Supercollider receives green light

By GUY DARST
The Associated Press

Idaho reaction — A4

WASHINGTON — President Reagan will seek funds to build the $4.4 billion "supercollider" eagerly sought by physicists to answer the most fundamental scientific questions of all — what is matter and how is it created?

The decision to build the supercollider, so called because it will whirl counter-rotating beams of protons into each other, shows America believes there are "no frontiers beyond our reach," Energy Secretary John S. Herrington told a news conference Friday.

"In high-energy physics, the development of the supercollider is the equivalent of putting a man on the moon," he said "It will have spinoffs, discoveries and innovations that will profoundly touch every human being."

The already-designed particle accelerator, to be placed in a nearly circular tunnel 52 miles in circumference — about 20 feet underground, will be one of the most eagerly sought federal installations in decades. Its construction will require 4,500 people at peak workload. In operation it will have 2,500 jobs and a $200 million annual budget.

The proton collision energy will be 20 times what is possible today and three times the energy of a projected collider in an existing smaller tunnel at CERN, the International European accelerator at Geneva, Switzerland.

Here are some criteria for site selection

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a partial list of criteria that communities trying to persuade the Energy Department to build the supercollider in their areas will have to meet.

The list is contained in "Supercollider R&D: The First Two Years," a brochure prepared by the Department of universities that will operate the machine for the federal government.

- Setting: Space for a ring 60 miles (100 km) in circumference; a site for a machine that is level to within a bit of less than one degree.
- Geology and Tunneling: Long, uniform material

- extensively characterized; avoidance of active faults; good soil stability; evidence of unconsolidated solids with ground water; data on seismic activity.
- Community Staff needs: housing, educational, cultural facilities; reasonable commuting times, major airport, all-weather roads; adequate industrial and construction resources.
- Utilities: 10,000-gallon per minute of water; up to 200 megawatts of electrical power; with separate heating and cooling; heat two outlets per year.
- Man-made disturbances: Avoidance of excessive noise and vibration.

Herrington said Reagan's decision, made Friday following a meeting of the Domestic Policy Council on Thursday, fits the president's concern for competitiveness in the world and means "you have the makings of the most aggressive scientific basic research effort of this government in decades."

"The question always arises, what are you going to get out of it? The nature of basic research that you don't know going into it... In the past, these machines have been amazingly successful," Herrington said.

By some estimates, one-third of gross national product and industrial activity, including "all the nuclear medicine, major supercomputing ability and a lot of electronic chip technology" arose one way or another from research in high-energy physics during the past 50 years, the secretary said.

An Energy Department official who spoke on condition he not be identified said 45 states had expressed interest in getting the protons from a runner. He promised to detail the selection process at a Feb. 10 news conference.

TV talk-show host Phil Donahue asks group of Moscow teen-agers if they have any conflicts with their parents

Life's fine, Soviet youth tell Donahue

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — An American TV talk-show host asked 400 Soviet teen-agers to raise their hand if they were having problems in school.

Not a single hand went up.

How many were having difficulty with their parents, Phil Donahue inquired.

Not one.

"Who is not happy?" he asked the teens.

No response.

Usually provocative and resilient, Donahue appeared non-plussed.

"You mean there's no controversy with your parents? None of you? Everything is wonderful in the Soviet Union for teen-agers?"

The audience's reaction, or lack of it, illustrates the dilemma the Kremlin's campaign for more honesty and openness has created for Soviet citizens.

Conditioned for years to remain silent on delicate subjects, especially in public and with foreigners, many people are having trouble overcoming old taboos.

Donahue's two-hour exchange with the students in a state broadcast studio was one of several programs his crew filmed in late January for airing in the United States during the week of Feb. 9.

The bulk of the audience came from two prestigious Moscow high schools — No. 27, which focuses on English-language training and No. 22, a sports training institute. Many of the children in the two schools gain admission through their parents' positions.

Donahue staffer Marilyn O'Reilly said she approached students at those schools with the help of Soviet officials and picked others at random.

Reagan cites deficit, vetoes water cleanup

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, calling on Congress to show "a little more political courage," vetoed a $20 billion water cleanup bill Friday but acknowledged he lacks the votes to be sustained.

Pinning the blame for big budget deficits on Congress, Reagan said "Let's not belly up on the same old bar, let's not drive down that dangerous road again. Let's work together for clean water and responsible government."

Reagan made a ceremony out of his veto, announcing it to an audience of invited guests in the Old Executive Office Building. He entered the room brandishing thumbs up and left it the same way. When he was handed the water bill, the president made a pretense of throwing it away.

"Just say no," shouted someone in the audience, sounding Reagan's own slogan. "I just said no," the president responded.

He addressed his remarks to Congress, recalling that only on Tuesday, when he delivered the State of the Union message, he received a standing ovation in telling the deficit-uncaring and outrageous.

"Well, I'm now asking you to stand with me in the first great battle of the deficit in the 100th Congress," Reagan said. "My friends on Capitol Hill, you cannot have it both ways.

"You cannot vote to radically increase deficits one day and deny them before the nation the next. It's time for a little more political courage and a little more political consistency on the part of all of us."

The House has scheduled a vote on overriding the veto for next Tuesday and Senate action is expected later in the week. A two-thirds vote by both chambers is required to enact the bill over Reagan's objection.

The bill was passed 496-6 by the House and 93-6 by the Senate earlier this month.

The president rejected an identical bill in November but that action was not subject to an override because it was a pocket veto, exercised after Congress had quit for the year.

"I know this veto is going to be overridden," Reagan said. "I know that I do not have the votes to sustain it, but it's time we did the right thing, all of us, regardless of the political fallout."

The action drew an immediate response from lawmakers and environmental groups.

"We gave him two chances to get on board, but now the president has simply postponed the inevitable," said Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-S.D., chairman of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee.

"The Senate wants this bill, the House wants this bill, the American people want this bill. The president stands alone on this one," Burdick said.

Lawrence Downing, president of the Sierra Club, quoted the veto as "an insult to the health and the environment of the American people."

Waite's whereabouts mystery; return by weekend reported

The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The whereabouts of hostage negotiator Terry Waite remained a mystery Friday amid reports he was to return to Beirut this weekend from a long absence in eastern Lebanon that inspired fears he had been kidnapped.

In Beirut, a car bomb exploded in the Christian sector, killing five people and wounding 37, many of them children in a passing school bus. The car explosion was the second in Christian east Beirut this month.

The Independent Beirut newspaper An-Nahar said Waite, the Anglican church envoy — a bearded man who stands 6-foot-7 — was seen Thursday in a three-car motorcade traveling between the Bekaa Valley villages of Nahleh and Bazzanleh. The British envoy left his hotel in the capital of Beirut on Jan. 20 to meet with kidnappers who hold foreign captives.

An-Nahar quoted sources it did not identify as saying Waite was not detained by the hostage holders and would return to Beirut within two days. It did not elaborate.

In Washington, diplomatic sources said Waite was being detained by Hezbollah forces in Lebanon in a political tug-of-war between that militant Moslem group, which has close ties to Iran, and Druse leader Walid Jumblatt.

The sources, speaking anonymously, said Waite's latest mediation effort was suggested by Jumblatt, who said late last year he had links to Hezbollah that might be helpful in freeing two American hostages.

Waite had been under the protection of Druse guards in Beirut but at some point, for unexplained reasons, they were dismissed.

Waite is the personal emissary of Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie. He is believed to have been negotiating with the fundamentalist Shiite Moslem captors of two Americans seized in 1985: Terry Anderson, 39, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, and Thomas Sutherland, 55, acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut.

Kuwait's official news agency said Monday the kidnappers had put Waite under house arrest, but the Church of England said Wednesday it had received word he was safe.

On Friday, church spokeswoman Eve Keatley said in London: "There are so many rumors we are just not commenting on them. What we really want to hear is Terry Waite's voice."

She added: "We have no precise details of where Terry is, although we keep getting assurances that he is well and has been seen. We are in regular daily contact with our well-placed sources of information in the Lebanon."

In its edition published Friday, the weekly magazine Al-Shira quoted a source identified only as a ranking Moslem cleric as saying, "There is a possibility that Waite was kidnapped."

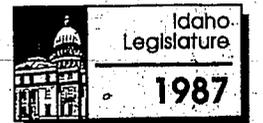

The magazine added without elaboration: "Circles close to Moslem fundamentalists stressed that Waite is under house arrest."

GOP senators draw line on repeal of investment tax credit

By BOB FICK
The Associated Press

BOISE — The Republican majority in the Idaho Senate has agreed to draw the line on Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus' plan to repeal the controversial state investment tax credit.

Although leaders declined to comment on the exchange during a 35-minute closed-door party caucus on Friday, called to discuss the governor's proposal, there were widespread indications that staunch opponents of repeal had mustered a working majority among the 26 GOP members to retain the credit.

GOP Caucus Chairman Jerry Twigg, R-Blackfoot, the leader authorized to discuss the actions, turned that responsibility over to Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, R-

Boise, a vocal supporter of retaining the credit.

Risch said he would make an announcement during the Republican State Central Committee meeting in Boise this weekend on significant financial positions taken by the Senate GOP majority.

But as the senators filed out of the private meeting, C.A. "Skip" Smyser from Parma was passing out a statement condemning attempts to repeal the tax credit.

"To repeal Idaho's investment tax credit would strike a counterproductive blow to the very nerve center of the state's economic development plans," Smyser said.

House Republicans have met a number of times on the question, but only in what leaders have called educational forums. So far, no effort to determine a consensus has been made.

Repeal of the credit has effectively become the keystone of Andrus' strategy to underwrite an ambitious $68.5 million 1988 state budget with its provisions for substantially increased support for education and economic development as he and nearly all other candidates pledged to do during last fall's election campaign.

The governor, who has picked up a significant ally in GOP Lt. Gov. C.L. "Butch" O-ter, has directly tied repeal of the credit, which would generate $14.5 million in extra revenue, to financing a major portion of his public and higher education enhancements.

Critics of repeal contend that it would impose a significant tax burden on business at a time when many are struggling to survive in a stagnant state economy. They also claim it would signal the rest of the nation that Idaho is not serious about economic expansion.

Report reinforces Reagan statements, Speakes declares

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House said Friday a Senate committee report on the Iran-Contra scandal backs up President Reagan's versions of events, but acknowledged that the secret dealings with Tehran "could be interpreted as a trade of arms for hostages."

The report contains no evidence whether the president was aware of, let alone approved, any diversion of funds to the Contras, said Larry Speakes in his final briefing as chief presidential spokesman.

The report released Thursday night by the Senate Intelligence Committee said there was no direct evidence that Reagan knew about the diversion of profits from the arms sales to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

It described the arms deal as largely plotted by foreign weapons merchants, encouraged by Israel and driven by Reagan's concern for the American hostages in Lebanon.

Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., the intelligence panel's chairman, said the report painted "a picture of making foreign policy that was in real disregard of the law."

With the issuance of the report, Boren renewed his call for White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan to resign. "He is the wrong chief of staff for this president at this time," Boren said, adding that Regan had failed to make sure the president had the best possible advice in the controversy and that foreign policy-making had, therefore, fallen to amateurs.

Israel's role — A7

In other developments: Reagan administration officials participated more directly than previously known in a military aid network for Nicaraguan Contra rebels during a two-year congressional ban on arms support, according to evidence in the Senate report.

A CIA officer participating in the arms sales to Iran described retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord and his Iran-born business partner, Albert Hakim, as "almost co-equal lieutenants" in North's operations, according to the report.

The Senate select investigating committee announced appointments of 10 associate counsel positions, bringing the total staff of investigating attorneys to 13.

The panel last week announced that Arthur L. Liman, a New York lawyer with experience handling white-collar crime cases, would lead the investigative team as chief counsel.

At the White House, Speakes highlighted portions of the report favorable to Reagan but dismissed other elements.

"The facts as they come out are bearing out what the president said," he heard.

In particular, Speakes said that former National Security Council staff Deputy Oliver L. North, in an interview last November with ABC, said he did not think Reagan was aware of any diversion of funds.

North was fired, and his boss, national security adviser John M. Poindexter, resigned, when it was revealed the diversion of money on Nov. 25.

Speakes noted that Poindexter had told Meese and Regan that he had not inquired into the diversion because he felt sorry for the Contras. Speakes cited that statement as further evidence to substantiate that Regan was never told of the plan.

