Otter vetoes drinking age bill

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Acting Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter on Tuesday vetoed legislation raising Idaho's legal drinking age from 19 to 21, saying it was a states' rights issue that should not be mandated by Congress.

"I firmly believe the time has come to express our disapproval, as a state, of the usurpation of Idaho's sovereign power by the Congress and the president, acting on behalf of the federal government," said Otter.

Legislation raising the state's legal drinking age cleared the Legislature last week. Tuesday, it was sent to the governor's office. Otter, Idaho's Republican lieutenant governor — acting governor since Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus in 1985 — at the National Governors' Association conference in Washington, D.C.

Otter said he informed Andrus of his intentions on the drinking-age bill. "This will not come as a surprise to the governor," he said.

C.L. 'BUTCH' OTTER
Message on states' rights

Otter said he wants the House to pass an alternative bill which already has cleared the Senate. It also raises the drinking age from 19 to 21, but declares that if South Dakota wins a U.S. Supreme Court challenge to the federal mandate, then Idaho's drinking age will return to 19.

Then, said Otter, Idaho can make the decision whether to raise the legal drinking age without the threat of losing federal highway funds.

Federal officials said Idaho will lose $4.5 million federal highway funds this year and up to $45 million in the next five years if it does not meet the congressional mandate to raise the drinking age.

Idaho is one of a handful of states, mainly in the West, which have refused to raise the drinking age. Otter said he did not think Idaho would lose any highway funds.

The Senate passed the bill 22-15 and the House approved it 53-30. In each case, that is less than the two-thirds majority needed to override a veto.

Magic Valley lawmakers were not amused by Otter's veto, even though high school pages gave a cheer when they heard the drinking age bill had died.

"I think Butch just got shot in the butt," said Rep. Mack Nebaur, R-Pauli, who supported raising the drinking age. "I'm going to think of Butch every time I hit a pothole."

"We're right back where we started," said Rep. Jerry Callen, R-Jerome, who also supported the measure. "I think there's sufficient evidence to support raising the drinking age, without the states' rights argument."

State Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, called the veto a "serious mistake" by Otter.

"It just means we're going to have to do it again," Noh said. "It's that important of an issue."

Not all Magic Valley legislators thought Otter's move was a mistake.

State Rep. Gary Robbins, R-Dietrich, laughed when he heard Otter had vetoed the measure.

"Good for him," Robbins said. "It was a bad bill."

S. African nuclear bombs could end in wrong hands

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — South Africa's white-minority government may have built as many as a dozen nuclear weapons which could fall into the hands of a "radical ruling faction" or be used by terrorists, according to a study released Tuesday.

The frightening prospect was raised in a report on the global spread of nuclear weapons issued by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

The report was prepared by Leonard S. Spector, an associate at the private organization, who told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee that "recent (proliferation) developments are profoundly troubling."

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, chairman of the panel, said at a hearing called to discuss the report that the United States must take steps to "protect both ourselves and the international community from the global insecurity that arises from the proliferation of nuclear weapons."

Spector's report reviewed developments around the globe which could lead to the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Officially, five nations say they possess nuclear weapons — the United States, the Soviet Union, China, France, and Great Britain. A sixth, India, successfully conducted an atomic test in 1974 but is not believed to have built a stockpile of weapons.

Several other nations are believed to either have secret atomic stockpiles or be able to produce weapons in short order, including South Africa, Israel and Pakistan. None of the three has publicly confirmed that it possesses nuclear weapons.

In other findings, the report said:

- Israel may have acquired enough nuclear weaponry "to level every urban center in the Middle East" with a population over 100,000.
- Pakistan may be in a position to manufacture all necessary components for nuclear arms.

Blaine's sheriff resigns

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Dennis Haynes, Blaine County sheriff since 1980, has submitted his resignation to the Blaine County Board of Commissioners and endorsed his chief deputy as his successor.

County Commissioner Rupert House told The Times-News on Tuesday that the commissioners have not met since the letter was received and have not acted on the resignation, but he believes it will be accepted at the board's March 9 meeting.

House said Haynes contacted him Sunday and presented a letter saying he would like to leave office effective March 16.

Haynes said Tuesday night he is not revealing details of his career change other than to say he is giving up law enforcement with mixed emotions "to accept a position in the private sector. He called it "a private personal commitment" and an opportunity he could not afford to turn down.

In his letter to the County Board, Haynes said that because of this commitment, "I no longer have time for proper attention to my law enforcement career. I feel in fairness to the county citizens and my family that I must relinquish the office of sheriff."

"I want to thank the citizens of the county for their support over the years and hope that Gene Ramsey, my chief deputy, will be considered (for the appointment)."

Haynes said he has been in law enforcement the past 26 years because he loves the work and may sometime return to it. He said he will continue to live in Blaine County in his new job.

Law enforcement has always been his love, Haynes said, and he has attained many of the goals he set in 1960. "I wanted to go to the FBI

Former White House secretary smiles, poses for photographers

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Fawn Hall, the former White House secretary who reportedly acknowledged destroying documents, posed for news photographers Tuesday and proclaimed their attention "a little overwhelming."

She appeared briefly at a photo session arranged by her lawyer on the steps in front of her law office.

"Miss Hall is here in response to numerous requests for photographs," said Plato Cacheris, her attorney, adding that his client would have nothing to say about investigations into the sale of weapons to Iran and the diversion of profits to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Miss Hall, the personal secretary to Lt. Col. Oliver L. North until he was fired from the National Security Council on Nov. 25 for his involvement in the Iran-Contra case, has been granted immunity by Lawrence B. Walsh, the special prosecutor looking into the affair.

"She will continue her cooperation" with Walsh and others, Cacheris said.

FAWN HALL
... a little overwhelming

Asked how she felt about being thrust into the public limelight, the 27-year-old woman replied, "It's a little overwhelming ... it's a little nervous for me."

Referring to a saying by the late pop artist Andy Warhol that everyone would be famous for 15 minutes in their life, she said, "I kind of feel like that right now."

Miss Hall, dressed in a black skirt, black boots, a green blouse and a tweed coat, obliged photographers by posing for them at different angles.

Smiling broadly, she joked about evading camera crews since Sunday when a report in The Washington Post first brought her to public attention.

The story quoted federal investigators as saying she told them she had destroyed printouts of documents in North's office on Nov. 21, the day before Attorney General Edwin Meese III talked with North. The NSC however, had a computer system with backup tapes on which messages were preserved.

On Monday, The Los Angeles Times reported that Miss Hall told investigators that, acting on North's instructions, she altered four Nov. 21 memos in mid-November. The newspaper also reported that she said she

President says forgetting possible

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, asked Tuesday about a disputed point in the Iran-Contra controversy, suggested that "it's possible to forget" whether he authorized a 1985 shipment by Israel of U.S. arms to Iran.

At a meeting with business executives, Reagan was asked if he was unable to say for sure whether he gave approval for the shipment — the first in a series of clandestine sales of U.S. arms to Tehran, with some proceeds reportedly later diverted to the Nicaraguan Contras.

"I'd like to ask one question of everybody," Reagan said to reporters and to the business group. "Everybody that can remember what they were doing on August 8, 1985, raise your hands."

Surveying the table and finding no arms outstretched, Reagan said quietly, "I think it's possible to forget. Nobody's raised any hands, and I'm chucked."

The president waved off further questions, saying he would not comment further until after the Tower Commission releases its findings Thursday on the Iran-Contra arms-and-money scheme.

Sources on the commission, meanwhile, said that despite the panel's skepticism as to President Reagan's answers on whether the Iran deal was primarily a trade of arms for hostages, there was no pro or otherwise, ABC News reported Tuesday night.

The network said the commission will accept the president's claim that he was most interested in using arms as part of a strategic initiative to open doors to Iran.

The report, however, is expected to say that former National Security Adviser John Poindexter, his aide Oliver North and others on the NSC were fully aware of the arms-for-

AIDS testing won't work

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Some medical authorities joined gay rights advocates Tuesday in opposing mandatory testing for the AIDS virus, with one expert denouncing tests for all hospital patients as "a dimly disguised maneuver" aimed at eventual forced testing of the entire U.S. population.

Mandatory AIDS tests are "social placebos designed to reassure anxious and frightened people," said Dr. Ron Bayer of New York's Hastings Center. "This is not the time for placebos."

Only widespread changes in sexual behavior and drug use can truly curtail the spread of AIDS, said Bayer, an associate for policy studies at the nonpartisan, nonprofit research organization.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which cripples the body's immune system, is transmitted most frequently by sex or intravenous drug use.

Bayer commented Tuesday on the first day of a two-day conference on AIDS testing sponsored by the national Centers for Disease Control. The meeting, originally planned as a discussion for a few doren experts, attracted hundreds of health officials, medical researchers and activists.

The idea of mandatory AIDS testing for hospital patients, pregnant women and engaged couples was criticized as bad medical policy and legally objectionable by gay rights groups, civil libertarians and medical professionals.

CDC researchers said earlier this month that they wanted to hear a variety of opinions on how widespread use of tests for the virus that causes AIDS, including mandatory testing.

CDC officials stressed Tuesday that the CDC is an advisory agency and cannot itself dictate health practices to state agencies. "We're here to discuss the merit — or lack of merit — of additional AIDS testing," said CDC Director James O. Mason.

The disease has occurred most often in homosexual men and drug abusers, but heterosexual cases now number 4 percent of the reported 30,000 U.S. cases. More than 17,000 AIDS patients in this country have died.

also laughed, although he thought it was a little more serious.

But Jones threw in another proposal, half in jest. If push comes to shove, he said, "We could just keep their federal gas tax money," Jones said.

"Of course, you don't hear that said much in public," Jones said with a smile. "I'm pretty sure we might be in federal court over it."

Otter said he felt so strongly about the states' rights issue that he sent a letter to President Ronald Reagan on Tuesday, notifying him of the veto.

Otter said he did not act because he does not support raising the drinking age to 21. He noted Tuesday that when he was a legislator in the 1970s, he voted against lowering the drinking age to 21.

"However, Mr. President, use of federal blackmail to achieve even as noble a goal cannot and should not go unchallenged" by any state or politician who believes in states rights and the Constitution, he said.

Otter said he has "some assurances" from House leaders that they would pass the alternative legislation.

The acting governor said he felt the federal mandate was a violation of state-federal relationships as spelled out in the 10th Amendment to the Constitution.

"Some time, some place, we have to draw the line and say no further. And for me, this is the time," he said.

With little comment, Otter signed into law legislation eliminating a requirement that Idaho's governors live in a 73-year-old state-owned house in Boise. Andrus has expressed a desire to live in his own house. Still remaining in Idaho law is a requirement that the governor live in Ada County.

Haynes said he wanted to be a police chief and wanted to be a sheriff. I have done all of these," he said.

Haynes was first elected as Blaine County sheriff in 1980, when he defeated long-time sheriff Orville Drexler.

Haynes began his law enforcement career in January 1960, when he became a member of the Twin Falls Police Department. He also worked for the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department for several years, moving to Blaine County to serve as Ketchum City police chief in 1969. He ran unsuccessfully for sheriff in 1972 and was elected on the Republican ticket in his second attempt, in 1980.

House said the county commissioners hope to be able to accept the resignation and announce an appointment at the March meeting.

"The Republican Central Committee (of Blaine County) will be asked to review applications and select three candidates," House said.

"They will give us the three recommendations and we (the commissioners) will make the appointment," House said.

The commissioners had not yet asked for applications Tuesday because the resignation had not been formally announced, House said.

The Blaine County Sheriff's Department consists of 21 persons, including the sheriff.

hastages motive behind the arms sales, ABC said.

As for embattled White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan, the Tower Commission is expected to make no finding of wrongdoing on his part, ABC said.

Regan denied any role in the doctor-chronicles prepared at the White House last November to minimize the president's role in the affair. ABC said that while the Tower Commission found Regan's denial unpersuasive, it will not try to resolve the conflict between Regan's account and testimony that linked him to the chronologies.

The commission is not expected to make recommendations on whether any individual should face criminal prosecution, although it is expected to accuse the National Security Council of ignoring legal restrictions on military aid to the Contras and the sale of weapons to Iran.

Reached Tuesday night, former Sen. John Tower, who is heading the panel, said "I'm not going to confirm or deny anything. I wouldn't jump to any hasty conclusions."

A commission source said, however, that since the board members were unable to interview Poindexter and North, the portions of the report dealing with the purported diversion of Iranian arms sales profits to Nicaraguan rebels was inconclusive.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said he could not confirm or deny the report and would have no immediate comment.

Hall removed documents from the NSC.

Miss Hall has been a civilian employee of the Navy since January 1976. Pentagon records show she was detailed to the NSC between February 1983 and Jan. 9. She is in the GS-9 civil service pay grade, which carries a salary range of $22,452 to $29,199.

At the White House, Miss Hall was near her mother, Wilma Hall, who was the secretary to Robert C. McFarlane, the national security adviser until his resignation in December 1985. Mrs. Hall is still at the NSC, working for the Latin American division.

Fawn Hall's professional and social life also intersected. She dated Arturo Cruz Jr., the son of Arturo Cruz, a top Contra leader, for about 15 months, informed sources said. She and the younger Cruz split up around the time North left the NSC.

The senior Cruz has acknowledged that he received about $6,000 a month in expense money from North last year.

Thompson reportedly drew a knife on him as he drove away. The teenager was able to escape at a red light and a state probation officer trailed Thompson until he was arrested by police.

Thompson also was charged with aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, but the charge was dropped in a plea-bargain arrangement, Cahill said.

The state agreed to recommend an indeterminate prison sentence.

North asked a federal court to block the investigation by a special independent counsel.

The lawsuit said special counsel Lawrence E. Walsh has been granted prosecutorial powers in violation of the Constitution, and that he and his staff are interfering unlawfully with the conduct of foreign policy in their investigation.

Lawmakers said special congressional panels investigating the affair may vote as early as Thursday to grant immunity from prosecution to several individuals believed able to shed light on what happened.

Former President Gerald R. Ford, referring to the scandal that brought down President Richard M. Nixon and made Ford president, said at a Fort Wayne, Ind., appearance that "this crisis is not comparable to Watergate (and) I hope and trust it doesn't reach the stage Watergate did."

Former Reagan aide Robert C. McFarlane checked out of Bethesda Naval Hospital, a little over two weeks after being rushed there after a drug overdose that police called a suicide attempt. McFarlane's lawyer, Leonard Garment, said he would "go back to work and resume a normal life as well as the various investigations will allow."

McFarlane, who was Reagan's national security adviser from 1983 through December 1985, has testified that the president approved the 1985 arms shipment to Iran.

Mormon elder Taylor, 83, dies

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church general authority emeritus Elder Henry D. Taylor died Tuesday in a Salt Lake City hospital following a short illness. He was 83.

Taylor had served as a general authority since April 6, 1958, when he was named assistant to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints' Council of the Twelve.

He continued serving as a member of the First Quorum of the Seventy from Oct. 1, 1976, until he was given emeritus status two years later.

The Provo, Utah, native also was managing director of the church's welfare services program.

Cruise missile passes test

COLD LAKE, Alberta (AP) — An unarmed cruise missile was successfully test fired 1,365 miles over northern Canada on Tuesday, U.S. and Canadian military officials announced.

Two similar tests were ended in failure. The missile was launched from a U.S. B-52 bomber in morning darkness over the Beaufort Sea and parachuted onto a frozen lake in northwestern Saskatchewan about 11:30 a.m., said Maj. Jan Martinson of the Canadian Forces base at Cold Lake.

She said the flight by the subsonic missile took 3 hours and 52 minutes.

Washington wins in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Harold Washington surged to victory over former Mayor Jane Byrne on Tuesday in a raucous Democratic primary rematch marked by allegations that the incumbent's enemies tried to steal the election.

Washington, the city's first black mayor, piled up margins of 25-to-1 or better in black neighborhoods on the city's South and West sides as he became Chicago's first mayor since the late Richard J. Daley to win renomination.

Keep fighting, Volcker says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker warned banks and debtor countries on Tuesday against battle fatigue as they struggle to cope with the Third World debt crisis.

Both Volcker and Treasury Secretary James Baker III said they viewed Brazil's decision to suspend payments on its international debt as only a temporary action. Both officials stressed the need for negotiations to work out a suitable payment schedule.

Brazil last week announced it will not resume paying interest on its $108 billion debt until the country reaches agreement with bankers to ease terms and pump more money into Brazil's cash-strapped economy.

Northern Nevada and Utah:
Utah — Occasional snow continuing through today. Scattered snow showers Wednesday night and Thursday. Local breezy southerly winds. Lows in the mid teens, to near 30. Highs in the 30s and 40s.

Nevada — Scattered snow showers today. Partly cloudy tonight and Thursday in west and central Nevada. Chance of snow flurries in the east. Lows mostly from 8 to 20. Highs Wednesday from 32 to 42 and Thursday from 35 to 45.

Synopsis:
The National Weather Service in Boise says low pressure continued at the surface and aloft and Wednesday, and surges of moisture continued to rotate around the low center and move across the southern half of Idaho.

Late afternoon skies across the Gem State were partly cloudy. Widely scattered showers continued. Most reported temperatures at 3 p.m. were in the 30s and 40s with 20s reported in the central mountains.

Winds across much of the south were from 15 to 20 mph and light elsewhere. Benefits of afternoon precipitation included only light accumulations.

The warmest temperature in the state Tuesday was 47 degrees at Arco. In the west and Gooding reported the state's low of 1 degree.

The extended outlook for Southern Idaho, Friday through Sunday, calls for dry through the period. Temperatures below normal with highs from upper 30s to mid 40s. Lows from 10 to 25.

Elsewhere in the nation, Tuesday's high temperature was 82 degrees in McAllen, Texas, and Key West, Fla., and the low was 6 degrees at Salt Ste Marie, Mich.

Democrats tie up budget-writers, demand role in decisions

BOISE (AP) — The overall blueprint for the 1988 state budget is continuing to solidify.

But the Democratic minority tied up the initial phase of budget writing Tuesday in an attempt to gain a role in spending policy after years of docilely supporting scaled-back moderate Republican alternatives.

"This year we're going to be part of the decisions," Sen. Marguerite McLaughlin, D-Orofino, said.

The tug-of-war came on the first agency budget offering room for disagreement with the spending recommendations of Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus — the State Employee Retirement System.

million a year with the money coming from dedicated funds rather than jealously conserved general tax receipts, the Republican majority on the panel appeared intent on reducing the Andrus recommendation, even if just by several thousand dollars.

Although that agency spends less than $1.5

the governor's plan rejected on generally party-line votes, the Democrats opposed all the Republican options.

The face-off left both the six-member moderate and 11-member conservative Republican factions short of the 13 votes needed to approve any budget level. The difference between all three options was only $46,000 in a budget of around $1.4 billion.

In recent years when the panel's conservative faction effectively held the majority, Democrats had joined with moderates after seeing the governor's recommended budget levels rejected in attempts to head off even-lower spending levels pushed by the conservatives.

Mrs. McLaughlin said of the GOP moderates: "There's seven of us and now they need us, one side or the other. I don't think we're going to be obstructionist all the way. But we have certain budgets we're going to hang in there for."

House Appropriations Chairman Kathleen Gurnsey, R-Boise, predicted the stalemate would not last, suggesting that it was up to the Democrats to join forces with moderates if they wanted to avoid the kind of limited spending increases the conservatives have pressed for. Absent that, she said the moderates should ultimately back the conservatives if no other option is available.

But Mrs. McLaughlin said the Democrats will join moderate Republicans only if Democratic spending positions are accommodated at least some of the time. If that kind of agreement cannot be reached—and moderates eventually back the conservative spending plans, "then it's their decision."

While the committee reached no decisions on any agency budgets Tuesday, the attempt by both the conservative and moderate Republicans to scale back the governor's recommendations was another sign of the GOP leadership's drive to fashion an overall state general revenue budget around $630 million, about $12 million below the governor's recommendation. Conservatives Republicans have been talking about a budget of between $640 million and $645 million.

Callen proposes longer school terms to improve pupils' showing

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

BOISE — A bill to keep children in school longer so that they can learn more was introduced into the House Education Committee on Tuesday.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Jerry Callen, R-Jerome, would require school children to be in school 200 days, instead of the current 180. The change would take 4 years to achieve.

Callen said children in Japan attend school 200 days, and their scores in math and science are higher as a result.

"Children just need to spend more time with teachers in the classroom," Callen said. "If the state Legislature is going to spend 10 percent more money on education, I think we should demand more excellence."

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry

Evans said that, in the abstract, "it makes a lot of sense."

"Time on task is one of the factors that relates directly to achievement scores," Evans said.

But in reality, he doubted teachers would go for teaching another month at the same money.

State Rep. Doug Jones, R-Filer, one of three Education Committee members who voted against printing Callen's bill, said he had no problem with the concept.

But Jones said he thought there were other ways to get at the problem.

"There's nothing to prevent local school boards from lengthening the day," Jones said. "If we add 20 minutes to the school day, we could accomplish the same result."

Callen said he doubted the bill would make it out of the House this year, but he said he wanted to give lawmakers something to think about.

House adopts bill negating court ruling

BOISE (AP) — In an action that could cut automobile insurance premiums for all Idaho residents, the Idaho House has voted 54-30 for a bill that in effect overrules an Idaho Supreme Court decision last year.

In a 3-2 decision, the Supreme Court ruled against "household exclusion" laws that forbid members of the same household filing lawsuits against each other under an insurance policy covering a vehicle operator.

The House on Tuesday passed legislation restoring the "household exclusion" and sent the measure to the Senate.

Chief sponsor Rep. Sam Clark, R-Pocatello, said one major insurance provider said the decision represents 9 percent of current insurance premiums.

Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, led opposition to the change. She said 41 states allow members of the same household to sue, including all the states contiguous to Idaho.

She said since insurance rates are set on a regional basis, the new law in effect would require Idaho motorists to subsidize coverage for motorists in other states but not available in Idaho.

"It is really strange that we go rolling in and aid the poor old insurance companies in this state, who are so overburdened," she said.

She called it "unsound legislation" that does not conform to the insurance laws of surrounding states.

Committee endorses cutting tax on employers to pay compensation

BOISE (AP) — After a debate over whether it was better to favor employers or their workers, a House committee has approved legislation to lower the unemployment compensation taxes paid by employers.

The vote was 14-5, with all five of the Democrats on the State Affairs Committee voting against the bill, saying it hurt workers.

The measure, which already has cleared the Senate, goes to the House floor for a final vote.

Unemployment insurance taxes paid by employers rose sharply on Jan. 1, under a formula enacted in 1983 and designed to keep the state unemployment compensation fund healthy.

Sen. Rachel Gilbert, R-Boise, sponsored the bill to lower the tax, saying the extra revenue was not needed to keep the fund sound.

Democrats argued that unemployment compensation benefits need to be increased and the fund is healthy enough to absorb the extra cost.

Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, tried to get the committee to approve an amendment which she said would add about $7 million per year in jobless pay and benefits.

That motion lost, 14-5, and the same vote sent the bill to the House floor with "do-pass" endorsement.

"There's a sort of mentality around here that looks upon unemployment insurance as sort of welfare," said Ms. McDermott. "It is not."

She said if Idaho wants economic development, it must keep a stable work force. Without adequate unemployment benefits, many workers will be forced to leave the state to seek jobs, she said.

Ms. McDermott argued that tightening eligibility requirements has cut 1,600 workers off unemployment compensation.

Passing the Gilbert bill, she said, will make even more people ineligible. "They are our citizens," she said.

Rep. Jerry Deekard, R-Eagle, called the Gilbert bill a matter of equity.

"It will maintain some income to the fund but it will not be a burden on employers," he said.

He suggested that if the Democrats wanted to change the benefits, that should be handled in separate legislation.

If Idaho wants economic development, the Legislature shouldn't be talking about short-term, patch-and-scratch changes, Deekard said. He said it would be better for the economy to leave money in the hands of employers than increasing unemployment benefits.

Rep. Mike Strasser, R-Nampa, said the unemployment compensation fund has about $95 million in it. But he said it wouldn't take long to drain it, if the state economy falls into a deep recession.

