House raises Gem drinking age to 21 again

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho House has battled over raising the legal drinking age from 19 to 21 so much this session that members probably know all the arguments by heart. But they heard them again on Monday, as the House passed another drinking-age bill, 45-38, and sent it to the Senate. It was almost exactly the same as legislation which passed both chambers by close to two-thirds majorities, but was vetoed by Acting Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter. Again, the debate centered as much on states' rights as it on raising the legal drinking age. Idaho is one of a handful of states—mostly

Roll call — A3

In the West, which have refused to go along with a congressional mandate to raise the legal drinking age. Legislators have been advised that if they don't raise the drinking age to 21 this session, Idaho will lose about $4.5 million in federal highway funds this fall—and about twice that amount in succeeding years. Some House members battled for a bill similar to one which passed the Senate early in the session, but which was killed by a House committee. It also raises the drinking age to 21, but links the action to a lawsuit filed by South Dakota challenging the congressional mandate. That legislation says if the U.S. Supreme Court rules the congressional action was improper, then Idaho's legal drinking age would revert to 19. Minutes after the House approved the "clean" drinking-age bill, it defeated the alternate version, 44-37. But late in the afternoon, the House voted 41-40 to reconsider, then voted 46-34 to hold the alternative bill for Tuesday. "We should pass this legislation without regard to the federal blackmail issue," said Rep. Dean Sorensen, R-Boise, a surgeon. He argued again that raising the legal drinking age would inevitably cut highway deaths in that age group. "If we want our citizens to act responsibly, we should treat them as responsible citizens," said Rep. Dorothy McCann, D-Wallahe, opposing raising the drinking age. "We shouldn't be taking away their driving rights but we expect them to be responsible in all other ways." Some of the legislators arguing for holding the legislation for another day said they wanted to hear from a former South Dakota official who started the legislation. At a news conference, former South Dakota attorney general Mark Melehenry said states will see an erosion of rights if the federal government is successful at withholding highway monies from states that fail to raise the legal drinking age to 21. "You can't just pass the law (without repercussions)," said Melehenry. "You'll find pretty soon you have to dance to their tune." South Dakota Attorney General Roger Tellinghousen will argue the state's case before the U.S. Supreme Court April 27, and Melehenry said a decision is expected in July.

Crash kills trucker

3 others hurt in I-84 wreck

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — A Louisiana trucker died in a fiery crash on I-84, just west of the Ridgeway interchange in Jerome County Monday evening. Three other persons were injured in the wreck. Idaho State Police said a truck and semi-trailer unit hauling tomatoes from New Orleans, La., to Seattle, Wash., collided with a pickup truck at milepost 192, one mile west of Ridgeway Road about 6:30 p.m. Monday. The truck-tractor immediately burst into flames, trapping and fatally burning the driver. Another man in the truck was asleep in the sleeper and told officers he did not know what happened. However, he was able to escape the fire and was released after treatment. He was identified as Cecil Morrison of Louisiana. The identity of the driver was not released by state police Monday night. Two others, identified as Larry Loughmiller and Robert Loughmiller, apparently from the Twin Falls area, were treated for injuries at the Twin Falls Clinic Hospital. They were expected to be released later Monday night or early today. None of the three injured was seriously hurt.

The State Police dispatcher, Cpl. Lonnie Richards, said both westbound lanes of the Interstate were completely blocked for about an hour and a half but the inside westbound lane reopened at about 8:15 p.m. Officers said at that time they expected to have the wreckage cleared and both lanes opened to traffic within another two hours.

Richards said investigating officers reported both vehicles were westbound when the truck started to go around the pickup which was

Amnesty fee for aliens sought

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The administration Monday proposed a $185 charge for each of the millions of illegal aliens who are expected to seek amnesty under the immigration overhaul that President Reagan signed into law last November. Starting May 5, aliens who entered the United States illegally that eventually will lead to citizenship, even if they entered the country illegally. Commissioner Alan C. Nelson of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service said that families with dependent children will be charged a bargain rate of $42. Nelson announced the fees along with other long-awaited rule proposals for the immigration changes. In addition to providing amnesty for illegal aliens who moved to the United States before Jan. 1, 1982, the law also calls for civil and criminal penalties for employers who hire illegal aliens and enhanced enforcement of the law. The proposed rules will be subject to a 30-day comment period after they are published in the Federal Register, probably today. The final rules are not expected to be announced until early May. Despite protests from Hispanic

OK hair-grower, panel says

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A government advisory panel on Monday recommended approval of the first drug shown to make hair grow on bald men, but with the provision that doctors be instructed to tell their patients not to expect miracles. The panel of outside experts also told the Food and Drug Administration it expects the agency to closely monitor advertising of the product to make sure the manufacturer, Upjohn Co., does not overstate what the hair-grower can be expected to do. While an advisory committee's recommendation is not binding on the FDA, the agency typically follows its advice. C.C. Evans, the physician who heads the FDA's dermatology section, said he expects the drug to be approved in a few months. The Michigan company has been selling the drug — minoxidil — in Canada under the trade name Rogaine since last October and plans to market it in the United States as Rogaine. A one-month supply has been selling in Canada for about $45 in U.S. equivalent currency, but Upjohn officials declined to say how much it will cost in this country. To be effective, the drug must be taken indefinitely. If discontinued, the hair it has stimulated to grow falls out. Minoxidil has been used in tablet form for about 20 years as a treatment for high blood pressure, and the side effect of hair growth was noted in some patients. The hair-grower version is in ointment form and only 2 percent the strength of the pill. In reaching a unanimous decision to recommend approval, the five-member panel accepted Upjohn's finding that minoxidil indeed does stimulate hair growth and is relatively safe. However, the four-hour discussion that led to the decision was rife with skepticism over just how much hair minoxidil can grow, and on how many men. The consensus was that since the drug is unlikely to have serious side effects, and can help some people, there is no reason to keep it off the market. Upjohn officials acknowledged in their presentation to the panel that clinical trials indicated no more than half the people being treated with the solution

Fender flap fracas muddies path of highway bill through Congress

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate and House are clashing over how to deal with trucks that are splashing. It's a mud flap flap. The dispute is over an item that looks innocent enough in the multibillion-dollar highway bill. Much public interest in the bill, which Congress hopes to wrap up this week, centers on a provision that would allow motorists on certain highways to drive 65 mph, instead of the current 55 mph limit. To most of the high-powered lobbyists who spent the last three weeks in crowded hearing rooms watching congressional compromise-seekers strike deals on the legislation, the concern was how the money would be carved up. But the legislation's mud flap language is an example of how individual features of mammoth bills can have big economic consequences for specific groups. The dispute is among final differences between the two chambers as they struggle to agree to a compromise highway bill. Staff aides continued trying to find a solution Monday. "This issue is a 0.5 on a scale of 10 for the bill overall," said one congressional aide, who asked to not be identified. "But—for them it's an eight or nine." The "them" in this case is Rep. Bob McEwen, R-Ohio, and Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo. Their clash involves how to protect the safety of motorists whose visibility is hindered when passing trucks kick up cascades of water. The name the government has given to products that would limit this problem is splash and spray suppression devices. Danforth wants the government to issue regulations quickly requiring the devices and defining their performance standards. The only such federal rules now on the drawing board would give a virtual monopoly to the Monsanto Co. of St. Louis, Mo. "If McEwen has his way, the door to this mud flap market would be opened for smaller manufacturers, several of them in Ohio, where he is weighing a run for the Senate next year." "I don't think we ought to be making regulations forcing everybody out of business," says McEwen. Danforth: "Frankly, if our industry has deteriorated to the point where only one company can figure out how to build a better mud flap, we're in pretty bad shape." At stake is a potentially huge market for the flaps, which would cost about $200 to install for each truck.

Americans join with Irish in celebrating St. Patrick's Day

By The Associated Press

Americans become honorary Irishmen today, marking St. Patrick's Day with a massive parade down New York City's Fifth Avenue, the world's largest St. Patrick's Day parade. The parade will be held in Cleveland, Ohio, on the city's 225th anniversary. St. Patrick's Day parade will be dedicated to the 3,412 Congressional Medal of Honor winners, parade officials announced Monday. About 120,000 marchers led by the 69th Infantry Regiment of the New York National Guard were expected in Tuesday's parade honoring Ireland's patron saint. An anticipated 1 million spectators were expected to line the 42-block parade route under sunny skies. Organizers bill the New York City parade as the largest in the free world. This year's grand marshal is John E. Lowe, international president of the Transport Worker's Union. Honoring the Medal of Honor winners is in keeping with the parade's tradition of recognizing contributions made by native Irish to American freedom, said parade chairman Francis P. Belme. Of the 3,412 medal winners, 257 were Irish-born and 2,018 have Irish surnames, Belme said, adding the Irish-Americans represent the largest single nationality among Medal of Honor recipients. The Medal of Honor, America's highest military award, was first awarded during the Civil War to recognize valor. Along with revelers, 3,346 police officers were to ensure the parade remains a family affair. The tower of the Empire State Building will be bathed in green light to honor the day. Residents of Savannah, Ga., lay claim to nation's largest St. Patrick's Day celebration outside New York. The four-day event there, attended by a crowd estimated by police at 120,000 showed estimated 300,000 people, culminates Tuesday with the 163rd annual march through downtown. "We've got to go all lined up, we're ready to go," Harry Deal, assistant to the parade committee chairman, said Monday. The Irish in Cleveland began their annual parade in 1867, and about 10,000 people are expected to march today. Among those in the parade will be 79-year-old Hannah Byrnes, this year's Irish Mother of the Year.

Some communities celebrated early. A crowd estimated by police at 120,000 showed up Sunday in downtown Buffalo for the city's annual salute to St. Pat. Shamrock, Texas, a town of 3,500 that has a Blarney Stone imported from County Cork, Ireland, and is said to have been named by Irish railroad workers, gave a bash Sunday attended by about 10,000 people. The tiny West Virginia town of Ireland kicked off a week of activities over the weekend that will include a hike up a steep hillside Friday to put two pennies for good luck on the town's Blarney Stone.

Nothing startling in Iranian's messages, Fitzwater claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan recently received private messages from Iranian arms middleman Manucher Ghorbanifar, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Monday, but he indicated they bore no startling revelations.

"I don't have the specifics of the letters, but I'm told that they had nothing new in them. In terms of material information that would have cast new evidence or light on the case," Fitzwater said.

"We aren't confirming who they came from," Fitzwater said at a White House briefing when questioned about a report Monday in the Wall Street Journal.

The newspaper reported that a memorandum written by ABC-TV journalist Barbara Walters and relayed to the White House included an allegation by Ghorbanifar that payments were made to Iranian officials.

Ms. Walters, after interviewing Ghorbanifar in December on ABC-TV's "20/20" program, wrote the internal memorandum containing information that was not included in her broadcast, the newspaper said.

Richard Wald, an ABC News senior vice president, said Ms. Walters wrote the memo based on Ghorbanifar's private statements and other matters, and sent it to the White House and to ABC News editors.

The Journal quoted Ms. Walters as saying she felt it was important that the information reach the president, and she agreed to pass it on even though she "felt terrible." She also said she was preparing to broadcast information not disclosed in her earlier interview.

Ms. Walters was unavailable for comment Monday. ABC, in a statement from New York City, "confirmed" that after the December interview, "Mr. Ghorbanifar asked to speak to Ms. Walters again and asked that she send his views to the president."

"Believing that her information could be of assistance to the remaining hostages (held by pro-Iranian elements in Lebanon); and before 'forming' her management," Ms. Walters did that and also gave her information to the appropriate editors at ABC News," it said.

Ms. Walters and Wald said some of the material concerned alleged payments to an Iranian faction headed by Ayatollah Hossein Ali Montazeri, designated successor to the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. Wald characterized the information as "sort of inconclusive."

In other developments Monday:

• Congressional sources said House and Senate investigators are near agreement on a timetable for granting "limited immunity" from prosecution to central figures in the affair and are a so considering immunity for unnamed mid-level witnesses.

• A source familiar with Contra finances said the rebels, Lacoo with an impending cutoff in U.S. aid in 1984, were assured by retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord that Saudi Arabia would help. Later, between July 1984 and March 1985, $32.5 million was deposited in a Contra account in the Cayman Islands, according to records supplied by Contra official Bosco Matamoros.

The records say $2 million came from Swiss Bank Corp., and Matamoros said the remainder also came from foreign sources but the Contras have no documents to indicate their identity.

Flap

The government estimates that about 4.4 million trucks and trailers would need the flaps, but it figures that including costs of maintenance and decreased fuel efficiency, installation of the devices would cost $29 million. The American Trucking Association says the cost would be more like $1 billion.

McEwen has placed a provision in the highway bill that would prohibit federal regulation of mud flaps unless the government was certain that a device was available that would result in protecting the public from unreasonable risk of death or injury due to accidents resulting from splash and spray." Such a device would also have to be manufactured by at least three companies.

McEwen argues that the government's spray tests, conducted in a wind tunnel, don't mean anything in the real world of wind and gusty rain. The effect of his proposal would be to prevent the government from regulating mud flaps indefinitely.

The Transportation Department is deciding whether to make its proposed regulations official, or will them back and consider different devices.

"Holy Toledo," McEwen said when asked if his support for the amendment was motivated by his plans to run for the Senate next year. "I did this last year. I think the issue is right."

McEwen unsuccessfully sought a similar measure last year.

Danforth says he doesn't care which companies manufacture the devices, or even what kind of equipment is used. His position, supported by groups such as the American Automobile Association and the Center for Auto Safety, is that the McEwen amendment must be blocked, and rules issued as soon as possible.

Fee

groups, who complain that illegal aliens may not be able to pay the fees, Nelson called them "reasonable and fair." He said the fees protect "the taxpayer by ensuring that the costs of the program are covered by the anticipated revenue generated."

Nelson said the INS is preparing to handle about 2.9 million applicants, but he believes the actual figure will be closer to 2 million. He said that more than 100 special INS legalization offices will be open by May 5.

Under the terms of the law, those aliens seeking amnesty will have to file about $3 million applicants in the United States before Jan. 1, 1982, and that since then they have left for periods no longer than 45 days that total no more than 180 days.

The INS said the aliens will first have to prove their identities by producing such documents as a passport, a birth certificate, a national identity document bearing a photo and fingerprint, a driver's license, a marriage or baptismal certificate, or an affidavit.

To prove the length of residence, the INS advised aliens to collect documents such as employment records, tax returns, utility bills, children's school records, family medical records; receipts for money orders sent in or out of the country, bank records and tax receipts.

Nelson warned that any alien who failed to provide information about the trucking firm and the victim and his family could be prosecuted and deported.

been involved in persecuting anyone because of race, religion, nationality or political orientation; or if they are not self-supporting and have been recipients of cash welfare assistance.

Nelson said the aliens will be required to take medical examinations, which he estimated will cost them about $75 each. He said the government has not decided whether to test for AIDS, but said if someone is known to have it, the person would probably be rejected.

He said that employers must check every new employee to ensure he or she is a legal U.S. resident, regardless of his or her name, appearance or accent. Employers must begin checking June 1, but they must check every employee they hire since the law took effect Nov. 7.

Today's weather

Sunny, warmer today, but then clouds

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding: Sunny and warmer today. Highs in the 50s. Westerly winds from 5 to 10 mph. Increasing clouds tonight. Lows from 30 to 35. Partly cloudy Wednesday with a chance of showers. Highs in the 50s.

Camas Prairie, Halley and Lower Wood River Valley: Sunny today. Highs in the 50s. Increasing clouds tonight. Lows from 30 to 35. Partly cloudy Wednesday with a chance of showers. Highs near 50.

Northern Nevada and Utah: Variable clouds today through Wednesday with isolated lingering showers mainly in the mountains. Lows mostly in the upper 20s and low 30s. Highs mostly from the mid 40s to mid 50s.

Nevada — Increasing clouds with a few showers in the afternoon along the northern border. Increasing clouds tonight with a few showers along the northern border. Lows tonight from mid 20s to mid 30s and highs Wednesday from low 40s to low 50s.

Synopsis: The National Weather Service in Boise says a strong storm system centered over northeastern Arizona continued to cause cloudiness over much of south-central and southeastern Idaho Monday afternoon.

A weak disturbance moving over the northern half of the state brought clouds and showers to that area. Improving conditions are expected over the state today before another weather disturbance moves in from the north tonight.

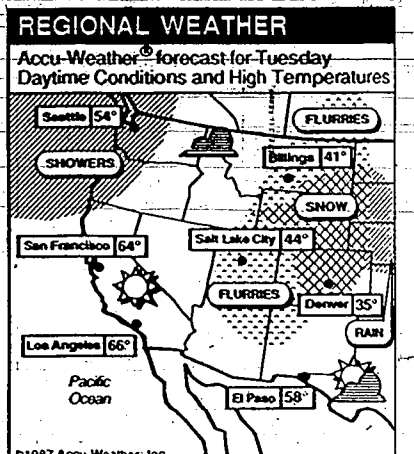

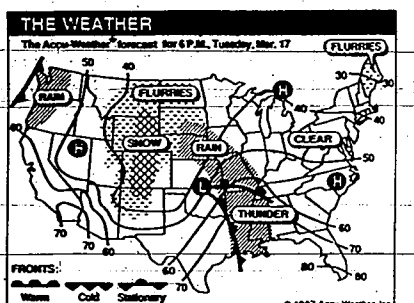

Mostly cloudy to overcast skies were the rule over much of the state Monday afternoon. Partly cloudy conditions were noted over parts of the southwest, however.

Precipitation was mainly confined to the north. Grangeville has received .94 inch since early Monday. Other amounts were generally less than a few tenths of an inch.

Brisk winds blew across the south Monday with speeds from 15 to 25 mph were common. Gusts to near 40 mph were recorded at Mountain Home.

The warmest temperature in the state Monday was 59 degrees at Payette, while Stanley and Diale each reported the state's low of 19 degrees.

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho — Thursday through Saturday, widely scattered showers. Thursday decreasing from the west. Friday, dry. Saturday, breezy Thursday and Friday.

Cool with highs in the 40s in the east to the mid 50s in the west. Lows mostly in the 20s in the east and the upper 20s to mid 30s in the west.

Elsewhere in the nation, Monday's high temperature was 87 degrees at McAllen, Texas; and the low was 3 degrees at Marquette, Mich.

Senate kills tort reform as compromise pressure builds

BOISE (AP) — Pressure for compromise legislation to resolve the liability insurance crisis intensified on Monday as a maneuver by Senate supporters of a House-passed plan ended in that specific bill being barred from further consideration this session.

"That makes all the more pressure on those negotiating a compromise to come up with something," Assistant Republican Floor Leader Michael Crapo of Idaho Falls said.

The bill backed by the Idaho Liberty Reform Coalition, which claims to be the largest lobbying group ever mobilized in Idaho, was rejected by the Senate Judiciary Committee on a 7-4 vote last Friday. It had earlier passed the House by a better than three-to-one margin.

Committee Chairman Roger Fairchild, R-Fruitland, cited severe technical flaws with the so-called tort reform package and pledged to develop a compromise that combined some of its provisions for reform of the civil court system with provisions for changes in insurance industry regulation.

He has been working with members on both sides of the issue to strike a compromise. Fairchild said, promising the alternative by Tuesday at the latest.

But on Monday, Sen. Rachel Gilbert, R-Boise, invoked a Senate ruling allowing a bill being held by a committee to be brought to the floor for immediate action on a majority vote. Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, R-Boise, countered with another parliamentary maneuver to block a vote.

Painting the confrontation as a challenge to the time-honored committee system of the Senate, Risch won assent by more than the two-thirds vote needed to bar any further attempts to bring the coalition bill to a floor vote. Only six senators backed Mrs. Gilbert — Republicans Larry Anderson of Twin Falls, Rod Beck of Boise, Jerry Hanson of Boise and Democrat Michael of Twin Falls and Democrats John Peavey of Carey and Bruce Sweeney of Lewiston.

The House-passed bill would have limited noneconomic damages that could be recovered in civil suits, barred double collections, allocated responsibility for injuries among the liable parties, restricted punitive damage claims, permitted time-payment of judgments and instituted a variable interest rate on unpaid judgments.

Supporters of that package blamed the unavailability or unaffordability of liability insurance on runaway juries and huge damage awards.

But critics of the bill contended there was no evidence that the kinds of dramatic changes it authorized in the court system would translate into a solution to the liability insurance crisis. The Trial Lawyers Association has blamed the crisis on the insurance companies and their practices over the past decade.

"We find there are problems in all areas, whether it be tort law, whether it be insurance companies, whether it be reinsurance, whether it be an attitude of our society," Fairchild said. "There is enough fault to go around."