Regan has a copy of the report and planning to read it, Speakes said. He also said the president of the report was not "and that it confirms his position that he neither authorized nor was aware of the alleged transfer of funds to the Contras."

According to the report, North told Regan that the president was aware of Iran in terms of developing ties with a strategically important nation, but that the president always focused on the hostages.

The report said: "According to Meese, North said it was a terrible mistake to say the president wanted a 'strategic relationship, because the president wanted the hostages."

Speakes said, "That recollection of Ollie does not necessarily hold water because at the wedding of Nancy Reagan, the president was never in any private, intimate conversations with the president, as the record shows."

He said the report — taken as a whole — demonstrates that the administration's original intent "was related to a strategic opening."

While there was no direct evidence that Reagan knew about the diversion of money to the Contras, he did have at least 17 meetings at which North was present in 1985 and 1986, the report said. It also found that at one point, the president met with North and a lower-echelon CIA official stationed in a Central American country.

Speakes said, "The report is consistent with the president's position that, from its inception, the Iran initiative was an effort to open a dialogue with top officials of a strategically important country."

The release of hostages, he said, was "an important preliminary step intended to show that the Iranians would no longer support terrorism, and the sale of arms was a gesture of goodwill on the part of the United States in pursuing this strategic opening."

"To be sure, the linking of arms sales to the release of hostages at several points during this 15-month episode could be interpreted as a trade of arms for hostages," Speakes said, "but this was not the policy approved by the president."

The report said it has not been able to trace where money from the arms sale went. Meese has said that up to $30 million was diverted to the Contras, but Speakes backed away from that.

"I don't think we have those facts yet," he said.

Citing Meese's comments, Speakes said there was evidence "that these funds were diverted from the arms sale. The question is to whom were they diverted and I don't think that question has been answered."

Collisions of protons in the super-collider will concentrate in a region almost unimaginably small, in an almost unimaginably brief time, an energy density that must have existed during the "big bang" beginning of the universe billions of years ago. In that space, some processes must occur that occurred during the big bang, scientists believe.

Wolfgang Panofsky, director of the Stanford Linear Accelerator in California, said a complete theory of matter-might never emerge. "If history is any guide, it will not answer all questions, and indeed may open up new questions," he said.

The accelerator has been described as a $6 billion project. Alvin Trivelpiece, director of energy research, said the difference in figures is that the higher figure is the simple sum of annual outlays that would be made through 1996, including expected price inflation, while $4.4 billion is the "present value" or what would have to be set aside in a lump sum in 1988 that could be drawn on.

The first half-hour Thursday was fraught with silence and discomfort. Donahue wanted to discuss problems confronting youths everywhere — drugs, pregnancy, promiscuity, drug fights with parents.

The Soviet teens wanted to know why the United States hasn't joined in the nuclear testing moratorium the Kremlin announced nearly 18 months ago, why the U.S. government spends so much on armaments, and why Donahue wanted to be seen talking about problems they said they didn't have.

"You are like sheep," Donahue said, explaining what he considers America's stereotype of Soviets. "What can we do if everything is like sheep? One girl offered, speaking in English, 'American students have many more problems than we have — criminality, drugs.'"

Echoing the words of the state-run press, one boy said he was concerned "about the limited contingent of Soviet soldiers in Afghanistan."

He said he feared having to serve in the protracted war "and ending life before I start living."

Several hands shot up to reply. One boy said his friends consider the Afghan war a chance "to test themselves."

Another, sounding the party line, said he considered it his "internationalist duty."

The subject changed to religion. "Church exists for those of weak character," said one boy. The Soviet Union is officially atheist.

One girl rose and said she liked the "beautiful old rites" and thought churches should be preserved as historical monuments.

Asked whether she believed in God, she laughed and blurted out: "Of course not. I'm a member of the Komsomol," the youth branch of the Communist Party.

Today's weather

Mild readings see January on its way
Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding: Today, partly cloudy with south to east winds 5 to 15 mph. High in the upper 30s to low 40s. Tonight and Sunday, variable clouds with a chance of showers on Sunday. Lows in the mid-to upper 20s. Highs mid-30s to low 40s.

Idaho Falls, Halley and Lower Wood River Valley: Today, partly cloudy with south to east winds 5 to 15 mph. High in the upper 30s to low 40s. Tonight and Sunday, variable clouds with scattered showers mainly on Sunday. Lows in the upper teens to low 20s. Highs in the low to mid-30s.

Northern Nevada and Utah: Utah — Partly cloudy tonight. Increasing clouds on Sunday. Few mountain snow flurries. Lows 20s to low 30s. Highs mid-30s to upper 40s.

Nevada — Mostly sunny today. Fair skies tonight. Partly cloudy and clear on Sunday. Precipitation mostly in the 20s. Highs today upper 30s to upper 40s. Highs Sunday mostly upper 40s to mid-50s.

Symptoms: Skies will be partly cloudy today with a chance of showers over north Idaho. Afternoon highs on Friday under cloud cover have stayed in the 30s to low 40s. No measurable precipitation was received Friday afternoon. Precipitation that did fall generally amounted to .10 inch or less.

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 45 degrees at Lewiston, while the low of 10 degrees was reported at Sun Valley.

The extended outlook for Southern Idaho, Monday through Wednesday: A change of rain and snow Monday then mostly dry. Highs upper 30s and 40s. Lows mostly upper teens and 20s.

Elsewhere in the nation, Friday's high temperature was 82 degrees at Tucson, Ariz., and McAllen, Texas, and the low was 3 degrees below zero at Billings, Maine, and Yellowstone Park, Wyo.

BOISE (AP) — Although he made some progress in paying off bills late last year, Republican governor candidate David Leroy still owes nearly $70,000 from the unsuccessful campaign.

Campaign finance reports filed with the secretary of state's office here Friday showed Leroy, a Boise attorney, still owed $69,750 as of Jan. 1, even though he paid off $23,114 in debts.

The year-end report from Gov. Cecil Andrus, Leroy's Democratic opponent, wasn't on file as of Friday.

Overall, Leroy spent about $875,000 on the campaign, about $70,000 less than Anders' latest report, Anders was his third term as Idaho's chief executive.

Briefly

Enforcement chief confirmed

BOISE (AP) — The Senate has unanimously confirmed Mack Richardson as Gov. Cecil Andrus' director of the Department of Law Enforcement.

The unopposed confirmation on Friday of the veteran of 21 years in the Service Security continued the trend of support the Republican-dominated Senate has given the top members of the new administration.

Also on Friday, the Senate Judiciary Committee endorsed the nomination of 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt of Twin Falls to the Idaho Judicial Council. Hurlbutt was named the state's most productive judge last year. The council selects slates of nominees from which the governor fills judicial vacancies.

Daycare alternative delayed

BOISE (AP) — The Senate Health and Welfare Committee has delayed introduction of an alternative to the Child Care Coalition's proposal for statewide daycare regulation as lawmakers continued striving to end Idaho's distinction as the only state without such a law.

But in declining to submit the bill on Friday, the committee was concerned with making some technical and minor changes. None of the panel members indicated any serious objections to the plan of Sen. Michael Crapo, R-Idaho Falls. Crapo said the measure would probably be introduced next week after the changes have been made.

PBS news scheduling criticized

BOISE (AP) — The general manager of the Idaho Educational Public Broadcasting System is being to assure legislative budget writers that the three-station network is doing the best it can with limited resources to meet the needs of Idahoans.

But in presenting his 1988 budget request to the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee on Friday, Jerold Garber was bombarded with questions from the panel about the scheduling of the system's nightly newscast on the Legislature, "Idaho Reports," that is simultaneously shown on its stations in Boise, Moscow and Idaho Falls.

Lawmakers from the mountain time zone of southern Idaho complained the broadcast at 6 p.m. conflicts with local newscasts, and those from the Pacific time zone in northern Idaho said the 5 p.m. airing was too early for most people to see.

Graduate students increase

POCATELLO (AP) — Idaho State University officials say the school's enrollment is up 450 this semester, spurred by a big increase in graduate enrollment.

Darold Chambers, director of registration and records, said Friday ISU's total head count is just over 7,000.

There was an increase of 32 percent in graduate students, and part-time enrollment went up 17 percent, Chambers said.

Chambers said the average age of entering ISU freshmen is 27.

Craig outspent Currie on race

BOISE (AP) — Year-end campaign finance reports indicate Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, outspent Bill Currie 20-1 in their election race for Idaho's 2nd District congressional seat.

Craig won his fourth term, 121,274-59,133.

His year-end finance report, filed with the secretary of state's office here on Friday, showed spending of $245,103 and a cash balance of $14,830.

Currie, a Bonners Ferry businessman making his first bid for major office, showed spending of $12,516 and unpaid obligations of $8,223.

Currie showed most of the unpaid debt was a personal loan of nearly $7,000 to his campaign committee and a debt of about $1,300 to campaign aide Douglas Jones, Rupert.

'Abandoned' parking fee eyed

POCATELLO (AP) — City fathers hope they may be able to get rid of unsightly, abandoned motor vehicles by imposing an annual parking fee on all residents.

Mayor Dick Finlayson said the City Council plans full informational hearings before putting the drive into effect. But city officials hope to come up with new laws imposing fines on violators, and a new definition of "abandoned" vehicles.

The permit system, how much to be charged, and whether it all would be legal are being researched by the city's legal department, the mayor said.

Pocatello plans street project

POCATELLO (AP) — Pocatello will launch the most ambitious local street repair program in a decade, planning to spend $1 million repaving and reconstructing nearly 40 miles of streets.

City streets superintendent Curt Neville said about 70 percent of the work will be bid out to private contractors, with the rest of the work to be done by city street crews.

City officials said they hope to raise $663,000 from a new city street utility fee charged all residents. The rest of the money is to come from the street department's construction budget.

City officials emphasized that there will be no tax increase to finance the summer construction program.

Man found dead

COLFAX, Wash. (AP) — An Idaho man found in a road ditch was pronounced dead of unknown causes, the Whitman County Sheriff's department reported.

Larry Davis, age unavailable, of Moscow, Idaho, was pronounced dead at Moscow's Gritman Memorial Hospital after attempts to revive him failed, according to a news release issued late Thursday.

Board OKs start of work on new prison

BOISE (AP) — Going along with a decision made earlier in the week by Gov. Cecil Andrus and legislative leaders, a state board has voted to authorize the start of work on a new 248-bed maximum security state prison near Boise.

But the action by the Permanent Building Fund Council Friday wasn't without some reservations.

She said she's been approached about that possibility, and wants to be free to recommend it. Ms. Barker said it's also possible the state might save money by having both the Orofino and Boise projects designed at the same time.

The state has $8 million to start work on the maximum security prison. The council voted to rescind a Jan. 19 request to the Legislature to divert $4.55 million of the $8 million to add 100 medium security beds at Orofino.

Board member Rep. Kathleen "Kitty" Gumsen, R-Boise, and member Jerry Hess of Nampa wanted to know where the money was to come from before committing the state to nearly $21 million worth of construction.

Eventually, the council voted to authorize the Division of Public Works to prepare a call for design for the new prison. The same motion included a separate project to add 100 beds of medium security space at the state prison at Orofino, although design of that project won't proceed until Andrus and the Legislature decide how it's to be funded.

treatment and water supplies at the main prison.

Hess said the state already doesn't meet federal Environmental Protection Agency standards for the treatment of sewage at the prison, and must expand the water supply.

Ann Barker, public works director, told the council she didn't want to be restricted to the traditional route of preparing a "request for proposals," soliciting plans from architects.

She said the national trend appears to be toward having private companies build prisons, and then lease them to public agencies.

That was before Andrus and leaders of the House and Senate agreed Monday to build 248 beds of maximum security space and let the Board of Corrections and the Permanent Building Fund Council decide the location.

Sen. Kermit Klobert, D-Hope, both a member of legislative leadership and a member of the council, said he felt it was "a wise decision" to get the prison matter settled.

The officials said it would cost about $20.8 million to build the maximum security prison, install 100 new beds at Orofino, and expand sewer and water facilities at the existing prison.

Employees union representative alleges drug abuse at youth center

BOISE (AP) — The business representative for a state employees union is alleging drug abuse by staff members at the Youth Services Center, a systematic routing out of Mormon workers and hiring of out-of-state employees over Idahoans.

