Some U.S.-Soviet arms accords appear close, ambassador believes

Los Angeles Times

MOSCOW — Departing U.S. Ambassador Arthur A. Hartman said Wednesday that some Soviet-American arms control agreements are "practically within reach" if the Kremlin would drop its demand for a package deal that would include restrictions on the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative.

Hartman also urged Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to visit the United States this year even if there is no accord on reduction of nuclear weapons.

In an unusual on-the-record news conference, the retiring American diplomat praised the Soviet leadership for "improvements—in some aspects of human rights but said there had been no progress in other areas.

Gorbachev may unveil some new arms control ideas Monday when he speaks before 550 foreign delegates at a Moscow forum on a nuclear-free world, Hartman said.

Some "headway has been made at the Geneva arms talks, he said, by defining differences between the two sides—

But Hartman, who was one of President Reagan's team of advisers at the summit meeting with Gorbachev in Reykjavik, Iceland, last October, said it was possible to make agreements in two major areas — strategic missiles and medium-range missiles.

"There are elements of this that are practically within reach today, and we should go for them," he said.

He mentioned a 50 percent cut in Soviet and American strategic missiles and elimination of medium-range missiles by both sides in Europe, with each side allowed to keep 100 of the latter on its own territory.

"They would be good agreements," Hartman said, but he recalled that Gorbachev had linked agreements on those two areas to strict curbs on research on Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, the space-based missile defense system also known as "Star Wars."

"They have not broken that linkage," he said, although he added that Soviet scientists had shown greater flexibility in discussing ways to curtail Star Wars research without stopping the program entirely.

On other topics, Hartman:

- Welcomed the Soviet government's recent release of 140 political prisoners as "a step in the right direction, no doubt about it."
- Reported that about half the cases on the U.S. Embassy's list of divided families had been solved by the Soviets' granting of exit visas to Soviet citizens with relatives in the United States. However, in the case of Americans — those known as "divided spouses"—there are still "12—hard cases" that show little movement.
- Hartman, a career Foreign Service officer, resigned his post after 5½ years in Moscow to return to private life. Reagan has nominated Jack F. Matlock Jr., a member of the National Security Council staff, to replace him.

Permanent sales tax moving toward vote

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — There's been a lot of talk of taxes in the 1987 Idaho Legislature.

That could change. Wednesday, the House Revenue and Taxation Committee gave quick approval to what could be the first major tax bill enacted this session.

The measure is expected to be ready for final action on Monday. Most legislators predict it will pass easily.

It makes the state's permanent sales tax rate 5 percent — an increase from the official 4 percent rate now in effect, but one not likely to bother many purchasers. Five percent has been the temporary tax rate for the last year.

"I think will pass," said House Speaker Tom Boyd, R-Geneseo.

"Almost everyone has been saying since last October that we need the 5 percent rate."

It didn't take the Revenue and Taxation Committee long to approve the sales tax bill Wednesday morning.

Chairman Rep. Steve Antone

R-Rupert, told committee members the bill raises about $61 million in additional state revenue.

Most of it, $53 million, goes into the general state treasury. Antone said another $8 million to $9½ million goes to the cities and counties through a revenue-sharing formula.

The only dissenting vote came from Rep. Boyd Hill, R-Meridian. He complained that the committee spent more time working over his relatively minor bill earlier in the day than it spent on a major tax bill.

Work continued on another major tax bill, repeal of the investment tax credit. Boyd said it was his intention to have a House committee take up that proposal from Gov. Cecil An-

It could come up for final action in Revenue and Taxation early next week.

Andrus, who has been working for support outside the Legislature for repeal of the investment credit, picked up another ally in the Department of Commerce, which earlier urged retention of the credit, reversed itself Tuesday and joined Andrus' side.

But endorsing such a repeal is intended only as a last alternative to funding of education and the Idaho Department of Commerce, said Nevalon Lang, chamber president.

The chamber still urges Andrus and the Legislature to seek a more "broad-based" support for education and the Commerce agency, said Lang.

The chamber announced earlier it was in favor of keeping the investment credit, saying repeal would be harmful to economic development.

But on a visit to the Legislature last week, the Lewiston chamber came under a lot of pressure for its stand.

Lang indicated that pressure from representatives of Lewis-Clark State College influenced the board's decision.

Rumblings of trade persistent

BEIRUT — Newspapers in London and Israel said Wednesday secret talks were going on for a major swap that would free foreign hostages in Lebanon in exchange for 400 Arab prisoners.

Lebanese Shiite leader Nabih Berri said there were no talks yet but indications were positive.

Berri, head of the mainstream Shiite movement Amal, made the original proposal on Saturday, setting off a frenzy of rumors, reports and speculation on the hostage crisis.

Berri, who is also Lebanon's justice minister, proposed that Israel free 400 Arab prisoners. In return, Amal would return a captured Israeli airman—and a Moslem extremist organization would free the four kidnaped captives.

Air Force picks MX rail bases

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Air Force has selected 10 additional bases in eight states stretching from Louisiana to Washington for consideration as "garrisons" for giant MX missiles that would be placed on rail cars, the Pentagon said Wednesday.

A review of the 10 bases on environmental and operational grounds will start by January 1988 with a goal of filing environmental-impact studies by late 1988 or early 1989, the announcement said.

The studies "will support both environmental and design activities," the Air Force said Wednesday, adding that environmental study would be performed for that base as well.

The Air Force and Pentagon had previously announced the first rail cars carrying MX missiles, assuming the plan goes forward, would be based at F.E. Warren AFB in Wyoming.

The selection of that base as the initial home for rail-mobile MX missiles has not changed, the Air Force said Wednesday, adding that environmental study would be performed for that base as well.

Fog-borne pesticides may be threat to trees

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Pesticides and other manufactured chemicals can concentrate in fog and may pose a hazard to trees and other plants, but probably not people, researchers say.

Fog from California and Maryland showed traces of 16 pesticides, sometimes at 100 times to 1,000 times the concentrations commonly reported for pesticides and similar chemicals in rain water from other locations, the researchers reported in Thursday's issue of the British journal Nature.

The reason for the higher concentration in fog droplets is not known, said study co-author Dwight Giotfel-

AMA executive argues for keeping AIDS histories secret

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — The public has no right to know that entertainer Liberace had AIDS or that a hospital doctor suffers from the deadly disease, a top executive of the American Medical Association said Wednesday.

The medical history of a patient, even one who is a public figure or a doctor, should be confidential unless the individual's condition poses a threat to society, said Dr. James S. Todd.

A different view was offered by Dennis O'Leary, President Reagan's attending physician when Reagan was the victim of an assassination attempt and now head of the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals.

"Anytime you become a public figure, you do yield some of your right to privacy," O'Leary said.

Todd, senior deputy executive vice president of the Chicago-based AMA, discussed medical records confidentiality with O'Leary and two other panelists who represented hospitals and insurers at the American College of Healthcare Executives' 30th annual meeting.

Todd criticized the media's "insatiable desire to know what's going on."

Nothing casual contact does not spread with AIDS, he also said "a person sitting in the front row of a Las Vegas casino" who shook Liberace's hand doesn't need to know the entertainer suffered from acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

O'Leary said there may be some need for publicity in the case of Liberace's death last week. He cited reports that information may have been improperly withheld on the death certificate.

"We need balance here" in deciding access to confidential information, O'Leary said.

Todd also said the name of a Cook County Hospital doctor with AIDS, suspended last week but later reinstated to restricted duty because of a non-patient contact, should remain confidential.

There's virtually no chance a doctor would transmit the disease to patients if he followed proper guidelines, Todd said, adding it's up to a physician to notify patients "one-on-one."

AIDS destroys the body's immune system, leaving victims prone to life-threatening infection. It is caused by a virus, believed transmitted by blood or semen.

Todd said employers should not have access to an individual's medical records unless the employee or applicant suffers from a disease that could affect job performance. And he said individual health records should be withheld from insurance companies providing group employee coverage.

O'Leary said if an individual tests positive for AIDS antibodies, meaning he has been exposed to the disease, it's the responsibility of the individual — not a hospital or doctor — to report it to the employer or insurance company.

But Todd said such a finding is not an employer's concern, unless the individual's job carries a risk of transmission.

Dole seeks campaign support in Idaho

The Associated Press

BOISE — Republican Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas, presidential aspirations bolstered by opinion support in Iowa, met for over an hour Wednesday with top Idaho Republicans and business leaders, pressing his campaign for support of his potential candidacy.

"I think there was a lot of interest, but we didn't ask anybody to hold up their hands," Dole said after emerging from a private session with top Republican officials and business leaders at the world headquarters of Boise Cascade Corp., four blocks from the state Capitol.

"We'll have to follow up and see how many of them we can get working for us," the 1976 GOP vice presidential nominee and unsuccessful 1980 presidential hopeful said.

Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, R-Boise, and House Speaker Tom Boyd, R-Coeur d'Alene, were favorably impressed by Dole, but were not ready to sign on to his campaign or any other.

"I find most people are keeping their options open at this point," Risch said, but Boyd called Dole "a viable candidate... someone Idaho Republicans can relate to."

SEN. BOB DOLE
...a viable candidate

Dole, who flew into Boise from Olympia, Wash., and was heading on to Kansas City, Mo., Wednesday night, said he would announce formation of a presidential exploratory committee on March 3 and hoped to have steering committee's set up by April 1 in several states, including Idaho. In any formal announcement of his candidacy will be delayed until late summer or fall at the earliest, he said.

Compared to more populous states, Idaho has just a handful of delegates to the nominating convention. But, Dole said, "If you get a good group to support you, it makes a difference" in corraling backers elsewhere.

The meeting, organized by Idaho Sen. Steve Symms and at which Boise Cascade Chairman John Fery was host, included Secretary of State Pete Cenarrusa, who as the Idaho chairman for both of President Reagan's successful campaigns turned in the second highest voter percentage for the president in any state in the nation.

Among the others at the session were GOP legislative leaders, state Treasurer Lydia Justice Edwards, Schools Superintendent Jerry Evans, Morrison Knudsen President William Deasy and David Leroy, the party's 1986 gubernatorial candidate.

"It's early on to say, but it appears he has substantial support in the community," Leroy said. "He's getting an early start and that's good for his potential candidacy."

Dole, the Republican leader in the Senate, was scheduled to be in St. Louis on Thursday and then to make several stops in Iowa, where he finished first among all the potential Republican hopefuls in the most recent Iowa Poll.

But, he said, "I've been around long enough to know you can go down in this business faster than you can go up."

On the Iran-Contra controversy that has begun to haunt the Reagan administration, Dole said he believed it would be behind both the president and the Republican Party by the heat of the 1988 campaign and not be a factor.

It was his second trip to Idaho in less than a year. Dole, whose wife Elizabeth is Reagan's Transportation Secretary, came to the state last spring to help bolster state GOP prospects in the statewide election.

'Brew pubs' sponsor offers a taste test

BOISE (AP) — A dozen lawmakers were treated to a beer-tasting outing sponsored by Rep. Phil Childers, R-Boise, who took up one of the lobbyist's oldest tools, alcohol.

Childers' bill to allow establishment of "brew pubs," small breweries offering beer for sale on the premises or at one other location, passed the House by a wide margin in last week and is in the Senate State Affairs Committee.

Beers from three Idaho brewers — Terry Dennis of Boise, Gordon Gammell of Sun Valley and Steve Knudsen of Boise — were offered to lawmakers and lobbyists at a Boise restaurant Tuesday.

Childers is a homebrewer himself and boasted of the quality of the beers, ranging from light to dark in color and flavor.

"Real people drink beer," Sen. Mike Blackbird, D-Kellogg, said. "It's not elitist. It fits the middle class very well, and that's what we are here in Idaho."

Rep. Dorothy McCann, D-Wallace, recalled the days when Wallace had its own brewery, Sunset Brewing. "It wasn't the best beer in the world. One of the beers was called Idaho Select and popularly known as Idaho Shellac."

"These people have a business idea," Sen. Roger Fairchild said. "They need to remove some roadblocks so they can pursue it. It seems legitimate."

Coalition claims wide support for legal reforms

BOISE (AP) — Idahoans overwhelmingly favor the Idaho Liability Reform Coalition's package of legislation intended to end what officials call "excesses and inequity" in the state's civil justice system.

Coalition Chairman James Weatherly, head of the Association of Idaho Cities, said Monday a survey taken in mid-February shows over 70 percent support for all key elements of the group's proposal, which also has the general support of Gov. Cecil Andrus.

"We have been called a special interest group, but I deny that," Weatherly said of the coalition's 134 member organizations. "We are Idaho."

"When you find Idahoans lining up on the same sides of issues by margins as high as 14-to-one, then it's clear they're telling you that they act on the problem is now," he said. The telephone survey of 600 registered voters, conducted by political pollster Lance Tarrance from Jan. 13-17 for the Idaho Medical Association, wide margins of support for all provisions of the package, introduced in the legislature last week. 77 percent favored basing damage awards on the degree of negligence not the ability to pay, eliminating the so-called "deep pocket" problem that many claim has run up judgments.

82 percent backed reducing the interest rate on unpaid judgments from the current 18 percent to a rate annually adjusted to match the rate allowed on federal securities.

80 percent supported requiring a stricter evidentiary showing to claim punitive damages.

77 percent favored allowing payment of some portions of damages over time rather than in an immediate lump sum.

75 percent backed immunity for unpaid volunteers at nonprofit organizations.

74 percent supported capping noneconomic damages on a scale up to a maximum of $375,000 based on life expectancy.

71 percent backed prohibiting double payments on damage awards.

But the Trial Lawyers Association, which is offering an alternative package, has argued that the problem is not in the court system, particularly since Idaho has seen only a few huge judgments. They contend the problem is the way the insurance companies have managed and invested their premiums so that now those companies are faced with no choice but to send rates spiraling to remain solvent.

Deregulation on move

BOISE (AP) — After many revisions, a bill deregulating much of the telecommunications industry in Idaho has been approved for printing and introduction.

The House State Affairs Committee gave the measure preliminary approval on Wednesday. A full hearing is expected to be scheduled later.

The TRP page bill would allow the Public Utilities Commission to deregulate some phases of the industry, upon a finding that the action would serve the public interest and would not hurt the level of service available.

William Roden, Boise lobbyist who is working on the bill for Mountain Bell, said the latest version incorporated some changes suggested by the cable television industry in Idaho. Based on those changes, Roden said Jean Weston, spokesman for cable television companies, said the cable companies probably will not oppose the legislation.

Roden said the final version attempted to accommodate suggested changes from all interest groups, but acknowledged that it still won't please everyone.

"I'm sure there will be a lot of discussion on it. It is not engraved on stone," he said.

Economic growth to receive boost

REXBURG (AP) — A Madison County commissioner plans to announce appointment of a county economic development board at a meeting here Feb. 23.

Commissioner Bruce Webster said he has contacted several people about serving on a board of six or seven members to encourage county economic growth.

The board could apply for federal grants for county projects, oversee county development and attempt to entice businesses to the county, Webster said.

Among specific projects are a county industrial park, a new station for the county ambulance service, rebuilding the Archer Highway and expansion of the city-county airport.

Black could end up on day care hot seat

If the Idaho Legislature falls once again to pass a day care licensing bill in this session, much of the onus will be on Rep. Ronald Black, R-Twin Falls. Black defeated incumbent Donna Scott in last spring's Republican primary at least in part on his position favoring a day care coalition proposal which would have set up statewide, mandatory licensing. Scott was opposed to the law and said so. But this winter, Black reversed his stand. This week, he came out against the coalition proposal, saying it would be too onerous on day care operators, which he happens to be.

His vote turned out to be a critical one, and the measure lost on a 42-42 tie vote, with Black voting against the proposal. The defeat means a far-weaker Senate version is now the only day care option left in this legislative session. Many consider it nothing less than a legislative whitewash; a bill which will have no real effect. Black now says he supports this Senate version because the sides on this issue are too hardened, and that the Senate version is the only one on which agreement may be possible. He would rather get the weaker bill than none at all.

Tactically, this argument may make sense. Day care is not exactly an unexplored topic in the halls of Boise and perhaps the time has come for all the shouting to stop and for legislators to pass whatever bill they can.

Black will have some explaining to do if the Senate version becomes law, and he will really be on the hot seat if it doesn't.

The evidence suggests that there is strong support in Idaho for some kind of day care licensing.

Black, who made day care an issue in his campaign, has a responsibility in our view to explain how and why he changed from a proponent to an opponent of the bill which would bring the most amount of protection.

Lincoln left nation legacy of tolerance

Most students first learn about Abraham Lincoln in the famous legend of "honest Abe" who walked for miles to return a few pennies. But looking back, we see that perhaps Lincoln's greatest contribution to this nation was his legacy of tolerance and forgiveness. Even as he prosecuted a war that tore this nation apart, he worked to find a common heritage and experience that would bind it together again. At his second inaugural address almost 125 years ago, when the cannons of the civil war were still firing, Lincoln took the opportunity to speak out passionately against the injustice of slavery. But he also tried to instill a sense of compassion in his weary fellow citizens.

He closed his famous speech with the plea: "With malice toward none, with charity for all, let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to bind up the nation's wounds."

Lincoln would be saddened today to witness an upsurge in racism and intolerance around the country: a black man beaten and chased to his death in Howard Beach, N.Y.; the hanging of a black student at the Citadel Academy in South Carolina; the rock throwing by Klan members at a "brotherhood march" in the all white county of Forsyth, Ga.; racial incidents in colleges in New England and elsewhere; attacks on Hasidic Jews in Brooklyn and on Cambodian refugees in Philadelphia.

While racial bigotry is making the headlines, a more subtle kind of intolerance is on the rise behind the scenes. Efforts to censor books and curricula in schools are growing, pursued by those who want to eliminate ideas with which they disagree.

Christy Macy

The notion that public schools are a place for students to be exposed to opposing points of view and to learn about the wide spectrum of cultures and religions that make up America is increasingly under attack.

According to a recent study by People For the American Way, censorship of books and ideas in the classroom has doubled over the past four years. In 1986, there were attempts to remove from the classroom numerous literary classics dealing with minorities, including Harper Lee's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel "To Kill a Mockingbird" and Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn." Alice Walker's prize-winning novel, "The Color Purple," about growing up poor and black in the South, was the target of censorship efforts in two states.

Textbooks encouraging understanding and tolerance are also the subjects of lawsuits. In Alabama, the rock throwing by Klan members at a textbook trial in federal court in Mobile, Ala., objected to a statement in a home economics teaching guide that "people of all races and cultural backgrounds should be shown as having high ideals and goals."

In the recent "Scopes II" trial in Hawkins County Tenn., objections were raised to stories that portrayed Roman Catholicism, Buddhism, and Japanese and Chinese religions. One of the plaintiffs claimed that a passage from "The Diary of Anne Frank" was objectionable because it encouraged religious tolerance. The series was also criticized because it gave students "a sense of themselves as individuals and participants in a national or world community."

Given the ugly racial incidents of the past few months, it was surprising to see 20,000 people join in the second "march of brotherhood" in Forsyth County a few weeks ago. But more must also be done away from the spotlight to curb the rise of intolerance and bigotry in this country. Increasingly, we must support and defend our schools and teachers. The public schools are a common meeting place for young people whose beliefs may seem worlds apart, but who live under the same flag.

Here children from every racial and ethnic background and from every religious faith come together to become Americans. It is in the schools that children learn to accept each other as equals, to understand beliefs they do not personally share, and to appreciate and celebrate the rich mosaic of American history and culture. In this way, they learn tolerance.

If we fail to pass on to each generation the American tradition of pluralism and tolerance, then we will fail to teach them the lesson of Lincoln. In that failure as a nation we will lose our most precious heritage — our compassion and sense of justice.

Christy Macy is director of educational policy for People for the American Way, a 250,000 member nonpartisan constitutional liberties organization.

Dealing with niceties while catching up with the Soviets

WASHINGTON — Granted, coffee cakes are not trampled or coffee cups overturned in the excitement generated by George Shultz when he graces Sunday morning television interview programs.

However, last Sunday, speaking in his style of a 45 rpm record played at 33 1/3 rpm, he announced a conclusion that was reasonable, predictable and puzzling to the New York Times.

"The Times headline focused on a trivial point concerning its editorial position against the Strategic Defense Initiative; 'Shultz Rules Out 'Star Wars' Move Within Two Years.' The 'move' refers to a decision to deploy. However, the important issue concerns testing, and the Washington Post headlined the news as 'Shultz Accepts Broad View of ABM Pact.'"

The controversy concerns the intersection of legal and scientific judgments. It came to a boil when Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., wrote to President Reagan last week about "constitutional crisis" if Reagan does not consult with Congress before adopting a broad interpretation of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty.

A narrow interpretation would essentially impede realistic tests of all but ground-based systems of the sort the Soviet Union already has. The broad interpretation would permit tests appropriate to the range of options for strategic defense options.

