Court approves job preference for women

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, for the first time upholding an affirmative action plan for women, ruled Wednesday that employers may give special preferences in hiring and promoting female workers to create a more balanced workforce.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices said a 1964 civil rights law banning on-the-job discrimination allows such preferential treatment. And they said employers may adopt affirmative action plans without admitting past discrimination against women.

plans to help racial minorities in a series of decisions since 1978. Wednesday's ruling marks the first time it has approved such preferential treatment for women.

The decision was hailed as a momentous victory for women's rights. "It vindicates our historic position that sex discrimination, like race discrimination, can be remedied by the use of affirmative action measures," said Judith Lichtman, executive director of the Women's Legal Defense Fund.

As it has in a series of affirmative action cases, the court rejected the Reagan administration's position. Justice Department lawyers had argued that individual rights should not be sacrificed in the interest of "casual social engineering."

The court rejected an appeal by Paul E. Johnson, who was denied promotion to road dispatcher by the Santa Clara County Transportation Agency in California.

The job went to Diane Joyce, who Johnson said was less qualified than himself. The court said Johnson, who scored two points higher than Ms. Joyce on a test, may have been minimally more qualified for the job. But the justices emphasized that their ruling does not mean unqualified people will be hired or promoted.

"Sex is but one of several factors that may be taken into account in evaluating qualified applicants for a position," Justice William Brennan wrote for the court. The transportation agency "appropriately took into account one factor the sex of Diane Joyce in determining that she should be promoted to the road dispatcher position," he said.

The court's dissenters said the ruling perverts the 1964 law "into a powerful engine of racism and sexism."

Justice Antonin Scalia said, "We effectively replace the goal of a discrimination-free society with the quite incompatible goal of proportionate representation by race and by sex in the workplace."

He was joined by Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justice Byron L. White. Brennan said employers may grant preferential treatment to overcome "a manifest imbalance" in the number of men and women holding specific jobs.

"Voluntary employer action can play a crucial role in eliminating the vestiges of discrimination in the workplace," he said.

Brennan emphasized that employers should not be forced to admit past bias before taking such steps since to do so would

Quick return by Bakker looks unlikely

The Associated Press

FORT MILL, S.C. — The Rev. Jerry Falwell said Wednesday it would be impossible for the Rev. Jim Bakker to return to his scandal-ravaged evangelical empire anytime soon, while a new board member of the organization vowed: "There will be no funeral for PTL."

Meanwhile, two California religious activists said a $115,000 payment made by Bakker was not blackmail as he claimed but settlement of a threatened lawsuit over his sexual dalliance with a church secretary seven years ago. It remained unclear where most of the money ended up.

And a Tennessee minister said he plans to "show leaders of Bakker's denomination, the Springfield, Mo.-based Assemblies of God, evidence that PTL officials attempted to cover up reports of the sexual misconduct."

Falwell, who will preside here today at the first meeting of the new PTL board he formed since succeeding Bakker as chairman last week, told a civic club luncheon Wednesday in Cocoa Beach, Fla., that he had heard rumors Bakker would return to PTL.

"I hear rumors that he wants to return soon," said Falwell, a fundamentalist Baptist minister who founded the Moral Majority. But he told the club that if that happened, "it would make our job impossible." He added that he didn't know how he and the new board could deal with the credibility issue if Bakker were to return right away.

"I'm not saying he could never return," he said. "That's up to God, not Jerry Falwell."

He also said he had no desire to remain as the head of PTL beyond the time needed for "fence-mending."

On Tuesday, Charles Cookman, the district superintendent of the First Assembly of God Church, said in Dunn, N.C., that the church stood by Bakker and his wife, Tammy Faye, and that the door was open for Bakker to return to the ministry.

One of the new board members arriving in Fort Mill on Wednesday for the meeting was the Rev. James Robison, a Southern Baptist TV

Senate OK's $343 million school budget

The Associated Press

BOISE — After days of tedious delay, the Senate Wednesday overwhelmingly approved a $343-million 1988 state budget for public schools that actually exceeds what was once called an ambitious recommendation from Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Amid rising pressure from Democrats for action on the major bills still blocking final adjournment, the public school allocation, a key component of the huge $857 million legislative budget draft for the year that begins July 1, was sent to the House on a 55-7 vote.

"I think we've acted very responsibly," Senate Education Chairman Terry Sverdrup, R-Cataldo, said, and floor sponsor Darrell McRoberts, R-Twin Falls, added, "Maybe we are reaching a new plateau in Idaho."

Action on the public school measure came as other pieces of the 1988 tax and spending puzzle continued to fall in place but there remained no consensus on the $18 million tax increase package needed to avoid a huge deficit next year.

In the House, another major victory for the governor was confirmed with final approval of his $1.7 million budget for the Commerce Department to get the campaign to revitalize Idaho's economy off the ground. That bill, exactly what Andrus proposed, included another $300,000 to underwrite the state's bid for multibillion-dollar federal Superconducting Super Collider project.

Together with the House and Senate sent another two dozen 1988 spending bills to the governor's desk. In addition to the Commerce budget, they included the $180 million Transportation Department budget that cleared the House with nearly no discussion, and the $24.6 million Fish and Game allocation that drew only taken opposition in the Senate.

On the tax side, the Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee cleared the way for final action on a House-passed repeal of a $3.3 million tax break for agricultural leaders. That bill, approved last year by Republicans at the behest of then GOP gubernatorial candidate David Leroy, has done little to increase farm credit, critics in both parties have claimed.

The sponsor of the bill when it passed last year, Sen. Lynn Tominga, R-Rupert, agreed to sponsor the repealer this year. The committee also again delayed action on a $2.5 million restoration of the capital gains income tax exclusion for farmers and loggers that has also passed the House.

Repeat of the loan credit, called well-intended but ill-conceived, and defeat of the capital gains restoration are critical to keep the current revenue gap at only about $15 million.

The only opposition to the public school budget in the Senate came from Republicans seriously concerned about the huge tax increase required to finance it and the rest of the budget plan and the impact higher taxes will have on the still-fragile Idaho economy. Sen. Phil Batt, R-Wilder, voted against the public school budget for the first time in 15 sessions because the current tax structure will not support it.

Jerome phone bill refunds in works

By MARK PRATTER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Some 4,500 Mountain Bell subscribers in Jerome to the MetroPac discounted long-distance service received incorrect bills for February and March, a Mountain Bell spokesman said on Wednesday.

The error, due to a mistake in a computer billing program, could affect other Mountain Bell long-distance subscribers in Jerome if they made long-distance calls during February and March, spokesman Rick Hays said.

MetroPac subscribers receive discounts for long-distance calls between points in the Magic Valley, Hays said.

Those who paid too much will receive a refund in April, said Hays. The company has assigned four people to review every phone bill in Jerome for the period in question, he said. Because of this, he said, it would do customers no good to call in about irregularities in their bills.

Hays said he had no idea of the amount of money involved in the errors. "We're talking about small amounts. The majority of them were under $10," Hays said.

This is not the first time there has been a problem with MetroPac billing. In December 1985 a state Public Utilities Commission memo referred to double-billing of MetroPac customers when they should have received a discount, according to the PUC.

The PUC was not informed of the latest problem until a reporter called and told them.

Hays initially said Wednesday that he had been informed, but when advised that PUC spokesman Gary Richardson said the PUC was not aware of it, Hays retracted his earlier statement.

The PUC is now checking into the situation, said Richardson. Hays also initially said that the problem was turned up in routine internal checks at the company's Salt Lake City accounting center. He later also retracted that statement, saying the problem was discovered from customer complaints.

A random check of business and residential customers in Jerome on Wednesday showed no one was aware of problems with their phone bills.

The programming error in the latest case occurred while a number of other program changes were being made, Hays said.

Panel prepares sweeping trade bill

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sweeping trade legislation returning new authority to impose import restraints cleared major House committee hurdles Wednesday as lawmakers sharpened their focus on the record U.S. deficit in global markets.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said the blueprint approved 34-2 by his panel "sends our trading partners a strong message that the time for excuses is over."

"It is not a belligerent message but it is one that they will ignore at their peril," Rostenkowski told a news conference. As the issue heated up, the House adopted by unanimous consent a resolution calling on President Reagan to retaliate against alleged Japanese violation of a six-month-old semiconductor trade agreement. Sponsor Robert Matsui, D-Calif., said the nonbinding measure, similar to a version approved by the Senate last week, "sends a strong retaliatory signal."

But measures produced by House committees, which now will be combined into a single trade bill, were the major developments.

The Banking Committee voted 85-15 to make a competitive exchange rate for the dollar, a major objective of U.S. negotiators, and take steps to help with reduction of Third World debt.

The measure also calls on the administration to press other countries to halt the practice of pegging the value of their currencies to the value of the dollar.

As the value of the dollar falls, U.S. exports become less expensive in other countries and imports become more costly in the United States. A few nations have effectively thwarted American efforts to fight the record $109 billion trade deficit by causing their own currencies to fluctuate in tandem with the dollar.

The House Energy and Commerce Committee approved 26-45 a trade package that in some features appeared to conflict with the Ways and Means version, raising the prospect of a contest between two powerful chairmen, Rostenkowski and Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., of the energy and commerce panel.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, could refer; such a conflict when he and the chairman meet early next month to weave trade proposals from an array of House committees into one, smooth package.

That measure is expected to reach the House floor for debate late next month. But the Ways and Means provisions are expected to form the heart of what emerges as the final product. Before acting, the Ways and Means Committee heard from Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., who is seeking to add a provision that would call for import curbs to force other countries to reduce the dollar value of unfair trade practices by 10 percent a year if they refuse to take action voluntarily.

As approved, the measure contains a modified version of Gephardt's plan, with its provisions relaxed somewhat. Gephardt stopped

Senate probes go to court to get Secord's bank records

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate attorneys sought a court order Wednesday to force former Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord to give them access to records of foreign bank accounts that investigators believe he controlled as part of the Iran-Contra connection.

In a U.S. District Court filing, the Senate said Secord should be held in contempt if he refuses to comply with a valid court order. The court authorized the step in a vote last week.

Secord has cited his Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination in refusing to comply with a request from the Senate investigating committee that he sign an order directing foreign banks to make available the information.

Investigators, including the presidentially appointed Tower commission, say the former Air Force officer helped organize shipments of weapons to Iran and the Nicaraguan rebels, making use of Swiss bank accounts under his control.

In other Iran-Contra developments: Senate Democrats, after failing a third time to choke off a Republican-led filibuster, abandoned their drive to force President Reagan to fully account for all assistance flowing to Nicaragua's Contra rebels. The Senate voted 54-46 in favor of cutting off the filibuster, but that was six votes short of the total needed to end debate. Still, Democratic leaders said the vote provided evidence that there may be a Senate majority ready to reject new aid installments.

The White House released a letter from the Tower commission apologizing to J. Robert McBrine, a Treasury Department official dealing with national security affairs, for incorrectly identifying him in connection with a Swiss bank account deposit. At McBrine's insistence, the White House released the letter concerning insertion of his name in brackets after a reference to a "Bob M." in the Tower report. There was no indication to whom "Bob M." actually referred.

The Senate request for court action in the Secord case came late in the day after Senate and House committees investigating the Iran-Contra affair held separate meetings to take stock of their work thus far.

Two members of the House committee, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there was no evidence to dispute President Reagan's statement that he did not know funds were apparently being diverted from Iran arms sales to the Contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government.

The two sessions took place amid unusual concern about secrecy.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., and his counterpart in the Senate, Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, both said they would seek the removal of any committee member caught leaking unauthorized information to reporters. They said the penalty for staff leaks would be dismissal.

They issued their warnings after publication on Wednesday of a New York Times story that said investigators believe former CIA Director William Casey masterminded the once-secret Contra aid program that was run by former National Security Council aide Oliver North.

Asked about the story, Hamilton said, "We believe, of course, that Mr. Casey was a principal actor in these events. His name comes up frequently." But Hamilton said the investigation has not yet focused on any particular personalities or transactions.

expose them to lawsuits for sex discrimination.

Joining Brennan's opinion were Justices Thurgood Marshall, Harry A. Blackmun, Lewis F. Powell and John Stevens.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor voted to uphold Ms. Joyce's promotion over Johnson.

But she said in a separate concurring opinion that the court went too far endorsing affirmative action.

"Unfortunately, the court today gives little guidance for what statistical imbalance is sufficient to support an affirmative action plan," O'Connor said.

Marsha Levick, executive director of the National Organization for Women's Legal Defense and Education Fund, said the decision "sends a strong message to employers that voluntary affirmative action is the way to go to remedy past discrimination against women."

She said the decision likewise carries a message for women — "They have an equal right to compete for advancement and promotion."

Ms. Lichtman of the Women's Legal Defense Fund said the ruling "puts to rest once and for all the arguments the Justice Department has used to thwart aggressive legal measures to overcome past discrimination."

The Santa Clara County Transportation Agency adopted its plan in 1978 to promote women, minorities and the handicapped. At the time, not one of the agency's 733 skilled craft positions was held by a woman.

The plan has a long-range goal of assigning 35 percent of the agency's jobs to women, minorities and the handicapped, the approximate percentage of the county's available workers.

The plan did not specify any past discrimination by the agency; only that "the women and others were under-represented."

Johnson challenged the plan after he was demoted from promotion to road dispatcher in 1980 and Ms. Joyce got the job.

Both had considerable experience working as road yard clerks with the agency. Johnson said in addition to scoring two points higher than Ms. Joyce he was more qualified because the examiners who conducted the oral test unanimously recommended him for the promotion.

preacher who vowed that PTL would survive the current crisis.

Robison also chastized other religious leaders for engaging in an evangelical civil war over the $172 million PTL.

"Jesus-treated Judas with more dignity than some preachers will treat other preachers," Robison, based in Fort Worth, Texas, said on Wednesday's "PTL Club," the daily PTL television program.

Bakker said Monday from his Palm Springs, Calif., home that he quit the 500,000-member ministry to score a "political plot" to take over PTL, which stands for Praise the Lord or People That Love His name. He identified evangelist Jimmy Swaggart as instigator of the scheme.

Swaggart denied trying to bring down PTL, but admitted telling Assemblies of God leaders what he knew — about Bakker's sexual encounter and said his fellow Pentecostal evangelist was a "cancer" that needed to be excised from the body of Christ.

The two Californians interviewed Tuesday by the Orange County Register, said they tried to contact Bakker for years after learning of his infidelity and finally threatened to sue him if he didn't talk to them.

John Stewart, an Orange County attorney who co-hosted a Christian radio program called "The Bible Answer Man," and Paul Roper of Anaheim also said the woman, church secretary Jessica Hahn, 27, of West Babylon, N.Y., claimed the evangelist pressured her into having sex with him.

Stewart said the $115,000 settlement was negotiated on Ms. Hahn's behalf.

Action on the bill has been stalled for days until the severely split GOP Senate majority finally fashioned a consensus on some changes leaders wanted made in the bill.

Those modifications, added to the measure before the final Senate vote, included earmarking $8 million of the total for nonrecurring school district expenses. Legislators to use as much of the extra money to offset property tax increases obtained last spring and removing the specific designation that $2.1 million be used to underwrite a one-time school district Social Security obligation.

Lawmakers believe the so-called one-time money will give them some flexibility when it comes to writing the 1989 school budget.

Democrats, whose bid to mandate huge teacher pay raises was rejected, generally opposed the changes, claiming they could undermine local district operations and be used to counter appeals for increased local support.

The budget plan, a 10 percent increase over this year's allocation and $800,000 more than Andrus recommended, still includes enough money to finance the first of four proposed teacher pay-raise increases to bring Idaho salaries up to the national average. That was a key part of the governor's recommendation.

Coupled with a new law changing the formula for distributing aid to the 116 school districts, the budget will raise the support for the state statistical equivalent of a classroom unit to nearly $32,000 a year from just over $29,000 this year.

The bill also stood in stark contrast to past state allocations to public schools that have been minimal at best and viewed as so inadequate many local districts had to ask for local property tax hikes to make ends meet. Last year's addi-ped-short-of-asking-for-a-vote on his proposal to make the measure "more results-oriented."

But Gephardt, a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, is expected to attempt to offer his plan on the floor.

Key provisions of the measure would:

- Transfer the power to order import curbs to aid industry threatened by foreign competition from the president to the U.S. trade representative.
- Establish "mandatory" retaliation in the case of countries that violate trade agreements or engage in "unjustifiable" practices.
- Call for retaliation against the denial of certain worker rights, such as collective bargaining, as an unfair foreign trade practice.
- Invoke retaliatory procedures for nations that target sectors of the U.S. economy for a wave of exports.
- Grant the administration authority to negotiate a new General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, the pact that governs much of world commerce.

As was the case with a trade bill that passed the House last year, the measure is being advertised as containing "mandatory" retaliation features.

national school tax levies hit a record $29.8 million statewide, up over $3 million from the previous year.

The delays on the public school budget vote, intertwined in a battle over a $15 million tax increase package needed to balance the overall budget plan, prompted the Democratic minority in the chamber to stand firm against any further majority attempts to postpone a vote.

That decision forced GOP leaders to pull the House-passed $107 million state budget for higher education from the floor so it's stacked up behind it could be considered without departing from Senate procedures. To do that, Democratic support would have been needed.

"There's no intent to reduce this bill," Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, R-Boise, said. "The fact is we don't have the money yet to pay for it."

Risch said the higher education budget would be held in the Senate and the public school appropriation held in the House until after an agreement is worked out on the tax package to close the gap between spending commitments and available revenue.

Senate Democratic Floor Leader Kermit Kiebert of Hope claimed the only way to expedite action on that revenue plan being put together by House tax-writers was to pass the appropriations bills to prove the extra money was needed.

"We must show the House it's time to move," Kiebert said, and Democratic Caucus Chairman John Peavey of Carey predicted the continuing delays would add another week to the 1987 session.

House Revenue and Taxation Committee Chairman Steve Antone, R-Rupert, said no firm decisions have been made on the content of the tax package yet, pointing out that the House was waiting for Senate action on the budget measures to indicate just how much additional revenue was needed.

Senate committee sets up final vote on Gem lottery

BOISE (AP) — With little debate, an Idaho Senate committee has cleared the way for a final legislative vote on proposed repeal of the constitutional ban on a state-run lottery.

With only Republican Mark Ricks of Rexburg formally dissenting, the State Affairs Committee on Wednesday endorsed the constitutional amendment and recommended approval by the full Senate.

The measure, similar to one that passed the Senate on a 32-10 vote earlier this year only to be rejected for drafting reasons by a House committee, cleared the House by the exact two-thirds vote needed for approval.

The committee also heard testimony from dozens of supporters and opponents on legislation legalizing dog racing that breezed through the House last week only days after its introduction. But a vote on the measure was postponed.

Supporters claimed dog racing would provide an economic boost to the Coeur d'Alene area and would not conflict with horse racing in other areas.

But the horse racing industry strongly opposed the plan, submitting a petition with over 500 signatures opposing the bill. The committee, however, warned that dog racing would do little to help the economy and only drain receipts from the horse racing industry.

Chris Christian of the Idaho Thoroughbred Breeders Association said the issue was too important to be pushed through the Legislature in just a matter of days when it has taken years of debate to bring the lottery issue to that same point.

Endorsement of the constitutional amendment by the House, where lottery proposals have died in past sessions, came in response to last fall's 60 percent voter approval of a legally-questionable lottery initiative that is now being challenged in district court.

If approved by the Senate, as expected, the measure would be submitted to voters in November 1988.

The only public opposition came from Stanley Crow, a leader of anti-lottery forces, who warned that the proposal did not specifically ban casino-gambling although even its supporters had claimed they had no intention of opening that door.

Crow recommended that a sentence be added specifically including a casino gambling ban, but with legislative leaders trying to end the session in the next few days that would have required the House to reconsider the bill.

"Considering where we are" in the session, Senate President Pro Tem James Risch, R-Boise, said, "it's either this or nothing."

The measure, if approved by voters next year, would remove the legal cloud hanging over the 1986 initiative, district court decision in the legal challenge to that initiative was expected in a few days.

Split education board dies

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho House vote for good management and wise expenditure of the money we spend on education, one for public education, schools and one for higher education.

The House on Wednesday voted Sandpoint, an elementary school principal, said in the 15 years he has been in state government, not a member House, to approve proposed constitutional amendments, so the port creating a urged board.

"I'll bet you $5 that if it gets on the ballot, the people will reject it for consideration but lost with only 54 votes. It was held over, and sponsors debated for an hour on Wednesday trying to save the proposal. But they didn't gain a single vote."

Rep. Janet Hay, R-Nampa, former member of the Board of Education, argued it would improve management efficiency to have separate boards. "We could save some money and get better value for our educational dollar," she said. "This is a vice building in Boise because of the many new education employees that would be needed.

"This will engender, create and encourage inefficiency," she said. The proposal passed the Senate 37-3.

Tax committee again delays starting on major decisions

BOISE (AP) — On Wednesday, the 73rd day of the 1987 session of the Idaho Legislature, its key tax committee was supposed to start making major tax decisions.

But the name didn't get far, postponing major decisions for yet another day.

Chairman Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, told Revenue and Taxation Committee members he wanted to pare down a list of tax proposals to a couple. Antone said depending on what the Senate does with major education bills, it appears the state could need up to $15 million in additional revenue for the next state budget.

But members could agree only to strike two from a list of 10 tax proposals.

As the meeting ended, Antone told members to be prepared on Thursday to present their last tax proposals of the session, and to make a tax decision.

But the 18-member committee centered on whether the Legislature should seek short-term solutions to funding problems, by levying and collecting one-time money, or seek a longer approach know where we are going," he said.

Antone said it appears the Legislature will not agree on any tax increase that is not spread across all groups, including individuals and corporations.

The committee agreed to eliminate from future consideration imposing the sales tax on services, and another bill phasing out the investment tax credit over the next three years. Also dropped from the "active" list was House Bill 337, which proposed cutting the allowance for personal exemptions along with phasing out the investment tax credit.

