Memo could torpedo day-care legislation

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

BOISE — A memo between two state agencies that appears to jump the gun on day-care licensing has outraged lawmakers, who say it may torpedo chances of passing a day-care bill this year.

The memo is an agreement between the Department of Health and Welfare and the seven district health departments to divvy up responsibility for day-care licensure if the Legislature passes a day-care bill.

The agreement was signed on Wednesday by Richard Donovan, new director of the state Department of Health and Welfare, and Larry Belmont, chairman of the Conference of District Health Departments.

A few lawmakers requested copies of the memo on Thursday.

Bills out soon — A4

"I'm very upset and disappointed," said Rep. Chris Hooper, House Health and Welfare Committee chairman, on Friday. "I think it may destroy any hopes of getting a good day-care bill through this year."

Rep. Brent Brocksome, R-Boise, who is writing a comprehensive day-care bill to introduce next week, said the agreement was a serious mistake and "premature."

"I really don't know what effect it will have on my bill, but I'm very concerned about it," Brocksome said.

Sen. Denton Darrington, Health and Welfare Committee chairman, who is writing a day-care bill on the Senate side, said he was "shocked" by the memo.

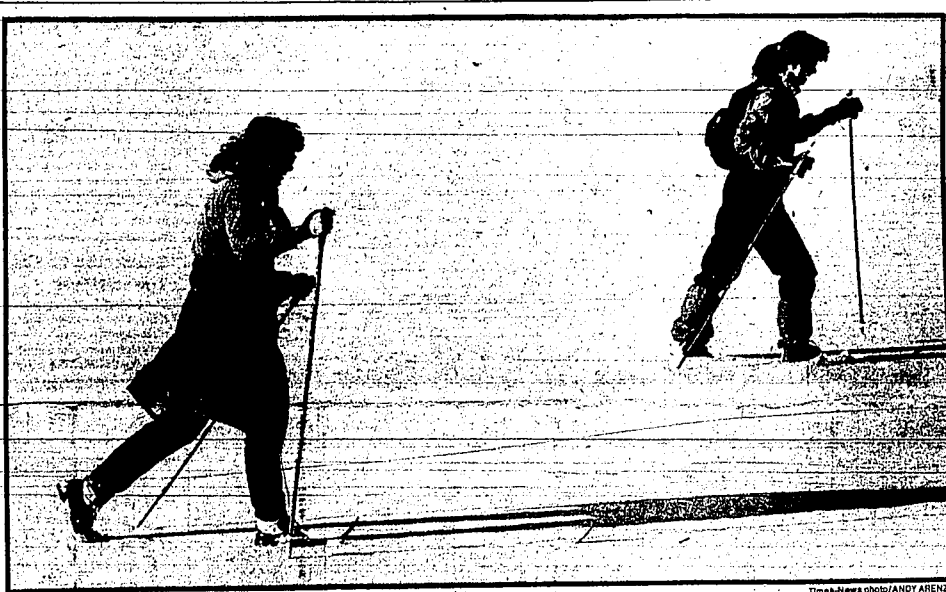

"It blows me away that they would reach an agreement before we even have a bill," the Declo Republican said on Friday. "Of course, it won't affect us much. We'll pass whatever we want to pass."

Under the agreement, DHW would act as the single agency responsible for administration of day-care licensing. DHW would also jointly formulate rules and regulations on day care, in cooperation with the districts' boards.

Under the agreement, health districts would take care of health-related functions, such as sanitation, nutrition and communicable-disease control. DHW would handle fire inspections, life-safety codes, background checks and other licensing requirements.

The memo also states: "We feel the Legislature should invest adequate General Fund dollars into day-care licensure," and "that there is a need for statewide consistency in licensure standards."

Unidentified plane tracked in closed area

By LAURIE SULLIVAN
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Federal Investigators poring over a computer printout of the radar sequence at Salt Lake City International Airport said Friday an unidentified plane entered controlled air space about one minute before a mid-air collision which killed 10 people.

However, John Lauber, a National Transportation Safety Board member, said a preliminary study of the printout was far from conclusive because air traffic controllers may not have seen what appeared on paper.

"We're a long way from determining who made what decisions and when and why," he said.

An 18-seat SkyWest F441-1A Metroliner and a single-engine Mooney M-20C collided over the Salt Lake Valley Thursday, killing 10 people.

Lauber said an unidentified plane was about 1 1/2 miles into Airport Radar Service Area space when the doomed aircraft collided.

Under federal rules, planes are required to establish radio contact with the control tower before entering an ARSA. The unidentified plane was using a transponder which sent a radio signal to the tower indicating it was operating under visual flight reading, or VFR, Lauber said.

The unidentified plane had been in the ARSA more than one minute before the mid-air crash, but Lauber said the computer printouts examined Friday did not show whether it showed up on radar screens.

Lauber refused to say whether the unidentified craft was the Mooney.

He said ATIS members still needed to interview people in the tower when the two planes slammed into each other to learn whether they saw the plane and whether they tried to contact it.

He said preliminary data indicated there was no evidence of radio contact between the unidentified plane and controllers at the airport.

Investigators planned to travel Saturday to Hill Air Force Base near Ogden, Utah, where investigators hoped to play back the actual radar sequence which showed on the airport's screens.

Earlier Friday, Tom Doyle, assistant airport air traffic manager, said the Mooney, with two experienced pilots aboard, did not contact air traffic controllers and was not detected by radar operators before the collision.

The Metroliner and the four-seat Mooney slammed together some 2,700 feet above the valley, sending

Sentence terms extradition key

The Washington Post

BONN, West Germany — West Germany would extradite a Lebanese man to the United States to stand trial for air piracy and murder in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA jet airliner only if Washington agreed not to seek the death penalty for the suspect, Mohammed Hamedel, the government said Friday.

West Germany's constitution forbids the death penalty, and "all of the nation's extradition treaties say that a suspect can be handed over to another country only if execution is ruled out."

The June 1985 hijacking resulted in the death of U.S. Navy diver Robert D. Stethem of Waldorf, Md.

In Washington, Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland said he could not comment on the department's options in the death penalty question, because U.S. diplomats are continuing to discuss the issue with West German authorities.

But Justice Department officials are confident that they can resolve the dispute by promising not to seek the death penalty for Hamedel, according to U.S. sources. While such a recommendation would not bind a sentencing judge, capital punishment is rarely if ever imposed if it is not sought by the prosecution.

In a 1985 indictment unsealed Thursday, Hamedel was charged with air piracy, murder, assault, hostage taking, interfering with a flight crew, placing a destructive device aboard an aircraft and other charges. Only the air piracy charge carries the death penalty under amended 1958 aviation law that covers assaults against Americans traveling abroad in U.S. aircraft. Sources said the Justice Department has no plans to resolve the dispute by dropping the air piracy charge.

The Bonn government was worried that terrorists might kidnap or observe allied West Germans to press for release of Hamedel, 29, according to informed sources.

Meanwhile, West German, Italian and U.S. officials said that they believed that there may be a link between Hamedel and a Lebanese man arrested Monday at Milan's airport when he was caught carrying concealed plastic explosives and detonators.

Abductors free Ecuador president after jailed revolt leader released

The Associated Press

QUITO, Ecuador — President Leon Febres Cordero, kidnapped Friday by renegade paratroopers during a visit to the Taura air base, was freed more than 10 hours later when the government released the leader of an earlier revolt.

The Taura base is near the port city of Quayaquil, 170 miles southeast of Quito, the capital.

Radio reports said the president, Defense Minister Gen. Medardo Salazar and others seized by the paratroopers left the air base in a caravan of cars and went to the Guayaquil governor's mansion. People were reported gathered along the streets of the caravan's route and applauded as the cars passed.

The broadcasts said the president and his party were freed immediately after Gen. Frank Vargas Pazos, who had been jailed following an attempted revolt last March, arrived at the Taura base aboard a special government plane.

LEON FEBRES CORDERO
Held captive for 10 hours
Local news reports earlier in the day said as many as 15 people might have been killed in a gun battle between paratroopers and presidential bodyguards, but Febres Cordero said in a telephone conversation that he and Salazar were uninjured.

Febres Cordero and other members of his party were seized at about 9:45 a.m. and freed at 8 p.m.

Vice President Blasco Penaherrera had announced earlier that the troopers who seized the president had said, "As soon as Gen. Vargas Pazos arrives at the Taura air base President Febres Cordero will be freed."

Penaherrera, speaking at a news conference at the presidential palace in Quito, made no mention of an earlier demand by the kidnappers that Febres Cordero be removed from office.

Vargas Pazos, 52, a former air force commander, had been held at the Epitachima army base in the jungle east of Quito since the charged revolt, awaiting trial on charges stemming from his actions.

Penaherrera said he spoke by telephone.

Advisors recommend OK for AIDS drug

The Associated Press

ROCKVILLE, Md. — A government advisory committee recommended approval Friday of what would be the first drug generally available to doctors for treatment of AIDS.

The 10-1 vote by the Food and Drug Administration committee is not binding on the FDA, which will make the final decision, but is expected to carry heavy weight.

The panel, acting at the end of a day-long meeting to consider the drug AZT, voted to recommend general availability despite serious concern about a lack of as much clinical data as usually precedes drug approvals as well as concern that there would be no iron-clad way to ensure that it would go to the patients most in need once available for general prescription.

The drug manufacturer outlined a procedure for voluntary constraints if the FDA approves AZT and promised to work closely to continue monitoring its effect.

If the FDA continues the expedited handling it has accorded AZT up to now, it is conceivable the drug could be on the market in a month or so.

David Barry, vice president for research for Burroughs Wellcome Co., told the committee during a day of technical presentation that the drug will be available only in limited quantities, even if the FDA grants the company's request that it be approved for general availability.

He said the company shares government concern that AZT, or zidovudine, might be administered to patients who might not benefit from it once available to physicians to prescribe as they see fit.

Moreover, he said, there is a shortage of the drug, which is derived from the sperm of herring, that would prompt the company to try to restrict it to those most in need, even if it receives FDA approval.

The advisory panel, appointed by the FDA, is made up of physicians who have demonstrated that they do not have links with drug manufacturers that would constitute a conflict of interest in recommending action on their products.

While the original clinical trials that led to the hurry-up consideration of AZT were limited for the most part to AIDS with a rare form of pneumonia called Pneumocystis carinii, final approval technically would not be limited to patients with that condition.

Related early tests also covered a less-severe condition called AIDS-related complex, or ARC.

Oldest former legislator dies

DUBOIS (AP) — Harry R. Harn, 91, the oldest former member of the Idaho Legislature, died in an Idaho Falls hospital on Thursday of causes incident to age.

Harn, a Kansas native, moved to Idaho in 1919 at the invitation of his brother, who operated a Dubois garage. He spent the rest of his life in the state, became prominent in the Idaho Republican Party and was a business and civic leader in Dubois.

Funeral services will be Monday at 1 p.m. in the Community Baptist Church, Dubois.

Harn was a state representative from 1931-32 and 1935-36, and as state senator from Clark County from 1937-1947 and 1965-66.

Erbland named criminal chief

BOISE (AP) — Attorney General Jim Jones said Friday he has appointed Peter Erbland, Coeur d'Alene, new chief of the Criminal Division. He replaces Marc Haws, who resigned.

It will be the second time Erbland has replaced Haws in a job. Jones said when Haws resigned as chief deputy prosecutor for Kootenai County to join the attorney general's staff, Erbland also replaced him in that job.

Haws is taking a position with a Salt Lake City law firm.

Rumsfeld to address GOP

BOISE (AP) — Former Defense Secretary and White House chief of staff — Donald Rumsfeld — is scheduled to address the Idaho Republican Party's Lincoln Day banquet Feb. 5.

Rumsfeld was Secretary of Defense and White House chief of staff under President Ford.

He was named ambassador to NATO in 1973, and resigned a U.S. House seat he held for seven years to work for the Nixon White House as director of the Economic Stabilization Program.

Rumsfeld, 54, is president and chief executive officer of Searle pharmaceutical company.

Ricks wants Teton Dam rebuilt

BOISE (AP) — State Sen. Mark Ricks, R-Rexburg, said he plans to introduce a resolution in the Legislature urging the federal government to rebuild the failed Teton Dam.

The earth-filled dam on the Teton River 13 miles northeast of Rexburg crumbled as its reservoir was being filled in June 1976, killing 11 people and causing widespread damage in the floodplains of both the Teton and Snake rivers.

Ricks said area farmers still need the flood control and water-storage the dam would provide. But he said federal officials need to see support from the people of Idaho before considering a rebuilding plan.

John Keys, regional director for the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, said his agency would back the dam's construction, but that local water users would have to pay for it.

The Fremont-Madison Irrigation District long has been in favor of rebuilding the dam, manager Dale Swensen said. In fact, the district's board has passed resolutions supporting the action.

1 percent sales tax proposed

LAVA HOT SPRINGS (AP) — A Lava Hot Springs resident has asked the City Council to change the resort community's "bed and booze" tax to a 1 percent local option sales tax.

The city now charges a special 5 percent tax on hotel, motel, overnight accommodations and liquor by the drink. Mill Campbell told council members a 1 percent sales tax would be more fair.

Campbell told the council that McCall, Sun Valley and Ketchum had recently changed from a 5 percent tax to the 1 percent sales tax. His petition asks for a special election on the question on May 19.

Swan Falls measure passage 'assured'

BOISE (AP) — State Water Resources Director Ken Dunn said he has "every assurance" from Idaho's congressional delegation that federal legislation mandating approval of the state's Snake River water rights agreement will be enacted soon.

"They know of no opposition," Dunn told the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee on Friday. "The president says he will sign that bill if it ever gets to him. . . . Our congressional delegation tells me they think it will pass very soon. I have every assurance in the world."

The bill, now pending in committees of both the House and Senate, directs the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to approve the agreement that ended the long-running battle between the state and Idaho Power Co. for control of the water in the Snake River Basin.

Dunn said members of the Idaho delegation believe the measure will win committee approval within 10 days.

The federal commission's acceptance of the settlement is the final hurdle in resolving the dispute that halted issuance of any new water rights permits in the basin since 1964.

The same measure was passed by Congress last fall but as part of a larger and controversial bill that would have mandated energy conservation features in major appliances. President Reagan vetoed the entire measure because of his opposition to provisions other than the Snake River water rights settlement proposition.

Dunn said he has begun issuing what he called interim water permits to those willing to take the change that the Congress will act favorably on the matter. But he told the committee that those interim permits carry no guarantees of any future right to water.

The settlement, reached in late 1984, was ratified by the Legislature two years ago, and the department began laying the ground work for a $27 million, 10-year adjudication of all water rights in the basin that is a key part of the agreement.

It will be the largest water rights adjudication ever conducted in the West.

Rush: Tax credit little help to farmers

BOISE (AP) — Idaho farmers have been getting little benefit from the investment tax credit, because they have little income to use it on, says Agriculture Director Richard Rush.

He urged that rather than keeping the investment tax credit in state laws, the same amount of money would bring more benefit to Idaho farmers in other programs, such as farm research.

That's a key recommendation from Rush's boss, Gov. Cecil Andrus. Rush told the House Revenue and Taxation Committee on Friday that farmers will get much more benefit in the long run from expanded funding for farm extension and research.

Rush said only half the farmers reporting income between $50,000 and $500,000 last year were able to use investment tax credit, because the others didn't make a profit.

The committee has been hearing testimony on whether Idaho should adopt the new federal tax laws, and whether the state should go along with the federal government and repeal the investment tax credit.