The goal would be to maintain a modest growth in the fund, he said.

"We need to have that fund grow, but not too fast," he said, in support of the Gilbert bill.

Rep. Dorothy McCann, D-Wallace, said displaced workers, especially in the Silver Valley, need strong unemployment benefits.

"Next year there will be more money in the fund, and we're talking about reducing benefits," she said.

"The benefits are very needed (in the Silver Valley). It is very wrong for us not to address the needs of those people," she said.

Craig calls for hearings into system

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, has called for immediate congressional hearings on the federal Farm Credit System and Farm Credit Administration director Frank Naylor.

Craig requested the hearings in a letter to Rep. Ed Jones, D-Tenn., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee's subcommittee on conservation, credit and rural development.

In his letter, Craig cited what he called "the continuing deterioration of the Farm Credit System and the Farm Credit Administration's apparent inability to prevent this decline."

Craig said a major portion of the blame for the system's problems falls on Naylor.

Idaho's other congressman, Democrat Richard Stallings, also has been a strong critic of the Farm Credit System in general and of Naylor in particular.

The system is in "deep financial trouble," with reported 1986 losses of $1.9 billion, Craig said.

Testing moratorium would be good start

Much has been said the past few years over strategic arms limitations and nuclear testing, but the world's superpowers are no closer to ending the military brinkmanship that threatens the future of our planet than they were a decade ago. The gap may even be wider now than it was then.

This isn't to say that there have not been opportunities to slow down the arms race and reduce tensions between the governments of the United States and the Soviet Union. But mutual suspicion of the other nation's motives has prevented any progress from being made.

Another opportunity arose and has all but passed this week.

Soviet officials, who have often expressed their desire to end the underground testing of nuclear weapons, reacted to our government's refusal to do so by announcing they plan to resume their own testing program.

The USSR announced its stoppage of nuclear weapons testing in August, 1985, on the anniversary of the nuclear bombing of Hiroshima, Japan.

The U.S. was urged to follow suit, with the Soviets extending their moratorium four times. But the moratorium expired on Jan. 1.

Even then, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev said the Soviets would stop their tests if the U.S. did so. The U.S. response was a nuclear detonation on Feb. 2 in the Nevada desert. Gorbachev then said the USSR would no longer be bound by the moratorium.

Yet on Sunday Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said the USSR was still willing to stop its testing — if the U.S. would agree to do the same. The White House responded, in typical fashion, by saying the Soviet offer would have no effect on U.S. testing plans.

Spokesman Dan Howard said the U.S. was waiting for a Soviet response to a arms-reduction proposal made at Geneva, Switzerland.

Granted that the Soviets are milking the situation for as much positive image-making as they possibly can, it seems our government has been obliging them with its recalcitrance. We appear to be the heavies.

Diplomatic protocol aside, what is to be lost by the adoption of a more-receptive attitude towards the notion of a testing moratorium? What is the rationale for continued testing?

If an end is ever to be found to this nuclear-weapons madness, both sides must be willing to take a first step. Putting an indefinite hold on testing while seriously discussing significant arms reductions with the Soviets would not seem to endanger national security.

Whether the Soviet position is more shadow than substance remains to be seen. Whatever their motives, they have made it clear they are willing to discuss an end to the nuclear paranoia. The ball is in our court.

Time to take look at PUC's problems

The members of the first Public Utilities Commission were appointed after March 9, 1951, by Gov. Charles Robbins, and then again in January 1953. Then, in 1955, Gov. Len Jordan was the second governor to appoint commissions. In 1963 the 6-year term began, one to be appointed every 20 years for a 6-year term.

I think the time has come to look very closely into the increasingly growing problems in the PUC. I believe it is time to start thinking in the lines of these three offices becoming elected offices.

The reasons I will outline here and try to explain the reasons I have come to this conclusion.

These offices have become dangerously close to the point where they can be awarded as political favors, either through the governor's office, the controlling party in the Senate, or in the House. The voters should prove very costly to the working men and women, the fixed-income, the small businesses, the school and education system and the family farmer. Now keep in mind that I have not said that this has happened, nor have I accused any one, but the symptoms are there.

Idaho should be divided into three separate districts, one commissioner should be elected from each district to serve a term of not more than four years a term. In this manner, each commissioner would understand the needs of his own district and would have to answer to the voters each election.

Donald McMurrian

tion to attain this office. The safeguard should be built in to protect these offices from being bought by large companies, utilities companies or any special interest groups. I believe the limit should be $10,000-$15,000.

The qualifications for these offices should be open for any qualified voter to be able to run for any of these offices, within their district. It would prove to be very dangerous to all citizens to have the board filled with all doctors, all lawyers or all college professors, or anyone who may not understand the needs of the average citizen. In other words, the board should have a balance of all views.

In conclusion: From all the publicity that has been circulating in the news media and the increasing need to protect the public of Idaho, I think it is time to bring about a change in the manner in which these PUC offices are selected.

These offices are too important to the people of Idaho to remain a political favor type of office. After all, let's face it, your billfold and your savings account, if you have one, are the ones that are truly in danger.

The choice of the PUC should be the choice of the voting public. After all, if they make a mistake, they will be the ones who pay the bills anyway.

The desire for money Siegel's reason

BOSTON — When it became known on The Street that Martin Siegel had pleaded guilty to selling insider information, one of his bewildered friends said to a reporter, "He didn't need the money."

It was, by all normal accounting systems, a classic understatement. In 1985, Siegel legitimately earned $1.7 million. In the past few months, he was able to scrounge up $3 million as part of his deal with government prosecutors. At 38 years old, he had a Connecticut estate, a million-dollar condominium in Manhattan, a family and a reputation as the best and the brightest of the new breed. Yet on a number of occasions, this articulate, educated, "secretary of defense" in the takeover world, stood in a public place in New York City waiting for a courier like an ordinary drug dealer. He gave the password and got the cash. Eventually, before his anxiety or his conscience got a grip on him, Siegel had taken more than $700,000 in cash from the godfather of this story, Ivan Boesky.

Why did he do it? This is what intrigues people about the latest star of the Wall Street scandal. Why does anyone who is already rich risk it all for a bit more? Even those who can't spell "arbitrageur," those who can't explain the inner workings of a takeover, reach for an explanation of the inner workings of the psyche.

The question will be asked again before this story is over. The public curiosity about the lives of the rich pales beside our curiosity about the crimes of the rich. The profiles of Boesky point to an insatiable egomaniac. But the stories about Siegel are much more ambiguous. Words like handsome, self-confident, creative, are attached to his name. So are words like compulsive and insecure.

In the retrospective psychoanalysis I favor, it is said that the mid-life bankruptcy of the father left this son with a permanent, unquenchable fear about his own financial future. He dipped into his suitcase of cash for spending money to avoid dipping into his capital. He apparently rationalized it by calling the payoff his "consulting fee."

The Bull, the Bear and the Boesky

If you prefer group analysis, then we are told that Siegel lived in the rarefied and immunized world of Wall Street deal-makers. Vast amounts of money rode on the sort of knowledge Siegel specialized in. Stocks rose and fell on news of a takeover. Information was the admission card to play the game with the big boys. It was too seductive finally for him, and for the others, to hold the admission card and not play.

But the analysis of parents or peers doesn't respond fully to his bewildered friend's comment: "He didn't need the money." The suggestion in this querulous remark is that money, enough money, protects people from temptation. In the bewilderdium at the crimes of the rich, there lurks the belief that money should provide a buffer against the desire for money.

It doesn't always work that way. For some people, the sense of need always stays ahead of their balance sheet. There is no "enough," especially in a business where money is the product. There are people we all know who start out wanting "enough" to pay their bills, and having gained that, enough to pay for college, and then a second house, a vacation. Having acquired all that, they want enough money to live the same way without working, and then enough for their children to live that way.

People who begin comparing themselves to the Joneses may end up comparing themselves to the Trumps. They go on wanting money. It is said that Siegel, whose own home was described as a Gatsby estate, was awed in turn by the Boesky estate. What is a million million dollars compared to $33 million?

The new breed of deal-makers, a friend tells me, operates with the morals of the limo crowd. Siegel went one better: He commuted by helicopter, above the crowd. He must have also assumed he could hover above the law.

This is not, mind you, some Greek tragedy. Although we are intrigued by the distance of the fall, Wall Street is hardly the turf of the gods. If the rich are different from the rest of us, it's because they commit crimes with more digits.

Why did he do it? Why does someone who is rich risk everything for a little more? Why do it for the money?

In following these Wall Street stories, I am reminded of what Emerson wrote: "There are three wants which can never be satisfied; that of the rich wanting more, that of the sick wanting something different, and that of the traveler who says, 'Anywhere but here.'"

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

Opinion remains unchanged

My recent comment on the cartoon, "The Far Side," sure struck a fire with Filer resident. He seems to think I am out of line by stating my views in the public forum.

If I am out of line I am sorry, but I still am of the same opinion.

It seems that regardless of what subject is discussed some "blabber mouth" is on the sidelines, ready to deny others of expressing opinions of their own.

I am made happy when I find an "intelligent" person like my Filer friend. I have not met the Filer friend, but I hope we can become better acquainted.

Likewise, I would like to see that 9-year-old "wee kid" of his. I bet the 9-year-old does not top the class in school.

Backs official language bill

Sen. Phil Batt, chairman, State Affairs Committee.

Dear Sen. Batt:

We have been informed that Rep. Ron Crane, here or will, introduce a bill in the House of Representatives to designate English as the official language of Idaho.

We strongly urge you to support the measure in the Senate. We are aware of your opposition to a similar measure introduced last year.

In our opinion, no foreigner who is admitted to this country to become a citizen should expect the taxpayers of this country to educate his children in the language of his or her origin.

In last year's election, California set an example for every state in the union should follow. On June 30, 1987 the law making English the official language of California will be in effect.

Seventy-four percent of the California electorate favored the measure.

SDI will aggravate problem

Jerry Callen and his SDI protagonists appear to be magic, both seeking and giving. A now of decades ago, it was the Soviets who were proclaiming "defense is moral — offense is immoral." Our response was simple — if they persisted with their plans for an elaborate defense system, we would have no choice other than to rapidly escalate our offensive capability commensurately. Today our respective positions are reversed — Reagan wants the umbrella, and the Russians will be forced to increase their inventory of offensive weapons proportionately.

It is often said that the Soviets can't be trusted, but if this administration spends one trillion dollars deploying a defense against 25,000 warheads, the Russians can be trusted to double their offensive capability.

SDI will not render nuclear warfare obsolete; on the contrary, it will only aggravate the problem. World nuclear arsenals are already sufficient to wipe out the human race, but if SDI becomes a reality, "you ain't seen nothing yet."

Just think, all this to maintain "stability." Yes, it will work, within prescribed limits. Bill Parcells proved convincingly all last season that a good defense is a legitimate weapon, but then he never was forced to contend with 22 Denver Broncos, or even two John Elways.

As to fiscal considerations, Reagan has proved that where there's a will there's a way, even if the way economically enslaves the next ten generations of Americans. Borrowed money is easy to spend.

Like Callen, Hartwell et al., I too hope our grandchildren "never have to live under the iron heel of the USSR." I also hope they never have to live under the Guecci-clad heels of the international money-manipulators.

It should be obvious to both superpowers that they have only three options — extinction, bankruptcy or cooperation. Only the latter makes any sense.

So this landscape knocks on wonder

make it back down. And, I suspect, they aren't the reasons that this experience becomes so meaningful and even life-pivoting for many of these students.

George Vlastos, the artist who teaches in this program with me, and I were invited to St. Louis, Mo., to conduct a series of workshops at The Principia, the school which sends students to the Teton Science School each year for this particular art and science program. Our last evening at Principia, students who had already participated in the moving lesson only to what their week at TSS had meant to them. The TSS "graduates" had put together an hour-long slide show coordinated with music, intermittently dubbed over with students reading from their own writings. The answer was in that slide presentation — while in the Teton, they had touched art, they had participated in the moving lesson only to what their week at TSS had meant to them. And that sense of awe-within-fear remains cherished.

I know the feeling. Even wonder fades, no matter how cherished — as if it were hot coal slowly diminishing within the gray ash of itself, waiting to blaze again when a sudden jolt knocks it free. So this landscape knocks upon wonder to set it free.

A line of six students and a TSS staff biologist are up ahead of me. They are sloshing smoothly on cross country skis, stopping occasionally to point out tracks of moose, red squirrel, weasel, or mouse. I am snowshoeing, plodding up the incline slowly. When I catch up, they continue on. We move up a trail beneath lodgepole pine and aspen groves. The sunlight spruces off hoarfrost crystals on the snowpack. Pine and spruce cast long blue shadows out from the dark of themselves, across the white snow into a thick stand of trees.

Isn't weariness nor the natural pace of snowshoes that makes me dawdle. It's the beauty. And the need for silence in this landscape. I let the group stretch the distance between us further — around a bend, so that I can no longer see them. And the sound of their skis and voices is muffled. I even stop so that my own tracking will not interfere with the quiet. I want to hold my breath; I want to dampen the sound of my heartbeat. I am glad to be alone, here. Somehow the silence allows the beauty to seep into my own inner landscape.

I have brought my journal, too, but I do not write. Writing, now, would only interfere with the wonder. To write would be to attempt words, too soon, to describe something which needs seepage to be complete.

From here I can see the blue of the sky settle into the tracks of a snowshoe hare. How the delicate entry, which the sky makes, dusts the edges of the tracks, tumbling flakes and crystals into shallow blue pools.

I stand in the kind of quiet that might allow one to see the cloudy breath of a mountain vole venting from beneath the snowpack. Light and shadow shift, then return, as tree tops and branches bend to a sudden wind. I cannot absorb any more beauty. I look toward the top of Lobo Hill and trek up the trail.

I am alone. The air is colder, now. My breath has coated my beard in frost. In less than an hour I will be looking down from the top. I will be a little tired and in my weariness, I will ask myself a foolish, rhetorical question. Then look across the skycape toward the Teton, listen in awe myself for a moment, and know the answer. This is why I return, year after year, and why the Principia students really come here to be in this program.

Committee favors giving tax breaks

BOISE (AP) — Everybody in the Idaho Legislature has been keeping a watch on the House Revenue and Taxation Committee, where tax bills originate.

That's where most of Gov. Cecil Andrus' proposals to raise taxes to balance the state budget have surfaced — and so far, have been rejected.

But the committee shows less reluctance to approve potential tax breaks for specific groups.

On Tuesday, it gave preliminary approval to legislation designed to ease tax collections on the taxes themselves for cigarette dealers, wine-makers, farmers, ranchers, timber owners and businesses.

Sent to the House floor for a vote was legislation giving cigarette dealers longer to submit state taxes. Sponsors noted it will cost $700,000 in revenue for the next state budget, although the money will be made up in future budgets.

Given preliminary approval for printing and introduction was a bill restoring capital gains tax treatment for certain business property.

The new federal tax code wipes out capital gains treatment, which exempts from taxes 60 percent of most income-producing property. Idaho is adopting the federal tax laws as its own, which includes repealing the capital gains law.

Sponsor Rep. Wayne Sutton, R-Midvale, estimated it would cost $500,000 to $1.5 million per year in tax revenue.

But he pushed it as a way to help farmers and ranchers. He argued that farmers and ranchers face huge tax bills if they are forced to liquidate their assets, even though they may be bankrupt.

"We are trying to address a problem in agriculture. The industry is in a severe depression. It is not just a small problem," he said.

"It's unfair to tax property tax valuation that occurs during an individual's lifetime," he said.

Rep. Phil Childers, R-Boise, asked Sutton why he did not cover other groups, such as retirees, who also have lost capital gains treatment of lump-sum distributions, such as company stock.

"I appreciate trying to meet the concerns of one small group, but there are others with just as great a need," said Childers.

Sutton said that might be covered in separate legislation, but his proposal was aimed at "the most severe need."

The legislation grants capital gains treatment to any real property held five years or longer; cattle, timber, horses and other income-producing property.

Voting against introducing the proposal were Childers and Rep. Chris Hooper, R-Boise; Rep. Lou Horvath, D-Pinehurst, and Rep. Harold Reid, D-Craigmont.

Reid, a farmer, said farmers have received many tax breaks from the Legislature over the years. But he said it is wrong to single out one particular group for a tax break not available to the general public.

"It is not proper to sort out one group of people to give them capital gains," he said.

Legislation presented to the committee by Boise lobbyist Jay Webb calls for increasing the state wine tax from 45 cents per gallon to 50 cents. But it grants a tax exemption for wine-producers who make less than 400,000 gallons per year, which covers most Idaho producers. They would have to pay only 25 cents per gallon.

Webb said the legislation was designed to be revenue-neutral, because increased tax collections from out-of-state producers should offset lower collections from Idaho wine-makers.

Hearings start on plan for Fort Hall

FORT HALL (AP) — Public hearings will begin this week on a comprehensive plan guiding the Fort Hall Indian Reservation's land use for the next 50 years.

"There's a lot in this plan that the people should know about," said Kenneth Timbana, tribal land use director and author of the plan. "We want to know what they think so we can revise it and publish a final plan in October."

The first of three dozen meetings is scheduled for Thursday, with additional meetings slated through June for 7 p.m. Mondays and Thursdays in the Tribal Conference Room.

Accused abusers cannot see state records, high court rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, citing the "vulnerability and guilt" of sexually abused children, said Tuesday that people accused of abuse are not entitled to see confidential state records to help defend themselves.

In a 5-4 ruling, the justices said the Pennsylvania Supreme Court mistakenly ordered child welfare officials to reveal confidential records to a man accused of raping his young daughter.

All 50 states and the District of Columbia have confidentiality laws governing allegations of sexual abuse.

In another criminal justice decision, the court said honest mistakes by police officers may excuse what otherwise would be an unconstitutional search of someone's home.

The 6-3 decision apparently reinstated a Baltimore man's heroin-peddling conviction and 15-year sentence. The court said police made an honest mistake when they searched the man's apartment, relying on a search warrant for the adjoining unit that shared the same hallway.

In other decisions Tuesday, the court:

- Ruled, 6-3, in the case of an Illinois man that full-time gamblers are, for federal tax purposes, engaged in a "trade or business" that has entitled them to deduct gambling losses from gross income.

- Ruled unanimously that a Japanese manufacturer of tire valves does not have to defend itself in a product liability lawsuit in California courts.

- Said states may place a property tax on aircraft used within state borders even though most other business property is exempt. The 9-0 decision upheld a South Dakota tax on grounds the proceeds from the levy are used to benefit the airline industry.

- Ruled 8-1 in a dispute between an Iowa insurance company and the Blackfeet Indian tribe in Montana that federal courts must defer action on all lawsuits when the possibility exists that an Indian tribal court also may have authority to resolve the case.

- Voted unanimously in an Alabama case to block states from imposing financial penalties for unsuccessful appeals in federal court cases that involve state law.

In the child abuse case, the court said states must be allowed to shield confidential files from defendants and their lawyers.

- Child abuse is one of the most difficult crimes to detect and prosecute, in large part because there often are no witnesses except the victim, Justice Lewis F. Powell wrote for the court.

"A child's feelings of vulnerability and guilt, and his or her unwillingness to come forward are particularly acute when the abuser is a parent," he said. "It therefore is essential that the child have a state-designated person to whom he may turn, and to do so with the assurances of confidentiality."

But Powell said the records in the Pennsylvania case should be examined in private by a trial judge to determine whether they contain information that might help exonerate the father, George F. Ritchie.

NRC hit by protest over plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission, attempting to assert federal sovereignty over the commercial use of atomic energy, was hit with a storm of protest Tuesday from state officials and local groups fearful of disasters at two East Coast reactors awaiting licenses.

At issue was a proposed change in commission rules that would allow the NRC to give new reactors a green light even if governors and local authorities refused to sign off on evacuation plans in the event of a major accident.

Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts told the commission, "The rule you are discussing today would make a governor's right to protect the public health and safety of the people of his or her state virtually meaningless once a nuclear accident had occurred."

The hearing was disrupted several times by anti-nuclear protesters who chanted and sang in the audience. Several people were led away by security guards.

Commission Chairman Lando Zech implored the audience, "I ask all of you to please help us conduct this meeting in an orderly manner."

Picketers from at least three anti-nuclear groups surrounded the entrance to the agency's headquarters, as both advocates and opponents of the proposed rules change jammed the hearing room and an auxiliary auditorium more than an hour before the proceedings began.

Nearly a score of citizen groups and other would-be witnesses, denied the chance to testify orally, registered their complaints in writing.

Dukakis, three other governors, five senators and more than a dozen House members were heard on the issue.

At immediate stake was the fate of the Seabrook plant, in New Hampshire near the Massachusetts border, and the Shoreham plant, on Long Island about 55 miles east of New York City.

Both of the multibillion-dollar plants have been completed, but Dukakis and Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York have effectively vetoed licensing by taking advantage of the NRC's own rule requiring state participation in emergency planning. The two governors have flatly refused, saying there is no way they can guarantee the safe evacuation of residents in an accident.

Health care plan on way

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Tuesday sent to Congress his proposal for legislation to provide catastrophic health care coverage for up to 30 million people through the Medicare program.

"The legislation that we are advancing today addresses a fundamental gap in the health insurance protection of the elderly and disabled," Reagan said in his letter to members of Congress. "This proposed legislation would help solve this tragic problem. I urge you to join me in facing the challenge before us."

Under the plan Reagan proposes, an elderly person would pay $4.92 a month in Medicare premiums in addition to the $17.90 now paid. This would give the person protection for any medical services covered by the plan which exceeded $2,000 a year.

Work on highway bill starts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of the House and Senate began trying to resolve their differences Tuesday over legislation to finance highway and mass transit projects, but sidestepped the volatile question of raising the national speed limit and other thorny issues.

The conferees, who met for about 45 minutes, list 19 differences between the measures already approved by each chamber, and reached tentative agreement on three of the minor ones.

But battle lines were drawn when supporters and opponents of the Senate provision that would allow a speed limit increase to 65 mph made it clear they would stand their ground.

Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, a vocal supporter of the higher speed limit, said the measure was so important that House leaders should allow a floor vote on the proposal in that chamber, which he said he believed would be successful.

"Once they do that, if that's the last thing stymieing the bill, I'd say, 'Let's go along with it'" and approve the highway bill without the speed limit increase, he said.

Governors seek 65 mph limit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's governors dropped their support Tuesday for the national 55-mph speed limit and asked the federal government to allow states to raise legal speeds to 65 mph on selected rural highways.

The National Governors' Association approved a new policy statement similar to legislation passed by the Senate, with governors saying higher speeds wouldn't jeopardize safety on interstates and other highways in rural areas.

The governors asked for an end to federal sanctions withholding highway money to states that don't adequately enforce the speed limits.

Welfare reform wins backing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's governors, reaching a "broad and deeply felt bipartisan consensus," asked Congress on Tuesday for sweeping changes in the national welfare system that include requiring work or job training in exchange for assistance.

The National Governors' Association approved the new welfare policy with only one dissenting governor and, armed with Reagan administration support for the low-cost elements, sent its leaders before the House Ways and Means Committee to lobby for the plan.

"Welfare reform has been tried a number of times in the past and gotten nowhere," said New Hampshire Gov. John Sununu, a Republican. "I hope that the chemistry of bipartisan support that we are looking at here will give us the tools that will help get Congress to act."

Painting sells for $4 million

NEW YORK (AP) — A painting by the 19th century French artist Jacques-Louis David that sold for less than $1,000 in 1950 was auctioned Tuesday for $4 million to the J. Paul Getty Museum in California.

The price for "Farewell to Telemachus and Eucharis" was a record for a David, a spokesman at Sotheby's auction house said.

The thousandfold increase in 37 years for David's "Farewell to Telemachus and Eucharis" is a reflection of the current rarity of such works and an increased understanding of this painting's theme, said Nancy Harrison, the auction house's expert on 19th century works.

Apparent supernova located

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What appears to be a star undergoing the early stages of a massive supernova explosion in a nearby galaxy was discovered Tuesday by astronomers in Chile and New Zealand, an astronomy reporting agency said.

