Persian Gulf forces on higher level of alert

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan expressed "concern and anger" Monday over the Iraqi missile strike that killed 28 American sailors aboard the guided missile frigate Stark and he put U.S. ships on heightened alert in the Persian Gulf with authority to fire at threatening warplanes.

statement said. "We also seek compensation for the ship."

A letter from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to Reagan was delivered to the State Department, expressing "deep regret over the painful incident." Presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater said, "We feel it does represent an apology. It does not address the matter of compensation."

The White House and Pentagon said the Iraqi attack was inadvertent but unexplained.

The Pentagon said the ship had at least a minute's warning that a missile had been fired at it by an Iraqi warplane, but did not try to shoot it down either the missile or the plane.

"We did not return the fire. I don't know the reason," said Fitzwater. The Stark, part of a U.S. naval task force in the gulf, was hit Sunday by one — possibly two — French-made Exocet missiles while on routine patrol about 85 miles northeast of Bahrain.

It was the first attack on an American warship in the nearly 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war. Iraqi ambassador Nizar Hamdon called it an inadvertent error.

"I think it happens in every air force in the world, in every army in the world, that mistakes do happen," Hamdon said in an interview on Cable News Network. "We have expressed our condolences." The missile ripped through the ship's hull, tearing a 10- to 15-foot hole in its port side. Of the 28 sailors killed, 25 were trapped by intense fire in one compartment; 21 others were injured.

"As we speak, the captain is trying to save his ship," Vice Adm. Henry Mustin, deputy chief of naval operations, said Monday afternoon. He said the captain was unavailable for questioning by the Pentagon.

Reagan met for more than an hour with national security advisers. Afterward, Fitzwater issued a statement saying, "The president has ordered a higher state of alert for U.S. vessels in the area" and that Iran and Iraq were being officially notified of the change.

In his letter to Reagan, Saddam Hussein said, "I believe you are sure that the Iraqi aircraft in which they had previously attacked hostile targets did not intend at all to attack a target belonging to your country or to any other country other than Iran."

At the Pentagon, spokesman Robert Sims said he could not see STARBUCK on Page A2

Hansen School District Superintendent Richard Smith listens to parents' testimony during Monday's board meeting

Hansen school chief refuses to resign

By CRAIG LINCOLN Times-News writer

HANSEN — Hansen Superintendent Richard Smith linked unrest in the school district to the teacher's union at a Monday night meeting and refused to resign in response to the demands of 126 parents who signed petitions.

the meeting as a forum to defend its actions, saying the resignation of two teachers this spring occurred under fair and legal circumstances.

The meeting drew close to 90 Hansen residents, who listened to their School Board and superintendent answer complaints from teachers and parents for more than an hour. The board had earlier promised to respond to lists of grievances presented to the board by teachers in December and by parents May 1. Smith said he hadn't responded before to the December grievances because he didn't want to disturb a settlement the teachers had reached over a pay dispute, which sparked the list of grievances and a vote of "no confidence" in Smith.

"I felt at the time any comments would cause further turbulence in waters being calmed," Smith said. Toward the end of his statement, he said, "The vote was a bitter pill to swallow. Not only was it swallowed and removed from my system, but I didn't want to bring it back up."

Smith said the "majority of the accusations are vague and unclear and therefore unanswerable," but he did provide detailed answers to

Audit shows some dairy payments go astray

WASHINGTON — A $1.8 billion subsidy program to help curb surplus milk production fails to ensure that all payments are going to dairy farmers who deserve them, according to an Agriculture Department audit report.

gram — resulted in overpayments to dairy farmers.

Also, the report said, the agency has not taken sufficient action to ensure that producers with leased milk production facilities will maintain control of their facilities" for the entire five years that they are supposed to be out of dairying.

Under the 18-month "whole-herd buyout" program which began April 1, 1986, more dairy farmers contracted to slaughter or export more than 1.5 million head of cows, heifers and calves.

Producers whose bids were accepted agreed to remain out of dairying for at least five years. The $1.8 billion, spread over the five-year period, is supposed to help compensate farmers for the lost milk production.

The audit report, by the department's Office of Inspector General, was made available Monday at the request of The Associated Press.

The only Idaho county listed was Jerome, with 17 dairy farms or contracts qualifying for subsidies. The sum of $17,008,394 was paid to producers in that county.

Congress included the whole-herd buyout — officially called the Dairy Termination Program or DTP — in the Food Security Act of 1985. In all bids from nearly 14,000 dairy producers were accepted out of 29,534 submitted.

About 38 percent of the $1.8 billion program costs comes from dairy

Ship had minute warning of missile

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The American frigate attacked Sunday in the Persian Gulf had at least one minute's warning that a missile had been fired against it and should have been able to defend itself, Pentagon officials said Monday.

The ship knew, however, that the plane, that unexpectedly attacked it was from Iraq. No Iraqi plane had ever attacked a U.S. ship before and there was no reason for the ship's captain to expect an assault, the officials added.

"We also know that the combat system of this ship is capable of dealing with this threat," added Vice Adm. Henry C. Mustin, a deputy chief of naval operations. "Why it did not, we don't know."

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger described the attack on the Stark as a "ghastly error of some kind," he said. "It was possible the death toll could climb."

He told ABC News it was "a single, horrible error on the part of the Iraqi pilot."

"The ship's perfectly capable of defending itself," Weinberger said in another interview on the Cable News Network.

"But the possibility, or even the likelihood, that an Iraqi plane ... would launch a missile as was just about zero. And so you did not have any expectation of that."

The defense secretary refused to go into detail, but hinted American ships assigned to the gulf would now react to any lighter flying a route that would allow launch of a missile, instead of waiting for some evidence that an attack had been launched.

In an NBC interview, Weinberger was more specific:

"Any belligerent plane now that approaches on a pattern that could launch an attack will be assumed to be hostile," he said. "That has not been the case before because we had no reason whatever to suppose that an Iraqi plane would launch a missile against an American ship."

The devastating attack on the guided-missile frigate Stark, which left 28 men dead and at least 21 injured, involved at least one and possibly two Iraqi Mirage F-1 fighters, the Pentagon said.

The attack was the first on an American warship since the Iran-Iraq war began almost seven years ago. Pentagon and other administration officials continued to describe the attack Monday as inadvertent and apparently a case of

Leader says rebels puzzled over probe

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Nicaraguan rebel leader Adolfo Calero is expected to tell the Iran-Contra hearings this week that his forces have been "dragged into an incidental investigation that they do not fully understand."

Calero, who has been civilian leader of the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, the Contra fighting group now undergoing a leadership reorganization, is scheduled to be the week's second witness after the hearings resume on Tuesday.

He is to testify after lawmakers finish questioning Robert Owen, the self-described "foot soldier" who served as a middleman in the Contras' dealings with Lt. Col. Oliver North, the White House aide who was fired last November for his Iran-Contra activities.

Owen testified last Thursday under a grant of limited immunity, the first such grant during the hearings. That means his testimony cannot be used against him in a criminal prosecution.

Calero, in a statement prepared for the hearings and obtained by The Associated Press, was critical of investigations that have focused on U.S. involvement in the secret supplying of the Contras during a two-year period when Congress had banned official military aid.

"In addition to the sea of troubles brought on Nicaraguans by the Sandinistas, we have been unfortunately dragged into an internal inquisition involving opposing views, technicalities and fine points of laws or amendments that we do not fully comprehend and apparently neither does world opinion," Calero's prepared statement says.

"Yes, I've set up front companies; we had to mask our identity. We received monies from foreign sources; that was the only way to survive after U.S. aid was cut off by Congress."

He says such tactics were necessary in the "spirit of self-preservation," and he thanks "patriotic Americans and citizens of other countries who understood our plight and the implications of our defeat."

Pool, jobs, downtown top concerns of Twin Falls citizens

By PAT MARCANTONIO Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — City residents want a new swimming pool, more jobs and a preserved downtown, according to the results of a Twin Falls community survey presented Monday to the City Council.

City staff received 708 responses to the 2,000 questionnaires. It mailed last month to randomly selected city residents.

Now that the numbers are in, city staff will begin studying the results to determine how to respond to the concerns and concerns of the city residents.

The results showed that 83 percent of those who responded believe the city needs a new pool, and 66 percent are willing to make voluntary donations of $3 a month for 16 to 18 months to build one.

After the failure of three bond issues to finance a pool, the city is considering seeking contributions to generate $400,000 needed to complete financing of a new pool.

Mayor Doug Volmer said he was excited about the response to the pool. The city has the $1.2 million needed to construct the pool in various reserves throughout the city budget. The money could be borrowed from other departments and repaid by the donations.

The Pool Committee, composed of city residents, will decide the financial route the city should take, Volmer said.

On the subject of economic development, 65 percent of those surveyed want the city to actively recruit new business and help existing business in conjunction with other organizations, such as the Greater Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce. About 14 percent favor the city waiving sewer and water development fees to encourage businesses; and 15 percent want the city to provide sewer and water lines at city expense. Six percent wanted the city to do nothing.

About 94 percent are saying, "Let's do something," said city employee Vince Alberti, who helped coordinate the survey.

On another question, city residents said lack of employment was the No. 1 problem of the city. A "good environment" was rated the city's chief asset.

Volmer said the city is considering hiring a full-time economic development director. Promotion of the Twin Falls on a voluntary basis doesn't work, he said. The chamber can't afford to hire someone to do the work.

"We need someone to go knocking on doors," said Volmer, a former chamber president.

The city has already dedicated money to economic development by hiring the Fantus Co. to conduct an economic study, Volmer said. The Fantus report will be presented to the council June 4.

A resounding 90 percent of those who responded support the city's involvement in the promotion of Twin Falls as a tourist attraction.

percent growth, and 15 percent think a 3 percent annual growth rate is a nice figure.

Only 6 percent of those surveyed wanted no growth at all.

Between 1970 and 1980, city population grew at an annual rate of about 2 percent. Between 1980 and 1987, city records show a slight reduction in population.

A demographics portion of the survey may reinforce the population losses, at least of younger people.

The survey showed that 31 percent of those who responded were retired. About half of the people who answered the survey didn't have children living at home. About half were over 52 years old.

"Is that an indication our younger people are leaving the community?" asked Councilman Jim Vickers.

"It certainly is," Alberti replied. On questions related to taxes, 55 percent of those who responded favor a change in state law to allow a local-option tax. Thirty-one percent did not like the idea and 14 percent were undecided.

The result was a "flip-flop" in attitudes compared with a 1985 community survey, said City Manager Tom Courtney. Two years ago, a majority of people surveyed didn't want a local-option tax.

Vollmer said the information will be used to lobby the Legislature to allow the taxes.

A 1 cent local-option tax on all people purchasing taxable goods would generate $1.5 million for the city government, according to the survey.

Those who support the tax had divided opinions about how its revenue should be used. Twenty-two percent want the money to go to street maintenance, 19 percent want it used to provide property-tax relief, and 14 percent want it spent on economic development.

In a related question, the use of revenue bonds and local improvement district drew the most support to provide capital improvements, such as sidewalks and recreational facilities.

Of those who responded, 347 people believe the city should preserve downtown more than other commercial areas in the city. On that same question, 201 people voted no and 127 were undecided.

City Development Director LaMar Orton, who helped coordinate the survey, said several people had negative comments about the new mall.

City services were generally rated high. While the ratings of other city services didn't change much this year, compared to the 1985 survey, there were some exceptions.

About 44 percent of the people rated street maintenance excellent to good, compared to the 10 percent who gave it that rating two years ago. Vollmer said the number could have been better this year.

When questioned if they protect a city plan to provide fire protection outside the city limits on a contractual basis, 94 percent marked "yes."

farmers themselves, estimated by USDA at about 175,000, through fees levied on all milk marketed. The 1987 program, however, go only to those who signed contracts to participate in the program.

Participating farmers have to brand each cow, heifer and calf, and provide the county USDA office with proper evidence that the animals were slaughtered or sold for export. The brands are supposed to identify the animals in case some are illegally sold to other dairy producers.

The report said that the county and national offices generally developed and carried out effective procedures and controls over the bidding and contracting for dairy animals, and provided adequate restrictions to prevent or detect the re-entry of dairy cattle exported under the program.

But the wet spots, including slipshod procedures by some county officials requiring corrective action, the report said—in all—it said—the auditors "performed an in-depth review" at 15 state offices and 54 county offices involving 1,500 DTP contracts with anticipated payments of more than $460 million.

In one example, the report said that a review of 272 contracts involving large payments of generally more than $1 million per farm, 17 of the 54 county offices involved "incorrectly computed the contract milk base for 33 of the contracts," an error rate of 12 percent.