"Most farm taxes should go down a little," said Rush. "Family farms should do better."

But he said most tax experts feel it will take at least one year under the new tax laws before it is clear what impact they will have on farmers. If the investment tax credit is repealed, "In the near term, it will not be noticeable," he said.

Some changes will hurt farmers, he said, particularly the loss of income averaging, which allows farmers to offset good years against bad ones. But he said the elimination of capital gains treatment for farm assets might keep developers from turning highly erodible land into arable land.

"That will be a long-term benefit to the industry," Rush said.

Road opponents delay court action

POCATELLO (AP) — Opponents of the Bureau of Land Management's proposal to build the Egin-Hamer Road are taking a "wait and see" attitude before rushing into court.

An "artful compromise" is how Tom Franz, a National Wildlife Federation attorney, termed Idaho BLM Director Delmar Vall's decision to propose building the road but close it in winter to reduce potential harm to elk wintering in the area west of the St. Anthony sand dunes.

"We're not necessarily 100 percent opposed to the compromise if it can be effective," he said. "We'll have to wait for the full decision."

"Going to court was our original intention," said Karl Holte, president of the local federation chapter.

"But we can't really make any comment until we see what the final environmental impact statement says."

Ed Stockly, director of the Idaho Natural Resources Legal Foundation, said, "There could be something in the final EIS that would put a new light on it."

The Shoshone-Bannock Tribes also indicated earlier they might try to block the road, but officials now say they also will wait for the environmental report. Attorney Jack Ross said the tribes will sue "only if we see some damage to the elk herd."

The Tribes claim BLM officials used "inappropriate methodology" in assessing potential impacts of the road, did not consider potential avoidance of the Sage Junction Port of Entry by "overweight" farm market vehicles and outlaw trucks, and failed to address costs for enforcing the road closure, and mitigating for elk loss.

All three groups said a major concern was whether the winter closure of the road could be effectively enforced, with the tribes saying that proviso leads them to consider the "road and close" proposal as something other than a compromise.

DWR awaits approval on conservation loans

BOISE (AP) — The Department of Water Resources is awaiting federal approval of an innovative loan program to underwrite millions of dollars in future-energy conservation projects — the first program of its kind being reviewed by the Energy Department.

"It's an experiment," Water Resources Director Ken Dunn said Friday after advising legislative budget writers of the proposal using about a third of the money the state received from Exxon Corp. as part of a national judgment for oil-price fixing.

"We had this one opportunity with a large amount of dollars to see if we can't get a revolving loan program going . . . to maximize the effect of these funds," he said.

Some $3 million of the state's $8.9 million share will be devoted to the special revolving fund the department hopes to have operating by spring, Dunn said. A directive is being drafted now to solicit a bank to administer the fund. The rest of the money has been disbursed in the form of grants for energy conservation projects.

Loans would carry a minimal interest rate, he said, just enough to cover costs of administration when combined with the money the operating bank can make on investment of idle cash in the account. He speculated that the rate could be as low as 2 percent or 3 percent.

The projects to be financed by loans from the account, Dunn said, would have to meet certain guidelines for energy conservation, but he said private individuals, businesses or industry could receive the money.

"Giving grants doesn't represent the best use of the money," Dunn told the committee.

Local GOP gathering provides surplus of toasts, few roasts

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Republican Central Committee honored, more than humored, politicians Thursday night in appreciation for those who left or were forced out of office during the last year.

Instead of speakers trading barbs with the former legislators and county office holders, political discourse became the order of the day. The press also became the butt of some criticism for the downfall of some public servants.

Master of ceremonies Mark Stubbs, Twin Falls County GOP chairman, said in his introduction that a "press tirade" during the last year affecting Republicans had been unfair and unjust.

"A few things got said out of context," Stubbs said without elaborating. "I would like to see that change."

Stubbs added that the people "toasted" instead of being "roasted" had been "honest, hard-working people who tried to do the right thing."

About 50 people turned out in frigid weather to honor former Idaho House speaker Tom Stivers and former representatives Noy Brackett, Donna Scott, and Jeff Sloker (who could not attend). From Twin Falls County, former commissioner Ann Cover (who was also absent) and former treasurer Juanita Stettler were toasted.

All were well-remembered for their accomplishments while holding office.

Lt. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter joked and reminisced about serving in the state Legislature with Brackett. Otter said he could always poll Brackett for accurate vote totals in pending legislation.

Otter said he used to greet Brackett by saying, "Hi Noy, how's your bracket?"

Twin Falls County Treasurer Bonnie Brunning commented on Stettler's 43 years in public office. Brunning read a declaration of independence for the retiring Stettler that noted the advantage of the abbreviation of the title "treasurer."

Brunning said commissioners are "commies," auditors are "aud" and she didn't elaborate on assessors.

Current officials also brought political philosophy to the gathering.

Rep. Mack Nelbaur, R-Paul, said he regretted leaving Donna Scott to carry a bill limiting community college funding that was "best for the state, but wasn't taken that way in her community."

Scott was defeated during the May primary election by Ron Black, who went on to win her District 23 seat.

"I feel like I contributed to her downfall," Nelbaur said. "The biggest mistake was made by me" for letting Scott carry the bill, despite the College of Southern Idaho being in her county.

Twin Falls GOP Program Chair Donna Mauldin spoke about political science and the shift she perceived during the last election away from "liberalism" and toward conservatism.

"There were no liberals running in 1988," Mauldin said. "I think that's really strange."

Mauldin noted that candidates were labeled by the press as either "moderates" or "ultra-conservatives." She said this had the effect of placing the ultra-conservatives in the former middle of the political spectrum and meant moderates were actually closer to a totalitarian government than previously suspected.

To politicians labeled ultra-conservatives, Mauldin said, "I'd like to thank these office-holders for keeping us in the middle."

Otter's keynote speech digressed with a discourse on the United States being a republic rather than a democracy, because of the constitution. He said the founding fathers had intended that U.S. senators be elected by state legislatures to avoid conflicts in senatorial races, as he said now happens through out-of-state campaign contributions.

Otter said the conflicts of having out-of-state participation could be avoided, leaving senate elections in the air, by delegating that elective power to the state legislatures.

In a local vein, Otter complimented Stivers for being a straightforward politician when they were both state legislators in the 1970s. Stivers, in turn, produced a moment of Otter's ambition — a business card that read "C.L. 'Butch' Otter for governor."

It was the second tribute in a week to Stivers, who was the object of a GOP roast in Boise Monday.

Buhl rancher, lawmakers decry rustling laws

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

BOISE — Bob Wait wants the hides of the men who stole his cattle.

The Buhl rancher had seven head of cattle stolen last October, when he moved them to a range 12 miles south of Buhl.

Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department officers nabbed six people for the cattle rustling, but under current state law, three of them may get off scot-free.

"One person admitted to taking two cattle, but we've only found one carcass," Wait said on Friday. "Under the law, he can be charged only with a misdemeanor."

Currently, a person can only be charged with grand theft if the value of the livestock is $1,000 or more, or if two or more head of livestock are stolen.

A law introduced in the House Agriculture Committee on Friday by Rep. Celia Folkings, R-Buhl, and Rep. Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley, would make taking one cow, horse, sheep, mule or hog a felony.

"What this does is bring theft of livestock in line with the theft of other property," Folkings said.

An individual would be charged with grand theft if one animal worth $150 or more was taken. Conviction could mean a $5,000 fine or 1-14 years in prison.

The Cattle Association of Idaho had no figures on the number or value of cattle stolen each year, but officials said it was high.

"The Sheriff's Association is working hard on this with us, because they don't think it's only a minor misdemeanor, why prosecute?" Folkings said.

A bill introduced by Rep. Celia Folkings, R-Buhl, and Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley, would make taking one cow, horse, sheep, mule or hog a felony.

Blaine commissioners delay action on controversial sleigh ride

By JOHN ZILLY
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Blaine County Board of Commissioners has delayed a decision concerning operation of a sleigh ride in Adams Gulch, but it appears likely that the commissioners will decide that the controversy is out of their jurisdiction.

The commissioners heard an appeal this week to a conditional use permit issued in November to R.J. Lewy for his sleigh ride operation in Adams Gulch.

Although Lewy's entire operation will be run on public, U.S. Forest Service land in the Adams Gulch area, all Lewy's sleigh ride guests would have to use the Adams Gulch road, which crosses private land.

Landowners in the Adams Gulch subdivision, subdivided only 11 months ago, objected to Lewy's sleigh ride operation — specifically, the winter road use — and appealed the November conditional use permit to the Blaine County Commissioners.

According to Blaine County zoning laws, public easements are granted to all privately owned roads that provide access to public lands. When the land in Adams Gulch was subdivided, "a 60-foot wide multi-use access easement" was drawn into the area plat map.

But Robert Koonz, attorney for landowner Stedman Adams, argued that Lewy's operation constituted an inappropriate use.

R.J. Lewy's attorney, Keith Roark, said that sleigh ride operations constituted a "historic use" in the Adams Gulch and therefore should be permitted.

"We've never objected to the sleigh," Koonz responded. "That's been a historic use. But they want to put tents up, and they want to serve beer and wine. Now, that's a substantial difference next to the kind of property in Adams Gulch."

Roark argued, however, that the conditional use permit really wasn't needed because neither the county commissioners nor the planning and zoning board had jurisdiction.

He (R.J. Lewy) would be perfectly happy to have this board of commissioners conclude that, since the property in question clearly belongs to the United States Forest Service, since the use proposed by R.J. Lewy is subject to a scheme of regulation by the federal government . . . that (your) jurisdiction . . . does not extend to the site," Roark said.

The forest service, according to Roark, is the agency with jurisdiction over the Adams Gulch site, and Lewy will have to get a permit from them to run the sleigh ride operation there.

At present, Lewy runs the sleigh rides at North Fork near the Sawtooth National Recreation headquarters, but plans to return to the Adams Gulch site, perhaps next year.

Commissioner Alan Reynolds wanted to overturn the conditional use permit but not because of the landowners' appeal.

"I don't believe we have the jurisdiction," he said.

John Gladics, chairman of Blaine County's Planning and Zoning Commission agreed.

"On technical grounds the permit should be denied," he said.

The commissioners took no action, however, choosing to wait until their next meeting.

Jenny Felling, Blaine County zoning administrator, said she thought the county commissioners would vote to deny the permit on the grounds that it wasn't in their jurisdiction.

"It's probably a good thing," she said. "I'll clarify the issue (about jurisdiction on federally held land). Why should they need to go through two separate bureaucracies (the county commissioners and the U.S. Forest Service)?"

Charboneau attorney, citing 'spirit' strategy, files new trial motion

By PAT MARGANTONIO
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jaimi Charboneau's new lawyer is seeking a new trial because he claims one of Charboneau's earlier lawyers, Golden Bennett, based his defense strategy on clairvoyant and other "supernatural phenomena," including regular contact with the "spirit" of Charboneau's victim.

But Bennett, a Twin Falls lawyer, said he has never believed in "that chalyvraint crap." He also charged that Greg Fuller, appointed by the court earlier this month to represent Charboneau, with "grasping at straws."

Fuller filed a request for a new trial, three statements forthcoming in 5th District Court in Jerome.

Charboneau was convicted in May 1985 of first-degree murder for the death of his former wife, Marilyn Arbaugh, whose bullet-ridden body was found on July 1, 1984, at her Jerome home.

Fuller filed also on Friday a request for the court to reconsider the death sentence and for post-conviction relief. He has sought a Feb. 10 hearing on the two motions.

To support his motions, Fuller filed three statements taken under oath, including one from former Jerome County prosecutor Dannis Adamson, who served during the initial phase of the case involving Charboneau.

In his affidavit, Adamson stated that sometime after a July 1984 preliminary hearing for Charboneau, but prior to the trial, he was approached by Bennett and Bennett's former investigator, James Coakley. Adamson stated that Bennett told him he knew Charboneau wasn't guilty because Bennett's niece in California had a seance with the deceased. In the seance, . . . said the deceased indicated that she forgave her daughter for firing the fatal shots.

Efforts for resolution of day-care licensing may inspire dual bills

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

BOISE — Lawmakers on both sides of the Legislature are expected to introduce day-care licensing bills next week in an effort to resolve the longstanding controversy over state regulation of day-care facilities.

On the House side, Rep. Brent Brooks, R-Boise, is working with the Day Care Coalition to introduce a comprehensive bill next week. His effort is backed by Twin Falls Rep. Ron Black, owner of the Little Red School House.

On the Senate side, Health and Welfare Committee Chairman Denton Darrington is working with Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho Falls, to hammer out an agreement.

Darrington's bill would impose minimum basic standards for licensure and exempt small day-care operations.

Darrington said his bill was not as comprehensive as Brooks's. But Darrington predicted his version would make it out of the Senate.

"We're trying to strike a balance so we don't have burdensome regulations," Darrington said on Friday.

Darrington, in the past, has opposed day-care legislation. But he needed because neither the county commissioners nor the planning and zoning board had jurisdiction.

He (R.J. Lewy) would be perfectly happy to have this board of commissioners conclude that, since the property in question clearly belongs to the United States Forest Service, since the use proposed by R.J. Lewy is subject to a scheme of regulation by the federal government . . . that (your) jurisdiction . . . does not extend to the site," Roark said.

Idaho Legislature 1987

said this year, "I'm ready to get this thing solved."

Brooks's bill goes farther in outlining rules and regulations for day-care licensing, although Brooks said it was still a compromise solution to please all sides.

His draft proposal would put the licensing authority with the district health boards. It would exempt people who take care of five or fewer children. And it would require a background check of day-care operators.

One of the major differences between Darrington's version and Brooks's bill is the cutoff numbers of who should be licensed.

Black said Friday that the numbers are important, because small day-care operators, those with five children or fewer, should not be included.

"What we're trying to do is protect children and prevent people with a history of child or sexual abuse," from running a day-care home," Black said.

Audit of 1986 budget in Jerome County kills balance expectations

By TERESA Z. TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Jerome County ended its 1986 fiscal year with less money than anticipated, according to an audit by the Rupert firm of Gilnes and Condie.

The county commissioners discussed the audit and reorganized for the new year at a meeting this week.

The balance for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30 for Jerome County was approximately $58,900 after counting all revenues and expenditures. The county had expected a year-end balance of $130,376.

The Jerome County Commission attributed the difference between budgeted and actual funds to the sluggish remittance of tax monies due the county and to the reduced amount of federal revenue sharing Jerome County has received. The county had expected to receive $124,000 in revenue sharing funds and had only received $103,866. The federal program has since been eliminated.

Among the money-management suggestions included in the audit were a more exact accounting of ticket sales by the Jerome County Fair Board and finding revenue to cover an operating shortfall in the weed control department.

"You may have to look at raising fees for weed spraying" on crop expenses that are not covered by other funds," accountant Elden Condie said.

In other business related to county finances, the county may not have to tap into a "tax anticipation" loan arranged in late 1986 to cover a county shortfall caused by tax monies being paid more slowly than anticipated.

"Although slow property tax payments continue to be a problem, outgoing Treasurer Elsie Childers said delinquent property taxes that had been in name in more rapidly than expected.

"We may have to tap into the loan, but we won't know for a while yet," Childers said.

Also at the meeting re-elected commissioners Hank Bakker and Carl Montgomery and newly elected Ray Cobble were sworn in to office by 5th-District Judge Roger Burdick. Cobble takes the place of outgoing commissioner Pam Smith.

