

Nuclear study in Idaho drops monitoring project

POCATELLO (AP) — Personal radiation monitoring of people near areas with above-normal levels of gamma rays has been cut out of a radionuclide study in southeastern Idaho.

The Environmental Protection Agency study, which is monitoring radiation around phosphate mines and plants near Pocatello and Soda Springs, had been on hold since October, pending review by the EPA Science Advisory Board.

Helicopter sampling last summer covered 70 square miles in and around Pocatello and Soda Springs. The aerial research identified certain areas where gamma radiation is above background levels, particularly near phosphate plants and along roads with high phosphate slag use.

The ground testing is expected to begin next month. But the personal monitoring program, which one of the study's designers called critical, will be left out. Under the program, volunteers would have worn dosimeters to see what dose of radiation they were receiving in and around their homes.

"The dosimeters were the critical link between what is happening in the environment and what is on people," said John Hall, the EPA's project manager. "It was one of the central themes of the study. Now we'll have to make some assumptions about occupancy times and we'll have to interview people about how long they spend at home."

Radionuclides are the alpha, beta and gamma rays emitted as elements with an unstable atomic structure decay to a more stable state. Interest in exposure to radionuclides in southeastern Idaho was raised in 1980 when it became apparent that phosphate slag was radioactive. The slag is a byproduct from fertilizer plants that has been used in construction of road beds since 1960.

The Science Advisory Board, an independent panel of academic experts, wanted the plan changed to assess radiation doses, rather than risk. The changes in the plan were based on philosophical rather than technical concerns, Hall said.

"They wanted the study to be statistically relevant," he said.

Random testing would be hard to do, particularly in Soda Springs where the phosphate plant is both the major source of radiation and employment. "Naturally when you are in a small community and you have one employer, random selection is difficult. There is no way to avoid that source, because it's one of the major reasons the town is there."

Hall said concerns over liability and political pressure also could have been factors in the decision. The conclusions of the study without personal monitoring would be weaker than with it, he said.

At Odmark of the EPA-Idaho office in Boise said the decision to drop the personal monitoring was based on budget considerations. "I think the primary reason is it couldn't be done with the budget we had," he said. "We couldn't do it on a scale that would be statistically significant."

The testing is being done by Pacific Northwest Laboratory in Richland, Wash. The ground portion of the study will include analysis of gamma, alpha and beta radiation, officials said. The second phase will cost an estimated $400,000. The delay since last October cost the EPA an estimated $10,000 a month.

65 MPH signs go up May 3

BOISE (AP) — May 3 will be a long Sunday for Idaho Transportation Department maintenance crews.

They have the job of changing signs on most sections of the state's interstate highway system to indicate the speed limit change from 50 mph to 65 mph.

Transportation Department spokesman Jeff Stratten said 24-inch overlays with the new numbers will be applied to 200 speed limit signs on 570 miles of interstate highway throughout Idaho.

Another 50 new 65-mph speed limit signs will be put up to replace deteriorated signs, all on May 3, when the higher limit becomes legal.

Stratten said the total cost of the changeover, including materials and labor, would be about $7,500.

Only three small "urbanized" sections of Idaho's 608-mile interstate highway system do not qualify for the higher limit, authorized by Congress last month as part of an $88 billion appropriations bill for 570 miles of interstate highway and mass-transit projects.

The Idaho Transportation Board decided last week that the 65-mph limit will remain in effect on Interstate 84 from five miles west of Boise to three miles south of the city, on Interstate 15 and Interstate 86 through Pocatello, and Interstate 90 from Osburn, east to Coeur d'Alene, to the Montana border.

No hearing draws Andrus protest

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus was held in Idaho, because the has notified Energy Secretary John Lewis that he isn't happy that the federal government does not plan to hold hearings on the Hanford nuclear reactor in Idaho.

In a letter released by the governor's office on Monday, Andrus is urging Herrington to hold at least one scoping hearing in Idaho, instead of just in the states of Oregon and Washington. In an April 9 letter, Andrus urged that at least one hearing be held in Idaho, because the federal government does not plan to hold hearings on the Hanford nuclear reactor in Idaho.

"I must voice my disapproval of this appalling insensitivity to the needs of the people of Idaho," said Andrus. "The reopening of the Hanford reactor is of vital concern to them, as it is to me. The hearing process will not be complete without the input of Idaho residents and officials."

Jones: avoid 'rip offs'

BOISE — The best way to keep from getting "ripped off" in a business purchase is to deal with reputable merchants, says Attorney General Jim Jones.

Jones talked about National Consumers Week, which runs through Saturday, at a news conference on Monday.

"A deal that looks too good to be true generally is," he said. "Any deal that looks much better than a reasonable man would expect should be checked out very carefully."

He said his office has been notified recently about a number of such "deals."

"Many people have received offers by phone or mail for a so-called motorcycle for only $350. It turns out to be an underpowered moped, although in most instances, it is never delivered," he said.

Jones said the "advance fee loan scheme" still is being pushed by con-men in Idaho. People not able to obtain financing elsewhere are offered low-interest loans, usually from foreign sources, without collateral.

"The tip-off that a scam is in process is when the would-be lender asks for an advance fee for securing the loan," the attorney general said.

"Under most circumstances it is a violation of law to ask for a fee before the loan money or a binding commitment is in hand. People should be wary of these deals because the 'lender' usually disappears after the advance fee is paid," Jones said.

Phony vacations also are offered by a lot of people, he said, which sound good but which require between $75 and $300 in fees or product purchases.

"Many people have been left holding the bag, receiving neither a vacation nor a refund of their money," Jones said. "Again, these deals need to be checked out very carefully because a number of reputable organizations currently are in operation in the state," he said.

Consumers also should read contracts carefully before signing them, should read and understand product warranties, and should always keep receipts and register warranties.

Starting July 1, the attorney general's office will have a $60,000 budget for consumer protection. The Legislature stopped funding that activity in 1981, and the fiscal year 1988 appropriation is the first since then. Jones said that will allow a limited operation, but the new agency will have to concentrate on aggravated cases.

Drought aid sought

BOISE (AP) — Canyon and Ada counties have become the latest Idaho counties to ask for federal disaster assistance because of drought.

Gov. Cecil Andrus on Monday signed requests to Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng for emergency action on requests from the two county commissions. That would clear the way for eligible farmers to qualify for emergency loans and other assistance to cope with the drought.

The governor made a similar request for Washington County last week.

Andrus said local officials reported that stream flows in Canyon County are the lowest in years. The Canyon County Commission last Wednesday approved a disaster resolution.

Ada County Commission Chairman Mike Johnson said the county is obligated to declare an emergency.

Opinion

Letters/ Jail need shown by the numbers

Alternative unacceptable
I feel that, as a private citizen, Doug McConaughy has the right to express his dissenting opinion as to the proposed jail, just as every other citizen of Twin Falls County has a right to express their opinions, pro and con.

There is a question of alternatives, and the alternative to a "no" vote seems unacceptable. So, then, having listened to Mr. McConaughy's thoughts on a TV show, I feel there are questions which I, as a private citizen, should answer.

First, he made the statement that the jail architects are, "two of the best in the nation," yet describes the proposed jail as a "monstrosity" and "Anschwitz II." How is this possible? Further, the roof was of concern to interested parties, and the roof has been lowered, and the aesthetic effect improved. Citizen's input!

Then he suggests that a "judge and jury" should have been left to decide the question of the jail. This is a decision by one man or by 12, as it is, over 60 interested citizens, many of whom are property owners, have decided on a proposition to be presented to the entire county populace. Aren't these better figures?

Then his thoughts that the state would somehow pay the bulk of this jail. Cheaper for us. Well, roughly calculating his figures, the other 43 counties of the state could go with their hands out and rightfully ask around $130,000,000. This is cheaper? How?

Then his suggestion that, if the jail held 150 beds, that "the judges would fill it." Well, Mr. McConaughy, you partly answered the question of recourse against any judge who would take such an action against the civil rights of our citizens.

You say that a judge could be removed by the elective process... you're right. I'll add to that a group that Tom Stivers mentioned, the Idaho Judicial Council, would likely take a dim view of persons improperly incarcerated.

Then you say, sir, that the inmate cap is "way too small," and I have 1910 literature indicating that the cap is in line with the jail's capacity at that time. It hasn't grown any.

Then, indicating decreasing county population, your program presented the question as to whether the "jail will still be needed in two or three years." Well, sir, this area is rich in potential and the population will increase as promoters bring in new revenue producers.

Finally, as to your suggestion of "air-conditioned comfort," I can assure you that I can spend a night in that thing. Voluntarily, of course! I'm sure it could be arranged.

Letters welcome

Mormon claim isn't true

In the slick and beautiful insert in Thursday's Times-News "Mormon Testify Jesus is the Christ" is the following quote: "Bible doctrine is Mormon doctrine and Mormon doctrine is Bible doctrine. They are one and the same."

In this pluralistic society I would defend the Mormon right to believe whatever they want, but to make such a claim is pure deception. Let's look at what the Mormons believe about the nature of God and how that compares with the Bible's teachings.

Joseph Smith taught: "First, God himself, who sits enthroned in yonder heavens is a man like unto one of yourselves, that is the great secret. . . I am going to tell you how God came to be God. We have imagined that God was God from all eternity. . . God himself, the father of us all dwelt on an earth the name as Jesus Christ himself did." (Times and Seasons, Vol. 7, pp. 613-614).

In "Mormon Doctrine" compiled by Bruce R. McConkie, p. 643 we read "God himself, the father of us all, is a glorified, exalted, immortal, resurrected man!"

The heart of Mormon doctrine is contained in the following poem by Lorenzo Snow, a former president of the Mormon Church, called "Man's Destiny."

"Still, 'tis no phantom that we trace
Man's ultimatum is life's race;
This royal path has long been led
By righteous men, each now a God:
As Abram an Issac, Jacob, too,
First babes, then men — to gods they grew.

As man now is, our God once was;
As now God is, so man may be; . . .
Which doth unfold man's destiny. . ."

Now let's look at the Bible and see what it says about the nature of God and our destiny. "I am he, before me there was no God formed, neither shall there be after me. I even I, am the Lord, and beside me there is no saviour." (Isaiah 43:10-11) "I am the first, and I am the last, and beside me there is no God." (Isaiah 44:6) "Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools and changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man." (Romans 1:22-23)

Obviously we have a major contradiction between Mormon doctrine and Biblical doctrine. Because of this and many other differences Historical Biblical Christianity has always claimed that Mormonism is not Christian in doctrine.

For the Mormons to now claim to be Christian is pure deception. I would recommend any Mormon who does not understand this to listen to KCHR radio FM 91. On Christian radio they will hear in the privacy of their own homes what Historical Biblical Christian doctrine really states.

Claims are 'fraudulent'

Reference is made to the Mormon Church insert to the Good Friday newspaper: "This insert states: 'It is not uncommon to hear informed persons say: If all men believed in the Bible, all men would be Mormon. Bible doctrine is Mormon doctrine and Mormon doctrine is Bible doctrine. They are one and the same.'"

The above statement does not fall within the limits of reality. I take offense at the roughshod "I say or no say" implications. I have a great deal of difficulty in believing in the saltness of Joseph Smith. History books and court documents state that he led a sorted life. For you to tell me that an accurate account of his life is interchangeable with the words of Christ and the apostles is absurd.

In the creation of Mormonism, I find it interesting to note that Smith wrote of finding plates of gold from God. I was taught that God wrote on stone and wished that man use an angel to form the first letters. When he sent his son it was to poverty in a manger at birth as well as during his life.

In the creation of Mormonism, I find it interesting to note that Smith used magic stones and glasses to interpret the writing on the plates.

Of all the languages available to be on the golden plates, I find it interesting that Smith reports the plates contained Egyptian hieroglyphics. This left Smith free to interpret them in any fashion he should choose.

With the discovery and later decipher of the Rosetta Stone this picture was to change. Guess what? It was discovered that Smith's work was, (how do you say it politely?), fraudulent.

It is amazing to me that the church that introduced plural marriage to our country in the last century claims to be experts on ruling families today. Perhaps having 27 wives does give one condensed knowledge.

I was taught that the veil of the temple was completely rent at the moment Christ died. It should understand the implications of this act. If the church would not be building temples today.

I will close by quoting your early church leader from his King Follett discourse: "I have greater works than Jesus Christ, and my disciples have not left me yet."

Scott claims misquote

No wonder the press has so little credibility with its readers. Zealous reporters write only what they want printed.

