Reagan imposes tariffs on Japanese goods

WASHINGTON — President Reagan slapped Japan with stiff retaliatory tariffs Friday that will double the import prices of selected Japanese computers, color televisions sets and power hand tools coming into this country.

The Japanese imports hit by the 100 percent tariffs are $180 million worth of top-end desktop computers, $50 million worth of color television sets with 18-inch to 20-inch screens, and $30 billion worth of power hand tools that include large bit-drills, hammers and certain grinders, sanders and polishers.

U.S. officials emphasized Friday that the economic impact on Japan, which ran a $38.6 billion trade surplus with the United States last year, would be all the more acute because of the health and vitality of the U.S. semiconductor industry are essential to America's future competitiveness. We cannot allow it to be jeopardized by unfair trading practices.

Reagan, acting on part of his administration's new get-tough policy on trade, approved the tariffs on $200 million worth of Japanese products despite a last-minute personal plea from Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, who will be visiting here in 12 days, and Japanese threats to take the Tariffs and Trade (GATT) international compact that regulates world trade. The Japanese government, in a statement issued by its embassy here, said it was "deeply disappointed" by the sanctions.

Pacific trade war not likely

By TOM RAUM The Associated Press

Analysis

WASHINGTON — Despite the slapping of stiff U.S. tariffs on selected Japanese imports Friday, a full-fledged trans-Pacific trade war seems unlikely to erupt, and some analysts suggest a negotiated settlement may be reached within weeks.

In imposing 100 percent duties on Japanese-made personal computers, color televisions and power tools, the Reagan administration sent a strong message to Japan that it is serious about ending a trade deficit with Japan that reached $58.6 billion last year. The move also appeared to strengthen the president's hand in dealing with a Democratic-controlled Congress that appears bent on passing major trade legislation this year.

which to fight a proposed amendment by Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., a 1988 Democratic presidential aspirant, calling for mandatory tariffs against nations such as Japan that maintain huge trade surpluses with the United States. That amendment is expected to be debated on the House floor later this month. Japan vowed to appeal Friday's move to an international trade tribunal, the Geneva-based General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. Earlier, it had threatened to take "appropriate measures to defend its interests" without elaborating. While the prospect of counter-retaliation by Japan is being raised, possibly against U.S. agricultural shipments to Japan, it is unclear whether that Japan will take tough steps at this time. For one thing, a trade war is in the interest of neither nation — and Japan would stand to lose the most from further escalations.

Welfare groups see negative results

Animal patents may mean leaner pigs

WASHINGTON — Scientists say a new government policy announced Friday to permit patenting of genetically engineered animal breeds could help produce leaner pigs and more milk from cows, but animal welfare groups see negative consequences. The U.S. Patent and Trademark Office said it would permit inventors to patent animals produced through gene splicing and a host of new reproductive techniques. The policy, to be published Tuesday, would make the United States the first country to patent animals. It bans patents of new human traits and continues the policy of finding animals produced through natural breeding to be unpatentable.

The office, which has patented genetically engineered single-cell organisms since a 1980 Supreme Court ruling, has received 15 applications for multicell patents and expects many more because of the new patent protections, said Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks Donald J. Quigg. A coalition of animal-welfare and public policy groups led by the Humane Society of the United States and the Washington-based Foundation on Economic Trends filed a petition with the patent office Friday calling for the policy to be rescinded. "It's an arbitrary and capricious agency action because the statutes of the patent law were never meant to cover animal life," said Jeremy Rifkin, president of the foundation.

The group is also drafting legislation, which it hopes to have introduced in Congress next week, that would prohibit patenting of animals. "It's really outrageous for a handful of officials to say all members of the animal kingdom are reducible to the same manufacturing process as a automobile or toaster-oven," Rifkin said. The new policy could end the family farm by placing control of animal breeds in the hands of chemical and pharmaceutical companies that manage to patent superior strains of farm animals, he said. Howard Hawk, an Agriculture Department researcher at Beltsville, Md., said leaner meat-producing cows and disease-resistant animals could result from genetic experiments.

Hansen held in jail awaiting questioning

cause for the parole violation

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Former Idaho Congressman George Hansen was held in the Alexandria City Jail Friday awaiting questioning by a probation officer after his arrest in Hanksan on charges of parole violation. Hansen, 56, will be kept in jail until the interview, said Justice Department spokesman Joe Krovisky. He said he did not know if the questioning would be Friday or next week. The conservative Republican from Idaho served six months in federal prison in Virginia on felony ethics convictions last year and was paroled in December. He was arrested Wednesday in Omaha, Neb., for leaving Virginia without permission, officials said. Late Thursday he was flown by federal marshals to Alexandria, Va., Washington, D.C. suburb. Krovisky said that Hansen's case will go to the Parole Commission regional examiner in Philadelphia if the probation officer finds probable cause.

The regional examiner will make a decision on the case and circulate it among commissioner members until four concurring votes are received. "The worst case from Hansen's point of view is revocation" of parole, said Krovisky. Other possibilities are that the conditions of his release would be dropped or that he would be put in a halfway house, said Krovisky. Hansen, the first congressman jailed for breaking financial disclosure laws, was convicted of four federal ethics violations in 1984, the same year he lost re-election to an eighth term by 70 votes. He was also found guilty of submitting false financial disclosure statements to Congress. The charges included concealing his financial dealings with Texas billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt. Hansen was fined $40,000 and served six months of a five- to 15-month sentence in federal prison before being paroled in December.

Soviets accept proposal to exchange nuclear tests

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union accepted a U.S. proposal to conduct underground nuclear weapons tests on each other's territories to help lighten pressure to guard against violent outbreaks of two unratified treaties, U.S. arms control negotiator Kenneth Adelman said Friday. "It's a very positive move," Adelman said in an interview. "We've wanted better verification since the 1960s and they have Adelman then pursued it on Tuesday with other Soviet officials. The Soviets agreed we can monitor the tests. The United Kingdom is testing which is Adelman said. The two treaties have never been verified by the States. Logical devices like the blast area to make sure the detonation is within the 150-kiloton limit required by the 1974 Threshold Test Ban Treaty and the 1976 Peaceful Nuclear Explosions Treaty. The Soviets, who for a long time resisted on-site inspection, prefer testing outside measurement. Adelman said a combination of the two might be the result. Secretary of State George Shultz made the proposal to Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze on Monday. According to an internal memorandum obtained by The Associated Press. cooperative with our investigative and prosecutorial efforts," the memo said.

WASHINGTON — The Marine Corps, anticipating that American overseas will be implicated in the growing Marine guard spy scandal, has decided to ask the Justice Department to join the investigation. The State Department and other agencies have not cooperated fully with the investigation into allegations that Marine guards at several U.S. Embassies in Soviet bloc countries were seduced by foreign women and allowed spies to breach security, according to an internal memorandum obtained by The Associated Press. "We need the 'clout' which the FBI and attorney general can provide in dealing with the State Department, CIA and NSA, which to this point have been less than totally cooperative with our investigative and prosecutorial efforts," the memo said. "For example, the CIA has already tried an end-run. We still are not receiving the full cooperation of the CIA." The memo did not elaborate on the CIA "end-run." The memo, addressed to the Marine Corps commandant, Gen. P.X. Kelley, by one of the corps' top lawyers, Col. M.E. Rich, said prosecutors have debated entering plea-bargain talks with one of the Marine embassy guards charged in the affair. The memo suggested that more individuals may be implicated in the spy campaign than publicly disclosed. That suggestion arose from a reference to a possible need for as many as 40 military lawyers. The memo added that the resources of the Marine Corps and the Naval Investigative Service have been "stretched thin" by the demands of the investigation. It said a quick decision is needed on handling the cases of the first two Marines arrested, Sgt. Clayton J. Lonergan and Cpl. Arnold Bracy. The former guards at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow have been charged with espionage. "Decisions as to whether to confer immunity on Cpl. Bracy, whether to enter into plea negotiations, etc., must be made in the next few days," the memo said. Administration sources had earlier said they had problems gathering evidence. The memo was written to per- Casuar W. Weinberger to enlist the Justice Department's cooperation in launching a National Security Task Force. See MARINE on Page A2

McFarlane's 'no dice' stopped North's Tehran arms deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North negotiated an arms-for-hostages deal alone with Iranian officials while on a secret mission to Tehran last year and ordered a plane-load of weapons before former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane said "no dice," a source said Friday.

The source, who is familiar with the deal, said North negotiated the release of two hostages while other members of the U.S. delegation in Tehran slept in the early hours of May 28, 1986.

North ordered a plane to fly from Tehran before walking away from McFarlane and informing him of the arrangement, said the source, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

McFarlane immediately called the deal and ordered the plane of spare military parts to return because all four U.S. hostages being held in Lebanon were not to be released in the deal, according to this account.

The source said it was not unusual for North to follow the National Security Council aide, who was fired by President Reagan last November, to "get things moving subject to a decision" to go ahead or stop.

In the May 28 case, he said, McFarlane was awakened by North's telephone call and returned to the specific purpose of determining whether or not to let it go ahead, and said "no dice."

The deal between North and Iranian Ambassador Masoud Ghannouchi followed a period of negotiations the previous day and night that were frustrating for the Americans and had left McFarlane out of patience and ready to leave, according to testimony received last year by the House Select Committee.

According to the committee's report, McFarlane had ordered his delegation to leave the night before but stayed over because the plane had not been refueled. The report also says that an Iranian senior foreign affairs adviser asked the American group to delay a decision until 8 a.m., and that at 7:30 a.m. an Iranian official told McFarlane he was impressed by the Americans but not all of the hostages.

"It is too late," McFarlane was quoted as saying then.

The Americans departed at 8:50 a.m., the report said, with McFarlane telling an Iranian official to tell his "superiors that this was the fourth time they had failed to honor an agreement. The lack of trust will endure for a long time."

The report contained detailed accounts of the negotiations of that day, but it did not contain the disclosure of North's independent negotiations with the canceling of the plane by McFarlane.

"The Japanese government will seek the earliest possible withdrawal of the U.S. measures through constructive dialogue with the U.S. government," the embassy said.

The order, which would increase the import price of 32,000 computer to $4,000, an administration trade official said. The impact on retail prices would not be as great, since wholesale and retail profits would be added to the desktop computer price.

Japanese manufacturers might be able to cut the import price of some products to lessen the impact of the tariffs on retail prices. If a Japanese company chose to keep its sales up by taking the additional tariffs out of profits instead of raising prices, it could face new charges of illegal dumping, a U.S. trade official said.

In addition, the falling dollar is lessening the value of Japanese import prices.

President Reagan said he ordered the sanctions "to enforce the principles of free and fair trade."

"I regret these actions were necessary," he added. "We will eliminate them as soon as we have firm and convincing evidence that the dumping in third country markets has stopped and that access to the Japanese market has improved."

Administration officials appeared deliberately vague Friday on how long the sanctions would last. One senior trade official said it would take at least until mid-June for the United States to get the kind of data Reagan called for on the dumping issue and probably longer to show an increase in U.S. sales in Japan.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said Reagan sent a personal note to Nakasone Friday telling him "in a personal way" why he imposed the sanctions. "The president and the prime minister are very good friends," said Fitzwater. "The president is very concerned about having to take this action and he conveyed that to the prime minister."

The decision came as Congress is about to consider trade legislation, and Fitzwater said it was "important" that administration action could help demonstrate that present trade laws are enough to protect U.S. companies from unfair trade practices.

Troops stage mutiny in Manila
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — About 50 mutinous troops rammed a truck through a gate at army headquarters, exchanged gunfire with loyalist soldiers and took hostages in a bid to free rebel troops held after a January coup attempt, military officials and witnesses said.

Col. Emiliano Templo, chief of staff of the capital regional command, said the mutineers were holed up with an undetermined number of hostages in the headquarters building of Fort Bonifacio in suburban Makati.

Templo said Maj. Gen. Rodolfo Canlaso, the army commander, and Col. Arturo Enrique, the operations chief, were negotiating with the mutineers.

Witnesses said the mutineers exchanged gunfire for about 15 minutes at the site of 100 troops surrounded and held there but there were no injuries.

Two tanks were deployed on the grounds of the Presidential Malacanan Palace.

Group splits big lottery prize
HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Two groups of workers hopped a bus Friday and hit the yellow brick road to the state capital, where they expected to collect a piece of the state's largest lottery jackpot.

There were two winning tickets for the $26 million Super 7 drawing, one held by 20 workers from a produce warehouse in Scranton and the other by 29 teachers and workers at a Philadelphia elementary school.

The school group had invested in 145 tickets, while the warehouse workers had been chipping in to a fund for six months to "buy numbers" closer by a computer.

"It's not enough to prompt anybody to retire, but it sure is nice," said Richard Becker, principal at the elementary school and one of those who will share the prize.

Colder with westerly winds from 15 to 30 mph. Highs near 50. Partly cloudy and cool Sunday. Westerly winds from 15 to 30 mph. Highs from 50 to 55.

Camas Prairie, Halley and Lower Wood River Valley:
Mild colder today with brisk westerly to northerly winds from 20 to 40 mph. Occasional rain or snow. Snowfall of 1 to 2 inches, mainly at higher elevations. Highs from 45 to 50. Partly cloudy tonight with showers ending. Colder with lows in the low to mid 20s. Partly cloudy, cool and breezy Sunday. Highs from 45 to 50.

Northern Nevada and Utah:
Utah — Increasing clouds, windy and warm today. Turning cooler tonight on into Easter Sunday with a few showers and thunderstorms. Highs from 70 to mid 80s. Lows tonight in the 40s. Highs Sunday from 50s to low 70s.

Nevada — Strong and gusty winds over the east today. Otherwise, partly cloudy with a few showers lingering over the east. Colder. Highs today from 60s to mid 60s with high Sunday from the upper 40s to 50s. Overnight lows in the upper 20s and 30s tonight.

