied six more from the field in the final period of play. His 13 points staked Kimberly to a 47-point lead at that point, before Filer rallied once again to pull within 51-45.

Tews and Steve McCandless each earned three points and a pair of Novak charlies saw Filer close to within 50-41 with three minutes gone in the period.

Filer's comeback was short-lived. Tews and Steve McCandless each earned three points and a pair of Novak charlies saw Filer close to within 50-41 with three minutes gone in the period.

Arizona's Smith fills Tollner's shoes at USC

By KEN PETERS
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Larry Smith, hired Friday as Southern California's football coach, said he hopes to return the Trojans to prominence as a national power.

"When you come in here, you see the sky as the limit," Smith said at an afternoon press conference of the 1985-86 Programs into winners at UCLA and Tulane. Inherits a Southern Cal team that was 7-5 under Ted Tollner this season; including a 16-7 loss to Auburn in the Citrus Bowl on Thursday.

Smith said he envied Southern Cal, returning to the top of the national rankings, but added that there is no timetable. He also said that his top goal will be to get USC on the athletes' to earn degrees.

Unlike the programs he took over at first at Tulane and then at Arizona, the Southern Cal football team has a lot of talented players, a great tradition and a strong coaching staff. He appeared in bowl games each of the past three years.

"Ted Tollner is a friend of mine and he did a good job of getting some players," Smith said. "We're not going to come in here and make wholesale changes."

"It's going to mostly be a matter of molding the players into a team, in the style I and my coaches are used to."

Smith said he intends to bring five seasons of his assistants along with him, and one other assistant will be hired, or retained off Tollner's staff.

"The expectations at USC are high and Larry is the kind of coach that can make USC a consistent Top 10 team and a challenger for national championships," said Athletic Director Mike McGehee.

Smith, meanwhile, said one friend of his wasn't so happy that he was moving from Arizona to Southern California.

He talked earlier with UCLA Coach Terry Donahue and he told me to stay at Arizona," Smith said with a smile. "Then I called him up this morning and said, 'Guess what, you've got a new neighbor. He said, 'Oh, no.'"

While Tollner's downfall came at least in part because he was 1-7 against rivals UCLA and Notre Dame, Smith's Arizona teams beat rival Arizona State each of the past five seasons.

"I like the big games," Smith said. "That's what football's all about."

Tollner, who had a 20-20-1 record at the school, was fired following the end of the regular season, effective after the Citrus Bowl.

Smith, the 10th head coach of Southern Cal history, agreed to a 5-year contract that reportedly will pay him about $250,000 a year, $50,000 more than he made at Arizona.

After an 8-3 regular season, the 40-year-old Smith guided Arizona to a 40-21 victory over North Carolina in the Aloha Bowl last weekend for the university's first bowl win ever.

Since a 5-5 season in 1980, his first as head coach at Arizona, Smith's Wildcats teams improved each year, culminating with the 9-3 record in 1985.

During four earlier years at Tulane, he improved that team's record each year and went 9-3 in 1979 and earned a berth in the Liberty Cowboys.

Although Smith's Arizona teams dominated rival Arizona State, they didn't fare as well against the Tollner-led Trojans, losing twice in as many meetings.

Other candidates for the Southern Cal job included Iowa Coach Hayden Wittcutt, former Southern Cal assistant coach and current San Diego Chargers Coach Dave Levy; current Trojan assistant Arlie Giganotte; and Paul Hackett, also a former Trojan assistant who now is with the Dallas Cowboys.

BYU players out of hospital; say they've learned lessons

By BOB BLACK

PROVO, Utah — The three Brigham Young football players arrested last month for forging prescriptions for pain killers are now realising their addiction to the painkiller Percodan could have killed them.

"The point we make is that we all could have ended up dead," said linebacker J.C. Von Collin, who held a news conference Friday with tight end Trevor Molini and linebacker Steve Sanders.

"That point really got to me," he said. "People should realize that, too. Don't depend on drugs."

The three juniors, released Friday from the in-patient phase of therapy at the Utah Valley Regional Medical Center's Dayspring Chemical Dependency Unit, said drug addiction can happen to anybody.

last season after they received football injuries, but quickly became addicted. They were arrested for forging prescriptions last month and missed BYU's final regular-season game against Air Force and the Freedom Bowl against UCLA.

Von Collin, an inside linebacker and BYU's leading tackler this past season, suffered chronic back problems, while Molini, who caught 34 passes for 444 yards and two touchdowns, underwent foot surgery just prior to this season. Sanders underwent two knee operations and a shoulder operation within the last two years.

"It can happen to anybody," said Sanders, of Orange County, Calif. "It's a disease and I hope that people will take care of the problem before it starts."

They said their dependence on the drug affected their school work and relationships with fellow students and family members.

"I'm friends with my family again," Von Collin, of Clearfield, Utah, said. "I don't have to duck in to corners to avoid people."

While the three would not discuss their future at BYU, which is expected by the Mormon Church, or their pending criminal charges, they did say their school work suffered while they were addicted because they were unable to concentrate.

Molini said he never took the drug before playing for the Cougars, but he realizes now that it affected his performance.

"I never used pills before a game," Molini said. "I look back on it and I realize it had a great deal of effect on my play — eye-hand coordination, sluggishness."

Molini, of Sparks, Nev., said they should be a drug education program at the junior or senior high school level to help youngsters realize what controlled substances can do to them.

Meanwhile, the players' future was uncertain, but they said they hoped to be reinstated at the school and return to the football team next year.

"All three of us love the team," Sanders said. "We love the coaches and the players."

BYU spokesman Sue Bergin said before the news conference the players' future at the school would be decided early next week.

