Justice Robert Huntley said most U.S. citizens fail to participate in their government.

Stallings praises flexibility, checks put into Constitution

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings praised the U.S. Constitution Friday for providing the necessary checks within government for it to survive good and bad officials for 200 years.

"If we get too far out of line, the president is going to whack us and if the president gets too far out of line, we have the teeth to bite him," Stallings said.

Stallings and Idaho Supreme Court Justice Robert Huntley each commemorated the constitutional bicentennial this year by lecturing on it at the College of Southern Idaho. In separate speeches, sponsored by the Snake River Symposium, the officials each credited the document's longevity with its flexibility.

Stallings noted that interstate highways not envisioned by the founding fathers were built federally, under the umbrella of national defense. He said if invaded, the old roads were inadequate to move troops.

"If you took the old highways and had to stop for red lights, Lord only knows where our defense would be," Stallings said.

The Constitution also offers checks between branches of government to overcome the shortcomings of its members. Both officials agreed that people are basically corruptible.

"People have a tendency to over-reach. It's a sad statement, but accurate, I think," Huntley told about 50 people.

"If you look at our money you'll find who we trust — God," Stallings said to about 100 people.

"The Democratic representative said the two-party system not spelled out in the Constitution, but accommodated by it, is one way government keeps an eye on itself.

"This system was designed for controversy," Stallings said, so that through discussions the right course of action is determined. He said that's why he prefers the term "loyal opposition," where each side points out the other's weaknesses for the national good.

Stallings said religious figures such as the Revs. Pat Robertson and Jesse Jackson, if elected, would narrow people's freedoms, particularly in religious choice guaranteed by the Constitution.

"The system was not designed to let the religions tell us how to govern," Stallings said.

Huntley said the Constitution's flexibility helped the country adjust to serve more of its members.

Tort reform package dies on Senate table

The Associated Press

BOISE — Claiming limitations on individual rights to recover civil damages will not resolve the liability insurance crisis, the Senate Judiciary Committee has killed the House-passed tort reform package backed by a broad-based coalition of Idahoans.

"The job of the Legislature is to examine that public sentiment and temper it with the facts that we have learned," Sen. Karl Brooks, D-Boise, said.

The committee voted 7-4 on Friday to table the bill that critics claimed failed to resolve the real problem of liability insurance availability and affordability. In addition, they complained about technical drafting flaws that could exaggerate any unfairness already perceived in the civil court system.

"My efforts in the future will be to try to solve those technical problems and come forth with a new bill... but any compromise I'm in-involved in will have some elements of insurance reform," Committee Chairman Roger Fairchild, R-Fruitland, said. "For my part, this issue is not over."

But while Fairchild said a new bill combining portions of the tort reform package with provisions from a liability insurance proposal would be introduced next week, chances for its enactment this session as legislative leaders hoped to finally adjourn before the end of the month.

The so-called tort reform bill passed the House easily last month with the backing of the Idaho Liability Reform Coalition, which organizes Idaho's largest lobbying group ever put together in Idaho, passed the House easily a month ago. But Risch had warned backers that it was in trouble when it hit the Senate.

"I told them they were wrong a year ago," Risch said. "I told them they were wrong during the campaign, and I'll tell them they're wrong again today."

The bill would have limited non-economic damages on a sliding scale capped at $375,000, restricted punitive damage claims, barred double payments, allocated liability among parties, protected not-for-profit volunteers, allowed periodic payments of damage awards and provide a variable interest rate on unpaid damage judgments.

The coalition said a recent poll showed three of every four Idahoans supporting the plan.

"What you are saying," Sen. Larry Anderson, R-Twin Falls, told the bill's opponents, "is never have so many — been so wrong about so many — but any compromise I'm in-

House panel delays action on state lottery resolution

The Associated Press

BOISE — Members of the House State Affairs Committee have managed to stall action on the lottery resolution until at least next Tuesday.

The resolution, which passed the Senate earlier, is designed to lead to amending the Idaho Constitution to remove a ban on lotteries. Voters in the last general election approved by more than 74,000 votes an initiative proposal for a state lottery.

So far, the 1987 Legislature has done almost nothing to put it in operation.

Rep. Dorothy McCann, D-Wallace, urged the committee to hold the resolution until next Tuesday, which eventually prevailed on a voice vote.

The committee delayed action, even though the resolution's sponsor, Sen. Mike Blackbird, D-Kellogg, told committee members he already looked the resolution to Chief Deputy Attorney General Ed Kolbe, who has no objection with the resolution, Blackbird said.

If the resolution clears State Affairs, it would have to be approved by two-thirds of the House. After that, the proposal would go on the next general election ballot, in November of 1988. It would be up to the Legislature in 1989 to pass enabling legislation to start a lottery.

Blackbird suggested Senate legislation allowing the Lottery Commission to borrow $700,000 this year and $700,000 next year to put the lottery in operation, but the bill was shot down.

Almost no member of State Affairs praised the resolution passed by the Senate, although some members said they would vote for it because it appears to be the only way to remove the constitutional ban on lotteries.

Two Republican legislators criticized the news media for their reports on the lottery.

Rep. L. Ed Brown, R-Pocatello, compared the news media to "children trying to reach for a piece of candy" in its attraction to the lottery, without looking into the problems it could cause.

"There is a complete lack of interest on the part of the media to investigate the long-term implications," said Brown. "There's no historical perspective."

"This lack of investigative reporting on the part of the media is of interest to me," said Brown.

Brown said a lottery will not generate much revenue to the state or for education, despite promises of "fabulous returns."

"It will be a little blip on the fiscal landscape as it passes," he said. "Because it will not really generate

Voyager 2 sets course for Neptune

The Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. — The Voyager 2 space probe fired its thrusters Friday on instruction from scientists 2 billion miles away, changing course for its 1989 encounter with Neptune and one of its moons, NASSA said.

The adjustment, which increased the spacecraft's speed, alters its course so that it will not be endangered by debris that may be orbiting the solar system's eighth planet.

"This is a major step toward getting ready for our encounter," said Voyager project scientist Ed Stone. "It will be the closest planetary flyby we've had."

Soviets planning to try officials at Chernobyl

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — A Soviet official said Friday that those responsible for the Chernobyl nuclear power plant disaster will go on trial soon.

Andriak Petrosyants, chairman of the State Committee for the Utilization of Atomic Energy, told a news conference he did not know how many people are being prosecuted, what the charges are or when the proceedings would begin.

"All I can say is that it will be soon and it will be in Kiev," he said.

The world's worst nuclear accident destroyed the No. 4 reactor at Chernobyl on April 26, 1986. Two workers were killed on the spot and at least 29 other people died from radiation-related illnesses. Hundreds of victims were hospitalized after being exposed to harmful levels of radiation.

Soviet newspapers have reported that at least one senior plant official, including the director, were fired after the accident. Petrosyants declined to say whether any of these officials would be prosecuted, but he repeated official statements that the accident entirely on human error.

His news conference was held to discuss the visit of 11 American nuclear energy experts who toured the Chernobyl facility and other nuclear plants and training institutes. The Americans arrived on Feb. 27.

Delegation chief Friedrich Bernthal, a member of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, said the visit was aimed at expanding cooperation on nuclear safety.

Bernthal said his group had only a brief tour of the Chernobyl station, 80 miles north of the Ukrainian capital of Kiev.

He said the No. 1 and No. 2 reactors at the four-unit station are operating at full capacity and meeting international safety standards, and that the radiation levels at the plant are well within the acceptable range.

Senators impatient at pace of Iran-Contra counsel's probe

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The leaders of the Senate committee investigating the Iran-Contra controversy expressed impatience Friday about the pace of independent counsel Lawrence Walsh's probe into the case.

Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, the committee chairman, said it took Walsh several weeks to complete his interrogation of Fawn Hall, former secretary to Lt. Col. Oliver North, and then make her available to congressional investigators for questioning.

"Now I'm certain he has his own way of doing his business but at times we find it a bit difficult to appreciate his need for five, six, seven weeks to question a witness," said Inouye.

"Most respectfully, I believe that it could be done with a bit more expedition," said Inouye, whose own committee has been subjected to criticism that it was moving too quickly toward granting key witnesses limited immunity from prosecution in order to compel their testimony.

Speaking in the same interview, the panel's top Republican, Sen. Warren Rudman of New Hampshire, noted that the Senate committee doesn't need anyone's approval to do what we're doing and we don't intend to seek it. We intend to cooperate to the extent that we can and fulfill our responsibilities.

"If we do not think we can fulfill our responsibilities and still cooperate, then we will fulfill our responsibilities."

One Senate official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Senate investigators did wait long periods in late January or early February to permit Walsh to question Ms. Hall before they did.

This official said Walsh notified congressional investigators within the past several days that he had completed his interrogation and they were free to proceed.

In apparent anticipation of this timetable, Walsh wrote the committees in late February, allowing the mandatory 10-day waiting period to end at about the same time Walsh finished his questioning.

Inouye and Rudman made their comments at the end of an occasionally contentious week in which Walsh appealed to both the House and Senate committees to delay for 90 days any decision to grant immunity to North and Rear Adm. John Poindexter, President Reagan's former national security adviser.

Lawyers for both committees and aides to the committees then voted that immunity in promise on the issue, but no decision is expected for several more days.

The congressional source said Senate investigators were discussing among possible compromise proposals a plan for the committee to

Bush has star billing at GOP meet as rivals given 5-minute allotments

NASHUA, N.H. (AP) — Vice President George Bush had star billing at a Republican meeting that opened Friday, while his 1988 rivals shared the podium, given five minutes to say their piece.

Bush is scheduled to make a solo appearance as the luncheon speaker today at the Republican National Party Leadership Conference, a day after his six potential foes addressed the opening banquet.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas opened his remarks Friday night by saying, "I received a telegram just as I walked in. It read, 'Sorry I couldn't be there this evening, buddy' told me." It was signed, George Bush.

