Reagan says embassy to be made spy-proof

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said Tuesday that if the new American Embassy being built in Moscow cannot be made secure from Soviet spying, the United States may have to destroy it and build another facility.

Reagan also said that Soviet diplomats will not be allowed to transfer to their new embassy in Washington until American officials occupy the new U.S. Embassy in Moscow, a move that will not take place until he is sure that the facility is safe from Soviet eavesdropping.

Soviet espionage reportedly has reached into some of the most secure rooms in the U.S. Embassy and one Reagan administration official said that an initial assessment has concluded that virtually all arms-control communications in and out of Moscow have fallen into Soviet hands in the last year.

The president Tuesday named former Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird to assess the security damage at the existing U.S. Embassy, which has resulted from the Marine sex-and-spy scandal, and to review concerns that the new building under construction may already be bugged.

In addition, Reagan has asked one of his presidential advisory boards to evaluate the security at U.S. embassies worldwide, as well as at the new Moscow facility. If security cannot be ensured at the Moscow embassy, he said, "it may be necessary to destroy and rebuild it."

Reagan disclosed the steps in a hastily announced appearance in the White House press briefing room. By making the announcement himself, offering his first comments at length on the successful Soviet effort to gain access to the embassy's most secure areas, he appeared to be demonstrating an aggressive effort to respond to the scandal.

While all the facts are not known, it is clear that security implications are widespread and that additional quick action is required to prevent further damage to our national security, the president said in remarks carried on live national broadcasts.

"The United States will not occupy our new embassy building in Moscow unless and until I can be assured that it is safe to move into a secure embassy environment," Reagan said. "Likewise, the Soviet Union will not be allowed to occupy its facility in Washington until a simultaneous move by both countries is possible."

Inspection team lambasts resistance to tight security

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Two members of Congress looking into the U.S. Embassy security scandal blasted top people Tuesday for resisting tighter protection measures, and said the mission might never be declared spy-free.

Their report called for a worldwide overhaul of measures taken to protect U.S. diplomatic missions from espionage.

They said a new $191-million embassy complex being built in Moscow would take at least five more years to make secure, and did not rule out that it might have to be destroyed because it was riddled with KGB bugging devices.

Embassy security in Moscow was "fundamentally flawed" not only in physical and personnel areas, concluded Dan Mica, D-Fla., and Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Mica and Ms. Snowe came to Moscow to inspect the new embassy and gauge damage done by a spying scandal that led to two former U.S. Marine embassy guards being arrested. They spoke to reporters after two days of inspecting the buildings and talking with embassy officials.

U.S. Ambassador Jack Matlock delivered a formal protest Tuesday over purported infiltration of the old and new buildings by embassy spies, Marine Jaroslav Verzer said Tuesday.

"We should operate on the basis that the facility has been fully compromised," Mica said of the building that has served as the U.S. Embassy since 1953.

Of the new red-brick complex, Mica said, "We have five years of problems here, at least."

"We might recommend that it be demolished," Ms. Snowe said.

The two reserved their strongest criticism for the attitude taken by embassy personnel on security matters, and what they said was the failure to devise back-up systems that would prevent Soviet penetration.

Ms. Snowe said her talks with embassy personnel revealed a "negative attitude" toward the Marine guards' actions.

"This lax attitude and the lack of leadership in the security area by the senior staff in the embassy may have contributed to the breakdown of security which led to the penetration of the embassy."

Mica said embassy officials expressed disagreement with these findings.

He said Marine guards registered 137 security violations at the embassy in 1986, including safety left open overnight and classified documents left exposed. The Marines had the sense "nothing was being done" about the violations, Mica said.

Mica and Ms. Snowe called for sweeping changes in security measures at the Moscow embassy and other U.S. diplomatic missions. Among their recommendations:

Finds shouldn't delay supercollider

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Recent discoveries that superconductivity is possible at temperatures not far from ordinary freezing don't offer any reason to delay the planned "supercollider" particle accelerator, the Reagan administration told Congress on Tuesday.

Exciting as the new discoveries are, the exotic materials involved "have not yet been fabricated into conductors suitable for electromagnets, a task that will certainly take in excess of 10 years and probably closer to 20 years," said Alvin Trivelpiece, head of research in the Energy Department, in testimony before the House Space, Science and Technology Committee.

Superconductivity is the absence of all electrical resistance. An electrical current in such a conductor wastes no energy heating up the wire.

The $4.4 billion supercollider,

WASHINGTON — The Idaho National Engineering Laboratory in eastern Idaho offers a potential $1-billion saving in the cost of the proposed superconducting supercollider project, says Sen. Steve Symms.

The Idaho Republican said the 900-square-mile INEL provides an ideal existing environment for the SSC project.

"Idaho already has the facilities and support services necessary to meet needs of the SSC and would make it a great success, and for less money," he said.

designed to hurl beams of protons at each other at energies 20 times greater than those cooled to a few degrees above absolute zero by liquid helium in a well-tried technique already in use at other atom smashers.

The magnets and 330,000 miles of superconducting wire would cost more than $1 billion. Orders for the materials to make wire must be entered and the start of the 1989 fiscal year. In October 1988, Trivelpiece said, if the machine is to operate in 1996 as scheduled.

"I think it's a silly position" to suggest waiting for the new high-temperature superconductivity to be developed, said Trivelpiece, appearing in his last day on the job.

The head of the design team for the supercollider, Maury Tigner of the Universities Research Association, was asked by Rep. Don Ritter, R-Pa., a critic of the project.

"Wouldn't it be irresponsible to lock ourselves into a technology ... fast on its way to obsolescence?" Tigner replied. "If your statement in divorce is the conclusion would be correct."

Inmates ask for ban on prisoner transfers

The Associated Press

BOISE — Inmates who require little supervision in Idaho's prison system have asked a federal judge to ban the state from housing them with prisoners who require closer monitoring, court records show.

The transfer of inmates to the minimum-custody facility, located next to the main prison south of Boise, was one alternative suggested by state officials for dealing with a federal court order to curb overcrowding at the main prison.

Richard Wright and Timothy Gawron, inmates at the South Idaho Correctional Institute, are asking U.S. District Judge Marion Callister to place a cap of 130 on the minimum-custody facility, commonly known as the farm. Dean Schwarzmiller, law clerk at the main prison, assisted the minimum-security inmates in preparing the legal documents.

"The conditions of confinement at SIC1 are continuing to deteriorate at a steady pace. The inmates said in a motion filed Monday: 'Prisoners are now faced with the promise of even more offenders being transferred to this already crowded prison facility.'

"SIC1 houses only minimum-custody inmates and the transferring of medium-custody prisoners ... would beyond all doubt further compromise the safety of the plaintiffs," the motion said.

Nation's divorce rate may be steady

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States has passed a time of rising divorce and now may be in a period of stabilizing marriages, according to a new study by Census Bureau statisticians.

Divorce seems to have peaked in the late 1970s and now has stopped its nearly two-decade-long increase, says the report by Arthur J. Norton and Jeanne E. Moorman of the Bureau's Population Division.

The leveling divorce rate likely stems from a combination of the rising age at first marriage and a change in social attitudes toward maintaining marriages, Moorman said in a telephone interview.

"There seems to have been a period when divorce was the easiest answer. Now, there is more of a feeling that people should try harder, should work more at it. Marriage is important ... and we should not be giving up so easily," she said.

In addition, she said, "Marriages that occur later seem to be more stable marriages ... and the consequence is the stabilizing of divorce rates."

But that new stability doesn't mean a return to the family arrangements of the past; the report indicates.

The rate of divorce remains high, first marriages are taking place later than ever before, more young women will never wed and remarriage after divorce is becoming less frequent, concluded the study published in the February edition of the Journal of Marriage and the Family.

For women in their 20s, the divorced proportion increased from 1975 to 1980, but did not change significantly from 1980 to 1985, the study found.

"Instability as divorce is and will continue to be disproportionately an activity of young adults; these figures may suggest the beginning of an overall stabilization, if not a diminution of the rate of divorce after first marriage for women currently in their 20s," concluded Norton and Moorman.

This notwithstanding, though, "women currently in their 30s will probably establish record high proportions ever divorced ..."

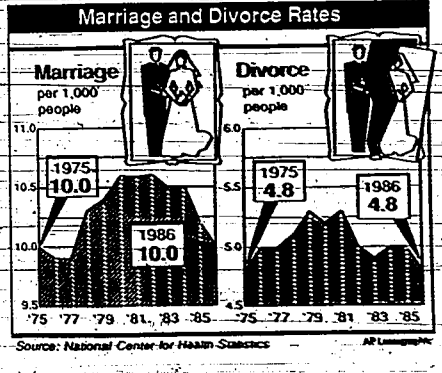

A 1985 survey found that nearly one-third of women aged 35 to 39 had a first marriage in divorce and they projected that as many as 56 percent of this group would eventually divorce.

That is more divorces than is expected for women either older or younger than that group, the authors said, since those in the late 1960s and early 1970s were the vanguard of the post-World War II baby boom.

Factors increasing this rate — more than double the 24 percent rate expected for women aged 35 to 39 — include economic cycles; political events; technical advances in fertility control; the rising employment of women and other social, cultural and psychological changes.

Norton and Moorman found that divorce was most likely for women who first marry while still

Most rivers receding in flood-ravaged Northeastern states

By The Associated Press

Most rivers receded Tuesday in the flood-ravaged Northeast, where 3,000 people had been forced from their homes at one time or another by rising water elsewhere.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis said damage estimates were still being prepared but would eventually total "tens of millions" of dollars.

New Hampshire officials said they couldn't make estimates until the water subsided, and Massachusetts officials said they were too busy to be able to assess the damage.

David Dilley, meteorologist with the National Weather Service at Boston's Logan International Airport, said some sections along the border between Massachusetts and New Hampshire and Vermont had received up to 13 inches of rain in the past week. Average rainfall for the region for all of April is 3.8 inches.

New York Gov. Mario Cuomo on Tuesday declared disaster emergencies because of the flooding in Schoharie, Montgomery and Ulster counties in the eastern part of the state.

In addition to the bridge collapse victims in New York, at least nine deaths have been blamed on the flooding. Two men were killed in Kentucky, two in Ohio and one each in West Virginia and Alabama, and one man drowned in Vermont and two men were missing in Massachusetts, he said.

In Massachusetts, the Merrimack River apparently crested Tuesday, but was expected to stay well above flood-stage at least until Wednesday morning, the New England River Forecast Center said. About 1,750 were evacuated from their homes along the river's banks in the state.

Eight Massachusetts towns declared states of emergency on Tuesday, bringing the total for the state to 54.

New Hampshire Civil Defense officials said 1,000 to 1,200 people had been flooded out since Saturday, and about 200 remained in public shelters.

Tuesday. An additional 30 people were evacuated Tuesday near the rising Merrimack River in Nashua, N.H., where some fled the rising water.

An emergency release of water from a dam at Keene, N.H., forced the evacuations of communities along the Assabetz River, and Civil Defense spokesman John Gifford estimated that more than 100 people spent the night in shelters.

Washington captures 2nd term

By The Associated Press

Chicago voters gave Mayor Harold Washington a second term Tuesday, while in Kansas City, Kan., they turned the mayor-out-of-office two months after he received a "heart transplant" and in Wisconsin they approved a lottery and were favoring part-mutual betting.

In San Francisco, Democratic fund-raiser Nancy Pelosi led city Supervisor Harry Britt, a gay rights activist, in an estimated damage estimate during a congressional election to fill the seat of the late Rep. Sala Burton.

Mrs. Burton died in February after endorsing Mrs. Pelosi, the financial chair of the 1988 national Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee. Gay activists hoped an upset victory by Britt would boost prospects for more AIDS research funding and send a message about gay power across the country.

If neither won more than 50 percent of the vote, the two top vote-getters from other parties—in the heavily Democratic 5th district—on June 2.

Washington, Chicago's first black mayor, defeated his arch-rival, former Alderman Edward Vrdolyak to become the city's first mayor re-elected since the late Richard J. Daley.