Warren Lundquist, business representative for the Idaho Service Employees Union Local 687, held a news conference in Boise Friday to disclose the contents of a letter mailed to Health and Welfare Director Richard Donovan. The letter raised allegations against YSC, a state facility in St. Anthony for troubled youths.

forced to leave employment there," Lundquist wrote. "It appears that their replacements were from out of state in many cases — Ohio, Illinois, etc."

He alleged that the out-of-state employees were friends of YSC administrator Kurt Friedenauer.

However, Donovan said that YSC or the department doesn't have a free rein in hiring personnel. He said that applicants must apply with the Idaho Personnel Commission, which screens potential workers and develops a register of most-qualified candidates.

The department interviews the top five for a position, and chooses from those the state.

Report reinforces Reagan statements, Speakes declares

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House said Friday a Senate committee report on the Iran-Contragate scandal backs up President Reagan's account of events, but acknowledged that the secret dealings with Tehran "could be interpreted as a trade of arms for hostages."

"The report contains no evidence whatsoever that the president was aware of or later approved any diversion of funds to the Contras," said Larry Speakes in his final briefing as chief presidential spokesman.

The report released Thursday night by the Senate Intelligence Committee said there was no direct evidence that Reagan knew about the diversion of profits from the arms sales to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

It described the arms deal as largely plotted by foreign weapons merchants, encouraged by Israel and driven by Reagan's concern for the American hostages in Lebanon.

Richard V. Secord and his Iranian-born business partner, Albert Hakim, as "almost co-equal lieutenants" in North's operations, according to the report.

The Senate select investigating committee announced appointments of 10 associate counsel positions, bringing the total staff of into resign.

Israel's role — A7

"He is the wrong chief of staff for this president at this time," Boren said, adding that Reagan had failed to make sure the president had the best, possible advice on the controversy and that foreign policy making had, therefore, fallen to amateurs.

In other developments:

- Reagan administration officials participated more directly than previously known in a military aid network for Nicaraguan Contra rebels during a two-year congressional ban on arms support, according to evidence in the Senate report.
- A CIA officer participating in the arms sales to Iran described retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord and his Iranian-born business partner, Albert Hakim, as "almost co-equal lieutenants" in North's operations, according to the report.
- The Senate select investigating committee announced appointments of 10 associate counsel positions, bringing the total staff of investigating attorneys to 13. The panel last week announced that Arthur L. Limas, a New York lawyer with experience handling "white-collar crime" cases, would lead the investigative team as chief counsel.

At the White House, Speakes highlighted portions of the report favorable to Reagan but dismissed other elements.

"The facts as they come out are bearing out what the president said," he argued.

In particular, Speakes said that former National Security Council staff deputy Oliver L. North, in an interview last November with Attorney General Edwin Meese III, said he did not think Reagan was aware of any diversion of funds.

North was fired, and his boss, national security adviser John M. Poindexter, resigned, when Meese revealed the diversion of money on Nov. 25.

Speakes noted that Poindexter had expected Reagan to say he had not inquired into the diversion because he felt sorry for the Contras. Speakes cited that statement as further evidence to substantiate that Reagan was never told of the plan.

Reagan has a copy of the report and plans to read it, Speakes said. He said the president was pleased that the report was not "and that it confirms his position that he neither authorized nor was aware of the alleged transfer of funds to the Contras."

Accordingly to the report, North told Meese on the weekend of Nov. 22-23 that he tried to talk to Reagan about Iran in terms of developing ties with a strategically important nation, but that the president always focused on the hostages.

The report said: "According to Meese, North said it was a terrible mistake to say the president wanted a 'strategic' relationship, because the president wanted the hostages."

Speakes said, "That recollection of Olle does not necessarily hold water because Olle was never in any private, intimate conversations with the president, as the record shows." He said the report — taken as a whole — demonstrates that the administration's original intent "was related to a strategic opening."

While there was no direct evidence that Reagan knew about the diversion of money to the Contras, he had at least 17 meetings at which North was present in 1985 and 1986, the report said. It also found that on one point the president met with North and a top-level CIA official at a Central Intelligence Agency office in a Central American country.

Speakes said, "The report is consistent with the president's position that, from its inception, the Iran initiative was an effort to open a dialogue with top officials of a strategically important country."

The release of the report, he said, was "an important preliminary step intended to show that the Iranians would no longer support terrorism, and the sale of arms was a gesture of good faith on the part of the United States in pursuing this strategic opening."

"To be sure, the linking of arms sale to the release of hostages at several points during this 15-month episode could be interpreted as a trade of arms for hostages," Speakes said, "but this was not the policy approved by the president."

The report said it has not been able to trace where money from the arms sale went. Meese has said that up to $50 million was diverted to the Contras, but Speakes backed away from that.

"I don't think we have those facts yet," he said.

Citing Meese's comments, Speakes said there was evidence "that these funds were diverted from the arms sale. The question is to whom were they diverted and I don't think that question has been answered."

He also denied published reports that Shultz, Weinberger and Treasury Secretary James A. Baker planned to resign unless Reagan quit.

"I don't think so. Wrong," Speakes said.

Collider

director of the department's Fermilab near Chicago, home of the most powerful particle accelerators. Physicists had "bitten off their fingernails and are down to the studs" in their anxiety.

Scientists lack a fundamental understanding of the physical world "and there is reason to believe we are closing in on it," he said.

"The convergence of particle physics and cosmology is very exciting," he said.

Cosmology is the science that studies the origin of the universe.

Collisions of protons in the super-collider will concentrate in a region almost unimaginably small, in an almost unimaginably brief time, the energy density that must have existed during the "big bang" beginning of the universe billions of years ago. In that space, some processes must occur that occurred during the big bang, scientists believe.

Wolfgang Panofsky, director of the Stanford Linear Accelerator in California, said a complete theory of matter might never emerge. "If history is any guide, it will not answer all questions, and indeed may open up new questions," he said.

The accelerator has been described as a $6 billion project. Alvin Trivelpiece, director of energy research, said the difference in figures is that the higher figure is the simple sum of annual outlays that would be made through 1996, including expected price inflation, while $4.4 billion is the "present value," or what would have to be set aside in a lump sum in 1988 that could be drawn on.

Youth

places frequented by teenagers, such as discos and skating rinks.

Most of the audience were expensive stereotypical Soviets and revealed affluence or privilege with references to visits to the United States or party posts held by their parents.

The first half-hour Thursday was fraught with silence and discomfort. Donahue tried to discuss problems confronting youth everywhere — teenage pregnancy, promiscuity, drugs, fights with parents.

"The Soviet teens wanted to know why the United States hasn't joined in the nuclear testing moratorium," the Kremlin announced nearly 18 months ago, why the U.S. government spends so much on armaments, and why Donahue was so interested in talking about problems they said they didn't have.

"You are like sheep," Donahue said, explaining what he considers America's stereotype of Soviets. "You are all moving in the same direction, without individual expression or individual feelings. Is that because it's difficult to express your real feelings here?"

More stares. More silence.

"How can we do it every thing is all right here?" one girl offered, speaking in English. "American students have many more problems than we have — criminality, drugs."

Donahue, dressed in blue jeans and his trademark spectacles, pressed forward. "What about sex? When do Soviets start dating?"

"Well, I'm not a virgin" since 14 years old, "I'm of 18 volunteered in English, one arm slung over the back of his red plastic chair.

Donahue asked whether it was normal to have healthy 14-year-olds on Friday showed Leroy, a Boise attorney, still owed $69,750 as of Jan. 1, even though he paid off $23,114 in debts.

The year-end report from Gov. Cecil Andrus, Leroy's Democrat opponent, wasn't on file as of Friday.

Overall, Leroy spent about $375,000 on the campaign, about $70,000 less than Andrus' latest report. Andrus won his third term as Idaho's chief executive.

servicing in the military, since many in the audience were near the draft age of 19.

Echoing the words of the state-run press, one boy said he was concerned about the limited contingent of Soviet soldiers in Afghanistan.

He said he feared having to serve in the protracted war "and ending life before it starts living up."

Several hands shot up to reply.

The release of the report, he said, was "an important preliminary step intended to show that the Iranians would no longer support terrorism, and the sale of arms was a gesture of good faith on the part of the United States in pursuing this strategic opening."

"To be sure, the linking of arms sale

he considered it his "internationalist duty."

The subject changed to religion. "Church exists for those of weak character," said one boy. The Soviet Union is officially atheist.

One girl rose to say she liked the "beautiful old rites" and thought churches should be preserved as historical monuments.

Asked whether she believed in God, she laughed and blurted out: "Of course not. I'm a member of the Komsomol," the youth branch of the Communist Party.

Leroy debt nearly $70,000

BOISE (AP) — Although he made some progress in paying off bills late last year, Republican governor candidate David Leroy still owes nearly $70,000 from the unsuccessful campaign.

Campaign finance reports filed with the secretary-of-state's office Friday showed Leroy, a Boise attorney, still owed $69,750 as of Jan. 1, even though he paid off $23,114 in debts.

The year-end report from Gov. Cecil Andrus, Leroy's Democrat opponent, wasn't on file as of Friday.

break claim it has never provided the job or business expansion it was intended to. Many argue that while it could be a development incentive in better economic times, the most important state needs now are to reverse the deterioration of Idaho's social system.

While the Senate Republicans have apparently reached a consensus on retaining the credit, there apparently has been no detailed discussion on exactly how much the state can afford to spend in the coming budget year or what alternatives to repeal of the credit might be considered to raise enough money to finance Andrus' spending blueprint.

Correction

MIAMI (AP) — The Associated Press, in a story Wednesday about the release of Sam Nealey Hall from custody in Nicaragua, erroneously said Nealey was saying in reference to the Nicaraguan people, "I'm sorry I tried to ambush them."

The correct quote was, "I'm sorry I tried to abuse them."

Hall, 49, had been held since Dec. 12 when he was arrested at an air base northeast of Managua and accused of spying.

Enforcement chief confirmed

BOISE (AP) — The Senate has unanimously confirmed Mack Richardson as Gov. Cecil Andrus' director of the Department of Law Enforcement.

The unopposed confirmation on Friday of the veteran of 31 years in the Secret Service continued the trend of support the Republican-dominated Senate has given the top members of the new administration.

Also on Friday, the Senate Judiciary Committee endorsed the nomination of 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt of Twin Falls to the Idaho Judicial Council. Hurlbutt was named the state's most productive judge last year. The council selects a slate of nominees from which the governor fills judicial vacancies.

Daycare alternative delayed

BOISE (AP) — The Senate Health and Welfare Committee has delayed introduction of an alternative to the Child Care Coalition's proposal for statewide daycare regulation as lawmakers continued striving to end Idaho's distinction as the only state without such a law.

But in declining to submit the bill on Friday, the committee was concerned with making some technical and minor changes. None of the panel members indicated any serious objections to the plan of Sen. Michael Crapo, R-Idaho Falls. Crapo said the measure would probably be introduced next week after the changes have been made.

PBS news scheduling criticized

BOISE (AP) — The general manager of the Idaho Educational-Public Broadcasting System is trying to assure legislative budget writers that the three-station network is doing the best it can with limited resources to meet the needs of Idahoans.

But in presenting his 1988 budget request to the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee on Friday, Gerald Garber was bombarded with questions from the panel about the scheduling of the system's nightly newscast on the Legislature, "Idaho Reports," that is simultaneously shown on its stations in Boise, Moscow and Idaho Falls.

Lawmakers from the mountain time zone of southern Idaho complained the broadcast at 6 p.m. conflicts with local newscasts, and those from the Pacific time zone in northern Idaho said the 5 p.m. airing was too early for most people to see.

Graduate students increase

POCATELLO (AP) — Idaho State University officials say the school's enrollment is up 450 this semester, spurred by a big increase in graduate enrollment.

Friday, Jerold Chambers, director of registration and records, said Friday ISU's total head count is just over 7,000.

There was an increase of 32 percent in graduate students, and part-time enrollment went up 17 percent, Chambers said.

Chambers said the average age of entering ISU freshmen is 27.

Craig outspend Currie on race

BOISE (AP) — Year-end campaign finance reports indicate Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, outspent Democrat Bill Currie 20-1 in their election race for Idaho's 1st District congressional seat.

Craig won his fourth term, 121,274-59,133.

His year-end finance report, filed with the secretary of state's office here on Friday, showed spending of $245,103 and a cash balance of $14,830.