Also attending the conference were Sen. Jack Kemp of New York; former Gov. Pete du Pont of Delaware, the only announced candidate for the GOP nomination; former Sen. Steve Alexander of Maine; and Rep. Dan Rostenkowski of Illinois, who plans to enter the race in 10 days.

Rep. Pat Robertson and former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld. Most stuck to the issues in their remarks Friday.

Speaking in front of backdrop that read, "New Hampshire: FIRST in the nation," a reference to the state's presidential primary, the contenders described the GOP as the party of the future and criticized the Democrats as the party ready to raise taxes.

Before the meeting formally opened, supporters of the potential candidates sought to turn Bush's billing against him by reminding New Hampshire voters that the conference was taking place in the city remembered for the microphone incident took place during the 1980 election between Bush and Ronald Reagan.

"In 1980, Bush only wanted to share the microphone with Ronald Reagan," said Carroll Jones, a Dole supporter. "This time he doesn't want to share it with anyone."

Charles Douglas, a leading Kemp

backer said, "I'm tempted to go to Radio Shack and buy a microphone so George Bush will have one of his own."

All the potential candidates to succeed Reagan were invited to the conference, and all quickly accepted. They then discussed they would get about five minutes each to address the opening dinner Friday night and a role in panel discussions on Saturday — all but Bush.

The vice president was flying in Saturday to deliver the keynote address at a luncheon.

Dole quickly declared he would pass up the entire event, then reentered and agreed to appear for the Friday dinner.

Bush aides insisted they had nothing to do with the program. But other candidates speculated the billing given the vice president was no accident and probably stemmed from the fact Bush is supported by New Hampshire Gov. John H. Sununu.

"I don't fault the vice president," said Dole. "If you get a good deal, you ought to take it."

Tort

The bill was opposed by the Idaho Trial Lawyers Association and a number of consumer groups. They claimed that there was no evidence that drastic revisions in the civil court system would make liability insurance any more available or affordable, and that the answer to the liability crisis would be reforms covering the insurance industry. One package called for state control on premium increases and decreases.

Both Risch and Boise Democrat Gail Bray disputed claims by proponents of the tort-reform package that Idaho juries were out of control and damage awards were skyrocketing.

"The insurance industry," Mrs. Bray contended, "has not completely leveled with the public."

Voting with Risch, Fairchild-Brooks and Mrs. Bray to kill the bill were Idaho Falls Republican Lee Staker and Democrats Mary-Lou Reed of Coeur d'Alene and Claire Wertherell of Moulgland Home. Supporting the bill with Anderson were Republicans Denton Darrington of Declo, Ann Rydalch of Idaho Falls and Darrell McRoberts.

much revenue, as promised, Brown said the real question appeared to be, "Shall the state entertain its people with a lottery?"

"The media is not interested in the lottery because it is a positive program," said Rep. Emerson Smock, R-Boise. "They are only interested in negative things."

Other committee members attacked the resolution itself, with several noting that it was wrong to have a detailed, lengthy proposal placed in the state Constitution.

"Clean" lottery legislation in the past, sometimes by as few as one or two votes.

Herndon, D-Sandpoint.

"It's the most poorly drafted proposed constitutional amendment I've ever seen," said Herndon. "I'm very uncomfortable with it." But he said the people want a lottery.

Rep. Mike Strasser, R-Nampa, alleged legislators were "scared to death to say this isn't the right way to do it."

"Before we put junk on the floor, we ought to try to do it right first," he said.

But other legislators noted that the Idaho House has rejected "clean" lottery legislation in the past, sometimes by as few as one or two votes.

Blacks gaining freedom after the Civil War and women getting the vote in 1920 each represented milestones in gathering the voices of all the citizens.

"But, Huntley noted, while several members of the audience closed their eyes and nodded toward their desks, that participatory democracy is lacking because people rarely take interest — and contact their representatives — in the way the government may not be run by political minorities such as Thomas Jefferson or John Adams, of the 18th and 19th centuries.

"I don't know how many people we have in our area willing to give up their personal wealth for public service," Huntley said. "Most people are in government because they can't do anything else."

Beyond concerns that few people take an active part keeping an eye on government, Huntley questioned the role of the media in the founding fathers' insight in a proposal to rewrite the Constitution.

"Even if the group came up with a good Constitution to submit to the people, would the majority of people be able to handle, and read in their own words, the kind of arguments that were written by Alexander Hamilton, James Madison and John Jay in the Federalist Papers?" Huntley asked.

Voyager

Friday's trajectory change, along with minor course corrections later, will bring the durable space probe within 3,100 miles of cloud tops above Neptune's north pole at 9 p.m. on Aug. 24, 1989, 12 hours earlier than originally planned.

"We'll go over the top of Neptune and down to Triton," Stone said. Voyager 2 will pass within 25,000 miles of that moon, which may be covered with a cold organic sludge, but will not get close to Herald, Neptune's other known moon.

The approach to Neptune will be about 20 times closer than the probe's 1986 encounter with Uranus, 30 times closer than its 1981 Saturn flyby and 70 times closer than its nearest approach to Jupiter in 1979.

Old-time physics chairs in the physics, math and astronomy division at the California Institute of Technology.

Voyager 2 was launched from Earth on Aug. 20, 1977. It is now 2.08 billion miles from Earth, but its curving path means it has traveled 3.5 billion miles in the past year.

The trajectory change was made early Friday when computer commands sent to the spacecraft weeks ago automatically ordered a 70-minute firing of the probe's hydrazine thrusters.

Voyager 2 then spent a half hour aiming its radio transmitter at Earth, and at 7:37 a.m. MST scientists received the signal confirming the mid-course correction.

"There's no indication it was anything but a perfect maneuver," said Stone. Voyager flight engineering manager at Jet Propulsion Laboratory, which operates the United States' unmanned space exploration program for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Voyager 2 within 800 miles of Neptune and 5,000 miles of Triton. The more distant trajectory was chosen to avoid the possibility that the spacecraft would smash into partial rings, or arcs, of debris orbiting Neptune.

The people think there may be a donut or two down such areas. Stone said, adding that scientists won't know until Voyager 2's encounter whether the rings contain boulders, rocks, pebbles or finer grains.

The course correction raised the probe's speed by 204 mph to more than 43,800 mph relative to the speed of the sun, 51,072 mph relative to the speed of Earth, Miller said.

Neptune is a gas giant planet, like Jupiter, Saturn and Uranus, which also consist largely of gases. Like Uranus, Neptune probably has a very "watery" atmosphere that becomes wetter with depth, so there is no clear boundary between atmosphere and ocean; Stone said, adding that a small rocky core probably is at the center of the planet.

Neptune measures about 4,000 miles across, compared with about 7,900 miles for Earth. Triton's diameter is estimated at between 1,400 miles and 3,200 miles. Nereid probably is only 350 miles diameter.

intended to conduct interviews in closed sessions with those two witnesses and without their public interrogation for the 90 days sought by the House panel.

In a related development Friday, 42 House Democrats urged that the House panel investigating the Iran-Contra affair give full study to a private network set up with Reagan administration encouragement to reportedly recruit Contras rebels.

"The committee clearly has the authority to investigate these activities," said Rep. Peter DeFazio, D-Ore., who organized the House group. "However, it's not clear they will commit the staff and resources necessary to do so."

He also to Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House committee, the lawmakers cited allegations that the private aid network may have violated U.S. arms export laws or the Neutrality Act, which prohibits financial aid against any country with which the United States is formally at peace.

In another Iran-Contra development Friday, the board of the National Endowment for Democracy, which awards grants to promote democracy abroad, voted unanimously to remove its money from the Washington-based Institute for North South Issues, an organization mentioned in the Iran-Contra affair.

Endowment President Carl Germsman said that while there has been no evidence of wrongdoing by the Institute, the endowment should not be tainted by the controversy. A chart found by the Tower commission in North's state contained handwritten designations in boxes that appeared to signify organizations involved in funding the Contras, but a private Contra aid network. One of the boxes was labeled with the Institute's initials.

Utility may help pay for dam

REXBURG (AP) — State Sen. Mark Ricks, R-Rexburg, said recent talks with Idaho Power Co. indicate the utility would be willing to help pay for reconstruction of the failed Teton Dam if it takes over Utah Power & Light Co. in eastern Idaho service area.

"By all means," they said they definitely would be interested," Ricks said. "We did talk briefly about cost sharing to rebuild the dam, and they still said they were interested."

The Fremont-Madison Irrigation District and several cities in the Upper Snake River Valley have been looking for a way to get the dam rebuilt on the Teton River northeast of Rexburg.

The earth-filled structure collapsed in June 1976 as the reservoir behind it was being filled, killing 11 people and causing an estimated $500 million in flood damage.

But supporters of reconstruction say the power production, water storage and flood control needs that fostered the dam in the first place still exist. The cost of reconstruction has been estimated at anywhere from $70 million to $200 million.

Senate confirms PUC pick

BOISE (AP) — After an ill-fated beginning, Gov. Cecil Andrus has won unanimous Senate confirmation of an appointee to the Public Utilities Commission.

Without dissent on Friday, the Senate confirmed the nomination of Caldwell attorney Joe Miller, 38, to complete the final two years of the term vacated by Democrat Conley Ward.

In addition, the chamber gave tentative approval to legislation boosting the commissioners' salaries from $36,500 to $50,000. That bill will come to a final legislative vote next week. Andrus proposed the higher salaries, contending it would help attract highly qualified people to serve on the three-member regulatory board.

Miller was nominated by Andrus this past Monday along with Coeur d'Alene Republican Ralph Nelson, 46, an accountant. Nelson, who will take over the six-year term of Republican Richard High, is scheduled to appear before the State Affairs Committee next week for his confirmation hearing.

House OK's phone charge

BOISE (AP) — With the hope of saving lives, the House has approved permitting counties to charge telephone customers up to $1 a month to fund improvements in emergency communication equipment.

Ada County Sheriff Vaughn Killeen, who pushed for the measure, said he was pleased with Thursday's 67-12 vote and had high hopes for Senate passage. "We never think an emergency will happen to us, but we can save many lives and give peace of mind to many people," said Rep. Con Mahoney, R-Idaho Falls.

