Americans add crew of Stark to lists of honored war dead

The Associated Press

With parades, prayers and the playing of taps, Americans honored their war dead Monday on a Memorial Day made freshly somber by the painful memory of the 37 sailors killed on the USS Stark.

Some of those community observances were dedicated to home-town boys killed aboard the Stark in the Persian Gulf in an Iraqi missile attack.

At Fort Campbell, Ky., a black granite monument was unveiled to honor the 248 soldiers of the 101st Airborne Division who died in a 1985 plane crash at Gander, Newfoundland, while flying home from a peacekeeping mission in the Middle East.

8 Korean cabinet ministers resign

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chun Doo-hwan on Tuesday accepted the resignations of his prime minister and seven other cabinet ministers after his entire Cabinet offered to quit because of a police torture case.

A government spokesman said Prime Minister Lee Sang-yang had resigned along with the deputy prime minister, the ministers of finance, home affairs, justice, the attorney general, the head of the National Security Planning Board and a junior law minister.

The entire 25-member Cabinet had submitted its resignation earlier in the day in an emergency meeting presided over by the prime minister, said the state-run Korea Broadcasting System (KBS) and the Yonhap News Agency.

Yonhap said Lee then went to Blue House, the presidential mansion, for a meeting with Chun.

The president decided that the remain in Cabinet members would offer in their posts, said the government spokesman, who asked not to be named in beginning with official procedure. The prime minister has very limited power in the South Korean political system, which is dominated by the president.

The Korean Broadcasting System quoted the state minister as saying before the left for his meeting with Chun that the Cabinet would have to take "moral and political" responsibilities in connection with incidents that raised "questions about the government's morality and public confidence."

There had been widespread speculation in recent days that major changes would be made in top government posts and perhaps in Chun's ruling Democratic Justice Party in an effort to quell the outcry over a possible cover-up in the death of a university student while he was undergoing police interrogation.

Radar plane data stolen

TOKYO (AP) — Technical data on a new Boeing AWACS radar plane may have been part of the information four alleged Japanese spies told the Soviet Union, the newspaper Yomiuri said Monday.

Police found copies of a manual for maintaining, inspecting and flying the plane in the home of Masateru Tachibana, 39, a military writer and former employee of a U.S. air base, the newspaper reported. Tachibana and three other men were arrested May 13 or suspicion of spying for the Soviet Union and China.

Yomiuri publishes papers in both Japanese and English, and the two versions gave different types of radar planes as the alleged target of espionage. Japanese officials said they would not confirm or deny the Yomiuri reports and U.S. military offices were closed Monday for Memorial Day.

Donovan

Donovan and his co-defendants, some of them executives of Schlavoone Construction Co., pleaded guilty to conspiracy in stealing $7.4 million in a subway construction contract from 1979 to 1984 by way of a bogus equipment rental scheme with a minority-owned subcontractor.

Donovan, flanked by his wife and his lawyer, William O. Blattman, spoke bitterly Monday of the charges brought against him, which he said from the start were politically motivated to embarrass Reagan before the election.

"The question is, should this indictment have ever been brought?" Donovan asked. "Which office do I go to get my reputation back? Who will reimburse my company for the economic jail it's been in for 2½ years?"

In Washington, Reagan voiced his pleasure with the jury's decision. "I have always known Ray Donovan as a man of integrity and I am happy to see this verdict. I have never lost confidence in him."

The president said in a statement read by White House spokesman Ben Jarrett.

Prosecutor Stephen R. Bookin, who spent 3½ years developing and presenting the case, left the courtroom without comment.

When asked for a statement, Assistant District Attorney Jay Shapiro, said: "Nothing. Not even a comment."

At a news conference Monday evening, Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola said: "We have to accept the verdict. There's got to be winners and losers and unfortunately we can't win them all."

Merola dismissed the suggestion of political motivation in the prosecution as "absolute nonsense."

"No part of the prosecution could be ascertained, but Donovan's lawyers have said they won't appeal. Donovan's executives has cost more than $13 million, as well as scores of millions more in lost business."

"It is better to spend dollars for readiness than it is to spend lives," Webb told people gathered in an amphitheater near the unknown dead of America's first World War.

At the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., told a crowd of about 3,000 people that "the best memorial we can possibly create" is to honor them from Southeast Asia would be to "make war itself obsolete."

"The next war, if it is a nuclear confrontation, could be the most obscene thing in history," said Gore, a Vietnam veteran who is a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

A Memorial Day service for the 228 victims of an American Airlines crash exactly eight years earlier, on May 25, 1979, was held in rainy weather at Chicago's O'Hare Airport.

Former prisoners of war gathered for a small ceremony in a cemetery at Las Cruces, N.M., some of them bound together by memories of the horrors of the Bataan Death March as they were surrendered to the Japanese in the Philippines in World War II.

"It was one hell of a horrible experience and I lived it for a long, long time," said Donald Sims.

In Kansas City, Mo., the Rev. Thomas Denzer recalled his service in the Pacific during World War II in a speech at the city's Liberty Memorial.

"It was only when I stand at the graves of my comrades in the steaming jungles of New Guinea and in the sticky mud of the Philippines, and I heard the plaintive wailing of boys coming off the hills that I came to realize that I am death and sacrifice comes life and freedom," Denzer said.

Americans of Japanese ancestry who served in the U.S. armed forces were honored Monday at a cemetery atop Capitol Hill in Seattle.

In New York City, ex-servicemen gathered at a Vietnam monument on Memorial Day to back a measure to establish a shelter in the city for homeless veterans.

"On Memorial Day everyone but we have to take care of the ones who are dying," said John Rowan, a member of the national board of directors of the Vietnam Veterans of America.

In West Virginia, which had the nation's highest casualty rate in the Vietnam War, a Vietnam Veterans Park was dedicated at Phillip by Sen. Jay Rockefeller. "This park will always remind us of the dangers they face and the sacrifices they endured," he said.

Fuller said. "If he is disappointed in the case, Fuller said he should have reduced because of information about death-penalty issues he has started to gather from several organizations, including the American Civil Liberties Union. The information, which is plentiful, will save him time in research."

"If we had to do it ourselves, my-gosh!" Fuller said.

Jones said that attorneys and organizations opposed to the death penalty, which is provided from legal aid to the person facing execution.

"The situation is now that in some of these cases, when we (the state) go into court there may be anywhere from five to 12 lawyers on the other side," Jones said.

Robert Fallowfield, former Blaine County public defender, represented Mark Emilio Aragon through the beginning stages of his appeal of a 6-month-old Keichum baby in April 1982.

Fallowfield said, "It took a hell of a lot of time. And, it's the citizen who pays for it."

Jerome County has already paid almost $90,000 for Charbonnet's trial, which was held in Boise because of pre-trial publicity, and part of his appeal.

Watts said the county was criticized for the amount of trial expenses, such as the cost of hotel rooms for three or four county officials. But the county economized where it could by limiting meal allowances, she said.

If the court had brought a jury from Boise to hear the case in Jerome, it would have cost much more to feed and house 14 people for several weeks, she said.

Appeal

also a cost to the judicial system in terms of deteriorating public confidence when it takes years to decide a case, Jones said.

"The public says, 'Can't these things be resolved?'," he added. "It's worth any amount of money to make sure the rights of a man facing death are fully protected."

Jones says, "In my mind Creech has had every benefit. Yet, there is always the prospect of an appellate us all. And, if that happens I think there's something dramatically wrong with the system."

Pall also thinks there something wrong — wrong with a system that puts men to death.

"We're in deep trouble anytime it becomes fashionable to think of the death penalty as a grand solution to prison overcrowding," he said. "It (the death penalty) is not fashionable. It is not nice."

Studies show that the death penalty doesn't deter crime, Pall added.

The costs of housing prisoners in maximum security for years is expensive, but it's also expensive to pay for all of the appeals required in a capital case, she said.

The ACLU branch, which is reorganizing after years of inactivity, may become involved in some of the death-sentence appeals in the state, Pall said. Members hope to establish a presence with a full-time staff person.

In neighboring Utah, Deputy State Attorney General Earl Dorius has been representing the state for more than a decade in the "Hippie Murder" case.

Two men were convicted in the killing of three people and torturing and wounding of two others in an Ogden store. The case is still on appeal.

Utah differs from other states because its law prohibits the state or a county to pay defense costs after the first stage of appeals, Dorius said. Defense of people facing death row is usually handled "gratuitously" by an organization or private attorney.

"Beyond the first appeal, in Utah we don't have any obligations," he said.

Iraq called the attack on the Stark a mistake. President Saddam Hussein publicly apologized for his officials, stressed the need for U.S. help to help end the war and said they do not want Iraqi-U.S. relations impaired.

Newton told reporters Monday that attacking the Stark "was the last thing the Iraqis wanted. The Iraqis have shown a lot of good will."

Rites held for Texas tornado victims

SARAGOSA, Texas (AP) — More than 1,000 relatives and friends of the people killed by a tornado gathered Monday in this devastated town for a rosary service, while Red Cross volunteers began distributing aid that has poured on them as far away as Canada.

The first funeral following the Friday night disaster was held Monday morning, with the burial in Pecos of a 25-year-old woman and her son, who would have been 1 year old on Sunday.

Funnel cloud approaches Saragosa, Texas Friday

Red Cross workers set up shop in the school in nearby Balmorhea, where officials canceled the last week of classes after the disaster.

The school also was to be used for Monday night's service, led by El Paso Bishop Raymond Pena, and for a mass funeral today.

Reeves County Sheriff Raul Flores ordered that no reporters or photographers be allowed inside the building.

"These people are in shock. We're just trying to find out what they need, whether it be anything from payment for the funeral to long-term help in terms of rebuilding or furnishing their homes," said Red Cross spokeswoman Susan Clowé.

The Red Cross determined that 53 homes were destroyed and about 40 were damaged when the twister tore apart the predominantly Hispanic farming community. Ms. Clowé said 90 to 100 families were affected by the disaster, which injured more than 120 people.

Gov. Bill Clements said state officials were working on an emergency declaration that could speed assistance to the tornado's victims.

"We're going to declare an emergency. We're working on that right now. We're contacting Washington," Clements said Monday from his Capitol office.

Katherine McCain, executive director of the Red Cross chapter, said donation have been made of clothing, food, and household items, as well as more than $5,000 in cash — from a child's piggy bank to pennies in a paper bag.

"The response has been tremendous not only from Oldessa and West Texas, but from all over the country," she said.

State Rep. Larry Shaw said Saragosa's residents may be so poor that even government-sponsored, low-interest loans won't be of help because they couldn't pay them back.

"But if this fits the criteria and then if there is a disaster area declared, we'll be able to get them the money to rebuild their homes and lives," he said.

While earth-moving machines were used Monday to dig graves for Tuesday's mass funeral, dozens of workers began cleaning up the 76-year-old community.

Some said they would move away.

"I don't like this place anymore. Too much has died," said Frank Ramirez, who escaped serious injury when the tornado leveled his house.