In Kansas City, school-board president Joe Stelzner spotted Mayor Jack Reardon's hopes of winning a fourth-year term, receiving 18,122 votes to 15,374 for Reardon.

Reardon, 43, required the transplant because he suffered from cardiomyopathy, which results in inadequate pumping ability.

In Wisconsin, with 1,258 of 3,406 wards reporting, a constitutional amendment clearing the way for a state lottery was being approved by a vote of 235,223 to 167,999, or 56 percent to 36 percent. The referendum was winning approval by a margin of 235,905 to 215,409, or 52 percent to 48 percent.

In other voting Tuesday:

- Chicago voters were asked to endorse a bi-lateral nuclear test ban, calling on the United States and Soviet Union to enter into agreement "for an immediate and verifiable end to nuclear warhead testing."
- Madison, Wis., Mayor F. Joseph Sensenbrenner, seeking his third two-year term, held a lead over Mary Kay Baum, court administrator of Wisconsin's 5th Judicial District.

DALLAS (AP) — The Postal Service Board of Governors on Tuesday declined to request higher rates for first-class mail, but members said a price increase is inevitable.

We will need new rates sometime in 1988 in order to protect our fiscal integrity," Postmaster General Preston R. Tisch said during the second day of a board meeting.

A formal request for higher rates would begin a long and lengthy approval process, beginning with hearings by the Independent Postal Rate Commission. The new rates likely would not take effect until a year or more after the request is made.

The board adopted a change in c.o.d. rules to take effect June 7. Buyers of merchandise sent to collect on delivery in order to protect their checks in the post office. Instead, checks would be made payable directly to the seller.

Postal board says no rate hike now

The service was stuck with about $200 million in uncollectible checks in 1985, largely as the result of disappointed customers stopping payment for merchandise, officials said.

Consideration of a postage rate boost was prompted by an expected $2 billion increase in costs over the next two years. Spokesman Jim Van Loosen attributed the cost increase to a new employee retirement system, higher outlays for labor and other benefits.

Deputy Postmaster General Michael S. Coughlin said each penny of a first-class rate hike and construction increases in other rates, would generate about an additional $1 billion each year. But he cautioned against inferring that the proposed rate hike would be 2 cents.

Coughlin last month said it was unlikely the cost of a first-class stamp would exceed 25 cents.

The rate was last increased on its role replaced the 20-cent rate that had been in effect more than three years.

Tisch told a meeting of postal customers on Monday that he also had asked for a 1 percent across-the-board spending cut.

"I think it's important that our customers be reassured that we are firmly in control of our present budget," Tisch told the governors.

Postal officials expect much of their increased costs will come from employees shifting from the old Civil Service Retirement System to the Federal Employee Retirement System instituted last year by Congress.

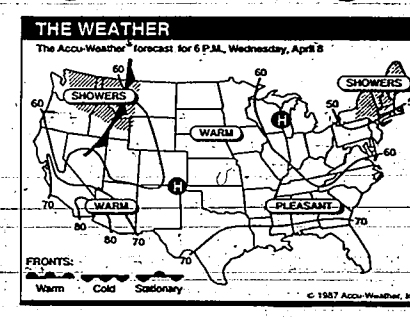

The new system requires larger matching payments from the Postal Service. Coughlin has estimated about 40 percent of the system's employees will make the switch between July 1 and Dec. 31.

Andrus OKs spending, tax increases

BOISE (AP) — Approving hefty increases in both spending and taxes, Gov. Cecil Andrus completed action Tuesday on nearly all the work of the 1987 Legislature.

Andrus signed into law big spending increases for the state's public schools, colleges and universities. He also approved nearly $7 million worth of new construction projects.

To fund the bills, the Legislature approved a 1.5 percent increase in the state's sales tax, and Andrus approved all of the measures as he worked late Monday night on the remaining bills.

Andrus left the state Tuesday for Washington, D.C., where he is scheduled today at hearings on the superconducting supercollider project.

The governor's office said Tuesday that Andrus signed more than 40 measures that only one did not add upon. It tightens procedures for enforcing the state's mandatory motor vehicle liability insurance law.

Earlier, the governor signed bills permanently boosting the state's 1.5 percent and doubling the state cigarette tax.

His latest action approves the $16.4-million tax-increase package put together in the waning hours of the legislative session, which adjourned last Wednesday.

Included in the signed bills were an appropriation of $343 million for public schools, an increase of more than 9 percent, and a higher education appropriation of $101.6 million, higher than the governor recommended.

The colleges and universities also were major beneficiaries of a $6.9 million construction bill, dubbed the "pork barrel" measure by some lawmakers, spending money generated by the increased cigarette tax.

To pay for it, Idahoans face higher personal state income tax rates, although most of the impact falls on high-income families and individuals. Those with taxable income over $20,000 and joint returns with taxable income over $40,000 will bear most of the brunt.

It's about $70 per $10,000 of taxable income in the highest brackets.

Corporate taxes also are increased slightly, but corporations now will have to make quarterly tax payments. That provides an extra $6.5 million for each of the next two state budgets, but little after that.

Farmers and businessmen get one tax break. Andrus Monday night signed a bill granting limited capital gains treatment for certain profits.

The measure was aimed at helping farmers and ranchers cope with taxes on the appreciated value of farm property forced onto the market.

Senior citizens get another break under a bill signed by Andrus. The "lifeline" legislation grants $4 per month off the basic telephone charges of people over age 60 also qualifying for a federal energy assistance grant.

Sponsors estimated 11,000 households would qualify for the grant, to be financed by a small surcharge on all telephone users.

The governor's office also announced that on Saturday Andrus signed compromise legislation freezing the tax on employers for unemployment compensation benefits for the next two years. It also restores a potential two weeks of jobless benefits, and eases slightly the requirement for requalification for benefits.

The House sponsor, Rep. Boyd Hill, R-Meridian, said that without the bill unemployment taxes on Idaho companies would have gone up $20 million per year.

Also approved by Andrus:

- A bill allowing the Fish and Game Department to allow one special big-horn sheep permit to be sold in the highest out-of-state bidder. It must go for at least $30,000. The money will be used to enhance the species and improve habitat.
- Legislation boosting the state insurance premium tax and imposing a surcharge, to pay for a tax break granted insurance companies by the 1985 Legislature.
- An amendment to the Sunshine Law on political campaign contributions, requiring information on the source of funding for out-of-state contributions of more than $200 to Idaho campaigns.
- Legislation repealing the sales tax on food stamps, and also on Women, Infants and Children benefits. The bill stipulates that if federal officials approve, the state will pay up to $2 million extra to food stamp recipients to offset sales tax. If the federal government does not approve that arrangement, the sales tax is simply repealed as of Oct. 1.

Juvenile jail plan gains nod

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The interim plan of nine eastern Idaho counties to resolve a legal challenge to the way they have been jailing juvenile offenders has won approval from a San Francisco-based legal center.

The Upper Snake River Valley counties have agreed to convert the Fremont County Jail into a regional facility for juvenile offenders, with that county's inmates being disbursed to jails in Bonneville, Madison and Jefferson counties.

"Generally, our reaction was favorable as an interim measure until something more permanent can be developed," said Teresa Demchak, an attorney with the Youth Law Center and National Center for Youth Law in California. "The attitudes, the facility and the programming generally met the concerns we raised."

The jail agreement among the counties, prompted by a lawsuit the center filed last year against Bonneville County, gave some breathing room to local officials, who have been searching for a permanent solution for housing juvenile offenders.

Those officials plan to meet next month to discuss obtaining the abandoned Idaho Department of Employment and Training building for renovation into a regional juvenile detention center.

The Youth Law Center sued Bonneville County to halt the housing of juveniles in that building in the county jail and won a court settlement that the practice would be halted. The interim plan will now be incorporated into that settlement, officials said.

Bonneville County had hoped to begin housing juveniles in Fremont County two months ago, but the Youth Law Center raised concerns about solitary confinement, exercise, programming, staff training and contracts for emergency medical and mental health care at the jail.

Those problems were finally resolved by Fremont County officials, clearing the way for the cooperative agreement.

Decision reversed

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Supreme Court has reversed a district judge's decision that Shoshone County was immune from a wrongful death suit filed by the parents of a teen who hanged himself in the county jail.

Justices on Tuesday remanded the case to 1st District Judge Richard Magnuson, who ruled that the county was immune from a wrongful death suit filed by Norman and Sonja Walker.

The Walkers claimed that county jail personnel in Wallace were negligent in caring for their son, Michael, 17, who was placed in protective custody in January 1983 because of mental illness.

A flame of hope continues to burn

An anniversary slipped by on Monday, virtually unnoticed by many Americans. It was the 70th anniversary of the United States' entry into World War I — called at the time "the war to end wars."

For a number of years, the date was observed as Army Day, but that passed into history with the designation of another date in May when all of the nation's armed forces were reorganized.

Now, seven decades after the United States entered the war in Europe — the United States the tide in that conflict — not many of the veterans of that war remain. The men of the American Expeditionary Forces, of St. Mihiel and the Marne, of the Meuse-Argonne and of the Mexican border guard who survive are now in their 80s and 90s. They have seen this nation engage in three subsequent wars and the advance of technology from the horse and buggy to nuclear energy and the exploration of space.

Unfortunately for the idealistic approach that the United States took in 1917, the hope that war could be ended (for all time was never achieved. Another world war and a stream of smaller, localized conflicts have darkened the pages of history over the ensuing years — and there seems little likelihood that violence, terrorism and warfare in some form will end.

Still, the hope that at some time peace will prevail remains strong among Americans, although there seems to be a division of opinion concerning the way to attain that objective.

The important point, though, seven decades after thousands of Americans shipped out for "Over There" — intending and hoping that neither they nor their descendants would have to fight a future war — is that while their deeds in the service of their country must not be forgotten, that flame of hope for a peaceful world is still burning.

Not as brightly as some might prefer, but it is still burning.

Questions lottery turndown

The news and TV coverage is great. I would like to add my voice also. Now we have a turndown on a lottery for Idaho — but we have pari-mutuel betting in North Idaho on dog races — pari-mutuel betting in Jerome, Burley, Boise and elsewhere? A lottery that passed by vote last election now is against state Constitution. How come? Gambling is gambling, no matter what. Maybe certain communities, etc., can gain access when common taxpayers cannot. Maybe owners of Jackpot from Boise, Twin Falls, have money enough to stop us. We all like to have fun, even senior citizens when we can't drive the death road 93 to Jackpot. And yes, I know Ken Jones Sr. retired from Western Auto and police work. He is a good man. We should put him in state government. VELMA BENCKEN Buhl

People join, avert disaster

On Thursday, April 2, we had an example of people working together to avert a disaster for a local family. We had a potentially expensive and a very dangerous fire near Hagerman. The response of the local people was, in a word, fantastic. When Rollie Zollinger and I arrived with a tanker, two neighbors were fighting the fire with a garden hose. They had kept the flames from the back of the garage, but the house and garage roofs were covered with burning pieces of a poplar tree that was close to both buildings. We were able to extinguish the fires on the roofs with our larger line, then called for more help. Bliss Fire Department arrived within minutes after we called and kept the fire out of more trees near the house. Idaho Power arrived as I was calling the Gooding Sheriff to ask for assistance to disconnect a power line to the house. They were working in the area and responded to see if they could help. After they disconnected the line, a boom truck arrived and two Idaho Power men donned protective clothing and went up in the basket with a water line to put the tree out. They then cut the tree down in sections from the top without damaging either building. Had they not been there, I have no doubt the tree would have fallen on one of the buildings, causing great damage. These Idaho Power people were a credit to their company and their community. Hagerman Fire Department greatly appreciated their efforts.

Wendell Ambulance also stood by voluntarily in case he was needed. We wish to thank him, as the potential was there for need of his services. Another neighbor brought his tractor and was of great help pushing burning trees over. His help was also appreciated.