The captain of the ship reported his vessel had been struck by two missiles. Many of the dead appeared to be perished in the fire, which spread to a forward berthing area below the main deck.

"The ship saw the aircraft coming at some distance—we're not sure exactly where that was—and issued two warnings to the aircraft by radio," Burgess said.

"We don't know whether those warnings were acknowledged or not," Pentagon sources meantime, disclosed Monday the ship had been engaged in a gun search for underwater mines at the time of the attack—and this was barely moving through the water.

Seminars offered for area investors

TWIN FALLS—Thomson McGinn Securities Inc. of Salt Lake City is sponsoring five seminars for investors today and Wednesday in the Magic Valley.

A representative will discuss conservative investments, such as U.S. Government and corporate securities, as well as effects of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 on investment strategies.

Seminars are scheduled at 1 p.m. today in the Carson Springs Inn at Twin Falls and at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Best Western Durley Inn at Burley. There is no charge or obligation, but reservations are required by phoning 308-225-8221, the company announced.

Clarification

A Times-News story Sunday about the Twin Falls School Board election today failed to mention the profession of one candidate. Edis Guyan is a plant pathologist at Engers Brothers Seed Co.

Correction

TWIN FALLS—Due to a reporter's error, an article in Monday's edition about the Twin Falls City Council meeting inaccurately reported that a proposed set of building-permit fees would be lower than present fees.

In reality, the proposed set of fees would be higher and raised in increments over a period of time. The proposal, however, was tabled by the City Council on Monday for further study.

The Times-News regrets the error.

Court expands application of anti-discrimination laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, greatly expanding legal protection for minorities, ruled Monday that civil rights laws aimed primarily at helping blacks may be used to ban and punish discrimination against Arabs and Jews.

Writing 9-0, the justices said civil rights laws enacted in the wake of the Civil War were designed to prohibit "racial" discrimination based on ethnicity and common ancestry, and not merely skin pigment.

The rulings, in separate cases involving an Arab professor in Pennsylvania and a vandalized Jewish temple in Maryland, were hailed by a variety of civil rights groups.

Based on sheer numbers, some said Hispanics could be the biggest beneficiaries.

In other action, the court:

- Ruled 8-1 in the case of a disabled Vietnam veteran from Tennessee that state courts may order child support payments from veterans-disability benefits.
- Decided 5-4 that members of the armed services and their families may not sue non-military federal employees for injuries or deaths resulting from military service. The ruling extended a 1950 decision barring such lawsuits against military supervisors.

- Allowed states to remove parts of a corpse's eyes without the consent of the dead person's family. The justices rejected a challenge to a Florida law that does not require consent.
- Rejected an appeal by two Baptist churches in Michigan who may be forced to shut down schools for hiring teachers not licensed by the state.
- Allowed New Jersey to revoke automatically for 10 years the licenses of people three times convicted of drunken driving.

Justice Byron R. White, writing for the court in the rights case, said, "We have little trouble in concluding that Congress intended to protect from discrimination identifiable classes of persons who are subjected to intentional discrimination solely because of their ancestry or ethnic characteristics."

"Such discrimination is racial discrimination that Congress intended to forbid, whether or not it would be classified as racial in terms of modern scientific theory," he said.

White said that although Jews and Arabs today may be considered members of the Caucasian race, Congress had a different view of race when it enacted Reconstruction-era laws granting to all persons the same rights "enjoyed by white citizens."

He noted, for example, frequent 19th century references to Scandinavians, Chinese, Latins and Spanish as members of distinct "races."

"This ruling will have the greatest benefit to the Hispanic community in the country," said Antonia Hernandez, head of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund. "We're so happy, I can't tell you."

She said the rulings will give Hispanics an important new weapon to fight bias that could result from a new immigration law penalizing employers for hiring illegal aliens.

Former Meese deputy linked to Wedtech

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former acting chief of the Small Business Administration on Monday depleted an ex-White House official as being intensely interested in 1987 in arranging for Wedtech Corp., the now-scandal-plagued South Bronx defense contractor, to get a $32-million no-bid Army contract.

Don Templeman, formerly of the SBA, said that James Jenkins, at the time the deputy to then-White House counselor Edwin Meese III, told him that "the president had gone" to New York City and vowed "to get some employment in there."

Jenkins told Templeman that White House officials "were trying to find a way legally under this (SBA) program" to create jobs by awarding Wedtech the contract to supply small engines to the Army, the former SBA official recalled in an interview.

Templeman said he subsequently attended a May 1982 White House meeting, where he tentatively agreed that the SBA would supply $3 million in advance payments to Wedtech and $2 million in "business development expenses" if the company worked out a dispute it was having with the Army over the contract.

Secretary names scholars

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Secretary of Education William J. Bennett announced Monday the names of 140 high school seniors selected as the 1987 class of Presidential Scholars.

Idahoans chosen were Catherine S. James of Grangeville and Kevin M. James of Lewiston.

Most were chosen for academic achievements, leadership and community and school activities. Nine were selected for accomplishments in the arts, including music, dance, theater and creative writing.

They will be brought to Washington June 15-18 for a round of speeches and activities including a June 17 White House ceremony at which President Reagan will speak and give each of the scholars a medalion.

Region owes Burks a debt of gratitude

Bob Burks, manager of the Northside Canal Company and a native of the Wendell area, is not the kind of man who gets overly-steamed about things. His basic style is deliberate and thoughtful.

But Burks is fuming over what he sees happening to the Niagara Springs and Crystal Springs portion of the Snake River Canyon.

He's been involved in what has been, up to now, mostly a one-man campaign to preserve the area, which has long been popular as a recreation site.

Without some concerted protests, he says, the outflow from Niagara Springs will be mostly diverted into fish hatcheries, leaving a trickle of 50 cfs down through what is now one of the canyon's prettiest small parks.

After viewing the area this past weekend, we think Burks is right about the potential threat, and we urge public participation in helping him protect it. You can start by getting in touch with Burks at Box 298, Wendell, Idaho 83355, telephone 539-2219.

Burks is a formal protester of the proposed water diversion project at Niagara Springs, and he will be making a formal presentation to the state Department of Water Resources hearing at Gooding City Hall on May 28 at 10 a.m. The more people he has heard from by then, the better.

The issues here are complex ones. At Crystal Springs, a once-pristine outflow pond will be all but dried up, except as an outwash from a Clear Lakes commercial hatchery, when an Army Corps of Engineers project is turned on later this year.

That project will divert water from the canyon wall into a collector pipe and across the Snake River, to be used to raise steelhead. At Crystal Springs pond, the damage is already done and what was once a beautiful spot has been turned into a drying pool of fish droppings. Anyone who thinks this is pretty should drive down and take a look.

Burks is trying, in effect, to prevent the same thing from happening at Niagara Springs.

One of the Magic Valley's treasures is the wondrous flows of aquifer water from the canyon walls. Once these are gone, they are not easily replaced. Thus, decisions about their future should be public and carefully thought out.

We all owe Bob Burks a debt of gratitude here for raising public awareness about this important resource. Hopefully, his bugle call is not too late.

Raising tuition bodes ill in the long run

For the past five or six years, tuition charges at private colleges and universities have been rising at twice or three times the rate of inflation.

While most of the rest of the economy has prospered with a relatively low rate of inflation, private education seems to have remained stuck in the era of high inflation rates. Each spring parents of college students can expect to receive a letter from a dean or president informing them of yet another increase in tuition of 6 percent, 8 percent or even 12 percent.

The most common excuse for escalating tuitions is that faculty salaries have lost much of the buying power that they had in the mid-1960s and early '70s. There may be some truth to this argument, but it does not really explain the rise in tuitions. If you look at how colleges and universities are spending the additional money they generate by raising tuitions, you will see that only a small part of it goes to increase faculty paychecks. Much of the additional money is being spent on improving a wide range of facilities, services and programs: career counseling, study abroad, internships, special seminars, lectureships, publications and, most important, financial aid.

The reason for this is that private colleges and universities no longer compete with each other on the basis of stated price, as do most other commodities and services. They compete primarily on the basis of general academic reputation, enhanced services and programs and discounted prices (financial aid).

The number of traditional college-age students has been declining since 1980. If the usual laws of economics applied to higher education as they do to widgets, you would expect the price of a college education to drop. That is what should happen when an abundant commodity seeks fewer purchasers. But the opposite has occurred: The market for independent colleges and universities seems to be relatively insensitive to price. What this means is that the consumers of higher education — parents and students — do not appear to be choosing institutions on the basis of cost.

There is a good reason for this. First, approximately 80 percent of today's students go to public universities. The cost of operating a public university is not less than the cost of operating a private university of the same size, but the price to the consumers is considerably less because of state tax support. There is no way that independent colleges and universities can compete with public universities on the basis of stated price or tuition charges.

Second, as many as two-thirds of the students who attend the better-known independent colleges receive some form of financial aid. Most institutions will award aid in the form of scholarships on the basis of need, to make up the difference between what the college charges and what a qualified applicant's family can afford to pay. A family that can pay $5,000 per year will be charged $5,000, whether the tuition is $8,000 or $12,000. Given a choice between Pontiac College, with a tuition of $8,000 per year, and Cadillac College, which charges $12,000, which would you prefer, knowing that, in either case, the cost to you will be the same: $5,000?

Being a rational consumer, you will compare what each college offers in the way of prestigious faculty, up-to-date facilities, career counseling, food and housing. You probably will choose Cadillac College. It has a better reputation for academic achievement, its campus is picturesque and its course catalogue is full of picture seminars and tutorials.

Now look at the situation from the point of view of the president at Pontiac College. Pontiac cannot compete with the public institutions on the basis of price. Neither can Pontiac compete with Cadillac College on the basis of price, because the financial aid policy at both institutions equalizes price for the majority of students. Pontiac College will enjoy little competitive advantage by charging less than Cadillac College. Why, then, should the president at Pontiac cut corners, why economize, why defer renovating that aging dormitory?

Nobody will appreciate those cost-cutting efforts. Why not just raise Pontiac's tuition to $12,000 and be done with it? Pontiac will pick up students who cannot get into Cadillac, many of whom won't need or qualify for aid, and it can spend part of its additional revenues on beefing up financial aid.

What is wrong with this thinking? For the consumer, and for higher education in general, plenty. In the long run, tuition escalation is going to drive more and more students to the public universities. The Pontiac Colleges of this country will not be able to offer enough services to offset the great price advantage of the public university.

The more affluent and prestigious independent colleges will prosper, but the independent sector is likely to become smaller as less prestigious colleges are unable to attract qualified students. At some point, independent colleges and universities will become elitist preserves with dwindling influence on the intellectual and cultural life of the nation.

Escalating tuitions may appear to be an easy short-run solution to a college's financial problems, but they have disastrous long-term consequences for all higher education.

Letters/ Twin Falls detective concludes his career with department is over

Conscience directs choice

Since May 12, 1986, when I disclosed to Federal Law Enforcement officials that Commander Patrick Bermingham of the Twin Falls Police Department had illegally claimed and received witness fees and costs to which he was not entitled. There has been the object of nearly constant harassment by officials of the Public Safety Department and the city manager's office.

I have been forced out of the detective division into patrol duties, a move which is clearly a demotion and placed under the supervision of the very man whose illegal activities I reported.

My most recent transfer back into uniform, coinciding as it does with the dismissal of an appeal by the U.S. Attorney's Office of an order dismissing criminal proceedings against Commander Bermingham, has made it absolutely clear to me that my career with the Twin Falls Police Department has been terminated.

As you know, law enforcement is more than just a job to me and I have tried now for a full year to balance my work with this department against my belief that law breakers in uniform are the very worst kind of criminals.

Commander Bermingham, but can no longer justify the heavy price upon my family, my peace of mind, and my career that you are forcing me to pay. Therefore, since it is clear that I have already been effectively terminated by your actions, I hereby submit my resignation effective June 1, 1987.

'Dr. Saras, staff the best'

My association with the Animal Clinic and Dr. Patricia Saras has run a span of five years; incidently, the time of my residence in Twin Falls.

She is not only a well-qualified veterinarian, but a caring and loving individual in the treatment and care of animals. When asked by a new resident of Twin Falls about a veterinarian, I always recommend her and will continue to do so in the future. Dr. Saras and her staff are the best.

End stigma in call for help

May is Mental Health Month. KMVT put on an excellent "Views" program featuring two mental health workers and a family member of a mentally ill person. One of the speakers was given on the subjects of why mentally ill persons do not seek psychiatric help and how mentally ill persons feel.