Stars & Stripes sweeps USA to make America's Cup semis

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) — Stars & Stripes and New Zealand sailed out of the semifinals Friday into a long expected showdown to determine a challenger for the America's Cup.

Both yachts completed 40 sweeps in the best-of-seven series with their respective opponents, USA from San Francisco and French Kiss from France.

Dennis Conner, the San Diego skipper who lost the Cup in 1983 in Australia and has been after it ever since, had little trouble besting USA's Tom Blackaller.

After the race, Blackaller had no complaints at a news conference. "I'd rather have won than to have been so hard on me, but I had more design time for his radical two-ruddered 12-meter boat. And Blackaller said he could have used more money.

Conner thereupon slipped him a $10 bill. If he had to choose, Blackaller said he would put the money on Conner to take the best-of-seven challenge finals against New Zealand and skipper Chris Dickson which start Jan. 18.

"It'd be very surprised if Stars & Stripes is to beat the challenger," Blackaller said.

Dickson said his yacht, the only fiberglass boat among a fleet of aluminum crafts, would stand on her record, a grandy 374 in 13 yachts began the long elimination process on Oct. 5. Stars & Stripes stands 31-7.

Conner's single-minded pursuit of the trophy contrasts with Dickson, who is the baby of the fleet at 25 years of age and has only been racing 12-meter boats since late in 1984.

Conner is the only skipper to have beaten New Zealand. Dickson beat Stars & Stripes twice.

"Your guess is as good as mine," Conner said when he held his opinion on the challengers' chances. "Both boats are reaching the top of their form at the same time."

Conner, a dueling master in the tactics of match racing, and Dickson, a winning prodigy, had established themselves as the boats to beat some time ago. Now they only have to beat the other.

The Stars & Stripes USA race saw both yachts raise protest flags but they withdrew them on returning to land.

"The protests came when both yachts were neck and neck. On the first spinaker run Conner had the advantage of the inside position with Blackaller trailing to starboard about two lengths astern."

After rounding the mark, Blackaller hoisted the red protest flag.

Conner's turn came on the third windward leg. Stars & Stripes crossed inches astern of USA, which held the starboard tack right of way. Blackaller quickly jacked to backwind Conner, a tactic that had backfired on the San Francisco in their first race allowing Conner to score a narrow victory.

The so-called "slam dunk" tack run through this time either as Conner escaped to leeward into clear air, forcing Blackaller to tack away. Conner picked his own protest flag.

Conner raked up 11 seconds on the 3.5-mile leg, lost three on the next under spinaker but closed strong on USA through to finish 43 seconds ahead. Tactician Tom Whidden patted his skipper on the back and Conner raised his arm in salute to his followers clustering about him on escort boats.

Conner's next opponent was never in doubt against French Kiss.

Dickson's fourth straight victory over Marc Paolot was a carbon copy of their first two races. His winning margin was 2:44 this time compared to 2:40 and 2:46 in the first two.

Dickson's consistency faltered only in their third meeting when he made a homestretch drive to win Paolot at the wire after the two yachts collided midway through the last leg. Paolot was later disqualified which only made his defeat official.

Expanded 11 1/2-month PGA season will begin next week

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — The longest season in professional sports gets under way Wednesday when the PGA Tour opens its 11 1/2-month schedule with the elite MONEY Tournament of Champions.

The $500,000 tournament, with separate but simultaneous competition for both regular tour players and seniors, is the first event on a calendar that has at least one tournament a week through Dec. 15.

In all, there are 41 official tournaments plus various team events including the biennial Ryder Cup matches, approved but unofficial: tournaments like the Skins Game, and the British Open.

Golf

The total official prize money will be about $30 million — some purses have not yet been announced — with at least five tournaments offering $1 million or more. Those include the Doral Ryder Open, the Tournament Players Championship, the Panasonic-Las Vegas Invitational, the International and, the biggest of all, the Nabisco Championships of Golf.

The Nabisco, a new event replacing the Vantage in a revamping of corporate sponsorships, will offer $2 million in individual prize money, plus the distribution of another $1 million in season-long competition, plus another $2 million for charity.

Only the top 30 players on the season-long Nabisco Grand Prix point-list will be eligible to play in the official season-ending event.

In effect, it's a playoff system — you gain eligibility through your season-long performance — leading to a season-ending climax.

"We've tried various other methods, but this could be what we've been looking for — a logical, dramatic conclusion to the tour," Commissioner Deane Beman said.

Prior to that, however, in the 40 official events that lead up to the Nabisco, the tour faces a problem — a very pleasant one.

"It'll be hard to improve on the 1986 season — the most exciting year in golf that I can recall," Beman said.

He mentioned the dramatic triumphs by Jack Nicklaus in the Masters and Ray Floyd in the U.S. Open and young players like Bob Tway asserting themselves. Obviously we're very deep in talent."

"With Tway, other young players, and Greg Norman, there's a lot of stories developing for 1987," Beman said.

It starts Wednesday with the Open champion, won five consecutive foreign events — which did not count toward Player of the Year runs through Saturday, ending a day or earlier than usual to avoid television conflict with the NFL playoffs.

Norman and Tway, the 1986 Player of the Year, led the field of winners-only from last season.

It will number 23 or 30, depending on Nicklaus who will play a very limited schedule this year.

Tway led the PGA Tour with four 1986 victories including the PGA national championship and edged Norman for the U.S. money-winning title.

However, Norman, the British NBC

Other major figures in the Tournament of Champions include Floyd, defending champion Colin Peete, Hal Sutton, Ben Crenshaw, Andy Bean, Dan Pohl and Corey Pavin, all multiple winners from 1986.