"People who established this town were pioneers... the people of Saragosa are pioneers again," said Rep. Ron Coleman, D-Texas, who was among 500 people attending an outdoor Mass on Sunday in memory of the victims at the site of what used to be Our Lady of Guadalupe Church.

"While our hearts are heavy, God is still with us," Pena said Sunday's service. "Non-believers now will question our faith in God. But for us, the words that Jesus speaks to us in the gospel today, 'I will not abandon you,' is a sign that God hears our prayers."

On either side of the bishop stood statues of Jesus and Joseph that survived with only slight damage.

"The fact that the statue of the Lord remained intact was of great comfort to the people," Pena said.

"The first thing they said to me was, 'Look, our altar is still there, the statues are still there.' I looked at the statues' survival as a sign of God's love."

Rapist moved after protest

RODEO, Calif. (AP) — Paroled rapist Lawrence Singleton, wearing a white prison vest, was removed from an apartment Monday after about 400 residents surrounded the building to protest a decision to place him there permanently.

Singleton was identified by police officers as the man taken from the rear of the building about 2:30 p.m. for a waiting guard car.

Police would not say where he was taken, but some protesters said they would remain nearby to make certain he didn't return.

The demonstration had built throughout the day after residents learned late Sunday that Singleton had been moved into the apartment building, said Contra Costa County Sheriff's Department officials.

Contemporary poets must continue focusing our language

For nearly two hundred years, the American poet has twisted the lens of our language as focused on images that have become America.

His work is not different than other artists and innovators. The poet creates with what is available to him: his language, his heritage, his values, his place in space and time, and his imagination:

*There Was A Time
when a snapping twig would cause us to cock and ear
for hearing things to aim for the shadow
in the bull's-eye,
to take a hint.*

Historically, American poets have been enraptured by the same things that have bemused others: freedom, individualism,

Retrospect and Prospect

Today:
William Studebaker

land and progress. Poets as diverse as Whitman and Longfellow, Dickinson and Crane, Eliot and Guest share these. These are the ways formed a cultural conduit through which American poets have transmitted their images.

Among America's poets, none have addressed this country more directly than Walt Whitman. From his vantage, he could "Hear America singing." "His mechanics, carpenters, masons, boatmen, shoemakers, wood-cutters, wires, mothers: "Each singing what belongs to him or her and to none else."

Whitman, like the elder poet Emerson, imagined and prophesied the building of a great country, a nation which "The people" would construct, a "land of migrations." From the many, the individual would take strength and with that strength build better men and women.

However, not Whitman nor any of the other, more or less, historical poets lived with the ugly monster Schindler Doom: A monster that can be likened to a Nordic Giant of Frost who will one day, against all goodness, destroy the world. The Nordic world is created out of the Giant, and it will be destroyed of its own substance. As Beowulf knew, only the heroic stand between man and his doom. America's heroic age is yet to come. America has yet to confront the Giant of its own creation.

As even now we should begin to carry all the stones back to the river's mouth, to keep a hand on the arm where it can flutter (a natural wonder to any child who put the earth back in its place.

Contemporary poets must find new ways to focus language, so our ears will hear. They must find new images that blend our heritage and shape our responsibilities, so we will see clearly. American poets must see this "world" in its time, watch the earthrise above the plain of cosmic reality, and preserve its blue beauty.

As even now we should begin to keep the shores of the universe a quiet place, to let the feed-down where they might want to go, to imagine a public earth where a child could say, as if he knew, "There was a time..."

William Studebaker, Twin Falls, is a poet who teaches literature and mythology at the College of Southern Idaho. His article, written from a poet's perspective, is the third in a series in The Times-News this week on America's past and future by Magic Valley writers.

Now is the time to remain patient

WASHINGTON — The admission dates to at least 1948 in the etymology of English slang, but it applies with contemporary meaning to the attack on the USS Stark: Let us not go off half-cocked.

As a Navy board of inquiry pursues its investigation, we must remember things we know are far outnumbered by the things we do not know. We know that at least 37 members of the Stark's crew died in the fires and explosions that racked the frigate a little after 10 o'clock on the night of May 17. We know, because the Iraqi government has admitted it, that the fatal missile (or missiles) came from an Iraqi fighter plane. We know that the Stark was in international waters well south of the line that had been drawn across the Persian Gulf to confine hostilities. We know that the Stark did not return fire.

Beyond those elementary facts, we know little. Was the attack intended to identify the Stark for what it was? What, precisely, were the "rules of engagement" under which the Stark was steaming? Pentagon spokesmen insist that the frigate had full authority to fire once it knew it was being fired upon, but it would surprise no one familiar with Navy regulations to learn that full authority is not always full authority. Since the days of Lord Nelson, orders from an admiralty have been characterized by ambiguity. It is a fair surmise that ship captains in zones of belligerence are instructed to protect themselves on the one hand, but not to create international incidents on the other.

We know that the Stark had defensive armaments. Why were these not employed? In midweek we heard tentative explanations, and these seem plausible. The frigate's officers had no reason to anticipate that U.S. ships in the Gulf often are "locked on" by Iraqi or Iranian aircraft. As a safety precaution, the ship's awesome Gatling guns normally are kept in an "off" mode. It takes several minutes for them to be "acquired." The attack was at night and only a few seconds elapsed between the firing and the impact. Before the Stark's captain, Cmdr. Glenn R. Brindell, is pilloried, let us wait upon the evidence.

The board of inquiry will be headed by Adm. Grant Sharp. I met the admiral during a visit to the Sixth Fleet in January and was much impressed by him. He is a seagulling man, soft-spoken, but with steel in his spine. He will be looking for facts, not excuses.

The board's investigation will take time; it cannot be hurried. Meanwhile, the attack may serve a useful purpose. It reminds us anew of the sacrificial heroism of those who serve in the U.S. Navy, whether in peace or in war. The 37 men who died in the suffocating smoke and flames were out there in the Persian Gulf, far from their loved ones, doing their lonely duty in the long tradition of men who man ships of the line.

It is nauseating to hear pipsqueak voices on Capitol Hill whining that the United States has no business patrolling the Persian Gulf. Even in an age when technology threatens to overwhelm vessels that cruise at 35 knots, a naval presence is vital to our national interest. The sea lanes of the world must be kept open for the commerce of the world, and these lanes cannot be kept open by mooring our ships in snug harbors at home.

The attack on the Stark coincided with a decision by the administration to put U.S. flags on 11 Kuwait oil tankers. It will be several weeks before the decision can be put into effect. In this period Congress has every right to examine the wisdom of this protective move. Here, again, let us not go off half-cocked. Plausible arguments support the decision. Will this "flagging" heighten the risk of unacceptable involvement? We hear opinions pro and con. It is a time for listening. At the very least, it seems to me, the administration should insist that our allies, notably Japan, France and Great Britain, should share the risk by a naval presence of their own. After all, they are the ones that benefit from Middle Eastern oil.

The temptation to vent undiluted outrage is strong. The Stark had done nothing to provoke this attack. Our men are dead. But before we raise the emotional hammer to full-cock, let us draw a long breath. If retaliation against Iraq is justified, suitable punishment can be imposed in time.

James J. Kilpatrick writes his column, "A Conservative View," from Washington.

Next recession may hit Japan hardest

Today's economic conditions are similar to those of the late 1920s that ushered in the Great Depression.

Then just as now, pervasive surpluses spurred fierce international competition, with many countries resorting to protectionism. International debt problems emerged and weak prices and outright deflation plagued commodity markets.

In addition, stocks were about as buoyant then as they have been in the 1980s. Even the insider trading scandals of the two eras have much in common.

The most striking parallel, however, may be between the economic position of the United States in the late 1920s and that of Japan today. In many ways, Japan is where the United States was 60 years ago, an emerging world economic power experiencing rapid growth amid a stagnant global economy.

This boom, however, has its drawbacks: Even though Japan is well off now, its rapid growth is creating internal imbalances and distortions that may turn its next recession into a disaster similar to that of the United States in the 1920s. The United States, on the other hand, now is more like Great Britain in the 1920s and 1930s. After losing its world dominance after World War I, Britain suffered from slow growth, industrial overcapacity and high unemployment. Still, Britain did not take as big a fall as the United States during the depression, so if history repeats itself, this country's decline likewise might not be as severe in the next economic downturn.

Consider the historical similarities: Between the world wars, the United States blossomed into a world economic leader.

U.S. unemployment averaged only 3.7 percent between 1922 and 1929 and gross national product grew almost 40 percent. The trade surplus amounted to over 1 percent of GNP, and the United States became a net international lender.

Money flowed into U.S. securities; stock prices rose 497 percent from 1921 to 1929. Meanwhile, the pound was overvalued because Britain went back to the prewar gold standard, and to prevent a capital flight to the United States, the U.S. Federal Reserve artificially held down interest rates. This encouraged stock investment at the expense of bonds, and made borrowing to speculate in stocks attractive.

A. Gary Shilling

Then things came unglued. The Dow fell 89 percent between 1929 and 1932, the consumer price index declined 24 percent between 1929 and 1933 and GNP was off 25 percent. The ratio of the value of stocks on the New York Stock Exchange to GNP was cut in half between 1929 and 1931, from 70 percent to 35 percent.

In Britain, where speculation had been considerably less rampant and the market rise during the 1920s was only one-sixth of Wall Street's, the crash was not as severe.

Now America is the waning economic power and the waxing one is Japan. The United States has long been the high-cost producer in many industries, but this fact remained hidden during the shortages of the 1970s. Then the world took a turn to surpluses and competition intensified. The desire to consume and inability to compete led to huge U.S. trade deficits that by 1986 reached 3.5 percent of GNP.

To finance our trade gap, we had to borrow, becoming last year a net international debtor for the first time since World War I. Unemployment remains above 6 percent, despite 4½ years of expansion and fiscal stimulus requiring annual budget deficits that have exceeded $200 billion.

Like the isolationist United States between the two world wars, Japan appears reluctant to accept the role of a dominant economic power. But even in a world of excess supply, Japan has amassed a phenomenal $100 billion trade surplus in the fiscal year ended March 31, up from $53 billion a year before.

The Japanese stock market has been extremely bullish. In a decade, Tokyo's share of world stock market trading has risen from 14 percent to 36 percent, while Wall Street's has fallen from 61 percent to 36 percent. Just as the United States held down its interest rates to support the pound in the 1920s, now Japan is keeping interest rates low to support the yen. Something new is being invested in that nation's stocks.

The environment is ideal for 1920s-style speculation, which has been rampant. The ratio of stock market value to GNP in Japan is 130 percent, compared to 60 percent in the United States. Nippon Telegraph & Telephone, for example, has a price-to-earnings ratio of more than 250 and market value exceeding that of the entire West German stock market.

Signs of trouble for the Japanese economy have surfaced, however. In the years following World War II, Japan was able to develop rapidly by imitating an evolving Western technology and becoming a low-cost producer of an increasingly sophisticated array of exports. But now the newly industrialized countries are following its footsteps.