In a telephone interview with Dan Pepkoey of the Statesman, I said repeatedly that I was not an organizer for PAC-5, I would not be a candidate, was not serving on their board and had not contributed dollars to the organization.

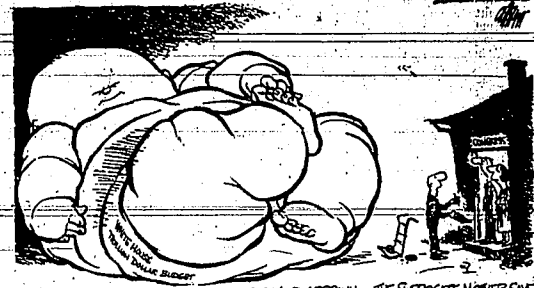

I did say I was aware of the goals of the PAC-5, which are to build membership, inform the public and encourage conservative candidates. (Not everyone in Idaho was thrilled with the beautiful wedding gift we taxpayers were asked to give the honey-moaners in Boise.)

I also said I would work locally (as I always have) to promote conservative candidates and help inform the public regarding issues and voting records.

Most importantly, I did not say "By God," I may say a lot of things, but I do not use the Lord's name in vain.

In a follow up interview with UPI, I expressed my distress over what had been done, but it was repeated again, statewide.

When the truth is distorted, it's no wonder we have so little faith in The Times-News.

Tourism issues important

Tourism is starting to be recognized for the importance to economic development that it has to local cities and towns. Non-profit organizations such as historical societies, chambers of commerce, etc., need to be "up" on tourism. But how does one "learn" about "tourism"? It takes time, and one year is only a start, but I believe this is the vice presidents of these organizations were to attend the monthly meetings of the Idaho Travel Council (ITC), Region IV, Magicland, then after two or three years of new vice presidents and presidents attending meetings the knowledge would begin to disperse.

Joe Herring of Region IV Development Association, says that our local committee of the Idaho Travel Council consists of, and is run by, experts on tourism. What better way to help your community to attract the tourist than by being involved in helping to direct and spend the tourist tax money where it will do the most good.

As a matter of fact, Region IV grants for $200,000 in tourist oriented programs will be apportioned in Pocatello next week. Is your organization involved in tourism and is it one of those that will receive some of these funds? It could be if you were involved.

Contact your chamber of commerce or Region IV at 734-6866 for information and times of the next meeting. See you there.

Let valley grow, prosper

In response to Mr. Paul G. Taylor, April 17, I do believe you missed the point. I never stated that K49AZ-TV left the air for 20 minutes. K49AZ-TV switched the program that was in progress for another in mid-stream without skipping a heartbeat.

Now understand, this has happened more than once in the time K49AZ-TV has been in operation. I just didn't jump up and grab the telephone; and it seems to happen during this program every Sunday evening. All I ask is that K49AZ-TV let the viewers know. (Please stand by or don't adjust your dial, or we have lost transmission, etc.)

Now you and I do agree, let's have more stations, let Twin Falls and the Magic Valley grow and prosper. When K6AZ-TV first began operation in Twin Falls, I got in touch with old friends and showed them how UHF (ultra high frequency) hooks up and works, so I believe I did my part to welcome K49AZ-TV to our community. By the way there are still many people who still don't have K49AZ-TV because they don't understand how the dial operates.

Now, if my informant's correct, KLIX-TV (now KMVT-TV) only had problems in their first month of operation, and since then have earned the respect of their viewers and continue to do so, KMVT-TV has a lot to be proud of. We citizens of Twin Falls and surrounding communities are unique, we deserve the best our advertising dollars can give us.

I would like to thank The Times-News for allowing letters.

Negotiations needed

As the details continue to come out about the Iran/Contra affair, my disillusionment with presidential foreign policy becomes greater. I am very uncomfortable with President Reagan's view of the situation in Nicaragua and I strongly disagree on supporting a military resolution to conflicts in that country.

Why not direct bilateral peace negotiations with the government of Nicaragua and at the same time show our good intentions by terminating financial assistance to the Contras? Our country needs to put weight behind the Contadora peace process and the new Costa Rican peace initiative and allow their people of Central America to work out their own problems, without the threat of military interventions.

Maybe professor is right

Dear Professor Quinn:
I just finished reading your letter in the Sunday paper of The Times-News. Shame on you for failing Mark Stubbs and the Republican Party.

Professor, don't you realize that the Republican Party never lies to the American public?

When President Reagan, in his 1980 campaign, promised the public that he would reduce government spending, he kept his word. Just ask the people on Social Security and welfare, veterans, street people, social programs, revenue sharing, the unemployed, unions and the low income.

Yes, yes, just ask any of these people, they will tell you he reduced spending. (Let's not talk about the national debt or military spending.)

Did he not say he was going to make our nation safe and secure? Did he not say Star Wars was worth the cost? Come to think of it, let's not talk about this either.

Okay, now, here's something we can talk about. The president stated that we should not deal with terrorists, and not have nuclear arms deals to hostile countries. Come to think of it, let's not talk about this either. Okay, here's something, our president vetoed the highway bill, saying that it was a waste of the taxpayers' money, saying that there was just too much waste in it. We needed the money to build roads and airstrips in South America. Come to think of it, let's not talk about this either.

Well, anyway, back during the '86 election, the right-to-work people, and not have nuclear arms deals to hostile countries. Come to think of it, let's not talk about this either. It would not lower wages or reduce benefits, but would create new jobs and bring in new business.

The right-to-work would make lots of good things happen for Idaho. Well-it! Maybe we'd better not talk about this either.

Come to think of it, Professor Quinn, maybe you're right.

Letters/ Dallas' shooting of officers gains defenders

Wrong people in uniform

Re: Doris O'Connor's letter of 4/2/87:
I was for five years a chemist for the Idaho Bureau of Laboratories, and am qualified to do alcohol analysis on blood and breath samples. I have been qualified as an expert witness on alcohol in virtually every courthouse from Nampa to Preston.

I won't bore you with the number of times the defendant testified that he had consumed only one beer. But I can assure you it doesn't matter how difficult to what — the quantitative analysis does not lie, nor is it prejudiced as to age, gender or social standing.

Virginia Demeyer is reported to have drunk six, 6-ounce glasses of wine and two gin and tonics. Roughly that correlates to 14, 12-ounce bottles of beer. She did this of her own accord. Deliberately. Then she attempted to drive her car. Deliberately. She ran over and killed two helpless, innocent children. Where these children were standing or who wasn't watching them is not at issue.

She was charged with vehicular manslaughter, which is a felony for killing two defenseless children, and never spent a night in jail. Why? I wonder what gifts those two children had to offer society?

Your gall to unmitigated, Ms. O'Connor, when you attempt to minimize the crime of deliberate disregard for human life by a drunk driver. Your infantile attempt to compare this with Claude Dallas is disgusting. Neither of these children were threatening Demeyer, nor did they have a car in which to defend themselves against her willful negligence.

Two armed men entered Claude Dallas' camp and exceeded their authority of issuing him a citation. Had they done what they were paid to do they would still be alive.

Please re-read the two previous sentences slowly until you comprehend them. Had they issued the citation(s) and had Dallas not come to court, then a warrant could have been issued and the sheriff or a deputy with real authority would have gone and arrested him.

Your two amiable game warden friends were not amiable and public testimony and outcry readily shows this. Power is oft times a capricious servant, Ms. O'Connor, a self-serving task master.

Bill Pogue was a belligerent, overbearing zealot who routinely pulled his gun on people to enforce his own version of quasi-authority. It is most unfortunate he was allowed to carry a gun.

The Idaho Fish and Game Department should be fined by Claude Dallas for attempting to enforce his own version of quasi-authority for serious offenses as holding a fishing pole for example. Find me one who will testify Claude Dallas ever pulled a gun on him.

Claude Dallas stood trial for murder and was found guilty of manslaughter. A jury of 11 women and men — your peers — sentenced him to three years in prison.

In answer to your question as to why Dallas did not take his punishment and fine, I am sorry to have to point out such an elementary answer. Your two friends never gave him that option — they gave him a "come with us now or else" choice.

Two amiable men don't exceed their authority of issuing tickets and draw their guns. One of your friends did Ms. O'Connor, and when he did the other's other friend into the same position.

They were known bullies, high on expropriated power. They were wrong. Now they are dead. Killed by their own megalomania. I'm sorry your friends are dead, Ms. O'Connor. I'm sorry for their families. And I'm sorry for Claude Dallas. Had I been there, I might have been different. I'm older than Claude and I have dealt with more bullies. Bill Pogue and Connelly Elms would still be alive. But they wouldn't be working for the Fish and Game Department. Not Idaho's. Now anywhere. I give you that as my personal guarantee.

WILL BUEHLER

Wardens were 'wrong'

Concerning Mr. Claude Dallas Jr., I have read most all the papers, books and also watched the movie. As our daughter lives in Jerome, my husband is also a hunter; raccoon, quail and elk. He has hunted in Idaho, Colorado, Kansas and in Missouri, where we have also known conservation agents, some were very nice people, and some were different.

It seems as though Pogue was looking for trouble. Stop and think. What would you do if two conservation officers came up to you and first thing took your gun? In my opinion it was kill or be killed.

I'm sure Mr. Dallas would not be alive today if he hadn't had a second gun. I think most people would try and save their own lives if they felt they were in danger. I don't believe in killing, and I surely believe in law enforcement. Pogue, it seems, was a belligerent man who should never have had a job as a law enforcer. Sometimes a uniform makes a person feel about others. I feel Connelly Elms was with the wrong person. For so many people to have trusted Mr. Claude Dallas Jr. with their homes and all their worldly goods and considered him a good friend, he couldn't be that bad a person. Surely all the people that knew him couldn't be that wrong.

Would you stand and not try to protect yourself if you thought someone was going to shoot you? As for the Pogue family, I'm sure you loved him, but you also knew him for the type of person he was. Sorry, Mr. Claude Dallas Jr. — law is good and we have to have it, but you got a raw deal.

Jerry Conley, check your agents carefully so maybe something like this won't happen again. Jack Olsen, maybe you missed my book. Instead of "Give A Boy A Gun," it maybe should have been "Give the wrong person a uniform." My feelings from Missouri.

Murder jury deliberates

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A jury began deliberating Monday whether Billionaire Boys Club leader Joe Hunt is a cold-blooded killer or just the victim of an elaborate hoax at the hands of an admitted con man.

Hunt, 27, is charged with killing self-described con man and freelance journalist Ronald Levin, who disappeared from his Beverly Hills home June 6, 1984.

His body has not been found. Deputy District Attorney Fred Wapner and tens of thousands of people gathered in Soledad Canyon after Hunt allegedly killed him and disfigured his face with shotgun blasts.

But defense attorney Arthur Barends claims Levin is alive and pulling off the ultimate con. He produced two witnesses who said they saw Levin in a flashy car near Tucson, Ariz., more than a year after his presumed death. Hunt's girlfriend also testified she was with Hunt when the murder reportedly took place.

NEW YORK (AP) — Several major airlines said Monday they would extend their lowest discount fares through the end of summer, but the tickets would be more expensive and carry more restrictions than the cut-rate fares unveiled earlier this year.

Continental Airlines also said it had asked the Department of Transportation to require U.S. airlines to routinely disclose service information such as on-time performance, complaints about lost luggage and the time it takes for answers on telephone reservation lines.

Continental and Eastern Airlines, both units of Texas Air Corp., said they would continue offering the special "Maxxaver" fares previously slated to end May 20.

Northwest Airlines said it would match the discount fare extension. United and Delta and American representatives said their companies were studying the fare announcements.

Child goes to stepmother

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dry-eyed but downcast, a 4-year-old whose father allegedly tried to sell her for $100,000 was turned over to her stepmother Monday as the battle for her custody continued.

Rachel Rauser was escorted by police off an Eastern Airlines plane that flew into Philadelphia International Airport from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., avoiding reporters and photographers waiting in the terminal.

She stood quietly on the tarmac and nodded when her stepmother, Cindy Sullivan-Waltman of Salem, N.J., spoke to her, and then they got into a station wagon bound for an undisclosed destination.

The little girl, whose mother was killed in a traffic accident in 1984, had been staying with her aunt and uncle, Deborah and Gary Stern of Sunrise, Fla., who have vowed to continue fighting for the child's custody.

A New Jersey court awarded custody to Ms. Sullivan-Waltman, who is separated from the child's father, Joseph Waltman.

