Pro football teams draft Sellers, Rice... The Associated Press... WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration said Tuesday that Japan has given signs of modifying its "dumping" of underpriced computer chips...

Japan may have halted chip dumping

The Associated Press... Hours later, however, presidential spokesman Martin Flitwater stressed there was "no hard evidence" to prove that change has occurred. He stressed there was no reason to expect resolution of the dispute for Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's visit to Washington on Thursday and Friday.

Montana manhunt centers on lake

The Associated Press... WOLF CREEK, Mont. — Three or four heavily armed snipers, including two escapees from a California mental institution, eluded law enforcement officers in mountainous terrain above a Missouri River reservoir near here Tuesday after a gun battle.

Iran counsel worried by immunity

The Associated Press... WASHINGTON — Independent counsel Lawrence Walsh on Tuesday renewed his plea that Congress not grant immunity to key Iran-Contra witnesses, while President Reagan said he knew of no diversion of money to the Contras and can't imagine a former aide will testify otherwise.

New directors banish Bakker from PTL ministry

The Associated Press... FORT MILL, S.C. — The new PTL board banished television evangelist Jim Bakker and his top deputies from the ministry Tuesday and cut off payments to Jessica Hahn, the former church secretary who had sex with Bakker seven years ago.

Briefly

Rees named to Oregon Guard

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Gov. Neil Goldschmidt has named Col. Fred Rees of Helix as Oregon's new adjutant general. Rees, 42, currently commander of an Idaho National Guard unit, replaces Maj. Gen. Richard Miller, who resigned as head of the Oregon National Guard earlier this year. Rees, a Vietnam veteran and graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, will assume his new duties as Oregon adjutant general sometime in mid-May, Goldschmidt said Tuesday. A graduate of the University of Oregon Law School, Rees is manager of Rees Farms in the Helix area of Umatilla County and has a law practice.

Water loan applications soon

BOISE (AP) — Five energy conservation loan programs, all funded by a court settlement against Exxon Oil Corp., will be ready for applications soon. The Department of Water Resources hopes to have applications ready for the middle of next month for governmental, public, institutional and agricultural loans. Commercial and residential loan applications are expected to be ready by mid-June. Minimum and maximum loan amounts have not been determined, but will be set by the time applications are available. Exxon gave $8.7 million to Idaho as part of its nationwide settlement of oil pricing violations. The money must be used for energy conservation programs. Part is going to finance the energy conservation loan program, part to pay for a low-income weatherization program and $1 million will go into a state institutional conservation program. Interest rates will be 6 percent for agricultural and commercial loans and 3 percent for the other loans. Maximum repayment period will be 5 years except for governmental loans, which will be repaid over 10 years.

Bannock awaiting AG opinion

POCATELLO (AP) — Bannock County officials hope to receive guidance by the end of the week from Attorney General Jim Jones on the validity of a proposed per-house fee to underwrite ambulance service in the county. The fee of $15 to $17 per house, similar in theory to one the City of Pocatello has imposed to help finance street maintenance, has been proposed to head off a county-wide property tax hike totaling $60,000 to underwrite ambulance service. County Commissioner Tom Katsilometes asked for the Informal attorney general's opinion earlier this year after Bonneville County made a similar request after formally imposing such an ambulance fee.

Two plead innocent to escape

BOISE (AP) — Two men charged with attempting to escape from the Idaho State Penitentiary have pleaded innocent to the charges in 4th District Court, Ada County Deputy Prosecutor Jim Dickinson said. Justin Milo Beeson, 18, and William "Buzzard" Jones, 36, appeared in District Court at an arraignment Monday. A jury trial has been scheduled for July 22. The two were charged after they allegedly attempted to escape from the prison by sliding under a fence Feb. 27.

FFA chapter hopes for $7,000

NAMPA (AP) — A Nampa Future Farmers of America chapter is hoping to make $7,000 this year by selling devices called knot-enders that are designed to rope knots in ropes. An anonymous Boisean invented a small twisted metal rod that is billed as making tying knots obsolete. The knot-ender, which looks like a small, twisted hanger, can be used to secure a rope and tie down anything from larsps over a truck to a boat or motorcycle. The device costs $10 for a package of three. Nampa FFA President Mike Davis said the sales goal for the first year is $3 million nationwide.

BLM: Early fire season in 1987

BOISE (AP) — Fire season usually doesn't get under way until at least mid-May or June, but Bureau of Land Management officials say the drought has brought an early start. "It's one of the earliest fire seasons we've had," dispatcher Kim Christensen said. Bureau firefighters doused three lightning fires near Bruneau Monday night — the largest consuming 500 acres of brush, said dispatcher Dennis Rudd. The other two consumed a total of 540 acres, but no buildings were threatened, he said. Monday's fires brought to nine the number of fires the BLM has tackled so far this year.

20 years for Garden City rapist

BOISE (AP) — A man who pleaded guilty to rape shortly after the victim began testifying at his trial has received a 20-year indeterminate prison term, Ada County Prosecutor Jim Dickinson said. Fred A. Cotton, 38, pleaded guilty in February to raping a woman in a Garden City laundromat. Cotton was sentenced Monday. A 42-year-old woman told police she was raped in a Garden City laundromat on Nov. 16.

Audit: Oregon reforestation overstated

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — U.S. Forest Service employees overstated the number of acres reforested in 1985 in 23 of 39 ranger districts studied, a U.S. Department of Agriculture audit shows. The audit, conducted by the USDA Inspector General's office, randomly studied how well Forest Service staffers were meeting agency requirements for reforestation of harvested areas.

The report concluded that the Forest Service "does not have a significant problem in which field staff intentionally misrepresent reforestation attainments."

But the audit identified two ranger districts on Oregon national forests where employees intentionally overstated reforestation in 1985. Reforestation overstatements in 21 other districts "were attributed to clerical errors, computer errors, reforestation claims for 1985 but not done in that year, surveying mistakes and other technical errors. Inaccurate reforestation reports were found in 31 of the 39 statistically selected districts. The audit did not statistically project its results to predict how many inaccuracies could be expected on the agency's entire 68 ranger districts.

The audit's findings had no measurable effect on reforestation reported by the Forest Service in 1985, said James R. Ebbitt, USDA assistant inspector general for audits. "Nevertheless, the audit shows the number of ranger districts involved in the questionable reportings as significant, and the conditions themselves requiring some corrective efforts."

The Forest Service should require "second party" verification of reforestation claims, Ebbitt said in the audit report.

Three ranger districts in two Idaho national forests were included in the survey. The Krasaal District of the Payette National Forest accurately reported its reforestation, the audit report said.

Errors in reporting resulted in overstatements of 47 acres on the

Pierce and 31 acres on the North Fork districts in the Clearwater National Forest, the audit said.

The audit said 671 acres on the Pierce and 1,400 acres on the North Fork actually were reforested in the audit report said.

Staffs on the Clackamas Ranger District in Mount Hood National Forest and the Republic Ranger District in the Coville National Forest in Oregon claimed to have its budget from money set aside for reforested 234 acres in 1985 that had reforestation from timber sales.

When reforestation is accomplished, the higher levels of the Forest Service bureaucracy are allowed to take money out of reforestation funds," said O'Toole. "For every dollar spent on reforestation in the field, higher level bureaucrats are allowed 25 cents to 40 cents for overhead and other expenses."

No decision has been made whether to reprimand the employees involved, said Lamar Beasley, Forest Service deputy chief for national forest systems.

The ranger district reforestation forester said that he claimed the units because the Forest Supervisor's Office was inflexible about changing targets."

Boise VA animal research to expand

BOISE (AP) — The animal research facility at the Boise Veterans Administration Medical Center will be tripled in size at a cost of at least $1 million, VA officials said.

Construction is expected to begin in June and be completed by the fall of 1988, Alan Perry, associate director of the center, said Monday. Construction will be opened May 21.

The project, which may cost up to $5 million, will allow expansion of research cardio-vascular physiology and pharmacology; pulmonary physiology and pharmacology; infectious diseases; aging; and neuropharmacology, Perry said.

The 1,000-square-foot expansion comes at a time when animal rights advocates are taking their protests far beyond peaceful pickets. Recent protests include criminal acts against research facilities in Oregon and California.

"This facility will have very sophisticated security," said Dr. Robert Vestal, associate chief of staff for research and development at the Boise VA Medical Center.

The Boise VA has been conducting animal experiments since 1960, and uses sheep, rabbits, rats and mice. With the expansion, the center hopes to add miniature pigs and guinea pigs as research animals, Vestal said.

Vestal said he is concerned about the recent attacks. He said Idaho is isolated from such violence, "but I feel there is always the risk of sensationalizing this issue."

Marlin Stephens, director of the laboratory animals department for the Humane Society of the U.S., said many people are saddened by the acts of violence but said they could understand the frustration.

Stephens, who has a doctorate in biology, said about 50 million animals a year are used in research at about 1,000 facilities. Most die in less than a year.

He said the Animal Welfare Act regulates treatment of laboratory animals, but that VA medical centers are exempt from inspection by the policing agency, the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

"We don't have a good idea of what's going on in those labs because the USDA doesn't inspect those facilities," Stephens said.

Vestal agreed that in the past the VA centers were not fully regulated. But increased scrutiny of research has prompted changes, including some he called "excessive," making make animal research subject to constraints approaching those for procedures involving humans.

"Those of us involved in medical and biological research are committed to do this research in the hopes of benefiting society and we will do what is necessary to comply with the increased regulatory requirements," Vestal said.

Amendments to Animal Welfare Act that took effect in December require researchers to consider alternatives to procedures likely to produce pain or distress.

State committee members picked

BOISE (AP) — The Legislative Council has picked the membership of the seven interim study committees which will meet between now and the next legislative session.

The study committees were authorized by the 1987 legislative session. Sen. James Risch, president pro tem, also has appointed an oversight committee on the Public Utilities Commission, which is not controlled by the Legislative Council.

Sen. William Ringert, R-Boise, will be cochairman of a committee looking into medical insurance costs for retirees. Rep. Ron Crane, R-Nampa, will head the House membership.

Heading a committee on Medicare costs will be Rep. Brent Brockmeier, R-Boise, and Sen. Ann Rydaich, R-Idaho Falls. Other members include Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Deer and Rep. Russell Newcomb, R-Twin Falls.

Rep. Ray Infanger, R-Salmon, and Sen. Vearl Crystal, R-Lewisville, will cochair an interim committee on Indian affairs.

A 13-member committee was appointed to look into Idaho's public school support system. Cochairmen will be the chairmen of the Legislature's education committees, Sen. Terry Sverdrsten, R-Cataldo, and Rep. Ernest Hale, R-Burley.

Other members include Sen. Claire Wetherell, D-Mountain Home; Rep. Frances Field, R-Grand View and Rep. Cella Folkinga, R-Buhl.

The committee on juvenile justice will be headed by Darrington and Rep. Dean Sorenson, R-Boise. Among other members is Sen. Larry Anderson, R-Twin Falls.

One interim committee has two assignments. It will look at both Idaho lien laws and contractor licensing laws. Chairman assignments are tentative. None of the members are from the Magic Valley.

The committee looking into the insurance premium tax will be headed by Sen. Jerry Thorne, R-Nampa, and Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, cochairmen.

ISU students balk at ban

POCATELLO (AP) — The Idaho State University student Senate has declined for the time being to put an initiative to the student body calling for a ban on nuclear-weapons research at the school. The ISU Student Peace Union asked the Senate to call for a vote on its proposed amendment to the student body association's constitution declaring the university a nuclear-weapons-free zone. At its last meeting of the school year Monday night, the Senate left until next semester a decision on whether to put the amendment to a vote. "Yes, we're disappointed," said Carla Reale, Peace Union member. "We wanted it to be decided now before everyone leaves for the summer."

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — Cold rain and the discovery of buried hazardous materials hampered rescue workers Tuesday in their search for 11 men missing in the ruins of a collapsed apartment building.

Libya may possess missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — American intelligence agencies believe Libya may be attempting to build a short-range guided missile to add to its military arsenal, administration officials said Tuesday.

Mid-air near misses common

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the National Transportation Safety Board expressed alarm that near-collisions involving commercial jetliners are becoming commonplace as four more such incidents in one day came to light Tuesday.

PAUL LAXALT Not a Reagan clone

Nevada's Laxalt eyes presidency

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Nevada Sen. Paul Laxalt, trying to stake the main claim to the political legacy of his friend Ronald Reagan, declared Tuesday he is running for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination because "there is much unfinished work to do" on the Reagan agenda.

Free speech not suppressed by U.S. 'propaganda' label

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is not suppressing free speech by labeling as "political propaganda" three Canadian films on acid rain and nuclear war, the Supreme Court ruled Tuesday.

Poindexter is honorable, Reagan says

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan called John Poindexter "an honorable man" Tuesday and speculated that the former national security adviser did not tell him about money being funneled to Nicaraguan rebels because "he thought he was being, in some way, protective of me."

Laxalt, son-of-a-Basque-sheep-herder, said he is only forming an exploratory committee, but his decision to run is "as close to final as it could be," adding the "slight caveat" of raising enough money for a campaign.

The 64-year-old former governor and senator brushed aside suggestions that a pending libel suit involving his prior ownership of a Nevada casino could stall his campaign, saying he was certain he would prove in court the story was false.

In Western parlance, this hired hand is ready to take over as foreman," Laxalt added to the cheers of his supporters.

some foreign-produced material is "neutral and even-handed" and has no pejorative connotation.

Civil rights groups said they will turn to Congress for help in removing the propaganda designation from the Canadian films and other, similar material.

The administration sparked an uproar in 1983 when the Justice Department classified the films as political propaganda under a World War II law designed to expose Nazi propaganda and foreign subversion.

The law, the Foreign Agents Registration Act, was challenged by California State Sen. Barry Keene, who planned to sponsor showings of the films to support his views.