Their success has been enviable: In 1970, Korea, Taiwan, Hong Kong, Singapore, Brazil and Mexico accounted for just 4 percent of global exports; today they account for 10 percent, more than Japan does.

Thus far, Japan has been able to find even more sophisticated goods to stay ahead of the newly industrialized countries and maintain its export-led growth. Whether it can continue to do so isn't clear.

Moreover, the strong yen and protectionism are forcing many Japanese companies to produce abroad — in the newly industrialized countries, Europe and North America. By the year 2000, Japan's largest manufacturers are expected to produce about 20 percent of their output abroad, compared to 3.4 percent in 1982.

Unemployment already has hit the postwar high of 3 percent. If the "hidden jobless" — those who would be out of jobs if they didn't have guaranteed lifetime employment — are taken into account, the rate certainly would be much higher. How long can these surplus workers be assigned to trim the hedge around the factory building?

The next recession, therefore, may bring the Japanese economy down with a crash that will be spearheaded by the same sort of overheated stock market the United States experienced before the Great Depression. In the United States this time, the recession will be considerably milder, not because we are in an intrinsically stronger position, but because our recent economic gains have been far smaller than Japan's, and the speculation in our markets has been far less rabid.

Rigorous running may harm your hormones, tipsheet says

BOSTON — Let me see if I've got it straight now. My neighborhood health tipsheet, the New England Journal of Medicine, reports this week that rigorous running may be bad for the hormones.

Go for the really long distance and it isn't just the old shins that may sprain. You could end up infertile, with thin bones and a lousy immune system. But when it happens, or so I'm told, your heart will be in great shape.

The week before, the Journal warned that a mere three drinks a week could increase the risk of breast cancer. But the same few pops, or so I've read, are supposed to lower the cholesterol level.

I'm not sure whether to be grateful for these accumulated pieces of knowledge or not. What have I learned? Run too little and die young of a heart attack? Run too much and die, without offspring, of some bizarre infection? Drink your way to breast cancer? Abstain all the way to the coronary unit?

Ellen Goodman

I think it has become impossible for Americans to keep their health IQ updated. We are all suffering from an information glut, research overload. But worse than that, we have accumulated a mind boggling, confusing and contradictory health advice.

Sugar, we have been told, causes cavities, but saccharin may cause cancer and aspartame may cause seizures. The sun apparently gives you vitamin D and also wrinkles. Stay out of the summer rays and you get depressed, stay in and you get skin cancer. Coffee has been on and off the list of endangering species. People now wake up at 4 a.m. wondering whether their decal was water-processed. We have been told to stop eating beef and start eating fish, but also watch out for mercury poisoning.

(Are you running with me? Not too far, I hope, or your hormones will get you.) The more there is of it, the better it is for you, except for olive oil which is good for you, except that it adds calories which are bad for you. Everybody says it's healthier to be thin than fat, but it's important to have some extra pounds to color you get sick.

Lesing is bad for you, except that cutting down too calories slows down the metabolism that burns the calories. Cheese, by the way, is high in calcium but also high in fat. If you are going to eat the stuff you need, then you have to work it off. This leads directly to aerobics, which trims the waist line and wrecks the knees.

The way I read it, what's good for the bones is probably bad for the arteries.

What's good for the heart is probably bad for the back. And just reading this news raises everybody's stress level, which is dangerous in itself and must be reduced by exercise. But not too much exercise or you'll become infertile, and if you don't have any children you'll increase your risk of breast cancer.

This cacophony of reports from researchers has turned personal health into a modern soap opera. ("General Outpatient?" "As the Body Turns?") Something new is coming up every week. It's enough to make anyone long for the days of the four basic food groups.

This is not just the result of a research boom. It's an offshoot of living in the era of specialities. The hip bone may be connected to the thigh bone, but not in the lab. Many of the researchers who deal with organs as near as the liver or kidney are fairly detached from each other.

There's a tendency to study single diseases and small body parts instead of lives. The group concerned with the maintenance of the lungs doesn't always "do" ankles and the cancer-prevention team isn't into cardiovascular diseases.

As the last generalists, we, the owners of whole bodies, are supposed to think of ourselves as something more than the sum of parts and potential diseases to be taken care of with separate regimens. A bit of fiber to stave off colon cancer, calcium to keep the bones straight and don't forget the dental floss.

Our running research team at least prescribes a compromise: moderation; something between the lifestyle of a couch potato and that of a marathoner. But somewhere out there you can count on it, there is a researcher deep in a lab about to prove conclusively that moderation is absolutely hazardous to your health.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

Falwell pleads for funds

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell on Monday intensified his plea for more money, saying his PTL television ministry fell short of its weekend fund-raising goal of $2 million and will go out of business unless it gets at least $3.2 million by Friday.

"This is not crying wolf," the fundamentalist minister told viewers of the ministry's "PTL Club" television program. "This is getting the truth."

The PTL ministry, which includes a cable television network and the 2,300-acre Heritage USA Christian vacation park, needs $7 million by May 31 and $25 million in less than 90 days to survive, Falwell said last week.

About $3.5 million in contributions poured in the week after the first appeal, but the ministry's goal of adding $2 million more over the weekend from an auction and income from Heritage USA was not met, Falwell said. The auction raised about $200,000, he said.

The $3.5 million was a "great breakthrough," but at least $3.2 million and possibly as much as $4 million is needed to keep PTL on the air, pay the staff and avoid lawsuits by paying on past due bills, Falwell said.

War Powers Act arguments erupt anew

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than three years ago, Secretary of State George P. Shultz told Congress the War Powers Act could prevent the administration from doing "sensible things" to protect U.S. interests in the Persian Gulf.

(Now, members of Congress are saying the act should be invoked to limit presidential authority to put Kuwait tankers under the U.S. flag and to take other measures in the wake of an Iraqi attack that killed 37 American sailors.)

The disagreement is the latest of many over the War Powers Act since it was enacted over the veto of then-President Richard M. Nixon on Nov. 7, 1973, as an outgrowth of the undeclared U.S. war in Vietnam.

Supporters of the legislation have argued that Nixon and presidents since him have been exercising powers that were intended to belong only to Congress. Nixon argued that the act usurped presidential authority, and subsequent presidents have agreed with him.

The act requires the president to notify Congress within 48 hours any time he sends combat troops into a foreign country or "substantially enlarges" the number of American troops already there. He must give progress reports to Congress every six months.

If the troops are sent into hostilities, or into "situations where imminent involvement in hostilities is clearly indicated," they must be withdrawn after 60 days, or in some circumstances 90 days, unless Congress declares war or authorizes them to remain.

The reporting provisions of the law were invoked partially in President Gerald R. Ford's report on his handling of the Cambodian seizure of the U.S. merchant ship Mayaguez. In President Jimmy Carter's report on the failed Iranian hostage rescue attempt and in President Reagan's two reports on the dispatch of Marines to Lebanon.

In the Lebanon case, Congress passed a resolution in 1983 which invoked the act and authorized the Marines to remain in Lebanon until early 1985. The Marines were withdrawn in February 1984, however, after American forces in Lebanon had suffered 266 fatalities.

Shultz argued at the time that the restrictions of the act encouraged Syria to sit tight and wait for the administration to withdraw American Marines, without having to pull its own forces out of Lebanon.

In testimony before a Senate Appropriations subcommittee on March 1, 1983, Shultz said the act could inhibit the use of American military force in the event the Iran-Iraq war threatened vital American interests.

He said the legislation prevented the administration from doing "sensible things."

Shultz's words have again become timely because of events surrounding the May 17 Iraqi missile attack on the USS Stark in the Persian Gulf.

On May 18, Reagan ordered U.S. forces in the Gulf to fire at Iranian or Iraqi warplanes approaching "in a pattern which indicates hostile intent."

The White House announcement of the decision, which followed a meeting of the National Security Council Planning Group, said it had been decided that notification under the War Powers Act was not required.

Officials questioning Pole

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Officials are questioning a 31-year-old Polish national who jumped from a Niagara Falls tour boat and swam to the American shore and may divulge more information about him in a few days, authorities said Monday.

"At his request no information on his identity or his situation is being released," said Benedict J. Ferro, Buffalo district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Ferro said the man was in protective custody. He refused to comment on reports the man is a Polish soldier who has asked for political asylum.

The man boarded the Maid of the Mist Boat on the Canadian side of the Niagara River on Saturday afternoon. When the boat reached the United States side of the river, he jumped overboard, swam ashore and was taken into custody.

What's what

CHOPPING TECHNIQUES

You know how a logger with an axe delivers alternate blows, first left, then right, then left? A woodpecker does that, too.

L.A.W. is a small society of British barristers who don't like to wear those a hairpieces required of counsors by tradition in England's courts. The name stands for "Lawyers Against Wigs."

Near my place is a butcher shop and I don't know whether the butcher can't spell or can. Over a tray of deep red steaks is a sign: "Filly Mignon." What do you think?

Most drunk drivers are men in their 30s.

DREAD OF DENTIST

What do you dread most about going to the dentist? Pollsters asked a sampling of patients. The majority poitized: the sound of the drill and the size of the bill. Or words to that effect. Earlier surveys indicated the dentists themselves thought the needle was what their patients most feared.

Men are far more reluctant than women — generally, generally — to discuss their first sexual experiences. That, according to the counsors.

Pacific plot picked up an albatross on Midway and flew it 4,900 miles before turning it loose. Took that bird 32 days to fly home. But it did that.

Quick, what's the oldest town in Ohio? One founded in 1788, Marietta.

NEAR-SIGHTED

A sampling of 17,000 students is plenty big enough to give testers accurate data. That's how many the testers checked in Great Britain — to learn that near-sighted youngsters are at least a year ahead of students generally. The bespectacled caricature of the nerd is accurate, evidently. Kids who wear glasses appear to be smarter.

Q. At what age do most career military people retire?
A. Officers, 43. Enlisted, 39. These are averages.

Italians wrote the first novels.

Q. What was the first Hollywood movie to use dirty words?
A. "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf."

GENERAL TENDENCIES: It's a very good day to quietly think in terms of whatever obligations of a practical nature you have. Get rid of them through a conscientious endeavor.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Although you like to get into creative affairs it is better to handle whatever is of a practical nature.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You may feel hemmed in by the situation around you, but a little ingenuity can free you from this condition.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't ask favors of others to day or you could get into troublesome arguments.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Don't feel put off by influential people. Realize that bigwigs have problems worse than your own.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You have several avenues to follow that will bring you greater popularity, but choose the wisest.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Don't take any risks with you (male or you can lose much of the harmony that has been so carefully built up).

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Outside partners are not in the mood to do what you would like, so don't call them today.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Although your work may seem boring, keep at it. Take any health treatments you may need.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Instead of planning recreations, finish those practical tasks that have to be completed now.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You have to have more patience and consideration at home now, so don't lose your patience.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Much more care than usual has to be exercised in motion. Be careful of any errors in your reports.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY he or she will be educated and take much time at doing everything, so it would be wise to teach this one to be faster in order to keep up with others. Your progeny could do well along business lines and should have the education slanted this way.