House OK's legislation that clears the way for building of new prison

BOISE (AP) — Legislation clearing the way for construction of a new maximum security state prison scraped through the Idaho House on Monday.

The bill was close, despite an announcement by legislative leaders in January that they agreed with Gov. Cecil Andrus' approach to solving a critical prison overcrowding problem. Most of the objections were over the way the prison site was selected.

The resolution authorizing the project cleared the Senate 27-15, but barely made it through the House.

The House first approved, 53-41, a margin of a single vote. The House first approved, 53-41, a margin of a single vote, so the votes lost. Then the House voted 53-41 in reconsideration. But the second time around, the vote was 41-40, and the legislation was approved.

After much negotiation, Andrus, Senate President Pro Tem James Risch and House Speaker Tom Boyd announced in January they favored building a maximum security prison. It's to be located near the main prison, eight miles south of Boise.

Legislators battling against the proposal on Monday were from areas which were under consideration for the prison site, but which lost out.

Idaho is under a federal court order to reduce overcrowding in its prison system, a fact mentioned often in debate.

The resolution which was approved authorizes the state to negotiate a contract with a construction manager for planning, design, financing, construction and equipping of the prison.

Sponsors mentioned Boise-based Morrison Knudsen Co., Inc., the worldwide engineering and construction company, as the possible construction manager.

The state has $8 million appropriated last year for the project, and will have to borrow the rest.

Rep. Ernest Hale, R-Burley, argued that a proposed site near Burley would at least $1.5 million cheaper, because it would not need major water and sewer system improvements.

"There has been a lot of skulduggery going on over this," said Hale. The site should have been awarded a long time ago.

Rep. Jerry Deckard, R-Engle, chief sponsor, said, "This has nothing to do with the selection process. It has to do with building a facility that we all know we need," said Deckard.

With the $8 million on hand, Deckard said the state would have to borrow to meet the estimated $24 million cost of building the new prison, and enlarging facilities at Orofino to add 100 beds. Some opponents objected that the resolution set no limit on the spending, but Deckard said that's not his purpose.

He said if the resolution had a certain amount, that's what the bids would be.

"We do have a problem at the prison. This allows us to alleviate it," Deckard said. "If extended authorizations are not the most responsible approach," said Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, and Rep. Mack Nelbaur, R-Paul, said the state would save at least $15 million in interest with a pay-as-you-go approach.

Letters/Seat belts, environment, Claude Dallas prompt reader comments

Buckling up seat belt can save injury, death

March has been designated Buckle Up Month in the state of Idaho.

I am writing as an ardent believer in the use of the seat belt. I teach drivers education and defensive driving and see many films and statistics emphasizing seat belt safety.

I wear a seat belt in the car at all times and require my students to do the same. They create a habit I hope they will maintain as they continue to drive. What discourages me is the fact that parents fail to wear their seat belts and also fail to encourage their young people to remain in the habit.

Automobile manufacturers spend thousands of dollars to improve the safety of each vehicle. But most of this research and equipment is worthless unless the passengers remain in the protection of the car by the use of seat belts.

Magic Valley, please buckle up! It's the law. Needless injury and death can be reduced or eliminated. Please buckle up. We care.

Dallas had a single problem: importance

To all you folks out there who feel Dallas is a hero.

Dallas' only problem was he felt he was more important than anyone else. In other words — "The law" for weaklings. If anyone gets in my way, that's their problem."

My question is, "What's going to keep you or a loved one from getting in one of those Dallas' ways? How you going to feel then?"

Real dairy products don't mean additives

Dairy products and additives: Have you checked what you are buying in dairy products? These are some of the preservatives you'll find: ice cream, whipping cream, mono-diglycerides, guar gum, calcium sulfate, carob gum, polysorbate to, carotennum, and gelatin. Also when buttered milk. Bear in mind on the side of box or label, you will find the Real Seal.

Our dairy products should be real, not a bunch of preservatives and additives.

Do they thin the whipping cream down to the point it won't whip, then put gelatin in so it will? All the rest

Let's preserve to make shelf-life longer

We're not getting fresh products. This all takes place in a land of plenty.

Let's let our state government, our representatives know we want the Real Seal to mean just that. Let's keep dairy products just that way.

I don't make sense to pay support prices to dairy farmers. Let resellers and wholesalers bottle and sell a product whipping cream that won't do what it's supposed to, without gelatin to hold it together instead of rich enough cream to whip. We Americans don't know what real things are. Real doesn't mean additives.

Nation could use pair of presidents at once

What this country needs is two presidents... Jimmy Carter would be great for business and Ronnie Reagan could look after social affairs.

Or... scares the hell out of me that one morning I would wake up in America because our president forgot.

And for the conservatives: Howard Baker is one of those rascals who gave the Panama Canal to the Panamanians. Has he plans to give the Suez Canal to the Suezians. If the chief executive gives her OK? Perhaps this is enough to get the red back into your neck.

INEL may become front for future troubles

When I read what Harlan Summers, INEL tour director, had to say, ("We have to be realistic." "We may not get it — it's such a political plum that everybody wants it.") I wondered why anybody in Idaho would want a bigger nuclear waste dump than we already have.

After hearing over the local TV network, some time ago, about toxic waste being shipped in to INEL for testing (?) I thought it would be the concern of many, yet — nothing was said.

I have the sinking feeling that INEL (or rather Idaho) will become a catch-all for more toxic and nuclear waste and the super conducting super collider, little more than a front offering numerous future possibilities.

Letters/Censorship is not 'judgment' regarding Doonesbury deletion

Doesn't buy the explanation

Re: editorial judgment dropped Doonesbury.

Sorry, I don't buy it. Censorship is censorship and your decision to call it "judgment" will not eliminate the fact that you have forced your moral values on every citizen in the Magic Valley.

In my memory, I recall when you, as the editorial staff of The Times-News, requested input from your readers to aid in determining which strips should appear in your paper on a daily basis. Doonesbury was one of the winners.

It would appear to me that it was at this time that the "judgment" call regarding the printability of the strip was determined. In light of this, it seems to me, as an intelligent individual, that your statement "The editors of The Times-News... make judgments every day on the fitness of what is disseminated to the public." is at best invalid and, more likely, totally hypocritical.

I say this due to the fact that on Friday the 13, when you chose not to run Doonesbury in your opinion, "when a comic strip is no longer comic," as your subject matter seems to have little redeeming value... you did find it totally appropriate to print the statement "...if you suspect your daughter is already sexually active or about to be — I hope you have discussed with her the importance of safe sex..." which appears in Dear Abby.

This draws to mind the question that if "several readers" (which I strongly suspect are also some of your biggest advertisers) were to complain about quotes attributable to our community leaders, if your decision not to cover or report on those people in the future, it even for a brief period of time, would be the same?

In short, gentlemen, if in the future your "judgment" forces you to use censorship, at least have the intestinal fortitude to call it censorship.

By the way, as of today you owe my paper a $5 writer.

KENT CRAMER

Why a selective conscience?

So it finally comes out. All of your posturing in your editorials about freedom of expression was only "sound and fury, signifying nothing." When your bottom line was threatened, you turned and ran. It turns out that the only freedom of expression you are really concerned about is that of your paper, not that of your readers, nor that of Garry Trudeau as a writer.

The subject of "safe sex" is not one that we can afford to put our heads in the sand about. The problems will not simply disappear if we pretend they are not there.

Humor is one way of bringing knowledge to people. They may laugh initially, but eventually they will think about what they have read. Or they may be shocked and horrified initially, but they will still think about it.

We have the right to be educated about something that is threatening to our very lives, and you have the responsibility to educate us. If you do not accept that responsibility, your very reason for existence is gone.

In my opinion, the cartoon in the classified section in The Far Side, which I generally enjoy, was in much poorer taste than Doonesbury had been up until you chose to pull it. What do you think those bulls were going to do with that blow-up cow anyway? Probably the same thing people do with their blow-up dolls? Why was your conscience so selective? And why did it get selective in the middle of the series instead of at the beginning? If you have qualms about the way something is going to be received by your readership, why were those qualms not present from the beginning?

I think it should take much more than the threats of a few members of the "moral majority" to cancel their subscriptions to make you give up your principles. Freedom of expression is for everyone, or it soon will not be available to anyone.

Thanks, at least, for the freedom of expression opportunities you provide for us in your letters to the editor column.

This strip can be eliminated

Congratulations on eliminating Doonesbury for a few days. As far as my husband and I are concerned, you can eliminate it — period.

Or perhaps Trudeau is taking so much rope he's going to end up in hanging himself. The subject of AIDS and condoms is not one for public humor, let alone for children. And children, being children, are going to read the "funny papers."

Certainly Trudeau is not contributing to sex education when he has to dip into the shabby and, yes, sad side of sex to hold the public's attention.

Again, congratulations.

Moral stand is funnier yet

What is going on here? I was reading my paper today and what do I find — "No Doonesbury." Needless to say, I was furious.

Today in the paper I read an article that says it was an editorial judgment.

Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Howard claim they censored the strip because of complaints from readers. Since when have readers' complaints stopped you before? After years of printing things that offend readers, you decide to take a moral stand — and on a comic strip no less. I find your moral stand funnier than the strip itself.

I can't help but wonder what comic strip

Selection of choices offered

The way I look at it, you've got three choices:

A) Mail us a xerox copy of the missing (censored!) issues of Doonesbury (including this Sunday's, if you decide to mix it, too);

B) Recant your untenable position of denying subscribers the full benefit of your newspaper (most of which has always been on the funny pages anyway) by printing an update of Doonesbury; or

C) Send us a refund of our subscription charges (paid in advance, of course) back through last Thursday and strike us from your mailing list.

Now that's even more than you give your readers who have always been able to read; or b) not read any part of the paper that might offend them.

Letters/Constitution's anniversary more than a celebration

Event time for rededication

"The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what we did here..." (Gettysburg Address) This statement has as much truth and meaning for each of us today as it did when President Lincoln gave this speech.

"We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union..." The Constitution is not something that was done but something that is happening. It was never intended to be a static concept but a living, evolving process of people working together for the common good of all.

The originators of this document knew in and of itself our Constitution was not an end to all problems but a seed which with thought, love and care could produce a new direction and new concepts for people living in a more perfect union. For this reason the greatest power and highest officeholder of our government has been entrusted to the spirit to our founding principles. Let us remember and keep alive the spirit of '76, and increase our awareness and commitment to the principles of '87.

My thanks to the College of Southern Idaho and those who worked in putting together the 1987 Snake River Symposium, a Bicentennial Commemoration of the United States Constitution. My thanks and appreciation also to Rep. Richard Stallings, Justice Robert Rutledge and all those in attendance for the sharing of your time, thoughts and experiences.

I hope throughout this year there will be a continual growth of interest and activities within our community to stimulate interest, conversation and education into the workings of our governing process. There are no guarantees or even remote probabilities of its survival without each of us.

I have enjoyed the benefits of being a citizen of the United States but have done poorly at being a responsible citizen. I would like to do better and I need your help. Joining together and guided by our founding principles I know we all can find pride and satisfaction in being part of this evolving process of forming a more perfect union.

See what judiciary is up to Previous commentaries have been closely connected to the executive and legislative branches of state government because that's where the action is during the legislative session. However, we should not forget about the third branch of government, the judiciary, and see what it has been up to lately.

The lack of enforcement of corrective measures is carried to a high degree of refinement in Idaho through the Judicial Council. The Judicial Council consists of seven members, composed of three attorney members appointed by the Idaho State Bar; one of whom shall be a district judge; three non-attorney members appointed by the governor. The seventh member is the chief justice of the Supreme Court.

The Judicial Council is, among other things, charged with recommending the removal, discipline and retirement of judicial officers.

Now we are getting to the heart of the problem. Can you imagine that it might be a little difficult for the four majority members who are attorneys, a district judge and the chief justice to take strong, or any, disciplinary action against a judge or another member of the Supreme Court?

Here is a prime example. A formal complaint was filed with the Judicial Council in December 1985, alleging that a justice of the Supreme Court was involved in activities outside the realm of judicial duties in conflict with the separation of powers and many canons of ethics promulgated by the Code of Judicial Conduct. According to the complaint, the action was filed prior to the legislative session so that if amendatory legislation was needed after a decision was rendered there would be plenty of time to take care of it before the Legislature adjourned.

Are you surprised, that even after urging by attorneys and members of the Legislature, the Judicial Council did not act on the matter until May 15, 1986, two months after the Legislature adjourned?

The decision was that the Judicial Council did not feel that the allegations constituted a violation of the Code of Judicial Conduct. And isn't it strange that the chief justice withdrew from the hearing because of a "conflict of interest." Naturally there would be.

Many attorneys in Idaho were urging the Legislature to lend support to the case, but not one attorney was willing to lodge a complaint themselves, for fear of reprisal by the judiciary.

So now we have come full circle. The Judicial Branch of our state government has a protective coating that apparently can't be cracked. Think about it.

Fallout from right-to-work

Last November the Republican Party, that great champion of the working class, gave us something called the right-to-work-for-less law. We were told that this would be a great help to the working people of Idaho.

It would not lower wages. The head dude of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce got so carried away, he said it would raise wages by bringing in thousands of new jobs into the state. There would be a shortage of workers and employees would have to raise wages in a bidding war for employees.

Independent Meat Company of Twin Falls has given its employees the opportunity to exercise their right-to-work for 15 percent less pay. The company stated that it has plenty of seams to take the jobs of any of its employees who do not wish to exercise their right-to-work-for-less law. The company says that it needs to buy new machinery and will allow the employees to buy the new machinery for them.

The company has refused to disclose its profits. Now we learn the company, instead of giving us locally raised meat, they are importing meat from Australia and New Zealand.

I have bought my last Falls Brand meat or anything else sold by the Independent Meat Company. This would be a great time for the Republican legislators and most of the newspapers, including The Times-News, who championed the right-to-work-for-less law, to interview the employees of Independent Meat Co., for their feelings about the right-to-work-for-less law now that they have had the opportunity to receive the benefits first hand from it.

House turns down anti-terrorist legislation with 52-31 vote

BOISE (AP) - The Idaho Legislature's attempt to send a "message" to racist and terrorist organizations went down to defeat on Monday.

Legislators complained that although the intent of an anti-terrorist bill was good, the legislation was poorly drafted and could abridge the constitutional rights of people to own and bear arms.

"We don't want to lose any more business because people think Idaho is a state which loves Nazis, because we don't," said Rep. Tom Giovanelli, D-Coeur d'Alene, chief sponsor.

The vote was 52-31 against the bill. All 20 House Democrats voted for the legislation, because it came from Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus, but they were joined by only 11 of the 64 House Republicans.

Legislators complained that although the intent of an anti-terrorist bill was good, the legislation was poorly drafted and could abridge the constitutional rights of people to own and bear arms.

perly owners prove they were innocent to avoid forfeiture.

It has the potential for great abuse," said Simpson, contending that in 14 states with similar legislation, there never has been a conviction for anti-terrorist activities.

Giovanelli disputed that, saying a Florida law had been used to convict two men of terrorism.

Although not mentioned by name, sponsors indicated the legislation was aimed at the "white supremacist, Aryan, National Church of Jesus Christ Christian, centered at Hayden Lake."

But he said the measure was badly written. "It is terribly, fatally flawed and it will not accomplish the goals we intend," said Hooper.

If the Legislature wants to send a message, said Simpson, the Legislature should write a letter, not enact questionable felony laws.

Simpson and other members said the National Rifle Association opposes the legislation, saying it could abridge important constitutional rights to own and bear arms.

But Giovanelli contended the bill will not change or affect those constitutional rights. "It's too risky to fundamental rights that we pass legislation that violates essential rights we have as American citizens," said Rep. Robert Fry, R-Horsehoe Bend.

of the organizations involved "hurts people where it hurts the most -- in their pocketbooks."

In response to arguments that similar laws haven't been used in other states, Rep. Steve Herndon, D-Sandpoint, said, "I hope it sends such a message that we don't have to use it."

That's the only way we are going to get them as an organization out of the state -- by bankrupting the organization.

"If they want to use their compound at Hayden Lake (for illegal activities) then they should have to forfeit the compound," he said.

Jones urges federalism focus

BOISE (AP) - A group working to improve federal-state relations has agreed to Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones' suggestion to allow state attorneys general to participate in an effort to reestablish federalism.

Jones last week participated with Connecticut Attorney General Joe Lieberman and U.S. Justice Department representative Eugene Hickock in a panel on federalism.

Hickock has worked with President Reagan's Working Group on Federalism, charged with improving federal-state relations.

Jones said the group has recommended Reagan issue a comprehensive executive order outlining guidelines to be followed by federal agencies undertaking actions that could affect states' authority.

He said he urged the group to bring attorneys general into drafting the executive order.

Group expects grant funds

BOISE (AP) - The Idaho Commission for Children and Youth expects to receive $129,000 in federal grant money to improve the state's juvenile justice system.

The commission is seeking grant proposals from local governments and state agencies for the money it anticipates from the U.S. Justice Department's Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention.

Commission Administrator Sharon H. Hixon said the grant funds will be used to improve juvenile programs and rehabilitation.

The maximum for any single grant is $15,000.

Montpelier gets state grant

BOISE (AP) - The city of Montpelier has received $13,065 in state grant funds for its wastewater treatment facility. Gov. Cecil Andrus has announced the grant.

The money will be drawn from the state's Water Pollution Control Fund and will be used to design new structures to upgrade Montpelier's system, including an outfall line to the Bear River.

The total cost of the project is $17,420, with the city paying for the balance.

Choir travels to Philadelphia

POCATELLO (AP) - Dan Bowman says his favorite thing about being choir director at Pocatello High School is "what the music does for the kids, and where it takes them."

This summer, their vocal skills may take them to Philadelphia and Washington, D.C., where they've been asked to represent Idaho at the celebration of the bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

For Bowman, having his choir selected last fall was a great honor. A choir and band from each state were requested for the "We the People 200 Festival of the States." Each of the 50 states has its own day of recognition, Idaho's is in June. Another performer ance is slated in the nation's Capitol Building.

The PHS choir was the first to be offered this honor in Idaho. Several bands were given the chance to participate, and Burley finally accepted.

Each side says it got what it wanted. For the mayor, it's a contingency fund to give him flexibility in administering municipal affairs and to continue working to improve Pocatello. City Council members received assurances they would be kept informed of special projects and programs.

They will also get a chance to vote whether to go along with Finlayson's spending recommendations.

A negotiating session, termed a "trip to the woodshed" by Council President Earl Pond, was called 10 days ago. Council members voiced concern that Finlayson was undertaking too much without council approval. They wanted to know where the money was coming from.

State official suspended

BOISE (AP) - The chief of the Idaho Communications Bureau has been suspended with pay pending an investigation into his official conduct, said Department of Administration Director Lorin Nelson.

Nelson said Monday Bureau Chief William J. DeZonia had been suspended as of Friday. DeZonia on Monday declined comment on the suspension.

Nelson said an internal investigation is underway and would be concluded within 30 days.

The Communications Bureau, which is under the Department of Administration, oversees the state's telephone and radio operations.

Men face gun, drug charges

BOISE (AP) - Two men accused of trading heroin and cocaine for guns found for Mexico will go on trial May 19 in U.S. District Court in Boise.

Jose Moises Rodriguez-Machado and Gorgonio Carrasco-Lujan, both citizens of Mexico, will be tried for exporting guns and conspiracy. They earlier were indicted by a federal grand jury.

The indictment accuses them of arranging the exportation of automatic and semi-automatic guns to Mexico from March through August 1987 without obtaining a license to export weapons.

As part of the conspiracy, the pair traded cocaine, heroin and U.S. currency for firearms, the indictment said.

They were arrested Aug. 17 at the Rexburg airport after delivering 29.4 ounces of heroin and 23 ounces of cocaine to U.S. customs undercover agent Michael McCauley, according to court records.

New school tax bill put on hold

BOISE (AP) - Like a lot of proposed tax changes which have surfaced in the Idaho Legislature this year, members of the House Revenue and Taxation Committee say they like the concept of a tax bill authored by Rep. Raymond Parks, R-Blackfoot - but now is not the time for it.

The committee on a voice vote decided Monday to hold Parks' suggestion to change local school financing from property taxes to income taxes. That's usually a killing motion, and it means Parks' proposal has suffered the same fate for two consecutive sessions.

State tourism dollars discussed

BOISE (AP) - Idaho's losing a lot of recreation dollars to neighboring eastern Washington's horse racing tracks, say northern Idaho state legislators.