Rep. Harold Reid, D-Craigmont, said he wasn't strongly for his proposal to impose a 5 percent surcharge on state income tax returns. But other committee members voiced strong support for that proposal, and it was kept alive.

Rep. Gary Montgomery, R-Boise, said he didn't like the idea of using one-time money to balance this year's budget.

"If we use one-time dollars this year, next year we will double the problem," he said.

Gas tax showdown in works

BOISE (AP) — Amid concern about the impact on key sectors of the Idaho economy, the state Senate has tentatively approved a scaled-back increase in the state fuel tax.

Without dissent on Wednesday, the Senate voted to reduce the three-cent increase that passed the House last week to two cents. The revised proposal still needs final approval before it can be returned to the House.

Transportation Chairman John Sessions, R-Driggs, said it would be rejected.

Senate Transportation Chairman C.A. Smyser, R-Parma, called the scaled-down tax plan raising the levy to 6.5 cents a gallon a compromise, but Sessions suggested that the House would accept only a three-cent boost.

Critics of the higher increase claim it will hit hardest on farmers and businesses shipping by truck.

If the two-cent increase is approved by the Senate but rejected by the House, the bill could still be salvaged before the end of the 1987 session if some kind of compromise could be worked out between the two chambers.

State highway officials, already facing a backlog of needed road maintenance and other work that is nearing $1 billion, have warned that without more revenues the state highway network, already labeled deplorable in some areas, will continue to deteriorate.

Because state fuel tax revenues have dropped due to improved fuel efficiency and driver conservation and federal support is declining, the new department budget based on current revenue forecasts all but completely eliminates the annual resurfacing program that is already running behind the schedule officials believe is really needed to maintain a quality road network.

Under the House plan, the state would collect about $7.6 million in additional revenue, enough to reinstate the resurfacing program and provide several million dollars more to begin eating into the road-work backlog. The rest of the money would generally be distributed to cities, counties and local highway districts.

The Senate plan, if approved, would cut available extra funds by a third, leaving the department short of the money needed to fully restore the resurfacing program even on its inadequate schedule.

In the past decade, officials said, the percentage of Idaho highways 15 years or older has risen from half to two-thirds. They contended that under the House version, Idaho's tax will still remain in the same range as those charged by the surrounding states except for Wyoming.

Adams loses bid to fund commission

BOISE (AP) — Rep. Richard Adams, D-Grangeville, battled for a long time Wednesday to "save" funding for the Commission on Women's Programs but he lost every vote.

As a result, it appears that a $6,300 appropriation for the commission is dead for the session.

The appropriation was part of a $7.1 billion budget bill that also included funding for the Commission for the Blind, Office on Aging and the Human Rights Commission.

But after a long battle by Adams to save the appropriation, the House voted 42-27 to eliminate funding for the commission.

The House took the action in a series of standing votes, in which members' votes are not recorded individually. But it appeared that a majority of Republicans opposed funding for the commission, and Democrats and a handful of GOP House members favored it.

Adams at first tried to get more money put into a program providing meals and other services for senior citizens. For an extra $50,000, Adams said, the state could cut a waiting list of nearly 300 senior citizens trying to join the program.

Gorbachev sends back Reagan's missile proposal of 1981

Will we soon have a nuclear arms-control agreement with the Soviet Union?

Early agreement would seem highly likely in light of President Reagan's optimistic appraisal of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's proposal to eliminate all intermediate-range missiles in Europe. In fact, proponents of arms reductions suggest that such an agreement is possible in three or four months.

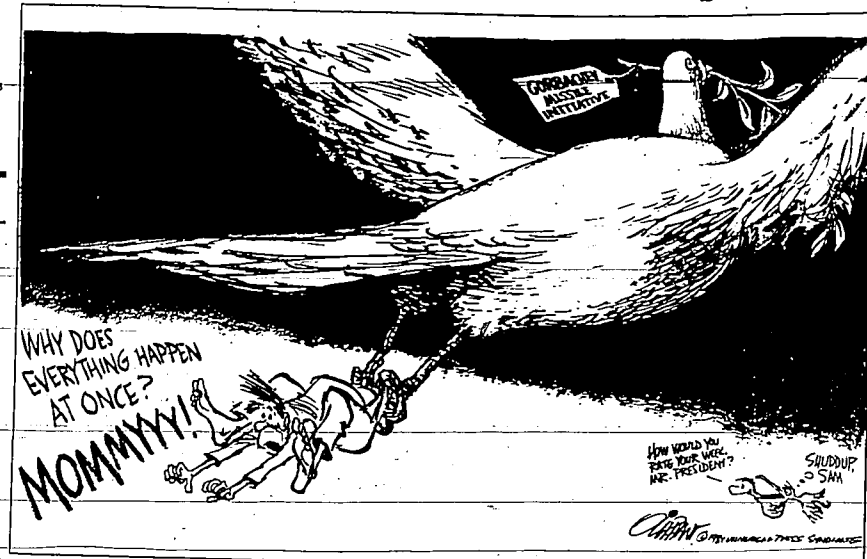

Eugene J. Carroll Jr.

But some key players are not equally optimistic. Before he fell ill, Max M. Kampelman, the senior U.S. negotiator in Geneva, said that he hopes to reach a useful agreement by spring 1988. Other authoritative voices in, or close to, the administration are raising doubts, citing three principal concerns about the wisdom of removing U.S. missiles, the difficulty of negotiating an equitable agreement with the Soviets, and the ability to verify compliance with the agreement to prevent Soviet cheating in the future.

The first concern is based on the assertion that the Soviet Union has overwhelming conventional military power that can be countered only by U.S. nuclear strength. That assertion is made so often that it is commonly accepted without question even though there is considerable evidence that it is a myth.

For example, the conservative International Institute for Strategic Studies of London says in a recent analysis that the conventional balance of NATO and Warsaw Pact military forces in Europe "is still strong to make general military aggression a highly risky undertaking for either side. . . there would still appear to be insufficient overall strength on either side to guarantee victory."

There is another reason to question the argument that 316 intermediate-range U.S. nuclear missiles are would retain 100 warheads on 100 missiles in the United States. To reduce to equal numbers of warheads, the Soviets would have to dismantle 520 missiles and inactivate 1,115 warheads while the United States would dismantle 216 missiles, each with one warhead. Numbers never tell the whole story of an arms-control agreement, but it is fair to say that the Soviets are offering up a lot more than we are.

Finally, the issue of verification is raised by many who oppose any arms agreement with the Soviets. Perhaps the most straightforward evidence that we can verify missile levels with great confidence is provided by the Department of Defense in its publication, "Soviet Military Power." The 1986 edition lists exactly 112 SS-4 and 441 SS-20 missiles deployed in the Soviet Union. Previous editions have carefully reported the inactivation since 1978 of 483 SS-4 and 90 SS-5 missiles as the SS-20s increased from zero to 441. All of this information was available without any special verification arrangements. If we have been able to track their intermediate-range missiles one-by-one since 1978, we certainly have the ability to keep track of them today. Furthermore, the Soviets are proposing new measures of on-site inspection in each country that would increase confidence even more than that no significant cheating was possible.

Reagan has promised new "hands-on" leadership in the White House, and it appears that his personal political interests would be well served by a breakthrough on arms control after six years of no progress. For his own reasons Gorbachev has chosen to offer an agreement that is almost exactly the same "zero-option" that Reagan originally proposed for intermediate-range missiles in November 1981. In effect, Reagan is being asked to accept "yes" for an answer to his own proposal. If the president is really back in command, that should not be hard to do.

Eugene J. Carroll Jr., a retired rear admiral, is deputy director of the Center for Defense Information in Washington.

critical to nuclear deterrence of the defense of Europe. Even after all 316 are gone, the United States will still have aircraft and submarine-based missiles assigned to NATO that are capable of delivering approximately 1,200 nuclear warheads and bombs on the Soviet Union from European bases and waters.

The second reservation about obtaining an equitable arms-reduction agreement reflects a mistaken belief that devious Soviet negotiators always hornsoggle their innocent American counterparts. Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger recently explained the problem this way: "Wherever the Soviets are numerically inferior they demonstrate equal numbers; in whatever categories they are ahead they ask for equal reductions that improve their proportionate advantage."

The record shows that the American negotiators have more than held their own. SALT II numbers are a good example. In that treaty the Soviets agreed to surrender their overall numerical advantage in strategic nuclear delivery vehicles (2,594 Soviet to 2,284 U.S.) by coming down to equal limits of 2,250 missile launchers and bombers when the treaty was ratified. The United States was not required to surrender its 2 to 1 advantage in deliverable strategic bombs and warheads (9,808 U.S. to 5,764 Soviet). Not a bad bargain!

In the present Soviet proposal the numbers favor the United States even more. Both sides would remove all intermediate-range missiles from the European theater. The Soviets would retain 100 warheads on 33 missiles in Eastern Russia while we

Letters/ Vietnam-era veteran defends record of present service officer

Dunlap should keep post

As a Vietnam-era veteran and a former service officer and past vice commander of Twin Falls Post No. 7 of the American Legion, I feel compelled to write in defense of Jerry Dunlap, the Twin Falls and Jerome County Veterans Service officer.

The only problem I see in the current situation is that Jerry has the job and Randy Russell wants it. This seems to be borne out by the fact that those who went to the county commissioners did not provide even one valid, written substantiated complaint against Jerry. They did, however, provide letters of recommendation for Mr. Russell.

Each veteran's organization has an individual service officer whose duties involve service primarily to members of their own organization. The county service officer can help those who may not be affiliated with an organization or who may need more help than a volunteer might be able to provide.

The fact that Mr. Russell is the service officer for three separate groups looks to me as if he is attempting to "corner the market," rather than resign all three positions in June because of an excessive workload which he willingly took upon himself when he accepted the two officer positions; perhaps he should resign from two of them and just keep one. There are other veterans willing to serve, and if he is considering resignation because of excessive workload now, how dependable will he be for the county under that workload?

I have personally talked with many of the veterans and widows that Jerry has worked with and they all, without exception, hold him in high esteem. They describe him as compassionate, involved, caring, willing to go the extra mile.

I know him as a veteran with personal health problems who has not let that get in the way of his service to other veterans. In fact, he identifies more with their special difficulties because of his own. He is a quiet, self-effacing person who is almost embarrassed when he is praised for a job well done. His ability to seek progress by compromise, rather than by taking the noisier, more adversarial road, will continue to serve the veterans in our area very well.

Rope has a possible use

Ah, this rope business. Thank God! Finally! An issue to take issue with. There have been so few. Marvin Hempleman brought a rope he used over the holidays to house his Christmas tree and figuray, the rope, and with proper malice surrounded the jail model at the courthouse with it.

Of course, and rightly so, a radio program sounded the alarm—Big news! A caller to the program said, "Look at the expense of that rope, all the fringes involved with this jail thing."

Poor Hempleman, doomed by a rope; but it is red and white, after all, and looks gala. . . even, I ascertain, expensive. Just wait! He'll try to take the rope back. Just wait. "That rope cost the taxpayer. . . gimme that rope leave it here. . . He'll be sure to be out a rope. And such a rare item, available at not less than $3 or $4 at any of your more exclusive hardware stores."

Aw, well, the dissenters need less a need for that rope—for a certain disc jockey who is looking for enough to hang himself with.

You know, I talked to Hempleman and he looked sad and bewildered. "Gosh, I thought I would get substantive thought concerning this jail thing; after all, I've been working at it for 6 years." No, quit those thoughts from your mind, Harry, and just you try taking back your chickens; they need it with the rope. The dissenters need that rope, you see, to rope off the cave they intend to house prisoners in.

Dallas case a miscarriage

Enough is enough!

My name is Kenneth E. Jones, 125 11th Ave. N., Buhl. Over the years I have received criticism and credit alike for letters to the editor by one Kenneth D. Jones, B.L. 3, Buhl. (Ken Jones, Buhl.)

Each time Mr. Jones writes one of his letters, I have to explain to my acquaintances that I am not the author. However, on March 24, he wrote a letter entitled "Was Dallas treated fairly?" This letter was the straw that broke the camel's back. Anyone who is acquainted with me knows I could never have written that letter. To dispel the doubts anyone else may have, I have decided to write my first letter to the editor.

For the past 17 years, I have been a Fish and Game license vendor in the city of Buhl and have known many conservation officers. I have found them to be gentlemen of high integrity who are dedicated to their professions.

In Mr. Jones' letter, he stated, "Perhaps one could tell just what actually happened when these men and Dallas came face to face, all armed." It is my understanding that a witness to this crime stated that one officer was shot while holding pellets, and then Dallas turned and shot the other officer. He then took a rifle and put a bullet in each officer's head.

I am a retired Los Angeles police officer and have handled many vicious crimes. However, none were more heinous than this one. I, by no means, condone the other crime mentioned in Mr. Jones' letter, but I see no comparison.

To answer Mr. Jones' question, "Was Dallas treated fairly?", it is my opinion that to receive a sentence for manslaughter for this crime was a miscarriage of justice.

In closing, if I ever have an occasion to write another letter to the editor, it will be signed by "Kenneth E. Jones, Buhl."

Red at sunrise has beauty

Yesterday's edition carried a letter from Mr. Childs of Buhl who stated that red skies made him nervous. I can't think of many things more beautiful than the sunrises we are treated to here in Idaho. This morning was a perfect example. A sliver of a moon directly to the east and further north, beautiful red-tinted clouds. What a nice way to greet a new day.

Should we not see "red skies in the morning" then we would have smog or a complete cloud cover and can expect a dreary day. Mr. Childs' third paragraph says, "Our highly-revered pallidness weren't thinking much when they accepted this design." (The new red, white and blue plates.) If they expected it, then we don't have it. I would surmise you meant, "they accepted the real pretty design."

Except for the error pointed out, I accept your point of view.

Texts on Constitution have substance, provoke thoughts

Everybody seems to enjoy the sport of textbook bashing.

I have played the game on numerous occasions. Time for a little unbashing.

In these years, when many school textbook publishers are justifiably, roundly-criticized for deleting controversial material, it is a pleasure to read a few texts that not only have substance but are thought-provoking.

After reading one of these books, one wants to read further in the area of discussion—to me that is the secret of a good textbook, no matter to which level it is aimed.

Last year, to be prepared for the celebration of the bicentennial of our Constitution, Franklin's, Inc. of New York published a series of textbooks for upper elementary and junior high school students. This 11-book series examines the U.S. Constitution from a number of different perspectives which are suggested by the titles: from a broad historical overview. . . this Constitution; to biographical perspectives offered by focusing on men like Alexander Hamilton, James Madison, Benjamin Franklin, and George Washington; to essential constitutional questions raised by such pertinent issues as States' Rights, The Right to Bear Arms, Separation of Church and State, Capital Punishment, Censorship, and Your Right to Privacy.

learned a great deal from these little books, these "primers," these "first books" as the publisher calls them, recognizing that there is much more to each issue or to the perspectives offered in the texts.

What impressed me most about the series is the thematic approach in many of the books. Here information is focused around an issue. Here is meaningful history as it is generated around a real issue, not merely a temporal sequence of historical data to be memorized. Here controversy is smacked and straight on. No shaming it, no sneaking and jiving as if controversy and disagreement don't exist.

Charles Levensdosky

I have read seven of these little texts; they range in length from a mere 62 to 76 pages. Each book contains a helpful bibliography for suggested further reading. And each book includes a few useful photographs, tied to the text. There are no color pages, no circus typography, no blocks of color around type, no trickery, no splash—just clear, informative prose.

Imagine capturing a student's attention through information instead of hype. And wonder if this concept will begin a new, old trend? The idea is revolutionary; it assumes that students really want to know, not merely be entertained.

I was least impressed with the biography, Alexander Hamilton by Mollie Keller. It seemed written "down" to children. None one of the other six books' reads were written in a style or a language that indicated it was written for children. The issues were undoubtedly simplified for the age group, but not too much, not insultingly simplified. I Separation of Churches and State by Irene Cumming Kleeberg pulls no punches. She explains the essence of this concept, now so controversial. No question—separation of church and state is written into our Constitution and Bill of Rights.

Article II of the Constitution allows the president the choice to either "swear" or "affirm" that "I will faithfully execute the office of the president of the United States."

Article VI of the Constitution says that "no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification. . . for an elected office."

And the First Amendment of the Bill of Rights says, in part, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof. . ."

The prohibitions of the First Amendment have been expanded to include the states by the language of the Fourteenth Amendment. "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens."

The text gives a brief history of the origin of this concept of separation of church and state, beginning with the pilgrims' quest for religious freedom. The book leads the reader briefly through some writings on the question by those who hammered out the Constitution and our Bill of Rights. The historical background is necessary for an understanding of the meaning of this church-state issue.

Author Kleeberg asks rhetorically why the issue of the separation of church and state has been in the news, recently. She then suggests five possible reasons: the decline of church membership which worries some people; changing morality; more litigation; a changing Supreme Court; and the school prayer decision by the Supreme Court in 1962 which said that prayers and Bible reading in public schools violated the First Amendment.

Kleeberg points out that the "wall of separation" between church and state is like a movable wall on a stage, which the Supreme Court, by its decisions over the decades, pushes back and forth. There are no final answers on this issue, nor in this book. Thoughtful insights into ways of analyzing what the Supreme Court may alter where that wall of separation extends.

This isn't a book of easy answers. This isn't a book which is based upon the concept that learning is merely memorization. Thoughtful insights into the thematically developed texts in this constitutional series, must think. Readers must weigh the issues and discuss them.

If excellence in education means anything, it means that we teach our children to think for themselves and to research and to enjoy both—for these essentials are basic to a love of learning. These little books may give other textbook companies the courage to challenge in realties; to be controversial, and to ideas, clearly presented. It can be done; Franklin Wata had done it with this series.

Stumping Hansen gains wide support

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former congressman George Hansen discounts rumors that he might be a third-party candidate for president in 1988, but there's no doubt he is campaigning.

"I'm not out actively running for anything," he said. "I'm trying to help build a movement. I'm helping to marshal the forces."

The Idaho Republican made his comments recently in an interview with the Gannett News Service.

As an avowed activist in a movement to assert the rights and concerns of "Independent" Americans, whatever their circumstances, Hansen said he sees his role as roughly analogous to that of the early Ronald Reagan, who began political life as a promoter and spokesman rather than as a candidate for office.

In the three months since Hansen's release on parole from a federal prison camp in southern Virginia, Hansen has been in demand as a platform speaker for grassroots conservative groups.

His four-count felony conviction for submitting false financial disclosure statements to Congress, where he served seven terms, apparently has left him neither the worse for wear nor lacking in public appeal.

"They almost did me a favor," he jokes. "After I got out of federal honor camp, I developed a broader constituency."

Hansen spoke recently at Republican Lincoln Day gatherings in Idaho Falls and Pocatello and made appearances in Nashville, Tenn., and Phoenix, Ariz.

"I'm out traveling almost every week," he said when reached at his Washington office. "I probably could go out and speak 10 days a week if I were up to it."

One engagement early this month took Hansen to Pittsburgh, where he took on the Populist Party of America, The Spotlight, a feisty, Washington-based newspaper dedicated to "the other side of the news ... events hushed up or distorted by the controlled press," look note of Hansen's appearance and said he was "widely mentioned as a possible Populist party presidential candidate in 1988."

Asked about the suggestion, Hansen demurred. He was flattered, he said, but not in position to make such a commitment, either to the race or to that particular group.

"If you've had a big run-in with the establishment like I have, a lot of 'em have been kind enough to make me the object of their frustrations and their loyalty," Hansen said.

"I'm not looking for an office; I never have. If you can get the right person, I'll stand behind him."

"I just told 'em I appreciate their concern ... but we're going to have to build a great big political movement. You have to make the candidates come to you ... address the real issues of this country."

Hansen's own agenda still focuses considerably on his recent imprisonment and parole, which runs through September unless it's rescinded sooner. A hearing in several weeks will address relaxation of parole terms restricting his travel and association.

Hansen believes he should be free to meet anyone who might seek his advice about grievances with the government. Technically, he is not allowed to associate with anyone in trouble with the law.

"I've had to play a little rearguard with the parole people," Hansen said.

Officers silent on slaying

BLACKFOOT (AP) — Bingham County law enforcement officials are keeping a lid on information surrounding the Feb. 28 slaying of Blackfoot convenience store clerk Stacey Dawn Baldwin, and will not speculate on whether her death is related to two other recent murders in Idaho Falls.

Bingham County Sheriff Roy Nelson said Wednesday that a green pickup truck, reported stolen in Chubbuck and found abandoned on Interstate 15 between Blackfoot and Fort Hall on Feb. 23, is not believed to have any connection with the murder.

"It's still being checked by the forensic lab," Nelson said "but at this time we don't believe there is any connection. We're working very hard on it."

Nelson said Bingham County officers are in touch with Bonneville County and Idaho Falls officers daily to compare notes and go over leads in the three cases.

Blackfoot officers said earlier that witnesses reported seeing a man get into a green pickup leaving the Red Mini Barn, where the 21-year-old Mrs. Baldwin was night clerk.

Women found chained to pipe

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Three nude women were found chained to a sewer pipe Wednesday in the basement of a rowhouse and police said they found body parts elsewhere in the house that may represent two bodies.

A fourth woman escaped from the house during the night and summoned police, who said the women, aged 18 to 24, may have been chained for up to three months.

Neighbors said they had complained to police about noise and a smell of burning flesh, but police said they had no records of such complaints.

Gary Heitzik, 43, who lived in the rowhouse for about two years, was arrested and charged with rape, kidnapping and aggravated assault. No homicide charges were filed.

One of the women held in the basement said she believed two women she knew only by first names died there, one in a fall and the other by electrocution.

One of the women held in the basement, Lisa Thomas, 19, said she lost 40 to 50 pounds through the ordeal.

Demos want minimum pay hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats proposed Wednesday to raise the minimum wage by $1.30 to $4.65 an hour within the next three years. The Reagan administration immediately vowed to fight the increase.

Led by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, Democrats introduced legislation to raise the minimum wage for some 6.7 million workers for the first time in six years.