"We don't know for sure if it is a supernova, but it seems that way," said Daniel Green, an astronomer at the Smithsonian Institution's Central Bureau for Astronomical Telegrams in Cambridge, Mass. "At this stage it's probable."

The apparent supernova — a rapidly brightening, gargantuan explosion of a star — is being called Supernova 1987A. It's located near 30 Doradus, a star in the Large Magellanic Cloud, a galaxy located in the constellation Doradus and one of the closest galaxies to our own Milky Way. Green said during an interview.

Boy to receive his new liver

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Surgeons on Tuesday prepared to transplant a liver into 7-year-old Ronnie DeSilvers, who received an outpouring of support from Americans after his medical funds were stolen.

Medical officials had been notified that a donor liver matching Ronnie's blood type and size had been found, but were uncertain whether the organ was healthy enough to be given to the Miami boy.

"It looks good at this point. Ronnie is being prepared for surgery," said Lynn McMahon, a spokeswoman for Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh.

The 12-hour surgery was scheduled to begin around 6 p.m., Miss McMahon said.

Rogers to leave post at NATO

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO announced Tuesday that President Reagan has told U.S. Gen. Bernard W. Rogers to step down after eight years as top commander of allied forces in Europe, effective June 30.

The announcement by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's civilian headquarters did not elaborate on Reagan's decision, which was expected.

Officials said Rogers also will relinquish his duties as commanding officer of U.S. troops in Europe in June.

Storm strands travelers across West

By The Associated Press

A powerful storm dumped as much as 2 feet of wind-whipped snow on parts of the West on Tuesday, stranding travelers on hundreds of miles of highways from Wyoming to Arizona and closing schools.

Las Vegas, Nev., had its second snowfall of the winter, a rarity for the gambling spa in the southern Nevada desert, and parts of Wyoming got the first major blast of snow for the season.

The storm's effects extended across the continent from high wind and waves that kept surfers on shore in southern California to snow across parts of the Dakotas.

Blowing snow and poor visibility across northern Arizona forced the state Department of Public Safety to close a 107-mile section of Interstate 40 between Ash Fork and Winslow during the morning, and several stranded truckers said they probably wouldn't get back on the road until at least Wednesday.

There were numerous accidents but no serious injuries along I-40, police said. Truckers said they saw a number of cars and jackknifed trucks in ditches. Schools were closed in Flagstaff, which got 13 inches of snow and had 2-foot drifts.

Lander, Wyo., got about 24 inches, closing schools, and the Wyoming Highway Patrol said several highways were closed in central Wyoming.

Poll opposes advisers' role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 60 percent of Americans think President Reagan relies too much on his advisers and 44 percent think he is too old for the job, according to a Los Angeles Times poll being published Wednesday.

Nevertheless, the survey said that Reagan's approval rating has risen slightly, from 50 percent shortly after the Iran arms sale disclosures to 55 percent now.

The poll found that 44 percent of Americans think the 76-year-old Reagan is too old for the job while 52 percent don't think so. Some 43 percent of the people believe Reagan has lied about the Iran affair while 39 percent think he has told the truth, the survey said.

What's what

LEAPS TO THE LIGHT
Spouts of needlefish are long sharply pointed spears. Sort of like swordfish, only smaller. They leap toward light. In New Guinea, fishermen with lanterns on their boats are afraid of needlefish. Ought to be. Those light-leapers stab to death about 20 fisherman a year.

There are a lot of trained donkeys in China, but no human being ever trains them. Not anymore. Baby donkeys run alongside their mothers and learn to do what the mothers do, and they turn out very well trained.

Was anybody in your family alive in 1900? If so, said elder beat the odds. At birth, that baby had less chance of surviving a week than did grownups who were 90 years old at the time.

DISEASE
Q. What's the most prevalent disease worldwide now?
A. Malaria.

Any doctor who wants to specialize in obesity cases has plenty to study. For a couple of decades now, technical articles on the subject have been turning up in American print on an average of 35 a month.

SKEPTIC
"Skeptic" isn't supposed to mean "doubtful," exactly, as most people think. It comes from roots for "thoughtful" reconsideration. You're a skeptic, if you have an open mind about whatever, and want to take another look.

Odd thing about India. It's one of the top 10 industrial powers in, yet among the poorest of all the nations.

Boys ran telephone switchboards before 1890. You know why the phone companies switched to girls? The boys were too rude.

"Fib" comes from "fable."

Stars, and Harlettes, turn out to honor the Divine Miss M

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Eleven former Harlettes, Bette Midler's backup singers, sang "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy from Company B" at the Hollywood Palladium to honor her at the American Cinematheque's 2nd annual Motion Picture Ball.

Actor- pianist Dudley Moore was host for the gathering, which was attended by such celebrities as Buck Henry, James Woods, Paul Mazursky, who directed Miss Midler in "Down and Out in Beverly Hills"; Shelley Long, who co-starred with her in "Outrageous Fortune"; Joe Namath; Suzanne Somers; and Pee-wee Herman.

"I can't believe everybody came out for me," Miss Midler said, "especially considering I've been such a cool all my professional life."

Toast of Motion Picture Ball

Cathleen Crowell Webb of Jaffrey, the Keene Sentinel reported Monday.

"We are not sure if we were successful in achieving our goal here," Levy said.

Levy said he hopes the television movie would help clear Dotson's record — his sentence was commuted in 1985 but a judge refused to vacate the conviction — and provide him with some royalties. Illinois law prohibits Dotson from receiving royalties from books or movies on his life story, but does not bar him from receiving royalties from Webb on her life story.

Levy noted that Webb had said in the past that she would help Dotson. There was no answer Tuesday morning at the home of the church of her pastor, who has served as her spokesman.

Webb has said she had made up the rape charge in 1977 when she was 16 because she was afraid she was pregnant and didn't want her parents to know she was having sex with her boyfriend. She said she recalled because her religious beliefs motivated her to tell the truth.

Dotson, 29, told the Sentinel he has tried to maintain a low profile.

"I can go out a little easier. People don't come up to me like they used to," he said.

The Judds, Travis top nominees for awards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mother-daughter country duo The Judds and two-way country artist Randy Travis are the top nominees with four nods each for the 22nd annual Country Music Awards.

Other top nominees included George Strait, Reba McEntire and Alabama with three nominations each. The awards will be presented at Knott's Berry Farm in Buena Park on April 6 and televised on NBC.

The Judds were nominated for top vocal duet; single of the year for "Rockin' With the Rhythm," song of the year for "Grandpa," and album of the year for "Rockin' with the Rhythm."

Travis, one of several new country music artists who are changing the sound of Nashville, was nominated for top male vocalist; single record of the year for "On The Other Hand"; song of the year for "On The Other Hand"; and album of the year for "Storms of Life."

Royko column draws Selma mayor's retort

SELMA, Ala. (AP) — Mayor Joe Smitherman is singing "Y'all Come" to Chicago columnist Mike Royko, who wrote an opinion piece that the mayor claims is the mark.

"The Chicago Tribune columnist's view of Selma as a landmark of racial intolerance is outdated and no more accurate than a depiction of Chicago as a gangland city run by Al Capone," Smitherman said in an interview Tuesday.

"Chicago doesn't have people running around with machine guns," he said. "We're not the same as we were 20 years ago."

Royko, in a recent syndicated column titled "Echoes of Selma Sound Phony Here," recalled the atmosphere of about 20 years ago when blacks marched in Selma seeking the right to vote.

Quintuplets will drive soon, warns mother

NEW YORK (AP) — Tuesday was the 17th birthday of the Kienast quintuplets and their mother is laughingly warning everyone to look out because all five soon will be learning to drive.

"We have braced for the drivers' license era," Peggy Jo Kienast of Bernards Township, N.J., said on CBS-TV's "The Morning Program."

"Beware everyone on the roads," Abby, Amy, Gordon, Sara and Ted, juniors at Ridge High School, had a private birthday party Sunday.

On the program, Sara said there are ways to get away if she feels a lack of privacy amidst her siblings.

"You can just go to your own room and stuff and ignore them all," But Gordon added, "I like having a bunch of brothers and sisters."

Sculptor to produce bronze dancing cranes

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Noted sculptor John Raimondi has won a commission for a 69-foot-high sculpture of two sandhill cranes that he says will be the tallest bronze sculpture in North America.

"Dance of the Cranes" depicting the long-necked birds in their ritual dance will stand near the entrance to Epley Airlfield.

Wrongly accused rapist seeks OK on TV movie

KEENE, N.H. (AP) — Gary Dotson, who spent six years in prison on a rape charge later recanted by his accuser, spent the weekend in New Hampshire seeking the woman's OK for a television movie.

Dotson, of Chicago; his wife, Camille; and David Levy, who wants to produce a television movie about the case, met several times with

Sixth-grader holding out for year without TV to win $500 from mom

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — If sixth-grader Benjamin Barreux can hold out five more days without watching TV, he'll be $500 richer under a friendly wager with his mother.

Benjamin, 11, entered into the year-long wager with his mother, Roslyn Barreux, and he's nearly fulfilled his part of the deal.

The bet, which ends at 9:01 a.m. Monday, began half-jokingly. Ms. Barreux said.

"I came home with an article about two kids somewhere whose parents gave them $500 if they didn't watch TV for a year," she said. When she showed her son the story, he eagerly said he would stop watching the tube for $500.

"I figured either way I'd win," Ms. Barreux said. "If I didn't follow through, I saved $500, and if he did, it would be worth having him do other things for a year."

Before the bet, Benjamin said he watched about six or seven hours of television daily. Since then, he has filled his time reading, and stacks of magazines and library books line his bedroom.

An interest he had in toy soldiers has expanded into a curiosity about military history, his mother said.

"He could name almost every plane and ship in World War II," Ms. Barreux said in a telephone interview this week.

Thomas Donohue, director of Boston University's School of Mass Communication, said there have been several cases of families giving up TV.

"I think it says more about the kid and his discipline than it says about television," he said.

"This proves that TV is not an addiction in a physical or psychological way," added Terence Moran, professor of Communications Arts and Science at New York University. "Normal kids can live without it, such as when they go to summer camp and don't watch TV for two months."

Ms. Barreux said she was not completely confident her son could give up television when she made the bet.

"He was coming home and racing to the TV set and taping his favorite shows while watching another," she said.

Benjamin said he had a tough time adjusting during the first month of the bet, and that his resolve was tested when he watched "Rambo," was on cable TV.

"All my friends would talk about the movie and kid me by asking how I liked it," he said. "Sometimes they would show a TV Guide in my face."

He also said that there were times he worried about losing the bet on a technicality.

"When we would go to the department stores and we'd walk past the TV displays, he would hide his eyes," his mother said. "In one restaurant, there were three TV sets and he had to position his chair so he couldn't see any of them."

Benjamin said he was not sure what he would do with the $500 except that he has agreed not to buy a TV.

Pothole costly for Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — The city must pay almost $400,000 to a carpenter injured when his sports car hit a large pothole and flew into oncoming traffic, a jury ruled.

Charles Lovejoy's subcompact car ran into a 2-by-2-foot hole about 8 inches deep in southwest Houston in September 1979. The jolt literally sent the car into the air and caused it to collide with another vehicle, although Lovejoy was observing the speed limit, said John Davis Jr., one of Lovejoy's attorneys.

The jury on Monday awarded

Lovejoy, an unemployed carpenter, a total of $382,500. Davis said interest probably will raise the figure closer to $500,000.

Assistant City Attorney Susan Teich said the city has not decided whether to appeal the case.

Lovejoy suffered a compound fracture of his right arm and subsequent damage to his radial nerve that caused some loss of arm strength and control.

City street division officials testified that there were numerous potholes in the area.

Asked what show would break his fast, he said: "Whatever's on Monday afternoon."

Congress will reject school lunch cuts plan — House panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress will ignore the Reagan administration's proposal to cut child nutrition programs by 17 percent next year, members of the House told an Agriculture Department official Tuesday.

"We have received this same budget proposal before, and we have soundly rejected it," Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., told Sonia Crow, associate administrator of the Food and Nutrition Service. "I do not believe Congress intends, this year or next, to allow any further erosion of services provided by child nutrition programs," added Ford, chairing a hearing of the House Education and Labor subcommittee on elementary, secondary and vocational education.

The administration has proposed for the third time to eliminate a 25 cents per meal subsidy for meals that go to students from families with incomes above about $20,000. Savings in fiscal 1988 would be $857 million, Ms. Crow said. Ms. Crow said 85 percent of federal subsidies go to meals that poor children get free or at reduced prices, so the proposal "is not a significant reduction of the federal commitment to child nutrition programs."

Opponents of the reduction, among them the American School Food Services Association, say the 25-cent-per-meal subsidy amounts to a grant that enables many schools to offer lunches and breakfasts. "Without this grant many districts could not afford to participate," Mary Klatko, head of the group's legislative committee, said in a statement. She cited a Library of Congress study that estimated 44,000 schools serving over 12 million children would be at risk of dropping out if the administration cuts were enacted.

"A chip that entitles you to a free lunch isn't worth a tinker's damn if you're going to a school that couldn't afford to keep the program going without a federal subsidy," Ford said. "It comes down to what is the cheapest manner to deliver the services. And as yet I haven't found a cheaper way," added Rep. William Goodling of Pennsylvania, ranking Republican on the subcommittee. But Ms. Crow said the reductions are urgent this year in light of the federal budget deficit and said she has cut her own budget for staff, supplies and computers by 27 to 30 percent to set an example. "It has forced us to be better managers of our programs and our resources. And this is what we are asking of the people who administer child nutrition programs. We know these are not easy reductions," she said.

Under questioning, Ms. Crow said she was not prepared to answer whether 17 percent cuts had been requested for other Agriculture Department subsidies. Asked if feeding programs for foreigners should be cut 17 percent, she replied, "The discussion we're in now doesn't concern that."

Sustained Contra aid advised

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Contra guerrillas will produce good results in combat with Nicaragua's Sandinista government within the next year, but the rebels won't succeed over the long term without sustained support from the United States, the top U.S. military official in the region said Tuesday.

If the United States doesn't pledge long-term support to the Contras — doesn't actually take sides in Central America — it will leave friendly countries such as Honduras and El Salvador open to Nicaraguan intimidation, said Army Gen. John R. Galvin, the chief of the U.S. Southern Command in Panama.

"What we have to do to help the Contras is to sustain our support," Galvin said during a Pentagon press conference.

"The sustenance of it is more important than the money. The moral aspect of it is more important than the money. I really think that we need to recognize that in Central America, we actually need to take sides."

Last year's decision by Congress to approve $100 million in aid for the Contras will make a difference, Galvin continued, but it will take time for results to show.

The American aid has only been flowing to the Contras for about four months, he added, and yet "people want to know where are the results?"

"It takes four months just to hand out the books and rucksacks. I would say, to see the full impact of that, you would need about a year."

Galvin said the Contras now have about 100,000 rebels inside Nicaragua and have expanded the level of fighting within Nicaragua over a broader region than has been seen previously, Galvin said.

"The level of fighting over the past two years, first of all, has been fairly high — 100 shooting contacts per month is what it is right now and it has averaged that for at least 10 months. I would predict that in two or three months, you're going to see more combat action, good combat action, than you may have seen in the past."

Given the normal history of insurgent movements, however, it would be foolish to expect a quick victory, Galvin continued.

"But are we, or are we not committed long term to the hemisphere and its security? If we're not committed, I think we've had it. There is a danger there that the American people and the American Congress will want results too quickly."

Senator will refuse more than $100

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., says he will refuse money from all political action committees and will again limit all campaign contributions to $100 in his 1988 bid for a fourth term.

Chiles set a $100 contribution limit in his 1982 race. In 1976, he refused to accept contributions above $100.

Federal election laws permit maximum contributions of $1,000 per election from individuals and $5,000 from political action committees.

Chiles, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said Monday he will discuss his decision at a news conference Thursday.

McCausland up for Air Force post

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has nominated Maj. Gen. Charles McCausland for a promotion and new assignment as the vice commander of the Air Force Logistics Command, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

Assuming he is confirmed by the Senate, McCausland will receive his third star and will replace Lt. Gen. Marc C. Reynolds, who is retiring on April 1 after more than 35 years of active-duty service.

McCausland, 51, a native of Flushing, N.Y., now commands the Ogden Air Logistics Center at Hill Air Force Base, Utah.

Reynolds has served in his post at the Logistics Command since September 1984.

School funding compromise gains support

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

BOISE — A compromise bill to help financially disadvantaged school districts and to stave off a lawsuit against the state is gaining support in the Legislature.

"We're not pulling from opposite ends anymore," said State Sen. Terry Sversten, R-Colado, chairman of the Senate Education Committee. "People are moving rapidly for this."

Sversten was drafting the compromise version on Tuesday that would increase the state's funding formula calculation at a faster pace than state Superintendent Jerry Evans originally requested.

The compromise bill also would not rob from the wealthier districts and give to the poorer, as districts such as Blaine County fear a House bill would do.

The compromise also would require an additional $2.5 million in state money to go to schools, versus $15.5 million to $16 million needed to fund the House bill.

That means that even the people on JFAC (Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee) would like to see funding from the general fund go toward equity, and that really surprises me," Sversten said.

The House bill, called "the flooring plan," is supported by the Twin Falls School District. It would force the state to fund all districts at 80 percent of the level of the highest district in the state.

The flooring plan was written by Meridian School Superintendent Nick Hallett.

Hallett, Evans and others debated the merits of both plans during a lengthy joint House and Senate Education Committee hearing Monday night.

No one argued that a real disparity exists between school districts in Idaho. In some cases, schools spend $1,200 more per student based on where the family lives.

The argument is over how to solve the problem.

Evans argued that lawmakers need to move cautiously, because no school district in Idaho is "wealthy."

Hallett agreed that Evans' plan was a good one, but it did not move fast enough in helping poorer school districts.

Also testifying in favor of the House Bill was Twin Falls School Trustee Steve Tolman.

Tolman told lawmakers that the Twin Falls School District did not want to sue the state. "But the need is now," he said.

However, Boise School Trustee Rory Jones said the House bill "would cause tremendous taxpayer inequity."

"The reason low-spending districts are low is not because of a low base, but because their levies are low," Jones said.

Jones' testimony appeared to come straight from an Idaho Education Association study, also released on Monday.

The IEA-sponsored report said the state's school finance system is "basically sound."

"Spending disparities persist among districts," said the report, "but these disparities can be reduced using the basic school finance system in place, provided it is sufficiently funded by the state."

The report was written by E. Gareth Hoachlander with MPR Associates, a management, planning and research firm in Berkeley, Calif.

The IEA requested the study to examine the two plans for improving school finance in Idaho and assess the pros and cons of each.

Hoachlander said the flooring plan "unfairly rewards districts making low tax effort and penalizes those with high tax efforts."

Hoachlander said as long as districts are free to raise local property taxes, the Senate plan "will achieve a better balance between spending equity and taxpayer equity."

A representative of the Blaine County School District, Treasurer Lita Sullivan, also argued that while attendance in Blaine County has risen 22 percent in 6 years, state support has declined 66 percent.

Market value in Blaine County has gone from $629 million in 1982, to over $1 billion in 1986, Sullivan said. But with the 5-percent cap on taxes imposed by the 1 Percent Initiative, school districts have not been able to tap that new wealth, she said.

Sullivan said Blaine County did support the Senate version 1119, because it guaranteed that districts such as Blaine County would not lose money as the state tried to help poorer districts.

Lawmakers on Tuesday said they were convinced something will be done this year to help school districts such as Twin Falls.

"But people need to realize, wealthy districts have problems, too," said Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey.

He said 30-40 percent of the Blaine County School District's budget was tied to annual override levies.

Rocky Jackson, who attends as many public meetings as he can get to, speaks out at a city council hearing in Jerome

Mark Jerome man 'present' in civic affairs

By TERESA Z. TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — In the late '60s and early '70s, everyone, it seemed, held an opinion and voiced it about the issues confronting the people of that time.

But as the wild-eyed young men and women of that age grew into adulthood, began families, established careers, those passions waned, and perhaps as a result of a feeling of futility about really having any impact on society, those same people became quiet. Their desire to improve something turned inward, and the "me" generation was born. The nation was left with what seemed to be a general apathy towards the administrative process of national and local government.

But wait a minute . . . allow me to introduce Rocky Jackson.

If you've been to a public meeting in Jerome in the last couple of years, you've probably seen Jackson. And you have probably heard him speak, usually to question policy makers, such as City Council members or county commissioners, about the decisions they are making or to suggest to them points they may have overlooked.

When county zoning officials were considering a zoning change to allow C.J. Marshall to open a potato processing plant, he was at the hearing to praise Marshall on behalf of the area's family's for opening the plant in Jerome. And at the recent city hearings to consider allowing liquor sales on Sunday, he questioned the effect more liberal alcohol laws would have on family life.

He makes it a point to make his presence felt at Jerome's city and county government public meetings.

"I always had an opinion, but I never got out and expressed it up until the last few years," says Jackson. That was when his involvement with the Jerome wading pool project got him interested in voicing those opinions more.

"I know you put a lot of trust in the people you elect, but it doesn't hurt to go down and see what happens with those people . . . whether they are doing their job for you, it is accountability," Jackson says.

Jackson, who was instrumental in getting a wading pool built for the children of Jerome and who was involved in a tree-planting project for the city, is concerned about the economy of the area, but enthusiastic about his town.

"Jerome is not a good town . . . Jerome is a great town. I don't know many communities where if you have an idea to build a wading pool and ask for private donations, you are given $14,800," says Jackson.

In an age in which many young people in small towns graduate from high school and leave immediately to seek their fortunes elsewhere, Jackson, 34, chose to remain in the town where he was born and make the most of its opportunities.

"My grandfather came here in the early 1920s. My father was born on Bacon Ranch, which is out northeast of Jerome. I am the youngest of four kids. I was born in (the) Jerome hospital the day it opened, March 19, 1932," he says.

Jackson, who is married and has one daughter, has worked for Mountain Bell for 13 years and is currently a facilities technician for the company.

He was recently named "employee of the year" by the company and was awarded $1,000 for donation to the cause of his choice. Jackson chose to donate the money to the Jerome School District to be used for books for students in first, second and third grades.

Jackson says he was not always community-minded, but an automobile accident during his college years changed his life.

"The accident taught me to think differently. Rather than for me, it taught me to think for us. There is sharing; there is doing for others," he says.

Woodbury wins P&Z approval for shopping center

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A plan for a shopping center near the intersection of Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Pole Line Road received the unanimous approval of the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday evening.

But developer Rick Woodbury, president of the Woodbury Corp. of Salt Lake City, said his company will still tentatively first and build later.

He said he had no commitments for the proposed "Magic Valley Plaza," but the corporation was negotiating with several businesses.

He couldn't say whether a commitment was imminent, but he said he hoped some construction will start by summer.

The corporation had originally planned to build an enclosed mall, but another Utah company, Price Development, built the Magic Valley Mall across Blue Lakes Boulevard North, near the rim of the Snake River Canyon.

The corporation on Tuesday presented the city with amended plans, this time for a shopping center that will complement the enclosed mall, according to its application. The plaza would include stores not usually found in malls, such as furniture and hardware businesses. Nearby free-standing buildings would house a six-screen theatre, fast-food and family restaurants and banking or financial institutions.

Woodbury told the commission that some persons might question the economic feasibility of the plan, but his corporation will be closely watching the economic impact of the Magic Valley Mall. In addition, his corporation would build only when it has a tenant.

"We've been involved with this property for 7 years and nothing has happened," Woodbury said. "It would have been easy to throw open a shopping center. But once you put up buildings, it's hard to take them down. It's in our own best interests to be careful."

The project will probably be dealt with on a property-by-property basis, he said. If the corporation obtains a commitment for a large grocery store, for example, it may "take chances" and build more space.

"This is a 15-year plan and not a 2-year plan," Woodbury said.

The depressed economy is a present factor, "(but) Twin Falls is destined to be the economic center of the area," he said. "I think Twin Falls has a future. That's why I am here."