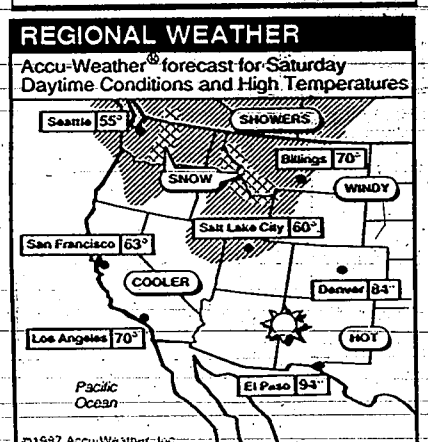

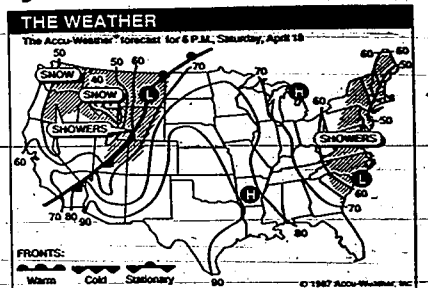

Synopsis:
Skies were cloudy over much of Idaho Friday afternoon with the exception of the southeast, south central and east central regions where mostly sunny skies were the rule.

Afternoon temperatures remained warm over the south with readings in the 70s.

With the heavier cloud cover over the north, temperatures in the upper 40s to the low 50s were common. Cooler skies had light rain and 47 degrees at midmorning Friday. Winds were in the 5 to 15 mph range over most of the state. The southeast had winds of 15 to 25 mph however.

The highest temperature in the state Friday was 83 degrees in Twin Falls, while the low was 22 degrees at Stanley.

The agricultural forecast for southern Idaho shows conditions for field preparation and planting will be poor today due to showers, strong winds and colder temperatures. Conditions will improve Sunday with good conditions Monday through Wednesday. Total precipitation will be .10 to .20 inch today, mainly in the south. Soil temperatures will cool 4 to 7 degrees by Sunday then warm slowly

Trade

With an economy that relies heavily on exports, the island nation is already reeling from the 50 percent devaluation of the Japanese yen against the Japanese yen that has occurred over the past two years — an exchange rate shift that has cut sharply into the profits of Japanese exporters.

At the current time, the U.S. market is far more important to Japan than Japanese markets are to the United States. That's what the trade deficit is all about.

The sanctions are actually minuscule in comparison with total two-way trade between the two nations — $11.3 billion last year. But they have important symbolic and political importance to both nations as the first trade retaliation directed specifically at Japan since the end of World War II.

"Now that the Japanese realize we're serious, I think that they'll sit down and negotiate a compromise, maybe a voluntary restraint agreement like they have done in the past with their exports of semiconductors," economist Michael R. Evans said.

Administration officials have indicated they will lift the sanctions if Japan is willing to take steps that led to the tariffs. The required evidence: an increase in U.S. sales of computer chips in Japan and the end of "dumping" of similar products by Japanese semiconductor manufacturers at prices below their fair value.

In his statement on Friday, Reagan said he was "encouraged" by recent action taken by the government of Japan to improve their compliance with the U.S.-Japanese semiconductor agreement.

U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Kretzinger suggested on Friday, even before the tariffs were announced, that the Japanese "can correct it very quickly, almost overnight, if they'll just do so."

Analysts said it would serve both nations if progress could be made toward a negotiated settlement by the time Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone meets with Reagan on April 29.

Kretzinger also concedes that Japan is no longer selling semiconductors — the tiny silicon chips that make computers work — in this country at bargain-basement prices, but contends the practice is continuing in markets outside the United States.

Although the president's Economic Policy Council, made up of a majority of Cabinet secretaries, was unanimous in its decision to go ahead with the tariffs, questions have been raised by many senior administration officials about the enforceability by Japan of the semiconductor pact.

Even Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, an early advocate of the sanctions, suggested in a recent interview that Japan might have overplayed its hand in signing the accord in the first place.

"I'm not sure there was an industry consensus (in Japan) to go along with this agreement their own government had signed," Baldrige said. "If the industry doesn't want to do it, it's been difficult in the past for the government to force that kind of action."

But, added Baldrige, "Japan is a sovereign nation and has to make its own decision for itself. All we can look at is the end result."

The task force would be composed of military and Justice Department lawyers and military and FBI investigators. It would take over the investigation and prosecution.

According to a second memo written three days later by Kelley, both the Justice Department and the idea and Kelley said he expected Attorney General Edwin Meese III to go along.

The Justice Department decided to prosecute Meese on April 17.

A few hours before the first memo, dated April 7, surfaced, Kelley at a news conference said he couldn't rule out additional arrests, but pleaded for Americans to support his "strong case."

"We are a very close-knit organization. It borders on, with us, being a religion," said Kelley. "We belong to the American taxpayer. We are a proud corps. And we must press on."

"We cannot allow the actions of a remote handful of individuals... we cannot allow that to destroy our morale," he said.

The United States during the news conference about a lack of cooperation among agencies in probing the scandal, acknowledged there had been some initial problems, but asserted they had since been corrected.

The general declined comment, however, on the possibility of immunity for one of the Marines.

The memo touched on Rich's concerns involving politics and the corps' image.

"A joint task force would take the focus off the Marine Corps as well as put some distance between them and the investigation-prosecution. Thus, we can begin to win public attitudes, which were not vigorously pursuing the cases. This may become more important if officer cases are developed."

The Marine Corps and Postings have said neither Marines are being questioned, but there have been no other espionage arrests.

At his news conference, the 56-year-old general complained about a "total disregard" in public attitudes, saying, "It is interesting to note that in almost every instance (of earlier spy cases), the focus has been on the individual, not the institution. In this case, however, it seems that just the opposite is true."

He also criticized Soviet statements "to degrade and humiliate" the corps, adding: "If they can do this to us, they can do it to the United States Marine Corps, then all of our previous institutions will be vulnerable to their slanderous attacks."

Charter helicopter pilot dies, game officers survive crash

CHALLIS (AP) — The pilot of a charter helicopter on an aerial big-brother survey early Friday in central Idaho's Frank Church-River of No Return Wildlife Preserve was killed when the plane crashed shortly after takeoff.

The pilot was not immediately identified, but was believed to be a Nevada charter service with contract operations in Boise.

Fish and Game Conservation Officer Gary Gadwa, 38, of Stanley, and regional wildlife biologist Mike Scott, 39, of Salmon were aboard the helicopter when it crashed Thursday evening. After surviving overnight, the two officers were in relatively good condition, Wilson said.

Officials were still trying to piece together details of the crash. But Scott said that before the craft went down he heard a loud pop and then saw pieces of the helicopter fall to the ground.

Wilson said Scott was treated for a separated shoulder and Gadwa for rib injuries. Pieces of the copter were found in steep, rocky terrain, authorities said, and the pitch of the slope where the craft came to rest was about 45 degrees.

After waiting through the night, Scott and Gadwa hiked 200 yards to the top of a ridge Friday morning and placed a silver sleeping bag on the ground to indicate their location, officials said.

"Gary Gadwa talked in that search craft," Wilson said. "He heard road traffic so he tuned in with his Handi-Talkie and guided it in."

A search for the helicopter was launched early Friday after it failed to return Thursday night to its home base at a backcountry air strip near Thomas Creek, some 10 miles from the crash site.

"Temperatures in that high-elevation territory plunged into the 20s Thursday night. The mercury hit 22 degrees in Stanley. But Wilson said, "These guys are always equipped. They had sleeping bags."

Charter-company spokesman Conrad Moreno said the survey work had been under way for the past week.

Symms will support Kansan

POCATELLO (AP) — Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, says although there is a number of good Republicans running for the party's presidential nomination next year, he will support Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan.

In a news conference here Friday, Symms said he would feel comfortable supporting several candidates, including Vice-President George Bush, former Nevada senator Paul Laxalt and Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y.

But he said Dole has the "time-tested experience" necessary to work well with Congress.

Symms also said he and Dole "share the same vision of America," and he defended Dole against doubts that the Kansan may not be conservative enough to wear the GOP mantle.

Jury returns guilty verdict

POCATELLO (AP) — A jury of six men and six women Friday found Miguel Acuna Romero guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the beating death of Pocatello businessman Robert Larry Thompson last October.

The jury deliberated less than six hours before reaching its verdict following a three-day trial.

Romero, 20, was charged along with Jerry Griffith, 17, in the death of Thompson, 40, who died of head injuries following an altercation on the night of Oct. 29, 1986, on a downtown Pocatello street.

Both were charged with first-degree murder and separate trials were scheduled. Griffith was held in the Power County jail in American Falls awaiting trial as an adult.

Tribal judge blocks contract

FORT HALL (AP) — A tribal judge at the Fort Hall Indian Reservation in eastern Idaho has issued an order forbidding the FMC Corp. from issuing a contract for electrical work.

The action comes in a running dispute over an Indian requirement for hiring quotas. FMC mines phosphate ore for its Pocatello plant at the Gay Mine on the reservation.

After a 4½-hour hearing on Friday, Acting Chief Tribal Judge Charles Lohab ruled that the tribes had authority over hiring, and issued a restraining order against FMC.

Stallings backs rights bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reps. Wayne Owens of Utah and Richard Stallings of Idaho have joined forces in co-sponsoring legislation that would shield parents and protect taxpayers' rights.

Owens spokesman Art Kingdom said Friday the measure is called the "Omnibus Taxpayers Bill of Rights Act."

The bill would impose due process requirements on the internal revenue service, he said.

In most cases, it would shift the burden of proof from the taxpayer to the Internal Revenue Service, Kingdom said.

He said the bill also would establish the office of ombudsman within the Department of Treasury and would provide for civil action against IRS employees.

Clothing seized to repay loan

REXBURG (AP) — Sweatshirts and pants manufactured at the North Pole Inc. factory in St. Anthony have been seized and will be sold to help repay a $260,000 loan from the city of St. Anthony to North Pole owner Ted Davis.

Jeff Summers, executive director of East-Central Idaho Development Company, which administers the city's revolving loan fund, said Thursday, "We have seized the inventory in Salt Lake City and are in the process of selling it."

The inventory was located at a silk-screening plant in Salt Lake City, but none of the clothing had been silk-screened, Summers said.

North Pole owner Ted Davis has been notified that the inventory would be seized and sold, Summers said. The clothing items, about 600 dozen sweatshirts or pants, are in storage in Salt Lake City.

Weiser refuses release time

WEISER (AP) — The Weiser School Board has narrowly rejected a request from the Mormon Church to allow students to be released from regularly scheduled study periods to attend religious classes.

Superintendent Tom Falash said the 3-2 vote by the board late Thursday was based on the issue of release time from school and not religion. The request would have affected only students at the high school.

Falash said the district schedules practice periods for various activities during the day and to have students released from school at those times would be disruptive.

The request for a release policy was made by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which wanted the opportunity to use study periods for seminary training of students.

Court rules in Nez Perce case

BOISE (AP) — The state of Idaho cannot try a Nez Perce Indian for aggravated battery committed on his 2-month-old daughter, the Idaho Supreme Court says, because the crime occurred on an Indian reservation and is covered only by federal laws.

But the court ruled unanimously Friday to uphold the conviction of Leonard Marek on a charge of felony injury to a child, a crime which the state can prosecute even though it occurred on a reservation.

Marek was charged in 1985 with injuring his daughter during an argument with his wife, an enrolled member of the Thlingit Tribe.

A jury convicted Marek of aggravated battery and felony injury to a child, and then Judge John Maynard ordered him to serve a fixed term of 15 years in prison.

Marek's appeal argued that aggravated battery is one of the crimes listed in the Major Crimes Act, a federal criminal law that law forbids state prosecution of offenses involving Indians and on an Indian reservation.

Attorney general gives his view of drinking age law, employment

BOISE (AP) — As far as state Attorney General Jim Jones is concerned, people who turned age 19 on or after last Saturday will not be able to buy or drink alcoholic beverages in Idaho.

But all persons age 19 may work in establishments which sell and serve alcohol, he added Friday.

Those who turned 19 on or before April 10 can legally buy and consume alcohol, he said.

Jones said his office has received numerous inquiries about the new drinking age law which went into effect last weekend. It raised Idaho's legal drinking age from 19 to 21, but granted "grandfather" rights to some 19- and 20-year-olds.

Those who were of legal age on the day before the change, April 10, can legally drink, Jones said.

"The new drinking age bill went into effect on April 11. Everyone who was 19 before that date is eligible to purchase and drink alcoholic beverages, as well as to visit establishments where such beverages are sold."

"Those who turn 19 after midnight on April 10 may not legally drink until they reach 21 years of age," he said.

He said the legislation specifically allows all 19-year-olds to lawfully sell, serve or dispense liquor, wine or

Hang glider pilot dies from injuries

POCATELLO (AP) — A Pocatello man has died of injuries suffered when his hang-glider slammed into the side of a mountain south of the city, authorities reported.

Police identified the victim as Darrell Gene Newsum, 21.

A witness said Newsum was apparently having problems steering and controlling his hang-glider when he slammed into the rocks in the Portneuf-Black Rock area on Thursday, police said.

Wreckage of small plane lies in ruins of house where one occupant was blown from shower.

Small plane hits house, kills pilot; 6 occupants of home escape blaze

PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — A small plane crashed into a house and exploded into flames Friday, killing the pilot, while six people in the house escaped, including one who was blown out of the shower, according to police and witnesses.

The pilot was dead at the scene in central Westchester County, said Gus Wagner, a Pleasantville fire dispatcher.

There were no other passengers aboard, said Federal Aviation Administration spokeswoman Kathleen Bergen.

"It hit like an earthquake, and then it was a double explosion," said a neighbor, Helen Ochs.

The twin-engine Beech Baron aircraft, flying from Syracuse, crashed about five miles northwest of the Westchester County Airport, its destination, Ms. Bergen said.

In his house were Robert Fischetti, 20; his mother, Teresa; his 14-year-old sister, Tracey; and three friends, Daniel Russo, 19, Keith Brockstedt, 18, and Michael Gallo, also 18, said Pleasantville Police Chief Joseph Davi.

"Something came through the roof, and at first we thought it was a tree," said Brockstedt. "Then we just ran."

Fischetti was in the shower when the plane struck and was blown out of it on impact, said Russo, who said he pulled the injured man out of the house.

Fischetti was in satisfactory condition in the burn unit at Westchester County Medical Center, a hospital official said.

Mrs. Fischetti was treated for a minor injury at the medical center and released; the others were unhurt, the official said.

The 2½-story house was gutted, and a fire burned in the rubble for two hours after the crash.

Michael Coley, who lives across the street, said he looked up seconds after the plane hit.

"I rushed to the front door . . . then we heard an explosion and saw the house across the street just light up. Then I saw a little girl leave the house.

"A second later, it seemed to me, I saw someone drive a car very quickly out of the driveway, possibly to get the car away from the house. A second later, another very large explosion just wiped out the house, just lit it up — burnt it to cinders."