Ferry Eastland, a Justice Department spokesman, said the Supreme Court decision "gives us a measure of vindication."

The films are "If You Love This Planet," an Academy Award winner for short subjects in 1988 that concerned the consequences of nuclear war, "Acid From Heaven" and "Acid Rain: Requiem or Recovery."

The Canadian government has been pressing President Reagan to take strong measures to reduce acid rain produced by U.S. air pollution.

In other decisions, the court: Said those sued by the government for allegedly harming the environment are entitled to have a jury decide whether they violated federal law.

Heard arguments in a case from South Dakota over the federal government's power to withhold some highway construction money from states that fail to adopt a minimum drinking age of 21.

L.M. Boyd's What's what

A SINGLE AT HOME

Far more single young men and women now elect to continue to live at home with their parents than did so 10 years ago. To be specific, 26 percent more 20-to-34-year-old men and 18 percent more women than that age. They decline to move to apartments of their own as once they did. The survey to find this out covered 50,000 households, a sizable sampling.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: It's one of those days when you would be wise to follow through with the practical ideas you've started on. Anything new could have countless unfortunate ramifications.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Pay more attention to the smaller details of practical affairs. Visit a good friend tonight for a good time.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Concentrate on personal matters that can be profitable. Show special thoughtfulness to your friends.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Contact your friends and see if there is anything helpful you can do for them that makes them happy.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Study your personal wishes and find the best way to attain them. Make a practical plan for best results.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Delve right-into-outside activities and handle them efficiently. Enjoy the feeling of satisfaction you have.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Go over your bills and do whatever will make them run more smoothly now and in the future.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 23): Go over your bills and see how you can handle them right so they are soon behind you.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You have to use tact with a recalcitrant partner if you are able to put your points across.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Persevere if you aim to complete your duties. Discuss the details of some project with coworkers.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You can enjoy yourself more at hobbies by practicing. Show more devotion and feel more sure of yourself.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): It's a good day to discuss financial affairs at home, but use tact and avoid arguments thustly.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Handle delayed communications and they are soon behind you. Be happy with the one you love.

Actress says Reagan cagey, kind, but JFK was the sexiest

TWIN FALLS, Pa. (AP) — Actress Angie Dickinson says President Reagan combined cagey intelligence with a kindness toward women, but President Kennedy was the "sexiest politician I ever met."

Ms. Dickinson met Reagan in 1963 on the set of "The Killers." She said Reagan "didn't light up like John Kennedy," but is "smart like a fox — not fast and mean, but smart."

"And his sexuality is sweet as opposed to a sensual sexuality," she added. "He's the kind of man who would call and bring flowers."

Kennedy, she said, was "a devastatingly handsome, charming man — the kind your mother would not marry. From the moment I met him, I was hooked like everyone else."

Ms. Dickinson compared the presidents in an interview for the May 2 issue of TV Guide, but brushed when asked about rumors that romantically linked her with Kennedy.

"He was a married man and president of the United States. I don't advertise who my loves are. ... I'm not going to go tell anyone what happens in my bed. That's ridiculous," she said.

Joint jumping as 600 businessmen unwind during party at Alcatraz

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The joint was jumping as 600 businessmen gathered for a party at Alcatraz, the legendary penitentiary that housed the country's worst crooks for nearly 30 years.

Surrounded by steel bars, doors and endless locks, the dinner Monday night at tables set in burgundy linen off rich china and silver, sipping fine wines from crystal goblets. An orchestra played. Livered waiters and waitresses in black ties and white gloves served.

It was a big time in the Big House.

On the outside, said businessman Barry Douglas of Los Angeles, "you really can't imagine what this is like, when you walk in and they shut the door behind you."

"I wanted something out of the ordinary," said Bill Hambrecht, chief officer of Hambrecht & Quist, a San Francisco investment banking firm celebrating its 15th technology conference.

"It's a bit far out," he said. "But we're these people (conference participants) here. They talk business for four straight days, and it's important to go out at least one night and have a lot of fun."

The company paid caterers $72,000 to arrange the entire evening, including a troupe of actors who pretended — through noisy, sham inmate-guard fights and an "escape" during dessert.

The high-tech executive and institutional money managers drank cocktails on the patio alongside the burned-out remains of the warden's house, huddling against the cold of a fresh westerly wind blowing in through the Golden Gate.

In the mess hall, they were entertained by an eight-piece band and a laser light-show playing on a wall where the final breakfast menu in March 1963 was still hanging.

The National Park Service, which administers Alcatraz as part of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, reported the party was the first time that alcoholic beverages had been legally served on the island.

The partygoers prowled the cavolite detention cells in the infamous "D" Block, and later had supper and sipped wine from crystal goblets at tables right outside the steel bars.

"What an existence in there," said Gary Hamilton of Boston, peering into the dark cubicle where criminals were tossed for weeks after violent episodes.

Dozens listened raptly to the lectures of Frank Heaney, who, at 71, was the youngest guard ever to serve on the island. He is now doing public relations for the ferry service that runs tourists to Alcatraz.

"Did you have Ivan Boesky here?" joked one man, referring to the man fined $100 million for inside stock trading.

"Those guys are lucky this place closed down," called another as the colleagues laughed.

Many of the guests peered from the barred mess hall windows, glimpsing a spectacular view of San Francisco that the convicts must have seen while serving time on the arid island they called "The Rock." It's only a tantalizing mile off the glittering San Francisco shore.

Spoma Mattson, one of the event's chief planners, said the bash had "at a time when some Wall Streeters are facing sentences in federal penitentiaries."

Barges transported $11,000 in lighting equipment, dozens of portable heaters, toilets, furniture, thousands of feet of extension cord, 4,000 pounds of food, and hundreds of gallons of fresh water.

The 20-acre island is a place that can be called truly unique for a conference party. For 23 years it was the meanest prison in America, echoing to the footsteps of the likes of Chicago crime czar Al Capone, "Birdman" Robert Stroud, and George "Machine Gun" Kelly.

Park Service spokesman Howard Levitt said the party is an experiment to determine the feasibility of such events for the future. Alcatraz is part of the system's Golden Gate National Recreation Area.

Throughout the prison years, 40 known inmates tested the administrative brag that Alcatraz was escape-proof with 13 escape attempts, the first in 1936.

One man was reported by his relative to have succeeded: Clarence Anglin, who died the island in 1962 and was reported to have died a free man in Iowa 10 years later.

Bridges will portray eccentric auto maker

MARTINEZ, Calif. (AP) — Actor Jeff Bridges will portray the man who built the legendary shaped Tucker, the "Car of Tomorrow" in the 1940s, in a movie produced by George Lucas and directed by Francis Ford Coppola.

Bridges, plays Preston Tucker, a forgotten Michigan entrepreneur who built cars intended to last a lifetime. Today there are only 45 Tuckers in running condition, and 18 of them have been rounded up for the movie "Tucker."

Several shiny Tucker Torpedoes were parked nearby on Monday when Bridges accepted the key to the city in a scene for the film.

In the 1940s, Tucker amassed $28 million to build the auto, but spent most of the money on design work and samples. Before he could mass-produce his car, he was charged by the Securities and Exchange Commission with fraud.

Eventually he and seven associates were acquitted on all counts, but Tucker never got his business going again, and died of cancer in 1966 at age 53. His 50 prototype cars sold for $2,000 apiece.

The Tucker's rear-mounted motor was a converted helicopter engine.

Prince Charles dons toga for ceremonies

BOLOGNA, Italy (AP) — Prince Charles, draped in a ceremonial toga, received an honorary doctorate in philosophy Tuesday from the University of Bologna.

The prince, who is on a one-week visit to Italy, was greeted by a small group of students with banners protesting "degrees awarded to the powerful."

The prince received the degree on the occasion of a convention in this northern city dedicated to the British Special Forces and their role in the Italian resistance during World War II.

Explaining Viet war a tough proposition

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Country Joe McDonald wants the younger generation to understand the Vietnam War, but concedes it's tough going.

Portugal's president will receive degree

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — President Mario Soares of Portugal will receive an honorary degree from Brown University during a four-day visit to Rhode Island and Massachusetts next month, officials said.

Soares' itinerary also includes lunch with Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis and dinner with New Bedford, Mass., Mayor John Bullard and members of that city's large Portuguese community, said Rita Levenson, a spokeswoman for Lusitanos, a local Lisbon-based group that is coordinating Soares' visit.

Brown's commencement is May 25.

Maureen Reagan can't elude family

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Maureen Reagan says she's come a long way from just being the daughter of famous parents, but the first question she was asked after a speech Tuesday was about her mother, "Falcon Crest" star Jane Wyman.

Ms. Reagan smiled patiently, then gave a brief update on the television series.

After her 45-minute speech to a group of commodity market reporters on the status of women around the world, Ms. Reagan said she has earned her own professional reputation. "Everybody used to pat me on the head and said, 'OK, kid.' Now they say, 'OK, boss, what do you want me to do?'"

Pearlman dons wig

NEW YORK (AP) — Wonder what would it take to get Itzhak Perlman to wear a blond wig, dress and matching scarf in front of his violin-playing peers?

Monday night, Perlman did just that during a skit to honor Dorothy DeLay, the 70-year violin instructor who has taught him and many other concert violinists.

"I think it feels good to have me around, like a rabbit's foot, but they do it all themselves. As everybody does," said Miss DeLay.

House panel seeks files from embassy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Accusing the State Department of withholding information, a House subcommittee voted Tuesday to subpoena department files on security at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

"I am shocked and chagrined that the State Department would act in this way when they had indicated that they would cooperate," said subcommittee chairman Rep. Dan Mica, D-Fla. who toured the embassy earlier this month and reported lax security.

"We understand they set up a special task force to try to withhold this information," said Mica, chairman of the Foreign Affairs subcommittee on overseas operations.

The panel voted 6-0, with three absent, to issue the subpoena for files dealing with security procedures at the present U.S. Embassy in Moscow, the building still under construction to replace it, and possibly other American missions in the Soviet bloc.

At the State Department, spokesman Charles Redman said a computer search produced thousands of documents about embassy security and a task force was assigned to determine which were relevant to the committee's request.

Materials were provided to the subcommittee Friday, Monday and Tuesday mornings, said Redman, but he acknowledged that some highly classified cables have not been provided. He said the State Department is trying to work out an agreement with the subcommittee concerning these documents.

Asked about Mica's expression of shock over the State Department's behavior, Redman said, "I just have no idea on what basis he could make such a statement."

Last Friday, Robert Lamb, the assistant secretary of state for diplomatic security, assured the subcommittee that security procedures had been tightened since two Marine guards allegedly were sexually entrapped by Soviet women employed at the embassy and allowed KGB agents into sensitive sections of the building.

Lamb also testified that U.S. officials were aware as early as 1979 of Soviet attempts to bug a new U.S. Embassy under construction in Moscow, but thought they could counteract the devices.

President Reagan has said that Soviet workers implanted so many listening devices in the new building that he may order it torn down.

Mica strode into the Capitol Hill hearing 15 minutes late, followed by an aide carrying a box of documents that the congressman said State Department officials sent him Tuesday morning in an attempt to ward off the subpoena.

Mica said that the box contained classified documents, and that they would be placed in a safe. He allowed photographers to take pictures of the open box.

Mica said that "what we do know is damaging to certain personnel at the embassy, with regard to embassy procedures, practices, and their positions with regard to security." He declined to name the individuals.

Cost of improvements may slow NASA flight

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — NASA may lack the money to make the first post-Challenger space shuttle flight in early 1988 because of the high cost of permanent improvements required, the head of the agency said Tuesday.

James C. Fletcher said the space agency has money problems in trying to recover from last year's explosion that killed seven crew members and brought the shuttle program to an abrupt halt.

"We just don't want to start the first flight and then have a big gap in the program," because of insufficient funds, Fletcher said. "We want to have a first flight and then continuation of several flights after that."

NASA had set Feb. 18, 1988 as a target date for the first flight, but said last week that a number of factors — including a decision to fire the engines while locking the ship on the pad — will cause a delay.

"It's safe to say it will be at least six weeks later than that because that's how long the flight readiness firing will take," Fletcher said.

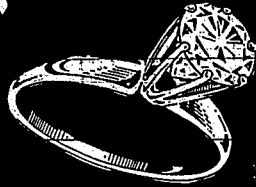

Naval aviator's remains identified

WASHINGTON (AP) — The remains of a naval aviator who was lost over North Vietnam 22 years ago have been identified positively by an Army laboratory in Hawaii, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

The remains of Lt. J.G. David M. Christian were repatriated to the United States by Vietnam in April 1986 and identified recently by the U.S. Army's Central Identification Laboratory in Honolulu, the Pentagon said in a statement.

Christian's remains will be transported to California today following a full military honors ceremony at Hickam Air Force Base in Hawaii, the Pentagon added.

Suit already consumes 10% cost of new jail

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — More than $330,000 has been spent by Twin Falls County on costs related to an inmate lawsuit over the present jail. That's close to 10 percent of what it would cost to build a proposed new 90-bed jail.

"I'm not surprised," Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said of the expenses. "We (the commissioners) see all those numbers as they come in, but you don't really pay attention until they are added up."

In this case, the figures suggest that up to the amount of one year's payment on a $3.6 million bond to finance a new jail, he said. During 1986 a total of $154,888 was spent on bonding and transporting inmates to other jails because of a cap on the jail population.

According to figures provided by the Jail Advisory Committee that is promoting passage of the jail bond at a May 12 election. The 50-inmate cap was one part of a court agreement resulting from the lawsuit.

January, February and March of 1987, the boarding and transportation costs the county is committed to about $200,000, according to Sheriff Jim Munia.

The highest transportation and boarding bill for March 1987 came close at $21,856. Banker Bud Way estimated that county residents are now paying 28 cents for every $1,000 of taxable valuation on their property to transport and board inmates.