The commission plans to fill expected vacancies of four area administrative boards. New board members are needed on the County Fair Board, the Waterways Board, the Airport Board and the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Terms of office vary on these boards with Fair Board members being reappointed each year, Waterways Board members reappointed every two years, while Airport Board and Planning and Zoning Commission members serve terms

Ag director Rush: Credit crunch, subsidy cuts threaten hundreds

BOISE (AP) — The persisting depression in the state's agricultural economy will likely push hundreds more Idaho farmers off the land this year, state Agriculture Director Dick Rush says.

"I don't see that turning around very quickly," Rush said Friday in adding his own dismal note to the relatively pessimistic testimony given to the Legislature's joint Revenue Projection Committee over the last 10 days.

"We've got people in Idaho that are in as tough a shape as anywhere in the nation," Rush told the committee as it closed out its hearings. "I see kind of a split happening in Idaho agriculture between the haves and the have-nots."

The panel, expected to hold its revenue growth projection to 2 percent or below, will meet next week to begin drafting the official estimate that will be the basis for key legislative fiscal decisions in the next two months.

The federal government reported in late 1986 that Idaho had lost some 600 of its 24,000 farms during the previous year with about 500,000 acres of land taken out of production, Rush said. The problems facing farmers in the coming season could see the loss of farms exceed last year's level.

Although potato and bean prices have improved and some stability has been introduced into the livestock sector, Rush said those positive circumstances have been offset and possibly overwhelmed by the continuing slide in grain prices.

While 1986 was believed to be the tightest year ever for farmers and ranchers seeking credit to continue their operations, Rush said the credit crunch has been intensified, possibly by the new federal bankruptcy law for farmers.

"This year is going to be a harder year for getting financing than last," he said, citing as a possible reason the new law that limits the claims creditors can make against farmers seeking bankruptcy law protections.

Compounding the problem, Rush told the committee, is the threat of the Reagan administration's latest proposal to rein in federal farm subsidies. That plan would cut the most critical price support program by 10 percent immediately with additional cuts in the future.

"We're getting a tremendous amount of our income from those programs," Rush said. "It will have a significant effect if those reductions are made."

State analysts have estimated that Idaho producers received about $105 million in payments from the government last year, a third of the estimated farm proprietor income generated in the state during 1986.

BOISE (AP) — Police have charged a Twin Falls man now in prison with phoning in a bomb threat to the Boise State University Pavilion on the night of the Van Halen rock concert last Oct. 19.

A warrant has been issued for Edgar Robert Lockwood, 33, Ada County sheriff's Sgt. John Bryant said Thursday.

Lockwood is in the Idaho State Penitentiary for a parole violation on an earlier bomb-related conviction, Bryant said.

The warrant is on a charge of using a telephone or communicating to law enforcement or other authorities that an explosive device has been planted in a public place. The charge carries a maximum penalty of 5 years in prison.

More than 3,500 people evacuated the Pavilion after the bomb threat, delaying the concert about one hour.

A tape of the threat was played over a Twin Falls television station, and a caller said the voice sounded familiar, Bryant said.

Voice prints of the tape were sent to the FBI lab in Washington, D.C., and interviews with suspects were conducted and compared.

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — KWSU-TV officials say they will air a program about the controversy surrounding the process of selecting and most stations aired it during the week of December 13, Davis said.

"I reviewed the program and found it to be journalistically sound," said Warren Wright, director of television programming at KWSU-TV.

He said he had received both Jefferson's critique and Davis' response and agreed the issues raised in the critique were significant.

The program takes viewers through a history of the nation's nuclear industry and through the site selection process that has narrowed the proposed repository to three finalists: the Hanford nuclear reservation in central Washington; Deaf Smith County, Texas; and Yucca Mountain, Nev.

Overall, Wright said, the program was "reasonably balanced and objective."

Wright said the station delayed broadcasting the program because other public stations in the area carried it in December.

Station manager Dennis Haarsager said the delay is not related to KWSU-TV's fundraising activities in the Tri-Clies, near Hanford.

"We think it's a good, strong program, and we're happy to show it to our constituents," Haarsager said.

Northwest power council revises its building standards

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Northwest Power Planning Council has revised the ways builders can meet energy-efficiency construction standards in the Northwest.

The changes are intended to give their territories greater flexibility in obtaining energy efficiency in new homes and commercial buildings.

The action was taken during a two-day meeting ended Thursday, achieving the standards themselves, that is, the level of energy efficiency, are not significant differences from the first standards adopted in 1983, except that improved construction techniques could result in the same level of energy conservation at less cost.

The council's model energy conservation standards, adopted in 1983, are intended to apply to new electrically heated homes and all new commercial buildings in Oregon, Idaho and western Montana.

The council also agreed to re-evaluate proposed amendments to its Columbia River Basin Fish and Wildlife Program.

In the energy plan, the regional council dropped a requirement that home-builders use a combination of vapor-barrier wraps with heat exchanger ventilators to cut heating needs.

The change was made after a Bonneville Power Administration study and analysis by the council showed said.

Labor Dept. seeks former Gooding man in wage case

SEATTLE — A former Gooding man is among 72 unlocated persons being sought by the U.S. Department of Labor, which is holding a total of $7,945 in back wages.

David Reese Hutcherson, whose last known address in Gooding, is among those being sought.

Wilbur Olson, assistant regional administrator for the Wage-Hour Division, said the money represents back wages owed under provisions of the federal Fair Labor Standards, the Service Contracts, and the Davis-Bacon and related acts.

The Wage-Hour Division was unable to locate the persons to make payments after collecting the back wages.

The department can hold the money for a period of up to 3 years before returning it to the U.S. Treasury or to the employer, depending upon the circumstances of recovery.

Olson said those who believe they may be due back wages should contact the Seattle Regional Office of the Wage-Hour Division, Room 3033 Federal Office Building, 909 First Ave., Seattle, Wash. 98174, or by phoning (206) 442-1914.

of three years.

"These board members administer the funds used to run the various activities governed by the boards," Commissioner Bekker said. Monies used to administer activities supervised by the Waterways and Airport Boards are gathered from user and license fees.

Montgomery said persons interested in serving on the boards may apply to the County Commission. Otherwise, the commissioners contact those persons who may be interested in being on a board or have some special talent that may be useful to the various boards.

There are seven positions on the Fair and Airport Boards, five positions on the Waterways Board, and 12 on the Planning and Zoning Commission. Bekker said not all the positions are open at this time, but the commissioners expect to have the vacancies that are open filled by the end of January.

Bekker said the Waterways Board spent close to $30,000 last year, with $25,000 going to the Bureau of Land Management for projects improving Magic Reservoir. As of Jan. 1, persons purchasing boat licenses will have the opportunity to designate which county should receive a portion of each fee, he said.

"We encourage persons in the area to designate Jerome County as the county to receive the fees," said Bekker. He emphasized local recreation areas have been greatly improved by monies received so far.

Catholic U. bars theological from teaching

By LAWRENCE FEINBERG
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Rev. Charles E. Curran, a liberal theologian censured by the Vatican, disclosed Monday that he has been suspended from teaching theology at Catholic University, but said he intends to teach three classes anyway when the spring term starts on Thursday. "I have a contract with the university to teach and I will be there," Curran declared in an interview. "As a tenured faculty member, how can they keep me from teaching my courses?"

Curran, who was distributed by Curran and then released by the university, Archbishop of Washington James A. Hickey, who serves as university chancellor, said he was formally suspending Curran from teaching in the theology department until final action is taken on revoking Curran's church license to teach Catholic theology.

In August, in a decision approved by Pope John Paul II, the Vatican's Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith ruled that Curran was "not suitable to be eligible to teach" Catholic theology because he had disseminated from church teachings on abortion, contraception and other sexual issues.

Hickey declared there was "no conceivable basis" for continuing to permit Curran "to teach in the name of the church when the highest authorities of the church have expressly and finally declared that" he was not suitable to teach Catholic theology.

CHARLES CURRAN
Declared unfit to teach

But Curran, who has said he will fight to keep his post at the university, said Hickey's authority covers only courses offered to students in three ecclesiastical degree programs accredited by the Vatican. He said the courses in ethics and moral theology that he plans to teach this spring are taken mostly by students in the university's theology programs over which Hickey has "no authority."

Curran said he will tell the ecclesiastical students, mostly priests or those studying for the priesthood, that they can receive no credit for his courses toward their degrees because "Hickey has a statutory right to suspend me from the ecclesiastical degree programs," but he said the other students "have every right to take the courses for credit."

The Rev. David N. Power, chairman of the theology department, said Monday it was still not certain whether Curran would be allowed to teach any students in the courses.

He said a final decision would be made by the university's vice president for academic affairs, John K.C. Oh, after a recommendation from the Rev. William Cenkner, dean of the school of religious studies.

Neither Cenkner nor Oh could be reached for comment Monday. A university spokesman said Catholic University's president, the Rev. William J. Byron, was visiting Holland.

"It is very hard to get clarity as to what is being done," Power said. But he added that the courses will be canceled if Curran is not allowed to teach them, as he has done in the past. "We can't create faculty out of nothing," Power said. "There is simply nobody (besides Curran) to teach."

Curran, 52, who was on a one-year leave of absence until Jan. 1, was disciplined by the Vatican in August after a six-year investigation of his views by Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger of West Germany, president of Sacred Congregation. Church officials said it was part of a broader effort to curb dissent within the church from official papal teachings.

Curran has received strong support from the Catholic Theological Society of America, a group of theologians that he has criticized by saying he has been used by some church scholars.

In November, Oh overruled a theology department recommendation and deleted Curran's name from the university's official spring class schedule, which says the instructor should have been notified by the end of the semester. Oh said then that Curran's name was dropped because Curran

"could be withdrawn" from teaching and the university did not want to "mislead students."

Registrar John P. McCarthy said Monday that he has still not been notified by Oh who will teach the courses.

Curran has taught at the university since 1965, and holds tenure as a professor of moral theology. Catholic is the only university in America chartered by the Vatican, and under church law, its faculty members in theology, philosophy, and canon law must have a special authorization to teach, called a canonical mission or license, from the ecclesiastical head of the institution, who is Hickey.

At Curran's request, the issue of whether Hickey was a sufficient "serious reason" to revoke the license has been referred to a seven-member faculty committee, appointed by the University Senate. Under university rules, the panel is to hold hearings and make a recommendation to the board of trustees and to Hickey, who will make the final decision.

Several university officials said it was unclear how that decision might affect Curran's status as a tenured professor, who can only be fired for "cause," although some officials suggest that withdrawal of a church license might be sufficient cause to dismiss a professor of theology.

Under the suspension, Curran will continue to receive full pay and benefits.

In a statement Monday Curran said that Hickey's action to suspend him was "unwarranted and amounts to a prejudgment of the case under consideration." He said both Power and Cenkner had recommended against the suspension.

A well-known theologian and popular speaker, Curran has said that contraception and sterilization are not "intrinsically evil," as the Catholic church teaches. He said that, under limited circumstances, abortion, homosexuality, masturbation, premarital sex, divorce, and euthanasia are officially banned or condemned by the church, are justified.

Church news

Roberts receives $1.6 million after plea

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Evangelist Oral Roberts has received about $1.6 million in cash and pledges in the 10 days since he told followers God would take his life in March unless he raised $4.5 million to build a ministry spokesman said Thursday.

The $4.5 million is what remains to be collected to fund an $8 million scholarship program for Oral Roberts University medical school students who agree to become medical missionaries.

The 68-year-old evangelist embarked on the fund-raising effort among his followers in March 1986, but first drew widespread attention when he said on his Jan. 4 television program, "Expect A Miracle," that God told him he will die unless the total amount is raised by March.

He repeated the comment in his weekly half-hour program aired Jan. 11, a show taped at the same time the Jan. 4 program was produced. Much of the program was taped at Roberts' City of Faith medical complex, a three-tower structure adjacent to the university.

"I'm coming to you today to talk to you in a way I've never shared with you," Roberts told followers. "I'm the closest to God I've ever been. Yet I'm under an almost unbearable burden. As I told you last March 1986, God came to me and reminded me why he had us to build Oral Roberts University, the medical school, the City of Faith, all of which are under scholarship."

Roberts said God told him, "I want you to turn the medical school around in one year, and raise the $8 million it takes. And he said if you don't do it, I'm going to call you home in one year."

Roberts, who rarely grants interviews, has not been available to talk more about his televised comments, which ministry officials say were seen in 1.4 million households in 200 television markets.

The pioneer television preacher who has had television programs for more than 30 years also mailed 1 million letters to "prayer partners," asking donations to extend his life.

Jan Dargatz, vice president for creative development for the Oral Roberts Ministry, said Thursday that Roberts' words literally means he will die unless the money is raised in time.

She said she believes the goal will be reached and that Roberts will live.

The first medical team will go to Kenya this spring, said Ms. Dargatz. The evangelist said his goal is to allow medical students to finish their education debt-free, then spend one year as a missionary in a Third World country for each year they are under scholarship.

Ms. Dargatz said $9 of the 48 students in the first year of the program have signed up for the ministry's scholarships. A total of 69 of the 192 current students and residents now in the program also have agreed to participate.

Roberts turns 69 Jan. 24. His son, Richard, discounted rumors that his father's health might be failing.

"He's healthy as a horse," the younger Roberts said in his daily syndicated television program.

Several university officials said it was unclear how that decision might affect Curran's status as a tenured professor, who can only be fired for "cause," although some officials suggest that withdrawal of a church license might be sufficient cause to dismiss a professor of theology.

Under the suspension, Curran will continue to receive full pay and benefits.

In a statement Monday Curran said that Hickey's action to suspend him was "unwarranted and amounts to a prejudgment of the case under consideration." He said both Power and Cenkner had recommended against the suspension.

A well-known theologian and popular speaker, Curran has said that contraception and sterilization are not "intrinsically evil," as the Catholic church teaches. He said that, under limited circumstances, abortion, homosexuality, masturbation, premarital sex, divorce, and euthanasia are officially banned or condemned by the church, are justified.

Secretaries knew what was going on, McFarlane declares

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane told Congress Friday that Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger "knew what was going on" during the decision to sanction arms sales as part of a bid to force Iraq to moderate its Iran policy.

McFarlane also said President Reagan was warned "very emphatically" by his advisers that if the deal became public, it would look like he was simply trading U.S. arms for the release of Americans held hostage in Lebanon.

McFarlane said Reagan acted to authorize the contacts with Iran in mid-summer 1985 only after he and his advisers became convinced that despite obvious risks, any other course would be "a cop-out," given Iran's important strategic position to both the United States and the Soviet Union.

He said that Shultz and other Cabinet officers were fully involved in the original decision, even though they advised against it, and that there was "no ambiguity or misunderstanding among them of the nature of the decision."

Shultz, however, told reporters late Friday that he could not recall being told during the summer of 1985 that Reagan had approved Israeli arms shipments to Iran.

In fact, Shultz said he attended a meeting that August with Reagan and McFarlane in which the issue was discussed, and he had "the impression" no decision was taken.

"I'm not challenging him," Shultz said. "I'm just saying I have lots of notes. I sort of habitually did that. Maybe I'm missing something or missed something. But I don't have any note about being formally notified of a presidential decision."

Shultz said the first, full-scale formal meeting to discuss weapons shipments to Iran was not held until that December.

Until then, Shultz said, "I just don't recall being told" the President has "explicitly decided to authorize, in effect, the Israelis to ship arms. I don't say that it didn't happen. I just don't recall it."