Rep. Hilde Kellogg, R-Post Falls, on Monday won preliminary approval from a House committee for her proposal to legalize pari-mutuel wagering on dog races.

As proposed, the legislation would not permit dog racing events within 100 miles of cities which conducted pari-mutuel horse racing last season.

Rep. Emerson Smock, R-Boise, noted that all the horse racing tracks in Idaho are in the southern part of the state, so the bill would not prevent dog racing in northern Idaho.

Parks argued that property taxes are not a fair way of financing schools. Basing taxes on income would be more equitable, and would greatly expand the tax base, he contended.

But committee members said they thought school financing would become enormously complicated and expensive if the state Tax Commission had to calculate different tax rates for each of the 116 school districts.

Opponents suggested turning the proposal over to an interim study committee on the state tax system, with hopes that its impact on each school district could be calculated before the idea is brought to the Legislature again.

Jerry Evans, state superintendent of public instruction, said he neither favored nor opposed the idea, but said it would have enormous complications on school financing.

As the discussion moved toward other possible changes in school financing, such as removing the local responsibility completely, Evans said that wouldn't be a good idea.

Evans said the Parks proposal could cause even more problems in equalizing school funding.

ISAA backs raising of speed limit

BOISE (AP) - The Idaho State Automobile Association, which has played a major role in urging highway safety, has endorsed federal legislation to raise the 55 mile-an-hour speed limit on interstate highways.

"We believe the 55 mph speed limit should be modified," Dick Navarro, president of the association, said in the AAA's spring newsletter.

"A relaxation of the speed limit on interstate freeways would not have a negative impact on highway safety," Navarro said. "It would, however, greatly reduce travel time, fatigue and boredom."

He said various studies have shown that excessive speed has been the main cause of accidents less than a percent of the time while fatigue and drinking have combined to cause over half of all accidents.

The endorsement of the higher speed limit came as the U.S. House of Representatives planned to debate on Wednesday and then vote on Senate-approved legislation allowing the speed limit on rural interstates to be increased to 65 mph.

That provision has been added to multibillion-dollar federal highway construction bills, needed by Idaho and other states to underwrite pressing road improvement projects. But it was the debate over the higher speed limit that killed the road-funding measure last fall.

Navarro contended that the current 55 mph limit is generally being ignored by the motoring public, citing Idaho State Police figures indicating Idaho drivers are complying with the limit only 48 percent of the time on the state's freeways.

Whoopi Goldberg presented dyslexic achievement award

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What does comic actress Whoopi Goldberg have in common with fairy tale writer Hans Christian Andersen?

Both were dyslexic, and now Miss Goldberg has received the Hans Christian Andersen Award for outstanding achievement by a dyslexic.

"Dyslexia, a learning disorder that makes its victims see letters and numbers backward, strikes 15 percent of the population. Some of its victims have been misdiagnosed as retarded."

"After years of being considered as retarded, I think I am doing pretty good," Miss Goldberg said Sunday after receiving the award from last year's winner, TV producer Stephen J. Cannell.

The awards benefit the Landmark School West, which provides special education for those with learning disabilities.

Miss Goldberg was also presented a special proclamation from Mayor Tom Bradley declaring Sunday as Whoopi Goldberg Day in Los Angeles.

Former Black Panther leader describes deal

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Former Black Panther leader Huey Newton says his imprisonment on a gun charge was an empty victory for prosecutors.

Newton, who had agreed more than a decade ago to serve two years in jail.

He told the San Francisco Chronicle in a jailhouse interview published Monday that the deal was made after his return from Cuba, where he had lived from 1974 to 1977.

Faced with charges in the shooting of a 17-year-old girl and an assault on his tailor, Newton said his attorney struck a deal with prosecutors in which Newton would spend two years in jail, and the murder and assault charges would be dropped.

"Not that I was guilty of anything," Newton said, "but I knew it would cost me half a million dollars to fight the charges."

He said the deal fell through when prosecutors decided to try the case. He was acquitted on the assault charge and two jurors failed to reach a verdict in the killing.

Newton was ordered to prison last week to start serving a sentence of 16 months to three years on a gun-possession charge stemming from the assault case.

"After 10 years, we wound up two years anyway, after fighting in the court system for years on a matter that could have been settled," Newton said.

America's Cup turns to gold for skipper Conner

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The sterling silver America's Cup has turned to gold for skipper Dennis Conner, whose Stars & Stripes crew beat the Australians to bring the sailing trophy back to the United States.

Since the victory in February, Conner has scheduled 30 to 40 personal appearances that will pay from $10,000 to $20,000 each, said Sandy Montag.

Conner has done commercials for Wheaties, Disneyland, Izod clothes, American Express, Ray-Ban sunglasses and Sperry Top-Sider shoes.

He has a contract with "Good Morning America" and there are about 10 other offers in the final stages, according to Montag.

"Right now, he's as hot as John Madden, although not as experienced. The offers and calls never stop," Montag said.

Montag believes that Conner's loss to the Australians in the 1983 America's Cup races increased his commercial appeal.

"He became a national hero" by winning the cup back, Montag said.

Sinatra plans to appear at Palm Springs benefit.

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Frank Sinatra, back home after his third operation since November, plans to appear in about two weeks at a benefit, his publicist says.

Sinatra, 71, was released Saturday from Eisenhower Medical Center in neighboring Rancho Mirage, said spokesman Leo Solters.

At the hospital, the singer had minor surgery to remove scar tissue from an earlier abdominal operation.

"He even drove home himself, proving the hospitalization was minor. It was a little like going to the dentist only less painful," Solters said.

Sinatra was stricken with diverticulitis while performing last year at the Golden Nugget in Atlantic City, N.J. He underwent surgery for intestinal inflammation in November and in January.

He plans to appear March 28 at a benefit for the Palm Valley School in Palm Springs, Solters said.

Woman pleads guilty to selling singer drugs

LONDON (AP) — A 23-year-old woman was sentenced Monday to two years' probation after pleading guilty to supplying heroin to pop star Boy George.

Anna Katrina Tinnaung, an unemployed musician, acted as go-between for the Culture Club lead singer and his drug supplier, Stephen Lublin. Lublin and Diane Felner were sentenced earlier this month to four years for conspiracy to supply heroin to Boy George.

Prosecutor Edward Brown told the court that in April 1985, the singer, who is suffering withdrawal symptoms and asked Ms. Tinnaung to obtain heroin for him. She then bought 100 pounds ($137 worth) and delivered it to Boy George.

In July, she bought more heroin for the singer at his request, Brown said.

Defense lawyer Rock Tanczy said his client was "clearly a caring, kind and compassionate woman swept along by a group and the needs of others."

Last July, Boy George agreed to undergo drug addiction treatment after being convicted of possessing heroin and fined $20 pounds ($325).

Last week, police charged Boy George with possessing less than an ounce of marijuana. The 25-year-old singer, who has entered no plea, is awaiting a court appearance on the charge.

King changes ways after heart attack

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Talk show host Larry King said the heart attack he suffered last month has taught him a lesson in survival: He quit smoking, changed his diet and began regular exercise.

"I'd have to be an idiot to ignore what this is telling me. This is a great lesson, a painful lesson if you can live through it. I'm lucky," King said in a telephone interview from his Arlington, Va., home with the Los Angeles Herald Examiner.

In the interview, published Monday, he said King said he once thought life had granted him immunity.

"I was indestructible," he said. "I was going to live to 80 or 90, pain-free."

But now he figures his Feb. 24 coronary was "just a warning" to happen. He was a 33-year three-pack-a-day smoker and workaholic who rarely exercised and paid no attention to his diet. Also, there was his family history: His father died of a heart attack at age 44 when King was 10.

But King seemed in excellent health with no problem doing his nightly interview show for Cable News Network and four-hour radio stint on the syndicated "Larry King Show" when he developed pains in his right shoulder last month.

He said he drove himself to George Washington University Hospital in Washington, D.C., and was told he was having a mild heart attack.

He quit smoking, cut out fried food, salt and most cholesterol. His radio show has been trimmed from four hours to three.

Finally, he has begun exercising regularly, taking two walks a day.

Jurors show sympathy for young victim

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jurors who convicted a man of child molestation were so sympathetic to the 9-year-old victim and impressed by her testimony that they plan to use some of their court pay to take her out for a day of shopping and lunch.

"I think the jury just felt very compassionate," Judge Suzanne Forsyth said Monday in a telephone interview. "They are to be commended in the way they approached the child after the trial."

The six men and six women on the Bartholomew Circuit Court jury at Columbus announced their plan after convicting Danny Wood, 26, of Columbus, the girl's stepfather, on two counts of child molesting earlier this month.

Wood faces up to eight years in prison on each count. Judge Trautman postponed a sentencing hearing scheduled Monday until a presentence evaluation can be conducted.

She said the jurors did not consult her about their plan.

"I think the jurors reacted because they listened intently and heard a tragic story of a young girl who has had a lot to deal with," the judge said. "In addition to considering the evidence in the trial, they developed compassion for the victim."

"I think the jury developed admiration for this girl because she is a survivor. She has lived in 30 places during her nine years, attended many different schools, but has developed as an individual despite a lot of disruptions," the judge said.

Each of the 12 jurors and one alternate pledged some of the reimbursement they received, which totaled $1,327.50, to take the girl to lunch and on a shopping trip March 20.

"The little girl who has led such a horrendous life the last several years, we felt anything we did for her would be a help," juror Nelson Stewart told The Indianapolis Star.

Columnist to undergo surgery

CHICAGO (AP) — Irv Kupcinet, a Chicago Sun-Times columnist, will undergo surgery Tuesday for a benign growth, his assistant said.

Kupcinet, 74, was in good condition Monday, said Northwestern Memorial hospital spokeswoman Pat Miller.

The columnist's assistant, Estella Foster, said Kupcinet entered the hospital Tuesday, and that a biopsy Friday indicated the small growth in the rectal area was not malignant.

Kupcinet began his "Kup" column in 1943. His "Kup's Show" television talk show, which appeared in as many as 150 markets, ran for 27 years until last year, when Kupcinet decided to cut down on his schedule.

Idaho's old penitentiary is being preserved by the Idaho State Historical Society

Housed Idaho prisoners 1872 to 1974

Old penitentiary reveals prison history

By CHARLES HILLINGER
Los Angeles Times

BOISE — Eyeing the huge hook hanging from the ceiling, the dangling rope, noose and trap door at the gallows in the old Idaho penitentiary, former warden Orvil E. Stiles recalls the state's last execution.

"I was here with Raymond Snowden 30 years ago on the last day of his life," Snowden murdered a woman in Garden City bar. He prayed alone with me. Then he was led into this room. He was the calmest man in the execution chamber, far calmer than I was."

Stiles, 73, spent nine years as chaplain at the Idaho penitentiary. He was chaplain at the time of Snowden's execution and later became warden. He was both the warden and a Baptist minister at the same time.

The old penitentiary on the east end of Idaho's capital city was home to 1,000 prisoners, 215 of them women, from 1872 to 1974 when a new penitentiary was opened.

The plan was to demolish the complex of sandstone buildings when the penitentiary was vacated. But the Idaho State Historical Society was granted permission to preserve the historic prison as a permanent exhibit of the changing nature of penitentiary philosophy and practices during the past century.

When the last prisoners walked out, the Historical Society walked in — opening the prison seven days a week for public visitation. Guided tours are conducted through cell blocks, death row, the gallows, laundry, women's prison, cannery, license plate factory, shirt and shoe factories, dining hall and other buildings by former guards and wardens and occasionally even former inmates.

An area referred to as the "hole" or "Siberia," where prisoners in isolation ate and slept, consisted of 12 cells, each 3/4-foot-wide and 6 feet long, with one small hole for ventilation.

"When we were on duty in the vicinity of Siberia we could hear prisoners in the hall screaming and yelling their heads off," said former guard Jim Howland, 58. "It was an awful place to be cooped up."

Stiles vividly remembers his first day as warden, Sept. 15, 1967: "I gathered all the prisoners together and announced that no one would be confined any longer in Siberia. I told the prisoners if a dog had been put in one of those cells, the humane society would have you jalled. I got a standing ovation."

In recent years, Stiles has been chaplain at the Idaho State Veterans Home. He frequently conducts tours through the old penitentiary because he believes it is important for people to see what life was like behind prison walls.

Every year about 7,000 Idaho elementary and high school students make field trips to the old penitentiary. Teacher Dick Newton, 46, has been taking his fourth-grade classes through the penitentiary ever since it was first opened to the public.

"Touring the penitentiary fits in beautifully with the history class," he said. "The kids start their tour laughing and joking. But by the time they've finished their mood is quite the reverse. They see what it's like to lose their freedom for whatever mistake society thinks they made. It makes a lasting impression. It makes the young people think."

Located on the National Register of Historic Places, the old Idaho Penitentiary was built by prisoners using sandstone blocks quarried in the hills above the penitentiary.

The Moorish-style dining hall was designed, constructed and supervised in 1898 by inmate George Hamilton. The prison administration was so proud of his efforts, he was granted an early release, providing he leave Idaho and never return. Hamilton committed suicide the day after he was released.

Various exhibits in the penitentiary tell the story of riots, escapes (there were more than 500, and 90 of the prisoners were never recaptured), attempted escapes and the 10 executions that occurred here. There are also photos and information about many of the better-known inmates.

Lyda Southard, an inmate from 1921 to 1941, was called Idaho's "Lady Bluebeard." She was convicted of poisoning her fourth husband by boiling arsenic flypaper and pouring the water from it into his food. (Her three previous husbands died from similar symptoms.) Southard escaped for 18 months and during that time, married a fifth time. The mother of her husband also died of arsenic flypaper poisoning.

Harry Orchard, who assassinated a former Idaho governor, served longer than any other inmate. He was imprisoned for 45 years, until his death in 1954. He was 88. Orchard is buried in the penitentiary cemetery with 74 other inmates whose bodies were never claimed by relatives or friends.

Utah heart transplant patient gets released

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Thomas Nielson, the Utah bricklayer who received his teenaged grandson's heart in what doctors say was a first-of-its-kind operation, has been allowed to go home.

Nielson, 63, was released Sunday from Salt Lake City's LDS Hospital, where he received the heart of 16-year-old Jonathan Simper on March 4. Just hours after the youth died from injuries sustained in a car-train accident.

Nielson's wife, Donna, said Sunday that his new heart was beating strongly and he was recovering well.

"He's tired from the trip and he will have only family members as visitors for a while, but Tom is very grateful for the marvelous medical care he has received," she said.

Doctors have that as far as they know, the transplant marked the first time such an exchange between relatives has been performed.

Simper was one of four Brigham City teenagers killed when the car in which they were riding collided with a train March 3. Although his three companions died instantly, Jonathan lived, although brain dead, for several hours while transplant arrangements were completed.

Nielson was reluctant at first to accept the heart, but was convinced by the youth's parents, Craig and Teri Simper, that Jonathan would want him to have it.

Although he still is emotionally distraught over the death of his eldest grandchild, Mrs. Nielson said that her husband had not experienced any rejection symptoms.

Sunday not only marked the day Nielson was released from the hospital, but was the first day the couple stayed in their new North Logan home. Close friends and relatives helped them move in while her husband recovered at the hospital, Mrs. Nielson said.

County acts carefully on four-season resort

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Some Utah County officials say they are looking out for the interests of their constituents by acting cautiously in dealing with a proposed four-season resort straddling the northern county line.

The Estes Co. of Arizona plans to develop its Traverse Ridge project into a destination resort that will include a golf course, tennis courts, swimming pool, health club and water activities.

"I think we are more cautious than pessimistic, but we want to make sure things are done right," said Commission Chairman Brent Morris. "I think we all feel good about the project, but we will also believe it when we see it."

Developers have been trying to find the best spot for the hotel and said they had a tough time deciding between Draper, at the southern edge of Salt Lake County, and Utah County.

Morris said he believes the project could be a good thing for the county, but he added that he is worried about controlling the quality of the development.

"I think the biggest effect will be on the cities in Utah County that will border the resort," he said. "I've told the mayors in those towns I will stick by their decision if they decide to support or fight the resort."

He said that even though the resort will be in Utah County, if an annexation is approved, Draper City will have control over the project.

Great Salt Lake pumping project set to begin

LAKESIDE, Utah (AP) — The last of three massive engines has arrived at the Great Salt Lake, and a $60 million pumping project to lower the level of the flood-swollen inland sea may begin next week, an official says.

The 85-ton, natural gas-powered engine has been lowered into place in a pump house at Hogup Ridge, joining two others that are expected to lower the level of the 60-mile-long, 30-mile-wide lake by pumping water into huge ponds in the west desert. Ron Ollis of the state Division of Water Resources said Monday. The lake was measured Monday at 4211.75 feet above sea level, just 1.2 inches below its historic high of 4213.85 recorded last June 3, said Bill Alder, meteorologist in charge of the National Weather Service bureau in Salt Lake City.

The rising waters already have caused some $200 million in damages to lakeshore property over the past five years.

Workers are putting the finishing touches on the first engine, which is expected to be fired up on March 25 or shortly thereafter, he said.

"The first engine is still being readied to pump water," Ollis said. "They'll bring the next two on line later, and we hope to have all three going by mid-to-late May."

Like the first two, the last engine arrived aboard a 122-foot-long tractor-trailer rig after a 17-day journey from the Dresser-Rand plant in Painted Post, N.Y.

The engines each are capable of pumping 930 cubic feet per second, or 430,000 gallons a minute, Ollis said.

Alder said the lake is expected to peak at 4212.25 between May 20 and June 10. He said if all three pumps operate as expected, the level will have been lowered by 2.2 inches at the estimated time of peaking.

In all, the project is expected to reduce the lake's level by 12 inches after a year, he said.

"It's a start. You're not going to have wonders in a few months," Alder said. "You have to worry about the long term."

Alder predicted the lake at peak would cause some flooding but little damage. However, he said northwest storms that build high waves could cause trouble to the Southern Pacific causeway which bisects the lake and to stretches of Interstate 80 on the southern shore.

80-year-old man enjoys parachuting

SHERIDAN, Ore. (AP) — Wayne Sipe gave himself a present for his 80th birthday — his first jump from an airplane.

The retired Salem roofing contractor made a six-minute descent under a rainbow-colored parachute from 4,500 feet Saturday, missing the target by several hundred yards and falling as he hit the ground, but emerging unscathed.

Sipe, whose jump was watched by about 200 relatives and fellow members of the skydiving Salem Eagles Lodge, was then feted with a chorus of "Happy Birthday" and a cake inscribed "Soar With Eagles or Walk With Turkeys."

"I enjoyed it. I've got two more jumps to make, 10 years apart," said Sipe, whose jump raised more than $1,000 in donations for charity.

Cassia hospital fights decreasing patients

By RONDA TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY—Cassia Memorial Hospital has been fighting three problems in the last year: a decreased number of physicians, doctors limiting hospital procedures because of malpractice insurance constraints and a "light volume" of patients, Hospital Administrator Dick Packer said at a press conference Monday morning.

Two of these problems have solutions in sight, he said. The hospital will begin a malpractice insurance program for local doctors in the next couple months and plans to add four new physicians to its staff in July, he said.

However, he said, a 25 to 30 percent drop in patients over the last year may have been caused by many factors, including such things as the hard-pressed local farm economy and national health trends. "I'm not sure of the reasons," he said.

Most of the loss has been in inpatient numbers, with outpatient volume remaining "surprisingly close" to prior years' figures, although it has gone down somewhat, he said.

The hospital has cut some workers' hours and has not filled some vacant positions to help alleviate financial restraints created by having fewer patients. Two administrative positions, the hospital assistant administrator and the assistant administrator of the nursing department, have been eliminated due to the crunch, he said.

"Despite the large decline in admissions, a survey released within the last month by the Idaho Hospital Association showed that Cassia has 25 to 25 percent below that of comparable hospitals on a cost per patient basis, he said. The survey was based on actual hospital bills, not on quoted hospital prices, he said.

Nationally, hospital admissions for inpatients are down about 8 percent, he said. Many insurance providers have changed their policies so that surgeries which had been performed on an inpatient basis now only be performed on an outpatient basis, contributing to this decline, he said.

Cassia will do some space planning and develop an overall plan "to better align ourselves so we can grow with order," he said. The 87-bed hospital is owned by Cassia County and has a management agreement with Intermountain Health Care.

Cassia has bought some new equipment, including stress-testing equipment for cardiology work and new surgical microscopes. The recent addition of a $25,000 video endoscopy colonoscope is the first of its kind in Idaho, according to Dr. Hayden Ellingham.

Ellingham has used the scope since January and has found and removed 30 polyps and one small cancer, he said. He believes that the machine will be used on the average of three to four times per week.