Currie, a Bonners Ferry businessman making his first bid for major office, showed spending of $12,516 and unpaid obligations of $8,232.

Currie showed most of the unpaid debt was a personal loan of nearly $7,000 to his campaign committee and a debt of about $1,300 to campaign aide Douglas Jones, Rupert.

'Abandoned' parking fee eyed

POCATELLO (AP) — City fathers here say they hope to get rid of unsightly, abandoned motor vehicles by imposing an annual parking fee on all residents.

Mayor Dick Finlayson said the City Council plans full information hearings before putting the drive into effect. But city officials hope to come up with new laws imposing fines on violators, and a new definition of "abandoned" vehicles.

The permit system, how much to be charged, and whether it all would be legal, are being researched by the city's legal department, the mayor said.

Pocatello plans street project

POCATELLO (AP) — Pocatello will launch the most ambitious local street repair program in a decade, planning to spend $1 million repaving and reconstructing nearly 40 miles of streets.

City streets superintendent Curt Neville said about 70 percent of the work will be bid out to private contractors, with the rest of the work to be done by city street crews.

City officials said they hope to raise $663,000 from a new city street utility fee charged all residents. The rest of the money is to come from the street department's construction budget.

City officials emphasized that there will be no tax increase to finance the summer construction program.

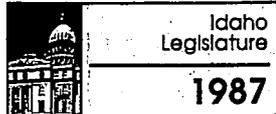

Man found dead

COLFAX, Wash. (AP) — An Idaho man found in a road ditch was pronounced dead of unknown causes, the Whitman County Sheriff's department reported.

Larry Davis, age unavallable, of Moscow, Idaho, was pronounced dead at Moscow's Critman Memorial Hospital after attempts to revive him failed, according to a news release issued late Thursday.

Board OKs start of work on new prison

BOISE (AP) — Going along with a decision made earlier in the week by Gov. Cecil Andrus and legislative leaders, a state board has voted to authorize the start of work on a new 248-bed maximum security state prison near Boise.

But the action by the Permanent Building Fund Council Friday wasn't without some reservation.

Board member Rep. Kathleen "Kitty" Gurnsey, R-Boise, and member Jerry Hess of Nampa wanted to know where the money was to come from before committing the state to nearly $21 million worth of construction.

treatment and water supplies at the main prison.

Eventually, the council voted to authorize the Division of Public Works to prepare a call for design for the new prison. The same motion included a separate project to add 100 beds of medium security space at the state prison at Orofino, although design of that project won't proceed until Andrus and the Legislature decide how it's to be funded.

Hess said the state already doesn't meet federal Environmental Protection Agency standards for the treatment of sewage at the prison, and must expand the water supply.

The council also authorized Public Works to start the paperwork on expanding sewage

Anne Barker, public works director, told the council she didn't want to be restricted to the traditional route of preparing a "request for proposals," soliciting plans from architects.

She said the national trend appears to be toward having private companies build prisons, and then lease them to public agencies.

She said she's been approached about that possibility, and wants to be free to recommend it. Ms. Barker said it's also possible the state might save money by having both the Orofino and Boise projects designed at the same time.

The state has $8 million to start work on the maximum security prison. The council voted to rescind a Jan. 19 request to the Legislature to divert $4.63 million of the $8 million to add 100 medium security beds at Orofino.

That was before Andrus and leaders of the House and Senate agreed Monday to build 248 beds of maximum security space and let the Board of Corrections and the Permanent Building Fund Council decide the location.

Sen. Kermit Kiebert, D-Hope, both a member of legislative leadership and a member of the council, said he felt it was "a wise decision" to get the prison matter settled.

The officials said it would cost about $20.8 million to build the maximum security prison, install 100 new beds at Orofino, and expand sewer and water facilities at the existing prison.

Employees union representative alleges drug abuse at youth center

BOISE (AP) — The business representative for a state employees union is alleging drug abuse by staff members at the Youth Services state in many cases — Ohio, Illinois, Center, a systematic routing out of Mormon workers and hiring of out-of-state employees over Idahoans.

Warren Lundquist, business representative for the Idaho Service Employees Union Local 687, held a news conference in Boise Friday to disclose the contents of a letter mailed to Health and Welfare Director Richard Donovan. The letter raised allegations against YSC, a state facility in St. Anthony for troubled youths.

A number of our members have brought to our attention that numerous Idaho residents have been forced to leave employment there," Lundquist wrote. "It appears that their replacements were from out of state in many cases — Ohio, Illinois, Center, a systematic routing out of Mormon workers and hiring of out-of-state employees over Idahoans."

He alleged that the out-of-state employees were Friends of YSC administrator Kurt Friedener.

However, Donovan said that YSC or the department doesn't have a free rein in hiring personnel. He said that applicants must apply with Idaho Personnel Commission, which screens potential workers and develops a register of most-qualified state facility in St. Anthony for troubled youths.

The department interviews the top five for a position, and chooses from those, he said.

Since July 1984, 100 people have been hired at YSC, and only nine have been from out of state, Donovan said.

Commenting on allegations that Mormons were being pushed out, department public information officer Lindy High said religion is not a factor in hiring.

Lundquist also said in his letter that "further reports from our members allege wide-spread drug use by the staff."

INEL groundwater monitoring back in plan

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The state Water Resources Board has reversed an earlier decision and put state monitoring of Idaho National Engineering Laboratory groundwater back in its water plan.

State Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, wrote the board on Nov. 25, asking how the absence of monitoring would impact state water quality at the site, which sits atop the Snake River Plain Aquifer.

Noh is chairman of the Senate Resources and Environment Committee.

The board put the requirement back in on Dec. 12 due to public interest, said Frank Sherman, a supervisor in the water planning section of the state Department of Water Resources.

However, Sherman said he couldn't be sure the change would mean a DWR representative would be available to monitor the INEL site. He referred questions on this to DWR Director A. Kenneth Dunn, who could not be reached for comment Friday.

The groundwater at INEL is contaminated with low-level radioactive waste, and radioactive tritium has already been detected at INEL's southern boundary, according to a 1983 study by the U.S. Geological Survey.

Tritium has a half-life of 12 years, meaning that in that period it will lose half its radioactivity. The tritium is not present in heavy enough concentrations to pose a health hazard, however, INEL officials said. Marcy Williamson, director of the radiological and environmental science lab at INEL, said the change in the water plan "will have no great effect, one way or the other."

He said the state has had the right to split groundwater samples with INEL for a long time. Williamson said the state had a representative at the local DWR office near INEL at one time. But the position hasn't been funded in the last couple of years, he said.

The DWR had said earlier that it was dropping INEL groundwater monitoring from its water plan because the INEL no longer uses injection wells to dispose of hundreds of millions of gallons of radioactive wastes into the groundwater aquifer.

Instead, the federal facility near Arco relies on ponds which allow the waste to percolate more slowly into the aquifer. Some of the material is deposited on rocks as it filters down, according to INEL officials.

By the year 2000 the tritium waste plume will migrate 5-6 miles south of the INEL property line, according to a mathematical model developed by J.B. Robertson of the U.S. Geological Survey.

Judging from the behavior of the plume so far it appears the model is conservative, Williamson said.

Economist paints bleak farm picture

By JANE ROBINSON
Times-News writer

BOISE — An Iowa economist painted a grim agricultural picture Thursday, stretching into the next century.

Nell Hari, a professor of agriculture and economics at Iowa State University, said the nation's farm problem is more severe than the public understands, although the number of farmers facing bankruptcy is actually small.

"The problem is not strictly too much debt and overproduction," Hari said. "We're facing too much debt in too few hands, and global overproduction of basic agricultural commodities."

Hari spoke to a small audience of Idaho lawmakers about the often-understood dimensions of the farm crisis. He also outlined how some state governments are helping to ease some of the problem.

The major problem is too much debt, he said. In 1982 farmers had $11.8 billion in debt. In the 1980s it was $21.6 billion.

But the problem is not that large numbers of farmers have large debts. In fact, 39.5 percent of the nation's farmers have no debt at all, he said. Another 15 percent have only modest debts, according to Hari.

The problem is that a few farmers are carrying the bulk of the debt. "The scariest statistic of all," he said, "is that a third of all farmers are carrying two-thirds of the debt."

And if they go down, they could drag banks down with them, he said. In a typical commercial bank 82 percent of its loans are held by farmers.

Hari said high interest rates in the late '70s are what tore agriculture apart. Not only did interest rates affect a farmer's own financial picture, but they also created a strong dollar, driving down exports.

Hari's presentation may not have been good news for Idahoans who are pinning their hopes on selling more products abroad.

He called the export picture "very, very grim." Many foreign countries — especially Third World Nations, Hari said.

Lawmakers consider answers to farm crisis

By JANE ROBINSON
Times-News writer

BOISE — A seminar here this week on the scope of the farm crisis drew praise from Magic Valley lawmakers, who will begin looking at state laws to deal with the situation.

"I'm optimistic something may come out of it," said state Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly.

Noh was among a number of lawmakers who listened to Thursday's seminar by Nell Hari, a professor in economics and agriculture at Iowa State University.

Noh said it was too early to hone in on specific legislation. However, he was interested in mediation efforts and options for farmers and lending their institutions before problems move operation to court.

Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, said that before any legislation is introduced to reform agriculture, he would like to see bankers and farmers meet face-to-face.

"We need to have some real frank discussions, because the present situation—between farmers and lenders is stalling," Peavey said.

"We've got to discuss how to keep bankers from stonewalling" loans Peavey said he was most interested in Iowa's ASSIST Program that Hari outlined.

The program provides a computerized analysis of farm businesses through the university.

Rep. Jerry Callen, R-Jerome, also liked the idea of taking computers to farmers to help them analyze their operations.

Reagan's green light on particle accelerator project raises hopes of state, INEL officials

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Key figures in the Idaho quest to obtain the Superconducting Super-Collider project sounded delighted Friday that President Reagan had given the go-ahead.

A spokesman for Gov. Cecil Andrus said Andrus would be talking next week about getting state funding to attract the research project. But Marc Johnson, Andrus' press secretary, said he didn't know how much Andrus was seeking.

All the Idaho money raised so far to attract it has come from the private sector. Johnson said the governor applauded Reagan's decision. "If the project is to be built, it should be built in Idaho," Andrus said.

Troy Wade, Idaho National Engineering Laboratory manager, said he was "very pleasantly surprised" on learning of Reagan's decision.

Wade said he was also surprised about the timing of the announcement. "I thought it was a dead issue until after the 1988 elections." He described the reaction to the news at INEL near Arco as "very positive."

"I'm urging people to be guardedly optimistic," Wade said. "Congress still has to go along. There is the potential for a partisan political battle. There are hurdles to cross. We're a long way off."

Idaho backers of the project say the INEL, with its engineering capabilities honed in nuclear safety research and its 890-square-mile site, would be an ideal location for the $4.4 billion particle accelerator project.

"The pros outweigh the cons," said Wade regarding an Idaho site. No other location can touch Idaho's advantages in land and low-cost construction, Wade said, and the INEL has the engineering capabilities in place. The cons are weather — which would lengthen the construction period somewhat, remoteness and the state's higher-education system.

According to the schedule announced Friday, Wade said the state has 10 years to beef-up physics departments in its universities.

James Bruce, head of the state's superconductor task force, said: "I think, from the standpoint of cost and infrastructure at INEL, we can do it cheaper."

Wade said that Andrus and Jim Hawkins, state Department of Commerce director, are "very motivated with respect to it (the project)."

Last summer a spokesman for the task force said $45,000 of $72,000 raised to attract the project had been spent. Bruce wouldn't say how much he thought the state should commit to the project. "It's not a tremendous amount," he said.

By contrast, Texas has budgeted $10 million for preliminary research. The task force spokesman said last summer.

The INEL has already been chosen by the federal government as the preferred site for the $68.1 million Special Isotope Separation project which, if all goes well, could be operating in the 1990s.

Law on name reporting stirs debate on confidentiality

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

BOISE — The issue of reporting the names of people confirmed to have antibodies to the AIDS virus to the state, as mandated by the last Legislature, reared its head again Friday as experts on both sides disagreed sharply.

"There is no valid public health reason for having that name," said Dr. Richard Chaisson, who treats AIDS patients at San Francisco General Hospital. "By requiring reporting (of the names), they're scaring away so many people that they don't get an accurate count."