Probers read over papers for ties to Contra supply net

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators have checked documents found on a plane confiscated by drug agents in Florida to see if they shed light on the private supply network that helped the Nicaraguan Contras, a source said Friday.

Reams of documents, including diaries, maps and manifests, were discovered on the DC-4 cargo plane that was seized by the Drug Enforcement Administration in Charlotte County, Fla., on March 24, federal and local officials said.

"There are some military-associated items" on the plane, which was rigged for dropping materials from the air, according to Detective Ron Bellomy — of the Charlotte County Sheriff's office.

The documents indicate deliveries of military items to Honduras, and they also name passengers, including Mario Calero, the brother of Contra leader Adolfo Calero.

Investigators from a special Senate committee investigating the Iran-Contra affair have looked at some documents but have not reached any conclusions about them, according to a staff member who asked that he remain anonymous.

Jack Hook, a Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman in Miami, said authorities believe the plane was "purchased with drug money for the intent of smuggling drugs." Authorities have been looking for the plane in connection with drug arrests that resulted in the indictments of 18 people in April 1985, he said.

Hook said the pilot of the plane, Frank Moss, also says he is the owner but has not produced records.

necessary to prove ownership. Moss, of Port Charlotte, Fla., has denied having links to drug smuggling or to Contra rebels fighting the government in Nicaragua, according to the Fort Myers, Fla., News-Press.

Mario Calero, who runs a Contra supply network from his office in New Orleans, said Friday that he contracted with Moss' company, Hondu-Carb Cargo Inc., in 1984 and 1985 to deliver humanitarian aid to the Contras.

But he said the plane he used carried tail number N90201, while the plane under DEA's control has tail number N67029, according to Bellomy.

The confiscated plane's documents, seen by The Associated Press, indicate that Moss' company, which was based in Georgetown, Grand Caymans, had more than one airplane, as Calero suggested.

Asked why records from planes with tail numbers N90201 and N67029 would be found on the same plane, Calero said, "They used their planes as offices."

One document — a Customs Service declaration — indicated that plane N90201 flew from New Orleans to Tegucigalpa, Honduras on March 25, 1985, loaded with "relief goods and supplies."

Next to the words Hondu-Carb was the name Mario Calero, who was listed as the operator. Moss was the pilot.

Another person who said he contacted with Moss was James McCoy, a former U.S. military attaché in Nicaragua and now an officer of an international arms company in Miami, R-M Equipment Inc.

McCoy, a friend of Adolfo Calero, said his company received State Department permission in February 1985 to ship rifle magazines and tripods to the Honduran Army.

A shipper's export declaration found among documents on the Florida plane indicated the items sent to Honduras by McCoy's company included 25 boxes of magazines, weighing 6,000 pounds.

The equipment was for the Honduran government, not for the Contras, according to earlier published reports.

R-M Equipment has, however, arranged for the sale of weapons to the Contras, according to earlier published reports.

Evangelist scandals just publicity

MADALYN MURRAY O'HAIR Denounces attention play

DENVER (AP) — Altheist leader Madalyn Murray O'Hair says she believes the recent scandal involving television evangelists was a "ploy to grab media attention."

"You no longer have to watch 'Dynasty' and 'Dallas,'" O'Hair said during a news conference held as the 17th Annual National American Altheists Convention began here.

"You have the real live thing in PTL."

Jim Bakker resigned as head of PTL ministries last month after he revealed that he was involved in a sexual indiscretion several years ago.

As the founder of the National American Altheists spoke at the gathering inside the Radisson Hotel, a handful of pickets marched outside, carrying signs that read "There is No Peace Without Jesus."

The three-day convention during the Easter holiday weekend will get into full swing Saturday with the Altheist Pride March Assembly from the hotel to the state Capitol.

Speakers scheduled to address the assembly include Isaac Hasson, founder of the Israel Secular Humanist Association; Dr. Gregory Faby, who has researched life extension techniques; Arthur Frederick Ide, who will speak on the evangelical Christian mind; and author Michael Parenti.

O'Hair's son Bill, a born-again Christian, also is in Denver this weekend, along with other Christian ministries on witnessing to the altheist convention.

O'Hair, 68, became famous in 1963 when she won a Supreme Court case to have organized prayer and Bible reading banned from public schools.

Penn State heart works for 397 days

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — The second recipient of the Penn State heart died Friday after 397 days of being sustained by the artificial heart, doctors at the Milton S. Hershey Medical Center said.

Robert Cresswell, 49, a man in a respiratory arrest at 8:55 a.m., they said.

Cresswell's wife, Faith, said she was with her husband in their apartment at the hospital Friday morning.

Just last month, on the first anniversary of the operation, Dr. William S. Pierce, director of Hershey's artificial organ program, said Cresswell was "truly into uncharted waters" because not even test animals had been kept alive as long as one year on the Penn State heart.

The heart, which Pierce designed, is named for Penn State University, with which the Hershey Medical Center is affiliated.

Entertainer Gleason, 71, enters hospital for yearly check

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Entertainer Jackie Gleason was undergoing his annual examination at Broward General Hospital Friday, his secretary said Friday.

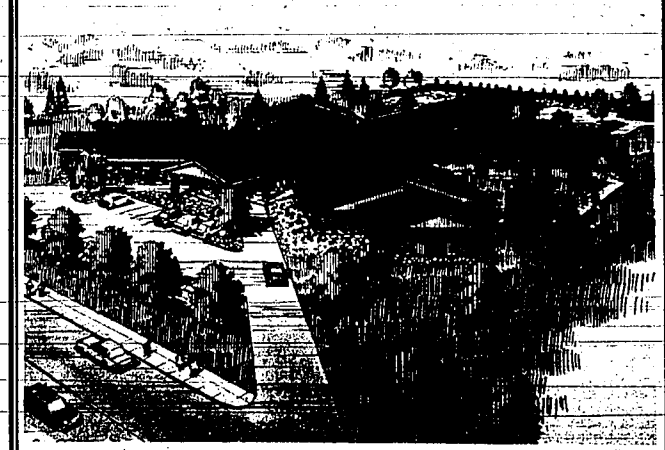

"Jackie's just in for his routine checkup," said Sydell Spear. "They were giving him routine tests today. I imagine he should be out after the weekend."

Spear said Gleason, 71, has been undergoing annual examinations since he had open-heart surgery a decade ago.

Ms. Spear said she had just talked with Gleason's wife, who reported he has no current medical problems.

Gleason is best known for his "Honeymooners" television show, reruns of which are still broadcast in many areas. He has no current projects, Ms. Spear said.

Tass criticizes NATO reaction to arms control proposals

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said Secretary of State George P. Shultz, in a briefing commentary that singled out Friday for special criticism, Tass said the North Atlantic Treaty Organization as a whole had backedpedaled on earlier proposals for the elimination of medium-range missiles from Europe.

"It appears that whenever the Soviet Union speaks closer to the stand of the NATO countries on disarmament, the Western leaders take a step back from their own proposals," the commentary, written by military writer Vladimir Bogachyov, said.

In a related development, Tass quoted Shultz's meeting with the NATO allies in Brussels Thursday to brief them on the latest Soviet proposals, but he said there would be no "instant response" from the West.

In Frankfurt, West German Defense Minister Manfred Woerner was quoted Friday as saying Western Europe could not give up nuclear weapons until it reached a balance in conventional forces with the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact.

Woerner, in an interview with the Bild newspaper, said the greatest danger to European security came from the Warsaw Pact's superiority in non-nuclear forces.

"The Soviets have to reduce (their strength) in this area," he said. "As long as there is no balance in conventional forces, then we cannot fully give up nuclear weapons."

British Foreign Secretary Geoffrey Howe, after the Brussels meeting, spoke about Soviet advantages in conventional and chemical forces.

President Reagan, on vacation in California, spoke hopefully of a U.S.-Soviet arms control accord by year's end.

Thousands of student protesters battle South Korean riot police

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of students fought with riot police Friday on campus demonstrations against the government's freeze on election reforms.

Some reports indicated students were throwing rocks and gasoline bombs, and police responded with tear gas.

No official statements on the campus unrest were made, but news reports indicated about 15,000 students were involved nationwide at 40 universities and colleges, including 16 campuses in Seoul.

Most of the violence broke out after observances marking Monday's anniversary of the April 19, 1980, student riots that led to the downfall of the government of the late President Syngman Rhee.

In Seoul, sources at various campuses reported a total of 23 students were injured.

At Sogang University in Seoul, riot police firing tear gas moved into the campus and dispersed about 1,000 demonstrators who threw stones and gasoline bombs, newspaper reports said.

Witnesses said about 2,600 students held a rally at Korea University in Seoul. Then, throwing firebombs about 1,500 students engaged in violent clashes for two hours with about 1,000 police at the campus gate, according to the witnesses, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

President Chun Doo-hwan on Monday announced a halt to debate on changing the constitution until after the current electoral college system picks his successor next year. South Korea next year will also host the 1988 Summer Olympics.

Chun, a former general, took power in a 1980 military coup. He was elected to a seven-year presidential term in 1981 by the electoral college he established.

Critics have been demanding a direct popular presidential election.

Chun's term ends in February, and the country has been debating changes in the election system. Chun has said he will step down when his term expires.

Argentine soldiers surrender

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The government reported the surrender Friday of 130 soldiers who rebelled at a northern camp demanding amnesty for officers accused of torture and killing in 1970s "dirty war" against leftists.

Officials also said troops cleared the streets around an infantry school at the Campo de Mayo army base in suburban Buenos Aires and cut off water and electricity.

An army lieutenant colonel there was dismissed earlier in the day for inciting cadets to join the rebellion and eight of his subordinates were arrested in northern Argentina.

About 500 people shouting "Long Live Democracy!" cheered when soldiers entered the school to make sure no threat remained there.

Unconfirmed reports said Ernesto Barreiro, the rebel major who led the mutineers, took refuge at a "foreign consulate" in Cordoba, six miles from the rebel camp.

No one was injured in either the rebellion or the surrender, the government said.

"The situation in Cordoba is absolutely normal," Defense Minister Jose Horacio Jaunarena said.

President Raul Alfonsin had put the army on alert Friday and his government had begun preparing a bill for Congress that would impose a state of siege, restricting the right of assembly and allowing arrests without warrant.

Alfonsin met for hours with the army's five corps commanders.

About 150,000 people went into the streets of Buenos Aires to show support for Alfonsin and his civilian government. Jaunarena said this demonstrated "one more time that the people in a clear call want to live under democracy and a state of rights."

Report on Chernobyl births upbeat

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet doctors found no radiation-linked abnormalities in babies born to women who lived near the Chernobyl nuclear power complex during last year's accident, the Tass news agency reported Friday.

As a result, women "can be told with confidence today that there is no reason whatsoever to terminate pregnancy" if they were living near Chernobyl when the accident occurred on April 26, 1986, the officials said.

The article, written by a Tass correspondent in Kiev, addressed fears that babies born to women living within the 18-mile danger zone around the nuclear power complex would be affected by the cloud of radiation that was spewed out by the plant as it burned.

"Luckily, the theoretical forecasts turned out to be more fearsome than reality," Tass quoted the director of a Kiev maternity center, Yelena Lukyanova, as saying.

Thirty-one people died in the accident, according to Soviet officials, and thousands of Soviets face the fear of cancer because of the radiation release.

All residents were evacuated from the danger zone, which extended from the northern Ukraine into southern Byelorussia.

Tass said specialists from the Kiev maternity center have checked 2,580 women in various stages of pregnancy. It said 457 women and 375 newborns were examined at the center's clinics, while others were checked by traveling teams.

"No changes were detected in them," Lukyanova said by consequence of the breakdown at the atomic power station," Tass said.

Tass did not say whether every newborn from the danger zone had been examined in the past year. But it said of those examined, no abnormalities linked to radioactivity had been found.

U.S. wants bans on Asian missiles

BEIJING (AP) — The United States wants a total ban on Soviet medium-range missiles in Asia and Moscow's proposal of a reduction to 100 is acceptable only on an interim basis, President Reagan's senior arms control adviser said Friday.

Edward L. Rowley, here to brief Chinese leaders on Secretary of State George Shultz's visit to Moscow, said Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev talked with Shultz about eliminating intermediate-range nuclear missiles only in Europe.

"It's ambiguous what happens in Asia and we don't like that ambiguity and want to clean this up," Rowley said at a news conference.

"We have pressed them very hard, saying that we prefer a zero INF solution. We don't see why there should be 100 remaining. They insist that there be 100 remaining. We insist it's an interim step. We don't see that as the end of the line," he said.

China and Japan repeatedly have expressed concern about the Soviet force of SS-20, intermediate-range missiles in Soviet Asia, and have said the elimination of such weapons in Europe should be accompanied by similar disarmament there.

Rowley said the United States hopes to begin negotiations on the remaining 100 missiles within six months. The Soviets have proposed that the United States also keep 100 medium-range missiles on its continental territory.

"But if we could reduce the 1,300 odd Soviet SS-20 warheads down to 100, a reduction of some 1,200, this would greatly enhance the security in Europe and in Asia and reduce to 20 percent the number of SS-20s in Asia," he added.

Rowley also spoke of a need to tie reduction of intermediate-range missiles to cuts in short-range nuclear forces and conventional forces.

Mount Etna erupts

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Ashes, gases and tons of rocks shot from Mount Etna and showered tourists near the snow-covered summit of Europe's tallest volcano Friday, killing an 8-year-old boy and his mother, officials reported.

The eruption injured seven others in the group of 30 French, Italian and German tourists, but none was in serious condition, said police in this city on Sicily's eastern coast. The two killed were French.

Rescue workers are to drive over snow-covered trails to reach the group. Helicopters were unable to land because of heavy fog.

EASTER ISLAND
Q: Easter Island in the South Pacific has no streams, yet people have lived there thousands of years. Where do they get fresh water?

A: From three volcanic crater lakes. It's a study, that place. There's writing on relics nobody can read, stone statues nobody knows who carved, a history of cannibalism, all sorts of stuff.

Q: Why is it harder for a dentist to extract lower teeth than upper teeth?

A: The jawbone is the hardest bone in the body.

Widespread long ago was the belief that a jolting ride was good for the liver. And a contraction of "for the liver" turned into a nickname for the old Model T Ford — "liver!" Or so the word researchers think.