The hospital also plans to purchase ultrasound equipment that will be helpful to doctors dealing with obstetrics, radiology and cardiology patients, Packer added.

The planned additions of malpractice coverage for local physicians and the anticipated arrival of new doctors will "keep patients in the community instead of sending them somewhere else," he said.

Under their current malpractice insurance policies, many local doctors have been limited to a total of 40 obstetric patients and/or patients requiring general anesthesia, he said. Most area physicians opted for the limited coverage because costs for it ranged from $3,000 to $15,000, as opposed to between $40,000 and $85,000 for unlimited procedure coverage, he said.

But physicians can lose these restrictions under a new unlimited malpractice insurance plan being developed by Intermountain Health Care, he said.

No set rates have been given, and the individual figures will depend upon each doctor's prior experience, he said. However, "the new insurance (rate) is very competitive as far as

Council toughens dog enforcement

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council Monday adopted code changes that a pitter some bite into dog enforcement, a tougher rule on transient merchants and peddlers, and restrictions on going-out-of-business sales.

The amendments become effective when they are published in the legal notices, which will be within a month, said City Attorney Shane Bengochea, the author of the changes.

Bengochea said he proposed changes to what he and other city officials saw as problems or weaknesses in the code. Other suggestions came from a Seattle firm that reviewed the code.

farm or garden products they produced and selling newspaper subscriptions. Charitable or religious groups and arts and crafts shows are already exempted.

The license requirements have been expanded to include an extended background check, a photograph, and certification by the South Central District Health Department of any food product to be sold.

Transient merchants, peddlers or solicitors will also be required to obtain a bond, conditioned on holding the city harmless from liabilities or causes of action or expenses arising due to any claims arising from its granting of a license.

The bond requirement — which is $500 per merchant or peddler — may be waived if the vendor or peddler provides letters of reference from local businesses or companies.

The changes to the dog ordinances were spurred partly by three attacks on children last year, which resulted in wounds requiring 40 to 80 stitches in some cases, he said.

The city has a problem with dogs of large, Bengochea added.

The amendment changes the definition of dog kennel and vicious dogs. A kennel was considered to be a place where more than two dogs were kept, kept or boarded in a commercial venture. But a kennel will now be known as a place where more than three dogs over the age of 6 months are kept, raised or boarded, regardless of a commercial business.

Operators of kennels, as now defined, will be subject to an annual fee of $15, compared to the present fee of $15.

The new section on going-out-of-business and liquidation sales requires advance notice of the sales and a license. A statement explaining the reason for the sale and a $1,000 bond are among the requirements for licensure.

With a license, which will cost $25, the going-out-of-business sale can't be held for more than 60 days, Sundays and holidays excluded.

Any person violating the ordinances will be subject to a maximum fine of $300 and not more than 6 months in jail.

The other amendments adopted by the council moved responsibility for licensing businesses onto the city clerk. Clarifications and corrected grammar were also part of the amendments.

A vicious dog is now defined as an animal that has bitten someone without provocation and has a temperament endangering people or other animals. Under the new definition, "vicious" is expanded to mean an animal that also claws or otherwise harms someone or constitutes a "physical threat."

In other business, the council approved a lease for operation of the restaurant and lounge at the Twin Falls Sun Valley Airport, effective in June.

The former manager, Bill Durbin, said he wanted out of his lease to take care of his other businesses. Durbin took over management in June.

When the amendments become law, owners of barking dogs can be cited by the city police or animal control officer. Now it takes a formal complaint by neighbors.

Penalties on the owners of at-large or vicious dogs have been stiffened as well. Not only will the person face fine and jail, but the court will be allowed to order the owners to surrender the dog for destruction or to obtain a bond or insurance in the amount of $10,000 or more to prove financial responsibility for the dog's actions.

Kevin Owings, who worked for Durbin at the restaurant, is the new operator.

The city's lease with Owings is different than the one it had with Durbin. Instead of paying a flat rent of about $400 a month, Owings will pay 3 percent of the gross profit.

City Manager Tom Courtney said the flat rate was eliminated because the restaurant business is cyclic. During the slow periods, it was difficult for the managers to pay the rent, he said.

Another part of the code amendments approved Monday established regulations on peddlers and solicitors, similar to those on transient merchants and itinerant merchants or vendors.

Bengochea said the peddler and solicitor sections were added because Twin Falls was without a "game market," without any regulations.

Exceptions to the peddler, solicitor and transient vendor, rules were expanded to include those seeking political contributions, hawking approved a contract with the U.S. Bureau of Land Management to continue operating a slurry-mixing plant at the airport for its fire-suppression program. The BLM will pay the city $3,000 for the 6 months program operates.

The other change allows the city to review the lease annually, instead of on a multi-year basis.

approved a contract with Twin Falls engineer Dale Riedesel to oversee a grant application to the Federal Aviation Administration for a new snow plow and seal-coating of the taxiways.

The contract with Riedesel amounts to $9,440.

Legislative leaders predict changes for education budgets

The Associated Press

BOISE — Republican legislative leaders on Monday labeled as realistic the ambitious 1988 recommendations for state aid to education but indicated changes will likely be made to reduce the gaping disparity between total spending commitments and available revenues.

House Speaker Tom Boyd of Genesee also emphasized the need for tax increase proposals to the draft budget has made inevitable to keep pace with those budget bills through the legislative process so that revenue disparities does not run out of control.

"We really must be careful right now if in fact we pass these high budgets and then come along with the revenue measures and not get the support for them," Boyd said.

New nursing home near completion

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The owner of Twin Falls Care Center said Monday that the Magic Valley's newest nursing home is nearing completion for a scheduled opening in early May.

Owner Brent Brocksome, of Boise, said the skilled nursing facility has already hired an administrator and a director of nursing services. Brocksome, who is also a state representative, said the facility will begin hiring in April about 50 people to staff the 60-bed facility.

Individuals express supports my desire to provide appropriate rehabilitative, quality care," Brocksome said.

Pat Gooding, of Eden, who formerly administered Kimberly's Mountain View Care Center, was named administrator from among 35 applicants, Brocksome said.

Gooding said the center will work to combat the nursing-home image of patients entering and not leaving. She said she's looking forward to helping patients get back on their own with more rehabilitative and physical therapy.

"I really love working with the patients and their families," said Gooding, who has 7 1/2 years experience in skilled nursing care. Randy Hudspeth, of Twin Falls, was named director of skilled nursing.

Brocksome broke ground last November for the 32,000-square-foot skilled nursing facility, along Eastland Drive just north of Elizabeth Boulevard. He said construction has gone well and ahead of schedule. He owns the center with his wife Pat.

Gooding noted that while caring for about the same number of patients, TFCC is twice as large as her previous facility.

Brocksome said he sold his interest last Dec. 31 in six other care facilities in Idaho and surrounding states.

Meyerhoeffer says bill would fund salary hike

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho President Gerald Meyerhoeffer said Monday that a bill to increase state funding and possibly a local property tax increase would mean salary increases this year at the school.

"Our first obligation is to salaries because we freeze them last year," Meyerhoeffer told The Times-News after the Board of Trustees' monthly meeting. He said raises in two of the last three years were "pretty meager."

He reported to the board that the Legislature's Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee last week approved a 9.7-percent increase for CSI's academic program and a 9.2-percent hike in the vocational program. The bill would raise CSI's state funding from $5.38 million annually to about $5.85 million, Meyerhoeffer said.

Because vocational and academic personnel are given equal raises, precise figures on how much the state gains would mean is still unclear.

Meyerhoeffer noted that state funding now provides less than 40 percent of the school's budget, with tuition and local property taxes covering the rest.

Gov. Cecil Andrus' budget included forcing the state's two community colleges to increase their local property tax to the limit of a 16-percent mill levy, in return for state Increases. CSI currently taxes Twin Falls County and Jerome County properties at about .146 percent.

"We will probably raise that (taxes) some," Meyerhoeffer said. "It will have to be tied to that."

Meyerhoeffer said the large state increases also move toward meeting CSI's request for the state to fund 50 percent of community college budgets within three years.

"Now we have to look toward the arguments for 50-percent funding," he said.

Blaine County GOP selects finalists for sheriff

By BARBARA NEIWERT
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Republican Central Committee for Blaine County has selected three finalists to replace the resigning Blaine County Sheriff, Dennis Haynes.

After interviews Sunday with six candidates for the position, the Republican committee announced it will recommend Ketchum Police Department Sgt. Walt Fennell, 30; Bellevue Marshal Winston "Buz" Gray, 47; and Sun Valley Police Capt. Jack Stoneback, 45.

The list of finalists did not include Gene Ramsey, Blaine County's chief deputy sheriff. Haynes had recommended Ramsey be appointed to succeed him.

Other candidates who had applied included Gayland Edwards, former Idaho state patrolman, and Eugene Farnworth, a Blaine County sheriff's deputy.

The three candidates will go before the Blaine County Board of Commissioners March 23 for final interviews and selection for the sheriff's position.

Haynes turned in his resignation last month, saying that he had mixed emotions about leaving law enforcement, but was accepting a job in the private sector.

Due to a delay in the committee's selection process, the county commissioners refused last week to accept Haynes' resignation until a replacement could be found.

The person picked for the position will assume duties of the office on March 23, said Commission Chairman Rupert House.

The sheriff is paid approximately $24,000 a year, and since he will be replacing Haynes mid-term, he will serve the county until the next general election in November 1988.

All of the six candidates considered for the position were well qualified, said Committee Chairwoman Elaine Martin.

Fennell has worked with the Ketchum Police Department since 1980, after completing three years training in criminal justice at Washington State University.

Gray has served as the Bellevue city marshal for the past three years. He has served as the Montpelier police chief and has worked

Helena man accused of killing Duffys takes the witness stand

BOULDER, Mont. (AP) — Kenneth A. Miller took the witness stand Monday to deny shooting the parents of actor Patrick Duffy in their driveway last week and to blame his friend Sean Wentz for the murders.

The 19-year-old Helena janitor, charged with two counts of deliberate homicide for the slayings of Terrence and Marie Duffy, gave a different account to a Jefferson County District Court jury that started last week by Wentz, who faces a separate trial on similar charges.

The two are accused of shooting the Duffys Nov. 18 during a bout of the couple's bar in Boulder, a ranching town 30 miles south of Helena.

Wentz, 19, also of Helena, testified for the prosecution last week that Miller decided they would rob the couple's bar. He said he carried his shotgun into the bar but gave the gun to Miller. He said Miller shot Duffy in "cold blood," then gave him back the gun. Wentz said Mrs. Duffy entered the bar and Miller reached over and pulled the trigger, killing Mrs. Duffy.

But Miller denied there was any discussion of robbing the Duffys beforehand, and he emphatically denied shooting either of the Duffys.

He said he and Wentz had a drink at the bar earlier in the evening, then left to go to hot springs resort about five miles from town. Miller said he and Wentz returned to the bar, and Wentz and Terrence Duffy got into an argument.

"That's when Mr. Duffy said there's nothing but faggots down there (at the hot springs), and Sean said 'I'll kill faggots,'" Miller testified.

He said Duffy told Wentz to be a "smear-ass." He said Wentz left the bar for a few minutes and returned holding the shotgun.

"I ran back into this corner, and Sean and Mr. Duffy started struggling," Miller said.

Miller testified he didn't actually see Terrence Duffy get shot, but Wentz threatened to shoot him, too, unless he did as he was told.

"I didn't know what was going through Sean's head right then," Miller said. "I was scared."

He said Wentz ordered him to pick up the shotgun shell casing, and as he was on his hands and knees, Mrs. Duffy walked past him toward Wentz.

"She told Sean 'You're going to have to kill me, too.' He just shot her," Miller said. "She just about fell on me."

Miller admitted taking money from the cash register and liquor bottles from behind the bar, but said he did so on Wentz's orders.

Defense attorney Edmund Sheehy asked Miller whether he grabbed the gun away from Wentz and shot the Duffys, and he responded, "No."

Miller also denied screaming to Wentz, "Shoot him, shoot him," or that he shot Mrs. Duffy while Wentz held the shotgun.

"Afterward, he said, he and Wentz returned to Helena, where they stole a pickup truck and a Jeep from an auto dealership, and he followed Wentz to Wentz's apartment."

"I was following him like a fawn follows a doe," Miller said under cross examination by Jefferson County Attorney John Connor.

Miller said he couldn't remember certain details about the night the Duffys were shot.

When asked by Connor why his testimony differed significantly from what other witnesses said on the stand, he said he didn't know.

Miller said he was scared and was crying. He said Wentz told him the world was going to end in two days and they should head to the mountains.

Services planned for tanker crew

SPOKANE (AP) — With flags at half-staff, Patrick Air Force Base prepared Monday to host the services for two men who died when a KC-135 tanker went down in flames.

A memorial service was scheduled Tuesday morning at the base chapel. A special public-address system is planned to carry the service to the overflow crowd expected at base spokesman Capt. Bob Ballou.

Meanwhile, the Air Force board investigating the crash continued its probe of the disaster. It could be two months before the board finishes its look at Friday's crash, Ballou said.

Six died inside the tanker, which was part of a demonstration flight ordered by the head of the Strategic Air Command.

The seventh man died in a car on the ground when the plane veered sharply left after take-off, clipped a fence outside Fairchild's runway and plowed across a nearby field. A fire engulfed the scattered wreckage.

Ballou on Monday revised earlier comments about the investigation board, saying part of the resulting report will be made public. The portion that places blame on the crew is released, he said, factual material gleaned in the investigation will be released.

Another officer at Fairchild, who spoke only with a promise of anonymity, said family members wanting to know the board's conclusions could be told.

"We're not that insensitive," the officer said.

Major Fred Harrop, chief of public information for SAC at Offutt Air Force Base near Omaha, Neb., did not return phone calls from the AP on Monday. Over the weekend, he said Gen. John Chalm, SAC commander, was off base for the weekend and could not be reached for comment on the crash.

Chain ordered Fairchild's development of a bomber-tanker demonstration team after Fairchild took home most of the honors at the 1986 Air Force Competition last fall, according to Gen. Thomas Harris, head of the 92nd Bombardment Wing at Fairchild.

Harris has refused requests for interviews since the crash.

A tanker and its companion B-52 were to perform a number of maneuvers — including simulated refueling — at altitudes low enough to impress audiences with the bomber's size.

Services for two of the crash victims have been scheduled. An individual service for Lt. Col. Michael Cornell, 42, of Cortez, Colo., was set for 2 p.m. Tuesday in the base chapel. A private service for Capt. Frank Johnson, 40, of Peninsula, Calif., was scheduled Wednesday at St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church in Spokane.

Also killed in the crash were Sr. Master Sgt. Paul Hamilton, 41, of Portsmouth, N.H., who was in his car; Capt. James W. Litzinger, 32, navigator, Verona, Pa.; 1st Lt. Mark L. Myers, 24, navigator, Canal Fulton, Ohio; Capt. Christopher Chapman, 29, pilot, Tacoma, Wash.; and Staff Sgt. Rodney S. Erks, 29, refueling-boom operator, Lenoxx, S.D.

Stream-flow hearing set

HAGERMAN — A hearing on minimum stream-flows at Minnie Miller Springs will be held Thursday afternoon here.

The Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation is seeking the minimum stream-flow to preserve fish and-wildlife habitat, aesthetics and recreation, according to a press release from the Department of Water Resources.

The hearing will be held at Hagerman Valley Senior Citizens' Building, 140 Lake St. at 1:30 p.m. Anyone interested in testifying on the proposed stream-flow is invited to attend.

The Department of Fish and Game is seeking 200 cubic feet per second of year-round flow from the Snake River Canyon well to the point where individual stream-forms form a single stream. The other stream-forms, 10 cfs, starting where the spring farthest upstream flow into a natural channel and ending where the flow discharges into the Snake River, a distance of about one-half mile.

The hearing on Minnie Miller was postponed until a dispute between DWR and FAG could be resolved involving stream-flows on the Big Wood River. The issues in the Big Wood dispute could apply to Minnie Miller, according to DWR.

The dispute between the two agencies was resolved in a manner that would guarantee enough water for recreational, as well as hydroelectric use, according to FAG and Blaine County officials.

went to the computer to check on the title, he said, the man pulled a revolver and demanded all of the firm's money.

Howard said he gave the man a bank money bag and the man then went to the cash register and cleaned out all of the cash drawers.

He ordered the shop manager to lie on the floor, saying he would "blow your brains out" if he did not cooperate, Howard told police.

The man took what Howard said Monday was a "substantial amount of cash in bills and change."

"I had never seen the man before," Howard said. "I thought at first he was joking and I just stood there, but he pulled the hammer back on the gun and said again 'Give me all of your money' and I decided he meant business and that I had better do as he said," Howard told The Times-News Monday.

He described the man as being in his early or mid 30s, with dark hair and complexion, but not Hispanic, and about 5 feet tall. He was wearing a long coat with sheepskin lining, levis and cowboy boots.

No information was available on whether the man left by vehicle or foot.

Jewelry taken from vehicle

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls woman told Police Sunday that jewelry valued at more than $1,200, which she left in a vehicle parked outside her home, was taken by burglars.

The woman said rings and a necklace were in a GMC "Jimmy" at her home, 207 Wiseman St., between 1 a.m. and 1:15 a.m. Sunday when they disappeared. The vehicle was not locked, police said.

It was one of several vehicle burglaries during the weekend.

In one, Nelson Guyman told police that someone entered his parked car at 432 Meadows Lane during the weekend. Police said someone apparently broke into the locked vehicle taking a radar detector, stereo tapes and other items valued at a total of $385.

Crash victim in fair condition

BURLEY — One of three persons injured in a single-car accident near Burley early Saturday morning was listed in fair condition Monday at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls.

Hospital officials said Elizabeth Hernandez, 22, of Nampa, was transferred to MVMRC from the Mindoka Memorial Hospital in Rupert, with fractures and other injuries.

Idaho State Police officers who investigated the accident said the woman was thrown from a small 1974 sedan driven by Jonas Hernandez, 16, of Nampa. Officers said the driver apparently fell asleep, causing the vehicle to go off the roadway and roll. The woman was thrown clear of the vehicle, while the driver and another passenger, Teodoro Hernandez, 52, also of Nampa, remained inside. It was necessary to extricate the older Hernandez from the back seat of the vehicle. Both men were treated at Mindoka Memorial Hospital and released.

The accident occurred on Interstate 84, about 4 miles west of Burley, and was reported at 3:40 a.m.

St. Patrick's Day parade today

TWIN FALLS — The Irish will have their day in Twin Falls today with a parade scheduled for noon along Main Avenue, featuring a lot of Irish enthusiasm and one German band.

Stuart Thomas, one of the owners of Rock Creek Restaurant, is organizing the event.

He has invited members of the local Veteran Motor Car Club of America chapter to drive their old cars, along with several drill teams and a German band. The procession begins at the east end of Main Avenue, behind the Main Avenue Car Wash, and will end at the Sears store.

Thomas said downtown merchants are supporting the effort and will be responding to St. Patrick's Day specials and a lot of green hats and costumes during the day.

Parade marshal will be Bill Mingo. A member of the VMCCA club, Mingo will be driving one of his many antique cars. He will also be celebrating his 75th birthday, having been born on St. Patrick's Day in 1912.

Store robbery suspect sought

TWIN FALLS — Police in Twin Falls on Monday continued to look for a man reported to have robbed the manager of Studio 200 Saturday morning.

Police were called by Michael Howard, of the video rental business at 1136 Blue Lakes Blvd., about 10:15 a.m. Saturday saying he had just been robbed.

Howard told police a man came into his business and asked to rent a specific movie. When Howard

PUC nominee appears before Senate panel

BOISE (AP) — Coeur d'Alene accountant Ralph Nelson has received high recommendations from state officials to get up to speed on the confirmation as a member of the Public Utilities Commission.

Sen. Terry Sversten, R-Cataldo, who presented Nelson to the Senate State Affairs Committee on Monday, said his review of Nelson's credentials brought praise from Panhandle GOP officials, including party activist Louise Shaddock, a former state Commerce Department director.

"She had so much good to say about Mr. Nelson," Sversten told the committee.

Nelson, 46, was nominated to the commission a week ago by Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus to replace outgoing Republican Commissioner Richard High.

Conceding his prior experience with the three-member utility regulating panel has been "very limited," Nelson told the committee there were many issues he had no detailed opinions on.

"There's just a myriad number of things to get up to speed on," Nelson said. "The commission was unanimously confirmed by the Senate last Friday."