The bills started flowing after Feb. 11, 1986 when the Twin Falls County Board of Commissioners signed the court agreement. In the past, the commissioners admitted to several problems at the present jail, which is more than 70 years old. They also agreed to implement several improvements, place a bond before the public to finance a new jail and impose the cap. The result of the cap was the frequent transportation of inmates to other jails at boarding cost of about $100 a day for adults and $40 a day for juveniles.

The lawsuit was brought by two former jail inmates, who alleged the aged jail was inadequate.

The cost of improvements amount to $1.5 million. Included in that amount are alarms and fans, a new lock system, emergency lighting, a new fire door and exits and private visitation room.

"They (the improvements) make the jail safer," Hempleman said, "but it's wasted money." Doubt about it. "When we get our new jail most of the things we've bought like the fire alarms and doors, won't be of any use in the new facility. You've spent all these dollars and you can't use them in the BURELY — Cowles Media Co., which owns The South Idaho Press, is putting the Burley daily newspaper and its sister publications up for sale to concentrate on larger holdings.

A top executive of the Minneapolis-based publishing company announced the sell-off of South Idaho Newspapers Inc. in Tuesday's editions of the SIP, citing long-term business strategy.

"We have chosen to focus our corporate resources on media properties substantially larger than the South Idaho Press," said Jay Cowles, director of planning. Cowles Media does not yet have a buyer, Cowles said. Marketing the papers is expected to take as long as six months. Normal operations will continue until a sale is concluded, he told the company's 30 Denver employees in a meeting on Monday.

South Idaho Newspapers publishes the daily paper and two free weeklies, Magic Valley Farm Lines magazine and SIP Reminder. Shopper paper. The SIP circulates 8,000 copies daily, and the two weeklies circulate 27,800.

The Burley group is the smallest division of the Cowles chain, which includes the 300,000-copy Minneapolis Star and Tribune; the Great Falls, Mont., Tribune; The Rapid City, S.D., Journal, and the Sentinel News-Paper, a group of weekly papers in suburban Denver.

Cowles praised the South Idaho Newspapers group in Tuesday's announcement, saying "We believe it has a good future as an independent voice in the eastern Magic Valley."

He declined later in a telephone interview to disclose any sale price or other purchase terms. John Eberline, SIP publisher and SINI president, was out of the office and could not be reached Tuesday for comment.

Cowles Media purchased South Idaho Press in 1977 from the late Lloyd Hollinger, owner of commercial printer Burley Reminder Inc., and other community investors, said Gary Hollinger, his son and

In the past three years, Cowles has invested in an offset press, a color laboratory and an addition to the company's main plant at Burley. The expansion brought South

Idaho Newspapers' printing in-house and established a commercial printing business, which now competes with its former printer, Burley Reminder, in Minidoka County.

In the past few months, South Idaho Newspapers also has taken one of its publications out of business and sold its interest in another.

On April 1, the SIP absorbed Minidoka County News, a weekly paper that served 4,000 subscribers in Minidoka County. The company also divested part ownership in Idaho Outdoor Digest, a 5,000-circulation sporting magazine based at Rupert.

Engines may improve wastewater treatment

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — With a breath of air from new engines, the capacity of the Twin Falls City Wastewater Treatment Plant could be increased by 12 percent, estimated plant managers.

In addition, energy savings would pay for the $200,000 investment for the new equipment in five years, said Dick Harville, regional manager of Operations Management International Inc. The city contracts with OMI to manage the plant.

The City Council on Monday commissioned an engineering study to confirm OMI's preliminary estimates and determine whether the investment is economically feasible. After the study is completed, the council will determine how to pay the bill.

The money would purchase two engines and two blowers to add air to the treatment system, Harville said. Air encourages the bacterial growth that destroys pollutants in the water.

pounds of biochemical oxygen demand, or BODs, per day, Harville said. BODs are pollutants in the wastewater.

During some days last month, the plant went beyond its design capacity because of increased waste from contracted industries, he said. Once a treatment plant reaches 80 percent of its capacity, operators must present the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency with a plan on how it would expand the system, Harville said. Taking into consideration some high-load days, the Twin Falls plant is beyond that capacity point.

But the new equipment would save money on electrical costs because it would use the methane gas by-product of the plant, Harville said. The present air blowers are now run by electricity.

By using the methane-powered engines, the annual energy savings would be increased to $45,000.

Radiologist loses $350,000 lawsuit

By BONNIE BAIIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls radiologist has won a $350,000 lawsuit for damages to a Jerome awarded the right to sue a Twin Falls radiologist.

James and Lillian Smallwood of Jerome filed the damage suit against Dr. Carol Dick after James Smallwood suffered a fractured back in an expert witness a radiologist from Abilene, Texas, S.D., in 1981. The suit was filed in the District Court, which was the first time a report on a patient of the treating physician was negligent in not seeing a fracture of the thoracic spine area.

Smallwood's attorney, W. Marcus W. Nye of Boise, argued in his closing remarks that Dick, a radiologist from Abilene, Tex., had testified that he could see an irregularity in the thoracic spine area.

However, Defense Attorney Jeremiah Guape of Boise, noted that two other radiologists from the Magic Valley area had agreed with Dick's analysis and report. He also pointed out to jurors that the treating physicians had requested — full — spine — X-rays — although Smallwood's back pain persisted.

Nye said that Dick did not meet the standard of her profession in handling the Smallwood case and therefore contributed to his permanent injuries.

In the special verdict, signed by nine of the 12 jurors, and requiring a minimum of three-fourths of the panel, jurors said there was negligence constituting the proximate cause of injuries to the plaintiff.

Gooding textbook selection committee will assist district

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent.

GOODING — A committee to assist the Gooding School District in selecting textbooks has been appointed.

Superintendent Lester Diehl told the board at its April meeting that state regulations require such a review committee when new school books are being selected.

Two teachers, Gail Cushman and Alice Heckender, were appointed to the committee along with elementary principal Jim Cobble and school board chairman Clair Major. The committee also includes two parents, Sharon Braga and Susan Faulkner.

The committee will review textbook selections and make recommendations to the school board.

In other business at the board meeting, a 'C' average rule advisory committee was appointed. The committee includes high school principal Larry Tinker, teachers Brett Fowler and Tom Woodruff and two sets of parents, Jerry and Pauline McConnell and Richard and Sue Curtis.

Diehl said the group will study ways to implement the grade mandated 'C' average rule for core classes, which affects students graduating in 1968.

Under the rule, a student to graduate must earn a composite 'C' average in four core classes, math, reading, speech and English or meet a district approved alternative.

Alternatives approved by the state include earning a standard score on the Iowa Basic Skills Test and passing a district developed writing test, or meeting the requirements of a district-developed Competency Plan that has been approved by the state.

Diehl said the state will develop guidelines for the alternative and the local district will have to decide which option to follow. "We need to get a plan in place," Diehl said and advised the board that the third option might not be feasible for Gooding.

Diehl told the board Gooding will receive a net gain of about $20,000 from the state apportionment under a new equalizing formula. "It's not going to be the 9 percent they've been talking about," he said.

All-breed horse show set Saturday

JEROME — An all-breed horse show with english and western classes will be held Saturday, beginning at 9 a.m., at Simpson's arena in Jerome.

The arena is located one-half mile south and three miles west of Cindy's Restaurant in Jerome.

Promoter Sharon Olsen says this is a "schooling show" for all ages of riders and horses. Entry fee is $3 per class and show judge will be Sandra Birnie of Gooding.

Lists of prizes for the horse show are posted at Petersen's Western Wear and at Walco in Twin Falls.

Gooding has lost about two full classroom funding units because of declining enrollment in the past two years he said, but state funds pay a little more per unit because there are fewer students state wide "people are leaving the state," he added.

Tinker told the board the high school enrollment was down from the 310 who started classes there last fall.

Moves from Stuart clot

Willis moves to principal at Harrison

TWIN FALLS — Steve Willis, vice principal at Robert Stuart Junior High School, has been selected as the new principal of Harrison Elementary School.

Willis replaces Bill Stover, who served as principal at Harrison for three years before resigning.

Willis has been an employee of the Twin Falls School District for 11 years as a teacher and vice principal. He will begin his duties as Harrison's principal during the summer of 1967.

Suspect in murder appears in court

GOODING — Donald T. Sigall, 22, of Boise, was arraigned Tuesday on a first degree murder charge involving the death last Thursday of his step-father, Willbert Loren Groves, 55, also of Gooding.

Fifth District Magistrate Thomas Cushman conducted the arraignment but disqualifed himself from the preliminary hearing and court officials said no date has been set pending selection of another judge.

Sigall was held in the Gooding County Jail late Tuesday without bond. He will be represented by Steve Botimer, Gooding County public defender.

Sigall was returned to Gooding late Monday from Boise where he was picked up by Gooding County officers.

He was arrested in Boise by city detectives Thursday afternoon after police received a tip about a body in the back of a camper parked at an apartment house. Officers arrested him when he was observed returning to the camper and pickup truck from the apartment.

Groves died of blows about the head, and an autopsy showed he had been dead for several hours when the body was found. Officers arrested him when he was observed returning to the camper and pickup truck from the apartment.

Wendell clean-up slated Thursday

WENDELL — The annual clean-up day in Wendell will be held Thursday, April 30.

"We're picking up anything that's laying out there (in city alleys)," says city superintendent Charlie Doy. "Stumps, rocks, you name it, we pick it up."

Things of value people want to keep should be retrieved from alleys before Thursday, Doy says.

Brush should be cut in four foot lengths. Rusted or burned out barrels will be hauled away and not replaced by the city.

Students from the vocational agriculture class at the Wendell high school, led by teacher Jim Benson, will be a major part of the clean-up crew, says Doy. Everyone else who would like to volunteer help should meet at the Wood's shop, at 8 a.m. Thursday morning.

Veria Day Legerda

OAKLEY — Veria Day Legerda, 70, of Salt Lake City, Utah, formerly of Oakley, died Sunday, April 23, at the Dixie-Hatch Medical Center in Salt Lake City.

She was born Oct. 25, 1914, in Oakley, Utah, and was a native of that town. Surviving are: her husband, Michael Legerda of Salt Lake City; three sons, Gene Baker of Reno, Nev., George Baker of Jerome and Gary Baker of Boise; three daughters, Debra Fanning of Hailey, Sherry White of Missoula, Mont., and Terry Jones of Worland, Wyo.; seven brothers, Donald Day of Burley, Gilbert Day of American Falls, Raymond Day of Dayton, Ohio and Bill Day of Orem, Utah; one sister, Johann Mayer of Burley; 17 grandchildren; and seven great-grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by her parents, two brothers and three sisters.

an estimated $48,000 to $50,000 a year.

Other related costs are less obvious, Attorneys in the county's Public Defender Office have to travel to other jails to visit county inmates. According to county records, almost $100 has been spent.

County taxpayers feel the full brunt of the costs related to the lawsuit because the costs aren't restricted by a statutory limitation applicable on other county expenses, Hempleman said.

As a result, the county may levy for the full impact of the lawsuit.

While the costs for the improvements are a one-time item, the other costs are continuing, such as the transportation expenses and salaries for additional personnel, he said.

If the bond fails, the jail could be reduced by a court to a holding facility, Hempleman said. That will mean more transportation costs. But before that the first thing he would authorize is the purchase of another van to transport inmates, he added.

"Then there's the problem of space. Even if we have the money, we need space (for the additional inmates) in other jails," Hempleman said. "I don't know where we'd go."

could amount to $35,000, he said. But the reduced power usage won't offset the city's reduced rate from the Idaho Power Co.

The exact savings and costs of the proposal will be researched in a study by CH2M-Hill Engineers of Boise. City Manager Tom Courtney said the study cost will be $5,000.

OMI has indicated a willingness to help the city finance the project, Courtney said. But he believed there would be enough money within the city budget.

On another subject, Finance Director Rick Thompson said the city had a $250,000 loss "on paper" in its investment program because of a declining bond market.

"But it's not going to happen," said Thompson during his quarterly report to the council on city investments.

With $1 million in "liquid" assets and expected revenue from property taxes, the city is not in a position of having to sell its holdings, he said.

Courtney added, "If we hold our investments until maturity, there will be no loss."

On the subject of streets, Young reported that bids for a large seal-coating project of city streets had come in about $40,000 less than estimated. As a result, the council decided to tackle another street project.

The city will proceed on reconstruction of Flier Avenue from Mountain View Drive to Eastland Drive at an estimated cost of $1,533.

The city had earlier decided to fund 15 streets, construction projects at a total estimated cost of $28,810. The Flier Avenue project was no. 12 on the list.

Even with the addition of the Flier Avenue project, the city will have a contingency fund for emergencies, Young said.

In other business, the council approved and lauded the plans of city employees for the Western Days celebration this summer.

An employees committee planned and will sponsor several events, including a tractor pull, mini-mud race, chili cooking contest and baseball throw, to name a few.

Councilman Jack Miller said the council was "100 percent" behind the

Waldheim says he did nothing wrong

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — President Kurt Waldheim said Tuesday he did nothing wrong as a German army officer during World War II and the U.S. decision to bar him on grounds of "involvement in Nazi atrocities is "incongruous."

"I have a clear conscience... You can trust me," Waldheim told the nation in a five-minute speech on radio and television.

Austrian President Kurt Waldheim prepares for speech

On Monday, the United States put the former U.N. secretary general on its Watchlist of undesirable aliens barred from entering the United States, citing evidence that he aided in the deportation and execution of thousands of Jews and others.

Investigators found evidence that Waldheim "participated in persecutions for reasons of race or religion under the Nazi regime," Attorney General Edwin Meese III said Tuesday in Brussels.

A U.S. official at the United Nations in New York said that, if Waldheim sought to attend a U.N. session, "a policy decision would have to be made on whether to admit."