Dr. Charles Brokopp and Fritz Dixon, with the state Department of Health and Welfare, defended Idaho's law requiring the names to be reported at the conference titled "AIDS: Issues and Controversies for the Community."

"The reasons for not reporting it are based on paranoia," said Brokopp, state epidemiologist with H&W.

He argued that since the names are kept confidential by H&W and the parole board, there is no reason to fear the information will be released. And Brokopp said the advantage of having the names allows H&W workers to contact the persons, let them know they have been exposed to AIDS and how to avoid potentially transmitting it.

"I think we have a very good track record," said Brokopp, referring to H&W's 40 years of requiring the names of people diagnosed with diseases such as syphilis and hepatitis without releasing names.

The philosophical debate erupted several times during a Thursday evening community meeting and Friday's day-long conference on AIDS at Boise State University.

The conference drew 200 people from health care, education and business-related fields to learn more about Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

In addition to BSU and H&W, the conference was sponsored by Ada County Continuing Medical Education, Idaho AIDS Foundation, Idaho Public Health Association and SE Idaho Regional Medical Center.

A confirmed positive test for AIDS means that the person has been exposed to the disease, not that it will develop. But the experts agree all people, who test positive may be viewed as contagious and may develop AIDS, which weakens the body's immune system.

Chaisson and Gary Carr, a registered nurse from SFGH, were invited as keynote speakers to the conference because of their experience in dealing with AIDS patients. San Francisco has registered 3,000 cases of AIDS since the disease was identified and SFGH has treated 750 of those cases.

Chaisson said "anonymous testing, as is done in California, should be done in Idaho as the scope of the problem can be defined. A blanket education of people, who are at high risk of catching the disease, such as gay and

Rights of employees with AIDS unclear

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

BOISE — In light of "several" people losing their jobs in Idaho after testing positive for AIDS virus, state officials addressed in a panel discussion Friday the legal aspects of firing or not hiring an AIDS victim.

"There have certainly been cases of wrongfully firing with employees with AIDS virus," said Dr. Charles Brokopp, state epidemiologist with the Department of Health and Welfare. "We are aware of several cases in Idaho."

Without going into details on specific cases, Brokopp said the people may file charges against their former employers.

Deputy Attorney General Leslie Goddard said earlier in the discussion that the Federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973 prohibited firing "handicapped" people, which apparently includes AIDS victims, if they are physically able to perform their jobs. If the company received federal contracts, the company's liability for workers' lost wages, insurance, medical costs and attorney's fees, she said.

The discussion came during a workshop entitled "Employing the Worker with AIDS," one of four panels offered Friday at a Boise State University conference called "AIDS: Issues and Controversies for the Community."

About half of the 200 health-care workers, educators, business people and others attending the conference listened as officials laid out state and federal policies.

Goddard said Idaho's Human Rights Commission, which is her client, would typically enforce violations of handicapped rights, but they are not defined in the code.

While not being familiar with the specific cases Brokopp mentioned, Goddard said after the discussion that she had found no Idaho statute that would protect people from being fired. If the company did not receive federal contracts, an anti-discrimination law would be the expected civil litigation will be falling into uncharted waters of Idaho law.

Federal opinion on the matter has only been muddled since 1973, Goddard said. A U.S. Justice Department opinion issued last year said employers could fire workers with AIDS virus if concerned for other workers' safety, but not simply because the person had AIDS, she said.

Most of the rest of the discussion focused on reminding people that AIDS is contracted only through intimate sexual contact or a travenous transfer of blood. The virus "absolutely" cannot be transmitted by casual contact, she said.

Brokopp, whose view is shared by AIDS specialists from San Francisco, said the

Buhl open in fair condition

• BUHL — A Buhl teenager was in fair condition Friday after suffering injuries in car-train accident in Buhl Thursday night.

• Buhl police reported that James Lupton, 16, driver of the car, was seriously injured and a passenger, Kevin Ross, was treated at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center emergency room and released. Both boys are from Buhl.

• Investigating officer Michael Hottman of Buhl said the accident happened at 9:53 p.m. Thursday at the railroad crossing on 12th Avenue South. Hottman said Lupton was driving south and pulled onto the railroad crossing as a train engine was backing up in a westerly direction, moving at 10-15 mph. The engine struck the car on the driver's side, dragging it 200 feet down the tracks.

• "It was necessary to extricate Lupton from the wreckage, although Ross was able to get out of his own."

• Hottman said the car was demolished.

• There was no stop sign at the crossing, but there was a railroad-crossing sign. There was no alcohol involvement, he said.

• Mike Bixby, 34, of Pocatello, was the engineer on the train and he and other railroad personnel escaped injury.

Bekker not due prosecution

The accident was still under investigation Friday and no charges have been filed, Hottman said.

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. E. Baxter, acting as special prosecutor for Jerome County, said Friday that she sees no basis for prosecuting former Jerome County commissioner Henk Bekker on alleged insufficient funds checks.

• Jerome County Prosecutor Mark Gause asked Baxter to investigate the matter, saying that as Jerome county attorney he has represented Bekker and other county commissioners in numerous legal matters.

• No charges had been brought against Bekker. Baxter said there were two basic problems with the evidence submitted for her decision. First, she said, the checks were written subject to a hold agreement. Secondly, they were written on an open account. Under these conditions the law does not show a criminal act has been committed, Baxter said.

• Bekker has resigned his position as county commissioner and also as an administrator of the juvenile jail facility in Jerome County to accept a banking position in Utah.

• Baxter said she was asked by Gause to BOISE (AP) — A Minnesota woman is seeking damages of at least $1.85 million in a lawsuit filed over a traffic accident in Twin Falls County that severely injured her two children.

• Janette Gustafson filed the lawsuit against Ross E. Parker, whose address wasn't listed, on behalf of her children.

• The lawsuit alleges that Parker crossed the center line of U.S. 93 in Twin Falls County in June 1985 and struck a station wagon driven by Roger Gustafson.

• Mrs. Gustafson filed the suit that her children were severely injured. Her son, Matthew, received a liver injury, nerve damage in his right arm, a right hand deformity and other injuries, according to the suit, while her son, Todd, received a skull fracture, upper extremity damage and possible brain damage.

• Mrs. Gustafson is seeking general damages of $50,000, $1.5 million for Matthew, $300,000 for Todd, medical expenses, and attorneys fees.

speaking with people who tested positive for AIDS is a more direct method for education before the disease spreads further. The person's contacts can then be traced to let others know they may also be at risk of developing the disease, blood transmitted intravenously. Brokopp said that after consulting with one person who tested positive, risk and H&W was able to let those people know without releasing any names.

• In the case of blood donated to Red Cross, five people of 50,000 to 60,000 were tested since testing began in March 1985 were found positive.

• Ted Walters, regional director of Red Cross, said back-tracing was also done for previous donations of those five people, since they had the names.

• Three had donated previously, covering seven recipients, said Dixon, state health officer with H&W. Three of those seven were apparently unaffected, but the other four tested positive and have been told.

• Despite this harnessing of information about the approximately 85 people testing positive in Idaho, Chaisson said some individuals in the high-risk group are scared away because they fear retribution if the test results are released.

• Beyond testing blood donations, the district health departments tested 1,660 specimens as of Jan. 1, Brokopp said. Of those, 70 were confirmed positive for the antibody, six people are known to have full-fledged AIDS and about a dozen more with AIDS were diagnosed before coming to Idaho, he said.

Report on non-marital sex stirs flap

Leaders of the Episcopal Church's Newark diocese divide on heated issue

... news stories about the report have prompted telephone calls from distressed parishioners in a proportion to nothing else — more than women entering the priesthood ...

— Rev. John Negrotto

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — In emotionally charged debate Friday, leaders of the Episcopal Church's Newark diocese divided on a report that urges the church to give its blessing to sexual relationships between homosexual, unmarried, divorced or widowed adult couples.

"It's going to drive people out of the church," the Rev. John Negrotto of Holy Trinity Church in Hillsdale told a packed hearing discussing the clergy-lay panel's recommendations.

"Are we running a church or an ethics course?" asked Chuck Meredith of Maywood. "I think we're crossing a line into advocacy and I don't want to be a part of it."

Negrotto said news stories about the report have prompted telephone calls from distressed parishioners "in a proportion to nothing else — more than women entering the priesthood," which occurred a decade ago.

Other delegates to the diocese's annual convention reported that the bulk of telephone calls, some supportive of the report.

Because of the report, "We have people coming into the church, looking for what we have to offer," said the Rev. Scott Kallstrom of Grace Van Vorst Church in Jersey City.

The task force's findings, embraced by diocesan leaders Bishop William Tappin, are a minority view among the nation's 3 million Episcopalans. In 1979, the church's General Convention voted down a resolution to adopt similar recommendations.

On Saturday, the body of 200 priests and 500 lay members will vote on whether to distribute the report among the faithful.

If the resolution passes, the body will vote on whether to accept all or part of the report's recommendations as policy when it reconvenes next year.

Spang said he intends to ignite national debate on sexual ethics with the report, which the Newark Diocesan Convention ordered at its 1985 meeting. He hopes it will prompt church leaders to amend doctrine to embrace all believers.

Members of the task force acknowledged to the 50 or so people who packed a hotel conference room to overflowing that they did not report to include all points of view in the report.

"That prompted angry comments. 'Are we going to rewrite the Bible?'" shouted one priest.

"I don't want to be debating this with parishioners whose minds are already made up," said Negrotto.

Episcopal doctrine approves of sex only between men and women who are married. Trad-itionalists say the church's teaching is centered on God, not changing social mores.

The task force said that because attitudes toward marriage have changed as more women defer it or reject it for careers, the church should accept premarital sex and cohabitation.

Homosexuals also have as much right to worship God as heterosexuals and their rights to church recognition and ministry should not be ignored, the report says.

Useless sexual relationships should be recognized if they manifest "healing, reconciliation, compassion, mutuality, concern for others," the panel said.

"I find no hearing message in this document at all," said the Rev. Al Salt of All Saints Church in Millington. "Homosexuals who have come to a knowledge of Christ can be healed of homosexuality."

That comment drew moans of disapproval.

"I am tired of hearing that homosexuality is sickness," Kallstrom said. "There is no convincing moral basis for homosexuality being a sickness."

Spang, a member of the Commission on Human Affairs and Health of the church's national House of Bishops, noted that among those who supported him when the House of Bishops adopted the proposal in 1979 was the church's current leader, Presiding Bishop Edmond Lee Browning.

Browning would not comment on the report because that would interfere with the legislative process, said spokeswoman Janet Vetter in New York City.

Spang said he expects the issue to be taken up again by the House of Bishops, which meets in September in Chicago.

Nauvoo restoration chief Kimball retires

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Dr. LeRoy Kimball, a founder and for 25 years president of Nauvoo Restoration Inc., has retired, Mormon Church officials say.

Kimball, 85, has served as the only president of the organization, formed in 1962 to oversee restoration efforts at the village of Nauvoo, Ill., which flourished as an early Mormon settlement from 1839 to 1846.

Elder Lorin C. Dunn, a member of the church's First Quorum of the Seventy, was named Friday to replace Kimball.

Papal visit to Detroit slated

DETROIT (AP) — Gov. James Blanchard, Mayor Coleman Young and Archbishop Edmund Szoka said Wednesday they were delighted Pope John Paul II will visit Detroit during his 10-day U.S. tour in September.

The Vatican announced Wednesday the pope would make a 24-hour stop in the city Sept. 18-19 at the end of his 10-day American tour.

Szoka and Young predicted 1 million or more people would turn out to hear the pope, and they said they would work together to find appropriate locations for his appearances.

Blanchard, in Lansing, said he welcomed the pope's visit.

The archbishop, leader of 1.5 million Detroit-area Catholics, said he met with the pope several times in Rome and urged him to visit the city. He said he learned Monday that the pope would do so.

"Archbishop Szoka is to be congratulated for his persistence," Young said during a joint news conference with Szoka at Sacred Heart Seminary. "It's obvious he got the pope's attention."

Robert Kozarek, mayor of the heavily Polish Detroit enclave of Hamtramck, said he was overjoyed by news of the visit by the Polish-born pope, and hoped it would include a stop in his community.