The selection of Miller and Nelson came several weeks after Andrus' first nomination to the PUC, Republican businessman Tom Sahlborg of Pocatello, ran into stiff criticism in the GOP Senate, and in the face of his likely rejection by the Senate Sahlborg withdrew his name from consideration.

County sets speed limit at rail crossing

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — Box Elder County commissioners have imposed a 10 mph speed limit on a rural railroad crossing where four Brigham City teenagers were killed when their car collided with a train on March 3.

The ordinance passed Monday would set the speed limit on a mile-long stretch of the road at 35 mph, with a limit of 10 mph for 250 feet on each side of the tracks.

At present, no speed limit is posted.

Commission Chairman Jim White said he will ask Union Pacific to consider installing signals at the crossing.

Lyle Schnitker

TWIN FALLS — Lyle Schnitker, 82, of Twin Falls and formerly a long-time resident of the Hollister area, died Monday, March 16, at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Born Sept. 16, 1904, at New Myer Creek, Wyo., he moved at an early age with his family to Idaho. He moved there, then to the Big Creek area. He moved to Twin Falls, where he completed school, graduating from Twin Falls High School in 1922. He married Rhoda "Bertie" Lusk March 10, 1923, at Burley. They homesteaded on the Salmon Tract in the Hollister area, where he resided for 19 years. They moved into Twin Falls last year.

Mr. Schnitker was a member and past master of the Hollister Grange, on the board of supervisors of the Twin Falls Soil Conservation District, a member and chairman of the board of the Magic Valley Memorial Hospital board for many years. He was one of the original members of the Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission, a member of the Twin Falls Travelers' Good Sam RV Club and a past officer of the Twin Falls Elks Lodge.

Surviving are: his wife of Twin Falls; two daughters, Donna Lanning of Hollister and Patricia Fuller of Twin Falls; a brother, Lester Schnitker of Twin Falls; a sister, Marie Humphrey of Gooding; eight grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by a daughter, Wanita Marler.

The funeral will be held Thursday at 11 a.m. in Reynolds Funeral Chapel, with the Rev. Jim Myers and the Rev. Sharon Weiss officiating. Burial will be in Sunset Memorial Park.

Contributions to that memorial fund should be given to the Hollister Community Presbyterian Church memorial fund.

James D. Wilson

Buhl, James D. Wilson, 75, of Buhl, died Monday, March 16, in St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise after surgery.

Born Sept. 3, 1911, in Calro, Neb., the family moved to Buhl when he was 7 years old, where he attended school. In 1937, he married Iltima Atkinson. Mr. Wilson had been active in transporting the circus caravan to the regional hospital in Salt Lake City. He had been engaged in several businesses in Buhl, the last being the Sport Shop, which he sold several years ago.

He was a member of the Masonic and Shriner organizations.

Surviving are: a son, Dwayne L. Wilson of Bountiful, Utah; three grandchildren, a brother, Ray Wilson of Bremerton, Wash.; and a sister, Ruth R. Davis of Twin Falls. His wife preceded him in death.

A memorial service will be held Monday, March 23, at the Hopkins-Buhl Funeral Chapel. Friends may meet with the family at the Buhl Housing Center in Timmon Courts immediately following the service.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Shriner's Hospital, which may be left at the funeral chapel.

Boyd, however, said that in view of the staunch defense of the tax credit mounted by the Republican legislative majority this year, it would be difficult for the legislature to impose the entire budget-balancing burden on individual taxpayers.

Boyd said that the bill was opposed to repeal of the investment tax credit, he said there was a possibility of a modified version of the governor's original proposal could win approval from the full House.

Mix of autos, alcohol leads to tragedy

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for your column about drunk drivers, and especially for saying that friends don't let friends drink drunk.

I would like to mention an aspect of drunkenness that is rarely mentioned but is equally as horrifying as being a victim of a drunk driver.

I killed a man. One dark, rainy night I was driving alone in a busy neighborhood shopping center. I wasn't going fast, and I didn't even know I had hit him until I heard this terrible thud! It seems that this man had walked out from between two parked cars, and straight into my path. He was killed instantly. When I realized what I had done, I nearly went into shock.

Fortunately, there were several witnesses who were kind enough to wait until the police arrived. Six of them volunteered to testify on my behalf.

The dead man reeked of alcohol, and it was later confirmed that the alcohol level in his blood was even higher than .16. The poor man was in his 50s, and was known as the neighborhood drunk.

I was absolved of any guilt, but it left me an emotional wreck. I had to see a psychiatrist for over a year before I could get over the nightmares of that terrible experience.

Please print this, Abby, as an example of how an innocent person can become a victim of a drunk pedestrian.

— LOS ANGELES VICTIM

DEAR VICTIM: Thanks for giving us the flip side of that coin. Perhaps we should coin a new motto: "Friends don't let friends WALK drunk."

DEAR ABBY: A Houston Post reader wrote: "I just saw a 20-minute film at church that I think should be required viewing for everyone between the ages of 11 and 65. It is titled, "Sex, Drugs and AIDS."

You said you had seen the film and thought everyone between the ages of 10 and 65 should see it. Why only up to 65? My husband is 66 and I am in my early 40s, and we are not aware that sex stops at 65.

Perhaps those over 65 should also be encouraged to see the film.

— ANONYMOUS IN CHICAGO

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I did not mean to imply that sex stops at age 65. But people over 65 are less likely to be in a group that practices high-risk behavior.

It's a fact that there are fewer TV drug abusers who are 65 or older, and people in that age group are less likely to change partners promiscuously. Also, most have been in mutually monogamous relationships for more than 10 years.

The film "Sex, Drugs and AIDS" is highly educational, and I recommend it for people of ALL ages.

DEAR ABBY: "Mortified in Minneapolis" complained because her otherwise masculine-looking husband insists on drinking through a straw in public. Thanks for saying that drinking through a straw has nothing to do with a man's masculinity.

My macho man always carries a straw in his pocket. He has a beautiful walrus moustache, and that straw is the perfect solution for keeping his moustache nice and clean.

Wedding

Buckland-Webb

TWIN FALLS — Kristy Diane Buckland became the bride of Curtis Randall Webb on Dec. 19 in the Logan, Utah, LDS Temple.

The bride is the daughter of William and Lana Buckland of Hagerman, and the bridegroom's parents are Lloyd and Barbara Webb of Twin Falls.

Deborah Buckland, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Attendants were Pamela and Penny Buckland, sisters of the bride, and Carolea Wright, sister of the groom. Serving as flower girl was Carrie Buckland, also a sister of the bride. Kevan and Barry Webb, brothers of the groom, ushered.

Mildred Clements attended the guestbook.

A luncheon was hosted by Lloyd and Barbara Webb on Dec. 19 at the Blue Bird Restaurant in Logan, and a reception was held on Dec. 20 in the Hagerman LDS Church.

The bride, a 1984 graduate of Bliss High School, attended Richs College and is presently attending the College of Southern Idaho, majoring in math and physics. She plans to teach secondary education.

Kristy Buckland, Curtis Webb

Webb, a 1976 graduate of Twin Falls High School, served an LDS mission in Costa Rica, San Jose Mission. He is also a graduate of Utah State University and Brigham Young University Law School. He is presently a partner in the law firm Webb, Burton, Carlson, Pedersen and Webb in Twin Falls. The couple resides in Twin Falls.

Utah teen program fights suicides

CLEARFIELD, Utah (AP) — As mental health experts seek answers for an increase in teen suicides nationwide, a group of Utah students personally touched — by similar tragedies — has launched a program to prevent future deaths.

A rash of teenage suicides last November and December stunned the northern Utah community of Clearfield. The deaths were investigated as suicides, but law enforcement officials agreed there was no apparent link.

Three of the teens were classmates at Clearfield High School, where students have banded together to help their peers deal with problems such as teen pregnancy, drug and alcohol abuse and suicide.

"These problems seem to be the tip of the iceberg, that being that kids have low self-esteem," said Jay Stuart, a psychology teacher and adviser to the BEST program.

BEST, which stands for Building Esteem in Students and Teens, started as a club and has evolved into a class offered at the high school. The peer-support movement caught on, and BEST sponsors have had to limit enrollments.

Stuart insists that teens who threaten or actually commit suicide really don't want to die. "They just want help. And school is the best place for them to verbalize their needs or threaten suicide, because people there pick up on it."

The BEST program is designed to give positive support to all youths feeling similar pressures and frustrations. Its three main functions are education, prevention and intervention.

To educate youths about dealing with risks, students in the BEST program sponsor assemblies and guest speakers, and put on skits dramatizing real life situations.

Memorial fund is established

TWIN FALLS — A scholarship memorial fund has been established at Utah State University, Logan, in honor of the late Dr. Glen E. Leggett, Twin Falls.

Leggett, who died last January, had worked for 20 years at the Snake River Conservation Research Center near Kimberly as a soil chemist. He had received awards for leadership and service to the fertilizer and chemical industry from the Idaho Fertilizer and Chemical Association and the Pacific Northwest Plant Food Association.

D.T. Westermann, soil scientist at the Kimberly center, said the scholarship will be given to a junior or senior undergraduate student majoring in soil chemistry or soil fertility.

Contributions may be sent to the USU Endowment Fund in care of Dr. D.W. James, Department of Soil Science and Biometeorology, UMC 48, Utah State University, Logan, Utah 84322-4840.

Malnutrition effects can linger for life

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — "Victims of chronic malnutrition — especially young children — suffer lifelong mental and emotional difficulties, even after they have supposedly 'recovered' from the most obvious physical effects," says Dr. Janina Galler in Boston magazine.

Galler, director of the Center for Behavioral Development and Mental Retardation at Boston University School of Medicine, says "The brain is severely affected by chronic malnutrition but the damage does not simply occur then. Rather, it appears to be some ongoing impact on the programming of the brain which may not appear until later in development."

Some children who have been chronically malnourished continue to show below-normal scores on tests of abstract reasoning, logical and relational thinking, language development, reading, writing, IQ and social relations well after their diets have improved.

Acid Rain: How It Occurs, Why It Kills

These conclusions, discussed by EPA officials familiar with the study, are still tentative. But if they stand up they would give ammunition to those who have long argued for measures to reduce emissions of acid rain precursors from power plants and other fuel-burning sources.

Most proponents of controls call for uniform reductions from older coal-burning power plants in the East. # Laxalt expected to plunge into presidential campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — After keeping prospective supporters waiting for months for a decision, former Sen. Paul D. Laxalt of Nevada is expected to take the plunge soon into the exploratory phase of a campaign for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination.

PAUL LAXALT
Getting closer to decision

"He's a lot closer to running today than he has been since last fall," said a longtime Laxalt associate, speaking on condition he not be identified.

Laxalt himself said he has made no decisions and even if he decides to run will probably not announce his candidacy before September.

But he said he will make a decision by May 1 on whether to form an exploratory committee, a step several Republican presidential aspirants have already taken.

"I just don't want to keep all these people on the line much longer," he said. "They are getting intense pressure from all the other camps. It's like recruiting season in the NFL or soccer rush time."

Already, Laxalt has lost one potential campaign aide who had said that he would be with him if he ran, but had urged him to make an early decision. Former White House political director Edward J. Rollins decided early this year to head the

If he runs, he said, he will "attempt to do reasonably well in Iowa and New Hampshire and in the Superbowl in March and then close at home, out there in the West."

"Since I am the only Western candidate, I would have heavy emphasis to have enough funds to close strongly out there, particularly in California," he said.

In Los Angeles, Laxalt told a conservative political group this past Wednesday he is leaning toward establishing an exploratory committee because he's "got a very deep obligation to keeping this Reagan revolution moving forward."

"I had a real outpouring here of people who felt that I should do this," he said of his speech to Citizens for the Republic, an organization that includes many of President Reagan's longtime California supporters.

The former senator is a close friend of the president, whom he met when he was governor of Nevada and Reagan was governor of California.

Laxalt conceded that his recommendation of former Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee to succeed Donald T. Regan as White House chief of staff has caused some of his conservative supporters "considerable anguish."

Reagan may hold news conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater indicated Monday that President Reagan will hold a news conference soon, but he declined to give a date.

The Washington Post and ABC News reported over the weekend that the president has at least tentatively decided to hold a news conference on Thursday.

It would be his first since Nov. 19.

"We have nothing to announce at this point," Fitzwater told reporters.

The spokesman said alternative dates were still being examined, and added, "The truth is we don't announce press conferences until the day before, or two days before."

When a correspondent noted a report that Reagan will travel to Columbia, Mo., on March 26, and asked if he would be having a news conference before any travel, Fitzwater responded, "I am not confirming a news conference or a travel date."

Nation Army launches new troop safety campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army, alarmed by the number of its soldiers who are being run over in their sleep by tanks and other vehicles, has launched a new safety campaign and demanded stricter disciplinary action by officers against troops who ignore safety guidelines.

"Getting run over by a tactical vehicle is not and should not be something soldiers expect to happen — especially when they are sleeping. But happen it does — and too often," the report said that from March 25, 1984, to Oct. 28, 1986, 22 sleeping soldiers were run over in 19 separate accidents during field training exercises.

"Seven of the soldiers died," the report said. "Eight of the accidents involved tracked vehicles; the other 11 involved wheeled vehicles. In three of the accidents, two soldiers were run over."

The report concluded that most of the accidents occurred for two reasons — soldiers went to sleep in areas where they shouldn't have, and vehicle drivers failed to send out crew members as walking guides to spot sleeping soldiers.

Dukakis to seek Demo nomination

BOSTON (AP) — Gov. Michael S. Dukakis said Monday he intends to enter the race for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination, calling himself a longshot but declaring he has the strength and experience to hold the office.

"With your help and with your prayers the son of a Greek immigrant named Mike Dukakis can be the next president," Dukakis said as he announced he was forming a campaign committee and would formally enter the race May 4.

The 54-year-old governor said he wanted to bring to the nation "a message of good jobs and economic opportunity and vibrant, sustained economic growth for every American in every part of our country. It is a message of opportunity for all... It is the determination to purse the cause of world peace, and there is no greater task before us."

Dukakis, who coasted to his third term in November but, is little known outside the Northeast, acknowledged "the odds against winning are very very long. And as the sitting governor, the odds are very tough."

But, he added, "I wouldn't be doing it if I didn't think that the prospects were at least reasonably good, assuming we can put together a strong campaign."

The formation of a presidential campaign committee makes Dukakis legally a candidate. Candidates customarily form the committee and later make what is considered the official announcement to the media that they are running.

Two other Democrats already in the race — are also considered longshots. Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt — formally joined the race on Feb. 23, and former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt announced his bid on March 10.

Former Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, the front-runner in national polls, is to announce his second try for the Democratic nomination on April 13.

Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware has set up a presidential campaign committee, but will not make a formal announcement until late May or early June. The Rev. Jesse Jackson, another 1984 hopeful, will announce later in the spring. Sen. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas is currently agonizing over whether to make the race.

Helms pressed to throw hat into GOP race

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms, saying no Republican candidate for president has excited conservatives, have begun a campaign aimed at encouraging him to enter the 1988 race for the White House.

"I feel like Jesse Helms is the candidate that could light a fire under a lot of conservatives that are just sort of sitting it out right now," said Carter Wrenn, head of Helms' political organization, said Monday.

That organization, a political committee called the National Congressional Club, mailed several thousand letters to major Helms backers around the country late last week. It asked whether they would join in urging Helms to run, Wrenn also invited the supporters to send money and set a goal of $55,000 to be used for a broader appeal to all 120,000 contributors to the committee.

Helms, 65, a conservative who won his third Senate term in a bruising 1984 race, has not said he would run.

Midterm elections pose test for Gandhi

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Rajiv Gandhi faces three state elections next week that represent a midterm test of the young prime minister's personal appeal and his policy of adding more free enterprise to Indian socialism.

Gandhi's Congress Party will try to keep control of the legislature in Kerala state, where Marxist parties are strong, and defeat the governing Communists in West Bengal.

For the third contest, Congress formed a coalition with a Moslem party in the northern state of Kashmir, where Moslems are in the majority.

Fifty-five million people are registered to vote in the three states.

Congress has lost three state elections since Gandhi, now 42, took office in 1984 after the assassination of his mother, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. The party says this was by design because Rajiv Gandhi made agreements with regional political groups in all three cases in an effort to resolve major problems.

By that reasoning, the elections March 23 are the first real test since 1984. Romesh Thapar, a leading political analyst, said voters will be judging both the party and Gandhi, even though Gandhi's job is not at stake.

Thapar, 65, said the election "will be a test for Gandhi as a vote-catcher. Gandhi's image as a leader has gone down, there is resentment in his party and if he fails to project himself as the vote-catcher the boy is in serious trouble."

Soviet dam collapses, flood claims 19

MOSCOW (AP) — Torrential rains and mudslides collapsed a dam in Soviet Central Asia on Monday, loosing a flood that swept away most of a village and killed 19 people, the Tass news agency said.

Tass said six people were seriously injured and nine others missing in the disaster in the republic of Tadzhikistan. It said the waters have caused a "critical situation" in the republic's agricultural district of Dangara.

Tass' prompt and relatively detailed reporting of the calamity was clearly linked to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's campaign for "glasnost," or openness. The campaign has permitted fuller and speedier news about some topics in the nation's media, which for years were slow to report accidents and disasters.

The flood was reported on the main evening television news program, ensuring that a large part of the Soviet public would hear about it.

Even so, restrictions apparently remain. In contrast to the coverage of the flood in Tadzhikistan, the sinking of a Soviet freighter Saturday in a gale off New Jersey went an avalanche of mud destroyed the reservoir dam, sending "a water mass" crashing down on the village of Sargazan.

"Fifty-three houses, a livestock breeding farm and a poultry farm were swept away," Tass said. "Bridges and a railroad section were destroyed, communication was disrupted. Part of the crops were washed away."

Tass said search parties aided by aircraft were looking for the missing.

Tents, food and medicine were being rushed to the disaster scene, Tass said, and senior officials of the republic had arrived to survey rescue and relief efforts.

The news agency gave no further details, but it indicated Sargazan was in an isolated area that could make rescue work difficult.

Tass added that several days of torrential rains have also created a "tense situation" in the Kurgan-Tyubinsky region of Tadzhikistan. It did not say if there had been flooding there.

Tass identified the Dangara district as "virgin lands," a Soviet term for steppe or mountainous terrain reclaimed for cultivation. It did not say whether erosion due to farming might have played a part in the mudslides.

An ambitious "virgin lands" project under then-leader Nikita S. Khrushchev was criticized by some specialists for adverse environmental consequences.

Tadzhikistan, a mountainous republic on the Soviet Union's borders with Afghanistan, Pakistan and China, has been the scene of intensive efforts to improve agriculture. It is one of the country's chief cotton growing regions.

Most of the republic's nearly million people are Moslem.

The dam collapse and flooding was the latest in a series of natural disasters reported by Soviet media in the past several months.

The Pravda newspaper said on Feb. 14 that avalanches, landslides and flooding in the mountains of the republic of Georgia had claimed more than 80 lives this winter and destroyed 2,700 homes.

U.S. embargo draws blame for launch woe

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet Union is having a hard time getting its new launching service for foreign satellites, off the ground because of U.S. restrictions on high technology exports, a Soviet official says.

"I believe this embargo has frightened away everyone," said Nikolai Semyonov, an official of the new Soviet civilian space agency Glavkosmos. "If there wasn't an American embargo, then we would have a mass of contracts already."

Many satellites contain American high technology, and the U.S. and several other Western governments have laws aimed at preventing such equipment from getting into Soviet hands.

Only one contract has been signed since the Soviets set up Glavkosmos in October 1985 to supervise their civilian space program and enter the world commercial satellite-launching business. A Soviet Proton booster is due to put into orbit an Indian earth-observation satellite in September or October.

Moscow is trying to tap a worldwide demand for launching satellites, particularly those used for communications. An acute shortage of launching opportunities developed because the U.S. space shuttle and the European Ariane programs both suffered technical setbacks and were suspended.

China is also getting into the act, offering to launch foreign satellites on its Long March rockets.

What the Soviets have to offer is their extensive experience, ranging from launching the world's first satellite in 1957 to a total of about 100 Proton rocket launches a year recently. The space launches are in use since 1965. It announced failure rate is seven in 102 launches.

Britain's top heist unsolved

LONDON (AP) — For three years Scotland Yard has been reeling in suspects, getting convictions, probing money-laundering rings, but it has yet to find much of the three tons of gold stolen in Britain's biggest robbery.

The case began at dawn Nov. 26, 1983. Six hooded gunmen burst into a security depot at Heathrow Airport, doused the guards with kerosene and threatened to set them afire unless they opened the vaults.

The gunmen escaped in vans with 6,800 14-karat gold bars, worth $38.7 million.