I feel one very important spokesperson was left out — the person who suffers from the disease of mental illness. Unless one suffers from a disease, whether it be cancer, heart disease, or the disease of mental illness, one cannot really know the pain that comes with the particular disease. John Heizer left a legacy in his many contributions to his community. Let's remember him for his contributions and let's go one step further. Let us do everything possible to reduce the stigma and risks one takes in reaching out for help.

Many improvements made

Recently, a petition was circulated in Minidoka County concerning the fair board. The petition stated that Wade Zollinger and Ron King had made more improvements to the fair grounds in the last six months than present or previous board members.

In the last 10 years, approximately $319,000 has been spent at the fair grounds on capital improvements. A new race track was built, and in the same area a grandstand, restrooms, a racing office, and a video booth were built. Recently, a new show building was built for the 4-H and Open Class exhibits. This building also contains an office for the fairboard and restrooms for the public.

The 4th Ward LDS constructed a concession stand last year. Tables and chairs have been purchased, as have pebbled and cabinets for display areas, and new stage was built in the sale barn. Repairs to equipment and show area take another chunk of the money.

In 1985, the fairboard requested permission from the Minidoka County Commissioners to level and seed the south area for a parking lot and a place to put the Fourth of July Carnival. Because of budgeting, work did not start until 1986, when trees and debris were removed. There had been a stock car racing track in the area, and time and money were needed to remove concrete, tires, poles, etc. This year, the area was leveled and seeded.

Revenues for the fairboard budget come almost entirely from tax monies. By law, two-thirds must be put into the general fund and one-third into the capital fund. Amount available for the capital is about $23,000 yearly. In past years, the fairboard has received some revenue sharing money, but that is no longer available. Anticipated revenues are figured, and the fairboard sets the budget from these figures. It is against state law for the budget to be overspent, and each fairboard member can be held personally responsible for such. All government monies must be audited by an accredited CPA, and the importance of complying to state statute is very much stressed at each audit report.

To say that nothing has been done to improve the Minidoka County Fair grounds when it is fact what and where money has been spent, is a gross inaccuracy.

Ad on Mormonism absurd

I found your recent advertisement selling Mormonism quite absurd. In fact, from the true Christian perspective, it calls God a liar.

"Under your advertisement's heading: 'Restoration of the Gospel' is implied (actually referred) the belief that the gospel was lost from the earth. That of course would make God, in the person of Jesus Christ, to be a liar because he said through Matthew (16:18) that he would establish his church, and 'the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.' But God can not lie; even Mormons believe that. And anyone who is a true Christian will submit that God is capable of following through on his word. He is no liar; there was no apostasy. Besides that, given that if the Book of Mormon were true, in 3 Nephi 28:25-26, it is mentioned three Nephites who belong to "the church" (vs. 18) who supposedly "were never to taste of death." And the same is said of the apostle John in Doctrine and Covenants 7:3. Now, if these people who are of "the church" have never died, then by the writings of these Mormon documents, there could not have in any way been an apostasy — let alone a complete apostasy.

But in any case, even if the article is absurd because I believe and know God to be in control of all things regardless of how much mankind tries to screw it up for him. God did build his church on the day of Pentecost, and it still exists today in the temple (body) of every Christian. It is not a man-made, individual organizational preference. His church is the collective body of all born-of-the-spirit (born-again) believers throughout the world and time; and Jesus Christ is the chief cornerstone.

Mormons call themselves Christian because they have Jesus Christ in the name of their organization; and they do believe in a Jesus Christ. Paul spoke of him in II Corinthians 11:3-4, 12-15. Check it out. The Jesus Christ of the Mormons, according to the book Gospel Through the Ages (an official LDS publication), is the "spirit brother of Lucifer" whom we know of as the devil. The "spirit brother of Lucifer" the devil is not the Jesus Christ of the Bible.

But God is in control. It's interesting that in the language spoken by over 25 percent of the world's population (Chinese) that the pronunciation of the words for "gates of hell" is "mormon." Ask the missionary school in Provo. God did build his church, there was no apostasy, and Mormon "will not prevail against it." EARL R. JOHNSON

HUMPTY DUMPTY FALLS AGAIN!

AT SWENSEN'S

The sad story of Humpty Dumpty's fall from the wall goes back a long way, and certainly—the Kings men and their horses could have patched him up with modern technology (Super Glue and Scotch Tape). However the modern May, 1987 fall of THE EGG at Swensen's is strictly about the price. Swensen's fine AA quality Humpty Dumpty Eggs—EXTRA LARGE SIZE and less than 1¢ each—ARE super fresh without a scratch or a crack. Think of the possibilities for battered budgets: Two eggs and a slice of toast breakfast for only 18¢, money stretching quiches, souffles, omelettes, potato salad, boiled eggs, scrambled eggs, egg nog, etc.

MAYPORT NAVAL STATION, Fla. (AP) — Navy officers began the somber task Monday of notifying the families of the 28 sailors killed during a missile attack on the frigate USS Stark on the Persian Gulf.

The military did not publicly disclose the names of the sailors killed or of the 21 wounded on the attack.

"Everybody is hurting," Navy Chaplain Bill Perry said here at the Stark's home base outside Jacksonville. "There's a lot of pain, a lot of sadness and a lot of headshaking. . . . If you wear the uniform you feel the pain."

Base commander Capt. John Mitchell declined to say how many, if any, of the 85 Stark sailors who make their home in the Jacksonville area were killed in Sunday's attack. The Stark carried 200 crewmen.

"Until they (the families) hear something everyone is a casualty," Mitchell told reporters.

He said a team of 10 doctors, psychologists and other professionals arrived Monday from Portsmouth, Va., to help families deal with the crisis.

A sailor from the USS Saratoga, which also has Mayport as its home port, said the feeling on the base was shock and disbelief.

"It was a ship we saw everyday in port. It's quite a shock to everyone," said the sailor, who declined to give his name.

Perry, who visited the families of several Stark crewmen after Sunday's attack and talked to sailors at the base, said the time before families were told the names of the dead and injured was the most difficult part.

That time was especially hard for two wives of crew members, who did not know their husbands' fate on the Stark, said Su Ferguson, director of service to military families and veterans at the Jacksonville Red Cross.

One of the two gave birth Monday to a healthy girl in Jacksonville, said Ms. Ferguson, and the Red Cross sent a message with the news to the ship. Another crewman's wife was getting ready to deliver, she added.

"You hurt inside for people you don't know. You hurt for them. You hurt with them and you keep them in your prayers," Perry, a chaplain for 18 years, said at a news conference on this North Florida base on the Atlantic coast.

"That leaning shoulder-to-shoulder is really strong," he said, adding that about a dozen families held an all-night prayer vigil Sunday in the base chapel.

"It's important for (families) to be with other people. This is not the time for anyone to be left alone," agreed Eric Casas, deputy director of the Family Service Center at Mayport. "There's certain amount of anxiety involved, certain amount of despair."

"Everybody feels like they've received an unexpected punch in the stomach," said Perry.

Mrs. Ferguson said the Red Cross had also offered to provide some financial assistance, nurses trained in grief counseling and "whatever the command at Mayport feels they need assistance with."

Outside the base gates, the community expressed anger over the atack.

"It looks like we've lost a bunch of lives for nothing. . . . Anyone can do anything they want to us, but there would be hell to pay if we ever attacked them. . . . any little country," said former navy man Jody Segraves. He owns a small jewelry and electronics store just outside the gates.

Sheffield loss aided U.S. fleet

WASHINGTON (AP) — A French-built Exocet missile that killed 28 sailors aboard the USS Stark in the Persian Gulf was the same type of weapon that sank the British destroyer Sheffield in the 1982 Falklands war.

The U.S. Navy incorporated many lessons from the Sheffield in building ships like the Stark, but the Americans were not prepared for "a sudden and unprovoked attack" Vice Adm. Henry C. Mastin, deputy chief of naval operations, said Monday.

The Stark, an Oliver Hazard Perry-class guided-missile frigate, is equipped with an MK-15 Phalanx Close-In Weapon System, consisting of radar-controlled 20mm Gatling guns designed to hurl 3,000 rounds a minute at missiles like the Exocet.

"Although the Stark's Phalanx was on 'remote' automatic," it did not fire a single round at an Exocet that approached on Sunday about 15 feet off the water at 10 miles a minute, just below the speed of sound.

"The ship radioed that its radar had spotted two missile firings, Mustin and Air Force Lt. Gen. Richard Burpee told a Pentagon briefing, but radar on a nearby Airborne Warning and Control System plane detected only one Iraqi plane and missile, officials said.

The missile slammed into the left side of the Stark 20 feet above the waterline and just below the ship's brain. Its Combat Information Center.

The hole stretched from the steel hull to the superstructure, built of aluminum, like that of the Sheffield, the British destroyer that was destroyed by an Argentine Exocet, officials said.

The intense fires associated with aluminum construction killed 20 sailors aboard the Sheffield, and exacerbated damage on the Stark, officials said.

A fire in an aluminum structure "creates hot spots that are hard to cool down. Water is almost ineffective. The crew needs to use foam," said one Pentagon official. And because aluminum remains hot, it can rekindle fires.

The Exocet, developed by the French contractor Aerospatiale in collaboration with the French military, was first tested in 1972, and by the end of 1981 had been ordered by about 25 nations.

The missile that struck the Stark was fired from an F-1 flying at about 5,000 feet above the water, then dropped to 10-15 feet above the surface.

The Exocet has its own radar system, and during the early stages of its flight can communicate with a computer system aboard the airplane to track its victim. Some Exocets are designed to home in on the radar of their targets.

Liberty was target in '67

WASHINGTON (AP) — The attack on the Navy frigate Stark came almost 20 years after an assault on the USS Liberty, another Navy ship which became embroiled in a Mideast conflict.

On June 8, 1967, Israeli jets and torpedo boats struck the Liberty, a Navy electronic intelligence-gathering ship that was on station in the Mediterranean Sea off the Sinai peninsula.

The attack, which occurred during daylight and good weather in international waters, killed 34 servicemen and wounded 171 others among the 294 crew members.

Officially, Israel said it was a case of mistaken identity that occurred because the ship was believed to be Egyptian.

MAYPORT NAVAL STATION, Fla. (AP) — Navy officers began the somber task Monday of notifying the families of the 28 sailors killed during a missile attack on the frigate USS Stark on the Persian Gulf.

The military did not publicly disclose the names of the sailors killed or of the 21 wounded in the attack.

"Everybody is hurting," Navy Chaplain F. J. Perry said here at the Stark's home base outside Jacksonville. "There's a lot of pain, a lot of sadness and a lot of headbanging. If you wear the uniform you feel the pain."

Base commander Capt. John Mitchell declined to say how many, if any, of the 85 Stark sailors who make their home in the Jacksonville area were killed in Sunday's attack. The Stark carried 200 crewmen.

"That'll give (the families) a heart something everyone is a casualty," Mitchell told reporters.

He said a team of 10 doctors, psychologists and other professionals arrived Monday from Portsmouth, Va., to help families deal with the crisis.

A sailor from the USS Saratoga, which also has Mayport as its home port, said the feeding on the base was shock and disbelief.

"It was a ship we saw everyday in port. It's quite a shock to everyone," said the sailor, who declined to give his name.

Perry, who visited the families of several Stark crewmen after Sunday's attack and talked to sailors at the base, said the time before families were told the names of the dead and injured was the most difficult part.

That time was especially hard for two wives of crew members, who did not know their husbands' fate on the Stark, said Su Ferguson, director of service to military families and veterans at the Jacksonville-Red Cross.

One of the two gave birth Monday to a healthy girl in Jacksonville, said Ms. Ferguson, and the Red Cross sent a message with the news to the ship. Another crewman's wife was getting ready to deliver, she added.

"You hurt inside for people you don't know. You hurt for them. You hurt with them and you keep them in your prayers," Perry, a chaplain for 18 years, said at a news conference on this North Florida base on the Atlantic coast.

"That leaning shoulder-to-shoulder is really strong," he said, adding that about a dozen families held an all-night prayer vigil Sunday in the base chapel.

"It's important for (families) to be with other people. This is not the time for anyone to be left alone," agreed Eric Casas, deputy director of the Family Service Center at Mayport. "There's certain amount of anxiety involved, certain amount of despair."

"Everybody feels like they've received an unexpected punch in the stomach," said Perry.

Mrs. Ferguson said the Red Cross had also offered to provide some financial assistance, nurses trained in grief counseling and "whatever the command at Mayport feels they need assistance with."