LEO (July 23 to August 21): You have a good opportunity to express your finest talents now. Good friends will go along with your ideas today.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Be sure to keep any promises you have made. Your mate has a plan for you, but it needs modification.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 23): Strive directly to associate your most progressive ideas and they will back you quickly.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You find a novel way of handling a property affair. Later you get the financial aid of good friends.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Be more enthused about an intimate matter and you find the right way to handle it successfully.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Get your thoughts better organized. Handle your personal affairs and then make plans with your mate.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Discuss with a good friend that strange wish you have, but later devote your time to your mate.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Get started on making a fine impression on a prominent person. Don't neglect public and credit matters.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have all kinds of fascinating and advanced ideas and will articulate them very well. It would be wise to give as comprehensive a course of education as possible. Upon reaching adulthood, your progeny will become very businesslike and successful.

Wilbur pick to be nation's poet laureate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Wilbur, who has a Pulitzer Prize among other honors, was named Friday as Poet Laureate of the United States. He succeeds Robert Penn Warren.

"He is a poet for us all, whose elegant words brim with wit and paradox," said Daniel J. Boorstin, the librarian of Congress, who appointed Wilbur.

"He is also a poet's poet — a cosmopolitan citizen of the world of letters," Boorstin said. "His poems are among the best our country has to offer."

Wilbur, 66, was born in New York, reared in New Jersey and educated at Amherst College and Harvard University. He is the second poet laureate, a title created in 1985 as a successor to the post of consultant in poetry.

In a 1985 book, "Attitudes: Things of this World," Wilbur wrote: his poem to the Library of Congress, which is distinguished by a 160-foot high dome:

Look up into the dome:
It is a great salon, a brilliant place,
Yet not too splendid for the race
Whom we imagine there, wholly at home.

Foundation fellowships. He was president of the American Academy of Arts and Letters in 1974-1976.

The new poet laureate is well known, too, as a critic and translator. He translated Moliere's "Le Misanthrope" in 1952 and the Moliere's "Tartuffe" in 1962. Both were produced in New York. He was the lyricist for Leonard Bernstein's musical "Candide."

Wilbur's first book of poetry, "The Beautiful Changes," was published in 1947. His third book, from which the poem about the Library of Congress was taken, won the Pulitzer and National Book awards. He received the Bollingen prize for poetry in 1971 and has held Guggenheim and Ford Foundation fellowships. He will take over his new job, which pays $35,000 a year, in September.

Carlson resigns as bank manager at Idaho First

Wins partnership with Aurora Capital
By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Clyde N. "Barney" Carlson, a prominent Twin Falls banker and former president of the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, will leave the city this summer to become one of three top officers for Aurora Capital Group, a Colorado investment firm.

Carlson, 44, resigned Thursday as manager of the downtown Twin Falls office of Idaho First National Bank, after 22 years with the institution and its local predecessor Fidelity National Bank. The resignation is likely to take effect some time this summer.

Carlson will become co-general partner and chief financial officer for a limited partnership formed to oversee operations of rapidly expanding Aurora Capital Corp.

Marc Peperzak, Aurora Capital president, moved the agricultural investments company from Twin Falls to Boulder, Colo., last year to take advantage of fluid milk markets. The company operates dairies and develops real estate.

"In many ways, we are like a private bank ourselves," Peperzak said. "A lot of his bank training is perfect for what we want to do."

Carlson will join Peperzak and John Baxter, former president of

The Boise Co., in Aurora Capital Group. In Twin Falls, Carlson and Peperzak were two of the founding members of the Magic Valley Ag Institute, a non-profit group formed to boost the farm economy in the area.

Carlson will manage the financial affairs of Aurora Capital and its array of affiliates. "I feel that the opportunity that has been presented to me by Marc Peperzak and Aurora Capital Group is one that only comes along once in a great while," he said. "It involves an equity stake in the partnership, along with other incentives."

Carlson is well-known in both business and community circles in Twin Falls.

He was 1985 president of the Chamber of Commerce and served Dianne Pierce, Idaho First on its board of directors for five years. He currently is president of the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Foundation, and a director for Region IV Development Corp.

Carlson also chaired the "Save The Y" fund-raising campaign in 1981 and continues as one of three trustees for the YFCA's trust funds.

A Twin Falls native, Carlson started in banking with Fidelity National Bank in Buhl as a manager-trainer. He was working at the Filer branch when the bank was purchased by Idaho First. He managed the bank's branches at Filer, Rupert and Buhl before coming to Twin Falls six years ago.

"He has been an asset to Idaho First for almost 22 years," said Chamber of Commerce spokeswoman. "He'll be very hard to replace." The bank has begun seeking a replacement, she said.

Based in Twin Falls from 1976-1986, Aurora Capital owns and develops dairies in the U.S. and abroad. It is building a 7,500-cow operation in Texas and is cooperating in a large dairy in Pakistan.

The company also manages six large dairies for various outside investors. Three in the Magic Valley received the federal government's biggest payment, $9.9 million, to go out of business in the whole-herd dairy buyout program.

Aurora Capital also develops housing subdivisions, mobile home parks and other real estate ventures.

Carlson said he and Peperzak talked several months about an offer.

Gas prices are lower than last Easter's

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — While Idahoans traveling over the Easter weekend will pay slightly higher prices than they did over Christmas, the cost of gas is less than last year's Easter vacation, according to figures provided by the American Automobile Association.

Idaho's average price of gasoline rose a scant 3 cents per gallon since Christmas. Last year's Easter prices were 5 cents per gallon higher than this year's.

Magic Valley residents will get lower prices if they drive somewhere else. Magic Valley's average price is 13.2 cents higher than the Idaho average and 3.4 cents more than the national average.

The average price for 20 stations surveyed in the Magic Valley area and Ketchum was $1.088 per gallon. The average for Idaho was 96.5 cents per gallon.

But Idaho's average price was almost 4 percent less than the national average of 99.4 cents per gallon.

Nationwide, retail gas prices rose an average of 1.5 cents per gallon since December. This Easter's prices are the highest since July 4, 1986.

To take advantage of the lowest prices in the nation, a transcon lineal drive to New Jersey would be necessary. New Jersey recorded the lowest statewide average — 85.6 cents per gallon.

Economist resurrects water use arguments

MOSCOW, IAP — While southern Idaho farmers look for ways to cope with a looming summer water shortage, a University of Idaho agricultural economist has revived the debate over whether irrigators should curtail use in low-water years.

"Agriculture's use of irrigation water would be changed very little while creating a considerable amount of excess value in the hydropower sector," says Joel Hamilton.

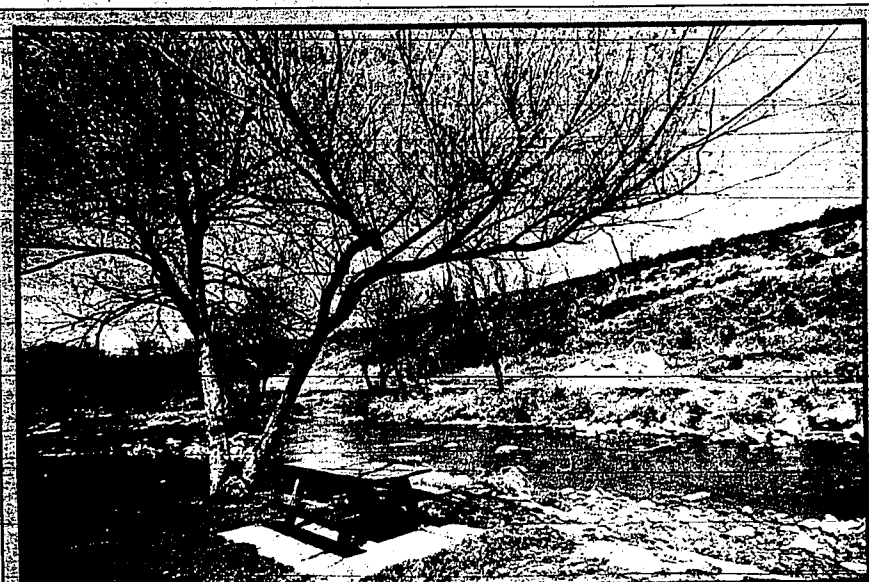

Hamilton, working with two researchers from Washington State University, studied the comparative value of water in irrigation and power generation and concluded that in low-run-off years like 1987 water is substantially more valuable as an energy source than for agricultural production.

Based on that, he has added his voice to those suggesting that utilities be allowed to pay farmers not to use their allotted irrigation supplies so the water is available to generate electricity.

Water marketing has been suggested by various officials, including former Gov. John Evans, over the past several years, but a number of major problems would have to be solved before an actual marketing system could be put in place.

Still, Hamilton contends that if power companies know they have aial customers, know their power supply will not be curtailed, without some guarantees, he pointed out, power companies have no choice but to cut the price they charge for interruptible power, and that reduction in revenues could ultimately be felt in consumer bills.

"I'm saying farmers, forcing severe financial losses from the potential drought, Hamilton said a system allowing them to sell at least some of their irrigation water power companies offers an alternative source of stable income that could ease the impact of drought-reduced crops.

Plans for Rock Creek Park include bridge, 10 tables

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County officials are working to make Rock Creek Park bigger and better.

Plans for an additional park land are over, and construction previously bid and let is expected to begin shortly. Within two years, a federal grant and local matching funds are expected to help establish a bridge across the creek, greener pastures on the other side and 10 picnic tables for patrons to enjoy.

"We've had a long time thinking about this, and now it's in the hands of the contractor," said Darrell Helder, the county parks and recreation director. "And we're really pleased with it."

"I'm pleased in the worst of the ways," said John Eakin, a manager of the Twin Falls Canal

Co., which donated nine acres of land across from Rock Creek Park for the county's use.

The canal company gave the land to the county in February, after four months of negotiations. The parks advisory committee ultimately paid the canal company $5,000 in private donations to cover half the flooding easement in the land.

The canal company still holds the flood easement on the lands, Helder said.

"It was strictly that we thought giving them the land was quite a generous gesture," Eakin said. "So now that everything is settled, technically gave 9 acres to the county, only about four of it is flat land, Helder said. That land will complement the park, which is now about five acres, he said.

An open space on the north side of the creek is expected to be used for camping, Helder said. But, first, sprinklers will have to be installed to keep the area green, he said.

Picnic tables will also be installed, and a trail will be developed leading around the land that includes a tall ridge of rock jutting up from the creek.

"The parks director said completing all the work within the two-year limit on the grant will be difficult, but that it will proceed quickly now. Delays since receiving the grant Oct. 5 revolved around actually getting the land, which the grant required, Helder said.

"A contractor is expected to begin $1,000-plus worth of paid work on bridge abutments, Helder said. Two bridges, one for pedestrians and one for cars, will cross Rock Creek from the south side park to the new, northern addition.

Irrigation outlook optimistic

Despite Thursday's landslide, other pumps can handle load

HAGERMAN — Bell Rapids Mutual Irrigation Company officials and irrigators were optimistic Friday that the company will be able to meet irrigation needs this summer despite the loss of one of the company's three pumping stations in a landslide Thursday.

"We're optimistic, but we're optimistic," said company manager Ken Strickler Friday afternoon in describing about $1.5 million in damages resulting from the slide that destroyed the firm's No. 1 pumping station, on the west bank of the Snake River, on Thursday.

The site is downstream from Upper Salmon Falls Dam and within the Hagerman Fossil Beds, a national landmark.

Strickler said the No. 2 station, 5 miles downriver, and the No. 3 station, an open-irrigation system, should be adequate, he said. "With some modifications, we should be able to meet the needs."

The modifications might include another pumping station, above the site, he said. The irrigation company will not be able to do all the modification work itself and will have to hire subcontractors. He had no figures on what modifications would cost.

more pumping capacity than No. 1, he said.

Approximately 80 shareholders are served by the 15-year-old system, which gets its name from the portion of the river from which it draws water.

The tract is desert entry land; without the water, the tract would be useless for growing.

The irrigation company provides water for about 36,000 acres of land under cultivation in the area.

Strickler said that the system should be repaired to meet demand of its shareholders by the end of May or first part of June, the critical time for irrigators.

"There is no chance that the No. 1 station will be back in service this year," Strickler said. "That's mountain's unstable. It's difficult to get in there."

Strickler declined to say whether the losses were covered by insurance. He said the irrigation company will not be able to do all the modification work itself and will have to hire subcontractors. He had no figures on what modifications would cost.

The No. 1 pump structure was knocked apart by a massive landslide that also pushed over an electric power transmission pole, snapped several hundred feet of pipeline and buried two pickup trucks parked at the station.

A torrent of water accompanied the slide, as water pumped into the irrigation system flowed back out downhill. The flow continued for 2 or 3 hours, Strickler said.

The power interruption also knocked out the other pumping station temporarily on Thursday, but it went back into service as soon as power was restored, Strickler said.

Strickler was unable to say what caused the slide, which occurred shortly after noon, but he dismissed rumors that there had been a leak in the pipeline that was destroyed by the slide, or that there had been seepage from the canal system. "We feel that our pipeline was not leaking," he said.

The soil in the cliffs area above the pumping station is unstable, Strickler said, and another slide had occurred southwest of that site last year.

Because of the danger of another slide, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management and the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department were warning people to stay away from the immediate area. A police vehicle guarded one entrance to the site Friday afternoon and another entrance was blocked with a "road closed" sign.

"We've had problems with people disregarding the barricades," Deputy Steve Butting told The Times-News on Friday afternoon.

More barricades are being erected to keep onlookers away from the site, near U.S. Highway 30, 3 miles west of Hagerman.

Noting that the site can be viewed from a nearby boat dock, onlookers are being asked to stay completely away from the west side of the river.

Officials from the state Bureau of Water Quality and the state Division of Environment were at the scene Friday, assessing damage from about a dozen 55-gallon oil drums that were swept into the river from the slide.

The state Department of Fish & Game and DOE pulled the drums, containing lubricating oil, from the river Thursday night, said Tim Little of DOE.

Politicos reevaluate progress of session

By JANE ROBISON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Although legislators continue to praise the 1987 legislative session as one of the best, three local lawmakers revealed minor quins and some political differences during a post-legislative appraisal session on Thursday.

"Hopefully, we haven't done too much to harm the economy," said State Rep. Jerry Callen, R-Jerome, who opposed a tax increase. "But, tax-wise, I'm not sure we did this state a service."

State Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, also was uneasy about the state of the state, especially the future of agriculture.

"We can solicit new business all we want, but until we find solutions to the long-term problems facing agriculture, we're going to be in a world of hurt," the Carey rancher said during a meeting of the Sawtooth Press Club.

He also could not resist chiding his GOP colleagues for the battle over the investment tax credit.