Two of the holdup men have been caught and are serving 25-year prison sentences. The police say they know the identities of nearly all the others and are still running them down.

About $19 million, or half the proceeds of the robbery, has been traced, police say. Lawyers, real estate speculators and jewelers accused of handling the "laundered" assets that allegedly resulted from the robbery are being hauled in for questioning, in twos and threes.

"I think we've made significant progress. I think we'll make more," said Brian Worth, Scotland Yard's deputy assistant commissioner in charge of specialist operations.

While the hunt has been largely unembellished in what Worth calls the "very laborious business" of tracking money-laundering trails between Hong Kong and the Caribbean, it hasn't been short on drama.

Fourteen months after the robbery, an undercover team moved at night into the grounds of a country mansion south of London owned by Kenneth Noye, a wealthy businessman who, police suspected had masterminded a route in Britain to dispose of half the gold.

But Noye, alerted by his guard dogs, surprised one of the detectives, John Fordham, and stabbed him to death. Eleven of the gold bars — the only original ones found so far — later were dug up in his 18-acre garden.

Shaken by the detective's death, Scotland Yard in March 1986 formed a 45-member task force to delve into money-laundering and organized crime. The gold robbery became one of its assignments.

SWENSEN'S THE LOCAL FLORIST BRINGS YOU FRESH WHITE FLOWERS

There's certainly no question that a dozen long stem roses packs a lot of wallop when you need to send a certain kind of message, but this week Swensen, your local florist (among other things) is offering glamorous short stem white cauliflowers at an unbelievably affordable price, making it possible to impress someone you love with a dazzling bouquet of gorgeous white cauliflowers while at the same time providing that special someone with enough salad material, main course vegies and relish tray stuff for the rest of the month. Remember: Swensen's white flowers last longer in your refrigerator than red roses, white will go with almost any outfit, and of course if you give cheap cauliflower instead of expensive roses it's always the thought that counts.

Pollard case reveals underlying elements of Israeli society

Israelis sign letter of support for American Jonathan Pollard

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
The Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — The Pollard spy case revealed some basic elements of Israeli society: heavy emphasis on security, refusal to abandon a fellow soldier and a weakness in the system of checks and balances.

Jonathan Jay Pollard, a 32-year-old U.S. Navy intelligence analyst, was sentenced earlier this month in Washington to life in prison for selling military secrets to Israel: His wife, Anne Henderson-Pollard, was given five years in prison for helping him.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's government disavowed knowledge of Pollard's recruitment and said the spying, which has caused a major strain in U.S.-Israeli relations, was a "rogue" operation by a Defense Ministry agency that has been disbanded.

Official abandonment of Pollard, an American Jew, angered many people. Nearly all Israelis serve in the army and believe deeply that a colleague must not be deserted on the field of battle. Widespread support for Pollard was reflected in a poll published last week in the daily newspaper Yedioth Ahronot, which found that 68 percent of the 639 adults surveyed believed the government should help Pollard.

"I think (public anger) reflects a genuine concern that, yes we do have a value here, that we do not abandon people in the battlefield. They feel this guy Pollard was sincere in his desire to help Israel, and he was exploited to the full," said Joseph Alpher, deputy director of Tel Aviv University's Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies.

"You simply cannot abandon him because our leaders feel that to show compassion for him would be interpreted by the United States as a lack of proper conviction," Dov Shillansky, a legislator from Shamir's right-wing Likud bloc, said. "Pollard was not a soldier in the field, but I would say we all feel that if someone is out there trying to help us and he gets hurt, we owe him help in return."

One image from the affair most grating to Israelis was that of Pollard and his wife being turned away from the Israeli Embassy in Washington.

"Forget about the politics of the situation, who did what, who knew what," said Amnon Dror, chairman of a private fund-raising drive for Pollard.

News reports said the Israeli government has paid $20,000 towards Pollard's legal costs. Yedioth Ahronot newspaper said the government provided the money "because of its moral commitment to Pollard, although it continues to stress the spy operation was carried out in opposition... without the knowledge of the political echelon."

Dror, who claims tens of thousands of dollars were raised, said the private campaign was being dropped because of the reported government help for Pollard. He said he was in touch with officials and "I am satisfied that the government is serious about this."

"What is important is that Israel don't just leave someone hanging. We don't leave someone outside, banging on locked gates," said Dror, 58, who was a member of the elite Palmach commandos before Israel became a nation in 1948.

This touches on another tenet of Israeli society: the "right of return," which is enshrined in a law that says any Jew can claim citizenship.

Some see recruiting an American to spy despite extensive intelligence sharing between the United States and Israel as an example of overemphasis on security.

Harry Wall, director in Israel of the Anti-Defamation League of the American Jewish organization B'nai B'rith, said the Pollard case "demonstrates Israel's preoccupation, almost obsession, with security taken to unacceptable limits."

Rabin says no spying on U.S. since arrest

JERUSALEM (AP) — No one has other Americans, particularly Jewish university students and professors.

On Sunday, the Washington Post quoted U.S. attorney Joseph E. DiGenova as saying the possibility of broader American involvement was raised during Pollard's interrogation.

The Washington Times quoted Justice Department official John Martin as saying last week: "The prosecution of Pollard has ended. The investigation surrounding his activities and the activities of his co-conspirators has not ended."

They said that belief stemmed from the fact that Pollard, a 32-year-old American Jew, told interrogators his Israeli handlers often gave him identification numbers of highly classified documents they asked him to deliver.

The Americans fear the numbers were provided by a highly placed U.S. official, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

In a report last week, the daily newspaper Davar said the FBI suspected Israelis tried to recruit

BSU's NIT hopes dashed by Huskies

By MONTE ENBYSKI
 Special to The Times-News

NIT roundup — Page C2

SEATTLE — When the dust settled, 51 fouls had been called, Washington guard Greg Hill had 18 of his team's last 22 points and the Huskies escaped with a hard-fought 73-68 win over Boise State here at noisy Hec Edmundson Pavilion.

Thus ended the Broncos' first-ever appearance in the National Invitation Tournament, and a 24 season, the best record in the school's history.

Washington, 29-14, moves on to play the winner of Tuesday's Oregon State-California game in the NIT third round.

"We tried. We stuck with our game plan, which was to pressure them defensively and make them work for the hoop, and we gave it our best shot," said Bronco guard Chris Childs, who scored 21 in a losing effort.

"They're a good team," he said of the Huskies.

"We did a real nice job," BSU Coach Bobby Dye said. "I was pleased with everything but the final result tonight."

In a foul-plagued seasaw game, the player who emerged at the end was not 7-foot center Chris Welp, but Hill, a 6-foot, 3-inch senior guard who scored a game-high 24 points — 22 in the second half.

His three-point rainbow with 7 minutes and 26 seconds remaining put the Huskies ahead 54-33 and started the spurt.

It ended when he calmly sank two free throws with 10 seconds left to give Washington a 71-68 edge. Hill coolly hit 8 of 8 free throws in crunch time.

"It feels good that I was putting the ball in the basket," said Hill, who at one time scored 16 straight, including two three-point howitzers. "But when you come down and make one, you forget about it the next time down court."

Boise State provided the openings when it switched to a 2-3 zone in the second half, he said. "We have the perfect offense to combat that."

"When you're playing that way with confidence, that rim gets bigger and bigger," said Washington Coach Andy Russo.

Despite Hill's offensive explosion, and Boise State's early ineptitude at the foul line, the Broncos remained in the game until the very end when Childs tripped and was called for traveling with two seconds left and the score 71-68.

He had four three-pointers already and was itching to get the ball for another. But instead of him sending it into overtime, the ball went back to the Huskies and Al-Moscatei baseballed a pass in to Welp who ended it with a stuff.

"I don't know if I tripped myself or somebody tripped me," said Childs, who knocked Hill over when he tripped. Boise State spent the entire night in foul trouble but only two players — Arnel Jones and Greg Dodd — fouled out. At one time in the second half, six players had four fouls.

"I got to the point our guys didn't know what a foul was," Dye said, in part a jab at the officiating. "It (the foul trouble) had a major effect tonight."

With 16:40 left in the game, Dye made his displeasure known. He got up and pointed to the scoreboard that seven fouls had been called on Boise State in the second half to none on the Huskies.

Russo came charging toward Dye and an official to even out the argument.

It was a heated exchange between the two but it did not last long.

For the game, which seemed like an endless parade to the foul line, Boise State amassed 31 fouls to Washington's 20.

The free-throw problems came early in the game. BSU could convert only 4 of 13 in the first half. It turned it around after intermission by hitting 7 of 9.

Still, the early misses made a difference. Five of them were front ends of one-and-ones.

"I think missed free throws in the first half cost us the game," Dye said. "We could have been up 10 or 12 points in the first half if we had made our free throws."

"We didn't shoot well," admitted Dodd, who finished with 10 points. "It could have been the cause of us losing, but we still had the chance to win it near the end."

Eric Hayes also was in double figures with 11 in his final night as a Bronco, and as a team Boise State shot 54 percent from the field to offset its meager 50 percent effort from the foul line.

Washington players, and the 4,480 people in attendance, got a much tougher challenge from the Broncos than they expected.

"I can tell you this — they're a lot better team than they were last year," said Welp, referring to a 74-55 Washington win in Boise last season.

Welp was held to four points in the first half and 14 for the game, well below his 23.9 average.

"They slap at the ball so much; they're really active on defense. They make it really tough to move the ball and get good shots," he said.

BSU point guard Doug Ustalo, making an appearance in his hometown, had seven assists and four steals to go with four points. His former teammate at Edmonds, Wash., Community College, UW forward Phil Zevenbergen, kept the Huskies in it in the first half by making all seven of his field goal attempts. He scored only one point in the second half, however, and finished with 16.

CSI draws final 1st-round game; San Jacinto in other bracket

By The Times-News

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — The National Junior College Athletic Association men's basketball tournament will get under way here this afternoon, with second-ranked College of Southern Idaho getting a front-row seat until Wednesday afternoon's final game of the first round.

The 33-1 Eagles are scheduled to take on 27-4 Northeast Mississippi Community College of Booneville, Miss., here Wednesday afternoon at 12:45 p.m. MST in the final game of the first round. The winner of that game will play the winner of Wednesday's first-round game between fifth-ranked Allegany Community College (35-2) of Cumberland, Md., and 14th-ranked Brewton-Parker

Community College (30-2) of Vernon, Ga., in the final game of the second round Thursday night. Top-ranked San Jacinto (33-0) of Pasadena, Texas, the defending national champion, is in the opposite tournament bracket and will open at 3:30 p.m. MST today against 18th-ranked Westchester Community College (23-8) of Valhalla, N.Y.

The tournament, which follows a modified double-elimination format, will continue through Saturday night in Hutchinson's Civic Arena. The tournament will open at noon MST today with a contest between two unranked teams, Wabash Valley Community College of Mount Carmel, Ill., and Kankakee Community College of Kankakee, Ill.

That will be followed at 1:45 p.m. MST by a matchup between seventh-ranked Herkimer Community College (29-3) of Herkimer, N.Y., and 12th-ranked Gloucester County College (26-1) of Waterbury, Conn. That will be followed at 9:30 p.m. by the final game of the day, between unranked Bismarck Community College (22-10) of Bismarck, N.D., and Mesa Community College (28-6) of Mesa, Ariz.

At 7:45 p.m. MST, unranked Westark Community College (28-9) of Fort Smith, Ark., will take on 10th-ranked Mattatuck Community College (26-1) of Waterbury, Conn. That will be followed at 9:30 p.m. by the final game of the day, between unranked Bismarck Community College (22-10) of Bismarck, N.D., and Mesa Community College (28-6) of Mesa, Ariz.

Elimination of tie games proposed

NFL rulemakers call for 2 more seasons of instant replays

By DAVE GOLDBERG
 The Associated Press

KAANAPALI, Hawaii — The NFL's rule-making Competition Committee recommended to league owners Monday that they extend the controversial instant-replay oversight of on-field officials for another two years. The proposal, submitted at the first general session of the annual winter meeting, would phase in over the two years an instant replay official to each officiating crew, replacing the system used last season which had retired officials or members of the league office staff in the replay booth. The current replay officials would remain until the system is fully intact. Tex Schramm, the president of the Dallas Cowboys and chairman of the competition committee, predicted the measure would get the 21 votes it needs to pass. Miami Coach Don Shula, co-chairman of the committee, added: "The coaches and players just want the right call." The Competition Committee also recommended a change in the overtime system.

Under the present system, the game ends immediately if a team scores in overtime, even if the other team never gets the ball. Overtime games also stop after 15 minutes, even if neither team scores. The committee proposed that if a team scores on its first possession, the kicking team would get one possession to tie or win the game. If it ties the game again, the next team to score would win. In addition, the game would continue until a winner is determined. In addition, the committee sought to extend the protection of a quarterback by recommending a change that would allow a rushing defensive lineman only one step before he is allowed to hit a quarterback after the ball is released. At present, he can hit a quarterback from two steps away. Instant replay was used for the first time in 1986 to oversee non-penalty calls on the field. League officials say the system worked well in the second half after a first-half plagued by delays to watch replays and one in which botched communications gave the Los Angeles Raiders a touchdown each week that should have been overruled. The proposals are expected to be voted on Wednesday or Thursday by the 28 owners. The main topic of discussion among the owners remained the new television contract, the first in league history in which revenue is declining. Most agreed that he wouldn't specify a number.

time has come to cut-down in all facets of spending. Commissioner Pete Rozelle, giving his annual state of the league message to owners at the winter meetings, said he was relieved he had finished the bargaining that resulted in a 3.3 percent reduction in TV revenue — each team will now get about $50,000 less per year than the $17.5 million it received in the last year of the $2.1 billion, 5-year contract that expired Feb. 1. And he said he was optimistic about the league's financial future, noting that the NFL's 28 teams made more money than he would not specify a number.

Kidd's late basket seals Little Rock win

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Curtis Kidd, who scored 13 points in the first half and then disappeared, made a layup with 35 seconds left to secure a 54-48 victory for the University of Arkansas at Little Rock over Stephen F. Austin in the second round of the National Invitation Tournament Monday night.

NIT tournament

Kidd's basket put UALR on top 50-48 and came after Paul Springer penetrated the Lumberjacks defense. Stephen F. Austin only scored one field goal from the time UALR led 45-42 until a meaningless last-second basket.

Vandy scored only three field goals in the final six minutes, but sealed the victory by hitting 20 of 23 free throws.

Florida State guard Pee Wee Barber led all scorers with 23 points, George McCloud came off the bench to add 16 and forward Randy Allen finished with 16.

Illinois State 79 Cleveland State 77

CLEVELAND (AP) — Derrick Sanders scored 20 of his 27 points in the second half Monday night as Illinois State held off a late rally to defeat Cleveland State 79-77 in a second-round National Invitation Tournament basketball game.

Sanders, who leads the Redbirds with a 15-point average, scored eight points during a 12-2 run at the start of the second half. The run quieted the sell-out crowd of 7,433 at Public Hall and gave Illinois State a 55-43 lead.

The visitors expanded the margin to 60-47 on Cliff Peterson's 15-foot jumper with 13 minutes to play before Cleveland State responded with a 15-2 rally to tie it at 62 on Eddie Bryant's two free throws with 9:51 left.

Illinois State, however, then scored nine straight points, the last four by Sanders, for a 71-62 lead with 7:18 to go. Cleveland got no closer than three until Bryant hit a three-point shot at the final buzzer.

Todd Starks sank two free throws with five seconds left to clinch it for Illinois State, 19-12.

Tony Hoffield scored 18 points for Illinois State. Ken McAdams led Cleveland State with 20 points and Brent Cleveland with 17.

Vanderbilt 109 Florida State 92

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Vanderbilt's Will Perdue, Barry Booker and Barry Goheen each scored 22 points to propel the Commodores to a 109-92 basketball victory over Florida State in the second round of the National Invitation Tournament Monday night.

The Commodores, members of the Southeastern Conference, set a season high for points scored as they improved their record to 18-15 for the season.

Florida State, a member of the Metro Conference, had its season dominated by its season opener with a 19-11 record.

Vanderbilt led 60-58 before reserve center Randy Neff started a 2-7 Commodore explosion with a 3-point play with 14:08 to play.

Perdue and the Commodores dominated the game during the next 8:05 of the 7-foot-1 center power forward in four baskets on the inside before closing the spurt with two free throws with 6:03 left for an 83-65 Vandy edge.

Arizona aide lands Rice job

HOUSTON (AP) — Arizona assistant coach Scott Thompson was named the new head coach for the Rice University basketball team, the school's athletic director announced Monday.

Thompson replaces former coach Tommy Suttis, who resigned under pressure Jan. 30 after six years at Rice.

Thompson, 32, has been a member of the coaching staff of Lute Olson the past seven years, including the last four at Arizona. He also coached under Olson at Iowa and was an assistant on the United States team in the World Games last summer.

Greg Walcavich, an assistant coach at Suttis, coached Rice in the 1980-81 season. He was named head coach for the 1986-87 season. The Owls posted a 7-2 record under Walcavich and were 8-19 for the year — putting them in last place in the Southwest Conference with a 2-14 record.

Southern Methodist University, which has an SWC member, has had a football program banned in 1987 by the NCAA because of a booster shield fund that paid players. Meanwhile, allegations of payments to players under Suttis at the University of Houston, and an NCAA investigation is pending.

NCAA won't change its drug-test procedures

By RICK WARNER The Associated Press

College basketball

Despite protests from players and coaches, the NCAA won't change its new drug-testing procedures during the remainder of the men's basketball tournament. "We think it's a good system," said Vanderbilt Athletic Director Roy Kramer, a member of the NCAA's special drug-testing committee. "We think it accomplishes what we set out to accomplish."

College basketball was "ridiculous," Kansas Coach Larry Brown said. "I know it's good, and I know it's important. But there has to be a better way." Eight players on each of the 32 first-round winners were tested — the seven who saw the most action and one selected at random. School officials will be notified of the results before a third-round action begins on Thursday.

Players were provided with caffeine-free soda and juices because of high levels of caffeine in a positive drug test. "At all of the sites, we provided liquids that didn't contain any of the banned substances," said Connecticut Athletic Director John Toner, head of the NCAA drug-testing committee. "We didn't want anyone to go thirsty."

Third-round games begin Thursday at the Southeast Regional in Louisville, Ky., and the East Regional in East Rutherford, N.J. In the Southeast, Providence plays Alabama and Georgetown faces Kansas. In the East, it's Florida against Syracuse and North Carolina vs. Notre Dame.

Balboni's HR stakes Royals to win over O's

By The Associated Press

Steve Balboni, trying to recover from a 1986 season plagued by back problems, broke a scoreless tie with a leadoff home run in the seventh inning Monday as the Kansas City Royals defeated the Baltimore Orioles 2-0.

The Royals added a run in the ninth when Bo Jackson, who doubled earlier in the game, tripled and scored on a groundout by Bill Pecota.

Balboni's homer was the first of the spring for the first baseman who sat out most of the final month of 1986 with a ruptured and bulging disc.

In 1986 he had 36 homers and 88 RBI and last season finished with 29 homers and 88 RBI, but batted only .229.

The drive over the left-center field fence came off Rick Ownbey, a non-roster pitcher, after starter Mike Boddicker had checked the Royals on two hits over five innings.

Tigers 7, Twins 1

At Lakeland, Terry Harper and Larry Herndon each drove in two runs to back the five-hit pitching of veteran left-hander Frank Tanana and two others as Detroit beat Minnesota. Tanana allowed only one hit and one unearned run in the five innings he worked. He struck out four, including the side in the fourth.

Red Sox 6, Yankees 4

At Winter Haven, Kevin Romine capped a Boston comeback with a tie-breaking home run in the seventh inning and Marc Sullivan also homered, powering the Red Sox over New York. Reliever Steve Crawford, the third Boston pitcher, allowed only two hits in three scoreless innings as the Red Sox rallied from 3-0 and 4-1 deficits.

Expos 7, Braves 5

At West Palm Beach, Jeff Reynolds drove in the go-ahead run with a run-scoring single in a three-run Montreal seventh inning to pace the Expos over a split-Atlanta

Phillies 9, Red Sox 8

Angels 15, Cubs 2

At Mesa, Kirk McCaskill, making his first appearance of the spring, earned the win as California routed the Chicago, Relievers Donnie Moore and Ray Chadwick, who earned the save, combined with McCaskill to limit the Cubs to three hits. Butch Wynegar, Devon White and Doug Cencinches each had three hits for the winners.

drove in two runs for the Rangers, who handed the White Sox their sixth loss in seven spring games.