Outside the base gates, the community expressed anger over the at-

and electronics store just outside the gates.

The Stark was carrying an anti-submarine helicopter detachment, HSL-32, based in Virginia at the Norfolk Naval Air Station, said Chief Journalist Phil Wilkinson, a Navy spokesman in Norfolk.

"It looks like we've lost a bunch of lives for nothing. . . . Anyone can do anything they want to us, but there would be hell to pay if we ever attacked them. . . . Any little country," said former navy man Jody Segraves. He owns a small jewelry

Sheffield loss aided U.S. fleet

WASHINGTON (AP) — A French-built Exocet missile that killed 28 sailors aboard the USS Stark in the Persian Gulf was the same type of weapon that sank the British destroyer Sheffield in the 1982 Falklands war.

The U.S. Navy incorporated many lessons from the Sheffield in building ships like the Stark, but the Americans were not prepared for "a sudden and unprovoked attack," Vice Adm. Henry C. Mustin, deputy chief of naval operations, said Monday.

The Stark, an Oliver Hazard Perry-class guided-missile frigate, is equipped with an MK-15 Phalanx Close-In Weapon System, consisting of radar-controlled 20mm Gatling guns designed to hunt 3,000 rounds a minute at missiles like the Exocet.

Although the Stark's Phalanx was on "remote automatic," it did not fire a single round at an Exocet that approached on Sunday about 15 feet off the water at 10 miles a minute, just below the speed of sound.

The ship radioed that its radar had spotted two missile firings, Mustin and Air Force Lt. Gen. Richard Burpee told a Pentagon briefing, but radar on a nearby Airborne Warning and Control System plane detected only one Iraqi plane and missile, officials said.

The missile slammed into the left side of the Stark 20 feet above the waterline and just below the ship's brain, its Combat Information Center.

The hole stretched from the steel hull to the superstructure, built of aluminum, like that of the Sheffield, the British destroyer that was destroyed by an Argentine Exocet, officials said.

The intense fires associated with aluminum construction killed 28 sailors aboard the Sheffield, and exacerbated damage on the Stark, officials said.

A fire in an aluminum structure "creates hot spots that are hard to cool down. Water is almost ineffective. The crew needs to use foam," said one Pentagon official. And because aluminum remains hot, it can rekindle fires.

The Exocet, developed by the French contractor Aerospatiale in collaboration with the French military, was first tested in 1972, and by the end of 1981 had been ordered by about 25 nations.

The missile that struck the Stark was fired from an F-1 flying at about 5,000 feet above the water, then dropped to 10-15 feet above the surface.

The Exocet has its own radar system, and during the early stages of its flight can communicate with a computer system aboard the airplane to track its victim. Some Exocets are designed to home in on the radar of their targets.

Liberty was target in '67

WASHINGTON (AP) — The attack on the Navy frigate Stark came almost 20 years after an assault on the USS Liberty, another Navy ship which became embroiled in a Mediterranean conflict.

On June 8, 1967, Israeli jets and torpedo boats struck the Liberty, a Navy electronic intelligence-gathering ship that was on station in the Mediterranean Sea off the Sinai peninsula.

The attack, which occurred during daylight and good weather in international waters, killed 34 servicemen and wounded 171 others among the 294 crew members.

Officially, Israel said it was a case of mistaken identity that occurred because the ship was believed to be Egyptian.

New tax forms still complex

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service on Monday unveiled some of the new individual tax forms required by the 1986 tax overhaul, and like the new law, they promise little simplification for most Americans.

The landmark law, most of which is taking effect this year, requires creation of about 40 new forms — only eight to 10 of them affecting individuals — and modifications in about 200 existing forms. Virtually every individual form will require some updating.

"The forms are a reflection of what the Congress has given us," Arthur Altman, chairman of the tax-forms advisory committee at the IRS, told reporters Monday. The new forms will reflect changes in the law in the least obtrusive manner, he added.

"We are going to be testing some of our forms as we go through the summer," Altman said, adding that he expects some changes to be made as a result of the tests.

Will filing a return early next year, on the new forms, be more difficult than it was this year? Altman was asked. "It depends on how the 1986 tax law affected you," he replied.

That new law affects virtually every individual and business taxpayer in one way or the other: It cut tax rates significantly, raised the personal exemption and standard deductions and eliminated or reduced several itemized deductions.

Most of the simplification the new law brings is expected to come from encouraging about 10 million couples and individuals to stop itemizing deductions. But in many of those cases, authorities agree, taxpayers still will have to itemize in order to find out they would be better off claiming the standard deduction.

The IRS released draft copies of the basic individual forms — the long Form 1040, the shorter Form 1040A and the one-page 1040EZ — plus Schedule A for itemized deductions; Schedule D for capital gains and losses; Schedule E for supplemental income and Form 2106 on which employee-business expenses are reported.

One of the most obvious changes is near the top of the 1040 and 1040A and requires taxpayers to list the full name and relationship of every law dependent claimed, as well as the Social Security number of each and individuals to stop itemizing dependent over the age of 4.

IRS warns grace period end nearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service warned taxpayers Monday they have only two weeks left to take advantage of a grace period from IRS penalties for filing a new W-4 withholding form.

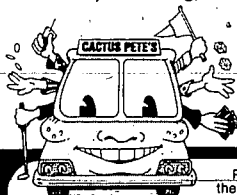

IRS spokesman Steven Pyrek said that while the new federal tax code does not require people to file a form W-4 until Oct. 1, meeting that deadline by itself does not satisfy the requirement that people prepay at least 90 percent of their tax bill.

People failing to meet the 90 percent standard can be assessed penalties. But because of confusion over the form W-4, the IRS announced earlier this year it would waive the penalty for taxpayers who have made a "good faith" effort at getting their withholding right.

It defined a "good faith" effort as completing and filing a new form W-4 by June 1, thus declaring a grace period that is about to expire.

The two deadlines have caused some confusion.

Volunteers position a boat in the Snake River to transport the body of a man who fell from the Murtaugh Bridge

Arizona man slips, dies in canyon fall

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

MURTAUGH — An Arizona resident who has been in Twin Falls County for several weeks seeking farm work, fell to his death Monday afternoon from the Murtaugh bridge.

Twin Falls County Coroner Calvin Edwards said the death is being ruled an accident. He said Johnson died instantly of massive head injuries.

"As near as we can tell, he drove onto the bridge and got out of his car, then climbed over the concrete railing—slipped and fell," Edwards said.

Munn said the accident was reported at 12:51 p.m. He said Johnson and a woman companion, Mary Joyce, about 40, also of Arizona, went onto the bridge and Johnson apparently fell.

Edwards said that after talking with Joyce, it was not known why he climbed over the railing, but the woman said he slipped and was hanging by his fingers when she got out of the car and went to his aid, attempting to pull him back on the bridge. She told officers Johnson let loose her hands and slipped from her grasp, falling to the rocks below.

Edwards said the two had been looking for work and Johnson had just obtained a job three days ago on a Murtaugh area farm.

Normally at this time of year, Munn said, the bridge would have been covered by high water, but the river is extremely low. The accident happened on the south side of the river near the end of the bridge and on the east side of the bridge, Munn said.

Although the couple came from Arizona, Edwards said, they have lived in numerous areas in recent months. Edwards said they appeared to have been living in their vehicle while seeking work.

Murtaugh Quick Response Unit members and officers were able to reach Johnson by a narrow rocky trail on the south side of the river. But to recover the body, Munn said, it was necessary to have the Jerome County Search and Rescue team bring a boat from the north side, cross the river and then float to a point where the body could be carried up to the highway.

The body of Johnson was taken to Reynolds Funeral Chapel where funeral arrangements are being made.

"On Sunday, a vehicle that has been in the river in the same general location since Jan. 24, 1985, was removed by wrecker equipment. This is the first time that the water level has been low enough to reach the vehicle since it entered the river. It is owned by Paul Rodegen, who allegedly drove and pushed it into the river and then disappeared, resulting in an extensive search of the water before he was later located alive and living in Roswell, N.M."

Elliott quits force, claims harassment

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Detective Howard Elliott, who initiated a year-long federal case against Twin Falls Police Commander Pat Birmingham, has resigned from the department, charging harassment.

In a letter Monday to City Manager Tom Courtney and Public Safety Director Tim Qualls, Elliott said events of the past year, and especially his recent transfer back to uniform patrol duty, have made it clear that his career with the Twin Falls Police Department has been terminated.

It was a year ago this month that Elliott contacted the U.S. Attorney's Office in Boise to report irregularities on a $132 expense voucher that Birmingham had submitted following his testimony in a federal drug case in Boise.

The action resulted in a grand jury indictment against Birmingham, but when the case reached federal court, Judge Harold Ryan dismissed it at the close of a two-day evidentiary hearing.

An appeal application from the U.S. Attorney to the 9th Circuit Court in San Francisco was denied recently when the government attorneys failed to complete the appeal by filing necessary documents, including a court transcript of the case.

In his letter of resignation, Elliott said his most recent transfer a week ago back into uniform from his regular work as a detective coincided with the announcement that the government's appeal had been denied.

Elliott's resignation said that he regrets having to concede that a police officer who has knowledge of a following his testimony in a federal drug case in Boise.

Rain came like manna from heaven to much of Idaho over the weekend, providing at least temporary respite from the drought.

One project engineer called it "a million-dollar rain." U.S. Soil Conservation Service in Ketchum, said the Halley-Ketchum area received 1.8 inches of rain, allowing some farmers to turn off sprinklers.

"It's buying three or four days," he said on Monday. "Where it's really helped is on the range land."

During a tour by a federal drought team on Saturday, farmers said they will be able to feed cattle and sheep to feed lots for feeding because of so little grazing or range land.

Boyd Stocking, watermaster of the Upper Little Wood River, said most farmers in the Carey area have shut off their irrigation pumps.

"We're going to get a week's worth of good out of this rain," he said.

The rain caused the flow in the Little Wood to go from 87 cubic feet per second last week to 426 cfs over the weekend, he said.

"We got two inches of rain. It's really helped," he said.

But at Inkom in Blannock County, the problem was too much water. A weekend storm caused flash flooding. Officials were left wondering what to do about a culvert system that clogged with runoff debris.

Palaades Reservoir gull employees said they had begun filling stains as 1 to 2 1/2 inches of rain was reported across the region. Increased river flows and a drop in irrigation de-

Vote today for board candidates

TWIN FALLS — School board elections are under way today between noon and 5 p.m. throughout Magic Valley.

Voters need not be registered to vote, but must have been residents of their district for 30 days, must be a U.S. citizen and at least 18 years old.

In Twin Falls, two seats will be decided. Trustee Calvin Lamborn is running unopposed for his Zone 2, southwest from Addison Avenue and Highway 74. Four other candidates seek the seat of outgoing Chairman: Gene Champilin, John Egan, Bert Remaley and Dave Sommer.

The four candidates for Zone 6, south of Addison Avenue and east of Highway 74, are Charlie Remaley, John Egan, Bert Remaley and Dave Sommer.

Residents of the two zones may vote in either polling places: Lincoln or Morningland elementary schools. But residents may only vote for the candidate representing their zone.

"Magic Valley residents with questions about polling places or other aspects of the elections should call their local school district office."

There are four override levies scheduled for today, which require a 50-percent majority to pass. Those districts include Cassia, $590,000; Filer, $69,250; Shoshone, $185,000; and Wendell, $75,000.

Also, Hansen has scheduled a $13,000, three-year plant facilities levy which requires a two-thirds majority to pass.

Signs invite spending time and money

BLISS — Motorists stretching their legs at a rest area west of Bliss now are getting a steer toward scenic sites they once might have overlooked, such as the "1000 Springs" along the Snake River, a winery in nearby Hagerman and the plunging Malad Gorge.

With a sulp from a pair of oversized scissors, state officials Moody unveiled the first of 11 information signs to be posted this summer at rest stops along Idaho's highways.

The placards also are a sign of the state's new hospitality toward tourists and their dollars. By 1990, the rest area signs will be followed by roadside guideposts pointing to dozens of attractions and by manned visitor stations at entry points on Interstate highways.

Speaking to a small crowd of Magic Valley business boosters at the eastbound rest stop on Interstate 84 near Bliss, State Travel Director Carl Wilgus Monday morning described the display as an historic step toward catching tourists' eyes.

Maxine and Marne Mercer of Hagerman inspect the new directory at the Bliss rest area

The doubted-sided signs are a joint venture between two state agencies.

The Idaho Travel Council profiles nearby attractions on one side. On the reverse, the state's Department of Transportation gives basic traveler services such as mileage between cities and locations of auxiliary dump stations for recreational vehicles. The signs are located in small shelters.