Peavey blamed the fight over repealing the ITC on Sen. Jim Risch, R-Boise.

"Risch started it off with negative comments, which were premature," Peavey said. "It was political posturing, and it prolonged the session."

Peavey said repealing the ITC was the "obvious place to get defense."

"Jumping to Risch's defense was State Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, who laid the fight over the ITC squarely at the feet of Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Noh said Risch was motivated to take a stand against repealing the ITC after Andrus singled out the Potlatch Corp., which contributed to David Leroy's campaign for governor.

"The governor chose to single out Potlatch, but he didn't single out Idaho Power, who supported him in his campaign," Noh said.

Idaho Power Company also was a major user of the ITC.

Noh said he would not have been responsible to let the governor get away with that, Noh said.

Noh also was mildly critical of the House for its handling of the education appropriation.

Noh, a longtime advocate of the teacher career ladder program, said the House could have established a career ladder program this year, but failed to do so.

And Noh warned that the state is not taking a hard enough look at the proposed takeover of Utah Power & Light's service area in eastern Idaho by Idaho Power Co.

"It has the potential to raise electricity rates on the rest of Idaho Power's service area," Noh warned. "We need to take a hard look at that proposal."

But Noh was pleased with his successful efforts to begin a thorough study of the accounting system of extra-curricular programs and a study to evaluate certification standards for school administrators. Two legislative committees will be appointed to conduct both studies.

Despite those proposed studies, Callen said the Legislature "missed a great opportunity for accountability."

"We gave (accountability) lip service," Callen said.

But Callen, Noh and Peavey all called the past session one of the most productive in years.

"The things that did happen have been a long time coming," Peavey said. "Most people should be proud."

British Parliament member stresses freedom's importance to BYU students

PROVO, Utah (AP) - British statesman-Rhodes-Boysen-Friday challenged spring graduates of Brigham Young University to make it their mission to defend freedom morally, economically and militarily.

Speaking at the Mormon Church-owned school's 12th commencement, the member of Parliament said BYU graduates should strive to "make America worthy of your aid and our trust in her."

"You must play your part in the continued battle for the soul, the destiny and the freedom of men and women everywhere," said Boysen, who received an honorary doctor of humanities from the school.

Thomas S. Monson, second counselor to the First Presidency of the Mormon Church and vice chairman of the BYU board of trustees' executive committee, conducted the services and offered concluding remarks.

"Go forward, look upward. Move onward, and rise heavenward," he told the 2,843 students receiving undergraduate and graduate degrees. "My advice today is to take the bold plan, live noble, move onward, and never hesitate or take counsel from your fears."

"Let us so live that future generations can look upon our achievements and say, 'Look, they did this for us,'" Monson said.

Those receiving diplomas represented all 50 states and 45 foreign countries. The total was an increase of 4 percent from the April 1966 commencement. The 1,340 students awarded BYU degrees in December also were invited to participate Friday.

Boysen represents the Brent North area in Britain's House of Commons and is minister of state for local government for Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's conservative government. He previously served five years as minister of higher education, minister for schools, minister for social security and deputy secretary for Northern Ireland.

A Methodist lay preacher since the age of 17 and a lecturer at BYU in 1975 and 1982, Boysen told students that a free society should be based on the family, the study of past societies, law and order based on respect for religious and natural law, honesty, religious and political freedoms, the preservation of property, and the distrust of big government.

He also said people should reject the notions that democracy can by itself preserve the free society, and that of equality as opposed to the concept of equality of opportunity.

"Yet we are surrounded, and have been in history, by false prophets who promote economic and political creeds that will solve all man's problems: the communists, socialists, national socialists, fanatics, reconstructionists who promise a better world and then imprison men and women in an end of history socialism, which is a living hell," Boysen said.

"I would also oppose the secular humanism, which often seems to be value-free and neutral and whose attractiveness is that it is fashionable. There must be a clear difference between good and evil," he said. "Churchill said, we cannot be neutral between the fireman and the fire," he said.

In his remarks, BYU President Holland advised students to "take pride in your accomplishments and take the future with a smile."

"There are a lot of problems in the world, and good people have to deal with them," he said. "I would like to leave here today optimistic about life and its challenges," he said.

Area woman sues Sears after falling - TWIN FALLS - A Twin Falls woman is suing Sears, Roebuck and Co. for $300,000 in general damages, legal costs and unspecified special damages for injuries she suffered after slipping on the ice on the store's parking lot.

Ruth K. Jones said she suffered a fractured left hip and other injuries resulting from a fall on the parking lot of the store, at 403 Main Ave. W., on Jan. 2, 1967.

The lawsuit, filed Friday, says Sears was negligent in not removing the ice from the parking lot or posting warning signs.

In addition to general damages of $300,000, Jones is asking for special damages to cover the costs of medical, nursing, therapeutic and other treatment expenses, the cost of extra assistance for help in the home, legal fees, and for other and further relief to which the court finds the plaintiff justly entitled.

The Buhl law firm of Herworth, Nussbaum, Pettibone and Lamiz is handling the lawsuit for Jones.

Decker: Protestants lacking information

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon Church critic Ed Decker, whose films and books have attacked Mormonism as a non-Christian cult, says protestant congregations have lost interest in his crusade to prove the Utah-based church poses a threat to Christianity.

"I am meaning that the (protestant) church needs to be a little more aware of what's going on in the flock," Decker said.

But ministers in Utah say Decker's confrontational approach to Mormonism is too aggressive, at least for congregations — in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints' homeland.

"Our style of ministry is different than 'Save Us From Satan,'" said Pastor Angus McDonald of the Evangelical Free Church in Salt Lake City and spokesman for the Evangelical Ministerial Alliance, a loosely knit group of protestant ministers in the Salt Lake area.

"We found that working on our own works better," he said.

In a recent Saints Alive newsletter, Decker complained that booklets for his films "The God Makers" and "Temple of the God Makers" have all but stopped.

He also pleaded for contributions from his readers.

"We urgently need our financial support base to grow if we are to continue standing on the wall, shouting the warning cry," he said.

During the early and mid 1980s, Decker's films "The God Makers" and "Temple of the God Makers," which detailed Mormon temple activities, drew sellout audiences in hundreds of protestant congregations. Some 500,000 copies of the book version of "The God Makers" have been distributed, he said.

"Quite frankly, I think the churches have gone on to other things. You can only show a movie so many thousands of times," Decker said in an interview from Saints Alive's headquarters in Issaquah, Wash.

By showing his films and speaking to protestant congregations, Decker hopes to stop people from joining the Mormon Church. He contends that his efforts helped curtail Mormon missionary efforts, citing a drop in baptism from a record-high 224,000 in 1982 to less than 200,000 in 1985.

Mormon officials attributed the decline to church decision to reduce the length of service of its male missionaries, who comprise most of the force, from two years to 18 months. The church later boasted the length of missions back to two years, and now has nearly 33,000 missionaries serving full-time centers.

Since 1983 the number of converts has been on a steady rise, according to church statistics. In 1986 the church reported its highest number of convert baptisms since 1982, with 216,210 people joining.

Decker asserts Mormon doctrine is non-Christian because they believe mortals may become like God. In his writings, he also accuses the church of breaking up families by alienating spouse and children who are not members of the faith.

McDonald said protestant ministers were trying to continue Decker's effort to dissuade both potential converts and members of the Mormon Church alike to forsake the religion. But he said most congregations in Utah preferred a softer approach.

He said Decker's films still are being used widely in other areas of the country.

Timothy Oliver, a professional missionary who teaches courses on proselytizing Mormons, said a friendlier approach than "Saints Alive" is needed.

"It's not so much anybody has rejected Saints Alive," he said. "However abusive it may appear, they're going to stay with love for (the Mormon) people."

Decker said Saints Alive is in good financial shape despite the newsletter's request for donations. He said the organization is paying its bills, and is in solid enough shape to sell videotape copies of "The God Makers" and "Temple of the God Makers" to Utah buyers at cost.

Meanwhile, Decker said he has formed a new ministry targeting masonic organizations, which he contends are rooted in the occult.

His interest in freemasonry is an outshoot from his studies of Mormonism. He said he found his sermons on Mormon temple practices drew the fire of masons as well as Mormons. Since the early days of the church, critics have argued that the Masonic temple ceremonies duplicate masonic temple rituals.

Temples are reserved for such rites as marriage and baptisms for ancestors and deceased relatives who were not Mormon.

JERUSALEM (AP) — Pilgrims singing hymns and carrying wooden crosses on Good Friday retraced the route Jesus walked from the hall in which Pontius Pilate pronounced the death sentence to Calvary, the site of his crucifixion.

Squads of Israeli soldiers with automatic rifles and radios patrolled the cobblestone streets of Old Jerusalem—near the Via Dolorosa, the road of suffering—as the thousands of Christians passed.

Officials said the city's 7,000 hotel rooms were fully booked for Holy Week, which coincided this year with the week-long Jewish Passover that ends Monday evening.

Pilgrims from a dozen countries wound past the 14 Stations of the Cross that commemorate events on Christ's walk to Calvary.

"We are walking in the footsteps of Jesus because he paid the price for us to be free. All these people are here to share in the joy of his resurrection," said Mary-Ann Hinger of Anaheim, Calif.

Robert Schuster, a toy maker from Kalamazoo, Mich., said there was a "something in the air" that is more than being in a crowd of people.

The Rev. Joe Conden of Germantown College near Dublin, Ireland, said the atmosphere of the old-walled city was important to understanding the story of Jesus. "It puts flesh on the story we have read so many times," said Conden, a Franciscan in brown robes who led

The procession covered about half a mile from a building near St. Stephen's Gate where tradition says Pilate, the Roman procurator, sentenced Jesus to death by crucifixion.

At the fifth station, where a Cyrenian named Simon helped Jesus with the cross, a priest read the story of Christ's journey to Calvary in Italian and English as several hundred pilgrims sang hymns.

At the sixth station, marking the spot where Jesus wiped sweat and blood from his brow, a woman and two men lifted a 6-foot-long long cross of thick pine as a priest read from the scriptures.

Pilgrims lined up to see the spot where tradition says Christ was crucified and the place where his body was anointed.

Outside, nighttime calls to prayer sounded from the minarets of a mosque on the Moslem sabbath.

Convict, a Hare Krishna, sues prison for religious 'equal time'

Suit represents four devotees of the sect

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — A Hare Krishna devotee serving a life term in prison for the murder of another member of the Eastern sect is suing state correction officials, charging they are denying him the right to worship according to his religion.

Thomas Drescher says he wants "equal time" with other religions in the maximum security West Virginia Penitentiary in Moundsville.

"Basically, they don't want to recognize Krishna consciousness as a real religion. That seems to be the issue," Drescher, 40, said in an interview last week. Krishnas worship the Hindu god Krishna and adhere to rules that ban alcohol, gambling, smoking, meat and extramarital sex.

He has filed suit in Marshall County Circuit Court on behalf of himself and three other Krishna followers in the prison. Among other things, the suit says they are being denied spiritual counseling, religious paraphernalia and the vegetarian diet required by the sect.

"The prison chaplain won't let us in (the chapel) because he says that we're not Christian and only Christian services are allowed in the prison. He's not allowing the Krishna minister in to conduct services or to meet with different members of the congregation who are here," he said.

Prison Chaplain Leonard Payne refused to comment on Drescher's allegations or the prison's policies on religion. Warden Jerry Hedrick also declined to discuss the matter.

"There has been a grievance filed and I've responded to it and there will be litigation that will come from it. For that reason I am not going to go any further," Hedrick said.

Last month, the U.S. Supreme Court heard arguments in a case involving two Muslim prisoners who denied access to a prayer rite in 1984 at the Leesburg, N.J., State Prison because of security concerns. A state lawyer asked the court to grant prison officials broad control over inmates' exercise of their religion, while a lawyer for the inmates said that could give jailers a blank check to discriminate against inmates. No ruling has been issued yet.

Drescher, a native of Buffalo, N.Y., was convicted in December of first-degree murder in the shooting, stabbing and beating death of fellow Krishna devotee Charles Saint-Innocent, was sentenced to life in prison without parole. He also is charged with murder in the shooting death of Krishna dissident Steven Bryant last May in Los Angeles and is to be extradited to California later this year.

Church news

TWIN FALLS — Dr. Louise Bates Evans will speak at a Family Ministry workshop Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at Valley Christian Church, 176 Heyburn Ave. E.

The study is designed to help pastors and congregations in ministry with families by increasing their knowledge about the family system and how its members interact. A variety of methods and approaches will stimulate participants' interests in family strengths, family stress and family coping. The workshop is designed to give participants a sampler of a variety of family life programs that would be self-contained or could be combined into a comprehensive program for persons throughout the life span.

Dr. Evans is director of Family and Children's Ministries in the Department of Christian Education, Division of Homeland Ministries at the general office of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ). She trains leaders and develops programs for ministry with families and children in local congregations. She received her doctorate in adult education from Indiana University in 1978, masters and bachelors degrees from Purdue University in 1970 and child development and family life in 1971.

TWIN FALLS — The final performance of the Easter cantata, "The Splendor of Easter," will be presented by the choir at 6 p.m. Sunday at First Assembly of God Church, 189 N. Lopez.

The death and victory is the retelling of the 18th and 19th centuries of the resurrection of Jesus Christ in picture and song. Nursery care will be provided and the public is invited to attend.

For information, call 733-5349.

Start a clean page

Whether it's in family life, career, or spirituality, sometimes we need to start a clean page. Not necessarily through quitting, divorce, or running away, but through the forgiveness possible in Christ. That's not easy.

Whether you're single, married, young or old, at our church you'll find people who are trying to care, reach out, and love. Like Christ taught. Start a clean page this week; join us for worship and in our search to care for each other.

GM drops cash bonus plan

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. directors in a move aimed at nudging executives toward a long-term view, voted to end $169 million in cash bonuses and to reward top executives with stock.

The United Auto Workers union, whose more than 350,000 members working for GM have been protesting money last year while executives retained their bonuses, said the new incentive system continued to show the company's "insensitivity and greed."

The system, if approved by shareholders at the automaker's May 22 annual meeting, would begin June 1.

Under the new plan, about 5,000 of GM's top executives will be eligible for stock distributions, compared with about 900 under the old plan.

"I believe this action is another important step in further motivating GM's leadership to face the competitive challenges ahead," said GM Chairman Roger Smith, who received $338,000 in cash bonuses on top of his $700,000 salary last year.