Under the bill, the minimum wage would remain $3.25 an hour until Dec. 31, jump 50 cents during 1988, rise another 40 cents in 1989 and become $4.65 on Jan. 1, 1991.

Beginning Jan. 1, 1991, and on Jan. 1 of every succeeding year, the minimum wage would be revised so that the rate would be one-half of the average private, non-supervisory, non-agricultural hourly wage as determined by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor for the previous November, rounded to the nearest multiple of 5 cents.

The average wage in February was $3.87 an hour, which would mean a $4.65 minimum wage under that formula.

EPA backs off acid lake guess

WASHINGTON (AP) — A review by outside experts has led Environmental Protection Agency scientists to back away from their recent prediction that 300 lakes in the Northeast could become acidified in the next 50 years.

The review last week at the agency's laboratory in Corvallis, Ore., led to a consensus judgment that acid rain would not acidify "more than a few hundred" lakes in the Northeast, Courtney Rierdan, director of EPA's acid rain research, said Wednesday.

And, he added, "you can't exclude zero" as the lowest possibility.

Rierdan said he and other agency executives are not disappointed that the prediction of another 300 acidified lakes, about a doubling of the current number, cannot be made.

"We asked them (EPA scientists and analysts) to stretch and be bold, and they did. It just didn't hold up," he said.

"Being able to say that hundreds of lakes could become acidified in a region with more than 7,000 lakes 'is not a trivial statement,'" he said.

New fight looms over arms limit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Appropriations Committee on Wednesday approved two Democratic-backed nuclear arms control proposals, setting the stage for another fight with the White House over the unratified SALT II treaty and a ban on testing of all atomic weapons.

The proposals were added as amendments to an $11-billion bill making various appropriations for the current fiscal year.

The panel approved the bill by voice vote later in the day. One other major provision blocks the Reagan administration's proposal involving drug testing of federal employees. The panel also added $425 million to aid to the nation's homeless.

By 35-19, the committee approved a proposal to require U.S. compliance with SALT II, the 1979 U.S.-Soviet treaty which President Reagan announced last year would no longer guide decisions on which atomic weapons to build. The United States is now above limits of some type of weapons.

The panel approved 31-22, a plan to ban all but the smallest U.S. atomic tests if the Soviet Union also halts nuclear tests.

Democrats on the panel noted the amendments are opposed by the Reagan administration but are similar to restrictions adopted last fall by the Democratic-controlled House. The restrictions were later dropped when Reagan appealed for national unity before his summit meeting in Iceland with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Democrats control Congress and have said they want arms control proposals at the top of their agenda for the current session.

Rep. Norman Dicks, D-Wash., author of the SALT II amendment, noted that Reagan had once pronounced the pact "fatally flawed" but had lived up to its limits on various types of weapons during the first five and one-half years of his presidency.

Searchers find wreckage of Phantom on California peak

MARCH AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The wreckage of an F-4 Phantom jet was sighted by aerial search crews Wednesday in the rugged San Bernardino mountains where a plane piloted by the eldest son of entertainer Dean Martin vanished five days ago.

"We don't know about any survivors," said Holly Kress, a spokeswoman for the San Bernardino County Department of Forestry.

Dean Paul Martin and Ramon Ortiz, both captains in the California Air National Guard, have been missing since radar lost track of their F-4 Phantom on Saturday.

Wreckage was found on the east side of Wood Canyon, east of Potosi in Riverside County, Ms. Kress said.

March Air Force Base spokeswoman Sgt. Judy Tyson confirmed that the crash site had been located just before 5 p.m. Base officials scheduled a late night news conference to discuss the wreckage.

Sgt. Carolyn Hamilton, assistant public information officer for the state Air National Guard, said she could not confirm that the F-4 wreckage was Martin's plane.

However, she said there were no reports of any other missing F-4 jets.

The thrust of the search shifted Wednesday morning after computer-enhanced Federal Aviation Administration tapes showed the F-4 disappeared from radar at the 3,300-foot level of snow-shrouded Mount San Geronimo instead of the 11,000-foot level, as previously believed.

Tests find more traces of drug use

WASHINGTON (AP) — New drug tests on the Conrail train involved in last January's collision with an Amtrak passenger train near Baltimore showed that one of the crewmen had used PCP as well as marijuana, officials said Wednesday.

The additional tests, conducted on blood and urine samples, confirmed the presence of some amounts of marijuana in Conrail engineer Ricky Gates and brakeman Edward Crosswell, but also traces of PCP, an illegal hallucinogenic chemical, in the urine of one of the crewmen, according to federal investigators.

The train collision Jan. 4 was the worst accident in Amtrak's history, killing 16 people and injuring 125 others. The crash occurred when a mix of three Conrail locomotives ran past several warning signs into the path of the 12-car Amtrak train.

The new tests were conducted at the request of the National Transportation Safety Board by the Center for Human Toxicology at the University of Utah. Earlier tests by the Aeromedical Institute in Oklahoma City revealed the presence of marijuana in both men, but not the PCP.

Guards worked together

WASHINGTON (AP) — Military investigators have concluded that two Marine guards arrested on spying charges were working together at the Moscow embassy and were both involved romantically with Soviet women, Pentagon sources said Wednesday.

Moreover, the investigators also believe the two embassy guards were at times in a position to allow Soviet agents to enter the embassy, the sources added.

The officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, also disclosed Wednesday night that Cpl. Arnold Bracy, the second Marine arrested in the case, had "broken down" during interrogation last Friday and acknowledged some wrongdoing.

"This is very serious," said one official. "It's not funny at all. These two guys worked together. It was not just a matter of their towns of duty overlapping in Moscow."

Five Pentagon sources agreed to discuss the case one day after the Marine Corps announced that Bracy, a 23-year-old native of the New York City area, was being court-martialed at the embassy for 14 months, had been detained and transferred from the Marine base at Twentynine Palms, Calif., to the base at Quantico, Va. on suspicion of espionage.

The Marine Corps has said Bracy was arrested on suspicion of espionage investigations of Sgt. Clayton J. Lonestree, another Moscow embassy guard who was accused of espionage last December.

The sources had earlier disclosed that Lonestree became involved sexually with a Soviet woman who worked as a translator at the embassy. The sources said Bracy had become involved with a Soviet woman who worked as an embassy cook.

According to one official, military investigators probing Lonestree's activities expanded their investigation to include Bracy after turning up evidence of Bracy's sexual affair.

"They discovered the fact that he had had contacts with this cook," said one official.

Baker snipes at lack of aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III on Wednesday voiced disappointment that newly industrialized nations in Asia, such as Taiwan and South Korea, have not made the effort to strengthen their currencies against the U.S. dollar.

Baker, testifying before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, said the Reagan administration is continuing talks with these governments in an effort to persuade them to make currency adjustments.

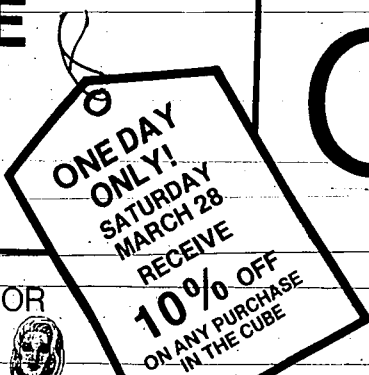

While the value of the dollar against major foreign currencies has fallen nearly 40 percent in the past two years — a slide economists contend is needed to ease this nation's trade deficit — it has not fallen against the currencies of Taiwan, South Korea and some other key Asian trading partners.

"This is because these nations have linked their currencies to the dollar. As the dollar slides against the Japanese yen and West German mark, these Asian currencies went right down with it, keeping pace with the dollar."

conference to discuss the wreckage.

Sgt. Carolyn Hamilton, assistant public information officer for the state Air National Guard, said she could not confirm that the F-4 wreckage was Martin's plane. However, she said there were no reports of any other missing F-4 jets.

The thrust of the search shifted Wednesday morning after computer-enhanced Federal Aviation Administration tapes showed the F-4C disappeared from radar at the 8,300-foot level of snow-shrouded Mount San Geronimo instead of the 11,000-foot level, as previously believed.

Tests find more traces of drug use

WASHINGTON (AP) — New drug tests on the Conrail train crew involved in last January's collision with an Amtrak passenger train near Baltimore showed that one of the crewmen had used PCP as well as marijuana, officials said Wednesday.

The additional tests, conducted on blood and urine samples, confirmed the presence of some amounts of marijuana in Conrail engineer Ricky Gates and brakeman Edward Cromwell, but also traces of PCP, an illegal hallucinogenic chemical, in the urine of Cromwell, according to federal investigators.

The train collision Jan. 4 was the worst accident in Amtrak's history, killing 10 people and injuring 175 others. The crash occurred when a unit of three Conrail locomotives ran past several warning signals into the path of the 12-car Amtrak train.

The new tests were conducted at the request of the National Transportation Safety Board by the Center for Human Toxicology at the University of Utah. Earlier tests by the Aeromedical Institute in Oklahoma City revealed the presence of marijuana in both men, but not the PCP.

Guards worked together

WASHINGTON (AP) — Military investigators have concluded that two East German guards arrested on espionage charges were working together at the Moscow embassy and were both involved romantically with Soviet women, Pentagon sources said Wednesday.

Moreover, the investigators also believe the two embassy guards were at times in a position to allow Soviet agents to enter the embassy, the sources added.

The officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, also disclosed Wednesday night that Cpl. Arnold Bracy, another guard arrested in the case, had "broken down" during interrogation last Friday and acknowledged some wrongdoing.

"This is very serious," said one official. "It's not funny at all. These two guys worked together; it was just a matter of a few hours of duty overlapping in Moscow."

Five Pentagon sources agreed to discuss the case one day after the Marine Corps announced that Bracy, a 21-year-old native of the New York City borough of Queens who worked at the embassy for 14 months, had been detained and transferred from the Marine base at Twentynine Palms, Calif., to the base at Quantico, Va., on suspicion of espionage.

The Marine Corps has said Bracy was arrested as a result of the continuing investigation of Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree, another Moscow embassy guard who was accused of espionage last December.

The sources had earlier disclosed that Lonetree became involved sexually with a Soviet woman who worked as a translator at the embassy. The source said Bracy had become involved with a Soviet woman who worked as an embassy cook.

According to one official, military investigators probing Lonetree's activities expanded their investigation to include Bracy after turning up evidence of Bracy's sexual affair.

"They discovered the fact that he had had contacts with this cook," said one official.

Baker snipes at lack of aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III on Wednesday voiced disappointment that newly industrialized nations in Asia, such as Taiwan and South Korea, have not agreed to strengthen their currencies against the U.S. dollar.

Baker, testifying before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, said the Reagan administration is continuing talks with these governments in an effort to persuade them to make currency adjustments.

While the value of the dollar against major foreign currencies has fallen nearly 40 percent in the past two years — a slide economists contend is needed to ease the nation's trade deficit — it has not fallen against the currencies of Taiwan, South Korea and some other key Asian trading partners.

"This is because these nations have linked their currencies to the dollar. As the dollar slid against the Japanese yen and West German mark, these Asian currencies went right down with it, keeping pace with the dollar."

SAMOANS CONVERSE

Samoans like nothing better, it's said, than to sit around at their leisure and argue the fine points of Christianity. Among other islanders, the Samoans are known as "the Irishmen of the Pacific."

Q. Is there really such a thing as an obsessive fear of marriage?
A. Must be. There's a name for it: gamophobia.

Q. What animal has a 300-pound nose? Come on, not everybody thinks of an elephant.

Every grownup in the Western World has had mononucleosis. At least, that's what the medics believe. They just can't prove it.

Our Language man now says the word "doughboy" dates all the way back to the Civil War. Coined then for no fancier reason than that the infantry insignia then looked like a wad of dough.

TAILOR'S MUSCLE

The tailor of old sat crosslegged. It strained his body's longest muscle, the one in the thigh, and he complained at length. It was his repeated complaint to doctors that gave the muscle its Latin name — "sartorius" meaning "tailor."

Church bulletins still turn out those notices. Take this one: "Wednesday, the Ladies Literary Society will meet. Mrs. Johnson will sing 'Put Me in My Little Bed,'" accompanied by the preacher."

Daily Horoscope

22: You can gain all the data you need now that will help you in furthering your ambitious activities.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Make romantic and recreational arrangements for the evening. Work on ideas that are lucrative.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You are highly amused at home with your kin and can get much done. Have guests in and enjoy amusements.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Find the right words in any communications with others. Be sure to dress nicely today.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Plan on making new additions to your home. Your eduation in finances can be most helpful to you now.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You are cheerful and can help others to come out of any depression. Get into new outlets with the one you love.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You have privately been thinking along modern lines and can use such ideas in a profitable way now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be quite dramatic in actions, but don't try to change your progeny since the best success can come from this very difference. Do teach your New Age progeny to value the conventional things in life. Give as many courses as possible in school.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: One of the best days you could have to put into motion a new inspiration that is unique and original and which involves persons who are quite extraordinary.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Some ideas you have may seem odd, but later you realize that they are dynamic and can bring you the right results.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Be more enthused when dealing with the public and you can get your points across more successfully...

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Any communications, either written or oral, are the best means through which you can get your new plans across.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Use more advanced systems that can help you to produce more during the daytime.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Plan a new course during the day with an associate. Take time to do some civic-duty and gain more prestige.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 21):

Alter ego a tough guy to keep up with

NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Willis says it would be fun to spend time as his television alter ego, David Addison, a real person rather than a character on "Moonlighting."

"It would be kind of hard keeping up with him," Willis said in an interview on the NBC "Today" show, to be broadcast Thursday and Friday.

David Addison burns the blue flame. He lives real hard. It would be difficult for me to keep up."

Mail carrier heroism by award for heroism

PALM BAY, Fla. (AP) — Terry Overly, who helped pull eight people from a burning van, will receive a Presidential Medal of Honor.

Overly, aided by three other men, rescued the people Feb. 21, 1986, after their van was involved in a collision. Eight people died in the crash.

"I am honored, yes," Overly, 37, said Tuesday. "But I don't feel proud of getting recognition on somebody else's misery."

The award will be given to Overly, a Palm Bay mail carrier, Friday in Orlando, according to Theresa Doggett of the Federal Highway Administration.

Overly was on his way home from U.S. Army Reserve training in Ocala when he saw the accident. Overly and Stuart Gourlay of Malabar rushed to the front of the van and pulled the driver and a passenger out.

Unable to reach the releases to the other passengers' seat belts, Overly got a knife, cut most of the victims loose and took them to the back of the van. Gourlay and two other men carried them to safety.

"I feel like it is my job," said Overly. "That was the way I was raised, too. My father is a retired police officer. He would have never gone by a situation like that without helping, and he wouldn't have wanted me to."

Recalling early stage days, Sills is all smiles

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Opera star Beverly Sills is all smiles when she recalls her early days singing in Nebraska and Iowa.

During a lecture and interview Tuesday, Miss Sills said a newspaper in one town where she performed switched cutlines of pictures of a diseased cow with a picture of her. She said the photo of her had a caption with "Stinking smut afflicted cows," while the sick cow picture's caption read, "Beverly Sills to perform on local stage."

Miss Sills said she was in high school when a Council Bluffs, Iowa, promoter hired her and five other young artists to perform in small towns in Nebraska and Iowa.

Since she was one of the least experienced members of the group, she played in what she called the "suburbs of Kearney."

She retired in 1980 as a singer in part to honor an agreement with her husband that she would stop singing at age 50. She was one year late, because there was one last premiere she had to do, she said.

Grand jury drops case of speaker's daughter

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A grand jury has declined to indict the 27-year-old daughter of House Speaker Jim Wright on a felony drug charge.

Allie Marie Carnes was arrested with her now-stranded husband on Oct. 19, 1986, by Fort Worth park police. She was arrested on a charge of possession of what police said was an unusable trace amount of amphetamines found in her purse.

The grand jury Monday declined to indict Mr. Carnes, said Tarrant County District Attorney Tim Curry.

"The case was fully presented," Curry said. "I just think they felt sorry for her."

John Thomas Carnes, 33, was indicted on a felony drug possession charge after police found two grams of amphetamines in the front seat of the couple's car.

Mrs. Carnes has since filed for

As for reports that he and ABC co-star Cybill Shepherd spend a great deal of time fighting behind the scenes, "I'd like to tell you there was something behind it, that we do work together as a wayward mom and 19th-century novelist kept her in California."

"I have to work wherever the work is," the 61-year-old actress said in an interview from her Santa Monica home.

Work keeping Harris distant from New York

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Julie Harris would rather be in New York, but her work as a wayward mom and 19th-century novelist kept her in California.

For six seasons, Harris has starred in "Knots Landing," a CBS prime-time soap opera, as Lilliane Clements, mother of series star Joan Van Ark.

On Saturday, Harris will portray English novelist Charlotte Bronte in a solo-out performance of "Bronie: A Solo Portrait" at Fullerton's Plummer Auditorium.

Brubeck in Moscow to begin concert tour

MOSCOW (AP) — American jazz pianist Dave Brubeck arrived in the Soviet Union on Wednesday for a concert tour long awaited by Soviet fans and repeatedly postponed because of uneasy U.S.-Soviet relations.

Brubeck told reporters at Moscow airport that he wrote new material for the 13-concert tour and that he hoped to issue a new record album in both the United States and the Soviet Union.

The 66-year-old pianist has been well known through radio broadcasts, records and tapes for 30 years in the Soviet Union, where there are thousands of jazz musicians and millions of fans.

His previous plans for a concert tour of the Soviet Union fell through because of strained relations between the United States and Soviet Union, Brubeck said.

Officials of the Soviet government organization that books concerts, Goskontsert, smiled broadly and handed him bouquets as they told Brubeck how long they had waited for his tour.

"We've started out many times, actually we were in Europe on the way here when the cultural climate changed," Brubeck said. "It seemed absolutely the right time now."

"I've written new material, but I hear they want the old," he added.

Distributor warns anti-drug flier isn't factual

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An anti-drug flier, apparently mailed to every household in Magic Valley, contains an inaccurate drug-scare article, according to its distributor.

"I'm just very upset I let it get this far," said John Wilson, who published the four-page flier "Drug Free America Networking Positive Alternatives."

Wilson said the article, entitled "New Drugs a Menace," which warns of school children in "some areas of the United States," is apparently unsubstantiated. Law enforcement officials and the organization that distributed the press release Wilson reprinted also say the story is groundless.

After mailing out his fliers last weekend, Wilson, who also coordinated local events recently during Drug Awareness Week, discovered through a Newsweek magazine article that the LSD scare was a fraud.

The Newsweek article, entitled "Anatomy of a Drug Scare," labeled the "Blue Star" LSD warnings he wrote about a "hoax." The Newsweek article said officials from across the country, including those in Georgia, Nebraska and Texas, have received anonymous letters warning about the LSD.

But the Newsweek article said no drug-enforcement agents have reported finding LSD-soaked paper in more than a decade.

Twin Falls Director of Public Safety Tim Qualls said local police have received no information about LSD being distributed in local schools.

Wilson said that while he prepared his flier to highlight anti-drug programs in Magic Valley, an unidentified woman gave him a press release warning about the LSD that he, in turn, published.

"I would not be able to track her down again if my life depended on it," Wilson said.

The press release had been distributed by the Utah Motor Transportation Association in Salt Lake City. The truckers' organization circulated it after a Midwestern safety director heard rumors that LSD was being given or mailed to school children, said UMTA Executive Vice President Otis Winn.

But Winn said no reports of the drugs have been made in Salt Lake City, and he knows nothing more about the drug.

"We've not had a single report from any teacher or the schools that there has been any of this," Winn said.

Ironically, Wilson had wanted to publish the anti-drug flier concentrating on "positive" activities, rather than scaring people with the dangers of drugs.

"That's why I'm really devastated about this mistake," Wilson said.

The 30-year-old computer consultant said he's "been through drugs myself," and wanted to test interest in the community for drug-awareness literature. If there is interest in this first edition of his flier, Wilson plans to set up a resource where school districts or other groups could turn for recommendations about drug-awareness films and literature.

Asked whether he thinks people will view him as a credible source after his incident, Wilson said he hopes merely to coordinate movie reviews and information on books that other people have written.

"We've experienced some information that's not very good now, but it's good to have someone to call on to see what the quality of the materials," Wilson said.

On the ball

It was a nice day to be outside Wednesday as temperatures topped 50, although outdoor swimming was still out of the question for most of us land animals. But "Dutch," Scott Guthrie's yellow Labrador, didn't seem to mind taking the plunge in the chilly waters of the Snake River above Shoshone Falls to retrieve a tennis ball.

Survivor recounts ocean raft drownings

The Associated Press

NEWPORT, Ore. — A college student who survived an accident that left one of his companions dead and another missing says he and his friends decided to go rafting in the Pacific to take advantage of the good weather.

"It was lucky we had nice weather there and we wanted to take advantage of it," 20-year-old Russell Andrew Woodhouse said Tuesday.

"We didn't plan on going out very far," he said. "We just wanted to hit some of the waves — kind of play around."

Woodhouse, of Ketchikan, Alaska, spent 3 hours in the 50-degree water Monday before he was pulled to safety by the Coast Guard in a daring rescue.

His companion, 19-year-old Troy Dean Stevens of Buhl, Idaho, also was pulled from the water, but could not be revived.

The Coast Guard searched without success for the third man on the raft, 19-year-old Eric Charles Mann of Albany. All three were students at Eastern Oregon State College in La Grande.

Woodhouse said one of the waves capsize the raft early Monday afternoon.

"We tried tipping the boat back over but we couldn't get it tipped," he said in an interview with the Albany Democrat-Herald.

Woodhouse and Stevens climbed on top of the overturned raft while he held on to a rope that was attached to it.

Another wave struck, knocking the two men from the top of the craft, tearing the rope from Woodhouse's hands and knocking all three men under water, Woodhouse said.

"We had life jackets. We all tried to get to each other," he said.

But the buffeting ocean waves eventually separated the trio.

"I found Eric later — he was dead," Woodhouse said. "Then a wave came and I lost him. Later on I just saw his life jacket, and he wasn't there anymore."