A mall will help attract new business to Twin Falls in "the long run," Woodbury said.

In the corporation's proposal for the 78-acre development, about 40 acres will be dedicated to businesses and other retail outlets; more than 4 acres for professional offices; 4 acres for mini-storage; 4 acres for a motel; 13 acres for multi-family housing; and 5 acres for sports and recreation.

Woodbury had no cost estimates for the development.

City Development Director LaMar Orton said the plan under consideration was basically a concept.

"The nitty gritty will come later," Orton said.

No one opposed the plan at the public hearing on Tuesday. Besides

Professors: Evolution, religion don't conflict

By DOUG BREWER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Evolution and religion are not mutually exclusive, the acting dean of the Idaho State University graduate school told an "Evolution on Trial" series workshop at the College of Southern Idaho Monday night.

A large number of people who call themselves Christians "have no conflict" between the two, said Edwin W. House, a professor of Christian and an ISU biology professor, adding that about half of the U.S. scientists who accept evolution are devoutly religious people.

He further listed several U.S. church denominations which don't officially object to the theory of organic evolution, such as the LDS church, the Roman Catholic Church and the Lutheran Church of America.

Yet, religion answers the "why" risk the "how," he said, focusing his presentation on the debate between creationism as a science and evolution.

House claimed that the writings of leading creation science proponents, such as Henry Morris and Duane Gish, the "how," is a scientific definition such as natural observation and empirical testing.

He said that such literature tended to be critical of evolution, without offering any scientific data supporting creationism. He noted that scientific journals lack creationism.

Craig: Boulder-White Clouds area status due update

RK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho lacks a nationally known magnet to draw tourists, U.S. Rep. Larry Craig says, and his proposed Boulder-White Clouds national park would create one.

Sun Valley and Coeur d'Alene have national recognition, the Idaho-Republican says, but more needs to be done.

"Idaho is at a critical turning point in the way we should view our natural resource base," says Craig, who last week announced his idea of turning the scenic alpine area north of Sun Valley into a national park. It is now part of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

It is worth exploring whether the state can do better than it has done in the past, Craig said Tuesday.

Previous decisions about the fate of the Boulder-White Clouds area need to be updated in today's context, he said.

Many details about the proposal are lacking, pending a study by the University of Idaho College of Forestry, but Craig said, "I have drawn no preconceived notions as to boundaries" of the proposed park.

Reactions to the proposal range from support to skepticism, mixed with a willingness to withhold final judgment until all the details are in.

Riek Johnson of the Idaho Conservation League on Tuesday questioned Craig's thinking on the issue, but he wouldn't rule out support for a national park in the Boulder-White Clouds.

Andy Munier, owner of Backwoods Mountain Sports in Ketchum, said, "I'm for it if it protects more of the White Clouds and the Sawtooths. . . . If it turns into an exploitative (thing), then I will really fight it." There needs to be better access through trails outside the core area, he said, but the core area needs to be left alone.

The question of whether the Boulder-White Clouds should be a national park has been discussed, since the 1920s, and there were congressional hearings on the subject in the mid-1960s. Some say the greatest attraction of the area is the mountains, whose craggy peaks resemble clouds when sunlight hits them the right way.

The southern boundary of the Boulder-White Clouds roadless area is located about 15 miles directly northwest of Ketchum.

The National Park Service has, in recent years, recommended national park status — which, after wilderness, offers the highest level of federal protection. But in 1979 Gov. Cecil Andrus, then U.S. secretary of Interior, recommended against it.

The NPS is under the Interior Department, while the U.S. Forest Service is a unit of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The Boulder-White Clouds area is comprised of 433,977 acres within the 754,000-acre SNRA, administered by the U.S. Forest Service.

The area is classified, by special direction of Congress, as a wilderness study area, said Sawtooth National Forest spokesman Ed Waldapfel. A draft of the Forest Service's forest plan recommends that 145,870 acres of the Boulder-White Clouds area become an official wilderness area, but this could change, Waldapfel said.

Wilderness areas ban man's interference in the environment. Fallen trees are not moved and motorized machinery is prohibited.

SNRA Superintendent Al Ashton said Andrus had recommended against national park status for the Boulder-White Clouds area because he felt the Forest Service managed the area satisfactorily.

Andrus had felt that the intent of the law was being met, Ashton said. It stated that the historic Western ranching atmosphere of the adjacent Sawtooth Valley should be maintained.

People also wanted to hunt and ranch in the area, Ashton said. While some hunting is allowed in national parks, the concept of a national park was not acceptable to all the people of Idaho. However, he said, people wanted some sort of protection of the area.

Ashton said he didn't know what to think about Craig's proposal because he didn't have enough information about it.

Johnson said the idea of a national park in the Boulder-White Clouds "has been studied to death. Some of the best natural resource minds Idaho had or ever will have were working on it — Sen. Frank Church, Gov. Cecil Andrus and Sen. James McClure.

"Any impact on hunting, fishing and ranching (from a national park) are great con-

Woodbury, no one spoke in his favor.

But Twin Falls businessman Bob Portlock did ask the commission to consider the past and present traffic problems of Blue Lakes Boulevard. He suggested also that the commission take the long view of its action and plans for the city.

"Keep an open mind as to what it will do for the community," Portlock said.

The Woodbury Corp. first approached the city in 1980 with plans for an enclosed mall at the site and a request for a C-1 planned unit development designation. But Woodbury had to reapply for the city's approval after failing to submit final plans within a required time period.

A C-1 PUD allows commercial uses and requires city approval of detailed building plans.

The corporation reapplied in 1984 and obtained approval for its mall plans, but again it failed to submit final plans in the required time limit.

It approved the concept on Tuesday, with stipulations recommended by city staff. These include the submission of a traffic study, a report on the effects of the shopping center on storm and irrigation water, a landscaping plan, and a plan for the orderly development of the site. The report's should be submitted at the time the corporation submits a final plan, which should be within a 1-year period, said Orton.

Woodbury said he basically agreed with the city's recommendations.

The corporation's proposal will now go before the city council for final approval.

In other business, Helen P. Kolouch received a special-use permit to use her property at 343 and 345 Martin St. as professional offices.

tion to the teaching of creationism in a religious or social science context.

House elaborated on the evolutionary-religious tie by recounting four interpretations of the biblical Book of Genesis — literal, which relies on a strict account and forms the basis for creationism; literary, meaning figurative; concordist, which stretches the concept of a creation day; and reconstruction, which infers a fossil record in that Earth was created, suffered a catastrophe and was created a second time.

All four are accepted by credible biblical scholars, with the latter three having little or no conflict with evolutionary thought, he said.

He claimed to find holes in the creationist argument regarding a young Earth, referring to some 300,000 radiometric datings of rocks and fossils that point toward an older terrestrial age.

He claimed to find holes in the creationist argument regarding a young Earth, referring to some 300,000 radiometric datings of rocks and fossils that point toward an older terrestrial age.

What is "not the central evidence for evolution in biology" is the highly speculative origin of life and of the universe, he said.

Its speculative nature makes origin an easy target for evolution opponents, but it is "not an issue of evolution," House told The Times-News before the session.

ISU microbiology professor Larry D. Farrell, who also appeared at the workshop, said before the session that he objected to the teaching of creationism in the public schools as a science per se, in that it would help produce a population that does not understand or appreciate science in general.

"It means the destruction of science as we know it," through a "redefinition," he said. "The U.S. would take a back-seat to those countries more realistic about science education."

Farrell added that he had no ob-

Fire damages center

FILER — A fire at the Magic Valley Living Center, southwest of Twin Falls, caused between $5,000 and $10,000 damage Tuesday.

Chief Bud Compher of the Filer Rural Fire Department said the fire started in the basement of the main home at the center. He said it appeared to have started where a large wood stove connects to the chimney and then spread up the walls and through the first floor area. The cause was not immediately apparent.

and the fire is still under investigation, he said.

Compher said smoke alarms in the building went off around 9 a.m. but telephones in the home were not working and one of the women counselors rode a bicycle 2½ miles to Curry to turn in the alarm.

Two women workers at the center used garden hoses to keep the fire from spreading while the alarm was being turned in, Compher said.

cerns," Johnson said. "We shouldn't sacrifice Idaho's basic traditional values for the sake of tourism."

Johnson wouldn't rule out support for a national park, but he said he would have to see specifics of Craig's proposal.

"Who has all the things it needs already to develop a great tourist economy. What we lack is the ability to market it," Johnson said. He pointed to Utah as a state that does a good job marketing its scenic wonders.

Craig has stressed the economic benefits of a national park and pointed to neighboring Wyoming, with Yellowstone and Grand Teton national parks — which he said are "bursting at the seams" with tourists.

Assad trying to salvage strategy for control over Lebanon

By ED BLANCHIE
The Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Syria's military intervention in Moslem west Beirut is a gamble by President Hafez Assad to stilt together his tattered strategy for pacifying Lebanon and prop up his main ally among the warring militias, the Shiite Moslem Amal.

Assad's efforts to end Lebanon's nearly 12-year-old civil war and impose a Pax Syriaiana began to unravel in December 1985 when Lebanon's Christian president, Amin Gemayel, torpedoed a Syrian-sponsored peace treaty.

Gemayel's main militia rivals had endorsed the treaty, and Assad appeared headed for a peacemaking triumph that would have made him a hero in the Arab world and beyond.

But Gemayel, fearing that surrendering power to Assad's Moslem allies would leave Lebanon's Christians defenseless, refused to accept the Damascus accord.

In January 1986, fighters loyal to Gemayel ousted his Christian rival, militia chief Elie Hobeika, who had signed the Syrian accord. Since then, Assad's peace efforts have been further undermined by the renaissance of Yasser Arafat's Palestinians in Lebanon and remorseless feuding among unruly Moslem militias led with Damascus.

Ostensibly, the goal of the 4,000 Syrian troops that rumbled into Beirut's Moslem sector Sunday is to end fierce street battles between the rival militias for control of west Beirut.

But the Syrian intervention also is aimed at preventing the complete collapse of Amal after it was savaged by the leftist Druse and their allies in Lebanon's Moscow-oriented Communist Party.

The leftists, although outnumbered by the poorly disciplined Shiite militiamen, drove them out of their main strongholds in west Beirut in fighting last week that killed 300 and wounded 1,300.

Until the Syrians moved in, Amal was on the ropes. It already had been fought to a standstill by Palestinian guerrillas the Shitties have been seeking to crush since May 1985 at Syria's urging.

In addition, Syrian-backed factions who had been at odds with Arafat since 1983 were joining forces with the PLO to fight Amal. That was a big slap in the face for Assad, who seeks to wrest control of the Palestinian movement from Arafat.

The Druse and other leftists refused to help the Shitties crush the Palestinians, leaving Amal increasingly isolated.

Druse leader Walid Jumblatt and Amal chief Nabil Berri, nominal allies in the civil war against the Christians, have been at loggerheads for months.

Jumblatt has carved out a Druse canton in the Chouf mountains southeast of Beirut and for the first time has access to the sea.

The fear in Damascus is that the independently minded Jumblatt will seek to make a deal with Israel and merge his canton with the Druse in the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights, captured from Syria in 1967, to create a separate state.

Assad's proxy war against the Palestinians has angered Moscow, Syria's main arms supplier. The Soviets are pushing to reunite the fragmented PLO in advance of an international Mideast peace conference.

The Kremlin calls the shots with Lebanon's Communists and Jumblatt has his own lines into Moscow.

Assad clearly has not been in control of events in Lebanon for some time," Hans-Heino Koppitz, a Middle East specialist with the London-based International Institute for Strategic Studies, said in a telephone interview.

"The challenge from the Iranians is growing and he has learned that Amal is not able to keep that in check," he said.

Assad was reluctant to send his army back into the Beirut cauldron. The last time he did that to quell civil war fighting, in 1976, his troops ended up fighting the Christians two years later.

Now he runs the risk of having to fight the Moslem militias and crossing swords with two of his nominal allies, Iran and Libya. In recent months they have started flexing their muscles in Lebanon.

Analysts believe Assad did not move until he got the assurances through U.S. contacts that Israel would not regard his move into Beirut as a provocation.

Israel, like Syria, would like to block Arafat's efforts to stage a comeback in Lebanon four years after he was driven out. It also would be happy to see Syria, its main Arab foe, bogged down in the Lebanese quicksands.

The Israelis were stuck in that quagmire themselves for three years and know only too well the dangers of trying to tranquilize Lebanon's feuding factions.

Syrians seize west Beirut strongholds

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian truce-enforcing troops Tuesday killed 22 Shiite Moslem zealots in hand-to-hand combat and three Druse militiamen in embattled west Beirut, police and hospital authorities said.

Police said the Syrians clashed with fighters of Hezbollah, or Party of God, in Moslem west Beirut's neighborhood of Bourj Hammoud about 9:15 p.m. Beirut time. The mortally wounded Hezbollah fighters were rushed to the Moslem-controlled Beirut hospital.

Hospital manager Abdullah Nawfal told The Associated Press 22 were dead and one was "barely alive" upon arrival.

"They (the 22) were all dead when they were brought in. They were all axed or bayoneted to death," Nawfal said. "They were killed in hand-to-hand combat."

He said members of Beirut's Civil Defense

Corps would take the bodies of the victims to the Bl el-Abed suburban Shiite neighborhood, where Hezbollah has its command headquarters.

The group, which is backed by Iran, is the most militant Shiite faction in Lebanon. It has been frequently reported to be the sponsor of extremist groups involved in kidnapping foreigners in Beirut.

Hezbollah headquarters declined immediate comment on the clash. Spokesmen at the Syrian military headquarters in west Beirut's Beaurivage Hotel were not immediately available for comment.

Sources with pro-Syrian militias said the Syrians attacked when their troops came under fire from a Hezbollah military center.

It was not immediately clear how the Syrians could get close enough to kill the Hezbollah fighters with bayonets if the Shitties were shooting at them with assault rifles.

The clash was the most serious confrontation involving the Syrians since they intervened to quell factional fighting in Beirut's Moslem sector Sunday. It could strain relations between Iran and Syria, which is the strongest Arab ally of the Persian nation in its 6½-year-old war with Arab Iraq.

Earlier Tuesday, Syrian foot patrols marched into west Beirut's battle zone to occupy Druse and Shiite militia strongholds and killed three Druse militiamen who refused to obey an order to halt.

Assassins who were not identified shot down two ranking Communists in the ancient southern port of Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut. Twelve members of the pro-Moscow Lebanese Communist Party have been slain in south Lebanon in the past nine days.

Aquino appeals for peace, unity; rebels' attack marks anniversary

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Communist rebels killed five people and wounded four in attacks around Cebu City on Tuesday, the eve of nationwide celebrations hailing the first anniversary of President Corason Aquino's rise to power.

Mrs. Aquino and armed forces chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos appealed for peace and unity among their countrymen.

"We cannot rebuild our country when others are trying to tear it down," she said in a televised message. "We say to those who want to see our country strong: let us make it strong together, put aside the arrogance of arms."

Organizers say they expect up to 500,000 people at a Manila rally today.

Mrs. Aquino is expected to unveil an amnesty and rehabilitation program then for rebels who lay down their arms.

Troops in full battle gear were posted Tuesday at broadcast stations and other strategic centers because of reports that rebels or Marcos loyalists might try to disrupt the celebrations.

A four-day "people power" uprising — led by military rebels, backed by the Roman Catholic Church, triumphant because of mass public outpourings to the streets — drove Ferdinand E. Marcos from the presidency into Hawaiian exile last year after 20 years of authoritarian government.

President Reagan told Filipinos Tuesday night their revolution was a "historic moment which freed loving people everywhere will long remember."

In a taped message aired by government television, Reagan said, "We watched with admiration as Filipinos put their lives on the line, with only their faith in their fellow Filipinos to protect them. With the courage of their convictions and prayers and the commitment of the citizenry, democracy took on new life in the Philippines."

Reagan, who had been a strong supporter of Marcos, added, "I salute you and tell you are proud to be your friends."

Efforts by the Aquino government to end an 18-year-old Communist insurgency fizzled when peace talks collapsed last month.

Brig. Gen. Romulo Querubin, commander of the Cebu area, said rebels lobbed a grenade into a school Tuesday and sprayed the building with gunfire, killing two men and wounding two women and two children.

About 30 farm families had been staying in the school after their village was evacuated because of fears of rebel attack.

Soviets free activist after 8-year term

MOSCOW (AP) — Christian activist Alexander Ogorodnikov has been freed from labor camp after serving more than eight years on charges of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda, dissident Yelena Bonner said Tuesday.

Keston College, a London-based organization that monitors religious activities in Eastern Europe, reported another release. It said Igor Ogurtsov had completed a 20-year sentence on similar charges.

No official announcement was made in either case. Bonner, wife of noted dissident Andrei Sakharov, said in a telephone interview that Ogorodnikov, 36, returned to his home in Moscow several days ago.

About 150 political and religious activists have been pardoned and freed in recent weeks. Officials say the releases are part of a review of convictions for offenses defined as anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda.

Ogorodnikov organized an informal Russian Orthodox youth group in 1974 and was sent to prison four years later. Bonner said his sister and her husband picked him up Feb. 14 at a strict-regime labor camp near Khabarovsk in the Soviet Far East.

Widow testifies at trial

PARIS (AP)—The wife of a slain U.S. military attaché wept Tuesday as she told a special terrorism court that her family still suffers because of her husband's 1982 assassination.

"No one on Earth deserves to die like that, to be executed like that," 47-year-old Sharon Ray, told the seven-judge panel. "This assassination changed not the bit of U.S. policy, it only changed the lives of our family, and we still suffer."

She made an emotional statement on the second day of the trial of Georges Ibrahim Abdallah, a Lebanese charged with complicity in the 1982 murders of Lt. Col. Charles Ray and Israeli diplomat Yacov Barsimantov.

Abdallah, 35, who left the trial Monday after denouncing what he called "Yankee executioners" in an opening statement, did not attend the trial Tuesday.

In a written statement, signed "Arab fighter," he told the court there was "no reason that I appear." Jacques Verges, the defense attorney, said Abdallah did not intend to return to the trial.

Mrs. Ray sobbed quietly and left the courtroom earlier Tuesday when the pistol prosecutors say was used to kill her husband was shown to the judges. Police found the pistol among other arms when they raided a Paris apartment rented by Abdallah.

As a party to the Abdallah case, Mrs. Ray is not required to be a witness, but after composing herself she said she wanted to make a statement.

Amid tears, her voice trembling and cracking, Mrs. Ray told the court her husband taught their children — a son now 20 years old and a daughter now 22 — to love and respect life.

Both children were at home the day their father was killed by a single gunshot to the head outside the family home in western Paris on Jan. 18, 1982.

"When I told them, my son fell over and my daughter just looked at me," Mrs. Ray said. "They did not understand what I was saying. Even I couldn't understand that."

She concluded by saying her husband "was 43 years old when he died. He could have lived another 30 years. I don't accept assassination, thank you."

Abdallah is also charged with the attempted murder of Robert O. Homme, the former U.S. consul-general in Strasbourg who survived a shooting on March 26, 1984.

All three attacks were claimed by the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Factions. Police and terrorism experts claim Abdallah is the leader of that organization.

Treblinka survivor IDs walk

JERUSALEM (AP)—The Treblinka death camp survivor who said John Demjanjuk was the brutal Nazi guard "Ivan the Terrible" testified Tuesday that the retired U.S. auto worker had the same walk.

Pinchas Epstein rose from his chair and demonstrated a limping shuffle.

He sobbed as he said the atrocities committed at the Nazi Germany's Treblinka camp in Poland more than 40 years ago never would leave his memory. "No one who entered there will ever leave," he said. "It is the kind of horror that will never end."

The 66-year-old defendant lived in Cleveland, Ohio, until his extradition last year. He is accused of being the Ukrainian guard who beat and mutilated prisoners, sometimes gouged out their eyes, shoved them into the death chambers and turned on the gas.

Demjanjuk, born in the Soviet Ukraine, claims never to have been at Treblinka and says he is a victim of mistaken identity.

Epstein, 61, nodded toward the defendant in court and said, "His way of walking was the way I remembered from Treblinka." The witness rose and walked with small, shuffling steps, limping slightly on his left leg.

The demonstration given by Epstein was similar to the way Demjanjuk has walked at the trial, but Demjanjuk has less of a shuffle and no noticeable limp.

Epstein's testimony came during cross-examination by defense attorney Mark O'Connor of Buffalo, N.Y., who questioned the witness in detail about his memories of Ivan and Treblinka.

O'Connor has based the defense on the contentions that Ivan was killed in a prisoner uprising in August 1943 and that memories are faulty after such a long period.

On Monday, Epstein pointed to Demjanjuk in court and said the defendant was the guard he knew as Ivan—the Terrible—at Treblinka, where 850,000 Jews were killed in 1942-1943.

He repeated the assertion Tuesday, saying, "I am convinced that opposite me sits Ivan the terrible and fearsome who was in Treblinka."

Births drop 40% in Zagreb after Chernobyl disaster

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP)—Nine months after the Chernobyl nuclear plant disaster, the number of births in Zagreb was 40 percent lower than usual, a medical professor was quoted as saying Tuesday.

Iva Kuvacic of Zagreb University told the Večernje Novosti newspaper that it was impossible to link the drop in births directly to the April 1986 nuclear accident in the Soviet Union.

"What is quite certain, however, is that these days we have been having about 40 percent fewer births than in previous years," he said.

He added, "evidently, (some) women sought not to get pregnant in this period. If they did, they decided to get abortions."

Zagreb, the capital of Croatia, is about 730 miles southwest of Chernobyl. The nuclear accident killed at least 31 people and spread a cloud of radiation that stretched around the world.

Pancakes star on Shrove Tuesday

Shrove Tuesday, the day before Lent begins, this year falls on March 3. The day has long been celebrated with great pancake feasts.

During medieval time, eggs and butter were taboo during the Lenten fast. So the Shrove Tuesday specialty became hearty pancakes, made rich with these forbidden ingredients. This delicious pancake tradition survives today in parts of the United States and many other countries.

One such tradition started with a young woman in Olney, England, who, while preparing her pancakes, heard the bells calling the family to church for Shrove Tuesday services. Unwilling to leave her pancakes or forget her religious duties, the woman raced to church turning the pancakes as she ran.

Centuries later in Olney as well as Liberal, Kan., that famous Shrove Tuesday pancake race through town is reenacted each year.

Enjoy your own traditional feast on Shrove Tuesday with Peaches 'N Cream Pancakes. Top them off with whipped topping or yogurt, red raspberry preserves and peach slices for a dessert finale.

Or begin the day with Perfect Pineapple Pancakes made quickly and easily with complete pancake mix and pineapple juice. The pancakes' fruity flavor is accented with pineapple slices and topped with warm syrup and chopped pecans.

In Ireland Shrove Tuesday is celebrated with potato pancakes. Fry Snappy Potato Pancakes as a savory accompaniment to breakfast meals or the dinner entree.

Denver Pancake Puff is a colorful entree, sure to satisfy the heartiest of appetites. The sides of this oven-baked pancake puff up high to hold a variety of green pepper, eggs, ham, tomato and cheese.

Some of the recipes that follow call for "original" or the traditional pancake mix, but those that call for "complete" mixes are intended for ready-made mixes that already contain shortening and eggs and need only water added. The mixes are not interchangeable.

PEACHES 'N CREAM PANCAKES

1 cup original pancake and waffle mix

1 cup milk
1 egg
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
Non-dairy whipped topping or plain or vanilla yogurt
One 8-oz. can unsweetened sliced peaches, drained

Red raspberry preserves

Heat griddle over high heat (400 degrees on electric griddle); grease lightly. Combine pancake mix, milk, egg, oil and cinnamon; mix just until large lumps disappear. (Batter will have small lumps which will disappear during baking.) Let stand 1 to 2 minutes to thicken.

For each pancake, pour scant 1/4 cup batter onto prepared griddle. Turn pancakes when tops are covered with bubbles and edges look cooked. Turn only once. For each serving, arrange three pancakes on a serving plate. Dollop with whipped topping, arrange 3 to 4 sliced peaches around topping. Drizzle with about 1 tablespoon preserves. Makes four servings.