The measure arose from Ada County officials' desire to modernize communications equipment used for police, firefighters and paramedics. The fee would raise $1.2 million a year in Ada County.

Among opponents of the bill was Rep. Phil Childers, R-Boise, who said a local government tax on phones is inappropriate.

Blackfoot cuts school jobs

BLACKFOOT (AP) — In a long-range savings plan aimed at erasing a $406,000 deficit, Blackfoot School Superintendent Daniel Schartz has announced a reorganization plan that cuts several administrative positions in the district.

Among the positions that will be eliminated is that of Assistant Superintendent Vaughn Hawkes, as well as the removal of several principals and teachers from positions as directors of federally funded programs.

"Instead of having two assistant principals, we'll have one associate, and the principals now working on other programs will be able to devote all of their time to their students and teachers," Schartz said.

Terrorist personalities same

POCATELLO (AP) — Terrorist groups may have different goals, but they have the same basic personalities, FBI agent Pete Welsh says.

In a presentation to a service club, Welsh used the Symbiote Liberation Army of the mid-'70s to illustrate points about leaders, figureheads and members of such organizations.

Welsh said SLA leader Nancy Ling Perry fit perfectly the description of a terrorist group leader. He said the individuals are generally well-educated, from middle-class families, in their 20s or 30s, and have political knowledge.

The figurehead in the SLA, Donald D. DeFreese, was also a stereotype in that he was from a lower-class background, had a history of violence and criminal activity, was male, between 20-30 years old, and had an anti-social personality.

It's difficult to negotiate with terrorists, Welsh said. Hostages are taken as part of a careful plan. Some participants are willing to die for their cause.

State budget drafting almost finished

BOISE (AP) — With the 1988 state budget draft running as much as $21 million over current revenue estimates, the House tax-writing committee is building up a stockpile of revenue-raising bills that can be used to offset that looming red ink.

With only token opposition on Friday, the Revenue and Taxation Committee introduced three bills that could be used to cut into that revenue gap, and Chairman Steve Antone, R-Rupert, said more tax-increase measures would be prepared over the weekend for review next week.

Meanwhile, the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee maintained the philosophy it adopted the day before in putting the Legislature on a collision course with a major tax increase. It approved a 1988 state allocation to junior colleges that exceeds Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus' recommendation by nearly $150,000.

The budget panel set the machinery in motion for some kind of significant tax increase a day earlier when it endorsed a public school budget of $343 million and a higher education allotment of $107.7 million. The school allocation effectively matches the governor's recommendation and the plan for the four colleges exceeds Andrus' proposal by over $2 million.

With only a few more agencies left to be handled by the committee, administration budget analysts are estimating the committees draft would slip a 5 percent surcharge on corporate and individual income taxes, require corporations to make quarterly rather than annual income tax payments and repeal what appears to be an unexpectedly costly tax break for out-of-state insurance companies.

But Antone emphasized that his committee will make no effort to push those or any other tax-increase bills to a floor vote until either the higher education budget or the public school allocation is approved by one of the chambers.

The income tax surcharge, which would be in effect only for just one tax year, was estimated to generate $15.6 million. The quarterly tax payment plan, rejected in past sessions, would generate about $1 million a year for two years, and the repeal of the premium tax cut would save the state about $2.5 million it could be forced to pay out immediately and as much as $13 million over the next few years.

Also pending in the committee is a compromise repeal of the investment tax credit, which would raise $7 million, and more than a score of variations on the income tax that could raise anywhere from $3 million to $31 million.

The Republican legislative majority has firmly rejected complete repeal of the tax credit, the cornerstone of the financing scheme for the governor's budget, and Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, R-Boise, has reiterated that the credit will not be tinkered with on this session.

will total around $657 million with revenues from the current tax structure expected to produce only between $635 million and $645 million.

The $5.85 million allotment for the College of Southern Idaho in Coeur d'Alene, a 9.7 percent increase over the support for this year, generally followed the trend the panel set in handling the other education budgets. After conservatives lost their fight to contain public school spending within the limited available revenue estimate, they pressed for equal treatment of the other components of the state's educational network.

That series of decisions, spurred by Republican leaders' commitment to meet or exceed the governor's education spending levels, was responsible for pushing the draft budget well over the leadership target of around $650 million.

Because of the growing disparity between spending commitments and available revenues, the House tax committee introduced bills that been getting a lot of inquiries about filing amended returns, which means other insurance companies may be planning to take advantage of the special tax law.

Without a law change, Ferguson said, it appears the growing disparity because of the tax break could be $1.5 million more than expected.

In a "worst case" situation, he said, about $626 million of the insurance premiums collected in Idaho each year could be subject to the refund, which could cost the state $12.5 million in tax revenue.

If the insurance companies file amended returns for 1985 and 1986, the tax loss those two years could be $14.1 million, he said.

"Due that it was misrepresented when it was passed, and could result in a substantial revenue loss, we are recommending that it be repealed retroactive to July 1, 1985," said Ferguson.

In response to a committee question, he said it would not be a new tax, but restoring an old tax.

"Are we going to need to put a 'gotcha' clause into every bill we pass around here, in case we change it in the future?" asked Rep. Phil Childers, R-Boise.

But a state budget expert says not only is the tax break not doing much to spur new investment, it could have a "catastrophic" impact on state tax collections.

The Revenue and Taxation Committee in the House voted Friday to print and introduce a bill repealing the tax break. And in an unusual move, it may be applied retroactively to July 1, 1985, when the tax break went into effect.

The state tax on the $800 million collected annually by insurance companies as premiums in Idaho was cut from 3 percent to 1 percent to companies investing 75 percent of their assets in the state.

But Mike Ferguson of the Division of Financial Management, said an analysis of the 31 companies which have claimed refunds under the act indicated that only 10 on the basis of trust investments met new ones.

So far, he said, only 81 companies have filed for refunds under the law. But Ferguson said the state has

Candidate interviews set

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Board of Education will interview five candidates next month to replace Executive Director Charles McQuillen, who is stepping down at the end of June.

Board member George Alvarez of Boise said a screening committee reviewed about 40 applicants for the job before identifying the five finalists, who he would not identify.

They will be interviewed by the entire board on April 16, and a final selection is expected before the next meeting on April 23 in Lewiston, Alvarez said.

McQuillen, 48, was dean of the College of Business at the University of Idaho before becoming executive director five years ago. He announced in October that he planned to leave the state to go to Kansas to write country music, but since has indicated he might accept a university teaching position.

Senate threshing out barley panel measure

Wheat Commission to include barley producers and levying a mandatory duer support the promotion effort. The measure would be doomed to failure.

Senate action on the measure was expected to be completed by the end of the session.

"It was 21- to 21 (in the Senate) the way we counted the votes," Idaho Wheat Growers Association Executive Director Tim McGreevy said in explaining why the growers acceded to vocal opponents of the mandatory assessment, "many from Caribou County. They have been pressing for a voluntary checkoff followed by a referendum in two years to determine whether the tax should be made mandatory."

Under the tentative compromise, growers would be allowed to recover half of the tax during the first four years, and then they could put the program to a statewide producer vote if that move is backed by 10 percent of the growers. If a referendum is not secured or the growers back the checkoff, it would become mandatory after that.

"Our people can live with that and still have a budget we can work with," McGreevy said.

Elk River to retain school

ELK RIVER (AP) — Residents in the mountain town of Elk River have resoundingly answered that they don't want to close their high school, the smallest in Idaho.

Elk River is north of Orofino. The local school board decided recently to poll residents on closing the school attended by 13 students. Trustees released their findings Wednesday at a meeting attended by 20 of the town's 200 residents.

"About 75 percent of the people wanted to keep it open, so we'll keep plugging along," said Board President Ted Malm, who added he "opened up a keg of nails" by posing the question.

The town has encountered rough times from sawmill closures, but wants to open an industrial park featuring a wood pellet mill.

Suspect in custody

LARGO, Fla. (AP) — The Meridian man accused of setting the fire that destroyed the historic Eastman Building six weeks ago has been arrested in Florida, authorities said.

Matthew Gregory Everett, 19, refused to waive extradition during a hearing on Thursday in Largo and was obtaining an attorney, officials said.

He was arrested earlier in the week after local police received a tip that he was in the Tampa area, Police spokesman John Bocchicchio said. Ball was set at $60,000 on the second-degree arson charge.

Senate action on the measure was expected to be completed by the end of the session.

CSI budget advances; capital gains on hold

JFAC OKs 9.7% budget hike for junior colleges

By JANE ROBINSON
Times-News writer

BOISE — Money is looming on the horizon for the College of Southern Idaho.

The Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee Friday approved a budget of $5.8 million, or a 9.7 percent increase, for Idaho's two junior colleges.

CSI's budget was frozen last year. To local legislators, the tough part is over.

"I think it's going to pass," said Rep. Gary Robbins, R-Dietrich. But Robbins added that the budget for higher education "is going to be more interesting."

The throes of liberal passion, JFAC on Thursday approved a $101.5 million budget for higher education, or about $2 million more than requested by Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Lawmakers on Friday were reeling from a day of what some called riotous spending.

Robbins reflected what other legislators were saying, that the increase for higher education will not survive.

But Rep. Tim Tucker, D-Port Hill, a member of JFAC, believes the money for junior colleges is safe this year.

"Unlike higher education, I think junior colleges received bipartisan support, and I think it was sincere," Tucker said on Friday. "The motion that passed was not the high motion, and I think they're going to fare well."

Sen. Darrel McRoberts, R-Buhl, originally requested a $5.9 million budget for junior colleges.

But Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, placed the $5.8 million budget on the floor as a compromise, below McRoberts' request but above the governor's budget.

Local legislators and CSI officials had argued that junior colleges should receive the same increase as higher education.

Newcomb: Bill aids agriculture, timber, mining

By JANE ROBINSON
Times-News writer

BOISE — Rep. Bruce Newcomb is worried his anti-kicking bill will not make it out of the Senate.

—The Burley Republican's bill would allow a capital gains deduction on the state income tax for farm property, timber and mining.