American hero of World War I honored in French village

CHATTEL-CHEHERY, France (AP) — Relatives and admirers of Sgt. Alvin Cullum York, the most decorated American hero of World War I, gathered in this tiny village on Memorial Day to dedicate a simple monument to the man whose pacifist beliefs almost kept him out of the war.

The monument was dedicated in bright sunshine during a 10-minute ceremony Monday attended by a small group from Tennessee and about 200 people from Chatel-Chehery and other villages in this region about 150 miles east of Paris.

On Oct. 8, 1918, in the midst of fierce fighting in the Argonne Forest, York, a sharpshooter from the Tennessee backwoods, singlehandedly silenced a German position of 25 machine guns. He killed 25 enemy soldiers and, with the help of his squad, captured 132.

"What you did was the greatest thing accomplished by any private soldier of all the armies of Europe," French Marshal Ferdinand Foch told York when he awarded him the Croix de Guerre.

That comment was inscribed on the monument of polished granite and bronze that now rests in front of the town hall of Chatel-Chehery. Like York's Tennessee hometown of Pall Mall, the village of 180 people near Verdun is too small to make it onto many maps.

York was a Christian fundamentalist. When he was drafted, he registered as a conscientious objector and was offered non-combat duty.

But his commanding officer told him to go home for a few days and reconsider his status. York did, and he decided he ought to do whatever he could to help get the war over.

"He thought that was the most Christian thing he could do," said Russell Hippe, the chairman of the Tennessee Historical Commission. "He was a peaceful person. He was a gentleman."

U.S. Ambassador Joe M. Rogers, who spent Sunday and Monday

ing military cemeteries and battle sites, said the memory of York and the sacrifice of thousands of other American soldiers is still vivid in France.

"If any American ever thought that the French have forgotten what we did in World War I and World War II, they should have been with me the last few days," Rodgers said.

York's son, Andrew Jackson York, 72, and his grandson, Gerald York, of Huntsville, Ala., an army major, represented the family at the dedication.

York was by all accounts a modest man, shunning offers of commercial endorsements that would have made him rich. After the war, he settled down to a life of blacksmithing, hog farming and running a grist mill. He died in 1964.

His exploits were recalled in a 1941 film starring Gary Cooper. The Tennessee Historical Commission decided to put up the monument in Chatel-Chehery, 100 years after his birth, to ensure that his legacy never fades from memory.

"He had all the attributes of a real modern weapons like poison gas and machine guns. For someone, to knock-out a machine-gun nest with a pistol and a five-shot rifle was really a symbol of the individual standing up to the machine age," said Hippe. "It showed that personal skill and courage could still make a mark."

Former missionary recounts his experiences as a hostage

WASHINGTON (AP) — As a hostage in Lebanon for 16 months, the Rev. Benjamin Weir endured deprivation and humiliation of a sort that few people experience.

Heid in isolation for most of the time, he was forced to wear a ski mask when talking to his Arab-speaking guards. He was taped like a mummy, carted around in a closed fire well, denied adequate time in the bathroom and confined to a building loaded with explosives.

In a new book titled "Hostage Bound, Hostage Free," Weir, 63, gives fresh, chilling details about his captivity and how he survived until his release in September 1985.

Weir's wife, Carol, was his co-author, telling how she and her children — with the help of the Presbyterian Church — traveled around the Middle East and the United States trying to secure her husband's release.

REV. BENJAMIN WEIR
Book skirts central issue

The 183-page book was published by the Philadelphia-based Westminster Press, which is affiliated with the Presbyterian Church. The book has a strong religious flavor, with long passages on the couple's spiritual faith and their reliance on the Bible.

Before Weir's captivity, he spent more than 30 years as a missionary in Lebanon where he learned to speak Arabic and developed an understanding for the complexities of the Middle East.

While the book has a wealth of information about the hostages and the conditions in which they were held, it never deals with a central issue: the Reagan administration's decision to sell weapons to Iran.

American officials have said that Weir was freed by his two Iranian captors in Lebanon after the United States allowed military equipment to be sold to Tehran.

Weir has said publicly that he opposes weapons sales to Iran, but he instead, he included a November 1986 telegram from President Reagan which said, "Let me assure you that no ransom was paid for your release."

Weir's story about daily life in captivity is riveting.

For the last several weeks as a hostage, Weir was kept in a room with four other American hostages, two of whom — Thomas Sutherland, dean of agriculture at the American University in Beirut and Terry Anderson, The Associated Press' Middle East correspondent — are still confined.

"A total of eight Americans are categorized as hostages now, but six of them have been seized since Weir's release."

"We spent considerable time exercising together. We even took imaginary trips," Weir wrote, recounting how he and his wife amused themselves. Father Lawrence Jenco, another former hostage, would take the group on a tour through Rome. Sutherland would return to his native Scotland and Anderson would travel to Japan, a country where he once lived.

The group spent August 1985 in a room in the basement of a building that shook from repeated explosions nearby, Weir said. Serious fighting was usually going on.

Since there was no air conditioning, ties, wash clothes, take a shower and clean dishes. During one of his moves, Weir was denied access to a toilet for eight hours.

He was also taped with heavy plastic from head to foot on the first day of his kidnapping on May 8, 1984, and on another occasion. "My arms were taped to my sides, and the tape was wound around my head, allowing just enough space for me to breathe through my nose," he wrote.

Weir said his release came as a surprise. In early September, the head guard, a man named Haj, said one hostage might be freed. The group of hostages decided that Anderson or Jenco should be the first to be released.

But the guards picked Weir.

The captors allowed the men to have a small fan. But when the electricity failed, the men were soon sitting in pools of sweat.

The guards would slip meals through a small space between the door and the floor, forcing one of the hostages to get on hands and knees to retrieve it. "The posture almost seemed like begging for food," Weir wrote.

Each hostage was given 10 minutes daily to use the toilet facilities.

Remains of sailors from Stark to arrive in U.S.

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (AP) — A C-141 transport plane carrying the remains of 36 sailors killed in the Iraqi attack on the USS Stark is expected to land today at this air base, site of the largest mortuary east of the Mississippi.

The plane is expected to touch down about 6 a.m. MDT on a flight from the Rhein-Main Air Base in West Germany, said Lt. Cmdr. John Woodhouse, a Dover Air Force Base spokesman.

Thirty-seven sailors were killed in the May 17 attack on the Stark in the Persian Gulf. The body of one victim was not recovered.

Base personnel were setting up chairs and platforms Monday in a giant hangar, known as Memorial Hall, for the arrival of the flag-draped coffins of the Stark victims.

The hangar will be the site of an approximately 20-minute ceremony this afternoon, Woodhouse said.

The ceremony will include the playing of the National Anthem, an invocation, a benediction, hymns sung from a speaker, Woodhouse said.

Base officials said Monday they were not yet sure who would be attending the ceremony.

Four seven-member teams of pallbearers, members of Navy honor guards from Washington, are scheduled to begin carrying the coffins into the hangar two hours after the plane lands here, Woodhouse said.

Throng on bridge flattened out arch

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — So many people jammed onto the Golden Gate Bridge for its 50th anniversary party that worried engineers did rapid calculations to make sure the span could support the weight, officials said Monday.

"The bridge flattened out, its whole arch disappeared," said Gary Giacomini, president of the bridge district board. "The bridge had the greatest load factor in its 50-year life."

"Imagine, the Golden Gate Bridge flattened out by the weight of human beings!"

Officials estimated 250,000 crowded onto the bridge deck Sunday morning for a walk across the span. More than 500,000 others—packed—the bridge—approaches, but were denied access by concerned authorities.

Giacomini said officials regretted that so many were turned away, but added, "In a way, I'm grateful because if they had gotten out there, maybe the bridge would have fallen down."

More than a million people participated in the all-day, $3 million celebration, which culminated with a spectacular fireworks show and the lighting of the bridge's 746-foot art deco towers.

Crowds exceeded official expectations at every event.

It was at midspan where the weight of the crowd flattened out the normal arch in the bridge deck.

Many who had come miles to the bridge only to be turned away were upset and decided to skip the rest of the events and go home.

Vets compare Stark attack to Pearl Harbor

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The traditional Memorial Day ceremony at Sunset Memorial Park Monday had a special meaning for two survivors of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. Eight days earlier an Iraqi fighter, without warning, attacked the frigate USS Stark in the Persian Gulf and killed 37 U.S. soldiers. "Almost 42 years before Monday's ceremony, Magic Valley residents Richard Hansing and Leroy Kohntopp were on battleships during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. The Stark incident was still on the minds of those attending the Memorial Day service in Twin Falls Monday. "Absolutely unnecessary," was how the Rev. W.W. "Jim" Winkle, who spoke at the Twin Falls ceremony, described the attack on the Stark. Over the noise of traffic on nearby Kimberly Road, he said, "Our lives have been saddened in the last two weeks when 37 of our countrymen were killed." Winkle said, "They're all heroes because they gave their lives in service of our country." Hansing, Kohntopp and Eldon Ulrich represented the Pearl Harbor Survivors at the ceremony. The Pearl Harbor Survivors is an organization with 16 Magic Valley members and 62 in the state. Hansing, who was on the battleship USS Nevada in his standard-issue, white tropical shorts when the Pearl Harbor battle began, said the two attacks were similar because there was no warning to U.S. ships in either case. And he said there were lessons to be learned from both. "That's a war zone — they've got to be more alert," he said about the Persian Gulf. "We can't let that happen again." "We trust people too much," he said. Leroy Kohntopp, who spent the duration of the Pearl Harbor attack on the battleship USS Maryland, agreed with Hansing. Hansing said the Stark incident, in addition to having similarities to Pearl Harbor, was like the bombing of the Marine bases in Beirut a few years back.

Kohntopp said the United States needs to be more prepared for an alert in the Persian Gulf. "What's the Boy Scout motto?" he asked. "Be prepared," answered Hansing. But Kohntopp didn't lay the blame on the enlisted men in control of the Stark. "As enlisted men, we just take orders," he said. "The men in control have to be prepared — whether it's the fleet commander or the civilians in the White House." "They're going to have to learn the hard way, I guess," Hansing said. "Lessons learned sometimes have to be relearned," Kohntopp said. He said the Stark situation is like teaching lessons to children or students. "We teach them and re-teach them," he said. "The deaths from the attack on the Stark were unnecessary," Winkle said, because "Someone said 'I don't know what that ship was.'" He said we must stand up and be counted as Americans and pay tribute to those "who sealed their patriotic testimony in blood." The Twin Falls service had participants from the American Legion, the Pearl Harbor Survivors, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans and the Vietnam Veterans. The Wendell American Legion and the Puer American Legion also sponsored services with the American Legion. Commander Dee Collins speaking in Wendell.