McFarlane testified before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee as the White House was denying that Reagan has distanced himself from the controversy surrounding the clandestine arms sales and alleged diversions of sales proceeds to Nicaraguan rebels.

Not long after a Reagan spokesman was quizzed by reporters about the president's attention to the problem, David Abshire, the retired NATO envoy brought in to coordinate the White House's handling of the various Iran-Contra investigations, issued a statement saying:

"The president is continuing to follow closely the efforts to compile all the facts regarding the Iran issue currently under investigation. The president met with me Monday and will be meeting with me on a regular basis."

Abshire said Reagan "wants to be absolutely certain" that Congress, an independent counsel and a presidential investigative panel looking into National Security Council operations, "are receiving all the materials and information they need for a comprehensive and expeditious review of the issue. The president remains committed to his pledge to the American people that they get all the facts."

The White House denied there was any connection between the stormy news briefing and the subsequent statement by Abshire.

McFarlane's Capitol Hill appearance, in which he did not testify under oath, coincided with the Senate committee's unusual step of releasing an internal administration memo. This document ordered the National Security Council to stay out of covert operations or other "special activities" unless Reagan orders otherwise.

The memo, written by new national security adviser Frank Carlucci, states that, generally, only the CIA or armed forces may conduct covert operations.

Briefly

Judge limits visits to child

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — A surrogate mother fighting for custody of the child she agreed to bear for a childless couple may not spend more time with the baby as the bitter trial proceeds, a judge ruled Friday.

Superior Court Judge Harvey R. Sorkow said surrogate mother Mary Beth Whitehead is to continue with her twice-weekly, two-hour visits with the 9½-month-old girl under supervision at a building two blocks from the courthouse.

He said he based his decision partly on expert evaluation that concluded it would be best not to disrupt the child's daily routine.

The child is in the temporary custody of William and Elizabeth Stern, who hired Mrs. Whitehead to bear the child using Stern's sperm.

The custody dispute arose after Mrs. Whitehead and her husband, Richard, changed their minds about the surrogate arrangement shortly after the baby was born March 27.

'Stealth' bomber moving on

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new "stealth" bomber has yet to fly, but thousands of hours of wind-tunnel tests on the design have been completed and the plane will mark a significant advance in aviation, the Air Force's top general said Friday.

Chief of Staff Larry D. Welch, in a rare discussion of the highly classified plane, said the aircraft would feature an unusually efficient aerodynamic design that would provide benefits to the Air Force even if it didn't offer the advantages of radar-evasion technology.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said recently the new bomber was "on track" for deployment in the early 1990s.

Welch discussed the project briefly Friday in an interview that was dominated by his defense of the new B-1 bomber, which is now entering the Air Force's inventory.

Court overturns EPA ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court Friday overturned the Environmental Protection Agency's decision allowing traces of a cancer-causing pesticide on imported mangoes and gave the agency 30 days to justify its action.

The court found that EPA "acted arbitrarily and capriciously" by allowing imported mangoes to continue for two years to have traces of the pesticide EDB, which it had banned on all domestic produce.

The agency in 1983 banned EDB, short for ethylene dibromide, as a pesticide on all domestically grown fruits and vegetables after reviewing evidence the chemical caused cancer.

But EPA said the pesticide would be allowed on the pulp of imported mangoes until Sept. 1, 1985 as long as the concentration did not exceed 30 parts per billion.

Churches pick office sites

By The Associated Press

Committees of two major Protestant denominations on Friday recommended new headquarters sites: St. Louis for the United Church of Christ and Kansas City, Mo., for the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A.

The United Church committee, meeting in Houston, picked St. Louis only after the Presbyterian committee, meeting in San Francisco, picked Kansas City.

Both recommendations are subject to approval by denominational conventions in June. The United Church General Synod will meet in Cleveland and the Presbyterian General Assembly in Biloxi, Miss.

The 1.7-million-member United Church has headquarters in New York, and the 3.1-million-member Presbyterian Church has dual headquarters, in Atlanta and New York.

Police case verdicts rejected

MIAMI (AP) — A jury submitted verdicts Friday in the trial of seven police officers charged in a $15 million cocaine ripoff scheme, but the judge refused to accept them, apparently because the verdicts were not unanimous.

U.S. District Judge Kenneth Ryskamp ordered the panel to return Saturday morning for a ninth day of deliberations in the trial stemming from the July 1985 deaths of four drug dealers.

"As I told you during instructions, you all must agree," Ryskamp told the jury after it gave him 20 verdict forms. "As to the way the verdict is at the present time, it is defective."

Ryskamp called the 11 attorneys to the bench before dismissing the verdict forms. He did not show the verdicts to them but ordered the documents sealed for the record.

In the whispered bench discussion, attorneys said the judge told them, "The jury has not reached a unanimous verdict, and I'm going to send them back."

Columnist Wilson dies after stroke

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Broadway columnist Earl Wilson, who during a 48-year career used his folksy writing style to bring New York's nightlife to millions of readers, died Friday. He was 79.

Wilson, who had been in a coma since last weekend, died at St. Joseph's hospital, said a spokeswoman Jodi Horton. He had Parkinson's disease and had suffered a stroke Dec. 14.

The prolific writer of gossip about who's hot and who's not retired in 1983 after churning out 11,424 columns a month for the New York Post. The column, "It Happened Last Night," also was carried by the Field Newspaper Service and before that by Hall Syndicate.

Fowler plans to leave FCC

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mark S. Fowler, a champion of deregulation during more than five years as chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, announced Friday he will step down this spring.

Fowler said he sent a letter to the White House informing President Reagan of his decision to resign, saying, "I have served longer than any other chairman. Now, it is time for me to move along."

Fowler said that leaving his position in the spring "will give sufficient time for a successor to be named to my seat."

He said he had no plans for the future, adding that "it would not be appropriate to think of that until near the end" of his stay at the FCC.

What's what

Pizza with no cheese

Three out of four sandwiches contain cheese. I never met a pizza without cheese. Yet countless government warehouses are full of cheese. If a fellow knew everything there is to know about cheese, I contend, he'd understand Washington jobbies, rural politics and the more significant factors in today's economy.

Weren't any dandelions around here until colonists brought them from Europe.

Q. What's honey -- a liquid or a solid?
A. It can't make up its mind. Like ketchup, mayonnaise, face cream and toothpaste. They're "thixotropic" substances. Surely you'll remember that and so designate them henceforth.

MILK PROTEIN

Q. Says here human breast milk has less protein than cow's milk. Why?
A. A calf gains weight a lot faster than a baby. So the baby doesn't need as much protein. Nor as much as a baby rat or a baby whale. Smart lady, Mother Nature. The milk of each species has just the right amount of protein for the offspring of that species.

Almost 1,000 years before Gutenberg came up with his European print shop, the Chinese were doing some printing of their own. Their oldest known specimen translates: "Beware of the Dog."

Q. Soviet law requires an engaged couple to wait a month from the time they apply for a marriage license until their wedding day. What proportion of them back out in that waiting period?
A. About 12 percent.

BY AND LARGE

Q. What's the opposite of "by and large"?
A. "Full and by." In sailing ship days a helmsman could expect either of these two orders. "Full and by" meant to sail as close to the wind as possible. That required an experienced sailor. "By and large" meant to sail slightly off wind. An inexperienced sailor was less likely to get in trouble that way. What's curious about this is "by and large" came into the common idiom to mean "generally." But "full and by" didn't come into the idiom to mean "specifically."

Ralph Waldo Emerson was of the opinion that any time is a good time if you know what to do with it.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today there is considerable confusion, concerning your personal philosophy, but this soon changes and you have some excellent creative ideas.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You may find it difficult to utilize some past knowledge. Meet with many interesting personalities.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Don't go off on any tangents otherwise your secret plans can be spoiled. Invite fascinating people in tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Keep out of an argument between your mate and a friend and then you can make outside contacts.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't mix in if a quarrel develops between a partner and a prominent person. Study into financial dealings.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): This is a good day to go after your personal wishes. Get in touch with modern thinking for best results.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Forget those amusements that are too expensive for you and plan the future with the aid of experts.

LIBRA (July 22 to August 21): Avoid an argument with a close tie and an outsider. Show more affection for your relatives.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Schedule your time well so that you can attend to duties and shop. Study into improving your career.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Forget that idea to spend lavishly for pleasure. Make fascinating new contacts with valuable advice.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Your ideas and the ideas of your kin may differ, so get out to business interests and come to a fine agreement.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Don't go into a tizzy over problems. Get into activities that are profitable in the business world.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Avoid that acquaintance who was his, or her, eyes on your assets. Plan to cooperate more with co-workers.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she won't be able to decide whether or not to adhere to the past or get into future interests, so be sure to give a good education that will help your progeny to adjust best to both. Upon reaching adulthood your progeny can make headway in worthwhile ventures.

Roof falls in, 10 Romanians lose lives

By The Associated Press

Ten Romanians died when a snow-burdened roof collapsed, an English bride had to be airlifted to hospital and fresh vegetables were in short supply in West Germany on Friday as Europe stayed locked in a deep freeze that has claimed at least 284 lives this month.

With some parts of Britain still snowbound after four days, officials helicoptered 500 pounds of food to an isolated power station on the Isle of Gull in the southeast coast of England to feed the workers who were in short supply in West Germany on Friday as Europe stayed locked in a deep freeze that has claimed at least 284 lives this month.

The collapse occurred Thursday in Satu Mare, a town of 128,000 people near the Hungarian border where Romania earlier this week had its lowest temperature, 27 degrees below zero, Scintela reported.

Queen Elizabeth's household, Buckingham Palace, gave 12 blankets to a police driver that collected 200 blankets for the charity Age Concern and the heated school buses were lent to the Salvation Army to shelter the homeless in London this weekend.

Bonneville Bees down Bruins in Gem State match

DAVE McNEES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Bruins, trying to get past a double-barrel test against the Gem State Conference's first and third-ranked teams, dropped the first one 71-59 to the Bonneville Bees.

The Bees, led by swing player Darren Johnson, combined height with quickness, surprising for such a large team. It enabled them to dominate the game by controlling the boards and utilizing the fast break.

The Bruins racked up their biggest lead of the game 8-4 in the first four minutes. But the conference-leading Bees quickly caught up and moved ahead to stay at 13-11 with a minute left in the first quarter. They then proceeded to build a comfortable cushion for themselves.

The early lull in the Bruin offense was a definite detriment to the final outcome, according to Bruin Coach John Astorquia.

"The game was lost early by Bonneville's great play in the first and second quarters and our scoring slump," he said.

The drought started with 19 seconds left in the first quarter and rolled three minutes into the second until finally broken by guard Tom Mueller with 5:35 left in the half.

Bonneville initiated its full court press in the second which was part of the reason for the lull. It was one of the things Coach Astorquia feared of the team.

"To beat Bonneville you have to beat their press. And because of their depth, they can keep their people fresh and their defense quick," he said before the match. Astorquia also said Bonneville's Johnson could "go outside and kill you."

That's exactly what he did. Outside, inside, and at the free throw line Johnson racked up 25 points of his own, including three three-pointers.

But scoring honors went to Bruin Gabe Ostyn with 26. Coming out of the locker room facing a half-time deficit of 23-44, Ostyn led what looked like a comeback, or at least a solid start; early in the third.

Then, as desperately needed three-point hoop by guard Jay Dee Yergensen sparked the Bruins most sustained and colorful drive of the night. It included "another three-pointer by Yergensen and one by guard Swede Trenkle to bring the score to 54-43.

The Bruins had scored ten unanswered points. But they also knocked four minutes off the clock and didn't leave enough time to overcome Bonneville's regained consistency.

Yergensen hit one more three-pointer and Ostyn sank four more baskets in the last part of the fourth, but most were answered by Bonneville guard Scott Parkinson.

The Bruins travel east tonight to face Rigby which is third in the conference. Twin Falls drops to 1-6 in conference and 3-6 for the season.

The Twin Falls juniors topped Buhl in the preliminary.

Eagles stagger into 100-84 victory

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Far from pretty, this 17th straight victory of the season for College of Southern Idaho's men's basketball team.

The Eagles, getting most of their impetus from a meteoric start by Kelth Jackson and the usual impeccable, steady performance of Erick Newman, struggled often and staggered late into a 100-84 decision over Region 18 archrival Ricks College.

It was disappointing enough for Coach Fred Trenkle to predict a tremendous battle tonight against Utah Tech "if we don't pull this thing together and get our team defense and offense going again."

Probably the tendency to criticize his rather lackluster performance is more reflective of the 110-point offense and 65-point defense averages CSI has been posting. More credit probably should be given to Ricks, which showed a strong offensive rebounding/scoring game until the big people tired in the second half.

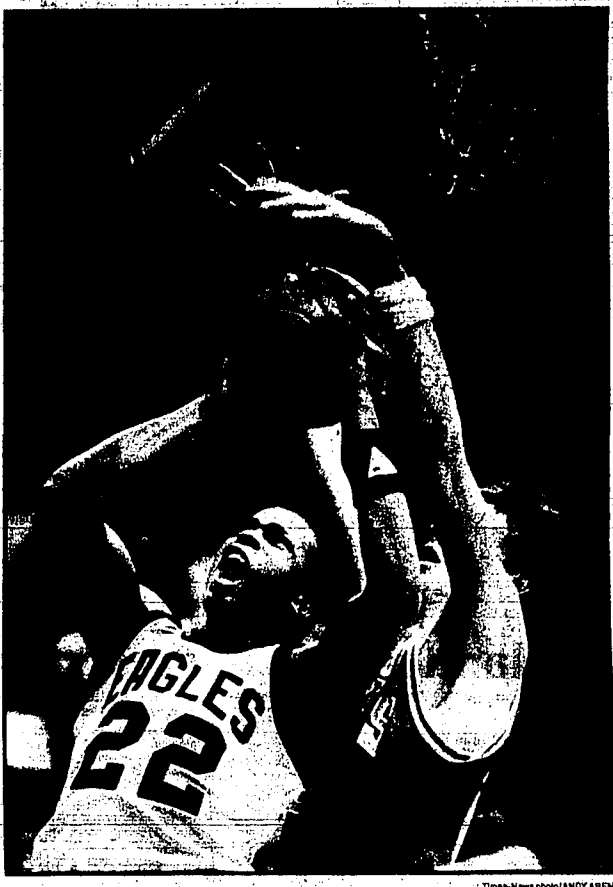

Ricks, with Gerald Riddick and Trent Shippen providing good ball handling, didn't turn the ball over much and stymied CSI's biggest offense weapon — the 10-point surge that comes off defensive turnovers.

Both teams were under par with Ricks' Clint Bean seeing limited action due to recent illness. The 6-foot-10 Bean got 12 first-half points. CSI had Mauro Gomez (25 points) slowed by a foot injury and Newman just coming back from stomach flu. Sophomore Shawn Lasher is gone for a month with a broken foot bone. Games hit six three-point goals.

The combination of those things, the little changes that you don't think should upset much, are the reasons a team can look like we did at times tonight," Coach Fred Trenkle said. "And I think emotionally we're still hanging from last week's tie game in Coeur d'Alene. But whatever it is, it has better improve by tomorrow night or Utah Tech will be a real problem."

"I don't think it's going to be a physical problem. We didn't over-run anyone tonight. We were able to sit the starters out quite a while," he added.

Shoshone beats scrappy Hornets to take first place

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — The Oakley Hornets led all the statistics in Friday night's Magic Valley Conference boys' basketball game with Shoshone except the important one — the final score.