Without it, Newcomb said, income taxes will jump 150 percent for people trying to sell off some assets to help pay debts.

"We've got to do something to keep from kicking people while they're down," Newcomb said. "I don't think people realize how much we're kicking them."

Newcomb bristles at talk that his is a special interest bill solely for farmers.

"It's for individuals, family-held corporations and partners, and just agriculture," he said. "This is for the three main industries that are hurting in Idaho."

When Congress approved the tax overhaul bill last year, it eliminated the capital gains deduction.

Newcomb argued that such a move seriously cripples people trying to get out of debt.

For example, a person sells property and makes $100,000 in capital gains to pay off $70,000 in debt. But under present law, he would owe $35,000 in taxes, so that he or she is still in the hole.

People in bankruptcy to get rid of their debt could end up owing taxes," Newcomb said. "People who liquidate everything should have some money left."

Newcomb's arguments swayed House members, and the bill passed by a 69-14 vote.

But it is being held in the Senate, the prisoner of bad timing. If approved, the deduction would cost the state an estimated $2.5 million in revenue, and legislators right now are $20 million in the hole.

"If they could get it out of the Senate, I think they could get it through," said a supporter, Rep. Cella Folkinga, R-Buhl. "This is vital."

Kimberly Republican Sen. Laird Nor also said it was "an important bill."

"This bill is not understood by many people, but it's important," he said. "If we can just get it to the floor."

Jerome High atrium set for 2 classrooms

By TERESA Z. TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The Jerome School Board has voted to proceed with plans to add two more classrooms to the "high school" by roofing the school's atrium, but decided to put another project on hold that would have entailed relocating a number of lockers in the school to make more classroom space.

Board members voted this week to retain the services of architect Ivan Stone to draw up the specifications for the project that would add two full-size classrooms of 900 square feet each and would expand the area around the library by 600 square feet.

School Board Chairman Al Chojnacky said both Superintendent Richard Kugler and Maintenance Supervisor Leggett recommend adding the lockers at the present time because the move would have cost $7,194. However, they recommended continuing the more expensive atrium-roofing project because of the immediate payback in energy savings.

The locker-moving project, estimated at $7,194, would have allowed high school-age special education students, currently attending class in the junior high annex, to attend classes with other high school students of their own age.

Although this project has been dropped, Chojnacky said one of the classrooms that will be built as a result of the atrium-roofing project will be dedicated for use by the special education students.

One classroom is scheduled for use by the special education students and one will be used as a free-floating classroom to be used as needed," Chojnacky said.

Total cost for the atrium-roofing project is estimated at $50,000. However, Chojnacky said contract bids will be let for only part of the project.

"We propose to do the rest of the work—building—the walls—and finishing the project, with our own maintenance people. If we do some of the work ourselves, it will save $13,000," he said.

In other business:

—The board voted to authorize the issue of tax anticipation notes, and will borrow $200,000 on April 24, and another $100,000 on June 24. Maturity day for the notes will be July 22.

—High school teacher Jack Peavey asked the board to consider offering summer school classes to taking students interested in high school "college-preparatory" classes.

—It is geared-towards-ambitious students who would like to take additional math classes, for example, on top of what is currently required, or another government or history class, or maybe add a language," Chojnacky said.

Peavey said a number of students have indicated an interest in the summer school program. These students are now attending classes in Twin Falls or obtaining the education by correspondence, he said.

"The classes will have to be self-supporting," Chojnacky said. "Students will have to pay a fee to attend the classes."

Chojnacky estimated the cost for each class would be from $30 to $45 depending on how many students commit to the program.

—Former vo-ag teacher Carter Lither requested the board reassess the way the awards fund he established 20 years ago is being administered for vo-ag students.

Buhl to buy meters for testing wastewater in new city program

By URSULA FULLERTON
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — The Buhl City Council discussed improvements to its wastewater treatment facility and water system at a meeting this week.

The council voted to buy three different meters for testing wastewater, which will allow the system to be operated more efficiently.

Randy Kolar, an engineer with J-U-B Engineers, said that the meters would eliminate the need for the city to hire an outside lab to test wastewater. That would allow test results to be provided more quickly and also would be cost-effective, he said.

The instruments include a pH meter, a dissolved oxygen meter and a spectrophotometer, which would measure the ultraviolet lights that pass through the water in order to disinfect it.

Seventy-five percent of the $4,400 cost would be covered by a state grant for which the city has already applied, and the other 25 percent would come from the city budget.

Kolar said that J-U-B could assist the city with designing the new testing program and train employees to operate the new instruments.

On the matter of the water system, the council scheduled a public hearing for March 30 to discuss the city's plans to have J-U-B apply for a state water grant that will cover the cost of installing a new water well and additional fire booster pumps.

Installing an additional water well would allow the water levels to stay consistent all year long, including the higher usage period during Pillsbury/Green Giant's seasonal corn packaging.

In other business:

• A proposal presented by Mayor Claude McKercher to have a city-wide cleanup the week of April 19-25 to coincide with the state-wide cleanup was accepted.

• Jack Ramsey of the Buhl Economic Council outlined a program that will include purchasing 10 new trash bins for the downtown area. The Economic Council plans to spend $1,300 on the project. The council gave its approval.

• The council decided not to purchase a new computer system for the city clerk's office this fiscal year. Instead the council will wait until October when the upcoming year's budget plans are made and a new fiscal year begins.

• Lawrence Quigley of the Buhl Senior Citizen Center asked the city for help in applying for a block grant that would enable further repairs to be done to the center. This particular grant would not need to be matched with local money, as past grants have been. The city would need to do the administrative work of the grant and would be paid for the work.

The council agreed to help if the seniors decide to apply for the grant.

• Charlotte Wesley was picked to succeed Emma Jones, who has resigned from the housing authority of the city of Buhl.

Charles Cox was hired to replace Officer J. Howard on the Buhl police force. Howard has accepted a position in Ada County.

Help children talk about their grief, advises consultant

By LORAYNE G. SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "You don't have to have a degree to be helpful to a grieving child," Dr. Alan D. Wolfelt, author and national consultant on grief, said here Wednesday.

Caring and understanding adults, such as teachers and friends, all can help children work through the loss of a loved one, either through death or divorce. While professional counselors have developed helpful techniques, the basic ingredient is showing love and acceptance of the child and willingness to help him express his feelings, he said.

"Just being a helpful human is what's important," Wolfelt said, "and being able to respond to cues." Often children want to talk to a teacher about their loss, he said, but the teacher, feeling untrained for counseling, will refer the child to a counselor the child does not know and therefore is not comfortable with.

Wolfelt, director of the Center for Loss and Life Transition in Ft. Collins, Colo., led a community workshop at Canyon Springs Inn sponsored by area morticians, hospitals and Home Hospice.

Designed to provide help to parents and caregivers who work with children, the day-long session drew a variety of professionals, including clergy, nurses and social workers, as well as morticians.

While one in 20 children will experience the death of a parent by age 14, one in four moves a year, and one in three will experience parental divorce, Wolfelt said, and all these conditions can cause children to experience a sense of loss.

Wolfelt outlined some of the major manifestations of grief such as shock, disbelieve, lack of feeling, physiological change, regression and disorganization or pain.

Explosive emotions is probably the response: "In children most upsetting to adults," Wolfelt says. Children faced with a loss may express anger to anyone — the doctor, God, siblings or even themselves as the believed cause for the event.

It is especially harmful in families which do not allow any expression of anger, Wolfelt says, thereby forcing children to turn their anger inward. Forcing children to repress such anger can result in anti-social behavior later, Wolfelt said.

The next step for children who are not allowed to express and deal with their anger is "acting out behavior" such as temper outbursts, starting fights at school and defying authority.

Other clues that children are unable to deal positively with their loss is when their grades drop drastically and they develop a different set of friends. Rejection of others also is common, the speaker says, because once extended family members are afraid to get emotionally close with another person and be hurt again.

In dealing with a grieving child, the expert advised that "lectures are not helpful." What the child most needs is to be able to express his feelings.

State board would get less than C-average on rule, Turner says

By RONDA TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The State Board of Education doesn't understand consequences of its own C-average rule and should continue to modify its policy, Lovell Turner, the former principal of both Declo High School and Burley Junior High School, told Cassia County trustees Wednesday.

According to Turner, the C-average requirement, although modified, can "put 16-year-olds out on the street." However, "the solutions are out there, we just have to work for them," he said.

Turner helped represent Cassia patrons in support of modifying the C-average graduation requirement at a meeting with the state board in Boise on March 6. He said that while he agrees with the two new options adopted by the state trustees that day, he would still like to see the board take steps to help struggling students graduate.

He said he felt after meeting with the board that the trustees who had adopted the rules weren't even knowledgeable about the C-average.

"If you'd give a test to the state board on C-average, I don't think they could get a C average," he said.

The state board voted unanimously March 6 to add two options to the rule requiring graduating seniors to have at least a C average in the core classes of English, mathematics, reading and science.

One addition would allow students to graduate who score at least the 15th percentile on the Statewide Achievement Test and receive three out of five points on the Direct Writing Assignment.

The other modification, which Turner enthusiastically supported, permits school districts to develop their own competency plans in accordance with state guidelines that have yet to be established.

Turner, who retired seven years ago, has his concerns for his 17 grandchildren and their peers caused him to examine the state educational system. He said he didn't object to the C-average rule, but thought—the state could do even more to challenge students working toward "college" recommendations. But, "there should be something for the kids who just can't do it," he said.

Superintendent Norman Hurst said that the district has asked its high school administrators to recommend policies for the new reading proficiency guidelines. These policies will in turn be recommended to the state.

He said that the district may be able to develop a vocational special needs program for learning-disabled children who need extra help but do not need or want to be placed in the district's special education program.

Board Chairman Mike Judd said that media, especially television news, had been "misleading" in stories about the state board's recent C-average modification. Some opinions may believe that the rule is no longer in effect, he said.