Coalition joins fray in debate

Seeks wider voice in wilderness plan

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A new organization representing off-road vehicle enthusiasts, snow-mobilers and power boaters vows to become a player in the Idaho wilderness debate, says its executive director. "We want all the players to be at the table, not just environmentalists and the timber industry," says Clark L. Collins, a Pocatello electrician. Collins says the organization formed this spring has dues-paying members all over the West and its newsletter circulates to 15,000 people.

"We are concerned about the direction land management policy is taking. We want to maintain access to public lands," says Collins. The wilderness debate centers on how much acreage and what areas will be included in a proposal to Congress which makes the wilderness designation. Motorized equipment and man's interference with the environment is banned in a designated wilderness area.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, sponsored a wilderness bill in 1984 calling for 526,064 more acres of wilderness out of 8 million acres of roadless areas in the state. But conservationists said this was not enough and when negotiations broke down they were seeking 1.2 to 1.5 million acres. Now there are moves to introduce a new wilderness bill in Congress and last March Rep. Peter Kostmeyer, D-Pa., proposed a 39 million acre Idaho wilderness bill.

Collins says the environmentalists are concerned about Gov. Cecil Andrus coming up with a wilderness proposal that they won't like. "Maybe they are overestimating their ability. Andrus has clout," he says. The Blue Ribbon Coalition wants no more wilderness but recognizes that realistically they need to be more wildness. "We want to make sure everyone's interest is represented," he said.

Collins says environmental organizations have built up a machinery that they need to justify their existence. "They are not working with people," he says. Collins says Blue Ribbon Coalition is a grassroots organization and the state's resource industries get involved in it after hearing his comments. "They (the resource industry) got involved because we can co-exist with industry," Collins says. He says the Idaho Cattle Association and the Idaho Intermountain Forest Association are members of the coalition.

Quilting together

Quilt making is usually an indoor activity, but one cannot blame Edna Loder, left, and Fern Greenhagen for taking their labor outside one sunny afternoon recently. They moved outdoors to take advantage of the warm conditions that were then prevailing. The two friends put the ties in a quilt in front of Loder's house on Eighth Avenue East in Twin Falls.

CASTLEFORD — The Castleford School Board passed a new grading policy at its meeting last week. The old scale started at 94-100 for an A and 85-93 for a B. The board changed its policy after conducting a survey of both parents and teachers. Several parents were present at the meeting. "Parents like the high standards," said Superintendent Hon Erickson, "but they don't want to penalize the students in the competition for scholarships." Erickson said many parents wish the old scale would set a grading scale that would make all districts the same. The new grading system will go into effect next year. Also at the meeting, Erickson presented the third revision of next year's budget to the board. The revised budget includes all requests

Adds flexibility, expands curriculum

Shoshone studies satellite television

SHOSHONE — Use of educational satellite television to expand the curriculum and add flexibility to course offerings is being considered by the Shoshone School District. The district purchased and installed a satellite receiver with federal grant funds earlier this year. Superintendent Wayne Waddoups told the School Board recently that there are several ways to use the system. He asked the board to consider subscribing to an educational broadcasting service that offers foreign language, advanced math and English classes that could be used for credit toward graduation. Such a service would also offer teacher-in-service programs.

"If we can get such a program for less than the cost of a teacher's salary, it will allow us to offer courses like Spanish and pre-calculus that are not available in the curriculum now," Waddoups said. He said that students would be able to take the course from videotapes during any class period of the day, with a telephone link to the instructor for questions and assistance. This way students who could not fit Spanish into their schedule during the single hour it was offered could still take the class. Waddoups said. He said that the satellite program would also make it possible to offer advanced courses to more challenging classes and subjects. The board authorized Waddoups to investigate the cost and availability of such programs.

In other business Tuesday, Board Chairman Donna Hubbard cast the tie-breaking vote to set the 1987-88 school calendar. Trustees Pat O'Malley and Rusty Tewes objected to a two-week vacation at Christmas and a half week vacation for spring break. O'Malley asked if the vacation periods could not be shortened to allow school to start later than August 24 and end before Memorial Day in May. Waddoups agreed the Christmas vacation was long, but said since Christmas comes on Friday it was difficult to do it differently. He said if students are in school Monday and Tuesday of Christmas week "it's really just wasted time." Principal Jess Kennison said the week-long spring break makes it possible for the high school students to participate in a tour of New York and Washington, D.C., a program he started this year. While he agreed not all students are able to take the trip, it does offer the opportunity. Hubbard said she felt the schedule must reflect what is best "educationally" for the students and voted in favor of the schedule. School will begin August 24 and end the Friday before Memorial Day, with two days off for Thanksgiving, two weeks at Christmas and a week for spring break.

Remains of sailors from Stark to arrive in U.S.

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (AP) — A C-141 transport plane carrying the remains of 36 sailors killed in the Iraqi attack on the USS Stark is expected to land today at this base, site of the largest mortuary east of the Mississippi.

The plane is expected to touch down about 6 a.m. MDT on a flight from the Rhein-Main Air Base in West Germany, said Lt. Cmdr. John Woodhouse, a Dover Air Force Base spokesman.

Thirty-seven sailors were killed in the May 17 attack on the Stark in the Persian Gulf. The body of one victim was not recovered.

Base personnel were setting up chairs and platforms Monday in a giant hangar, known as Memorial Hall, for the arrival of the flag-draped coffins of the Stark victims. The hangar will be the site of an approximately 20-minute ceremony this afternoon, Woodhouse said.

The ceremony will include the playing of the National Anthem, an invocation, a benediction, hymns and remarks from a speaker, Woodhouse said.

Base officials said Monday they were not yet sure who would be attending the ceremony.

Four seven-member teams of pallbearers, members of Navy honor guards from Washington, are scheduled to begin carrying the coffins into the hangar two hours after the plane lands here, Woodhouse said.

Throng on bridge flattened out arch

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — So many people jammed onto the Golden Gate Bridge for its 50th anniversary party that worried engineers did rapid calculations to make sure the span could support the weight, officials said Monday.

"The bridge flattened out, its whole arch disappeared," said Gary Giacomini, president of the bridge district board. "The bridge had the greatest load factor in its 50-year life."

"Imagine, the Golden Gate Bridge flattened out by the weight of human beings!"

Officials estimated 250,000 crowded onto the bridge deck Sunday morning for a walk across the span. More than 500,000 others packed the bridge approaches, but were denied access by concerned authorities.

Giacomini said officials regretted that so many were turned away, but added, "In a way, I'm grateful because if they had gotten on there, maybe the bridge would have fallen down."

More than a million people participated in the all-day, $3 million celebration, which culminated with a spectacular fireworks show and the lighting of the bridge's 716-foot art deco towers.

Crowds exceeded official expectations at every event.

It was at midspan where the weight of the crowd flattened out the normal arch in the bridge deck.

Many who had come miles to the bridge only to be turned away were upset and decided to skip the rest of the events and go home.

Vets compare Stark attack to Pearl Harbor

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The traditional Memorial Day ceremony at Sunset Memorial Park Monday had a special meaning for two survivors of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Eight days earlier an Iraqi fighter, without warning, attacked the frigate USS Stark in the Persian Gulf and killed 37 U.S. sailors.

Almost 42 years before Monday's ceremony, Magic Valley residents Richard Hansing and Leroy Kohntopp were on battleships during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

The Stark incident was still on the minds of those attending the Memorial Day service in Twin Falls Monday. "Absolutely unnecessary," was how the Rev. W.W. "Jim" Winkle, who spoke at the Memorial Day ceremony, described the attack on the Stark.

Over the noise of traffic on nearby Kimberly Road, he said, "Our lives have been saddened in the last two weeks when 37 of our countrymen were killed," Winkle said.

"They're all heroes because they gave their lives in service of our country."

Hansing, Kohntopp and Eldon Ulrich represented the Pearl Harbor Survivors at the ceremony. The Pearl Harbor Survivors is an organization with 16 Magic Valley members and 68 in the state.

Hansing, who was on the battleship USS Nevada in his standard-issue, white tropical shorts when the Pearl Harbor battle began, said the two attacks were similar because there was no warning to U.S. ships in either case.

And he said there were lessons to be learned from both. "That's a war zone — they've got to be more alert," he said about the Persian Gulf. "We can't let that happen again."

"We trust people too much," he said.

Leroy Kohntopp, who spent the duration of the Pearl Harbor attack on the battleship USS Maryland, agreed with Hansing.

Hansing said the Stark incident, in addition to having similarities to Pearl Harbor, was like the bombing of the Marine bases in Beirut a few years back.

Kohntopp said the United States needs to be more prepared for an alert in the Persian Gulf. "What's the Boy Scout motto?" he asked.

"Be prepared," answered Hansing. But Kohntopp didn't lay the blame on the enlisted men on board the Stark.

"As enlisted men, we just take orders," he said. "The men in control have to be prepared — whether it's the fleet commander or the civilians in the White House."

"They're going to have to learn the hard way, I guess," Hansing said.

"Lessons learned sometimes have to be relearned," Kohntopp said. He said the Stark situation is like teaching lessons to children or students.

"We teach them and re-teach them," he said. The deaths from the attack on the Stark were unnecessary, Winkle said, because "Someone said 'I don't know what that ship was.'"

He said we must stand up and be counted as Americans and pay tribute to those "who sealed their patriotic testimony in blood."

The Twin Falls service had participants from the American Legion, the Pearl Harbor Survivors, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans and the Vietnam Veterans.

The Wendell American Legion and the Filer American Legion also sponsored services with state American Legion Commander Dee Collins speaking in Wendell.

Coalition joins fray in debate

Seeks wider voice in wilderness plan

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A new organization representing off-road vehicle enthusiasts, snow-mobilists and power boaters vows to become a player in the Idaho wilderness debate, says its executive director.

"We want all the players to be at the table, not just environmentalists and the timber industry," says Clark L. Collins, a Pocatello electrician.

Collins says the organization formed this spring has dues-paying members all over the West and its newsletter circulates to 15,000 people.

"We are concerned about the direction land management policy is taking. We want to maintain access to public lands," says Collins.

The wilderness debate centers on how much acreage and what areas will be included in a proposal to Congress which makes the wilderness designation.

Motivated equipment and man's interference with the environment is banned in a designated wilderness area.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, sponsored a wilderness bill in 1984 calling for 526,064 more acres of wilderness out of 8 million acres of wilderness areas in the state. But conservationists said this was not enough and negotiations broke down they were seeking 1.2 to 1.5 million acres.

Now there are moves to introduce a new wilderness bill in Congress and last March Rep. Peter Kostmeyer, D-Pa., proposed a 3.9 million acre Idaho wilderness bill.

Collins says the environmentalists are concerned about Gov. Cecil Andrus coming up with a wilderness proposal that they won't like. "Maybe they are overestimating their ability. Andrus has clout," he says.

The Blue Ribbon Coalition wants no more wilderness but recognizes that realistically there will be more wilderness. "We want to make sure everyone's interest is represented," he said.

Collins says environmental organizations have built up a reputation they need conflict to justify their existence. "They are not working with people," he says.