Waldheim, who is 68 and was elected to the largely ceremonial presidency last June, thanked Austrians for an "impressive wave" of support expressed earlier Tuesday by a government statement rejecting the U.S. charges.

Associated Press earlier Tuesday by should allow an investigation by an independent group of military historians, who could make a report in four or five weeks.

In Tuesday speech, Waldheim made no direct reference to accusations that he was linked to World War II atrocities in Greece and Yugoslavia. He did not mention the Nazi Holocaust or Austria's role in the war. Germany annexed Austria in 1938, and some Austrians served in the German army in World War II.

"Once again, as in the last 12 months, there is talk of supposedly new papers," Waldheim said. "Let me emphasize that there can be no prospect of guilty conduct."

"Let me say in all simplicity, but also with clarity, that I cannot be misunderstood—I have a clear conscience," he said.

"I do not want to settle what those people had to go through who were thrown then into the terrible happenings of war; it was the fate of my generation, and we will carry it with us all our lives; that is, the knowledge of the horror of war and the will to work for more peace."

"I was on the side of those who worked for peace," he added, noting his 10 years as an Austrian diplomat and the decade he spent as U.N. secretary-general beginning in 1972.

He called the U.S. decision "dismaying and incomprehensible" and said later in the speech:

"Because I have always stood up for human beings, I would like to claim for myself the right to demand that one should not find people guilty without any proof. Anybody who does this violates the general principles of law and justice."

Bases loaded, no one out, he says

Nakasono off on toughest assignment

TOKYO (AP) — Ruefully comparing himself to a baseball pitcher with bases loaded and no one out, Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasono takes off for Washington Wednesday on what may be his toughest assignment yet.

Nakasono will meet President Reagan on Thursday and Friday, with strains between the United States and Japan the worst in decades over trade disputes.

At home, the prime minister has to cope with political woes which some say could force him to step down before his term ends in October.

Japanese opinion poll ratings of his leadership are at their lowest since he took office in November 1982. One recent newspaper survey put his approval rating at 24 percent.

But Nakasono, 68, has proved a cagey survivor.

When he invoked the bases-loaded analogy Monday to describe his immediate crises, Nakasono added with a rare smile, "In such games, the decisive moments come from the seventh inning onward."

Nakasono will leave Tokyo from Haneda airport on a chartered flight and fly to Washington by way of Anchorage, Alaska.

He said he hopes to resolve specific disputes with the Americans during his six-day trip, his sixth to Washington, and also to underscore the fundamental vitality of U.S.-Japan ties despite present trade tensions.

Still, a senior Foreign Ministry official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said, "We are in a very critical era and how we handle this situation... will have a lasting effect on the world economic situation as a whole. Whatever we do, we should do now."

The Reagan-Nakasono talks are certain to focus on Japan's huge trade surplus with the United States, which reached a record $58.6 billion last year. The two men are on a first-name basis, and Nakasono thanked Reagan on Monday for fighting protectionist sentiment in Congress against Japan.

The prime minister, whose outspoken, high-profile style contrasts with the usual consensus approach in Japanese politics, is likely to elaborate on recent pledges to boost the domestic economy and further open Japan's markets. The goal is to increase U.S. imports and help narrow the trade gap.

But Susumu Yamagake, professor of international relations at the University of Tokyo, remarked, "There is nothing more that Nakasono can offer. Of course he can say in the long run he will stimulate domestic demand and open our markets, but he's been saying that all along. The U.S. now says it wants some concrete action, and that's not something you can come up with in a short time."

Nakasono is under pressure at home to tell the Americans they, too, must act, mainly by making U.S. export products more competitive and cutting the U.S. budget deficit.

Japan also wants Americans to know that steps already taken under U.S. pressure have begun to hurt here. The coordinated devaluing of the U.S. dollar by 43 percent against the yen over the past 20 months, to help boost U.S. exports, has cut Japan's export volume, raised unemployment and reduced investment.

Yozo Yokota, professor of international law at International Christian University, doubted that substantive agreements would be reached but said Nakasono and Reagan would agree on "a kind of lip-service answer to pressure groups in both countries."

"I think Nakasono will bring some gift, and the only gift I can think of is the commitment that Japan will increase domestic spending," Yokota said.

Nakasono said he also will ask that penalty tariffs on $300 million worth of Japanese imports be lifted.

Washington imposed the tariffs April 17 in retaliation for purported violations of an accord on Japanese semiconductor sales. Nakasono said he would show Reagan evidence that Japan complied with the agreement and that the duties are unjustified.

Nakasono, leader of the conservative Liberal Democratic Party, said he also will raise Japanese concerns about a possible U.S.-Soviet agreement to remove medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe without a similar deal for Asia.

S. African student violence persists for 2nd day

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police whipped student protesters and the government said 16 students were arrested Tuesday during a second day of violence at the predominantly white University of Cape Town.

In another major development, Tuesday, a Supreme Court judge overturned a controversial ban on appeals for the release of detainees.

Major black opposition groups discussed plans for a nationwide strike from jobs and schools on May 5 and 6 to protest the whites-only parliamentary election on May 6. The United Democratic Front, the country's largest anti-apartheid coalition, said government suppression of opposition activity "has left us no option but to call for protest action."

The confrontation in Cape Town prompted police to close a major highway near the campus for more than two hours Tuesday afternoon. Police said the highway would be closed during peak hours each day until the unrest ceased.

The Bureau for Information said police used whips after a group of about 400 students refused to obey an order to disperse. It said 15 men and three women were arrested.

The violence followed a meeting of an estimated 3,000 students who voted to boycott classes through Wednesday to protest police use of firearms, tear gas and whips during campus clashes Monday.

The ruling regarding detainees, issued by Natal Province Supreme Court Justice R.N. Leon, was the second blow in five days to the government's state-of-emergency restrictions on news reporting and opposition activity. On Friday, a separate Supreme Court panel in Natal overruled prohibitions on reporting about unrest and security force action.

The regulations rejected by Leon were imposed April 10 by Police Commissioner Johan Coetzee. The rules banned any public appeals for the release of detainees, prompting immediate protests and threats of defiance from opposition politicians and clergymen. The outcry led to Coetzee's issuing a clarification say-

Belize refuses N.Y. trash

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The government of Belize said Tuesday it would not allow a barge filled with 3,000 tons of New York garbage to enter its territorial waters, thus prolonging the vessel's monthlong search for a dumping ground.

"The idea of us buying that garbage is laughable," government spokesman Manuel Romero said by telex from the nation's capital, Belmopan.

He quoted Prime Minister Manuel Esquivel's office as saying the barge would not be allowed into the territorial waters and its air wing has been ordered to be on the lookout for the barge.

The small Central American country is the latest state to turn away the barge, which left Islip, N.Y., on March 22 to find a place to unload cargo. North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and the Mexican government have refused the barge.

Salvadoran helicopter crash kills 10

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A Salvadoran military helicopter crashed shortly after takeoff at Ilopango air base outside the capital, and 10 people were killed, the head of the air force said.

Gen. Juan Rafael Bustillo said the accident occurred when the U.S.-made UH-1H helicopter went down with five crew members and five civilians aboard. The craft was en route to San Miguel, 60 miles east of San Salvador.

There was no immediate identification available of the victims, but military sources said two of the civilians were mothers of soldiers. The U.S. Embassy said no Americans were aboard.

Trial of accused Aquino slayers starts

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A three-judge panel began trying 40 defendants Tuesday in the 1983 murder of President Corason Aquino's husband, whose death unleashed a tide of resentment that eventually swept Ferdinand E. Marcos from power.

Mrs. Aquino succeeded Marcos in February 1986.

All 40 defendants are charged in the killings of former Sen. Benigno Aquino and Rolando Galman. Aquino, Marcos' chief political foe, was shot dead moments after he arrived at Manila International Airport after three years in the United States.

Galman was shot on the tarmac immediately afterward.

The Marcos government said Galman was a communist and accused him of killing Aquino.

Civil rift in El Salvador may go unremended despite U.S. aid

Alexander Duarte
Presidential mire deepens

By BRYNA BRENNAN
The Associated Press
SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Despite yearly infusions of more than $100 million in U.S. military aid, no end is in sight to El Salvador's more than 7-year-old civil war, either by fighting or negotiation.
Deepening political, social and economic rifts plague the fragile democracy of President Jose Napoleon Duarte's U.S.-backed government.
Leftist unions claim Duarte isn't doing enough for the poor majority. Rightists forcefully oppose social progress. The armed forces are becoming increasingly angered at politicians in general.
The economy keeps ailing

Analysis
downhill. War rages on in the northern and eastern cities of El Salvador, out of sight and usually away from earshot of the capital. Government and business leaders say the war-damaged country cannot provide jobs, land or basic services for as many as 600,000 Salvadorans who might be forced to return home because of the new U.S. immigration law.
"The economy does not have the power to absorb these people," Victor Steiner, president of the Chamber of Commerce and Industry, said in an interview.
El Salvador is Central America's most densely populated nation, with 5.2 million people, most of whom live in abject poverty. More than 50 percent of the workforce is unemployed or underemployed. The average farm worker earns about $1.50 a day.

Business leaders and the U.S. Embassy say Salvadorans living illegally in the United States sent home an estimated $350 million last year. By comparison, the U.S. government last year provided $245 million in economic and military aid to El Salvador.
The immigration law offers amnesty to certain illegal aliens who arrived in the United States before 1982, but thousands of Salvadorans entered the United States after that time.
"It's a problem we are well aware of, and it has become a hot issue that we are looking into," U.S. Embassy aide Pendleton Agnew said last month.

Duarte asked the U.S. government in March to give Salvadorans preferential treatment under the new immigration law, citing the civil war with leftist rebels and severe economic problems.
"What are they going to come back to?" asked a business leader who spoke on condition he not be identified. "There are not enough schools, hospitals, housing."
In June, Duarte completes the third year of a five-year term. He is called a dictator by the left and a socialist by the right.
His management of the economy has roused protests across the political spectrum, from the leftist rebels to the ultraconservatives who form Duarte's strongest opposition in the National Assembly.

Labor and business leaders have joined the chorus of critics.
Mainly because of the war and its destruction to farmlands, factories and businesses throughout El Salvador, a nation the size of Massachusetts, the economy is a disaster area.
Peasant women walk miles to fill plastic water jugs during the six-month dry season in the countryside. Children with extended bellies, a sign of malnutrition, go unheeded. Men carrying machetes seek seasonal field jobs. Youngsters beg passers-by for food and money.
The economy was further hurt by last October's devastating earthquake. It killed 1,500 people.

Soviets optimistic on treaty

GENEVA (AP) — The Soviet Union says Tuesday its draft treaty on eliminating medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe is a compromise incorporating U.S. proposals and agreement is achievable this year.
Alexei Obukhov, deputy chief of the Soviet delegation, told a news conference the U.S. position contains "unconstructive" elements, but problems appear surmountable and "there are more areas of convergence of views than earlier."
He introduced a new element, however, that could be an obstacle: The U.S.-controlled nuclear warheads on 72 West German Pershing 1 missiles must be destroyed as part of a superpower agreement on shorter-range weapons.
U.S. officials have insisted the warheads, including the Pershing 1s, be included in a bilateral deal.
In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said the Soviet decision to raise the question of West German missiles at this time "suggests a lack of serious intent."

Redman said the United States would make a "careful review" of the Soviet draft and was "likely to present several questions about it."
Obukhov said: "The warheads are controlled by the U.S. This is the logic of our approach."
The New York Times, quoting officials in Washington it did not identify, reported Tuesday that the Soviets presented the position when the draft was submitted the day before. Some Americans portrayed it as creating a new obstacle to an accord, the newspaper said.
According to Obukhov, the Soviets are willing to make a separate agreement on shorter-range weapons. It includes them in a treaty on medium-range missiles. Effective ranges for the two categories are 300-600 miles and 600-3,000.

Terry Schroeder, spokesman for the U.S. negotiators, declined comment.
The Soviet draft calls for eliminating the medium-range missiles of both superpowers from Europe, Obukhov said, with each retaining 100 warheads on its territory. The Soviet SS-20s remaining would be based in Asia.
Asked what differences exist between the U.S. and Soviet drafts, the negotiator cited the "negative side" of the U.S. treaty. He claimed Washington wants to convert medium-range missiles into shorter-range weapons rather than destroying them, and intends to deploy its 100 warheads "within reach of Soviet territory," presumably in Alaska.
"The U.S. draft also calls for a non-simultaneous dismantling of medium-range missiles "so that over a considerable period of time only the Soviet Union would be (dismantling missiles) while the United States would even have the possibility of building up." He did not explain the assertion.

Conversion of plant could lead to mishap

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — A severe accident could occur if the Washington Public Power Supply System's No. 1 nuclear power plant is converted to produce tritium for the nation's defense system, according to U.S. Department of Energy study.

The report, written as part of an Energy Department technical feasibility study of conversion from commercial use to defense use, says a "catastrophic" accident could occur if WPPSS No. 1 is used for tritium production.

The five-member safety panel, including scientists from the Energy Department and the contractor, says a "catastrophic" accident might occur during an accident that results in the melting, or partial melting, of the nuclear fuel within the reactor core.

In a reactor accident, uranium liquefied during a fuel melt would gather at the bottom of the reactor vessel and solidify, resulting in an uncontrolled nuclear chain reaction.

The release of heat and radiation similar to an explosion could be great enough to escape through the reactor's containment system, the report said.

The Energy Department prepared a three-part study on the technical aspects of converting the reactor. The first part of the report was released in February.

DOE is planning to release a second portion of the technical study within the next several days. Those documents include the safety analysis on conversion.

The portion of the study released in February concluded the conversion is technically feasible. A third portion of the study consists of classified information and will not be publicly released, Energy Department officials said.