But for local tourism promotion groups — which request the signs at various rest stops — the project is cosmic.

The signs tell the traveler what is up the road that might lure them off the road.

"We want him to stay a day and spend a dollar more," says Nick Conakas, chairman of the Malad Regional Travel Committee, which has obtained six signs at stops in its eight-county area.

The organization pushed for and won a state grant to 1985 to pay for the signs. The money came from the state's 2 percent tax on motel beds and campground spaces.

L.L. "Burt" Holmes, head of the Tourism Committee for the Hagerman Chamber of Commerce, said the signs will "get them off the freeway" and to places of interest ranging from fly-fishing haunts to hot-spring spas. "It would show them something they can go and do," said Holmes, who wrote the text for the Bliss display and runs a small lodge.

Other Magic Valley signs will be posted this summer at rest stops at Interstate 84 near Twin Falls (U.S. 331, eastbound and westbound); Interstate 84 just north of the Utah border, Juniper, northbound; and U.S. 20 and Idaho 75, Timmerman Hill. The westbound Interstate 84 stop near Bliss also is slated for a sign, but no agreement has been concluded, said Max Jensen, DOT traffic supervisor.

Seven other rest areas in the western and northern parts of the state also will receive signs.

Meanwhile, state officials also are attempting to erect roadside signs to guide tourists to scenic attractions. The first will show the way to Shoshone Falls, the 212-foot waterfall near Twin Falls, officials said.

However, those require more coordination with local officials, says John Bertram of Boise-based Plannmakers, a consultant for the project. "Once you get off the state highway system, we are trying to assure people they won't get lost on those often-county roads," he says.

By 1990 — the Idaho Centennial — the state plans to locate at least 60 scenic attractions and add another 60 historic markers to state highways, using $300,000 authorized by the state Legislature.

Also planned are manned visitor information stations at gateways to Idaho along Interstate highways 84 and 95.

Earth First! speaker: Wisdom is in nature

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

REDFISH LAKE — Dave Foreman stepped up to the microphone at the Idaho Conservators League meeting here, pushed it aside in a gesture of defiance with things technological and started to speak in low, raspy tones about the biological crisis on the planet.

By the time the speaker of the Earth First! environmental movement was done, he was howling like a wolf and the audience was on its feet giving him an ovation.

One person at the Saturday night speech dubbed him FBI Foreman, a takeoff on the evangelist movement in the news lately. Only in Foreman's case it's Praise the Lord instead of Praise the Lord.

"Life has been on this planet for 3.5 billion years but never has there been a biological crisis as today. In the next 20 years one-third of all species will be extinct. The only large mammals left will be the ones we chose to extil," says Foreman.

He talked of biologist Michael Souto's statement that on Earth vertebrate evolution has come to an end. The encroachments of civilization have deprived animals of the range they need for evolution, according to biologists. This is even true in an area as large as Yellowstone National Park. The consequences are that existing species are less resistant to disease than to earlier times when there was more biological diversity.

"We are the most important generation of human beings that has ever lived. Our decisions will determine whether evolution goes on or not," says Foreman.

Quoting the naturalist John Muir, Foreman said man has no mandate to exploit every square inch of the planet. Man has a right to be here but not everywhere, all at once at the same time, he said.

Foreman, the one-time mainstream environmentalist for the Wilderness Society, then launched into his praise of wilderness. Foreman and Earth Firster Howie Wolke have been making the case among ICL members for no compromise on the Idaho wilderness

Elliott

Continued from Page B1 that another member of the department has violated the law has to choose between his job and his conscience. He said he was proud of what he did in reporting Commandant Bermingham to the U.S. Attorney.

Elliott said Monday afternoon that he does not have another job to go to at this time.

"I don't know what I am going to be doing, I just know what I'm going to be doing," he said.

Elliott's attorney, Keith Roark of Halley, called the situation shameful and unfortunate — "one of the most upsetting things I've seen."

Roark said there is no question but that the treatment Elliott has received from his employers has had a effect on his future chances for employment.

Roark said in his opinion, Elliott has been an outstanding officer — probably one of the best detectives in the state.

City Manager Courtney said the city has made every attempt to work with Elliott and avoid any problems.

"As far as any action against him, the only step taken has been a letter in his file, reprimanding him for a residential area, and taking a few dog calls. Elliott said while he or other detectives are engaged in traffic patrol, their criminal cases and investigations sit for two months on their desks or in their files without any progress being made."

Courtney denied the charges that a program to cross-train patrol and detective divisions personnel was aimed at Elliott.

"This has been an excellent program and one that benefits the department and improves public service," Courtney said.

"In a city of this size we need as many people as possible who can work at various levels of skills and who can be moved to different divisions where workloads and manpower may require. While it saves money, it also saves time."

Elliott said Monday night the rotation program "is a joke." He said while working in the patrol division, he has worked alone and has never given training to any of the patrol officers.

He said his assignments have never involved criminal activities where he could offer training to fellow officers.

For example, he said his Monday duties included writing speeding tickets, investigating a traffic accident, making a junk complaint in a residential area, and taking a few dog calls.

Courtney agreed that Elliott is a good officer, adding that Qualls has repeatedly told him that he was a good officer. The city manager said both he and Qualls wanted to continue working with Elliott and forget what had happened in the Bermingham case.

He disagreed with Elliott's statements that as a patrolman, he has not had any physical training as a patrol officer.

He explained that usually the patrol exchange officers and the commander work different hours. In addition, he said, Elliott works under either a sergeant or corporal most of the time.

Elliott said that while he may not see Bermingham, he is still the commander of the department and any orders Bermingham issues are sure to be carried out.

Elliott said specific instances of his harassment include a termination hearing on April 8. He said efforts to terminate him were based on the fact that he did not list the nature of his illness or offer proof of illness and that he worked at another job while on sick leave.

Elliott said two physicians told him he could do physical work as long as it was not in the police department. Elliott said he has not received word on the hearing results.

Elliott said he not only blames the police administration, but the city council members for not checking into what has happened in his case and other department matters.

Foreman

Continued from Page B1 issue. They say the environmental organizations in Idaho are making a strategic error by compromising on their wilderness proposals. It is up to the politicians to make the compromise, and environmentalists should be advocates, they say.

Foreman wants all 8 million acres of roadless areas in Idaho to be afforded wilderness protection by Congress. But ICL is seeking 3.9 million acres, says Rick Johnson, ICL public lands coordinator.

Foreman says one has to consider wilderness for its own sake. "All things have intrinsic value. You don't count the value of a tree until how many greasy dollar bills you can stack against it," he says.

One does not measure the value of a river in economic terms. The river has its own value, it is alive, he says. "The plastic boxes we live in, those freeways, the Ronald Reagan administration are an aberration," he says.

The real world, he said as darkness and fog blanketed nearby Redfish Lake, is out there at the end of the lake where evolution is going on.

Foreman regaled the audience with verse at one point. Casting off his flannel shirt, he screamed, stomped and wheeled about in a 1 1/2 shirt reciting words about the blood of timber executives being his natural drink. He painted one-time U.S. Secretary of the Interior James Watt as sucking the Snake River dry when he was thirsty and destroying endangered species as a pastime.

"I'm an animal," he said. "I'm a mammal," he said. "I'm a mammal," he said. "I'm a mammal," he said.

Foreman shouted. He says when he dies he wants his body eaten by buzzards and weasels. In order that it should become part of the ecosystem.

"I want to live forever. I don't want to be pickled in a lead box. When I die I want to live forever. Maybe consciousness doesn't go on, but your energy goes on," says Foreman.

Foreman linked himself with the earth and urged people to love it by being alive, by not being machines. He says he is hurt every time a river is dammed, he is shot every time a grizzly is shot in Yellowstone.

He spoke of celebrating man's animal nature and enjoying life. He says there is no wisdom talking to Gov. Cecil Andrus or Sens. James McClure and Steve Symms.

There is wisdom in our old cedar growth in Selway, says Foreman whose movement sticks steel spikes in trees to prevent them from being cut by loggers.

"You want to know what to do about wilderness in Idaho? Ask the trees, the elk," he says.

Why should one accept the world the way Cecil Andrus, Jim McClure and the U.S. Forest Service hand it to us, he says.

He told people to dream of what they want because the wolves and grizzlies can't thrive unless people imagine what they want for these wild mammals.

Foreman spoke of the need for courage, passion and vision. But mostly he spoke of courage, the courage to say there is already too much developed in Idaho.

Foreman spoke of standing up to Andrus and not letting him use the wilderness issue to cap his political career.

"It takes courage to say wilderness is more important than Andrus," he said to the audience's whistles and applause.

He says this doesn't mean conservationists can't play pragmatic politics and pressure Andrus, but they always have to keep their wilderness goals in the back of their minds. Foreman told of conservationist Aldo Leopold who as a young forester on his first job surveyed the timber resources before World War II in the White Mountains of Arizona.

In those days when foresters came across wolves they shot them because they were perceived to be a threat, Foreman said. One day the survey team came across an old wolf fording a river with her pups.

Foreman said the team pulled their rifles from their scabbards and blazed away.

Leopold went over to the wolf to finish her off and as he wrote years later he said, "I reached the old wolf in time to watch a fierce green fire die in her eyes."

Foreman says he fears man is losing the fierce green fire.

Man dies as car plunges into canal

RUPERT — A Minidoka County man drowned Saturday night when his vehicle went out of control and plunged into a shallow irrigation ditch southwest of Rupert.

The victim was identified Sunday by Idaho State Police as Elias Alaniz, 22, of Heyburn. The accident was reported at 8:59 p.m. at the junction of county roads, 300 West and 300 South.

Officers said Alaniz was driving south on 300 West when he came into a "T" intersection and was unable to negotiate the sharp turn. His vehicle went out of control, left the roadway and went into a shallow irrigation ditch. He was partly thrown out of the vehicle and plumed under it as it rolled onto its left side in the water.

Two passengers in the vehicle, Mario Ramos and Vincent Garcia, were able to climb out of the vehicle safely. They were uninjured. State police said although there was only about two feet of water in the ditch, it was not possible to rescue Alaniz until equipment could lift the overturned vehicle. State officers said he died at the scene.

Drought

"Two inches of rain for southern Idaho is a big storm," he said. "If you look at it in terms of irrigation usage, it's like eight days' supply. We get a big rain like this and it will slack off irrigation demand for a week."

Rain was expected to continue through today, said Dan Keirns, National Weather Service, Pocatello.

Jerry Beard, U.S. Soil Conservation Service, said the combination of hard and steady rains will provide additional benefits to irrigators.

"The rain that comes hard and fast in the basin causes quick surface runoff that will help fill up reservoirs," he said. "A slow gentle rain that will infiltrate will help the dry land areas and reduce irrigation demand."

Palladas Reservoir stored an additional 3,000 acre-feet of water during the weekend storm. Jackson Lake was hardly affected. Ron Carlson, Water District No. 1 watermaster, said he is projecting restoring water rights from the current 1903 to 1906, based on a projection of a more than 2,000-cubic-foot-per-second increase in flow from the storm.

The Idaho Vote

The following is a summary of votes cast by members of Idaho's congressional delegation during the two-week period ending on May 15:

U.S. House delegates:

Larry Craig
Republican

In Washington:
1318 Longworth
Bldg., Washington, D.C. 20515
(202) 225-6511

Richard Stallings

House legislation:

- ① May 5: House passes defense authorization cut.
By a vote of 249-172, the House, in a move to keep defense funding within limits set by the House-passed budget resolution, approved a $230 billion defense authorization for fiscal 1988. The substitute spending bill cut $17 billion from the figure approved by the House Armed Services Committee and $23 billion from President Reagan's budget request. Under the amendment, SDI funding was cut.
Craig: NO. Stallings: YES.
- ② May 6: House OKs amendment for SALT II compliance.
By a vote of 245-161, the Democratic-controlled House adopted an amendment to the fiscal 1988 defense bill that requires the United States to continue to adhere to the terms of the unratified 1979 U.S.-U.S.S.R. strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II). The amendment prohibits use of funds for development of nuclear weapons that exceed the treaty's limits, unless the president certifies to Congress that the Soviet Union has exceeded the limitation.
Craig: NO. Stallings: YES.
- ③ May 12: House cuts SDI funding.
By a vote of 219-172, the House ignored President Reagan's wishes for more funding of the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI). The vote called for a $500 million cut in SDI funding for fiscal 1988. The amendment was approved from 20 Republicans, who oppose the administration's efforts to accelerate SDI testing and deployment.
Craig: NO. Stallings: YES.
- ④ May 13: House votes to extend debt limit.
By a vote of 236-124, the House easily approved a temporary $20 billion debt-limit increase, allowing the U.S. government to meet its financial obligations through July 17. The change was to temporarily raise the debt ceiling to $2.3 trillion, but rejected a Reagan administration request to raise the ceiling to almost $2.6 trillion.
Craig: NO. Stallings: YES.