The new plan in part provides for distribution of share rights that could not be used immediately.

"This form of incentive will aid in shifting the strategic orientation of GM's senior management to a more long-term business view which is more closely aligned with the interests of stockholders," the company said Thursday.

GM, the nation's largest automaker, began paying cash bonuses to executives in 1918 and last year distributed $169 million to 1,460 employees. The company also gave stock to about 900 employees.

No. 2 Ford Motor Co. gave $164.3 million in 1986 cash bonuses to 5,528 executives, according to a proxy released Friday. Ford Chairman Donald Fetscher carried $1,390,772 for 1986 — $650,772 in salary, $1.3 million in bonus.

Ford also paid $371 million, or an average of $2,100 per worker, in profits to its hourly workers.

No. 3 Chrysler Corp., which is a year behind the two larger automakers in its bonus payments, paid $76.9 million in bonuses to 1,914 executives in 1986 for 1985 performance, according to Chrysler's 1987 proxy, which also was released Friday.

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca earned $1,702,972 in 1986 — $727,972 in salary and $975,000 in 1985 bonus — and received $9,280,607 in stock, accumulated dividends and interest in November 1986 for his agreement in 1983 to stay with the company for three more years.

General Motors has signed a new contract giving him additional stock and at-risk options for staying at least four more years.

GM was criticized by both the UAW and Wall Street analysts for paying executive bonuses for 1986 when its profits sagged by 29 percent to $2.9 billion.

UAW President Owen Bieber and Vice President Donald F. Ephlin said the GM plan has "too much focus on keeping up with the corporate Joneses and not enough attention to a realistic assessment of what any single individual's contributions could possibly be worth."

FCC votes to raise phone line charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission voted Thursday to increase the monthly line charge paid by residential telephone subscribers by $1.50 over the next two years, beginning with a 60-cent boost in July.

The increase — which sets the charge at $3.50 by April 1989 — won unanimous support of the five-member commission as a way to further reduce long-distance rates and discourage large business users from leaving the public phone network to build their own networks.

FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler said the increase in combination with other changes in telephone cost allocations will mean "the American public can continue to look forward to affordable telephone service provided by the most modern, efficient telecommunications network in the world."

"The American public will come out ahead," said Fowler, who leaves the commission this week after nearly six years as chairman.

The first increment will add 60 cents to customers' bills on July 1, an additional 50 cents in December 1988 and up to 90 cents in April 1989.

The increase will be used in part to finance a program called Linkup America, an aid program that will pay half, or up to $30, of the cost of telephone installation charges for low-income households. The commission estimates that about 5 million American households could be eligible for the program.

The proposal was approved last month by an advisory board of FCC members and state telephone regulators, who voted to begin the plan June 1.

The commission voted to delay the first increment one month to give the public an opportunity to review tariffs that will pass through the increase to reduce long-distance rates and provide skeptics in Congress more information to justify the increase.

The FCC, in another compromise with congressional opponents, also agreed to delay the second increment until Dec. 1. The commission said it would provide additional time to review the impact of the first increase, but sources speaking on the condition of anonymity say the delay is politically appealing because it puts the increase into effect after the 1988 presidential election.

Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., chairman of the House telecommunications subcommittee, said he still questions the need for the increase and will seek legislation to justify its cost.

The subscriber line charge helps pay the cost of the wire that connects a customer's telephone with a phone company's central office. Part of the cost of that line also is subsidized with long-distance rates, so raising the proportion paid by subscribers reduces long-distance rates.

Fowler noted that since the charge was initiated at $1 in June 1985, long-distance rates have dropped 53.5 percent to 11 cents.

The FCC estimates the higher charge will reduce long-distance rates by at least 15 percent over the next six years.

Raising the subscriber line charge also reduces the local connection charges paid by large business users.

The FCC has been concerned by the number of large businesses that have been avoiding the charge altogether by building their own telecommunications systems and bypassing the public phone network.

Unless large users are discouraged from bypassing, residential rates will have to rise even higher than the planned $3.50 a month to absorb the costs those businesses once paid, the commission argues.

The FCC also argues that lower long-distance rates stimulate use of the telephone network, which in turn creates efficiency and works to reduce costs for consumers.

'Dumping' a term of many definitions

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. sanctions against Japan over computer chips have thrown a spotlight on "dumping," a term heavily used by political overtones and disparaging definitions.

Dumping means selling products outside the home market at unfairly low prices. Companies do it to get rid of excess production, because of political overtones in a new market, or, in some cases, drive competitors out of business so they can have the customers to themselves and raise prices at will.

The current dispute arises over how to tell if a price is unfairly low. Both nations can claim to be correct in their current dispute over whether Japanese companies are dumping their computer chips in places such as Hong Kong, Singapore and Taiwan.

Yoshiji Nogami, economic counselor at the Japanese Embassy in Washington, described the U.S. definition of dumping in an interview Friday as "very strange."

The United States last year established a set of "fair market value" rules for dumping chips, based on the estimated cost-of-producing the chips, including related costs such as administrative and marketing, plus an 8 percent markup for profit.

In short-hand, U.S. negotiators refer to that as the cost of production, even though it is more than the direct cost of producing an individual chip.

Japanese chip makers say the U.S.-set fair market value is unrealistically high and would make them uncompetitive with the Koreans and others who are not bound by the agreement.

Although they agreed to go along with the "fair market value" rule in the United States, they say they never agreed to abide by the standard when selling elsewhere.

In other countries, Nogami said, the Japanese use a different definition of fair value. He said they feel they are dumping here as long as they do not set prices below what they charge for chips in their own home market.

That goes along with a definition of fair value used by the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, a world-wide trading body to which both the United States and Japan belong.

Robins sets up trust fund to pay injury claims

Los Angeles Times

Troubled A.H. Robins Co., maker of the Dalkon Shield intrauterine device, filed a financial reorganization plan Thursday that sets up a $1.75-billion trust fund to pay injury claims to women who may have been injured by the shield.

However, quick payment of claims and resolution of Robins' nearly two-year-old bankruptcy proceedings appeared clouded by disclosures that Rorer Group — the pharmaceutical company that makes Maelox — was seeking to acquire Robins, based in Richmond,

III, whose Richmond, Va. law firm represents potential Dalkon-Shield claimants.

Before filing for Chapter 11 protection, Robins paid more than $378 million to settle 9,230 suits filed by women claiming injury from the Dalkon Shield, which was taken off the U.S. market in 1974. An additional 5,000 claims were pending against Robins when it sought protection Aug. 25, 1985 under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws.

Since then, a campaign ordered by the federal bankruptcy judge solicited additional claims from women who suspected that they may have been injured. More than 320,000 responses were received by the April 20, 1986 deadline, although not all of the claims will be accepted as valid.

The claims, which have been filed from women in some 80 countries, including the United States, allege injuries that include defective birth, infertility and even death.

On Thursday, Rorer and Robins both acknowledged that they had discussions in late March regarding merging the two companies but said no agreements were reached.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE[®] BOBBY WOLFF

"The optimist proclaims that we live in the best of all possible worlds, and the pessimist fears this is true."
—James Branch Cabell.

The optimist has little chance at today's game, for he "knows" that at least one of his finesses will work. The pessimist has a much better shot; he "knows" that he'd better look for something surer than one of three finesses.

Against the optimist, East wins his club ace and switches to a diamond. South ducks to West's jack and a trump is returned to South's rine. South ruffs his last club in dummy, and dummy's trump king draws East's last trump. A second diamond finesse leads to West's king and West exits with his last diamond. South may now fall back on the spade finesse, conceding down one when the third finesse loses.

The pessimist can't count on his finesses, so he plays for an extra chance. He too takes a deep finesse in diamonds at trick two, losing to West's diamond jack. However, after taking West's trump exit with his nine, he leads a second trump to dummy's jack. Instead of repeating the diamond finesse, the pessimist takes the losing spade finesse. West exits with his spade eight to South's ace and South ruffs his last club. On dummy's spade jack, he throws a diamond, and when he's lucky enough to drop East's spade 10, another diamond goes on dummy's nine of spades.

Easley: Twin Falls' native son finds a place in Pittsburgh

By MICHAEL VANAUDELIN
Times-News writer

Logan Easley was stretching out with rest of the Pittsburgh Pirates in their spring training camp in Bradenton, Fla., on Saturday, April 4, when he got the word. Pirate pitching coach Ray Miller approached the former Twin Falls Bruin and College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagle and told him that he had made it to the big leagues.

"I was relieved more than anything," said Easley. "I just wanted to know where I was going to go. And I was going to the big leagues."

After playing five seasons in the New York Yankees minor league organization, Easley was traded to the Pirates last winter, seemingly not a baseball paradise these days, but Pittsburgh gave Easley as much opportunity and ever since April 4, Twin Falls has a native son in baseball's major leagues.

LOGAN EASLEY
Member of Pirate bullpen

As a member of the Pirate bullpen on opening day, Easley — who had been used both as a starter and a reliever with the Yankees — had a less than impressive debut.

Giving up three hits and two runs in 1½ innings, Easley took a loss versus the world champion New York Mets on April 9 in Pittsburgh's second game of the season. But not to worry, Easley is still a member of the Pirate bullpen and he feels the experience was actually "good. I wish I had done better but it felt good to go."

In addition, the Pirate coaching staff wasn't too concerned over Easley's disappointing performance. The purpose of his appearance was just to get his feet wet; unfortunately, he got drenched.

"Coach Miller was real positive, though," said the right-hander. "I think everyone understood it was my first time out and it was positive that I got my first one out of the way."

This spring wasn't the first time Easley had a chance to make to the big leagues. Last spring, the Yankees brought him to their spring training but despite a 1.51 ERA from his previous minor league season at Albany, N.Y., he didn't make the final cut. This year was different.

Although it didn't seem that way at first, Easley pitched 14 innings at camp but "started off horribly," he said. "I was nervous. It wasn't until I got comfortable and showed what I could do that I did well."

Easley got to the big leagues by throwing the current money pitch in baseball, the split-fingered fastball, invented by current San Francisco Giants' manager Roger Craig and mastered by the likes of National League Cy-Young winner Mike Scott of the Houston Astros. It can be a devilishly difficult pitch to hit as the bottom falls out of the strike zone.

National League umpire Frank Pulli was quoted in the last issue of Sports Illustrated as saying Easley has the best split's he's seen.

"Now that he's in the major leagues, the biggest adjustment is not the quality of players, not the pressure, it's the size of the crowds.

"Sure, the kind of players you see here are better," said Easley, "but, man, you got so many people in the stands, it's a little intimidating."

The quality of the players is an important difference. In Easley's case, that's because the hardest-type of hitter for him to throw to are in abundance in the major leagues: the patient hitter.

"I do really well against a hitter who'll swing at the first pitch or who'll get a patient hitter then I can have some trouble. Here, practically everyone is like that."

But if the differences between the majors and the minors are numerous, there are practically none between the minors and CSI. Playing for the Golden Eagles under the guidance of Coach Jim Walker gave Easley the kind of experience that proved valuable in the minor leagues.

"CSI" faced some pretty tough competition," said Easley, a 1981 graduate of CSI. "In the minors, you might get some hitters who are more disciplined but actually, the competition is just about the same."

Playing under Coach Walker, though, provided his own kind of competition for Easley: The 11-year CSI coach has had a reputation of being a coach who is demanding and hard to play for. And even Easley, who admits he doesn't like to be told what to do every minute of the day, found that "Walker was tough, real tough, to play for."

Nonetheless, that toughness paid off for Easley.

"He (Walker) does get the most out of his players," said Easley. "He gets you to realize your ability. He pushed me to work harder and that is something good for a young player."

It was also Walker who realized Easley had pitching talent. In high school, he had pitched in the major leagues.

3 Phoenix Suns players indicted on drug charges

Walter Davis suspended for cocaine use

By DIRK BEVERIDGE
The Associated Press

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Three Phoenix Suns players were indicted on drug charges and another, All-Star guard Walter Davis, was suspended for cocaine use as a result of the NBA franchise from two sides Friday.

"Despite the problem... we will survive," Suns General Manager Jerry Colangelo said.

At a news conference Friday afternoon, authorities said Suns players James Edwards, Jay Humphries and Grant Goodenrich and two former players had been indicted by a county grand jury investigating cocaine trafficking. They faced the possibility of permanent banishment from the NBA.

The two former players were Garfield Heard and Mike Bratz.

"We will stand behind our players through this," Colangelo said. "We will not let this set us back."

At the same time, Colangelo said that Davis admitted he had become involved with cocaine again and would re-enter a drug treatment program.

Davis, who underwent 30 days of voluntary treatment for cocaine and alcohol abuse at a Southern California clinic in January 1986, came forward Friday to admit he had a relapse, Colangelo said.

A five-time All-Star and the NBA's Rookie of the Year in 1977-78, Davis was suspended without pay.

In telephone news conference, NBA Commissioner David Stern said Edwards, Humphries and Goodenrich underwent drug tests Friday, "and the results should be available on Monday. Any player whose test results are positive automatically will be permanently disqualified from the NBA."

"If the player tests negative, the NBA would have the right to test that player three more times within the next six weeks," Stern said. "If all tests prove negative, the player will be presumed innocent until proven guilty and no action would be taken against him pending the outcome of the criminal charges."

Stern said if any of the players were convicted of a crime involving the use or distribution of cocaine, he will be permanently disqualified from the NBA.

Phoenix Police Chief Ruben Ortega announced the indictments, which were returned Thursday. He said they came after a two-month probe by the police special investigations bureau, adding the investigation is ongoing.

Maricopa County Attorney Tom Collins said the investigation showed "the players were frequenting a local establishment and obtaining cocaine."