On Sunday, Shultz said S.D.I. can be pursued "much more effectively — perhaps only" with a pattern of tests permitted by the broad interpretation. Shultz said, "You can do it much more effectively if you don't have to test things all around the barn and then make gross inferences from it."

What that means is that even if the United States adheres to the narrow interpretation, the United States would not stop testing. Rather, it would continue by using sharp practices that conform only to the strict letter of the narrow interpretation. That is, the United States would conduct tests different, perhaps, in some measurement from the tests appropriate for straightforward exploration of strategic defense components, and then would extrapolate conclusions relevant to such components. However, Shultz said that even with such scientific trickiness, there are things that are "very desirable to test" that "you probably couldn't test adequately under the narrow definition" of the ABM limits.

That scientific conclusion has a large political consequence: Tests compatible with the narrow interpretation can not be conclusive enough to generate confidence in a strategic defense system, so Congress would not sustain adequate funding for strategic defense.

That is why the Shultz conclusion was predictable. Strategic defense is the President's core concern. If the administration had a narrow interpretation, it would have enacted, by indirection, the lead item on the Soviet agenda: unilateral U.S. abandonment of strategic defense.

At first, congressional critics of S.D.I. attacked the broad interpretation as inconsistent with the record of the 1971-1972 negotiations. However, as that record has been made available, congressional critics have shifted their ground. Now they argue that in 1972 the Senate thought it was subscribing to the narrow interpretation.

Three conclusions seem warranted. First, the negotiation record, although not unambiguous (what truly is?), gives ample support for the broad interpretation. Second, the Senate's 1972 ratification had next to nothing to do with the interpretation at issue. (I was working on the Senate staff during that debate and am sure that not six senators had an opinion on the testing of new systems.) Third, the question of what member of what negotiating team said what to which counterpart 15 years ago, in a radically different technological environment, is interesting but not decisive. It can not reasonably be the controlling consideration about what limits, if any, should be put on tests to answer scientific questions that could lead to substantially enhanced deterrence.

Note that word "deterrence." It is the key to understanding why Sen. Nunn may be more effective than President Reagan as an advocate of strategic defense. In announcing the Strategic Defense Initative in 1983, Reagan characteristically went too far. He said his goal is an impenetrable shield to make nuclear weapons obsolete by nullifying delivery vehicles. This, he said, would free the world from the immorality of deterrence — the policy of basing safety on a credible, survivable capacity to retaliate against an enemy attack by destroying the enemy's society.

Nunn argues that such a shield may not be technologically feasible or economically practicable, but that a strategic defense program might nevertheless substantially enhance deterrence. It might multiply the uncertainties of a Soviet regime contemplating a first strike. That is, strategic defenses could confront Soviet war planners with an unacceptable level of uncertainty about how much of their first strike, designed to disarm America, could get through. Shultz and Nunn seem to agree that the argument is not whether to proceed, but how to deal with domestic and diplomatic niceties while proceeding with tests of the sort of programs on which the Soviet Union has already spent $150 billion.

Letters/ Perpetual stupidity, vote buying are marks of the political agricultural process

Diversification is needed
We need diversification — not more government charity. The phrase "way of life" is used by patronizing politicians buzzing for farmers/ranchers. Everyone has a "way of life," from wealthiest to poorest.

Many invest in cars, cults, organized inactivity, other education, business in town or a farm, all by choice. In good times, many businesses and the "best" of farmers go broke, while lean times many businesses and the "poorest" of farmers remain afloat. Employees lose jobs all the time (except government employees).

Our whole future is ahead, and the person who can help each of us and others most is in our mirror — what do you see, forward or backward?

Today's farmer, contrary to political drizzle, contributes no more and no less than anyone else to our society, including teachers, laborers, doctors or others.

Through widely combined stupidity and greed, agricultural production is aiming at artificially targeted markets. The capitalist system corrects itself, if left alone. The political agricultural process is largely perpetual stupidity and vote buying.

As a society we've grown mentally and physically lazy. We hear about lack of money from elected officials, but no one knows what the real problems are, and few appear interested, it's easier to look backwards. Pay raises and more government charities are not answers. Most of our "leaders" are "reactive," therefore "followers," while real leaders are "active," take some risks. Being elected only provides opportunities to lead, not automatic leadership capabilities. It's frequently a platform to display ignorance and arrogance, a la Ronald Reagan and Steve Symms.

Government agencies, local through federal, are not organized for success, only slow, safe levels of effort. Don't reply too quickly, think this over.

Since words do not create solutions to help Idaho's economy, how about some mental activity? I.e., Hardrock Problem Identification. Are our elected officials problem solvers or part of the problem?

Let's start looking forward by establishing a local policy of giving new businesses from out-of-state five years of free taxes. Why not? Far more people are being supported by out-of-state investment money (Moore, Tupperware, FMC, KMVT, IF, Hewlett-Packard, Safeway, Sears, and on and on) than our 24,000 farms. To need both more and outside relocation/branches to diversify.

Our standard of living is now fifth in the world, and going down. Think and act now or pay more for less later, including Imported whisky, as we get the message?

Woman wants protection
A few weeks ago I read in the Lincoln County Journal the article about the rape of a 62-year-old Lincoln County woman. It has been weeks now since that incident and I have yet to read about the capture and incarceration of the rapist — Why?

Would it be too bold to suggest that the police force is incapable of gathering the evidence necessary to put this felon behind bars? Justice in this case would be the removal of certain organs on this person, but since the law won't permit this, why isn't something being done to rid us of this menace?

After this incident occurred I was told that the road was being patrolled. When? After morning coffee? I have never, before or after this woman was raped, seen a police car on that road in the early morning. Why is the rape being ignored by the sheriff's office?

Why aren't more people involved in this — including Sheriff Mills? I believe it is human nature not to get involved in something awful like this unless it happens to you, but I am amazed that this is the sheriff's policy also.

I realize there is only one person in the sheriff's office who is trained to issue a drivers license, but is there no one with enough training to get enough evidence to prosecute this rapist? If not, get someone who can.

I am not an outspoken person, but I am a potential victim and in my eyes the county does not have the trained personnel to handle this or some other crime that has been done by me. I am not willing to be victimized of this heinous crime and I want some protection.

Answers are in the Bible

I read the article "Newark Episcopal Diocese urges new sexual acceptance." I was really sad to think that because society is changing and accepting the "new morality" that any church would consider changing to keep in tune with the times. You know, I feel that people are really searching for answers and something to believe in.

Something that the world cannot offer. A lot of people have already tried and been involved in the "new morality" and find that they are searching for the things that the world gives. So, if people are searching for more and yet cannot find it in the churches, what real hope is there?

I realize that churches are man made, yet in all churches God should be the one we look to for help and to act and behave. Truthfully, I am glad that God doesn't change to fit in with the times: God is the same yesterday, and today and forever, Hebrews 13:8.

Churches are for all sinners and yes, Jesus Christ loves all of us no matter who or what we are, but no matter what time era we are going through, immorality is a sin and no sin should be blessed and accepted, I suppose what I am really trying to say is that for all of us, no matter who we are, the only answers we should look for are right in the Bible. No where in the Bible does it say to change God's word so that it fits in with the new times.

State Health and Welfare Board acts unanimously

Nonpoint pollution rules receive OK

BOISE (AP) — Despite some concern that they include too many loopholes, the Idaho Board of Health and Welfare has unanimously approved changes in state water quality standards on "nonpoint" sources of pollution.

"I wish we could carry out regulations to protect everything and everybody, but this is the real world," board member Donna Parsons of Nampa said during Wednesday's meeting in Boise. "Economically, realistically, maybe we can't protect everything we'd like."

The changes include implementation of a "feedback loop" to monitor the success of "best management practices" required to control water pollution from such sources as logging and farming.

Board member David Mead of Twin Falls said it was "not all that I hoped it would be. However, it's more than I thought it would be."

The new regulations were developed by a state interagency task force established by former Gov. John Evans after he vetoed a bill passed by the 1986 Legislature but opposed by Idaho environmentalists and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

That measure would have transferred authority for deciding whether logging activities were causing "serious injury" to water quality from the Department of Health and Welfare to the state Department of Lands.

Opponents feared it would open the door to widespread abuse by the timber industry of the best-management-practices requirement since it included no provision for monitoring the impact of logging operations.

The new regulations were developed through public workshops throughout the state last summer and negotiations with timber-industry officials and environmental groups that stretched into the fall.

They substitute the old "serious injury" prevention requirement with a feedback loop aimed at improving any best management practices found to be inadequate to meet water quality standards.

Al Murray, head of Health and Welfare's Water Quality Bureau, admitted to the Health and Welfare Board that there remain "weak links" in the feedback loop concept, including a shortage of money to carry out the in-stream monitoring program and an absence of criteria for allowable sedimentation in Idaho streams.

The feedback loop calls for the Water Quality Bureau to conduct in-stream monitoring and let relevant state agencies such as the Department of Lands or the Department of Water Resources know whether best management practices need to be modified to better protect water quality.

At Murray, the bureau was trying to win legislative approval of about 12 additional staff positions to conduct in-stream monitoring.

But board members Mead and Dr. Fred

Marleneau of Sandpoint said they were concerned about the absence of specific water-quality standards and the restriction against the state taking enforcement action against violators as long as they are meeting existing best management practices, however inadequate.

"With all due respect for the work that's been done, it looks to me like we're being asked to approve regulations with an awful lot of ifs and buts and maybes," Marleneau said.

Mead added: "I feel very uncomfortable that there's not some criteria that can determine if best management practices aren't working if they're not really working. I realize there are gray areas, but there are an awful lot of blacks and whites out there."

Marleneau asked new Health and Welfare Director Rich Donovan how active he would be in ensuring that in-stream monitoring is pursued and that best management practices are improved as needed.

Donovan said he generally would rely on his staff experts, but that he would be pressured by interest groups to overlook violations.

"Political considerations aside, if we have a rape-the-wilderness type of situation certainly I'll step in to stop that practice," he said.

With the board's approval, the regulations now go the germaine committees in the Legislature's for review.

Board backs away from land offer

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Land Board has at least temporarily backed away from a proposal to give holders of state cottage leases the right of first refusal to buy those parcels.

The Land Board was considering two bills for presentation to the Legislature that would have given violators the opportunity either to meet the highest bid for state land offered at auction or to buy the lots for 5 percent over the highest bid.

But Attorney General Jim Jones told the board during Tuesday's meeting in Boise that allowing leaseholders that preference would violate the Idaho Constitution's competitive bidding requirements.

Analysts plug for inflation allowance

BOISE (AP) — Top state and national analysts are trying to impress on legislative budget writers the need to build in about a 4 percent increase in spending for government operations when they begin drafting a state budget for the year beginning in July.

David Berson, the chief financial economist for Wharton Economists in Philadelphia, told the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee on Wednesday that it cannot expect another year of inflation at below 2 percent like the nation experienced in 1986.

Berson and Ore-Ida Foods Inc. economist Don Holley effectively reinforced the administration's position's forecast that inflation in the new budget year can be expected to run at around 4 percent, the level administration economists projected nine months ago.

"We feel the 4 percent inflation factor remains valid," administration analyst Mike Ferguson told the committee, "and if anything is on the low side."

The special presentation on the inflationary outlook came as discussion has increased among members of the committee and many of their colleagues in the House and Senate over severely reducing, or even eliminating, any inflationary adjustment in the new budget. That possibility has been spurred by efforts to underwrite a significant increase in state education spending while avoiding a confrontation over a major new tax increase.

Legislative budget analysts have calculated a 4 percent inflationary adjustment in basic operating costs would add just under $3 million to the new state budget with the same kind of adjustment for various programs like welfare and aid to public and higher education would add nearly $11 million to the total.

But Berson told the committee that the depressed inflation rate of 1986, the lowest in nearly two decades, almost entirely resulted from the plunge in oil prices. That decline is over, he said, and combined with anticipated increases in wages due to a tightening labor market and gradually escalating interest rates inflation will nearly 3.5 percent this year and rise to over 4.5 percent in 1988. Adjusting for the state budget rate that covers both 1987 and 1988, he said inflation would be just over 4 percent.

More importantly, Berson said that if oil prices and surprising stable food prices are removed from the 1986 calculation, the inflation rate for last year would actually be over 3 percent, a level that he said can be consistently expected in the U.S. economy.

Wharton's recommendation to any organization or government using a built-in inflationary factor in budget planning, he said, is to include an escalator over 1986 costs to cover anticipated increases.

Swan Falls bill wins endorsement

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional subcommittee has endorsed legislation mandating federal approval of the settlement to the long-running Idaho battle over control of the Snake River.

The Energy and Power Subcommittee of the House Commerce and Energy Committee unanimously approved the bill on Wednesday.

Similar to a proposal pending in the Senate, the House measure sponsored by Idaho Congressman Richard Stallings effectively requires the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to approve the 1984 settlement reached between the state and Idaho Power Co. on water rights in southern Idaho.

FERC approval of that pact is the remaining hurdle in ending the Swan Falls controversy. Lack of FERC approval has blocked issuance of any new water rights in the basin.

A similar proposal was vetoed by President Reagan last fall because it was attached to a controversial national appliance energy standards bill that the president refused to accept.

With FERC approval, the decade-long, multimillion-dollar process of adjudicating the thousands of water rights in the basin can begin.

Reagan answers 2nd round of Tower panel's questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan answered questions from an investigatory board about the Iran arms sale affair Wednesday as the White House defended Reagan's refusal to order two key figures in the case to end their silence and testify.

For the second time in 17 days, Reagan met in the Oval Office with members of the review board headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas. He appointed the panel Nov. 26 to investigate the activities of the National Security Council staff, including the secret sale of arms to Iran and diversion of profits to Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

As the request of the board, Reagan granted a one-week extension, until Feb. 26, for the panel to submit its final report. The report originally was due Jan. 29, but the board was granted an earlier delay until Feb. 19.

Reporting on Reagan's 70-minute session with the board, presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater said: "Today's meeting reviewed the National Security Council process and the development and execution of the Iran policy and the president's role. The president answered all of the board's questions."

Fitzwater said the board asked for more time to submit its findings in order "to comprehensively deal with all the information it has obtained."

Herbert Hetu, the board's spokesman, said more time was sought because of "a recent acquisition of new material."

He would not elaborate, except to say the request was not the result of the meeting with Reagan, the board's review of Reagan's notes or the hospitalization of former national security adviser Robert McFarlane, who took an overdose of Valium on Monday.

The meeting came one day after the White House revealed that Reagan had turned down a request from Tower that he order former aides John Poindexter and Oliver North to appear before the board and answer questions.

North and Poindexter both have invoked the Fifth Amendment and refused to answer questions from congressional committees.

In other developments Wednesday:

• The speaker of Iran's parliament, Hashemi Rafsanjani, said the United States had made a new attempt "a few days ago" to contact Iranian leaders and even provided a direct telephone number for Reagan, according to Tehran radio.

The report did not identify the intermediary who contacted Iranian officials and made no indication of Iran's response. The United States has maintained there has been no contact with Iran since mid-December.

Fitzwater, saying he checked at the White House and State Department with people who should know, said, "We have no indication of anyone having talked to him (Rafsanjani) ... or to anybody."

• Fitzwater said Reagan was "very concerned and upset for" former national security aide McFarlane who, police sources said, was trying to commit suicide when he took the Valium overdose Monday.

McFarlane telephoned McFarlane's wife, Jonda, on Tuesday, but has not spoken to McFarlane, White House officials said.

McFarlane, 49, remained hospitalized at Bethesda Naval Hospital in suburban Maryland on Wednesday, two days after he swallowed between 25 and 30 tablets of the tranquilizer Valium.

McFarlane was listed in good condition, said Lt. Russ Sanford, a hospital spokesman. Sanford refused to say what type of treatment doctors were giving McFarlane.

"Everyone is picking on what he said," Garment said in an interview. "I think it's unfair because the discrepancies are not really discrepancies, but simply one side of the story because most of the central participants have refused to answer questions."

Asked if McFarlane was angry about being the only one so far to volunteer to talk, Garment said, "I don't think so." He added: "I am."

Reagan telephoned McFarlane's wife, Jonda, on Tuesday, but has not spoken to McFarlane, Fitzwater said. McFarlane's lawyer, Leonard Garment, complained that McFarlane has been picked on unfairly because he's the only key figure cooperating in the Iran-Contra investigations.

• White House telephones and computer equipment installed in the homes of McFarlane and Poindexter were disconnected last Nov. 25, the same day that it was disclosed that money was skimmed from the Iran arms deals for the Contras, Fitzwater said.

Refusing to comment on the timing of the action, Fitzwater said, "We all know the significance of that date in terms of the Iranian situation but I don't want to characterize it ... It seems fairly obvious that the two were connected but I just don't know how and I don't know the thinking that went into it."

Although he left the White House in December, 1985, McFarlane was deeply involved in the Iran arms deal and served as an unpaid consultant to the NSC. His contract as a consultant — giving him a security clearance — runs until Sept. 30, 1987, Fitzwater said.

• Former President Carter contrasted his hostage crisis with the Reagan administration's, saying he "never misted the American people."

Before a speech in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Carter said that during the 441-day captivity of Americans in Iran during his administration: "We never considered, of course, paying any kind of ransom, we never delivered any weapons or any benefits to Ayatollah Khomeini."

"We never misted the American people about what had happened," he said. "There was nothing to cover up."

Lawyer says ex-aide dealt unfair treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert C. McFarlane, the former presidential aide who is recovering from a drug overdose, has been picked on unfairly because he's the only key figure cooperating in the investigations of the sale of U.S. weapons to Iran, his lawyer said Wednesday.

"He's the only game in town for the press to write about and some members of Congress to complain about," attorney Leonard Garment said, noting that his client — unlike other important players — volunteered to testify on Capitol Hill and elsewhere.

President Reagan, meantime, is "very concerned and upset for" said White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater, using the nickname of the former national security adviser who, police sources said, tried to commit suicide Monday.

Reagan telephoned McFarlane's wife, Jonda, on Tuesday, but has not spoken to McFarlane, White House officials said.

McFarlane, 49, remained hospitalized at Bethesda Naval Hospital in suburban Maryland on Wednesday, two days after he swallowed between 25 and 30 tablets of the tranquilizer Valium.

McFarlane was listed in good condition, said Lt. Russ Sanford, a hospital spokesman. Sanford refused to say what type of treatment doctors were giving McFarlane.

"Everyone is picking on what he said," Garment said in an interview. "I think it's unfair because the discrepancies are not really discrepancies, but simply one side of the story because most of the central participants have refused to answer questions."

Asked if McFarlane was angry about being the only one so far to volunteer to talk, Garment said, "I don't think so." He added: "I am."

Reagan answers 2nd round of Tower panel's questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan answered questions from an investigatory board about the Iran arms-sale affair Wednesday as the White House defended Reagan's refusal to order two key figures in the case to end their silence and testify.

For the second time in 17 days, Reagan met in the Oval Office with members of the review board headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas. He appointed the panel to investigate the activities of the National Security Council staff, including the secret sale of arms to Iran and diversion of profits to Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

At the request of the board, Reagan granted a one-week extension, until Feb. 26, for the panel to submit its final report. The report originally was due Jan. 29, but the board was granted an earlier delay until Feb. 19.

Reporting on Reagan's 70-minute session with the board, presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater said: "Today's meeting reviewed the National Security Council process and the development and execution of the Iran policy and the president's role. The president answered all of the board's questions."

Fitzwater said the board asked for more time to submit its findings in order "to comprehensively deal with all the information it has obtained."

Herbert Heta, the board's spokesman, said more time was sought because of "a recent acquisition of new material."

He would not elaborate, except to say the request was not the result of the meeting with Reagan, the board's review of Reagan's notes or the hospitalization of former national security adviser Robert McFarlane, who took an overdose of Valium tranquilizer Vallium on Monday.

The meeting came one day after the White House revealed that Reagan had turned down a request from Tower that he order former aides John Poindexter and Oliver North to appear before the board and answer questions.

North and Poindexter both have invoked the Fifth Amendment and refused to answer questions from congressional committees.

In other developments Wednesday, the speaker of Iran's parliament, Hashemi Rafsanjani, said the United States had made a new attempt "a few days ago" to contact Iranian leaders and even provided a direct telephone number for Reagan, according to Tehran radio.

The report did not identify the intermediary who contacted Iranian officials and gave no indication of Iran's response. The United States has maintained there has been no contact with Iran since mid-December.

Fitzwater, saying he checked at the White House and State Department with people who should know, said, "We have no indication of anyone having talked to him (Rafsanjani) ... or to anybody."

Fitzwater said Reagan was "very concerned and upset for" former national security aide McFarlane who, police sources said, was trying to commit suicide when he took the Valium overdose Monday.

Reagan telephoned McFarlane's wife, Jonda, on Tuesday, but has not spoken to McFarlane, Fitzwater said. McFarlane's lawyer, Leonard Garment, complained that McFarlane has been picked on unfairly because he's the only key figure cooperating in the Iran-Contra investigations.