Man faces marijuana charges

TWIN FALLS — Santiago Neal Leiba Jr. of Twin Falls appeared Tuesday in fifth District Magistrate Court on three felony drug charges, following his arrest Monday by Twin Falls city officers.

Police estimate the Leiba residence at 430 Oak St. shortly before noon on Monday with a search warrant. Police reports allege the search produced a quantity of both cocaine and marijuana, along with marijuana plants being grown in the home.

Leiba, who was not home when officers made the search, appeared later at the Police Department and he came in because he knew he would be arrested. He was free on $1,000 bond Tuesday afternoon, and the court appointed the public defender to represent him in further proceedings.

Charges of possession of marijuana with intent to deliver involve a number of packets of dried, leafy material found in the house. The complaint against Leiba alleged there were 250 grams of marijuana found in the residence, in small packets.

Leiba was charged with manufacture of a controlled substance — marijuana — after officers confiscated a total of 17 marijuana plants that were found growing in the kitchen and a mirror-lined closet. Most of them about 3 inches high. Three bindles, or packets of white powder material that later tested as cocaine, were also taken from the home, resulting in the seizure.

PUC investigates cogeneration contract provisions

By The Associated Press
and The Times-News

BOISE — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has begun an investigation of security provisions in contracts between Idaho Power Co. and cogenerators and small power producers.

The investigation was touched off by a dispute between IPC and Warren Chapman of Twin Falls, developer of a proposed hydroelectric project at Magic Reservoir. Chapman said he has rejected IPC's proposed contract to buy power from him because the terms would make it impossible to finance it.

In a separate action, the PUC issued an order Feb. 27 which favored IPC by backing security for ratepayers in connection with the Magic project, said Scott Woodbury, PUC attorney.

The order urged the parties to continue negotiations.

A prehearing conference on the investigation of security provisions is scheduled for April 9 in Boise. The investigation will take a look at the security issue from a broader perspective, with participation expected from a number of utilities and cogenerators, Woodbury said.

The commission wants to look at alternative ways of protecting IPC and its ratepayers should a cogenerator or small power producer fail before the end of its contract period.

"We anticipate that by initiating a formal proceeding we will spur the industry and the company to creative and practical proposals protecting the interests of ratepayers and cogenerators and small power producers," the PUC said in an order issued Monday.

Regulators said they want to hear proposals or evaluations of proposals from Idaho Power, the PUC staff and the industry on insurance, enhanced second mortgages, pooling arrangements, utility escrow accounts or other potential security measures.

The rates IPC is required to pay a cogenerator or small power producer are leveled over the period that the project agrees to sell its output, usually 35 years. As a result, the utility pays more than the electricity is worth during the project's first 20-25 years and less than it is worth during the last 10-15 years.

Such leveled rates provide front-end loading of payments to developers of cogeneration or small power projects during the period when the project is retiring its power producers' ability to provide the needed. But if a project falls before the end of a contract period, the initial overpayments put the utility buying the power, and its ratepayers, at risk.

To counter the risk, the PUC holds cogenerators and small power producers liable for refunding any overpayments if they are unable to fulfill their contract.

Chapman has refuted his case before the PUC, offering to provide a second mortgage on the plant, Woodbury said. The PUC has not issued a ruling yet on this point, however, as the staff sees this as not addressing the risk of overpayment by ratepayers, he said.

Adding to the problem is the current upsurge in the liability insurance industry, raising concerns among regulators over small power producers' ability to provide the necessary security.

Investment tax credit axed

By JANE ROBINSON
Times-News writer

BOISE — Flashing a twinkle instead of a tear in his eye, the governor's budget director on Wednesday conceded defeat in the battle to repeal the investment tax credit.

"We're conceding defeat of the session," said Martin Peterson, director of the Office of Financial Management.

Peterson's flag of surrender is in the form of remedial legislation authorizing the continued use of the controversial ITC, but for just one year.

Without the bill, the state Tax Commission said Wednesday, the status of the ITC is in doubt.

The Legislature last week passed a bill making Idaho's income tax act conform to the federal Tax Reform Act of 1986.

But, in so doing, the Legislature failed to include language authorizing the continued use of the ITC, officials said.

Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey on Wednesday said the confirmation bill "clearly repealed the ITC." And Peavey hinted the Democrats had scored a backdoor victory.

But Ted Spangler, deputy attorney general for the Tax Commission, said it was "a gross exaggeration" to say the ITC had been repealed.

"We have cloudy language we ought to clear up," he said.

The problem is that Idaho's bill, by conforming to the new federal tax code, refers to language no longer in effect because Congress repealed the ITC, Spangler said.

Ironically, the bill to be introduced today in the House Revenue and Finance Committee would repeal the ITC.

Indicted former bank worker reports 'amazing' support

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

PILER — A former savings and loan association manager now under federal indictment says she has been receiving "amazing" support from friends, former clients and the public in her fight to clear her name.

"They're standing behind me," says Mary K. Shank, 33, of Piler, who managed the Twin Falls branch of Home Federal Savings and Loan Association.

Shank late last week pleaded innocent to federal charges alleging she misapplied funds from loans and made false statements over a 21-month period at Home Federal.

"I've really been surprised at the support I'm receiving from the community," she said in a recent interview. "We've even had financial support offers." Shank said she has turned down the financial backing to delay her trial.

Many well-wishers have contacted her by phone and others in person in the community. They often say "they believe that people need to fight for things like this a little more," Shank said.

She declined to discuss the reasons behind her innocent plea, but said she is confident that she will be cleared at trial.

"I'm going to come out in the information I give during the trial," she said.

Her attorney, Bill Mark from Boise, did not return repeated phone calls for comment.

Shank currently is free on her own recognizance. She faces a trial on April 28 before U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan. If convicted, she could be jailed as long as 18 years and fined as much as $500,000.

A federal grand jury indicted her March 15 for offenses alleged to have occurred while Shank was a loan officer and a manager. The indictment alleged that Shank "decreased teller cash" and improperly deposited or withdrew money from six different accounts. A top Home Federal executive placed the total losses at $25,000,000. They were insured by Shank's bank officer's bond.

Input sought on power plant road

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Power Co. wants to build a road to its Twin Falls power station on the Snake River, and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers says the only environmental impact it knows of so far will be on a lone golden eagle's nest a half-mile from the site.

If the permit is issued, it will spell out that no blasting be allowed from Feb. 1 to June 1 for the permit's 3-year term, says Lindsay Meierhofer, Corps spokesman in Washington state. Any blasting would disturb the eagle and its young, she says.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has put the Corps in charge of all waterways, lakes and wetlands within Idaho, Meierhofer says.

The Corps is interested in hearing public comments on the project until Monday, she says.

EPA has yet to provide any comment, but the Corps does not anticipate any conflicts because the environmental impact has been so well studied by IPC, Meierhofer says.

"It looks like a pretty clean thing," she says.

Construction should begin in July and be completed in November, says

Larry Taylor, IPC spokesman. Effects on birds of prey was one of the factors in the construction timing, he says.

The project would replace an aging mechanical lift, which drops 150 feet into the canyon. Because the project is going out to bid, there are no estimates on what it would cost, Taylor says.

"If the lift were rebuilt, it would not be adequate for servicing major components of the plant when necessary," Taylor says. The road would enhance safety and accessibility to the plant, he says.

Dorm, store hit by burglars

TWIN FALLS — Stereo equipment reported to be valued at more than $1,300 was taken from a dormitory room at the College of Southern Idaho sometime during the past week.

A reports made to Twin Falls police Tuesday stated someone entered the room of William David Blake between March 13 and 22, and took five pieces of stereo equipment. Police said the door was not forced and was apparently unlocked when the theft occurred.

The theft of a motorcycle and trailer was reported to police Wednesday by officials at the Suzuki of Twin Falls, 356 4th Ave. W. The machine and snowmobile trailer were taken from either inside or just outside of a fenced enclosure at the dealership sometime between Feb. 14 and Wednesday morning when the theft was discovered.

The cycle, a four-wheel-drive unit, was valued at $2,706 and the trailer at $1,500, owners advised.

Plains storm moving on; rain, snow hits Southwest

By The Associated Press

The storm that battered the Plains moved toward the Great Lakes on Wednesday and was gradually weakened, and a new storm system spread rain and snow over the Southwest.

Even though the Plains storm was weakening and was not expected to produce any more heavy snow, northwesterly wind, gusting over 40 mph at times, continued blowing from Kansas and Nebraska into South Dakota. Blowing and drifting snow was still a problem from western Nebraska into central South Dakota.

Travelers advisories for blowing and drifting snow and hazardous driving conditions were posted over western portions of Nebraska and South Dakota. A livestock advisory for eastern South Dakota warned that the combination of high wind, rain and temperatures in the 30s could stress young and newborn livestock.

The storm dumped a total of 20 inches of snow on Broken Bow, Neb., and piled up 12-foot drifts around the city. O'Neill, Neb., measured 17 inches, while about a foot of snow fell on western Kansas and central South Dakota had more than half a foot on the storm system also generated locally heavy thunderstorms from the Carolinas into the central Appalachians. Scattered thunderstorms also developed over the Ohio Valley and lower Michigan.

Rain fell from the upper Mississippi Valley and eastern Missouri into the western Great Lakes. Golfball-size hail fell at Zelenople, Pa., and marble-size hail was reported at Penn State University in central Pennsylvania.

A new storm system over the Southwest spreading scattered showers and thunderstorms from southwestern Arizona into southern New Mexico and southeastern Texas. Snow fell in the mountains of south-central New Mexico, where a travelers' advisory was posted.

Unseasonably mild temperatures in the 60s and 70s were reported across New England and eastern New York state.

Records highs included 67 at Binghamton, N.Y.; 68 at Bridgeport, Conn.; 64 at Portland, Maine; and 69 at Burlington, Vt.

Temperatures around the nation at 2 p.m. EST ranged from 19 degrees at Yellowstone National Park to 85 at Lakeland, Fla. The low for the day was 3 degrees below zero at Yellowstone.

Troy Stevens was doing fine at this point, Wodehouse said. The two were 30 to 40 feet apart.

Later, "I saw" Troy and he was barely going," Wodehouse said. "His eyes were wide open and he was still. I flipped his hand and he was limp. Then I saw him later; he was face down."

The Coast Guard helicopter, in a rare rescue maneuver, was able to land on the water between the 10-foot waves to pick up Wodehouse and Stevens.

Unsuccessful attempts to revive Stevens began immediately and continued at Pacific Communities Hospital in Newport.

"His just shouldn't have been there. They should have stayed in the (Alsea) bay," said Mann's father, Charlie, a teacher at Linn-Benton Community College. "They were not scatterbrained. They were the most level-headed kids you could imagine."

Burglars take tools from farm building

TWIN FALLS — Burglars broke into a building on Breckenridge Farms on Poleline Road Monday night and took tools and equipment valued at $526.

Twin Falls police said injury was gained by breaking out a window. The missing items included several types of hand and power tools.

Victor Olzua, an employee of John Breckenridge, owner of the property, reported the theft. He said it occurred sometime after 6 p.m. Monday and before 7:58 a.m. Tuesday.

Low-flying planes draw complaints

TWIN FALLS — Several residents in the northeast area of Twin Falls complained to police and Federal Aviation Administration officials Tuesday evening about low-flying aircraft.

Police said that in two complaints received during the evening, callers said a small yellow airplane was flying low over homes, creating noise and disturbances.

Officers said two planes were apparently involved. Residents were advised to notify the FAA with complaints, as it appeared the aircraft was flying below the legal altitude.

Taxation Committee comes from the Governor's Office.

Gov. Cecil Andrus has repeatedly called for the repeal of the 3-percent tax credit for business.

Andrus wanted to use the $14.5 million to begin the repeal-to-finance increases in the education budget, but Republicans opposed the idea.

"We've known the problem existed since day one," Peterson said. "But we were holding out hope that some version to eliminate the ITC would pass."

Now, to avoid ambiguity and possible lawsuits, officials say the Legislature must pass the remedial language.

But the bill makes the ITC good for only 1 year and, lawmakers said on Wednesday, the ITC may be in trouble next year.

"There's a good chance the ITC will not make it next year," said Rep. Dean Sorenson, R-Boise, majority caucus chairman.

SNRA mulls campground service cuts near Stanley

By JIM McPHERSON
Times-News correspondent

STANLEY — There is a chance that some campgrounds north and west of Stanley in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area may be closed this summer if waste management services for them are eliminated. That possibility has local businessmen, who rely heavily on tourism, concerned.

"I'll make the river a mess," said Mayor Bud James, who also manages the Mountain Village Lodge. Instead of cutting out the services, he said, SNRA officials should consider starting them earlier in the year, when steelhead fishermen start coming into the area.

Under the present system, dumpsters and outhouses are put out and maintained in the campgrounds just before the beginning of the traditional camping season, around Memorial Day. But because of budget cuts, officials are considering not doing so at all this year.

"It is true that we are opening up the campgrounds," said SNRA Director Al Ashton. "But he is more optimistic about the campgrounds receiving full service now than he was when he discussed the problem with James. Then he painted a "worst-case scenario," he said.

However, the decision has not been made yet, he said. "I am doing everything I can to keep the situation," said Ashton. "We need these campgrounds." Eliminating the pickup of garbage and the pumping of toilets won't prevent people from using the campgrounds, he said, but is likely to create waste problems.

The campgrounds involved include seven along the Salmon River north of Stanley, and four on Highway 21 west of the city. Ashton said he is now accepting bids for waste management for all of these campgrounds, and will be making a final decision "within a couple of weeks."

That decision, he said, could be cutting services to all of the campgrounds, cutting services to some but not others, or maintaining all. The available funding, though, may be devoted to keeping the campgrounds around Redfish Lake and other lakes within the SNRA well maintained, he said.

Though the SNRA's "recreation budget" has not decreased from last year's level of $450,000-$470,000, the overall budget had been cut from $1.14 million to $890,000, said Ashton. That means that money from other areas which supplemented the recreation portion is no longer available, he said.

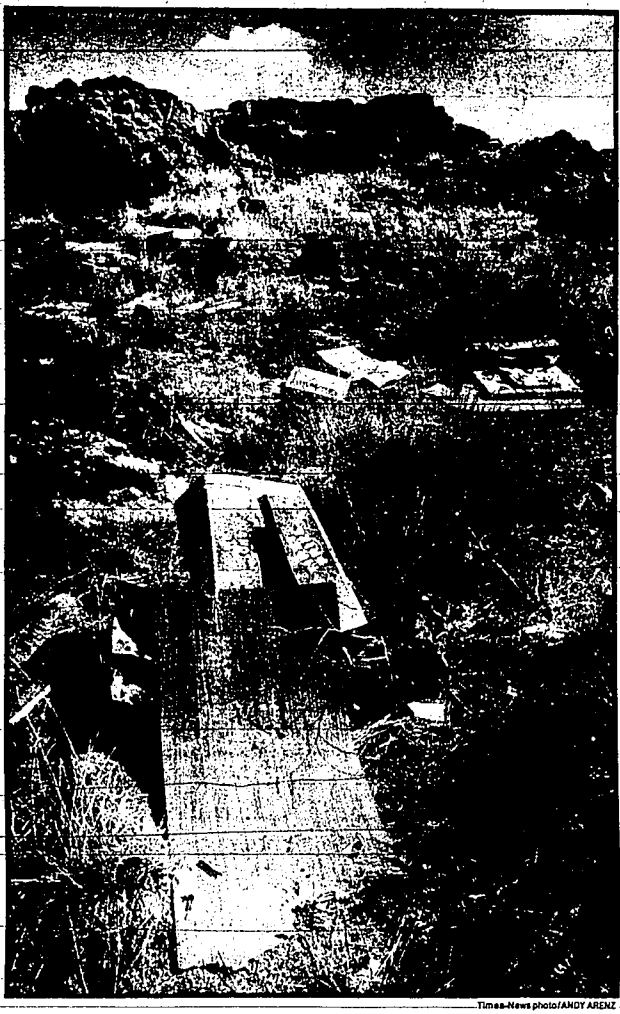

Still, "it doesn't cost that much for them to do this work," James maintains, and Ashton said the bids may prove him correct. But, he said, he doesn't know until the bids come in.

Besides the emptying of dumpsters, and the pumping of toilets about every 45 days, drinking water has to be tested once a month and individual campsites maintained.

To help, he said, each campground's "camp-hosts" may be asked to do more work than in the past, if the campgrounds do remain open. Another possibility, he said, is a campaign urging campers to carry out what they carry in, as backpackers are urged to do.

In the meantime, the Stanley Chamber of Commerce will continue to discuss the issue and local residents will be pressuring Idaho legislators and Forest Service officials in an effort to make sure Salmon River campgrounds, and those on Highway 21, are maintained throughout the upcoming summer.

BLM seeks aid against dumping

Garbage is scattered throughout the public use land around the canyon's north rim

Jerome sheriffs eye beefing up patrols in Perrine Bridge area

By TERESA Z. TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The Bureau of Land Management is asking for help from the Jerome sheriff's department in patrolling an area being favored more and more by local residents as a substitute dump.

Monday, Bob Cordell, a Shoshone District BLM representative, told the Jerome County Commissioners that the area just north of the Perrine Bridge is falling victim with increasing frequency to garbage dumping, acts of vandalism to archaeological sites and use as a repository for stolen property.

The affected area is on the east side of State Highway 93 between the canyon and Interstate 84.

Jerome County Sheriff Elza Hall said white law enforcement officials have developed a way to trace the people who dump garbage illegally, it is better to catch them in the act, and-for that, more-frequent patrolling is needed.

"We estimate 95 percent of the garbage comes from the Twin Falls area," Hall said.

Cordell said he was concerned that the sheriff's office was not making available to law enforcement entities aid in patrolling BLM lands within their county. He said he had heard a rumor that the money was being put into a general fund.

County Commission Chairman Carl Montgomery told Cordell that all revenues received by the county go into the general fund and are then redistributed to the various departments.

"That is just the way the system is set up," Montgomery said. "But maybe we can enter this as a line item to track it better."

Cordell said Jerome County was given $2,600 this year for law enforcement assistance, which was half the entire BLM district budget for this type of protection.

"We have a program where we can assist each county with funds in return for this kind of assistance," Cordell said. "Jerome County is the most active within the Shoshone District. We enjoy the most effort for our dollar."

Hall said Jerome County deputies patrol as often as they can, but sometimes it isn't often enough to deter individuals determined to litter and deface.

"Perhaps the money could be spent to hire one individual part-time, dedicated solely to patrolling that area, especially during the peak times of summer use. That person could spot check on a scheduled basis," Cordell said. He suggested that same person could help make sure users were complying with rules at the nearby landfill.

Cordell said because some of the land in the vicinity belongs to the state, the State Department of Lands might be able to augment the sum given to the sheriff's office. The sheriff and the BLM, a used four-wheel vehicle might also be made available to the sheriff's department, he said.

Montgomery said the county has no money in its budget for more employees or more working hours in the sheriff's department. However, when the budget for the next year is prepared, the possibilities of how to step up protection of that area will be explored, he said.

Blaine School District schedules override vote

By JOHN ZILLY
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — A $1.6 million Blaine County School District override election will be held April 19. The School Board announced this week.

This is the third year in a row that the board has sought a $1.6 million override.

District Superintendent Dave Noonan said that while most districts used overrides for special building projects, Blaine County has had to hold an override for the past seven years for basic operating costs — everything from hand soap to employee salaries.

"The override represents one third of our entire budget," Noonan said.

Board Vice Chairman Peter Flood cited four of the board's major considerations before trustees decided upon the $1.6 million figure.

First, Flood said that considering the relatively slow local economy. "We need the best programs with the monies available," he said.

Second, the board looked into what funding the school district could expect from the state. The board found that for the first time in seven years the Legislature will not cut Blaine County's school budget. Since 1980, basic monetary support from the state has decreased by 66.6 percent because of Blaine County's high property values, according to Noonan.

In addition, because of property tax law changes, the school district will receive about $140,000 in additional funds.

Third, due to savings on several budget items during the current year, the school district has

Filer considers asking for school override levy

By MICHAEL VANAUDELN
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Filer School District officials are considering asking voters to pass a $79,250 override levy for the coming school year, says Superintendent Sheldon Kovarsky.

The override would be $10,000 less than the $89,250 override the school district is operating under currently. "We are trying to make it as small as we can for the sake of patrons and taxpayers," Kovarsky says.

It would be used mainly to pay for maintenance and repairs and coming school year, says "maybe a little bit for some books," he says. None of the money would be used for salaries or personnel costs, however.

No action has yet been taken on the proposal, but the School Board "wanted to hear about it as soon as possible," says Kovarsky.

Plans for the levy are still in the beginning stages, and Kovarsky says the proposed amount may change. He says that it is "just a figure we would like to have. We're still discussing what the actual figure will be."

The School Board will discuss the matter further at its next meeting in April.

If the board decides to take the matter to a vote, it would be put on the ballot May 19, the same day voters will pick school board members. A simple majority (50 percent), rather than a two-thirds majority, would be required for passage.

Abducted Utah girl found safe in Malta

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

MALTA — The abduction of a 6-year-old girl Tuesday evening in Tremonton, Utah, had a happy ending when the child was found safe in the small Cassia County town of Malta early Wednesday night.

Torrey Healey, daughter of Howard and Jill Healey of Deweyville, near Tremonton, became the object of an intensive search through northern Utah after she disappeared from the Bear River Middle School in Tremonton about 6 p.m. Tuesday. Officers said she and a younger sister were attending a gymnastics meet at the school.

Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal said Idaho officers were not aware the child was missing until notified about 10 a.m. Wednesday after the dog, which she found one where she was let in, he said.

The residents of the home, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Schlender, called Deputy Sheriff Mike Thompson of Malta, who took the little girl to Burley. At her the store was open and she could call her parents.

Crystal said the little girl, who was calm and very bright-for her age, told Cassia officers she was at the entrance of the school waiting for her sister and friends to finish with the gymnastic meet.