The second part of the study evaluates whether a conceptual design for converting WPPSS No. 1 could meet Nuclear Regulatory Commission standards for commercial reactors.

If the reactor is not resolved, a timely safety evaluation from the NRC may not be obtained, the report said.

Although a "catastrophic" accident is not highly probable, regulatory efforts in the wake of nuclear accidents at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania and Chernobyl in the Soviet Union have shifted to include analysis of low-risk reactor accidents.

Except for that single issue, a design for converting the reactor probably will meet NRC licensing regulations, the panel concluded.

Energy Department reactors do not come under NRC rules, but DOE has promised to comply with regulations for commercial reactors if the WPPSS plant is converted to defense use.

WPPSS No. 1, located at the Hanford nuclear reservation in south-central Washington, was mothballed under construction delays ordered in April 1982. Construction of the plant is 63 percent complete. It would cost about $1.5 billion to complete construction, which totals $4.5 billion so far.

Tax hike may spur more bootleg booze

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Authorities had only a fraction of the bootleg liquor flowing into Utah, and recent tax increases could prompt even more Utahns to bring cheaper booze home from adjacent states, officials say.

In addition, the 11-cent-per-park-boat in Utah's cigarette tax could spur more Utahns into purchasing smokes in border towns, further hurting local businesses, according to a group representing the state's grocers.

Utah's sales tax already has climbed one-half cent from 6 cents to 6.5 cents on the dollar, while the gasoline tax is now 19 cents a gallon, compared to Wyoming's 8 cents a gallon.

"It's a much more serious problem than anybody knows," said Jim Olsen, president of the Utah Retail Grocers Association.

Mitch Ingersoll, supervisor of the state's liquor law enforcement officers, said he could not estimate "beyond a lot" how much alcohol is carried illegally into Utah, but he said there are not nearly enough officers to police the flow.

Ingersoll said enforcers hope the principle of deterrence, or catching and citing a few people, will persuade most Utahns to comply with the law.

Agents can spend only a few days a month traveling across state lines to watch and catch Utahns buying liquor to take home, and those caught hauling large quantities are pulled over when they enter Utah, he said.

Some who transport smaller home amounts get a notice in the mail after police take their license plate numbers.

Still, Ingersoll said, most people don't travel out-of-state just to buy liquor.

"You don't have a mass exodus going to liquor stores in Wyoming to usurp state law," he said.

Instead, he said, crowd-pleasers in Utah, Nebeker sold about 300 cartons like the horse races at Evanston's lone a week to Utahns, a quarter of Wyoming Downs draw visitors who his cigarette trade, and he predicts often buy a few bottles to take more sales now.

Helping police fight drugs has high price

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — High school senior Gary George Ellis Jr. says he has lost his friend and received death threats since word got out he spent four months as an undercover police informant.

Ellis' double life ended last Wednesday, when police arrested 42 of his peers on drug charges during a raid on East High School.

Ellis, 18, said that word was out within 24 hours that the raid was based on information he gave to police. Since then, he said his girlfriends have left him, and colleagues have told him life-threatening "accidents" would be arranged.

"They've told me I'm going to lose an ear or that one day I'm going to be walking down the road and get hit by a car," Ellis said.

Ellis said he volunteered to work for the police because he was worried about friends who were using drugs.

"I saw how my friends were. I wanted to get them out of it. They were doing okay. They were making a lot of money. But later down in life, they were going to get busted. They would probably go to prison," he said.

But his friends haven't taken kindly to his brand of charity. He said he can find a job and a place to live in another town.

Only his family and the police have told him that he did the right thing.

Ellis said he was a moderate drug user and part-time dealer himself and that he started smoking marijuana in eighth grade. He said he experimented with cocaine, LSD and psychedelic mushrooms.

But Ellis said he quit last fall, after realizing that drug use kept him from excelling in football and damaged his relationship with his family.

His friends wouldn't follow his example, so he took a shot at police action, a move Lt. Marty Vuyk, of the Metropolitan Narcotics Task Force, called courageous.

"In my estimation," Vuyk said, "he's talking about a hero, somebody who recognized a problem that needed to be addressed and was willing to step forward and do something about it. It's very admirable what he did."

Ellis said he knows what he did was right and would do it again. He isn't sure, though, if it will affect the drug problem at his high school.

Firming dollar helps stocks advance

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market moved modestly higher Tuesday in reaction to a firmer dollar and lower interest rates, although blue-chip issues gave up much of their gains late in the session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up as much as 27.27 points in late-morning trading, closed with a 1.42 gain to 2,231.96.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 180.68 million shares, against 227.71 million in the previous session.

Although the closely watched industrial average barely budged from Monday's close, the broader market posted wider gains. Advancers outpaced decliners by about 5 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 982 up, 600 down and 362 unchanged.

Analysts attributed the market's improvement to stronger dollar and higher bond prices — two markets partly responsible for a decline in stock prices in recent days.

The dollar was mostly higher on sharply recently. Some long-term and Unisys was up up 1 1/2 to 117 1/2, after a sharp decline in Europe and Tokyo more than $15 per share.

A sharp decline in Europe and Tokyo more than $15 per share followed value, pushing down its yield to 8 1/2 percent. Short-term inter-bank rates also were mostly lower.

Some analysts predicted stock prices would be pushed for further advance in the next few weeks, saying even more after Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone and President Reagan met this week.

The dollar's stability also provided Technology stocks helped lead the market's rebound. International Business Machines was up 1 to 155 1/4, while Compaq Computers rose 2 1/2 to 37 1/2.

Standard Oil rose 1 1/2 to 73 1/2 in active trading. British Petroleum and Standard Oil announced agreement on a sweetened take-over offer that would enable BP to acquire the rest of Standard Oil.

Among the most actively traded blue-chips, American Telephone and Telegraph was up 1/2 to 24 1/2; General Motors, down 1/2 to 88 1/2; and Boeing, down 1 1/2 to 44 1/2.

Knowing rights in hospital is critical for Medicare patients

Increasing numbers of Medicare beneficiaries are reporting that they are being pressured to leave the hospital before they are medically fit.

If you or people in your family are among the more than 31 million older Americans covered by Medicare, now more than ever it is critical to know your rights in the hospital.

Major shifts have been made in Medicare by the Reagan administration in response to escalating health care costs. One dramatic change has been the Prospective Payment System adopted by Congress four years ago. Confusion still surrounds the program, with diagnosis-related groups, better known as DRGs, at the center of much of the controversy.

Unless you have been in the hospital in the last few years, odds are that you still are in the dark about how you would be affected, reports my research associate, Beth Kobler.

But many Medicare patients insist they are being sent home too early from the hospital.

"The need for controlling costs is obvious, but should not be at the expense of quality care," says Barbara Herzog, director of the Health Care Campaign of the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP). While some hospitals and physicians have misinterpreted the changes to mean that Medicare patients were strictly limited to a set number of days, others "deliberately misundersood," she adds.

All too common are shocking stories of elderly patients being forced to leave hospital beds. The administrator's response: Medicare patients must realize that ultimately their physician is responsible for the medical treatment they receive. Only your doctor can discharge you from the hospital.

But physicians are complaining that DRGs force them to pigeonhole patients into categories. Hospitals, in many cases, are forced to make financial considerations a top priority, and doctors are feeling that pressure.

The key: Be alert to changes to ensure that the quality of care you receive in the hospital does not suffer.

If you feel that the treatment you received in the hospital was inadequate, or that you were forced out prematurely, or were refused admission improperly, discuss these concerns with your doctor.

You also may get in touch with the hospital's patient representative or discharge planner, suggests the AARP.

Contact the local Peer Review Organization (PRO) for further help. PROs are independent groups consisting of physicians and other health care professionals that are assigned by the federal government, to review hospital treatment of Medicare patients before, during and after hospital stays.

Specifically, if you are notified by the hospital during your stay that you no longer need in-patient care and your doctor or the PRO agrees, you still have the right to appeal.

But you must act on it immediately. Ask for a written notice of non-coverage, advises Herzog. This should provide you with all the information on how to appeal.

First Security's chairman says company outlook good for 1987

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Pointing to the company's successes in overcoming some difficult and challenging periods in 1986, Spencer F. Eccles, the chairman and chief executive officer of First Security Corp., said the company's outlook is good.

Eccles led the corporation's 59th annual meeting Monday. "The state of the corporation is good. We are strong, viable and positioned to take advantage of what we see as a gradually improved economy in our market area."

Eccles told shareholders that some key management actions in 1986 substantially increased the strength of the company and helped lay the groundwork for growth in 1987.

The actions included using one-time gains to build loan-loss reserves to where the corporation is now fully protected against foreseeable losses from non-performing assets. Non-performing assets were reduced by year-end to $168 million, a decline of $26 million from the 1985 year-end, he said.

Another important decision involved the continuation of a successful cost-containment program, Eccles said.

"We recognize that only lower cost operators will prosper in the future, since they alone will be able to price competitively and still maintain satisfactory margins and market share, in the face of dramatically increasing competition both from banks and non-banks alike," Eccles said.

Restructuring the corporation by selling its mortgage banking subsidiaries and other assets that no longer figure in the company's long-range plans was another important action, he said.

"We are optimistic that the structural changes made in the corporation in 1986 have added to our ability to improve earnings in 1987," Eccles said.

He said total loans and leases in 1986 were up by $200 million to $3.4 billion, a figure which excludes those loans and leases involved in the sale of First Security's mortgage subsidiaries.

"During the year we made 133,853 loans totaling $2.8 billion, including 15,727 commercial loans totaling $1.2 billion, 109,297 consumer installment loans totaling $925 million and 8,828 real estate loans with a value of $647 million," he said.

Gains made in 1986 helped the company post a fiscal 1987 first quarter income of $7.2 million, its best earnings quarter in 3 1/2 years, Eccles said.

The board of directors declared a regular quarterly dividend of 27 1/2 cents a common share, payable June 8 to stockholders of record on May 22. The dividend is the same as during the comparable quarter in 1986.

"Our improved earnings are evidence that the corporation is strong and that the actions which reduced the encumbrance of non-performing assets from our normal operations are working to the corporation's benefit," Eccles said.

Existing home sales rise in March

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sales of existing homes edged up 0.5 percent in March as mild weather and a dip in home prices helped boost demand, a real estate trade group reported.

The National Association of Realtors said existing single-family homes were sold at an annual rate of 3.71 million units in March, showing a 6 percent jump in sales during February.

The March improvement left sales 14.5 percent higher than they were a year earlier. The price of an existing home dipped to $54,200 last month, $700 below the average price of an existing home in February but 8.9 percent higher than the year-earlier cost.

Analysts credited the sales improvement to the alleviation of the decline in prices, milder-than-normal weather and steadily declining mortgage rates during March.

Mortgage rates dropped to a nine-year low of 9.07 percent at the end of March before beginning to

New York homes cost most

NEW YORK (AP) — New York City is the nation's most expensive market for single-family homes while Decatur, Ill., is the least expensive, according to a survey released Monday.

The survey, conducted by Reio Residential Brokerage Network, indicated home prices nationwide rose 6.4 percent during the first three months of the year, with the average price for a single-family house rising to $117,400 from $110,300 during the same period a year earlier.

The survey was based on prices in 77 major metropolitan areas in the United States, Reio said.

During the first quarter the average price of a house in New York City soared to more than $207,000, the group said. Prices throughout the Northeast appreciated dramatically as demand picked up, particularly in New York and New Jersey.

The average price of a house in Decatur was $46,100.

was predicting that existing home sales would total 3.57 million units all of 1987, 2.2 percent above the 1986 sales pace.

Tuccillo said overall demand shows no signs of waning even though the recent rise in interest rates.

But with style Convenience foods provide easy meals

Look outside! The current warm weather almost demands a picnic. Or, is tonight's dinner a bit more formal and better served inside?

Tip: Sliced cucumber and pitted ripe olives can be included in Salmon Picnic Salad.

Quick and Elegant Pear Dessert
1 package (10 oz.) frozen patty shells
1 can (29 oz.) Bartlett pears
½ cup fresh strawberries, quartered
1 orange peeled and cut into chunks
¼ cup green grapes
½ cup each pear liquid and orange juice
2 teaspoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons orange liqueur

Bake patty shells according to package directions. Cool. Drain pears; reserve ¼ cup liquid. Slice pears if necessary. Combine all fruits, combining pear liquid, orange juice and cornstarch; mix well. Cook and stir until mixture boils and thickens; cook 1 minute longer. Add liqueur; cook at room temperature. Add to fruit and mix to coat fruit. Spoon fruit mixture into cooled patty shells just before serving. Makes 4 servings.

*Liquor baked patty shells can be stored in air-tight container or frozen in freezer-proof container.

Salmon Picnic Salad
1 can (15½ oz.) salmon*
1 jar (6 oz.) marinated artichoke hearts
1 medium avocado
12 cherry tomatoes
Lettuce leaves
¼ cup white wine vinegar
2 tablespoons each minced parsley and green onion
¼ teaspoon each basil and oregano, crushed
¼ teaspoon pepper

At home preparations: Thoroughly chill salmon, artichoke hearts, avocado, tomatoes and lettuce. In small jar, combine vinegar, parsley, green onion and seasonings; chill.

At the picnic: Open salmon; drain and break into chunks with a fork. Drain artichoke hearts and add marinade to vinegar mixture in jar. Peel and slice avocado. Let each person arrange salmon, artichokes, avocado and tomatoes on lettuce leaves. Shake contents of jar thoroughly; drizzle over salad. Makes 4 servings.

*Two cans (7½ or 7¾ oz. each) salmon can be substituted.

Crisp Pear Salad
1 can (16 oz.) Bartlett pear halves
1 cup each thinly julienned radishes and green pepper
Pear Vinaigrette

Drain pears; reserve 2 tablespoons liquid. Slice wide ends of pear halves vertically into 3 segments; do not slice through narrow ends of pears. Toss radishes and green peppers; place on lettuce-lined platter. "Fan" pear halves on radish-green pepper bed. Drizzle Pear Vinaigrette over pears. Makes 4 servings.