White House telephones and computer equipment installed in the homes of McFarlane and Poindexter were disconnected last Nov. 25, the same day that it was disclosed that money was skimmed from the Iran arms deals for the Contras, Fitzwater said.

Refusing to comment on the timing of the action, Fitzwater said, "We all know the significance of that date in terms of the Iranian situation but I don't want to characterize it ... It seems fairly obvious that the two were connected but I just don't know how and I don't know the thinking that went into it."

Although he left the White House in December, 1985, McFarlane was deeply involved in the Iran arms deal and served as an unpaid consultant to the NSC. His contract as a consultant — giving him a security clearance — runs until Sept. 30, 1987, Fitzwater said.

Former President Carter contrasted his hostage crisis with the Reagan administration's, saying he "never misled the American people."

Before a speech in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Carter said that during the 444-day captivity of Americans in Iran during his administration: "We never considered, of course, paying any kind of ransom, we never delivered any weapons or any benefits to Ayatollah Khomeini."

"We never misled the American people about what had happened," he said. "There was nothing to cover up."

Lawyer says ex-aide dealt unfair treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert C. McFarlane, the former presidential aide who is recovering from a drug overdose, has been picked on unfairly because he's the only key figure cooperating in the investigations of the sale of U.S. weapons to Iran, his lawyer said Wednesday.

"He's the only game in town for the press to write about and some members of Congress to complain about," attorney Leonard Garment said, noting that his client — unlike other important players — volunteered to testify on Capitol Hill and elsewhere.

President Reagan, meantime, is "very concerned and upset for Bud," said White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater, using the nickname of the former national security adviser who, police sources said, tried to commit suicide Monday.

Reagan telephoned McFarlane's wife, Jonda, on Tuesday, but has not spoken to McFarlane, White House officials said.

McFarlane, 49, remained hospitalized at Bethesda Naval Hospital in suburban Maryland on Wednesday two days after he swallowed between 25 and 30 tablets of the tranquilizer Vallium.

McFarlane was listed in good condition, said Lt. Russ Sanford, a hospital spokesman. Sanford refused to say what type of treatment doctors were giving McFarlane.

"Everyone is picking on what he said," Garment said in an interview. "I think it's unfair because the discrepancies are not really discrepancies," but simply one side of the story because most of the central participants have refused to answer questions.

Asked if McFarlane was angry about being the only one so far to volunteer to talk, Garment said, "I don't think so." He added: "I am."

ABRA WITH A MEMORY
Not everybody who lives 100 years is glad of it. Researchers at England's London University asked 100 centenarians if they were grateful for their longevity. Eighteen said no. Eight said they weren't sure.

DAYLIGHT SAVING
What does Daylight Saving Time do for you? Not as much as it does for those who sell outdoor grills, English soil? charcoal and starter fluid, I'll warrant. They've calculated it adds to their annual dollar volume an additional $77.5 million.

Q. Did Gen. George Armstrong Custer's regiment ride behind the American flag at the Little Big Horn?
A. Not that flag. Regimental colors maybe. The Cavalry wasn't authorized to carry the national flag into battle until 1887, a year after that.

Q. Who was the only Queen of England who never set foot on her native soil?
A. Berengaria, wife of Richard the Lion-Hearted. What with the Crusades and all, Richard was gone more than he was home, so she stayed in Italy.

Q. How come the earth is slightly pear shaped instead of perfectly round?
A. Weight of polar ice does that.

What did you do at age 5? Mozart wrote, "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star."

Those citizens who sleep in the nude still don't mind telling the pollsters about it. Today's findings indicate 19 percent of the men and 6 percent of the women do so.

At this writing, to have your car blessed at a Buddhist Temple in Japan costs $10.77.

Why the men who snore outnumber the women who snore by about four to one is not yet really understood, according to the sleep researchers.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Only by using your charm to the greatest possible advantage will you overcome today's tendency to get involved in the negative factors of your activities.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Some talent you possess requires a new inspiration before you can use it to your advantage.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): It would be wise to absent yourself from home today. Have guests in tonight and show you are an excellent host.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Go over any writings and be careful of what you say. Much care in driving is advised.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Do nothing that can ruin your bank account. Budget your assets wisely.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Try to get a point across to another, but don't be surprised if you meet with a lot of resistance.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Be tactful if you want to get out of some responsibility that irks you. Set up a new plan of action.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): A thoughtless person could give you trouble during the daytime if you permit, but later you can be happy.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Take care you do not lose prestige in public, or at work, by some foolish actions.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): If you try to keep a promise you will be confused. Your mate can be helpful.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You can make long-term plans with a close friend today. Be clever and cooperative for best results.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Plan how best to get an associate to understand your views. Don't attempt public matters today.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You may not be content with your environment, but don't make any changes yet. A prominent person is supportive now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be tested marly, so give fine training in ethics so that your progeny can handle whatever comes up intelligently. Upon reaching maturity life will be more easier and there will be more money to do with as he, or she, likes. Be sure to give praise when earned.

Vietnam drama, period romance lead Oscar nominations

BEVERLY Hills, Calif. (AP) — "Platoon," a searing Vietnam drama that no studio would touch and "A Room with a View," a period romance regarded as a loush, scored eight nominations apiece Wednesday to lead the 59th annual Oscar race.

Woody Allen's "Hannah and Her Sisters" and two surprises, the outer-space sequel "Aliens" and "The Mission," a church-vs.-state story of colonial Brazil, were runners-up with seven apiece.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' 4,000-plus voters made these nominations for best picture of 1986: "Children of a Lesser God," "Hannah and Her Sisters," "The Mission," "Platoon" and "A Room with a View," a gentle story of Britons at Italian estates, Italy, and the English countryside.

Besides best picture, "Platoon" garnered nominations for director, editing, sound, cinematography and screenplay, and two nominations for best supporting actor.

It represented sweet vindication for writer-director Oliver Stone, who spent 10 frustrating years trying to find backing for the film of his memories as an infantryman in Vietnam.

The independently made film, distributed by Orion Pictures, is No. 1 at the box office this week.

Stone also was nominated for the screenplay for "Salvador," a film about a journalist in war-torn Vietnam, co-written with Richard Boyle, which hasn't seen wide distribution yet.

"It would be very hard to have another year as good as this one has been," Stone said Wednesday in New York, "I'm thrilled by both honors, especially that 'Salvador' has been retrieved from obscurity."

The nominations also featured Paul Newman, who has qualified six times before with nary a win; longtime jazz great Dexter Gordon in his acting debut; and hearing-impaired Marlee Matlin in a nearly mute performance.

Newman was nominated for best actor for his repeat as Fast Eddie Felson in "The Color of Money," a sequel to "The Hustler" of 25 years ago. Also named were last year's winner, William Hurt, as Miss Matlin's lover in "Children of a Lesser God," Gordon for "Round Midnight," James Woods for "Salvador" and Bob Hoskins for "Mona Lisa."

Hoskins said by telephone from London, "I think he is making a film: 'I didn't really expect anything like that, but I was txy, very hopeful.' Nominated for playing a role he described as "a petty crook, a very ordinary man," the actor added, "I am deeply honored."

Previous Oscar winners Jane Fonda in "The Morning After" and Sissy Spacek in "Crimes of the Heart" were nominated for best actress, along with Miss Matlin for "Children of a Lesser God," Kathleen Turner for "Peggy Sue Got Married" and Sigourney Weaver for "Aliens."

Miss Matlin in her film debut played a deaf woman. Through her publicist in New York, she commented: "I feel great... I'm gonna scream later. If she wins, it would mark the second Oscar for a virtually speechless role. Jane Wyman was the winner as the deaf rape victim in "Johnny Belinda" in 1946."

For best supporting actor, the nominees were Tom Berenger and Willem Dafoe for "Platoon," Michael Caine for "Hannah and Her Sisters," Denholm Elliott for "A Room with a View" and Dennis Hopper for "Hoosters." All are first-time actor nominees except Caine, who has been named three times in the best actor category.

For best supporting actress, the nominees were Tess Harper for "Crimes of the Heart," Piper Laurie for "Children of a Lesser God," Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio for "The Color of Money," Maggie Smith for "A Room with a View" and Dianne Wiest for "Hannah and Her Sisters."

For adapted screenplay, the nominees were: Hesper Anderson and Mark Medoff for "Children of a Lesser God," Richard Price for "The Color of Money," Beth Henley for "Crimes of the Heart," Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, "A Room with a View" and Raymond Gideon and Bruce A. Evans for "Stand by Me."

Austria and Canada made their debuts in the best foreign-language film category. The nominees: "The Assault" (The Netherlands), "Betty Blue" (France), "The Decline of the American Empire" (French-speaking Canada), "My Sweet Little Village" (Czechoslovakia), and "38" (Austria).

In London, Ms. Smith said she was "delighted and very surprised" to be nominated for her role as the chaperone Charlotte Bartlett. She added her surprise that "A Room with a View" earned eight nominations — "Everybody works hard all the time, you don't have time to reflect and think about it."

Nominees for director corresponded to best picture, with one exception: David Lynch for "Blue Velvet," who was chosen instead of Randa Haines of "Children of a Lesser God." The other nominees were Woody Allen for "Hannah and Her Sisters," Roland Joffe for "The Mission," Oliver Stone for "Platoon," and James Ivory for "A Room with a View."

Besides Stone and Boyle, nominees in the original screenplay category were Paul Hogan, Ken Shadle and John Cornell for "Crocodile Dundee," Allen for "Hannah and Her Sisters," and Hanif Kureishi for "My Beautiful Laundrette."

For adapted screenplay, the nominees were: Hesper Anderson and Mark Medoff for "Children of a Lesser God," Richard Price for "The Color of Money," Beth Henley for "Crimes of the Heart," Ruth Prawer Jhabvala, "A Room with a View" and Raymond Gideon and Bruce A. Evans for "Stand by Me."

For original song the nominees were "The Glory of Love" from "The Karate Kid Part II," "Life in a Looking Glass" from "That's Life," "Mean Green Mother from Outer Space" from "Little Shop of Horrors," "Somewhere Out There" from "An American Tail," and "Take My Breath Away" from "Top Gun." If the 1986 nominations carry any message, it may be that money doesn't matter. Except for "Platoon," none of the nominees for best picture was a box-office smash. Of the year's blockbusters, "Top Gun" managed four lesser nominations, the same for "Star Trek IV: The Voyage Home," "Crocodile Dundee" and "The Karate Kid Part II" had one apiece. The 59th awards will be presented at the Los Angeles Music Center on an ABC telecast March 30.

Ranch girl aiming to do her level best

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Miss Wyoming Michelle Renee Zimmerman lives on a ranch near Reduse, Wyo., a community with a population of about 25.

But the 22-year-old University of Wyoming student has a wide-open space this week for the Miss USA competition.

She and 51 other young women, ages 17 through 24, have come to Albuquerque seeking the 1987 Miss USA crown that carries with it more than $200,000 in cash and prizes and the chance to compete in the Miss Universe pageant. There's one representative from each state and the District of Columbia and Miss Teen USA.

The competition begins Thursday night with the preliminary round of evening gown and swimsuit judging. Interviews with the judges will follow on Friday and Saturday.

The top 10 finishers will be announced as semifinalists about 20 minutes into Thursday night's network-televised pageant.

After another round of evening gown and swimsuit competition and on-stage interviews, five finalists will be selected from which the judges will select the new Miss USA.

Miss Zimmerman said when she first arrived she was amazed all the other contestants were so beautiful, talented and dynamic.

But she said she knew she couldn't be distracted or she wouldn't do her best. "I'm going to go on what I have," she said.

Caruso stamp set

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new commemorative stamp honoring opera great Enrico Caruso will be issued Feb. 27, the U.S. Postal Service reported Wednesday.

The first day of issue ceremonies will be held at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, where Caruso performed for 18 years.

The 22-cent stamp honoring the tenor is a part of the continuing performing arts series of stamps.

Aquino declares constitution in force

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corason Aquino declared her new constitution in "full force" Wednesday and said the army will resume operations against Communist rebels, but she did not order a full offensive.

"The truce is over," she said of the cease-fire with the rebels that expired Sunday.

"Send this message out to all our troops so that none may be misled to relax their vigilance to their peril and that of the people they are charged to protect," she told about 500 soldiers at the Camp Aguinaldo military headquarters.

Mrs. Aquino stopped short of putting the army on the offensive against the insurgents, who have made several attacks since the 60-day truce ended. At least 25 people were killed in the attacks.

The new charter extends Mrs. Aquino's term of office to June 30, 1992, but will strip her of sole law-making powers after a two-chamber Congress is elected May 11. Local and regional elections are to follow on Aug. 24.

With the constitution in effect, "the night is over," Mrs. Aquino said Tuesday. In an allusion to months of coup plots and attempts, she urged the 55 million Filipinos to "put aside the deeds of darkness" and work together in peace and friendship.

"Even as we prepare for the struggle to come, let us continue to pray that God may yet smatch us from the brink of war and set us gently down in peace," she said, explaining that "all hope of peace is not lost."

She expressed hope that an amnesty and rehabilitation program for rebels that she plans to reveal later this month, plus negotiations with them on a regional basis, will convince "non-ideologues" to lay down their arms.

Rebel negotiators walked out of the national negotiations on the 18-year-old insurgency last month.

Mrs. Aquino, 54, spoke to the officers hours after formally declaring the new constitution in "full force and effect as of this date." It was approved by 76 percent of more than 22 million voters in a referendum Feb. 2.

She assumed power when former President Ferdinand E. Marcos fled the country Feb. 26, 1986, and scrapped the constitution he had promulgated under martial law in 1973. A commission she appointed wrote the new one.

"My fellow countrymen, we have a new constitution," Mrs. Aquino said during a nationally televised ceremony in which she took a new oath of office and led members of her Cabinet, the judiciary and other officials in swearing allegiance to the charter.

Military officials said troops and helicopters continued searching for guerrillas of the New People's Army who engaged army soldiers in a battle in which 18 people were killed and more than 20 wounded Tuesday in Nueva Ecija province, 90 miles north of Manila.

Efforts to send food to refugees falter

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A cease-fire took hold at besieged Palestinian camps in Beirut on Wednesday, but wangling over terms kept food from reaching tens of thousands of refugees already reported reduced to eating cats, dogs and rats.

The Syrian-brokered truce was the latest in a series of abortive efforts to end fighting between Palestinian guerrillas and Israeli army and militia men during the 12 weeks of combat, the Shiites have blocked the camps.

The cease-fire took effect at 8 a.m. police and Palestinian spokesmen said, and was basically a food-for-territory deal.

It followed nighttime mortar and rocket clashes around Bourj el-Barajneh and nearby Chaitalla camp. Police said two people were killed and seven wounded. That raised the toll in the latest round of Palestinian-Shiite fighting in Beirut and south Lebanon to at least 556 killed, 1,470 wounded.

Syrian army observers and Shiite Amal militia commanders discussed what police termed "procedural arrangements" to let food and medical supplies into Bourj el-Barajneh camp.

There were widespread accounts of camp residents eating cats, dogs and rats, but correspondents could not enter the camps to verify such reports.

A police spokesman said Shiite representatives refused to allow relief supplies into the camp until guerrillas complete a withdrawal from territory they seized outside their camps in south Lebanon.

"Contacts are under way with Palestinian representatives to work out an agreement... but I don't think this can be achieved today (Wednesday)," said the spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Palestinian commanders in south Lebanon's Sidon region said they had not received orders to withdraw from hills they captured from Amal in November and hand them over to Justice Minister Nabih Berri's Syrian-backed Amal.

Berri told reporters in Damascus: "I was promised... (Tuesday) that the Palestinians will complete their withdrawal... (Wednesday) and that Amal will regain its positions east of Sidon."

"If this happens, we shall lift the siege of the camps Thursday morning."

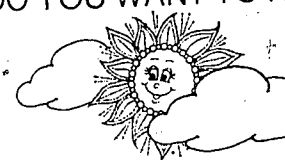

The deal, worked out in Damascus Tuesday, followed reports that the Palestinians, their food gone, are eating rats.

Arafat was not represented at the Damascus talks. Independent observers believe any accord that does include Arafat will fail.

Ceremonies to honor U.S. entry

PARIS (AP) — Ceremonies are planned this year to mark the 70th anniversary of the United States' entry into World War I, the French government announced Wednesday.

One special observance will be in Mar-la-Coquette at the memorial to the Lafayette Escadrille, a famous American flying unit.

Other memorials will include a special issue of stamps, school competitions, exhibitions and new publications. A special committee of honor for the event was created under the auspices of President Francois Mitterrand and Premier Jacques Chirac.

In addition, the government has decided to award honorary diplomas to all American veterans of the war still living.

Protests continue in Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Plainclothesmen pushed protesters out of a shopping mall Wednesday, the third day of demonstrations for release of a Jewish activist not included in the Kremlin pardon that freed 140 other imprisoned dissidents.

The protesters also demonstrated for the right to emigrate. They carried placards reading "Let us go to Israel" and "Free Josef Begun," who was given a seven-year prison term in October 1985.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur A. Hartman called the mass release a "step in the right direction," but he said the United States continues pressing for freer emigration.

He told a news conference he had appealed to Soviet authorities to let dissident Naum Meiman attend his wife's funeral in the United States.

Inna Meiman, 54, died Monday in Washington, where she had received cancer treatment since leaving the Soviet Union last month. Hartman said the refusal since 1975 to grant Meiman an exit visa violated "Soviet practice and Soviet law."

"In the last little while, the Soviet government has recognized that their treatment of individuals has had an effect on their relations with other countries," the ambassador said.

"They have been moving to dampen that effect. I don't think it's because they've changed their basic approach to the relation of the individual to the state."

Foreign Ministry spokesman Genady Gerasimov said at a news briefing Tuesday that 140 dissidents had been released and as many other cases were being examined. His announcement has not been reported to the Soviet public.

Gerasimov also said government commissions were reviewing the criminal code, but he gave no details.

Scott strategy memo stirs flap; apology due

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

BOISE — Aside from nuclear holocaust, having a strategy memo fall into the wrong hands is the worst thing that can ever happen to a lobbyist.

The worst-case scenario came true for Idaho Liability Reform Coalition people on Wednesday.

A letter marked "confidential strategy memo," detailing the status of liability reform and pinpointing state legislators who were "weak" or "OK" became public.

The memo was written by former state representative Donna Scott, of Twin Falls, now a field co-ordinator for the Idaho Liability Reform Coalition.

Word of the memo sent coalition members scrambling on damage control missions. By Wednesday evening, the president of the coalition said "an apology from Scott would be forthcoming to everyone named in the letter."

"It was a mistake, a very serious

'It was a mistake, a very serious mistake. It never should have been written.'

mistake," said Jim Weatherby, executive director of the Association of Idaho Cities and president of the Idaho Liability Reform Coalition.

Weatherby said that even though it was "a confidential memo," it never should have been written.

In the memo obtained by The Times-News, Scott said passage for liability reform looked good in the House. The real problem was the Senate, "and we're targeting the weak areas," the memo said.

Scott said Sen. Roger Fairchild, R-Fruitland, chairman of the Senate Judiciary and Rules Committee, "is willing to be the savior" — but does not want to go home as the rat who prevented the bill from even getting to the floor."

Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Deerlodge, was listed as favorable, "but seems to be playing the quiet game; I'm urging mail from his Cassia constituency."

Of the other nine members on the Judiciary and Rules Committee, Sen. Darrel McRoberts, R-Twin Falls; Sen. Larry Anderson, R-Twin Falls; and Sen. Ann Rydahl, R-Idaho Falls; were all listed as "OK."

Sen. Lee Staker, R-Idaho Falls, however, was listed as "a worry, and I have people from Idaho Falls literally on his doorstep."

On the Democratic side, senators Claire Wetherell, Mountain Home, and Karl Brooks, Boise, were listed as "very weak." And Scott said people from Mountain Home, Boise and Gen. Andrus are "bothering them."

Senators Gail Bray, D-Boise, and Mary Lou Reed, Cour d'Alene, were written off as "lost causes."

Only one House member was mentioned in the memo, which was addressed to Blaine County coalition members.

The man to work on was Rep. Gary Robbins, R-Dietrich, according to the memo.

"He needs personal attention... could be worthwhile," the memo read. "He's heavily influenced by Rep. Chris Hooper (in many ways)."

Fair Manager & Secretary Tom Shouse, left, adds glue to one of the 40 new benches as Lynn Chandler drives in screws

Shouse wins 23rd year as fair manager

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — For the 23rd year in a row, Tom Shouse has been named manager of the Twin Falls County Fair.

The county Fair Board Monday unanimously elected Shouse to the post, which includes acting as secretary-treasurer of the board, for the upcoming year.

Shouse said he and his wife, Neoma, who works as a secretary in the fair office, have had fun despite belt tightening over the years.

"The fair never seems to make enough money to satisfy everyone. But we stay in the black and out of trouble," Shouse said.