The Indians, the Class A-4 No. 1 team, came to fight at the Shoshone Oakley club and walked off the floor with a 65-63 victory.

The win left Shoshone in sole possession of first place in the MVC with a 5-0 record (10-9 overall), while Oakley fell 1½ games back to 3-1 and 7-5.

A backdoor layup by sophomore Jim Messick with nine seconds left in the contest led Shoshone to the win.

"The Shoshone Indians are very fortunate to win," said Shoshone Coach Larry Messick as he emerged from the locker room after the game. "They just completely outplayed us. We did a pitiful job on the boards."

"Experience," said Oakley Coach Neal Wyatt, searching for a reason for the loss. "The kids played well. They have nothing in the world to be ashamed of."

Shoshone set the pace for the early part of the game taking an 11-4 lead, but Oakley ran off nine straight points and the game would be a seesaw battle from that point.

The main difference for the Indians was the playing of 6-foot, 4-inch senior Kelly Duffin, who was the tallest player on the court.

Duffin took the ball inside whenever Shoshone needed a boost. The Indians needed a boost a lot Friday night.

Duffin scored 11 of the Indians 13 second quarter points to keep up with the Oakley output and Shoshone led by a point at the break.

Shoshone took the biggest second half lead six minutes into the third quarter, 46-40, after a bucket by Duffin and a pair of Messick free-throws.

Oakley battled back and tied the contest three minutes into the fourth quarter.

Senior Russen Hale, who had 22 points in the contest, led the Hornets comeback scoring six points in the fourth quarter and knotted the game with 45 seconds left.

After an exchange of baskets, Messick hit the game winner, the second triple for the sophomore in the final 36 seconds, and Oakley couldn't get the ball back up the court for a desperation shot.

Duffin led a trio of Indians in double figures with 23 points while Terry Flores added 14 for the winners.

Indians vs. Tigers in contrast

By MICHAEL VANAUDELN
Times-News writer

JEROME — Tonight's boys' basketball game between the 6-4 Buhl Indians and 5-0 Jerome Tigers will be a study in contrast.

You can bet on it.

The Indians, who along with Jerome and Wood River form a three-team A-2 district within the South-Central Idaho Conference that places one team in the state tournament, are a half-court team. That likes to get the ball down low to their big men, Kyle Wilson and Kevin Cato. The Tigers, meanwhile, the unanimous No. 1 selection in the latest Associated Press poll, love to run the fast break more than Magic Johnson has ever dreamt about.

"To beat Jerome," said Buhl Coach Tom Chivers, "we have to get the ball to Wilson and Cato as often as we can. We cannot run with Jerome."

"It will be a battle between the two different styles," said Jerome Coach Ben Allen. "We'll be using all 90 feet of the floor while they'll use only half of that."

The two different styles are personified in Buhl's 6-foot, 6-inch center Kyle Wilson and Jerome's 5-6 point guard Mike Welch. Each dictates their team, and each are the ones their teammates look to for some big numbers.

Wilson will, no doubt, draw some double-teaming, predefined Chivers.

"And we have to have a big game from Kyle. Buhl goes as Wilson goes."

The smaller Tigers don't have a player who matches up with Wilson, but the Indians don't have a player who can keep up with Welch. Jerome's leading scorer "pull pressure" on you constantly," said Cor. "He shoots very well and if you play him close, he can penetrate and dish the ball off."

Another kind of pressure that Buhl is sure to see is a Jerome press. In their 73-50 loss to second-ranked Jerome.

Regional powers Minico, Pocatello square off

By MICHAEL VANAUDELN
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — If ever there is to be a clash of boys' basketball titans in Region III of the Gem State Conference this year, it's definitely tonight's matchup between the two unbeaten teams in the region, the Minico Spartans and the Pocatello Indians.

Minico is 6-2 for the season with a 3-0 record in the region while Pocatello matches the Spartans' sterling record with a unblemished regional record of their own, 4-0, and 7-2 overall. Both teams sport identical 5-2 GSC records.

And neither team has lost any perspective over this upcoming war.

"We're preparing by mentally knowing the importance of this game," said Pocatello head coach Ron Kress. "We're a pretty basic team and they (Minico) scare the hell out of me."

At first glance, Minico wouldn't seem to be such a monster. For one thing, the Spartans are young, starting two juniors and a sophomore — but a closer look at who those young players are will make any opposing coach sleep with his lights on at night.

One doesn't think of the Spartans having a young team; one thinks of them, as having Jack Bagley, Robert Greener and sophomore Dan Poulton — three of the best players in the state. These three are the team's leading scorers and the ones "standing by to contribute," says Minico head coach Craig Dexter.

"Bagley has been shooting real well in the past few games and Poulton has been remarkably consistent." Bagley, especially, has been a 25-point scorer. The 6-2 sophomore scored 25 points against Rigby on Jan. 10 and 17 versus Blackfoot last Wednesday. It's performances like those that "tell me that we have to play some pretty outstanding defense," said Kress.

While Spartan fans will be watching for Bagley and Poulton to ring up some high scoring totals, Minico's third player of this young, productive trio, Greener, who may have

Pavilion sold out for Bronco-Vandal conference showdown

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

BOISE — All of those long-suffering Boise State University basketball fans who thought it would be a cold day before they'd ever see the Pavilion sell out to watch a Bronco-Vandal conference showdown for a Big Sky Conference showdown with the Broncos, who are off to a 12-2 start this season and working on a 12-game winning streak. The six-year-old Pavilion, which seats 12,000 for basketball, sold out Thursday morning about 10 a.m. in the conference.

For the record, Boise State hasn't filled its gym for a basketball game since the 1976-77 season.

"This is a bigger than average conference game," said BSI Coach Bobby Dye, whose Broncos are 2-0 in the league so far this year. "But it's still a conference game."

"Our players will be emotionally ready to play," promised first-year Vandal Coach Tim Floyd. "We're not a great offensive team, but we're a great team and we'll be ready for Boise State."

Dye admitted it's been hard to keep his team from getting distracted this week.

"We've been registering (for the week) — this week," he said. "The players have been trying to get back into their routine. We've been emphasizing that they need to stay calm and be aware of the fact that we have 11 more conference games after Saturday night. There is a long way to go."

Hype notwithstanding, this game has the potential of matching its pre-game notes. Idaho and Boise State are the No. 1 and No. 2 defensive teams in the conference, respectively, rank fourth and third in rebounding, second and first in three-point goals and fourth and first in turnover margin.

But it's also worth noting that of the 24 games BSU and Idaho have won between them this season, 18 have been on the home court.

"I'm not happy we were able to get a couple of wins last weekend (over Idaho State and Weber State)," said Dye. "I've heard it said you have to win at home if you're going to win a Big Sky championship. Well, winning at home is difficult to do — especially if you get too confident."

Floyd said his ballclub will be overmatched tonight, but he's been saying that about most of Idaho's opponents lately.

"From what I've seen, they're not just a good team — they're a team of a national standard," he said of the Broncos. "I think a lot of good teams would have a hard time going into Boise and beating them. They have three or four guys who can play above the rim: we're 6-6, 6-7 at the post spot. They've got good guard play. Doug Ustiafo is the best point guard in the conference. (Junior forward) Arnell Jones is one of the premier players in the conference, and (junior center) Gregg Dodd has done a very good job. I think he was a starter as a freshman at Utah (when Floyd was an assistant coach at Texas-El Paso), so I've seen what he can do."

"We've got to go out and not turn the ball over, give ourselves a chance," Floyd continued. "Since we're not a big team, we've got to give people going to the boards, including our perimeter people (James Allen, (James) Filch and (Vinson) Metcalf."

Dye thinks Floyd's assessment of the Vandals is overly modest. "Since they're a very fine basketball team with excellent team quickness," he said. "They do an excellent job on defense and on offense they're very patient and have excellent shot selection. They're much

Quick facts

Time: 7:30 p.m., tonight.
 Site: BSU Pavilion, Boise.
 What it means: A victory by Idaho tonight against the Broncos would give the Vandals a "breakthrough" against one of the Big Sky Conference leaders; a win by Boise State would leave BSU with a 5-0 conference record and at least a tie for the league lead.
 Season records: Idaho is 12-4; Boise State is 12-2.
 Big Sky Conference records: Both teams are 5-0.

Broncos' last victory, by a 41-35, came in Moscow last Jan. 11.
 The coaches: Tim Floyd, in his first season at Idaho, is 12-4; Bobby Dye, in his fourth season at Boise State, has a career record of 315-121.
 Radio: KBAR-AM, Burley.
 Television: KTYD-TV (Channel 7), Boise.
 Basic offense: Both teams use multiple offenses.
 Basic defense: Both teams use both man-to-man and zone defenses, although both are basically man-to-man.

The series: The series is tied 10-10. Idaho defeated Boise State last Feb. 10 in Boise.

Giants may lose Hill for Super Bowl in late-hit suspension

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New York Giants Coach Bill Parcells said Friday he was confident that safety Kenny Hill will not get a Super Bowl suspension for what the 49ers say was a late hit on wide receiver Jerry Rice in the NFL semifinal.

The NFL is investigating a complaint filed by San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh, who said videotapes of the Giants-49ers game on Jan. 4 showed that Hill took a cheap shot at Rice in the fourth quarter with New York ahead 49-3.

"Our office does not comment publicly regarding possible disciplinary action by the Commissioner," said Joe Browne, director of communications for the league.

At first, Parcells refused to comment on Walsh's allegations.

"We're not losing Kenny," Parcells said when asked about a possible suspension for the Super Bowl against the Denver Broncos in Pasadena, Calif.

There has been speculation that Hill would receive a substantial fine and one writer told Parcells he had heard it would be as high as $20,000.

"Tell your unnamed genius who came up with $20,000 that he hasn't got a clue," the coach said.

Hill, a starter since being acquired in a 1984 trade with the Los Angeles Raiders, said the league had informed him that it was conducting an investigation involving the play, for which Hill did not draw a penalty.

"I was there," Hill said, when asked about the play. "I don't think it would be in my best interests to comment at this point."

He said he would comment once the league makes a decision.

Walsh reportedly said there were two plays involving Hill that annoyed him, including one in which the safety allegedly ran 20 feet and speared Rice.

In other team matters, Parcells said All-Pro Linebacker Lawrence Taylor will only see limited action in practice because of a bruised thigh suffered in Sunday's 17-0 victory over Washington in the NFC title game.

"I doubt I would allow him to go full speed even if he were able," said Parcells. "He can run and he can hit the bag. Don't worry about him, though. He'll make himself be 100 percent if we were playing this afternoon."

Defensive end George Martin missed practice to attend the funeral of one of his grandparents, Parcells said. The Giants players did a lot of complaining after practice Wednesday because of what they thought was an excessive amount of running.

"We're going to run today, tomorrow, and Monday," Parcells said. "Yesterday wasn't a difficult practice, we just ran lengthily. I'll make sure I'll have hot chocolate and marshmallows after practice."

Broncos' quarterback John Elway continues to be the leading topic among the Giants.

"Elway is a guy we have to keep in mind every play," said Parcells. "Elway is some competitor. He won't go in there. He gets hit. He gets knocked out and he still stays in there."

Wright warns Broncos Super Bowl may be once-a-career experience

DENVER (AP) — Cornerback Louis Wright has counseled his Denver Broncos teammates not to take anything for granted in the Super Bowl.

Wright is one of three Broncos who will be playing in a second Super Bowl on Jan. 25 when Denver faces the New York Giants at Pasadena, Calif.

He vividly remembers the January 1978 game, in which Dallas beat the Broncos 27-10. "Getting to the Super Bowl was great, and we all thought we'd be back in a couple of years," Wright recalled. "We were certain that we'd have more chances. It's a shock to have to wait nine years. Some guys never made it back again."

"Louis told us how everybody from that '77 team thought they'd be back in another Super Bowl in a couple of years," wide receiver Steve Watson said. "It took him 10 years (actually nine). He told us to go for the gusto now. He told us to enjoy it and make it count."

Another Super Bowl veteran, linebacker Tom Jackson, said the 1977 Denver team was totally unprepared for the "party" atmosphere of the game.

"There were nights when some of our guys had too much fun," he said. "TV cameras filmed them at night clubs, and I'm sure the Cowboys saw that. We seldom saw the Cowboys we'd have more chances. It's a shock to have to wait nine years. Some guys never made it back again."

"Louis told us how everybody from that '77 team thought they'd be fun comes afterward. If we win, there'll be a real good party to go to."

Jackson, 35, has played in 191 games more than any player in the history of the Denver organization. He has hinted he might retire after this season, but says no decision will be made until the off-season.

"I don't have a Super Bowl ring, and just one time I'd like to experience it," he said.

Jackson's career appeared over in 1985 when he spent most of the year on the sidelines with a knee injury. His decision to come back in 1986 — and uncharacteristically work out hard during the off-season to prepare for it — was prompted by the presence of one player.

"I knew (quarterback) John Elway was going to get this team to the Super Bowl again, and I wanted to be a part of it," he said.

He is optimistic about his team's chances against the favored Giants.

"This team is much more balanced than the 1977 team," he said. "Last time we went we had very little offense, and everybody knew it."

"We were really tight, really close in 1977, and I think this team has developed a lot of that feeling, too. Having lost four straight games in the playoffs (in previous years) caused us to come together. Sometimes you have to go through turmoil to draw really close."

"Getting back to the Super Bowl has erased a lot of bad memories."

Ditka may quit over ouster of Vainisi

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Ditka threatened to resign as coach of the Chicago Bears last week and still may leave the team he led to the Super Bowl championship last year, published reports say.

When Ditka first heard last week that Jerry Vainisi, his close personal friend, was being let go, he tried to talk club President Mike McCaskey out of it and threatened to quit, Don Pierson of the Chicago Tribune reported.

The coach strongly hinted to friends he will not work for McCaskey beyond the 1987 season, when his contract expires, according to Pierson's report. Pierson helped Ditka write his autobiography last year.

Brian Hewitt, who covers the Bears for the Chicago Sun-Times, wrote "it may be only a matter of time" before Ditka goes.

Hewitt quoted a source close to the Bears as saying "Vainisi was the glue that held this organization together ... Had Mike Ditka left, Jerry Vainisi would have left."

Ditka was visibly upset Thursday at a news conference announcing Vainisi's departure. He said he was "very, very hurt" by McCaskey's decision to let Vainisi go.

On Friday afternoon, radio station WBBM-AM quoted sources saying the Atlanta Falcons, whose offer of a head coaching position was turned down by UCLA's Terry Donahue, had asked the Bears for permission to talk with Ditka about the vacancy.

The Falcons promptly denied that report.

"To my knowledge, nobody has contacted us to talk to Mike," said Bears spokesman Bryan Harlan. "Mike (McCaskey) has been gone all afternoon and I don't think anybody could have reached him."

Besides their personal friendship, Ditka and Vainisi are partners in a downtown restaurant and night club.

On Thursday, McCaskey told reporters he was confident that Ditka "will have a long coaching career as head coach of the Chicago Bears."

Vainisi, 45, was one of the three men — along with Ditka and Bill Tobin, player personnel director — that partered the defending Super Bowl champions.

But, 10 days after the Bears lost their NFL playoff opener 27-13 to the underdog Washington Redskins, McCaskey said Vainisi and the Bears "agreed to part company."

"Fired is too harsh a word," said McCaskey, grandson of the late George Halas, the Bears' founder.