Curriculum Director Gene Coltrin said that in a recent district evaluation of ninth graders failing to meet the C-RULE, "about half

Mormon official suggests welfare model to government

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Mormon Church's welfare program, and its goals of promoting the work ethic and self-reliance, can serve as a model for the federal government, a church official says.

In testimony Wednesday before the House Ways and Means subcommittee on public assistance, Keith McMullin, managing director of the faith's welfare services, said the church program tries to "empower work and to eliminate the curse of idleness and the evils of the dole."

The subcommittee has been charged with finding ways to improve government welfare.

While McMullin emphasized that the Mormon welfare system is based on religious principles, he added that "much of what we do can be copied and is worthy of imitation."

"Where community resources are available, that are compatible with the church approach, we are happy to use them," he said. "Our overarching aim, however, is always to help people help themselves."

When welfare services are extended to church members, he said, they are expected to do all they can to get back on their own as soon as possible, McMullin said.

"Permanent dependence on church and other welfare programs is discouraged except in instances of the very aged or infirm who have no other resources on which to rely," he said.

The kind of assistance needed by an applicant for church welfare is determined by the local bishop, McMullin said. The type of aid received can range from food and clothing, counseling, adoption services and job training to payment of bills.

Resources to support the church's welfare program come from voluntary donations by members of their time, talents and money.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon Church's 157th annual general conference will be held April 4-5 in Salt Lake City's historic Temple Square Tabernacle.

Scheduled speakers for the weekend conference include President Ezra Taft Benson, revered as "prophet, seer and revelator" of the 6 million-member Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and many other of the faith's general authorities.

In addition to several thousand who will gather during sessions here, several hundred thousand more Mormons are expected to watch on television beamed by satellite to more than 1,000 stake centers in the United States and Canada.

Music for the conference will be provided by the Mormon Tabernacle Choir under the direction of Jerrold D. Olney, organist Robert Cundick, and the Mormon Youth Chorus, directed by Robert C. Bowden. Several other church groups also plan to perform.

General sessions will be conducted at 10 a.m. MST, and 2 p.m. both days and a general priesthood session is scheduled for Saturday at 6 p.m. Benson is expected to preside over all sessions with the assistance of First Presidency counselors Gordon B. Hinckley and Thomas S. Monson, church officials said.

In addition, a meeting for general authorities, regional representatives and stake presidents is scheduled for April 3, 7 p.m., in the Tabernacle.

O'Connor: There's 'morbid curiosity' about priests, sex

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Cardinal John O'Connor said Monday there's "an almost morbid curiosity" about priests and sex in the wake of reports that some clerics may have contracted AIDS.

O'Connor made his comments at a news conference with the bishops of New York state's seven other Catholic dioceses.

The Roman Catholic leaders were in the state capital for their first joint public policy forum, a conference that attracted nearly 2,000 people.

While the Roman Catholic leader said the media's coverage of the church is generally fair, O'Connor said that "right now, there's what seems to me to be an almost morbid curiosity about the actual and alleged sexual practices of our priests."

"I believe some of the newspapers and some of the articles I read, I'd fear for my safety here right now because I'm sitting with seven other bishops who have nothing in mind but to assault me sexually," O'Connor said. "And that's the kind of absurdity that's being bandied about in some sectors of the press now."

O'Connor said he knew of no priests working for his diocese who had AIDS.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is most often a disease that affects homosexuals and intravenous drug users. O'Connor and the bishops were in Albany to lobby for a 54-item legislative agenda, but much of the news conference centered on sex issues.

The bishops reiterated their opposition to distributing condoms as a means of preventing the spread of AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases.

"We believe that the remedy that is suggested by some of offering condoms only multiplies the problem and further builds up the presumption that we can do whatever we wish with sex," said Bishop Stanislaus Brzana of the Ogdensburg Diocese. "We believe that the best remedy is the remedy which is proposed in the Bible."

Brzana said sex should be reserved for marriage. Albany Bishop Howard Hubbard said the bishops were holding their forum and the news conference to generate publicity for their positions.

"Perhaps we haven't used the media and the press... as well as we should have to tell our story," Hubbard said.

At a luncheon, O'Connor and the bishops were joined by Gov. Mario Cuomo, state Senate Majority Leader Warren Anderson and other state officials.

Religious leaders plot national campaign against pornography

CHICAGO (AP) — America's religious community must not waste any time in launching a national campaign against pornography, a Mormon Church official says.

"If we are to begin, let it be now," Richard Lindsay, managing director for public relations and special affairs for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, said Wednesday during a speech to the Religious Alliance Against Pornography's executive board.

Lindsay, a member of the board, was one of several religious leaders scheduled to speak at the meeting. The included Rabbi Marc H. Tannenbaum, director of the American Jewish Committee; Episcopal Bishop William Frey; Joseph Cardinal Bernardin, Catholic archbishop of Chicago, and RAAP president Dr. Jerry Klirk.

The meeting was held to outline plans for a national campaign for the coming year to focus efforts against pornography portraying children, violence, rape and degradation of women, officials said.

Lindsay outlined a four-part program the Mormon Church has approved for fighting pornography. "First, begin with yourself," he said. "We cannot hope to influence others in the direction of virtue unless we live lives of virtue ourselves," he said.

"We need also to train a better upcoming generation," Lindsay said. Cultivate within children a taste for the good. While they are very young, read to them the great stories which have become immortal because of the virtues they teach. Expose children to the good books."

Lindsay also said "earnest voices" of opposition to pornography are important. "Let our voices be heard. I hope they will not be shrill voices, but I hope we shall speak with such conviction that those to whom we speak shall know of the strength of our feeling and the sincerity of our effort," he said.

Finally, "strength of God" must be enlisted in the anti-smut crusade, Lindsay said. "Strength to do battle begins with enlisting the strength of God. He is the source of all true power," he said.

Police dismiss reports of satanic activities

FARMINGTON, Utah (AP) — Rumored animal sacrifices by a purported group of Satan worshippers meeting by night in northern Utah's mountains have been discounted by police here.

Farmington Detective Jeff Jacobson said the latest may have stemmed from the illegal dumping of more than 100 muskrat carcasses on a road in the foothills above town last week. He said area residents apparently mistook the dead animals for mutilated cats and dogs.

Jacobson said police observed the skinned muskrat carcasses when they checked the fire break road Tuesday.

"At this point, we have no evidence that there are animals being sacrificed through satanic worship or anything," Jacobson said. "The detective said as for the illegal dumping, violators are subject to a $299 fine. He said there are no suspects in the case."

"It's illegal dumping, but there are no laws in this area against trapping, as far as I know," he said. However, residents reported seeing what they described as satanic drawings in the area where the muskrats were found.

Carol Glatras, who often hikes near the site, said a large underground water storage tank had such drawings on its top. The tank is directly below the fire break road where the carcasses were discovered.

In recent months, residents also have made reports to the police that they saw robed figures holding candles in an abandoned church building.

Jacobson said police have checked out all the reports and have found no evidence of any satanic activity in the area.

"We follow through with every report and incident we get to verify or not verify that there may be some possible activity," the detective said.

Mormon official suggests welfare model to government

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Mormon Church's welfare program, and its goals of promoting the work ethic and self-reliance, can serve as a model for the federal government, a church official says.

The subcommittee has been charged with finding ways to improve government welfare. While McMullin emphasized that the Mormon welfare system is based on religious principles, he added that "much of what we do can be copied and is worthy of imitation."

When welfare services are extended to church members in need, they are expected to do all they can to get back on their own as soon as possible, McMullin said.

SEE-THROUGH FISH
That Antarctic seacritter called the Icefish is colorless. You can see through it, almost. You know why it doesn't turn solid in the cold? Instead of hemoglobin in its blood, it has antifreeze.

BALANCE
Scientists say primeval fish kept their balance in water with fluid-filled sacs on the sides of their heads. The human ear evolved from these sacs, they say. It's noteworthy, they think, that sacs now in the human middle ear still affect balance.

Young women commit suicide

ALSIP, Ill. (AP) — Two young women, one holding a rose and a stuffed animal, the other a photo album, were found dead in a garage, apparently victims of the same method of suicide used by four teen-agers in New Jersey, police said Friday.

None of the notes the women left mentioned the suicides a day earlier in New Jersey, but Alsip Police Chief Warner Huston said he thought the two young women "had heard about it, and that the publicity surrounding that incident probably gave them the impetus" to kill themselves.

Nancy Granann, 19, and Karen Logan, 17, described as best friends, had been neighbors and classmates. Both had dropped out of school and recently quit their jobs, authorities said.

The notes at the scene indicated the women had been depressed. Ms. Granann over her failed marriage and Ms. Logan over concern that "she had made a mess of her life ... that she had disappointed her parents," Huston said.

CIA obtains Soviet helicopter

NEW YORK (AP) — The CIA has obtained at least one of the Soviet Union's most advanced helicopter gunships, enabling the United States to learn ways of countering the aircraft's defenses, according to a broadcast report.

At least one of two Mi-24 Hind-D helicopters flown into Pakistan by defectors from the Soviet-supported Afghan army in 1985 was turned over to the CIA, NBC Nightly News reported, quoting unidentified Pentagon sources.

The sources said the CIA has figured out how to "outsmart" the defensive system of the Mi-24 by making changes in the Stinger anti-aircraft missile for use against it, NBC reported. As a result, the network said, intelligence specialists report that rebels in Afghanistan have been able to shoot down many Mi-24s over the past six months.

Uninspected steel investigated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon will investigate allegations that a Maine shipyard used uninspected steel in building one of the Navy's sophisticated new Ticonderoga class cruisers, a spokesman said Friday.

A preliminary review by the Navy of internal documents from the Bath Iron Works Corp. indicated that the shipyard may have used uninspected steel in some overhaul and non-government work, but has unearthed no evidence that such material went into the cruiser, said Navy spokesman Lt. Paul Weishaup.

"As a precautionary measure, the Navy will review again the procedures used at BIW and will initiate an inquiry into the allegation," Weishaup said in a statement.

He said Navy inspectors will seek "to assure once again that no inferior steel has been used and that our quality assurance procedures are adequate."