Portions of the final round Saturday will be televised nationally by NBC.

1986 marked a year of retrenchment for U.S. television network sports

By The Associated Press

Replays, retrenchment and retrenchment had a major impact on televised sports in 1986.

The NFL began using instant replays to review close calls, but the new rule seemed to start as many arguments as it settled. In one game, for example, an umpire misheard a ruling by the replay official and mistakenly allowed a touchdown that may have cost the Kansas City Chiefs a victory.

"It was a mistake of misunderstanding and human error," NFL spokesman Joe Brown said.

The foul-up led to a change in replay terminology. Instead of saying a pass is "complete" or "incomplete," for instance, replay officials now review the tape and say "reversal" or "confirmation."

While polls showed the replay rule was popular with fans, some NFL executives weren't pleased.

"The game belongs on the field, not in the press box," said George Young, general manager of the New York Giants who was against the idea from the beginning.

The rule will be reviewed at the NFL's annual meeting in March. If 21 of the league's 28 teams don't endorse the replay, it won't play again next season.

The NFL may have to make some financial adjustments to lose money on pro football and other sports in 1986, network officials pleaded poverty and vowed to hold the line on sports spending.

"We're had to retrench simply because of the proliferation of sports on television sets," said Peter Vande Sandt, HBO's president of sports. CBS Sports and ended it as head of the network's owned and operated stations.

The austerity trend was reflected in the bidding for the 1988 Seoul Olympics, which went to NBC for $60 million. That was far less than the $1 billion once sought by the games' South Korean organizers.

"The Olympic bidding was probably the benchmark," said Arthur Watson, NBC's president of sports. "It told the rest of the world that the days of escalating rights fees is over."

Well, not quite. Proving there are exceptions to every rule, CBS reluctantly agreed to pay $22 million a year to televise the NCAA basketball tournament through 1990. That's $20 million a year more than the network's current contract.

For TV sports watchers, one of the biggest changes in 1986 was the absence of sportscaster Howard Cosell. Humble Howard left ABC Sports after 20 years and started writing a newspaper column.

Cosell's former assistant, Frank Gifford, survived a shake-up that forced O.J. Simpson and Joe Namath booth. But Gifford got less than rave reviews in his new role as color commentator alongside Al Michaels.

Critics also took a few jibes. HBO's heavyweight unification series. What started out as an attempt to crown one heavyweight boxing champion turned into a quagmire of threats and lawsuits.

At one point, IBF champion Michael Spinks threatened to pull out of the series if the World Boxing

Association didn't sever ties with Super Bowl MVP said: "I think we're the makings of a dynasty."

The day after the Super Bowl, the Patriots' best season fell in shame when Coach Raymond Berry admitted that at least five of his players had serious drug problems. "We have a situation here that we think is intolerable," he said. "The league, as a whole, won't big in 1986 when six jurors who sat for nearly three months in a New York courtroom decided that the USFL deserved just $3 in its $1.63 billion lawsuit. It all but ended the life of the fledgling league, a constant irritation to the NFL since 1982.

The biggest controversy as the 1986-87 season began was the NFL's use of instant replays. The heated disputes of the early season, however, dwindled by season's end, although the replay of the playoff game between the Patriots and the Redskins became the first player to be banned under the NBA's guidelines for habitual offenders. Richardson's lifetime suspension came a month later. Either may appeal for reinstatement in two years.

Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, meanwhile, announced in February that he had mailed out the most extensive drug penalties in the major league history. The penalties affected 21 players, including stars such as Dave Parker, Keith Hernandez and Joaquin Andujar, who himself must undergo drug testing the next rest of their careers.

And after two separate outbursts of heavyweight title fights, traces of their World Boxing Council fight marijuana were found in the at Las Vegas.

bloodstream of former champion Mike Waterspoon as drugs also touched boxing.

The sport, however, also had its bright moments. On Nov. 22, Mike Tyson at 20 became the youngest heavyweight champion by knocking out Trevor Berbick in the first round.

Broncos hope to find lost magic vs. Patriots

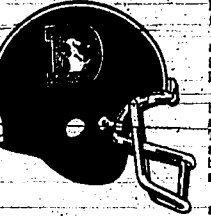

By JOHN MOSSMAN
The Associated Press

DENVER — When New England visits noisy Mile High Stadium for Sunday's NFL playoff game against Denver, Dan Reeves would be perfectly content if his Broncos duplicated its early-season success against the Patriots.

"They just outplayed us in the second half," said Eason. "We couldn't establish anything, running or passing."
"Their defense whipped us," added New England Coach Raymond Berry.

"We were embarrassed in Seattle," said defensive end Bruce Jones. "And that sort of loss will bring out the character in this team."
"I've seen Steve Foley, 'We didn't lose two games in a row all season. We've always come back real strong after a loss.'"
Reeves said the two Sunday opponents are closely matched.

long ones to (Stanley) Morgan and (Irvy) Fryar will. Eason tends to be more impatient and erratic, but he's especially dangerous when he scrambles out of the pocket.
"When he gets out of the pocket, he can make you look like a fool," said New England linebacker Andre Tippett. "He has magical powers or something. I haven't seen a quarterback do what he's done to avoid sacks."

In that 27-20 victory here, the Broncos scored on four of their five second-half possessions to overcome a 13-play deficit.
• held New England to 38 total yards in the second half.
• limited the Patriots' running game to 46 net yards on 22 carries.

sacked New England quarterback Tony Eason five times.
"That was probably the best half of football we played all year," said Broncos' quarterback John Elway, who endured a frustrating first half before completing 11 of 16 passes after intermission.