Pear Vinaigrette: Combine 2 tablespoons each vinegar, lemon juice, oil and pear liquid and ½ teaspoon each salt and crushed thyme. Makes ½ cup.

Kitchen aids help on fancy sauces

I'm even two weeks late on my diet! My desk runneth over. My kids call it going for my PHD (piled higher and deeper) time.

It's sort of funny how you spend the first 20 years of married life gathering "material" things together and the next 20 sorting through them and giving them away.

Kitchen space has become such a precious commodity, that I actually stop and think before automatically buying another new gadget. That doesn't mean I don't end up getting it, but I do pause first.

April is the month you realize that the culinary gift you wanted and got for Christmas really isn't that great or it broke or you misplaced the very explicit and intricate directions. It's sort of back to basics time.

There are some really great classes and demonstrations by Chefs going on in our valley. The cost is very modest and you'll learn lots. Sometimes it's learning the hard way like making Hollandaise sauce from scratch using a whisk and your elbow power.

Hollandaise is one of those great basic sauces that really add pizzazz to a meal. We were at a class going over the very, very basic skills of making stocks and sauces. Chef Curt Johnson of Tommyknocker Inn, Twin Falls, took us through the stocks and then we landed in the sauces.

His approach is the classical French Cuisine style which means no machines—you do it by hand! And the sauce was good. But it certainly took a long, long time. The one good thing was the sauce would hold for several hours so you could easily do it ahead.

Here is his basic recipe and method.

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

CLASSICAL HOLLANDAISE SAUCE
Put egg yolks only in a metal bowl over a low heat source. Sprinkle a little water over the yolks and using a metal whip, beat them until they triple in volume.

Remove from heat and then very slowly add just barely warmed butter to the yolks. Use 2 ounces of butter for each yolk. Keep unbeating and beating until all the butter is incorporated.

Now add some lemon juice, drizzle some over the top and whisk it in and add cayenne pepper and salt to taste.

After class, I tried two recipes using those modern kitchen aids, the microwave and the blender or food-processor. Actually there were minor differences in the finished products, but my arms weren't weak from hand beating and they were quite a bit faster.

Here are the two recipes I tried. You might check your microwave cookbook for your own recipe as there is a difference in power.

MICROWAVE HOLLANDAISE
¼ cup butter
¼ cup light cream
1 tablespoon
Lemon juice
2 egg yolks, beaten
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon salt

Place butter in a 4-cup glass measuring bowl and microwave on Roast Setting for about 1 minute or until melted. Stir in the remaining ingredients in order listed and beat with a hand mixer until smooth.

Microwave for 1 minute on Roast setting (which is half power on most machines), then beat well and microwave again for about 1 more minute. Sauce should be thickened. Beat lightly and serve. This makes about ¾ cup sauce.

BLENDER HOLLANDAISE SAUCE
Place 3 egg yolks in blender and add 1/2 teaspoon salt, a dash of hot pepper sauce and juice of half a lemon (2 tablespoons). Turn blender on and off very quickly. Melt 1 stick (¼ pound) butter until bubbly. Start the blender on high and gradually pour in the melted butter. Blend until sauce is smooth and thick.

It was fun doing the sauce from scratch but if you're in a hurry, try one of the others.

In case you haven't used Hollandaise it's absolutely great over asparagus. It's probably most famous as the topping for Eggs Benedict. To do an easy Eggs Benedict try this:

Toast and butter some English muffins. Place some cooked rounds of Canadian bacon on top of the muffins. Now poach some eggs and place one on each muffin and then top with Hollandaise.

Rich and good; this is a very favorite of mine for brunch. No wonder I'm two weeks behind on my diet!

Hollandaise Sauce now becomes Bearnaise Sauce. Take 1 tablespoon of finely chopped onion or shallots, ½ teaspoon tarragon leaves and a tablespoon of red wine vinegar or red wine and mix together in a small sauce pan and saute until

Extra guests never bother Ruth Miller

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — Whether it's to be a gourmet or basic farm cooking, Ruth Miller can handle it.

"We'll have company and maybe have stew and biscuits," she says, "and then the next time maybe we'll have something with five courses and three or four different wines to go with each course."

She says cooking and entertaining are hobbies she enjoys, and credits her mother with developing her interest in both.

Growing up on a farm near Fairfield in a family of eight, plus hired help, she had plenty of opportunities to help with food preparation. She says "entertained every night, because we always had so many people. But our house was one of those when somebody walked in, it was go-to-the-cupboard-and-get-you-a-plate, and sit down and eat," because there was always plenty for another person or two.

She says her mother taught her that if you've got meat on hand, you can always fix a meal, because you can find something to go with it. She says she always tries to have the makings of a quick meal in case someone shows up at mealtime.

She has a large well-stocked pantry, two refrigerators and freezers, which cut down on trips to the grocery store. She buys 50 pounds of flour and 25 pounds of sugar at a time, "which sounds kind of strange for a family of two, but I can get over not being part of a family of eight."

Another important lesson her mother imparted was to be organized. This is helpful when it comes to preparing food for guests.

So, when friends ask how she can be so relaxed while entertaining, she gives them this advice: "Before your company comes, get out every dish that you're going to need, and every serving spoon. Have your table set before anybody ever gets there — do it the day before if you have to."

If they are planning to serve liquor or wine, she suggests they check their supply and be sure to have the wine glasses on the table.

"Then—you-can-enjoy-you; your company, because that's what you want to do. You don't want to be frazzled, or as my mother says, 'have hostess fever!'"

She says the following lamb menu is one of her favorite company dinners.

Start your Cinco de Mayo feast with marinated shrimp

May 5 gives excuse for Mexican buffet

Observed in many parts of the United States and Mexico, Cinco de Mayo (which means the fifth of May) is celebrated with parties, parades, and of course, lots of Mexican food specialties.

The celebration is a reminder of a long battle for freedom from European intervention. When the Mexican people decided to declare their independence from the French, Spanish, and English, war was declared in 1862. In a major day-long battle against the French, General Ignacio Zaragoza led his army to a significant victory on the 5th of May. That battle marked the beginning of the end of European occupation.

In some parts of Mexico, the battle is re-enacted annually as part of the celebration that may go on for three days. In this country, Cinco de Mayo provides the perfect setting for a fun-filled Mexican buffet for party-minded friends.

Mexican fare can be as colorful and varied as the host desires. Much of it can be prepared ahead, and simply reheated when the party begins.

TEQUILA-MARINATED SHRIMP
1½ pounds medium to large shrimp in shells
Water and 1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup green taco sauce
¼ cup olive oil or salad oil
¼ cup tequila
4 tablespoons lime juice
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika

Place shrimp in a large pot. Add water to cover and the 1 teaspoon salt. Bring to boiling; reduce heat and simmer shrimp about 3 minutes until they turn pink. Drain; rinse with cool water. Peel and devein shrimp. In a bowl, mix remaining ingredients until well blended. Add shrimp, tossing gently to coat with sauce. Cover and chill several hours.

Serve shrimp on wooden picks. Makes 6 to 8 appetizer servings.

SERVE-YOURSELF GAZPACHO
2 jars (16½ ounces each) chili dip
1½ cups chicken broth
1½ cups tomato-vegetable juice
¼ cup finely chopped onion

½ cup chopped green bell pepper
2 tablespoons vinegar
2 cloves garlic, minced
¾ cup sauce with soup; chopped avocado, chopped tomatoes, chopped cucumber, fresh cilantro sprigs

Combine chili dip, chicken broth, juice, onion, bell pepper, vinegar and garlic until well blended. Cover and chill 4 to 24 hours. To serve, place soup in a large bowl. Arrange smaller bowls of avocado, tomatoes, cucumber and cilantro around soup. Allow each guest to serve himself, adding desired ingredients to soup. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

CINCO DE MAYO RICE MOLD
White layer:
1 cup long grain rice
¾ cup chicken broth
¼ cup chopped parsley or cilantro

Red layer:
1½ cups chicken broth
1 cup desired salsa
1 cup long grain rice
1 sweet red bell pepper, finely chopped

Green layer:
1½ cups chicken broth
1 cup green taco sauce
1 cup long grain rice
1 sweet green bell, finely chopped
Green and red pepper strips (optional)

To make white rice layer, add rice to simmering chicken broth; stir in parsley. Cover and simmer 20 minutes, or until liquid is absorbed. Remove; set aside. For red rice layer, bring chicken broth and salsa to boiling. Add rice and bell pepper; cover and simmer for 20 minutes. Remove; set aside.

For green rice layer, bring chicken broth and green taco sauce to boil; stir in rice and green bell pepper. Cover and simmer 20 minutes. Remove from heat. Generously oil a 5- or 6-cup oven-proof mold or bowl. Spoon rice over top of bowl and make an even layer. Spoon white rice on top of red rice; then spoon green rice over all, smoothing top. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 20 minutes or until heated through. Unmold on a platter; garnish with strips of red and green bell pepper, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

Miller

 Remove fell (the papery outside part on lamb) if needed, from a 5-6 pound leg of lamb. Rub with a mixture of 1/2 teaspoon crushed rosemary, 1/4 teaspoon pepper and 1 teaspoon garlic powder. Garlic lovers may cut slits in leg and insert cloves of garlic. Place meat fat side up, on rack in roaster. Pre-heat oven to 450 degrees. Place leg in oven, and reduce heat to 350 degrees. Roast about two hours to 190 degrees internal temperature for rareish lamb, or three hours to 175-180 internal temperature for well done.
 Miller says it is important to use a meat thermometer — that in not doing so, disasters can happen.
 She usually garnishes the lamb with lemon mint and serves it with mint jelly.

CURRIED FRUIT SALAD
 Serves eight
 One 28 ounce can of pear halves
 One 28 ounce can of sliced peaches
 One 16 ounce can of pineapple chunks
 1/4 cup dried currants
 2 cups dried figs
 1/2 cup pine nuts
 Drain all the fruit.

The sauce:
 Combine and heat:
 1/4 cup brown sugar
 3 teaspoons-curry powder, or to taste
 1/4 cup rum or apple juice
 1/4 cup lemon juice
 Pour over fruit, which has been placed in a glass 9x13-inch dish: Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

SPINACH SALAD
 Serves eight
 Clean two large bunches of fresh spinach, removing all stems. Wash well and put in plastic bags with wad of paper toweling, and refrigerate. Done a day ahead, this will remove the moisture. Brown 4 strips of bacon, which has been cut into small chunks. Remove bacon. Add the bacon grease (the careful of spatters), 2 tablespoons-lemon juice, 1/2 cup good wine vinegar and 3 tablespoons honey. Simmer for 5 minutes. Season with 1/4 teaspoon garlic, pepper, and salt, to taste, and 1 teaspoon dry mustard. Sample and correct seasoning to your taste.
 Pour whole warm over spinach greens. Garnish with 3 chopped boiled eggs, bacon pieces and small raw Bermuda onion rings. The dressing can be made ahead, and reheated in the microwave.

 This time of year, she says she would probably serve asparagus with this meat. Or, she would use a member of the cabbage family, such as brussel sprouts or broccoli. She would use only butter, too, then, because this is a rich meal.
 In addition, she serves either fetticline Alfredo, or oven baked potato wedges. The potatoes are the easier of the two because the pasta must be made at the last minute.
 For dessert, Miller bakes a cheesecake she used to serve at Chelsea's Restaurant during the three years she and her husband, Michael (Red), owned it. The recipe was given to her by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Joel Koonec.
 "I think it's the best cheesecake recipe I've ever been exposed to. You can put any kind of topping you want on it," Miller says.
WHITE CHEESECAKE
 1 1/2 pounds cream cheese, softened
 at room temperature
 5 egg sugar
 1 teaspoon vanilla
 2 drops almond extract
 The crust:

1 small box Zwieback, crushed
 1 tablespoon sugar
 3 tablespoons melted butter
 Mix crust ingredients well, press in bottom of springform pan—beat the cream cheese, eggs, sugar and vanilla and almond extract together and pour over crumb mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for 50 minutes. Remove from oven and let stand 15 minutes.
 The topping:
 1 cup whipping cream
 6 tablespoons sugar
 1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla
 Spread topping on cake. Return to oven for 10-15 minutes. Cool and put in refrigerator to chill.
 This time of year she puts a rhubarb sauce on this cake. In a saucepan, combine 1/2 cup grenadine and 1/2 cup water. Add one quart fresh sliced rhubarb. Simmer until fruit is done. Do not overcook. Add sugar to taste 1/2 cup, if grenadine is not available, use all water and increase sugar. Thicken with 2 teaspoons cornstarch mixed with 1/4 or less cup water, cooking just long enough to cook the thickening. Add red food coloring, if desired. Add 1/2 cup, chopped walnuts. Refrigerate and spread over top of cheesecake, or serve wedges of cake with sauce on the side.

Salmon and Creamy Pasta
 1 can (15 1/2 oz.) salmon, drained
 1/2 cup dry white wine
 1/4 teaspoon pepper
 3 1/2 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided
 2 tablespoons flour
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 1/2 cup half-and-half
 1/2 cup milk
 2 tablespoons dry sherry
 2 tablespoons chopped green onion
 3 ounces dry penne pasta, cooked and drained
 2 tablespoons each minced parsley

and grated Parmesan cheese
 Marinate salmon in white wine and pepper 5 minutes. Melt 2 tablespoons butter; add flour and salt and cook until bubbly. Add half-and-half and milk—while stirring—pour heat; cook and stir until mixture comes to boil. Stir in sherry; remove from heat. Saute green onion in 1/4 teaspoon butter. Remove salmon from marinade with slotted spoon; add to onion mixture and heat. Top cooked pasta with cream sauce; top with salmon—mixture. Sprinkle parsley and Parmesan cheese over salmon. Makes about 4 servings.

 mixed well. Add this all together to the finished Hollandaise.
 This is really good with meats and I love it on baked potatoes. See how attending one class gets you started on experimenting and expanding your basic recipe file!
 Other variations that we did were to add whipped cream to the Hollandaise. This makes a sauce called Mouseline. If you add a couple of tablespoons of tomato sauce (not catsup) it becomes Choron sauce. You could also add prepared mustard for another variation.
 If you use more lemon juice, the sauce is super on fish. All of these sauces can be used over most meats and vegetables. Use your imagination and enjoy!