At Vero Beach, Dion James had two hits and scored twice to lead an Atlanta split squad, past Los Angeles. The Braves scored four runs off loser Tim Lary after Dodger starter Orel Hershiser had allowed the Braves one earned run on three hits through the first four innings.

Padres 11, Brewers 6

At Chandler, rookie catcher Benito Santiago drove in four runs with three hits as San Diego rallied to beat Milwaukee. After the Brewers had taken a 5-2 lead, the Padres scored four runs in both the sixth and seventh innings. Santiago had two-run singles in each of the innings.

Paraguay shades United States in first round of Davis Cup

By The Associated Press

The United States Davis Cup squad, fresh off an opening round loss to Paraguay, will have to defeat a Boris Becker-led West Germany if it is to stay in the World Group for 1988.

Only the 16 nations in the World Group actually compete for the prestigious Davis Cup, symbolic of men's international tennis.

The United States and West Germany will play July 24-26 in the United States, with the winner staying in the World Group for 1988 while the loser drops down to zonal play next year.

West Germany was upset by Spain 3-2 in the best-of-five-matches competition, while Paraguay defeated the United States 3-2.

"Wonderful, wonderful," Victor Pecci shouted after defeating Aaron Krickstein of the United States in straight sets early Monday to propel Paraguay to victory. After Saturday's matches, the U.S. team held a 2-1 lead and appeared to be on the verge of victory.

Tennis

But Sunday night, Paraguay's Hugo Chapacu won a five-hour, five-set match over Jimmy Arias to tie the series 2-2 at the Paraguay Yacht and Golf Club in southern Asuncion.

That set the stage for Pecci's 6-2, 8-6, 9-7 victory in 3½ hours that ignited the 3,000-fans. When Krickstein netted at forehead on match point, Pecci fell to the ground and was buried under hundreds of fans who swarmed on to the court.

Sergio Casal shocked Becker, the reigning Wimbledon champion, in the final singles match Sunday to lift Spain over West Germany and into the second round of the World Group.

Casal, ranked 53rd in the world, upset the No. 2-ranked Becker 6-2, 6-6, 6-2, 6-3.

In other first-round World Group matches, Israel upset Czechoslovakia 3-2, Mexico downed Britain 5-0, India edged Argentina

3-2, defending champion Australia crushed Yugoslavia 4-1, Sweden whipped Italy 3-2 and France crushed South Korea 5-0.

The second round pairings, which will be held July 24-26, will send Sweden against France, Paraguay against Spain, India against Israel and Mexico against Australia.

Besides the United States vs. West Germany, other relegation matches will pit Italy against South Korea, Argentina against Czechoslovakia and Britain against Yugoslavia.

While Pecci won the decisive match, it was the little-known Chapacu who was the "key" to Paraguay's victory.

Chapacu was down 5-1 in the fifth set before staging a dramatic comeback against Arias to score a five-hour, five-set victory. Chapacu won five straight games to take a 6-5 lead, saving a "match point" in the seventh game.

Arias finally held his serve to pull even at 6-6 before Chapacu took two of the next three games and closed out a 6-4, 6-1, 5-7, 3-6, 9-7 victory.

Following Pecci's victory, the U.S. team hurriedly left the Paraguay stadium as rampaging fans ran over the clay court, taking souvenirs of the net, Pecci's shirt and the towels used by Pecci to wipe perspiration.

The U.S. team, led by captain Tom Gorman, was silent as it left the stadium and went behind closed doors.

In Barcelona, Spain, West Germany had a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five-match series going into Sunday.

CSI's nine drops its fourth straight

By The Times-News

MESA, Ariz. — The College of Southern Idaho saw its season baseball record fall to 2-5 here Monday after dropping its second game of the day.

The Eagles lost 15-7 to Mesa Community College here Monday night after dropping a 10-9 contest to Scottsdale, Ariz., Community College in nearby Scottsdale earlier Monday.

It was the third loss for the Eagles on their current road trip and their fourth in a row. CSI bowed by Dixie College 14-10 Saturday night in St. George, Utah.

CSI is scheduled to travel to Tempe, Wednesday for a twinbill with the Arizona State University junior varsity.

Mesa jumped on CSI sophomore right-hander David Carter for three runs in the first inning and five in the third and scored six more off relievers Corby Schroeder and Jeff Mo in the fifth in the rout of the Eagles.

CSI picked up two unearned runs on the second on three Mesa errors combined with a run-scoring double by freshman catcher Chris Hanks. The Eagles had the lead briefly, at 3-0, after an RBI groundout by freshman outfielder Billy Satterfield and an run-scoring single by Dave McQuilvey. The Eagles made it 5-3 in the top of the third on Hanks' fourth home run of the season.

After Mesa had taken a 14-5 lead with six runs in the bottom of the fifth, CSI made things respectable with a two-run single by Satterfield. Satterfield finished the game 2-for-4 at the plate with three RBIs, while Hanks was 2-for-4 with two RBIs. Sophomore second baseman Eric Kops was 2-for-2 in the game.

Earlier Monday, Scottsdale's Brad Keogh led off the bottom of the eighth with a double and scored on Bill Wurd's single to stake his ballclub to the victory.

CSI had tied the score in the top of the seventh on a run by McQuilvey tripled and scored on a single by freshman outfielder Errol Shirer.

College baseball

Satterfield singled, sending Shirer to second, and both scored on a three-run homer by Hanks.

The Eagles had taken a short-lived two-run lead in the first inning when Mo singled, scored ahead of Hanks on his two-run homer, but Scottsdale came back to tie the game in the bottom of the inning. CSI pulled ahead 5-2 with three more runs in the second. Kirk Slater doubled and scored on Kops' double. Shirer followed with a single that scored Kops, went to third on Satterfield's single and scored on a force play.

Scottsdale went up 7-5 with three runs in the bottom of the second, then scored two more in the third. Hanks finished the game 2-for-3 at the plate with five RBIs, going nine-seven for the day. Slater, McQuilvey and Shirer all had 2-for-4 games at the plate.

Since he succeeded Ed Garvey, who orchestrated a 57-day strike during the 1982 season, Upshaw has made it his business to open the lines of communication between the union and the owners, especially Pete Roselle and, especially, Donlan. The management negotiator was a guest last summer at Upshaw's wedding.

"This is not going to be a personality confrontation; it's going to deal with the issues," Upshaw recently said of upcoming talks. Donlan and I have spent a lot of time together away from our jobs. We often travel together.

"Heaven knows, in the past, the two sides didn't talk as much as Donlan and I talk. I'd like to think we've created a working environment in which we can agree. We talk three or four times a week."

Laughing at the contrast to his dog-eat-dog relationship with Garvey, Donlan recently said that he told Upshaw, "If we get any friendlier, we're going to have to start picking out furniture."

Their Maui rendezvous took place at the eye of the NFL owners meetings, which opened Monday on that Hawaiian island.

Florida's cities scramble to attract baseball

By BEN WALKER
The Associated Press

Baseball

Pretty soon you'll need a scorecard to tell the players in Florida and a Rand McNally to find them.

While minor-leaguers sweat it out for jobs, the hottest scramble in the Sunshine State is among cities trying to attract major-league teams for spring training.

Port Charlotte's web of inducements lured the Texas Rangers from Pompano Beach. Kissimmee romanced the Houston Astros from Cocoa Beach. Port St. Lucie wooed the New York Mets from St. Petersburg and Boardwalk.

The Cincinnati Reds may move to Plant City, a victim of Tampa-St. Pete's desire to get a major-league expansion franchise, and George Steinbrenner's New York Yankees keep making noise about leaving Fort Lauderdale. The Cleveland Indians may exit Arizona and become the 19th club training in Florida.

"The competition for teams is quite intense," Rafael Marcucci of the Florida Department of Commerce said.

Estimates show spring training sites are worth about $6 million to local areas, along with added recognition. That is why many communities, once just dots on a map, will spend part of their tourist and tax money to try to get a team.

Several clubs are going to rural parts of the state because there is room to build. These are not always popular moves with players.

Houston pitcher Charlie Kerfeld, wearing a diamond earring, said the Astros' gleaming two-year-old training base in central Florida, "next to the dusty Silver Spurs Rodeo pit — is far better than what they had for 22 years in Cocoa Beach. But there is a downside.

"I miss the women and good times," he said. "In Kissimmee, all you've got are the cows and bulls to play with."

Getting a spring training team, a deal that usually includes a Class A club for the summer, takes incentives as well as money.

"Anything you can offer them helps," said Don Ayley of the Port Charlotte committee that lured the Rangers.

Most important, Ashley said, is a new stadium and complex, with plenty of adjacent practice fields. A pledge of support helps. Port Charlotte sold almost 2,000 general season tickets for the Rangers, compared with 174 in Pompano Beach last year. Other economic benefits, such as tax breaks and reduced rent and maintenance costs, also are enticing.

"What's happening is municipal and county governments are sweetening the pot," Gray Webb, a Pompano Beach city commissioner, said.

Texas players have nicknamed their new spring home "Green Acres" because of its isolated location in southwest Florida. Many Rangers say the best place to live there is on an island that doesn't allow cars, and one practice was delayed 20 minutes when fog prevented a ferryboat from getting them across in time.

The Rangers, and the Washington Senators, before they moved to Texas, had trained since 1961 in Pompano Beach, 10 miles north of Fort Lauderdale. But Municipal Stadium got security. "They threw a ball through a rotted piece of plywood outfield fence last year — and when there wasn't enough room for the major and minor leaguers both, they left."

Fort Myers, which has had Kansas City's Royals since its inception in 1959, is also getting dumped.

"There's no question we will be losing a real source of pride," Lee Menzies of the Fort Myers business development corporation said.

"But the Royals played very fairly with us. If there was a problem here, it was probably on our end," Menzies admitted. "They asked for a few improvements, and the community didn't respond."

In Port St. Lucie, meanwhile, there already are signs welcoming the Mets, and a local radio station will carry their games for the second straight season, even though the team won't arrive there until next spring.

Construction has started to widen two-lane Prima Vista Boulevard leading to the new 5,000-seat stadium in participation of March 5, 1988 — when the Los Angeles Dodgers come down 15 miles from Vero Beach to play the Mets in their 1988 spring opener.

The Mets have trained in St. Petersburg since their inception in 1962. While they have their own training sites, they play at Al Lang Stadium with the St. Louis Cardinals for games. The Mets do not have their own locker room at Al Lang, and after games they must drive 15 minutes to another complex to shower.

"The way I describe it for years we lived in a nice duplex that we shared. It's gotten a little tattered around the edges," Mets General Manager Frank Cashen said. "Then, someone comes along and offers to build you a nice new house where you can put your whole family. They made it easier. What could we do?"

Mets owner Nelson Doubleday owns land near Fort St. Lucie and wanted to move from Florida's west coast to the east side.

"I think it's terrible they're leaving. I love the Mets," said Jane Her-ring, 63, of St. Petersburg, wearing a crumpled Mets' hat.

The Reds, a spring staple for 50 years in Tampa, may be headed to a new home in Plant City.

Tampa has put the Reds on year-to-year notice since they would like to build a major-league stadium on top of them, if-and-when baseball expands to the area.

Bosox sweeten pot for A.W.O.L. pitcher Clemens

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — The Boston Red Sox made their first move to get A.W.O.L. pitcher Roger Clemens back into training camp Monday by sweetening their offer with revised and increased incentive money.

General Manager Lou Gorman said he had talked 20 to 30 minutes by telephone with Alan Hendricks, Clemens' agent, who was in Tucson, Ariz., on business. "We increased our incentives, which would put Roger's earning potential at around $950,000," Gorman said. "The base salary would remain the same as in our original offer, but we changed the incentives to try to make them more palatable to him."

Gorman could not be pinned down on specifics. However, Clemens walked out during practice March 6 Monday, but teammates, who asked after Hendricks rejected a club offer, not to be identified, said they believed of a one-year contract for $500,000 and $350,000 in incentives.

Mini-rodeo set March 26

TWIN FALLS - As a prelude to the annual College of Southern Idaho Intercollegiate Rodeo March 27-29, there will be a mini-rodeo on Thursday, March 26, for youngsters.

Special Olympics this week

BOISE - Nearly 200 athletes will participate in the Idaho Special Olympics Winter Games here Thursday through Saturday.

Trenkle, Mattie finalists

COUER D'ALENE - College of Southern Idaho men's basketball Coach Fred Trenkle and Jerome High School head football Coach Joe Mattie are two of five finalists for the Idaho Coach of Year Award given annually by the Idaho Hall of Fame.

Winners in the various categories will be named at the 25th Anniversary Idaho Sports Banquet here Saturday night.

Other candidates for the Idaho Coach of the Year Award are Pat Dobrats, former-University of Idaho women's basketball coach; John Owen, wrestling coach at North Idaho College, and Idaho head football Coach Keith Gilbertson.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Utah Jazz Coach Frank Layden, ill with viral pneumonia, did not attend Monday practice and likely won't make it to tonight's NBA game against the Golden State Warriors, a team spokesman says.

Walker to coach at worlds

TWIN FALLS - College of Southern Idaho baseball Coach Jim Walker has been selected one of three coaches for the USA Junior Baseball Team at the World Junior Baseball Championships.

The three, chosen by the United States Baseball Federation's Youth Committee, will select their squad from 64 participants at the United States Olympic Festival in July in North Carolina.

Walker served as an assistant coach at the 1986 U.S. Olympic Festival in Houston.

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls Men's Softball Association will hold an organizational meeting Thursday night at City Hall.

Padres give up on Raines

SAN DIEGO (AP) - The San Diego Padres on Monday terminated their courtship of Tim Raines, saying there was no hope the club could work out a contract agreement despite the free agent outfielder's reduced money demand.

The negotiations are done and he's not going to play in San Diego, Padres president Ballard Smith said.

Smith broke off talks with the 1986 National League batting champion on March 1 after Raines and his representative rejected as inadequate a Padres proposal for a $2.2 million, two-year deal.

Airline turbulence

Plagued by problems from service to takeovers

By RICK GLADSTONE
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Despite predictions that U.S. airlines would enjoy relative peace and prosperity in 1987, the industry is still convulsed with problems ranging from shoddy service to traumatic takeovers.

Passenger complaints have surged at airlines that have quickly grown to unwieldy size by digesting competitors. Employee anger over layoffs and labor concessions is flaring at Pan American World Airways and Eastern Airlines.

Last year's fare wars have dissipated but not disappeared, largely because of industry giant Texas Air Corp., the Continental Airlines parent which last year purchased Eastern and now the pioneer People Express. Unless Texas Air decides to raise fares, its rivals won't either.

While heavily discounted seats remain available, they are limited by advance purchase and no-refund clauses. A Ralph Nader consumer organization has accused the airlines of advertising more bargain seats than they are willing to sell as a ploy to increase business.

"American carriers are forgetting what they're supposed to be doing in the air and concentrating on the marketing on the ground," said Jack Bloch, owner of JP's Travel World agency in New York. "They've lost sight of service."

The frenzied pace of airline takeovers in 1986 had been expected to subside, partly because few attractive candidates remained.

That prediction was undermined late last month by a merger scramble among TWA, USAir Group Inc. and Piedmont Aviation that remains unresolved.

Other principal takeover targets are Alaska, Aloha, America West, Braniff, Midway, Pan Am, Presidential and Southwest airlines, industry analysts say.

Smaller carriers face the choice of aligning themselves with an industry giant or starving. Many have turned to private letters, rushed into marketing agreements with bigger carriers.

In Minneapolis and Milwaukee, most passengers have little choice but to fly Northwest, which now has a 70% market share through its acquisition of Republic Airlines in St. Louis, most of the traffic destinations and fares. One of the goals was to stimulate competition and reduce the cost of flying.

Critics of deregulation concede that competition has intensified and fares have dropped. But they are troubled by the shrinking number of airlines.

While 123 interstate carriers were operating three years ago, 74 are operating now, according to Airline Economics Inc., a Washington consulting and publishing firm.

The eight airlines have sought bankruptcy-court protection and more than 25 have been acquired or agreed to be purchased. Most industry analysts believe the industry is evolving toward a half dozen super-airlines.

Delays in a possible decline in competition has sparked concern in Congress.

Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, plans to hold hearings on airline mergers March 25 before the Senate Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on antitrust monopolies and business rights, which he chairs.

For travelers, deregulation's effects have been felt in declining service, ranging from lost luggage to long ticket lines. This is especially so with airlines going through mergers.

The best example is Texas Air, which has about 20 percent of the market and has been trying to quickly absorb Eastern and People Express, which had owned Provenctown-Boston, Brill and Frontier airlines.

Delays and cancellations have plagued Continental's new Newark, N.J., hub—instances of cold meals and overbooking reached the point where flight attendants advised passengers to mail complaints to Texas Air chairman Frank Lorenzo.

Texas Air officials concede their company's rapid expansion has caused problems, but say that service will improve and contend that the airline's giant size and low labor costs will keep fares down naturally.

"The argument can be made that consolidation strengthens competition," said Bruce Hicks, Texas Air spokesman. "The surviving companies are stronger financially and in a better position to provide service and fair competition to the consumer."

Glossy corporate reports may join dinosaurs ere long

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The corporate annual report, that yearly attempt to wrap up prose and glib photos around endless tables of dull statistics, is about to undergo some changes — including, possibly, its extinction.

The Securities and Exchange Commission, the body that supposedly required corporations to prepare the annual report, has told the business world that it really doesn't care much one way or the other.

It gave the green light for corporations to change or even do away with the traditional report, as long as legally required financial statements are given to shareholders in some other acceptable way.

Once those requirements are taken care of, the SEC said, the content of what it called the "glossy report" to shareholders, "as with any other corporate communication not prescribed by the commission's rules, is a matter for the company's determination."

The SEC issued its opinion earlier this year in a private letter to General Motors Corp. But, recognizing the import of its decision, it released the letter to the public.

GM's proposal was based on a lengthy effort by the Financial Executives Institute, to find alternatives to the increasingly complex annual report. GM said it wanted to shorten the report and make it more readable, and the SEC approved as long as the automaker follows through with other parts of its proposal.

In lieu of the detailed financial tables in the usual report, GM said it would widely circulate full-audited statements with the press release on the company's earnings report and shift many of the detailed financial statements into annual proxy statements mailed to shareholders.

In addition, an SEC Form 10-K, the source of financial information for most professional investors, will be on file before the annual report is released. Summary data from the 10-K will be included in the report's appendix, and shareholders will be told how to get a copy of the 10-K. And financial data in the report will no longer be accompanied by auditors' report.

The result will be that all the required public statements will be included in the proxy statement or in public 10-K filings.

"Since the annual report would no longer be used in any SEC filings or proxy mailings, it could be dropped entirely," GM told the commission. "However, we believe that it has value as a general communications medium to our stockholders."

GM said it wants to make the report more readable, but it also wants to save money. Dale Cooper, GM's manager of stockholder relations, said the 1987 annual report now in preparation has 44 pages of high quality paper, and the auto giant will publish 2 million copies.

Shifting financial tables onto the lower quality paper of the proxy statement in 1988 and publishing a shorter annual report with only key financial statements will mean a substantial savings, she said.

Micron sees more losses

BOISE (AP) — Micron Technology Inc. said it expects to lose money for the eighth consecutive quarter.

The Boise-based semiconductor company said Friday that it anticipates losing $11 million for the second quarter of its current fiscal year, which ended March 5.

That compares with net losses of $9.7 million and $9.8 million for the first quarter, which ended in December, and for the second quarter of the previous fiscal year, respectively.

But Micron officials said their second-quarter revenues actually increased to about $20.4 million, compared with $19.7 million in the previous quarter.

Chairman Joseph Parkinson attributed the anticipated losses partly to intense competition from Japanese computer chip manufacturers.

"I think we have proven that the Japanese have been selling way below cost," Parkinson said.

MARKET REPORT

Trading slows as 'witching hour' looms

By CHET CURRIER
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Stock prices sagged Monday in the slowest trading in 2½ months as traders looked ahead to the "witching hour" at the end of the week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 10.22 to 2,248.44, bringing its loss over the past four sessions to 31.65 points.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 134.93 million shares, down from 150.87 million Friday and the smallest total since a $1.88 billion share day on Jan. 2.

This Friday marks the last trading in a set of options and futures on stock indexes, which are used by professionals in multiple computer-program strategies.

In the past, witching-hour sessions have frequently produced volatile and heavy activity as program traders close out their positions.

"These quarterly occasions have established a reliable pattern. Some Wall Streeters argue that the approaching one won't be especially stormy."

Nevertheless, brokers said, many market participants were opting for a cautious approach, with that uncertainty facing them and nothing much in the current economic news to encourage them to do any new buying.