Molestation case goes to trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 3-year-old, $6 million McMartin Pre-School child molestation case went to trial Monday; and prospective jurors were asked if they could sacrifice at least a year of their lives at $10 a day.

Of 73 potential jurors squeezed into the courtroom of Superior Court Judge William Pounders, 16 raised their hands to say the lengthy case would pose no hardship.

"That's exactly the number we estimated, so I think the trial will go very well," Pounders said.

They were sent to a jury room to fill out a detailed 41-page questionnaire, asking about their lives, knowledge of the case and any prejudices regarding child molestation defendants.

The case has altered significantly since the first allegations broke in March 1984 that children at the McMartin Pre-School in suburban Manhattan Beach had been raped, sodomized, then terrorized into silence by satanic rites and animal mutilations.

Agency reviews itself

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, stung by allegations that agency probes have been hamstrung in favor of the nuclear industry, moved on Monday to bolster the independence of investigators and vowed any further action needed to "put our house in order."

"This agency relies on thorough investigations to accomplish its regulatory activities," said Chairman Lando Zech. "Any weakness in its investigatory processes, internal or external, is unacceptable."

In his announcement, Zech referred specifically to cases aired April 9 before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, including the disclosure that a confidential NRC memorandum regarding allegations about a Louisiana nuclear plant had been leaked from the files of Commissioner Thomas Roberts to the owners of the utility.

Roberts acknowledged to the Senate committee that he originally squashed evidence that a copy of the memo, bearing his initials, had been found by an NRC investigator in the offices of the Louisiana Power & Light Co., owners of the Waterford nuclear plant. Roberts said he didn't leak the document, but ordered the copy, coupled with the investigator's notes, destroyed because he thought someone was trying to "set me up."

Zech said Monday, however, that Roberts now has asked the NRC's Office of Inspector and Auditor "to initiate, and complete as soon as possible, an investigation to determine how an NRC memorandum that appears to have come from his office's files" was obtained by the utility.

The Senate panel, headed by Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, also heard complaints from NRC investigators of harassment and intimidation by commission's superiors regarding probes of the Comanche Peak nuclear plant in Texas and the various difficulties facing nuclear operations of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Zech said he had ordered Administrative Judge Gary Edging to review those two investigations. "While we prejudging no person and no component of this agency, we want to make clear that we will take whatever corrective action may be required to put our house in order," Zech said.

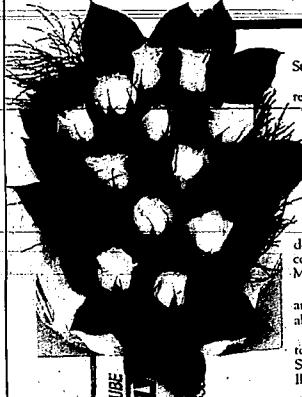

Justice was denied FBI post as 'subversive'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The late Potter Stewart, a Supreme Court justice for 23 years, was rejected for a job as an FBI agent in 1941 apparently because FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover was worried Stewart or his mother might be "subversive," USA Today reported Monday.

"Particular care (should) be given encouragement can be offered" on Stewart's application to be an FBI agent, Hoover wrote in an internal FBI memo on Stewart in May 1941.

In a subsequent letter to Stewart, Hoover said, "I regret that no en-

Retired general, envoy, dies at 85 of Lou Gehrig's disease

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, a World War II hero who became chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam during the buildup of American forces there, died Sunday at age 85, the Pentagon announced Monday.

The Army ordered flags lowered at all Army installations and Taylor's funeral Thursday in Arlington National Cemetery.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said Taylor will be remembered as "one of the great military men in American history" and that the four-star general "epitomized what it means to be a soldier, a diplomat and a scholar."

The Pentagon said Taylor died of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, which is more commonly known as Lou Gehrig's disease. He had been hospitalized since mid-January at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, where he died last Sunday.

Taylor was born in Keytesville, Mo., on Aug. 26, 1901. He graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1922.

His World War II career was studied with stunning expertise, including a cloak-and-dagger mission to Italy to confer with Italian officers before their country's surrender was announced.

GEN. MAXWELL D. TAYLOR
World War II airborne hero

He led the 101st Airborne in its jump into Normandy on D-Day and then led his paratroopers through 73 days of combat in Holland.

After the war, he became commander of Berlin, the Army's top post in the German capital, then under the control of the United States, the Soviet Union, France and Great Britain.

He commanded the 8th Army in Korea toward the end of the Korean War and was United Nations commander in the Far East.

Taylor assumed the Army's top military position, that of chief of staff, in 1965, a position he held until his first retirement on July 1, 1969.

Taylor wrote four books, starting with "The Uncertain Trumpet," in 1960. In it, he said massive retaliation with Air Force nuclear bombs continued to be the "basic strategic concept which guides our military preparations today."

He retired from the Army after 41 years of service and became chairman of the Mexican Light & Power Company in Mexico City. In the fall of 1969, he was made president of New York City's Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts.

Taylor was recalled by President John F. Kennedy to assist him as an adviser in the military and intelligence fields. Taylor had been head of the "Cuban Study Group" formed by Kennedy to look into the Bay of Pigs debacle and to advise on guerrilla tactics. He opposed the strategy of quarantine in favor of strikes that would destroy the Soviet missile sites in Cuba.

In the fall of 1961, Kennedy sent him to Vietnam to see what the United States could do there to stop Vietnamese communist forces. He recommended that U.S. military presence in Vietnam should be limited primarily to a "logistical task force" and as an "emergency reserve in a military crisis."

The general advocated bombing the north at a time when Johnson was saying the United States would not bomb the North Vietnamese capital of Hanoi.

He told reporters there were three purposes for U.S. planes to bomb North Vietnam: "To give the South Vietnamese some way to strike back against the source of devastations committed by the communists; to limit as far as possible the infiltration from North Vietnam into South Vietnam; to remind leaders in Hanoi they must pay an increasingly high price for a continuation of their help to the Viet Cong."

Taylor is survived by his wife, the former Lydia Gardner Happer and two sons, John Maxwell Taylor and Thomas Happer Taylor.

When he resigned in 1969, Taylor told reporters that "the future is certainly far more hopeful than it was a year ago." Taylor's public appearances for speeches and the like were often greeted with anti-war protests.

He chided critics of U.S. policy in Vietnam in 1968, saying this country was there for a "simple, clear objective — the independence of South Vietnam." He said the United States had to demonstrate that communist "wars of liberation were not inevitable."

Transplant recipient dies of kidney failure

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Charles A. Walker, the world's longest surviving heart-lung transplant recipient, has died at Stanford Medical Center, hospital officials said. He was 36.

Walker, who died Sunday night, had been hospitalized April 2 with pneumonia and was put on a respirator 10 days later after suffering gastro-intestinal bleeding, said family members.

The cause of death was listed as infection and renal failure.

The Mountain View, Calif., man had received two heart-lung transplants — the first on May 1, 1981, and the second on June 17, 1984.

Walker's brother, Jack P. Walker, who flew in from Syracuse, N.Y., to be with the family after his brother's condition worsened, said last week that chest X-rays showed no signs that the second transplant was being rejected.

He said Walker's admission to the hospital had come because of an accumulation of fluid in his abdomen. He said his brother also had liver disease.

with the 1986 death of Mary Gohlke, a 50-year-old Mesa, Ariz., resident who received the transplant in 1981. She died May 6, 1986, two weeks after she fell and damaged an artery in her abdomen, officials said.

Surgery slated today

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A University of Nevada-Las Vegas cheerleader whose bout with Hodgkin's disease gained national attention during a basketball tournament is scheduled to undergo a delicate bone marrow transplant Tuesday.

Valerie Pida, 19, of Las Vegas, Nev., has been in City of Hope Hospital for nearly two weeks preparing for the transplant.

Her father, Bob Pida, said she was "very weak" after undergoing high doses of radiation and chemotherapy treatments to kill cancerous cells.

The bone marrow is to be donated by her 22-year-old brother, John. Valerie has had Hodgkin's disease since she was 13. Doctors say her chances of survival are 20 to 30 percent with the bone marrow transplant, zero without it.

She won national attention when UNLV's basketball team went to college basketball's Final Four in New Orleans last month, and more than $135,000 has been raised to help defray her medical costs.

Her physician, Dr. Stephen Foreman, said Valerie has maintained her positive outlook, which he said is crucial to the success of the operation.

When he resigned in 1969, Taylor told reporters that "the future is certainly far more hopeful than it was a year ago." Taylor's public appearances for speeches and the like were often greeted with anti-war protests.

Philippine troops battle communists

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Hundreds of soldiers supported by helicopter gunships fought Communist rebels Monday about 30 miles north of Manila, the government news agency said.

It said the fighting was part of a sweep by about 400 troops through guerrilla strongholds in the mountains of Bulacan province. The Philippines News Agency report said at least 15 rebels had been killed and scores had been wounded. The agency said two government soldiers were wounded.

In the capital, President Corason Aquino appealed for unity and her generals said charges of mutiny and sedition would be filed against rebellious soldiers who attacked army headquarters Saturday.

Army and national police units encountered resistance from about 300 members of the rebel New People's Army in the sweep of eastern Bulacan, the agency said.

According to the report, fighting continued Monday morning and three clashes with retrailing rebels occurred between the towns of Remedios Trinidad and San Idefonso.

By Monday night, government forces were closing in on a 106-acre rebel training camp near San Idefonso, the Philippine News Agency said, quoting military reports.

Military spokesmen said rebels attacked an army camp in the north of Negros Occidental province in the central Visaya Islands on Monday, killing four soldiers and a young girl who was the daughter of a soldier.

During a Roman Catholic Mass at the Manila Cathedral, Mrs. Aquino said she regretted the lack of unity among the archipelago's 58 million people since Ferdinand E. Marcos fled to Hawaii in February 1986 after two decades as president.

Former soldiers who support Marcos were responsible for Saturday's raid, which included an attempt to free 110 prisoners held in connection with a coup plot discovered Jan. 27.

Saturday's mutineers surrendered after eight hours to troops surrounding the headquarters building at Fort Bonifacio in suburban Makata, where the rebels held about 50 hostages. One rebel was killed and two hostages were slightly wounded when troops loyal to Mrs. Aquino opened fire.

"It is unfortunate that not all Filipinos are thinking as one," said Mrs. Aquino, whose government has survived several coups and military conspiracies. "It is perhaps good to remind all of us that so much work has yet to be done and that we will be able to accomplish this only if we work as one."

Col. Honesto Isleta, a military spokesman, told reporters the 58 mutineers would be charged with sedition and rebellion. They include 13 rebels who stormed the main gate before dawn Saturday, 42 stockade inmates and three military police guards.

No participants in any coup attempt or plot have been tried so far, but more than 100 men who took part in the January attempt are being held.

Walesa completes autobiography

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Publishing house to publish his autobiography and submitted manuscript about the beginning of his political career.

Walesa, the shipyard electrician who won the 1983 Nobel Peace Prize for his leadership of the now-outlawed Solidarity free trade union, said he originally offered the manuscript to a Polish publishing house. But he said it would probably appear first in the West because of Polish censorship.

Walesa said he signed a contract with the Krakow-based Zaok publishing house.

Zaok is an independent Catholic publishing house.

"If it were not for the communists and if there was a real reform (in Poland) it would already have been published," said Walesa, who was contacted by telephone at his Gdansk apartment.

Alfonsin fires Argentine army chief

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — President Raul Alfonsin dismissed the army chief Monday, after days of guiding his civilian government through two military mutinies, and put the defense minister in charge temporarily.

The rebellions were the most serious threat to Alfonsin's administration since his inauguration in December 1983 ended nearly eight years of military rule.

At least 8,000 people vanished during the "dirty war" conducted against suspected leftists by the military juntas that ruled the country from 1976-83, and about 250 officers face charges of human rights abuses. The army recently demanded amnesty for those officers and the resignation of the army chief of staff, Gen. Hector Rios Erenu.

Hundreds of thousands of people went into the streets to support Alfonsin through the crisis.

The newspaper Diario Popular's headline Monday said: "The People Triumph!" In an editorial, the Buenos Aires Herald referred to "the end of the affair."

Storekeeper Juan Carlos Arosa summed up the feelings of many Argentines: "I can't tell you how happy I am we don't have a military government. Wait, yes I can. This is wonderful, just wonderful!"