U.S. Senate delegates:

Jim McClure
Republican

(202) 224-6142
In Twin Falls:
734-2515

Senate legislation:

- ① May 6: Senate approves a $1 trillion budget.
Shortly after midnight on May 6, the Senate approved a Democratic budget proposal for fiscal 1988, by a vote of 56-42, and set the stage for a clash with the Reagan administration. The budget called for $18.3 billion in new taxes and put a limit on defense spending.
McClure: NO. Symms: NO.
- ② May 6: Senate approves debt limit extension.
By a vote of 53-36, the Senate approved a temporary $20 billion increase in the U.S. borrowing authority, postponing a showdown over the coming public debt and the sluggish budget process.
McClure: Did not vote. Symms: NO.

Senator defends payment

POCATELLO (AP) — Idaho Sen. James McClure is defending a proposal to pay up to a $100 million yearly bonus to the state chosen for a permanent nuclear waste repository, contending at least the proposition has ignited the debate on the merits of the facility.

The state's senior Republican, sponsoring the controversial proposal with Senate Energy Committee Chairman Bennett Johnston, D-La., said the drawbacks of accepting the repository, in the minds of most local officials, far outweigh any economic benefits, and the payment at least offers one way of countering that feeling.

"What we're trying to do is test what is the level of economic benefits that will outweigh the detriments," said McClure, during a brief visit back to Idaho during a break in the Iran-Contra hearings. He is a member of that joint congressional investigating committee.

"Whether the bill goes anywhere or not, at least we've gotten a discussion going on what will induce a state or locality to want it," he said.

McClure said he personally preferred an above-ground repository that would allow monitoring, retrieval and possible recycling of nuclear waste. The Department of Energy has identified three possible below-ground sites for a permanent repository, and the agency is continuing to study an above-ground system as well, McClure said.

Sentencing hearing begins in bankruptcy embezzlement

BOISE (AP) — A U.S. district judge opened a sentencing hearing here Monday for a former bankrupt-estate trustee who admitted charges that he embezzled almost $220,000 from bankrupt debtors and their creditors.

Lois Christy, 46, faces up to 35 years in prison and fines of $485,000 on five counts of making a false statement and false certification, and one count of embezzlement. In February, she pleaded guilty to federal charges in a plea-bargain that saw the consolidation of five counts of embezzlement into a single count.

The sentencing hearing was scheduled to continue Wednesday before U.S. District Judge Markon Callister.

McClure: Committee won't find conspiracy

BLACKFOOT (AP) — Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, predicts the joint congressional committee investigating the Iran-Contra affair will find no criminal intent on the part of those involved.

But he said it's too early to say if anyone will be prosecuted.

"The question boils down to whether there was a conspiracy to subvert the stated policy of the government," McClure said. "If that's the case, then they better send me to jail too, because I do a lot of that."

Idaho's senior senator, a member of the House-Senate panel probing the use of money from the sale of arms to Iran to fund Nicaragua's Contra rebels, made his comments during an interview with the Blackfoot Morning News.

McClure said the next two weeks of hearings on the affair produced few surprises. But he said there was an indication that the process could drag on too long for his liking.

"Most people like to talk about the side issues of interest to them, but often they lose sight of the central question," McClure said.

The select committee "is not out to prosecute anybody. If that were to occur, that would be the job of the special prosecutor," he said.

"What we're trying to do is analyze the facts and determine just what went on when."

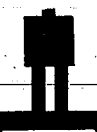

McClure sees Israel as a prime player in arms shipments to Iran. "Israel definitely had a lot at stake in seeing Iran weakened," he said. "The fact that Iraqi tanks were destroyed by the arms sent to Iran was no accident."

McClure stressed that the Iran arms sales and the fund-raising efforts for the Contras began separately and "are like streams which converged in time."

BUHL — Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Burgess, Buhl, will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary Thursday with an open house.

Friends and relatives are invited to call from 5 to 8 p.m. at Lincoln Court social hall, 1310 Main St. W., Buhl.

Burgess and Lillas Kirkbride were married May 21, 1937, in Castleford and solemnized their vows at the LDS Temple in Idaho Falls May 21, 1981.

The open house is being hosted by their children, Luella Vigil, Apache Junction, Ariz.; Duwayne A. Burgess, Fallon, Nev.; Lavonne E. Burgess, El Paso, Texas; and Leroy D. Burgess, Portland.

DEAR ABBY: The letter carriers of the Postal Service and the employees of the utilities, newspapers and other delivery services must regularly have access to the properties of the community in order to perform their duties.

Thousands of persons nationwide have suffered pain and other consequences of being bitten by dogs. Seven thousand were letter carriers last year alone.

Dog owners must accept that the attitude of "My dog doesn't bite" is a fallacy. Some dogs do bite letter carriers and other delivery service people. Owners need to realize that dog ownership carries with it several responsibilities. Preventing their dogs from biting or attacking people who must enter the property is one of them.

The U.S. Postal Service has been taking a tougher stance by interrupting mail delivery to homes where a dog is not properly restrained. Additionally, the agency has been assisting and joining its employees in actions to recover damages resulting from dog attacks.

Abby, will you please help us by asking dog owners to keep their dogs confined in a fenced yard, tied or chained, or keep them indoors during delivery hours? Thank you.

CSI sends playoff to rubber match

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

HELPER, Utah — Whether the College of Southern Idaho's baseball team returns to the National Junior College Athletic Association World Series for the fifth time in six years will depend upon how the Eagles do today against the Trinidad State Trojans.

But whatever the outcome, mark the fact that the season has gone in Tuesday, a tribute to CSI sophomore relief specialist John Brasse.

The best-of-three Northwest district junior college playoffs to a third game today on the Helper Municipal Park field.

For the second time in four days, the right-hander from Idaho Falls shook off the ill effects of a long rain delay to come back and beat Trinidad 11-7 Monday night and send

The Trojans had showed awesome power in winning Monday's opener, 11-3.

Today's final, which has both coaches wondering where he will find pitchers, will start at 1 p.m. with CSI being the visiting team. The winner of the game will play its first appearance at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the national finals in Grand Junction, Colo.

CSI Coach Jim Walker was half correct in his prediction that it would take "Jimmypal" in this series against Trinidad to carry CSI past its pitching problems. His Eagles banged out two home runs and lost a third on the old don't touch-'em-before-they-cross-home plate rule in winning the nightcap with 15 hits.

But Jimmypal, that which is defined by home runs, belonged to the Region 9 champions in the opener when Carl Smith hit two, including a three-run homer in seventh inning, and a grand-slam by Gary Corbin in a game-breaking fifth inning.

Looking toward today's game, Walker said, "we have no arms left. We have to come back with (sophomore right-hander David) Carter (Monday's first-game loser). Left-hander Tony Mortenson can't throw. We just have to go out and hit the backstop."

Mortenson worked an inning of relief in the nightcap, but had to retire due to a recurrent groin muscle pull.

"I'm proud of the way our guys battled back," said Walker of his Region 18 champs. "I felt we were out of sync today in just about everything, our fielding and our hitting especially. We had too many outs in our batting order and we're just going to have to come out better prepared mentally tomorrow."

Brasse entered the nightcap after Trinidad had jumped into a five-run lead, most of that on Keith Mitchell's three-run homer in the second inning. From that point, Brasse held the Trojans at bay except for a single that just didn't hurt. I can go tomorrow. Some in the eighth inning. But the Everybody has to be ready for key here was in the sixth inning.

The first game was a matter of an unearned run in the first inning and the heavy amount of moisture and forced postponement of the game for nearly two hours. Brasse said during the long delay he would prefer to "ice it (his right arm) now, get some rest and come back tomorrow. It's cold and tight now and I don't know if I could come back."

But he did come back, striking out five Trinidad batters in the last four innings and staying away from major rally threats.

"I pitched through the pain," said Brasse. "My arm was stiff and it just didn't hurt. I can go tomorrow. Some in the eighth inning. But the Everybody has to be ready for key here was in the sixth inning.

The first game was a matter of an unearned run in the first inning and the heavy amount of moisture and forced postponement of the game for

NBA

Bone-tired Celts now must befool Pistons

By HOWARD ULMAN
The Associated Press

BOSTON — There's little rest for the weary and wounded Boston Celtics.

Two days after their intense NBA playoff series finale against Milwaukee, they must battle the bruising Detroit Pistons, who will have had five days off.

The Pistons preferred to play the Celtics rather than the Bucks. The Celtics are just interested in who will be healthy enough to play for them in tonight night's opener of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference final.

Forward Kevin McHale has a broken-bone in his right foot, a sprained right ankle and a hyperextended left knee. Center Robert Parish has a sprained left ankle. Guard Danny Ainge suffered a sprained right knee one day after dislocating his right index finger.

"I don't worry about how my feet are," McHale said. "I just go out there thinking about doing what I have to do. No one on this team worries about how other people are feeling or doing. But we just expect them to do what they're capable of."

McHale and Parish overcame the pain and starred in the Celtics' 119-113 victory Sunday that gave them a 4-3 triumph in the conference semifinal. Ainge was hurt with 4:46 left in the third quarter, missed the rest of the game and is questionable for Tuesday night.

"My father always said that the most dangerous bear is a wounded bear and I believe him," McHale said. "We're wounded all right."

The Pistons are rested.

They finished a 4-1 conquest of the Atlanta Hawks

Offense-mind Magic named league's MVP

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Earvin "Magic" Johnson, asked by his coach to contribute more on offense during the season began, responded with his best-ever year and as a result was named Monday the NBA's Most Valuable Player.

Johnson, who averaged a career-high 23.9 points a game and led the league in assists for the fourth time in the last five years with a 12.2 average, received 65 first-place votes and a total of 733 points from the panel of media members.

Michael Jordan of Chicago, the NBA's leading scorer, had 10 first-place votes and 449 points to finish second. Larry Bird of Boston, the MVP the last three years, had one first-place vote and 271 points to place third.

The only other first-place votes went to Charles Barkley of Philadelphia, who finished sixth in the voting, and Akeem Olatunji of Houston, who was seventh.

The 6-foot-9 Johnson is the first guard to win the award in 22 years and the first to win it in the regular season. He was first in 1956. The others were Boston's Bob Cousy in 1957 and Cincinnati's Oscar Robertson in 1964.

"This award I dedicate ... it belongs to my father," Johnson said at a news conference at the Forum, where the Lakers will face Seattle in the second game of the Western Conference final Tuesday night. "I'm living for him, in a sense, playing in the NBA. I'm going to give this to him. I hope he'll be proud. I know he

Tory Thornton, seen here playing in a singles match against Jerome earlier this season, will be seeking her second straight title

KSV's Thornton goes to state a fourth time

By MICHAEL VANAUDELSN
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Last year at the Idaho State Class B high school tennis singles championship match, Tory Thornton of the Ketchum-Sun Valley Community School defeated Linda Voris of Caldwell's Vallivue High School.

This season, with an undefeated record, Thornton has been making sure that that happens again.

"I've been working pretty hard," she said. "I worry a little about state but I think I'll do pretty well. The finals are all I'm shooting for; it's all I think about."

She shouldn't need to worry, though. The Community School senior has gone through this season like a shark through a rubber raft — one champ and she's off to the next one. Thornton led her school to its first District 4 championship in history last weekend, upsetting defending state champion and archrival Wood River High School in the process.

Ever since the championship win, her first-ever victory over Voris, Thornton's confidence has become a contributing factor to her success.

"I know I can do it now," she said. "That, more than anything, has helped my game."

She'll be making her fourth trip to the state high school tournament in Sun Valley this weekend, which although not unprecedented is extremely rare in the annals of the Idaho High School Activities Association. She's been to the state finals two years in a row, winning last year for the Community School after getting there the year before as a Wood River sophomore. (She also went to state as a ninth-grader at Wood River Junior High.)

She ran into to a snag last summer, after the season was over, when she faced Voris again and lost to the Vallivue senior. And now, all she's thinking about is beating Voris again at state. And the idea of strutting away the champion with Voris walking away with a second-place finish again is revenge served best.