Before the vote, Fair Board Chairman Stan Snow of Twin Falls said he and other board members had heard rumors of Shouse's retirement. But the election on Monday put "the rumor to rest," Snow said.

At the beginning of the meeting, a new board member, Jack Ramsey of Filer, was officially seated by County Board Chairman Judy Felton. Another new board member, Gary Grindstaff of Buhl, was absent on Monday, but had previously taken his oath.

Snow was re-elected chairman and Emmett Harrison of Twin Falls was elected vice chairman.

Harrison nominated Snow for re-election and thanked him for an "excellent job."

"I appreciate the confidence," replied Snow, who has served on the board for about 8 years.

In other business, Sheri Brown of Jerome was named by the board as director of the fair's Miss Rodeo Idaho competition. The position is a volunteer one, Snow said.

Brown said she has been involved for years with rodeo-queen contests. The most recent was the Western Days event.

Snow asked Brown to prepare a budget of anticipated expenses.

The fair budgets about $1,000 for the rodeo queen contest, which attracts contestants from around the state. Snow said he would like more financial support from the sponsoring groups of the contestants to help pay the expenses related to the contest. The fair voted the bill to send the winner to national rodeo events in Las Vegas and Denver.

"To put out a quality product, you have to pay the piper and we can't pay it alone," Snow said.

Shouse said the registration fee for a queen contestant is $100, but may have to be raised to $200 to cover expenses. No action, however, was taken on the fees.

The winner of the Miss Rodeo Idaho competition, selected at the fair's rodeo, competes in the Miss Rodeo America contest, held in conjunction with national rodeo finals of the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association.

In other business, the board voted not to charge for premium books this year. But they will continue to print "$1.50" on the books to remind county residents what the books cost the fair.

The printing cost of the book, which lists information about fair events and competitions, is about $1.25 each. The county orders about 3,000 books annually.

Board members had questioned the need for ordering the same number of books this year and whether the books should be mailed.

Shouse and other board members opposed charging for the book, saying the books are given to the people who help support the fair by entering the different competitions. Books are mailed on a bulk rate, so the expenses don't amount to much, he said. He added that the number of books ordered are sufficient.

The board voted to leave the mailing number of books printed and their distribution to Shouse's discretion.

Shouse reported also that $941 had been spent to build 40 new benches. The board members said they believed there were not enough benches.

Fair employees are assembling the benches.

Burley, utilities urge end to BPA weatherization

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The city of Burley and rural utilities Wednesday said they are opposed to continuation of Bonneville Power Administration's $22.5 million program to weatherize homes to save electricity.

BPA is exploring options on what to do about the program as it goes to $27 facing the prospect of a deficit of up to $383 million. BPA is also proposing a rate increase for its preference customers of 11.5 percent to help offset declining power sales to California and aluminum plants in the Northwest.

"AT revenues go down, the money requirements do not. The expenses in the weatherization program may more than offset the good achieved for the money involved," said Don Hill, Burley utilities director. He spoke at a hearing attended by about 25 at the Burley Inn.

Burley is one of 108 BPA power customers in the Northwest that participates in the weatherization program.

Hill said this is a time of financial strain on utilities. He said there is no electrical power load growth in the Burley system. Hill said it cost an average of $2,000 per home to weatherize its structures in Burley.

BPA pays part of the cost to weatherize homes. The process involves such measures as insulating and caulking windows and doors.

Larry Burbank, general manager of Rural Electric Co. of Rupert, also said he was opposed to the continuation of the program which has cost BPA $300 million since its start in 1982.

Weatherization comes out of the rate base. Our children will pay the debt service. We are using ratepayers' money in a manner that causes rates to increase," he said.

BPA has to borrow money from the government for the weatherization program.

A spokesman for the Raft River Electric Co. also opposed continuation of the program for reasons similar to those stated by the other speakers.

Ken J. Robinette of the South Central Community Action Agency said he favored the option of continuing the program for low-income residents only.

He said low-income residents use more electricity at home than people with more income. He said low-income people spend all their money to pay for food, clothing and bills and don't have the funds to weatherize.

A contractor in Idaho Falls also said he favored continuation of the program, adding that there was a lot of weatherization going on in that city.

Robert N. Laffel, BPA district manager in Idaho Falls, said weatherization would continue at least through 1987. BPA officials said on what to do about weatherization.

BPA will make a decision on the issue on March 17 after hearings are held throughout BPA's service area.

Other options BPA has presented are phasing out the program by 1990, or raising rates or continuing it.

There will be a hearing on BPA's rate increase on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Burley Inn.

Airport to begin clearing farm property purchase

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Sun Valley Regional Airport will do some large-scale spring clearing.

Thousands of feet of wire and wooden fences and gates will be removed from approximately 160 acres near the east end of the airport's main runway, to meet the terms of a federal grant.

Meanwhile, a newly hired farm manager is preparing for crested weatgrass production on the land to generate revenue for the airport operation.

Engineer Dale Riedesel reported to the Airport Board on Tuesday that the airport is required to remove all structures from the 160 acres under the terms of a grant from the Federal Aviation Administration used to purchase the property.

The city of Twin Falls bought the land last fall from the Glenn Nelson family for about $165,000. Airport Manager Harry Merrick said. The purpose of the purchase was to protect the clear zone around the airport from encroachment.

The grant will also pay for removing the structures, which includes fences and several buildings, and the installation of a perimeter fence around the entire area.

According to their agreement with the city, the Nelson family must clear the land by March 17, Riedesel said. The family has indicated, however, it will seek an extension. Until the family leaves, the buildings can't be cleared, he said.

The airport can start with the removal of the fences on the remainder of the property, which should be placed out to bid soon, Riedesel said. A section at the end of the runway, called the safety area, must not only be cleared of fences and a ditch, but graded and sloped.

Some of the materials can be salvaged, such as boards from a

Chiropractic clinic gets P&Z approval

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A proposed chiropractic health-care clinic received the approval of the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday evening.

The commission approved a request by Dr. Alan Fox of Twin Falls for a special-use permit to construct and operate the clinic at the corner of Monroe Street and Falls Avenue.

The approval is final following an appeal period, said City Development Director LaMar Orton.

The approximately 5,100-square-foot clinic will house three staff doctors in a residential-style building, according to the permit application.

At a previous zoning meeting, Fox said the landscaping would complement that of the College of Southern Idaho, located across the street.

ment and drastically improve the area. The zoning is appropriate and Fox wrote in a letter to the city.

At the public hearing on Tuesday, no one objected to the request, Orton said.

The commission modified the permit by limiting the number of curb cuts originally requested, Orton said.

The area is zoned multi-family residential with a professional overlay. The overlay was placed on the area last year.

In other business, the commission approved a special-use permit request from the Christiansen Construction Company, Inc. to install a residential mobile home at 659 Eastland Dr. S. for use by a watchman.

Sentencing leads to records inquiry

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls attorney was sentenced in 5th District Court Feb. 5, to a year in jail on a felony drunk driving charge, but what started with some sympathetic pressions about the man's problem ended Wednesday with an informal inquiry into court records practices.

Fred Plankey of Twin Falls was arrested last month on a DUI charge by Twin Falls city officers, while he was on probation for two previous similar charges.

He appeared in 5th District Magistrate Court on probation violation charges and on the new charge. The court ordered the previous sentences enforced and Plankey waived preliminary hearing and was bound over to District Court on the third count, a felony charge.

Judge Phillip Becker sentenced Plankey last week to another 30 days in jail, with 2 years probation for the new charge. He ordered Plankey to pay $20 to the victim recovery fund and another $30 per month for supervised probation. Judge Becker also required Plankey to attend Alcoholics Anonymous programs and work-release program at the Twin Falls County Jail.

He will be allowed to serve jail time at night and to have time off to attend the A.A. meetings during the coming year.

Becker explained that each time Plankey arrives at the jail to serve a night of his sentence, he will be tested for alcoholic consumption. Any violation will result in additional jail time.

Becker said it is a stiff sentence, but he feels repeated offenses must be dealt with to prevent what could be fatal or serious injury accidents. He said it is also important that such individuals have help in recovery from the drinking problem.

Plankey's two young sons died in recent years of muscular dystrophy, and friends say he needs help in fighting the drinking problem that began about that time.

The Feb. 5 sentence was not reported until Tuesday, because the case file had been transferred to District Court but was not returned to the regular filing location.

When asked by a reporter about the file, Clerk Sherry Broyles immediately provided it, saying that it was on her desk, but available, because it was possible for a clerical error.

Broyles said later that she put the file on her desk rather than in the normal filing location, after an informal discussion in the courtroom. She said she understood that from conversation that she was doing so with the approval of Becker.

Fifth District trial court Judge Daniel Hurlburt of Twin Falls said Wednesday that the file was apparently held back through a misunderstanding.

Becker, of Gooding, who is district administrative judge, said emphatically Wednesday that there was no misunderstanding, at

Tools taken in farm burglary

RUPERT — Tools valued at $448 were reported taken in a farm burglary during the past weekend in Madison County.

Sheriff's officers reported a burglary occurred at the Wayne Plocher farm, near Paul, sometime during the past several days. Plocher reported the theft Monday, telling officers someone broke into a locked yard area and took an assortment of tools of various sizes and values. The investigation was still under way Tuesday.

Man sentenced for child abuse

TWIN FALLS — Charles Edward Merkle, 67, of Twin Falls was sentenced in 5th District Court to serve 5 years indeterminate sentences on each of five counts of sexual abuse of a child.

The sentences were to run consecutively, but the court retained judgment for 120 days and ordered 60 days of attendance in a program for sex offenders.

Merkle was charged with the abuse of three young girls, ages 5, 7 and 8 years, over a period of several months.

Arrest may solve 3 burglaries

JEROME — Three of several recent rural burglaries in the east end of Jerome County were believed solved this week with the arrest of one man.

Jerome County Sheriff's Deputy Deane Moore said Randy Brixey, 23, of Hazelton, was in custody Tuesday on three first-degree burglary counts involving home burglaries in the Eden and Hazelton areas.

Moore said the homes included those of Ralph Simmons and Don McDonald, which were broken into during the past few weeks, and another home where the residents are still away and have not reported the thefts.

In the Simmons home guns and other items, valued at about $1,000, were taken, while mostly jewelry was taken at the McDonald home.

Moore said that several burglaries have occurred this winter in the same general area, including some very recent ones.

In addition, Moore said, the Jerome Sheriff's Department has recovered a car stolen from Jerome about 2 weeks ago. She said two juveniles were apprehended in Colorado with the vehicle and all are being returned to Jerome. The vehicle was taken from a parking lot at the Huber Feed Service in Jerome.

Baptist church burglarized

TWIN FALLS — Burglars broke into the Grace Baptist Church, 798 Eastland Dr. N., sometime between 4 p.m. Friday and 10:30 p.m. Saturday and removed a large quantity of sound equipment.

Police reports in Twin Falls say $1,462 worth of sound equipment, including speakers and microphones and amplifiers, were removed from the church in the theft. $8 in cash was taken, Rev. M.L. Glatz told officers.

Police said someone kicked in a door to gain entry and carried the equipment from the building.

Safe belonged to Curry Grain

TWIN FALLS — A safe that was found in Snake River Canyon and recovered over the weekend is the property of Curry Grain Storage Co., Deputy Sheriff Harold Jensen said Tuesday.

He said the safe had been located some time ago, Jensen said, but was recovered Saturday in an exercise in canyon work rappelling for reserve officers.

The contents of the safe, mostly checks, had been removed before the safe was pushed into the canyon.

Hay growers to meet today

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley hay growers will meet today to discuss possibilities for compressing hay for foreign markets and to assess local hay markets.

George Juker, president of Rainbow-Commodity Co. of Buhl, which is organizing the session, said he hopes to sound out local farmers about a cooperative effort to process hay for shipping overseas. Farmers in the Cambridge-area have organized in a similar way to buy a hay press and to ship their crops overseas.

The meeting is intended as an exchange of information and will have no sales presentations, said Juker.

The no-host meeting is scheduled for 2 p.m. in the Golden Grids Farm Restaurant, 2956 Kimberly Rd., in Twin Falls. All hay growers and others interested in the industry are invited.

Utah runaways held at center

JEROME — Three teen-age girls from Utah were in custody at the Southern Idaho Youth Center in Jerome Wednesday, facing auto theft and runaway charges.

The girls, ages 15 and 16 years, were spotted by Idaho State Police officers about 1:45 p.m. Wednesday, at the eastbound rest area on Interstate 84 in Jerome County.

State police said the three are all from Vernal, Utah, and were traveling in a vehicle that had been reported stolen in Vernal.

A rebroadcast from Jerome on an attempt to locate the three was picked up by state officers, who recognized the vehicle at the rest stop just east of the U.S. 90-84 junction.

3-car accident slightly hurts 1

TWIN FALLS — A three-car accident on Piler Avenue Wednesday afternoon resulted in minor injuries to one person but damaged all three vehicles.

Police said a car driven by Joyce D. Smith, 30, of Twin Falls was stopped in traffic and a second vehicle stopped behind it. The second vehicle was driven by Kisa K. Luper, 31, also of Twin Falls. A third vehicle, a pickup truck driven by Eric G. Carlson, 16, of Twin Falls, collided with the rear of the Luper vehicle, pushing it into the Smith vehicle. All three were traveling west at the time of the accident.

Marilyn Holland, 47, of Gardner, Mont., a passenger in the Smith car, was treated for minor injuries and released. The accident was reported to police at 3:20 p.m. and an ambulance was dispatched.

Stallings to lead farm-series

TWIN FALLS — U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, will bring experts on farm finance, immigration and soil conservation to Twin Falls Friday as part of the "Idaho Family Farms — Hope and Help" series of public meetings in the 2nd Congressional District.

Stallings will lead the half-day session, which begins at 8:30 a.m. in the Twin Falls Holiday Inn, 1350 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

Wendell Barton, agriculture representative for the Independent Bankers Association of America, and Mike Shoemaker, farm program specialist for the U.S. Farmers Home Administration's office at Boise, will speak about lending issues.

An Idaho Falls certified public accountant will discuss tax reform and agriculture.

Marvin Mohrman, district director for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, will assess the H-2 program and immigration reform. Finally, Rod All, deputy state conservationist for the U.S. Soil Conservation Service at Boise, will speak about the 1985 Farm Bill's conservation programs.

The sessions are free and the public is invited. Stallings is holding similar meetings at Idaho Falls and Pocatello today.

Court upholds contempt fine

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Court of Appeals has upheld the $500 contempt of court fine levied against an Idaho Falls attorney in a child custody case.

Attorney Reginald Reeves was ordered to pay the fine on a charge that he advised a client to disregard a judge's order.

The Court of Appeals, in unanimously upholding the fine in a decision released Wednesday, noted that it wasn't clear until recently that anyone could appeal a judge's finding of contempt of court.

The court noted that the persons involved can challenge the procedure by which contempt is judged, may argue there is no evidence to support the finding that he or she knowingly violated a court order or can challenge the penalties involved.

"However, he may not knowingly ignore an order of the court, even though he believes it to be incorrect, and then contest the validity of the underlying order on appeal from a finding of criminal contempt," the court said.

The legal system will not work otherwise, the court said.

"If a party were free to disobey any order with which he or she disagreed, the entrepreneurial process could break down," said an opinion written by Justice Roger Swanson.

Retired nurse finds dead ewe ... wasn't

HAGERMAN — Fern Pothier, a retired nurse who lives northwest of Hagerman, was broken-hearted recently when she went into the sheep pen and found "Pretty Girl," one of her Suffolk ewes, on her back, still as a stone with feet extending into the air.

"She looked very bloated. I knew she was dead, so I went in the house and called the dead animal service," Pothier said. "I felt terrible."

Since the animal wasn't to be picked up until the next morning, Pothier went to bed feeling sad over the loss of the big sheep that had appeared healthy until found on her back that day.

The next morning when Pothier went to feed the flock, she was shocked to see one of Pretty Girl's legs give a few kicks.

"I thought, my word, she's alive and I left her lying there on her back all night," the woman said.

"Normally a sheep that gets on its back doesn't live long, Pothier explained.

Although the sheep still looked bloated, Pothier was able to get it rolled over on its tummy and soon on its feet. Within a few hours Pretty Girl was eating.

A few days later Pretty Girl gave birth to triplet lambs. Pothier, who still hasn't figured out how the sheep survived the night on its back without a fatal case of pneumonia, said at least she found out why Pretty Girl looked so fat and bloated.

As of Wednesday, mother and babies were doing fine, but Pothier was still a little in shock.

3,900-foot wooden fence, he said. Twin Falls County Commissioner Judy Felton put in a request for the work, saying the fair operation could use the materials. County employees could tear down the structure and haul it away.

The Airport Board took no action on the request.

If the city decides to sell some of the more valuable structures, such as granaries, some of the profit might have to go to the FAA because the FAA will supply 50 percent of the funds to clear the land, he said.

Riedesel told the board they would have to decide what materials they might want to salvage. Merrick said Riedesel will do further research on what can be included in the grant to remove the structures.

The airport board plans to irrigate 121 acres of the property. Crested wheatgrass is grown without irrigation on other city-owned acreage around the airport.

The board hired Larry McKay to manage the farming operation.

McKay, who farms 70 acres near the airport, contracted with the city for a salary of $18,000 a year. The contract includes a graduating percentage of the profits from crop sales as an incentive, City Manager Tom Courtney said.

McKay said he had never grown wheatgrass during his many years as a farmer. When he heard about the job opening, he did research about the crop. He found it had a good potential for profit, he said.

Airport Board Chairman Dick Shotwell said McKay had "very, very high qualifications."

McKay and Merrick will discuss what equipment must be purchased for the operation.

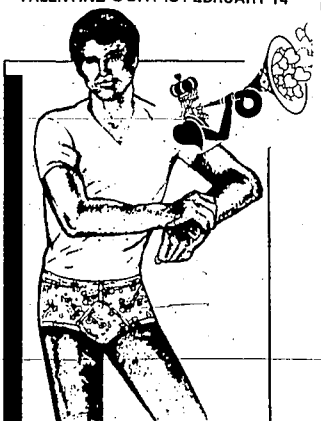

Merrick had said previously that the airport would make more money in farming than by renting the land to farmers.

If crop prices and yields are good, the airport could earn as much as $99,000 from the additional acres, he reported.

Robbins said on Wednesday that he has not talked to Scott this year, and he did not know why she characterized him as "weak" on tort reform.

"Donna and I have never talked about tort reform, and I don't know where she gets that I'm heavily influenced by Chris Hooper," Robbins said. "And at this point, my mind's wide open on the issue."

Fairchild, chairman of the Judiciary and Rules Committee, called the memo "bull—."

"I haven't talked to Donna in 2 years," he said.

"Fairchild said he will vote for liability reform, but only on the condition that insurance reform be part of the package."

"I have one goal: to get relief for my constituents on insurance rates," Fairchild said. "I have no intention of passing a bill that purports to do the job, and doesn't."

Fairchild said that despite 42 hours of testimony last year on the issue, not one witness could affirm that insurance rates would drop or insurance would be easier to get if liability reform legislation passed.

Darrington said lobbyists from both the liability reform coalition and the Trial Lawyers Association, a group opposing the measure, have been in his office every day. Darrington said he's solidly in favor of tort reform.

However, Darrington did say he had concerns that the legislation will not lower insurance rates, which is what people expect.

Whether expressed similar concerns over liability reform legislation.

Scott admitted that she had not talked to Robbins or Fairchild or the others named in the memo. She said the information was based on what other lobbyists supplied her.

"People who do the lobbying work report to me, and I get the word to the constituents," she said. "It's normal procedure to say who needs encouraging."

She said the quote on Fairchild would be the "savior" came from coalition lobbyist Ken McClure.

McClure could not be reached for comment. Weatherly said he did not recall that wording being used in meetings.

Scott's worst breach of lobbying tactics seems to be not that she made the characterizations, but that she put it in writing.

Other lobbyists admitted that it was standard procedure to line up the ducks on an issue. What was not standard, they said, was to put the information in a written memo.

"When you put the thing in writing, it looks worse," Weatherly said. "I can understand how certain legislators took offense. I regret it happened."

Weatherly said no similar memo exists from other coalition lobbyists. He said he hoped there would be no negative ramifications.

He added that Scott would remain with the coalition.

INN urges halt to sales tax on food stamps

By RONDA TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — "With a letter that big, they can't ignore it," said Idaho Neighbors Network member Ciell Frazier Jr., as he and other INN members solicited signatures for a 6-foot letter urging the halt of sales tax collections on food stamp purchases.

The giant letter urges Rep. Steve Antone (R-Rupert), the Chairman of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee, to issue legislation that will stop the state sales tax on food stamps before the federal government withdraws the $37.6 million program from Idaho on Oct. 1.

"What we're telling people basically," Frazier said, "is that we're going to lose food stamps in Idaho if the Legislature doesn't take the sales tax off of food stamp

6-foot petition to Antone seeks action before state loses federal program

They gathered signatures for the letter Wednesday from people lined up at the Burley South Central Community Action Agency waiting for the distribution of government commodities to those who met low-income guidelines.