To the neighbors, Bliss Fire Department, Wendell Ambulance, Idaho Power Company, Dennis Coyle of Idaho State Parks and all who helped, a heartfelt thank you from the Hagerman Fire Department. MICHAEL E. MCINTOSH Hagerman

Doing homework first step

I have sold advertising in Magic Valley for close to 5 years. In my travels, while selling both radio and television advertising, I have encountered retail businesses that fit into one of two categories. Retailers who aggressively pursue business, who market their stores, who advertise and who promote. You can recognize them. They are the ones who are listed in the "thank you" editorials in The Times-News. They donate store merchandise as prizes for the youth and other organizations. They support town-wide events. They are the business owners whose managers and employees are a part of the community and belong to civic organizations. They belong to and support our local chamber of commerce. They attend and voice opinions and ideas at merchants' meetings. They may not have a huge advertising budget, but they have a budget and spend every dime of it. They have sales. They move merchandise. They decorate their store windows. They give as much as they take from their community, if not more.

Retailers who open their doors and wait. You can recognize them. They're the stores who have a big "going out of business" sale and the general response is, "Oh, I'd forgotten all about them." They put the big advertising push out to go out of business.

As I see businesses closing around the area, I see that most of them just didn't want to be in business anymore. Why blame it on other outside sources? Frankly, we're better off without them. These businesses taking their places (and they will) might give back to the community. If they're smart, they'll invest 3-7 percent of their gross sales in advertising. The College of Southern Idaho has had actual continuing education courses in advertising, if they feel adequate in placing it.

Competition doesn't need to intimidate anyone, if they have done their homework. KRIS HARVEY Twin Falls

Religion vs. government merry-go-round continues to spin

Government supports of worship in public places and using the power of the state to promote a particular religious viewpoint is a widespread exercise of political power.

True religious liberty has always been a rarity on this planet precisely because of this custom. Where it is practiced, some individuals and certain groups lose their spiritual freedom. And segments of society become second-class citizens.

From Babylonian bondage to the Inquisition to today's established churches, the same tragic story has been repeated. Current examples abound that reflect the wondrous results of government intrusion into matters of the spirit.

The greatest measure of religious liberty is found in government's neutrality on the subject — neither for nor against. That has been the simple secret of the spiritual freedom enjoyed by our citizens for almost 200 years. However, around and around we go on the historical merry-go-round, never ceasing to learn the most obvious lessons of the past. Here comes that same grotesque old horse again.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, is calling for a constitutional amendment allowing organized silent prayer in the public schools. "All religions united with government are more or less inclined to liberty. All separated from government, are compatible with liberty." — Henry Clay, House of Representatives, 1818.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., would strip the federal courts of jurisdiction in specified matters, particularly involving prayer in public schools and other church-state conflicts. Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., intends to reintroduce the Ronald Reagan constitutional amendment authorizing vocal prayer in the public schools. Congressman Thomas N. Kindness, R-Ohio, will carry a similar amendment to the House of Representatives. Secretary of Education William J. Bennett maintains his support for federal aid to parochial schools. Attorney General Edmund Meese III states that it is a "bizarre" interpretation of the First Amendment to believe that the Founding Fathers believed in freedom from religion, as well as freedom of religion. George Washington, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, George Mason and Benjamin Franklin all endorsed government neutrality regarding religion, for the purpose of protecting government, ensuring liberty, and preserving the value of personal religious commitment.

"...nor shall any person be compelled to frequent or maintain any religious service or institution." — Thomas Jefferson, Virginia House of Burgesses, 1776.

Roy Jones, legislative director for the Liberty Foundation, is determined to bring organized prayer into our public schools. School prayer is becoming the civil rights issue of the next generation," says Jones. Presumably civil rights for the Christian majority, and to the back-of-the-bus for those children unfortunate enough to belong in a minority religious group.

"In this country, it is no part of the business of government to compose official prayers for any group of the American people to recite as part of a religious program carried on by government." — Hugo L. Black, Engel v. Vitale, 1962.

Separation of church and state guarantees each child's legal equality regarding religion. Government and school administration support for a particular prayer or a specific spiritual perspective ensures second-class status for all children not belonging to the predominant group.

"When the power, prestige, and financial support of government is placed behind a particular religious belief, the indirect coercive pressure upon religious minorities to conform to the prevailing officially approved religion is plain." — Hugo L. Black, Engel v. Vitale, 1962.

Where official prayers are written or approved by government bureaucrats with the intent of not antagonizing members of religious minorities or a political constituency, they become a compelled official act of government devoid of intellectual merit or spiritual content. A number of Christian Right spokesmen and organizations back prayer in school and in government. Naturally, it is their prayer and their God. Tim LaHaye, head of the American Coalition for Traditional Values (ACTV), ad-

SEN. ORRIN G. HATCH

Wants silent school prayer vacates a quota system whereby 25 percent of all federal jobs go to Christian conservatives. Says LaHaye: "No humanist is qualified to hold any government office." Pat Robertson, the bellwether of the religious evangelists and potential candidate for U.S. president, says that his decision will be based on what God tells him to do. When asked whether he would uphold our Constitution if elected president, he replied: "The Constitution of the United States is a marvelous document for self-government by Christian people. But the minute you turn the document into the hands of non-Christian people and atheist people, they can use it to destroy the very foundations of our society. And that's what's been happening."

In a letter to Norman Lear, television producer and founder of People for the American Way, Robertson assumed the prophetic mantle: "You are trying to silence a prophet of God... I want to warn you in the words of the Negro spiritual, 'Your arms are too short to box with God. The suppression of the volucous Gove servant is a terrible thing. God Himself will fight for me against you — and He will win.'"

"Democracies are most commonly corrupted by the insolence of demagogues." — Aristotle, Politics, Book V.

The prophetic mind-set is not new in American political history. It is an old horse. Thomas Jefferson, the philosophical architect of American freedom and religious liberty — and the mentor of James Madison, who wrote the First Amendment — was vilified by the religious absolutists and conservatives of his time. In the presidential election of 1800 the good Reverend William Linn said Jefferson's election would "destroy religion, introduce immorality, and loosen all the bonds of society," as well as be a "rebellion against God." A Federalist editorial outlined the individual choice of the voter: "Shall I continue in allegiance to God and a religious president, or impudently declare for Jefferson and God?" The incumbent president, John Adams — who was lauded by the conservatives — was a Unitarian. His words: "The government of the United States is not, in any sense, founded on the Christian religion. All possess alike liberty of conscience and immunity of citizenship." Adams lost the election to Jefferson.

The goals and thought processes of the religious bigots of 1800 differ little from those of today. Today, however, we are in greater danger because potential totalitarianism has the advantage of modern communications and technology. Every day, throughout the world, men risk their lives scratching for the economic, political, and religious liberties we have granted in the United States. Tragically, men place little value on what they are accustomed to and expect as their due. That facet of human nature could be fatal for our republic if we fail to discern the Religious Right's clear intent to impose a rigid ideology on all Americans regardless of the Constitution and individual convictions.

"Persecution is not an original feature in any religion; but is always the strongly

SEN. JESSE HELMS

Wants federal courts reexamined marked feature of all law religions, or religions established by the law. Take away the law establishment, and every religion resumes its original depravity." — Thomas Paine, The Rights of Man, 1791.

The Old Testament book of Daniel speaks prophetically of great "beasts," representing political or religious powers.

Throughout history, malevolent creatures appear in different guises. Whether in form today, religious and political fanaticism is the same old horse that has been around many times before.

Be warned. Given the chance, he will ride off with the most valuable treasures we share as Americans: free expression, religious liberty, economic opportunity, and political choice.

J. R. Joelson, a resident of Monterey, Calif., is a writer with an interest in religion, politics, and First Amendment issues.

Emissary hopes for support of Sandinistas

BOISE (AP) — A top Sandinista government emissary hopes Reagan administration support for Nicaragua's Contra rebels eventually will give way to unified American backing of his government.

"All we would like to have is a respectful, friendly relationship with the United States," Marcos Regan's pro-Sandinista policy.

He said the Sandinista government continues to promote an internal policy of political pluralism, mixed economy and nonalignment.

But Wheelock declined to say whether he expected that change in U.S. administration policy to come as a result of the 1988 presidential election, or which candidates to succeed Regan could be expected to affect that policy change.

"As soon as the United States ends its support of the Contras, the movement will die out," he said.

MATE'S TAILS
Most affectionate, Brazil's male marmoset monkeys. They have long, strong tails. And spend most of their time hanging upside down by their tails. With their arms around each other. The females just sit around and watch, I guess, wondering about heredity and environment.

$100,000 in donations 'astounds' stricken teen

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A college cheerleader stricken with cancer said she was astounded that strangers across America had donated more than $100,000 to help her through a bone marrow transplant that could save her life.

William Bennett, chairman of the Circus Circus Hotel and Casino here, presented a $25,000 check to Valerie's parents while she was in New Orleans cheering for her No. 1-ranked team, which lost 97-83.

Cassia votes down bond for jail expansion

Light voter turnout may have been factor

By RONDA TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — Cassia County voters Tuesday overwhelmingly turned down a $2.85 million proposal to expand the county jail from a 34-bed to a 70-bed facility.

Sixty-eight percent of the voters opposed the expansion project, with 749 "no" votes and 453 "yes" votes. The bond measure needed a two-thirds majority to pass.

Sheriff Billy Crystal said he didn't know what the county would do since the voters had rejected the measure.

"We'd try to get along the best we can," he said. "I imagine in a couple of years we'll try again."

Crystal said the people are saying "Gamble on what we got," said County Administrator Jim Hurst.

He said he felt that the light voter turnout could have been partly responsible for the measure's defeat.

The proposed expansion would have had a completely separate section for juvenile inmates that would have conformed to a U.S. District Court ruling against Bonneville County that held it was illegal to hold juveniles without adequate separation from adult inmates.

Crystal said Tuesday night following the election that the county would continue to house juveniles in the present jail for short-term sentences. He said that in the case of long-term sentences, the county may consider sending juveniles to the accredited juvenile facility in Fremont.

Commissioners J. Weldon Beck, Norman Dayley and John R. Adams had approved a design by Twin Falls architect Richard Heindel to remodel and expand the jail at the cost of $2.85 million. They voted during a March meeting to put the issue before Cassia voters Monday.

The Cassia County Commissioners and Crystal have been speaking before community groups since late last January trying to whip up support for the jail expansion. Crystal said that the current jail, built in 1976 as part of the law enforcement building, does not meet state or federal standards.

Under the proposed plan, only 29 beds of the current 34-bed jail would have remained, while 50 new beds would have been built. Other new construction would have included a new saltpile adjacent to new intake and booking areas, a remodeled kitchen, a new detoxification unit and an laundry.

The estimated tax levy on the bond was 73 cents per $1,000 of the taxable market value over the 20-year life of the bond. The range of anticipated rates on the bond was from 5 to 6 percent, but county officials used an estimated rate of 6 percent to establish the 73 cent per $1,000 figure.

For the owner of the average $59,000 house with a homeowner's exemption the estimated cost would have been $26.46 more per year. The owner of a $150,000 business, farm or commercial property would have paid an additional $105.50 if the bond had passed.

Farm lender blames loss on frost, economy

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A killing frost in potato fields and deteriorating conditions in the farm economy battered the finances of the Eastern Idaho Production Credit Association during 1986, pushing it below the profit line for the second time in three years.

The Pocatello-based association, which operates in the Magic Valley and in eastern Idaho, suffered a $140,679 loss last year. Loan volume dropped and 400 borrowers left for other lenders, EIPCA officials said Tuesday at the association's annual meeting in Twin Falls.

But President Arnold Seeley said that the association remains strong because of capital accumulated over many years.

The EIPCA is one of two production credit associations in the 12th Federal Reserve District serving the Pacific Northwest. The other, the Interstate Production Credit Association, operates in the rest of the five-state district.

A sudden freeze that severely damaged the 1986 potato crop in the fields combined with low potato prices to put the association's earnings in the red, he said.