PERFECT PINEAPPLE PANCAKES

One 20-oz. can sliced pineapple in unsweetened pineapple juice, undrained
Water
2 cups complete pancake and waffle mix
Syrup, warmed
Chopped pecans

Heat griddle over medium-high heat (375 degrees on electric griddle); grease lightly. Drain pineapple, reserving 1 cup juice. Add enough water to reserved pineapple juice to equal 1 1/2 cups. Combine pancake mix and liquid; mix just until large lumps disappear. (Batter will have small lumps which will disappear during baking.)

For each pancake, pour 1/4 cup batter onto prepared griddle. Turn when pancakes begin to rise and edges look cooked. Turn only once. To assemble, place pancakes on serving plate; place pineapple slices between pancakes. Serve with warm syrup and chopped pecans. Makes four servings.

SNAPPY POTATO PANCAKES

1/2 cup peeled, shredded potato (about 1 medium potato)
1 cup complete or buttermilk complete pancake and waffle mix
1/4 cup water
1/2 teaspoon instant minced onion
Dash salt
Frozen chopped chives

Heat griddle over medium-high heat; grease lightly. Place potato between paper towels; press lightly to absorb moisture. Combine pancake mix, water and potato; mix just until large lumps disappear. For each pancake, pour scant 1/4 cup batter onto prepared griddle. Turn when pancakes begin to rise and edges look cooked. Turn only once. For each serving, place two pancakes on a serving plate. Dollop with sour cream; sprinkle with chives. Makes 6 servings.

DENVER PUFF

1/2 cup water
1/2 cup margarine
1/2 cup original pancake and waffle mix
2 eggs
1/2 cup chopped green pepper
3 tablespoons margarine
10 eggs, beaten
1/2 cup chopped ham
1/2 cup chopped tomato
1 1/2 cups (6 oz.) shredded cheddar cheese

Heat oven to 400 degrees F. Generously grease 9-inch glass pie plate. Bring water and margarine to boil in medium saucepan. Add pancake mix; stir vigorously until mixture leaves sides of pan and forms a ball. Remove from heat; add 2 eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition. Spread batter evenly onto bottom and sides of prepared pie plate. Bake 15 to 18 minutes or until golden brown.

Meanwhile, in large skillet, saute green pepper in margarine; add beaten eggs, ham, tomato, 1 cup cheese and salt. Continue cooking over medium-low heat until eggs are soft-set, stirring occasionally. Spoon into hot pancake puff; sprinkle with remaining cheese. Cut into wedges; serve immediately.

She makes cooking a large meal look easy

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — For Billie Reed, entertaining guests might mean preparing a feast for 24 to 50 people. She says she loves to cook, but "cooking is only fun to me as to how it relates to people — particularly groups."

Recently, Idaho Parks Foundation members and some of their spouses, attended a meeting held at Reed's home. Her husband, Cole, is a member, and she is president of the Hagerman Valley Historical Society.

The group looked over the Hagerman fossil beds, and also saw the Hagerman Horse, a 3.4-million-year-old fossil found in the area and housed in the historical society's museum. The bones are on loan from the Smithsonian.

Reed fixed breakfast, lunch, dinner and another lunch for the 24 people during their stay. She prepared the dinner four days in advance, and put it in the freezer, so that she would be free to do other things on the day it was to be consumed.

When cooking for a crowd, she says she believes anything and everything that is possible should be done ahead of time.

"I've never liked to sacrifice taking care of my guests, for food," she says. "I think food is important, but I think my guests are more important."

The Reeds live on Billingsley Creek, and they have a large island, accessible by bridge, where a multitude of people can gather to eat. Called "Picnic Island" by her grandchildren, it has electricity and a bonfire pit.

Last fall, 40 or 50 paleontologists ate after attending a national meeting in Pocatello's Museum of Natural History, followed by a side tour of the fossil beds and a look at the Hagerman Horse.

For an upcoming museum fundraiser, she plans to make cassoulet, a hearty bean and meat dish, which, she says, has a wonderful combination of flavors.

Though she doesn't use recipes as a general rule, she says she has "never found any way to improve on this French cassoulet. I think you have to be willing to make a big mess with this one, but it is something that you can do ahead, and once it's done, you can put it in your roaster or your oven, and forget about it."

She says this recipe "sounds like the directions for forever, because you're putting together three or four different things, and then putting it all together at a different time. I've tried to shortcut this — and I have other recipes that are simpler, but they're just not nearly as good."

CASSOULET (CASS-O-LAY)

One 5-pound duck
2 pounds pork loin
1/2 cup chicken broth
1 1/2 quarts chicken broth
1 1/2 pounds pork sausage rounds
1/2 pound lean salt pork
2 whole onions

A bouquet garni, made by tying in cheesecloth: 1 parsley sprigs, 1 bay leaf and 1 cut clove of garlic
1/2 teaspoon thyme
2 pounds boned lamb shoulder, cubed
3 pounds dried white beans, preferably Great Northern
3 quarts water
3 tablespoons duck fat
3 cups chopped onion
2 cloves garlic, minced
Two 1/2 pound 15-ounce cans of tomatoes, drained and chopped

1 cup dry white wine
1/2 cup chopped fresh parsley
1 bay leaf
2 teaspoons thyme
Salt and pepper

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Place the duck, breast side up, in a shallow roasting pan. Place the pork loin in a small casserole. Insert a meat thermometer in the center of the

The prime time for California artichokes is now through May

LOS ANGELES — Can spring be far behind when the first deliveries of the peak crop of California artichokes appear in the markets? Look for them in good supply and quantity from now through May.

If artichokes are new to you, start with the simplest approach—Pull off one or two layers of lower petals and cut the stem nearly up to the base (one inch or less). Then snip off the top quarter and it's ready to boil.

Stand the prepared artichoke in a pot with three inches of boiling, salted water. Cover and boil gently about 25 to 40 minutes, depending on size, or until petals near center pull out easily. Stand upside down to drain.

Artichokes may be served hot or cold. To eat, pull off outer petals one at a time. Dip the base of the petal into sauce or melted butter. Then pull through your teeth to remove the soft pulpy portion of the petal. Discard the remaining petal. Continue until all petals have been removed.

Then spoon out the fuzzy center of the base and discard. The bottom, or heart, of the artichoke is entirely edible. Cut into small pieces and dip into sauce.

The artichoke can also be used as an ingredient in many dishes. Try this Artichoke Vegetable Stir-Fry for a side dish or light entree. Pull off additional layers of leaves until they are all light green in color; similarly use a knife to pare the base. Cut the artichoke in half and cut out the fuzzy center before cutting the artichoke into wedges or slices.

Simply add the artichoke as you would any prepared vegetable. That's the beauty of a stir-fry — and an artichoke. It's an easy, flavorful treat that adds contrasting color and texture to other vegetables such as tomatoes, olives and zucchini.

ARTICHOKE-VEGETABLE STIR-FRY
2 California artichokes
Lemon juice
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 cups sliced zucchini
1/2 cup vertically sliced onion
1 cup cedar, seeded, and sliced (into wide strips) tomato

1/4 cup sliced ripe olives
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1/2 teaspoon oregano, crushed
1/2 teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste
Shredded Parmesan cheese (optional)

Bend back outer petals of artichokes until they snap off easily near base. Edible portion of petals should remain on artichoke heart.

Continue to snap off and discard thick petals until central core of pale green petals is reached. Cut off stems and top 2 inches of artichokes; discard. Cut artichokes into fourths lengthwise. Trim outer dark green layer from artichoke bottoms. Cut off center petals and fuzzy center. Thinly slice and dip or rub all surfaces with lemon juice. Heat oil in skillet or wok. Add artichokes, zucchini and onion; stir-fry until vegetables are tender. Add tomato, olives, parsley, oregano, salt and pepper; stir-fry until thoroughly heated. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese before serving. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Artichoke Stir-Fry can be a side dish or light entree

Moroccan cuisine is spicy enough to tickle your tongue

"Every Person Comes Out Thirsty!" Yep, it's true. That's what EP-COT ceases to stand for — trust me (and my bandaged feet).

We had a delightful mid-winter break in central Florida where we alternated playing tourist and attending the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association's annual convention.

We took our one remaining-alone child, as did everyone else in the potato industry who attended. After all, you feel a little silly standing in line to ride Space Mountain at the Magic Kingdom if you don't have a kid with you!

If I ever get back to that area, I'll go back to EP-COT for at least another 12-hour stint. EP-COT is the center of Disney World, where they really do research and tourists take a "trip" through each pavilion. Some of them have movies on giant screens, some have boat rides through a maze of displays, sometimes you sit in little seats on a conveyor belt.

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

The great thing is you're getting an education and enjoying every moment of it (except for the long lines to get started).

There's a second part to this complex. It's an international section that features buildings, shows, stores and restaurants manned by people from those countries. We "visited" China, where they had a movie on a 360-degree screen totally surrounding the audience. The items in the stores were the same as those we saw for sale in China. It was memorable and very true in every detail.

We also had dinner in a French Bistro (outstanding) and saw the Canadian film (also in a 360-degree theater) and just skipped through Great Britain, Mexico, Italy and Germany.

The most fun was Morocco. Daughter and I made reservations for lunch. Moroccan food is presented in the Cafe Marrakesh at EP-COT, and I bought a cookbook so you can! I could try some of its dishes.

The most refreshing beverage of the whole vacation was the mint tea served hot in glasses by waiters who poured a thin stream a couple of feet through the long spout of a pot straight out of Ali Baba and the 40 Thieves.

To make this tea, just brew a pot of Chinese green tea using about half the regular amount of tea and add two bags of mint tea to it. It's really light and keeps in a hot pot all day.

The cuisine of Morocco is not highly spicy, just enough to tickle the tongue and make you want more. Its national dish is cous-cous, rolled semolina steamed with a variety of garden vegetables and usually served with chicken or lamb. It sounds exotic but isn't, just very good and very nutritious.

Moroccan food is influenced by its North African location, which provides a great variety of vegetables. The favorite meat is lamb, pork and alcohol are forbidden because of religious, seafood is plentiful on coastal cities, and rattles are using more veal and chicken.

The word Morocco means "Occident" in Arabic, and it is considered the most westernized of Arabian countries.

Here is the recipe for Lamb Cous-Cous Moroccan. You can find packages of cous-cous semolina in most supermarkets. Just check the specialty foods section. I also would use a lamb shoulder or even shanks this way.

LAMB COUS-COUS MOROCCAN
3/2 pounds lamb, cut into bite-sized pieces
1 pound onion, chopped coarsely if large
2 ounces olive oil
2 tablespoons salt (less is OK)
1 tablespoon white pepper (less is OK)

1 teaspoon saffron
1/2 teaspoon yellow food coloring
Assorted vegetables — try 1 pound of any or all of the following: carrots, turnips, cabbage, zucchini, egg

Searching for new vegetable varieties

Each year I plant more than 100 new vegetable varieties in the Ricks College Horticultural Research and Demonstration Garden.

A few of them have been around for a while, but most are brand new varieties just introduced in the last year or two. I try to concentrate on the varieties which look like they might be well adapted to intermountain growing conditions — short growing season, cool night temperatures and dry air.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

Here are a dozen of the best from last year's trial planting. Each has some unusual quality which makes it stand out. Of course there are many other good varieties which are just as well adapted to our climate.

Derby Day is an extra early, medium size cabbage which was ready about a week earlier than the earliest I have grown before. It does not spill as readily as other early cabbage, so it can be picked over a long 4-6 week period.

A plus is a long slender carrot which is the normal amount of vitamin A for carrots. It has a uniform, bright orange color and good flavor.

Canasta is a red-edged, semi-head lettuce that maintains a sweet, mild flavor even during hot weather and with later plantings. The outer leaves are loose like leaf lettuce and the center is a crisp head like iceberg lettuce.

Red Ace is a dark red beet with excellent, uniform size and shape. Supersett is an 8 to 9 inch, very dark green, slicing cucumber with smooth skin.

Ringer is an extra-early, large bell pepper. It has the size of later varieties along with early maturity. An excellent hot pepper.

per is Jalapa. It is a hybrid Jalapeno with earliness and very heavy yields.

I was impressed with three new tomatoes which I tried last year. Cheerios is an extra-early, small cherry tomato which had ripe fruit before Aug. 1. It has excellent flavor for an early tomato. Washington Cherry is a large cherry which produces large yields. It started producing ripe fruit in mid August. Cougar Red has small, medium and large fruit with some fruit reaching 4 inches. The last two varieties were developed by Washington State University in Pullman and probably will not be available for another year.

EarlGold is a new, early cantaloupe with good size and flavor. Springdance is a new medium early yellow sweet corn with excellent flavor.

You probably will not find any of these in the typical vegetable seed rack. Most are available only from specialized mail order catalogs. Johnny's Seeds in Albion, Maine 04910, Stokes Seeds in Buffalo, NY 14240, and Twilley Seed Co. in Trevoise, PA 19047, each list several of them.

For other well adapted vegetable varieties, check with your local nurseryman or garden store.

Consumers concerned about pesticides

By the Associated Press

Last week, when David Feldman paid for his groceries, he lobbied the store manager.

According to Successful Farming magazine, Feldman, a member of a new consumer network, is waging a grassroots campaign from DeBary, Fla., to persuade grocers to offer organic foods and other items with reduced pesticide residues.

"It's the next step for consumers who have changed their diet," says Deborah Schacht, director, Americans for Safe Food. "It's a shame for people who eat healthy foods to consume 30 to 40 carcinogens in a meal."

Bruce Ames, University of California biochemist, says the amount of man-made pesticide residues in our food averages less than the weight of a grain of salt. Most of these residues are noncarcinogenic, says fear of residues exists. According to the Food Market Survey, 75 percent of consumers feel pesticide residues are a health threat. A 1985 national consumer-trend survey reports 77 percent were concerned that food be grown without insecticides: 61 percent wanted food grown with organic fertilizer.

Truck farming is the target of consumer concern today, but grain farmers aren't immune to the threat. "Misinformation is growing rapidly," says Elizabeth Whelan, American Council on Science and Health. "The consumer doesn't care if a pesticide is used on raw or processed foods — the trend is to get rid of it." This attitude is likely to spread.

The dramatic contamination of meat and milk products by the banned chemical heptachlor and the illness caused by the illegal use of aldicarb sulfoxide (Temik) on watermelon elevated consumer concern. But the central issue is whether routine consumption of food with pesticide residues causes health problems.

Current regulations do not allow certain residue levels in food if the risks outweigh the benefits. For instance, in 1983, EPA banned ethylene dibromide, EDB, a suspected carcinogen, when residues were found in flour and finished bakery products.

Jay Feldman, National Coalition Against the Misuse of Pesticides, believes government tolerance levels are inadequate. "You can argue that because there are residues doesn't mean adverse effects, but we do not have long-term health data," he says.

Companies, supermarkets and grower cooperatives are responding. EPA has banned dieldrin (Alar), but Tree top inc., the world's largest apple juice processor, no longer accepts Alar-treated apples. Safeway, Giant and Kroger also removed apples with Alar from product aisles.

Some California supermarkets are test marketing "NutriClean," a system which rates fresh produce for chemicals and nutrition. (An environmental group study says 44 percent of fresh fruit contains one or more residues of 19 different pesticides.) The rating system, which hikes the cost about 3.5 percent on consumers, is controversial. EPA Another barometer of changing consumer taste, the natural food business, offers dubious credentials. Profit margins often are twice as high as traditional items, but the consumer has few guarantees the product is genuine. Only three states have standards.

Imports pose a bigger obstacle. Food with residues of a pesticide which is banned here can be imported.

Alternatives to some chemicals are emerging. Natural Pak Systems has a process which preserves perishable products without chemicals. But irradiation, which could reduce pesticide use, has aroused its own consumer fears.

"The bottom line is the question: Is our food supply safe? I don't think there's a food scientist who would argue that," says Pan Jones of California's Alliance for Food and Fiber. Ultimately, however, the cash register is the bottom line.

Fathoming the many moves of tricky sprouts

By HENRY MITCHELL
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — I have pointed out repeatedly the folly of starting seeds in pots in the house. They sprout all right, and then you go mad trying to keep them alive and sturdy until April, when you plant them out.

For some fathomless reason, however, I started a packet of viola seeds in a pot in my bedroom three weeks ago. I sterilized the soil — one of those chores that really is worth doing, since otherwise we (fungi) slaughter the seedlings — and they all came up like mustard.

There is only an east window (and a north one, which gets no sun, of course) and the draperies are pulled over at night, so the pot has to move under a lamp every night and back to the window every day.

I figure if I took in washing, I'd make a good bit on the time I have spent moving the pot around. By giving the tiny seedlings every minute of sunlight, heat and — by moving them under a lamp every night, have succeeded in raising them only halfway sprindly.

Now they need to be thinned out, into a seed flat, spaced an inch and a half apart. Of course I have no seed flat that will fit on the window sill, and can't get the seedlings out because there is a terrarium there that holds a pot of Stephanotis and one of Hoya.

The first flat sent out a new shoot 27 inches long. There are also two or three pots of Infant Agaves, the gold-striped kind, that I started from little offsets. There is also an urn holding a Puya Alpina, which is as prickly on the sides as the Agaves are (fiercely armed at the tips).

About every third time I move the violas, I get stuck on something. But it is better every since the large gold-barrel cactus was moved downstairs.

There is no point complaining, as I do know better than starting pots of seeds in January. So why did I do it? Dumb, that's why. Dumb.

People have asked about kiwi fruit and the species that produces it is Actinidia chinensis, which is supposed to be quite hardy in its climatic zone. But the kinds people eat were bred in the mild (or at least nearly frost-free) climate of New Zealand.

They are said not to be hardy outdoors here. I did see one that bore fruit outdoors in London, which gets pretty cold, though not ferociously so.

Now there are hardy kiwi vines, but these are not the same species. I think they are Actinidia arguta. The fruit is about the size of a cherry, judging by photographs, and is said to be delicious and sweet. It is perfectly hardy here.

The point is, the kind you buy at the grocery is probably too tender for outdoor culture here, and the one that is hardy (as in the variety "Issai") may be fine, but is not so handsome in fruit or foliage. I am dying to try it, but again, where can it be jammed in?

I do not want to discourage anybody on fruit trees. I know their use. I have a peach, a plum and two pears. Probably I will die before I get anything to speak of from any of them.

All of them require spraying, and the peach and plum need pruning. But spraying is the rub.

I have an apple also, which I do not spray. Every year it gives apples, and I dutifully cut up the bugs and get very strange pieces that are made into a pie. It only takes 40 minutes to cut up enough apples for it, and it is about as good as a pie you buy.

As I recall, it takes about 13 sprayings a year to grow good apples. As for the plum, last year I had one, flawless and delicious. The year before I had three, and the year before that I had two.

The trouble is twofold. The plum faces south and blooms long before the last freeze. That takes care of most of the fruit. The rest is lost by birds eating the flower buds during the winter.

The peaches, oddly enough, come to maturity and the day before I think they should be picked, every one (about 20 of them) is carried off by some animal. I tremble to think which. I hope it is squirrels and not rats.

When I was small, my mother set great store by a peach tree and used to express annoyance when the squirrels took them off (though well before they were ripe) by rolling them along the top board of the fence.

Get an early start by starting seeds indoors

By the Associated Press

Get a head start on spring by starting vegetable and flower seeds indoors.

Reason for starting seeds indoors is that many varieties are difficult to germinate directly in the garden. Another is that they will flower or produce a crop faster when they reach the garden.

March is an appropriate time for starting transplants for most crops. In the garden about six weeks later in much of this country. Of course, you can buy bedding plants, as transplants are known, in garden shops, ready to set outdoors.

In growing your plants from seeds, you need a suitable site — a place with bright light, such as a south-facing window with little shade from overhanging trees or other buildings.

Where light is inadequate, substitute artificial light. Fluorescent tubes provides excellent light when placed about 6 inches from the tops of seedlings for 12 hours daily. Artificial light will be needed for 16-18 hours if there is no other light at all.

Soil seeds in a fine, artificial growing medium or loose, well-drained sterilized soil—mix—Ordinary soil often carries disease organisms that can kill seedlings before they emerge from the soil or soon after. The latter is called "damping-off."

Planting can be made safer by placing pots or flats with a moist planting mix in a 140- to 200-degree oven. Cover trays or pots with foil to keep the moist during heating. Plant after the mix cools.

Most seeds germinate best at temperatures of 70 to 75 degrees F. After seedlings emerge, good growth is likely at 55 to 60 degrees. Plants grown too warm become tall, thin and weak.

If you need only a few plants you can seed directly into labor-saving, individual peat pots or pellets that eliminate drainage and disease problems, plus labor.

Direct seeding also speeds growth and eliminates transplant shock. Very fine seeds need not be covered — just scattered and pressed into the surface. Plant larger seed at a depth twice their thickness indoors and three times outdoors. After seeding, cover containers with plastic or glass to help keep the surface moist and permit some light to penetrate. Remove cover when seedlings appear.

IF YOU LIE AND COVER UP FOR SOMEONE ELSE'S DRINKING OR DRUG PROBLEM — YOU ARE PART OF THE PROBLEM. START BEING A PART OF THE SOLUTION.

CALL
IN TWIN FALLS
PHONE 734-6760

Before planting, keep the seeding media moist and you won't have to water again until after seeds have germinated.

Good planting containers in addition to the typical vegetable seed trays are paper cups, plastic food holders and egg cartons. Just make sure they have adequate holes in the bottom for good drainage. When watering use a light spray of room temperature water.

Unsafe Marijuana

The U.S. Department of Agriculture reports that almost one million acres of National Forest System land are considered unsafe for recreational uses and by Forest Service employees, because they have been commandeered by persons illicitly growing marijuana for profit. About 20 percent of the crop, valued at $1 billion, is grown for profit on these lands.

Explanation: Marijuana growers consider national forests safe. Millions of acres are remote, ideal for illegal activity, and using public lands reduces the risk of seizure by the government if the grower is caught.

During raids on 5,000 marijuana plantations, law-enforcement officials have found booby traps at more than 20 percent of the sites. Booby traps and firearms pose "life-threatening hazards" to forest visitors and Forest Service employees. Booby traps have included trip wires tied to firearms, pipe bombs, hand grenades, punji sticks in pits, fish hooks strung at eye level and alarm systems.

The environmental threat to the forest is the heavy use of herbicides, pesticides and fertilizer by marijuana growers. The chemicals leach into the soil, affecting water sources and harming animals and plants. Growers slaughter deer and other wild animals that browse on the plants.

Plus enter to win a National Barbecue Recipe Contest!

ABOUT YOUR RECIPE

The recipe must be an original BEEF recipe using one to five pounds of beef. It may form. Each serving must contain 8 ounces of beef. A complete list of ingredients, including quantities, number of servings and preparation time should be included. A conventional recipe must be prepared on a standard range or oven, or in a microwave oven. A barbecue recipe must be prepared over a charcoal or wood fire.

WHO MAY ENTER

The contest is open to all Idahoan 18 years of age or older, except cowboys, cattle owners, and those employed in the food industry.

JUDGING

A panel of judges will select final conventional recipes based upon the taste of BEEF, ease of preparation, originality and appearance. Each recipe must stand at their own risk, the Idaho Cook-Off in Boise, on May 1, 1987, and prepare their recipe. Seven barbecue recipes will be selected nationally to compete in the National Beef Cook-Off in September.

HOW TO ENTER

Print or type your recipe on an 8 1/2 x 11 plain white paper. Complete and attach the coupon below, or write the information on your recipe. Be sure to indicate whether you are entering the conventional category or the barbecue category. Your entry must be postmarked no later than MARCH 1, 1987. Send all entries to:

The kosher-food industry hits boom times

By BEA LEWIS
Newsday

NEW YORK — Kosher pizza? Kosher pasta? Kosher cola and taco shells and cough drops? So what's wrong with the traditional Jewish foodstuffs of the world might well ask, with a nice bowl of chicken soup?