Stockton celebrates asparagus capital

By ILANA DEBARE
 Los Angeles Times
STOCKTON, Calif. — The town that used to be known derisively as Mudville and Fat City was gunning for a new identity this weekend: Stockton, Asparagus Capital of the World.
 It was a serious and—apparently successful campaign, helped along by a little sun, a little music, and a lot of asparagus: asparagus bisque, asparagus quiche, asparagus pop-corn, asparagus breadsticks, milk chocolate asparagus bunches, Asparagus cookies. Coffee with an asparagus-spear stirrer.
 By the time the second annual Stockton Asparagus Festival ended Sunday more than 60,000 visitors had gobbled up 12,000 pounds of asparagus dishes out by 2,500 festival volunteers.
 The festival is "a heck of a lot better than anything this town's had to offer before," said local resident Jack Cosgrove, 29, sitting under a willow tree and sipping a beer from an asparagus-embellished stein.
 "Like Gilroy and garlic — that's going to be our name now, the asparagus capital of the world," added his friend Dan Sharp, 29.

The city's convention and visitors bureau dreamed up the idea of the festival several years ago, after a series of bizarre political scandals left the town's image badly tarnished. In one incident, a Stockton resident whose entire family was white was elected to the city council after campaigning as a black. In another, two council members—vied for—who was the stronger anti-drug candidate by conducting urine tests in front of reporters.
 "You're never going to stop bad political publicity, but the question is, what else is there?" said Kathy Post, promotional director for the festival. "Finally Stockton has its 'what else.' Its thing."
 In turning to a vegetable for help, Stockton followed the lead of Gilroy, a small garlic-producing town south of San Jose, that transformed its smelly agricultural staple into a tourist attraction through an annual Garlic Festival. Stockton was not alone. Since Gilroy's success, Castroville now has an Artichoke Festival, Yacaville an Onion Festival, and Morgan Hill a Mushroom Mardi Gras.
 "Due to the fresh vegetable syndrome that has taken place in the U.S., mention garlic or asparagus or what-have-you and people will follow," said Bill DePaoli, executive director of the California Asparagus Growers Association, which donated the Stockton festival's asparagus.

 Asparagus seemed a natural for Stockton: the San Joaquin Delta area around the city produces $5 million pounds of it every year, making it the leading asparagus-growing region in the country. And promoters figured that the vegetable's gourmet image was just what the former "Fat City" needed.
 "Asparagus has the connotation of being the Rolls-Royce of vegetables," DePaoli said. "It's the classiest vegetable, as opposed with all due respect to broccoli or cauliflower."
 It may be gourmet to the world, but in Stockton asparagus is unquestionably the vegetable of the people.
 "Everywhere you go now, it's deep-fried asparagus," said Valerie Soleto, munching asparagus-shrimp salad at a picnic table with her husband and some friends. "It's as popular as nachos and cheese."
 "I love it steamed, then dipped in a miso sauce with a little bit of mayonnaise, sweet, vinegar and sesame seeds," said Miyo Tominga, who was selling tempura for the Stockton Buddhist Temple.

 "I would say we eat it two or three times a week when it's in season," said Cliff Severson, 42, the manager of a local youth soccer team that was selling asparagus-flavored popcorn. "Then we blanch it and freeze it and eat it year round."
 Although asparagus-haters were hard to come by at the festival, a few asparagus fans acknowledged they had been less than enthusiastic in their younger days.
 "It was a little iffy in the beginning, but then I started eating it," said Kelly Gora, 14. "There was a time when my mom said, eat your greens. When she stopped nagging me, then I started eating it."
 "I'm from back east and I hated asparagus because it tasted like a tree," said Sharon Bensch, 44, who was selling canned gourmet asparagus on behalf of a local hospice. "But I love this asparagus. I just shipped it to my family for Easter."
 For some, though, even with asparagus there can be too much of a good thing.

Cigarette butts can poison youngsters

DEAR ABBY: I just finished your column on childhood poisoning. It was very good, but you missed one very important poison that parents don't recognize as such.

When my son was a toddler, he almost died of nicotine poisoning. He had eaten several cigarette butts from an ashtray. I called the poison center immediately, and they didn't know what to do.

As it turned out, ingesting cigarette butts can lead to shock, and then respiratory failure. Please, please, tell parents not to leave ashtrays or cigarettes where children can get at them. We are lucky that our son is still alive, but we still question whether he suffered brain damage from this incident. I hope this will prevent others from going through what we did.

— BARBARA WEISMANN, BUZZARDS BAY, MASS.
DEAR BARBARA: Thank you for your timely letter and some potentially life-saving information for parents who smoke — or entertain smokers. Read on for another sleeper:

appears harmless? Common cooking vanilla extract. It contains 30 percent alcohol, which is far more alcohol than liquor. How often we, as parents, comment that vanilla makes our foods taste better. How tempting it might be to a toddler.

If a child were to drink a 2-ounce bottle of vanilla extract, it could cause irreparable damage — if not death.

— TRACY MORSTAD, MINNESOTA READER

DEAR ABBY: My husband is retired and I hate it. He's home all the time so he brings in the mail, opens all of it and reads it — including my and all mail addressed to me — even letters marked "personal."

Yesterday I received a letter from our granddaughter. She's a waitress newlywed and has a baby. She said she needs $500 to pay some bills. My husband hit the roof and forbid me to send her anything.

Abby, I personally own some rental property and we've lived rent-free in a family home that I inherited. I have a nice savings account and have often helped members of my family in emergencies without my husband's knowledge, and I intend to do so as long as I live! (I sent our granddaughter the $500.)

He insists that anything that concerns me is his business and there is no need for privacy when it comes to mail.

Abby, I wouldn't think of opening a letter addressed to him. Does he left.

have a right to open my mail? And what should I do about it?

Hardy vegetables withstand frost danger

Hardy vegetables can be planted even before frost danger is past. Root, leaf and flower bud vegetables can withstand temperatures into the mid-twenties with very little damage. The soil is now warm enough to germinate seed of hardy vegetables.

Tender vegetables such as tomatoes, peppers, beans, cucumbers and squash should not be planted until frost danger is past, unless they can be protected. It is easy to tell hardy and tender vegetables apart. If you eat anything besides the fruit of the plant, it is almost certainly hardy. Peas and broad beans or fava beans are the only fruiting vegetables which are hardy. Virtually all the others are tender.

Many root vegetables such as radishes, beets and turnips are attacked by root maggots. You must treat with a pesticide when you plant to avoid maggot damage. Waxton or Durban granules should be scattered in the furrow with the seed. I like to sprinkle some more on top after covering the seed for extra protection. If you prefer not to use chemicals, use diatomaceous earth instead.

Another method of eliminating maggots is to cover the plants with floating row covers. These light weight, porous, spun fiber fabrics do not allow the adult flies near the plants where they can lay their eggs which develop into maggots. They also trap heat underneath which makes the vegetables grow faster. It is like a mini-greenhouse. Several brands are available. The most commonly found are Reemay (also sold as Dupont Lawn and Garden Blanket), Agronet and Kimberly

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

Farms. They are applied loosely over the seed or plants so there is room for the plants to grow underneath. The edges are covered securely with soil.

Floating row covers also allow about two weeks earlier planting of tender vegetables. Wall O'Water is another product which allows earlier planting and stimulates faster growth early in the season. It is a series of water filled tubes which can protect tender vegetables from as much as 10 degrees of frost.

In addition to such leaf vegetables as spinach, lettuce and cabbage, all the other members of the cabbage family, including broccoli and cauliflower, can be planted early. All of the cabbage family is easily started from seed planted directly outside as well as from transplants. They are also attacked by root maggots and should be treated at planting time.

I have a leaflet on planting and growing vegetables which includes information on when to plant, row covers, plastic mulch and other gardening techniques. If you would like a copy, send $1 and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Allen Wilson, P.O. Box 40, Rexburg, Idaho 83440. Ask for vegetable guide.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College.

New varieties boost geranium appeal

By EARL ARONSON
Associated Press

Geraniums are plants for all seasons. New, more compact and better flowering plants have larger blossoms that contrast with the darker, firmer leaves. These new plants are boosting the popularity of geraniums in the home and the outdoors.

Walking through huge greenhouses where millions of geraniums were taking root, Ernst Fritsch of Fischer Geraniums of Apollo Beach, Fla., said those with red blossoms continued to be the most popular in the United States. However, he added, orange-, pink-, pastel-, white- and lavender blossoms are gaining in demand.

Groth was trained in West Germany, the headquarters of Fischer Geraniums. He said there were about 280 species of geraniums, virtually all native to South Africa. About 6,000 different cultivars have developed since breeding began hundreds of years ago. Fischer maintains a Living Geranium Museum of nearly 2,500 geranium varieties in Hillscheid, West Germany, and evaluates 500 new ones each year in different climates.

New varieties are Zonals (Pelargonium hortorum), Ivy (Pelargonium peltatum), Cascade and Regal (Pelargonium domesticum).

Zonals derive their name from leaf patterns. They are free-flowering, compact and self-branching. They are excellent for flower beds and for container plants on porches, patios or decks. They can be trained into espaliers or tree forms. Ivy is most often used for hanging baskets and other containers. Semi-double flowers range in color from white and pastels to reds and purples.

Cascades flourish in containers or as ground covers. They are popular in Europe in window, porch and balcony boxes.

Regal, the newest at Fischer, is also known as Lady Washington. It has large open blossoms, and is expected to be widely used as pot plants and for outdoor plantings in mild temperature areas.

Geraniums, found growing in South Africa, were probably raised in the Dutch settlement established in 1652 near the Cape of Good Hope to provision East Indies trading ships. Ship surgeons most likely brought some to Europe. Records show that Thomas Jefferson sent geraniums from France to John Bartram of Philadelphia in 1786.

Fischer ships cuttings from cross-indexed and cloned plants by air from the Canary Islands and Mexico to rooting plants in Florida, Texas, Missouri, Washington, Minnesota, North Carolina and Ontario, Canada. Three-day-old cuttings arrive in refrigerated chests in bundles of 1,500 to 2,000. They are "stuck" into trays with a growing medium to root and mature. One month later, they are sent to wholesalers and florists where they will be held in 4-inch pots until ready for customers' homes or gardens. Groth said heavy rain was probably the geranium's worst enemy. Winter bloom depends largely on adequate light conditions in the garden, plant geraniums in the sun in a well-prepared bed at the depth they were growing in the pot, 12 inches apart. In containers, keep plants well watered and feed monthly in the summer.

We saw some of Fischer's geraniums in an attractive hanging basket display at Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla. Horticulturist Kate Warner said geraniums were also being used in bedding gardens at Fantasy Land and the Magic Kingdom.

Gerard Braun, Disney's superintendent of horticulture, said "We can get six months of great display" from red, pink and lavender varieties. He had good words for salmon pink Sofia, a Cascade. Groth said heavy rain was probably the geranium's worst enemy. Winter bloom depends largely on adequate light conditions in the garden, plant geraniums in the sun in a well-prepared bed at the depth they were growing in the pot, 12 inches apart. In containers, keep plants well watered and feed monthly in the summer.

Letters of thanks

Bowling tournament supporters thanked

I have so very many nice people to thank for their help and support in the KLIX McConaughy Ride Bowling Tournament.

Tournament was to raise funds for the Salvation Army food bank, promote bowling around the valley, and to have fun and teach other people that bowling is fun and for the whole family.

Kimberly patrons thanked for support

To Kimberly parents, patrons, staff, students and friends: On behalf of the Kimberly School District Board of Trustees and administration, I would like to publicly thank each and every one of you for your support in helping gain approval of our recent supplemental levy.

Achieving a high 72 percent favorable approval in today's economy exemplifies your dedication in striving for high quality education throughout the Kimberly School District.

Once again, congratulations to you for your dedication in supporting the youth of Kimberly. DR. RICHARD H. BAUSCHER, Kimberly School District Superintendent of schools

Fly Fishers banquet called 'big success'

This year the Magic Valley Fly Fishers held their annual fund-raising banquet. Our featured speaker was Mel Kreiger of San Francisco. The evening was a big success, raising money for area conservation and education projects.

Those people that so generously supported the MVFF have our heartfelt thanks: Silver Creek Sports, Horseshoe Club, Sports Country, Rust Steyer, Bop and Beer Club, Shokho, Northwest Transport, Calns, Sandpiper, Rock Creek Restaurant, Gene's Radiator Repair, Paris, Magic Valley Electric Supply, Armstrong & Co., Anglers Expressions, Blue Lakes Sporting Goods, Tim Colner, Dick Bonamarte, Anglers Calendar, Coors of Magic Valley, The Oasis, Heads & Threads, Stevens' Taxidermy, Creekside Bar & Grill, Buhl Country Club, Cactus Pete's, Cortland Line Co., Renegade Fly Shop, Barn Sport Shop, Payless Drug, Taylor's Safety Service, Pioneer Saloon, Sav-Mor Drug (Buhl), and Crist Custom Rods.