Final W-4 form ready in April

WASHINGTON (AP) — The final version of the W-4 tax-withholding form should be available to taxpayers by mid-April, the Internal Revenue Service said Friday.

The two-page form was sent to the printers Friday after the IRS and the White House Office of Management and Budget agreed on a handful of minor changes designed to make the instructions clearer.

Meanwhile, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, introduced a bill that would delay a new requirement that taxpayers pay in advance at least 90 percent of their 1987 tax liability.

Under the bill, a worker would have to pay at least 80 percent in advance, either through withholding or quarterly estimated payments. The 90-percent figure would take effect in 1988.

Inmate holds five hostages

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — An inmate apparently armed with a weapon fashioned from razor blades took five people hostage Friday at a maximum-security prison and held four of them for more than two hours before surrendering, officials said.

The inmate, seized five people, social workers and prisoners, about 11:30 a.m. MST, released one about an hour later, then set the others free unharmed about 1:55 p.m. MST, officials said.

He was identified by Department of Corrections spokeswoman Kim White as Bengro Galvan, 29, a Cuban who came to this country in the Mariel boatlift. Galvan was who serving a seven-year sentence in the Trenton State Prison on two drug charges, Ms. White said.

Galvan, who had a parole hearing scheduled in a few weeks, primarily was concerned about the accuracy of his parole date, Assistant Corrections Commissioner Gary Hillon said.

New York Mafia boss acquitted

NEW YORK (AP) — John Gottl, reputed boss of the largest Mafia family in the United States, and six co-defendants were acquitted Friday of all counts of racketeering and conspiracy.

The jury, whose members were not identified by name for security reasons, deliberated for seven days before returning a verdict. "I think they're tired of paid government informants who lie," said Gottl's lawyer, Bruce Cutler, who praised the jurors "for their courage."

"I think that's the American system," Cutler said. "I think everybody should be proud that John Gottl walked out today."

In the pandemonium that erupted after the verdict was read, Gottl pointed at the prosecution table and said: "Shame on them! I'd like to see the verdict on them, too."

Karnes sworn-in as senator

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican David Karnes, 38, a political novice from Omaha, became the newest and youngest U.S. senator Friday, filling the vacancy created by the death of Nebraska Democrat Edward Zorinsky.

Karnes told reporters: "I'm confident I'll be here a long time."

For Karnes, it was a busy first day of briefings, introductions, handshakes, a swearing-in ceremony on the floor of the Senate, and a chat with President Reagan at the White House. In between, Karnes said, he had to dash back to his hotel where checkout time was noon.

Schlafly blasts Koop on AIDS stance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservative activist Phyllis Schlafly accused Surgeon General C. Everett Koop on Friday of taking a stand on AIDS prevention that is encouraging America's schools to give condoms to children.

"All of his statements give a double message," Mrs. Schlafly said at a news conference. "The message is, 'Yes, abstinence is a good way to go. But if you're not going to practice abstinence then use condoms.' That is always the message he gives out."

She said Koop's statements "are being used by some schools and groups as authority for teaching schoolchildren about heterosexual and homosexual activities, and how to perform them using condoms."

Heterosexuals swamp AIDS-testing centers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — AIDS-testing centers and hot lines in several cities are being swamped by heterosexuals who fear they have been exposed to the deadly disease once regarded as largely a homosexual problem, health officials said Friday.

Although in the United States AIDS is still mainly confined to male homosexuals, hemophiles and intravenous drug abusers, health officials here and in other cities spiced by The Associated Press said there is an increasing trend toward heterosexuals seeking tests and information.

Callers are complaining that they can't reach clinics, and tests in some areas must be scheduled months ahead.

Health officials here and in Long Beach, Atlanta, San Francisco, Boston and Florida said the trend may be the result of stepped-up education programs and wide publicity about Liberae and other victims of acquired immune deficiency syndrome. One said taking a test has become "the social thing to do."

"People calling now are primarily heterosexual, many of them women, many of them mothers," Eric Rofes, director of the Gay and Lesbian Community Services Center in Hollywood, said during a Friday news conference held to demand expansion of Los Angeles County's free AIDS testing services.

Of the 586 people tested in February at the county's only free testing clinic, less than half, or 278, identified themselves as gay or bisexual.

On Thursday, the center got 132 telephone calls from people saying they had trouble reaching the clinic. Those who got through will be tested May 13.

Bist declined to reveal what had led authorities to believe the fire was the result of arson, saying it would hinder the investigation.

Police held two suspects, who had been taken into custody about midnight, Sgt. Christopher Buck said Friday.

"But his long experience as a pediatrician has taught him that most parents pass up the opportunity to teach their children," said Brown. "The next best place after parents would be at local level in schools. It would be up to the local community to determine when and where this information should be provided."

Mrs. Schlafly said, "I do not understand why he keeps encouraging this open-ended sex education in every grade level and inflicting it on the captive child in the public school classroom without giving the basic public health message that there is only one healthy way to go."

"It is an encouragement to promiscuity and it is an offense against the First Amendment right of those of us who believe that premarital sex is wrong," she said.

She continued, "Public school children may not be taught that if you're going to be promiscuous we're going to help you do it by recommending some devices to do it with."

Arson suspects questioned

DETROIT (AP) — Two suspects were questioned Friday in the investigation of a fire that swept through an abandoned warehouse, killing three firefighters. No charges were filed immediately, an investigator said.

Fire officials have ruled out earlier speculation that the fire was caused by homeless people, who have set small fires during winter months to keep warm, said Conrad Bist, chief of the fire department arson division.

Bist declined to reveal what had led authorities to believe the fire was the result of arson, saying it would hinder the investigation.

Police held two suspects, who had been taken into custody about midnight, Sgt. Christopher Buck said Friday.

Ferry owner says vessel not damaged

ZEEBRUGGE, Belgium (AP) — A London newspaper quoted sources Friday as saying the ferry that capsized a week ago struck the harbor wall, but the owner and salvager reported no damage to the hull or any of the four propellers.

The vessel turned onto its side March 6 when water rushed into the car deck as the ferry left Zebrugge for Dover, England, and 134 people were killed. Fifty-five bodies have been recovered. There were 49 survivors.

Officials and salvage workers believe the remaining bodies are inside the hull, which rests on a sandbar just outside the harbor entrance.

"Our preliminary reports say there was no damage to the hull nor to any of the propellers," said Jane McCarty, a spokeswoman in the Zebrugge office of the British ferry company Townsend Thoresen.

Hans Walenkamp, who is directing work by the Dutch salvage company Smit Tak International to pull the Herald of Free Enterprise upright, said his men inspected the ferry and found no damage.

"We have checked the hull and we have checked the propellers and we found no damage whatsoever," Walenkamp said. "Everything is intact."

The Times of London said it interviewed experts involved in events that followed the accident and all had concluded that the ship struck a harbor wall, damaging the propellers and causing the 427-foot vessel to capsize.

It identified its sources as Belgian navy divers, maritime pilots, sailors, ship owners and others who regularly work at Zebrugge.

Ms. McCarty said the 7,951-ton Herald of Free Enterprise has four propellers, three at the stern and one at the bow, and none showed any sign of damage. She repeated that the company had no official explanation of what caused the accident.

Townsend Thoresen also said the 55th body had been found, leaving 79 still missing.

Paul Ellis, another company spokesman, said divers made a "chance discovery" Thursday of the body of a ship's officer.

Smit Tak officials said their salvage crews had welded 16 of 32 steel loops to the promenade deck of the ferry. Cable will be strung through the loops so cranes on barges can right the ferry.

Ellis said the salvagers intended to have the vessel on its keel by March 30.

Walenkamp, the Smit Tak official, said workers would begin today driving 16 steel girders into the seabed to serve as piles. When the job is completed in about eight days, the 100-foot-long beams will anchor the crane barges.

Briefly

Kremlin rejects U.S. charge

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin on Friday rejected American claims that the Soviet Union cheated on superpower arms pacts and accused the United States of violating nuclear test agreements since the 1960s.

The Communist Party daily Pravda also said that the United States has blocked a total ban on nuclear tests by clinging to its testing program.

The article appeared to be a response to charges made by the Reagan administration accusing the Soviets of violating agreements on testing and arms control, including "regularly permitting the release of nuclear debris into the atmosphere."

Pravda said the United States violated a test ban agreement signed in the 1960s and a 1974 ceiling on the size of nuclear tests.

It criticized the Reagan administration for refusing to join the 19-month unilateral Soviet moratorium on nuclear testing that ended two weeks ago.

The U.S. State Department on Wednesday said that fallout from a Feb. 26 Soviet test was detected outside the Soviet Union.

Iran denounces threat report

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran said Friday that U.S. envoys who visited Tehran last year claimed that 36 Soviet divisions were massed near the Caspian Sea, ready to sweep south across the border into Iran.

Parliament speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani declared in his weekly prayer sermon at Tehran University that the Americans' purpose was to get Iran into a war with the Soviet Union and divert its forces from the war with Iraq.

Rafsanjani said the American officials, whom he did not name, showed the Iranians "a satellite photograph" marked with lines near the Caspian showing areas where the Americans said Soviet forces planned to enter Iran.

Former national security adviser Robert McFarlane and other U.S. officials made secret trips to Iran last year to arrange arms sales, negotiate for the release of Americans held hostage in Lebanon and explore the possibility of renewed relations.

Czech rights group gathers

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Fifteen prominent members of the Charter 77 human rights group held a rare public gathering around the grave of one of the group's first spokesmen Friday to mark the 10th anniversary of his death.

The 10-minute ceremony honored Jan Patocka, a philosopher and one of the original three spokesmen for the Soviet bloc's senior independent human rights organization.

Since the Charter 77 group was formed 10 years ago, its members have been harassed, interrogated and jailed. The charter calls for basic human rights guarantees and cultural and political freedoms.

Soviet priest freed from exile

MOSCOW (AP) — Dissident Yelena Bonner said Friday a government decree freed Father Gheb Yakunin from Siberian exile, but that other prominent human rights activists the government said it pardoned are still in custody.