Shultz issued 1985 warning about Israel's help with Iran

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Israel prepared Friday to cooperate with U.S. investigations into the Iran arms sales, Secretary of State George P. Shultz was said to have warned in 1985 about accepting Jerusalem's agenda on the Iran issue.

Israel's plan "is not the same as ours," Senate committee report member Shultz said in a June 5, 1985, memo to the national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane.

An "intelligence relationship with Israel concerning Iran" could seriously skew our own perception and analysis of the Iranian scene," the memo said.

The Senate panel's preliminary report, released late Thursday, shows that McFarlane and other White House officials worked closely with Israeli officials in devising the plan to sell arms to the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime in hopes of freeing American hostages in Lebanon and opening contacts to moderates in Tehran.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Israeli officials are working with Congress on the terms of Israel's cooperation in five separate investigations into the sales of weapons to Iran and the diversion of profits to rebels in Nicaragua.

Israelis may provide written testimony to the congressional panels led by David Abner, the presidential counselor and White House point man on the Iran-Contra case, but they probably will not testify. Details are expected to be worked out over the next several days.

The 64-page Senate report devotes more than 15 pages on how the arms sales got under way in 1985, exposing internal debate and confusion within the administration over the subsidy.

During 1985 and 1986, Israeli officials and middlemen were intimately involved in the arms program.

The report noted that "Israel had a strong interest in promoting contacts with Iran and reportedly had permitted arms transfers to Iran as a means of furthering their interests." Israeli middlemen had arranged private deals with Iran involving U.S. arms as early as 1982, according to intelligence studies.

Although the report did not mention Israel's motives, Jerusalem fears a victory by its enemy Iraq in the long-running Iran-Iraq war, and the Israelis are concerned about Jews living in Iran.

The first talk of U.S. arms being sold to Tehran, and the notion of exchanging the report that Michael Ledeen, a former NSC consultant with close ties to Israel, helped initiate the program that led to the first shipment of U.S. weapons from Israel to Iran on Aug. 30, 1985.

Ledeen, a friend of Shimon Peres, Israel's prime minister at the time, was a central contact with Chornbanfar, the report said. Their first meeting was in July, 1985, in Israel, where Ledeen was spending a month's vacation.

"Ledeen... appears to have played a key role in the initial contacts between the U.S. and Israel vis-a-vis Iran," the report states. Ledeen testified that he first talked with McFarlane in April 1985 "about the possibility of raising contacts with Iran and the government of Israel...."

When Shultz learned that Ledeen had broached the subject of Iran with Peres and an Israeli intelligence officer on May 4-5, 1985, the secretary "complained to McFarlane that Ledeen's contact with Israel had bypassed the Department of State," the report said.

The report quoted McFarlane as saying Ledeen was operating "on his own hook."

On July 3, 1985, David Kinche, director of Israel's foreign ministry, contacted McFarlane and told him Israel had established "a dialogue with Iran," the report said.

Then, on July 14, a "private emissary" from Prime Minister Peres came to press the point," the report said.

At a meeting with McFarlane and Shultz in early August 1985, Kinche "indicated that the Iranians not only wanted a dialogue with America" but also wanted arms from the U.S. and TOW anti-tank missiles from Israel," the report quotes documents as saying. "In return the Iranians could produce hostages."

McFarlane told Shultz that he "intended to favor going ahead" with the Kinche proposal, the report said. He "gave a positive assessment of the Iranian channel based upon his confidence in his Israeli contacts. Finally, he stated that in the short term, seven hostages might be released...."

Marine Corps charges former embassy guard with spying

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps has charged a former U.S. Embassy security guard with espionage, alleging he provided to Soviet agents the names and photographs of American intelligence agents attached to the embassy staff in Moscow.

In a formal statement of charges released Friday, the Marine Corps also accused Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree of providing the Soviets with descriptions of the floor plans and office assignments for U.S. embassies in Moscow and Vienna, Austria.

The charges against the 25-year-old Lonetree include 19 different violations of the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Among the 19 are a single charge of espionage, which under a law passed last year by Congress now carries a maximum penalty of death.

Matlock nominee

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Friday nominated Jack P. Matlock Jr., one of his top advisers on East-West affairs and a Russian language scholar, as ambassador to the Soviet Union.

Matlock, 57, whose nomination must be confirmed by the Senate, would replace Arthur A. Hartman, who stepped down as envoy to Moscow after serving through most of the Reagan administration.

Blood test can detect pesticide poisonings

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Farmers with flu-like symptoms actually may be suffering from pesticide contamination, but a widely available blood test can help pinpoint the problem, experts say.

"I am a farmer says, 'Gee, I had the flu all summer,' when I fact had been poisoned," said Mike Hard of the DeKalb County Farm Bureau. "This test detects it quickly, so the farmers can get prompt diagnosis and treatment."

far greater to the applicator than to anyone else."

The experts say no one knows the long-term effects of such chemicals.

The test can detect exposure to a variety of insecticides, notably organophosphates, used by farmers to keep bugs from destroying their crops. It does not work for herbicides, which control weeds.

Bob Frazee, a farm adviser for Marshall and Putnam counties who started Illinois' testing program in 1981, says the test is as important to farmers as seatbelts are to motorists.

The initial blood test, measuring an individual's normal level of the enzyme cholinesterase, is done during the winter when farmers are not exposed to insecticides.

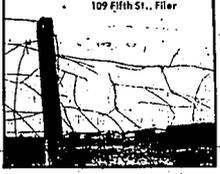

If flu symptoms occur after exposure and a followup test shows the enzyme level has dropped, the problem is pesticides. Treatment usually consists of medication that helps relieve the symptoms quickly.

Symptoms of contamination include headache, nausea, dizziness and fatigue.

John Doull, director of the Center for Environmental and Occupational Health at the University of Kansas, says Friday the test is available to farmers and professional applicators in most states, especially in agricultural areas.

Activists plan for 3rd round

ATLANTA (AP) — Forsyth County is targeted for a third straight weekend of civil rights activity as plans were announced Friday for a group of people from Atlanta to attend church services in the all-white community.

"We would not like for Sunday's activity to be defined as a demonstration... but a humane association," the Rev. Hosea Williams said at a morning news conference in front of the crypt of the civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

On Jan. 17, Williams and Congressman Dean Carter led a group of about 75 marchers into the county, where they were met by about 400 Ku Klux Klan-led counterdemonstrators, some of whom threw rocks, bottles and mud.

An estimated 25,000 counterdemonstrators returned to the county seat of Cumming Jan. 24 in a "March Against Fear and Intimidation" that was greeted by more than 20,000 counterdemonstrators.

GREEN PEPPERS

In the season of the common cold, it's a wise provider who puts green bell peppers on the menu. So say the medics. Hardly anything beats pepper for vitamin C.

Q. What's the most crowded city in the most crowded county in the most crowded state in the nation?
A. West New York, N.J.

At one Chicago restaurant, anybody who shows up with divorce papers signed that day, gets a meal.

The East Room of the White House is notable for this, too: It's where Abigail Adams, the first First Lady to live there, hung the family wash.

Owls outlive elephants.

LEFT HAND

Among all college undergraduates, 9.38 percent are left-handed. Among college music majors, 14.89 percent are left-handed. Coincidence? And How come northbound robins average 50 miles a day while southbound robins only average 30 miles a day?

These cities are identified with one state each: New York, Washington, Philadelphia, St. Louis and Kansas City. Put "Greater" in front of each name, and each then becomes identified with two states.

DUNCAN AGAIN

Were you aware that the fellow who reintroduced the Yo-Yo in 1920 Donald P. Duncan, Jr. was the same citizen who invented the parking meter?

Don't admit you're fat. Say: "I'm short for my weight!"

Once there was no such thing as hand luggage. In the two classes — the Rich and the Poor — the Poor couldn't afford to travel, and the Rich had servants. Then the Middle Class came along with enough money to travel but not enough to hire help. So somebody invented the carpetbag. This was the first hand luggage.

Some business brains say you need 20,000 middle class residents within a four-mile radius to support a good restaurant.

Giovanni Assisi spoke Francis so well his peers called him Francis — and eventually Saint Francis.

Arrest orders out for coup ringleaders

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The military chief of staff Friday ordered a general and three other officers arrested as ringleaders of this week's attempted coup. A new crisis arose when Communist rebels formally broke off peace talks.

Government officials believe this week's attempt was aimed at restoring former President Ferdinand E. Marcos to power. Marcos said from exile in Hawaii that the U.S. government had prevented him from returning to the Philippines at the request of President Corazon Aquino's administration.

Gen. Fidel V. Ramos said warrants were issued against Brig. Gen. Jose Zúñel, Col. Rolando Abadilla, Lt. Col. Reynaldo Cabanatan, and Maj. Antonio Baquiran in last Tuesday's attempt to capture military and media centers around the capital.

The armed forces press office said the four remain at large.

Government TV said Justice Minister Nephtali Gonzales ordered rebellion charges filed against 55 civilians who took part in the 61-hour occupation of Channel 7 television building, the only target the rebels actually managed to seize.

Zúñel, brother of Communist rebel negotiator Antonio Zúñel, and Abadilla, an intelligence officer based in Legazpi City, were key figures in an unsuccessful coup last July which took place at the Manila Hotel.

On Friday night, troops were placed on their lightly armed two hours earlier than usual at an air base targeted in this week's attempted coup. Officers at the gate of Villamor Air Base near Manila International Airport refused to say why the alert started at 8:30 p.m. instead of 10:30 p.m., but a shopkeeper nearby said the start of the alert coincided with two bursts of gunfire.

Mrs. Aquino, facing the gravest crises of her 11 months in office, campaigned Friday in the cities of Davao, General Santos and Cebu for her new constitution. Filipinos vote Monday on ratifying the charter, a move regarded as a test of Mrs. Aquino's government.

At each stop, the 54-year-old president vowed tough punishment for coup participants. She scoffed at reports that Marcos would try to return.

Ramos said 13 officers, 359 enlisted men and 137 civilians were held in connection with the coup attempt, which ended Thursday when the last holdouts surrendered at the building housing both Channel 7 and ZENB radio. As her government quashed the right-wing challenge, the Communist National Democratic Front announced it was pulling out of peace talks.

That raised fears of renewed fighting between the military and the 23,500-member New People's Army after a 60-day cease-fire expires on Feb. 8.

Negotiations had been suspended indefinitely Jan. 22 because of death threats against both negotiating teams.

The National Democratic Front said Friday that the military's killing of at least 12 protesters at Mendiolá Bridge on Jan. 22 "made us realize the futility of pursuing the peace talks at present." The statement was distributed at a rally for victims of a protest march for land reform that day near the presidential palace.

Chief government negotiator Teotisto Guingona said he was not informed officially of the Front's decision. He said it "could have tremendous consequences" if it leads to new fighting in the 18-year Marxist rebellion.

Peace with the Communists was a major goal of the Aquino government and the cornerstone of her national reconciliation policy.

Heavy security was enforced Friday for her final stop at Cebu City, 360 miles southeast of Manila, where she addressed about 30,000 people at a sports stadium. Three helicopter gunships escorted her helicopter on landing and takeoff.

Members of the local military honor guard were disarmed, and riot police studied to restrain the crowd from approaching her helicopter.

Presidential security guards, who normally keep pistols tucked out of sight, openly displayed semi-automatic rifles.

Woman dies in fire at Moscow hotel

MOSCOW (AP) — A fire caused by an overheated television set at the 21-story Hotel Rossiya killed a woman and sent several people to the hospital, Tass said Friday.

Two floors were evacuated, and some guests were removed to safety with ladders.

Tass said the fire began about 4:30 p.m. Thursday in the north wing of the 5,500-room hotel overlooking Red Square.

Botha sets date for white election

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — President P.W. Botha set the date Friday for white parliamentary elections in which his National Party will seek a mandate for the state of emergency and limited race reforms.

He told the opening 1987 session of the three-chamber Parliament for whites, Asians and people of mixed race — that the first white election in six years will be held May 6.

Asian voters and those of mixed race, officially known as "coloreds," vote only in elections for their own chambers. The 24 million people of South Africa's black majority have no national vote. The non-white Parliament chambers were established in 1984 under a new constitution.

Botha's speech gave the outlines of his election campaign, restating Nationalist policies:

- Continuing the state of emergency to quell what the party sees as an attempted revolution by black nationalists and communists in the outlawed African National Congress.
- Gradual changes in racial policy that preserve the rights of whites and other minorities and stop short of "one man, one vote."