She said the man got out of his car and walked to her, grabbing her and putting his hand over her mouth. She said he dragged her into his car and drove away. They drove around the Tremonton area for some time before traveling the approximately 75 miles to Malta.

"She told us the scariest part of her experience was when the man let her out at the Malta store and drove away, and she discovered the store was closed," Crystal said.

"She walked to two or three houses in Malta and knocked on the doors until she found one where she was let in, he said.

first officers could not locate the girl's parents because they were still searching for her.

Crystal said she was taken immediately to Cassia Memorial Hospital for examination, where she remained until 6 a.m. Wednesday.

Reports from the doctors, he said, were given to Tremonton authorities and the little girl's parents. Crystal and Utah officers said they believe the child was sexually assaulted during her ordeal.

In addition to an exam by the local physician, the parents arrived at the hospital with their own doctor, who also examined the child. Crystal said there were no apparent marks to indicate injury.

As of late Wednesday, Bob Elder County officers were questioning a possible suspect in the case. Sgt. Kenneth Adams of Tremonton said the man was taken into custody at a rest stop on Interstate 15 in Box Elder County early Wednesday. He said the man fits the description

Blaine names Femling sheriff

Traffic, drug problems top priority

By JOHN ZILLY
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Two areas of Blaine County law enforcement need attention — traffic and drug problems — says Walt Femling, who became the county's new sheriff this week.

In a public meeting Monday, the commissioners interviewed the three finalists for the position, and chose Femling, 30, to complete Dennis Haynes' term, which expires in 1988. Haynes resigned as Blaine County Sheriff to take a position in the private sector.

The drug problem, Femling told commissioners, has the biggest effect on the community.

"Drugs lead to 80 or 90 percent of our (Blaine County's) crimes," he said. Femling also said he would be more able to relate to young people in the community because of his age.

"I'd lay the cards on the table," Femling said. "I'd bring him in and talk it out. But he wouldn't be a senior deputy for long if he kept it up."

Femling also said that "good communication would take care of the problem."

Several county residents attending the Monday interview session spoke favorably of Femling. "Lita West said she hoped the board selected Femling."

"He is young, but we need a sheriff who can relate to our young people," she said. "Maybe he can break down some of the barriers and convince kids not to use drugs. We need a change."

Ketchum Police Chief Cal Neviand said he didn't think the age factor was "a problem because his (Femling's) leadership abilities are so great."

Neviand also said he'd be very comfortable working with Femling.

Femling said he expects to run for the position when his term ends. Since he did not go through the election process, he expects "a lot of people will be going after me at the next election."

However, he said that "if I work hard, I'll win re-election."

Femling, a native of Seattle, has worked for the Ketchum Police Department since 1980, most recently as a sergeant. He said Monday that his duties as sheriff would begin "right away, I have to swear everybody in by midnight tonight," he said.

After Haynes announced his resignation, six people applied for the vacated post. Last week the Blaine County Republican Central Committee whittled that number to three and gave their list to the County Board of Commissioners.

During the interview, Commissioner Alan Reynolds asked Femling if his age would be a significant factor. Femling is considerably younger than the other two candidates for the position, Sun Valley Police Capt. Jack Stoneback, 45, and Bellevue Marshal Winston Gray, 47.

"What if a senior deputy was talking behind your back about you, the young punk. How would you address that problem?" Reynolds asked.

"I still have a lot of checking and leg work to do before we know if charges will be filed," the Utah officer said.

Crystal said he was told 350 persons from the northern Utah communities of Tremonton and nearby Deweyville searched the hills and desert areas as well as highways after the child was reported missing Tuesday night.

When brought to Burley, Torrey was in good spirits and able to give an excellent description of her abductor and the vehicle, Crystal said.

She told officers the man's car was a blue four-door sedan with blue seat covers and that the man had a dog with him. From talking with the child, officers determined the abductor was probably 5 feet 8 or 9 inches tall, weighs 175 to 180 pounds and has brown hair.

Missile wrangling continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States accused the Soviet Union on Wednesday of taking "a major step backward" and staking out a senseless position in negotiations over nuclear missiles in Europe.

The U.S. attack was directed partly at General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev, while the Soviets drew support from their East European allies at a meeting in Moscow.

The State Department, through spokesman Charles E. Redman, said Gorbachev had abandoned a six-year-old commitment to negotiate restraints on shorter-range missiles as part of a ban on medium-range weapons.

In fact, Redman said, Gorbachev's Feb. 28 speech outlining the Soviet stand on European missiles was "a step backward" from what he had told President Reagan at Reykjavik, Iceland, last October about imposing constraints on shorter-range rockets. The public disagreement indicated an agreement would not be reached soon in Geneva to eliminate medium-range missiles from Europe.

At the center of the argument are 130 shorter-range Soviet SS-12 and SS-23 rockets, with a range of about 300 to 600 miles. The United States has no nuclear missiles exactly in that category and wants the right to match the Soviet total.

The question is whether that right should be — as the Reagan administration insists — established as an "integral part" of any treaty to eliminate medium-range missiles from Europe or dealt with afterward.

The Warsaw Pact foreign ministers, meeting in Moscow, ruled out a package deal. "As soon as an agreement is reached on eliminating medium-range missiles in Europe, we'll be ready to get down to discussing the operative tactical missiles issue," Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Vadim Logunov said.

Some Western leaders, led by British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, have opposed any agreement on medium-range rockets that does not include the smaller Soviet tactical missiles based in Czechoslovakia and East Germany.

MIDDLE CLASS VALUES At Swensen's

It has been widely reported and speculated lately that traditional middle class values such as honesty, industry, thrift, etc., are being lost or replaced and that the middle class is shrinking and isn't the same as it used to be. Some say being middle class is determined by how much money you make. Others say it depends on how you spend it. Still others say middle class is defined by education, aspirations, background, etc. Swensen's are happy to let the sociologists make middle class woges figuring it all out, while we sell groceries! Anyway, all this gibberish about middle class values is just to let you know that Swensen's Markets have great values for all classes — middle, high, on the way up or down! Manila's military faces prospect of 2-front war

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The military Wednesday rejected an offer by Communist rebels on Mindanao island for a limited cease-fire, and Moslem rebels threatened to break off peace talks with the government.

The threat raised the specter of a two-front war against Moslem and Communist guerrillas.

In other developments:

- Defense Secretary Rafael Ilto said the military was holding back from an all-out offensive against Communist insurgents for the May 11 congressional election.
- An army captain identified as the prime suspect in last week's bombing at the Philippine Military Academy denied any involvement in the blast which killed four people.
- The regional military commander in Mindanao's Cagayan de Oro, 500 miles south of Manila, turned down the offer by Communists for a regional cease-fire during Easter Week and the May election.
- "We cannot maintain a low profile in our military operations," said Brig. Gen. Mariano Adalem. Communist rebels made the offer Monday to allow people to vote "without fear of their lives."
- The Moslem rebels said they would resume fighting if President Corazon Aquino does not grant them autonomy before the elections.
- The newly ratified constitution provides autonomy for "Moslem Mindanao," which government interprets as five Mindanao island provinces where Moslems form the majority.
- But he said the 250,000-member military was using only about 60 percent of its firepower against the 24,000-strong rebel force.
- "A lot of people are campaigning," Ilto said.

wields sole lawmaking powers, and the rebels want her to decree Moslem autonomy before waiting for the legislature to convene.

Ilto said the military was sending more battalions against Communist New People's Army guerrillas, who have stepped up attacks since a nationwide cease-fire expired last month.

But he said the 250,000-member military was using only about 60 percent of its firepower against the 24,000-strong rebel force.

"A lot of people are campaigning," Ilto said.

Taste test of delicacy expensive

TOKYO (AP) — In a pricey preview of summertime delicacies, cherries shined up at a market in downtown Tokyo on Wednesday.

They sold for $3.33 per cherry.

The cherries, from a greenhouse in Yamashiro prefecture west of Tokyo, arrived just as the cherry blossoms were starting to bloom in the capital.

Dealers at the vegetable and fruit market in central Tokyo's Kanda district said the pre-season cherries were sold to bidders for 25,000 yen ($166.60) per 300-gram (10 1/2-ounce) package.

That worked out to about 500 yen ($3.33) per cherry, the normal price for a whole package in late May when cherries appear in quantity in Tokyo.

Couple gives up at school

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A heavily armed couple claiming to be leftist guerrillas took over a school Wednesday with about 1,000 students and teachers inside, but gradually freed everyone and then surrendered.

The man and woman left the school they had held for more than six hours in a blue mini-bus belonging to the army, but police sources would not say where they were being taken.

Gen. Adolfo Blandon, head of the joint chiefs of staff, entered the school to help persuade the couple to end the siege. Monsignor Gregorio Rosa Chavez, auxiliary bishop of San Salvador, also helped.

"I have the impression that they are not guerrillas, because their arguments are too incoherent," Rosa Chavez said after the siege ended about 3:45 p.m. MST.

The takeover of the San Jacinto grammar and high school started late in the morning, a half-hour after rebels in the neighborhood intercepted a police patrol car, killing two officers and wounding four other people.

The two incidents were not related, said Gen. Rinaldo Golcher, chief of the Treasury Police and the top-ranking security officer at the scene.

The man told a reporter of the television newscast Telepressa, invited to enter the San Jacinto school for an interview, that he was "strongly armed."

The man's G3 automatic rifle and a long knife were visible. Police agents at the scene said the couple also was armed with hand grenades when they entered the school at mid-morning.

About four hours after the takeover started, however, the couple allowed 25 first- and second-graders to leave the building. The children, dressed in beige uniforms with white shirts, were visibly scared.

Then an hour later, they began to let most of the students leave the primary side of the building, but delayed the release of 47 ninth-graders, aged about 14 or 15.

Golcher said the man was demanding that President Jose Napoleon Duarte and Roman Catholic Archbishop Arturo Rivera Damas come to the school in the working class, south-side neighborhood of San Jacinto.

Israelis agree to speak out

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir promised not to pass on to the United States information given by three Israelis in the Jonathan Pollard spy case, and their lawyer said Wednesday the three agreed to testify.

"My clients have received what they wanted, and they thank the government," David Libai told The Associated Press. "There is now no reason for them not to testify."

Pollard, a 32-year-old American Jew and civilian analyst for the Navy, was sentenced earlier this month to life in prison for selling Israel classified information. His wife, Anne Headerson-Pollard, 26, was given a five-year sentence for her role in the affair.

Israel has apologized for the spying, but maintains it was authorized by the government.

Shamir subsequently appointed a two-man committee to investigate the matter. Its future became cloudy when committee head Yehoshua Rotenshtreich said he would quit if unable to question all involved, and Libai advised his clients not to testify because the information could be used against them in a U.S. court if Israel passed it on.

Nude bathers may be up to their necks in hot tub hot water

DEAR ABBY: The other evening, Donna, my 25-year-old daughter, asked me to baby-sit her two children. As Donna and her husband were preparing to leave for the dinner party, Donna remarked that she always loved an invitation to the Smiths (made-up name) because they have a hot tub.

Abigail VanBuren Dear Abby

I asked Donna as they were walking out the door whether they had forgotten their bathing suits, since all her husband was carrying was a bottle of wine for the hosts. Donna's reply astounded me. She said nobody wears a bathing suit in a hot tub because it's too darn hot.

good and close friends, but not close enough to bathe together in our birthday suits. In fact, the only person I would ever share a hot tub with is my husband.

Abby, am I old-fashioned and over the hill at 45? Donna and her husband and the other couple apparently soak together naked! I asked Donna how they could do this, and she replied that all the couples involved are "good" friends.

What do you think of what my daughter and her husband and their friends are doing? Is this as common as she makes it sound? Am I the odd duck now?

Abby, I have a number of very

DEAR IRENE: You are not an odd duck. Many others, including me, believe that married couples who soak together in the altogether could find themselves literally in hot water up to their necks.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Too Late Now" — the poor woman whose husband never bathed or brushed his teeth, so she just moved into another bedroom and closed the door.

Ten years ago, I met a really great guy. We dated for a long time before getting very close. After we did, I noticed he had bad breath and body odor. I also discovered he didn't wear underwear, and thus his jeans carried a foul smell all the time.

Well, I bought him plenty of underwear and told him I thought they were "sexy." I got him deodorant and said it "turned me on," and I showered with him — not for sex, but to be sure he showered.

Because of this, he was clean and I was happy. We've been married for five happy years.

Some people are lazy, and with an incentive they'll come around.

DEAR HAPPILY WED: Wonderful! You nipped some slovenly habits before they were so ingrained they were impossible to change. If you'll recall, "Too Late Now" had locked her repulsive husband out of her bedroom for 49 years.

Were she to buy him sexy underwear and a quart of cologne, at this stage of the game he'd probably drink the cologne and polish his car with the underwear. My point: You can't teach an old dog new tricks.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend is a high school teacher. He is 29 and very good-looking. I know that he is attracted to some of the girls in his classes and wouldn't mind dating them.

I love him and I'm concerned about this. What's to prevent teachers from dating their students in high school?

— CONCERNED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR CONCERNED: Ethics. It's usually the "principal" of the thing.

DEAR ABBY: In apologizing to "Dentist's Wife in Ulta," you still haven't gotten it right. You said, "One day I may be in Ulta and require the services of a first-class dentist to extract my foot from my mouth."

In the case you have just mentioned, your need would be not for a dentist, but a PODIATRIST — a doctor of podiatric medicine and surgery. Just trying to get your doctors straightened out.

'I Can Cope' class planned for Cancer Month

TWIN FALLS — April is traditionally Cancer Month, and in the month, American Cancer Society volunteers will be doing much more than conducting a fund-raising drive.

Volunteers will be handing out educational material and attempting to raise funds in the usual door-to-door manner, but the organization is offering many more helpful events and programs on behalf of cancer prevention and patient support.

Starting off the month's schedule will be the "I Can Cope" series of meetings for cancer patients and their families. The eight-week program is designed to cover all aspects of the devastating disease and the treatment, which is often difficult.

On Tuesday, the first program in the series will offer information on living with cancer, normal anatomy and organ functions, and an introduction to cancer. Dr. David McClusky of the Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital staff will conduct the program. McClusky has worked with the local chapter of the American Cancer Society in a number of voluntary programs and services.

He will also be in charge of the second in the series of programs April 7. In that program he will explain diagnosis, treatment and rehabilitation of the cancer patient.

All of the eight "I Can Cope" programs will be held on Tuesday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m. in the First Baptist Church at Shoshone Street and 9th Avenue. They are sponsored jointly by the Twin Falls Clinic and Hospital and Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, and they are free to anyone interested.

Other topics that will be discussed during the coping sessions include nutrition and other daily health factors, dealing with the effects of cancer and its treatment, emotions that accompany the illness, communication and attitudes, and enhancing self-esteem and sexuality. Help for keeping active in mind and body and reducing stress and tension will be covered. The sessions will also provide information on other support systems and resources in the community.

Specialists from medical centers. In the community, technicians in various types of therapy, and those who deal in social services, home health, and Health and Welfare will be giving their time to assist the families and patients.

Debbie Nelson, R.N. and co-chairman of the "I Can Cope" program, will address the final session in the series, a "graduation" on May 19.

Holly Capps, R.N., said in announcing the series that the need for programs such as this is evident in Twin Falls as there are numerous cancer patients in the area. She encouraged those who are involved with the disease to join the program.

Dog class has dual purpose

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill. (AP) — An ambitious program by the young Madison County Humane Society should bring dogs and their owners closer, and also promote the adoption of thousands of dogs and cats that otherwise face death at the county pound each year.

"Most dogs want to please their masters," said Sherry Harper, vice president of the society and the person responsible for fund-raising.

"They enjoy the classes. They're anxious to go. It's kind of like their social life."

At the first session, dogs typically growl at each other because they're strangers. "By the end of the first class," she said, "they're all friends."

The sessions are held to raise money for a new animal-adoption program and to bring dogs closer to their owners, she said. "A lot of them can't control their dogs, and we don't want them to dump them. They just want them to have nice manners.

"All different sorts of people turn out," Harper said, adding the dogs are as varied as their owners.

"Usually, it's the owners that mess up, not the dogs," she said. "The majority of the mistakes are the people's."

For example, she said, masters are trained to start on the left foot when the dog is directed to heel; the dog is trained to have its head beside the master's left leg in preparation for walking. If the dog is ordered to stay, masters are supposed to start with the right foot to keep from confusing the dog.

Harper demonstrated what dog training can do with her German shepherd, Keshia, putting the dog through a series of maneuvers.

Warning usually precedes suicide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Suicide seldom strikes without warning, but instead is usually the culmination of a frustration or depression that was hardly a secret to those attuned to the warning signs, experts say.

"There are many warning signs for suicide," said Dr. Susan Blumenthal, chief of behavioral medicine at the National Institute of Mental Health.

"They are often the same signs as depression, but they are persistent and frequently appear in clusters." About 30,000 suicides are reported each year in the United States, including about 6,000 among people aged 15 to 24. For every person who commits suicide, anywhere from 10 to 100 others try. These attempts are themselves a major warning sign, Blumenthal said.

Experts say 80 percent of those who take their lives warn people beforehand, often explicitly. About one-third to one-half have had a prior suicide attempt.

The typical suicide victim has lost self-esteem and has a persistent sense of worthlessness, experts say. In 90 percent of cases, the suicide follows a humiliating event, such as a professional or scholastic failure or the breakup of a personal relationship.

Signs of trouble can include sudden changes in appetite and sleep habits, withdrawal, moodiness, excessive fatigue or agitation, alcohol or drug abuse and losing interest in hobbies and things that previously were pleasurable.

Other signs can include suddenly drawing up a will, giving away prized possessions or going to the doctor because of feeling ill for no specific reasons.

Talent aims Bruins and Rams toward A-1 track showdown the duel. With an abundance of talent if not much experience, Stands feels he has "a very spread-out team that will be competitive at every meet."

Twin Falls
With a turnout of 105 athletes this spring, a Region II team which joins Region III for the purposes of qualifying for the state meet, are all hoping to remain competitive. But as Burley boys' Coach Bill Gardner, whose team moves up to A-1 after five years in A-2, admitted, "Twin Falls is always tough and Highland returns so many. They're also going to be a rough team to handle."
Twin Falls, though, is ready for

The only possible problem with the Bruins is their youth. Much of the team is composed of sophomores who lack of experience.
"We're a young team," said Stands. "But I think that will be less of a factor as the season goes on. After awhile, our kids will have the experience they need."
On the boys' squad, the Bruins return eight state qualifiers, and even with this bunch there's no one single spot where Twin stands out.

Hurdlers Alex LaBeau and Kevin Boesel and middle-distance runner Paul Pearson also return for their senior years.
In the 800 meters, there's a new surprise find among the Bruin lot: senior David Babbel. A former distance runner, Babbel "has shown better speed in practice than last year," said Stands. "He's a real diamond-in-the-rough but we're going to let him run the 800."
In addition to his 800 duties, Babbel's newfound speed will place him as the anchor on Twin Falls' medley relay team.
With Babbel moved to the middle distances, the long distances (the 1600 and 3200 meters) will be left up to sophomore Todd Sims and junior John Conover.

The field events are led by high jumper Gabe Ostyn, who finished sixth last year at state with a leap of 6 feet, 6 inches, "and he's acquired some speed — a tremendous asset," added Stands.
The responsibilities in the weight events will be placed in the big miles of seniors Dan Riced and Steve Manson.
On the girls' squad, the same balance applies. But here, the sprinters on this girls' team are as good as they come.

Tigers ready to repeat as squad to beat

Jerome will return 15 key track stars

By MICHAEL VANAUSDELN
Times-News writer

The dynasty continues. Last year, the Jerome High School track team won both the boys' and girls' District 4 Class A-2 championships and the guys won the state title. This year, the cross-country team, the football team and the boys' basketball team all won state championships.

Prep track

So this spring, the Tiger track team looks to follow that same path. "Jerome is easily the class of the (South-Central Idaho) conference," said Wood River boys' Coach Bob Shay. "They have always been and it seems, they always will be."
Getting to state this spring will be slightly easier for athletes from Jerome, Buhl and Wood River, who compete among themselves for berths in the A-2 meet. With Bury being bumped upstairs to A-1 this school year, three teams instead of four will vie for the two individual qualifiers and the single relay team that go to state from the Magic Valley.
Burley and Mountain Home still compete with the three District 4 A-2 schools in the SCIC; that league holds its own conference meet in late April.

Jerome
All-in-all, the Tigers return 15 athletes from last year's state meet — 8 boys, 7 girls — and there are younger ones coming up that will fill in any other spots this season.
"We have a sophomore-dominated team," said boys' Coach Tim Dunne, whose teams have won six of the last eight state A-2 titles. "But we're still pretty strong. Our underclassmen are pretty mature for their age."
That's bad news for Jerome's two District 4 rivals, Wood River and Buhl, both which seem to sport quality teams this year. But they can't match the Tigers for depth and numbers.

The Jerome boys' team has a very mixed bag of talent, but it's a heavy bag.
Seniors Pat Hughes, Troy Ness and Kevan Pedrow are back from last year's state meet and each is the favorite to take in District 4 in their respective events.
Hughes, a defensive lineman from the state-champion football team, is at his best throwing the shot, but he will also fling the discus alongside Pedrow. Ness will run in the 800 meters.
Joining Ness to the middle distances will be junior Paul Hancock, running the 200 and 400. The standout sprinter on this squad, though, is John Gourley. Having state competition experience now, this sophomore is one teary cat.

"We always need some sprinters," said Dunne, "but John is pretty damn good. He can take on just about anybody who comes his way."
While Jerome has plenty of distance runners, the primary distance man for the Tigers is junior Glenn Leavitt.

Outside of Hughes' and Pedrow's shot putting and discus throwing, the main contribution from the field events will come from Lon Hutter, a sophomore, in the triple jump and from Kevin Thompson, a junior, in the pole-vault. That leaves the high jump.
"We're a little weak in that event," said Dunne. "Darrin Rice will jump for us but we don't have any depth there like we need."
The Jerome girls may have fewer returnees than the boys, but the depth is more evident with the ladies. Freshmen such as Charlette Garrison, Tara Martin and Erin Pringle have strengthened an already strong unit.