Response to the letter was better than the group had expected, he said. The INN had to start an additional 3-foot section of signatures because the original letter was filled up between 9:15 and 10 a.m. With the second section filling quickly, he said they would probably have to start others.

SCCA county specialist Candl Brady said that while she was surprised to see the INN members and their giant letter arrive, she agreed with their cause. The potential withdrawal of federal funding for food because it was concerned that changing the current accounting system would be expensive to businesses, Antone said in a letter to Idahoans, she said.

"One thing people don't realize is that the state of Idaho stands to lose $60 million in federal aid, $47 million in food stamps and $13 million in WIC (women, infants and children) money," she said. "The loss of that in administration, i.e., the tax reporting, funding won't only affect low-income people. Idaho also stands to lose $1.8 million in

Thus far Idaho has not complied with a federal demand that all states remove state sales tax on food stamp purchases if they are to continue to participate in the program. Last March the state Revenue and Taxation Committee requested, and was granted, a one-year extension of the federal deadline that would have eliminated the food stamp program in Idaho on Oct. 1, 1986.

The committee asked for the extension because it was concerned that changing the current accounting system would be expensive to businesses, Antone said in a letter to Idahoans, she said.

"We're concerned about what it would do to the economy of Idaho that is already bad," INN member Connie Williams said. "We'd have a lot of ghost towns," she predicted.

"The position of people who run food banks and that sort of thing is that they're already overburdened and can't pick up the slack," Sherman said.

Williams said that the INN was very concerned about the effect the loss of food stamps would have on the children of Idahoans currently receiving government food assistance. "If our children go to school

Andrus sworn in as Jerome commissioner

By TERESA Z. TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Business resumed in the Jerome County Board of Commissioners' office Wednesday after a second commissioner, Republican George E. Andrus, was sworn in by Commissioner Carl Montgomery before a crowd of about a dozen people.

Andrus takes the place of former commissioner Ray Cobble, who died in January, his first month in office.

Notified of his selection Monday by Gov. Cecil Andrus, Commissioner Andrus said that after losing in the primaries to Cobble last year, he thought his political career was over.

"I have been getting advice and congratulations from all over town," he said.

Commissioner Andrus called Wednesday a re-dedicated day and emphasized in a short speech after the ceremony that he wanted to represent the people of Jerome County, not just George Andrus.

"I want it said that I did represent the people," Andrus said.

Taking the opportunity to state his views on county workers, Andrus alluded to what he termed "hard feelings, jealousy and disunity" within the county work force.

"If they have a job to do, I hope they do it with happiness and dispatch," he continued, stressing that county employees need "the right attitude."

Commissioner Andrus also said that any county employees who don't want to maintain the right attitude might find themselves looking for another job.

"We should be a happy family," he said.

After the swearing-in ceremony, Commissioner Andrus and Montgomery got down to business, resolving several matters that had been pending before the commissioners. Because of Cobble's death and the resignation of a third commissioner, the board had not had a quorum of two to legally transact business since the end of January.

Business completed during the session Wednesday included approval or disapproval of several indigency applications and requests for rebates. Additionally, a special use permit was issued to the Northside Canal Co., granting permission for the construction of a hydroelectric plant on a canal near Hazelton.

Another request by the County Planning and Zoning Commission to require Jerome's juvenile detention center to hold a special use permit has not been decided upon yet, Montgomery said the matter is still under study by the commissioners.

Bringing the number of Jerome County Commissioners to two, George Andrus, left, is sworn in by Commissioner Carl Montgomery

Copies opponents' tactics

Weed wars: Group pushes herbicides

By RONDA TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — A counter advocacy group is being formed in Idaho to promote the use of herbicides on noxious weeds in Idaho, an Ada County weed coordinator told the Idaho Irrigation Pumpers Association Tuesday in Burley.

Gene Ross said the new group, Idaho Citizens for Food and Shelter, is copying the tactics of its opponent, the Northwest Coalition for Alternatives to Pesticides, and intends to push local government agencies for noxious weed control.

The ICFS is being formed by "agriculture and timber people getting together to use pesticides, primarily herbicides, in a meaningful manner," Ross said.

Declo, Elba and Oakley areas and have caused some hay crops to be quarantined in the past.

But herbicides used to control noxious weeds, such as 2,4-D and picloram, have been cited by environmentalists as creating long-term risks to humans, animals and the environment.

Control of noxious weeds in Idaho has become an issue in the two years since the Idaho Natural Resources Legal Foundation challenged a five-state Bureau of Land Management environmental assessment plan and won a court order prohibiting controlling the weeds with herbicides.

The case has been appealed by the U.S. 9th District Court this March, Ross said.

While the ICFS is just being formed, a similar group in Oregon has "been very successful in fighting NCAP," according to Ross.

The new Idaho group will follow the methods of the Oregon Citizens for Food and Shelter to fight NCAP's gains in outlawing herbicides. NCAP has sent small groups, usually of women, to plead its case against herbicides to local officials, such as county commissioners, Ross said.

OCFS banded together a similar group of farm wives and other interested persons to appear before the same public officials and argue against NCAP's proposals. The tactic has frequently caused some emotional confrontations between the two groups, but has stopped local ordinances banning herbicides, Ross said.

While noxious weeds germinate and spread rapidly, they do not provide food for domestic or wild animals. Instead they compete with suitable grazing vegetation and with agricultural crops. Infestations of noxious weeds, primarily leaf spurge, have affected the Basin,

However, some progress toward noxious weed control has been made in Idaho within the last two years, he said. The Idaho Noxious Weed Work Group, which consists of environmentalists, public officials, food producers and representatives of government agencies, has agreed to make eradication of invading weed species a top priority, he said.

The INWW also advocates controlling established weed infestations on public lands, he said.

The U.S. Forest Service, working out of its Ogdon, Utah, office, drafted an environmental impact statement in March 1986 that included Southern Idaho. This statement has not been appealed by any environmental group, Ross said.

"Now we have noxious weed control in Forest Service lands in Idaho, but not on BLM lands," he said.

However, noxious weeds infest very little of Forest Service lands, as compared to BLM lands. The BLM's insistence on keeping Idaho within the five-state district has allowed it to be targeted by environmental groups who would otherwise have no objection to Idaho's program, he said.

Jerome schools keep fund-raising program

By TERESA Z. TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Despite a request from a Jerome parent to look into the school district's fund-raising practices, School Board members decided to allow the program to continue, but urged school administrators and teachers to use good judgment and discretion when fund-raising within the community.

At the January board meeting, parent Linda Clark had requested that the School Board look into fund-raising methods within the schools, particularly those that involve the sale of books to students. She said the practice placed too much pressure on students to come up with money, when perhaps the family was already under financial straits.

Superintendent Richard Kugler compiled a report detailing the district's fund-raising activities and submitted it to the board with no recommendation this week. However, he said fund-raising activities such as the annual spell-a-thon, contributed a great deal of money to the school that otherwise might not be available.

Fund-raisers for the Jerome school district include a book fair, a spell-a-thon, a read-a-thon, Santa's secret shop, individual pictures, chocolate candy sales, book orders, book clubs, a jump rope for heart program, a Campbell soup label donation contest, Book-It, a perfect attendance program and a Jerome Tiger sports clothing program. In addition to individual high school club fund-raising activities.

Blaine refuses evidence on Eagle Creek appeal

By JOHN ZILLY
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — An appeal to the Blaine County Board of Commissioners over a stream alteration permit issued last year that could set the tone for future use of wetland near the Big Wood River, ended in an emotional tug-of-war Monday.

At the Blaine County Commissioners' meeting Monday, Friends of the Big Wood River appealed a stream alteration permit issued by the Blaine County Planning and Zoning office to Dean Oliver last November.

But the commissioners did not allow the Friends of the River to present new evidence, because the appeal was submitted after the 20-day appeal limit had expired.

In November, Ed Nigbor, director of Blaine County planning and zoning, issued a stream alteration permit to Oliver. The permit allows Oliver to alter a portion of the existing stream channel of Eagle Creek that runs through his property.

Eagle Creek is a small tributary permit issued last year that could set the tone for future use of wetland near the Big Wood River, ended in an emotional tug-of-war Monday.

Nigbor failed to notify the landowners living 300 feet above or 1,000 feet below Oliver's property about the proposed alteration of Eagle Creek.

At the meeting Monday, the Friends of the Big Wood River said that its appeal was late because the alteration in November. The Friends, numbering around seven, argued they should be allowed to submit evidence.

But Steve Crabtree, attorney for Dean Oliver, said "there was nothing unusual about Ed (Nigbor) issuing this permit administrative."

Barnyard bias shows eye for details

I saw Ola from a distance as I took a jog down our gravel road. She opened up the gate wearing an apron and a smile, measuring her steps carefully as someone past retirement might.

"I won't keep you," she said. "I know you like your walk, but say, ... um, did you know the robins have come back?"

Another time, another place, not Indian Cove, and I might have looked at her with a screwed up nose and those arched eyebrows people wear sometimes and said, "Huh?"

Now I feel her elation in the coming spring because living on the quiet farm you tend to notice things like the flutter of a robin's wing. The ability to appreciate little things requires an eye for detail. It's something that takes development.

I believe we've all come into the world not only fallen from grace, but also singularly obtuse. You don't think so? Have you ever watched a toddler get his food to his mouth? It comes in gooey heaps. And the chosen method of transportation? His chubby little fists, of course. I might mention to this tiny individual the fact that details, like spoons, knives, and forks count, but little good it would do me.

Children, bless their innocence, have an excuse. What about all us adults who live our lives and forget to ... how'd that song go? Oh yes; "stop and smell the roses along the way (or notice the robins)."

Diana Hooley Country neighbors

So many people here in Indian Cove are rose-smellers and robin-watchers. I don't know you exactly, but I think it's lack of stren, subway and smog distractions. I guess my barnyard bias is showing.

Take Doris for instance. There are quilters and there are quilters. But how many who flatter themselves with this title can get 5 stitches on a three-quarter-inch needle? The really remarkable thing about this is, I've never seen a Band-Aid on her needle finger and her eyes are prescription has stayed the same all these years. Occasionally someone will cross these sacred perimeters, anywhere past the Hammett bridge and before the Cove Community Church, and desecrate the ground with a golden beer can or a bright orange aberration from a taco chip company.

Uncle Willard, a rose-smelling robin-watcher from way back, took notice of this one day and decided to do something about it. He wanted the children and grandchildren and the church young people to all get together and go on a charity walk for ourselves, picking up and cleaning up Indian Cove road.

I appreciated his design in this plan, and even more I appreciated dear Uncle Willard, a genuine nurturer if ever there was one. But shortly after this, Uncle Willard died, and the candy wrappers and soda pop bottles and refuse all were graded under when the road grader came down Indian Cove road.

Which leaves me wondering if, after we all go, scientists and explorers will come here to find what kind of people, what kind of civilization we had. Did we have hand-painted pottery? Did we meticulously carve arrowheads? Were we intrigued with our lives and careful and watchful of the daily details? Or will they find heaps and heaps of brand names. I hope not.

ly. Even if there was a problem with notification, none of the people here (the Friends of the Big Wood River) are entitled to notification" because they are not 300 feet upstream or 1,000 feet downstream from Oliver's property.

Nearby landowners were notified of a meeting in December in which the Blaine County Planning and Zoning Board issued Oliver a conditional use permit to build on his property as long as he built at least 25 feet from the existing Eagle Creek stream bed.

Also in that meeting, Friends of the Big Wood River were not allowed to testify about the stream alteration permit that was issued a month before. According to the zoning commission, that issue was settled and the vote to decide whether to grant a conditional use permit to allow Oliver to build on the flood plain of the Big Wood River.

hungry, they can't learn," she said. "If we lose our food stamps, these kids will go to school hungry, and it's hard enough to learn."
Many of the people signing the letter Wednesday were also concerned about the future of their families. "You'd better sign that (letter) because that's (food stamps) the only things that's buying your food," Robert Rogers told his wife, Doyleen. The unemployed father of a 4-week-old and a 2-year-old daughter said he hadn't heard about the federal threat to withdraw food stamps until he saw the INN letter.

Fund-raising

Kugler said some of the programs entail students going door-to-door asking for donations and some just have a sign-up sheet at the school for those who might want to participate.
Trustee Ben Neff said he was concerned about the price of books displayed at the book fair and that students might feel pressured to purchase them.
"Maybe we should ensure those students that may not have the money to buy the books, could make arrangements to finance them... say for 10 cents a month for six months. When we have 46 percent of the kids on free and reduced lunches, there is more than one kid who may have trouble buying books," Neff said.
Emphasizing that the books in question were also available in school libraries, Kugler said in extreme instances some teachers have used their own money to buy a book for a student.

But Chairman Rupert House said that enough evidence had been heard.
Only House and Commissioner Robert Gardner discussed the matter, because Commissioner Alan Reynolds declared a conflict of interest. Reynolds is the real estate agent who sold the Eagle Creek property to Oliver in December.

Oliver said he couldn't believe that there was a problem. "I don't want to cause any problems with the river," he said. "It's all gotten really emotional. I'm not a bad person."

The Friends of the River argued that Oliver wasn't being sensitive to problems involved in altering a stream channel and building on a wetland. "There are plenty of other places to build on that property," said Andy Goodwin, a nearby landowner. "I think we should go back to square one and have a new hearing. We have a lot of evidence to submit about that property."

When the meeting ended, Oliver and Crabtree met with the Friends of the River and tried to find a compromise building site, but failed to do so. Another attempt at compromise will occur later.
Nigbor said he felt the entire issue was "politically delicate" because of much increased interest in modifications along the Big Wood River. "He is definitely entitled to build on that lot," he said.
"The way this is resolved is darned important," Nigbor said. "We'll use this case as an example in the future."

Luncheon to honor Connolly

TWIN FALLS — Helen Connolly, Twin Falls organist, will be honored at a "celebrity" luncheon at noon Feb. 20 at the Holiday Inn, sponsored by the Magic Valley Symphony League. Cost is $6.50. Connolly, who is organist at the United Methodist Church and a music instructor at CSI, will be organ soloist for the symphony's winter concert at 3 p.m. Feb. 22. Reservations for the luncheon must be made by Tuesday with Edie Laats, 733-1787, or Carma Smith, 733-2782.

Dairy goat group to meet

JEROME — The Magic Valley Dairy Goat Association will meet at 2 p.m. Sunday at the home of Clifford and Sheila Graham, three miles west and one and three-fourth miles north of Jerome. Discussion will be held on raising newborn kids. Anyone interested in learning more about dairy goats is welcome. For more information call 326-3193, 536-6448 or 324-5098.

Hospice training classes set

TWIN FALLS — Volunteer hospice training classes begin at 7 p.m. Tuesday at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. The training all taught by community professionals, includes 10 sessions on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Fee is $20. For additional information or to register call 737-2502.

Weddings

Robinette-Norris

TWIN FALLS — Julie Robinette became the bride of Joe Norris Oct. 25 at the Immanuel Lutheran Church in Twin Falls.

The Rev. Gary Benedix officiated. Mike Norris, uncle of the bridegroom, and Terry Hays sang, accompanied by Sue Keonen, organist.

The bride is the daughter of Shirley Robinette, Jerome, and the bridegroom's parents are Don and Mary Norris, Twin Falls.

Kandra Danos, Gooding, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Kelly Crockett, Twin Falls, sister of the bridegroom; Theresa A. Robinette, Twin Falls, sister-in-law of the bride; Sharon Benefield, Twin Falls, and Camille Reeder, Boise. Shauna Lancaster, Filer, was flower girl.

Casey Bartholomew, Ontario, Ore., was best man. Groomsmen were Dan Danos, Gooding, brother-in-law of the bridegroom; Mike Allen, Nampa; Mike Norris, Twin Falls, cousin of the bridegroom, and Brian Howard, Buhl. Reeder and Howard also served as candlelighters.

Dusty Danos, Gooding, nephew of the bridegroom, was ringbearer.

Special guests were Ruth Peterson, Twin Falls, and Louise Orr, Jerome, grandmothers of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Anderson, Twin Falls, grandparents of the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony a reception was held. Lisa Orr, Rupert, attended the guest book. Jennifer Clifford, Twin Falls; Wendt Willis, Filer; and Charlie Henry, Wendell, were gift attendants.

Serving were Nancy Clifford and Louise Campbell, both of Twin Falls, and Sue Edwards and Sandy Roberts, both cousins of the bride from Jerome.

The bride, a 1984 graduate of Twin Falls High School, is employed by Bach Photographs. The bridegroom, who graduated in 1986 from Twin Falls High School, is self-employed as a farmer.

Film offers 20 minutes of straight talk

DEAR ABBY: I just saw a 20-minute film at a church that I think should be required viewing for everyone between the ages of 11 and 65. It is titled "Sex, Drugs and AIDS." Afterward, a panel of medical experts answered questions from the audience.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

This film is for males, females, straights, gays or bisexuals; also for IV drug users and especially teenagers. It stressed that everyone who is sexually active can be a victim of AIDS. This film really opened my eyes.

I understand that some civic-minded people and Houston citizens interested in public health were the sponsors of this meeting. It was open to the public and there was no charge. I went out of curiosity because everyone is talking about AIDS, and I just can't say enough about how terrific I thought it was.

—SAFE, ALIVE IN HOUSTON
DEAR SAFE AND ALIVE: The film, "Sex, Drugs and AIDS," was produced by ODN Productions, Suite 304, 74 Varick St., New York, N.Y. 10013. It is available as a videocassette to qualified civic and community organizations for $35 a print. It has been endorsed by the American Foundation for AIDS Research.

I have seen it, and agree it should be seen by everyone between the ages of 10 and 65. It's the kind of plain talk young (and older) people can relate to.

DEAR ABBY: A new club just opened up deep in the heart of Texas. It's a country-western club and is decorated inside-and-out western style.

The owner asked for suggestions as to what to put on the doors of the restrooms. I suggested "Cows" and "Bulls." He used my suggestion, and in three days he got four complaints from women who resented being called "cows," so he changed it to "heifers." "Heifers" has been on the door for three months, and he hasn't had one complaint.

As far as I'm concerned, "heifers" sounds worse than cows. Comments welcomed.

—PROUD TEXAN
DEAR TEXAS: Since a heifer is a young cow who has never had a calf, some women may deem the term "heifers" more flattering than "cows," which I find utterly ridiculous.

What's the matter with "His" or "Hers," "Men" and "Women," or "Ladies" and "Gentlemen"? Or, if a picture is worth 10,000 words, use a picture of a cowboy and a cowgirl on appropriate doors. Foreign tourists who can't read English might appreciate it — and that's no bull.

DEAR ABBY: I am a young, happily married woman with two children. Last year my parents divorced, and I just learned that my father is having an affair with my mother-in-law, who is still married and living with her husband. This came as a shock to me because I never suspected that my in-laws were having problems.

My husband is aware of what's going on between my father and his mother, and says it's none of his business, and he doesn't care to discuss it.

Well, it bothers me, and I do want to discuss it. I'm afraid if my father breaks up my in-laws' marriage, it might break up our marriage. What should I do?

—WORRIED
DEAR WORRIED: You can't force your husband to discuss anything he doesn't care to discuss.

However, if you feel that your own marriage is threatened for any reason, it's important for you and your husband to discuss the matter with a professional counselor.

About the affair between your father and your husband's mother: If you want to let them know that you disapprove of their behavior, go ahead, but philanthropic parents are no more inclined to accept advice and criticism from their adult children than vice versa.

UI wins Idaho signing sweepstakes

By STEVE CRUMP

As expected, incoming Boise State University football Coach Skip Hall brought in a load of freshmen, but Hall's cross-state rival at the University of Idaho signed the most Idahoans Wednesday.

That was the count after the first day for national letter-of-intent signings permitted of high school seniors under NCAA regulations.

Boise State signed 21 freshmen Wednesday, and — unexpectedly — three junior college transfers. Four of Hall's signings, all fresh, are from Idaho.

University of Idaho Coach Keith Gilbertson signed 19 freshmen, eight of them from Idaho and two each from Boise and Pocatello. The Vandals brought in just one JC transfer, whose signing was announced earlier.

Idaho State, trying to rebound from a 2-9 finish last year, signed four freshmen and three junior college transfers Wednesday. The school had earlier announced the signing of eight JC transfers.

Five of the most highly sought-after Idaho high school seniors opted to go out of state. Mountain Home running back Maury Toy committed to UCLA, while his teammate, quarterback Gary Taylor, is going to Stanford.

Mike Empey, an offensive tackle at Pocatello's Highland High School, signed with Brigham Young University, as did Scott Charlton, a running back from Idaho Falls' Bonnevill High School. Steve Sampson, a linebacker from Idaho Falls High School, committed to Utah State. Toy, Empey and Sampson were all first-team Idaho Statesman selections for Class A-1.