Shortly before the president spoke, Foreign Minister R.F. Botha announced the resignation of Denis Worrall, ambassador to Britain. Newspapers said Worrall, 51, was frustrated by the slowness of change and might become an opposition candidate for Parliament.

Cabinet member Chris Heunis said, however, that he and Worrall spoke last month about the ambassador running for the governing party, not against it. Heunis is National Party leader in the Cape.

Memorial backing 'Star Wars' passes

BOISE (AP) — Despite arguments by one legislator that sponsors don't know what they're talking about, the Idaho Legislature again has launched its effort to get involved in national defense policy decisions.

The House State Affairs Committee on Friday gave preliminary approval to a message to Congress supporting President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, dubbed by some the "Star Wars" defense system.

"We simply don't know what in the world we are talking about," said Rep. Dean Haugenson, R-Coeur d'Alene, who served notice he would oppose the memorial. It was approved for printing and introduction.

Similar memorials have been passed by the Idaho House and allowed to die quietly in the Idaho Senate.

Undaunted, Rep. Jerry Callen, R-Jerome, launched a new effort on Friday. He distributed to committee members an article by conservative spokesman Phyllis Schlafly, entitled, "We Must Deploy SDI Now."

The only thing crazier than relying on Phyllis Schlafly as a defense expert is the Idaho Legislature to serve as an expert on national defense policy," said Haugenson.

"This is a waste of time and paper and I wish we'd quit doing it," he said.

Callen, while admitting he didn't know everything about how the weapon system works, said he was supporting the President's request for financing the laser-beam defense system.

"The cost is tremendous, but what is the cost of freedom?" he said.

Lottery approval likely

BOISE (AP) — The state lottery initiative passed by voters last year probably will be declared unconstitutional, but the Legislature is likely to approve a constitutional lottery bill, House Speaker Tom Boyd says.

Boyd said Thursday he's skeptical of the value of a lottery and would prefer that Idaho participate in a multistate lottery rather than run its own.

He said a constitutional amendment allowing a lottery would "sneak through" the Idaho House, where it narrowly failed last year. That defeat spawned the initiative.

Boyd was interviewed for KTVB's Viewpoint program to be telecast this weekend.

"Talk about a waste of money, that is one," Boyd said of the initiative, which is being challenged in court. "From what I understand, it is not constitutionally sound. But it at least gave us a good sign how people in the state feel about a lottery."

The lottery issue passed with 60.2 percent of the vote.

A proposed constitutional amendment to allow lotteries has been introduced in the Senate and is awaiting action by that chamber's State Affairs Committee.

Boyd also said he is pleased with the resolution of the issue of size and siting of a new maximum-security prison.

Legislative log

By The Associated Press
Confirmed By Senate
 Mark Richardson as director of the Department of Law Enforcement, introduced in House.

HB122 (State Affairs) — Memorial to president and Congress urging adoption of Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars" defense system.

HB96 (Revenue and Taxation) — Requires electors in school elections to be registered voters; provides that approval of a school plant facilities levy for 5 years or less may be by simple majority.

HB77 (Business) — Deletes requirement that a closed bank must be a party to sale of the bank at a court hearing.

HB98 (Business) — Allows credit unions to merge, with approval of director of Department of Finance.

HB99 (Business) — Deletes obsolete statutes and corrects typographical and other errors in code sections covering those persons who conduct business under guidelines of the Securities Act.

HB100 (Business) — Requires state agency to provide economic impact on businesses of new state regulations; requires that number of affected entities, businesses and industries be listed; describes alternatives which were considered and reason why rejected.

HB101 (Judiciary, Rules and Administration) — Provides that death of a section allowing fines under the Crime Victims Compensation Act for those convicted of crimes.

HB102 (Judiciary, Rules and Administration) — Expands scope of what constitutes the crime of sexual abuse of a child under the age of 16 years.

HB103 (Judiciary, Rules and Administration) — Provides that boards of community guardian may be created by order from county commission rather than from chief judge of a judicial district.

SB1043 (Transportation) — Requires commercial bus operators to provide minimum 15-minute terminal delays along regularly scheduled routes.

SB1044 (Transportation) — Raises the legal drinking age from 19 to 21 but calls for repeal if the U.S. Supreme Court upholds a South Dakota challenge to that federal mandate.

SB1045 (Commerce and Labor) — Allows notice of claim for death or disablement due to asbestosis or berylliosis to be filed within one year.

Wadkins takes over Pebble Beach lead

By BOB GREEN
The Associated Press

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Lanny Wadkins chipped in for a birdie on his final hole and took a one-shot lead over Payne Stewart Friday after two rounds of the $600,000 Pebble Beach National Pro-Am golf tournament.

LANNY WADKINS
Birdie on final hole

1977 PGA champion got that course "like it" and liked the idea of going back to it two days in a row.

His 20-25 foot chip that found the cup on his final hole at Spyglass gave him the lead over Stewart, who was playing in the same foursome and completed 58 holes in 138.

Stewart also had a 59 at Spyglass, perhaps the most difficult of the three courses and one which Wadkins said "was like playing a swamp. It's just not a playable golf course."

Steady overnight rains lifted in mid-morning, but left pools and puddles of casual water on fairways and in the bunkers on all three courses. Japanese veteran Isao Aoki, Danny Edwards and former British Open champion Sandy Lyle of Scotland were at 139, two shots back. Aoki had a 70 and Lyle 71, both at Pebble Beach. Edwards shot 63 at Cypress Point.

ing 67 and was well back at 145. Included in his 78 was an 8 on the last hole, where his third shot bounced off a tree, hit his caddy and caused a 2-shot penalty.

Tom Watson, twice a winner of this event when it was known as the Crosby, slipped to a 74 in the mud at Spyglass and took a 143 total into the last two rounds at Pebble Beach.

PGA title-holder Bob Tway also was at 143 after a 71 at Pebble Beach. Masters champ Jack Nicklaus could do no better than 144, par 72 at Spyglass and was at 144.

Wadkins, who started play from the 10th tee in a drizzling rain, backhanded a 3-inch birdie putt into the cup on the 17th to go one under for the day.

Wadkins put a birdie-ledge finish on a 3-under-par 69 at tough Spyglass Hill and completed 36 holes in 137, seven under par.

"I've hit the ball close a lot, and I've been driving it right down the middle. Actually, it's been a pretty easy seven under," Wadkins said.

Under the format that calls for the pros to play one round at each of three Monterey Peninsula courses, he now faces the final two rounds at Pebble Beach, which he called "one of my favorites." "It's the best of the three courses," said Wadkins, who won the

Rozelle ends contact between Parcells, Atlanta

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle put an end to the Friday to other "contacts" between the Atlanta Falcons and the agent for Bill Parcells, who coached the New York Giants to their first Super Bowl victory a week ago.

Pro football

Rozelle, speaking at a news conference at the Pro Bowl in Honolulu, confirmed that Robert Fraley, Parcells' agent, had called him Thursday after New York General Manager George Young denied him permission to talk to the Falcons about a joint coach and general manager's job.

Rozelle said the Giants' refusal: "This ended it."

It also ended a one-day flurry of activity that marked the first of the inevitable disruptions that seem to beset a Super Bowl champion. On Friday, two newspapers reported the contacts between the Falcons and Parcells, whose Giants beat the

BILL PARCELLS
Contract in force

Denver Broncos 39-20 in the Super Bowl last Sunday.

Parcells has two years remaining on a four-year contract that pays him a reported $300,000 a year. Atlanta was reportedly willing to pay $4.5 million over five years for a combined coach-general manager and if nothing else, any offer might give Parcells a wedge for re-opening his own contract.

Moreover, Parcells has not always seen eye-to-eye with Young and was close to being replaced after he was 3-12-1 in 1983. Since then, he has gone 32-12-1, capped by a 17-2 year and the NFL title last year.

Parcells and the Falcons had no comment on the reports although Young in effect confirmed them when he said:

"This isn't proper procedure. We've had a pretty good relationship with the Falcons. I don't understand this. I'd like the Falcons to tell me what they're doing."

Rozelle, however, said he had talked to Rankin Smith Jr., the Falcons' president, who had said Parcells was not on his list of prospective coaches. He said that both Smith and Atlanta's president Wellington Mara were satisfied with the situation.

"It seems it was a case of the agent more or less pushing the situation on his own," Rozelle said, who added that Fraley had asked him to intervene in the matter. "I told the agent, 'nope, that's it," he said.

The flap over the Atlanta offer puts the Giants on track to follow last year's champions, the Chicago Bears.

Two days after Chicago's victory, defensive coordinator Buddy Ryan left to become coach of the Philadelphia Eagles, taking four other Chicago assistants with him.

Playing without injured quarterback Jim McMahon, most of this season, Chicago went 14-2 against a soft schedule but was eliminated by Washington in the first round of the playoffs.

Atlanta has been without a coach since Dan Henning was fired following a 7-8-1 season. Since then, former Philadelphia Coach Dick Vermeil and UCLA Coach Terry Donahue have turned down offers from the Falcons and Henning, one of Parcells' closest friends, has been hired as an assistant offensive coach with Washington.

NFL closes books on '86-'87 season Sunday

By KEN PETERS
The Associated Press

HONOLULU — Six months and 24 games later, the NFL finally will close the book on football for 1986.

The Pro Bowl, final chapter of the campaign that began with exhibition games in July, will be played Sunday at 4 p.m. EST in Aloha Stadium.

While the league's annual all-star game may seem anticlimactic after the hype and hoopla of the Super Bowl, most of the players seem to enjoy the trip to Hawaii with its "short workouts that afford lots of leisure time, and the game itself.

"I had no reservations at all about coming here," said linebacker Harry Carson of the Super Bowl champion New York Giants. "I've got the whole offseason to rest up."

"This has always been an honor," added Carson, who will be playing in his eighth Pro Bowl. "I even thought about this game at the Super Bowl... after we went up by two touchdowns."

"I think everybody wants to play in this game," Los Angeles Raiders defensive end Howie Long said, some guys don't get into the playoffs, and this is like their playoffs."

"Maybe this game is a blessing in disguise," said Denver defensive end

Rulon Jones, reflecting back on the Broncos' 39-20 loss to the Giants in Pasadena, Calif., last Sunday.

"You always remember your last game of the season, and if you play well in it, you finish with a positive feeling."

Denver quarterback John Elway admitted he was a little weary of football after the long grind of the exhibition and regular seasons, the playoffs and the Super Bowl.

"This is our 24th game coming up," he said. "But it's nice to be here."

Giants' linebacker Lawrence Taylor said he views the Pro Bowl trip as a vacation.

"The game is pretty much secondary to me," said Taylor, who will be making his sixth appearance all-star appearance.

"It's the best of the AFC and the best of the NFC meeting in one place for a week and having a good time."

"You're out to show what you've got against the best players in the game, but I'd like to come out here and have a good time and not play a game."

"I'm tired of playing football. We've been playing for 27 weeks (including camp) and that's long enough."

NYAC faces shakeup over Witherspoon-Smith

By WALLACE MATTHEWS
Newsday

NEW YORK — The chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission said that he would ask for the resignations of three members of the commission Friday in connection with alleged wrongdoing in the Dec. 12 World Boxing Association heavyweight title fight between Tim Witherspoon and James "Bonecrusher" Smith at Madison Square Garden here.

Athletic administrative assistant Jackie Graham, office manager Henry Sanchez and inspector Michael Weisberg will be asked to resign "for not complying with the rules and regulations of the New York State Athletic Commission," according to the chairman, Jose Torres.

Boxing

Torres' actions coincide with the conclusion of a state inspector general's office investigation of the commission, which investigated irregularities in the Witherspoon-Smith fight, particularly the fact that both fighters were managed by Carl King and promoted by Don King.

Graham, working at ringside at the Felt Forum here Thursday night, said, "I've been told that I'll be asked to resign, but I can't comment until then."

But an anonymous source said that Graham was also being blamed for the botched drug test given to Witherspoon after the fight, which was announced as a positive for marijuana a few days after the fight. Two days later, Torres announced a mistake had been made and that Witherspoon was clean.

Torres said that despite the apparent wrongdoing of his subordinates, he would not consider resigning his $56,649 a year post, to which he was automatically reappointed for three years on Jan. 1.

"I delegate responsibility to my people," Torres said. "It would be absolutely unfair for me to have to pay for their mistakes."