As a growing number of Jews becomes Orthodox, the food industry has stretched the boundaries of kosher well beyond chicken soup and all the other old standbys.

Kosher is booming, with more and more new products available, more and more restaurants and takeout spots promoting the fact that they're "keeping kosher."

"There are now about 16,000 kosher products available nationally; that's up from about 1,000 products you could get ten years ago," said Irving Silverman, a Long Island entrepreneur.

While some major industries are having entire product lines certified kosher (regular Pepsi-Cola and all Honzon pasta are kosher, for instance), longtime kosher firms are expanding. Empire Kosher Foods now offers mesquite grilled chicken.

"Of the approximately 4,000 new food products introduced yearly over the last four years, 10 percent have been kosher," said Silverman, whose company, Nancy Neale Enterprises, organized the first "Kosher Foods and Jewish Life Expo" planned for the Jacob K. Javits Convention Center in March.

The producers expect more than 40,000 visitors during the four-day event that starts Saturday evening, March 7. The larger audience is kosher consumers, and tradesmen, but Silverman said the show also would draw the curious.

"Kosher always got lost in the shuffle of the other food shows," said Silverman. "I want to take kosher out of the closet."

Observers agree that the kosher market has grown enough to warrant a convention of its own.

The Orthodox Union, the largest non-profit kosher certifying agency handling more than 80 percent of the kosher market, has increased its list from 400 companies five years ago to about 1,500 companies, said Rabbi Mordechai Grunberg of the agency.

A spurt during the past five years has been felt at Koif (kosher) Supervision Service, according to Rabbi David Senter, director of supervision. "During the last five years, we've expanded from handling the kosher certification for 150 companies, to our present listing of over 400 companies," Senter said.

"And what's interesting about the growing kosher market, is that it's crossing ethnic boundaries," Senter said. "Years ago, Jews ate gefilte fish, Italians had their pasta. Now we're certifying such products as taco shells and chow mein."

No one is quite sure exactly how many kosher consumers are out there. In the absence of definitive statistics, Silverman estimates that "10 to 20 percent of Jewish families practice the laws of kashruth or are interested in kosher foods for home or outside home consumption."

If there are approximately 2.5 to 3 million Jewish people in the metropolitan New York area (the five boroughs, Long Island and areas within 200 miles of the city) "you're talking about a kosher buying market of about 250,000 to 300,000," said Silverman.

The kosher market as such is only now being developed, according to Menachem Lubinsky, president of Lubicom, a Manhattan-based marketing, public relations and advertising firm.

In the past, Jewish families who kept kosher had to do so on their own. Home cooks koshered their own meats; everything had to be made from scratch.

"If you wanted apple sauce, you had to strain your own apples. You couldn't go out kosher; you couldn't buy kosher, you couldn't go on a cruise kosher," Lubinsky said.

"It may not be a big market, but it's loyal and consistent," said Ziporah Spear, a kosher-observant Jew who heads the advertising department at the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America in Manhattan. And increases in the market are partly due to an increased birth rate among the Orthodox, who by definition are strictly observant.

But Jews referred to as baalei teshuva (meaning returning to the source), who are re-evaluating their religious practices, are also spurring sales.

Buying kosher food is "one of the easiest and most visible changes," Spear said. Statistics on the number of baalei teshuva differ because becoming kosher is a process, not something to be done overnight.

But most of the buying power seems to be coming from younger observant Jews who reflect the yuppie lifestyle, according to observers.

In fact, Silverman has nicknamed these yuppies "truppies," drawing from the Yiddish word frum, meaning religious. And part of today's lifestyle is eating out in restaurants that run the gamut from fast-food places such as Burger Nosh to the glitziest restaurants such as Levana on the Upper West Side. Or bringing food home from kosher takeout shops such as Mauzone's, which opened its third outlet nine months ago, across the street from Super-Sol, an all-kosher superette.

Major corporations whose sales are high in New York — Kitchens of Sara Lee, Ronzoni, Borden's, Pepsi Cola, Heinz, Bumble Bee, for example — are also finding that kosher labels sell.

"New York is Ronzoni's No. 1 market; we want to service all the segments. Also, we find that the kosher symbol is associated with quality," said David Graff, associate production manager for Ronzoni. A spokeswoman for Heinz reported that the market is also affected by non-Jews, primarily non-meat-eating religious groups and vegetarians.

Estee Menthol Cough Drops became kosher in 1985; Pine Brothers joined the ranks a few months ago. This was made possible by the development of petroleum-based glycerines to replace the animal-based ones generally used.

For candy lovers, Chuckles Jelly Candies recently were certified as kosher, adding to the list of more than 800 kosher candies.

"New York management felt the marketing opportunities in New York and Florida (in the winter) would be greater with kosher certification," according to a spokeswoman for Chuckles, which also makes Pine Brothers drops.

First spud chip became the crunch heard 'round the world

By the Associated Press

Legend holds that the potato chip was invented in 1853 by a disgruntled chef in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., who was trying to please infatuated Cornelius Vanderbilt.

No one really knows who invented the potato chip but, according to an article in the February issue of Town & Country, it was a crunch heard 'round the world and launched what has become a $1.3 billion industry.

Promoted originally as Saratoga Chips, they are served everywhere from saloons to gourmet restaurants.

The Vanderbilts have retained their potato chip connection. Marylou Whitney, wife of Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, great-grandson of the old tycoon, says her husband takes potato chips along on his Adirondacks fishing trips.

Whitney Tower, a great-grandson of Vanderbilt and president of the National Museum of Racing, said, "Give me a choice of those salted dots that usually decorate bars and I'll zero in on the potato chips every time."

Even popcorn king Orville Redenbacher admitted to nibbling potato chips, but added, "Only if I'm some place that doesn't serve popcorn."

duct but said, "One of my great memories is the freshly-made potato chips at the Hemingway Bar at the Ritz in Paris."

Potato chips have retained their popularity despite such snack newcomers as nachos, tacos, and tortillas. They retain about 50 percent share of the $2.1 billion snack food industry. Americans on average eat nearly five pounds of potato chips apiece every year — except in Pittsburgh where they eat eight pounds.

The industry tries hard to get away from the junk food label, pointing out that one ounce — about 15 to 20 ordinary chips — provides 10 percent of the vitamin C needed per day, five percent of the vitamin B6 and six percent of niacin.

The average ounce also contains about 150 calories, 14 grams of carbohydrates, 10 grams of fat and 170 milligrams of sodium.

There are about 300 potato chip factories in the country but only three national brands, each owned by a Fortune 500 company.

The biggest is Frito-Lay, whose three brands — Lay's, Ruffles and O'Grady's — use 4.2 percent of all the potatoes grown in America and account for 40 to 50 percent of all sales. Frito-Lay was begun by chip entrepreneur Herman Lay and Elmer Doolin, the creator of the corn snack Fritos. They joined forces in 1945, merged officially as Frito-Lay in '53 and four years later made a deal with Pepsi-Cola forming PepsiCo.

The second biggest chipper is Wise Potato Chips, founded in 1921 by a Pennsylvania farmer with too many potatoes. It was purchased in 1964 by Borden, Inc., which also swallowed a number of other chip companies.

The third national brand is Pringle's. Invented in 1956 by Procter & Gamble.

"Potato chip styles, Patricia Linden wrote in Town & Country, range from the thick-cut unpeeled variety called Hawaiian to such newcomers as Cheese-Flavored, Lo-Cal, Sushi-Style and Unreal Vinegar Potato Chips.

Connoisseurs such as Calvin Trillin insist the only ones worth eating are the kind found at a farmers' market in Pennsylvania. He said, "These chips are stupendous. They kind of explode when you eat them. Probably cooked in pure lard."

Unsentive uncle wants to reuse name

DEAR ABBY: Five years ago, our baby daughter died of sudden infant death syndrome. It was very painful for our whole family her name was Heather.

Last week, my younger brother and his wife announced that they are expecting a baby, and if it's a girl, they plan to name her Heather.

I tried to persuade my brother to pick another name because hearing the name of our dear departed daughter would be very painful for me, but he said his wife had always loved the name to change it and they have no plans to change it.

What can I do?

DEAR STILL: There is nothing you can do if that's the name they chose. Personally, I think your brother and his wife should have been more sensitive and understanding, but they have the right to name their child whatever they wish.

The grieving process is natural, but if after five years you still can't bear to hear the name of your dear departed daughter, you should seriously consider grief counseling with a support group. It can be enormously helpful.

For information on support groups near you, write to: The Pregnancy and Infant Loss Center, 1415 E. Wayzata Blvd., Suite 22, Wayzata, Minn. 55391. And please include a stamped 39 cent self-addressed, long envelope. It is a non-profit organization.

DEAR ABBY: When you say "Friends don't let friends drive drunk" you are, among other things, presupposing one's responsibility for the actions of another. One cannot control another's drinking — nor another's behavior under the influence.

We can try to prevent drunks from driving, and we can report them if they do; but to say that unless we prevent their driving, we do not deserve to be called that person's friend is thoroughly unjust.

Those of us who have friends, spouses or parents who drink and drive do not need Dear Abby to tell it's our fault. We take enough unfair blame from the alcoholics we love, and whose recovery, via abstinence and a 12-step program, we pray for.

— BEEN THERE IN NASHVILLE DEAR BEEN THERE: You may not be your fault if the alcoholic you love drives drunk and kills someone, but if you could have prevented him from driving and didn't, it is partially your fault.

Entrants are sought for state's at-large beauty pageant

BOISE — Entries for the Miss Idaho National Guard pageant must be received by the end of February.

The event, the only at-large pageant in the state, will be held March 28 at the YMCA in Boise. An at-large pageant means it is open to women from throughout Idaho, says Georgia Meacham, pageant director.

Contestants must be between 18 and 26 by the Labor Day holiday, be a high school graduate, an Idaho resident or have attended school in Idaho, and must never have been married.

The contest is open to all women in Idaho, with members of the guard or their families especially encouraged to enter.

"Winners of the Miss Idaho National Guard pageant have traditionally fared well in the Miss Idaho scholarship pageant," Meacham says.

Jennifer Hovey, Twin Falls, last year's winner, was named Miss Idaho and represented the state at the Miss America event in Atlantic City, N.J.

For more information contact Meacham, 3571 S. Colteridge Place, Boise, Idaho 83706 or call 343-4422.

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

To "report" a drunk driver is not enough — it takes a drunk less than three seconds to kill someone. Your report could be a few seconds too late.

DEAR ABBY: Your letter warning people about the hazards of riding on escalators recalls the time my husband and I were riding the escalator with our 4-year-old grandson.

Although we were aware of the emergency buttons at the top and bottom, we were in the middle of the staircase when "Jimmy's" shoelace got trapped in the teeth of the escalator. I tried vainly to pull the shoelace out of the teeth of the escalator while my husband quickly removed Jimmy's foot from the trapped shoe.

By the time someone stopped the escalator, the shoe was torn to shreds, but our grandson's foot was intact.

So in addition to knowing about the emergency buttons, adults should remember to get the child's foot out of the shoe as quickly as possible.

— FRANCES LOONEY, SEAL BEACH, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I thought you might enjoy this excerpt from a divorce complaint, filed on Sept. 16, 1977, in Fairfax County, Va.:

"George and Shylil Tillet for several years last past have lived together more like dog and cat than husband and wife and have at length acquired an incurable aversion to each other..."

— STILL GIGGLING IN VA.

DEAR STILL GIGGLING: Thanks for sharing. Time passes — but the more things change, the more they stay the same.

DEAR ABBY: I was moved to write when I read the young girl's complaint about her mother's secondhand smoke.

I want to tell you how proud I am of my own mother. She used to smoke, though I have no memories of it — only photographs of a pretty young mother holding a baby (me) in one hand and a cigarette in the other. She was 32 years old at the time.

When the reports first came out stating that smoking was unhealthy, she quit — cold turkey. Others have told me she climbed the walls for a couple of months, and it was years before the craving left her.

She did it for me and my sisters. She didn't want us to follow her poor example and become smokers who would find it as hard to quit as it was for her.

What have I (and my sisters) gained? We have never smoked. Or wanted to. I grew up in a home free of burn marks, smelly draperies and nasty ashtrays. And when Mom baby-sat for my children, I didn't have to worry that they might find matches or a lighter in her purse.

Alon is still around, though we live thousands of miles apart. Her letters have no scorch marks on them, and when we talk on the phone, I don't have to listen to a hacking cigarette cough.

Thank you, Mom, for having quit the habit when I was a baby. It took guts, courage and caring.

JUMP Co. plans two nights of youthful music and drama

TWIN FALLS — The Junior Musical Playhouse Company (JUMP) will present two evenings of music and drama at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday at the Renaissance Academy of the Arts, 505 Second Ave. E.

Dinner theater will be available for the Friday night performance. Reservations must be made by Thursday for the spaghetti dinner. Cost is $6 for adults and $4 for students. Tickets for the program only are $3 for adults and $2 for students. Tickets are available at Jud's Books or by calling 734-0719.

Scenes will be presented from "The House at Pooh Corner," "Hans Christian Andersen," "Snow White," "Snoopy," "Chorus Line" and "Bye Bye Birdie."

Students from kindergarten through high school will be performing these scenes.

Ryan Arnold and Tiffany Harigen, both Twin Falls, will present monologues; Jamie Griff, Twin Falls, and Karen Irwin, Kimberly, will play piano solos; Julie Leir and Angie Wignall, both Twin Falls, modern dance; Jason Houser, Twin Falls, song and dance; Resanna Boyle, Angela Hutchings and Kamie Hobbs, all Twin Falls, vocal trio; and Isaac Chilcoat, Twin Falls, vocal solo.

The "Pooh" cast includes Ann and Meredith Taylor, Kimberly, and from Twin Falls, David Koffer; Christine McBride; Emily and Allison Redman; Rachael Griff and Lorelle Juntunen.

Others in the cast are Heather and Richelle Hobbs; Jennifer Allen; Becky Lewis; Louie Messer; Raleigh Arnold; Michael Chad and Jonny Parsons; Travis Miles; Ivan Arrington; Cherie and Sean Cash; Kelly Haux; Dan Rice and Rick Harris, all of Twin Falls. Kimberly performers include Analise Taylor, Amy Lancaster, Meredith Perkins and Tanya Farmer. Baren and Cindy Olsen, Jerome, also are in the cast.

Accompanists are Lindsay Pedersen, Karen Irwin and Roberta Chilcoat. Lisa Saavdra is choreographer.

Repairs offered for heaters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The manufacturer of portable space heaters sold under the Patton and Sears brand names is offering to repair a defect that could cause the units to catch fire, the Consumer Product Safety Commission has announced.

Patton Electric Co. of New Haven, Ind., is offering the repairs for heaters it made in 1984, the commission said. Three instances have been reported in which the plastic-body heaters either melted or flamed up, the commission said, although there have been no injuries reported.

Letters of thanks

Jerome CAA thanks its many volunteers

Community Action Agency of Jerome would like to thank all the volunteers who have helped us in 1986. These volunteers assist with the USDA commodity distribution, bagging and stocking food pantry items, picking up donated food in the community, and general office duties, as well as repair work. The end of December Community Action Agency moved their office to the basement of the Jerome County Courthouse. Volunteers helped with this project, and we appreciate all who have given so unselfishly of their time.

Others who deserve thanks for support of our food pantry are the Home of Hope, Northwest Laboratory, Smith's, Stokes, Safeway, Jerome Health and Welfare, Northside Pomona Grange, the Catholic Women's Group and Ray and Lois

Pyke

A special thanks to the Jerome County Commissioners for donated office space and the Jerome Masons for donated space to do the commodity distribution. Without the above support, it would be impossible to provide needed services to income-eligible families.

Mental Health Board staged a bang-up show

Several years ago, I joined the Mental Health Association of Twin Falls to gain some insight into the many forms of mental illness. My mother had suffered from depression for years and I hoped I could better understand her problem and perhaps be of some help to her.

The Mental Health Association sponsors an annual variety show to raise funds to support the hot line and to provide emergency medical funds to clients in transition. The association also sponsors seminars and acts as a support group to families of the mentally ill. This year our show was scheduled for Jan. 31. One week before the show, my mom passed away quite unexpectedly.

The purpose of this letter is to voice my heartfelt thanks to the members of the Mental Health Board and others who picked up the pieces and staged a bang-up show, and to all those who performed, supported and attended the show.

To everyone who helped our family during this time of loss with phone calls, cards, food, floral offerings, memorials and prayers — please know that you reminded us how valuable our friends are.

Pioneering spirit may cause people to ignore depression

BOISE (AP) — The frontier spirit of Westerners leads them to deny the possibility of depression, says an expert on mood disorders.

Dr. Frederick Goodwin, scientific director for the National Institute of Mental Health in Washington, D.C., said many people, particularly in the West, think it's morally wrong to feel depressed — even if it is often a physiological problem.

That pioneering spirit and Western character are real assets in life, but they can be bad in the case of depression, Goodwin said.

Goodwin said that at any given time, up to 7 percent of the population is chronically depressed. About half of those suffer depression because of inclement weather and a lack of natural light, which can be helped through drugs or artificial light, he said.

"We live a cocoon existence," Goodwin said. "We go from a heated home to a car and to an office, where the windows are smaller because of heating purposes."

Goodwin said sleep advance treatments can help those who have problems with their daily routine and correct those whose "biological day starts before their environmental day."

Goodwin stressed that some patients have problems that must be treated over a long period. Many times, treatments end before some patients' conditions have improved properly, he said.

Goodwin spoke Saturday to more than 60 psychiatrists, psychologists and social workers at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise for a one-day conference on mood disorders.

Too much or little calcium harmful

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Too much or too little calcium can cause kidney stones, according to urologists at the University of Rochester.

"All things, including calcium, should be taken in moderation," says Dr. Abraham T.K. Cockett.

Bruins fall to Highland

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Highland junior Marty Hoge hasn't been a center very long and was pressed into service when teammate Jim Kolsen had to leave the sport under doctor's council.

But one wouldn't have known it watching the 6-3 junior work the inside for 27 points that gave the Rams a 62-49 decisive victory over Twin Falls in the first round of the Region III basketball tournament Tuesday night.

Hobe trouble put Kolsen on the sidelines and left Highland with an experiment.

"He's been our past man. We haven't had Kolsen," said Ram Coach Don Cotant, but he didn't seem real disappointed—this—time around.

Hoge simply devastated the hopes of the Bruins as he opened the game with a three-point play, watched teammate Greg Terch add a free throw and then collected two straight field goals to make it 8-0. That ended Twin Falls' hopes of perhaps making the Rams chase them in a spread offense the rest of the night.

"Yes, sir. It was coming," confirmed Coach John Astorquia when asked if the spread would have appeared had Twin Falls opened up 8-0.

"That had to be a factor. We expected them to play slow down tonight. Our emphasis was to get the opening lay, score if we could and set the tempo of the game," Cotant said.

The result means that Highland will travel to Minico, owner of a first-round bye, at 7:30 p.m. Thursday with the loser going home to stay.

Although Highland led throughout, Twin Falls had a couple of chances to put some real pressure on the Rams but fell away.

After staying behind 12-4 in the first quarter, Twin Falls closed to 14-12 early in the second. But then the Bruins made a couple of mistakes that Highland quickly capitalized on — and that was the pace of the game thereafter.

On the first run, Twin Falls fumbled away a Highland miss on a rebound and Brad Swallow picked up the loose ball and casually laid it in. Twin Falls missed and Hoge scored on transition and then on offense on the next possession to make it 20-12.

Region 3

Highland made another break-away bid when Swallow and Hoge opened the second half with two field goals each, but Twin Falls steamed somewhat to hang within 10 — although dropping to 14 on two occasions — through the quarter.

Twin Falls made its last hard bid early in the last period when Tom Mueller hit a field goal and Joel Jund collected a three-point play. Kenny Fuchs then picked up a field goal and two charities and with 6:08 remaining, the Bruins had cut the deficit to 47-42.

But then came the major disasters, too.

Twin Falls missed the front end of a one-and-one and Highland replied with two field goals — one off a missed free throw. Then after an unforced Bruins turnover, Terch scored again to make it 53-42.

"Those missed free throws," Astorquia said, "were the difference. We got it back to within five. Then we miss a free throw and they miss two free throws and they get them both back and put them in for field goals. That just killed us."

From the time it went to 47-42, Twin Falls struggled four minutes with just a Mueller free throw while Highland bounced out by as many as 19 points.

While that span was critical, Astorquia said the early minutes probably were the Bruin death knell.

"That was pretty bad (falling behind by 8-0) since it meant we had to fight from behind the whole game. Our problem wasn't so much as defense as it was offense. We only got one shot off in the first two and one-half minutes and we had four or five possessions—just turnovers," he said, shaking his head.

Twins Falls will host Burley at 7:30 p.m. Thursday with the loser going home to stay.

Shoshone blows away Pirates, 84-48

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

BURLEY — For the Shoshone Indians, the Fourth District Class A-4 southside subdistrict championship was just another day at work. Except most of the Indians were eight minutes late.

The Indians blew open a close contest and blew out the Hagerman Pirates 84-48 Tuesday night to gain a spot in the Idaho State A-4 basketball championships in Moscow on March 5.

A-4 Boys Basketball
District 4 - Southside Subdistrict

The Pirates still have an outside chance of gaining a spot in the state tournament if they can beat Richfield, the runner-up in the Northside conference, at 7 p.m. Thursday night at Jerome High School.

The winner of that contest will play the third-place team from District 3 on Saturday at 2 p.m. at Mountain Home High School.

The 84-point total for the Indians was the lowest point production in the tournament after posting scores in the 90s in their first two contests.

That was probably due to a 14-point first quarter as the Indians came out flat against the Pirates.

The problem was that Hagerman couldn't capitalize on Shoshone's downfall as the Pirates managed only eight first-quarter points.

"Shoshone didn't play well at all in the first quarter and we didn't take advantage," said Hagerman Coach Randy Clark.

Then the Pirates made the big errors.

They turned the ball over 14 times in the first half and got into a running game with the Indians, a game that nobody does better than Shoshone in 3-1 basketball.

Shoshone turned those turnovers into a 40-18 halftime lead, with 16 of those points coming from Kelly Duffin.

The Indians held an 18-8 lead early in the second as the defensive pressure got to the Pirates. While Duffin was having an easy time at Shoshone's end of the court, Hagerman's big man Devin Pharis was having trouble. Shoshone neutralized Pharis' play by pushing the pace and sometimes four players on him when he got the ball.

Turnovers played a big part midway through the second quarter as Jim Messick found himself with the ball and canned eight points in the quarter.

Shoshone's Jim Messick, right, wins after colliding with Hagerman's Corey Jensen while trying to drive around him. Messick was fouled on the play.

The Pirates scored the first three points of the third quarter but barely put a dent in the Indian lead.

The Hagerman offense was dealt another blow in the third quarter when Shaun Menchaca fouled out just two minutes into the period. Menchaca, who had 10 points in Hagerman's victory over Oakley, failed to score. George Shimer and Alan Sizemore stole the show in the third quarter as Shimer boosted the lead to 24 points with a pair of coast-to-coast cripplers.

The lead was 57-29 when Sizemore found an opening in the back door scoring four of his 11 third quarter points.

Duffin's 19 points lead all scorers as five Indians broke into double figures in the contest. Messick had 18 while Sizemore added 13 points.

Poky beats Burley stall for 30-28 win

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

POCATELLO — Burley High School boys' basketball Coach Steve Jensen and his Bobcats did a little riverboat gambling here Tuesday night in the first round of the Region III class A tournament, and almost walked away with all the house's chips.

The Bobcats stalled for the first 27 minutes, then ignited a fourth-quarter burst of three-point goals that left them two points shy of top-seeded and second-ranked Pocatello.

"Give Coach Jensen credit," said a heavily perspiring Pocatello Coach Ron Kress after his Indians pulled out a 30-28 victory, "it took the whole game down to the last three minutes takes a lot of courage."

The loss put the Bobcats into a Thursday night consolation-round game in Twin Falls against the Bruins, 62-49 losers to Highland in Tuesday's other first-round contest. Pocatello advances to the regional championship game here next Tuesday against the winner of Thursday's Minico-Highland contest.