Roberto Iglesias Concepcion, a lawyer, said: "I know I was scared, very scared, that the army would try to come to power if it saw an opportunity, but I think Alfonsin ended the rebellion with courage."

About 400,000 people responded to offings from radio and television announcers Sunday to gather in the huge Plaza de Mayo and "defend our democracy." They were there when the president flew to the rebel camp and persuaded the 150 rebellious soldiers to surrender.

Rios Erenu's dismissal appeared to be part of the deal. Defense Minister Horacio Jaunarena, a civilian, is replacing him temporarily and a senior army officer is expected to be chosen later.

The chief of staff angered many officers because of his order that those wanted for questioning in human rights cases testify in civilian courts.

In addition to the approximately 250 officers who face charges, five members of the former military juntas have been convicted and sent to prison for terms ranging from 4 1/2 years to life.

Although the government has not given a formal reason for Rios Erenu's removal, his usefulness to Alfonsin appeared to end Saturday night when loyalist troops refused his order to take the infantry school at the Campo de Mayo military base, where the rebels had taken refuge.

Guerrillas fire rockets into Israeli territory

JERUSALEM (AP) — Guerrillas fired a rocket into northern Israel Monday, as Israeli soldiers searched the border for clues of how Palestinian guerrillas slipped through Israel's defenses a day earlier.

Three other Soviet-made Katyusha rockets slammed into the self-designated Israeli security zone in south Lebanon Monday, the Israeli command said. None of the rockets caused any damage or injuries.

Meanwhile, violence was reported for the ninth day in the occupied territories, where Israelis have been feuding with Palestinians. Israeli troops shot and wounded a Palestinian teen-ager in the Gaza Strip after protesters hurled two firebombs at a military patrol.

Sunday's guerrilla infiltration, the worst in northern Israel in seven years, ended when Israeli soldiers discovered the guerrillas and engaged them in a firefight that left three Palestinians and two Israeli officers dead.

The Palestinians had crossed electronic fences and security ditches in an attempt to enter Israel and seize hostages, the army said. The military said the infiltrators belonged to Yasser Arafat's Fatah faction of the PLO.

Israel radio said soldiers searched

Meiss al-Jabal, a predominantly Shiite Moslem village where the three guerrillas may have hid before crossing the Israeli border near the Menara kibbutz.

Israel retaliated for the infiltration-by-bombing-a-guerrilla-headquarters in the Palestinian refugee camp of Rashidya, south of the Lebanese port city of Tyre, after sundown Sunday.

A U.N. source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said there was no violence in south Lebanon Monday.

"Guerrillas were keeping a low profile, apparently in anticipation of further possible Israeli retaliation," he said.

But no increased Israeli troop presence was noted in south Lebanon, where the Israelis maintain about 1,000 soldiers and a 1,500-member Lebanese militia in a "security zone" designed to protect northern Israel from attack.

On Saturday, the zone was the site of a 14-hour battle between the Israelis and Shiite Moslem guerrillas in which 18 guerrillas were killed and four Israelis wounded.

Hitler feted

NORTHEIM, West Germany (AP) — Groups of right-wing "skinheads" celebrating Adolf Hitler's birthday fought running street battles with Turkish youths, police said Monday.

The clashes, in which at least a dozen people were injured, started late Sunday and continued into the early hours Monday.

About 35 of the right-wing extremists — known as "skinheads" because they shave their heads — gathered Sunday night in the center of this Lower Saxony town to celebrate the late Nazi dictator's birthday, April 20.

After police chased them away from the center of town, the "skinheads" attacked a group of Turkish youths. Other groups of the skinheads, and the fighting spread throughout the town.

Police said eight skinheads were arrested.

Many West German cities and towns have communities of Turks, who left home in search of better-paying jobs.

Woodbury's plaza receives council approval

By PAT MARGANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A proposed shopping center at Blue Lakes Boulevard North and Pole Line Road gained the final approval of the Twin Falls City Council on Monday.

But don't expect to see construction this year because the Utah developer is still shopping for tenants for "Magic Valley Plaza."

Woodbury Corp. counsel Jeff Woodbury said construction might start next spring at the earliest. The corporation is talking with several large businesses to locate in the shopping center, but none have committed in about a month, he may be able to release the name of a potential tenant his company "feels good about," he said.

Woodbury said smaller businesses are interested in the center, but the corporation wants to land a large anchor store, such as a grocery or junior department store, before starting construction.

The council approved Woodbury's request for a commercial planned-unit-development zoning classification. The approval is contingent on the execution of a preliminary FUD agreement identifying responsibilities of the city and the developer, such as maintenance of interior streets within the 78-acre parcel.

City staff reported a savings by placing the responsibility on the developer. Currently, the Magic Valley Mall has accepted such duties.

Woodbury said he was surprised about the street issue since the development would be an asset to the city.

The council approved also a "conceptual" site plan for the project. Within a year, the corporation must submit final plans.

The Woodbury Corp. had previously sought the same zoning classification to build an enclosed mall, but abandoned the plans because of the construction of the Magic Valley Mall across Blue Lakes Boulevard.

The shopping center the corporation now has in mind would include businesses not usually found in malls, as well as restaurants, a housing complex, recreation center, business offices and storage units.

Woodbury also addressed a concern raised by people at the last council meeting, namely the fate of the poplar trees on the land.

After research, he found the trees were planted in the early 1900's, Woodbury said. The former property owner says a tree-a-year is usually lost in storms, which brought up the safety aspect of keeping the trees.

"We think they are beautiful," Woodbury said. But because of their age, he wasn't sure they could all be saved.

"We want to plant new poplar trees," he added. "That we aren't going to be hurt by severe winds is a concern."

In other business, the council took the first step toward the formation of the local improvement districts for work on North Col.

More than 100 Murtaugh residents listen to panelists' answers to questions on the school district's financial woes

Murtaugh patrons' fears confirmed

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News staff writer

MURTAUGH — About 100 patrons of the Murtaugh School District heard state legislators and education leaders confirm their fears that there are no easy answers to the small district's financial problems.

District voters go to the polls May 1 to vote on an override levy that will determine if the high school at Murtaugh remains open or if students will be transported to a nearby school next year.

Four state legislators and two Department of Education specialists told the Murtaugh parents their district is not alone in facing finanacial problems, but like other small districts faces some hard decisions.

The Chief for a Better Murtaugh called the Monday night meeting with the legislators and Department of Education officials to explain the options facing the district in the event the levy fails. The Murtaugh board of trustees has announced it will close the high school if the funds are not approved.

Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, said the basic educational cost per student is higher in the smaller schools than in larger schools.

"I believe the things you have to do to maintain a district separate from consolidation are things you must pay for," Neibaur said. "If the state becomes more involved in funding, they'll start laying down criteria that won't be popular with small districts."

Another legislator, Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, explained that the bigger schools are more efficient and administrative costs are lower. He suggested districts should continue to count on increased educational funds from the state such as are available this year, because this year's increase was due to increasing taxes.

"I think we have reached a limit as far as increasing taxes," he said.

Murtaugh has other problems too. It is currently on an "advised" accreditation status.

CSI offers staff members pay increases

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho Monday mailed contracts offering 7 percent salary increases to its 300 staff members.

"That's pretty much what the governor and the Legislature had planned," CSI President Gerald Meyerhoefer told the CSI board at its Monday meeting. "We feel pretty good about it."

Since salaries were frozen by legislative funding last year, the raises are welcome, Meyerhoefer said. All CSI salaries are raised equally, so the board followed the state's vocational-portion of CSI's budget, which was raised 7 percent to $2.2 million.

The state's academic portion went up about 9.2 percent to about $250 million. The state contributes only about 38 percent of CSI's overall budget.

CSI's 10 administrators will get 5 percent raises and Meyerhoefer said his salary negotiated with the board will also fall within that guideline.

Department heads are formulating requests for other money available. Private practice rooms for Fine Arts students and new microscopes are among the requests already made, Meyerhoefer said.

In other business, a new CSI athletic director was named after four years of Meyerhoefer serving in that role. CSI and the city of Twin Falls have also reached tentative agreement with area businesses to lengthen North College Road to Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

Karl Kleinkopf, chairman of CSI's physical education department, was hired as the school's athletic director to centralize athletic matters and represent a consistent line to the National Junior College Athletic Association. Kleinkopf's teaching will likely be reduced to accommodate the new duties and additional salary, still being negotiated, is expected to rise several thousand dollars, Meyerhoefer said.

Kleinkopf, who officially takes over July 1, plans to examine and improve reserved seating for basketball games.

Meyerhoefer said King Videocable, local station K49AZ and local radio stations will be contacted during the next 10 days to discuss the possibility of broadcasting Golden Eagles basketball next year. The team won the NJCAA championship this year.

North College Road may be extended to reduce congestion and tend to reduce congestion and improve access to local businesses.

Meyerhoefer said City Manager Tom Courtney and seven businesses surrounding the area have tentatively agreed to share the cost of lengthening the road and putting in sidewalks and curbs.

Meyerhoefer said that while CSI and the city have previously been in a dispute over a Local Improvement District, they may be able to voluntarily contribute to the improvements. Courtney was told by a Boise law firm that this method of making the cuts is permissible for the city and CSI, Meyerhoefer said.

CSI's share would be about $10,000 annually.

The businesses sharing the cost would be to join such as Local Improvement District, Sandpiper restaurant, Woodbury Corp. and John Breckenridge north of Pole Line Road and Snake River Tire, Roy Raymond Ford and Bill Workman south of Pole Line.

Safeway workers OK terms of new contract

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Unionized workers at 60 Safeway supermarkets in Idaho and three other states overwhelmingly have approved a new labor contract, clearing the way for a Detroit chain to take over the stores.

Grocery workers and meatcutters belonging to the United Food and Commercial Workers Union accepted the three-year pact by a 94 percent margin, 532-33, in voting last week.

Employees from Safeway's 18 stores in Idaho and western Wyoming also endorsed the contract by a wide margin, 248-14, said Sam Miller, president of UFW Local 58A.

According to a tentative schedule, Borman's Inc. could acquire the Salt Lake Division of Safeway Stores Inc. as early as next weekend, Miller said.

Gilbert Borman, director of public relations for Borman's Inc., would not confirm an imminent purchase, but said the company finds "considerable grounds to believe that a favorable outcome is possible."

The new contract calls for an immediate cut-in-wages. However, employees also will receive future bonuses — that — promise — to be made up for the cuts. It also offers more liberal seniority rights for longtime employees, Miller said.

The pact covers all 60 stores, including some that were non-union or had partial union representation.

Borman's, which operates 194 discount stores in the U.S. and Canada in the Detroit area, had announced its intent to buy the division early in March. The chain set a new, less expensive labor contract as a prime condition for completing the deal for the stores in Idaho, Nevada, Utah and western Wyoming. Sufficient financing and negotiation of a contract were other terms.

Miller said last week that union leaders forged the pact with Borman's over four weeks of negotiations.

Under Safeway, the division generated $350 million in sales in the year ending Jan. 3. At the end of 1985, the latest annual data available, Borman's posted more than $1 billion worth of sales.

Home violence strikes all walks of life

By RUSSELL WHITING
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Every second a woman is beaten, every five minutes a woman is raped. So reads a brochure published by the Idaho Network to Stop Violence Against Women. Lauri Gadwa, vice president of the organization, was in Ketchum to address Crisis Hotline volunteers last week on the reality of violence in the home.

"Spouse batterers come from all walks of life," she said. "There are no statistics that tell us they are poorer or less educated than anyone else. That is scary."

Alcohol and drugs are not the cause either, according to Gadwa. They only enhance the qualities already present in the batterer.

Gadwa is a network advocate living in Stanley who has worked with battered women throughout the state and says there is often no indication of violence before the fact.

"A lot of people are good actors. They just live in a big facade of a happy relationship when they are in public," Gadwa said.

The problem, however, is increasing in a society where "friends" or "lovers" are less likely to research their partner before marriage and overlook signs of violence and temper, she said.

The Chief for a Better Murtaugh called the Monday night meeting with the legislators and Department of Education officials to explain the options facing the district in the event the levy fails. The Murtaugh board of trustees has announced it will close the high school if the funds are not approved.

Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, said the basic educational cost per student is higher in the smaller schools than in larger schools.

"I believe the things you have to do to maintain a district separate from consolidation are things you must pay for," Neibaur said. "If the state becomes more involved in funding, they'll ing low self-esteem, believing in strong male and female roles, being jealous, having to be in control and using sex to prove virility.