"I would like a few more seniors but the way the freshmen have been developing, they may do the job themselves," said girls' Coach Skip Garrison.
Andrew will join state returnees.

Pilots' A-3 crown coveted by several improving schools

By MICHAEL VANAUSDELN
Times-News writer

Prep track
Class A-3

Glenns Ferry High School won the District 4 Class A-3 track title in both the boys' and girls' divisions last year. This spring, there will be many, many teams shooting for the Pilots' crown.
In addition to Glenns Ferry, 19 A-3 meet schools in the Magic Valley will field track teams this spring, and Pilots' girls' Coach Ken Fast is ready for the challenge.
"We have real good balance," he said. "We have some strong people back like Barb Johank and Dan Pember and the rest of the team is coming around."
"Glenns Ferry is always the team to beat," said Gooding girls' Coach Jerome Toone. "It'll take some real strong going to unset them them."

Glenns Ferry
As Fast mentioned, Johank and Pember return to the fore for the lady Pilots. Johank, a senior, is the premier high hurdler in the district and Pember, a junior, one of the top high jumpers in the state.

A lot of the Pilots' points, however, will come from an unknown and unusual source — freshmen. Four freshmen — Kim Fast, Cathy Dilworth, Jennifer Berry and Liz Zabala — are the wild cards in the Glenns Ferry deck.
"What they do will probably tell the story," said Fast. "It's just a matter of them getting it done."
Fast, daughter of coach Ken, will run in the 400 meters, while Dilworth will compete in the distances and Zabala in the hurdles. Berry, a sprinter, won't be seen until later in the season, though, having hurt her knee in practice.

The Glenns Ferry boys have lost many of the athletes that helped fuel their surprise district and Canyon Conference championships last year, including weight specialist Mark Carpenter, who finished fifth in the state in the shot put, distance runner Salvador Hurtado, hurdler Dan Johank and half-miler Sean Black.
But Jessie Lopez went to state in both the mile and the two-mile last spring as a freshman, as did Jason Simon, now a senior, in the 100.
The primary competitors in for both the Glenns Ferry boys and girls will come from Canyon Conference opponents the Valley Vikings and the Declo Hornets.

Declo
The Declo girls have struck first, winning a season-opening meet at Valley last Wednesday, winning the meet handily in a conference preview.
"We're still out of shape," said Coach Jay Darrington. "We have some good girls, though, and we're balanced enough of a team to challenge Glenns Ferry this year."

The Hornets return eight athletes from the group Darrington took to state last year. Hurdlers Tiffance Peterson and Dana Barker led the way for the Declo girls. Completing the balanced attack of Darrington's Hornets are middle-distance runners Tracey Giles and Becky Flowers, long-distance trackster Jessica Miller, high jumper Amber Tanner, jumper Stacy Wickie, the shot put and relay team member Melissa Jenkins.
Kim Wells is a contender for the district discus honors.

The Declo boys didn't look quite as good in their season-opener, but they'll still be up there fighting with Glenns Ferry come season's end, most coaches predict. The primary contributor of coach Mike Matthews' club will be high jumper Dee Darrington.

But the meet at Valley did show that the Hornets have plenty of talent to spread around.
Discus thrower Shawn Mal, a junior, took his event, and Brad Wheeler looked good in the triple jump. Matthews is also looking for sophomore Paul Haskell to contribute in the shot put along with senior Doug Turner in the two-mile. Turner especially may be the sleeper for the Hornets, having just missed qualifying for state competition last season.

"I really don't know about our speed," said Matthews, "but I'm impressed with our young kids. We have only five seniors on the team and the young guys have to come through for us."
Valley

For Valley, last week's performance by the boys gave coach Scott Tingey hope for this season. The Vikings took first place in the team standings but "we have even more potential than that. And that's really what our team is made of, potential."

Senior sprinter Nick Mechem won the 100 in last week's meet, and him and senior miler Steve Barrett is a lot of young, fresh talent.
"We're young," added Tingey, "but I think we're pretty good too."
While Mechem provides most of the Viking boys' points, it's long jumper Lori Reed who provides them for the girls. The Valley junior went to the state meet last year, and she's our primary track athlete right now, according to Valley girls' coach Marguerite Astorquia.

Shuffling of the GSC aids chances in playoffs

Baseball, one of only two organized high school sports not sanctioned by the Idaho High School Activities Association, will take a step up for the Class A schools of the Gem State Conference this season.
The 10-team GSC has been divided into the same IHSAA regions in which all other sports except football are grouped in Classes A-1 and A. With Twin Falls, Minico, Highland and Pocatello in Region III and Twin Falls, Burley, Minico, Pocatello or Highland — a guarantee of a spot in the state tournament and the runner-up a chance to get there through a playoff with the

Buhl players relish return of baseball to their town

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

BUHL — For the first time in more than a generation, high school baseball will return to Buhl this spring.
Buhl secondary school teacher Joe Shepard and Buhl businessman Tom Fleming, the immediate past and current Buhl American Legion coaches, conceived the idea; took it to the Buhl school board and borrowed the uniforms from the Legion program. They'll coach the team, which begins its season with a non-conference double-header in Buhl Saturday afternoon at 4 p.m.

few days, but the kids seem to be coming around," said Shepard, whose ballclub includes players from Castleford and Filer as well as Buhl. "There are a lot of young kids, but there are also quite a few players with experience."
The Indians will play a six-game schedule and then compete in the District 4-5-6 Class B tournament with Shelley, Snake River and South Fremont high schools. Because there are so few other B baseball teams in southeastern Idaho and because the program was late getting started, Buhl was only able to get home-and-home commitments with Bury — now a Class A school — Mountain Home, Snake River and the Twin Falls JVs. The Indians will also participate in the Cross State Conference tournament in Burley on May 9.

Boutin to Nevada-Reno?

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Idaho State University Coach Jim Boutin is a candidate for the head coaching job at the University of Nevada at Reno.
UNR Athletic Director Chris Boutin is scheduled to announce who will replace Sonny Allen today at 2 p.m. MST.
Boutin, who led his Bengals to the Big Sky Conference championship after finishing seventh in the conference during the regular season, interviewed with Allen last week. Two of the other candidates are Bill Wukowich, Backus assistant coach, and Rick Peters, a former head coach at Marquette University and University of San Diego head coach Hank Egan. San Jose State head coach Bill Berry, who was interviewed by Allen last week, withdrew his name from consideration on Monday.
Allen quit Wednesday, he had talked to eight people about the vacancy, which opened when Allen quit under pressure three playing a lot of baseball between now at the first week in May — with virtually no slack to make up rainouts.

That's significant because, under GSC rules, each rainout that is not made up counts as a half-game in the loss column.

Twin Falls
Coach Bill Ingram has a fair number of seniors back from last year's 10-13 ballclub, but they are in jeopardy over being overshadowed by the Classes of '88, '89 and '90 this spring.

"Overall, we'll have more depth than we did a year ago and we have a lot of competition at every position," says Ingram. "The older players know that they have to play hard every day or there will be some serious right to be challenging them. We have four or five good sophomores and four or five good juniors and a couple of freshmen who can play."

Last year's Bruins were a team long on offense, but short on defense. They finished with a 7-7 record in a season-opening double-header sweep of Pocatello in which the Bruins scored 30 runs and batted out 29 hits in any indication, none of those three areas should be a weakness this year.

"We need to swing the bat, but I think that's an area we can improve on," says Ingram. "We're counting a lot on seniors Kevin Ames and Kelly Chatterton for pitching and we'll be a stronger team defensively than we were a year ago, especially up the middle."

Ames, a right-hander, who has been in the Bruins' starting rotation since he was a sophomore, began the season last Friday by striking out nine and scattering seven hits in a complete game victory over Lewiston. He finished the year with a 3-2 record, a 1.74 ERA and a 3.23 earned run average and 8-5 in American Legion baseball last summer. Chatterton, who threw a five-hitter against the Indians last weekend, was last year's spot starter and No. 2 reliever, compiling a 0-1 record and a 1.47 ERA in 1986. He was 1-3 last summer in American Legion.

The spot starting position this year will devolve to right-hander Mike Buster, while junior John Hayes and senior southpaw Eric DeBruin will have to share the job. DeBruin has pitching experience — he pitched in Lewiston in 1986 and Ochser in 1985 and Ochser in 1984 and Ochser in 1983.

Senior Barry Williams (.232 in '86) will inherit the catching job in which he excelled last year. Williams will consist of senior Shane Clark (.250) at first, junior Joe Jund at second, senior Jon Mehr (.200) at third and senior Barry Smith (.200) at shortstop. Clark, Mehr and Smith will be at the helm in 1987 this season. Jund had a summer of Legion experience in Jerome.

Also expected to figure in the Bruins' plans are freshman infielders Matt Rasmussen and Shane Quessell, junior Shane Newton and sophomore Justin Walker.

Ames, who batted 220 last summer as the regular third baseman, has been moved to center field this spring, while Ochser (.368) and Buster (.384) — pair of left-handed hitters — will be in left and right, respectively.

Chatterton will spend time in the outfield when he's not on the mound, according to Ingram, along with Jason Denton and Tony Hughes.

Minico, a ballclub that finished 15-9 last season with a lineup dominated by juniors and sophomores, has come of age this season.

schedule to help the program succeed," said Greg Störmer. "We would have liked to get a few more wins, but it's a good start. We're looking forward to it."

Of the 17 players on Shepard's roster, nine have had previous playing experience on the high school level, including four last year's starters. Filer High senior James Schroeder, right-hander who has pitched for two years with the Twin Falls American Legion team, was the Cowboys' No. 3 starter last summer, compiling a 4-5 record. Schroeder's classmate Mike Brady, a southpaw, posted a 2-3 record with Buhl's Legion team last year, while Buhl High junior Brian Hansen, a right-hander, was 3-3 with the same team and teammate Cornelio Hernandez, another right-hander, was 1-3. He'll be the team's leading hitter last summer, with the leading leg team, senior catcher Kelly Atkinson, a two-year veteran of the Buhl Legion program, and outfielders Derek Walker and Michael Cooper, both of whom played Legion ball last summer at Buhl.

"These four kids look pretty good," Shepard said. "If you're starting from scratch like we are, pitching is a good area to have your experience in."

They'll be joined by Buhl High junior Casey Boyer, an infielder who had both Legion and high school experience last year in Coeur d'Alene; left-handed hitting senior first baseman Derek Walker, the leading hitter last summer, with the leading leg team, senior catcher Kelly Atkinson, a two-year veteran of the Buhl Legion program; and outfielders Derek Walker and Michael Cooper, both of whom played Legion ball last summer at Buhl.

"We're still finding our team," said Schroeder. "This is what you

But ironically, some of the key players for the Spartans this season are going to be sophomores.

"We're a young veteran ballclub," says Coach Cory Bridges. "We've got some kids who played on this team for two or three years and yet we've got a lot of sophomores and juniors too. It's a pretty good situation to be in."

The Spartans return starters in five positions, led by junior second baseman Kent Schow (who batted .415) and senior shortstop Kevin Condie (.400), two of the leading hitters in the Gen. State Conference last season. Junior Craig Anderson (.317) returns at third base, while sophomore Dan Poulton will take over first base.

Sophomore Bret Bott and senior Tony Martinez are also likely to see playing time in utility and pinch-hitting roles.

"The infield should be solid," said Bridges. "Poulton is a very solid defensively player and Kent Schow has started — for two years — Kevin Condie is back for his third year, and Craig Anderson played that last year and all last summer in Legion ball."

thusiastic about senior James Frost, who was Minico's No. 2 backstop a season ago.

Senior Dave Cosgrove and junior Kevin Miller, a pair of .300 hitters last spring, will return in left field and center field, respectively. The position not settled is right field, where senior Eric Bingham has begun the season.

It will be an all-sophomore starting pitching rotation, led by hard-throwing right-hander Jesse Villanueva, who compiled a .22 record with the Spartans as a freshman and was 4-9 with Burley's Min-Cassia Legion team last summer. Right-hander Eric Miller, 0-7 with Minico's Legion team last summer, and Poulton, another right-hander who was 1-2 with the Sage in '86, will be the other starters. Right-hander Willie Arango, a 16-year-old who compiled a .63 record with Min-Cassia last summer, moved away.

The relievers will be juniors Jack Bagley, a right-hander, is up off the junior varsity team, while right-hander Willie Arango was injured and didn't play last year.

"We've got some talent in our pitching staff, but they're awfully young," said Bridges. "If our sophomores can handle it, I think we can be a good ballclub."

With five qualifiers returning from the state meet, the lady Trojans are feeling pretty confident.

"Our junior class this year is really lean, which leaves us thin in a lot of areas," Satterfield said. "There are a lot of spots where sophomores and freshmen are going to have to be everyday players for us."

What the Bobcats do have is a solid staff of pitchers, including four of the top five pitchers from 1986. They include senior shortstop Jared Skaggs (.395 in '86), senior outfielder/shortstop Jason Whitehead (.333), senior outfielder

J.J. Gonzalez (.345), senior second baseman Jeff Bray (.227) and junior catcher Peter Rodriguez (.233). Gonzalez led Burley last year in hits (19), triples (2), runs batted in (18) and stolen bases (9), while Skaggs was the leader in on-base percentage (.630) and doubles (7).

"I hope I'm going to be one of our strong points this year," says Satterfield. "Hitting and defense."

The youngsters upon whom the Bobcats will depend this year including sophomore Tom Messenbrink, playing his first year of high school baseball, at third base, and sophomore Jeff Gibbons at first. Senior Jarrod Mallory, who did not play last year, and junior Mike Dudley will see time in the outfield along with junior Shay Watterson, who hit .190 last spring in a reserve role.

On the mound, however, Satterfield lost four of his five victories last season along with Trevor Uscola and Craig Felt.

"Skaggs (.61, 5.77 ERA) and Whitehead (.61, 5.57 ERA) both started for us last year, but beyond that, Messenbrink will see some time for us and Bray is going to do some relief, but beyond that it'll have to be sophomores and freshmen."

Burley, which is not a member of the GSC, will continue to play its traditional schedule of 10-12 games in addition to the required Region III games against Twin Falls, Minico, Highland and Pocatello.

Pocatello
The Indians compiled a 14-10 record last season on the strength of their pitching staff, but beyond that, Messenbrink will see some time for us and Bray is going to do some relief, but beyond that it'll have to be sophomores and freshmen."

Graduation took a heavy toll on all three of those areas, making pitching a sore point for the Indians.

"The pitching is questionable for us," says Coach Rick Parkin. "We have some kids who can hit, but our pitchers are young and they haven't had a lot of experience."

The Indians' steadiest hurler last year, right-hander Kelly Smith, graduated. That left senior Bob Jenkins and junior Jim Hallinan, both right-handers, the only experienced Pocatello pitchers. Jenkins was a spot starter last season; Hallinan was a reliever.

"Jenkins is by far the strength of the staff," says Parkin. "When he's on his can be effective. But we're a team that's going to have to count on hitting this year, and we haven't been outside a lot yet."

Highland
With both experienced and inexperienced ballclubs, the Rams have struggled for the last four seasons, including an 8-9 finish last year. But this year Coach Zane Simmons seems to have the mix of pitching, defense and hitting to make Highland one of the favorites in the Gem State Conference and in Region III.

"It's probably a matter of consistency and leadership," says Simmons. "That's what we didn't have last year, when we beat some good teams and lost to some poor teams. Time will tell. We have a lot of juniors off last year's team who are seniors and I think we'll be pretty competitive."

Of the only two returning starters returning from that team, senior shortstop Ryan Hall, who hit .359, and senior center fielder Kevin Hall, who batted .290.

Greg Störmer, Robert Davis and David Duff have shown some real potential in the middle distances," according to Minico Coach Wes Patterson. "But they don't have a lot of experience."

On the girls' squad, it's the long distances that provide Minico with its strength. Robbinia, a senior, and Christi, a junior, will blaze the path in both the 1600 and the 3200.

"We look pretty solid in just about every department," said Patterson, who has moved state-qualifying hurdler Allison Andrews, a sophomore, to the hurdles. "Yes, we've done some moving around and made some changes, but I think we're a pretty even team."

Of the two Burley teams, the girls' long distance runners returning six qualifiers from last year's state Class A-2 meet, including strong 800 and medley relay teams composed of Krista Williams, Jane Blayney, Becky Fowles and Jill Cornwell.

"We've got some speed," said girl Coach Ray Hoyt, "but we're young. This is what you might call a rebuilding year."

The boy's squad will be led by hurdler Bryan Shaw, a senior, but sophomore Mike Rossell will be a triple threat for the Bobcats. Compete in the 800, long and triple jump. Rossell "has a lot of pride of practice," said Carier. "Like the girls, we're a young team with only two seniors on the team. We'll be overly, though."

Mountain Home
Mountain Home, a team that the boys' coach says won't see until their four schools' meet will be regional, will depend heavily on a few athletes. The most notable is versatile senior Jonny Jaquet.

"She's just an exceptional track athlete," said her coach, Tony English.

In fact, Jaquet by herself could make up a solid team. Last season she qualified for four events in the state meet: the 100, high hurdles, high jump and long jump.

"The boys' squad has its own multiple talents in heavy Tony. The senior will run in the 800, sprint and will be a triple jump. He is joined by fellow senior Gary Taylor, also a sprinter but in an unusual combination; he will also throw the discus."

"We have pretty good depth," said English. "But really don't know what to expect from this team."

Of all the teams in Region III, the Pocatello Indians were hit the hardest by graduation — especially the girls. Vogt will primarily rely on distance runners, led by Jeff Doyle, a junior who finished second in the state meet last year — exchange student Rob Ronstrom and sophomore J. Dee Wilson for team points.

"We need work in the sprint to be Minico. Despite only one department, though," said Vogt.

TWIN FALLS — Senior Matt Childichimo of Twin Falls continued to impress with his early-season sprinting leads Wednesday afternoon in leading the Bruin boys girls to victory in a five-way track meet.

In the boys' division, the Bruins rolled with 123½ points to 65 for second-place Skyline. Blackfoot was third with 40½, followed by Burley with 28 and Jerome with 9.

On the girls' side, the Bruins picked up 102 points to 47 for runner-up Blackfoot. Skyline was third with 45, followed by Jerome with 41 and Burley with 25.

Childichimo turned the 100-meter dash in 10.66 seconds and added a 22.4 in the 200. Both were wind-aided — as were his efforts of last week — but they indicate he has picked up last year's half-hundred off last year's time and this is remarkable improvement between the junior and senior year.

Twin Falls senior Gabe Ostyn, credited with a 6-foot victory in the high jump, came within an eyelash of clearing 6-8, moving the bar to that height after losing all competition early.

Prep track

In the girls' division, Bruin senior Dana Cowan took the distance jump event, the latter in a half-inch duel with Jerome's Laura Cecl, who went on to place in four events and win the intermediates.

Probably none of the participating teams was at full strength. Jerome's only one token dozen or so, but rest reportedly good, seeing steedch fishing. Twin Falls' girls were without middle distance ace Jenny Hannah as the athletes took advantage of their last break before the state meet May 15-16.

The Bruins will next see action on April 3 in Idaho Falls' Raven Stadium in a three-way meet with Idaho Falls and Bonville.

Wood River prevail over Buhl, Carey

By The Times-News

HAILEY — The Wood River Wolverines opened their 1987 home track season by defeating Buhl and Carey in both ends of a three-team meet Wednesday.

On the boys' side, Wood River rolled up 84 points, edging Buhl, which had 80. Carey finished with 77.

The Wolverines girls had 88 points compared with 50 for Carey and 20 for Buhl.

"I was pretty pleased with the way we looked," said Wood River boys' Coach Bob Shoup. "I thought we had a couple of good individual performances for this time of year."

Detroit loses to Golden State, drops farther behind Atlanta

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Joe Barry Carroll scored 33 points and Eric "Sleepy" Floyd added 31 Wednesday night for the Golden State Warriors, who pulled away in the final three minutes for a 127-115 NBA victory over the Detroit Pistons.

Golden State led 103-93 after three periods, but the Pistons pulled to within one point with an 11-2 spurt at the start of the final quarter. Detroit trailed by only three points, 115-113, with 3:40 remaining.

Carroll made two free throws with 3:25 left, Floyd followed with a driving layup and Larry Smith's two free throws made the score 120-111 with two minutes remaining. A three-point play by Carroll a few seconds later, clinched the victory.

NBA Roundup

Smith, one of the league's top rebounding forwards, had eight rebounds in the last quarter and 18 in the game. Chris Mullin and Rod Higgins scored 19 points apiece for the Warriors, who made their record 35-14 with their third straight victory.

LA Clippers 111 Utah 101 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Larry Drew scored 14 of his 23 points off the bench in the fourth quarter and Mike Woodson added 28 to help the Los Angeles Clippers snap a six-game losing streak Wednesday night with a 111-101 NBA victory over the Utah Jazz.

The Clippers, who won for only the second time in their last 14 games, also got 24 points from Michael Cage to lead the victory.

Trull Bailey came off the bench to lead Utah with 24 points and Karl Malone had 21, despite going 0-for-11 in the second half.

After yielding seven straight Utah points in a 37-second span, the Clippers outscored the Jazz 17-0 over the last five minutes of the first quarter to turn a four-point deficit into a 32-27 lead.

Indiana 125 Milwaukee 108 INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Center Steve Stipanovich scored nine of his lead in the fourth quarter, and Wayne Tisdale came off the bench to add 24 more as the Indiana Pacers defeated the Milwaukee Bucks 125-108 Wednesday night in the NBA.

first 2:30, including an 18-foot jumper that capped an 11-2 Indiana run and pushed the lead to 101-83.

The Bucks hit just one of six shots in that span, a 15-footer by Terry Cummings. The closest the Bucks came after that — was on a Craig Hodges layup that reduced the margin to 103-87 with 8:50 to play.