Burley, which lost by 32 points here in December, shut the Gem State Conference champions' offense down by all but denying the Indians the ball through the first three quarters. Pocatello led 5-3 at the end of the first period and 15-9 at halftime. But for an eight-point burst by the Pokes' Mark Coram late in the first half and early in the second, the Indians would have had even less.

"Our strategy was to keep it close and have a shot at winning it at the end," said Jensen, "but the Gem State Conference champions' offense down by all but denying the Indians the ball through the first three quarters. Pocatello led 5-3 at the end of the first period and 15-9 at halftime. But for an eight-point burst by the Pokes' Mark Coram late in the first half and early in the second, the Indians would have had even less."

Those spurts, notably eight unanswered points by Pocatello in the last 1 1/2 minutes of the first half and the first 1 1/2 minutes of the second, saved the game for the Indians.

"No question about it," Kress agreed. "In this type of game you count possessions."

A-1 Boys Basketball

driving layin 43 seconds later to bring the Bobcats within five, at 24-19.

The Indians got the next two baskets, but Burley's 5-foot, 7-inch guard Brad Church connected from 22 feet with 1:28 remaining to make it 28-22. Pocatello then turned the ball over with 1:20 remaining, but Burley missed a two-point field goal attempt that then fouled Matt House, who hit the tied shot and missed the second. Melling pulled down the rebound, and Church struck again from 23 feet with 27 left to make it 29-25 Poky.

The teams exchanged turnovers until the Indians' Curtis Smith was fouled by 19 seconds left. Smith too hit the first shot and missed the second, and Melling got the rebound with his team trailing 30-25.

Church's fourth three-point attempt of the night bounced off the iron with eight seconds left, but teammate David Budge rebounded it and Church struck again from the other side of the floor with two seconds on the clock, making it 30-28 Poky.

The Indians' John Murlilo inbounded the ball with a baseball pass to the other end of the floor, denying the Bobcats one last shot.

"It was just got too far behind," said Jensen. "If we'd had a few less turnovers and shot better from the free throw line, we might have done it. We were 1-for-6 in free throws and three of those went to the front ends of one-and-ones."

Burley controlled the tempo of the game, and they took us out of our offense," said Kress. "We were always a step or two away from where we wanted to be. But I'm proud of the way the kids handled the pressure. We had tried about the possibility of a delay game, but we had never played against it before. They kept their composure."

Eagles blast Chukars for win No. 31

ONTARIO, Ore. — A couple of more records and a jump into second place in the national poll attended the College Soccer on Idaho Eagles on their final regular season game Tuesday night.

The Eagles, with six men in double scoring figures, pounded the luckless Treasure Valley Chukars 109-66 to wind up a 31-regular season.

Those 31 wins are the most any CSI team has posted in regular season — although there have been two others with just one loss and one that went through undefeated but didn't play as many games.

The 109 points, coupled with the 135 scored last night against Utah Tech-Salt Lake City, give the Eagles a record 245 points in 1987, a school record. And, based on last week's national stats, the last four games may have shaved CSI past top-ranked San Jacinto, Tex., as the scorching junior point guard in the nation. CSI was less than a point behind last week.

Just before game time, Tuesday's second-to-the-last regular season national poll came out with CSI, based on an 18-point win over Dixie College, displacing the Rebels and moving into second place. Dixie retained that one first-place vote it has been getting all year but dropped to fourth behind New Mexico JC. The Rebels dropped 48 votes behind CSI.

After the offensive show CSI put on Monday night, Tuesday's effort would have been more familiar to Golden Eagle fans.

"Our guys got together before the game and said 'we had fun last night but, hey, that's not really us.' They went out tonight and played good defense," said Coach Fred Trenkle.

This one was never in double as Erick Newman hit 12 points in the first eight minutes to help CSI fashion a 29-14 lead. Then Joey Johnson came out to score 12 points in the closing six minutes of the half to push that to 50-22 before TVCC scored the last six points before the buzzer.

Early in the second half, Ed Drownick and Mauro Gomes scored a couple of times each and CSI was untouchable.

Report on SMU to be released today

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
The Associated Press

DALLAS — Southern Methodist University learned Tuesday whether its football program will be allowed to suffer the "death penalty" and be shut down for as long as two years by the NCAA.

The rest of the world will know on Wednesday when the NCAA will distribute its official report to the media at 8:15 a.m. CST. The Mustangs' fate will be decided at a news conference scheduled for 9 a.m. CST.

SMU Sports Information Director Larry White said about 250 media representatives have notified him of their intentions to cover the press conference.

SMU, the most penalized school in NCAA history and currently on the second year of a three-year probation, has announced it will not appeal the decision whatever it is.

eligible for the "death penalty" — a two-year suspension of an athletic program involved in repeated violation of NCAA rules. The latest allegations rules violations took place while the Mustangs were on probation.

Wichita State has been put on probation the most times by the NCAA — seven. SMU has six probation, but has suffered the most sanctions.

The school had no scholarships to give in 1986 and was barred from television and bowl games. SMU had 15 scholarships to grant Feb. 11 on national signing day, but did not offer them.

There are only 52 scholarship football players left on campus.

SMU is facing its fifth NCAA punishment in the last 12 years. The football program was placed on probation in 1981 and 1985. The school's first brush with the NCAA was in 1958 when it was placed on probation for a year.

SMU has nonconference games scheduled with Oklahoma and New Mexico this year (and Oklahoma and Notre Dame in 1988. Two other games have yet to be scheduled. Under legislation adopted in June, 1985 the NCAA may suspend repeat offenders for up to two years, prohibiting competition, recruiting, coaching or scholarships. SMU was one of six schools voting against it.

The new rule also states that the death penalty doesn't necessarily have to be imposed if there are "unique" circumstances.

SMU officials believe their quick, thorough investigation with the help of the NCAA makes its case unique. The school invited the NCAA to sit in at its interviews.

Former SMU linebacker David Stanley said in a WFAA-TV interview that he received $750 a month from an SMU representative after the Mustangs' 1985 probation.

Buhl denies Jerome's bid for perfect season

DAVE MCNEES
Times-News writer

BUHL — An electrifying performance by Buhl boosted the Indians to an 87-66 drubbing of Jerome Tuesday night, denying the Tigers a perfect season on the last night of the regular season.

The win gives Buhl a boost going into the District 4 Class A-2 double-elimination tournament against Wood River.

Jerome, earning a first-round bye, will meet the victor of Friday's game on Saturday night. The winner of the tourney earns a trip to the A-2 state tournament in two weeks.

Driving aggressively inside, Buhl hopped to a quick six-point lead in the opening two minutes before Jerome's height advantage came in to play and the consistent, outside shots of Jerome's Wade Robison gave Jerome its first lead by a minute, 10-9. Roblin, guard Mike Welch, Jerome found itself six points in the lead, but a Buhl 3-pointer on the buzzer cut it in half to 18-21 at the first break.

The second quarter remained tight with scores exchanged almost every possession. After swapping back and forth throughout the period, it was Jerome's turn to strike on the buzzer for a 42-41 edge at halftime. Buhl's Kevin Cato was instrumental in keeping up with Jerome's quick pace, scoring 12 of his 23 points that period.

Buhl poured quickly in the third who was going to dominate the game with two offensive spurts, one for 10 points and the second for nine to nail down a solid-68-55 lead going into the fourth.

Jerome's numerous missed shots gave it no help in halting Buhl's domination and consistency as the Indians slowly built their lead. Welch hit five unanswered points in

Kareem makes first 3-pointer in 97-93 win over Phoenix

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar made his first 3-point shot of his career and Byron Scott and Michael Cooper scored 21 points apiece Tuesday night in the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Phoenix Suns 97-93 in the NBA.

Abdul-Jabbar, who finished with 19 points, grabbed a long rebound in front of the Lakers' bench and then connected on his 3-pointer with 55 seconds left in the first half. The 7-foot-2 Abdul-Jabbar, the all-time NBA scoring leader with more than 36,000 point, made his first 3-point shot in 15 career attempts, including playoffs.

Phoenix, trailing 74-66 after four quarters, opened the fourth period with a 10-2 run on Walter Davis' steal and layin and forged a 76-76 tie with 8:20 remaining.

Larry Nance's three-point play put the Suns ahead 81-80 with 5:42 left before the Lakers used a 14-4 run for a 93-85 lead with 59 seconds to go.

The victory was the fourth straight for the Lakers and improved their NBA-best road record to 29-10. Los Angeles played without Earvin "Magic" Johnson, their leading scorer and the NBA's leader in assists, who was in uniform but sat out the game because of recurring Achilles' tendonitis in his left heel.

career-high 38 points and pulled down 13 rebounds and John Stockton had 13 assists as the Utah Jazz overwhelmed the Seattle SuperSonics 133-103.

Stockton also scored 17 points, including nine of 10 from the free-throw line. Dale Ellis led Seattle with 26 points and Tom Chambers finished with 18 for the losers.

Utah led through most of the first quarter before Alton Lister put the Sonics on top 25-24 at the end of the period.

That was the last Seattle lead, however, as the Jazz moved out to a 58-51 advantage at halftime.

In the third period, Malone scored 10 and Dell Curry capped off the Jazz bench to hit a pair of 3-pointers and Utah led 80-73 going into the final quarter.

Nuggets 134, Rockets 105

DENVER (AP) — Lafayette Lever turned in his NBA-leading 12th triple double of the season Tuesday night as the Denver Nuggets beat the Houston Rockets 134-105.

Lever had 18 points, 12 rebounds and 13 assists. Alex English scored 29 for Denver and reserve Darrell Walker added 23.

The Nuggets, who lost in Houston Monday night, overcame a 10-7 deficit in the second quarter by scoring 15 straight points. The surge gave Denver a 43-36 lead.

Leading 51-44 midway through the second period, the Nuggets reeled off 11 straight points.

Bucks 120, Pacers 114

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Ricky Pierce scored four points in a 10-2 run that ended the second overtime as the Bucks outlasted the Indiana Pacers for a 120-114 NBA victory Tuesday night.

With the game tied at 112-112, Paul Pressey of the Bucks hit two free throws with 2:28 to go.

Pierce added a final jumper with 44 seconds left as Milwaukee won for the eighth time in nine games.

Terry Cummings led the Bucks with 24 points and Pressey added 20.

Herb Williams led Indiana with 28 points but did not score in the fourth quarter or either overtime period.

8-0 surge as the Bucks broke away from a 74-74 tie late in the third quarter. Chicago dealt the Hawks their fourth straight road loss and 10th in their last 12 games away from home.

Danley scored the Bulls' first six points of the fourth quarter as they took an 88-81 lead. After Atlanta's Jon Koncinski made a layup, Chicago's John Paxson hit a long jumper and Gene Banks dunked following a steal by Jordan for a 92-83 edge with 7:59 left.

Pistons 120, Nets 112

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Adrian Dantley scored 32 points and powered a late rally to spark the Detroit Pistons to their fourth straight NBA victory, a 120-112 decision over the New Jersey Nets on Tuesday night.

Detroit, which has won 10 of its last 12, snipped a 109-109 deadlock with 3:27 to play when Sidney Green hit an eight-foot bank shot from the right. Isiah Thomas came up with a loose ball in a scramble under the Nets' basket and drove the length of the court to score.

Then, with 2:14 to play, Dantley drove the lane for a basket and was fouled by the Nets' Jeff Turner, hitting the free throw for a three-point play and giving the Pistons a 116-109 advantage.

Blazers 122, Knicks 109

NEW YORK (AP) — Kiki Vandeweghe scored 34 points and Clyde Drexler 30, and they each scored 10 during a 40-13 first half surge that lifted the Portland Trail Blazers to a 122-109 NBA victory over the New York Knicks Tuesday night.

Portland bank shot from the right. Isiah Thomas came up with a loose ball in a scramble under the Nets' basket and drove the length of the court to score.

Then, with 2:14 to play, Dantley drove the lane for a basket and was fouled by the Nets' Jeff Turner, hitting the free throw for a three-point play and giving the Pistons a 116-109 advantage.

Cyclones upset Oklahoma, 86-84

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Tom Schafer picked the perfect time to play the best game of his Iowa State basketball career.

In his final home game, the 6-foot-7 senior hit a lunging, 18-foot shot in the buzzer to limit what was his career-high 29 points and give the Cyclones an 86-84 upset of 12th-ranked Oklahoma in a Big Eight Conference game Tuesday night.

"I felt pretty good about the way it went," Schafer, who also grabbed 17 rebounds, said of his career-winning shot. "I got it up there on the rim where I knew it had a chance to go in. I knew it wasn't going to be short."

Iowa State, which overcame a 16-point first-half deficit, got a chance in the game, said of his career-winning shot. "I got it up there on the rim where I knew it had a chance to go in. I knew it wasn't going to be short."

The Cyclones called a timeout with two seconds remaining to set up their final play and Gary Thompson inbounded the ball to Schafer, who sent the ball to right and banked in the shot from just inside the free throw line and was carried off the court by his delirious teammates.

"That was a good one, boy oh boy on my," Iowa State Coach Johnny Orr said. "Fitting that Schafer topped it off. He had a fantastic half. You can't play any harder than that or any better than he played. He just was tremendous."

It was the second major upset in as many weeks for Iowa State, which defeated then-No. 15 Kansas 85-81 a week ago Tuesday. The Cyclones squared their season record at 13-13 and improved to 5-8 in the Big Eight. Oklahoma fell out of first place in the league, falling to 21-6 and 9-4.

"It was a great comeback on our part," Orr said. "We beat a great team. One thing we did the second half than we did better in the first — we stopped the break. We didn't stop the break the first half. The second half we did a much better job."

"We're excited and elated to have the boys' dressing room full of us. We had two very victories at home. We beat Kansas and then we knocked Oklahoma out of first. That was terrific."

Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs kept reporters waiting outside the arena for 25 minutes, then hustled away. His only comment was, "Congratulations to Iowa State. I'm sorry, we've got to place to catch."

Georgetown 79, Boston C. 65

BOSTON (AP) — Senior forward Reggie Williams scored 25 points to lead No. 8 Georgetown to a 79-65 Big East Conference basketball victory over Boston College Tuesday night, the Hoyas' seventh consecutive victory.

Georgetown improved to 22-4 overall and 11-4 in the conference and gave the Hoyas sole possession of second place, one-half game behind Pittsburgh.

The Eagles, 9-16 and 2-12, trailed 38-35 with 5:33 to play when Williams scored eight points in a 2 1/2-minute span to stretch the Hoyas' lead to 54-41.

Los Angeles Raiders halft construction

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Raiders of the National Football League have halted construction of a new stadium while the Coliseum because of a dispute over other improvements at the aging stadium.

Alexander Haagen, the Coliseum Commission's new president, has scheduled a special meeting Wednesday in an attempt to resolve the stalemate so the gullies can be ready for the 1987 football season. The Raiders ripped out about 1,700 seats and several light standards before stopping work last week.

Irvin Kizer, senior administrator for Blackwell, said that by waiving insurance that the Coliseum will commit all net proceeds from the $21 million judgment it won in its successful antitrust lawsuit against the NFL.

Kizer said the necessary improvements include replacing 26 seats lost in the reconstructed stadium.

Smith says USC is tops

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The sign over Larry Smith's office door at the University of Southern California lists five goals:

- Be a class team and win with aplomb.
- Earn a USC degree.
- Beat UCLA and Notre Dame.
- Win Pac-10 championship and Rose Bowl.
- National championship.

"My dad told me when I was a kid growing up if you're good enough to play with the best, compete with the best and work with the best, do it," says Smith, who is Southern Cal's new coach after seven seasons at Arizona, where he was the second winningest coach in the school's history.

"It depends what kind of coach you are. If you just want to hole up in some little place and just go along with seven, eight wins ...

"To me it's a challenge to do something that hasn't been done before for a while. USC won its last national championship in 1972 and has been to the Rose Bowl only once in the last seven years and to keep it going consistently that way.

"Those people are used to consistent winning and consistent high bowls, and consistent championships.

"It's unusual for head coaches to jump from one job to another within the same conference.

"If I had been able to sign a contract at Arizona at the beginning of the season instead of having to wait, it wouldn't be at Southern Cal. Smith said Tuesday at the NCAA's College Football '87 Preview for 10 coaches and approximately 60 sports writers from across the country.

There were a lot of fans that were upset with me. I felt and I was going to have to interview for a school in the (Pac-10) conference that they're playing and a team that they want to beat badly every year, that they basically are trying to measure up to.

"They're always going to have to fight for everything they get at Arizona. If you go to 10-11 at USC, you've got a chance to win the national championship."

Southern Cal is considered one of the premier coaching jobs in the country. "You're flattered when you're asked to even interview for a school in the (Pac-10) conference that they're playing and a team that they want to beat badly every year, that they basically are trying to measure up to.

of the finest, the finest football tradition in the country.

"At least we have an opportunity to do it. You walk into Heritage Hall and you see four Heisman Trophy winners, eight national champions, three mythical championships, 20-plus Rose Bowls, I don't know how many bowls, 50-some guys in the pros right now."

One tradition Smith intends to bring back is Southern Cal's history of outstanding tailbacks. He has proven runners in Ryan Knight and Aaron Emanuel.

"About four or five years ago, the passing statistics in the Pac-10 went way up," Smith said. "That was the way to move the ball. Everybody had been defending the run so well that they started throwing and people were knocking people off with the passing game."

"That's the kind of thing that held you back in the (Pac-10) conference. He coached at BYU, he knew the passing game and that's what he did. You can't fault the guy."

"But you take a guy that's supposed to be a great like Aaron Emanuel or Ryan Knight, and I'm saying to myself, 'If you give him enough turns he could have a 100-yard yards you need, and you're done. You're done hopefully 2,000 yards.'"

CSI women collect a season-ending victory

ONTARIO — The College of Southern Idaho women turned to defense in the second half Tuesday night to shut down July Hyler and 4-32-83 Alvinette, a season-ending 57-43 victory over Treasure Valley.

Majors secures week's game, series honors

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Bruce Majors won both the high-game and high-series honors in last week's city league action, and by a comfortable margin.

Majors rolled a 289 game and a 724 series in the Wonder League at the Magic Bowl, outdistancing Darin Rhead's strong second-place finish in both categories.

Rhead rolled a 270 game and a 717 series in the Valley League at the Magic Bowl.

The week's best women's game and series belonged to Jean Stokesberry, who turned in a 284 game and a 611 series in the Mason Trophy League at the Magic Bowl.

Linda Braley's 235 was the second-best game, that coming in the Pintrippers League at the Bowladrome. Braley was the week's series runner-up with a 609 in the Sunset League at the Bowladrome.

Season falling apart for Louisville

By DICK JOYCE
The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Amos Black arrives at Freedom Hall early for the Louisville-Florida State game. He has a good seat behind the basket and admires the cheerleaders doing their pregame routines.

College basketball

87-71, giving Black an early start home to Harrodsburg.

Like Black, fans in this basketball-happy state expect big things from Louisville's team. Lose some tough nonconference games early in the season and then close with a rush.

Who can blame them? It's the Coach Crum method. The Cardinals have been in the NCAA Final Four six times, including four of the last seven years, and were champions in 1980 and 1986.

Last season, the Cards won 21 of their last 22 games for a 32-7 record.

But winning consecutive national titles is unheard-of these days; the last team to do it was UCLA in 1972.

And the ways things have been going for Louisville, even Crum admits that winning another title

"would take a major miracle." With the Cards' 16-11 record, he'd settle for a berth in the NCAA playoffs.

But told everyone before the season that we were an overrated team," Crum said. In the preseason polls, Louisville was second behind North Carolina but hasn't been rated since the early weeks.

"We don't have any players as good as Milt Wagner, Jeff Hall and Billy Thompson. If you lose three-fifths of your team to graduation, and replace them with freshmen who aren't as good, how can you be as good?"

The downfall began at the start, when Louisville lost all three games in the Great Alaska Shootout.

"Don't worry," was the cry. "Crum will have them ready come March."

Louisville's chances of an NCAA berth aren't even certain at this stage.

It's obvious what ails Louisville the backcourt, where Crum has tried six combinations involving 10 different players in attempting to replace Wagner and Hall. One of the them, sophomore Kevin Walls, quit the team after being relegated to the bench.

"Crum has repeatedly chastised his players for not hustling and at one point said in exasperation, 'I don't know what to do next.'"

In last Monday's win over Southern Mississippi, junior Herb Crook dribbled out the clock in regulation play with the score tied, thinking Louisville was leading. The Cards managed to win in overtime, 85-81.

Pervis Ellison, the 6-foot-9 freshman hero of Louisville's NCAA triumph over Duke last season, was a preseason All-American but he didn't get a single vote from the same people selecting the nation's top five players at midseason.

"He doesn't have a strong jump shot around him," Crum said, "and he has to learn to work harder without the ball."

Ellison, whose intensity has been questioned by the media, isn't talking to the press.

Ellison (15.3) forwards Crook (11.7) and Kimbro (11.5) and backup forward Mark McSwain (8.4) provide almost all of Louisville's offense. The current guards—freshman Keith Williams and senior Chris West earned their starting jobs because of defense.

Their average 3.6 points between Teams double and triple team Ellison and Crook. Crum said, because his squad lacks outside shooters. There have been some embarrassing losses for Louisville, 99-72 to Syracuse and 64-48 to Memphis State at home.

The Valentine's Day loss to Syracuse ended Louisville's longest winning streak this season—four games.

"It's been a frustrating season for everyone," said Kimbro, a 6-7 sophomore who played at guard this season. "But we're capable of winning again. I'll take a lot of hard work and a lot of luck."

Crook, who scored a career-high 29 points against Florida State, said, "It's been kind of frustrating. Early this season we didn't have the right attitudes. If we beat Memphis State (Sunday) that'll give us confidence for the tournament and we'll take it from there."

Crum, a former assistant under John Wooden at UCLA before coming to Louisville in 1971, has the security of a fat, long-term contract. He's in the fourth year of a year-5, $1 million deal.

"With the kind of schedule we play, we're going to lose a bunch of games," he said.

"Two years ago when the Cards finished 19-18 we gained the experience that was responsible for winning last year," Crum said. "You learn from it. You don't learn from playing paties."

Ellison has clinched a ticket for the Metro Conference regular-season crown with his 8-2 record.

Meridian unanimous A-1 pick in final AP high school survey

By The Associated Press

For the first and last time this season, it's unanimous.

The sports writers and broadcasters voting in the final Associated Press high school boys' basketball poll of the season selected Meridian: Jerome, Lapwai and Shoshone as their unanimous choices for the No. 1 teams in Classes A-1, A-2, A-3 and A-4, respectively.

The last of the frontrunners to be chosen by acclamation was 20-0 Meridian, which has led the A-1 rankings since the preseason poll in November. The Warriors had never received all the votes in A-1 until this week.

Meridian got 11 first-place votes and all 55 possible points to finish ahead of Pocatello, 18-2, which moved up from third place in last week's rankings, supplanting Boise.

The defending state A-1 champion Meridian, 16-4, who had occupied the No. 2 spot since the beginning of the season, dropped to the No. 5 position after back-to-back losses last week to the Warriors and Caldwell.

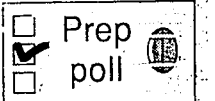

Defending state A-2 champ Rigby, 17-3, moved up from fourth to third in the A-1 ratings after beating Idaho Falls and Burley last week while Bonneville of Idaho Falls, 15-5, advanced from fifth to fourth after a win over Twin Falls. Lewiston, which was tied with Bonneville for No. 5 last week, dropped out of the rankings despite beating Sandpoint and improving to 11-8 for the season.

In A-2, 19-0 Jerome was the unanimous pick for No. 1 with 11 first-place votes and 55 points, followed again by 18-2 Shelley, Marsh Valley of Arimo, 16-4, moved up from fourth to third, replacing St. Maries. The Eagles wrapped up their regular season last week by beating fifth-ranked Soda Springs, while the lumberjacks dropped to 14-5 with a loss to Wallace that left them in the No. 4 slot in this week's survey.