Many farmers couldn't pay back operating loans. The association had to write off more than $1.7 million worth as lost, Seeley said. To absorb interest losses, it provided future protection. The EIPCA moved $800,000 — more than its entire earnings from operations for the year — into loan loss reserves.

"That figure is about twice as high as what we would normally put in," Seeley said.

The loan losses generally came from eastern Idaho, with about $100,000 from the Magic Valley, he said.

At the same time, the association was making fewer loans, which cut into its earnings from interest. Its total lendings during the year came to $151.5 million, a 2.6 percent decrease from the previous year. Numbers of borrowers also fell more than 23 percent to 1,443.

Part of the EIPCA's problems was due to non-competitive interest rates. Near the end of the year, the lender dropped its interest rates for borrowers by one-half percent. However, the cheaper rates had little effect in attracting new borrowers, Seeley said in an interview.

Despite the setbacks, the EIPCA still was holding more than $2.6 million in capital surpluses, the amount of money available before tapping stock contributed by its borrowers.

The cushion, plus a $3 million reserve for loan losses, places the association in solid financial shape, Seeley said.

To bring in new loan business in 1987, the EIPCA now has opened a radio advertising campaign and pumped more personal service into lending operations at its branches, he indicated in prepared remarks.

Figures from the annual report also indicated the EIPCA has been shifting toward lower-cost operations. During the year, it cut costs 21.2 percent.

The Twin Falls session of the annual meeting was the first of several in the 24-county service territory. The association has 457 borrowers in the Magic Valley.

Travel director seeks private sector support

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

LEWISTON (AP) — Idaho's new travel director wants to get state funds out of the state's financial straits.

Carl Wilgus, recently appointed head of the Idaho Department of Commerce's Division of Travel, said he wants to stretch the state's budget.

The division currently is funded by a 3-percent room tax on hotels and a 2 percent tax on rental property. Wilgus would like to cut the 2 percent tax on rental property.

"I sense a lot more enthusiasm and a lot more willingness for people to get something going," he said. "There's a growing interest and concern among people in business in Idaho that tourism is a valuable commodity."

Although he's been on the job only about 4 weeks, Wilgus said he already is working toward several goals. One is to establish tourism information centers on major highways. Another is to work on one center just east of the Oregon border on Interstate 84 and another on Interstate 20, west of Astoria.

Another goal is to strengthen the Idaho Film Bureau. "Before we're taken a restrictive ordinance," he said. "If the information requested, Wilgus said.

He said he plans to hire someone to handle the film bureau's public relations and advertising. Wilgus said he also plans to establish a film bureau in Idaho Falls.

"There's a wealth of these opportunities for public-private cooperation," Wilgus said, adding that he's looking for private firms making businesses willing to join in.

MVRMC 5-month profits show decline

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's healthy 1986 financial management pointed toward $1 million in excess revenues during the first 5 months of this fiscal year, according to accounting and administrative reports.

But that rate of profitability falls far below previous years' earnings during similar lengths of time, said an audit by Salt Lake City-based Deloitte-Haskins and Sells Gave-based.

qualified appraisal Monday of MVRMC's operations and financial records for the fiscal year ending last Sept. 30. And during the 5 months since then Administrator John Bingham reported that excess revenues were nearly double expectations.

Declining admissions were offset by a marginal rise in patients' average length of stay, allowing the total number of patient days to fall — the budgeted 11,500. Despite falling short in patient days, Deloitte-Haskins and Sells Gave-based the figures pointed to $1 million in revenue — $450,000 more than expected — above $6.6 million in operating expenses through February.

But that $1 million falls about $200,000 below a 5-month fraction of the hospital's annual $3.1 million excess operating revenue during 1986.

Illustrating further declines, the 1986 net operating revenue was 7 percent lower than in 1985, according to the audit.

Those "profits" must be recouped, he said, because it is owned by Twin Falls County.

DHS's Val Bitton said the hospital's purchase of a CT-scan brain scanner, unique to Magic Valley, contributed to that profitability. Dropping a capital lease for the scanner by buying one helped save $250,000 in lease payments spent during 1985, Bitton said.

Overall, MVRMC's assets surpassed $42 million during 1986, up $1.4 million from 1985.

Labor negotiations at meat plant stalled

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Labor negotiations remain at a standstill at Independent Meat Co. of Twin Falls, with both management and union officials saying the other side must make the first move.

As production gears up for the biggest sales season of the year, employees of the plant now have reneged on the job at reduced wages and without a pay contract for more than 5 weeks.

On March 1, Independent Meat implemented its "last and final" offer of a 15-percent cut in hourly wages, combined with a future profit sharing plan.

Until that point, the company and Local 368A of the United Food and Commercial Workers Union had been bargaining over new wage scales at the midpoint of a 3-year contract. However, despite federal mediation, no agreement was reached.

Since then, management and labor union executives say they have stayed in contact, but have held no talks.

Independent Meat must modify its last offer to bring the union back to the table, Sam Miller, Local 368A president, repeated this week. "Until there's a substantial move from that, it's really a waste of time to get together," he said.

Although retaining the option, the union is not preparing a strike or other job action. "We are hopeful the thing can be worked out to where it is not required," Miller said.

Before the talks halted, Local 368A had bargained for no less than a wage freeze. The contract dispute is confined to wages. Working conditions were not among items to be reopened this year.

Fal Florence, Independent Meat president and general manager, said Tuesday he does not intend to return to the table until the union bounces. Florence has said that lower wages are necessary to maintain Independent Meat's competitiveness against other low-cost producers.

Burley considers ordinance to halt 'cruising'

By RONDA TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — Burley city councilmen began considering a new ordinance Monday night that could put a halt to the practice of "cruising" — owners or tenants sign a written request to be placed on file with the sheriff's department before tollers can be removed from lots, he said.

Both Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal and Prosecutor Howard Smyser have reviewed the ordinance, he said. At the heart of the law is a requirement that property owners or tenants sign a written request to be placed on file with the sheriff's department before tollers can be removed from lots, he said.

Parsons warned the council that there were not many precedents for regulating conduct on private property.

"Time will tell whether the ordinance will hold up under constitutional evaluation of the state and federal government," he said.

The ordinance defines loitering as "remaining idle in essentially one location and shall include the concepts of spending time idly, loafing, walking around aimlessly, sitting or standing in motor vehicles while spending time idly and shall include the colloquial expression of 'hanging around' or the colloquial expression of 'hang out.'"

It prohibits people from loitering on private property that is customarily used by the public as an integral part of a commercial venture. "Disturbing the peace, obstructing the free passage of vehicles or pedestrians, and making offensive, disgusting or insulting remarks that are calculated to annoy or disturb the person to, or in whose hearing they are made," are expressly prohibited by the ordinance. Possessing an open container of beer or alcohol while loitering is also prohibited.

Court to hear surrogate appeal

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey Supreme Court on Tuesday agreed to hear surrogate mother Mary Beth Whitehead's appeal of the ruling that stripped her of all parental rights to the daughter she bore under a $10,000 contract.

By deciding to directly consider the Baby M case, the state's highest court is allowing Mrs. Whitehead to bypass the Appellate Division of Superior Court.

The Supreme Court scheduled oral arguments for Sept. 14 in Trenton, said court spokeswoman Beatrice Keltum.

Attorneys for both sides said the best interests of the year-old child, now in the custody of biological father William Stern, and the public policy questions involved require a quick resolution.

The Supreme Court also agreed to consider Cassidy's request for a stay of Superior Court Judge Harvey E. Sorkow's decision upholding the surrogate contract, stripping Mrs. Whitehead of her parental rights and awarding custody to Stern.

Hinckley wants life with killer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley says he wants to live with a woman who once killed her sleeping daughter and is now "the biggest influence in my life," according to court papers filed Tuesday.

Hinckley, acquitted by reason of insanity of attempted murder charges stemming from the 1981 shooting of President Reagan, recently filed a psychiatric report in which he hopes to eventually gain release from St. Elizabeths Hospital in Washington to live with Leslie DeVeu.

Ms. DeVeu, a onetime Washington socialite, was found innocent by reason of insanity of charges she murdered her child in 1982.

His next hearing at St. Elizabeths and there were published reports in 1985 that the couple was engaged to be married.

Ms. DeVeu has since been released from the government-run mental hospital where Hinckley was committed after his 1981 acquittal.

Soviet arms attitude praised

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Tuesday he is impressed with the Soviet attitude toward arms control and will not halt arms talks because of the spy scandal enveloping the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

At the conclusion of his appearance in the White House briefing room to announce a series of steps to gauge the severity of espionage at the U.S. Embassy, Reagan was asked about a published report that the Soviet Union had softened its position on the issue of a nuclear test ban treaty.

Without confirming the report, Reagan told reporters: "We think that it's encouraging — their whole attitude — to arms control which has never been true with any of the previous Soviet leaders."

Reagan's indirect praise for Soviet General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev came as the president was announcing a wide-ranging U.S. investigation of a breach of security at the Moscow embassy.

Child not told he has AIDS

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A mother of a 4-year-old boy with AIDS said Tuesday she won't tell her son he has the fatal disease because if he told a schoolmate it "could ruin his life."

"I can't risk having him be a leper," she said.

The woman, who is using a fictitious name, spoke in an interview before participating in a closed workshop on AIDS in children. Her son contracted the disease, she said, through a blood transfusion shortly after birth.

Surgeon General C. Everett Koop invited the woman and the mother of a child who died of AIDS in 1982 to a closed conference of physicians, social scientists and government health care experts.

People don't seem to believe scientists' claims that the disease cannot be transmitted through casual contact, she noted.

Deaver attorneys file motion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorneys for lobbyist Michael K. Deaver have filed a motion to obtain more details about the five-count perjury indictment against the former White House aide.

The defense filed a 14-page "bill of particulars" seeking the names of individuals who allegedly participated in the conversations that Deaver is accused of lying about to a congressional committee and a Federal grand jury.

Deaver is scheduled to go on trial June 8 before U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson.

Divers drag for bridge collapse victims

AMSTERDAM, N.Y. (AP) — Three divers in an almost frigid raging creek Tuesday dragged a wreckage and bodies from the collapse of a heavily traveled bridge before the dangerous current halted the operation, and federal experts started an investigation.

One officer fell from a bridge into turbulent Schoharie Creek and had to be rescued by the divers.

Three bodies have been recovered from two crushed Cadillac in the muddy farrow below the crumpled bridge that carried the New York State Thruway, part of Interstate 88, over the creek. A six-foot section of the bridge plunged to feet into the flooded stream Sunday, carrying with it a tractor-trailer and at least three cars.

Seven people were listed as missing. The cause of the collapse has not been determined. But bridge experts have said the stream, which was at a record-high flow, may have eroded the soil and stone beneath the 10-foot-thick concrete support pillars.

State investigators said Tuesday that a surge of water from a dam 40 miles upstream from the bridge is a new focus of the investigation. The record-high output from the New York State Power Authority's Eleonora-Gibboa hydroelectric dam registered 65,187 cubic feet per second Saturday night. That was the highest in the dam's 15-year history and was likened to flows at Niagara Falls.

The whitewater in an airboat Tuesday, dragging the river with a grappling hook after oil droplets believed to be from a submerged vehicle started rising to the surface. A state trooper fell from a bridge when he tried to retrieve a rope attached to the bridge for the divers. He was rescued by the airboat crew while climbing to a stump of debris.

Recovery work on the water was later abandoned for the day because of the dangerous current, said Lt. Michael Wright.

The creek had receded Monday after nearly 9 inches of rain in 48 hours, allowing searchers to recover the three bodies and the trailer of the truck.

Church leaders mull how to handle Bakker

DUNN, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina leaders of the Assemblies of God met Tuesday to discuss the denomination's handling of what they called the "moral failure" of television evangelist Jim Bakker.

Bakker resigned from PTL and the Assemblies of God last month, saying he had been blackmailed over an extramarital tryst with Jessica Hahn, a former church secretary. He later said the blackmail was part of what he called an attempt by a rival evangelist to take over PTL.