The victim is likely to be an "enabler" — blaming herself, acting passive and showing no strength, according to Gadwa.

"It is a chemistry of two like-people coming together," she said.

Gadwa said in her experience the batterer is likely never to change though he may promise to after a beating.

Gadwa said statistics show that 23 percent of all women experience mental or physical battering — and that 90 percent of the abuse goes unreported.

"Education is the best way to combat the problem. The victim needs to be able to say that the situation is wrong," she said.

There are shelters for battered women in most major cities in the state, including Twin Falls. The locations are kept secret, but people wishing to use them can receive information by calling the crisis hotline in their city or town.

"The battered spouse needs to know the options," Gadwa said. "They need to know there are alternatives to the situations they are in and ways to start over."

Kimberly schools considering policy for dealing with AIDS

By LYNDA BOODY
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly School Board discussed policies for dealing with communicable diseases, including AIDS, and admitting nonresident students Thursday night, but will not make a decision on them until next month.

The proposed communicable disease policy sets guidelines for dealing with both students and employees who are known to suffer from the AIDS virus, as well as those who are carriers of AIDS or Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

"The policy is modeled after the Blaine County School District policy, except that Kimberly's version includes employees as well," says Superintendent Richard Bausher.

The Blaine County School District policy was recently tested with a case of a student who contracted AIDS through a blood transfusion, and the board decided to admit the child.

Under the proposal, an evaluation team consisting of at least one school district physician, the student's or employee's physician, the student's or employee's school district attorney would study whether an infected student or employee should be permitted to participate in classes.

The proposal states that the team will consider the behavior and physical condition of the student. The expected type of interaction with others in the school setting, as well as the risks and benefits to the student and others, would also be considered.

The evaluation team would make its recommendation to the school board, which would make the final decision about whether the person would be allowed to participate in school activities.

Procedures for the admission of non-resident students were also outlined in a new policy. The policy would require interviews or from excessive class loads.

In other business, the school board approved the request of high school student Rick Stone to graduate early. However, Board Chairman G. Kent Taylor said, "We should discontinue this practice unless we have previous circumstances."

Stone plans to join her husband who is leaving the area in January.

Bausher also discussed recently passed legislation that could affect the school district. One Senate bill will allow two-year supplemental levies to be passed. The school board may vote to reduce the amount in the second year, but not to increase it. This levy may pass by a simple majority vote.

Another Senate bill would designate graffiti on school grounds as cause for misdemeanor action. Graffiti includes writing, scribbling and drawing on school property. The bill allows the school to press charges for damages and to fine the offender $250.

A third bill has raised the penalty or fine of revoking certificates for teachers found guilty of selling drugs or displaying immoral behavior.

Dad hopes solitary will prove salutary

DEAR ABBY: My parents are divorced and I live with my father. My 17-year-old sister lives with our mother in another town.

I'll be 15 next month. Last semester I flunked almost all my subjects. Up until now I've done quite well in school, but I guess I just got lazy.

My father took away my stereo, radio and all my tapes. I am not allowed to accept any telephone calls or make any. I have to stay after school every day for an hour and a half to study, plus I am not permitted to sleep after 8 a.m. on the weekends. These are the rules my father made, and I will have to obey them until I get my next report card.

Abby, I don't smoke, don't drink and I don't do drugs. I'm a pretty decent kid, but my father cares enough about you to insist that you study. By your own admission you are capable of doing "quite well."

Now, hit the books and pull down some impressive grades, so you can go back to enjoying life with father.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I disagree strongly. His work takes him out of town periodically on business seminars. The last two trips, he has developed a friendship with a woman from his office who also attends these three-day seminars.

The first time, he took her out for a drink and dancing. The second time, they had breakfast together every morning — just the two of them — even though there were seven people from the same office there. They spent every evening together — with him walking her to her room (one night getting in at 3:30 a.m.).

This friendship is still going on at work: they go to lunch together, taking time off in the middle of the day to go shopping. He claims it's business and there is no reason for me to be upset.

The lady says it is just a platonic friendship — she has many male friends and her husband doesn't mind. Am I wrong to let this friendship upset me? Or is my husband wrong to expect me to accept this kind of friendship?

—HURT IN OREGON
DEAR HURT: He's wrong. You seem to have a fairly complete timetable — of — your husband's schedule. If it is accurate, I think you had better opt for a counselor before you need a referee — or a lawyer. This kind of "business" could be filed under "monkey."

DEAR ABBY: Will you please save our sanity and print the letter someone sent in about wind chimes? We are being changed to death here! We'd like to mail it to the neighbors in our circle who are causing us sleepless nights and driving us crazy. I hope you can find it.

—J.D.
DEAR J.D.: It was a breeze: DEAR ABBY: Why do people assume that everyone in the world likes wind chimes? My neighbors hang some right outside my bedroom window, and in the middle of the night it sounds as if my telephone is ringing. Somebody stole their first set, and I don't dare to say anything because they might think I took them. (Believe me, I was tempted.) If people like wind chimes so much, why don't they hang them INSIDE the house, turn on a fan and enjoy them to their heart's content?

DEAR ABBY: Your recent column on labeling rest room doors reminded me of the time when Jock, my good Scotman friend, visited me in Kansas City and got into big trouble when he thought the sign on the door said "LADIES."

Commune facilities to ranch

PORTLAND (AP) — A housing complex and other buildings from the abandoned central Oregon commune of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh are being prepared for a new life at the commune of the Church Universal and Triumphant in Montana.

The Rajneesh housing was purchased by Royal Teton Ranch, headed by Elizabeth Clare Prophet, also known as "Guru Ma." Ms. Prophet claims she can converse with "ascended masters," ranging from Buddha, to Pope John XXIII, and provides "dictations" for her followers.

The Church Universal and Triumphant owns about 33,000 acres in Park County, Mont., including a 12,000-acre ranch that it bought in 1981 from Malcolm Forbes, a wealthy businessman and magazine publisher.

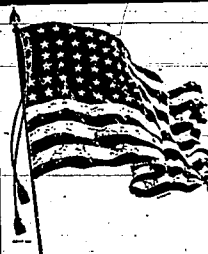

Most of the church's development is targeted for the Forbesh ranch. Plans call for a town of about 500 residents with a church, a university, a cafeteria, homes and a factory. The state has begun a study of the environmental impact the development will have on the area.

The Royal Teton ranch, about 10 miles north of Gardiner, population 400, also borders the north boundary of Yellowstone National Park. Officials have expressed concern that the development could harm the park and the threatened and endangered species that dwell in the area, including the grizzly bear, pronghorn antelope and elk.

As many as 300 of Prophet's followers may settle in Park County, which has a present population of less than 15,000 — smaller than Oregon's Wasco County, where the defunct commune Rancho Rajneesh is located.

Lavengton, the Park County seat, lost about 550 jobs more than a year ago when the Burlington Northern Railroad closed its locomotive repair shop there. The church, however, has become an economic force in the county, which derives its chief income from ranching and tourism.

Ma Anand Moses, an official with Rajneesh Investment Corp., said Ms. Prophet's group had bought items that included double-wide mobile homes and a modular housing complex of more than 25 units.

WIENER SECRETS SAFE

It was feared last week that the recipe for world famous Falls Brand Wieners had ended up in the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, and was being guarded by Marines. However, it was later found that the recipe in question was the Ambassador's own recipe for homemade salami, so the secret of Falls Brand Wieners' great taste has not been compromised. . . . a national treasure that is still safe and can be enjoyed at Swensen's low prices this week.

Easley wins his first for Bucs

By ALAN ROBINSON
The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Twin Falls' Logan Easley, a rookie right-handed relief pitcher for the Pittsburgh Pirates, posted his first major league victory here Monday by working the last two innings of the New York Mets.

Easley, 1-1, worked two scoreless innings, allowing one hit and striking out four.

Mike Diaz's three-run pinch homered capped a four-run seventh-inning counter-rally, and the Bream homered twice as the Pirates, losers of 37 one-run games last season, to end a 15-game losing streak against the Mets dating back to last June 6.

Easley, a 1979 graduate of Twin Falls High School and a 1981 graduate of the College of Southern Idaho, came to the Pirates in the off-season from the New York Yankees organization in a trade.

"A comeback like this is the greatest feeling in the world," said Bream, who had four hits. "Just like losing a habit, winning can become a habit when you win again like this. These are the kind of things that create a winning habit."

The Pirates, who got consecutive home runs from Johnny Ray and Bream in the third inning, lost the first two games of the season in New York after dropping 17 of 18 to the Mets last season.

"It's nice to win, but it's nice to beat anybody, and you have to look at it as just another night at the ballpark," Pirates Manager Jim Leyland said. "It's not a robbery or an in-trial-to-beat-the-Mets. You can't get over-excited about beating them once because you have to play 15 more times this season."

The loss was the fourth in a row for the defending world champion

Mets, who rallied from a 5-4 deficit with four runs in the top of the seventh. The Mets never lost more than four games in a row last season and lost that many only twice, once in August and once in September.

After Gary Carter's three-run homer off reliever Barry Jones gave the Mets a 6-5 lead, Bream greeted reliever Randy Myers with a solo homer in the bottom of the inning, his second of the game and third of the season, all in the last two games.

Myers' 0-1, retired the next two batters but walked Mike LaValliere and Rafael Bellard and was replaced by Doug Sisk. Diaz, batting for Jones, then lipped a 1-1 pitch into the left-field stands for his third home run of the season in only 20 at-bats.

"That's what they pay me to do," Diaz said. "Mike Diaz is nobody right now and America doesn't believe in the Pirates, but you look around this locker room and you don't see many losers. Tomorrow's another day and another game, but this one was fun."

It wasn't to Mets Manager Davey Johnson, who could be heard screaming at his team during a 15-minute postgame clubhouse meeting.

"Davey had some things to say, and he got his point across," first baseman Keith Hernandez said. "He's not one to have a lot of meetings, but this one was absolutely essential."

Sisk, who yielded only six home runs in his first 34 1/3 major-league innings, surrendered two in his first seven innings this season.

The Pirates led 5-2 until starting pitcher Rick Reuschel jammed his left knee sliding into second base after hitting a double to start the Pirates' sixth. Rookie left-hander John Smiley, unscored upon previously in 5 1/2 innings this season, replaced Reuschel and gave up pinch hitter Dave Magadan's first major-league homer with one out.

Wally Backman and Hernandez walked before Carter greeted Jones with his three-run homer to straightaway center, his third of the season.

The Mets scored in the first inning on Hernandez's two-run double. Carter's RBI single and took a 2-1 lead in the second on Mookie Wilson's leadoff homer, his first of the season.

The Pirates scored off Rick Aguilera in the bottom of the first when Barry Bonds doubled and Andy Van Slyke singled. In the third, Van Slyke walked and Ray and Bream homered, giving Pittsburgh a 4-2 lead.

Bonds drew a leadoff walk from Gene Walters in the fourth, stole second and third and scored on a single by Bream.

So long, Doc

By JOHN JEANSONNE
Newsday

You would go watch Julius Erving play basketball, then go home and wring the thrills out of your clothes. Not because of this many points or that many rebounds or dominance or any of that, but because of originality, which is, of course, an aspect of genius. And there was joy. Erving played basketball — he was probably the first practitioner of the dunk shot as a celebration — before others turned it into a sour, posturing in-your-face act.

Eventually, there was bound to be a convention of students and professors, trading in the Julius Erving excitement. Gathering for a season-long Erving farewell tour of NBA cities with his last stop in Landover, Md., Sunday, these people have taken their memories, the hard currency of having witnessed a Julius Erving creation, and cashed them in with whoever would listen. Slim reminiscence became something approaching legend (special memories, compounded daily). People began: "The first time I saw Julius Erving play," and the whole thing ran away with them.

Julius Erving could fly, you know. He could take off at the free-throw line and carry an entire young league, pausing it in one hand. He could hit a dying old league, cutting through the calcifying racial stereotypes that assumed whites didn't care to follow an increasingly black sport. He was funky and elegant all at once, rap and Swan Lake. He was a delight to all.

You would know all this by the farewell tour — if you didn't know it already. On the tour, there was a bonus, a sense of kinship and affection. You would listen to Julius Erving stories, then go home and wring the good feelings out of your clothes.