Boise State's signings are complete, according to BSU sports information director Max Corbel, although Hall has said he may bring in several more JC transfers in the fall. Idaho SID Dave Cook said Wednesday afternoon that Gilbertson had completed his signings, but a spokesman for ISU said four or five more players would be signed within the next day or two.

As far as Idaho prepsters were concerned, Gilbertson had the biggest day. He signed Vince Mann, a 6-foot-3, 215-pound defensive lineman, and Tobe Smith, a 5-11, 225-pound linebacker, from Boise's Borah High School. Mann was the Statesman's A-1 defensive lineman of the year and both he and Smith made the Boise newspaper's first-team all-state A-1 unit.

"I think this continues a long line of players Idaho has had from Borah," said Gilbertson, noting that Mann's father played at Idaho in the mid 1960s and that Smith's older brother Kord, now a freshman at Moscow, is a starting defensive lineman for the Vandals. "Tobe and Vince were both down linemen, but they both have the ability to play linebacker. In Vince's case, he has a chance to be an outstanding pass rusher and Tobe is a fine football look at linebacker because we think he has some skills at that position."

In the day's most surprising development, Gilbertson signed an all-state quarterback from Highland, Andy Bellia. The 6-0, 130-pound Bellia, the Statesman's A-1 offensive back of the year last fall, completed 159 of 302 passes last season for 2,345 yards and 18 touchdowns. Bellia's two immediate predecessors at quarterback at Highland, Mark Arstein and Marty Hoge — both all-stars — signed with ISU.

"Andy is the top quarterback in the state of Idaho," said Gilbertson. "We're real excited about him coming to Idaho. He has a strong arm and will really fit into our style of player."

Cook said Wednesday he did not know if Bellia had been recruited by Idaho State, but said both Utah State and Oregon State had recruited him.

Gilbertson also signed a defensive end from Pocatello High School, Erik Hansen. Hansen, a 6-3, 215-pounder, was first-team all-Gem State Conference.

The other Idahoans who agreed to attend Idaho Wednesday were Mitch Swenson, a 6-1, 185-pound defensive back from Coeur d'Alene; Russ Hayes, a 5-8, 151-pound wide receiver from Coeur d'Alene; Tim Johnson, a 6-4, 215-pound linebacker from Challis; and Reed Payne, a 6-3, 240-pound defensive lineman from Idaho Falls' Skyline High School.

"The biggest thing for us is how many Idaho kids we've signed — maybe the most we've signed from Idaho in quite awhile," said Gilbertson Wednesday. "I thought it was a great year in the state of Idaho, and Gooding High School sophomore Brett Bingham gets an upper hand on teammate Tracy Basterrechea during practice. At 26-0, Bingham is familiar with being on top

Great expectations

Unbeaten and a sophomore, Gooding's Bingham has a chance to join some select company

GOODING — The 1986 Idaho state high school wrestling tournament produced only one Magic Valley winner. Filer's Steve Crown took that gold medal out of the A-3 heavyweight classification.

In the 1987 event, which opens at the College of Southern Idaho today, 67 Magic Valley grapplers will put their hopes on the line. One with perhaps the best shot at an individual championship, though some 147 pounds lighter, has a lot in common with the now-graduated Crown. Brett Bingham, wrestling at 98 pounds in the A-3 class for Gooding High School, enters the fray with a state-best record in his division of 26-0.

Only a sophomore, Bingham compiled a 15-5 slate a year ago and capped his initial season of prep wrestling with a fifth-place showing in state at that same weight. "I wanted to go the season undefeated. I've been working for that all year," said Bingham, just 16. "I've almost got it. Four more wins and I'm there." Bingham counts 17 pins among this year's triumphs. Including District 4's fastest fall time of 23 seconds. One of his strongest showings came at the Buhl Invitational in December, when he registered a major decision over American number No. 1 here this weekend in the A-2 ranks.

"Brett is one of those wrestlers who have real good balance, coordination, speed and agility. He knows where his body is all the time," said first-year Gooding Coach Don Davis. "He's been that type of wrestler who has great control. The only person to score well against him was Spanbauer. Spanbauer got in two escapes and one takedown against Brett and still lost the match by a score of 12-4."

Pat Valliant, coach of A-3 District 4 champion Kimberley, also picked up on that match. "One of the most impressive things I know of Brett is that he easily beat the Spanbauer boy from American Falls, who is a junior and the best of the A-2s," said Valliant. "He's a good one." "Bingham was second in the world schoolboy freestyle championships," Valliant continued. "His dad has taken him on the circuit for a number of years. He's got great balance and he's very intelligent. I don't see any weaknesses. I really like to watch him wrestle. It's nice that we have kids of that caliber in this district. It gives us back some credibility that we've lacked for a number of years."

Agreement is widespread that participation in youth freestyle wrestling programs since the age of 10 has contributed to Bingham's success, but Tom Bingham sees another important quality in his son. "I think probably the biggest thing is that Brett has a great desire to excel. Not just in wrestling, but in everything he does," he said. "I think that's the edge. He's quite a determined kid."

A wingback on the Senators' junior varsity football team as well as a wrestler, the younger Bingham — whose off-season weight ranges right around 105 pounds — carries a 3.5 grade-point average in his studies and became the first year-old to attain Eagle Scout rank in the Gooding area two years ago. "I feel that's quite meaningful," Davis added. "It's wrestling practice from after school until about 6

TWIN FALLS — As is the case with state Class A-1 tournaments in most sports, the Meridian Warriors are favored to win this season's state wrestling tournament which begins its three-day run this afternoon at 1 in the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium.

But not totally. "Because they have 21 kids coming to the tournament," said Minico Coach Brad Cooper, "they

TWIN FALLS — At this year's Class A-3 state wrestling tournament, held at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium today through Saturday, there aren't a lot of Magic Valley wrestlers who are expected to challenge for titles.

But wait 'til next year. "We have some solid individuals who, I think, can do well in the tournament," said Kimberley

Kimberly, Glens Ferry, Shoshone could take home state girls' crowns

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

BLACKFOOT — Undeclared Kimberley and its Canyon Conference archrival Glens Ferry are rated as two of three favorites for the state Class A-3 girls' basketball championship, while defending A-4 champ Shoshone appears to be the team to beat as the combined state tournaments open here this morning.

The double-elimination tournaments run through Saturday at Blackfoot High School. Even though Grace won the A-3 state championship in 1986 and returns four seniors to this year's tournament, the 16-2 Grizzlies will have a tough time repeating.

Prairie High School of Cottonwood, which has won the A-3 title four times in the past 10 years, is back again this year with a perfect 20-0 record.

Kimberly also is undefeated at 21-0 and has one of the tournament's tallest and most experienced lineups. The Bulldogs have eight seniors led by 6-foot 1-inch Cindy Holcomb. The A-3 tournament kicks off with 18-1 Firth facing 20-5 Glens Ferry at 9 a.m. this morning, followed by Prairie against Kimberley at 10:40 a.m. The winners of those games meet at 6:25 p.m. Friday.

The first round's evening session matches 12-8 New Plymouth against 17-3 Challis at 6:25 p.m., then Grace battles 12-7 Lapwai at 10 p.m. The winners play at 9:45 p.m. Friday.

At 20-5, Shoshone's main competition in the A-4 tournament might come from 17-2 Council. But the Indians have the advantage in experience and depth. They are returning seven seniors while the Lumberjacks have no seniors, two sophomores and only seven players in all.

Another strong contender could be 19-1 Greenleaf Friends Academy, which won 17 straight games at the beginning of the season.

The A-4 tournament begins at 12:20 p.m. Thursday with Council facing 10-6 Salmon River High School of Riggins. Genesee, 16-2, meets Shoshone at 2 p.m. with the winners

Idaho will try again to fatten up on Boise St.

BOISE (AP) — Forward Arnell Jones powered Boise State through an 18-4 surge at the start of the second half as the Broncos overmatched Eastern Washington 70-45 Wednesday in a non-conference basketball game.

Boise State, in capping a sweep of its two-game season series with Eastern Washington, lifted its overall record to 17-5. The Broncos have won five straight games.

Eastern Washington, a Division I Independent that will join the Big Sky Conference next season, is 4-21. Jones, who scored five points in the first 3-1/2 minutes of the second half, cut loose inside with 16 points on 8 field goal attempts.

He also had a game-high 11 rebounds. Forward Eric Hayes struck for 14 points and grabbed seven rebounds. And post Jeff Kelley hit all seven of his field goal attempts and contributed 14 points. Freshman forward Nate Perkins led Eastern Washington with 10 points and eight rebounds, but the Eagles hit only 36 percent of their field goal attempts.

cond victory for BSU at ISU in 17 games.

"We recognize that they had a lot of guys that were ill and may have got a little tired at the end," Idaho coach Tim Floyd said of BSU's Jan. 17 loss to his team. "They've gotten better since then, and we'll have to be as sharp as we can to be able to stay with them."

But before traveling to Moscow, Boise State first must get past non-conference rival Eastern Washington Wednesday night in Boise. Bronco Coach Bobby Dye said staying up after hitting last week's emotional peak might be a problem. "Any time you're as high as we were coming back from Idaho State, you know the old adage: What shot must come down," he said.

Other Big Sky games this week include 36-Idaho State at 6:30 Montana and 3-6 Weber State at league-leading 8-1 Montana State on Thursday. Besides Boise State at Idaho, other conference action on Saturday includes ISU at MSU, Weber at Montana and 4-5 Nevada-Reno at 2:7 Northern Arizona.

The Lumberjacks host to Louisiana State on Monday night, 70-58.

Montana State, which lost its first Big Sky game of the season at Northern Arizona last week to drop to 17-5 overall, has the luxury of playing at home this week against seven teams it beat on the road earlier.

But Bobcat coach Stu Starnes said he would need a little extra from his team after the NAU loss and squeaking by Nevada-Reno 74-72 despite being up by as much as 18 points early on.

"We're right now at a point in the season where we get worn down a little bit," Starnes said. "It's bench time. Our sixth, seventh and eighth guys need to make more contributions than they did that last road trip for us to continue to win."

What's more, Montana State can't rely on a letdown from ISU and Weber, since a new season begins with the Big Sky tournament next month.

North Carolina gives Coach Smith 600th win of his career

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The 60th career coaching victory for North Carolina Coach Dean Smith was not the center of his attention as the third-ranked Tar Heels defeated Wake Forest 94-85 Wednesday night.

Cheerleaders carried a banner of congratulations in the arena. The Tar Heels' and Wake's fireworks exploded on the scoreboard of the Dean E. Smith Center just before the final score of the Atlantic Coast Conference game was posted.

But Smith didn't have much to say.

"This is not a case of counting numbers," Smith said. "I'm concerned with this team and bringing out the best in it. . . I'm taking my life one day at a time. This is not a day to reflect any more to me than last week when our staff won 599. I don't see any particular significance."

Smith, 55, the North Carolina coach since 1962, became the 10th winningest coach in NCAA Division I history.

Clemson 78

N. Carolina St. 75

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Horace Grant scored 14 of his 23 points in the second half Wednesday night as 16th-ranked Clemson fought off North Carolina State for a 78-75 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory.

The Wolfpack had trailed by as many as 11 points in the first half, but its man-to-man defense whittled the deficit to 45-40 at halftime. After falling behind on Michael Tall's four 3-point field goals in the first half, Vinny Del Negro's 3-pointer with 11:17 remaining tied the score at 55-55.

The score was tied five more times, the last at 70-70 on a running shot by Del Negro with 3:02 left.

Grant broke the tie with two free throws at 2:39, but Bennie Bolton hit the back end of a two-shot foul at 2:13 to get N.C. State within 72-71.

Top 20 Basketball

Grant maneuvered around Wolfpack center Charles Shackelford for a layup with 1:58 left to raise the Clemson lead, but Shackelford came back with a short jumper with 1:30 left.

Mississippi 62

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Vernon Maxwell scored 16 points and fellow guards Andrew Alton and Clifford Lett added 12 each Wednesday night to lead 19th-ranked Florida to an 85-62 Southeastern Conference victory over Mississippi.

Georgetown 78

Connecticut 50

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Reggie Williams scored 34 points Wednesday night as 13th-ranked Georgetown rolled to its 1,000th basketball victory, a 78-50 Big East Conference decision over Connecticut.

Alabama 71

Vanderbilt 67

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Alabama center Derrick McKey scored 18 points and the 14th-ranked Crimson Tide, withstood a late Vanderbilt rally to post a 71-67 Southeastern Conference basketball victory Wednesday night.

Alabama, 1x-4 overall and in first place in the SEC with an 11-2 mark, Commanders had tied the game 59-59 on a field goal by Bobby Westbrook with 6:04 to play.

Reserve guard James Jackson began Alabama's winning spurt with a leaping jump in the lane, giving the Tide the lead for good at 61-59 with 5:32 remaining.

A three-point play by forward Jim Farmer and an inside basket by Terry Coner upped the Alabama lead to 65-59 before Jackson capped the rally with a driving layup at the 1:32 mark.

Northwestern 75

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Despite a poor shooting performance, Steve Alford scored 15 points to tie Indiana's career scoring mark and Darryl Thomas scored 32 points Wednesday night to lift the No. 2 Hoosiers to a 77-75 Big Ten basketball victory over Northwestern.

Alford, who made only four of 13 shots from the field, including three 3-pointers, had been averaging 23.2 points per game. He now has 2,192 points to match the total posted by Don Schmitz from 1952-1955.

Three consecutive rebound baskets by Thomas and a nine-point burst by sophomore Rick Calloway midway in the second half broke up a close game as the Hoosiers, 20-2 overall and a first-place 11-1 in the conference, took a 58-47 lead with 6:50 left.

But the Wildcats, paced by Elliot Fullen's 14 second-half points and nine from Shon Morris, closed the deficit to 70-66 at 4:37 lead at halftime.

Although Morris, who finished with 20 points, fouled out with 2:03 left, Fullen's two free throws narrowed Indiana's lead to 76-72 with 43 seconds left.

Thomas made 10 of 11 free throws in the first half as Indiana took a 34-23 lead at halftime.

Northwestern, 6-16 and 1-11, was down 95-43 by Indiana earlier in the season.

Oklahoma St. 75

Oklahoma 74

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Royce Jeffries made a driving layup with seven seconds remaining, and teammate Todd Christian added two free throws six seconds later to carry Oklahoma State to a shocking 75-74 victory over No. 8 Oklahoma in a Big Eight basketball game Wednesday night.

After Jeffries made his shot to give the Cowboys a 73-71 lead, Oklahoma called a timeout. David Johnson's inbound pass, however, sailed over the head of Ricky Grant and was intercepted by Oklahoma State's Jay Davis, who was fouled with three seconds left.

Davis missed both free throws, giving the Sooners another chance.

But again Johnson misfired on the inbound pass, this one sailing out of bounds along the Oklahoma bench.

Oklahoma State then got the ball to Christian, who sank both free throws to give himself 22 points.

The shots became crucial a moment later when Oklahoma's Dave Siger made a desperation 3-point shot from about 40 feet with the buzzer sounding.

Oklahoma State, 7-16 overall and 3-6 in the Big Eight, led by eight in the first half but saw the Sooners come back to take a 40-37 lead at halftime.

The Sooners, however, shot just 38 percent from the field and couldn't keep Oklahoma State down.

The Cowboys led 64-58 with 6:23 to play, and after three field goals by Darryl Kennedy, who finished with 21 points, brought Oklahoma within 66-64, the Cowboys came back to make it 69-64 with 3:35 remaining.

Oklahoma, 10-4 and 7-2, never led after a layup by Davis put the Cowboys up 46-44 four minutes into the second half.

Ray Alford finished with 15 points for Oklahoma State and Slyvester Kincheon had 11.

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Lee Coward hit a 3-point field goal with two seconds left and Derrick Cheivous, the Big Eight's leading scorer, outduelled Danny Manning with a 26-point effort Wednesday night as Missouri beat 17th-ranked Kansas 63-39.

Coward hit his game-winning shot from the right side after teammate Devin Roll missed the front end of a 1-and-1 situation and Greg Church rebounded the miss and slapped the ball to Coward, who finished with 11 points.

Chevous, whose 28-point average leads the Big Eight, had 20 points in the first half as the Tigers, with Manning on the bench with foul problems, erased a 13-point Kansas lead.

Manning, who had scored 68 points in Kansas' last two victories, had 21 points.

Missouri improved to 15-9 overall and 6-3 in the conference. Kansas, tied to 18-6 and remained tied for first place in the Big Eight at 7-2 with Oklahoma, a 75-74 loser Wednesday night to Oklahoma State.

The Tigers, who suffered a one-point loss at Kansas in January, led by as many as nine points early in the second half after erasing an early 13-point first-half deficit. They held a 60-55 advantage when Gary Leonard completed a three-point play with 3:52 to play.

But Manning hit two free throws to make it 61-57, then Keith Harris made a foul shot to pull the Jayhawks within two.

NHL all-stars surprise Soviets, 4-3

QUEBEC (AP) — Philadelphia's Dave Poulin scored with 1:15 left as the NHL All-Stars defeated the Soviet Union national team 4-3 Wednesday night with a brilliant defensive performance in the opening game of Rendez-Vous 87.

Pittsburgh's Mario Lemieux grabbed the puck at center ice, skated down the left wing and into the right faceoff circle and shot from there. Poulin, standing in the goalmouth, deflected the puck past Soviet goalie Evgeny Belosheikin.

The goal topped a superb performance by the NHL's penalty-killing units, which allowed only one shot to the Soviets in four power-play opportunities. Edmonton goaltender Grant Fuhr played a big part in the victory with several spectacular saves while stopping 21 Soviet shots.

A little more than 10 minutes before, the Soviets had quelled a crowd of 15,300 at the Coliseum with a score by Anatoli Semenov at 8:04.

The NHL led 1-0 after the first period on a goal by Jari Kurri and a strong defense that totally smothered the high-powered Soviets.

Glenn Anderson, Kurri's teammate with the Edmonton Oilers, made it 2-0 late in the second period before the Soviets closed to 2-1 on a goal by Alexei Kasatonov.

The NHL's 21 lead after two periods was wiped out on a goal by Vacheslav Bykov early in the third session before Hartford's Kevin Dineen restored the NHL's one-goal lead at 7:03.

The NHL game plan was to get off to a fast start, or at least play the Soviets even for one period. They more than accomplished that mission.

Despite a defensive corps weakened by injury, the NHL completely overpowered the Soviets, allowing them only five shots on goal through the first 20 minutes.

The most impressive performance for the NHL All-Stars was their smothering work on the Soviets' power play. The Soviets had two manpower advantages in the first period, but were unable to get a shot off on either one. In one of the power-play situations, the only shot on goal came from Edmonton's Mark Messier.

A lot of the goal defensive work was provided by Edmonton's Wayne Gretzky, who was generally in charge of the puck for the NHL in both power-play situations.

Team NHL, outshooting the Soviets 11-5 in the first period, took a 1-0 lead when Kurri one-timed a pass from Gretzky at 5:23 and put it through Belosheikin's legs.

Curly, who Lemieux beat out for the starting job at center, dug the puck out from the end boards at the side of the net while Soviet defenseman Sergie Starikov slipped on the ice in front of him. The Oilers center feathered a pass to Kurri, who beat Belosheikin from the doorstep through a crowd of players.

In the second period, the NHLers took a 2-0 lead on a wraparound goal by Anderson with three minutes left.

Anderson—just swept-around—from behind the net and drove the puck between Belosheikin's legs.

The supposedly slow and damaged NHL defense, meanwhile, continued to blanket the Soviets for most of the second period. On the third Soviet power play of the game, the NHL team allowed just one shot on goal.

State

Tonight 10-6 Clark Fork battles Friends at 4:45 p.m. and 14-6 North Gem faces 18-4 Bliss at 8:20 p.m. The winners of those games meet at 8:05 p.m. Friday.

From the standpoint of the Magic Valley teams, most of the attention focuses on a possible first meeting between Kimberly and Glens Ferry in the state semifinals Friday night.

Kimberly won the first four meetings.

In A-4, Shoshone Coach Ed Sandy's first concern is getting past Genesee, the team the Indians beat en route to the state championship last year, while Bliss—which had an 18-game winning streak this year before getting broken by Shoshone in the District 4 championship game—will try to start another one against North Gem.

We're real happy to have so many of these kids heading Idaho."

The four Idahoans who agreed Wednesday to attend Boise State are Shawn Anderson, a 6-0, 240-pound noseguard from Meridian who was first-team Statesman all-state; Rod Johnson, a 6-4, 211-pound defensive back from Meridian, also first-team Statesman all-state; Greg Alexander, a 6-3, 258-pound offensive tackle from Boise; and Ryan Teel, a 6-4, 255-pound defensive lineman from Skyline.

ISU signed three Idahoans Wednesday, including Tim Spanbauer, a first-team Statesman A-1 all-state running back from Idaho Falls High. The 6-0, 195-pound Spanbauer rushed for 1,485 yards in his senior season and caught 31 passes for 347 more yards.