"I would be really content if I beat Linda in the finals," said Thornton. "Yes, it's a rivalry. It would be very pleasurable to beat her as I'm sure it would be for her. She'll be out to get me."

"Yeah, I'd like to beat her," said Voris. "I'd like to see her in the finals one more time."

To beat Voris again, Thornton will have to do a few things. For one, she'll have to use her speed and endurance to force a fast game even though Voris likes an action-packed match as well.

Both are the sort of players who "want to play hard and aggressive," as Voris put it. "For me, I want to get out there and win — and win fast."

But Thornton is also a speed demon in a way that it's impossible to be any closer.

The first set, in what was "the longest match I think I've ever played," said Thornton, was a fast one. Thornton, who had lost to Voris in the finals the year before, came out more determined than ever; smashing her serves, controlling the net and taking everything Voris gave her. Her concentration was high and "I knew I was in for a match," said Voris.

Realizing that this wasn't going to be easy, the Vallivue senior came on just as strong in the second set and won by the same tight score, 7-5. That second

CSI men's rodeo team gets still another regional title

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho's men's rodeo team clinched the Intermountain regional title in the final intercollegiate rodeo of the season last weekend in Provo, Utah.

The Eagles collected 2,170 points for the season, far ahead of runnerup Utah Valley with 1,450 and third-place Utah State with 1,400.

CSI's men's team has won the regional championship nine of the last 11 years and finished second the other two years. The team has finished out of the top 10 at the — National — Intercollegiate Rodeo just one of those years.

Among individuals, CSI sophomore Wayne Norcutt won the all-around title for the region, while his brother, Frank Norcutt, was second. The siblings from Battle Mountain, Nev., finished in the same order in saddle bronc riding, but Frank Norcutt won the team roping and Wayne placed second.

CSI's Richie Hamilton placed second in bareback riding and teammate Ted Hegy was third in steer wrestling while Darren Shaw was fourth.

At the Utah Valley rodeo in Provo, which concluded the regular season, Frank Norcutt won the saddle bronc riding, while Wayne Norcutt placed second. Hamilton finished second in bareback riding and Shaw and Dave Thacker took the team roping. Pete Jones was third in calf roping, while Hobie Peterson finished fourth.

For the CSI women, Gina Quigley took fourth place in goat tying and barrel racing and second in the all-around standings. The Eagles will compete in the nationals in Bozeman, Mont., on June 15-20.

Alysheba a triple winner? Don't bet against it

By PAUL MORAN
Newsday

Racing could use a hero, a four-legged, bullish, mercurial superstar in the mold of Secretariat or Seattle Slew. Alysheba, largely unknown before the Kentucky Derby, is not that animal, although he is a victory away from becoming only the 12th Triple Crown winner in history.

Racing could use a bitterly contested rivalry in the style of Alydar and Affirmed. None of that here, either. Alydar always left the impression that he would turn the tables on his rival. But twice has been within a length of Alysheba in both the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, but he has been soundly beaten both times.

Despite lack of both superstar and rivalry, the 19th Belmont Stakes is already the most keenly anticipated Triple Crown final since 1979, the year Spectacular Bid stepped on a safety pin and was beaten by Coastal. The script for this Belmont reads like a television miniseries, steeped in intrigue, rife with subplot. Racing needs this Belmont more, perhaps, than it needs a star

'At this point, with Belmont's table being set so lavishly, it matters little that Alysheba appears to be much less than a horse for the ages.'

3-year-old or a dramatic, two-horse happening. Stephens will attempt to extend his dominance of the Belmont into the realm of science-fiction while standing squarely in the path of Alysheba's attempt to win the Triple Crown, racing's most coveted, most elusive and most marketable title.

It will deliver Jack Van Berg, win-nest trainer of all time, vs. Woody Stephens, the Wizard of Ely, — both Hall of Famers. By the time Alysheba departed the Preakness "circle" on Saturday, Stephens already had ousted off his Alydar, who battled Affirmed in all three legs of the 1978 Triple Crown and was denied in each case, by a combined margin of less than two lengths.

Racing has been without a Triple Crown winner since Affirmed eight years ago. Now a son of his rival to Derby and the Preakness for Van Berg, the June 6 Belmont became a comes to at Belmont with an opporunity to win the title denied his sire. What matters is that Alysheba, with a victory, would become the second-leading money winner in history, behind John Henry, because he would have earned $5 million in combined purses and bonuses for the Triple Crown sweep.

"People who don't know much about the Belmont Stakes know what the Triple Crown is about," NYRA president Gerard McKeon said Monday. "We've got two colorful guys (Van Berg and Stephens) who will add some pizzazz. And people understand money."

Before it is run, the Belmont will have given racing at least one thing it sorely needs. The bonus, established primarily to hype declining television ratings for the series and make it more attractive to potential commercial sponsors, may be won in the first year of its existence. "I've got to think the odds were 20-1 against that happening," said McKeon, who sits on the board of Triple Crown Productions, the organization formed two years ago to promote the series as a single en-

NL: Expos knock Giants out of lead in West

MONTECAL (AP) — Neal Heaton thought it was time a Montreal starter did something for the club's overworked relief crew.

"I felt real tired after the seventh because I threw a lot of pitches for the inning before, but I wanted to go for it," said Heaton, who allowed six hits in pitching Montreal's first complete game of the season as the Expos defeated the San Francisco Giants 7-2 Monday night. "I just wanted to give the bullpen a rest."

The loss dropped the Giants out of a two-way tie with Cincinnati for first place in the National League West. San Francisco is now one-half game behind the Reds, who were idle Monday.

Heaton, 4-2, struck out seven, walked two and contributed a double and two-run single as the Expos won their fourth straight game and raised their record to 19-18, the first time they have been over .500 this season.

"We're on a roll now and we've beaten four pretty good pitchers," said Vance Law, whose third-inning double put the Expos ahead to stay. "But Neal gave the whole team a big lift with that game."

"Going the distance was a big boost for us as a team, and especially the bullpen, which has been overworked the last couple weeks."

Heaton was one hit away from coming out. Montreal manager Buck Rodgers said, "But he did a good job getting him to ground out."

Montreal did most of its damage against Giants starter Kelly Downs, 5-2, tagging him for seven hits and five runs before he was lifted with two outs in the third.

"I just stunk, that's all," said Downs. Montreal went ahead in the first inning when Tim Lincecum's grounder drove in Casey Candaele from third.

Baseball

The Giants took a 2-1 lead in the second on Bob Melvin's two-run homer.

But the Expos scored four times on four hits in the third to regain the lead. Raines led off with a single and scored on a double by Andres Galaraga. Vance Law followed with a double to score Galaraga and Horn Wittingham was walked intentionally.

Mike Fitzgerald's grounder advanced both runners, who then scored when Heaton beat out an infield single, a chopper up the middle that shortstop Matt Williams fielded behind second base.

"If you make contact, you can get hits," said Heaton. "Once I got it on the ground I just ran like hell."

Houston 4 Pittsburgh 1

PITTSBURGH (AP) — National League umpires are leaving Mike Scott alone these days. So are National League hitters.

Scott, accused on numerous occasions of scuffing the ball, pitched a three-hitter — his third low-hit effort this season — and Dickie Thon hit a two-run homer as the Houston Astros defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-1 Monday night.

Scott, 5-2, beat the Pirates for only the third time in 11 career decisions. He struck out eight, walked two and didn't allow a hit after Sid Bryan defeated to lead off the Pirates' fourth.

Since a 2-1 loss to the New York Mets on April 25, when he was periodically checked on orders from NL President A. Bartlett Giamatti, Scott said the umpires have been leaving him alone.

"After the league said they'd be checking me more, I've been checked less," Scott said. "It got a little ridiculous there for a while. They've been checking me for 2½ years, and if they want to keep checking me, that's fine."

Scott, last year's National League Cy Young Award winner, pitched a one-hitter April 15 against Los Angeles and a two-hitter against Montreal on May 8.

The Astros, who broke a three-game losing streak, took a 2-1 lead in the third inning. Billy Hatcher singled, advanced on Bill Doran's groundout and scored on Phil Garner's single. Kevin Bass made it 2-0 when his sinking liner eluded left fielder R.J. Reynolds and rolled to the wall for a triple.

Glenn Davis singled off Pirates starter Bob Kipper, 2-4, in the fourth inning before Thon, who had just one hit, a single, in nine previous at-bats this season, hit a 3-1 pitch into the left-field seats, his first home run since last Sept. 3.

Thon was activated May 8 after spending time on the disabled list with blurred vision, the result of his April 1984 beating by Mike Torrez of the New York Mets. He temporarily left the Astros in spring training because of the vision problem and reportedly considered retirement before agreeing to report to Houston's Tucson farm club in the Class AAA Pacific Coast League for rehabilitation.

The Pirates got their run in the third inning. Rafael Belliard drew a leadoff walk, stole second, was sacrificed to third, and after Barry Bonds fouled out, scored on Andy Van Slyke's single.

San Diego 7 New York 5

NEW YORK (AP) — The San Diego Padres still have the poorest record in the major leagues but they made the New York Mets look like the worst team in baseball Monday night.

Dave Dravecky pitched three-hit ball for six innings and the Padres parlayed five stolen bases and four New York errors into a 7-5 victory over the world champion Mets.

"I hope the next 10 are easier than the first 10," rookie Manager Larry Bowa said with a grin after the Padres won their 10th game of the season against 30 losses. San Diego has a two-game winning streak for just the third time all season.

The Mets got as close as 5-3 on the 18th time in 28 games and sank into one game of last place in the National League East at 16-20. They are six games from the top.

"We were sloppy," Mets Manager Dave Johnson said. "Our defense is hurting, but we are not pitching up to capabilities. That's our biggest problem."

Dravecky, 1-3, pitched three-hit ball for six innings in his second start of the year. He had a shutout until Darryl Strawberry hit a two-run homer in the sixth after a two-out error by center fielder Stanley Jefferson, a former Met, who had three hits and stole three bases.

Dravecky had lost four straight decisions to the Mets since May 28, 1983. Craig Lefferts worked 1½ innings, allowing Lee Mazzilli's pinch-hit homer in the seventh, and Lance McCullers went the last 1½ innings for his fifth save.

The Mets scored twice in the ninth on a two-out error by third baseman Mitchell with runners at second and third. But the Padres had scored twice in the top of the inning off Terry Leach on a single by Carmelo Martinez.

The Padres scored two runs in the first inning and twice more in the third against Ron Darling, 2-2.

Jefferson opened the game with a single, stole second and moved to third on a wild pitchoff throw by catcher Barry Lyons, a late replacement for Gary Carter, who has back spasms. Joey Cora hit an RBI single, stole second and later scored on John Kruk's bases-loaded groundout.

Tony Gwynn singled in the third inning and eventually scored on a picture of what I did last year as against what I was doing now and worked on imitating last year's style.

Ruffin said the difference involved "singling" the ball.

Los Angeles 5-3 Monday night, the Dodgers' fifth straight loss. Loser Rick Honeycutt, 2-2, went 5½ innings, allowing eight hits. The Phillies' runs were all measured because of an error by Los Angeles third baseman Bill Madlock.

With the Dodgers leading 1-0 on Pedro Guerrero's RBI single in the first inning, Mike Schmidt opened the Phillies' attack with a single and reached second when Madlock threw high trying for a forecourt after fielding Glenn Wilson's grounder.

After Lance Parrish fouled out, Chris James singled to the score. Madlock fielded Luis Aguiar's smash and forced Schmidt at third but Ruffin, who got his first hit of the season when he singled in the fifth, doubled to right over a shallow outfield, scoring James and Aguiar.

AL: Red-hot K.C. wins eighth straight

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Danny Tartabull hit a two-run home run Monday night and carried the streaking Kansas City Royals to a 4-2 victory over Boston in a game delayed by rain and a power failure.

Tartabull, whose home Sunday was the difference in a 3-2 conquest of Milwaukee, hit a 3-2 pitch from Al Nipper, who dropped to 3-3 despite giving up only five hits. The Red Sox, the defending American League champions, have lost four of five and have a dismal 5-16 road record.

It was the eighth straight home victory for the Royals and their 12th win in 15 games, a streak that has shot them from fourth place to first in the AL West.

The start of the game was delayed 67 minutes by rain. Then a bank of lights went out in the bottom of seventh inning, forcing a 25-minute stall.

Mark Gubicza, 2-4, allowed six hits, walked three and struck out one through seven innings. Dan Quisenberry got his fourth save by retiring four of five batters.