However, Vainisi's whose contract runs two more years, said in a later statement, "I remain ready, willing and able to continue my efforts on behalf of the Bears as always have."

McCaskey had said only that "a difference in approach and from philosophy" led to his departure, but refused to elaborate.

Vainisi is being kept on as a consultant until a contract payoff can be worked-out, and he came to his office at Halas Hall in suburban Lake Forest each day this week.

His primary responsibility was to get the players signed to contracts and was respected around the league for innovations in contracts, including incentive clauses and bonuses.

Players agents and NFL colleagues were shocked at the news of his departure.

"I've always thought he was the best general manager in football. I'm surprised," said Steve Zucker, who represents Jim McMahon and several other Bears.

"It's just mind-boggling," said Jim Flaks, president and general manager of the New Orleans Saints and Vainisi's predecessor as Bears GM.

Even Bears players, assistant coaches and other employees were surprised.

"It's one of those things I really have no idea why it happened," said linebacker and defensive team leader Mike Singletary.

Schlichter taken in gaming crackdown

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Art Schlichter, who was banned from pro football for a year because of his betting activities, was arrested Friday on a charge of unlawful gambling. The former Colts quarterback was said by police to have bet more than $200,000 on football and baseball games late last year.

Schlichter, 26, was among 13 people charged in a series of gambling arrests by city police.

Police Chief Paul A. Annee said records seized indicated Schlichter wagered on professional and college football and pro baseball.

Schlichter, the former Ohio State University star selected in the first round of the National Football League draft in 1982, missed the 1983 season while serving a one-year league suspension for gambling. The Colts were then in Baltimore.

"He's all right, I'll say that," said Lesa J. Lux, Schlichter's attorney. "It's not fun for anyone."

Lux said she was "not at liberty to say where he is" after coming to Indianapolis from Ohio to surrender to authorities.

She said she expects she or Schlichter will make a public statement after they have analyzed the information gathered by police. A court appearance is pending, she said.

Schlichter was charged with a Class B misdemeanor of unlawful gambling. The offense carries a maximum penalty of 180 days in jail and a $1,000 fine.

The bettors who were arrested are alleged to have wagered more than $519,000 during the time of the investigation, which lasted from September through December 1986.

Six other men were charged with felony counts of promoting professional gambling and corrupt business influence.

"Art Schlichter fit into the scheme of things here as a better one," said David Cook, a Marion County deputy prosecutor.

"That there's an organization that allows a person to bet that kind of money in that period of time, that's what concerns us," said Cook.

Annee said NFL security officials were consulted during the investigation, and that the officials said Schlichter's alleged betting pattern was "very similar, if not identical and was released on his own" to his previous gambling tendencies.

ART SCHLICHTER Hasn't broken habit yet

quarterback."

Irsay said he was surprised to learn of the arrest.

"I thought he learned his lesson. If they caught him again, I guess he hasn't," Irsay said.

Joe Browne, director of communications for the NFL, said Schlichter's arrest would not immediately affect his future participation in the league.

Schlichter's right now is a free agent and he's eligible to be signed by any of the 28 teams," Browne said.

"The contract of any free agent is subject to review by the commissioner's office when and if he signs. It's handled on a case-by-case basis," Browne said.

"The NFL has been tremendously cooperative and supportive of this investigation, especially with the involvement of a former athlete of theirs, particularly an athlete that has gone through this once before and was on the road to recovery," said Annee.

The police chief said Schlichter was released without having to post bond because this is the first criminal gambling charge lodged against him.

Police said they launched the investigation because they feared Indianapolis is becoming an active gambling center, with the influx of amateur sports championships and the arrival of the Colts.

"We're very concerned that organized crime not get any kind of a foothold in this county," said Annee.

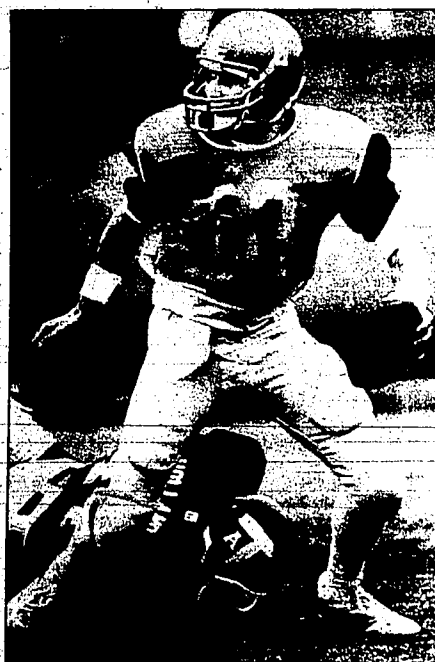

Schlichter was signed last June as a free agent by the Buffalo Bills, but failed to earn a spot on the team. He currently is a sales representative for a Columbus, Ohio-based credit insurance company.

He said recently that he is one of 36 applicants for the head football coaching job at a high school in Wilmington, Ohio.

Colts owner Robert Irsay said neither he nor other team officials knew of Schlichter's alleged gambling activities when he was cut from the squad.

"There was no inking at the time we released him that he was involved in gambling," Irsay said. "We knew about nothing of that sort. We let him go because of his physical stature as a

Coaches and player make Senior Bowl an all-Shula affair

Alabama's Mike Shula will handle the South generalling

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A South squad led by Don Shula former, meets the North Saturday in the 38th Senior Bowl football game.

Shula, coach of the Miami Dolphins, will have one son playing quarterback for the South, Mike, and another son, David, a Miami assistant, coaching the quarterbacks and receivers.

"It's really a family affair," the elder Shula said. "It's a new experience for me to be coaching Mike."

Mike Shula, who set a career record at Alabama with 25 touchdown passes, will open at quarterback for the South. He will be backed up by Cody Carlson of Baylor.

Shula passed for 1,486 yards and 13 touchdowns during the 1986 season and Carlson threw for 2,084 yards and 10 TDs.

"The South is a slight favorite to trim the North's 18-16-3 lead in this annual game that lures coaches and scouts from the NFL and Canadian Football League."

Michigan's Jim Harbaugh, a second-team All-American, and Oregon's Chris Miller, the most valuable player in last week's Hula Bowl, will share quarterback duties for the North — coached by John Robinson and his Los Angeles Rams' staff.

A crowd of 40,000 is expected at Ladd Memorial Stadium. The forecast calls for a 70 percent chance of rain during the game, which will be televised by the Mizlou and USA networks.

Harbaugh passed for 2,729 yards and 10 touchdowns in his senior year and Miller threw for 2,503 yards and 12 scores.

Both teams will be without key players lost to injuries. All-American tailback Brent Fullwood of Auburn for the South and

Michigan's Jim Harbaugh warms up his throwing hand

Southern California defensive back Lou Brock Jr., son of the former, Louisville Cardinals baseball star, for the North.

Fullwood missed last week's Japan Bowl because of a pulled hamstring, which hasn't responded to treatment. Brock has a shoulder injury.

Besides Fullwood, the South had three other 1986 All-Americans — linebacker Cornelius Bennett of Alabama, tackle Danny Villa of Arizona State and center Ben Tamburello of Auburn.

Shula decided to start Mike's Alabama teammate, Wes Neighbors, over Tamburello.

With Fullwood sidelined, the only 1,000-yard rusher in the game will be the South's Christian Okoye of Azusa Pacific.

Okoye, born in Nigeria, never had seen a football before arriving at the California college on a track scholarship. He rushed for 1,650 yards in 1986, ranking No. 1 in the nation for NAIA schools.

The North features Oklahoma's Spencer Tillman (519 yards rushing) and Jim Manoa (546 yards) of national champion Penn State at running back.

Washington's Lonzell Hill (43 catches for 721 yards) and Syracuse's Scott Schwedes (41 for 544) will open at the receiving positions for the North, and Southern Mississippi's Lynn Alston (22-463) and Alabama's Al Bell (26-315) will start for the South.

Linebackers Bennett, Mike Junkin of Duke and Johnny Holland of Texas A&M head the South defense, and Washington end Reggie Rogers and Penn State linebacker Bob White, a down lineman in his college career, lead the North defense.

Softball meeting scheduled

TWIN FALLS — Election of officers and first organization meeting for the 1987 Twin Falls Softball Association season will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday at city hall.

Levy completes grid staff

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Buffalo Coach Mark Levy Friday completed his staff of assistants Friday, hiring two coaches expected to help the Bills devise an offense to better utilize quarterback Jim Kelly.

The Bills, 4-12 during the 1986 NFL season, named former Baltimore Colts head coach Ted Marchibroda as quarterbacks coach and passing game coordinator, and former Southern California head coach Ted Follmer as receivers coach.

Marino to miss Pro Bowl

MIAMI (AP) — Miami Dolphins' quarterback Dan Marino has withdrawn from the Pro Bowl game for the third time in four seasons to undergo arthroscopic surgery on his left knee.

Marino has had four previous operations on the knee. This will be his third arthroscopic, a procedure he has likened to "an oil change."

"My doctor (Richard Steadman of Lake Tahoe, Calif.) has advised me to have the operation," Marino said Friday. "Unfortunately, I'll miss the Pro Bowl. I have to go in now, so I'll be ready to go to training camp."

City officials can scalp tickets

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — City officials who receive Super Bowl tickets can resell them for profit despite National Football League efforts to impose sanctions on them, a deputy city attorney says.

The NFL wanted scalping restrictions imposed on tickets sold to the city under contract provisions, but Deputy City Attorney Gary Gillig said the city refused because scalping is legal in California, and the city's personnel code does not bar resale of tickets for profit.

City officials purchased 1,200 tickets for the Jan. 25 Super Bowl at face value. NFL special events director Jim Steeg said the league was given assurances that city officials "would do their best to prevent scalping."

"We addressed the concern," he said. Gillig said it was possible the city might adopt a new personnel policy after the Super Bowl between the New York Giants and Denver Broncos, preventing city officials from reselling their tickets to anyone but relatives.

Riley to coach West stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Pat Riley of the Los Angeles Lakers; for the fifth time in the last six years, will coach the Western Conference team for the NBA All-Star Game on Feb. 8.

Riley clinched the assignment when the Lakers beat the Golden State Warriors 129-109 Thursday night, assuring Los Angeles of having the best record in the conference through Jan. 25, the cutoff for determining the All-Star coaches.

The East coaching job still is undecided, with the leading candidates being K.C. Jones of Boston, Mike Fratello of Atlanta and Chuck Daly of Detroit.

Riley has a 1-3 record in his previous All-Star coaching assignments. The lone victory came in 1985 when the West beat the East 140-129 in Indianapolis. He was the losing coach in 1982, 1983 and 1984.

Fignini wins second downhill

FRONTEN, West Germany (AP) — Olympic champion Michela Fignini led a strong challenge from her Swiss teammates and a surprisingly strong West German team Friday in winning her second World Cup downhill ski race this season.

It was the fourth downhill of the season and the last before the World Championships at Crans-Montana, Switzerland, where Fignini will be defending her downhill title. The championships begin Jan. 25.

Swiss and West German racers dominated the event, taking the first seven places. Fignini, 20, mastered the 2,260-meter long Breitenberg course in one minute, 20.12 seconds, giving the powerful Swiss team its 12th triumph in 17 World Cup races this season.

Regine Moesenlechner of West Germany placed second in 1:20.21. Maria Walliser of Switzerland was third in 1:20.82 and regained the lead in the overall World Cup standings with 107 points, 14 more than teammate Vreni Schneider.

Goodwin not averse to tests

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — Billy Goodwin, suspended from the Mississippi Coast Jets, says he and a teammate are not refusing to be tested for drugs, but just don't want to go to Denver to take the tests ordered by the Continental Basketball Association.

Thursday, the league suspended Goodwin and Bobby Parks — the Jets' leading scorers — for at least two years after the players refused urinalysis ordered by an independent arbitrator.

A statement was made in a statement released by the league office at Denver. Goodwin and Parks were suspended from the Jets by the league last weekend after their arrests at Pensacola, Fla., on drug possession charges.

Wake Forest coach resigns

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Al Groh resigned Friday as Wake Forest football coach, marking the fourth football coaching change in the Atlantic Coast Conference in the past two months.

"This is not a decision I like or feel comfortable with," Groh said in a statement he read at a news conference. "However, extended conversations between our administration and myself have been fruitful toward developing a common ground of agreement on the future direction of Wake Forest football."

"It is quite disappointing to me that things didn't quite work out."

Wake Forest had a 5-6 record, including 2-5 in the ACC last season.

Recently, Bobby Ross stepped down as football coach at Maryland. Ross then was named as Georgia Tech's coach after Bill Curry left to become head coach at Alabama. Leaving with Curry was Duke Coach Steve Sloan, who became the Crimson Tide's athletic director.

Minico faces must-win game

RUPERT — Minico's girls' basketball team faces a must-win situation tonight when the Spartans entertain Burley in a Region III contest.

A loss in the 8 p.m. contest tonight would doom Minico to be on the road in the first round of the postseason regional tournament. But if the Spartans, 8-7 overall and 2-3 in regional games, can beat Burley tonight and again on Jan. 29 or upset Highland in Pocatello on Jan. 20, they have a shot at the third berth in the postseason tournament, which would put them at home in the first round of the tournament.

Burley, now 11-4 overall and 1-4 in regional competition, would have to get some help from other teams to avoid being on the road in the first round. The Bobcats have two games remaining with Minico and another with Twin Falls in Twin Falls on Jan. 22.

Giants already being treated like NFL champions in N.Y.

By WALLACE MATTHEWS and TOM VERDUCCI
Newark

NEW YORK — The life of a Super Bowl team: Following their 17-0 victory over the Washington Redskins in the National Football Conference championship game last Sunday, the New York Giants got an unusual three-day break from practices and meetings. In that time, many were in demand for personal appearances, television shows and awards.

Pro football

Tuesday, while a group of his teammates cavorted in Central Park making a music video.

Lawrence Taylor received the NFL's Most Valuable Player award; defensively and George Martin received the "Man of the Year" award Wednesday from the Tomorrow's Children's Fund. Martin was honored for his work with various community projects in northern New Jersey. Here's what some of the other Giants did on their mid-winter vacation:

Leonard Marshall (defensive end): "A couple of people called for me to do stuff, but I wasn't interested. I stayed home, drank a few beers and rested."

Jerome Sully (nose tackle): "Nothing spectacular. I appeared in the video Tuesday, that's all."

Lionel Manuel (wide receiver): "Nothing interesting."

Gary Reasons (linebacker): "I did a couple of television and radio shows... and I basically enjoyed my time off. It was fun."

Andy Headen (linebacker): "I just went out and had a nice time."

Maurice Carthon (fullback): "I basically relaxed a little, came in for some treatment and did some baby-sitting. It was nice."

Karl Nelson (tackle): "I enjoyed it. I made some arrangements for my family to get to California."

Lawrence Taylor (wide receiver): "I really laid low. They asked me to be in the video, but it was too short notice. They called me late Monday night and told me we were starting to film at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning. All I did was speak at a high school in New Jersey to some kids."

Eric Howard (nose tackle): "Tuesday I went to the Knicks game and then I was on a call-in show. Then I watched some of the MTV thing we taped a month ago. Some of my high school buddies called me from California. They were drinking in a bar and looked at the TV and saw me on MTV. What a horrible sight, huh?"

Lawrence Taylor (linebacker): "He wasn't speaking Thursday. He made a cameo appearance in the Giants' video, and on Tuesday posed at home and at Giants Stadium for a Sports Illustrated cover."