The Patriots would appear to have the momentum, coming off a 34-27 season-ending victory at Miami, while Denver was humiliated by Seattle 41-16.
Yet the Broncos insist the blowout in Seattle will serve as a rallying point.

"These two teams are very good defense, and they have exciting young quarterbacks in offenses that can put points on the board. Both teams have been very consistent over the last two years. Last year we were a plus-14 in turnovers (actually turnovers as well as sacks); this year we're plus-17. New England was plus-17 last year and is plus-13 this year."
New England seems to have copied San Francisco's style — short, ball-control passing," said Denver's linebacker Karl Mecklenburg. "We can't let ourselves get too upset about the short passes Eason throws. He's going to get you frustrated, to get you to come up, and then he tries to beat you deep. The short passes won't beat you. The

A key to the outcome might be the ability of Denver tight ends Joey Hackett and Orson Mobley to handle Tippett.
In the earlier meeting, Clarence Key neutralized Tippett, limiting the All-Pro to three tackles and one sack. Key, however, has been suspended while he undergoes drug rehabilitation.

Taylor, defensive teammates wary of rematch with 'Niners

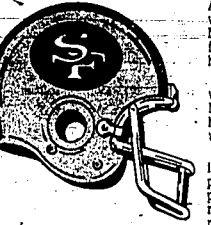

By TOM CANAVAN
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — To be perfectly blunt, Lawrence Taylor does not enjoy playing against the San Francisco 49ers.

He has left the field frustrated on a lot of other occasions against quarterbacks Joe Montana and the 49ers.
"I'll tell you, in the last game I wasn't a factor because of the quick releases by Montana," said Taylor, who led the NFL this season with 20½ sacks. "I feel if they go with the same game plan it won't make a difference who they use to put in against me."
John Ayers usually gets the job of preventing Taylor from reaching Montana, but he has a knee problem and has been listed as questionable for the game. Guy McIntyre would replace him if he cannot play.

"The 49ers have given me lots of problems throughout the years because they do so many different things. When I am playing them there is always a point in the game where I'm saying 'Forget this.'"
"It's not even fun when you play them because they are doing so many different things," Taylor added. "I have to play their game more than they are playing mine."
San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh said the pressure the Giants front seven puts on Montana makes a quick release almost mandatory for his quarterback.

Angles Rams 24-14 on the final weekend of the season to win the NFC West title for the third time in four years. Twice this decade, the have won the Super Bowl.
New York is riding a nine-game winning streak and was the only NFL team this season to win all its home games. The club's 14 victories was the most in its 61-year history.
The 49ers offense was ranked third in the NFL, averaging 380.1 yards per game. Montana, who missed part of the season with a back injury, finished as the NFC's second-ranked passer. Jerry Rice caught an NFC-high 86 passes this season for 1,570 yards and 15 touchdowns.

San Francisco, 10-5-1, will have another chance Sunday when the 49ers meet the 14-2 Giants here in the NFC semifinal with the winner advancing to within one step of the Super Bowl on Jan. 25.

NFC wild-card game.
It may have been Taylor's best game against the 49ers. Recently named the NFL's Most Valuable Player by The Associated Press, Taylor had 10 solo tackles and a sack in that game.

Taylor said if the 49ers take the sack away from him, he'll concentrate on making tackles, changing people down and working on other parts of the game.
"It's frustrating," Taylor said.

"We just have to show diversity when we play the Giants," Walsh said. "We have to keep them off balance. Whether that is possible or not, that's the best course we can take. We can't get greedy or lose patience in the game."
And Walsh says that means playing it close to the vest, no gimmick or low percentage plays. "If we start doing that than they will start to get all the momentum they need," he added.

San Francisco won four of its last five games and defeated the Los

The Giants were ranked second in the league on defense, surrendering 297.3 yards per game, including 217.1 per game through the air. New York is the best against the run.

Chicago almost subdued about Bears this year

By PHYLLIS MENSING

CHICAGO — Last year Chicago Bears fans went crazy over their Super Bowl championship team, grabbing up tickets, T-shirts, hats, headbands and anything else Bear-related, as fast as possible.

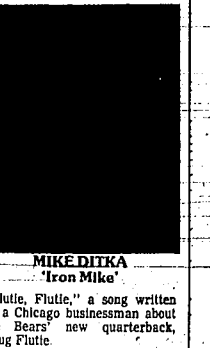

was inundated last year with request for Bears tickets. "It's certainly dropped off more than 50 percent this year, in terms of the calls I get," he said Friday.
DiRico also thinks fans may not be as confident in the team as last year.
"This year, they've been winning ugly, by the sheer momentum of the defense. They haven't been stomping people like they did last year," he said. "People may think the bubble is bursting, and they don't want to be around it. Everybody's got their fingers crossed."

customers this year tend to be hard-nosed Bears fans. "Last year, everybody was a Bears fan," he said. "This year it's not frantic, just steady."
There were nearly 10,000 no-shows for the Bears last regular-season game, but police still expect an overflow crowd Saturday. Hotels and restaurants are gearing up for parties.

Super Bowl Shuffle move over; Bears' Ditka cuts his own dance video CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Bears Coach Mike Ditka says his dancing departure from the tough-guy image on a new videotape is "a little embarrassing," though he is not dissatisfied with the results.