After a 16-16 tie was broken on a 3-pointer by the Pacers' Chuck Person with 5:20 to play in the first quarter, Indiana opened up a 7-point lead at the end of the period, 38-31.

Ex-CSI coach Grant back at CSU

By MARK KISZLA The Denver Post

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — The suffering Colorado State basketball program, ailing from the lack of fiscal and vocal support, got a transfusion of old blood Wednesday when former College-of-Southern-Idaho Coach Boyd Grant was hired as coach.

The 53-year-old native of American Falls played for the Rams during the mid 1950s and was an assistant to Jim Williams from 1962-72, when the team was one of the best in the west.

"I think Boyd Grant will give us a person our basketball program can rally around," said CSU Athletic Director Oval Jaynes. "He will bring the program instant credibility and unity, things I think we badly need."

Grant coached at CSI from 1974 through 1977, winning the National Junior College Athletic Association championship in 1976 and finishing second the year before. He came to CSI from the University of Kentucky, where he was an assistant to Adolph Rupp for two years.

"The biggest thing in being a successful college basketball coach is having good players. But No. 2 has to be the people who support it," said Grant.

College basketball

Grant, who accepted the Colorado State offer late Tuesday and will begin duties immediately.

Grant-coached Fresno State from 1970-73, compiling an impressive 196-74 record while leading the Bulldogs to three conference championships and three National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament appearances. He resigned a year ago, complaining of fatigue.

Jaynes withheld financial terms and length of Grant's CSU contract until a Thursday press conference here. "I'm not concerned about his age or enthusiasm," said Jaynes.

"John Wooden was my coach when I was 16," Grant said. "I was interviewed about recruiting when I was interviewing with CSU."

The Rams do return three starters, including top scorers Pat Durham and David Turcotte, from a team that finished 13-6 overall and 7-3 in the Western Athletic Conference. "That is important," Grant said.

NIT final: LaSalle vs. Eagles today

NEW YORK (AP) — La Salle, which faces Southern Mississippi for the title in the 50th National Invitation Tournament today, is not far from forgetting about facing another one defense that will let the Explorers again make eight 3-point shots in the first half.

"They've convinced me they can shoot," Southern Mississippi Coach M.K. Turk said Wednesday. "I can assure you that we won't open with a zone against La Salle."

"They know they have to play us man-to-man to win," La Salle Coach Bill "Speedy" Morris said. "But we feel we can handle a man-to-man and get the ball inside. Not many teams have tried to play a zone against us. We've had games where we've only shot five or six 3-pointers."

Southern Mississippi defeated Nebraska 82-75 in the other semifinal.

Holly Hamilton, a junior, in the 800 while also running the 400 with Pringle. Martin is expected to contribute mostly from the relay events where two other state competitors, Chrissy Rice and Tricia Spencer, return.

The emergence of the freshmen has "improved our running department drastically," said Andrew. "With the kind of runners we have, we'll really lead up on the relays."

In both hurdle events, Jerome has one of the best around in senior Laura Cecil, and the same is true for the distance events with senior Laura Jensen.

The jumping events show a marked weakness in the jumping events, but the discs and shot put look super with senior Teorsa Goodchild and junior Tanya Vogel. Both went to the state meet last year, "and they'll no doubt go again," added Andrew.

Wood River If either Buhl or Wood River can challenge the Tigers, it might just be the Wolverines.

The girls, especially, "have been showing a lot of enthusiasm and talent," according to their coach, Midge Patzer. "We had 38 girls come out and they all look like they can contribute."

The Wolverines are led by the talents of two seniors — sprinter Amy Engelbert and hurdler LeAnn Morgans.

"They are the leaders of our team," said Patzer, and they're the ones who will have to contribute mightily for Wood River to even come near Jerome.

Patzer also has high expectations for Jennifer Terra, a junior, running the quarter mile as well as the mile relay.

But the biggest Wood River promise comes from the younger section of the team. Sophomores Erin Renfro and Sheri Threasher will challenge Jerome's Jensen for district honors in the long distances.

The real concern, however, seem to be junior Christina Butler in the 800 and sophomore Diane Mackinzie in the hurdles.

"We have quite a bit of young talent," said Patzer. "The faster they develop, the better we'll be."

For the Wolverine boys, the pickings are slimmer. Senior Alan Schwartz will be back in the long jump and so will Aaron Baker in the 400, both returning athletes from last season's state meet. But beyond that, Shay isn't so sure where the team points are going to be coming from.

"We have some spots that need filling," he said. "We have only 20 boys out and we're running pretty thin."

Seniors Mike Malone and Troy Higgs will try to fatten things up a bit, though. Malone, a competitor in the state wrestling meet, will lead the weight events for the Wolverines. Higgs, meanwhile, is the standout of the sprint corps.

Buhl football Coach Keith Mielzner takes over the track team this spring looking "to build a winning program."

His strongest building block is senior Nancy Stevens, one of those ones in long while who are strong in several events. The Buhl senior will compete in the same events this spring that she did at the state meet — the 200, long jump and the mile event.

"She'll have to have another big year for us," said Mielzner of Stevens, whose strongest event is probably the long jump.

Freshman Jamie Korte, though, will provide support for Stevens, running in the sprint events as well as triple jumping.

"Jamie has really come on in practice," said Mielzner. "I really didn't expect someone to come on the way she has, but she has been a wonder."

Most of the points for the boys team will probably come from the pole vault event where two athletes, senior Brian Stary and junior Brad Armistead, make up Buhl's strongest event.

Another Indian to watch may be distance runner Michael Cooper, a senior, "who is as solid as you can get," said Mielzner.

Fish & Game weathers Californian's road closure petition

By BILL LOFTUS
The Associated Press

LEWISTON — The Idaho Fish and Game Department is under attack from California, and the battle is over the closure of roads in national forests.

Auto dealer Paul H. Snider of Sacramento, Calif., says that after hunting in Idaho for 30 years, he has started a petition drive opposing an increasing tendency to close roads to the public.

In a telephone interview, Snider said he has collected about 1,000 signatures, nearly all from Californians, seeking to reopen the roads. He says he also has received a letter from Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, supporting his effort.

Snider said the fact that he sells

Jeeps, in addition to other car makes, has nothing to do with his desire to keep back country roads open to the public.

"This is only because I'm familiar with the Salmon National Forest," Snider said.

He said the petitions are directed at national forests in Montana as well as Idaho because environmental groups have also publicly pledged to seek similar road closures.

The petitions do not in fact specify a state at all. They simply object to roads—closed because of the "Department of Fish and Game," which is the formal name of both Idaho's and California's wildlife agencies.

Snider said he gathered the signatures from a variety of hunting clubs in the Sacramento area and "Unless it's a new road, we don't think any more should be closed. And we should look at the areas they have blocked off completely."

— Paul Snider
auto dealer, Hunter

elsewhere. Petitions are now being distributed in Idaho as well. Road closures have been championed by Idaho Fish and Game, the U.S. Forest Service and timber industry officials for several reasons, the foremost being that road closures permit logging without jeopardizing elk herds.

By limiting the amount of open roadway in the forests, the number of hunters is reduced and elk herds thrive, biologists say. The road closures are also intended to help reduce the amount of mud in streams and thus prevent fish from being killed.

But Snider said the road closures also keep many people, particularly those who are not avid outdoorsmen, from traveling in the national forests. Those unable to walk into remote hunting areas are left out, he said.

"Unless it's a new road, we don't think any more should be closed," Snider said. "And we should look at the areas they have blocked off completely."

Although the petitions target the Fish and Game Department, it is the Forest Service that regulates public lands.

The Fish and Game Department is targeted as the villain in the road closures probably because, on a local basis, Fish and Game recommends which roads are closed and which remain open.

About 10 years ago, Snider said he began observing a steady erosion in the number of open roads that lead to the Salmon River from North Fork, Idaho, downstream.

Now the closures have expanded to include roads on both sides of the Lemhi Valley near Salmon, Idaho, he said. The Forest Service hasn't helped matters by changing its maps, Snider said. The maps once detailed which roads were open to motorized vehicles and which weren't.

Now the Forest Service simply indicates areas where roads may be open by shading areas on the maps. Travelers may not discover a road is closed until they visit the area, Snider said.

The protest is moving onward to both the state and national levels, he said.

Snider said he wrote to the U.S. Department of Interior to complain about the Forest Service's road closure policy. Now he's writing to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, which is in charge of the Forest Service.

Anxious anglers stage steelhead vigil

Abnormal weather, water cause delays

By MIKE HARROP
Special to The Times-News

STANLEY — There's a romance that clings to the River of No Return and its great remaining mystery — the steelhead that can appear in explosive numbers in the headwaters.

Right now, that romance is in the flirtation stage.

Only about 185 fish have reached the new Sawtooth Hatchery near Stanley, but more than 2,000 have been "logged in" at the Pahsimeroi weir further downstream below Challis.

The river temperature is in the low to mid-30s in the Stanley vicinity — hovering just below the level which will trigger a massive integration from the deep over-wintering holes in the Salmon River to the spawning "travels" in the neighborhood of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area.

Meanwhile, only about a month of catch-and-keep steelheading is left. The game commission cuts off the season in the upper river on April 30. In some other areas, the season ends on March 31.

The upper Salmon near Stanley is so low that a Labrador retriever can cross in places without getting his belly wet.

It is so clear that you can count the pebbles on the bottom of the deeper holes when the sun shines from the right angle.

But as of this writing, there are very few steelhead in the frigid waters.

Fishermen and merchants alike are growing anxious as time winds down on the run. Several false reports were circulating last week and some were even picked up by media.

However, a check of game officials and fishermen Sunday showed that the steelhead remain below Stanley for the most part, although some fish were caught at Sunbeam Dam. However, creel censusing by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game showed success at about 15 hours per fish.

Tom Rogers, superintendent of the Sawtooth Hatchery, says "the problem seems to get" fish to bite in these cold waters. A fresher that would warm the water temperature would have them (steelhead) bombing up here. We expect the peak of the season about the second week of April but "it could start any time." This year's weather has been wintery.

Of course, fishermen are permitted to fish for steelhead on most streams during the regular trout season that begins May 23. But they must release the fish unharmed.

Some locals around Stanley who know the river as intimately well and who are either outrageously good fishermen or are award-winning liars report having caught four and five fish per outing recently. But most fishermen will work for days before getting a strike until the fish move upstream.

There's some talk about a secret lure — a white bass rig — that is producing fish despite the scarcity of the big sea-run rainbow trout and the cold water.

But the lure isn't available at Stanley or anywhere else on the river. And the anglers that have them aren't giving any away.

As the steelhead continue to winter in the deep runs and wait for warmer temperatures, what little snow has fallen in the high country is slowly evaporating into the air.

When warm temperatures occur, there will be little runoff this year to cloud the streams and make fishing difficult.

And as a result, herds of anglers are waiting for the temperatures to warm and for fish to begin moving.

If the river warms gradually, the run will commence slowly in clear water, making conditions ideal for fly and lure fishermen.

But if sudden warming makes for high, roily water, only bait fishermen will stand a chance at this year's expected record run.

Steelhead fishing is similar to fishing for trout except that the fish aren't interested in eating.

Only a few fish will be aggressive enough to take a bait or lure at any given time, and a lot of fish are required to be present for really fast fishing.

On the other hand, a great many hours spent fishing can make up for low fish numbers.

Generally, shore fishermen enjoy about half the success rate of boat fishermen, but that changes in the headwaters near Stanley where boats need four-wheel drive during low-water periods.

There are several methods of taking steelhead from shore.

Sea-run rainbow trout favor boulders to break the current's force when resting, which is probably the best time for them to take bait or lures. Sand or small-grained gravel bottoms won't hold very many steelhead because they lack obstructions to break the current.

Most baits and lures hang up on the rocky bottoms preferred by steelhead. As a result, fishermen must develop techniques that allow a bait to move over the bed of the river without hanging up or which won't touch the bed at all, but hang suspended in water just over the lure-grabbing boulders.

Resting steelhead are thought to have "territorial rights" to as much space as they can defend from other fish.

They sometimes attack intruders, whether the intruder is another fish, a lure or a bait.

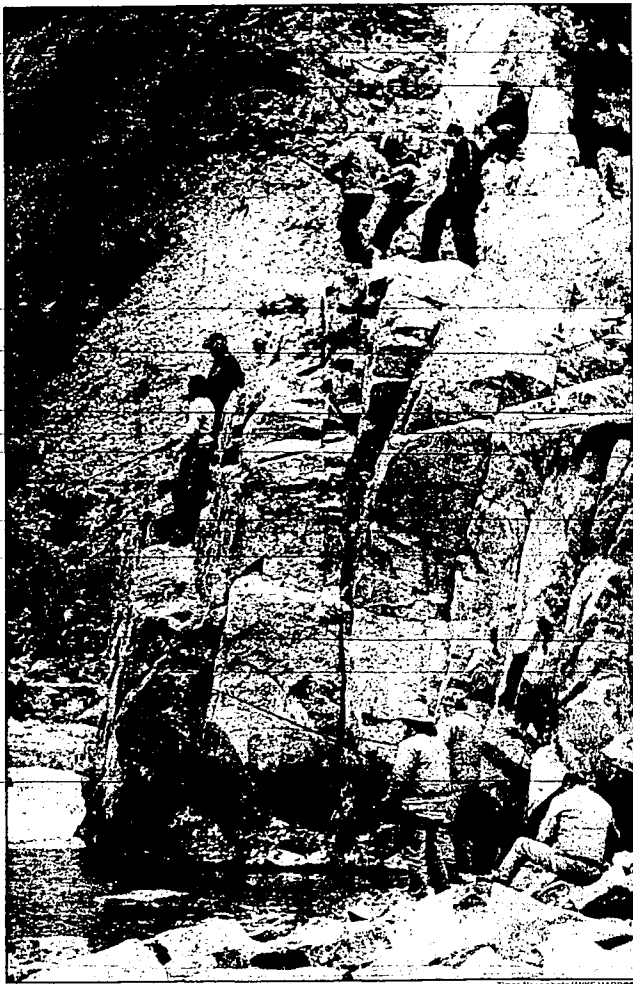

Thus, a lure can be "drifted" downstream either from a boat or by a caster standing on shore.

Such baits and lures are usually rigged 18 inches below a pencil lead sinker tied into the fishing line itself. The pencil lead is held by a surgical rubber pinch which will release if the sinker hangs up in the rocks.

Unless the lure or bait floats by itself, you'll need a small float to keep the hooks from hanging up on the bottom.

Baits include roe, worms, shrimp and pieces of trash fish. Lures include yarn and float combinations, spinners and plugs.

Because steelhead take lures near the bottom best, fishermen can take migrating steelhead by anchoring a line at 90 degrees to the bank with a heavy sinker, using a baited lure on a dropper

Castling into the upper Salmon River near Sunbeam Dam, these anglers reported slim luck about 18 inches above the sinker.

Spin-N-Glow bobbers are probably best for the latter method, because their built-in flotation will keep the lure and bait floating above the rocks while the lure's whirling action will attract attention.

Anglers also use spoons and spinners from shore, but lose many of them. Unless you're fishing very close to the bottom, you won't catch steelhead.

Try boats if fishing on upper Salmon But know risks

STANLEY — It's the 137th cast of the day without a strike and the river has snared your lure deep in the clutching rocks of the riverbed for the 72nd time.

You work for 15 minutes to get your lure free, but the rocks have a grip on the lure that is unshakable and the line must be intentionally broken to avoid leaving your rod and reel on the river — a monument to futility.

As the line parts, your last lure takes up permanent residence on a stream called the River of No Return because no angler has ever been known to go home with all the lures he owned when he went there.

Boat fishermen have a much easier time because snags usually release lures if the line pressure comes from above, rather than from the bank.

Generally speaking, drift boats can be used by steelheaders on the Salmon River below Sunbeam Dam, although early spring isn't the best time to learn whitewater navigation.

There is no room for mistakes on an unforgiving river where water temperatures approach the freezing point.

Farther downstream, there are stretches of relatively sane water where boats can be carried to the stream and used on short stretches where rapids aren't a problem.

Generally, a boat should be small enough to carry to the river from the road but big enough to go through a rapid in an emergency.

That means a 14-foot catprow, rubber rafts, large canoes, or a whitewater drift boat.

Two methods of boat fishing are generally employed for steelhead. In the fall, and late spring, water temperatures are warmer and steelhead will take a Hot Shot or similar lure fished from a boat.

Such lures dive to a point within a resting steelhead's zone of irritation, where he'll strike to get rid of the intruder. In operation, the boat is backed downstream, allowing the lure to "work" against the current.

In the winter and early spring, fish move deeper and the most effective method involves drifting bait deep through holes on a pencil lead sinker rig.

Drift fishing short stretches usually requires a motor to run to the head of a hole.

Out of 210 applicants, 21 win shot at turkeys

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

JEROME — Out of 210 candidates, 21 Magic Valley hunters were successful in drawing permits for the area's two spring turkey hunts.

A total of 66 applications for six permits for the new Niagara Wildlife Management Area spring turkey hunt and 146 more for the City of Rocks hunts were processed by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

This marks the second year hunting has been permitted on the Almo-City of Rocks populations as that group seems to have adapted well to its new surroundings and currently is dispersing across southern Cassia County. The majority of the birds still seem to favor the area immediately around Almo, however.

Craig Kvale, Region 4 wildlife manager, said the department estimates that flock from 100 to 200 birds.

The Niagara Turkeys have been in the Snake River Canyon country for longer, but haven't

Craig says wolf recovery plan ridiculous, unneeded

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Testifying before a House subcommittee, U.S. Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, blasted the Northern Rocky Mountain wolf recovery plan, calling the proposal "ridiculous, unmanageable and unnecessary."

Craig made his remarks before the subcommittee on fisheries and wildlife conservation and the environment. The body currently is considering reauthorization of an endangered species act.

which includes the wolf recovery plan. Idaho is one of three states identified for establishment of a wolf recovery management area.

The First District congressman asked the subcommittee to consider the "ridiculous" nature of the proposal.

"Federal law, in its stupidity, says that when an animals this is hunted and controlled in Canada and the steps across the border into Idaho, it immediately becomes a wolf. The body currently is considering reauthorization of an endangered species act. See WOLVES on Page D4

Biologists net 14 more caribou for transplant

The Associated Press

BONNERS FERRY — Idaho Department of Fish and Game biologists have corralled another 14 woodland caribou in British Columbia's rugged interior for transplanting in the Panhandle.

The first six caribou captured in the joint roundup with Canadian Wildlife Branch officials were scheduled to be brought across the border on Friday, with the remaining eight following on Saturday.

The new herd was expected to be released near Bonners Ferry as early as Monday or Tuesday, joining 12 other caribou released earlier in the month after being captured near Revelstoke, British Columbia.

John Beecham, Idaho Fish and Game's wildlife research manager, said the latest roundup went smoothly.

"It just couldn't have gone better," he said. "It was typical spring weather, snow squalls and blue skies."

The caribou were captured in the Iglicuch Mountains, some 120 miles west of Williams Lake, British Columbia.

Craters loop is now open

ARCO — The 7-mile loop drive through Craters of the Moon is now open. According to Superintendent Robert Scott, "The lack of snowfall this winter is responsible for the earliest road opening in many years."

Although many of the hiking trails in the monument are also open, several are still partially covered by snow. Visitors are reminded to exercise caution when utilizing areas in which snow and ice are present," Scott said.

"A few sites in the campground are now free of snow, but camping and related services are very limited at this time. While needed maintenance and cleaning programs will not be presented until mid-June, the visitor center is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily," he said in a news release.

A self-registration fee of $3 per vehicle will begin April 1.

Because of the early road opening, it is still possible that snow storms will temporarily close the loop drive. For current conditions visitors should call 527-3257.

Motor enthusiasts say timber parcel too big

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The timber industry's 1.2 million-acre starting point in negotiations for additional land to be set aside as wilderness is too high, says a spokesman for a new coalition representing motorized recreationalists.

Clark Collins, president of the Idaho Public Land Users Association, said Wednesday that his group would not let the timber industry negotiate for motorized forest users.

The coalition, which includes the Idaho Trail Machine Association, the Idaho State Snowmobile Association and the Western Whitewater Association, was formed to present a new voice in wilderness and public land use debates, he said.

"There's a lot of people that realize that those on the other side of the wilderness issue ought to get organized, and we are," Collins said. "In previous negotiations on wilderness designation motorized recreation users were just flat left out."

The Focaltelo electrician said the coalition represents the "new environmental movement," which is dedicated to "protecting our natural resources for public use, not from public use."

It is a part of a larger group that is being formed that calls itself the Blue Ribbon Coalition, which will represent similar interests throughout the Intermountain West, Collins said.

A mutual interest in protecting resources will, at times, put them on the same side as traditional conservation groups interested in keeping roadless areas protected, Collins said. They share a dedication to patience over resolution of the Idaho wilderness issue since the 9 million acres currently designated as roadless allows motorized use.

"We aren't going to let the timber people represent us because they don't," Collins said. "We feel the motorized recreationalists have already given up too many areas."

Rep. Peter Kostmayer, D-Pa., introduced a bill earlier this month calling for the designation of 3.9 million acres of new wilderness in the state. His bill represented the proposal of Idaho conservationists to add to the more than 4 million acres already set aside in Idaho.

Collins said there would be a strong effort to resolve the Idaho wilderness issue this year. "But I don't think it can be done in a year."

Giddyup, quacker!

Two-year-old Bill Jarrell takes what seems to be an oversized (for him) goose decoy for a flight of fancy in a meadow in northern Ashland, Oregon, recently. The decoys are among 600 set out as a promotion by the Ashland chapter of Ducks Unlimited.

Dead calf gives clue

KETCHUM — A road-killed elk calf has given the Idaho Fish and Game Department an idea that Magic Valley's big game herds have come through this mid winter in great shape.

Craig Kvale, Region 4 wildlife manager, the elk showed a "fair amount" of fat which is unusual in March of almost any year.

"We anticipate this indicates the herds generally came through the winter in great shape and that should mean a good year production-wise."