In Seattle, upon accepting a plaque from the SuperSonics, Erving stepped to the center-court microphone and asked the fans, there to honor him, if they would pause for a moment of silence. It was Veterans Day. In Dallas, Erving quietly stopped to visit a hospitalized 15-year-old girl from New Jersey on his way to his celebrity press conference. That was after Erving, approached by some high school cheerleaders for his autograph while waiting for his baggage in the Dallas airport, struck a deal: His autograph in exchange for a cheer. So they did a cheer, right there at the baggage claim, and the cheerleaders by rubbernecked and Erving smiled.

In Denver, after the spotlight had been doused and the sellout crowd had gone home, Erving made his own gift of thanks, giving one of his All-Star rings to Nuggets trainer Chopper Traviglino, who had been Erving's first professional trainer with the American Basketball Association in Virginia. Squawking, "Nothing in my life I've ever cherished as much," Traviglino said.

After a while, it wasn't clear whether the tour was meant to allow the multitudes to reach out to Erving, leaving them after 16 seasons at age 37, or for Erving to reach out to them. At each NBA stop, Erving made a formal donation of sneakers

'This is Babe Ruth we're talking about here. This is Lou Gehrig.'
— Atlanta publicist Bill Needle and money — totalling $100,000 in shoes and $10,000 in cash — to be passed from Converse (Erving's shoe company throughout his pro career) to the Salvation-Army Boys Clubs (Erving's first organized basketball team as a 9-year-old in Hempstead, N.Y.). In small little gatherings of Converse representatives, Salvation Army officials and Boys Club members, plus a few local reporters, Erving would tell the kids:

"Life is a cycle. When you give of in return, you receive so much more in return. One person can only handle so much. If you keep everything for yourself, if you're selfish, you become burdened by it all."

Unburdened, Erving lived the cycle, and the tour.

In Salt Lake City, he connected the home team, the Utah Jazz, to himself through his 10-year-old daughter Jazmin, thanking the fans "on behalf of my wife, Tracie, and our four children — especially my daughter, Jazzzzzzz."

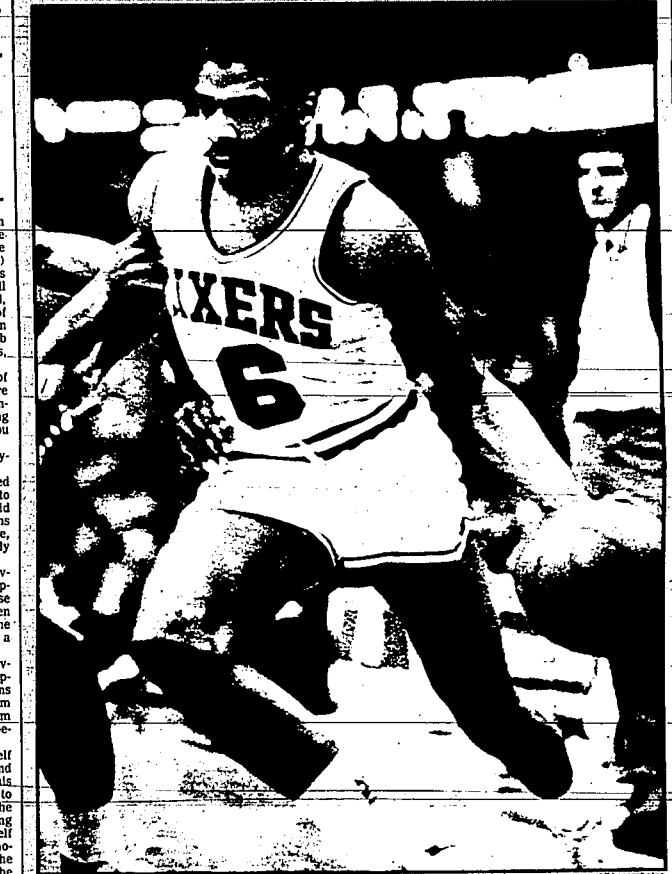

In San Antonio, Texas, where Erving was dressed for his final appearance in street clothes because he was recovering from a broken bone in his finger, he related to the fans by noting he was wearing a silver suit — the Spurs' colors.

In Sacramento, Calif., where Erving was making only his second appearance ever, he bonded Kings fans to their past, sharing with them some history of when the team played in Kansas City, Mo., and before that, Cincinnati.

In Phoenix, Ariz., he linked himself to former Suns Connie Hawkins and Dick Van Arsdale, aware that his style had been compared to Hawkins' and that his interest in the NBA had been fostered by watching Van Arsdale. He attached himself securely to the team's finest moment, recalling how he watched the three-overtime fifth game of the 1976 championship series between Phoenix and Boston. Erving is a devout believer in history, keenly aware that players too easily separate themselves from their fans — and thus from their game — because "a lot of guys in the NBA now don't have a clue what happened in the '60s and '70s. And don't care."

The tour was a public pageant of gag gifts, elaborate presentations and retired jerseys: of warm and, occasionally, touching ceremonies and ovals. In New Jersey, the sight of his old Nets No. 32 hanging from the ceiling was too much for Erving. "I couldn't keep looking up there, even through the unveiling," he said. "My eyes were too watery."

Surrounded by his mother, Callie Mae Lindsey, and a crowd of old Nets teammates and former coaches, and seeing his old Nets trainer, Fritz Massmann ("wearing a tuxedo!"), Erving exclaimed, "so I know this was special!" left-Erving

Brewers win 13th straight

New record tonight

By JOE MOOSHILL
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — "That's another one," Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "The only reason we play is to win, and this one is as important as any of them."

But even Trebelhorn had to admit the come-from-behind 5-4 Milwaukee victory over the Chicago White Sox Monday night was a little more important than the others since it helped the Brewers tie the major league record of 13 straight games to open the season.

The Brewers can break the record first set by the Atlanta Braves in 1982 by defeating the White Sox again tonight.

"I'm going to tell them we have to play better tomorrow night," said Trebelhorn. "We were lucky tonight. When we got behind, we fought to get even. And we got even. We went ahead and we had the right guys in at the right time."

The right guys turned out to be relievers Chuck Crim, who gained the victory in relief of Juan Nieves, and Dan Plesac, who pitched a tough ninth inning to earn his fifth save.

Nieves, who had pitched a no-hitter last Wednesday against Baltimore, quickly saw his chances for a second straight no-hitter disappear when leadoff batter Gary Redus singled off the left-hander's first pitch of the game.

"Nieves didn't have his good stuff," said Trebelhorn. "He was high in the strike zone and his breaking stuff was flat. The last four days have been tough on him."

"It was difficult for him to come down from his high, and there had been too many demands on his time for him to get ready for this game. Some of the players were trying to explain the streak which helped draw a number of fans from Milwaukee and even had White Sox fans cheering for the Brewers in the ninth inning."

"Somewhere along the line we're going to lose," said Greg Brock, who hit a two-run homer in the first inning. "We just have to remember not to get too high."

"It's difficult to explain. The defense and the pitching keeps us in the game until we scratch to get some runs."

"They are playing good," Chicago Manager Jim Fregosi conceded, adding that both Nieves and White Sox starter Jose DeLeon "were over-throwing the ball early in the game."

"Nieves, who hurt his chances of remaining in the game by committing two errors, said:

"When you pitch a no-hitter, people expect you to pitch 10. I got myself out of the game. I was over-aggressive. Redus' hit on the first pitch could have been the best thing that happened. It relaxed me."

Seko, Mota win sluggish, gremlin-ridden Boston Marathon

By MARLENE CIMONS
Los Angeles Times

BOSTON — Toshihiko Seko claims that he entered Monday's Boston Marathon expecting to lose.

"There were so many good competitors, I just didn't think I could win," he said.

Indeed, even during the last seven miles, after he had broken away from the lead pack — efforts that appeared — he couldn't stop looking over his shoulder, as if expecting to be overtaken at any moment.

"I wanted to see who was following me," the Japanese runner said through an interpreter. "I wanted to see who was coming behind me, but I couldn't see anyone coming."

The perception was somewhat different from several hundred yards back.

"He just ran away from us," said Welshman Steve Jones, who holds the second-fastest marathon time in history. "And there was nothing we could do about it. He was just running."

Jones, 30, won the 26.2-mile race for the second time in 2 hours 11 minutes 30 seconds, far slower than he had hoped to run, and far slower than his best of 2:08:27 last fall in America's Marathon-Chicago. When he won the race here in 1981, he finished in 2:09:26.

Jones was second in 2:12:37 and Great Britain's Geoff Smith, the 1984 and 1985 Boston winner, was third in 2:12:42.

As expected, Portugal's Rosa Mota, 28, won in the women's division in 2:29:04 in her first Boston Marathon.

Two Belgian women placed second and third, Agnes Pardons in 2:29:50 and Rina Van Landeghem in 2:29:56.

The first American man was David Gordon of Eugene, Ore., fourth in 2:13:30, and the first American woman was Leatrice Hoyer of Greenfield, Mass., who placed eighth with a time of 2:37:58.

The men's wheelchair winner was Andre R. Viger, 34, the defending champion from Sherbrooke, Mass., in 1:55:42. Among the women, defending champion Candace Cadenby of Brookline, Mass., won in 2:19:54.

Seko and Mota each won $40,000 in cash and a Mercedes-Benz car worth $31,000.

More than 8,300 runners lined up for the start in suburban Hopkinton under cloudy skies, occasional mist and temperatures in the mid-50s, conditions that would have been nearly ideal had it not been for a strong head wind that hampered the runners the entire way.

The race was marred by two accidents at the start.

In one, defending champion Roberto Castella of Australia was knocked down, or fell, just after the gun went off. He tumbled down, rolled over, jumped up and started running again. He was covered with cuts when he finished the race in sixth place.

In a separate incident, four wheelchairs were involved in a chain reaction crash during the first mile. The wheelchair event begins 15 minutes earlier than the runners' start.

Yanks, left in Brewers' dust, pick up seventh straight win

NEW YORK (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers may be the talk of baseball, but the New York Yankees are playing pretty well, too.

Don Mattingly, Mike Pagliaro and Claudio Washington hit two-run homers. Rick Rhoden pitched another strong game and the defense made key plays Monday night as the Yankees won for the seventh straight time, beating the Detroit Tigers 6-3.

"We know we've got a good club. We know we can do a lot of things," said Mattingly, who celebrated his 26th birthday by homering in the first inning of Jack Morris.

The Yankees pounded Morris, 1-2, for eight runs on 10 hits in 7 1/3 innings, beating him for the second time in his season.

Last year, New York played inconsistently at home, going 41-39 at Yankee Stadium, and hurt itself by not jelling "until after the All-Star break."

This year, the Yankees are 4-0 at home and have been winning with an impressive combination of offense, defense and pitching.

"In the past, we played 500 ball and then tried to win it in the second half," Mattingly said. "Good teams win early and often. These are important game now."

The Yankees are off to their best start at home since 1951, when they won their first 11 games at Yankee Stadium. Their current winning streak is their longest since September 1985, and has enabled them to keep pace with Milwaukee, which has won its first 13 games.

San Francisco 3 Los Angeles 5

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mark Davis held Los Angeles to four hits in seven innings and Chris Spier homered as the San Francisco Giants beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3 Monday night for their ninth victory without a loss in one-run games.

Davis, 2-0, gave way to Scott Garretts after walking Steve Sax to start the eighth inning. Sax was primarily a reliever over the last two seasons, making only three starts.

Garretts gave up a single to Mariano Duncan and a two-run double to Mike Marshall before striking out pinch hitter Frank Stube and retiring Mike Scioscia on a grounder and earning his third save.

The Giants had 13 hits, including four by Mike Aldrete and three by Spier, who chased Bret Herber and retiring Mike Scioscia on a grounder and earning his third save.

cluding the Olympics yet the down-the-wire race people had been predicting never materialized.

In fact, the pace was agonizingly slow right from the start.

That might have been traced to the wind or simply, to everyone's early reluctance to make the first move.

Whatever the reason, the lead pack clung together against the wind for the first 19 miles, rarely dipping under a five-minute-per-mile pace. It was a race tailor-made for Seku, whose tremendous leg speed often enables him to break

Paul Molitor doubled to drive in the tying run in the seventh inning and then scored the winning run on Robin Yount's bloop single to right.

"I didn't know it would fall in," Yount said. "I thought it would be close when I saw everyone converging on it. Everybody has to be realistic. We're not going to win every game, but you have to ride it when you can."

The White Sox tied the game with two runs in the second inning, helped by an error by Nieves, and they went ahead in the fifth.