"It was pretty good," Ditka said during an interview in Suwanee, Ga., where the Bears were preparing for Saturday's NFC semifinal playoff contest against the Washington Redskins.
"There are a lot of long-faced ballplayers after they saw it because they knew they couldn't keep up with me," said the coach, who showed his "Iron Mike" video to the squad earlier this week.
"It was a little embarrassing that I let myself go that much," he said.
Ditka's video follows last year's "Super Bowl Shuffle" tape featuring several Bears players, and

Big 10 goes 2-for-18 in Rose Bowl

Schembechler promises 'sweeping' changes next year at Michigan

INDUSTRY, Calif. (AP) — Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler, in the wake of the Wolverines' 22-15 loss to Arizona State in the Rose Bowl game, promises sweeping changes for 1987.
Schembechler, meeting with reporters Friday, said some coaches and players would be reassigned and emphasis will be put on making the Wolverines faster, especially on defense.
"I'd like more speed and quickness," Schembechler said. "We just didn't have it this year. I think everybody knew that this year. We had three games where our opponents scored 20 or more points."
"It's not that our defense isn't a good defense. It can't get the ball back quickly. We don't give up the big play, but people could control the ball on us."
Arizona State, for example, ran 81 offensive plays to only 52 for Michigan in Thursday's game. The Sun Devils had the ball some 10 minutes longer than the Wolverines.

"We've got the quickness. We may have to make some player adjustments and they'll be radical in some areas," Schembechler said. "I probably shouldn't say this, but I may take a kid like (fanker John) Koler and move him to defense. But I'm committed to improving our quickness, and right away. And I may do something like that."

College football

Arizona State, playing in its first Rose Bowl, continued the Pac-10's domination of the New Year's Day game by beating fourth-ranked Michigan 22-15. The Big Ten has now lost 16 of the last 18 Rose Bowls, including the past six in a row.
"I just ask myself, 'What happens to us,'" said Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler, whose Rose Bowl record fell to 1-7. "We come out here every year and lose by seven points. I can't tell you why."
In other New Year's games, Oklahoma crushed Arkansas in the Orange Bowl 42-8; Nebraska defeated Louisiana State in the Sugar Bowl 30-15; Ohio State downed Texas A&M in the Cotton Bowl 28-12; and Auburn beat Southern California in the Citrus Bowl 19-7.

Michigan jumped out to a 15-3 lead in the second quarter, but then their offense disappeared. The Wolverines managed only four first downs in the second half.
"We just never had the football and when we got it, we never did anything with it," Schembechler said.
Arizona State quarterback Jeff Van Raaphorst recovered from a slow start to lead a comeback by the seventh-ranked Sun Devils. Van Raaphorst, who threw for 193 yards and two touchdowns, was named the game's most valuable player.
Van Raaphorst dedicated the victory to his father, a kicker on the 1961 Ohio State team that won the Big Ten title but was not allowed to play in the Rose Bowl because the faculty wanted to de-emphasize football.
"My father never had the opportunity to play here, so this victory is for him," he said.
Sun Devil Coach John Cooper was also excited with the victory.
"I'm on cloud nine," he said. "This is the greatest thing to ever happen to me."
Arizona State improved its record to 10-1-1 while Michigan ended its season at 11-2.

No. 3 Oklahoma 42, No. 9 Arkansas 8
Spencer Tillman rushed for 109 yards and two touchdowns as the Sooners handed the Razorbacks their worst defeat in 17 years.
Tillman scored on runs of 77 and 21 yards in the second quarter. Oklahoma quarterback Jamelle Holloway also ran for a pair of touchdowns.
... defense registered seven sacks and intercepted five passes. It was the most lopsided loss for Arkansas since 1970, when Texas beat the Razorbacks 42-7.
"I've never been on a team that got beat that bad in my life," Arkansas quarterback Greg Thomas said. "Oklahoma has a great team, but we don't think they are 34 points better than we are."
Oklahoma ended its season at 11-1; Arkansas dropped to 9-3.
No. 6 Nebraska 30, No. 15 LSU 19
Two touchdowns by running back Tyrone Knox helped the Cornhuskers overpower the Tigers in Bill Arnparger's last game as LSU coach.
Nebraska trailed 7-0, but scored the next 30 points to put the game away. The Cornhuskers outgained LSU in total yards, 352-191.
"It was a typical Nebraska game," Cornhusker offensive tackle Tom Walter said. "I knew we were going to wear them out."
Nebraska improved its record to 10-4 while LSU fell to 9-3. Arnparger is leaving LSU to become athletic director at Florida.
No. 10 Auburn 15, USC 7
Brent Fullwood rushed for 152 yards and linebacker Aundrae Bruce had four quarterback sacks to spark the Tigers.
Auburn's defense held Southern Cal to 44 yards rushing and forced five turnovers, including four interceptions of USC quarterback Rodney Peete.
"They had a dominant defense," said Ted Toller, who coached his final game at USC. Toller was fired three weeks ago.
Auburn finished the season with a 10-2 record while USC fell to 7-5.

November factory orders up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to U.S. factories, spurred by a surge in demand for military equipment and a rush to beat tax overhaul, climbed 4.1 percent in November, the biggest increase in two years, the Commerce Department reported Friday.

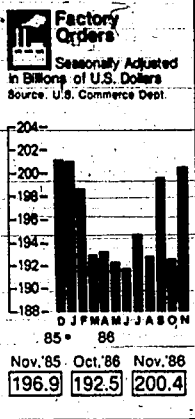

The department said total new orders rose by $7.9 billion in November to stand at $200.43 billion after falling 3.1 percent in October.

While such a big increase would normally be seen as positive for the country's beleaguered manufacturing sector, many analysts said the November gain was influenced by temporary factors that offered little evidence that manufacturers will enjoy increased demand in the new year.