Others were Keith Parry, a 6-3, 195-pound outside linebacker from Highland, and his teammate, Nate Long, a 5-11, 195-pound inside linebacker from Highland who was the GSC defensive player of the year last season.

Out-of-state freshman ISU signed Wednesday was Darren Burris, a 6-3, 240-pound defensive lineman from Tigard, Ore.

BSU's out-of-state frosh included Eural Andrews, a 6-2, 185-pound defensive back from Portland, Ore.; Darin Burkach, a 6-2, 185-pound quarterback-defensive back from Cle Elum, Wash.; Greg Cooper, a 6-6, 265-pound offensive-defensive-defensive lineman from Fairbanks, Alaska; Todd Gilkey, a 6-6, 225-pound five end from Kent, Wash.; Dave Giannazzo, a 6-4, 260-pound offensive-defensive tackle from Toronto; Chris Goad, a 6-3, 185-pound wide receiver from Kent, Wash.; Bart Hull, a 6-0, 215-pound running back-linebacker from Vancouver, British Columbia; Marcell King, a 6-0, 185-pound running back from North Pole, Alaska; Keith Morioka, a 5-11, 160-pound running back-defensive back from Woodville, Wash.; David Koch, a 6-4, 240-pound offensive-defensive lineman from Tumwater, Wash.; Tim Langhans, a 5-11, 195-pound defensive back from Aberdeen, Wash.; Robert Miller, a 6-8, 255-pound offensive guard-defensive tackle from Novato, Calif.; Louis Ray, a 6-3, 245-pound defensive offensive lineman from Denver; Russell, a 6-3, 215-pound linebacker-running back from Redmond, Wash.; Larry Stayer, a 6-3, 210-pound tight end from Marysville, Wash.; Trevor Stewart, a 6-1, 218-pound running back from Toronto, and White, a 6-0, 190-pound quarterback-defensive back-wide receiver from Denver.

Idaho's other incoming frosh are Casey Dunn, a 6-2, 195-pound tight end-linebacker from Pocatello, Wash.; Thayne Doyle, a 6-0, 165-pound placekicker from Spokane, Wash.; Charlie Oliver, a 6-0, 175-pound defensive back from Spokane; Chuck Long, a 6-3, 230-pound defensive lineman from Snohomish, Wash.; Pat West, a 6-4, 195-pound tight end from Snohomish; Damon Taggart, a 6-3, 215-pound linebacker-tight end from Everett, Wash.; Eric Dickey, a 6-4, 210-pound offensive lineman from Snohomish; Mike Schueller, a 6-3, 260-pound offensive lineman from Marysville, Wash.; Haynes, a 6-0, 180-pound defensive back from Seattle; Rene Ramos, a 6-3, 240-pound offensive lineman from Yakima, Wash.; and Shawn Smith, a 6-4, 235-pound offensive lineman from Lake Oswego, Ore.

The three out-of-state signings Idaho State announced Wednesday were all defensive players. They are David Michael, a 6-6, 225-pound defensive end-outside linebacker from West Covina, Calif., who played at California's Chubb College; Forrester "Boomer" Shepherd, a 6-4, 245-pound defensive lineman from San Diego who played at California's Saddleback Community College; and Charles "Scooter" Parker, a 6-0, 190-pound defensive back from Miami who played at the College of Eastern Utah. Michael and Shepherd will be juniors. Parker will be a sophomore.

The previous JC signings announced by ISU were Mike Beacco, a 6-4, 235-pound center from Price, Utah, and CEU; Pat Keag, a 6-5, 205-pound tight end from Taylorsville, Utah, and CEU; Carl Cullen, a 6-4, 265-pound offensive tackle from Duarte, Calif.; and Pasadena (Calif.) City College; Joe Haber, a 6-3, 230-pound tight end from Lafayette, Calif.; and Idaho Valley (Calif.) Community College; Curtis Harman, a 6-4, 250-pound outside linebacker from Citrus Heights, Calif.; and Sierra (Calif.) College; Greg Hetrick, a 6-0, 205-pound defensive back from Antioch, Calif.; and Linebacker from Antioch, Calif.; and Los Medanos (Calif.) College; Tony Roland, a 5-9, 185-pound cornerback from Garden Grove, Calif.; and Ceritos (Calif.) College; and Arthur White, a 6-1, 226-pound strong safety from Los Angeles and Los Angeles Valley Community College. All eight will be juniors.

Boise State signed up three JC transfers Wednesday, something of a surprise since Hall had indicated last month he would not bring any mid-year juco transfers into his program this year. The three are Larry Gram, a 6-4, 225-pound linebacker from Aragon, Calif., who played at California's San Mateo Community College; Fred Douglas, a 6-1, 215-pound linebacker from Ojai, Calif., who played at California's Ventura Community College; and Joe Murawski, a 6-0, 205-pound guard-center from Los Angeles who played at California's Mont San Antonio College. Heinz, Douglas and Murawski will all be juniors.

Blue-chip Texas prep quarterback tops list of BYU recruits

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Brigham Young University, as expected, laid claim to the top high school senior quarterback Tuesday when Detmer Wednesday as the national letter of intent sweepstakes began.

Detmer, with television cameras and reporters as witnesses, signed his letter at San Antonio's Southwest High School.

"I'm really happy about this," he said. "I've spent a long time waiting. I'm finally here."

There was little suspense about why Detmer would spend his collegiate career. In fact, Detmer said if NCAA rules hadn't stood in the way, he would have signed with BYU a long time ago.

Despite recruitment efforts by UCLA and Miami, Detmer's commitment to the Cougars did not waiver, said his father-coach, Sonny Detmer.

"He's been committed for so long. I think people expected him to back out," he said. "He never intended to back out. Unless you know, you don't think an 18-year-old kid can stick with a commitment. BYU is where his heart is."

Detmer, who threw for 79 touchdowns and 8,005 yards in high school, was the 1985 Texas Player of the Year.

"He's an outstanding player," said BYU assistant coach Dick Felt. "I asked one of the Texas Tech coaches about him earlier this year and he said, 'I'll know it, he throws it, they catch it, they score a touchdown.'"

Detmer, 5-foot-10, was not the only hot Texas recruit to sign with BYU. Brian Mitchell, a 5-foot-10, 170-pound defensive back from Waco, also signed with the Cougars. So did David Henderson, a 6-2, 175-pound defensive back from Longview... who was recruited by Texas, Stanford, Iowa and Texas Tech.

The Cougars also had a successful day in signing in-state recruits. They signed the top three linemen in Hill Country, a 6-foot-6, 280-pound all-state selection from Springville; Doug Stone, a 6-foot-4, 240-pound all-state pick from Timpliew; and Greg Pitts, another 6-foot-4, 240-pound all-stater from Timpliew.

BYU garnered letters of intent from Mike Empey, a 6-foot-6, 265-pound all-state lineman from Pocatello, and Ron Simmons, a 6-foot-3, 240-pound lineman from Mission Hills, Calif.

The Cougars signed two running backs: Peter Tupiuloti, a 6-foot-1, 180-pounder from San Mateo, Calif., who is the brother of current Cougar running back Tommy, and Scott Charlton, a 190-pound 6-foot-4 and all-state pick from Idaho Falls' Bonneville High; also signed with BYU.

BYU announced the signing of Kyle Roberts, a 6-foot-2, 160-pound defensive back from Mountain View, and Ted Dawson, a 6-foot-2, 225-pound linebacker from LaCanada, Calif.

BYU also heralded the signing of five junior college transfers, four of them from Ricks College. Those signings are:

• Kirk Davis, a 6-foot-1, 195-pound defensive back from San Jose, Calif., who earned second-team junior college All-America honors at Ricks last season. He intercepted a school-record 15 passes during his career at Ricks.

• Greg Hunter, a 6-foot-5, 255-pound offensive lineman from Brigham City and Ricks. He was a two-time all-conference selection and first-team JC All-America for Ricks.

• Travis McBeth, a 6-foot-3, 215-pound tight end from Carlsbad, Ariz., who led Ricks in receiving last season with 45 catches.

• Chad Robinson, a 6-foot-4, 218-pound linebacker from Highland and Ricks. He was a first-team all-conference selection last season.

• Phil Nauhah, a 6-foot-5, 250-pound all-league offensive lineman from LaHabra, Calif., and Fullerton JC.

Long, lonely vigils endured to save condors

By DAVID SMOLLAR
Los Angeles Times

MARICOPA, Calif. — Someday soon, thousands of years of free flight for the California condor will end on an isolated foothill ridge near here, probably in the hands of Pete Bloom.

"Home" for Bloom recently has been a 4-foot hole beneath the sun-baked golden grass ranchlands here on the hilly southwestern edge of the San Joaquin Valley.

Here, in a straw-covered pit, he kneels on a pillow from dawn to dusk, with a two-way radio, a copy of Newsweek, a couple of books, a flask of water, some fruit and cookies and a urine bottle, and waits for one of the two California condors still in the wild.

Inches in front of a narrow slit letting in light lies a freshly killed calf carcass to attract the vultures. Should a condor land and feed close enough to the opening, Bloom will slide his hands through the slit and grab the condor by its legs, pull the bird into the pit and hold it until other trapping team members scramble in from nearby observation points.

Team members take in stride the alternating heat and cold, the ants, the constant hum of flies buzzing around the carcass, the occasional rattlesnake, and the long periods of waiting. The pay is low and the recognition is limited to a small circle of wildlife experts.

But all that is a small price to pay for what they consider to be the high privilege available only to these few field biologists: the chance to save what they see as a majestic, almost mystical species from otherwise certain extinction.

The ridge where Bloom and the others patiently wait day after day is a traditional feeding site for the magnificent bird. But with its 9 1/2-foot wing span, the condor can fly up to 100 miles a day, soaring eight to 10 miles at a stretch on a thermal air current without so much as flapping its wings.

"And this time of year, through the fall and winter, there is other food available throughout its range, particularly game shot and left by hunters.

The two remaining condors carry radio transmitters, having been caught, tagged, and released under an earlier program. Several team members sit daily on mountain ridges or maneuver four-wheel-drive trucks over narrow roads, pointing portable antennas into the sky to try to pick up the distinctive "beep-beep-beep" of the condors' radio packs.

Each time a condor's signal grows strong near the trapping site, the jokes and idle conversations over the biologists' radios cease, and the rushing adrenaline of team members can almost be heard over the crackle of radio instructions.

But when the sound becomes faint, indicating that the bird has banked to another portion of its range, the long-wait resumes. Occasionally, the team traps a golden eagle feeding on the carcass at the end of the day and takes blood tests to compare lead content in the eagles' blood with that measured in the condors.

"This job has rewards that people making $30,000 or $40,000 or $50,000 a year do not understand," said

Bloom, a veteran of more than four years in the program and an expert in trapping a wide variety of bird species.

"You take a lot of your pay in (seeing) sunsets, bald eagles, mountains," said Vicky Meretsky, a team member making $16,000 a year for working 12- to 14-hour days.

While Bloom crouches in his pit, other members sit in a blind overlooking a backup trap site where a carcass rests upon the ground under a net poised to drop when triggered from the blind. As with the pit, there is no leaving the blind until trapping has ended for the day.

"Very few people can put up with the monotony, hours upon hours," said Dave Clendenon, an ornithologist who began with the program as a nest-watcher in 1982 after his excitement over seeing 14 condors in one day during a college field trip refused to dissipate.

"You learn patience as a field biologist," Bloom said. "But when the excitement does come, it comes hard and fast. . . . It's the most exciting place in the world because you are literally just inches away from wild animals, dozens of eagles fighting in front of you. . . . and occasionally a condor landing in just the right position for you to capture."

know they are on the front line in a desperate battle to save the California condor from extinction.

Until two years ago, plans called for trapping only some of the birds to be used in captive breeding programs at the Los Angeles and San Diego zoos. Others would be left in nature as guide birds for the captive-born condors that officials hope eventually to release.

But six birds disappeared over the fall and winter two years ago, and only one condor carcass was found, a victim of lead poisoning from eating bullet fragments in a deer carcass.

Officials then decided to trap the three remaining birds — all males — because they could no longer guarantee the condors' safety in nature. Trapping was held up more than eight months, however, by legal action brought by the Audubon Society. The society feared that the condors' habitat would not be protected if no birds were in the wild. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has since promised to maintain, and add to, publicly protected refuges.

One of the three remaining birds has been captured. When the other 25 at the two zoos to increase the gene pool for breeding. The first captive breeding is hoped for next year. First releases are expected between 1990 and 1992.

"It's as much a human drama as a condor drama," said Greg Sanders, who grew up in the southern San Joaquin Valley and who has worked to save endangered species in other countries.

"I was against the decision (to bring in all birds) at first. This bird thinks nothing of moving 60 to 70 to 100 miles in a day, and having worked in zoos and thinking about these birds in a cage, you realize that this bird was meant to soar and no cage in the world is big enough.

"So much of the time it flies in desolate areas where the loudest thing it ever hears is the wind whooshing by at 60 miles an hour. . . . It's an emotional thing."

The effort to save the rare California condor (shown above) from extinction has prompted field biologists to attempt the capture of the two remaining wild birds. At lower left, biologists "sift" a cannon net to rid it of anything that might result in a snag. At lower right, ornithologist Dave Clendenon releases a golden eagle that was trapped for comparative blood tests.

Three more spring turkey hunts offered in the Magic Valley

By The Times-News

JEROME — Preparations for the 1987 spring turkey hunts now can be completed with Magic Valley offering three more hunts on a new hunting site.

Craig Kvale, Region 4 wildlife manager, says applications for permits on the six hunts, offering 21 total permits in the Magic Valley as well as the rest of Idaho, are available from most vendors or the Fish and Game Department's regional office in Jerome.

The hunts include 953-1, (Snake River Canyon in the Niagara Springs area) April 20-24 for two permits; Hunt 953-2, April 25-May 1 for two permits, and 953-3, May 2-May 10 for two permits.

The other three hunts are on the same dates in the Almo-City of Rocks area. These dates include April 20-21 for five permits, April 25-May 1 for five permits and May 2-10 for five permits.

Permits will be restricted to one tom (bearded) turkey during the appropriate hunt.

Applications must be postmarked or delivered to the state headquarters office no later than March 6. The drawing will be conducted by computer.

Those applying must have a 1987 hunting license and include a $5.50 filing fee. Kvale noted the application includes a special markoff box in which unsuccessful applicants can donate all or a specified portion of that fee to the department's Idaho wild turkey transplant program sub-account. All those contributions will become dedicated and used only for turkey translocations across the state.

Kvale said two intra-state transplanting projects remain on the department's schedule for this winter, despite the lack of snowcover that makes trapping easier.

He noted some Almo area birds may yet be trapped and transplanted in Cottonwood Canyon in the South Hills this late winter. A trapping project in the fifth district also is pencilled in with those birds being moved into this region's Cottonwood area.

If sufficient birds are taken at Almo, a few turkeys will be sent to the third district's southern area along the Bruneau River, Kvale said.

Kvale said the difficulty of terrain and cover make it virtually impossible for the department to predict what numbers hunters will see in the two regional spring hunts.

"We estimate we have a minimum of 50 birds," he said of the Snake River flock that was planted on the Niagara Wildlife Management area five years ago.

"The first year or two after the release they really covered the territory. There were sightings as far west as Banbury's and throughout Melon Valley and as far east as the confluence of Rock Creek on the southside of the river and into the Blue Lakes Country Club property," Kvale said.

"In the past year or two, they've pretty much settled closer to the planting site. Last winter there were about 50 birds that spent nearly the entire winter on the Buhl golf course but with things opening up this year, they haven't been concentrated there as much. We've had reports of many sightings along the grade, some on the islands and generally throughout the wildlife management area," Kvale said.

"This will be the first time we've hunted this population since it was released. We have had reports of some poaching which 'may' have made the birds a little wiser. We don't know how they will react to being called and hunted," he added.

Kvale said he expected the Almo-City of Rocks area to be "tough hunting" because "the population has dispersed widely in the past. Two years ago we had sightings of turkey into the Pomerelle country and evidently some have established permanent residency in Utah."

"We estimate a minimum of 100 birds in that area but it would be very, very difficult to get any sightings in the pinon juniper forests in that area. For counting and for hunters, once the turkeys into into that type of vegetation, they are very difficult to see."

"We did have a couple of concentrations of about 40 birds at times during the winter but the lack of snow has let them range just about anywhere they want to go," Kvale added.

Gooding County is added to list of non-toxic zones

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Gooding County has officially been added to the list of non-toxic shot zones for migratory waterfowl hunting in the 1987 season.

Gooding, Canyon and Jefferson counties of Idaho were three of 25 counties added to the restricted list by the Interior Department under the continual criteria reduction. All lead shot for migratory waterfowl hunting must be abandoned through the nation by 1991.

The proposal was published in the Jan. 15 Federal Register.

The criterion for inclusion in non-toxic zones for this fall is 20 or more number of waterfowl harvested per square mile. That number drops to 15, 10 and five over the following three years and then becomes "fewer than five" by 1991-92.

"The Interior Department emphasized the inclusion of the next counties," as well as continued use of nontoxic shot wherever it was required during the 1986-87 waterfowl hunting season.

Coalition hopes donated feeds, volunteer labor will win them lease Bird farm's fate uncertain as bidding is opened

By The Times-News

BOISE — The fate of the Jerome game bird farm will take another step toward conclusion today with the opening of competitive bids on the facility, located southeast of Jerome.

How many bids the state purchasing office will receive on behalf of the Fish and Game Department isn't known. It will receive one from the Magic Valley Game Bird Coalition under aegis of the City of Jerome, it appears.

Gary Will, state bird manager, said he didn't know how the bids were coming in as of Tuesday, noting the number of bids was unimportant.

"If any final decision is made, it will be for what it deemed best for the resource," he said.

The Jerome city council voted support of the coalition earlier this week and that bid group was expected to have its program outline in the department's hands by Wednesday afternoon.

"It may be Thursday," Will said. "The only thing we know is that the Jerome group's proposal is being formulated."

The area coalition is hopeful of using donated feeds and volunteer labor to raise adult rooster pheasants for release in Magic Valley plus provide the department with 5,000 adult roosters and 5,000 day-old chicks for the private cooperat-program.

The coalition earlier said it was considering a proposal to raise 1,500 roosters this year and give them to the department in lieu of rent-payment. The department bidding procedure stipulates a minimum of 800 adult roosters per year.

The coalition early had stated a proposal to increase production to 8,000 by 1988 and to capacity of something between 15,000 to 16,000 the following year and each season thereafter.

The bird farm, consisting of 40 Jerome area residents and acres with approximately 20 of those under hatching, rearing and pen facilities, was purchased by private donation in the 1930s and turned over to the department for operation.

"Back with several studies conducted in various states over the past several years, the Idaho Department came to the conclusion that the farm wasn't biologically or economically feasible."

It proposed to end operation to save the $80,000 per year expenditure and purchase any required birds from private growers. The Idaho residents protested the end of operation and the coalition grew up among area hunters and businessmen.

Special fish study an effort to boost populations, sizes

JEROME — A special study on the Big Wood River, part of the $727,000 budgeted for research by the Fish and Game Commission, was begun by Fishery Biologist Russ Thurow last year and will continue in 1987. He has been examining fish populations with a comparison of numbers in different types of fish habitat.

Stu Murrell

One of the major problems in Big Wood River is the channel development that has been constructed on the flood plain. Landowners have alerted the channels in a number of areas to protect their investments when the annual spring runoff threatens to flood their homes.

The spottails have already reproduced in Oneida Reservoir, near Pocatello, and the walleye will be watched with interest to see if their average size increases after feeding on the shiners.

Much of this channel development has been removed from stream bottom, bank cover and vegetation necessary for good fish habitat. Fishery biologists utilize a snorkeling method to count fish in clear streams. Thurow snorkels at 165 sites last fall to look for cover components.

Partridge is continuing studies on the strains of planted trout that might be best for our waters in Region 4.

He found an average of 57 rainbow trout per 100 meters in those unaltered sites that had good cover and only 53 rainbow trout per 100 meters in areas of poor cover that had been channelled and covered that had been channelled and covered.

His initial studies on Magle Reservoir showed our local trout from the Hayspur hatchery near Picaabo were the most adaptable as compared to several exotic sub-species from California.

He has been testing netting and electric-shocking in selected areas in Salmon Reservoir and found that the number of forage fish has been reduced as the walleye population increased.

Partridge currently is working on Mormon Reservoir with brown trout, a small release of fall chinook and several strains of rainbow trout. Fishermen have been taking good catches all winter in the Lower Salmon Falls Reservoir near Hagerman. The department planted 5,000 rainbow trout with jaw tags last summer in an experiment to determine growth and survival rates in this popular fishing area.

Fish & Game projects set to start on March 1

BOISE — A lineup of Department of Fish and Game fishery research projects gets under way March 1 with a total cost budgeted at $720,000.

Any fishermen catching one of these tagged fish are requested to phone the information into our Jerome office. Preliminary returns have shown excellent growth rates for hatchery trout.