Trophy permits increased

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The Idaho Fish and Game Commission has approved additional controlled-hunt permits in 1987 for the trophy species of moose, bighorn sheep and mountain goat.

The five-member commission, meeting Friday in Boise, also extended the spring steelhead fishing season in the Little Salmon River through April 30.

Available resident permits for moose were raised to 60, bighorn sheep permits to 190 and mountain goat to 71. All are up from 1986 and substantially ahead of the permits offered just five years ago, the Department of Fish and Game said.

In 1982, for example, the commission approved 173 moose permits, 127 bighorn permits and 53 for mountain goat.

The department proposed increasing bighorn sheep permits to 208 this year. But a proposed increase from 18 to 54 in central Idaho hunting unit 27 was cut to 36 by the commission, spokesman Hugh Wilson said.

He said the department would closely monitor the unit to see if the doubled harvest is feasible with existing bighorn populations, which game managers believe have improved substantially.

The deadline for applications is April 30 and those applying for moose, bighorn or goat permits could not apply for any other controlled hunt permit.

Earlier, the commission approved revised wild turkey regulations for 1987, including the addition of 30 controlled-hunt permits for a total of 180.

BYU signs JC All-America back from Dixie

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Fine Unga, a first-team junior college all-America fullback from Dixie College, has signed a letter of intent to play football for Brigham Young next season.

Unga, who is from Provo, rushed for 1,514 yards, caught 26 passes and scored 28 touchdowns in 1986 for 11-1

Dixie, which finished the season ranked third nationally. He will graduate from Dixie this spring and then transfer to BYU. The Cougars lose their top three runnings backs — Lakel Helmlut, Bruce Hansen and Robert Parker — to graduation.

Unga is one of several Dixie players who have signed letters of intent with four-year schools.

Another, Dixie first-team all-American, defensive end Leon Cole, has signed a letter of intent with Texas A&M. Wide receiver Bryant Hill, a native of St. George, has signed with Oregon State.

Giants may lose Hill for Super Bowl in late-hit suspension

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — New York Giants Coach Bill Parcells said Friday he was confident that safety Kenny Hill will not get a Super Bowl suspension for what the 49ers say was a late hit on wide receiver Jerry Rice in the NFC semifinal.

The NFL is investigating a complaint filed by San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh, who said that videotapes of the Giants-49ers game on Jan. 4 showed that Hill took a cheap shot at Rice in the fourth quarter with New York ahead 49-3.

"Our office does not comment publicly regarding possible disciplinary action by the Commissioner," said Joe Browne, director of communications for the league.

At first, Parcells refused to comment on Walsh's allegations.

"We're not losing Kenny," Parcells said when asked about a possible suspension for the Super Bowl against the Denver Broncos in Pasadena, Calif.

There has been speculation that Hill would receive a substantial fine and one writer told Parcells he had heard it would be as high as $20,000. "Tell your unnamed genius who came up with $20,000 that he hasn't got a clue," the coach said.

Hill was a starter since being acquired in a 1984 trade with the Los Angeles Raiders, said the league had informed him that it was conducting an investigation involving the play, for which Hill did not draw a penalty.

"I was there," Hill said, when asked about the play. "I don't think it would be in my best interests to comment at this point."

He said he would comment once the league makes a decision. Walsh reportedly said there were two plays involving Hill that annoyed him, including one in which the safety allegedly ran 20 feet and speared Rice.

In other team matters, Parcells said All-Pro linebacker Lawrence Taylor will only see limited action in practice because of a bruised thigh suffered in Sunday's 17-0 victory over Washington in the NFC title out-

"I doubt I would allow him to go full speed even if he were able," said Parcells. "He can run and he can lift the leg. Don't worry about him, though. He'll make himself be 100 percent if we were playing this afternoon."

Defensive end George Martin missed practice to attend the funeral of one of his grandparents, Parcells said. "We're going to run today, tomorrow, and Monday," Parcells said. "Yesterday wasn't a difficult practice, we just ran lengthily. I'll make sure I'll have hot chocolate and marshmallows after practice."

Broncos' quarterback John Elway continues to be the leading topic among the Giants.

"Elway is a guy we have to keep in mind every play," said Parcells. "Elway is some competitor. He won't go down. He gets hit. He gets knocked out and he still stays in there."

Wright warns Broncos Super Bowl may be once-a-career experience

DENVER (AP) — Cornerback Louis Wright has counseled his Denver Broncos teammates not to take anything for granted in the Super Bowl.

Wright is one of three Broncos who will be playing in a second Super Bowl on Jan. 25 when Denver faces the New York Giants at Pasadena, Calif.

He vividly remembers the January 1978 game, in which Dallas beat the Broncos 27-10. "Getting to the Super Bowl was great, and we all thought we'd be back in a couple of years," Wright recalled. "We were certain we'd have more chances. It's a shock to have to wait nine years. Some guys never made it back again."

"Louie told us now everybody from that '77 team thought they'd be back in another Super Bowl in a couple of years," wide receiver Steve Watson said. "It took him 10 years (actually nine). He told us to go for the Super Bowl. He told us to enjoy it and make it count."

Another Super Bowl veteran, linebacker Tom Jackson, said the 1977 Denver team was totally unprepared for the "party" atmosphere of the game.

"There were two nights when some of our guys had too much fun," he said. "TV cameras filmed them at night clubs, and I'm sure the Cowboys saw them. They were there to win the game, whereas I think we were just happy to be there."

"We're not out there to visit every night club in Newport Beach. The fun comes afterward. If we win, there'll be a real good party to go to."

Jackson, 35, has played in 191 games, more than any player in the history of the Denver organization. He has hinted he might retire after this season, but says no decision will be made until the off-season.

"I don't have a Super Bowl ring, and just one time I'd like to experience it," he said. Jackson's career appeared over in 1985 when he spent most of the year on the sidelines with a knee injury. His decision to come back in 1986 — and uncharacteristically work out hard during the off-season to prepare for it — was prompted by the presence of one player.

"I knew (quarterback) John Elway was going to get this team to the Super Bowl again, and I wanted to be a part of it," he said.

He is optimistic about his team's chances against the favored Giants. "This team is much more balanced than the 1977 team," he said. "Last time we went we had very little offense, and everybody knew it."

"We were really tight, really close in 1977, and I think this team has developed a lot of that feeling, too. Having lost four straight games in the playoffs (in previous years) caused us to come together. Sometimes you have to go through turmoil to draw really close."

"Getting back to the Super Bowl has erased a lot of bad memories."

Schlichter taken in gaming crackdown

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Art Schlichter, who was banned from pro football for a year because of his betting activities, was arrested Friday on a charge of unlawful gambling.

The former Colts quarterback was said by police to have bet more than $200,000 on football and baseball games last year.

Schlichter, 26, was among 13 people charged in a series of gambling arrests by city police.

Police Chief Paul A. Annee said records seized indicated Schlichter was a wagered on professional and college football and pro baseball.

Schlichter, the former Ohio State University star selected in the first round of the National Football League draft in 1986, missed the 1986 season while serving a one-year league suspension for gambling. The Colts were then in Baltimore.

Schlichter at the time said his gambling had put him "on the path to total self-destruction."

"I have not only been a compulsive gambler for too long now, it made me a compulsive liar, too," he said. He later underwent treatment in an effort to break his habit.

Schlichter was reinstated for the 1984 season after a meeting with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle and moved with the Colts to Indianapolis, starting in live games. The Colts released him after the fifth game of the 1985 season.

Schlichter turned himself in to Indianapolis authorities early Friday and was released on his own recognizance after being booked.

"He's all right, I'll say that," said Lesa J. Lux, Schlichter's attorney. "It's not fun for anyone."

Lux said she was "not at liberty to say where he is" after coming to Indianapolis from Ohio to surrender to authorities.

She said she expects she or Schlichter will make a public statement after they have analyzed the information gathered by police. A court appearance is pending, she said.

Schlichter was charged with a Class B misdemeanor of unlawful gambling. The offense carries a maximum penalty of 180 days in jail and a $1,000 fine.

The bettors who were arrested are alleged to have wagered more than $2 million on the outcome of a football in this county," said Annee.

Schlichter was signed last June as a free agent by the Buffalo Bills, but failed to earn a spot on the team. He currently is a sales representative for a Columbus, Ohio-based credit insurance company.

He said recently that he is one of 36 applicants for the head football coaching job at a high school in Wilmington, Ohio.

Colts owner Robert Isray said neither he nor other team officials knew of Schlichter's alleged gambling activities when he was cut from the squad.

"There was no inkling at the time we released him he was involved again," Isray said. "We knew about nothing of that sort. We let him go because of his physical stature as a quarterback."

Isray said he was surprised to learn of the arrest.

"I thought he learned his lesson. If they caught him again, I guess he hasn't," Isray said.

Joe Browne, director of communications for the NFL, said Schlichter's arrest would not immediately affect his future participation in the league.

Schlichter right now is a free agent and he's eligible to be signed by any of the 28 teams," Browne said.

"The contract of any free agent is subject to review by the commissioner's office when and if he signs. It's handled on a case-by-case basis," Browne said.

ART SCHLICHTER Hasn't broken habit yet

Ditka may quit over ouster of Vainisi

CHICAGO (AP) — Mike Ditka threatened to resign as coach of the Chicago Bears last week and still may leave the team he led to the Super Bowl championship last year, published reports say.

When Ditka first heard last week that Jerry Vainisi, his close personal friend, was being let go, he tried to talk club President Don Piersen of the Chicago Tribune report.

The coach strongly tilted to friends he will not work for McCaskey beyond the 1987 season, when his contract expires, according to Piersen's report. Piersen helped Ditka write his autobiography last year.

Brian Hewitt, who covers the Bears for the Chicago Sun-Times, wrote "it may be only a matter of time" before Ditka goes.

Hewitt quoted a source close to the Bears as saying "Vainisi was the glue that held this organization together ... Had Mike Ditka left, Jerry Vainisi would have left."

Ditka was visibly upset Thursday at a news conference announcing Vainisi's departure. He said he was "very, very hurt" by McCaskey's decision to let Vainisi go.

On Friday afternoon, radio station WBBM-AM quoted sources saying the Atlanta Falcons, whose offer of a head coaching position was turned down by UCLA's Terry Donahue, had asked the Bears for permission to talk with Ditka about the vacancy.

The Falcons promptly denied that report. "To my knowledge, nobody has contacted us to talk to Mike," said Bears spokesman Bryan Harlan. "Mike (McCaskey) has been gone all afternoon and I don't think anybody could have reached him."

Besides their personal friendship, Ditka and Vainisi are partners in a downtown restaurant and night club.

On Thursday, McCaskey told reporters he was confident that Ditka "will have a long coaching career as head coach of the Chicago Bears."

Vainisi, 45, was one of the three men — along with Ditka and Bill Tobin, player personnel director — that operated the defending Super Bowl champions.

But, 10 days after the Bears lost their NFL playoff opener 27-13 to the underdog Washington Redskins, McCaskey said Vainisi and the Bears "agreed to part company."

"Fired is too harsh a word," said McCaskey, grandson of the late George Halas, the Bears' founder.

However, Vainisi, whose contract runs two more years, said in a later statement, "I remain ready, willing and able to continue my efforts on behalf of the Bears as I always have."

McCaskey had said only that "a difference in approach and from philosophy" led to his departure, but refused to elaborate.

Vainisi is being kept on as a consultant until a contract payoff can be worked out and he came to his office at Halas Hall in suburban Lake Forest each day this week.

His primary responsibility was to get the players signed to contracts and was respected around the league for innovations in contracts, including incentive clauses and bonuses.

Players agents and NFL colleagues were shocked at the news of his departure.

"I've always thought he was the best general manager in football. I'm surprised," said Steve Zucker, who represents Jim McMahon and several other Bears.

"It's just mind-boggling," said Jim Flinks, president and general manager of the New Orleans Saints and Vainisi's predecessor as Bears GM.

Even Bears players, assistant coaches and other employees were surprised.

"It's one of those things I really have no idea why it happened," said linebacker and defensive team leader Mike Singletary.

Coaches and player make Senior Bowl an all-Shula affair

Alabama's Mike Shula will handle the South generalling

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — A South squad, led by the Don Shula family, meets the North squad in the 38th Senior Bowl football game.

Shula, coach of the Miami Dolphins, will have one son playing quarterback for the South, Mike, and another son, David, a Miami assistant, coaching the quarterbacks and receivers.

"It's really a family affair," the elder Shula said. "It's a new experience for me to be coaching Mike."

Mike Shula, who set a career record at Alabama with 35 touchdown passes, will open at quarterback for the South. He will be backed up by Cody Carlson of Baylor.

Shula passed for 1,486 yards and 13 touchdowns during the 1986 season and Carlson threw for 2,084 yards and 10 TDs.

The North is a slight favorite to trim the South's 18-16 lead in this annual game that lures coaches and scouts from the NFL and Canadian Football League.

Michigan's Jim Harbaugh, a second-team All-American, and Oregon's Chris Miller, the most valuable player in last week's Hula Bowl, will share quarterback duties for the North, coached by John Robinson and his Los Angeles Rams staff.

A crowd of 40,000 is expected at the Municipal Stadium. The forecast calls for a 70 percent chance of rain during the game, which will be televised by the Mizlou and USA networks.

Harbaugh passed for 2,729 yards and 19 touchdowns in his senior year and Miller threw for 2,503 yards and 12 scores.

Both teams will be without key players lost to injuries — All-American tailback Brent Fullwood of Auburn for the South and

Michigan's Jim Harbaugh warms up his throwing hand

Southern California defensive back Lou Brock Jr., son of the former St. Louis Cardinals baseball star, for the North.

Fullwood missed last week's Japan Bowl because of a pulled hamstring, which hasn't responded to treatment. Brock has a shoulder injury.

Besides Fullwood, the South had three other 1986 All-Americans — linebacker Cornelius Bennett of Alabama, tackle Danny Villa of Arizona State and center Ben Tamburello of Auburn.

Shula decided to start Mike's Alabama teammate, Wes Neighbors, over Tamburello.

With Fullwood sidelined, the only 1,000-yard rusher in the game will be the South's Christian Okoye of Azusa Pacific.

Okoye, born in Nigeria, never had seen a football before arriving at the California college on a track scholarship. He rushed for 1,680 yards in 1986, ranking No. 1 in the nation for NAIA schools.

The North features Oklahoma's Spencer Tillman (519 yards rushing) and Tim Manoa (546 yards) of national champion Penn State at running back.

Washington's Lonell Hill (43 catches for 721 yards) and Syracuse's Scott Schwedes (41 for 544) will open at the receiving positions for the North, and Southern Mississippi's Lyeal Alston (22-453) and Alabama's Al Bell (26-315) will start for the South.

Linebackers Bennett, Mike Junkin of Duke and Johnny Holland of Texas A&M head the South defense, and Washington end Reggie Rogers and Penn State linebacker Bob White, a down lineman in his college career, lead the North defense.

Softball meeting scheduled

TWIN FALLS — Election of officers and first organization meeting for the 1987 Twin Falls Softball Association season will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday at city hall.

Levy completes grid staff

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Buffalo Coach Mary Levy Friday completed his staff of assistants Friday, hiring two coaches expected to help the Bills devise an offense to better utilize quarterback Jim Kelly.

The Bills, 4-12 during the 1986 NFL season, named former Baltimore Colts head coach Ted Marchibroda as quarterbacks coach and passing game coordinator, and former Southern California head coach Tom Oleniec as receivers coach.