Last month's increase was led by the largest one-month rise in military orders in 12 years, a 70.7 percent surge that reflected heavy demand for defense aircraft. The defense increase, which followed a 43.4 percent decline in October, left military orders at $10.4 billion.

Without the big defense increase, orders would have gone up a much smaller 1.13 percent in November, and some analysts said even this gain was overrating future economic strength.

They attributed much of the advance in the civilian categories to a looks impressive when you look more closely. It completely evaporates," said Michael Evans, head of a Washington consulting firm. "It isn't telling us anything about future strength."

Evans said he believed the economy limped along at a 1.5 percent annual rate in the just-completed October-December quarter and he said growth in the January-March period would slump to a negative 1 percent, as businesses and consumers cut back on spending with the advent of the new tax law.

Douglas Gilgott, senior economist at the New York Investment House of Merrill Lynch, said it was evident that much of increase in the November orders could be traced to the impending tax law changes.

"A lot of businesses were trying to get their equipment in place before year-end," he said.

Non-defense capital spending climbed 6.4 percent as business placed more orders to qualify for more lucrative tax treatment under the old law. Business capital spending to expand and modernize had fallen 4.6 percent in October.

In another report Friday, the Commerce Department said construction spending fell for a second consecutive time in November, a 0.7 percent decline that left spending at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $77 billion. Analysts said construction spending will weaken further in coming months as a result of widespread overbuilding of apartments and office buildings and the removal of many tax benefits under the new tax law.

The report on factory orders said two-thirds of the $7.9 billion increase in orders occurred in the durable goods sector, which rose by 5.7 percent in November. In an advance report 10 days ago, the government had put the increase in durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, at a slightly higher 5.9 percent.

Within the major industry categories, orders for transportation equipment rose 15.9 percent, powered by an 85.3 percent increase in orders in the aircraft and missiles category. Without the big increase in defense orders, demand in the transportation category would have fallen 8.9 percent.

Machinery orders were up 12.2 percent, led by a 16.2 percent rise in orders for office equipment.

Orders for non-durable goods rose 2.5 percent to $91.15 billion after having fallen 1.9 percent in October.

Shipments of manufactured goods rose 1 percent to $198.2 billion, with two-thirds of the $2 billion rise attributed to a pickup in shipments of defense goods.

More physicians dispensing drugs

Is it in your interest for physicians to dispense prescription drugs to you from their offices?

"One-stop medical care" may be more convenient, but is it dangerous to remove the checks and balances between the physician and pharmacist?

The issue is not the samples a doctor occasionally receives from the manufacturer. It's the stockpiling and dispensing of prescription drugs to the patient, commonly thought of as the pharmacist's role.

Exactly how many doctors are involved can't be stated. But it is estimated that 5 percent of all physicians dispense drugs to their patients. And that figure is growing.

Across the country, one-third of the states have looked at legislation and/or regulations on the general topic of doctors dispensing drugs and drug samples, reports the American Medical Association (AMA). The AMA has not issued a formal opinion for or against the trend, but the AMA says that as a matter of ethics, patients have the right to take their prescriptions elsewhere if their doctor does dispense.

Some states have taken a stand. Maryland, for instance, recently passed a law requiring physicians to receive approval from the state's Medical Examiners Board in order to dispense. In addition, the doctor must demonstrate that the dispensing of drugs is in the public interest.

Why would a doctor want to dispense prescription drugs from the office? One reason is that competition among the growing number of physicians is increasing, and drug dispensing offers an enticing way for some doctors to earn additional income.

"Through mail-order solicitations drug packaging companies have been advertising that doctors could earn from $15,000 to $20,000 extra on their practice if they dispense prescription drugs," reports David Banta, executive director of the Statewide Professional Society of Pharmacists in Maryland.

By buying directly from the doctor, would consumers save on the outrageous $20 billion annual prescription drug bill that we're now paying? Some say yes, since the doctor may get special cut rates on medicines.

Last month, the Bureau of Competition, Consumer Protection and Economics argued in favor of doctors dispensing in that it results in "maximizing the number of qualified sources from which consumers may purchase prescription drugs." Increased competition offers patients choice and convenience, as well as an incentive for pharmacists to lower prices, argues the FTC staff.

"I would dispute that it's cheaper for patients," retorts Banta. Also, it denies the patient the right to shop around for price since often patients, especially the elderly, may be intimidated by the physician, he adds.

One major question: Who is actually doing the dispensing?

"The physician has every right to dispense, but typically the pharmacist is doing it," says George Grifflinger of the American Pharmaceutical Association.

According to the Academy of Family Physicians, a national group representing family physicians, doctors have the right to diagnose, prescribe and dispense; however, those who do dispense "should be held to the same high standards of other professionals so privileged." In other words: It's a huge responsibility for a physician to undertake, and accurate records must be kept and strict guidelines followed.

If a physician dispenses a drug that interacts with another medication prescribed by a different doctor, it could be a life-threatening situation. Most pharmacists keep patient medication profiles that can prevent this from happening. What's more, doctors sometimes make errors in filling out prescriptions — mistakes that can be caught by a pharmacist.

There are doctors who have been dispensing prescription drugs for many years for various reasons: in rural areas or places where there aren't pharmacies nearby. It's convenient for patients.

But for the majority of doctors, this is not the case. While a growing number of entrepreneurs are luring physicians into opening up the equivalent of stores in their offices, the doctor must be readily accessible to the patient and follow all the precautions.

How many physicians do you know who have that extra time?

Stock market on roller coaster track

By PAT WECHSLER
Newday

Creaky roller coasters looked safe compared to the stock market in 1986.

Although the general trend was upward, this year's market was conundrum by a series of hitting heights and taking nosedives.