Dr. Charles H. Cookman, head of the North Carolina Assemblies of God, told reporters before the 16-member board went into closed session that the panel would be considering the resignations of Bakker and the Rev. Richard Dortch from the denomination.

Dortch, who replaced Bakker as host of the PTL Club and president of PTL, resigned from the denomination on the same day Bakker resigned. He has not explained his reasons for quitting.

Denominational leaders in Springfield, Mo., said March 25 after reviewing the Bakker case that they had found evidence not of blackmail but of money that had been paid to cover up "moral failure." They referred the case back to North Carolina for further investigation.

Cookman said the board would not announce the results of its decision because it was prohibited by its by-laws from doing so. The board can accept a minister's resignation, revoke his credentials or suspend him for rehabilitation and restoration.

"It's not that we're trying to keep the information from you," he told a throng of journalists gathered outside the church's one-story brick headquarters. "We're under mandate — not to release that information."

Cookman added that the matter was an issue for the denomination, not the public.

Demos clear way for budget in House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leaders cleared the way Tuesday for House approval of their fiscal 1988 budget this week, but passage of a version in the Senate won't be until after Congress' Easter recess.

The House Rules Committee approved a schedule for beginning "debate" today and completing action Thursday on the $1 trillion spending plan for the year beginning Oct. 1. House leaders were confident "it would pass," even though it recommends more than $2 billion in new taxes and fees.

"I think it is a budget that will win approval in the House," said House Majority Leader Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash. House members were willing to support more taxes than President Reagan says he would accept, in order to reduce the deficit, he said.

"The pressure of wringing out reductions in spending is getting tougher and tougher," Foley said. Democrats did not agree with the administration's policy of cutting health, education, housing and other critical needs of the nation in order to support defense, he said.

The budget is an overall fiscal blueprint that does not require Reagan's signature. Actual taxes and spending bills must be passed separately, and Reagan has threatened to veto tax increases.

Foley said the House will pass a tax boost, but he did not speculate on overriding a veto.

"One step at a time," he said. "I'm not giving up hope that the president will see reducing the deficit as a primary goal of his last 22 months in office."

Hart nagged by 1984 campaign debts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gary Hart, the front-runner for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination, is still nagged by more than $1 million in debts from his 1984 campaign for the presidency.

The former Colorado senator has worked the stack of overdue bills from 470 creditors down from $4.7 million.

After two-and-a-half years of work, $1.3 million in 1984 debts to about 60 creditors remained as of April 1, said Hart spokesman Kevin Sweeney.

The 1984 debt has not stopped Hart from raising money for 1988 with receipts estimated at more than $1 million so far from 9,000 contributors. Hart campaign staffers say the 1984 organization is legally independent, so money given for 1988 does not go to pay off old bills.

Slain U.S. adviser buried with honors

PENNSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Green Beret Gregory A. Fronius, the first U.S. military adviser killed in combat in El Salvador, was buried with full military honors Tuesday in the rural southwestern Pennsylvania hills where he grew up.

"He died fighting, fighting for our country, for himself, for the soldiers he was training with, and for El Salvador," said Fronius' friend, Staff Sgt. Michael Yorgensen of the 2nd Special Forces Group in Ft. Bragg, N.C.

Fronius, 27, an intelligence specialist, was killed March 31 in a guerrilla raid on a Salvadoran army garrison in El Paraiso, 78 miles north of the capital of San Salvador.

Exchange of embassy Marines to begin

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Marine Corps is about to begin replacing its guards at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow for questioning in a spy scandal, the Defense Department said late Tuesday, contradicting an earlier announcement by chief Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims that some already had been withdrawn.

In its new statement, the Pentagon said 15 new guards had been moved to Frankfurt, West Germany, in preparation for transfer to Moscow, but that the Marines they are replacing have yet to leave the Soviet capital.

"We made a mistake and Mr. Sims did not have the proper information," said Army Lt. Col. Arnold Williams, a Pentagon spokesman.

"We thought half of the current guard force had been moved from Moscow to West Germany, but it turned out that it was the replacements who were moved to Germany," Williams said.

"There are 15 Marines in Frankfurt and they are the replacements," Williams said. "They are processing now in preparation for movement to Moscow. We made a mistake in saying the men they are replacing had already left the Soviet Union and in moving them to Frankfurt."

Williams declined comment on when the first transfer would actually occur, beyond saying it would be soon.

Two former Marine guards are being held on espionage charges at the Quantico base, accused of allowing Soviet agents inside the embassy on numerous occasions last year.

According to Pentagon sources, Sgt. Clayton A. Lomax and Capt. Arnold Bracy became involved romantically with Soviet women in 1985 and 1986 while posted to the embassy and their alleged spying began assisting Soviet agents.

Divers hunt for bodies in capsized ferry

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Surgeon General C. Everett Koop urged that AIDS be taught Saturday to combat AIDS by teaching students of their own worth and by suggesting to them that sexual abstinence is their best defense.

"In a blunt address" before the Education Writers Association annual convention, Koop reiterated the advice that, "conservatives last fall." If children do not abstain from sex, they must be informed about how to cut down on their risk of getting acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

At one point, he quipped, "If I can paraphrase (Chrysler Motors Corp. Chairman) Lee Iacocca, I would say it this way: If you have a monogamous relationship, keep it. If you don't have one, get it."

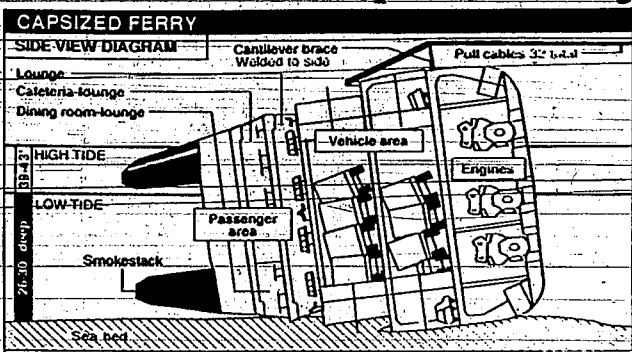

Koop suggested that schools teach about the hazards of AIDS within the context of what he called "studies in human development."

Such studies would stress loving relationships in which sex is no longer seen just as a "casual or gratuitous act" without consequences.

"We are fighting a disease, not war," Koop said. "We are not at war with a disease."

"Neither homosexuality or heterosexuality per se is the issue."

In Philadelphia last week, President Reagan gave his first definitive speech on AIDS. Like Education Secretary William J. Bennett, he stressed that education should aim at encouraging sexual abstinence among youngsters as the best line of defense against the disease.

Koop, a born-again Christian, angered conservatives and touched off a debate within the Reagan administration when he issued a report in October bluntly recommending that AIDS education "must start at the lowest grade possible as part of any health and hygiene program."

Such education, for pupils as young as elementary school age, would teach about AIDS, and he took exception to Koop's suggestion that other biologically detailed descriptions of how AIDS is spread and can be prevented, Koop suggested at the time.

Within a week of Koop's remarks, Bennett said it was up to parents and local school authorities to teach about AIDS, and he took exception to Koop's suggestion that such lessons should start in elementary school.

Ill Gorbachev set for trip

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev still has a touch of influenza but will pay a delayed visit to Washington this week despite ill health, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Tuesday.

Gorbachev's scheduled to begin Monday, was postponed "for a humanly understandable reason: a slight illness; a slight flu."

He said Gorbachev would make the trip "in the second half of this week."

Asked for a specific day, he said: "Take the week and divide by two, and you know when the second half of the week is."

Gorbachev's comments at a news briefing were the first by a Soviet official on the leader's reported illness.

It was the first report of a Gorbachev illness since he gained power in March 1985.

Develop Argentina, Pope urges

VIEDMA, Argentina (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Tuesday called for fair distribution of Argentina's natural bounty, advised gauchos and farmworkers not to migrate to the cities and told Indians to defend their heritage.

He also heard an outspoken local bishop imply this country's Roman Catholic establishment did not do enough to defend human rights during a 1976-1983 military regime that tortured and killed thousands of suspected opponents.

In Viedma, on the northern edge of the vast Patagonian scrubland, the pope encouraged development of the nearly empty region.

"Take advantage of the natural resources of this region... so as to achieve ever more human-living conditions and populate more and more this extensive area," he said from an outdoor platform surrounded by sagebrush near the airport.

The democratically elected government of President Raul Alfonsin, whose December 1983 inauguration ended military rule, plans to transfer the national capital from Buenos Aires, with 10 million people, to Viedma, population 30,000. The transfer is intended to spur provincial development.

Local residents, their faces lined by the Patagonian sun and wind, reached out to touch the pope. John Paul passed to kiss babies, caress the heads of young people and extended his hand to wellwishers. One couple offered him a gourd of an Argentine herbal tea called "mate," which he sipped.

Earlier Tuesday in Bahia Blanca, at the edge of the fertile pampas breadbasket and pastureland, the pope tried to encourage farmworkers and ranch hands to hit by falling world prices for Argentina's beef and grain.

Officiating at an outdoor Mass, he told them to actively seek better wages and working conditions.

Mom to give birth to own grandchildren

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Some surgeons and doctors are planning to give a 43-year-old grandmother giving birth to her daughter's triplets, but Pat Anthony is a heroine to many in her farming town.

Eggs from the daughter, Karen Ferreira-Jorge, were fertilized with her husband's sperm through the "in vitro" process and placed in Anthony's womb. It is the first known case of surrogate motherhood in South Africa.

The 25-year-old daughter has a son, but her uterus was removed after the birth because of a congenital ailment and the couple wanted more children.

According to a report Tuesday in the Afrikaans-language newspaper Beeld, excitement has gripped the agricultural town of 7,700, 280 miles northeast of Johannesburg.

Townfolk interviewed for the paper expressed admiration for Mrs. Anthony, and some women said they would do the same thing if necessary. The mayor was considering a town celebration, Beeld said.

Residents described the grandmother as a petite, young-looking woman with great energy. She is three months pregnant with the triplets.

The family has sold its story to the local newspaper. It is the first time a woman's comment to other media — except to confirm that the article carried in last Sunday's edition was correct. Pat Anthony's husband, Raymond, said the contract expires in two months.

One legal expert said Mrs. Anthony's daughter might have to adopt the children.

Union work force planned if Montanan purchases rail line

BUTTE, Mont. (AP) — Missoula businessman Dennis Washington says if he completes the purchase of the Burlington Northern's southern route through Montana, he plans to man it with a union work force.

That intention and other details of the potential purchase were part of a letter from Washington to Sen. Fred Van Valkenburg, D-Missoula, that was obtained by The Montana Standard on Monday.

The letter followed a request by Van Valkenburg for information about the purchase because of pending legislation that might affect it.

Both Washington and Washington Corp. president Dorn Parkinson were out of the state on Monday and unavailable for comment.

But Washington confirmed in the letter that his company is negotiating the purchase of the 450-mile line from Laurel to Sandpoint, Idaho.

Valkenburg said that a union work force would be taken primarily from the existing Burlington Northern employee ranks, and the average pay scale would probably be 80 to 90 percent of current wages.

"For this proposed railroad to have economic viability there would have to be significant alterations of the current work rules," Washington wrote.

Washington said if the sale is approved by New York investors, the Burlington firm Wertheim Schroder & Co. will have a substantial ownership interest.

Wertheim Schroder & Co. is also contributing its expertise to the project, he said.

The operating and business plans would be similar to the approach taken by the MidSouth Rail Corp., which Wertheim Schroder & Co. helped in restructuring and in which the firm has part ownership.

Washington wrote in the letter that the price would be funded through a combination of equity and debt, Washington said, and the money would be borrowed by major money centers.

Washington wrote in the letter that his company does not anticipate purchasing the line through a newly organized company controlled by one with the intention of having a long-term Montana controlled and operated business.

Butcher says he will enter guilty pleas

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Bankrupt financier C.H. Butcher Jr. agreed Tuesday, part way through his trial, to enter guilty pleas to one count of conspiracy and five of bankruptcy fraud.