Collins says Blue Ribbon Coalition is a grassroots organization and the state's resource industries got involved in after hearing his comments. "They (the resource industry) got involved because we can co-exist with industry," Collins says.

He says the Idaho Cattle Association and the Idaho Inland Mountain Forestry Association are members of the coalition.

Quilting together
Quilt making is usually an indoor activity, but one cannot blame Edna Loder, left, and Fern Greenhalgh for taking their labor outside one sunny afternoon recently. They moved outdoors to take advantage of the warm conditions that were then prevailing. The two friends put the ties to a quilt in front of Loder's house on Eighth Avenue East in Twin Falls.

Shoshone studies satellite television

By JANE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Use of educational satellite television to expand the curriculum and add flexibility to course offerings is being considered by the Shoshone School District.

The district purchased and installed a satellite receiver with federal grant funds earlier this year. Superintendent Wayne Waddoups told the School Board recently that there are several ways to use the system.

He asked the board to consider subscribing to an educational broadcasting service that offers foreign language, advanced math and English classes that could be used for credit toward graduation. Such a service would also offer teacher-in-service programs.

"If we can get such a program for less than the cost of a teacher's salary, it will allow us to offer courses like Spanish and pre-calculus that are not available in the curriculum now," Waddoups said.

He said that students would be able to take the course from videotapes during any class period of the day, with a telephone link to the instructor for questions and assistance. This way students who could not fit Spanish into their schedule during the single hour it was offered could still take the class, Waddoups said.

He said that the satellite program would also make it possible to offer advanced courses to those students who are ready to move on to more challenging classes and subjects.

The board authorized Waddoups to investigate the cost and availability of such programs.

In other business Tuesday, Board Chairman Donna Hibbard cast the tie-breaking vote to set the 1987-88 school calendar.

Trustees Pat O'Malley and Rusty Tews objected to a two-week vacation at Christmas and a full-week vacation for spring break.

O'Malley asked if the vacation periods could not be shortened to allow school to start later than August 24 and end before Memorial Day in May.

Waddoups agreed the Christmas vacation was long, but said since Christmas comes on Friday it was difficult to do it differently. He said if students are in school Monday and Tuesday of Christmas week "it's really just wasted time."

Principal Jess Kennison said the week-long spring break makes it possible for the high school students to participate in a tour of New York and Washington, D.C., a program he started this year. While he agreed not all students are able to take the trip, it does offer the opportunity.

Hibbard said she felt the schedule must reflect what is best "educationally" for the students and voted in favor of the schedule.

School will begin August 24 and end the Friday before Memorial Day, with two days off for Thanksgiving, two weeks at Christmas and a week for spring break.

Residents of Franklin County angered by Utah tax notices

PRESTON (AP) — Some Franklin County residents are hopping mad about recent letters from tax collectors asking back sales tax on automobiles purchased south of the state border.

Carolyn Stone, a bank loan officer and president of the Preston Chamber of Commerce, said she knows of about 20 local people who have received the notices. But she isn't one of those upset.

"I hope they keep it that way," she said. "It'll make our people shop at home in Utah sooner to be on the upswing in recent weeks."

Even though Preston has four car dealerships, Ms. Stone said many Franklin County residents prefer to shop in Logan, Utah. "You have a lot of dealers in Logan and it just gives them better selection."

Utah's higher sales tax — 6 percent compared to 5 percent in Idaho — hasn't deterred Idaho shoppers in the past — because Utah exempts automobiles purchased for use out-of-state.

Idahoans who buy the cars in Utah can sign exemption forms, bring the cars back to Idaho and pay their home state's lower sales tax when they register the cars.

"We tax the purchase if they purchase the vehicle in Utah and they do work in Utah," said Hal Hansen, chairman of the Utah State Tax Commission.

Even though created a problem for many southern Idahoans, who work for Utah companies such as Morton Thiokol, DeLorean and Utah State University, Ms. Stone said.

"We have some people who work down here in Utah, some who shop down here when they're through," she said.

The policy of taxing autos purchased in Utah by people who work in Idaho seems to be on the upswing in recent weeks.

"It's hit us really, really quickly," said Rae Proctor, a tax policy specialist with the Idaho State Tax Commission. "We were unaware it was happening until about two weeks ago."

Paula Bell, the executive director of the Cache County Chamber of Commerce in Logan, also said the flap over back sales tax is a recent development.

"This really news to me; I haven't heard anything about it," she said late last week.

But Hansen said the Utah Tax Commission has always enforced the tax. The reason it's getting more attention recently is that "there have been more infractions recently. There has not been more effort generated to find them, just more responses."

The problem, said Hansen, is that some Idahoans falsify the exemption forms when they buy an auto in Utah. The form clearly states that buyers are not entitled to the exemption if they work in Utah. But the Utah Tax Commission does a routine follow-up on each exemption granted, matching the names on the exemption form with Utah income tax records.

Those who are caught trying to work their tax can wind up paying much more than the original tax, said Hansen. Each delinquent taxpayer is charged interest, as well as a 10-percent penalty.

In addition, "there could be a fraud penalty, although we've not seen fit to go after that," said Hansen.

All of which is enough to outrage southern Idahoans, who spend a great deal of money across the border.

State Rep. Robert Geddes, R-Preston, said he has asked the Idaho Tax Commission to look into the practice of charging interest and penalties on sales that go back as much as four years.

Franklin County Assessor Dean Abrams said he thinks Idahoans should consider boycotting Utah stores.

"It would appear to me if Utah is so-pressed for tax dollars they are looking to collect sales tax from Idaho residents to support their operation, we would do well to do our shopping at home," Abrams said. "Logan receives a great deal of business from our community, even though Utah sales tax is higher."

Talk like that, naturally, concerns Logan business people.

Officers investigating rollover; another accident blocks bridge

By CRAIG LINCOLN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Sheriff's Department is investigating a one-car rollover and possible suicide: 20.5 miles south of Castleford, said Deputy David Cline of the sheriff's office.

Idaho State Police reported two other accidents involving a 1974 Cadillac, including one that backed up southbound traffic on Perrine Memorial Bridge for about an hour late in the afternoon.

Cline gave this account of the Castleford-area accident:

The sheriff's office received the report of the accident, which was 2.5 miles south of Lilly Grade, at 10:30 a.m. Monday.

Upon arrival, the officers found the driver of the car dead and ruled it a possible suicide. The sheriff's office withheld further information pending notification of relatives.

The accident that stopped Perrine Memorial Bridge traffic occurred shortly after 4 p.m. when Elmo Lee, 25, of Twin Falls, stopped at the intersection of U.S. Highway 93 and Bridgeview Drive, then entered the highway, state police reports said.

Lee's 1974 Cadillac and a vehicle driven by Tim Reed, 25, of Twin Falls, collided. Reed was driving a 1974 Audi, police reports said.

Southbound traffic was halted from shortly after 4 p.m. until 5:06 p.m. At 4:30 p.m., traffic was still moving slowly and cars were bumper-to-bumper to the north side of Perrine Memorial Bridge. Northbound traffic was not affected by the accident.

Reed and his wife, Kim, were treated and released from Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Two motorcycle riders from Portland were treated and released from MVRMC after the Harley-Davidson they were riding went out of control and laid over on its right side Monday afternoon on Interstate 84 near Tully, state police reported.

The driver of the motorcycle, 29-year-old Christopher Conklin, apparently lost control on the rain-slickened roadway. Police received the report at 3:07 p.m. Passenger Terry Cline, 25, also received minor injuries.

Hearing to reveal more on slayings

IDaho Falls (AP) — More information about the slayings of Nathan Haddon and Susan Michelbacher is expected to come out during a preliminary hearing beginning today in Bonneville County Magistrate Court in Idaho Falls. More charges with killing them.

Paul Ezra Rhoades, 33, faces two counts of first-degree murder and 11 other charges in the deaths of Haddon, 20, a convenience store clerk and manager at the Eastern Idaho Vocational-Technical School, and Michelbacher, 24, a junior high special education teacher.

The hearing will be conducted by 7th District Magistrate Michael B. Kennedy.

Besides murder, Rhoades is charged with robbery and two counts of using a firearm in the commission of a felony in Haddon's slaying. In Mrs. Michelbacher's death, he faces charges of first-degree kidnapping, rape, infamous crime against nature, robbery, and four counts of using a firearm in the commission of a felony.

Rhoades also faces a preliminary hearing in Blackfoot July 15 on charges that he kidnaped and murdered Stacy Baldwin, 21, in Bingham County in late February. The Bonneville County proceeding will be open to the public. Two weeks ago, Kennedy turned down a defense motion to close the hearing, citing U.S. Supreme Court rulings. Attorneys representing local media opposed the closure motion.

Lower Salmon plant work running ahead of schedule

HAGERMAN (AP) — Scheduled vice maintenance at the Idaho Power Co. 70-megawatt Lower Salmon Unit at the end of June, Womack said. Originally scheduled for completion in late February, the work will be finished by the end of May under the supervisory hand of Nick Zabala.

If work continues ahead of schedule, Zabala and his crew will be able to begin their next rewind project in late February for the plant's No. 2 unit removed from service in late February for a major overhaul of its generator and repairs to its turbine.

The unit is the last of Lower Salmon's four generators to be refurbished, and replaced with the existing plant after nearly four decades of service. The plant was built by the predecessor of Idaho Power in 1910 and after nearly four decades of service in the late 1940s.

Crash landing leaves 4 hurt

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Four single-engine planes that were flying low over a rugged canyon, landed on the roof of a vacant building and crashed through a shed Monday, authorities said.

Ogden Police Lt. Charles Burick said the four were en route from Ogden, Minn., to Santa Rosa, Calif., with scheduled stops in Rapid City, S.D., and Elgin, Nev., when the plane hit a piston on Ogden Canyon and lost power over the small town of Dore, Nev.

Pilot Edly Ray Stephens called the Ogden airport, which guided him through the canyon, Burick said.

"They were being guided toward the airport, but the piston snagged the engine and it was looking for any unpopulated area where he could set that thing down," Burick said.

As for drug activity in the community, police reported four less cases in 1986 than in 1985. There were 45 drug cases of which 32 were felonies. Drugs involved had a street value of $17,400 and police cleared 84 percent of the drug crimes, up from 78 percent the previous year.

There were 34 adults arrested on drug charges in 1986, an increase of 8 over last year. Another 11 juveniles were taken into custody on drug offenses, six more than in 1985.

Nationally, arrested a total of 688 juveniles in 1986 for various offenses. This is 108 more than in 1985. Of these, 176 were petitioned into court in 1986. It was a slow year for murder in Twin Falls. One murder was investigated while two occurred the previous year. All of the murders in the past two years have been cleared. Suicides increased from 5 to 8 in the past year.

for textbooks, supplies and materials to care for Erickson, and it comes within projected revenues.

The board approved a request by Erickson to advertise for two half-time teachers' aides for next year, with the understanding that the positions are subject to budget limitations.

"We have overhauled classes in the elementary, and we are in the situation where we are going to have to do something on the secondary level," said Erickson.