Of course the goods wouldn't have done us much good without people buying raffle tickets and bidding on auction items. So thank you members for your continued support of MVFF. Tight lines to all. JOHN VANDERWALKER, President, MVFF

Production cut increases oyster prices
 Los Angeles Times

"Oyster prices in the coming months will be the highest ever after they will be higher every year after this one," says Jim Harris, president of Blue Point Oyster Bar Co., a Los Angeles-based company that specializes in the Gulf Coast species of the shellfish. "What was traditionally a renewable resource is becoming a non-renewable one."
 Driving the increases at dockside and retail are coinciding declines in the harvest of both Maryland's Eastern oyster and those from the Gulf states. For instance, Louisiana, the country's leading producer, is in the second year of a sharp downturn.
 One reason for the growth is oysters' emerging popularity in all types of restaurants — beyond just those specializing in seafood.
 "Let me put it this way: Demand for our Gulf product, alone, has quadrupled in the last 18 months," said Harris, whose company has trademarked the Blue Point Oyster brand as a means of establishing a premium seafood line in what is traditionally a non-label-conscious industry.

Pageant planned
 BOISE — Young women from throughout the Gem state will compete in the Miss Idaho Teen USA Pageant, to be held Aug. 28-29 in the Red Lion Riverside in Boise.
 Candidates must be between 15 and 18 years of age, single and have lived in Idaho for six months. For more information contact Blanche Evans, state director, Idaho First National Bank Building, 205 N. 10th, Suite 500, Boise, 83702, phone 344-3300.
 The winner will receive an expense-paid trip to the national event.

NFL gets 4 QBs in Round 1 of draft

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The NFL draft became a quarterback auction Tuesday as teams seeking help at football's most critical position reached for question marks in hopes of pulling another Joe Montana or Dan Fouts out of a relatively thin talent pool.

Four quarterbacks were chosen on the first round, the most since the talent-laden 1983 draft. But only Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde of Miami, taken by Tampa Bay with the first pick, was considered a sure NFL star.

The other three — Kelly Stouffer of Colorado State, chosen by St. Louis; Chris Miller of Oregon, taken by Atlanta; and Jim Harbaugh of Michigan, taken in a shocking move by the Chicago Bears — all had serious question marks about them.

Unlike recent drafts, when offensive and defensive linemen were the hot items, there was a higher premium on skill players in the four-hour, eight-minute first round. Besides the quarterbacks, three wide receivers went in the first

ISU's Hoge, Broncos' Ellis chosen in 10th round

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

The tenth round of Tuesday's NFL draft was the lucky round for two Big Sky Conference football players.

Idaho State running back Merrill Hoge was the 261st player taken in the draft by the Pittsburgh Steelers, while Boise State inside linebacker Jim Ellis was chosen a dozen picks later by the Los Angeles Raiders as the 273rd selection.

Hoge is going to a ballclub that also has another running back from the Big Sky. David Hughes from Boise State.

"I'm happy, excited, tickled, ready to go," said Hoge in a telephone interview from his Pocatello home.

The Steelers were in need of some offense with a quarterback as their top priority and running backs as the next. The American Football Conference team had possible putting any kind of offense together last year, which is nothing but good news for the ISU senior.

To top the good news, the tenth-round selection of Hoge was the first "running back" taken by the Steelers.

"They play my kind of offense," he said referring to the trap plays that he was accustomed to at Idaho State.

"I'm in the perfect situation. The scout called me and asked if I was going to make this team and I said 'you bet I am.'"

Ellis, the second Bronco chosen in the draft after Twin Falls

Lance Sellers, was elated about the opportunity to play for the Black and Silver of the Raiders.

"It feels great. I'm happy," said Ellis in a phone interview from his home in Boise. "I'm looking forward to working hard and getting ready."

Ellis, like Hoge, had been up since the draft began at 6 a.m., didn't expect to be drafted at all.

"I didn't expect anything because I didn't want to get let down," he said.

But as he watched the draft on television, the linebacker started to get a bit jittery.

native and quarterback for the University of Montana, was picked in the 11th round by Minnesota. He was the 285th player selected in the draft.

Earlier in the draft, Twin Falls' Sellers and Mike Rice were drafted by a pair of clubs. Rice was tabbed in the eighth round by the Jets, while Sellers was a sixth-round pick by the Miami Dolphins.

In all, the Big Sky had eight players selected through the first 11 rounds, including Nevada-Reno linebacker Henry Rolland, in the fifth round by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, and Northern Arizona defensive end Tom Gibson in the fifth round by the New England Patriots.

Montana State linebacker Kirk Timmer was chosen in the 11th round by the Jets.

round and so did six running backs — including Alonzo Highsmith of Miami to Houston and D.J. Dozier of Penn State to Minnesota in two of the nine deals which made the first and second rounds seem like a trade mart.

Disgruntled linebacker Chip Banks went from Cleveland to San Diego in a trade which moved the Browns from 24th to fifth in the first round and netted them linebacker Mike Junkin of Duke, whom Browns Coach

Marty Schottenheimer termed "one of the finest college linebackers I've ever seen."

No one was saying that about the quarterbacks behind Testaverde, but there were precedents for taking the chance. In 1978, Fouts and Montana, two of the modern era's most successful quarterbacks, were third-round picks — Fouts by San Diego in 1973 and Montana by San Francisco in 1979.

Chicago Coach Mike Ditka defended the choice of Harbaugh, a projected third-or-fourth-rounder, in a typically blunt fashion.

"We don't draft for the sake of the media or the fans," said Ditka, who now has five quarterbacks: starter Jim McMahon, recovering from shoulder surgery, plus Doug Flutie, Mike Tomczak, Steve Fuller and Harbaugh.

"There are a combination of reasons," Chicago personnel director Bill Tobin said. "Jim's status is one. We don't know where Jim is. There is uncertainty about his health. If he is healthy, he's our No. 1 quarterback." See DRAFT on Page D2

CSI sweeps Ricks, gains edge in north

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It was a break through in Region 18 junior college baseball but still short of what will be needed.

The College of Southern Idaho became the first team to sweep a doubleheader in Northern Division play — beating Ricks College 10-2 and 10-3 — Tuesday afternoon.

"That mathematically shoved CSI into the lead for a spot in the regional playoffs, slanted someplace in Utah later this spring, the Eagles now are 4-2 (32-14 overall). Ricks, which emulated the Eagles by splitting twin bills at North Idaho and Treasure Valley last weekend, went to 2-4 in the conference. But the difference is, Ricks has its final six games at home while CSI has four of its final six on the home diamond.

Treasure Valley and North Idaho will carry 3-3 regional marks into this weekend when things reach the decision point with North Idaho and Treasure Valley returning doubleheaders at Twin Falls and Rexburg. Any team that can sweep should clinch a spot in the regional finals. The race ends next week with CSI visiting Ricks on Friday.

Twin Falls nears home-field guarantee

BURLEY — Twin Falls High School right-hander Kevin Ames was not having a good day Tuesday until his double play deep left-center field highlighted a three-run fifth inning as the Bruins defeated the Hurley Bobcats 6-3 in a Region III baseball game.

The Bruin senior, who had allowed three runs on three hits in the first four innings and struck out in his first at-bat, settled for his four-game-winning double and struck out four Burley batters, holding the Bobcats scoreless in the final three innings.

"(He) Ames was having some control problems Tuesday at Twin Falls Coach Bill Ingram. "He's been that way for the past two ballgames and it was only in the last part of the game that he started getting the ball across the plate."

"The control problems came when he throws his fastball too often," said Ingram, which resulted in Burley's three runs, two of them inning, Ames must have known he'd be in trouble. Two Bobcat batters, Pete Rodriguez and Shay Waterson, reached base on infield errors; one of them, a throwing error to second base by Ames himself.

The Twin Falls senior rebounded from the overthrow, which put Rodriguez on second and Waterson on first, to catch a pop fly by Mike Dudley but Tom Messinkink, the Burley third baseman who would stuff the next two Twin Falls' innings with some outstanding defensive work, laid down a bunt to reach base and load 'em up for Tilley.

The Burley sophomore, who had yet to get a varsity hit before today's appearance, blasted a 2-2 pitch down the first-base line and Burley had a 2-1 lead. Ames was finally able to get out of the inning by striking out Jared Skaggs and getting Jason Whitehead to fly out to left field.

The Bobcats, who had won three in a row going into Tuesday's game, picked up another run in the fourth, then Twin Falls, whose sole run had come in the second when Matt Rasmussen tripled and scored, came alive "when their pitcher (Skaggs) started to fire," said Ingram.

Shane Quesnell led off the inning with a walk and moved to second on a Shane Wallace groundout. Barry Smith shot one to left, scoring Quesnell, stole second and moved to third when catcher Rodriguez's throwing attempt flew into center-field. Joel Junid smacked one in the hole between third and short to score Smith. Following Junid, Jon Mehr hit one back to the mound and an alert Skaggs threw out Junid going to second, setting up Ames' game winner.

The Bruins scored again in the sixth and added an insurance run in the seventh when Rodriguez committed his second error of the day, overthrowing third base when Smith, who had reached on a walk, stole the base, bringing him home on the error.

"We had them on the ropes," said Burley coach Dean Satterfield. "We just let it slip away."

Trenkle signs up California prep star Jarvis to letter of intent

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Another all-California standout has signed a basketball letter-of-intent with the College of Southern Idaho, according to msn's Coach Fred Trenkle.

Trenkle said Ken Jarvis, a two-time all-state player from Milligan High School in Long Beach, Calif., confirmed he will attend CSI this fall. Jarvis, a 6-foot, 1/2-inch, 205-pound swing player, is the fourth to join Trenkle's freshman brigade.

Tank Collins, a teammate of Jarvis in a couple of all-star games this spring in California, and Idahoans Kyle Wilson of Buhl and Greg Jose of Lapwai signed earlier this month.

"Jarvis is exactly the type of player that fits in well with our style of play," said Trenkle. "He has the size and strength to rebound and be as physical as the situation demands. But he is considered by the half-dozen major college coaches I've talked to about him to be a finesse player. He is considered an excellent ball handler by all who have seen him. He has everything needed to play off guard, quick forward or even go to the point if necessary."

Jarvis average 18 points and 11 rebounds per game as a senior. His team lost to the eventual state champions by one point in the playoffs and Jarvis had 19 points and 11 rebounds in that one.

"He and Collins should complement each other very well," said Trenkle. "I think with the young men we have recruited thus far we have filled some very critical pieces. So far we have four players in the 6-5 area and all style of play," said Trenkle. "He

Undefeated TFHS netters hand Rams first loss

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls High School's tennis team made a little history here Tuesday afternoon and in the process became the team to beat in both Region III and in the Gem State Conference.

The Bruins defeated defending Region III champion Highland in a 7-5 dual meet, running their season record to 9-0-1 pending pair of matches in Idaho Falls today against Idaho Falls and Skyline. The win was only the second dual match victory in history by Twin Falls over Highland — the first came two seasons ago, the season the Bruins won the school's only district championship under the old District 4-5 Class A setup.

"It couldn't have come in a more fitting way for second-year Coach Julie Helthecker, who watched Julie Babcock and Lacey Townley rally from a 4-5 deficit to beat Highland's Robyn Gorb and Wendy Kriksky 7-5 in the third and deciding set of their girls' doubles match — the last match of the day.

"It's great to win so many three-set matches and it's great to win some girls' and boys' doubles matches," said Helthecker of the Bruins' two greatest weaknesses "this season. "Most teams we play know they can't beat (TFHS single aces) Dawn (Bulg) and Suele (Hoags), so they load up in the other events."

Babcock and Townley had to struggle for the victory, winning Highland — the first came two seasons ago, the season the Bruins won the school's only district championship under the old District 4-5 Class A setup.

in boys' doubles and Dave McNeese and Abby Matsuka outlasted Brian Trumble and Kell Heinrich 6-4, 2-6, 6-3 in a 90-minute-long mixed doubles showdown.

"One of our problems this season has been that we've won the first sets of matches and lost the next two, especially in doubles," said Helthecker. "It's good to see that we're playing with enough confidence to hold on to those leads."

Although the victory has little bearing on the upcoming regional tournament, it was important in several respects: It made Bruin senior Juan Marquez the top seed in that tournament by virtue of his surprisingly easy 6-1, 6-4 boys' singles victory over previously unbeaten Fernando Palles of Highland. It probably did the same for the Bruins' No. 1 mixed doubles team of Chris Sacco and Tonya Peterson, which beat Highland's

James Christensen and Judith Schaffhausen 4-6, 7-6, 6-3 Tuesday. Hoag and Dawn Bulg will be the top two seeds in girls' singles, but they'll be teamed in girls' doubles at the regional tournament, where they will almost certainly be the No. 1-seeded team.

"This was an important win for us in that it exposed us to a pressure situation, which we haven't seen that much this year," said Helthecker. "It showed us where our strengths and weaknesses are and it showed us we can beat Highland."

The loss left the Rams 8-1-2 for the season.

Urie, DeJong, Stuart commit to play for CSI's women's basketball team

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Bigger, strong and deeper.

Those three pluses will be major additions to next year's College of Southern Idaho women's basketball team, according to Coach Ben Stroud, who still is in the "midst-of-the" recruiting season.

"But overall team quickness and speed is going to be a question mark," said the second-year mentor.

added some quality talent to our team."

Magic Valley's trio of 5-foot, 11-inch Hettie DeJong of Burley, 5-9 Rose Stuart of Mileno and 5-11 Andrie Urie of Kimberly provides a lot of mobility and shooting punch at the guard or wing positions.

"The inside game is enhanced with the addition of 6-0 Monique Gustin of Borah, 6-1 Carolyn Smith of Boise and 6-0 Lisa Phillips of Highland. American Falls' Sandy Rowland is a 5-11 athlete who can play just about anywhere" and will give the Eagles flexibility."

"The thing I like about this group is that it can get physical with us." And we were pleased with the positive image that our program evidently has in Southern Idaho because I feel we