The pleas stem from bankruptcy fraud and money laundering indictments for which Butcher, members of his family and associates were on trial.

Also included in the agreement with federal prosecutors was an indictment on bank fraud for which Butcher was to stand trial later.

Details of the plea agreement were not available immediately.

There was no indication how this would affect the other defendants. All those charged, except Butcher's father, were in court as U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Higgins went over the agreement with Butcher.

C.H. Butcher Sr. had been excused from the courtroom, but was believed to be in the building.

C.H. Butcher Jr., who ran the $1.5 billion City & County Bank chain in Tennessee and Kentucky before it crumbled in 1983; his father, C.H. Butcher Sr.; his son, C.H. Butcher III; his wife, Shirley R. Butcher; and three associates faced a 69-count fraud indictment.

Others charged in the case are Emma Bailey, a family friend and former bank employee; Teryl Alchley, girlfriend of the youngest Butcher; and Gary F. Long, a business associate and friend.

The separate money laundering indictment named C.H. Butcher Jr., his father and Ms. Bailey.

C.H. Butcher Jr. was acquitted last year on fraud charges in the demise of his Southern Industrial Banking Corp., a loan and thrift company.

The conspiracy count carries a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine, while the remaining five counts carry a maximum term of five years and a $5,000 fine each.

Planning ahead to stay ahead

By JOAN BEAN
Times News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Through careful planning and cooperation from her family, Cindy Ball is meeting the challenge of balancing a career with homemaking.

In her position as marketing director at the Canyon Springs Inn, she sometimes puts in a 12-hour day. In addition, she works at a clothing store in the Magic Valley Mall, on a part-time basis.

She is left with little time for cooking and household chores. This is where advance preparation, and her two sons, fit in.

On the weekend, she often sets aside a meal planning hour. "I'll just really, in detail, figure out what I need to have, so that nobody has to go to the store, which is a pain," she says.

"I try to get in to the grocery store real early on a Saturday, or maybe late on Saturday, so that I avoid a lot of the traffic, and just really try to pick up about everything I need for the week. And that keeps me out of the grocery store through the week, hopefully."

She says she likes to include a roast in her plans, and cooks it on a Sunday afternoon. Not only does this make a nice meal for that day, but she then has enough left over for roast beef sandwiches, sliced roast and gravy or French dip sandwiches.

Occasionally, she will cook all day Sunday, in order to have home-cooked meals on hand.

"Lasagna is always a good one to make ahead of time, and then freeze it," she says. "Or chili. I like to make homemade things, so a lot of times I'll do chili until it's coming out of my ears, and then freeze it individually in portions that will serve us for maybe a month."

Then if I find myself working a night I didn't plan on, or whatever, I can call home and tell the kids to get something out of the freezer, and be ready for it," she says.

She can depend upon 14-year-old Jarrod and 9-year-old Zachary to help with the cooking, vacuuming and cleaning. "They've been taught that for a reason," she says, "because I'm certainly career oriented. I realized very early that it was essential for them to know the things that moms do, so they can help out. . . I wouldn't be able to function without them. I take them grocery shopping. They're really conscientious. It's really paid off."

On the nights she is working at her second job, she puts on a roast and Jarrod and Zachary prepare the rest of the meal. Or, the boys might, as they often do, barbecue some steaks. "Jarrod is just as good at barbecuing steaks as I am," she says.

Ball says she grew up in a similar family situation. Her mother was successfully pursuing a career and depended on her only daughter for help at home. "That was

Quick cooking is a necessity When Times of the Essence

Busy families need easy recipes

When time is of the essence, it's tempting to stop at the nearest fast-food restaurant to feed your family.

"There are nutritious meals that can be prepared in little more time. It takes to run out for burgers, however.

"Here's one nutritious menu which from prep time to serving time takes a little more than half an hour. These easy-to-prepare recipes are ideal for busy families looking for a healthy, home-cooked meal."

Start by baking the onions and marinating the tomatoes in the vinegar and almond dressing. Then cook the potatoes, prepare the fresh sauce and add the turkey. Finish by toasting the almonds for the salad and pouring the mustard vinaigrette over the warm potatoes. It's that simple!

"This meal is as nutritious as it is fast. Some studies indicate that onions may help lower blood pressure and cholesterol levels, while providing a healthy dose of vitamin C and dietary fiber. Almonds are a good source of vitamin E, riboflavin, magnesium, calcium, iron and fiber. The potato side dish is a valuable source of vitamins C and B6, potassium, niacin, folacin, magnesium and fiber.

Great of turkey, without the skin, is low in fat and a source of high quality protein. B vitamins, iron and zinc.

GOLDEN STUFFED ONION
4 jumbo yellow onions
1 cup fresh mushrooms
1 tablespoon margarine
1 1/2 cups white sauce (recipe follows)

Shredded cheddar cheese
1/2 cup onion, finely chopped
1/2 cup celery, finely chopped

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Peel onions. Cut the ends of root ends. Slice 1/2 off onion tops (reserve for another use). Hollow onions with spoon or melon baller, leaving about 1/2 inch thick walls bottom intact. Chop the onion parings and the mushroom stems in margarine over medium heat five minutes.

Prepare white sauce according to onion mushroom mixture. Empty pack mixture into sauce. Sprinkle generously with cheese. Place in baking dish, cover and bake in 350 degree oven for 30 minutes. Remove cover for last 10 minutes to brown cheese and onions. Makes 4 servings.

While Sauce: In small saucepan, melt 1 tablespoon margarine. Stir in 1 tablespoon flour. Gradually add 1 cup milk, stirring constantly. Add 1/4 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon pepper. Cook and stir over medium heat until thickened.

WARM POTATOES LYONNAISE
4 medium potatoes (about 1 1/2 pounds), sliced 1/2 inch thick
2 cups (10 1/2 ounces) chicken broth
1/2 cup vegetable oil
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup sliced white wine vinegar
2 teaspoon grainy mustard
Salt and pepper to taste
1/2 cup chopped parsley

In saucepan combine potatoes and broth. Bring to boil; reduce heat and simmer, covered until just tender, about 10 minutes. Remove from heat; drain and reserve broth from potatoes. Combine 1/4 cup of the broth (reserving remaining broth for another use), the oil, vinegar, mustard, salt and pepper. Whisk to blend. Pour over potatoes, tossing gently to coat. Let stand 10 minutes to serve warm, or serve at room temperature. Garnish with parsley. Makes 4 servings.

BALSAMIC TOMATOES ALMONDINE
1/2 cup sliced almonds
1/2 cup balsamic vinegar
1/4 cup plus 1 1/2 teaspoons almond oil
1/2 teaspoon garlic salt
3 tomatoes, thinly sliced
1/2 head butter lettuce, washed and crisped
1/2 cup chopped onion

meal and pop it into the oven or microwave for a tasty, fast and easy meal.

Cooks who use this method of "fast foods" also have the advantage of taking control over what goes into their food.

Other suggestions to increase your efficiency in the kitchen include shopping with a grocery list and shopping only once a week. This saves time and cuts down on impulse buying.

When the budget allows, stock up on pantry items, refrigerator staples, freezer items and spices.

Many of the recipes Keddie uses are "essentials" and main dish meals with vegetables packaged in freezable packets that can be prepared ahead of time.

Several tips can be used to ensure good quality in your frozen foods.

The freezer should be set at 0 degrees Fahrenheit. It is best to remove all grocery store wrapping before freezing with aluminum foil or freezer paper. Hot foods should be cooled quickly before freezing.

Also, a freezer should be kept at least two-thirds full. Labeling and dating all foods help avoid spoilage and eliminates coming up with a "mystery" package. To

Spring is time for fast recipes

Spring is here, both really here and according to calendar time. I can remember lots of springs that didn't start until the end of May (if then). What are we going to do next month when we've got all our spring work done?

Personally, I'm glad to see daylight-saving time come early. I never could figure how to reset my digital watch last fall so have had to subtract an hour from what it said, and now I'm finally right again.

Friend Husband really got busy on the lawn last weekend. It's funny how these things get divided up. I get flowers, vegetables and herbs. He gets grass, bushes and watering systems. He trims the hedge. I start on the garage (this is an ongoing, 20-year project). He likes to get things done yesterday; I'm content with tomorrow.

Anyway, this is the time of year I like to try those fast, last recipes. You know the ones that some people disdain when reading, but love to eat.

Here's a quicky that feeds six to eight and is ready in less than a half hour.

SEAFOOD GUMBQ
10 1/2 ounce can clam chowder
10 1/2 ounce can chicken gumbo

10 1/2 ounce can tomato soup
10 1/2 ounce can chicken broth
2 1/2 cups of any combination of: fish chunks, shrimp (fresh or frozen), crabmeat, oysters, clams (whole or canned)

1 large yellow onion, finely chopped and sauteed in 2 tablespoons butter or olive oil
Salt and pepper to taste
Dash of red pepper hot sauce

Heat tomato soup, chicken broth, clam chowder, and chicken gumbo in one package (seven chopped okra, thawed (optional)

Combine all ingredients. Heat gently until it begins to boil, then turn down the heat and simmer for 10-15 minutes.

This is a great one to add to your list. It's easy to do. Add bread and a green or pello salad can complete this meal.

If you choose not to use the okra, green peas or beans can be used.

A new cookbook arrived in the mail today. It's one of a series of "Great Meals in 15 Minutes." There are some especially like the list of all ingredients of all recipes for each meal at the first of each section. There are also lists of ingredients to start-to-finish steps for the whole meal.

One recipe we tried without the whole meal makes a good, hearty main dish that's also fast.

Use organization as a weapon to win battle with the kitchen

By BARBARA NIEMERT
Times News correspondent

HAILEY — With many women heading down a job outside of the home, pressures build when it is time to come home to face children, husband, the house and the task of preparing the evening meal.

Several ways to beat "The What-To-Have-For-Dinner-Syndrome" were offered during a presentation Monday night by LeAnn Keddie, regional consumer affairs coordinator for the Reynolds Metals Company.

Foremost in the effort to win the battle with the kitchen is to get organized. Without organization, many women waste precious time working in the kitchen when they don't need to be there, Keddie says.

Having difficulty deciding what to have for dinner results from a lack of preparedness, a lack of ideas, a lack of inspiration and a sluggish feeling of disorganization, she says.

Quick food from fast-food restaurants solves the problem at times, but it is only a temporary fix. It is also costly and won't provide good nutritional value.

Scheduling a little time in your routine for meal planning and preparation will save time in the long run, she says.

Keddie has three suggestions which help in the kitchen.

• An organized kitchen should have components ready to cook with, eliminating the need to run to the store for this item or that. As an example, freezer items to have on hand include chopped onion, green pepper, celery, fried, crumbled bacon bits, shredded cheeses and other common cooking ingredients.

• Thinking through your menu preparation can avoid cooking in a helter-skelter manner. Plan your dinner menu and work productively through the menu, so all items will be ready at the same time.

• The most efficient suggestion which Keddie gave, and one which seems to save the most time, is to get in the habit of cooking sessions.

First, choose family favorites that can easily be doubled. Next make your shopping list.

Keddie said that shopping at the same grocery store, rather than running from store to store to get a good bargain here and there, will save both time and money in the long run. Using manufacturers' coupons for items you normally buy is another money saver.

When time permits, such as a weekend day, cook up several dishes, leaving one to eat now and freezing the rest.

Wrap, date and label prepared entrees for later use, allowing you to come home, take out a frozen meal and pop it into the oven or microwave for a tasty, fast and easy meal.

Cooks who use this method of "fast foods" also have the advantage of taking control over what goes into their food.

When the budget allows, stock up on pantry items, refrigerator staples, freezer items and spices.

Vermont maple season early for second year prevent freezer burn, wrap food as tight as possible.