Most of the day's selling came early in the session, with analysts noting selling by New Jersey as part of a divestiture program involving stocks of companies doing business in South Africa. Through the afternoon, the market drifted and then made up a little of its lost ground near the close.

Among the blue chips, Coca-Cola lost 1 to 46½; General Motors ½ to 77; Alcoa 1½ to 42½; Sears Roebuck 1½ to 51½, and American Telephone & Telegraph ¼ to 23½.

Owens-Corning Fiberglas tumbled 3¼ to 26 for one of the day's largest percentage declines among Big Board issues. The company attributed the drop to a New York Times article published Sunday on studies of the health effects of glass fiber.

CertainTeed, another producer of glass fiber items, fell 2¼ to 36½. Upjohn dropped ¾ to 134 as a Food and Drug Administration advisory panel recommended that the FDA approve Upjohn's minoxidil drug for use against baldness, with adequate labeling.

Upjohn shares soared from about 33, adjusted for stock splits, in 1985 to a recent high of 150, spurred to a significant extent by excitement over minoxidil's anti-baldness prospects.

On Monday, analysts said, investors were inclined to take profits in the stock and perhaps scale back slightly their views of the drug's sales potential.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 9 to 5 in the overall tally on the NYSE, with 550 up, 1,016 down and 338 unchanged. The exchange's composite index lost 37 to 164.34.

Nationwide turnover in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 158.43 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial fell 1.92 to 329.41, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 1.66 to 228.23.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market dropped 1.11 to 430.86. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 331.18, down 1.25.

Wool price supports rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government wool price supports available to sheep producers for 1987 will be $1.81 per pound, up from $1.78 last year.

The Agriculture Department has announced. The 1987 support for mohair will be $4.95 per pound, up from $4.93 in 1986.

Vern Neppi of the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service said.

Payments will be made next year to help make up the difference between the support price and the average market price during the year. The 1987 market price for shorn wool is expected to average around 70 cents per pound, compared with 68 cents last year.

Mohair prices are expected to be about $3 per pound, compared with $2.70 in 1986, Neppi said.

Demand for auto mechanics to rise during the next decade

What profession would you choose for your child? Doctor? Lawyer? Maybe. What about auto mechanic?

Older are auto mechanic does not even rank in your top 10. Knowing the facts may spark some interest for you and your child.

The demand for auto mechanics is slated to rise over the next decade to an estimated 1 million total by 1995. Today, about 900,000 of these professionals are currently working for auto repair shops, car dealers and gas stations throughout the country.

Job opportunity is not all that is changing. In recent years, the nature of the work has undergone drastic realignment. With the advent of microchips and computerized engines, today's mechanic has truly become a highly skilled and often specialized technician.

Employment for auto technicians will increase just due to the growing number of drivers and the surge in the number of cars on the road. But complex auto technology will be the key factor creating more job opportunities for students who have the right technical background.

"Electronics has hit the automobile," Scott Morrison, director of marketing of Precision Tune, told my research associate, Beth Kobliner. Technological advancements make cleaner air and better gas mileage possible.

In the '50s and '60s, car engines did not change much. In the late '70s, automobiles were equipped with engine control systems and in the early '80s, on-board computers. Today, car engine specifications change as frequently as every 90 days, Morrison says.

Because of this new technology, he adds, a new breed of specialist evolved, called an engine performance specialist. Unlike the general master mechanic, specialists concentrate on certain areas of the automobile.

Training is also different. In the '50s, a boy interested in cars and not necessarily at the top of his class would usually go right into the industry, often as an apprentice in a gas station. In the '60s and '70s, the student entered vocational or technical schools after completing high school, to learn about gas and diesel engines. In both cases, after years of on-the-job experience, they emerged as master mechanics.

In the '80s and '90s, students with an interest in becoming auto technicians are more likely to be college-bound, typically in the top half or quarter of their high school class. Mechanical dexterity is still a must, but an interest in computers is essential. Many of these students enter auto tech programs at community college or vocational or technical schools. Background in electronics, physics, chemistry and math, ability to read and understand complex car manuals, good analytical skills and, of course, a knowledge of automobiles are vital.

As the level of skill and technical training in the field increases, so do salaries. Being an auto technician can be a lucrative career. According to the California Automobile Association, high school graduates often start at $12,000 to $16,000. Graduates of a two-year community college program earn from $17,000 to $24,000. After five years, a highly skilled technician can earn from $25,000 to $40,000, or more.

On the national level, average weekly earnings for full-time payroll employees in 1986: $324 per week, reports the Labor Department.

While the number of women entering the field is growing, statistics of the Labor Department reveal that only 1 percent of all auto technicians are female. According to the Automobile Association of America (AAA), contributing to the demand for more technicians is the fact that the average age of technicians today is in the mid-50s.

Many companies sponsor automotive schools. For the past four years, the AAA has co-sponsored the Plymouth/AAA/Tire Shooting Contest. From more than 7,000 high school and vocational facilities in all 50 states, 150,000 seniors will participate in this written and hands-on competition this year. The winners from each state will compete for over $400,000 in prizes and scholarships. Since it began in 1949, over 40,000 students throughout the country have been placed in automotive technician jobs as a result of the contest.

Call on your local AAA to find out more. Or have your auto shop or technical school instructor write for more information to: John Moore, National Chairman, Plymouth/AAA Tire Shooting Contest, 500 North Primrose Drive, Orlando, Fla. 32803

Visa to combat Express efforts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of Visa U.S.A. Inc. has launched an assault on the American Express Co.'s new credit card, asking some 500 Visa-issuing banks to "rethink" selling American Express products because of the new competition.

Visa President C.T. Russell said in telegrams to the banks that American Express' new Optima card "is positioned to be directly competitive with your Visa and MasterCard products."

"The essence of this move is an attempt by American Express to further its presence in the retail banking market by acquiring additional relationship with your better customers," said the telegram, released Friday.

Russell suggested that bankers call American Express to complain about the move into "one of your most profitable lines of service." He added, "you may wish to rethink your position in offering American Express products."

American Express announced Tuesday that it would offer the new Optima card to people who already hold an American Express card.

The Optima would cost an additional $15 a year, on top of the $45 for a regular American Express card, but it would offer revolving credit at a 12.5 percent annual interest rate, substantially less than most Visa cards charge.

Russell's telegram was released by the Consumer Federation of America, which said it was asking the Justice Department to investigate whether Visa was applying anti-trust provisions in an effort to maintain the comparatively high interest rates on Visa cards.

But A. Wayne Johnson, Visa executive vice president, said Visa cards generally are cheaper than the new Optima card when annual fees are factored in. The complaint, he said, is that American Express was breaching a longstanding business relationship with the nation's banks.

For years, banks have sold American Express-traveler's checks at an "intentional profit," simply to serve their customers, he said. American Express in turn stayed out of the credit business; their cards required payment in full each month.

Johnson said American Express' new Optima card breaks that understanding by competing for the credit business with the nation's million holders of Visa Premier or Mastercard Gold cards.

"American Express has inexplicably and forever changed the environment," Johnson said, and the nation's banks should have the right to reconsider selling American Express-traveler's checks.

But Walter Montgomery, senior vice president of American Express, said the Visa telegram "seems like an overreaction."

"We're engaged in a very selective marketing effort," Montgomery said in New York. "We're not trying to compete head-to-head."

Consultant from SBA to visit area

BOISE — A representative from the Service Corps of Retired Executives Program of the U.S. Small Business Administration will be available March 26 at Burley and Twin Falls to consult with business owners.

Appointments should be made in advance by phoning the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce at 733-3974 or the Burley Chamber of Commerce, 678-7230.

The SBA guarantees loans for acquisition or operation of profit-oriented ventures. It can guarantee as much as 90 percent of a conventional loan, with a maximum guarantee of $50,000.

The SCORE consultant will be available at the chamber offices in Twin Falls and at City Hall in Burley.

GM sales drop 2.2 percent while Ford shows increase

Auto Sales

March 1-10, 1987
Percentage increase from same period last year (on a per-vehicle-day basis) rate financing; rebates or discounts on options on most models. Ford sales were up 5.9 percent for the period. The No. 2 auto maker also announced Friday that it would add the popular Taurus and Sable models to the list of cars that fall under its incentive program.

Chrysler, which is also offering selective incentives, said its sales were essentially flat for the period, up a scant 0.4 percent. Among the smaller manufacturers, American Honda said its sales were up 16.1 percent in early March. Nissan U.S. reported a 19.1 percent increase from the year-ago period. American Motors said its sales fell 57.3 percent and Volkswagen U.S. reported a sales gain of 4.9 percent. Toyota, which recently began selling some of the cars it produces jointly with GM in Fremont, Calif., said it sold 500 units in the period. On a seasonally adjusted basis, domestic new cars sold at an annual rate of 7.5 million in the first 10 days of March, down from the 7.7 million annual rate posted in the comparable 1986 period. The annual rate is a reflection of the number of cars that would be sold if a period's sales pace were to continue for a full year.

Winner of Oregon's biggest lottery jackpot still farming

By MARILYNN WHEELER
The Associated Press

CANBY, Ore. — Life hasn't been the same for Dick Anderson since he became Oregon's first lottery millionaire in 1985. But it hasn't been just one big Monopoly game, either. The 45-year-old farmer's $7.4 million jackpot is the largest prize awarded since the Oregon Lottery began April 25, 1985. The money is paid in 20 yearly installments of $370,000, or $288,000 after taxes. "For some people, winning the lottery would mean instant retirement," says Anderson. "For us it was exactly the opposite."

A lot of things haven't changed. Anderson and his family still live in the same house, a mile away from where he grew up. He still farms land first settled by his grandfather in 1900. And he still buys lottery tickets.

Anderson has invested his winnings in more farm land and has put more money into side businesses, such as an industrial park along Oregon Highway 99 and a pickle company.

His wife of 20 years, Diane, clings to the simpler life they used to lead. Though she has taken over the pickle business, she still does her own house cleaning. She also worries about how the lottery windfall has affected her friends and family.

Anderson says the initial wave of publicity lasted about six months after he won the lottery July 6, 1985. There was a lull, then all the attention began again when he received his second annuity payment a year later.

"There are still quite a few people calling. Anderson says, 'Everybody's under-capitalized. They just need little more money.'"

"They have collected two cardboard boxes of mail, he says, adding, 'I still haven't read a third of it. I'm not interested in a gold mine in Nicaragua. We've had some real bizarre-type requests.'" messages people leave on the Andersons' answering machine.

"One woman wanted money to save her home, because she's given $80,000 to save cultural arts in Afghanistan. To us, that's outrageous."

"Some California people sent us a picture of their summer home," recalls Anderson. "They'd like money for a new roof and some refurbishing. We don't even have a summer home."

"People don't have complaints, they just call to say 'I hate you,'" says Mrs. Anderson. Then there are the salesmen.

"I could have been rich in the stock market a thousand times if I'd taken everybody's advice," Anderson says. "But I haven't bought one single share of stock. I figure I'm better sticking to what I know, which is real estate, especially farm real estate."

He's invested in another 100 acres of farm land, bought some new farm equipment and made some improvements in the way he farms. He used to raise vegetables, but this year he has most of his acreage in grass seed, which takes less time and labor than canner crops. During the winter, his new herd of 600 sheep grazes his grass seed fields.

Anderson says another big investment has been in the pickle business.

The farm's main cash crop when he won the lottery jackpot was cucumbers, and for several years he'd rented one of his outbuildings to a pickle maker who also bought part of his crop.

When the pickle maker's business started to fall in October 1985, the Andersons bought him out. Mrs. Anderson says the company recently extended its distribution of genuine kosher dill pickles from Oregon to markets in Seattle and Spokane.

"We're not making any money yet," she says. "But we're getting ready to break even."

The couple have had a hard time spending their lottery winnings. Irivolously, says Mrs. Anderson. The only exception was last fall after winning big on a trip to Reno, Nev. They blew about $3,000 in an afternoon spending spree, she says. She bought jewelry and her husband bought a rifle.

They took their teen-agers, Marc and Tricia, to Hawaii for spring vacation last year. This year, they're planning a trip to Mexico.

Mrs. Anderson says winning the lottery hasn't affected their kids much, probably because they were old enough at the time to have learned the value of money.

However, she is less comfortable with the family's new fortune.

"I think nobody should win that much money," she says. "Having an income of $300,000 a year, we ought to be able to go out and pay cash for a new house. That doesn't feel normal."

Timber company's annual report shows earnings jumped 50 percent

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Weyerhaeuser Forest Products Co. earnings jumped 50 percent to $244 million during 1986, the timber giant's annual report says.

President and Chief Executive Officer George Weyerhaeuser attributed much of the profitability to last year's restructuring of the company, which was divided into separate entities to oversee solid wood products, pulp and paper and diversified services such as real estate, financial services and gardening equipment.

According to the annual report, Weyerhaeuser's diversified products division had $2.63 billion in sales last year, slightly less than sales in 1985. Earnings in 1985, however, were only $162.8 million.

Logs represented the largest 1986 sales increase. Weyerhaeuser sold 506 million cubic feet of logs last year, compared with 406 million cubic feet in 1985. The company's overall financial statement, released in January, indicated that Weyerhaeuser's profits increased 38 percent, with net earnings of $276.7 million. Gross earnings before taxes and interest payments were $421 million, based on sales of $5.65 billion.

A breakdown for the three Weyerhaeuser companies created by the restructuring wasn't available until completion of the annual report, which stockholders received Thursday.

George Weyerhaeuser wrote in his message to stockholders that diversified services led to much of the company's growth in the early 1980s, but that that would probably change.

According to the annual report, earnings in diversified services dropped from $60.3 million in 1985 to $46.4 million in 1986. Sales were $789 million in 1986, compared with $847 million the year before.

"These operations oriented almost entirely to U.S. markets, were to a large degree insulated from the declining competitiveness of the United States in world markets, and from the inroads of increasing import volumes," Weyerhaeuser told stockholders.

In the 1986-87 environment, sales and earnings recovery has and will come mainly from our forest products and pulp and paper businesses as our share of markets increases and prices and margins strengthen.

Earnings from pulp and paper operations improved dramatically, rising from $124 million on sales of about $2.2 billion in 1985 to earnings of $221 million based on sales of nearly $2.4 billion.

But the company said the earnings were still less than half of what it had targeted.

Montana wood business improves

BOZEMAN (AP) — The wood products industry is bouncing back in Montana, and sales last year hit a record $830 million, a University of Montana study says.

Even when adjusted for inflation, the sales rival those of 1979, the peak year for timber production and sales in Montana, said George Keegan, who wrote the study for the Bureau of Business and Economic Research.

The major products covered in the study included lumber, plywood, pulp and paper.

Keegan, who said 1987 is also projected as a good year for lumber consumption, said the state's timber industry is bouncing back from a three year recession from 1980 through 1982, and several years when high inventories kept down prices.

There was a decline in the oversupply of lumber last year, he said, when the U.S. dollar declined, there were strikes in production areas in the Northwest and the Canadians had imposed a 15 percent tax on lumber sold in the United States.

"As a result, the price of timber has risen from 10 to 20 percent during the past two years, and prices appear to be remaining up for the first two months of this year, Keegan said. The price of paper has also risen."

The information was gathered by the bureau from the 32 largest mills in the state, accounting for more than 90 percent of the wood products processed.

Keegan said there is some uncertainty about the lumber market this year, because the effect of the Canadian tax on lumber is unknown.

Keegan said that while production is at an all-time high, the number of people employed in the timber and related industries has been steadily declining. That is because industry has implemented labor-saving technology both in the woods and in processing.

The U.S. Forest Service says the statewide harvest in 1985 from all sources, including government lands and private timberlands, was almost 1.2 billion board feet. The agency hasn't published the 1986 figures.

Much of the production comes from four counties in the northwest corner of the state: Lincoln, Flathead, Sanders and Missoula. In 1985, 47 percent of the timber harvested in the state came from national forest lands, up from 33 percent in 1982.

Terry Redig, an economist for the Forest Service in Missoula, said that studies show timber is being harvested on public lands at a rate slower than the growth rate. To replenish the land,

American buyers choose more house over lower payments

NEW YORK — When a house is the item to be purchased, Americans like to go first class, or to at least spend as much as they can afford.

They don't do it with travel; relatively few non-business travelers choose first-class over coach.

At the showroom, they show a decided preference for small, lower-priced automobiles, even forcing a salesclerk in Detroit to bend to their wishes.

At the meat counter, they have a tendency to pick choice over prime beef. And when choosing clothing or household items their preference for discount stores helped create what is often referred to as the "retailing revolution."

But in housing their attitude is different. When mortgage rates fell about 1.5 percentage points last year it was reasonable to expect that monthly payments would fall as well. But the monthly payment on conventional mortgages rose instead, by about $40.

It means that buyers choose more house over lower payments, according to analysts at Lomas & Nettleton, Co., Dallas-based mortgage bankers. Customers bought $15,000 more house than they were willing to buy the year before.

Monorail system proposed

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — A $50 million monorail system which would link Ogden, Salt Lake City and Provo is being proposed by a group of Salt Lake City businessmen.

In a presentation to the Weber County Commission, Paul Smith of Horizon Transportation System said his group believes the monorail system would be the best solution to solving downtown parking problems along the Wasatch Front and eliminating heavy traffic on the Interstate 15 corridor.

The plan calls for building a monorail using technology devised for Disneyland and Disney World, Smith said.

The project's first two phases would link Ogden to Salt Lake City and Provo, while Phase Five would link the system up to the ski resorts east of Salt Lake City, Smith said.

It would take 40 minutes to travel from Ogden to Salt Lake City on the monorail, even with several stops at "pick points along the way."

"It's a very fast, very quiet piece of machinery," Smith said.

The electrically powered system would, in terms of moving people, equal a six-lane freeway, he said.

Smith said construction of the double-rail system would be handled by a Florida-based company, the Transportation Group, which is the marketing arm of Bombardier Co. of Quebec, Canada.

Bombardier negotiated rights from Disney World to produce its monorail system, Smith said.

He said funding for the project first would be sought from the private sector, with government participation solicited only on such matters as obtaining right-of-ways.

Smith said Horizon currently is trying to run together funding for a feasibility study on the monorail system.

Several major investors, who he declined to name, are waiting for results of the study, he said.

Seagram plans to sell wine brands

NEW YORK (AP) — Joseph E. Seagram & Sons Inc. said Tuesday that it had agreed to sell its medium-priced table-wine business for $200 million to a concern headed by two longtime wine industry figures.

Seagram said the brand being sold is Paul Masson, Taylor California Cellars, Taylor New York, Great Western and Gold Seal wines.

The buyer was identified as Vinters International Co. Inc., a New York-based concern headed by Paul M. Schlem, who headed Gold Seal before it was sold to Seagram, and Michael P.H. Clift, a former Seagram wine executive.

Seagram has owned Paul Masson since 1955 and acquired Gold Seal in 1979. The two Taylor wines and Great Western were part of the Wine Spectrum which Seagram purchased from Coca-Cola Co. in November 1985.

Seagram is keeping the two other Wine Spectrum wines, the premium California wines of Sterling Vineyards and The Monterey Vineyard.

customer paid $118,000 for the average conventionally financed new home — conventional mortgages are those with fixed rates, usually for 20 years to 30 years — compared to $105,000 in 1985. The trend was even more pronounced in the existing home market, where buyers paid $108,000 for the average home, compared to $93,000 in the earlier year; a 16 percent increase, versus a 13 percent rise in the new-home market.

The suggestion is strong, therefore, that Americans put the purchase of a home in a different category than their purchases. They are, it appears, eager to invest in the home in which they live rather than save the money or use it to make other purchases or investments. Paul M. Low, Lomas & Nettleton senior vice president, remarks that this willingness to use "savings" from lower interest rates to invest in more house seems to challenge old attitudes about the impact of interest rates.

The classic view is that buyers appear when monthly carrying charges decline sufficiently to fit their income scales. That view assumes that affordability is the key factor in the decision to buy or not to buy. But, says Low, in a period of relatively low interest rates, affordability is not nearly as significant as when mortgage rates are higher.

Instead, he suggests, homebuyers seem to have a number in mind about how much they can afford to invest. While an interest rate decline may cause them to lower that number, more likely they view it as an option to buy more house. Additional evidence of Low's number theory seems to come from the rental market. Nationally, the rent component of the consumer price index rose 6 percent last year, in spite of a market pockmarked with vacancies.

Ordinarily, a buyer's market would put downward pressure on rents. But of all the major markets, says Low, only Houston fell, and by only one-half of one percent.