The overhauled classes can affect accreditation, he added.

The secondary school aide would cover study halls and help tutor students who don't fit into any other class. The new aides will begin work in August.

The board also heard Charles Stuts of Buhl to fill the new elementary position, added to meet accreditation requirements.

At their business, the board opened sealed bids for the school's shares of city irrigation water. High bid of $25 was made by Vivian A. Daiss of Buhl.

High school graduates will be Thursday at 9 a.m. in the gym. Eighth-grade graduates will be Friday at 7 p.m. in the gym.

Self-donation best if you need blood

DEAR ABBY: I was glad to see a letter concerning self-blood donating, since this is an important topic few people know much about.

Many patients are nervous about contracting AIDS should they require a transfusion during surgery. Blood donors worry more about contracting certain forms of hepatitis from blood transfusions than they do about AIDS because the sophisticated blood-screening techniques used today have greatly reduced the likelihood of AIDS transmission.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

There are other good reasons for self-donation—that you might like to let your readers know about. Your own blood is the safest blood you can receive during transfusion. It cannot transmit an illness to you, will not cause allergic or other transfusion reactions, and compatibility testing is not necessary.

Even if you have been turned down as a donor in the past, you may still qualify for self-donation since ordinary donor standards don't apply in this case.

Readers facing an operation should consult with their surgeon ahead of time as to whether self-and will graduate from high school in two weeks. The other day after I got off work, I went over to my boyfriend's house to visit for a few minutes. He's 21. His parents were not home at the time.

I'd been there for about 20 minutes, when my dad drove up looking for me. He yelled at me in Spanish for the weekend. Last night my boyfriend not-to come to my house anymore and that he had better go to his house again.

We weren't doing anything. Abby, just talking. I was totally innocent at any wrongdoing.

Now, my dad says that if you agreed that I was innocent, he would reconsider. Please let me know what you think as soon as possible.

Student spots flaw in ad

BALTIMORE (AP) — Members of that "new generation" Pepsi Cola advertising is aimed at know their American history, and one has gotten a job offer from the soft drink maker after pointing out that one of its radio ads was wrong.

Amy Kristof, a 17-year-old honors student at Old Mill High School in Anne Arundel County, heard the error last week.

In the commercial the voices of Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin are heard. Franklin favors Coke Classic, and Jefferson says: "Pepsi's the best. Ben Franklin. That experiment with the kite fried your taste buds."

Just one little problem: Jefferson was in France, not in Philadelphia, in 1787.

"When I heard it, it caught my attention. I said, 'That's wrong,'" Miss Kristof said.

She said she heard the commercial the day after she took an advanced placement history exam. "That was one of the things I had studied to prepare for the exam," she said. "We knew this was the bicentennial year for the Constitution, so we had studied a lot about it and the convention."

CAN LITTLE GROCERY STORES BE BETTER THAN BIG GROCERY STORES?

In Swensen's opinion, the pertinent question is whether little grocery stores can be better than big grocery stores. Since for over 30 years, ours have been little and theirs (out of town chain stores) have been big. Where ours get a little bigger, theirs get bigger still. So, 30 years Swensen's, the locally owned and operated grocery stores have been struggling mightily, against great odds (whereas), to overcome the mass modern mentality that bigger is always better.

Swensen's contention is that bigger is NOT always better and that better is a combination of factors such as wide selection, low prices, convenience, location, friendly service, freshness of products, store attitude, cleanliness, fairness, and other qualities. Sometimes better is just a perception in the mind of the shopper. We at Swensen's Thank You for your patronage and invite you to continue to consider and shop our smaller stores where we think you'll find many things better!

American bases come under siege

Nuclear foes, election politics, budget cuts at home leave future in doubt

By CHARLES J. HANLEY The Associated Press

American military bases and way-stations around the world are increasingly under political siege.

They are embroiled in election politics and anti-nuclear fervor abroad and budget politics at home.

In elections in Britain, the Philippines and Greece, the future of American military installations has been thrown open to debate. In Spain and Greece, popular opposition threatens to block renewal of U.S. bases agreements. And in the distant Pacific, the island states of Fiji and Palau are on a collision course with the U.S. Navy over port calls by nuclear warships.

Other allies, meanwhile, are angry over U.S. aid programs that fall short of promises. Turkey, driving that point home, decided last month to hold up ratification of a four-year extension for U.S. military bases there.

These political uncertainties are rattling the foundations of a global network of bases and other facilities manned by a half-million U.S. military personnel in two dozen countries.

A U.S. official involved in overseas base negotiations traces some of the problems to a development the United States generally welcomes — the growth of democracies.

"Greece once was ruled by colonels, Spain by Franco, the Philippines by Marcos," he pointed out in an interview. "If you ask whether it is easier to deal with an elected government or with one man, the answer is obvious. . . . Today, there are more electoral politics involved in the bases question."

This official, citing the sensitivity of his position, asked not to be identified.

One example of democracy's complications: The Philippines' new constitution gives the Manila Congress the option of calling a nationwide referendum on the question of continuing the U.S. military presence there. It is a move sure to focus Philippine political passions on the bases.

Pentagon officials also blame a budget-cutting U.S. Congress for "short-sightedness" in slashing the military aid packages foreign governments receive in exchange for granting base rights.

From 1985 to 1986, security aid to countries providing U.S. access to military facilities was cut collectively by 11 percent, the Pentagon reports.

Some reaction to the cuts backs to typical. President Mohamed Siad Barre complained to reporters in March that the continuing reductions in U.S. military aid — to $7.5 million this year from $20 million in 1986 — violated the 7-year-old treaty under which that East African nation grants U.S. forces

Spanish demonstrators march on U.S. base near Madrid in March protest access to its seaports and airstrips. "It is very sad that our friend neglects us," he said. "We are not happy at all."

At the Pentagon, officials sound frustrated.

"The results of these cuts will unfold over the next year, but we may anticipate complications in renegotiating base rights and raising taxes," Pentagon analyst Michael W.S. Ryan concludes in a Defense Department publication.

Here is a country-by-country look at the issues: SPAIN Spanish and U.S. negotiators have made little progress toward rewriting the agreement under which 10,000 U.S. troops are stationed at four air and naval bases in Spain. The Spanish say they want to ask the Americans to leave if agreement is not reached by November.

Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez, whose Socialists regard the pact as a 1958 legacy from right-wing dictator Francisco Franco, wants Washington to withdraw its 72 F-16 warplanes from Torrejon air base, near Madrid. American negotiators agree to a withdrawal only if Spain's air force takes over the F-16s' static function — reinforcement for air units elsewhere in NATO.

But, said a Pentagon official, "the Spaniards haven't offered to go to the assistance of their NATO partners." Two months ago, 50,000 people marched in Madrid to demand a U.S. pullout.

BRITAIN The opposition Labor Party, trying to oust Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in elections June 11, is running on a platform calling for the shutdown of U.S. cruise-missile and other nuclear bases in Britain.

Neil Kinnock's Laborites are underdogs to Thatcher's Conservatives. Analysts see a longshot possibility, however, that a coalition government of Labor and Britain's centrist Liberal and Social Democrats are viewed in Washington as lukewarm in their long-term support for the U.S. bases.

Opinion polls consistently indicate that most Britons want U.S. nuclear bases out, although a majority reject Labor's call for dismantling Britain's own nuclear force.

GREENLAND The government of this semi-autonomous Danish territory collapsed in March, setting the stage for an election this Tuesday in which the radar base at Thule is an issue.

Some Greenlanders and Danes complain that radar modernization under way at Thule will make it part of President Reagan's proposed "Star Wars" anti-missile defense system. Washington denies it, and both the Greenlandic and Danish governments accept the U.S. explanation. But the leftist Inuit Party is expected to press the Thule issue in a continuing campaign for total Greenland independence from U.S. ally Denmark.

GREECE Andreas Papandreu, the Socialist prime minister, came to power in 1981 pledging to eventually shut down the four U.S. military bases in Greece, a NATO ally. Since then, the bases have remained a political target.

In March, during one of Greece's periodic showdowns with rival Turkey, Papandreu demanded that a U.S. Navy communications station be closed temporarily, a demand later withdrawn. In April, left-wing Greek terrorists wounded 32 U.S. military personnel in the bombing of a U.S. ship. In January, Papandreu said he is willing to negotiate a new bases agreement, replacing one expiring in December 1983. But Greek officials say they are "in a hurry."

Pentagon official Richard Perle said in January, "The United States is preparing contingency plans for moving the bases of Greek soil."

TURKEY Last December, the Turkish government signed a four-year extension on the agreement allowing U.S. access to a dozen military installations, including listening posts that gather intelligence from the neighboring Soviet Union.

On April 10, however, the Turks announced they would hold up final Cabinet approval until the U.S. Congress finishes discussing "issues of concern to Turkey." Their complaint: U.S. lawmakers have slashed military aid to Turkey from $700 million in 1985 to $240 million this year. The Turks, dependent on U.S. aid, have made no move yet to close the bases.

PHILIPPINES In the Philippines, where 14,000 U.S. sailors and airmen are stationed at Clark Air Base and Subic Naval Base, the U.S. demand for a system to make possible renewal of the bases agreement politically volatile.

Before she became president in 1986, after the authoritarian Ferdinand E. Marcos was ousted, Corason Aquino committed herself to closing the U.S. bases once her current agreement expires in 1991. Now she says only that she will keep her "options open."

A new constitution approved in a plebiscite in February requires that any new agreement be a formal treaty approved by the Philippine Congress and — the Congress decides — by a national referendum. As a price, Filipino negotiators are expected to demand major increases in U.S. aid.

The new constitution, in ambiguous language, also appears to ban nuclear weapons from Philippine soil. During campaigning for a congressional election in May, Aquino, to confront Washington over the presumed presence of nuclear arms at U.S. facilities, thus far, she has not.

FIJI In elections April 12, a left-of-center government came to power promising to ban port calls by U.S. nuclear warships in Fiji, a Pacific crossroads. A similar ban is nearby New Zealand led to the collapse of the U.S.-New Zealand alliance last year.

On May 14, conservative military men toppled the current government in a coup. In the confused political situation, the policy on ship visits remains unclear.

PALAU In a vote last Dec. 2, the people of this U.S.-administered island chain 350 miles west of the Philippines failed to approve a compact providing self-government in exchange for allowing U.S. nuclear warships through its waters.

Since the Palauan constitution otherwise bans entry of nuclear warships, one's heart sinks that the compact must receive at least 55 percent approval. Only 65 percent voted "yes" in December.

The Pentagon is troubled. "If Palau succumbed with a nuclear ban, it would open up all kinds of possible challenges," said one official.

Backers see no conflict with projected national monument

Silent veterans of forgotten war building own memorial

By BOB DWORCKI The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Think of a limited, uncelebrated war euphemistically called a "minor action" in a divided Asian country where U.S. troops helped a southern republic against communist-backed aggressors from the north.