Bonner said she learned in a telephone call from Yakunin's family in Moscow that he was released under a decree issued Tuesday by the Supreme Soviet, the national parliament.

Yakunin, 53, is a dissident Russian Orthodox priest and founding member of the Christian Committee for the Defense of the Rights of Believers in the U.S.S.R. He was sentenced to five years in prison and five years in internal exile in 1980 on charges of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda.

Few changes in S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A human rights group said Friday that abolition of "pass laws" dictating where blacks could live and work has been of no help to most, and many officials behave as if nothing had changed.

A report to the annual conference of the anti-apartheid group, said blacks still are exploited by employers and harassed by civil servants eight months after the hated laws were taken off the books.

Black Sash said its findings were based on interviews with 16,181 people at an office it maintains in Johannesburg to advise blacks. It said requests for help increased after the pass laws were scrapped.

"There is an entirely new system of law but there is no real freedom of movement," the report said. "There are new names to government offices but the same officials continue to deal with the public."

Jerome downs Shelley, 74-68 Faces St. Maries for title

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

BOISE — The 1987 legacy of the No. 1 ranking held up Friday night when the top-rated Jerome Tigers downed the second-ranked Shelley Russells 74-68 to gain the finals of the Idaho Class A-2 high school boys' basketball tournament.

The Tigers, now 22-1 for the season, will take on third-ranked St. Maries in tonight's state championship game at 6:45 in the Boise State University Pavilion. The Lumberjacks, now 18-6, gained the finals by edging fourth-ranked Marsh Valley of Arimo 70-69 here in Friday's other semifinal game.

Jerome Coach Ben Allen was quick to point out that the fact that the top-ranked teams in Classes A-3 and A-4, Lapwai and Shoshone, won their tournaments last week portends nothing for his Tigers.

"I said before the season started Marsh Valley would be the team to beat," said Allen. "They have great people back from last year. St. Maries and St. Maries is an impressive team."

Shelley will meet Marsh Valley, now 20-5, for the third-place trophy this afternoon at 3:15. Boise's Bishop Kelly High School, which eliminated Bear Lake of Montpelier 68-47 in one loser-out game Friday, will take on District 3 rival Kuna for the consolation honors at 1:15. The Kavenen knocked out Lakeland of Rathrum 67-49 in Friday's other loser-out game.

The Tigers needed three definite surges to win this one because Shelley — despite being overwhelmed on the boards — kept picking up garbage off its pressure defense.

"They didn't get the turnovers off the press," said Allen. "But the thing the press did was keep us from getting the ball inside."

Except for the early start, Jerome owned all of its leads to its inside players — and particularly to 6-foot, 5-inch sophomore Clint Bailey, whose 18 points were integral in two distinct surges. It was three Bailey field goals and two free throws that helped Jerome fashion a game-clinching 59-58 lead with 2 minutes and 21 seconds left in the game. Had the Tigers hit their free throws after that, it might have been a laugh against the 21-3 Russells.

Early on, it was senior forward Wade Robison's shooting that kept Jerome out front despite a pretty penetrating show by Shelley senior forward Seth Cannon, who wound up with 34 Shelley points.

But about as impressive was the fact that Cannon attempted 34 field goals, but moving to the glass, Cannon was pure vanilla.

The early scoring duel between Robison and Cannon culminated in second quarter when Jerome held 24-22 lead. At that time Robison had 12 points and Cannon 16. Late in the first period, Jerome built a 20-12 lead.

Bears upset Clemson 65-60

By TOM SALADINO

ATLANTA — Winston Garland and Basil Robinson starred in Southwest Missouri State's upset of No. 13 Clemson, but Coach Charlie Spoonhour thought the key to his team's victory was Greg Bell's defense of Tigers center Horace Grant.

NCAA Tournament
The Southeast

Garland scored 24 points and fellow senior guard Robinson added 13 points in the Bears' stunning 65-60 upset of Clemson Friday in the first round of the NCAA Southeast Regional basketball tournament.

"You can talk about Garland and Robinson, but the job Bell did on Grant probably won the game," said Spoonhour after the Bears' triumph in their first-ever NCAA tournament.

Southwest Missouri, 28-5, and seeded 13th in the 16-team region, will meet the winner of the Kansas-Houston game later Friday after winning its 13th straight game. Bell and the rest of the Bears, who lead the nation in scoring defense, allowing only 37 per game, held Grant, the Atlantic Coast Conference player of the year, to only 10 points in the second half after the 6-foot-4 center had 14 in the first half that ended in a 28-28 tie.

Clemson, 25-6, and seeded fourth, lost its third straight and fourth in five games.

"I think we're a pretty good team and we don't think Clemson underestimated us," Spoonhour said. "One of the greatest things about being unknown, is that people start talking about you and find out that we're a pretty good unknown team."

"It's a disappointing loss, but Southwest Missouri is deserving of a game for 28 straight," said Clemson Coach Cliff Ellis said. "I think we played a pretty good basketball game."

The Tigers led 46-45 on a pair of free throws by Larry Middleton with 7:59 remaining before the Bears made their run to victory.

The Tigers led 46-45, on two free throws by Larry Middleton with 7:59 remaining before the Bears made their decisive run. Garland, a 6-2 senior guard, hit a 15-foot jumper to give Southwest Missouri the lead for good at 47-46 and key a 6-0 run by the smaller Bears for a 51-46 lead with 6:27 left.

Clemson could never get closer than two points after that when Grant scored his only points of the half, two free throws — with 4:19 left to get within 52.

Garland, however, came right back with a 3-point field goal and then Robinson made a 12-footer and added two free throws for a 61-54 lead with 41 seconds left.

Robinson made all four of his shots from the field in the second half, including a 3-point field goal after making only one of three shots in the opening half.

Michael Brown, who hit two consecutive 3-point shots in the closing seconds, added 14 points for Clemson.

Broncos to face Huskies

SEATTLE (AP) — Boise State University's basketball team will take the field in the University of Washington here Monday night in the second round of the National Invitation Tournament, the NIT committee announced Friday.

The Broncos, 22-7 overall and 10-4 in the Big Sky conference, had finished second in Montana last weekend of the regular season, but lost in the conference tournament to Idaho State.

Idaho State went on to the NCAA Tournament, where it was defeated in the first round by No. 1-ranked Nevada on Thursday.

Boise State defeated Utah on Wednesday 62-61 in a first-round NIT game with the winning basket from Mike Sanor, whose younger brother, Jeff, is a freshman for the Huskies.

Washington, which lost in the first round to UCLA last weekend, defeated Montana State 98-90 in overtime in another first-round NIT game in Bozeman, Mont., last Wednesday.

This season marks Washington's third appearance in college basketball's NIT, and Boise State's first. The NIT is 80 years old in Seattle's 8,000-seat Hec Ed Pavilion.

Spartans fall to Rigby, 84-70

BOISE — Phase 2 of the Minico youth program came to an end Friday night, a little short of hopes, but definitely on its timetable.

The Spartans fell to third-ranked Rigby 84-70 here in a semifinal game of the Idaho Class A-1 high school basketball tournament, and must content themselves with playing the loser of Friday's late semifinal game between Meridian and Coeur d'Alene for the third-place trophy today at 11:55 a.m. in the Boise State University Pavilion.

Rigby, 24-4 and the defending state A-2 champion, will get a chance to win a state title in its first season as an A-1 school against the Meridian-Coeur d'Alene winner tonight at 8:30.

Fifth-ranked Boise and fourth-ranked Bonneville survived against cross-town rivals in Friday's loser-out games. Bonneville beat Idaho Falls 66-47 and Boise outlasted Borah 76-68 in overtime. The Braves and the Bees will play for the tournament consolation trophy this morning at 10:15.

Starting its usual lineup dominated by underclassmen, the unranked Spartans held an early advantage on the favored Trojans, but fell behind 15-13 about six minutes into the game and stayed there the rest of the night.

"We don't have any reason to feel disappointed," said Minico Coach

Craig Dexter, who won the Region III championship with a battalion that has just two seniors. "The effort was there. The determination was there. The kids showed great heart."

"We lost, but it was like somebody said here a minute ago, we are kind of classy. It has nothing to do with me," Dexter hastened to add, "but we've got some classy guys on this team."

The Spartans, who had beaten Rigby in Rupert in January and lost to the Trojans in Rigby last month, came out with one offensive hand at a time. Early on, it was sophomore forward Donny Poulton who hit Minico's first seven points and had 12 at the end of the first quarter. In the third quarter, junior center Kalen McKenzie hit nine of Minico's first 13 points, and in the fourth quarter junior point guard Jack Bagley took over the scoring leadership for the Spartans. Junior center Robert Greener, who ended the night with 12 points, was fairly consistent throughout. But in all junior guard James Christensen hit Minico's 65th and 66th points from the free throw line, only four Spartans had scored.

"I don't know how to explain that," said Dexter. "It's kind of the way it's been all year. I think it has to do with our youth and next..." See SPARTANS on Page B2.

Hopson, Buckeyes rip Kentucky, 91-77

By ED SHEARER
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Coach Gary Williams called it a "pretty normal" outing for Ohio State's Dennis Hopson, who scored 32 points, 28 in the final 25 minutes, as the Buckeyes trounced Kentucky 91-77 Friday night.

"What he did was pretty typical of this season," Williams said. "His rebounding was a little weak (six), but his passing was exceptional."

Hopson, second leading scorer in the nation with a 29.2 average, started his scoring bludge when Kentucky held a five-point lead and guided the Buckeyes into the second round of the NCAA Southeast Regional basketball tournament.

NCAA Tournament

"We were just going to come down and keep executing the offense until things went our way, and that's what happened," Hopson said.

It may have seemed typical to Williams, but it seemed exceptional to Kentucky Coach Eddie Sutton.

"We didn't control Hopson," Sutton said. "He's one of the most difficult players we've ever had to defend."

"We just didn't slow him down in the second stanza," Sutton added.