Wallace, the No. 1 pick in AP's preseason poll, moved back into the rankings in the fifth spot following the win over St. Maries that improved the Miners' season record to 14-5. Soda Springs dropped to 13-7 with the loss to Marsh Valley and fell from the rankings.

In A-3, 20-0 Lapwai— which became the unanimous No. 1 choice for the first last week— again received all 11 first-place votes and 55 points, followed— once in order by Challis, 20-2; Fruitland, 19-3; Malad, 17-4; and McCall-Donnelly, 17-5.

In A-4, Shoshone received all 11 first-place votes and 55 points to stay atop the pack, while No. 3 Dietrich moved up a notch after improving its record to 19-2 with successive victories over Richfield.

Boston expected to defeat sports violence rules

BOSTON (AP) — The city councilor who filed a rejected proposal to arrest athletes involved in brawls during professional games said Tuesday more legislation could result if leagues don't act to curtail violence.

You could see it arise in municipalities, if not in Boston then somewhere else," City Council President Bruce Bolling said.

The council's Committee on Government Operations rejected Bolling's proposed ordinance. Councilor Christopher Iannella said the full council would reject it Wednesday.

"I don't know of anybody who supports the ordinance," Iannella, who was on the committee's report that was filed Monday. "Games are governed by rules, not laws."

Bolling said that if those rules aren't changed, new laws still may be proposed.

"If the leagues and owners and players want elected officials to stay out of that (sports) arena, whether it's local, state or federal (officials)," Bolling said, "they're going to have to strengthen their rules and regulations and procedures that will curb the level of violence that we've been witnessing."

He said that after discussions with law professors, he feels it may be more feasible to punish a team with a substantial fine rather than one of its players if that player engages in a violent act during a game.

He admitted that the ordinance proposed last month was controversial and would not easily gain the support of a majority of council members. But his effort wasn't a complete failure, he said.

"The issue has been put on the front burner," Bolling said. "To the extent that the issue has drawn national attention and to the extent that attention could bring additional pressure on to the various leagues, he said, "... we have to wait and see. This is an area of further discussion."

Additional talks are expected to be scheduled for the summer by the IOC, which awarded the Games solely to Seoul.

Park also expressed optimism that the sometimes violent student-demonstrations will cease as the Olympics draw closer.

"I think the students are coming to be aware of how important the Olympics are and how unwise it is to behave that way in such a critical period. Of great opportunity for our country to develop," he said.

"Most Koreans regard the Seoul Olympics as the most glorious event in their 5,000-year history."

During the Asian Games last September, students opposed to President Chun Doo-hwan's government took to the streets in demonstrations that were then broken up by riot police and tear gas.

Park, a former deputy director of South Korea's national intelligence agency, took over as president of the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee last May.

"Everything is on schedule" for the Games, which begin on Sept. 17, the owners, managers and players themselves to engage in more substantive efforts to curb violence ... its purpose will have been served."

Iannella agreed that the public focus the bill put on sports violence was good but said laws already exist that deal with assaults and could be applied to violent actions in sports.

He said Bolling's proposal was vague and did not include specific crimes and punishments.

Frank Costello, a spokesman for Mayor Raymond Flynn, said Flynn didn't support Bolling's proposal. However, Flynn has called for an end to violence in professional sports.

At a hearing Feb. 6, Bolling was the only speaker in favor of his proposal. He said he was fearful that sports violence was sending youngsters the wrong message.

Iannella agreed Monday, saying, "Kids idolize athletes. It isn't good for the country ... to have this kind of adoration for people who are going to resort to physical violence."

Observers have said Bolling's ordinance appeared to be aimed at hockey violence. Last Nov. 20, players from the Boston Bruins and Montreal Canadiens engaged in a bench-clearing brawl that continued on a ramp leading to the dressing rooms at Boston Garden. Eight players were ejected from the NHL game.

"A lot of people seem to want to talk about hockey, but I think there's been escalating violence in every professional sport," Bolling said.

He said his proposal has received a lot of attention and should serve as a warning to sports officials.

"A shot has been fired across the bow," Bolling said. "Now, are you going to take heed or are some other steps going to be taken?"

A total of $3.1 billion will have been spent by the end of the Games, Park said, including $1.4 billion on a five-year government program of road- and subway-building and other improvements not directly tied to the Games.

The total also includes $800 million to be spent by the private sector on yachting, gymnasium and other facilities.

Mattingsly predicts he'll have banner season

By The Associated Press

A week ago, first baseman Don Mattingly won a record arbitration award of $1.975 million. On Tuesday, he started to earn it.

After reporting to the New York Yankees training camp at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Mattingly said he didn't think the new contract would affect his play this season.

"I felt more pressure last year early in the season," he said. "Last year was my first year making over a million dollars. I was trying to do too much, proving to people I was worth that kind of money."

Mattingly hit 352 last season with 31 home runs and 113 runs batted in. He was runner-up in the American

Baseball

League batting race and Most Valuable Player voting.

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner has said the new contract will be a "mistake" around Mattingly's neck and that the money will be well spent only if he leads the club to the World Series.

"I think he said some of those things in anger," Mattingly said. "I think really what he's saying is 'he was me to do what I did the last two or three years, and I expect those things of myself.'"

Around the Camps

The Brewers must have felt like they were back in Milwaukee on Tuesday. It was cold in the '40s, windy and wet as the team worked out at its spring training camp in Chandler, Ariz. "We'll work out every day," Manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "We'll do something even if it rains."

In Scottsdale, Ariz., rain forced the San Francisco Giants to practice indoors. The Giants got some good news, though. Third base baseman Chris Brown, who led the team in batting last season with a .317 average, reported to camp after signing a one-year contract.

Fernando Valenzuela threw his first pitches of spring training at the Los Angeles Dodgers camp in Vero

Beach, Fla. Valenzuela, who won 20 games for the first time last season, threw on the sidelines for about 10 minutes. "My arm was a little bit stiff, but it was only the first time throwing for me," he said. "I thought I threw well."

Ozzie Virgil struggled during his first year with the Atlanta Braves, but he's expecting better things this season. "I'm a better player than last year," he said at the Braves' training camp in West Palm Beach, Fla. Virgil, who was acquired from Philadelphia after the 1985 season, batted 223 with 15 home runs and 48 RBI last season. "I was messed up, trying too hard," he said. "It breaks you a little bit, but you have to keep going."

The Minnesota Twins have invited free agent outfielder Billy Sample to spring training as a non-roster player. A team official said Sample, a-272 lifetime hitter, won't be offered a contract unless he makes the team. Sample, an eight-year veteran, hit 285 in 200 at bats last year with the Braves.

Ray Miller, who was considered baseball's pitching guru during his years with the Baltimore Orioles, will try to work his magic this season as coach of Pittsburgh's young pitching staff. "I'm taking this as a personal challenge," he said Tuesday at the Pirates' training camp in Bradenton, Fla. "I had a chance to go with an American League team, one with a veteran staff. But I knew that if I was successful there, they'd say it was because the pitchers were supposed to win."

New York Mets' Manager Davey Johnson may bypass Dwight Gooden and start left-hander Bob Ojeda in the team's season opener against Pittsburgh on April 7. Ojeda had a 4-0 record with a 0.68 ERA against the Pirates last season.

Spring training starts in earnest this weekend

By BEN WALKER
The Associated Press

Tim Lincecum, Lance Parrish, Andre Dawson and Bob Horner were in limbo.

Reggie is back in Oakland, and Dick Howser is back in the dugout. Tom Seaver, Steve Carlton and Earl Weaver are gone, perhaps forever.

And the New York Mets are bigger and badder than ever.

This week, it all starts again. Pitchers and catchers already have reported to camp because it's time for spring training.

Can the Mets become the first team to repeat since the 1977 New York Yankees? Will Roger Clemens dominate? When is Mike Schmidt due to hit his 500th home run?

Questions and more questions, part of the culture and mystique of a timeless game.

Who will emerge as this season's Jose Canseco and Wally Joyner? Which teams will provide the surprises that Boston and Houston did?

White workouts have started along Florida's Gold Coast and in the Arizona desert. There is uncertainty over top free agents who have no place to go.

"I am getting anxious," admitted Horner, who has gotten only one offer, for a $1 million pay cut from San Diego, and cannot resign with Atlanta — if he wants to at all — until May 1.

Raines and Dawson, teammates in the Montreal outfield last season, face the same predicament during the free-agent freeze. So do catchers Parry of Detroit and Rich of Boston and Bob Boone of California.

along with pitcher Ron Guidry of the New York Yankees.

Raines could be the player to keep Houston on top in the National League West, or put Los Angeles there. Parrish might help Philadelphia or St. Louis contend with the Mets.

But so far, nothing. While owners sign players to season, they are released and may not pitch again, although Carlton has been invited to Philadelphia's spring camp for a tryout.

Pete Rose, having given up his roster spot to a minor leaguer, will start the season, where released players are, in Cincinnati.

Reggie Jackson re-signed with the A's, with whom he won three championships. Rick Rhoden and Gary Ward are now with the Yankees. Danny Tartabull's at Kansas City. Rick Dempsey is in Cleveland. Terry

Kennedy's in Baltimore and Storm Davis is in San Diego.

The biggest trade of the off-season was an eight-player deal that sent power-hitting outfielder Kevin McReynolds from San Diego to the Mets. The swap was one of the few positive things that happened to the Mets since they completed their miracle, final-out escape and beat Boston in the World Series.

Since then, Dwight Gooden, Ron Darling and Tim Lincecum had their run-ins with the law, and Darryl Strawberry was in the papers for marital problems. Manager Davey Johnson is counting the days until he can get all of his players back together and hopefully keep them out of trouble.

"I take one day at a time," said Howser, who left the Royals' job last July.

Uncertainty also surrounds Pedro Guerrero, trying to recover from an injury that wrecked his 1986 season, and pitchers Shane Rawley, Dan Petry and Dave Stieb as they try to overcome arm problems.

Several teams will sport new uniforms, including the Astros' toned-down look, and new faces are liberally sprinkled throughout the leagues.

Reggie Jackson re-signed with the A's, with whom he won three championships. Rick Rhoden and Gary Ward are now with the Yankees. Danny Tartabull's at Kansas City. Rick Dempsey is in Cleveland. Terry

Former alcoholic Louganis honored with Owens Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Diver Greg Louganis, winner of the 1987 Jesse Owens International Trophy, said Tuesday he has begun an educational crusade against alcoholism, an addiction that he began to fight in himself 3 1/2 years ago.

The 27-year-old Louganis, holder of a record 41 U.S. diving titles and a double gold medalist at the 1984 Olympics, was awarded the Jesse Owens trophy on Tuesday at a news conference.

Later, he told reporters that since beginning his "recovery" from alcoholism in November 1983, he has been speaking at high schools and junior high schools in southern California, "not preaching, but trying to give them positive alternatives."

The Owens award is presented annually to the athlete who "best personifies excellence in athletic performance and since cooperation and understanding among peoples of all nations."

Last year's winner was Said Aouita of Morocco, a long distance runner. Sprinter Carl Lewis won the award in 1985.

In worldwide balloting by a special panel, Louganis received 91 points to 70 for Jackie Joyner-Kersey, the record-setting heptathlete who was named winner of the AAU's Sullivan Award as the No. 1 amateur athlete Monday night.

Distance runner Ingrid Kristiansen of Norway was third with 65 points, followed by pole-vaulter Sergei Bubka of the Soviet Union with 61 points.

"It's an honor just to be mentioned among my heroes, the people I read about in the newspapers,"

Louganis said.

Louganis' first revealed that he had a drinking problem last fall in an interview with the Los Angeles Times. Now, he says, he limits himself to "club soda and Perrier."

"I talk to a lot of kids about positive things they can do with their lives. They're not into school, OK. There are positive alternatives. The arts, sports. There's too much preaching, and these kids aren't given enough healthy choices."

"They can't deal with their problems. I tell them to go to the movies, get lost in a movie. Myself, I exercise and dance. . . . There's always a healthier way than alcohol to deal with your problems."

Louganis, who admits having won a national platform diving title in 1978 with Greg Louganis, says he withdrew from alcohol gradually when he "began to realize that it was taking away my diving. . . ."

Louganis first joined the national team in 1976 and won a silver medal at the Montreal Olympics. He is the only diver to have performed 10 in national and international competition, and he set a record at the 1984 Games with a score of 710.91 on the 10-meter platform.

He was inducted into the Olympic Hall of Fame in 1985.

Louganis said he plans to compete in Seoul, South Korea, at the 1988 Games.

"I'll continue to compete as long as I feel I can improve my diving," Louganis said. "I'd like to break 800 (points) in the 3-meter springboard. To do that, you have to average 95 on all 11 of your dives. If I can do that, I'll hang my suit up."

He said his best score to date on the 3-meter board was 750.

BSC indoor championships slated this weekend at ISU

POCATELLO (AP) — In a track meet featuring three individuals and one relay team which already have qualified for the NCAA championships, the Big Sky Conference will decide its indoor track title at the Mindome this weekend.

It's the first Big Sky indoor track championship after a layoff of two years and the seventh indoor meet.

Six Big Sky teams are entered in competition through Friday evening and concludes Saturday. Idaho and Nevada-Reno are not entered.

No Big Sky Conference team has ever won two league indoor track titles. Boise State, Idaho, Idaho State, Nevada-Reno, Northern Arizona and Weber State each have won one championship.

Northern Arizona, which has won the last two outdoor track titles, appears to be the team to beat, along with Boise State and host Idaho.

Some 15 events will be conducted including 1,600 and 3,200-meter relay races on the ISU Mindome's wooden, banked, 200-meter, six-lane oval which is considered among the fastest in the world.

The teams already have qualified for the NCAA indoor championships March 13-17 at Oklahoma City. They include Northern Arizona's Dwayne Hall in the 500-meters; Boise State's Troy Kemp and Wendall Lawrence, high jump and triple jump and the Idaho State 400-meter relay team.

Mark Byrne, Dave Cook, Rene Sepulveda, and Jeff Jaynes.

Mattingly predicts he'll have banner season

By The Associated Press

A week ago, first baseman Don Mattingly won a record arbitration award of $1.975 million. On Tuesday, he started to earn it.

After reporting to the New York Yankees' training camp at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Mattingly said he didn't think the new contract would affect his play this season.

"I felt more pressure last year early in the season," he said. "Last year was my first year making over a million dollars. I was trying to do too much, proving to people I was worth that kind of money."

Mattingly hit .352 last season with 113 home runs and 113 runs batted in. He was runner-up in the American

Baseball

League batting race and Most Valuable Player voting.

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner has said the new contract will be a "millionaire" around Mattingly's neck and that the money will be well spent only if he leads the club to the World Series.

"I think he said some of those things in anger," Mattingly said. "I think really what he's saying is he wants me to do what I did the last two or three years, and I expect those things of myself."

Around the Camps

The Brewers must have felt like they were back in Milwaukee on Tuesday. It was cold (in the 40s), windy and wet as the team worked out at its spring training camp in Chandler, Ariz. "We'll work out every day," Manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "We'll do something even if it pours."

In Scottsdale, Ariz., rain forced the San Francisco Giants to practice indoors. The Giants got some good news, though. Third base baseman Chris Brown, who led the team in batting last season with a .317 average, reported to camp after signing a one-year contract.

Fernando Valenzuela threw his first pitches of spring training at the Los Angeles Dodgers camp in Vero

Beach, Fla. Valenzuela, who won 20 games for the first time last season, threw on the sidelines for about 10 minutes. "My arm was a little bit stiff, but it was only the first time throwing for me," he said. "I thought I threw well."

"Ozzie Virgil struggled during his first year with the Atlanta Braves, but he's expecting better things this season. "I'm a better player than last year," he said at the Braves' training camp in West Palm Beach, Fla. Virgil, who was acquired from Philadelphia after the 1985 season, batted .221 with 15 home runs and 48 RBI last season. "I was messed up, trying to look hard," he said. "It breaks you a little bit, but you have to keep going."

The Minnesota Twins have invited free agent outfielder Billy Sample to spring training as a non-roster player. A team official said Sample, a .272 lifetime hitter, won't be offered a contract unless he makes the team. Sample, an eight-year veteran, hit .285 in 200 at bats last year with the Braves.

Ray Miller, who was considered baseball's pitching guru during his years with the Baltimore Orioles, will be working his magic this season as coach of Pittsburgh's young pitching staff. "I'm taking this as a personal challenge," he said Tuesday at the Pirates' training camp in Bradenton, Fla. "I had a chance to go to with an American League team, one with a veteran staff. But I knew that if I was successful there, they'd say it was because the pitchers were supposed to win."

"New York Mets' Manager Davey Johnson may bypass Dwight Gooden and start left-hander Bob Ojeda as the team's season opener against Pittsburgh on April 7. Ojeda had a 4.0 record with a 0.68 ERA against the Pirates last season.

Spring training starts in earnest this weekend

By BEN WALKER
The Associated Press

Tim Lincecum, Lance Parrish, Andre Dawson and Bob Horner were in limbo.

Reggie is back in Oakland, and Dick Howser is back in the dugout.

Tom Seaver, Steve Carlton and Earl Weaver are gone, perhaps forever.

And the New York Mets are bigger and badder than ever.

This week, it all starts again. Pitchers and catchers already have reported to camp because it's time for spring training and Baseball 1987.

Can the Mets become the first team to repeat since the 1977 New York Yankees? Will Roger Clemens dominate? Will Mike Schmidt go into his 500th home run?

Questions and more questions, part of the allure and mystique of a timeless game.

Who will emerge as this season's Jose Canseco and Wally Joyner? Which teams will provide the surprises that Boston and Houston did?

While workouts have started along Florida's Gold Coast and in the Arizona desert, there is uncertainty over top free agents who have no place to go.

"I am getting anxious," admitted Horner, who has gotten only one offer, for a $1 million pay cut from San Diego, and cannot re-sign with Atlanta — if he wants to at all — until May 1.

Raines and Dawson, teammates in the Montreal outfield last season, face the same predicament during the free-agent freeze. So do catchers Parrish of Detroit, Rich Gedman of Boston and Bob Boone of California, along with pitcher Ron Guidry of the New York Yankees.

Raines could be the player to keep Houston on top in the National League West, or put Los Angeles there. Parrish might help Philadelphia or St. Louis contend with the Mets.

But to play nothing. While owners continue to parry charges of collusion from the players' union, several of the top stars may not be seen for the first month of the regular season.

Then there the 300-game winners, Seaver and Carlton. Both had losing records last season, were released and may not pitch again, although Carlton has been invited to Philadelphia's spring camp for a tryout.

Pete Rose, having given up his roster spot to a minor leaguer, will start the season in Cincinnati's manager, but he is ineligible to play until May. Surely there are a few swells left in the bat of the game's all-time hit leader.

Dave Kingman is still without a job while World Series Most Valuable Player Hank Knight got one in Baltimore, signing a free-agent contract for $600,000 after turning down $800,000 from the Mets.

Knight is one of the players new Baltimore Manager Cal Ripken Sr. — who replaces Weaver — is hoping can help reverse the history. Other managers starting their first full seasons are Larry Bowa in San Diego, Tom Kelly in Minnesota and Tom Trebelhorn in Milwaukee.

Much of the managerial attention will be on Howser, returning to the Kansas City Royals after twice undergoing surgery for brain cancer.

"I take one day at a time," said Howser, who left the Royals' job last July.

Uncertainty also surrounds Pedro Guerrero, trying to recover from an injury that wrecked his 1986 season, and pitchers Shane Rawley, Dan Petry and Dave Stieb as they try to overcome arm problems.

Several teams will sport new uniforms, including the Astros' toned-down look, and new faces are liberally sprinkled throughout the leagues.

Reggie Jackson re-signed with the A's, with whom he won three championships. Rick Rhoden and Gary Ward are now with the Yankees. Danny Tartabull's at Kansas City. Rick Dempsey is in Cleveland. Terry

Kennedy's in Baltimore and Storm Davis is in San Diego.

The biggest trade of the off-season was an eight-player deal that sent power-hitting outfielder Kevin Miley from San Diego to the Mets. The swap was one of the few positive things that happened to the Mets since they completed their miracle, final-out escape and beat Boston in the World Series.

Since then, Dwight Gooden, Ron Darling and Tim Lincecum had their runs with the law, and Darrryl Strawberry was in the papers for marital problems. Manager Davey Johnson is counting the days until he can get all of his players back together and hopefully keep them out of trouble.

"I can't believe all these things happened to us," he said.

Former alcoholic Louganis honored with Owens Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Diver Greg Louganis, winner of the 1987 Jesse Owens International Trophy, said Tuesday he has begun an educational crusade against alcoholism, an addiction that he began to fight in himself 3 1/2 years ago.

The 27-year-old Louganis, holder of a record 41 U.S. diving titles and a double gold medalist at the 1984 Olympics, was awarded the Jesse Owens trophy on Tuesday at a news conference.

Later, he told reporters that since beginning his recovery from alcoholism in November 1983, he has been speaking at high schools and junior high schools in southern California, "not preaching, but trying to give them positive alternatives."

The Owens award is presented annually to the athlete who "best personifies excellence in athletic performance and sincere cooperation and understanding among peoples of all nations."

Last year's winner was Said Aouita of Morocco, a long distance runner. Sprinter Carl Lewis won the award in 1985.

In worldwide balloting by a special panel, Louganis received 91 points to 70 for Jackie Joyner-Kersey, the record-setting heptathlete who was named winner of the AAU's Sullivan Award as the No. 1 amateur athlete Monday night.

Distance runner Ingrid Kristianson of Norway was third with 65 points, followed by pole-vaulter Sergei Bubka of the Soviet Union with 61 points.

"It's an honor just to be mentioned among my heroes, the people I read about in the newspapers,"

Louganis said.

Louganis first revealed that he had a drinking problem last fall in an interview with the Los Angeles Times. Now, he says, he limits himself to "club soda and Perrier."

"I talk to a lot of kids about positive things they can do with their lives. They're not into school, OK. There are positive alternatives — the 10-meter platform."

Louganis, who admits having won a national platform diving title in 1978 with a hangover, says he withdrew from alcohol abuse gradually when he "began to realize that it was taking away my diving."

Louganis first joined the national team in 1976 and won a silver medal at the Montreal Olympics. He is the only diver to ever score a perfect 10 in national and international competition, and he set a record at the 1984 Games with a score of 710.91 in the 10-meter platform.

He was inducted into the Olympic Hall of Fame in 1985.

Louganis said he plans to compete in Seoul, South Korea, at the 1988 Games.

"I'll continue to compete as long as I feel I can improve my diving," Louganis said. "I'd like to break 800 (points) in the 3-meter springboard. To do that, you have to average 9 1/2 on all 11 of your dives. If I can do that, I'll hang my suit up."

He said his best score to date on the 3-meter board was 750.

BSC indoor championships slated this weekend at ISU

POCAHELLO (AP) — In a track meet featuring three individuals and one relay team which already have qualified for the NCAA championships, the Big Sky Conference will decide its indoor track title at the Minidome this weekend.

It's the first Big Sky indoor track championship after a layoff of two years and the seventh indoor meet.

Six Big Sky teams are entered in competition that starts Friday evening and concludes Saturday. Idaho and Nevada-Reno are not entered.

No Big Sky Conference team has ever won two league indoor track titles. Boise State, Idaho, Idaho State, Nevada-Reno, Northern Arizona and Weber State each have won one championship.

Northern Arizona, which has won the last two outdoor track titles, appears to be the team to beat, according to Boise State and host Idaho State.

Some 14 events will be conducted including 1,600 and 3,200-meter relay races on the ISU Minidome's wooden, banked, 200-meter, six-lane oval track, considered among the fastest in the world.

Those who already have qualified for the NCAA indoor championships March 13-17 at Oklahoma City include Northern Arizona's Dwayne Hall in the 500-meters; Boise State's Troy Kemp and Wendell Lawrence in the high jump and triple jump and the Idaho State 3,200-meter-relay team of Mark Byrne, Dave Cook, Rene Sepulveda, and Jeff Jaynes.