Keddle highly recommends the following recipe for chicken:

CHICKEN FLORENTINE
1 pound fresh spinach, rinsed and stems removed
1/2 cup onion, finely chopped
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
Salt and pepper to taste
8 boneless chicken breast halves
4 slices baked ham, cut in half
4 slices Swiss cheddar, cut in half
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Garlic salt
Thyme leaves
Paprika
Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Tear off four 12x18-inch sheets of aluminum foil. Coarsely chop spinach; place in center of lower half of each sheet of foil. Sprinkle spinach with onion and Parmesan cheese. Season with salt and pepper.
If necessary, pound chicken to 1/4-inch thickness for even cooking. Top four chicken pieces with slices of ham, cheese and a second piece of spinach. Place chicken bundles on top of spinach on each foil sheet. Dot chicken with butter, sprinkle with garlic salt, thyme and paprika. Fold foil in half, sealing edges together, making a tight 1/2-inch fold on each side. Fold again, allowing space for heat circulation and expansion. Repeat on each side. Cook 22 minutes.

Transfer foil packet to dinner plate using oven mitts. Cut an X in top of packet and carefully peel back foil. Makes 4 servings.

Another recipe which can be prepared in foil packets to serve now or freeze is made with pork. An advantage of cooking with foil packets is eliminating the cleanup of messy, overware.

Year of four-text-inch sheets of aluminum foil. Sprinkle pork chops with seasoned salt. In skillet, brown and tender. Center two pork chops on each foil sheet. Spoon 1 tablespoon barbecue sauce over each. Place 1 cup vegetables next to pork chops. Season with salt and pepper; dot with butter. Drugstore wrap with foil. Label date and freeze. Makes 4 servings.

Conventional oven reheating: To serve, preheat oven to 400 degrees. Place foil packet on cookie sheet. Cook 40 to 45 minutes or until heated through.

Remove frozen food from foil packet. Place food on microwave-safe plate. Cover with plastic wrap, turning back one edge to vent. Cook on HIGH power 6 minutes or until heated through, rotating dish once.

MONTELLER, Vt. (AP) — Spring's coming early in Vermont for the second year in a row, raising the prospect of bitter lines for the state's maple sugar producers.

"We're a little over half of last year, and that was a bad year," Wilson Clark, president of the Vermont Maple Sugar Producers' Association, said Monday.

Vermont, the nation's leading maple sugar producer, last year put out against 345,000 gallons of maple syrup, against an annual average of 300,000 gallons. This year, the state will be lucky to produce 300,000 gallons, Clark and other producers said.

Clark, who started sugaring on his family's "Swallow" farm 31 years ago in 1944, said 1967 may rank second only to 1945 among the worst years he's ever seen.

He said 1945 "was considered the disaster of the century," that 1967 "probably will be close to that."

"We're fast approaching the end (of the season)," he added. "We'll probably be done in two or three more days."

With the prime syrup-producing areas of Vermont, New York, New Hampshire and the province of Quebec all reporting an off-year for sugaring, prices are expected to take a sharp jump for the second year in a row.

Harry Morse of the Morse Farm in Montpelier, said he feared another price increase on top of last year's jump of 30 to 50 percent might cut down consumers' willingness to pay.

The price for a gallon of maple syrup now stands at high as $20 this year, Morse said, adding, "I'm not even selling gallons this year. It's just too tough to ask." He said Monday he was selling half-gallon containers for $20.

Clark, too, said he was worried about asking too much. "It could be bad for the industry," he said.

Restaurants are leading a comeback of lamb

By ROSE DOSTI
The Los Angeles Times

If you believe Wild West movie lore, the turn of the century was filled with bloody, vegetable tales of how beef bands recruited these farmers from infiltrating the kingdom of precious cattle lands. In the movies, the beef barons are so successful that the lamb turns the farmers' forces to remain small, unassuming and not fully understood.

And that is not far from the truth. Lamb had only a brief period of popularity in the '60s and '60s, before the advent of cattle feedlots in America and before grain-fed beef developed the marbling that enticed Americans away from all other meats, according to Polly Hayes of the American Lamb Council in Denver.

Since then, lamb has had little chance of luring Americans away from beef — a robust 97.1 pounds per capita according to beef (as of 1985), compared with lamb's mealy 1.5 pounds per capita (as of 1986). The lamb industry has remained deadlocked for the past 10 years, with neither any dramatic increase nor decrease in production or sales. The latest U.S. Department of Agriculture and Department of Commerce production figures show that lamb — production remains steady at 6.3 million heads, compared with 36.6 million heads for beef cattle sold to market. In addition, lamb from New Zealand and Australia, which has not found high acceptance by Americans because of its small size and gamy flavor, is sold in amounts of about 35.4 million pounds yearly to American markets.

The lamb industry, in fact, has had a difficult time combating misconceptions about lamb. "The most objectionable thing about lamb, according to consumers, is that it has a gamey odor, which is why we recommend cooking lamb at low temperatures to prevent lamb fat from burning," Hayes said.

Cooking lamb has not come easy. Indeed, Americans prefer the lamb served in restaurants rather than having to figure out how to cook it at home, as one study reported by the American Lamb Council indicates.

But things are looking up for lamb. You can almost hear the drums roll when you open a menu in today's top-flight restaurants and find lamb featured with flair and imagination never before seen in the 150-odd years of the best continental restaurants dared to stray from lamb chops or rack with mint jelly.

Gardening/home

Young fruit trees need special pruning

Young fruit trees need special pruning to develop branches at the most convenient picking height.

In commercial orchards the lowest branches start about 18 inches above the ground and rise slightly in a boom landscape, branching is sometimes started a little higher so that maintenance practices such as lawn mowing are easier.

Trees purchased from a nursery may already have some branches developed at the 18-inch to two-foot height. If not, the main trunk of the tree must be pruned about a foot above the desired location of the lowest branch. This will induce the tree to sprout several branches at the proper height.

Three to five branches are usually allowed to grow at the 1 1/2, 2 1/2, 4 1/2 foot height. Extra branches are removed. Branches should be spaced around the tree. Those with the widest angle to the trunk are the strongest. The branches chosen to remain are shortened by about a third to a half if they are more than 18 inches long. This forces them to develop side branches.

If the trunk is pruned, usually two or three upright growing branches will develop just below the pruning cut. On peach trees, all upright growing branches are removed the second year to develop an open center tree. Main side branches are also shortened the second spring to encourage further branching.

Any side branches growing in toward the center of the tree are removed the second year also. Peach trees generally are not hardy in colder areas such as the Wood River Valley.

A second layer of main branches about three feet above the first layer is usually developed on apple, cherry, pear, plum and apricot trees. In order to do this, one of the upright growing branches is allowed to remain and the others are removed.

It is pruned the second spring about three to four feet above the first layer of branches. This will induce branching in the area just below where it is pruned. The first layer of main branches is pruned as described above for peaches.

During the third spring, four or five additional branches are chosen at the second level with the best branching angles. They are shortened by a third to a half in order to encourage branching. The main pruning job on the lower layer is to remove excess small branches which are growing into each other and remove those which are growing straight up or in toward the center of the tree.

A third layer of branches can be allowed to develop in the same way as the second layer. This will depend upon how high you want the tree to grow.

Once the basic framework is developed, the main pruning job is to remove excess branches which grow into each other or toward the center of the tree. Major branches can be shortened back to a side branch to reduce the height or spread of the tree.

I have a leaflet with general information on pruning and specific suggestions for pruning both young and established fruit trees.

If you would like a copy, send $1 and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Allen Wilson, P.O. Box 40, Rexburg, Idaho 83440. Ask for the pruning leaflet.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College.

Bush fruits a tasty solution

By the Associated Press

Cane and bush fruits are a tasty solution for gardeners who don't have the space for fruit trees, says Betty Holmes and Gardens magazine.

When grown against a fence, heavy plants make use of otherwise unused space. Before making any selection, ask a local nurseryowner which varieties are suitable for the local climate.

Raspberries: Just note the high price of fresh raspberries at the grocery store, and be convinced that this cane fruit will be as good as gold in a garden. Originally confined to cold-weather regions, varieties now are available that thrive in warm areas.

Raspberry varieties fall into two groups: summer-fruiting and everbearing. The summer-fruiting raspberry produces berries on the previous season's canes in early to midsummer. The everbearing types bear fruit twice, once in early summer on the previous season's growth, and again in the fall on the previous season's canes.

Red and black are the two most common types of raspberries, but purple and yellow varieties also exist.

Plant raspberries in the early spring (fall in milder climates). They grow best in well-drained soil.

Blackberries: Though frequently confused with black raspberries, blackberries are larger (1 to 2 inches long) and more elongated. Blackberries grow in one of two ways: on short-stemmed canes or on trailing vines. Cane varieties thrive everywhere except in extremely cold or extremely warm regions, and vine types are limited to warmer climates. Trailing varieties produce canes from the ground.

Blueberries: These are popular fruiting varieties in the blackberry family. They bear large, non-black berries. Loganberries and loganberries are more red.

New cooktops clean easier

By the Los Angeles Times

The other day a story on television said that with more women joining the work force, neatness in housekeeping is declining. This may or may not be true, but certainly one place in the home that requires more time and effort in cleaning and tidying for most people is the kitchen. And if you are a busy cook, the cooktop could be a dreaded chore for cleaning up spills and grease stains.

Furthermore, if a dirty cooktop is ignored too long, the crevices will thicken with annoying burned-on crusts. To the rescue are two types of modern cooktops, one for gas-cooking units and another for electric units.

Although Europeans have been producing easy-to-clean gas cooktops for some time, it is only now that one is being made in the United States. The Thermador gas cooktop with ThermoFlame (from $399) is being introduced by Thermador-Waste King as the ultimate addition to its gas cooktop line. The cooktop comes with a sealed burner and continuous surface design with no lift outs other than the slim grates. What a relief not to have the chore of removing drip pans or having to dig into the nooks and crannies underneath the burners to wipe up spills.

"The concept of a state-of-the-art gas cooktop came out of a consumer need," said John Lomacz, general sales manager of Thermador's California sales branch. "In 1982 we introduced the Eregona line of electric cooktops with the hottops (solid elements) with glass surface," he explained. "Consumers absolutely love how they clean up. We wanted to bring that cleanliness story to the versatile gas cooktop which... is still very popular." One plus point about gas-stove-top cooking is that it allows total freedom in the choice of cookware as well as easily controllable heat.

Rocker is tender beneath tough leather

DEAR ABBY — I just read the letter from "A-Nice-Leather-Loving-Guy" who says she dresses like a biker and looks tough, but she's really a nice girl underneath. She says she can't meet any decent guys because of the way she dresses. Abby, you told her maybe she should change her style of dress. I disagree with you totally — you see, I am a punk rocker and my style of dress is outrageous, but I have no trouble meeting nice guys. Guys who are turned off by a girl who dresses wild or different aren't worth knowing. They are rude and ignorant for not wanting to know us "weirdos" better. Underneath, we are just like everyone else. — TRYING TO BE MEIN B A L T I M O R E

DEAR TRYING — The way a person presents him (or her) self is a conscious statement. So if you choose to go around with a purple and orange Mohawk, a safety pin through your ear and a ring in your nose, it's your privilege. But please don't label people "rude and ignorant" if they're so turned off by your outrageous appearance that they have no interest in knowing the "real" you.

DEAR ABBY — This is for "Bartley in Berkeley." I am a 25-year-old college senior. I am also a virgin. You are not weird, you are unusual. But the best always is the true to yourself. Some men still appreciate the obvious goodness you possess. And finally, it does not take experience to know that having sex is no substitute for making love. — HEART IS DOKE

CONFIDENTIAL TO G.G. IN MOSCOW, IDAHO — Money talks, but it doesn't tell where it came from. Be careful.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU — If you want to see Dear Abby on TV, watch

"Hollywood Squares" tonight. I'm on it — Monday through Friday — all this week.

CONFIDENTIAL TO B.G. IN CEDAR CO. — Sometimes a kind lie is better than a cruel truth.