They are expected to team with incumbent offensive coordinator Jim Ringo to create a more free-wheeling offense. Levy has said he wants to see Kelly, who signed with the Bills last August for $8.5 million over five years, pass more than in 1986.

Marino to miss Pro Bowl

MIAMI (AP) — Miami Dolphins' quarterback Dan Marino has withdrawn from the Pro Bowl game for the third time in four seasons to undergo arthroscopic surgery on his left knee.

He will be replaced on the AFC team by Cincinnati quarterback Dalton Gibson.

Marino has had four previous operations on the knee. This will be his third arthroscopic, a procedure he has likened to "an oil change."

"My doctor (Richard Steadman of Lake Tahoe, Calif.) has advised me to have the operation," Marino said Friday. "Unfortunately, I'll miss the Pro Bowl. I have to go in now, so I'll be ready to go to training camp."

Marino's withdrawal means that Denver's John Elway will start for the AFC in the Feb. 1 game against the NFC at Honolulu.

Earlier, Dolphins' wide receiver Mark Duper withdrew from the game to undergo arthroscopic surgery. He was replaced by teammate Mark Clayton.

City officials can scalp tickets

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — City officials who receive Super Bowl efforts to impose sanctions on them, a deputy city attorney says.

The NFL wanted scalping restrictions imposed on tickets sold to the public under contract provisions, but Deputy City Attorney Gary Cligg said the city would not agree because scalping is legal in California, and the city's personnel code does not bar resale of tickets for profit.

City officials purchased 1,200 tickets for the Jan. 25 Super Bowl at face value. NFL special events director Jim Steeg said the league was given assurances that city officials "would do their best to prevent scalping."

"We addressed the concern," he said.

Cligg said it was possible the city might adopt a new personnel policy after the Super Bowl between the New York Giants and Denver Broncos, preventing city officials from reselling their tickets to anyone but relatives.

Riley to coach West stars

NEW YORK (AP) — Pat Riley of the Los Angeles Lakers, for the fifth time in the last six years, will coach the Western Conference team for the NBA All-Star Game on Feb. 8.

Riley clinched the assignment when the Lakers beat the Golden State Warriors 129-109 Thursday night, assuring Los Angeles of having the best record in the conference through Jan. 25, the cutoff for determining the All-Star coaches.

The East coaching job still is undecided, with the leading candidates being K.C. Jones of Boston, Mike Fratello of Atlanta and Chuck Daly of Detroit.

Riley has a 1-3 record in his previous All-Star coaching assignments. He was the fourth coach in 1985 when the West beat the East 140-129 in Indianapolis. He was the losing coach in 1982, 1983 and last year.

This year's game will be played in Seattle's Kingdome.

Figini wins second downhill

PFRONTEN, West Germany (AP) — Olympic champion Michela Figini held off a strong challenge from her Swiss teammates and a surprisingly strong West German team Friday in winning her second World Cup downhill ski race this season.

It was the fourth downhill of the season and the last before the World Championships at Crans-Montana, Switzerland, where Figini will be defending her downhill title. The championships begin Jan. 25.

Swiss and West German racers dominated the event, taking the first seven places.

Figini, 20, mastered the 2,260-meter long Breitenberg course in 1:06.12, 20.12 seconds, giving the powerful Swiss team its 12th triumph in 17 World Cup races this season.

Regine Moesenlechner of West Germany placed second in 1:20.21. Maria Walliser of Switzerland was third in 1:20.82 and regained the lead in the overall World-Cup standings with 197 points, 14 more than teammate Vreni Schneider.

Goodwin not averse to tests

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — Billy Goodwin, suspended from the Mississippi Coast Jets, says he and a teammate are not refusing to be tested for drugs, but just don't want to go to Denver to take the tests ordered by the Continental Basketball Association.

Thursday, the league suspended Goodwin and Bobby Parks — the Jets' leading scorers — for at least two years after the players refused reanalysis ordered by an independent arbitrator.

The announcement was made in a statement released by the league office at Denver. Goodwin and Parks were suspended from the Jets for the league last weekend after their arrests at Pensacola, Fla., on drug possession charges.

Wake Forest coach resigns

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Al Groh resigned Friday as Wake Forest football coach, marking the fourth football coaching change in the Atlantic Coast Conference in the past two months.

"This is not a decision I like or feel comfortable with," Groh said in a statement he read at a news conference. "However, extended conversations between our administration and myself have been fruitless toward developing a common ground of agreement on the future direction of Wake Forest and my role in it.

"It is quite disappointing to me that things didn't quite work out."

Wake Forest had a 5-6 record, including 2-5 in the AEC last season.

Recently, Bobby Ross stepped down as football coach at Maryland. Ross then took the same position at Georgia Tech after Bill Curry left to become head coach of Alabama. Leaving with Curry was Duke Coach Steve Sloan, who became the Crimson Tide's athletic director.

Minico faces must-win game

RUPERT — Minico's girls' basketball team faces a must-win situation tonight when the Spartans entertain Burley in a Region III contest.

A loss in the 8 p.m. contest tonight would doom Minico to be on the road in the first round of the postseason regional tournament. But if the Spartans, 8-7 overall and 2-3 in regional games, can beat Burley tonight and again on Jan. 29 or upset Highland in Pocatello on Jan. 20, they have a shot at the third berth in the postseason tournament, which would put them at home in the first round of the tournament.

Burley, now 11-4 overall and 1-4 in regional competition, would have to get some help from other teams to avoid being on the road in the first round. The Bobcats have two games remaining with Minico and another with Twin Falls in Twin Falls on Jan. 22.

Giants already being treated like NFL champions in N.Y.

By WALLACE MATTHEWS and TOM VERDUCCI
Newsday

NEW YORK — The life of a Super Bowl team: Following their 17-0 victory over the Washington Redskins in the National Football Conference championship game last Sunday, the New York Giants got an unusual three-day break from practices and meetings. In that time, many were in demand for personal appearances, television shows and awards.

Pro football

Tuesday, while a group of his teammates cavorted in Central Park making a music video, Lawrence Taylor received the NFL's Most Valuable Player award; defensive end George Martin received the "Man of the Year" award Wednesday from the Tomorrow's Children's Fund. Martin was honored for his work with various community projects in northern New Jersey. Here's what some of the other Giants did on their mid-winter vacation:

Leonard Marshall (defensive end): "A couple of people called for me to do stuff, but I wasn't interested. I stayed home, drank a few beers and rested."

Jerome Sully (nose tackle): "Nothing spectacular. I appeared in the video Tuesday, that's all."

Lonel Manuel (wide receiver): "Nothing interesting."

Gary Reasons (linebacker): "I did a couple of television and radio shows ... and I basically enjoyed my time off. It was fun."

Andy Headen (linebacker): "I just went out and had a nice time."

Maurice Carthon (fullback): "I basically relaxed a little, came in for some treatment and did some baby-sitting. It was nice."

Karl Nelson (tackle): "I enjoyed it. I made some arrangements for my family to get to California. I went to the Tomorrow's Children banquet (Wednesday). Other than that, I didn't do a whole lot."

Bart Oates (center): "I went to Atlantic City with some friends. It was fun. I lost $1.25."

Billy Ard (guard): "I had a couple of personal appearances in the city, did a Sports show ... nothing too exciting. I went to visit my mother."

Phil McConkey (wide receiver): "I came in every day to work out, made a couple of appearances and took it easy. Nothing too important."

Raul Allegre (kicker): "I came in every day and worked out, lifted weights a little, ran some errands. I really don't know what to do with my time off here."

Tony Calabrese (running back): "I stayed home and I played with my daughter. I got away from football."

Chris Godfrey (guard): "I got some things done around the house, did things to get ready for a trip to California."

Pepper Johnson (linebacker): "I flew to Detroit on Monday, drove five hours to a cabin I have in northern Michigan with some friends and went snowmobiling. I just needed to get away from it all. It was great. We took a VCR with us. My friends made a tape of the bad plays I've made this year and we watched the tape."

Ottis Anderson (running back): "I went to film the music video with the rest of the guys on Tuesday, but I was only there for a little while because I felt sick. I went home and stayed in bed."

Harry Carson (linebacker): "I did three TV shows ... People magazine came (to my house) and did a photo spread on me."

Stacy Robinson (wide receiver): "I really laid low. They asked me to be in the video, but it was too short notice. They called me late Monday night and told me we were starting to film at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning. All I did was speak at a high school in New Jersey to some kids."

Erik Howard (nose tackle): "Tuesday I went to the Knicks game and then I was on a call-in show. Then I watched some of the MTV thing we taped a month ago. Some of my high school buddies called me from California. They were drinking in a bar and looked at the TV and saw me on MTV. What a horrible sight, huh?"

Lawrence Taylor (linebacker): (He wasn't speaking Thursday). He made a cameo appearance in the Giants' video, and on Tuesday posed at home and at Giants Stadium for Sports Illustrated cover.

BYU signs JC All-America back from Dixie

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Fine Unga, a first-team junior college all-America tailback from Dixie College, has signed a letter of intent to play football for Brigham Young next season.

Unga, who is from Provo, rushed for 1,514 yards, caught 26 passes and scored 26 touchdowns in 1986 for 11-1

Dixie, which finished the season ranked third nationally.

He will graduate from Dixie College in the spring and then transfer to BYU. The Cougars lose their top three running backs — Lakel Helmuli, Bruce Hansen and Robert Parker — to graduation.

Unga is one of several Dixie players who have signed letters of intent with four-year schools.

Another Dixie first-team all-American, defensive end Leon Cole, has signed a letter of intent with Texas A&M. Wide receiver Bryant Hill, a native of St. George, has signed with Oregon State.

Trophy permits increased

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The Idaho Fish and Game Commission has approved additional controlled trophy permits for 1987 for the trophy species of moose, bighorn sheep and mountain goat.

The five-member commission, meeting Friday in Boise, also extended the spring steelhead fishing season in the Little Salmon River through April 30.

Available resident permits for moose were raised to 400, bighorn sheep permits to 190 and mountain goat to 71. All are up from 1986 and substantially ahead of the permits offered just five months ago by the Department of Fish and Game said.

In 1982, for example, the commission approved 173 moose permits, 127 bighorn permits and 53 for mountain goat.

The department proposed increasing bighorn sheep permits to 200 this year. But a proposed increase from 18 to 54 in central Idaho hunting unit 27 was cut to 35 by the commission, spokesman Hugh Wilson said.

He said the department would closely monitor the unit to see if the doubled harvest is feasible with existing bighorn populations, which game managers believe have improved substantially.

The deadline for applications is April 30 and those applying for moose, bighorn or goat permits could not apply for any other controlled hunt permit.

Earlier, the commission approved revised wild turkey regulations for 1987, including the addition of 30 controlled hunt permits for a total of 180.

What the dollar's steep drop means to consumers in U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar's sharp drop means Americans spend more for imports — from Toyota Terrels to Norwegian radios — but it could also mean they may have more money to pay for them. Here is a look at how the dollar's plunge in international currency markets affects people in their daily lives. Q. How does a cheap dollar affect consumers? A. It hurts consumers. Dollars don't have the same buying power anymore. For example, a Toyota Terrel that cost $3,448 at the start of the 1986 model year went up to $5,798 by the end of the year, and to $5,848 at the start of the 1987 model year. The average U.S. sale price of a Mercedes-Benz is up about 25 percent in the past year. Consumer electronics have not risen as much in price, mainly because the Japanese makers have been under intense pressure from the South Koreans, whose currency has fallen in tandem with the dollar. For example, Matsushita Electric Corp. of America tried to raise prices 3 percent in January 1986 and another 5 percent in May but was forced to roll back both increases, Stan Hamelz, vice president and general manager for consumer video, said Thursday. The actual selling price of a basic Panasonic videocassette recorder remains around $299, the same as in late 1985, he said. Deluxe electronics products are getting even more expensive. A Tandberg 3001A radio from Norway that cost $1,295 at the end of 1985 costs $1,495 now and will rise to $1,595 on March 1. Q. How does a cheap dollar affect workers? A. It helps workers. Since the low dollar makes imports more expensive and makes exports cheaper for American makers, it encourages more production here. That means U.S. companies hire more people. Every 1 percent increase in ex-

Expanding Japanese investment could become leading problem

By STEVEN K. PAULSON The Associated Press Analysis TOKYO — Japanese investment in the United States has more than tripled in five years, creating a new strain in relations that some Japanese fear could eventually outstrip trade friction as the No. 1 problem between the two countries. The Japan External Trade Organization reports that between 1980 and 1986, Japan's direct investment in the United States — real estate, factories and the like — rose from $1.4 billion to $5.3 billion. Indirect investment, most of it in convertible bonds and securities that can be easily pulled out, is now about $20 billion, said trade agency spokesman Hiroki Sakamoto. The rapid rising value of the yen has made the dollar price of some prime U.S. real estate cheaper for the Japanese. Japan's Mitsui & Co. recently bought the Exxon skyscraper in midtown Manhattan for $480 million, the most ever paid for a single New York building. Japanese businessmen also bought the nearby American Broadcasting Co. building for $175 million and the ARCO complex in Los Angeles for $60 million. The Japanese trade surplus, in effect, is bankrolling the overseas purchases. The surplus, the excess of Japan's exports over its imports, has ballooned from $35 billion in 1984 to an estimated $82 billion in 1986. By the end of 1987, Japan is expected to own a half-trillion dollars' worth of assets in other countries. In the United States, those properties include automobile factories, electronics plants and holdings in financial houses. Sakamoto said the friction caused by the growing trade imbalance apparently is carrying over to Japanese international investment as well. "We are already at the stage where we have to carefully monitor the responses toward Japanese investment in the United States," he said in an interview. "In the past 10 to 20 years, we have been collaborating and fighting over trade friction, but compared with investment friction, trade friction is easier to handle." In automobile manufacturing, Sakamoto said, Japanese communities are springing up in U.S. locations, sometimes with large numbers of Japanese workers settling down, families intermarrying and children attending local schools — all of which can breed resentment. Sakamoto said American businessmen resent the movement of Japanese competitors directly into the U.S. market, and U.S. labor organizations resent what they see as an anti-union Japanese attitude. "There is especially resentment because of Japan's way of doing business. Our first dedication is to our customers, second to the employees, third to the communities, and the shareholders are at the end of the line." "In the United States, it's just the opposite, so we get a lot of resentment from everywhere," he said. The bad feelings have produced some anti-Japanese demonstrations in the United States and complaints to the Japanese Embassy in Washington, Sakamoto said. Jack Yamashita, who heads a South Carolina government office here that promotes the state as a location for Japanese companies, agreed that American resentment is "slowly but steadily growing." "The Japanese have purchased some major buildings in the United States, in Los Angeles and in New York. Some people resent the fact that these landmarks no longer belong to Americans," he said.

T-bill yields plunge sharply at auction WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on one-year Treasury bills fell in Thursday's auction to the lowest level since August. The average yield was 5.44 percent, down from 5.60 percent at the last auction on Dec. 23. It was the lowest rate since 52-week bills averaged 5.33 percent on Aug. 28. A total of $9.79 billion in bills were sold out of bids totaling $35.11 billion. The bills will carry a coupon interest rate of 5 1/2 percent with each $10,000 in face value selling for $9,450.50.

It might even result in a recession, if foreigners start to fear the dollar is in a free fall. They would stop investing their money in U.S. Treasury bonds, which would force interest rates up and choke off the economy. "You have to walk a tightrope here," Wyss said.