Doug Jones, 0-1, Cleveland's fifth pitcher, walked Rance Mullins with one out in the 10th and then surrendered consecutive singles to Ernie Whitl and Gruber as the Indians lost for the ninth time in 11 games.

Cincinnati 12 San Diego 3

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Dave Parker homered and Ron Oester went 4-for-4 to lead an 18-hit Cincinnati attack while Guy Hoffman held San Diego to two runs and seven hits in eight innings as the Reds trounced the Padres 12-3 Monday night.

The victory was the Reds' 10th in 15 games and the loss was the fourth straight and 12th in 14 games for the Padres.

In the last two games, San Diego pitchers have allowed 21 runs and 34 hits. The Padres have allowed a major league-leading 24 homers, 10 in the last five games.

Oakland 10 California 5

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Tony Phillips hit a bases-loaded home run in the top of the ninth inning to power the Oakland Athletics to a 10-5 victory over the California Angels Monday night.

The Athletics had taken a 6-5 lead in the eighth on Reggie Jackson's infield roller, which scored Mike Davis from third base to snag a 5-5 tie.

Minnesota 13 Seattle 5

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Gary Gaetti and Roy Smalley capped a six-run first inning with consecutive home runs Monday night, powering the Minnesota Twins to an 13-5 rout of the Seattle Mariners.

MONTREAL (AP) — Lance Parrish hit a three-run homer, and Glenn Wilson followed with a solo shot as Philadelphia rallied for four runs with two out in the ninth inning to beat Montreal 4-3 in the Expos' home opener Monday.

Toronto 8 Cleveland 7

CLEVELAND (AP) — Kelly Gruber scored one of five Toronto runs in the ninth inning and then drove in the game-winner with a single to center in the 10th Monday night as the Blue Jays rallied to defeat the Indians 8-7.

NHL playoffs: Quebec upsets Habs in opener

MONTREAL (AP) — Dale Hunter's power-play goal as the ice cracked in the second period triggered a three-goal outburst and helped the Quebec Nordiques to a 7-0 victory over the red-hot Montreal Canadiens in the opening game of their second-round NHL playoff series Monday night.

The goal came with the score tied 4-4, and Montreal's Chris Chelios serving a double minor penalty, his second of the penalty-filled game. Nilan received the infraction after a retaliatory hit against a Nordiques' defender. When a battered referee — Andy VanHellemond, he was assessed an unsportsmanlike penalty and a misconduct.

Kansas City 10 Boston 2

BOSTON (AP) — Danny Tartabull, Larry Owen and Frank White hit their first homers of the season, and Bret Saberhagen earned a third straight victory for the first time since 1985 as the Kansas City Royals beat Boston 10-2 Monday, spilling the Red Sox 7th anniversary of the opening of Fenway Park.

Tartabull, Kevin Seitzer, Hal McCrae, Bo Jackson and Angel Salazar had two hits apiece as Kansas City ended a three-game losing streak with a 13-hit attack against Bruce Hurst, 2-1, and reliever Steve Crawford.

Saberhagen, the 1985 Cy Young Award winner, struggled in the first three innings before settling down and improving his record to 3-0. He allowed seven singles, including three by Wade Boggs and two by Don Baylor, before giving way to Dan Quisenberry to start the ninth. After White singled with one out in the fifth, Saberhagen retired 11 in a row.

Philadelphia 4 Montreal 3

MONTREAL (AP) — Lance Parrish hit a three-run homer, and Glenn Wilson followed with a solo shot as Philadelphia rallied for four runs with two out in the ninth inning to beat Montreal 4-3 in the Expos' home opener Monday.

Montreal right-hander Jay Tibbs, 1-2, was working on a five-hit, 2-0 shutout when Van Hayes was sent on a one-out throwing error by first baseman Andres Galarraga in the ninth. Mike Schmidt walked, and Mike Easter struck out before Parrish hit a 3-2 pitch for his second homer of the year. Wilson followed with his second home run of the season.

Hockey

The Canadiens, who had made headlines off the ice earlier in the week when three members of their team were under police investigation for allegations of sexual misconduct, then yielded goals to John Madden at 5:22 and Pat Gilliam at 7:21.

Anton Stastny had scored a pair of earlier goals for Quebec and Michel Goulet and Basil McCrae had contributed single goals. On the Montreal side, 1-0 lead in their best-of-seven Adams Division final.

Philadelphia 4 NY Islanders 2

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tim Kerr tipped in three goals, two on power plays, as the Philadelphia Flyers cooled off the surging New York Islanders 4-2 Monday night in the opener of their second-round NHL playoff series.

The 225-pound Kerr, who has scored 50 or more goals in each of the last four regular seasons, accounted for two goals early in the first period for a 2-0 Philadelphia lead. He increased the Flyers' edge to 4-0 just 3:11 into the second period as the Flyers took a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven Patrick Division final.

By beating the Washington Capitals Saturday night, the Isles' became only the third team in playoff history to overcome a 3-1 deficit in a best-of-seven series.

Dudley, Schenk top finishers

TWIN FALLS — G. Dudley and Alice Schenk were the top men's and women's finishers Saturday in the fifth annual End of Tax Season Fun Run, sponsored by the accounting firm of McMullen, McPhee and Associates.

Dudley covered the four-mile course in 22 minutes, 44 seconds to win the overall race and the men's 30-39 division. Schenk was the top women's finisher in 23:40, also taking the 23-39 age class.

Top finishers by age group:

Age Group	Sex	Name	Time
30-39	Men	G. Dudley	22:44
30-39	Women	Alice Schenk	23:40
20-29	Men	John W. ...	22:57

LeMond accidentally shot

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Greg LeMond, the only American to win the Tour de France bicycle race, was in fair condition Monday after being hit in the back with a shotgun blast during a hunting trip, authorities said.

"He should recover from all injuries and they should not affect his performance as an athlete," said Dr. Sandy Beal, "one of three surgeons involved in the two-hour operation on the cyclist."

She said LeMond would probably be hospitalized for one or two weeks and would be able to resume cycling practice in a couple of months.

LeMond, 25, and some friends "were apparently hunting in the area when one of the companions, Patrick Blades, fired a shotgun at a running rabbit, accidentally shooting Mr. LeMond in the back," Placer County Sheriff's Capt. Larry Newman said.

Knicks clean house

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks fired coach Bob Hill and general manager Scotty Stirling on Monday, in the wake of a 24-58 NBA season and a third straight last-place finish.

The announcement was made by Richard Evans, the new president of Madison Square Garden Corp.

Hill, an assistant coach with the club, replaced Hubie Brown as head coach last Dec. 1 and posted a 20-46 record including six straight losses at the end of the season after the return of injured star forward Bernard King.

Stirling was hired Jan. 3, 1986, replacing former Knicks star Dave DeBusschere as the team's front-office boss. The Knicks, however, continued to founder and Stirling was under fire for a number of his trades.

Brett out for two weeks

BOSTON (AP) — The Kansas City Royals will be without third baseman George Brett for at least two weeks because of a rib injury suffered when he fouled off a pitch.

Brett was pined on the 15-day disabled list Monday after doctors diagnosed his injury as separated cartilage. He was injured swinging in the first inning of Sunday's first game of a doubleheader against the New York Yankees and left the game an inning later. The Royals lost both games, 5-0 and 1-0.

After the doubleheader, the 33-year-old third baseman said he thought he might be out for as long as a month.

"If this thing is serious, I just might retire," Brett said as he headed for the team bus. "Hey, I'm not joking. I may call it quits. I don't need this."

Women's tourney Wednesday

TWIN FALLS — A women's round-robin tennis tournament will be held Wednesday at the Twin Falls High School courts.

The tournament will have just one classification and will be open to women aged 20-60.

Competition is scheduled to start at 9:30 a.m. There is no entry fee.

CS men to golf Thursday

TWIN FALLS — Canyon Springs Men's Golf Association will hold a blunt draw tournament in its twilight league Thursday.

Competitors may play anytime during the day Thursday, with a best-ball tournament sign-up for the evening.

There is no registration deadline, but there is a $3 registration fee.

Area cyclists place

TWIN FALLS — Three members of the Magic Valley Cyclists bicycle racing club collected awards at the Ontario, Ore., Icebreaker race over the weekend.

Eric Ward won second place in the junior men's division, while Wayne Ortel took second place in the senior men's class and Lorenzo Domingo was first in the citizens' race.

Both Ortel and Ward were competing in their first United States Cycling Federation-licensed race.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE[®] BOBBY WOLFF

Dear Mr. Wolff: Holding 10 HCP and a good five-card suit, I jumped to three diamonds over my partner's opening no-trump. He maintains that my jump was misleading. Is he correct?

ANSWER: With 10 HCP and a five-card major, the jump to three in that major would be a standard choice. However, since minor-suit games require winning 11 tricks instead of 10, the jump in a minor suit implies slam possibilities. With 10-point hands and a minor suit, one veers strongly toward a no-trump game.

Dear Mr. Wolff: If all four players pass, who gets the next deal?

ANSWER: The laws provide for the deal to pass in rotation (law 22).

Dear Mr. Wolff: Is a reverse bid an unconditional force on responder? e.g. Opener 1♦ Responder 1♠

ANSWER: In modern expert circles, the reverse bid is unconditionally forcing on responder. The strength varies depending upon fit and distribution, but one should expect at least 17 HCP.

Dear Mr. Wolff: What's the modern version of a two no-trump opening?

ANSWER: The "old-fashioned" limits are 22-24 HCP, balanced, stoppers in all suits. Modern players, who use an all-purpose forcing two-club opening, can describe the 22-24 range by opening two clubs and rebidding two no-trump. They then reduce the opening two no-trump range to 20-21, 21-22 or 20-22 HCP, depending upon agreement.

Dear Mr. Wolff: If partner opens three hearts and I jump to four spades, isn't my bid a shoutout?

ANSWER: Definitely, yes. The three-heart bidder described his hand with his opening bid and is not being asked anything by the jump to game. Had you bid three spades that would have been a force, asking opener to further clarify his opening pre-empt.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

Charms strike the sight, but merit wins the soul. - Alexander Pope

Ten entries for the Bols Brilliant Prize of 1986 have been submitted to a panel of judges for review. The winner and runner-up will be announced later this year. Today's entry, submitted by Jarmo Lehtola of Finland, is one of the candidates. It describes a defensive play made by Peter Schaltz of Denmark.

The bidding is not in accord with standard American methods; however, this entry is concerned with defensive-play, not with hiding methods.

West led the spade 10 and Peter Schaltz (East) covered with his jack, South ducking. East continued with another spade and South won his king. South then led his diamond king to East's ace, and the defense had reached the point of no return.

Had East exited with a red card, South would have had no problems. He would surrender a heart and then claim nine tricks via four diamonds, three hearts and two spades.

Schaltz solved the defensive problem by leading a club at trick four. (South was known to have started with five diamonds, four hearts and three spades, from the bidding and play.) West took his club ace and knocked out South's last spade stopper, but there was still one more spade to go. When South played the ace and king of hearts, Schaltz jettisoned his heart queen, promoting West's heart jack as an entry to the good spades.

Interest rate rise spoils early gain by stocks

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly Monday, giving up an early gain as interest rates resumed their recent rise.

Trading set its slowest pace in five weeks. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 11 points in the first hour, but then fell to end 10 points below its opening level.

The early going, closed with a 5.39-point loss at 2270.60.

Trading had been expected to be quiet after the long Easter holiday weekend, and analysts said many investors were cautious.

A recent rise in interest rates threw a scare into the stock market, raising questions about the outlook for the economy and the Federal Reserve policy.

In Monday's credit market activity, prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, dropped out 10 for every $1,000 in face value.

One primary concern has been that weakness in the dollar against leading foreign currencies might prompt the Fed to try to shore it up by encouraging U.S. interest rates to rise.

Another source of pressure on both the bond and stock markets has been an increase in inflationary expectations, as reflected in stepped-up demand for pre-emptive metals investments.

Metals issues were strong again Monday as the price of gold climbed $50 to $453.60 on the Commodity

Exchange In New York.

Washington — Citing benefits to national security from possibly vast pools of oil in the Prudhoe Bay field, Hodel, a former energy secretary, has long sought ways to increase domestic oil and gas production.

The chief environmental threat has been seen as disturbance to preferred calving grounds of the 160,000-strong Porcupine caribou herd.

But he will likely face long odds in getting Congress to approve his recommendation. Hodel said he is firmly believing the successful development of the Prudhoe Bay field 100 miles to the west of the refuge showed that "oil and gas activities can be conducted on the coastal plain of the arctic refuge in a manner consistent with the need to conserve the area's environmental and wildlife."