The thrills and chills were capped off in September with the most dramatic market plunge since the black days of the Depression.

The Sept. 11 collapse — a drop of 88 points in a day — prompted warnings of the start of a bear market, but since then the market has shown no clear trends. As economist Edward Yardeni said, it was not a time for the weak of heart.

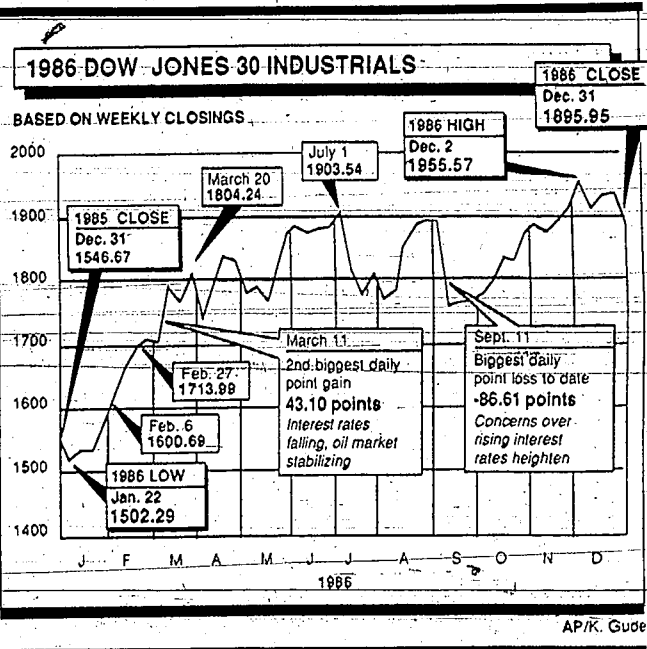

The peaks and valleys caught the attention of Washington regulators, who began to scrutinize new Wall Street trading techniques that many critics blamed for the sudden increase in daily volatility.

The culprits fingered most frequently: "program trading" and index futures and options.

Although program trading was not new, inventors in 1986, this new-style computerized trading won the requisite number of money managers' hearts and minds this year to make a difference.

And the increased acceptance meant a much more volatile market when more than a handful of major portfolio managers began to dump millions of shares on the market at once.

Compounding the increase in program trading were new financial products based on widely used stock market indexes that allowed the same investors to bet on the general

BPA proposes rate boost for some users, utilities

PORTLAND (AP) — The Bonneville Power Administration has issued preliminary proposals to raise wholesale power rates by 11.5 percent for its preference customers and 15.4 percent for other utilities.

The proposal, which would take effect Oct. 1, 1987, and last until Sept. 30, 1989, would boost the power marketing agency's revenue by 13.3 percent.

The federal agency, which markets hydroelectric power in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and western Montana, emphasized that the rate proposals are not final and probably will change after public comment is received.

Public hearings on the rate proposals begin Jan. 16.

Still, the proposal brought negative reactions from representatives of both publicly owned utilities, which receive the preferential rate, and those that are privately owned.

"We're going to examine the proposal carefully," said Daniel M. Ogden Jr., manager of the Public Power Council, based in Vancouver, Wash. "We think that it needs careful scrutiny and will be coming back with some counterproposals that we think will be easier for the region to absorb."

Robert McCullough, manager of regulatory finance for Portland General Electric Co., said his company is "surprised that such large increases are required. An increase of $400 million will be a real strain on the region."

Pacific Power & Light Co. spokesperson Cathy Merritt said her company's officials felt the proposed increase "would have a negative impact on our customers and we're going to work actively to see that it doesn't happen."

BPA Administrator Jim Jura said the figures represent the official start of the rate-making process. He said the agency also will be looking for ways to reduce its operating expenses.

Ogden, whose organization represents 115 publicly owned utilities in the region, said he believes the BPA can save more money.

"We're going to work with Bonneville to reduce its planned spending with a view to reducing its cost and thus lowering the need for a rate increase," he said.

However, Ogden admitted the BPA has revenue problems. Sales of BPA power to California utilities have lagged because oil prices have dropped far enough to make it cheaper for the utilities to operate their own oil-fired generators.

The agency's revenue also has been hurt by a drop directly to aluminum manufacturers.

Mr. Merritt said a 15.4 percent increase in its BPA rates could translate into a 7 percent to 8 percent hike in rates for PP&L's residential customers. However, she said the hike could be reduced further or eliminated if the company decides to offset the higher costs elsewhere.

On the other hand, publicly owned utilities, such as those in Seattle, Tacoma and Eugene, would bear the full brunt of an 11.4 percent hike because they buy virtually all their power from the BPA.

BPA's proposal also includes a contingency plan that could increase rates by another 10 percent in the first nine months of 1989 if its revenues begin slipping.

"We don't think Bonneville needs a rate increase," said Mike Shull, spokesman for the Clark County, Wash., Public Utility District. "The main thing we've tried to get across to them is that if they're suffering from a lack of revenue they should cut their expenses."

BPA spokesman Ed Mossey said the larger rate increase to private utilities was necessary because of a provision of the Northwest Power Act that requires that public utilities not pay more for their power than if the act never had come into being.

Both McCullough and Mr. Merritt said they believed the BPA made a mistake in calculating the 15.4 percent hike. They believed a recalculation would result in a much lower figure.

John Crisson, executive director of Direct Service Industries Inc., said the agency's proposed rate increase would mean a 2 percent to 4 percent hike in industrial electric costs. Crisson's organization represents the region's aluminum companies.

"I don't think it's going to trigger a series of aluminum company shutdowns, but it isn't really good news either," he said.