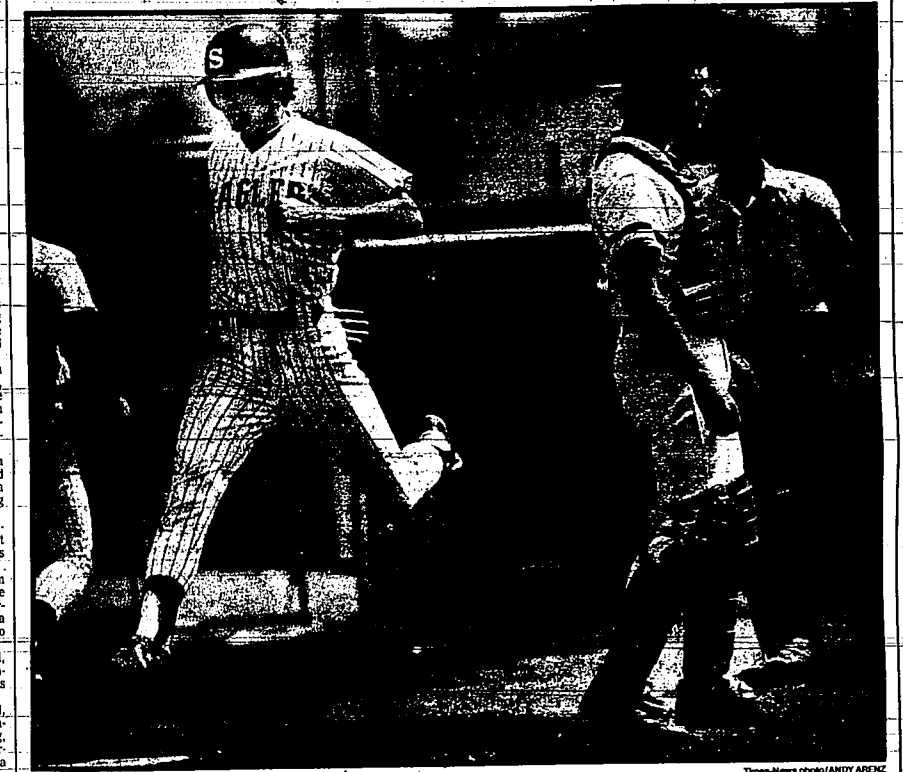

He said the probe "focused on individuals and individual acts and not on the Phoenix Suns organization as a whole."

Edwards, 31, a nine-year veteran center, was indicted on three counts: conspiracy to possess a narcotic drug, conspiracy to transfer a narcotic drug and conspiracy to transfer or possess narcotic drugs.

Humphries, 24, a third-year guard, was indicted on one count of conspiracy to transfer and/or possess marijuana and/or a narcotic drug.

Goodenrich, 24, a rookie guard, was indicted on three counts: conspiracy to possess a narcotic drug, transfer or offer to transfer a narcotic drug and attempt to possess a narcotic drug.

Bratz, 31, was indicted on three counts: conspiracy to traffic in a narcotic drug, conspiracy to transfer and/or possess narcotic drugs and conspiracy to traffic a narcotic drug or marijuana.

Milner on disabled list for drug problem

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Outfielder Eddie Milner became the latest major league baseball player to admit a drug problem as the San Francisco Giants announced Friday he had been placed on the 30-day disabled list for treatment.

The team did not release specifics about what type of drug problem Milner had, but where he was to be treated. He was approached by club trainers and asked for help. The Giants said the situation had been discussed with Commissioner Peter Ueberroth and would be handled under policies established last year.

Team officials said Milner's treatment would take a minimum of 28 days.

Milner's removal from the club's roster comes at a time when Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden is in a drug rehabilitation center in New York after testing positive for cocaine. Baseball has no drug-testing program but Gooden had received a testing charge he included in his contract.

The 31-year-old Milner, a cousin of former major league John Milner, was unavailable for comment. He had been with the Giants since 1983. He was in a trade for pitcher Frank Williams and had played in eight games with the Giants, batting .222 with one RBI.

"The Giants are prepared to assist in every way possible with Eddie Milner's recovery," said Al Rosen.

Giants officials said Ueberroth has advised the team that, consistent with league policy, Milner will be given "this one opportunity" to receive medical assistance and avoid disciplinary action.

"If Milner fails to cooperate in an appropriate treatment program and thereafter, he will be subject to penalties," the team quoted the commissioner as saying.

He was replaced on the Giants' roster by Randy Kutcher. The 26-year-old was recalled from the Phoenix Firebirds of the AAA Pacific Coast League, where he had 308 hits with two home runs and six RBIs in seven games.

Milner's is the latest of baseball's drug problems in a line tracing back to August 1980 when Texas Ranger pitcher Ferguson Jenkins was arrested in Canada on charges of cocaine possession. Jenkins was given a brief suspension that was lifted by an arbitrator after a grievance hearing.

In August 1982, Alan Wiggins was suspended for 30 days following his arrest on charges of suspicion of attempting to possess cocaine.

Brewers keep on rolling with win No. 10

By RICK GANO
The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Cecil Cooper has been around the major leagues for 17 years, and even he is a little amazed that the Milwaukee Brewers have opened the season with a 10-game winning streak.

"It's unbelievable, that's all I can say," the veteran designated hitter said Friday night after driving in the go-ahead run in the unbeatens Brewers' 10-2 victory over the Texas Rangers.

"We've just got to keep rolling, as long as it goes. It's good for the young players, their confidence. They believe in themselves. We've just got to keep playing," he said.

Ted Higuera's five-hit, 12-strikeout pitching, a seven-run seventh inning and a roaring crowd of 41,548 helped the Brewers hand Texas its seventh straight defeat.

Higuera, 3-0, returned to the field for a curtain call after his first complete game this season. He was touched for solo homers by Larry Parrish in the second and Don Slaught in the seventh.

"It was beautiful," Higuera said of the crowd as the Brewers moved to within one victory of tying the 1981 Oakland A's for the fastest American League start. The major-league record is 13 straight victories to start the 1982 season by the Atlanta Braves.

"I was getting aggressive," Higuera said. "I was giving it something extra."

Cooper's grounder knocked in the go-ahead run in the sixth, but if the

Rob Deer had not been running from the play with the count 2-1, it would have been an easy double play.

"We don't start Deer at first. It's 1-1 and they're going to bat," said Brewers second baseman Jim Gantner, who along with Cooper and Robin Yount each drove in two runs.

"We could have easily been out of the game with an inning-ending double play. That play picked us up and got us going."

"It's nice to have this streak," Gantner said. "Anybody who says they're not glad to start off 10-0 is crazy. Tomorrow's a new game and 10-0 doesn't mean anything when we step on the field tomorrow."

He stole second and scored on Yount's line-drive double into the right-field corner.

Yount moved to third on Glenn Braggs' groundout and scored on Cooper's grounder following an intentional walk to Deer.

Dale Svein then extended his hitting streak to 10 games with a double to left, scoring Deer.

"The key play was Deer running. That move put us over the hump because then Dale was able to come up and get the double for an insurance run," Molitor said.

Molitor gets the double play on Cooper's grounder, he gets out of the inning and it's a tie game.

Slaught led off the Texas seventh with his second homer. Pete O'Brien then reached on an error and Jerry Browne walked.

Bruins in catbird seat for doubleheader

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

POCAHELLO — The Twin Falls High School baseball team finds itself in the catbird seat headed into today's Region III doubleheader against Highland, but the catbird record is decidedly unimpressive. The Bruins led both the Gem State Conference (7-2) and the Division (3-0) pending their meeting with the Rams, the current second-place team in the region with a 3-1 record. Twin Falls could move into a commanding position for the first time in the postseason regional tournament with a sweep of Highland today, but a doubleheader would leave the Bruins in a difficult position with three games remaining in their regular season.

The Bruins set up a showdown with the current runner-up in the Skyline, the current runner-up in the Gem State Conference, by beating Highland twice in Falls, according to Coach Simmons.

"We've always played Twin very tough," said Simmons, whose teams have won three of their four games with Twin Falls despite finishing at the bottom of the GSC the last two years. "We've always respected their program, and I think our players have picked up on that. I really don't understand why it is, but the last couple of years we've played well against good teams and terrible against weaker teams. The program wasn't available Friday to talk about his pitching plans, but the Bruins can expect to see Highland in the first game today. O'Bray, 2-1 for the season, throws a 90-mile-per-hour fastball and mixes up his pitches, according to Simmons.

Focallo's Hallwell Park. "Highland is a pretty darn talented team," said Twin Falls Coach Bill Ingram earlier in the week. "They just killed us in a doubleheader last year. We'll have our work cut out for us."

The Rams, 6-4 for the season and 4-4 in GSC games, play their last four regional games at home, and Highland is definitely ready for Twin Falls. Highland is definitely ready for Twin Falls. Highland is definitely ready for Twin Falls. Highland is definitely ready for Twin Falls.

NL: Reds outlast Astros on top of West

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds shortstop Kurt Stillwell has discovered something more relaxing than a game-winning grand slam.

Stillwell, tense over his recent hitting failures, took a deep breath and hit his first career home run with the Reds on Friday night to send the Reds to a 9-8 victory over the Houston Astros.

Stillwell's home-to-right-field highlighted a five-run fifth inning off starter Bob Lincecum, 1-1, and reliever Aurelio Lopez that put the Reds ahead to stay.

"I've been too tight, and when I'm not having fun, I don't play well," said Stillwell, filling in for injured starter Barry Larkin this week. "I'm happy now. I'm not quite as tight. I'll definitely loosen me up. It's a lot of fun to hit a home run."

The Astros were leading 6-4 by virtue of Billy Hatcher's two-run triple in the top of the fifth when the Reds loaded the bases with one out on singles by Parker and Eric Davis and a walk. Lopez came on and walked Bo Diaz to force in a run, then hit up second pitcher Tom Seaver to Stillwell, a second-year shortstop without a home in his previous 287 major-league at-bats.

Reds Manager Pete Rose yelled to Slater to expect a fastball. "I told Lopez when the reliever fell behind in the count 1-0.

"Pete said he was going to throw me a fastball down the middle," Stillwell said. "I sat back and looked right there. It was right there."

"This might loosen him up a little bit," Rose suggested.

Stillwell's homer capped a 12-hit effort to extend the lead to 9-6. Dave Parker's 25th career homer, a three-run shot in the first inning.

"I said before that they're a type of ballclub that's going to score runs," Astros Manager Bill Mauer said. "I didn't think they'd score this many."

Baseball

Left-hander Rob Murphy earned his second win without a loss in relief of starter Bill Lindrum. Murphy pitched 1 1/2 innings, giving up a solo homer to Kevin Bass in the sixth to end his streak of 25 scoreless innings dating to last Aug. 31.

Ron Robinson allowed an RBI single to Bass in the eighth, and left-hander John Franco pitched a perfect ninth for his third save.

Houston took a first-inning lead when Denny Walling hit a two-out solo homer in his first at-bat of the season. Walling had been on the disabled list with back spasms.

The Astros, who had committed just three errors in their first nine games, made two in the first inning prior to Parker's third homer of the season.

Feldling errors by shortstop Craig Reynolds and Walling, playing third, put Tracy Jones and Dave Concepcion aboard. Parker hit an 0-1 pitch into the first row of the second deck in right field.

Concepcion singled home a run in the second, but Houston trimmed it to 4-3 in the fourth as runs scored on a single by Davis and a ground out by Jose Cruz. Hatcher tripled home two runs in the fifth and scored on Phil Garner's sacrifice fly for a 6-lead.

Los Angeles 5 San Diego 3

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Pedro Guerrero hit a pair of homers and Fernando Valenzuela pitched a seven-inning shutout to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 5-3 victory over the San Diego Padres Friday night.

Guerrero's first homer sparked a first-inning, three-homer explosion as Valenzuela pitched six shutout innings and gave up three runs, two of them earned, on nine hits. Rick Horton went the final three innings for his 10th save.

Bob Ojeda, 1-2, allowed four runs, three earned, on six hits in seven innings as the Mets had their three-game winning streak ended.

With New York ahead 3-2 in the fifth, Tudor hit a one-out single. Vince Coleman walked with two outs in the fifth inning Friday night, rallying the St. Louis Cardinals to a 4-3 victory over the New York Mets.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Atlanta Braves' Zane Smith, who pitched a 6-0 shutout, ran averages Friday night and pitched a four-hit shutout in the fifth inning and beat the San Francisco Giants 2-0 for his first victory since last July.

Smith, 1-1, struck out eight and walked none in his first shutout since last April 19. He hadn't won since a July 2 decision over the Giants. In his first two starts this season, Smith gave up 21 hits in 19 2/3 innings.

Mike Krukow, the Giants' 23rd game winner of last season, dropped to 0-2 with the loss, allowing eight hits, striking out eight and walking two in eight innings. The Braves had three hits, including Andres Thomas' two-run double, in the first inning.

Hanks homers twice as CSI beats Lassen

By MICHAEL VANAUDELEN Times-News writer

College baseball

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles defeated the Lassen, Calif., Community College Cougars 10-7 here Friday with the weapon that often decides whether they live or die in Frontier Field — the home run.

CSI, coming off Thursday's 7-6 win over Lassen when Shawn Whalen bled one over the right-field fence in the bottom of the seventh inning, broke a 6-6 tie in Hanks belted one into the nearby tennis courts to power the Eagles to their sixth straight victory.

But earlier in the same inning, CSI wobbled as Lassen came back. CSI's 5-6 deficit to tie the game when Shawn Patton hit a round-tripper to knock in three runs and CSI second baseman Anthony Negrette overthrew first base on a 4-1 homer by Lassen to score the tying run.

But Hanks' thundering homer and another insurance homer, a three-run shot, by the CSI catcher, Steve Hanks, gave CSI a 10-7 lead in the sixth inning when Shawn Whalen hit the Golden Eagles' season record to 25-12.

"We either destroy or get destroyed by home runs," said CSI Coach Jim Walker. "It always seems that the key hit is a home run."

CSI's power was further in evidence when Ryan Brown Schmidt scored one more homer to bring the 14th major-leaguer to hit 500 homers. He hammered a 2-1 pitch from left-hander Bob Patterson 10-10 in the 13th.

at bay for most of the game. Pitching coach Ed Starnes said the #1 infielder went 4 1/2 innings, scattered five hits and struck out five.

"He really gives us a boost in our pitching-departments," said Walker. "Dave has a lot of heart in him and he just went out there and pitched a solid game."

Friday's game left no question that CSI opponents will be seeing McQuivey again.

"We're always looking for pitchers," emphasized Walker. McQuivey was helped by a five-run inning from his teammates in the 13th. Errol Shreve pitched the final out of the game with a single to left.

After Billy Statterfield, hampered with sore ribs, struck out, Jeff Moie singled up the middle. Hanks followed with a double down the third-base line to score Shreve and Moie, making the score 9-1 CSI.

Whalen touched out to the catcher but Steve Bivens walked and Kirk Slater sailed one in the 13th. Slater and Bivens, Brown hit the third double of the inning with a shot to center to score Slater and CSI had a 6-lead.