The chief environmental threat has been seen as disturbance to preferred calving grounds of the 160,000-strong Porcupine caribou herd.

He noted that environmental groups predicted disaster for caribou before the Prudhoe Bay-Valdez pipeline was built, but the caribou herd at Prudhoe Bay has since thrived.

The draft "environmental" impact statement released last November contained a statement that officials have said ever since: That full oil development "could result in a major population decline and change in distribution of 20-40 percent of the herd."

In the final statement released today, that section was changed to read: "A change in distribution of the herd" could reasonably be expected as a result of oil development.

The refuge contains "the most outstanding onshore frontier area," with potential oil reserves vital to our national security because they would reduce America's dependence on unstable sources of foreign oil," the secretary said in his statement.

No one knows yet whether there is oil under the Prudhoe Bay field, roughly the size of the Prudhoe Bay field, source of one barrel in five of current domestic production.

Hodel faces an uphill fight persuading Congress to allow drilling in the refuge. Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the House Interior Committee, is one of its sponsors of a bill to turn the 1.5 million acres into a wilderness area in which all development would be permanently banned.

Hodel rejected an option laid out by the Fish and Wildlife Service that would have permitted exploration, but not development, to go forward. "Without authorization for a leasing program, the private sector cannot be expected to invest financial resources in exploring the area," he wrote. "History shows that it is unlikely that the federal government could conduct an effective and timely exploration program."

Canadian lumber exports soaring

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — A booming market in Europe and Asia for British Columbia lumber is making up losses from falling North America sales, industry officials say.

"It's very active right now," said Ed Cameron, senior vice-president of Seaboard Lumber Sales Co. Ltd. of Vancouver. "Our sales to Europe in the first quarter this year are three times what they were last year, and prices are up 12 to 15 percent."

under 15 percent of production in 1986, say B.C. Council of Forest Industries statisticians. That compared with 30 percent of production consumed within Canada and 56.4 percent shipped to the United States, but still represented almost $1 billion in revenue for the provincial economy, said the council.

Applicants denied credit have rights to resolve situation

What if you are turned down for a loan based on a negative credit report about you? You have specific rights under the law (the Fair Credit Reporting Act, FCRA, effective back in 1971). Use them. Take action if you think a lender has turned down your application for a loan or charge account or any other type of credit, based on your credit history.

Sylvia Porter

Credit bureaus, also known as reporting agencies, do not actually "rate" how good or bad a credit risk you are. Instead, merchants, banks, finance companies and other creditors send credit bureaus reports containing specific information about your credit accounts and your bill-paying habits.

The credit bureau must disclose the contents of credit files to you free of charge if you request it in writing within 30 days of being denied.

In addition to your credit history, your credit bureau file contains your name, address and Social Security number. You are entitled to see your occupation, your employer, salary and marital status.

By discovering what information is included in your credit file, you will get a clearer picture of how lenders view you. You can also ask for the names of the creditors who have requested your credit report within the last six months, reports my research associate, Beth Kohler.

Some times, a particular credit bureau may not have your complete credit history, say, if you had a charge account in a different city or under a different name. You may ask the credit bureau to include the additional information. While they are not obligated to add new accounts to your file, many bureaus will do so for a small fee.

Typically, you will have to pay a small fee to the credit bureau to review your file. Odds are, it's money well spent.

law. Check the Yellow Pages under "Credit" or "Credit Reporting Agencies" to get the name of a major credit bureau in your area. You may want to call your bank or a department store and ask which credit bureau it uses.

But if the negative information is accurate, in general, if you fall to pay a bill, it will remain on your credit record for 10 years.

While you can easily find out what information a credit bureau has about you in its files, a company which operates a ma-reports the Federal Trade Commission (FTC).

Most important: Understand that you can challenge any information you believe is inaccurate or incomplete. Billing errors occur, and you may be on record as having a poor credit rating without your even knowing it.

Once you do complain, the reporting agency is required to investigate your grievance. If it finds there is a mistake or the information cannot be checked, the credit bureau must remove it from your file.

If you do not agree with the outcome of the inquiry, you should include your side of the story in your file for future lenders to evaluate.

But if the negative information is accurate, in general, if you fall to pay a bill, it will remain on your credit record for 10 years.

While you can easily find out what information a credit bureau has about you in its files, a company which operates a ma-credit reporting agency, is introducing "the first consumer financial information service" in New York, April 21.

Among the features in the new system called CreditRight: For an annual membership fee, you will be notified in writing every time someone receives a copy of your TRW credit report. In addition, members of the service receive a copy of their credit report as often as they wish.

"It allows consumers to receive timely updates on who is accessing your credit report as well as what is in your file," notes Thomas Honey, president of Consumer Bankers Association.

This new service demonstrates the overall importance for you consumers to know the status of your credit reports. Whether this "consumer-friendly" approach will be the trend in the credit bureau industry is yet to be seen.

Lumber - Drug trading charge has wide implications

Continued from Page D1 Canadian dollar against its U.S. counterpart, up more than 5 cents in the last three months; has made Canadian lumber exports more expensive.

The 15-percent federal export tax on lumber shipped to the United States which took effect Jan. 8, has added another cost to Canadian producers.

Widman said the tax was being applied to the full value of remanufactured wood products, such as window frames, rather than the value of the raw material used, making them uncompetitive in the U.S. market.

The delay has caused layoffs of about 300 workers, but the figure could easily double in the next few weeks unless quick action is taken, said Widman.

Drug trading charge has wide implications

NEW YORK (AP) - Allegations that cocaine was traded on Wall Street were used as a method of exchange in business at Brooks, which specializes in "penny stocks," stocks in new companies that trade at low prices.

In one case, prosecutors said, Brooks members sold cocaine for $10,000 in stock to a principal of a company whose stock Brooks was about to offer to the public.

A lawyer for Brooks, Bert Gurska said the firm's principals had "no knowledge of any widespread drug distribution or drug network inside the firm."

Others arrested included employees of New York Depository Trust Co., Allied Capital, and Advent Inc., all charged with dealing cocaine.

"The notion that there is some use of controlled substances on Wall Street is not shocking," said Michael Feldman, a partner at the Shea & Gould law firm of the large Wall Street brokerage firm of the firm.

"If the government can establish that one of the currencies that pays for exchange of information is narcotics, that would be an unusual thing."

Drug use can be found in all aspects of society - and that the financial industry is not immune to it is hardly surprising, said Feldman.

Wayne D. Robbins, 32, of Lawrence, a senior partner at Brooks, was one of those arrested.

Suit charges UP attempt at monopoly

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Southern Pacific Railroad has charged in a lawsuit that Union Pacific Railroad officials are purposely interfering with its business to establish a monopoly.

Southern Pacific, whose causeway across the Great Salt Lake has been damaged periodically by the lake's record level, is suing Union Pacific for access to the Union Pacific's causeway for alleged contract violations.

The two railroad companies have two agreements that allow each to use the other's tracks while maintenance work is being performed, according to documents filed in 2nd District Court.

Southern Pacific says in the suit that Union Pacific is now negotiating on that agreement in an attempt to gain a monopoly on rail business between Alazon, Nev., and Ogden, Utah, a major connection between the West Coast and the Midwest.

Documents said Union Pacific had granted permission to Southern Pacific to use its lines when the causeway was first damaged in June 1986, but three weeks later Union Pacific raised the charge to Southern Pacific from the agreed-upon $9 per mile to approximately $83 per mile for each train using the line.

Arbitrators ruled in favor of Southern Pacific in the rate hike disagreement, according to the suit.

In a letter dated Feb. 19, Union Pacific Executive Vice-President J.R. Davis told Southern Pacific officials the dispute agreements were "only for detours necessitated by maintenance work of a short duration, that is no more than a month."

He said the agreement did not provide for long-term use of the rail by Southern Pacific.

Union Pacific officials sent a letter March 7 to Southern Pacific giving a 90-day notice of termination of the contract effective June 8.

M-K first quarter net income slips

BOISE, (AP) — Morrison-Knudsen Corp., a worldwide engineering, construction and shipbuilding company, has reported a drop in first-quarter net income from the same period a year ago.

Net income declined 31 percent during the three months that ended March 31, to just over $5.5 million, or 50 cents a share, on revenue of about $469.12 million. Morrison Knudsen reported net income of more than $6 million on revenue of $465.15 million during the corresponding quarter of 1986.

W.J. Deasy, president and chief executive officer of the Boise-based corporation, said the decline resulted from reduced operating income in all three major segments of the company's operation.

M-K's backlog of uncompleted contracts at the end of the first quarter was $3.3 billion, up 7 percent from both the end of 1986 and the end of the first quarter of last year, Deasy said.

New work booked in the first three months of 1987 totaled $68 million. Morrison-Knudsen Co. Inc. and two joint-venture associates had been responding more last year, and a selected reverse from smaller results during mid-year project to the previous two quarters.

Deasy said the three major projects awarded to Morrison-Knudsen subsidiaries during the period included a $291 million Navy ship order, a $200 million long-term mine operations contract, and a $118 million contract for rail car remanufacturing.

Additionally, the New York District of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers announced on April 1 that Morrison-Knudsen Co. Inc. and two joint-venture associates had been selected as builders for the $517 million Fort Drum project to update New York.

Utility's earnings decline

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Washington Water Power Co. cited lower consumption, higher expenses and utility reserve-account requirements in reporting sharply lower earnings for the first quarter of 1987 and for the 12 months ended March 31.

The company — on Monday reported total first-quarter revenues of $118.15 million, compared with $130.52 million in the first quarter of 1986. Net income for the quarter was $19.12 million, compared with $38 million in the first three months of 1986.

For the 12 months, the company reported revenues of $377.49 million, compared with $439.29 million a year earlier. Net income for the period was $49.95 million, compared with $80.13 million a year ago.

Paul Redmond, WWP chairman and chief executive officer, said major factors in the first-quarter earnings decline were reduced electricity and natural-gas use and increased fuel and purchased-power expense.

Average temperatures during the first quarter were 8 percent warmer than normal, and 15 percent warmer than in the first quarter of 1986, Redmond noted.

While the revenue dip from reduced use was largely offset by recent price increases, Redmond said electric expenses went up because low streamflows reduced hydroelectric generation and because mechanical problems resulted in a loss of generation from the coal-fired Colstrip No. 4 plant.

All the factors combined to raise the company's fuel and power-purchase expenses and to limit the energy available for sale to wholesale markets, Redmond said in a news release.

Colstrip No. 4, in Montana, is expected to be back on-line by June, WWP said.

The decline for the 12-month period was caused primarily by the establishment of reserve accounts for plant investment write-downs in 1986 of $53.7 million, on an after-tax basis. The reserves caused a decline of $1.50 a share Dec. 31, Redmond said.

Key Tronic fills vacancy

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Key Tronic Corp. it has a new vice president of technology.

Howard G. Sachs fills the vacancy created when Donald Meyers was promoted to executive vice president Jan. 1, 1987, the company said.

His major responsibilities at Key Tronic will include heading both the engineering department and the research and development operation.

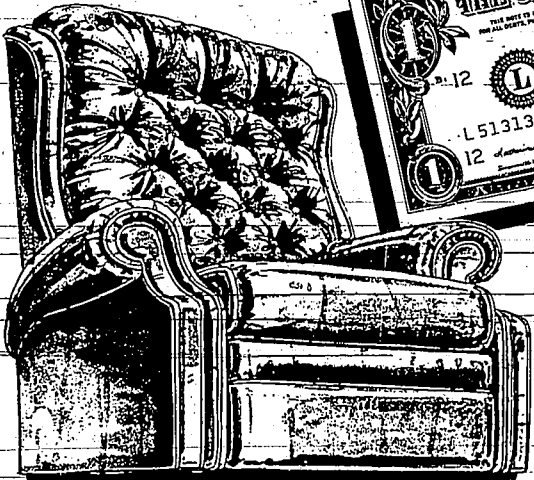

Prior to joining the corporation, Sachs was vice president of operations for Sensomatic Electronics Corp., Boca Raton, Fla., a position he held since 1982.

Founded in 1969, Key Tronic Corp. is the world's largest independent manufacturer of computer keyboards. Headquartered in Spokane, Key Tronic has more than 1,500 employees with manufacturing operations in Spokane; Cheney, Wash.; Dundalk, Ireland; and Hsinchu, Taiwan.