The Royals scored their first run without a hit. Tartabull walked leading off the second, Frank White also walked, and Tartabull came around on infield outs by Bo Jackson and Angel Salazar. Wade Boggs hit his seventh home run and Don Baylor immediately followed with his ninth-to-give the Royals a 2-1 lead in the fourth.

Willie Wilson singled leading off the Royals' sixth and was wiped out when Kevin Seitzer grounded into a double play. But Juan Beniquez walked and rode home on Tartabull's fourth homer.

In the eighth, Wilson tripled to right and Juan Beniquez hit sacrifice fly to make it 4-2.

Detroit 6 Texas 3

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Pat Sheridan hit a two-run homer and had three of Detroit's 16 hits as the Tigers won their sixth straight game, 6-3 over the Texas Rangers Monday night.

Rookie Jeff Robinson, a last-minute replacement for scheduled starter Dan Petry, allowed just one run in 5½ innings. Petry was scratched after complaining of high fever retiring four of five batters.

The Royals scored their first run without a hit. Tartabull walked leading off the second, Frank White also walked, and Tartabull came around on infield outs by Bo Jackson

Detroit took a 1-0 lead in the third inning on an unearned run when Rangers left fielder Pete Incaviglia dropped. Dave Bergman's fly-ball, allowing Billy Bean to score from second.

In the fourth, Detroit made it 3-0 as Matt Nokes led off with a double, Sheridan singled, Darrell Evans got an RBI groundout and Bean singled in a run.

Sheridan's homer, a 430-foot shot to dead center field, followed Alan Trammell's single off reliever Jeff Russell in the fifth, making it 5-0. Russell had replaced starter Jose Guzman, 2-3, who last 3½ innings.

The Rangers scored in their half of the fifth on a two-out single by Jerry Browne, a walk and Scott Fletcher's RBI single.

The Tigers added their sixth run in the seventh on Trammell's double, Nokes' single and a double play grounded. Texas scored an unearned run in the seventh, helped when Sheridan misplayed Oddie McDowell's single in the eighth field. Darrell Rogers hit a pinch-hit home run against Mike Henneman leading off the ninth for the Rangers.

Onishi, Davis continue atop District 6 all-around ratings

By The Times-News

OAKLEY — Kris Onishi of Rupert and Zane Davis of Filer solidified their season-long positions atop the all-around standings in District 6 here last weekend at the third highest high school rodeo of the spring.

Onishi won the breakaway roping, pole bending and barrel racing events at the Oakley Rodeo Arena Friday and Saturday, while Davis won the bull riding competition and finished second in saddle bronc riding and team roping.

Sherry Quigley of Castleford moved into second place in the all-around cowgirl standings, ahead of Buhl's Nevada Freeman despite Freeman's victory in the goat tying event. Deco's Mike Munsee remained in second place in the boys' all-around standings behind Davis, winning both cow cutting and barrel racing.

Other event winners at Oakley were Shawna Stutzman of Twin Falls, girls' cow cutting; Kevin Brown of Rupert, barrel racing;

Prep rodeo

Jon Peter of Filer, saddle bronc riding; Mike Poulton of Oakley, calf roping; Brandon Beddo of Oakley, steer wrestling; and Lowell and Stan Gould of Twin Falls, team roping.

Paper says grand jury may indict athletes who signed with agents

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal grand jury in Chicago will consider whether to indict student athletes, as well as sports agents, for defrauding their colleges by signing contracts before their college eligibility had expired.

The Atlanta Constitution reported. Wire and mail fraud charges also could apply to the athletes and unidentified sources quoted by The Constitution in a copyright story in its Tuesday edition, said the Internal Revenue Service is conducting its own investigation.

"Alabama basketball players Derrick McKey and Terry Cox are among the athletes who have been subpoenaed, the paper reported.

"The investigation is into the business affairs of New York agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom.

NCAA regulations forbid college athletes from entering agreements with, or accepting money from, any agent while the athlete still is eligible to play on the college level.

The grand jury's focus on the student athletes is "an unfortunate spinoff of the Norby Walters scenario, and I think the U.S. attorney is all wet," said New York attorney Richard Zaroff, who represents Pittsburgh inebriator Tony Woods.

"To try and prosecute the players in this case is without merit or consequence. Unfortunately, that's prosecutorial mentality. The U.S. attorney has been telling other attorneys, in essence, 'We're going to get these kids, too, and that's wrong,'" he said.

The Constitution said 50 to 60 athletes who have had dealings with Walters' agency have been subpoenaed to testify in Chicago. The grand jury is expected to meet once a week during the next two months, possibly longer.

Subpoenaed athletes, The Constitution reported, include football players: Woods; Rod Woodson of Purdue; Ronnie Harmon of the Buffalo Bills and formerly of Iowa; Devon Mitchell of the Detroit Lions and formerly of Iowa; Jeff Atkins, Jerry Ball, Terence Mann and Ron Morris of Southern Methodist; Everett Gay, William Harris and Edwin Simmonson of Texas; and Byron Linwood and Egypt Allen, Texas Christian and Louis Brock Jr. of Southern California.

Harmon and Woodson were subpoenaed to appear Tuesday, but their attorneys were attempting to delay the appearances. The Constitution said.

O'Maley extends lead in District 5

By The Times-News

Uh Oh.

CALL BEFORE YOU DIG.

Something as simple as that little do-it-yourself lawn project could turn out to be a real problem for you and your neighborhood. Avoid the problem, call us before you dig.

There are miles of telephone cables, as well as gas, electric, and cable TV lines buried all over. A quick call at least 48 hours before you start digging will get someone out to your place, at no charge, to mark the location of underground utility cables. This could help you avoid injury, service disruptions and the possibility of big repair charges for damaged underground utility cables.

Check the Customer Guide of your Mountain Bell White Pages Telephone Directory for the Buried Cable Location Service number.

...a state of mind produced by contemplation of a neighbor's weakness...

West was so comfortable about the outcome of today's hand that he chose a neutral and safe lead...

West was positive that he would score three trump tricks, which added to the side's other goodies...

Another diamond from dummy was ruffed with South's queen and West was stuck. Five hearts, doubtless made, for a horrible East-West result.

What should West have led to avert the disaster? His side's wealth of high cards should have told him...

Send bridge questions to The Aces, P.O. Box 2242, Twin Falls, Idaho 83435.

ANSWER: Three clubs. North's reverse promises a very strong hand (17 or more HCP)...

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Comfort: a state of mind produced by contemplation of a neighbor's uncausness.

West was so comfortable about the outcome of today's hand that he chose a neutral and safe lead. What he forgot was that when the sides bid wildly, they usually have a wide distribution to compensate for any shortage of high-card strength.

West was positive that he would score three trump tricks, which added to his side's other goods, would not a stable gain. He therefore chose his "safest" lead - the king of spades.

The play by South was quick and very painful. A club was discarded from dummy while South won his spade ace. A spade was ruffed in dummy, the high clubs were cashed, and a diamond was ruffed. A club ruff in dummy was followed by two more diamond ruffs and two more spade ruffs in dummy. South was left with Q-9 of trumps and West with A-K-10, and no tricks had been won by the defense.

West's ace of diamonds from dummy was ruffed with South's queen and West was stuck. Five hearts, doubted and made, for a horrible East-West result.

What should West have led to avoid the disaster? His side's wealth of high cards should have told him that the enemy's bidding was based on ruffing values. An instead of waiting for his "three trump tricks," he should have led trumps.

Three quick rounds of trumps would have ruined Spades early and instead of paying-off, West would have collected 800 points.

Briefly

Population will hit 5 billion

LONDON (AP) — The United Nations Monday asked people everywhere to pause July 11 and contemplate the future of Baby Five Billion, the child whose birth will push the Earth's population over 5 billion.

Demographers have chosen the unborn baby as a symbol of the world population explosion.

The State of World Population 1987, a report by the U.N. Fund for Population Activities, said Baby Five Billion is likely to be born in the developing world — where 90 percent of all children are born today.

Issuing the report in London, the fund's executive director, Dr. Nafis Sadik, stressed the need for nations to reduce population growth as they try to improve social and economic conditions.

Barbie not required to attend

LYON, France (AP) — Judge Andre Cerdini on Monday again rejected a demand by civil party lawyers to order former Lyon Gestapo chief Klaus Barbie, charged with crimes against humanity, to attend his trial.

It was the third time the judge had denied such a request since Barbie announced last Wednesday he would no longer attend the court sessions.

Monday's only witness, West German prosecutor Alfred Sireim, testified that three documents linking Barbie to the deportation of Jews appeared to be authentic.

One attorney informed the court that several civil parties in the suit had received death threats.

Lawyers representing some of the former Nazi SS lieutenant's alleged victims demanded that Cerdini use his power to bring Barbie to the courtroom by force to face the witnesses.

Vietnam's Linh visits Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Nguyen Van Linh, head of Vietnam's Communist Party, arrived in Moscow on Monday for an official visit, the Tass news agency reported.

Linh was invited to Moscow by the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party, according to Tass. The official news agency did not provide any details of Linh's agenda or the length of his stay in the Soviet Union.

Linh became the party's general secretary in December, replacing Truong Chinh, who retired along with other Vietnamese leaders after coming under heavy criticism at the party's sixth national congress.

Confusion reigns in Fiji; leader unclear

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — The governor general and the leader of last week's coup both claimed to be in charge Monday, creating confusion in the South Pacific tourist paradise that describes itself as "the way the world should be."

Governor-General Ratu Sir Penia Ganiau led off a series of contradictory announcements on the army-controlled radio station by saying Lt. Col. Siliveni Rabuka, the coup leader, agreed that Ganiau would continue to hold full executive power. Ganiau represents Queen Elizabeth II, this former British colony's formal head of state.

The governor general said he had directed Rabuka to reopen newspapers, lift censorship, withdraw soldiers not needed to keep the peace and free all detainees. Among those held are Prime Minister Timoci Bavadra and the 11 members of his Indian-dominated Cabinet, who were arrested Thursday when Rabuka, an ethnic Fijian and a group of followers stormed Parliament.

There have been conflicts before by the Fijians, who form 47 percent of the island's population of 715,000, and Indians who comprise 49 percent. The other residents are Europeans and people of mixed race.

In another development, a Fiji Indian, identified as an airport employee and claiming to have dynamite strapped to his body, boarded an Air New Zealand Boeing 747 on the tarmac at Nadi International airport outside Suva.

An airline official said the man released the more than 100 passengers, but held three crew members as hostages and demanded the plane be flown to Libya.

Another airline official said the hijacker demanded the release of Bavadra and his Cabinet.

In New Zealand, Prime Minister David Lange identified the hijacker as Ahmed Ali and he said New Zealand's Special Air Services troops were in a state of "preparations." New Zealand is about 150 miles south of Fiji.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said two American correspondents were detained by soldiers in Fiji, and that the reporters told the U.S. Embassy they were held for up to three hours and some of their notes were confiscated before they were released. He did not identify the reporters, but The Honolulu Star-Bulletin said one was its correspondent, Linda Hoesek.

Ganiau, a former deputy prime minister, said in one of his statements he could not recognize the Council of Ministers appointed by Rabuka or any of its decrees.

Soon after his statements, the same station broadcast a message from Rabuka saying Ganiau had sworn him in as chairman of the Council of Ministers, with the powers of head of government, and the other 15 council members would be sworn in Tuesday.

Seoul students battle riot police on anniversary

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Mobs of students demanding a new government battled riot police across the country Monday, and radicals hurling firebombs staged surprise attacks outside Seoul's Roman Catholic cathedral.

Thousands of students fought riot police in Seoul and other cities during protests and services marking the seventh anniversary of the uprising in the southern city of Kwangju.

The students called for immediate elections and the removal of President Chun Doo-hwan, the ex-general who played a key role in ending the bloody 1980 revolt in Kwangju.

Police said they had no details on casualties, but several police officers were seen set ablaze by firebombs. Korean news reports said more than 200 people were detained, but national police officials said they had no other figures.

Cardinal Stephen Kim, leader of the Roman Catholic Church in South Korea, warned the government it faces more rebellion if it does not clear the way for democratic reforms.

Chun's opponents are demanding changes in the constitution to permit direct presidential elections to choose a successor to the president, who says he will step down when his term expires in February. But Chun refuses to abandon the electoral college system before next summer's Seoul Olympics.

About 100 students hurled about 100 firebombs at riot police outside

Myongdong Cathedral in the heart of Seoul after the service as hundreds of shocked pedestrians watched. The students had been mingling with worshippers leaving the cathedral just before the attack, but they did not appear to have attended the service.

"Overthrow the dictatorship. By revolution," yelled the students who were thought to be extreme leftwing radicals.