DEAR ABBY — You did not need to apologize for saying "doctors and dentists," even though you pointed out that dentists are also doctors — doctors of dentistry. However, not to imply that doctors of medicine ostracize doctors of dentistry — when someone cries out, "Is there a doctor in the house?" you can be sure they're not looking for a dentist! — JUST ME

ADDITIONS AFFECT MANY AMERICANS
 CLEVELAND (AP) — Between 15 and 22.5 percent of the U.S. population suffers from some form of mental or addictive disorder, according to Dr. Herbert Meltzer.
 Meltzer, a consultant to the National Institute of Mental Health, says 20 to 25 million Americans are directly affected by mental illness, alcoholism and drug abuse. Over 9 million Americans currently have an "effective disorder," such as depression or mania, he says.
 "Fortunately, research has begun to come up with effective treatments for some of these conditions," says Meltzer, a psychiatrist at Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine. "For someone who doesn't know where to turn, it is advisable to start with a university medical center."

Mets open season with 3-2 win over Pirates

-NEW YORK (AP) - Darryl Strawberry hit a three-run homer in the first inning and the World Series champion New York Mets repelled Pittsburgh's left-hander, Pedro Martinez, to open their 1987 season Tuesday by beating the Pirates 3-2.

Minutes after receiving their World Series ring and unveiling a championship banner in pregame ceremonies on an overcast day, Strawberry provided the first big hit of the year in front of the crowd of 46,000. He sent Pedro Martinez, who pitched over the right-center field fence - close to where his towering home run clinched Game 7 of the World Series last October against Boston - over the top of the scoreboard.

Bob Ojeda scattered 10 hits and one run over seven innings, and Jesse Orosco closed as the Mets won their 16th opening-day game in the last 18 years.

Cards 9, Cubs 3

CHICAGO (AP) - Rookie Jim Lindeman and pitcher John Tudor each drove in two runs in a three-run third inning Tuesday to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 9-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs in the season opener for both teams.

A crowd of 38,340 watched, the Cubs jumped on Tudor for three runs in the first two innings. But starter Rick Sutcliffe, plagued by wildness, failed to last through the third inning, walking seven without a strikeout.

Tudor, aided by three double plays in the first three innings, got the win, going five innings, allowing eight hits and walking three. Bill Dawley pitched four innings, allowing only one hit, striking out three and picking up the save.

Braves 6, Phils 0

ATLANTA (AP) - Rick Mahler ran his greatest attack to 24 innings in season openers with a three-bitter and Ken Oberkell had three hits, including a two-run double that broke a scoreless tie in the sixth inning, as the Atlanta Braves blanked the Philadelphia Phillies, 6-0, Tuesday night.

Mahler allowed only an infield single to Milt Thompson leading off the game, a single by Mike Easter in the second inning and another infield hit by Thompson in the ninth. Mahler struck out two and walked four, but added a two-run double in Atlanta's four-run eighth.

Astros 6, LA 5

HOUSTON (AP) - Houston rallied for four runs in the eighth inning to two wild pitches by Los Angeles reliever Matt Young and a two-run homer by Kevin Bass to beat the Dodgers 6-5 Tuesday night.

The Dodgers led 4-3 through seven innings, but reliever Ken Howell yielded singles to Craig Reynolds and Terry Puhl to start the eighth. Young then allowed Reynolds and Puhl to score on wild pitches, tying the score.

Angels 7, M's 1

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - Mike Erick's bases-loaded single to left-center field won with no outs in the bottom of the ninth as the Los Angeles Angels won their season-opening victory over the Oakland Athletics Tuesday night.

Steve Leonard's infield single off Bill Krueger started the 10th and Kirby Puckett followed with a double. After Gary Cincinnati was intentionally walked, Erick drove in his third run of the game with a one-bouncer to the fence.

George Frazier was the winning pitcher, working the last two innings of the Twins win, for only the second time in six home openers at the Metrodome.

Twins 5, A's 4

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - Kent Erick's bases-loaded single to left-center field won with no outs in the bottom of the ninth as the Minnesota Twins won a 5-4 home opener Tuesday night.

Jordan hits 39 in 26 minutes to pace Bulls in 116-86 romp

CHICAGO (AP) - Michael Jordan scored 39 points in 26 minutes Tuesday night to pace the Chicago Bulls to a 116-86 romp over the Detroit Pistons in an incident-marred NBA game.

Jordan was assessed a technical foul in the first period when, after being fouled by Bill Laimbeer, he drove to the basket, took a swing at the Detroit center. In the third period, Detroit's Adrian Dantley grabbed Jordan and wrestled him off the floor.

"It's the first time I ever felt like fighting, but you could see it coming," Jordan said after leaving the game in the third period.

The Bulls snapped a three-game losing streak by taking advantage of Laimbeer and a poor Detroit shooting.

Detroit, 49-37, dropped 2 1/2 games behind the Atlanta in the NBA's Central Division.

With 7:02 left in the third quarter, Isiah Thomas and Chicago center Dave Corzine got into a shoving match. Thomas took several swings at Corzine, who responded by counting off "Thomson" when Detroit's Rick Maborn joined the fray, the officials collared Corzine and gave him a technical foul.

Detroit Coach Chuck Daly was ejected when he argued that Corzine

Cavs 107, Celts 83

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) - Ron Harper scored 30 points and the Cleveland Cavaliers won their season's first game, 107-83, Tuesday night as the Cavaliers handed the Boston Celtics their eighth loss in the last nine road games.

Boston, whose starting center, Robert Parish, missed the game because of a sore elbow, led 69-68 after Larry Bird made a driving layup with just over two minutes to play in the third quarter.

The Cavaliers, however, outscored the Celtics 21-4 over the next 6 1/2 minutes to take an 89-72 lead, and Boston never challenged after that. Brad Daugherty scored seven of his 20 points during the Cleveland run, which helped the Cavaliers snap a five-game losing streak.

Bucks 95, Bulls 94

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) - John Lucas scored 26 points and played the entire game as the Milwaukee Bucks edged the Washington Bullets 95-94 in an NBA game Tuesday night.

The Bucks, who had not won away from home since March 11, when they beat Washington 115-107, snapped a six-game road losing streak.

Pacers 128, Nets 114

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Ron Anderson came off the bench to score 23 of his 27 points in the fourth quarter as Indiana defeated the New Jersey Nets 128-114 Tuesday night for the Pacers' eighth consecutive NBA victory at home.

Anderson, who only played nine minutes in the first half, played the entire fourth quarter due to foul trouble that plagued the entire Pacer front line most of the game.

McMahon gets 'good report' on shoulder

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Chicago Bears quarterback Jim McMahon sidled last year by a shoulder injury has received a "real good report" from his doctor, his agent says.

McMahon's shoulder has progressed enough since his surgery Dec. 12 that he will be able to throw a football "real soon," Steve Zucker, the quarterback's agent said Monday.

Fans

The satellite transmission to the War Memorial Convention Hall on Kaula was permanently lost during a preliminary fight, leaving about 750 fans in the dark.

A spokeswoman for the production company which sponsored the two Hawaii satellite telecasts, said refunds would be given. She said a satellite decoder malfunction may have caused the problem.

At Toronto, unruly fans at the La Penola tavern overturned tables and smashed glasses while waiting for the satellite broadcast of the fight, eventually won by Leonard on a split decision - the first loss for Hagler after 12 successful title defenses.

Tavern manager Nick Piras said he was almost certain he could pick up transmission with a satellite dish and a descrambler, but his cable was cut by the tavern staff.

A broken cable also prevented broadcast of the fight in the Million Dollar Saloon at Brampton, Ontario, where fans banged on tables, broke glasses and chanted, "Trash the place."

About 40 police cars were called to the scene. It took 17 policemen to quell a disturbance at Elliot Lake, Ontario, where more than 300 patrons caused more than $10,000 in damages at the Oakes Hotel, smashing plates, glasses, speakers, juke boxes and glasses when a closed-circuit TV failed to show the bout.

Four men were arrested in the disturbance. At Fredericton and Sydney in Nova Scotia, and at St. John's, New Brunswick, the satellite transmission broke down at hotels and arenas and patrons, including St. John's Premier Robert Peckford, were of refunds.

The program went off much better at most of the other 1,580-600 locations.

Zucker said he had hoped Dr. Frank Jobe would clear McMahon to lead a baseball on Monday's examination. But the news was better than expected, he said.

"He may go right to a football," Zucker said of McMahon. "Jobe August."

Masters

-Continued from Page D1- Norman, the Australian who dominated world golf last year, and Ballesteros - the brilliant Spaniard who has won two Masters titles and two British Open trophies, are not alone.

They're joined by such strong title threats as Sandy-Lyle of Scotland, Tommy Nakajima of Japan and Bernhard Langer of West Germany, with C. C. Chen of Taiwan and Nick Price of South Africa as possibilities.

The situation, some of the game's best players of West Germany and several factors: the increased interest in golf around the world, an elevated level of competition on the American tour, and the decline of Tom Watson.

"There's no reason that the best player in the world has to be American. It's just happened that way in the past largely because of the facilities here, because more people play golf here," Nicklaus said.

And that's a problem on the American tour: "No question about it, there are more good players - more players capable of winning - now than there ever have been," Lee Trevino said.

And with that level of competition, it is just that much harder for one player to dominate on the American tour; it's just that much harder for a player to distance himself from the others.

Watson did it. During the late 1970s and early 1980s, he was the game's world leader.

But Watson has gone into a puzzling, frustrating slump that has deprived the United States of its best performer.

The result is that Norman, Ballesteros, Langer, Lyle and Nakajima have advanced to the top rank and are most likely to succeed in this year's Masters.

statement to everyone at the same time.

Trainer said Leonard hurt his right hand and would have it X-rayed after he returned home to Parkersburg, West Virginia, where he had retinal surgery in 1982, and his right eye, which underwent a surgical procedure in 1984, were no factors in the fight.

As Hagler and Pat Petronelli said he had no idea whether he would fight again.

"He's feeling down," Petronelli said.

"So why did he pick the Eagles to win the division?"

"Because," he said, "if you give your opponents too much respect, then you start believing it yourself."

Petronelli, meanwhile, said he was "embarrassed" by reports right after the Super Bowl that his agent, Robert-Frazier, had approached Atlanta Falcons about the team's vacant coach and general manager's job.

"Sometimes these things happen in this business," he said. "Things happen that you don't have complete control over. They get into your head and sometimes they get out of your head."

And he added: "nothing happened, I'm here aren't I."

Everyone except Ryan called the defending champion New York Giants the favorites to repeat.

Philadelphia's coach Bill Parcells, Ryan picked the Eagles to win, and later said of the Giants: "I think they have an excellent chance to repeat if they don't get a lot of injuries."

Parcells, meanwhile, said he was "embarrassed" by reports right after the Super Bowl that his agent, Robert-Frazier, had approached Atlanta Falcons about the team's vacant coach and general manager's job.

Spinks

York, one of the possible training venue for Spinks in Sun Valley, said Tuesday the fighter and his entourage would be returning to the resort to train.

"The time frame is just not good for us," said company sales director Bill Clifford, citing unpredictable weather conditions in late April and early May when Spinks is supposed to start training.

Steve Soran, the president of the hospitality association, said he would meet with representatives of Spinks in Twin Falls sometime today.

"We won't know anything until they get here," Soran said. "The resort's situation is already in the planning stages of looking for a place to put Spinks for public sparring sessions."

Soran is looking for a facility with a 20-foot ceiling, public restrooms, a locker, a shower, parking facilities and rooms for anywhere from 15 to 60 people.

The big stumbling block for the association is the cost for a boxing ring. The cost of a ring is $550 a day which is tough for the association, a non-profit group.

"There's no doubt it would be a tremendous benefit to the community to have him here, even for three weeks," said association executive director Wes Gates. "We can cover everything but the ring."

The association is seeking to find a ring in Boise, Caldwell or in Gooding for Spinks use.

The hospitality association has looked at the Rice Lakes Mall, the Blue Lakes Plaza and the buildings owned by the State Center and Diamond International.

The Downtown Business Improvement District of Twin Falls has scheduled a meeting for this week to discuss bringing the the training sessions downtown.