Kvale said all aspects of the region's big game winter projects have now been concluded.

The region currently is putting together in-house recommendations for the 1987 fall hunting seasons.

Shrewd Nevada residents court big-spending 'snowbirds'

"They gotta go somewhere in the summer, and it may as well be in Ely."

The north country is a courtin' them snowbirds. Wherever snowbirds gather in great numbers, there are booths set up, such as the one from Ely, Nev., to remind the winter traveler that coming north is the thing to do in the summer, and it is worth the drive.

"In Ely, we have restored the Nevada Northern Railway depot, we have started a Silver Trails Trips contest and we are giving the winner $1,000 in Nevada silver bullion."

As a representative from Ely was filling my sack with material about Ely, he was giving his pitch to several who had stopped to view the table full of material he was handing out.

"First you gotta give 'em a map of Nevada so they can find it," he tells me. "Then you gotta get 'em thinking about spending time in our area."

"OK, you got me interested," I tell the pitch man. "Now, how do you do it? Who pays for all this?"

"Well, for me, they pay my trailer space down here for a month or two, and help with the grub for me and the wife," he tells me. "Hell, the chamber is tickled pink, last year we increased our tourist budget over 100 percent, and the state picked up most of the tab by printing brochures and a lot of it came by having this booth where the most of our kind of tourists are, here in the south land."

As he continued to fill my plastic sack with printed material, he asked if I had ever been to Austin, Nev. "Can't say as I have," I replied.

"Well sonny, you come to my town and I guarantee you one hell of a time. Come on Aug. 1 and we will have the town a jump for ya," and threw into the sack a 4-page newspaper about Austin's history and events that were going on around the area.

"Bet you didn't know that everyone of them people walking by here spends over $1,000 per month while they are a visitin'!" he tells me, as he pulls me aside to let another new snowbird gather up material. "Hell man, that's big money in our part of the country."

This fellow from Ely wasn't selling anything, he was promoting his area and he got a free place to stay and some grub to get him through the winter.

Where in the heck can a community get such a service for the cost? Chambers of commerce in Idaho are wining and dining all kinds of potential business contacts to get industry, mayors and governors are running all over the country hoping to get the ear of an industry executive who will hire 20 workers at a minimum wage, and then pull up stakes after a few years and go to another state that offers them more in the form of tax advantages or free services.

Tourism for Idaho? There are some simple solutions also.

During my travels in the West, I have often come upon an area that I would have loved to fish. The problem — no license for that state. The nearest place to purchase a license is several miles away; or it is a Sunday or a holiday.

The solution by some is — an interstate fishing license.

If the state wildlife agencies in the Western states got together and issued an interstate license for a reduced rate, what would be the effect?

Let me give you the cost of an out-of-state license. Nevada will cost you $30. California, $45.50; Arizona, $25.50.

All over the Western states out-of-state fishermen pay a premium. Let me give you my personal example of just how much a license to fish has cost me in the past 12 months, or a worst-case scenario.

I have fished in Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Washington and Montana, and have added up the tote to be $200.50. An have kept only fish I have caught in my native state, Idaho. (The wife likes trout.)

Such an interstate fishing license could be administered by an existing group — such as the Pacific Fishery Management Council, that could issue the license, direct the revenues to an accounting firm which would distribute revenues to participating state agencies.

Such revenues are already being given to states from federal excise taxes on fishing equipment.

The added money from such fishing licenses would be just the tip of money flow generated. I'm looking at money fishermen would spend on gas, hotels, motels, camping fees, food and the tackle each fisherman feels they would need to fish the different areas.

It has been suggested that such licenses would go together with restricted to traveling senior citizens and that a catch-and-release policy could be part of the license sale, thus in no way depleting the states fishing.

If the senior citizen tag, much like the "Golden Age" passport for federal camping facilities were issued, it should calm fears of mobs of Californians coming to Idaho to deplete our fishing.

Just a thought for today, and another suggestion for creating Idaho tourist dollars.

species" and gains the same rights as an average U.S. citizen," Craig said.

"Idahoans don't want to eliminate wolves," the congressman maintained, "but they certainly see the need to control them."

"If we could confine them to the Frank Church River of No Return Wilderness, that would be one thing," Craig said. "But there's a basic problem with that: wolves can't read. So I can't see where signs setting their boundaries would do much good."

He added the 3,000-square mile area allotted for the plan would take it beyond the wilderness tract.

Questioning the need for a recovery plan for a species that appears to be sustaining itself, Craig also addressed animal damage control efforts of Idaho livestock operators.

F & G's Chuck Garey honored for his work

JEROME — Chuck Garey, district conservation officer with the Idaho Department of Fish and Game in Twin Falls, has been named the outstanding conservation officer in Idaho for the Shikar-Safari Award.

This award is presented by the Safari International Club for conservation officers who have shown outstanding leadership, public relations and law enforcement abilities.

Garey has shown a dedication in working with landowners that has developed excellent cooperation between them and the Idaho Department. For example, he worked 67 days straight during the severe winter of 1985-86 while handling depredation complaints by farmers with big game problems in Jerome County and winter feeding of distressed wildlife.

The result of this effort was gratifying and not one complaint was received from any of the farmers involved. This reflects this officer's sensitivity and responsiveness to their problems. It is obvious in his outlook that he is very much concerned about the welfare of the wildlife resource.

He is a recognized authority on firearms and has a chapter on handguns for conservation officers in Dr. Sigler's book, Wildlife Law Enforcement, that is in use for wildlife courses throughout U.W. universities. He has served as the firearms training officer a number of years for the Fish and Game Department.

His law enforcement efforts have done much to protect our fisheries and wildlife in Idaho. He is an excellent investigator and has compiled an impressive list of successful cases.

For example, he solved a case in which a moose was shot and abandoned in the Island Park area of Idaho. The trail was 11 months old when the investigation began. Through careful interviews with all members of the hunting party involved and, due to his thorough and professional approach, the Jerome hunter who shot the moose received a citation, paid $1,300 in fines and civil penalties and lost his hunting privileges for three years.

He has an excellent record of working with sportsmen and other persons interested in our fish and wildlife resources.

Garey recently has been in demand for programs to teachers at Project WILD workshops where he presents a personal insight into violator's motivations and the black market in the sale of illegal wildlife.

We are fortunate to have such an outstanding officer working here in Magic Valley.

The current will carry you downstream while your lure works the fish-holding structures.

Some bait fishermen like to anchor and still-fish really good holes with fresh eggs or shrimp.

Under certain circumstances though, an anchor can overturn a boat in strong current.

Niagara 553-2 (15 applications for two permits) Ned Riggs, Wendell, and Lloyd DeWitt, Kimberly.

Niagara 553-3 (11 applications for two permits) Robert Kerbs, Twin Falls, and George Waples, Buhl.

Also 553-1 (35 applications for five permits) Fred Barron, Rupert; Carrell Erickson, Almo; Walter Easter, Buhl; Gary Hickey, Jerome; and Gary O'Connell, Declo.

Also 553-2 (35 applications for five permits) Walter Barron, Rupert; Carrell Erickson, Almo; Robert Erickson, Rupert; Michael Swanner, Ernest; Lee Strickland, Wendell; and Lewis P. Part, Burley.

Also 553-3 (31 applications for five permits) Bruce Bell, Pocatello; Douglas Green, Ernest; Fred Preston, Declo; Dale Giquley, Twin Falls; and Mike Williams, Burley.

Salt Lake hotel rooms reserved for falcon pair

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Hotel Utah may be closing in August, but in the meantime, two new tiny rooms have been built to accommodate two special guests — a pair of rare and endangered peregrine falcons.

The birds will take residence in specially constructed retreats on a ledge near the northeast corner of the hotel's 10th story, officials said.

For the fourth year in a row, the falcons are showing interest in nesting at the downtown site, where last year they produced three chicks. So far, only one of the falcons, the female, has returned to soar over Main Street.

Her next expected to join her soon, said Bob Walters, a non-game biologist for the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources.

"Last year the first observation of both birds was April 9, so we're a little early," he said Friday. "We shouldn't get too alarmed."

In 1986, the falcons nested in a box biologist erected near a favorite perch on the south side of the hotel. Because peregrines rarely nest in the same exact spot two years in a row, they're expected to seek a new site at the building this spring.

It is hoped the falcons will use one of the two boxes constructed this past week.

"We could be confounded by the fact that they'll do whatever they damn well please," Walters said. He said the new boxes were placed so that any young birds can practice flying over the relatively quiet plaza behind the nearby Mormon Church and away from the influx of river-down traffic.

Mormon Church officials recently announced they would close the 75-year-old Hotel Utah in August, making way for remodeling of the building for church-related uses.

Legal logjam Farmer fights to save beavers from railroad

RICHMOND, Mass. (AP) — Despite a pile of legal bricks "a foot high and growing," a farmer insists a bunch of Philadelphia railroad lawyers aren't going to run three beaver families from his land, not by a dam site.

"The little fellows have kits in the lodges now and if I cut the dam and let the water out they will die," farmer John Foster said Monday.

"The Philadelphia lawyers are trying to bulldoze this little farmer, this little hillbilly. But anyone who knows me knows I'm not going to change my mind," he said.

"I said those little fellows are going to stay, and they are going to stay," said Foster, who made one concession Monday to the legal onslaught that began in October. He hired lawyer David Katz.

"Had to, when they took me to federal court," he said.

The beavers' dam created a 30-acre pond, and Corral officials fear spring rains and a quick thaw of the winter's record snow could flood and damage the tracks.

The railroad lawyers asked a federal judge in Springfield last week to order Foster to let Corral workers on his property.

"No hearing date has been set, but I hope the judge is looking out the window today," said Stephen Doncette, a Boston lawyer for Corral. "The spring thaw is on its way."

Doncette said Corral approached Foster last fall about trapping and moving the three pairs of beavers, but he refused. Since then, Foster figures, his beaver colony has grown by four or five kits in each lodge.

When negotiations stalled, Corral filed suit seeking $10,000 in damages, alleging Foster broke federal railroad safety laws and created a risk of injury by refusing to let anyone dislodge the beaver.

"The way I figure it, I'm in hot water whether I tear down that dam or not and I like the beavers," Foster said.

All I want to do is get them to have the kind of environmental hearing the law says we can't get supposed to when you start drawing down a wetland," he said. "I'll take months if they go by all the rules."

"If I just open the dam without a hearing, I could face a $25,000-a-day fine for tampering with the wetlands and be held liable for the damages the release of the water could cause downstream," he said.

"I just can't believe that in this day and age when we can send men to the moon, that we can't get an engineer to come out here and figure out something we could do that would keep the railroad happy and the beavers too," he said.

Under the state Wetlands Protection Act, people who fill or drain wetlands without permits could be fined up to $25,000 a day, said John Creed, a spokesman for the state Department of Environmental Conservation.

Tribes, council decry market road decision

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The Idaho Environmental Council, the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes and at least six individuals have officially protested a decision by the Bureau of Land Management to allow construction of a farm-to-market road between Jefferson and Fremont counties.

Those protests could delay a final decision on the controversial Egghammer road by as much as a year, a BLM official said Wednesday.

"Official protests of the decision, issued in February by Idaho BLM Director Delmar Vall, had to be re-marked by Monday. Vall had decided to grant Fremont and Jefferson counties a right-of-way to build the controversial 8.5-mile road across critical elk wintering range, but only if it is closed in the winter.

Only the six individual protests had been received by Tuesday, said Jim Colby, BLM staff planner in Washington. D.C. Lloyd Ferguson, Idaho Falls BLM District manager, said he knew of additional protests coming from the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes and the Idaho Environmental Council.

"The six individual protests were from Hildegard Baber, Kathleen Williams Eder and Robert Sherwood, both of Idaho Falls; Ruth Herrington, Boise; Blair Nash, Rexburg, and John Swanson, Minneapolis, Minn. All opposed the road because of possible detrimental effects on the 200-head Sand Creek elk herd.

"This does not appear to be an abnormal amount of protests," said

Colby, who handles many of the BLM's protests nationally. "One would think with the number of comments on the draft (environmental impact statement) there would be more."

More than 500 people commented on the road proposal in letters and at hearings.

Colby and other BLM staffers review the issues that are brought up in the protests as well as the planning record made by the local and state BLM offices. The state office then must submit an analysis of the protests.

The final decision on whether a protest is valid will be made by Robert Burford, national BLM director.

"The director doesn't ordinarily substitute his judgment for the state director's," Colby said. "He usually decides if something was done wrong."

If the protests are not complicated, the notice of decision can be issued in 60 days. That might be the case if only the individual protests had been made. But the tribes' and IEC's protests could be more complicated and take more time.

"Some last over a year if it's complicated," Colby said.

The IEC said its main concern is the practicality of maintaining and enforcing a winter closure. It said the BLM should have projected some herd reductions even from the winter closure based on possible violations of the closure.

Fishing in paradise Christmas Island's angling, scenery bountiful

By CHARLIE MEYERS
The Denver Post

Tropical sun sparkling on white sand beaches. Palm trees waving in an ocean breeze. Limpid waters and coral reefs.

Viewed from the cruel vise of February, such exotic scenes seem the perfect foil for Rocky Mountain winter doldrums, a restful respite from cold and toil.

But let's not get too relaxed. This is a fishing trip, serious business for the enthusiasts who eagerly will pay more than $2,000 to sample a place many believe is the greatest spot on earth for light tackle in salt water.

This angling Valhalla is Christmas Island, discovered by Captain James Cook Dec. 25, 1770. This tiny atoll, roughly the size of the city of Denver, is located 2,200 miles south of Hawaii, barely a hundred miles from the equator. It is the largest of 33 coral islands that comprise the fringing Republic of Kiribati, where fewer than 60,000 people live in an ocean area larger than the Rocky Mountains.

But there is a treasure trove here that goes far beyond anything the good captain could have imagined during his brief and unimpressive landfall more than a two centuries ago. British and American technicians, who came here in the late 1950s to conduct nuclear tests south of Christmas Island, stumbled upon the enduring prize, a seemingly endless series of crystal-clear flats loaded with one of the most esteemed sport fish that ever burned up a reel, the bonefish.

These shorelines also are thick with golden trevally and barracuda and the blue water nearby is teeming with wahoo, giant trevally, yellowfin tuna and black marlin.

"It is simply the greatest place for light-tackle casting in the world," says Bill Fitzsimmons, who has been there seven times since 1984. Fitzsimmons organizes two excursions each year for 15 anglers.

"What makes this so special, apart from the fact that there are more bonefish here than anywhere discovered so far, is the weather," Fitzsimmons continued. "In the course of a week at any of the other popular saltwater places, you might have two perfect days, two fair days and the rest where you can't even get on the water. At Christmas Island, I have yet to have a bad day of fishing in nearly two months total."

Christmas Island is located in the middle of the Equatorial Calm. It has less than 30 inches of annual rainfall and few storms. Temperature ranges from 72 at night to 84 during the day, with virtually no annual variation.

Let's you suspect — Fitzsimmons might be swept away by commercial enthusiasm, other testimonials are appropriate:

Al Larson first went to Christmas with Fitzsimmons in March 1984, and liked it so much he came back in 1986.

"It's absolutely fabulous," Larson said. "The fishing is almost constant and there's never a dull moment. There are sharks, rays, lots of birds. Something is around all the time."

What Larson remembers most is the trevally, a large tropical fish with the generous build of a sea bass.

"We had things that looked like Volkswagens swimming around us in knee-deep water. It's spectacular. Jim Norwood has fished all over the hemisphere and flatly states, "This is the finest fishing you can ever imagine, mile after mile of sandy flats, all loaded with bonefish.

These fish make a trout seem like it's standing still."

Norwood, Larson and Fitzsimmons all are accomplished fly fishermen for whom the opportunity to toss streamers to large, viable fish in shallow water is one of life's highest callings. Yet these flats are equally accommodating to spin fishermen as well. Fitzsimmons says that spinning gear poses a bit more of a challenge for bonefish, but is more effective for trevally, a fish that inhabits both the depths and shallows and grows to more than 60 pounds.

"The best way to fish for them is with big surface poppers," Fitzsimmons related. "Think of an 80-pound large-mouth bass hitting a jitterbug lure and that's what you have here. Wildest of all is that a trevally will just keep hitting the plug until it's hooked. From there on, it's a wrestling match."

"You can land these with regular bonefish gear, but if they get any bigger, you're out of luck," Fitzsimmons said. "For the giant trevally offshore, you use the stoutest tackle you can find and then pray a lot."

Girl, age 7, hurt in attack by pet bear

MORLEY, Mich. (AP) — A 7-year-old girl was hospitalized in stable condition Wednesday after a neighbor's 400-pound pet black bear bit her, authorities said.

Amanda Barnes was attacked Tuesday near her Aetna Township home.

"The little girl got off the bus, and the neighbor's bear had got out," said Mecosta County Sheriff's Sgt. Richard Rau. "She walked by it and started to run then it reached out and grabbed her."

She was in Mecosta County General Hospital in Big Rapids, where she was being treated for several severe bites on the buttocks.

Deputies said her step-brother, 16-year-old Wayne Hughes, freed her by reaching into the mouth of the bear, grabbing it by the lips and pulling it away.

The 4-year-old animal, named Woody, was fatally shot after it was captured by county officials and its owner, Ron Monroe, deputies said.

Rau said the animal was "quite friendly in the past."

Service gives warning about antler poaching

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is warning people against breaking federal law by going onto the National Elk Refuge to pick up elk antlers.

A Fish and Wildlife news release says March is the month when bull elk are shedding their antlers on the refuge, and refuge officials will be conducting routine daytime patrols and special nighttime patrols to prevent antler theft and to reduce the number of people trespassing on the refuge and disturbing the elk.

Officers will be using sophisticated enforcement devices, the news release says, including night vision spotting scopes. Ultra-violet equipment is used to mark antlers and detect stolen antlers.

The department release notes that antler theft on the refuge is a violation of federal regulations and the Lacey Act, which prohibits the taking, possession, transportation, sale or purchasing of antlers from the refuge.

Breaking those laws carries a maximum penalty of $20,000 and five years in prison, according to the service.

The release adds that because of the high market value of shed antlers, removal of a dozen average-sized antlers can also be a felony.

Refuge Manager John Wilbrecht said that in the last few years refuge officers working with the Game and Fish Department, Teton County Sheriff's Department and U.S. Fish and Wildlife special agents have made 10 arrests for antler theft.

Wilbrecht said refuge personnel working with the Jackson Boy Scouts periodically remove the antlers from the refuge to prevent large numbers of antlers from accumulating on the range.

The antlers are then sold to the public through an auction held in the Jackson town square in May that attracts traders from around the world.

Proceeds from the antler sales are used to purchase winter feed for the elk.

"We're making the wisest use of this valuable resource," Wilbrecht said.

Fishing guide printed

BOISE (AP) — Anglers will be spared a hit or miss method of finding a good fishing hole by the "Official Guide to Fishing in Idaho," a state Department of Fish and Game publication.

"We have attempted to give readers a leg up in beginning their next adventure without eliminating the excitement of the search, or the thrill of discovery," said Bill Goodnight, department information and education chief.

Each of six fishing areas has a map showing the location of major waters, plus a list of local facilities and species of fish.

The guide shies away from uncovering "hot spots," but should be helpful in planning fishing trips, Goodnight said.

The book also describes the type of fishery in a particular stream or lake. For example: "wild, wildcat-chery or hatchery."

License vendors soon will have the guide and it is now available at department offices for $1 a copy, including tax.

Hunters claim 59,800 deer

BOISE (AP) — Hunters have harvested 59,800 Idaho deer last year, the highest total since 1970 and about 11,000 above 1985.

Included in the total compiled by a state Department of Fish and Game telephone survey were 53,200 taken during general seasons and 4,400 in controlled hunts.

Archers, with more management units available, took 1,600 deer in 1986, compared to 1,200 the year before. Muzzle loaders accounted for 600, up from 550.

The total elk taken at 15,500 matches the 1985 figure and is 50 less than 1984. The last three years have been the best since 1968, department records show. Bowhunters accounted for 900, compared to 500 in 1985, and muzzle loaders harvested 600, an increase of 100.

Unit 32 near Square Butte north of Emmet recorded 4,004 deer taken in the general season and a special hunt. The department wanted to reduce the herd by 3,000 to compensate for a range fire that consumed 80 percent of the 200,000 acres of winter range in the unit.

Men deny deer killing charge

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Three men accused of slaughtering a deer penned at a wildlife sanctuary with a hunting arrow pleaded innocent Wednesday to charges in the case.

The men were each charged with eight counts, including willful and malicious damage, larceny, trespassing, hunting without a license and hunting out of season.

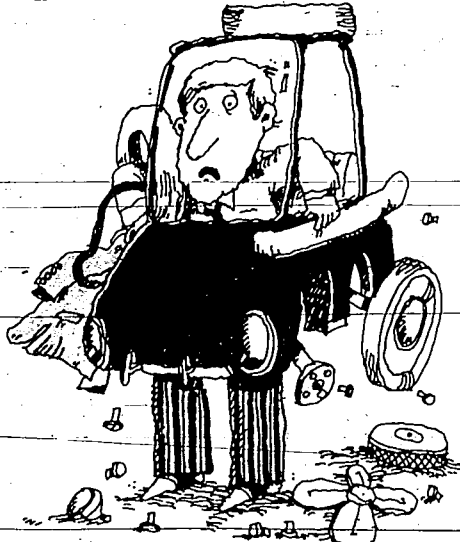

Charles Dolan, Hampden County assistant district attorney, said conviction on the malicious damage charge carries up to 10 years in prison.

The defendants were released on personal recognizance and a pretrial conference was scheduled for May 15.

The 6-year-old buck was shot at Laughing Brook Wildlife Sanctuary on Jan. 20, environmental police said. The animal was apparently dragged from its pen on the 259-acre estate of children's book author Thornton Burgess into a waiting vehicle.

The pen was in a compound near the creek where Burgess set many tales of Reddy Fox, Mister Black Snake and Lightfoot the Deer. Burgess died in 1955.