The aluminum companies have an agreement with the BPA that cushions them against the full impact of the rate hikes.

Petroleum trade union leader says Reagan injures industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the largest trade organization in the petroleum industry says that several Reagan administration actions have hurt domestic oil producers.

The president hurt by signing the omnibus tax revision bill and the Superfund toxic waste dump cleanup renewal bill and the secretary of the interior hurt by delaying leasing federal waters off California, complained Charles DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute.

"Our concern is the apparent lack of understanding on the part of the administration for the implications of what is going on today," DiBona said at a news conference called to issue an institute study of oil imports.

That study reassessed the institute position that continued low oil prices will mean increased imports and declining U.S. production.

It predicted effective pricing power over world oil by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Companies will resume when 80 percent of OPEC production capacity is used.

OPEC is producing at about 65 percent of capacity now and DiBona repeated earlier predictions that the 80 percent level would be reached in three to six years.

He said he could not predict whether the short-term price of oil, close to $15 a barrel most of the fall, would slide at the new OPEC target price of $18. Current prices are about $17.50. A year ago, they were around $28; in July they were below $10.

The Superfund bill imposed new annual taxes of $2.75 billion on crude oil and continued $1.4 billion in taxes on petrochemicals. DiBona said these were far larger than the industry's responsibility for toxic wastes would justify.

In addition, the overall tax revision law increased his industry's taxes by $10 billion over five years.

Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel has delayed until 1989 a scheduled 1988 offering of leases in waters off northern California that are now off-limits to drillers.

"The secretary of interior has agreed to a situation which has the effect of locking up the most prolific oil areas off California," DiBona said.

DiBona said he hoped President Reagan would call attention to the decline of the U.S. oil industry and increasing imports in his State of the Union message because "that would make a tremendous difference in public understanding of this problem."

Reagan has opposed taxing oil imports to protect domestic producers, and DiBona acknowledged the industry was still split on the issue.

DiBona was still studying to determine the extent to which it adds to the volatility.

Just as it has been far more than developed as a hedge for portfolios trading techniques that has made the market seem crazier.

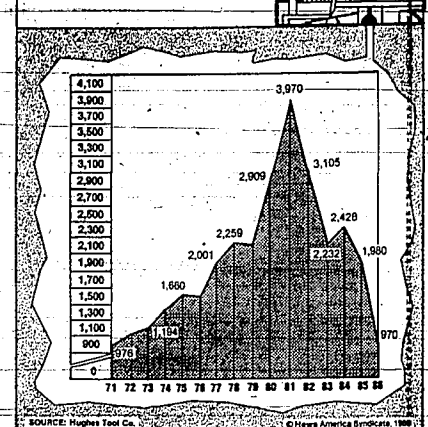

Record trading volumes were set this year on most of the stock exchanges, and creeping institutionalization — that is, the trend of the past decade that has put larger portions of stock in the hands of large institutional investors — has made individual company stocks and the entire market more susceptible to very short-term performance criteria that the bigger money managers live by.

Oil exploration in U.S. at 15-year low

U.S. land-based "wild cat" exploratory and developmental drilling for new oil reserves has declined dramatically in recent years. The slump in rig drilling indicates that the ready supply of low-cost imported oil is delaying the search for new domestic crude sources. Currently, 979 drilling rigs are being used in the search for new supplies, down from 3,970 in 1967. The number of operating rigs has not been so low since 1971.

Allied Stores shareholders approve offer from Campeau

NEW YORK (AP) — Allied Stores Corp. shareholders have approved the $3.5 billion acquisition of the big New York-based retailer by Campeau Corp.

Campeau said it planned to have a vote on Wednesday, completed before the new year began Thursday.

Toronto-based Campeau's takeover plan specified that each share of Allied common stock that the deal, which was approved in a vote on Wednesday, completed before the new year began Thursday.

Campeau did not already own would be converted into 569 in cash if the takeover was completed by Wednesday.

Among the divisions of Allied is The Bon department store chain, which operates in the Pacific Northwest, including stores in Twin Falls and Boise.

The Securities and Exchange Commission, however, was still in the trouble by the impact of program market have become stampedes of trading and, as the year came to a close, was still Companies with access to cheap foreign oil oppose such a tax while companies with only domestic production favor it.

Asked about DiBona's remarks, Hodel issued this response through spokesman Robert Walker: "You've got to be kidding. I consistently have warned that failure to develop domestic oil and gas reserves, particularly those in the central and southern United States, could cripple the U.S. economy and endanger national security."

DiBona acknowledged that the administration has backed an easing of environmental requirements, and to price controls on natural gas production with little trouble for all profits tax, actually an excise tax, that is not being collected because the price of crude oil is too low.

The API study said the U.S. economy could withstand a moderate shortening in world oil production through the use of current world production, would reduce U.S. national product by at most 0.5 percent, and possibly by nothing if other industrialized countries have large oil inventories, the study said.

"NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market moved broadly upward in the year's first trading session Friday, driven mainly by computerized program-trading and a bond market rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks closed at 1,027.51, up 31.36 points.

Gainers outpaced losers by about 7-to-1, with 1,478 issues up, 154 down and 740 unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume totaled 91.8 million shares, compared with 139.17 million shares on Wednesday, the last session of 1986. The market was closed on New Year's Day.

Day traders and securities analyst at Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. said the bond market, which had been down in recent days, rallied as interest rates fell — and was particularly encouraged by a sharp drop in the federal funds rate, the lending rate for overnight loans between financial institutions.

That rate closed at 6 1/2 percent Friday after reaching a high of 30 percent for seasonal reasons earlier in the week. It ended trading Wednesday at 6 percent.