Funding from the federal aid to fish restoration act (Dingle-Johnson) accounts for $45,100 of the total and department matching dollars make up the balance of $321,700, fishery research manager Dave Ortmann said.

Stu Murrell is Region 4 conservation educator for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

In northern Idaho, fishery research biologists will be studying the possibility of enhancing the Priest Lake cutthroat trout and lake trout fishery.

Another job centers on the feasibility of introducing exotic species that provide forage for other fish in reservoirs. The researchers hope to learn how the introduced species adapt to a new environment and how growth rates and numbers of pre-existing fish and introduced species change.

Electrofishing, snorkeling and other techniques will be used to rate the status of game fish populations in the lower St. Joe river system and the St. Maries River. Studies will be studied to determine factors that could limit fish populations.

Different trout strains were marked and released in three Idaho reservoirs in 1985 and 1986, then evaluated to determine if they would improve a fishery. In the new project, evaluation will continue and growth, survival and catchability will be rated.

Idaho Falls officer wins new award

BOISE (AP) — Don Wright of Idaho Falls is the first to receive the Northwestern Pogue-Elms Award, named in honor of two Idaho Fish and Game officers killed by prison escapee Claude Dallas.

Don epitomizes a professional conservation officer in his work habits, appearance and attitude," Fish and Game Director Jerry Conley said. The award was presented to Wright at the recent Northwestern Wildlife Law Enforcement Officer Association conference in Albuquerque, N.M.

Wright joined the department in 1971 as a conservation officer in Shoshone and became a regional officer in 1978. Pogue and Elms were fatally shot in January 1981 while investigating a poaching incident in Owyhee County. Their convicted killer, Claude Dallas, remains at large after his escape from the Idaho State Penitentiary in March.

The proliferation of specialty guns raises questions

Military-style guns are generally rapid-firing pieces with 10, 20 or 30 round magazines of varying quality and doubtful accuracy. They are usually finished in non-reflective black and are fitted with peep sights.

Mike Harrop Outdoors

Many people buy them for what the NRA calls "home defense." I suppose that means they also make good guns with which to subdue burglars, drive off attacking Indians and to keep your daughter's boyfriend in the right frame of mind.

Personally, I don't favor a national law limiting magazine size either, because it would be like banning handguns — there are too many of them floating around in the general population for any legislation to be effective.

When I checked gun dealers in this outdoorsman's state, I found that military assault rifles are outselling autoloaders made for sportsmen.

But I think we should ask ourselves where we're heading. Will the next craze be flamethrowers or heat-seeking rockets? Will it be electronically amplified optical sighting devices that allow you to find a target in all but the blackest of nights?

As a general class, they aren't suited for American hunting conditions because few of them combine accuracy and light weight. But they make fine guns for standing off the FBI, taking hostages and robbing supermarkets.

At least one manufacturer hopes to catch the crest of the new wave. Iver Johnson now sells a "long-range rifle system" consisting of a bipod-mounted, 50-caliber rifle and a rangefinding optical scope adjustable to 1,500 meters for about $7,000.

Except for our nationally-known troubles with The Order near Coeur d'Alene, Idahoans haven't had any notable crime sprees with these rifles. Generally speaking, they rest safely in the hands of target shooters, collectors, and survivalists — the people intent on surviving the anarchy that will fall if established law enforcement and society breaks down.

We have no gun show in North America large enough to be suitable prey for such a rifle, but the 50-caliber Browning machine gun shell it uses was originally developed for shooting through engine blocks.

Before writing this column, I talked the problem over with several gun merchants, other sportsmen and some gun buffs. None of them agree with me, but I suspect that of belonging to the National Rifle Association.

Freedom to own a gun is both time-honored and appropriate for Americans. But sometimes, there has to be a limit, where the kid next door comes home from the drugstore with an autoloading 120 mm. anti-tank gun.

Some felt that the proliferation of assault rifles could become a problem, but all were uncomfortable with any law restricting gun ownership to sporting-style weapons.

Sportsmen have already lined themselves up repeating guns holding no more than three shells for duck hunting, and we don't have to permit 30-shot magazines for "home defense."

Texas county quits its wolf bounties

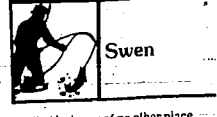

BRYAN, Texas (AP) — Brazos County officials have voted to stop paying $7.50 bounties to hunters who bring in wolf cubs as proof they killed one of the predators.

It looked funny as heck when I finished the cast. The tip end of the pole dropped down towards the water. I reeled a few turns and kept watch on the noodle and... yep, I could tell, even when a 4-inch catfish chewed on the worm we were using for bait.

County Treasurer Sandle Walker said Monday that she has paid $225 for 30 sets of wolf ears so far this year. But the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department says there are no wolves in Brazos or surrounding counties. So the county halted the practice.

Bank-fishing Briton spills bite checking tip to curious Swen

Being a bank fisherman involves knowing when you get a bite. Some watch the line, some have devices that tell when you have a bite, including belts, horns, buzzers.

Swen

Over the years of writing columns I have mentioned several, including the famous "zapper," a rig that jerked the rod when you had a bite.

me that he knew of no other place than in England where the device was available. I went back to the rig and cut off an old pole behind the second from the end eye and used a piece of surgical tubing, slightly smaller than the diameter of the pole. I slid the cut tip into one end and the remaining part of the pole and had my bite indicator pole.

White tube fishing at an area called Echo Bay on Lake Mead, I noticed a man fishing on the bank with a broken pole, at least I thought his tip end of the pole was broken.

When the fish are biting light it works exceptionally well. There are those that say fishing has no classic moves, as in other sports.

After having no luck at my type of fishing, I walked a considerable distance just to meet a bank fisherman who would fish with the tip of his pole dangling almost to the water.

"Hoosy," I tell 'em. "Ya ever see a fly fisherman trying to land a trout with a net?"

What I found was an Englishman who was fishing with a patented device from England, that lets the line water become a pole watter, and one heck of a good bite indicator.

Last fall I was giving fly fishing lessons to a 65-year-old man who had never cast a fly, or for that matter caught a trout. The site was Thousand Springs in Hagerman Valley.

The bite indicator from England, is actually an extension of your existing pole. The tip-top guide had a small threaded hole just below the eye. It was in this threaded hole that you screwed on a 12-inch length of pole with an extra eye and a tip-top guide.

After the basics I led on a wet fly and gave him his head, offering only verbal advice. Soon he had hooked a 12-inch and I backed off to see just how even this novice made all the classic moves.

What made this device work was a rubber sleeve where the extra tip screwed on, which hung down like a limp noodle. The tip-top end of the device had a bright red coloring, that was easy to see.

He kept his pole hand far behind his head much like a fencer about to lunge. The net hand was extended much like a pro tennis player trying to step a low net shot.

I asked for a demonstration, noting that it may be quite a trick to cast with the noodle hanging down. "No problem mate," my new found English friend assured me. He was right. The noodle on the end of his pole went out straight when you cast, even without weight other than the ball.

While in this two-hands-busy position he was working with the net like a wood chopper working on a tree. All these moves would rate an action shot if it were in another sport.

Where in heck can I get one of these?" I asked. My friend informed

Yes, he finally landed the fish and raised the netted fish like any champion in all those action sports.

Two trout reach Pahsimeroi

ELLIS — The first two steelhead of what should be a major spawning run have been taken in the Idaho Power Company's Pahsimeroi Reservoir.

The steelhead generally spend the winter in the lower Main Salmon River and then move up stream, as their spawning time approaches. The peak of the run is expected to reach the Pahsimeroi sometime in late March or early April, depending on water temperatures, and the Sawtooth weir about a month later.

Lobbying drive for wildlife bill of rights begun by federation

By BILL SCHULZ
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Leaders of the National Wildlife Federation, who last year endorsed a cabinet-level office of the environment, this year will push for an environmental bill of rights to be added to the U.S. Constitution.

"The only reason it is not there is our forefathers, who crafted the most important document in the world, could never have seen that we would be so economically developed that those rights would be in jeopardy," said J.D. Hair, executive vice president of the 4.5 million-member federation.

"The American people have the right to conservation of their resources, the right to clean air and water, the right to environmental protection in our country. Those rights are no less important than freedom of speech and the freedom of religion," Hair said.

He said delegates to the federation's annual meeting in Quebec this March will be asked for approval of a resolution calling for adoption of the constitutional amendment.

These things are needed, Hair said a telephone interview from his Washington office, because of the continuing problems with the American environment.

The federation's annual Environmental Quality Index, released in January, found some bright spots during 1986, but there was alarming new evidence of environmental destruction.

The federation said one study showed 35 million people living near the Great Lakes generally have considerably higher levels of hazardous chemicals in their bodies than other North Americans, the result of widespread pollution of the lakes.

"In reality, there probably are far more people affected than that," Hair said, and they will be found as scientists learn more about the Great Lakes. "The way we traditionally thought about the Great Lakes, it was in terms of pollution in the form of effluent flowing into the lakes. Now we know it's a multitude of sources; that much of the pollution now going into the Great Lakes is airborne, flowing in from other areas."

Two bright spots cited by the survey were federal extension of the Superfund for environmental cleanup and Interior Department action which will lead to a ban of toxic lead shot for waterfowl hunting.

Hair said even though the new Clean Water Act was vetoed by the President, he is confident that veto will be overturned by the Congress. Reagan let the 1986 bill die on his desk, and when the new Congress passed the legislation, he vetoed it Friday morning.

Other notes from the index:

- Toxic chemicals are threatening wildlife, even in national wildlife refuges. Among those threatened is the Arkansas refuge in Texas, winter home of the whooping crane.

- Lake Erie, once the most polluted of the Great Lakes, is cleaner now than at any time in the past 20 years. In addition, anglers can eat fish caught in Boston's Charles River.

A survey of 1,300 readers of the federation's National Wildlife magazine found drinking water contamination is considered the country's greatest environmental threat.

Museum's taxidermist of 27 years set to retire

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A musk ox is waiting for David Schwendeman.

After 27 years as a taxidermist at the American Museum of Natural History, where his eagles, otters and seals cast glassy stares on museum-goers, he retires Friday as the museum's last taxidermist.

He will continue stuffing animals in the family taxidermy business founded by his father in 1921.

"We got a whole musk ox. That's one of my big jobs when I retire," said Schwendeman, 62.

But the New York City museum now has little need for taxidermists.

The proliferation of endangered species has made it difficult to find specimens. And in said exhibition department Chairman George S. Gardner, most species of interest have been stuffed.

"We've told the stories we want to tell," said Gardner, who noted that the cost of creating one of the large prewar dioramas has increased tenfold to as much as $100,000.

Two assistants trained by Schwendeman "can do the small jobs," Gardner said.

His departure marks the end of an era at the museum, one of the nation's premier natural history museums. In the 1920s, it had five or six taxidermists preparing its big mammal exhibits in the African and North American halls.

Schwendeman levels at the eight elephants stuffed during the glory years before World War II.

"I feel confident in mounting almost anything. Except an elephant — I'm too old for that," he said.

As Schwendeman prepared to move into private taxidermy, he reflected during an interview on a 27-year career in the museum's exhibition department.

Above all is the pride he feels when children point at his exhibits and exclaim, "Oh look at that!"

"It does make a person feel real good, that he's contributed something to science and education. It's been a wonderful life for me," he said.

As a taxidermist, Schwendeman is a sculptor, painter, chemist, and ironworker. The craft involves filling cured skins with materials such as carved balsa wood, excelsior and Fiberglas.

He has made plastic copies of reptiles and amphibians. The real bodies "don't hold up too well," he said.

His life in taxidermy began at age 12 when he stuffed his first animal: a starling.

New Idaho parks guide is available

BOISE — A new guide to Idaho's State Parks is now available from the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation in Boise. The color brochure describes the parks, their facilities, programs, and basic regulations. The guide is free, and can be obtained by writing to the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation, Statehouse Mall, Boise 83720.

Reported wolf carcass find in Idaho is still unconfirmed

By BILL LOFTUS
The Associated Press

LEWISTON — A reported find of a dead wolf near Lookout Pass in the northern Idaho's Panhandle National Forest cannot be confirmed, state fish and game officials say.

Last fall, the hunter told officials at a check station that he had found the remains of a wolf about three air miles south of Mullan near the Idaho-Montana border.

However, by the time the hunter and a U.S. Forest Service biologist returned to the site in October, bear had found the carcass and all that remained was hair and a few bones.

"That evidence was insufficient to confirm the animal was a wolf, and the Panhandle National Forests will count the report as a probable sighting," said Bob Shackelford of the U.S. Forest Service at Coeur d'Alene.

He said there have been about a hundred reported sightings of wolves recorded in the forests, "but we haven't had a confirmed sighting in years."

The report followed the discovery of a pack of wolves along Montana's Flathead River and other sightings in the northern part of the state.

Wolf expert Mike Schlegel of the Idaho Fish and Game Department at McCall said the sighting was inconclusive because the skull, the only way to determine whether the animal was a wolf or a dog, was missing.

He said fur and a leg bone were sent to L. David Mech of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service at St. Paul, Minn., for examination, but without success.

"He said he can't be conclusive on it," Schlegel. "The hair sample was from a black animal and all the animals he works with are of the gray phase."

He said at present, there is no method for telling wolf hairs from dog hairs, but Mech did suggest that the samples be saved in case a method is developed.

Shackelford said another reason to doubt the sighting is the popularity of wolf-dog hybrids among pet owners in the region. The hybrids often look nearly identical to wolves and sometimes are set free or escape.

"There are several of these sightings that we don't give a lot of credibility to it," he said. "Some were made within 30 miles of Coeur d'Alene."

"We suspect that several of these wolf sightings in the Coeur d'Alene area were because of an animal that was domestic at one time or it was a pet," Shackelford said.

Schlegel said wolf-dogs also pose a problem for biologists working on a federal wolf-recovery plan in the northern Rocky Mountains, and a revision being circulated includes a passage considering controls on such hybrids.

Prisoners break into pet market with a tropical fish caper

POINT OF THE MOUNTAIN, Utah (AP) — Utah State Prison officials plan to break into the lucrative tropical fish market in a program designed to reduce imports and give prisoners some extra spending money.

"We have free land, geothermal water, a good labor supply and no fringe benefit package to worry about," said Win Tatham, correctional industries director. "We'll reduce the balance-of-trade and make a profit, perhaps a substantial one within one and one-half years."

The project will employ up to 20 inmates and use the prison grounds' geothermal water, which will keep the fish ponds at 80 degrees.

"With geothermal water available (the prison) is in one of a very few United States locations that can raise warm-water tropical fish," Tatham said. "Our research emphasizes that this can be a labor intensive, profitable operation offering a joint private sector-prison industries opportunity."

He said tropical fish are a $750 million market in the United States and $500 million of that comes from imports, mainly from the Far East.

One other person, who operates on property adjacent to the prison, raises fish for sale in Utah, but Tatham said the prison won't sell fish because the man can't sell $500 million worth of fish alone.

Fish lay their eggs on fiberglass in aquariums and once hatched, the young fish are fed brine shrimp for two weeks, then placed in the pond to fatten for four months. After that, the fish will be flown to California for sale.

"All you have to do is put the fish and water in boxes, oxygenate them and get them out to the airport," he said. "They'll be in California the same day."

"Some suggest that it be called blood money," Tatham said. "But many are unemployed and indigent. We're required to provide razors, tobacco and a few other essentials to them. If they have their own money we won't have to do that."

Too rapid development of fish farming industry a threat, say Canadians

JUNEAU (AP) — Rapid development of the fish farming industry without government control can create political and practical disasters, Canadian legislators warned their Alaska counterparts Tuesday.

The advice came during a meeting between the Canadian Standing Senate Committee on Fisheries and the Alaska House and Senate resources committees. The Canadian delegation is in Alaska for three days to talk about mutual fishing issues.

Top on the list were fish farms — also called mariculture or aquaculture — and disputes over Yukon River salmon.

"The number of British Columbia fish farms, most producing salmon, grew from a handful to nearly 100 in just a few years. In November, the Canadian government put a moratorium on new farms until better regulations can be drafted.

Except for oyster farms, Alaskans now cannot enter the business because there's no state permit system. Sen. Fred Zharoff, D-Kodiak, has proposed a bill (SB106) that would allow aquaculture development.

There was less mutual ground when talk turned to the Yukon River, where, Canadian officials say, Alaskans take more than their fair share of fish.

Canada has been pushing for an annual 5 percent reduction in the Alaska take of king and chum salmon on the Yukon.

Of the average 195,000 Yukon kings and 505,000 Yukon chum caught each year, Alaskans take 55 percent of the Alaskans — 7 percent, according to Ron Regnart, a state fisheries official in Anchorage.

Regnart said information on the origins of Yukon salmon is sketchy.

"It appears that anywhere from 25 to 50 percent of the Alaska (Chinook) catch originates in Canada," he said.

"They're going uncontrolled, without really looking at it carefully," said Vince Goboyan, research director for the committee.

Goboyan said aquaculture can be a very attractive business proposition, but its unregulated spread has posed threats to the environment, navigation and land rights in British Columbia.

In addition, the rapid growth caused a backlash of opposition from conventional fishermen and other interests, sometimes out of proportion to the problems, Goboyan said.

"Here comes this new breed of farmers, and they're seen as a threat to everybody," he said.

Alaska legislators are studying a Canadian report on the problems in British Columbia with an eye to preventing a repeat in Alaska.

Canada is trying to get the United States government to limit Alaskans' Yukon salmon catches and put the fishery under the control of the Pacific Salmon Commission.

Alaska manages the Yukon fishery, but the U.S. State Department is in charge of the negotiations. American negotiators believe the issue deserves a separate treaty or agreement. They worry it would get lost if lumped with other Pacific fish issues, Regnart said.

The Canadian senators asked whether the dispute would be settled quicker if the federal governments bowed out.

Sen. Jack Coghill, R-Nenana, said it would.

Fisheries biologist invents portable, artificial fishing shade tree

By BRENT FRAZEE
Kansas City Star-Times

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Now, fishermen can see to it that their favorite fishing hole has flooded timber, even if Mother Nature didn't plant it there.

Thanks to the advances of the fishing-tackle world, anglers can carry their own shade tree to the lake with them, toss it in the water and create an instant home for fish.

It's called the Fish'n Tree and was developed by Dr. Loren Hill, the University of Oklahoma fisheries biologist who also invented the Color-C-Lector and the pfl monitor. The plastic tree is 4 feet 4 inches tall and sprouts six broad leaves. Also among new items on the market are deep-diving crankbaits, new plastic lures, horsepower-rated electric motors and lighted tackle boxes.

By stacking the trees, fishermen can make their flooded timber grow quickly, and manufacturers say studies have shown that it doesn't take long for that artificial cover to attract fish.

"Dr. Hill put one of these Fish'n Trees in a part of a lake that was devoid of cover. There were no flooded trees, no stumps, no brush, just a gravel bottom," said Larry Boyd, a manufacturer's representative for the Rebel Co., which is marketing the product. "Within 30 minutes, it had attracted fish."

"That's where it can really be effective — in a pond or a lake that needs structure. It gives the fisherman an indestructible form of cover that is much more convenient to use than the brush pile he might sink in the lake."

"The Fish'n Tree is portable. He can put it in the water where he wants to and he can take it with him at the end of the day."

Early results indicate it might even produce success in some unlikely settings.

"Some fishermen up north put one of these Fish'n Trees on a downriver and lowered it to a depth where they were marking fish," Boyd said. "It wasn't long before they had a school of walleyes suspended under the leaves of the tree."

"They were catching so many fish that 15 other boats moved in and started trolling and casting around them."

The Fish'n Tree is only one of the new products that is making a splash at outdoor shows.

The crankball industry has sunk to new depths, 20 feet, to be exact.

That's the magic zone that several new lures on the market — Mann's 20 Deep Hog, Bagley's DB-3 Magnum and the Dredge, and Bomber's Mag-A — are now reaching. Manufacturers predict the products will open new opportunities for crankball fishermen who previously had been unable to reach fish on deep structure.

Several new plastic lures also will appeal to anglers and fishermen. Knight Manufacturing Co. has introduced the Pigtail plastic worm, which has a hollow curly tail that will float off the bottom and give it better visibility. Mister Twister's Skinny Dipper plastic worms are tapered to provide better action. And Culpit has introduced a new plastic lizard with a curly tail.

Fishermen who enjoy using small baits for trout and panfish will be happy to learn that Mepps, manufacturer of one of the leading spinners on the market, has a new ultralight series.

Minn Kota has introduced a line of electric motors powerful enough to be rated in horsepower rather than pounds of thrust. Its four- and three-horse electric motors can be used in place of gasoline motors to power small boats.

"They will be especially effective on small lakes — where gasoline motors are not allowed," said Ken Carter, a manufacturer's representative for Minn Kota.

Minn Kota also has a trolling motor with an 18-foot cord, so that it can be operated from the back of the boat.