It is a violation of commission rule for a person to manage more than one fighter on the same card, without the permission of the chairman. No such permission was granted for the Dec. 12 fight, and Torres did not even know of Carl King's involvement with both fighters until it was called to his attention by deputy commissioner Marvin Kohn two days before the fight. The final report was submitted this week to New York Gov. Mario Cuomo by Inspector General Joseph Spinelli, but no details will be made public until next week.

NHL exiles former LA coach Quinn from league until 1990

MONTREAL (AP) — National Hockey League president John Ziegler has banned former Los Angeles coach Pat Quinn from coaching in the NHL until the 1990-91 season and fined the Vancouver Canucks and the Kings a total of $440,000, the league said Friday.

Quinn was also barred from all league activities until after this June's annual NHL meeting.

Quinn, in the last year of a three-year pact with Los Angeles, was expelled from the league last month because he had accepted money from the Canucks to become their general manager next season, while still coaching the Kings.

Quinn, 43, had accepted a $100,000 signing bonus from Vancouver.

Ziegler's new ruling appears to clear the way for Quinn to assume his new duties with the Canucks after the June meetings.

The NHL president fined the Canucks $310,000 and the Kings $130,000 for their actions involving Quinn's signing with Vancouver, as well as the payment of money to Quinn by Vancouver and the fact he continued to coach the Kings after being expelled.

The fines were the maximum allowed by league bylaws.

Quinn can appeal his suspensions,

Hockey

"It is my desire to impart two thoughts to the fans who support our team, to our players, coaches and everyone within our organization," Kings owner Jerry Buss said.

"First, I'm extremely disappointed and I plan to appeal this decision immediately. This is the first time, to my knowledge, that an innocent bystander has been fined for the actions of others. I am confident that the fine to the Los Angeles Kings will be dismissed.

"Second, I have confidence in the NHL's procedures for a fair hearing and the results which will be reached in the order of Quinn to the Associated Press Friday in a telephone interview. "I fully intend to pursue all appropriate remedies which are afforded to me. My legal counsel is currently reviewing the order and until that is completed it would be imprudent for me to comment any further. I'd like to read it myself first and I don't have it in my hands. Apparently it will arrive sometime tomorrow."

In his 21-page ruling, Ziegler lamented the incident, but said he had no choice but to act.

"Can any of us really believe," said the president, "that the NHL would not have been the laughing stock of professional sports had it permitted Super Bowl XXI to go forward with the existing coaches in the Denver coach and months before agreed to become the president and general manager of the Giants and had accepted $100,000 in consideration thereof?"

each day Quinn coached the Kings after they learned he had signed with Vancouver.

Ziegler said $115,000 of the Los Angeles fine and $250,000 of the Vancouver fine won't be payable until June 1, to allow the teams to apply for a rehearing of their case.

However, the Canucks' application won't be considered unless it has been endorsed by the Kings, Ziegler said.

The president said the participants believed they were acting legally, but "it is clear that at some point everyone forgot the essential and crucial element of the professional sports business — to wit — the integrity of competition."

Quinn's expulsion from all activities means he can't perform any general managerial functions, such as planning the Canucks' schedule for the next amateur draft, which is part of the June meeting. Nor can he make trades or negotiate with players until after that meeting.

Among the fines levied Friday, the Canucks were penalized $100,000 for each day the Kings were coached by Quinn from the date he reached an agreement in principle to join the Canucks until the day he was expelled from the league.

Foster beats Nehemiah second time

NEW YORK (AP) — Greg Foster scored his second straight victory over archrival Reneado Nehemiah, winning the men's 60-yard high hurdles with a late burst, and Lee McRae easily beat Carl Lewis in the 60-yard dash Friday night in the Millrose Games at Madison Square Garden.

Foster, ranked No. 1 in the world in the 110-meter high hurdles — a spot that Nehemiah had occupied before leaving track in 1982 for the San Francisco 49ers of the NFL — was clocked in 6.98 seconds in winning the event for the fourth time in five years and the fifth time overall.

It was only the seventh victory for Foster in 36 meetings against Nehemiah indoors and outdoors. Including one dead-heat tie since their confrontation in 1972. The two had met for the first time this year two weeks ago at Los Angeles — where Nehemiah made his first indoor appearance in five years — and Foster won handily over 60 meters in 7.36. Nehemiah finished third.

This time, the race was close until the final hurdle, when Foster, who in the past often had been psyched out by Nehemiah, took command.

Nehemiah finished second in 7.02, and was followed by NCAA champion Keith Talley of dead-heat tie since their confrontation in 1972. The two had met for the first time this year two weeks ago at Los Angeles — where Nehemiah made his first indoor appearance in five years — and Foster won handily over 60 meters in 7.36. Nehemiah finished third.

Afterward, Foster virtually dismissed his rivalry with Nehemiah.

"I'm out there watching myself and myself only," Foster said. "I'm the only one running as far as I'm concerned."

"Long ago, I worried about the competition," he added. "Now, I'm just worried about winning and losing. When I worry about beating someone, I lose everything."

"As far as the rivalry is concerned, I think it's good for the sport. It brings out the crowd and makes it a quality race."

Foster also said he "ran a terrible race," because he was "bothered by stomach cramps."

Nehemiah said: "I did everything to lose. I lost sight of everything I had to do."

"I ran in everybody else's lane," he continued. "I had a lot of power and speed but no control."

In the men's dash, McRae, of the University of Pittsburgh and holder of the world indoor best of 6.60, was out of the blocks first and never relinquished the lead, clocking 6.12.

Lewis, winner of four gold medals in the 1984 Olympics and holder of the world indoor best of 6.60, was out of the blocks first and never seriously challenged and finished second in 6.14.

Among those who were beaten in the heats and failed to make the six-man final in the men's 60 were Calvin Smith, the world outdoor record holder at 100 meters, and two-time Olympian Harvey Glance.

Evelyn Ashford and Jeanette Bolden, who share the world indoor best in the women's 60-yard dash, also failed to make the final, won for the second straight year by Gwen Torrence of the University of Georgia, in 6.63.

Ashford, a double Olympic gold medalist in 1984 and the world record holder in the women's 100, never has won a Millrose sprint — one of the few titles that has eluded her during her illustrious career.

She placed fourth in her heat, while Bolden was fifth.

Torrence, the NCAA champion, edged Nellie Fiere-Cooman of The Netherlands, the European indoor champion, by one-hundredths of a second in a struggle to the tape.

The women's 60-yard hurdles final also was missing two of its top entrants — Stephanie Hightower-Letwlich and Candy Young, who had set a world indoor best of 7.37 in finishing in a dead-heat in this meet in 1982.

Both failed to get out of the heats. Hightower-Letwlich, a five-time Millrose winner, placing fourth in her heat, and Young, a former NCAA champion, finishing sixth.

In their absence, LaVonna Martin, the Southern Conference champion from Tennessee, won in a hand-timed 7.5, edging world heptathlon record holder Jackie Joyner-Kersey, clocked in 7.6.

Buhl, Jerome girls square off

JEROME — Buhl High School's girls' basketball team A-2 wrap up the regular-season championship of District 4 Class A-2 here tonight and the top seed and first-round bye in next week's postseason tournament by beating Jerome.

For their part, the Tigers — who lost to Buhl 37-33 in Buhl on Dec. 17 — can nail down a tie with the Inklins atop District 4 with a win. That would force the heading of next week's round-robin district tournament into a tiebreaker.

There are only three A-2 teams in District 4. Buhl, which is 12-7 for the season, has a 2-0 record against district A-2 competition. Jerome, which will go tonight's game with a 9-10 overall mark, is 1-1 in district competition.

Game time is 8 p.m. in the Jerome High gym.

Throwers' clinic canceled

TWIN FALLS — A throwers' clinic scheduled for today sponsored by The Snake River Association of The Athletic Congress has been canceled.

College of Southern Idaho track coach Rick Neill said the clinic was called off because of an illness by the featured clinician, Stewart Toeger.

Morse leads Mazda Classic

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Cathy Morse shot a career-best 68 and came from five strokes off the lead Friday to take a two-shot advantage over Rosie Jones and Becky Pearson after two rounds of the LPGA's $200,000 Mazda Classic.

Morse birdied the last three holes on the 6,472-yard layout at Stonebridge Golf and Country Club to finish with a 6-under-par score that equaled a year-old course record set by Patty Sheehan and Barb Thomas. She finished the day with a 36-hole total of 6-under 138.

Jones, who like Morse shot 72 in Thursday's opening round, posted a 68 in warm, sunny weather for a two-day score of 4-under-par 140. She was followed by Pearson, who followed her opening round 68 with a 72 that featured four birdies and four bogeys.

Embattled Rice coach resigns

HOUSTON (AP) — Rice basketball coach Tommy Sultits, whose Owls have compiled a 63-39 record over the last six seasons, announced Friday that he is resigning.

Sultits, whose team scored just nine first-half points in a Southwest Conference game this week, voluntarily stepped down from the post he has held since 1981 but he did not immediately say what his plans are.

The Owls, 1-7 in SWC play and 7-12 overall this season, shot just 19 percent in the first half of Wednesday's game against Texas Christian.

A's trade for Cey

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland A's traded infielder Luis Quiñones to the Chicago Cubs on Friday for third baseman Ron Cey, who they said will spare the designated hitter's duties with Reggie Jackson.

Cey played the past four seasons for the Cubs after spending 10 years with the Los Angeles Dodgers. The right-handed hitting slugger has 312 career home runs and 1,128 runs batted in.

Last year, Cey hit .273 with 13 homers and 36 runs batted in in 97 games. He turns 39 on Feb. 15.

Cey is guaranteed $50,000 in 1987 as final payment on the five-year contract he signed with the Cubs in 1983. No details were released on how the two clubs are splitting the payment.

The slug-hitting Quiñones, 24, a native of Puerto Rico, was reacquired by the A's in December after spending the 1986 season with the San Francisco Giants, where he hit .179 with no homers and 11 RBI in 71 games. Originally signed by San Diego, he spent time in the A's in 1983 before playing in the Cleveland and San Francisco organizations.

McKinney third at worlds

CRANS-MONTANA, Switzerland (AP) — Erika Hess of Switzerland clinched her third consecutive gold medal in the combined and record fifth overall with a controlled but quick downhill run at the Alpine Ski World Championships Friday.

The 24-year-old Hess, competing in her fourth and probably last world championship, finished third in the downhill and with her third place in Thursday's slalom portion, retained the title.

Sylvia Eder of Austria took the silver medal, while Tamara McKinney of the United States won the bronze.

Jury awards $5 million more

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A San Diego Superior Court Jury Thursday awarded another $5 million to former San Diego Chargers owner Gene Klein in his civil lawsuit against Al Davis, the managing general partner of the Los Angeles Raiders.

The award brings to more than $10 million the jury has awarded Klein in his malicious prosecution case.

Klein claimed a near-fatal heart attack he suffered in 1981 was brought on by being named an individual defendant in Davis' antitrust lawsuit against the National Football League. The jury voted 9-3 the minimum number of votes required — to award the punitive damages.

Dave Stoddard, C.P.A. with information about the new tax laws.
"Interest expense will be broken into four categories; mortgage, investment, business, consumer. Mostly, home mortgage interest is still fully allowed. Consumer interest like auto and personal loans will be phased out over 5 years. Business loan interest is still fully deductible, and investment interest is deductible under certain guidelines."

THE ACES®

BOBBY WOLFF

"With man, most of his misfortunes are occasioned by man."
— Pliny the Elder.

Who gets the blame for allowing today's game to make? Study the defense closely to see if you can spot the blunder.

West cashed his diamond king and reasoned that his best shot lay with scoring two spade tricks. If East held a quick entry in either clubs or hearts, West could beat four hearts, given a little luck in distribution.

Accordingly, West shifted to his spade queen at trick two, dummy's king winning as East and South played low. Trumps were drawn, the club nine lost to East's king, and the game was now in jeopardy. However, when East returned the spade 10, West could not afford to overtake. West's setting spade trick went begging, and South scored his game and rubber.

Where did the defense go wrong?

It was an excellent choice for West to lead his spade queen! (A low one of ace and another would not succeed). The crime came when East held on to his blocking spade 10. Had he tossed it under the spade king, he could have later led his six, and West would have collected two spade winners instead of one.