AL: Angels outduel Twins in battle of West frontrunners

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Mike Witt threw a three-hitter, while Edwin "Doc" Gooden pitched a homer-saving catch in right field Friday night as the California Angels beat the Minnesota Twins 2-

White, a rookie, homered off Bert Blyleven, 1-1, with one out in the third to break a scoreless tie and give him three homers in four games. The home run was the fourth of the season allowed by Blyleven, who set the major-league record last year, straddling 46.

The Twins led the game in the fourth when Randy Bush tripled and scored on Kirby Puckett's single.

California reclaimed the lead the next inning as Mark McLemore led off with a double on a ground out on one swing by Wally Joyner.

Witt, 2-1, struck out seven and walked one and also allowed a third-inning single to Greg Gagne.

It appeared he surrendered a game-tying homer to Roy Smalley in the seventh.

However, White raced back and, with a perfectly timed running leap, caught the ball above the eight-foot fence.

The teams are now tied for first in the American League West with 7-3 records.

Toronto 10 Boston 5

TORONTO (AP) — Fred McGriff hit his first major-league homer, a three-run shot to cap a four-run fifth-inning rally, as the Toronto Blue Jays defeated the Boston Red Sox 10-5 Friday night.

Trailing 5-3 in the fifth with two outs, the Blue Jays scored four times against Boston starter Bob Stanley, 1-2.

Detroit 3 Chicago 1

DETROIT (AP) — Matt Nokes had an RBI single and scored the winning run in Detroit's three-run third inning while Frank Tanana and two relievers combined on a five-hitter to lead the Chicago White Sox 3-1 Friday night.

It was the fourth victory over Chicago for the Tigers, who swept the White Sox last weekend in Baltimore 4-3.

Crawford moves up to third

BOISE — Buhl's Christie Crawford has moved into third place in the Division III all-events standing with two weekends to go in the Idaho State Women's Bowling Tournament.

Crawford has a score of 1,386, leaving her 34 pins behind event leader Linda Crapo of St. Anthony and six pins behind runner-up Laura Dickerson of Malad.

The Tots to Teens team of Burley is in second place in the Division II team standings with a score of 3,018, 45 pins behind event leader Scherer Diesel of Caldwell.

Janna Driscoll of Jerome remains in second place in Division I singles with a score of 699, 10 pins behind leader Joan Oliver of Emmet.

The 16-week-long tournament is being held at Boise's 20th Century Lanes and Timberlances.

First TFTA tourney next week

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Tennis Association will hold its first tournament of the season, the Arthur Walker Memorial, here April 25-26.

This TFTA membership tourney will be played at courts throughout the city, with the finals scheduled at Frootier Field.

Entrants may play in any or all events for the price of a membership, which is $10 for families, $7.50 for adults and $5 for students. Prizes will be awarded to winners in singles, doubles and mixed doubles in advanced, beginner and intermediate categories.

Entry deadline is Wednesday, April 22. Further information can be obtained by phoning Lora Crane at 734-6437.

Scramble for Life slated May 1

TWIN FALLS — The sixth annual Scramble for Life golf tournament, to benefit the Idaho State Perinatal Project, has been scheduled for Friday, May 1, at the Blue Lakes Country Club.

The tournament, which is held as a memorial for the late Dr. Glenn Hoss of Twin Falls, will be run on a four-person scramble format. The tourney will be for both men and women and for both professionals and amateurs.

The $50 entry fee will include 18 holes of golf, cart rental, refreshments, a buffet lunch and prizes.

The tournament will begin with a shotgun start at 1:30 p.m. Further information can be obtained by phoning the BLCC pro shop at 733-2337.

CSI Biathlon slated April 25

TWIN FALLS — The third annual Associated Students of the College of Southern Idaho Biathlon will be held on Saturday, April 25, starting on the CSI campus.

There will be courses of 4.3 and 16 miles will individual and team competition. Early registration deadline is today, with a fee of $8 per person.

All entries must be in by 3 p.m. on Friday, April 24, at the Student Activities Office of the Taylor Administration Building on the CSI campus.

Prizes and T-shirts will be awarded.

The biathlon is being sponsored by the CSI Student Senate, Idaho First National Bank, Peck Farms of Carey, Donnelley Sports and Valley Schwinn Cycles.

Idaho moves back game times

MOSCOW (AP) — The University of Idaho has moved the starting times of its football games back a half hour this fall to avoid overlapping with games on the same days at nearby Washington State University, Athletic Director Bill Belknap said.

The two schools both play home games on Sept. 5, Sept. 12, Oct. 10 and Oct. 24.

Washington State recently moved all but one of its afternoon football games from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m., so Idaho will move its evening games from 6:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. because of potential traffic problems caused by fans leaving the WSU game and others arriving for Idaho's, Belknap said.

Belknap said the ability of some die-hard fans to get from the WSU game to Idaho's in time for the opening kickoff was another factor.

BSU announces grid schedule

BOISE — Boise State University will play non-conference games against one NCAA Division I, one Division I-A and one Division II opponents next fall, all in Bronco stadium.

BSU has announced an 11-game schedule, which will include seven home games.

The Broncos will open the season in Bronco Stadium on Saturday, Sept. 5, against Delaware State, a I-AA team. The following Saturday, Sept. 12, they will play Cal State-Northridge, another Division II team, in Bronco Stadium.

Their final non-league game will be against the University of Utah, a Division I team, in Bronco Stadium on Saturday, Oct. 31.

The rest of the schedule will include the Broncos' eight Big Sky Conference games, beginning on Saturday, Sept. 26, in Ogden, Utah, against Weber State and concluding on Saturday, Nov. 21, in Moscow against the University of Idaho.

Palmer complains of chest pains

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jim Palmer — the former pitching star of the Baltimore Orioles — was released from the hospital Friday after being diagnosed as having muscular skeletal pain, a team spokesman said.

But the three-time Cy Young Award winner, who was hospitalized Thursday night after complaining of chest pains and difficulty in breathing, showed no signs of any heart problems, said Rick Vaughn of the Orioles public relations office.

Dr. J scores 38 points in his Philly finale, but Sixers lose

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Julius Erving turned the clock back Friday night, twisting and leaping his way to 38 points and became the third player in the history of professional basketball to score 30,000 or more points.

His team lost to the Indiana Pacers Friday night, 115-111, but the night was Dr. J's.

He joined Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Los Angeles Lakers, who has 36,474 points, and Bill Chamberlain, who is second with 31,419.

Erving called on all of the great players of all time.

He spun through the air from the foul line, slam dunked, stole the ball and hit a 3-pointer from the corner. He looked like the Dr. J. who rescued a struggling NBA in the mid 1970s with his skywalking style.

Erving collected 17 field goals on 31 shots, and was three of seven from the foul line.

"It's a night I'll never forget," Erving said. "During the ceremony and warmups I kind of made-up my mind that I'd go if I tonight."

"There was no doubt that my teammates were giving me the ball and setting me up."

Erving said he realized the crowd was into the game.

"It was a happening, a nice happening," he said. "I'm grateful to the guys for sacrificing and helping me clear this hurdle. Now we can get ready for the playoffs."

Houston 121
Dallas 99

HOUSTON (AP) — Akeem Olatunji scored 29 points and the Houston Rockets broke away from a bench-clearing fight in the third quarter to beat the Dallas Mavericks 121-99 in an NBA game Friday night.

The Rockets were leading 79-66 when Houston's Jim Petersen and Dallas' Roy Tarpley were ejected for fighting.

Houston's 18-point halftime lead had been cut to seven earlier in the third period. But the Rockets burst to a 22-6 margin going into the final period.

Portland 111 Utah 101

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Clyde Drexler had 29 points and 12 rebounds, while Jerome Kersey added 26 points and 14 rebounds as the Portland Trail Blazers held off Utah 111-101 in an NBA game that closed the Jazz' regular season Friday night.

San Antonio 115 LA Lakers 103

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — David Greenwood scored 23 points as the San Antonio Spurs snapped the Los Angeles Lakers' 11-game winning streak with a 115-103 NBA victory Friday night.

After trailing throughout the first and early part of the second quarters, San Antonio took the lead at 36-34 on a 3-point basket by Johnny Moore with 7:25 left in the half and never trailed again. The Lakers had beaten the Spurs the last six times the teams had played.

Mychal Thompson paced the Lakers with 20 points. Four Laker starters — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Magic Johnson, A.C. Green and James Worthy did not play in the final period. Abdul-Jabbar finished with 13.

Washington 142 New York 110

NEW YORK (AP) — Moses Malone scored 22 points and Jeff Malone added 21, lifting the Washington Bullets to a 142-110 NBA victory over the New York Knicks Friday night.

The Bullets' victory clinched sixth place in the Eastern Conference, and they will play the third-place Detroit Pistons in the first round of the NBA playoffs starting next week.

Boston 108 Chicago 105

BOSTON (AP) — Larry Bird scored 38 points to lead the Boston Celtics to a 108-105 NBA victory Friday night over Chicago as the Bulls' Michael Jordan missed the last 18 minutes with an apparently minor thigh injury.

Jordan, who scored a regular-season career-high 61 points Thursday night, was forced out with a contusion of the left thigh suffered in that 117-114 loss to Atlanta. He had scored at least 50 points in each of his previous three games, but finished with 17 against Boston.

It was only the fifth time this season that Jordan was not the leading scorer for Chicago, which ended the regular season with a 40-42 record. Jordan had 15 points at halftime, but had just one more field goal before leaving with 6:31 left in the third quarter.

Boston improved its record to 58-23, one game ahead of the Hawks. The two teams play at Boston Garden in their season finale Sunday.

Detroit 130 New Jersey 117

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Adrian Dantley scored 38 points and Bill Laimbeer added 23 Friday night to lead the Detroit Pistons to a franchise record-tying 52nd victory of the season, a 130-117 NBA decision over the New Jersey Nets.

Kimberly's Invitational set today

By The Times-News

KIMBERLY — Fast-Improving Valley will get a chance to show whether it's ready to contend with District 4 Class A-3 boys' powers Glens Ferry and Wendell while Declo's girls will tune up for a coming rematch with the Pilots at today's Kimberly Invitational track and field meet.

Competition is scheduled to start with the 3,200-meter run at 10:30 a.m. on Kimberly High School's dirt track, with Valley, Declo, Hansen and Oakley joining the host Bulldogs.

Glens Ferry, the defending meet and district champions, won't be in attendance. The Pilots competed in the Filer Invitational on Thursday.

Valley swept a six-team meet on its home turf earlier in the week, and today's competition should give Viking boys' Coach Scott Tingey and girls' Coach Marquerite Astorquia a good indication how their teams are progressing with the Canyon Conference championships two weeks away.

Declo's girls, who have yet to lose a meet this spring, will tune up for their rematch with Glens Ferry at next week's Declo Invitational.

Ex-BYU tight end pleads guilty to drug charge

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Former Brigham Young football player Trevor Molini pleaded guilty Friday to a charge of obtaining a prescription drug by fraud and was ordered to return to court May 15 for sentencing.

Molini, 22, entered the plea before 4th District Judge George E. Balliff, who referred the case to Adult Probation and Parole for recommendations and gave him permission to return to his home near Reno, Nev., until sentencing.

College football

Molini faces a maximum sentence of five years imprisonment and a $5,000 fine for the felony count.

The plea marked the second time this year that Molini, who has undergone an in-patient drug rehabilitation program for addiction to the narcotic painkiller Percodan, has pleaded guilty to prescription drug charges. He and Steve Sanders, a former Cougar linebacker, were arrested on April 9, and both were expelled from school the following day.

Sanders was arraigned April 10 on two counts of obtaining a prescription drug by fraud or misrepresentation and one count of attempting to obtain prescription drugs. He is to appear for a preliminary hearing in 8th Circuit Court on May 18.

Orem police said the drugs involved were Vocodin and Lortab, both prescription painkillers. Earlier this year, Molini pleaded guilty to three reduced counts of attempting to obtain a controlled substance.

Percodan, by misrepresentation. — Eighth Circuit Judge E. Patrick McGuire delayed sentencing for a year, saying the court would monitor his progress. Sanders was an all-Western Athletic Conference and honorable mention All-American as a sophomore, but suffered a foot injury and saw limited play in 1986.

Hayes holds on to slim lead at Heritage Classic

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Mark Hayes, using a resurged old putter, salvaged a 3-under-par 68 from trees and traps and retained a one-stroke lead Friday.

"I made all the tough little putts I had to have to save par," Hayes said after completing two trips over the Harbour Town Golf Links in 10-under-par 132.

Meanwhile, Masters champion Larry Mize faltered to make the cut. Mize, who shot an opening round 76, had a 1-under-par 70 Friday, but a 36-hole score of 4-over-par 146 was not good enough to qualify him for the final two rounds.

Hayes' strong showing was largely attributable to the putter he returned to his bag this week after a 10-year absence.

Hayes, who admits to constant tinkering with his clubs, said he was trying to bend his putter last week when it snapped.

He used it only 24 times in the first round, and one-putted nine times Friday, including a 30-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole that left him one stroke in front of Steve Jones.

He used to score his last victory 10 years ago in the Tournament Players Championship — out of his collection of about 200 and put it back in his bag.

Molini was an all-Western Athletic Conference and honorable mention All-American as a sophomore, but suffered a foot injury and saw limited play in 1986.

Unheralded McGeorge forges lead in Santa Barbara Open

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Little-known Missie McGeorge, who ranks 63rd on the Ladies Professional Golf Association's money-winning list this year, fired a 6-under-par 66 Friday to take a two-stroke after the first round of the Sandpiper Golf Course in nearby Goleta to equal her best round as a professional.

McGeorge, who missed the cut in four of her eight previous tournaments this year, had seven birdies and one bogey over the 6,371-yard course in the 17th.

The field will be cut to the low 70 and ties after Saturday's round with Sunday's final round to be played exclusively at Sandpiper. The tournament offers a top prize of $45,000.

"I know that the ad was successful because I had many, many calls and drop ins"

Debbie Lattin
Health Insurance Claim Specialist

"I have run several ads in the Times-News that have worked well for me. The best ad of all was an ad in the "Women in Business" feature page. All of my customers have mentioned seeing my ads. Trying to advertise on your own just will not work. The newspaper reaches more homes and businesses than you can. I know that my ads are successful because I have had many, many calls and drop-ins that I had not seen before regarding their health insurance and claims. The folks in the advertising department are all so pleasant and go out of their way to please. I have been very happy with the Times-News."

We're proud to be a part of successful Magic Valley businesses, because the growth of your business is our business. Call your advertising representative today to start your success story. 733-0931