Gator switch trips up 'Pack, 82-70

By WILLIAM KATES

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — North Carolina State thought it had found the answer to Florida's zone early in the second half, but then the Gators switched to their one offensive hand at a time. Early on, it was sophomore forward Donny Poulton who hit Minico's first seven points and had 12 at the end of the first quarter. In the third quarter, junior center Kalen McKenzie hit nine of Minico's first 13 points, and in the fourth quarter junior point guard Jack Bagley took over the scoring leadership for the Spartans. Junior center Robert Greener, who ended the night with 12 points, was fairly consistent throughout. But in all junior guard James Christensen hit Minico's 65th and 66th points from the free throw line, only four Spartans had scored.

"Coach (Norm) Sloan said forget about the zone and man-to-man and press them up and down the court," said Vernon Maxwell, who scored 28 points.

"Me and Andrew (Moten) created something for the team. We caused turnovers and converted them on offense," Maxwell said.

"We made a few mistakes and they capitalized on them and the whole momentum of the game turned," said North Carolina State guard Viny Del Negro, describing how the Gators erased a nine-point Wolfpack lead with a 17-0 run midway through the second half.

Sloan said he thought about switching friends from North Carolina State and all the people I worked with — it's a basketball game," he said.

North Carolina State, which earned a berth in the tournament by winning the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, led 49-40 when Maxwell made a 3-point shot at the 12:09 mark.

The Gators, 22-10, reeled off 11 points in a 67-second span then continued their run until the Wolfpack's Quentin Jackson hit a pair of free throws with 7:07 to play and Florida led 57-51.

A 3-pointer at the 6:03 mark by Bennie Bolton, who led North Carolina State with 21 points, shaved the lead to 59-54, but the Gators responded with four quick points.

Maxwell, who was listed as a questionable starter because of a knee injury, was the main beneficiary of the switch. He scored 21 second half points off steals and fast break layups.

"I decided to forget about the knee and go out there and play," he said.

Despite beating the school he led to a national championship in 1974, Sloan said the spoils of victory were no sweeter than if he Florida had defeated another team.

NCAA: ACC teams continue to tumble

By The Associated Press

Darryl Joe took over as Louisiana State's starting guard in January. And Friday, he took over against Georgia Tech.

Tech's Bruce Dalrymple, who guarded the 6-foot-1 Joe in the first round of the NCAA Midwest Regional basketball tournament, just shook his head, after Joe hit seven 3-point baskets and finished with a career-high 28 points in LSU's 85-79 victory.

In the East region in Syracuse, N.Y. Friday, Norm Sloan's Florida Gators on Friday beat North Carolina State, the team he coached to the 1974 national championship, as an Atlantic Coast Conference team went down for the fourth time in six first-round NCAA Tournament basketball games.

Meanwhile, Southwest Missouri of the Mid-Continent Conference, the league that provided upset-minded Cleveland State in 1986, beat No. 13 Clemson of the ACC 65-60 in a Southeast Regional game.

Tigers Horace Grant, the ACC Champion of Year, was limited to only two second-half points.

Virginia lost to Wyoming 64-60 in Salt Lake City Thursday in the first round of the Western Regional.

The ACC, which along with the Big Ten and Southern Conference sent six teams to the tournament, did advance to No. 2 North Carolina and Duke into second-round action.

Joe, a junior college transfer, said he worked with Coach Dale Brown Thursday on his shot.

He told me to keep my elbows straight," Joe said. "I wasn't surprised today. They just were dropping."

Brown added, "Wa worked like heck, and today he was deadly."

Coach Bobby Cremins said Joe demolished his game plan.

"He was just killing us from the outside," Cremins said.

"He surprised us. When we saw him on film, he wasn't looking for that shot."

College basketball

Anthony Wilder added 20 points for 10-seeded LSU, which held off a late rally by seventh-seeded Tech, 82-76, to face second-seeded Temple, 32-3, in the tournament's second round Sunday at the Horizon in Rosemont, Ill.

Also in the East, Western Kentucky beat West Virginia 64-62 and host Syracuse, ranked 10th, beat Georgia Southern 79-73.

In other Southeast Regional games at Atlanta, No. 20 Kansas beat Houston 66-55, No. 4 Georgetown blasted Bucknell, 75-53, and Ohio State ripped Kentucky 91-77.

In the Midwest Regional at Rosemont, Ill., No. 8 Temple downed Southern University 75-56, St. John's nipped Wichita State 57-55 and host DePaul beat Louisiana Tech, 76-62.

In the West Regional at Tucson, Ariz., sixth-ranked Iowa crushed Sacramento State 82-66, while No. 12 South Carolina won 89-91 overtime victory over Arizona and No. 12 Pittsburgh trounced Marist 90-68. Later Friday, Oklahoma took on Tulsa.

Doug Lee scored 17 of his career-high 29 points in the second half to lead seventh-ranked Purdue past Northeastern. The Boiler-makers reached the 100-point mark for the first time this season.

Sacramento converted an in-bounds pass into a game-winning layup with one second left to give Western Kentucky its victory over West Virginia. With three seconds left, Johnson, a 6-foot-9 junior, had the shot blocked by Darryl Prue. On the next play, a punt shot from Prue fell in front and made a quick baseline move for the basket.

Syracuse got a scare from Georgia Southern, trailing 40-39 at the half. But the Orangemen pulled away in the second half for the victory led by senior guard Greg Monroe who scored 14 of his 16 points after Intermission. Center Rony Selkaly led Syracuse with 22. The Orangemen moved into Sunday's second round against Western Kentucky.

Reggie Williams scored 21 points and ignited Georgetown with 20 points of second-half action as the Hoyas trounced Bucknell for their 12th straight victory. Top-seeded Georgetown trailed the 16th seed 23-19 when the Hoyas made their move with 4:37 left before the half, running off 13 consecutive points within a 1:27 run. Georgetown's hero was junior jumper, Charles Smith hit a free throw and a layup off a steal and Williams connected on his first 3-pointer of another set.

Southern, which had scored 100 or more points in its previous five games, only 20 of 73 shots from the field as Perry and 6-foot-10 Ramon Rivas bottled up the inside. Southern's tallest starter is 6-7 Craig Pollard.

Marco Baldi, a 6-11 sophomore from Italy who was banned from last year's tournament for violating NCAA rules, made a 12-foot jumper with one second remaining to lift St. John's over Wichita State. Baldi was suspended prior to St. John's first-round game in 1986 against Montana State when it was learned by the NCAA he had accepted transporation expenses from an Italian pro club. His eligibility was restored last October.

Dallas Comegys scored 29 points and Rod Strickland, shaking off the flu, added 25 to help Dallas roll over the Dallas Mavericks Friday night.

The Hawks' All-Star forward had every reason to be tired, scoring 32 points in leading Atlanta to its ninth straight victory.

"It was a very hard-fought game," Wilkins said. "Dallas is very physical. You know they like to push you down low. But the way we played physically down the stretch, and forced some turnovers, we deserved to win."

"Atlanta just beat us tonight," Motta said. "I thought the intensity was there for both teams. Atlanta has the best one-to-10 man squad I think we have faced this season. I know they were the most physical team we have faced all year."

Dallas managed to tie the game twice in the third period, the last at 4:12 when guard Rolando Blackman hit two free throws to make it 68-68. Atlanta then took the lead for good by outscoring the Mavericks 12-7 for an 80-75 advantage at the end of the quarter.

In the fourth period, Mark Aguirre, who had 32 points, scored 10 straight as Dallas cut Atlanta's lead to 95-93 with 4:24 remaining. But the Hawks went on 10-4 for a 97-99 margin.

Detroit 100 Chicago 99
CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Laimbeer hit the second of two free throws with just four seconds left in the second half of the Western Athletic Conference regular-season champion, trailed 78-73 with 50 seconds left in regulation but forced the overtime at 79-79 on Jeep Jackson's 3-point goal with 26 seconds left and junior guard Chris Blocker's jumper with one second remaining. THE ACES

BOBBY WOLFF

"There is not a fiercer bell than the failure in a great object."
— John Keats.

Most people can be philosophical about the loss of a makeable game. But beware of the person who has lost a slam, especially if the slam went down because of a finesse that could not win.

South won his club king, drew trumps, cashed the club ace and led the diamond jack. "Without this finesse, we're lost," he said. East won his diamond king and switched to the spade king, and it was all over. South could discard one spade on a high diamond but eventually the defense got a spade trick for one down.

"You took a finesse that couldn't win," chastised North. "You lose the slam regardless of where the diamond king might be. If West has it, he covers your jack and you lose two diamonds. If East has it, you lose one diamond and one spade."

North's analysis was an accurate one; South took his diamond finesse the wrong way. Instead, he should win the second trump lead in dummy and lead a low diamond toward his jack. If East wins, South enjoys two spade discards on dummy's diamonds. If East makes a shrewd duck, it won't help him. A third round of diamonds ruffs out East's king and South gets a discard on dummy's diamond queen.

Vulnerable: Both
Dealer: South
The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♥	Pass	3♥	Pass
3♥	Pass	4♥	Pass
5♥	Pass	5♥	Pass
6♥	Pass	Pass	Pass

- ♦ K Q J 6
- ♥ 4 2
- ♠ K 10 9

ANSWER: Three no-trump. Four clubs is an alternative but the no-trump game might prove easier than five clubs.

Dawn of a New Age...

BERETTA

"From a design standpoint, Beretta has the bloodlines of it's "big brothers", Camaro and Corvette, born in the same studio. When you see this car on the road, you'll know it's something special. It has "presence". Beretta is a head turner. The car has a sleek, authoritative stance that will stand out in the crowd of fiercely competitive sporty cars. Jerry Palmer, Chief Designer of the Beretta.

CORSICA

If it had to be more than "just another car". We didn't create it in a vacuum. Corsica spent about four and one-half years in development. More than 10,000 people gave their opinions and input. The payoff is far more than just another car! The result is a car you can feel proud to drive down the street. It'll appeal to a wide variety of buyers because of it's sporty, youthful appearance and it's room inside. Don Lansky, Chief Designer of the Corsica.