Imagine 54,235 American dead, 8,177 missing in action and 369 unreturned prisoners of war. Add fiery napalm, helicopters and forsaken soldiers who came home without flag-waving parades or a fitting monument to their sacrifice.

Vietnam? No, Korea.

Veterans of the Korean War's nasty battles, mindful of the mix-up in the public consciousness, are building a monument so they will be remembered.

"The forgotten war was not Vietnam, but Korea. Any American who fought and died should have a better tale than to be forgotten," said ex-Marine Charles Edward "Mac" McCareen, a Philadelphia insurance executive who is chairman of a campaign to build the International Korean War Memorial.

"These guys gave so much and got so little. There should be some symbol to show that freedom is never free. Its price is sacrifice," McCareen said.

Some wonder why it has taken more than 30 years, since the war's end in 1953, for veterans to get together on a memorial. McCareen responded, "When the war was over, all of us came home, picked up where we left off, went back to school, went back to raising families."

The group plans to raise $5 million in private donations for a memorial to be built in Los Angeles. Groundbreaking at Angels Gate Park is scheduled for June 25, the 37th anniversary of the North Korean invasion of the South. Work is expected to take two years.

The memorial will honor the 16 countries from the United Nations whose soldiers fought the North Koreans and Chinese.

The memorial will show 15 soldiers fighting in the snow. The scene was inspired by the battle of the Chosin Reservoir, where 15,000 trapped Marines battled 120,000 Chinese and subzero temperatures to escape to the sea.

Felix de Weldon, the sculptor who created the two Jima Memorial in Washington, D.C., will build the monument.

"It will probably be more dramatic and more moving than any others I have done," de Weldon said in a telephone interview from Newport, R.I.

The memorial, he said, would show "the courage, the determination, the suffering, the power of survival" of those who fought.

"Private initiative can get the job done a lot faster," said John Curran, president of Mack Trucks Inc. in Allentown, who heads the corporate drive for donations.

The memorial in Los Angeles is Korea is where the Cold War got hot, where America decided to draw the line on communist expansion and where the United Nations first mustered troops to back up its orders.

Northern invaders trained by the Soviet Union, nearly crushed the South Koreans and U.N. forces. But after a daring amphibious landing at Inchon forced by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, U.N. forces routed the invaders and drove to the Chinese border.

Hordes of Chinese entered the war. MacArthur was sacked by President Harry Truman and lines stanchioned nightly along the 38th parallel, the place where the fighting had erupted. Peace talks dragged on for two years before a truce was signed July 27, 1953.

Next, the South Korean capital and the site of 1988 Summer Olympics, twice fell to communists before being reconquered.

The war in Korea inspired the television show "M*A*S*H," but the committee organizing the International National Memorial is an encyclopedic guide, five neglectful paragraphs to Korea, six pages to Vietnam and 26 pages to World War II.

"We were the silent veterans of the the process should have been speeded up. Hands officials, including USA for Africa President Ken Kragan, said the careful reviews that determined how money was spent were a good thing.

"We're extremely proud of the coalition (review) process and how that worked," Kragan said in an interview. "I give an awful lot of credit to our board of directors, who were under tremendous pressure to spend the money fast."

Officials are still considering the future of the organization after the final $3 million is given out, and it's possible it will simply close its doors. Hands Across America was the seconded charity event by USA for Africa, the celebrity-guided organization that earned admiration for its "We Are the World" single, raised through the song "We Are the World."

It was the efficiency of USA for Africa, which gave out some of the "We Are the World" money to the 148 states that had people like Hayes to expect faster action after Hands.

"We had a couple of million from USA for Africa, and within two weeks we gave them proposals for 23 cities," he recalled. "That went off without a hitch, and in many places within weeks the money went out and made a complete difference."

forgetten war. We feel an obligation. If we don't let people know what happened, nobody would know," said ex-Marine Frank Kerr, founder of the Chosin Few.

Those who died established that time and place. It was the same beach, the same place, and there wasn't a ripple. It was like they didn't exist. We want to make sure there is a ripple," said Kerr, a public relations executive from Boston. "They did fight. They died. They did something."

By the men who fought there felt otherwise.

"I think we won. We repelled the enemy. We defeated the North Koreans and routed a couple of Chinese armies. The United Nations objective was to restore the government of South Korea. We did that," McCareen said.

"It certainly was a victory. We went in with the idea of saving South Korea," Curran said.

"Our position is we won. It ended with an armistice, just like World War I. The countries held the same territories they did when they started. If Korea was a tie, then so was World War I," Kerr said.

But Marty Rogal, USA for Africa executive director, said the careful distribution of the Hands money will also make a difference.

"If we had just bought shelter for the nation's 3 million homeless, if the $15 million would have lasted one night," Rogal said in a statement. "If we had just bought food, if we had just bought stamps, if we had just bought stamps, it would have provided less than two meals."

Even a critic like Hayes admits he cannot feel antagonistic to Hands Across America.

"My criticism is warm and affectionate," he said. "Even one small check makes a difference, if you're hungry."

Hands Across America: Criticism increasing a year after

By RICHARD DEATLEY The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — One year ago, Hands Across America was billed as the unassailable charity event of the 1980s, a proposed human chain across the United States to raise at least $50 million for the hungry and homeless.

The plan called for scores of celebrities to join 6 million people in a 4,225-mile line on Sunday, May 25, 1981.

Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck joined hands with participants in Disneyland. Kenny Rogers stood in the blistering heat of the Southwest desert, and President Reagan gingerly participated in front of the White House. It was party time at the Queen Mary in Long Beach and Battery Park in Manhattan.

But there were lots of gaps between these and points, and a lot of people simply didn't send in their pledges, resulting in a net of only $15 million for the hungry and homeless after all costs were paid.

Organizers have found themselves defensive because the cost of mounting the event was around $14 million to $16 million. Even though the cost was known in advance, its size in relation to lower-than-anticipated donations hurt credibility.

"It was a net good," said Robert Hayes of the National Coalition for the Homeless in New York. "But they spent too much to raise too little and promoted a national extravaganza empty of content."

Organizers said there were benefits beyond the balance sheet, though: spotlighting the problem of hunger and homelessness in the United States, and raising the spirit of voluntarism throughout the nation.

"It was a magnificent effort," said the Rev. Colin Henderson of St. Mary's Episcopal Church in Laguna Beach. "It raised a lot of money, but the problem is so much bigger than that." Henderson's bid for funds for a homeless shelter run by his church was turned down.

The disbursement of funds is still not complete — $3 million for long-range projects is to be doled out in September.

Critics said that because of the relatively small amounts granted to shelters and other organizations, the process should have been speeded up.

Hands officials, including USA for Africa President Ken Kragan, said the careful reviews that determined how money was spent were a good thing.

"We're extremely proud of the coalition (review) process and how that worked," Kragan said in an interview. "I give an awful lot of credit to our board of directors, who were under tremendous pressure to spend the money fast."

Officials are still considering the future of the organization after the final $3 million is given out, and it's possible it will simply close its doors. Hands Across America was the seconded charity event by USA for Africa, the celebrity-guided organization that earned admiration for its "We Are the World" single, raised through the song "We Are the World."

Romanians extend a lavish welcome to arriving Soviet

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev came to Romania on Monday for his first visit to a trading partner. The Kremlin ally was given a lavish mass welcome staged in the style of his predecessor, Leonid Brezhnev.

President Nicolae Ceausescu, who has openly scorned some of the Soviet Union's current reforms, kissed the Soviet leader three times after Gorbachev and his wife Raisa stepped from an Illyushin 62 Aeroflot jet.

Thousands of youths in folk costume, teen-agers in blue and gold from the Formation of Youth for the Defense of the Country, and other massed citizens chanted "Hurrah!" and "Ceausescu, Gorbachev!" as the stone-faced Soviet leader reviewed troops.

The highly organized display continued from the airport to central Bucharest. Tens of thousands of youths waved colored scarves, perched atop stands in formations reminiscent of wedding cakes.

The welcome contrasted with the subdued style that has characterized Gorbachev's tenure since he assumed power in March 1985.

In Romania, however, Ceausescu is the official object of mass public adulation like that accorded in the Soviet Union to earlier Kremlin leaders.

Elaborate, orchestrated welcomes were extended in Romania to Brezhnev in 1976, to President Richard Nixon in 1969 and to President Gerald Ford in 1974.

Portraits carried by Monday's crowds showed a realistic portrayal of Gorbachev, including his forehead birthmark. But the 69-year-old Ceausescu was depicted as a man of 25.

Airport crowds, on cue, struck up a chant of "Ceausescu, PCR (Romanian Communist Party)!" when Ceausescu and his wife Elena arrived to greet the Soviet visitors.

The two men exchanged greetings in a "warm, friendly atmosphere," the state news agency Agerpres reported.

They began talks after a traditional folk dance in a city square. State television showed Gorbachev wearing a red kerchief of the Young Pioneers, joining in for about 20 seconds.

Despite points of potential friction between Gorbachev and Ceausescu, Western diplomats and Soviet bloc officials suggested beforehand that any strong disagreement was unlikely to surface in public.

Gorbachev stressed on his last day of his visit to Prague, Czechoslovakia, in April that Moscow will not force its allies to imitate its recent reforms. Some of the reforms were adopted long ago in other Soviet bloc nations.

Romanian officials recently have maintained that they embraced Soviet-style economic reforms and self-management years before the Kremlin and underlined that both nations have the improvement of communism as their main goal.

But Gorbachev's encouragement of limited private enterprise at home drew open attacks from Ceausescu, who has shown no sign of allowing "glasnost" — limited but greater openness — in the state-controlled news media or arts.

Romania has long irritated the Kremlin with an independent foreign policy. This country drew Western praise for refusing to allow Warsaw Pact troops on its soil and for maintaining relations with Israel after the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Soviets quit jamming broadcasts by VOA

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union apparently has given up its 7-year-old practice of jamming Voice of America broadcasts in Russian and other languages, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said Monday.

Embassy spokesman Jarrachy Verner said he heard VOA broadcasts in Russian on three short-wave frequencies Monday morning.

"Our monitors tell us that jamming has stopped on most of the broadcasts in Russian on the Soviet Union," he said by telephone. The Soviets regularly have jammed the broadcasts since August 1980, as U.S.-Soviet relations deteriorated after Soviet troops moved into Afghanistan in December 1979.

Verner said the VOA broadcasts he heard were "coming in pretty well."

Monitors both inside and outside the Soviet Union also reported VOA broadcasts in Ukrainian, Georgian, Armenian and Azerbaijani were not being jammed, Verner said. In West Germany, Radio Free Europe spokesman Bill Mahoney said engineers there had determined the Soviets were no longer jamming Radio Free Europe broadcasts in Russian and the Baltic languages of Lithuania, Latvia, and Estonia. Mahoney said it would take the engineers a week to determine whether all the Soviet jamming stations had been shut down or redirected.

Floods, fires plague China regions

BEIJING (AP) — Heavy rains have caused floods that killed at least 48 people in Guangdong province of southern China and forced evacuation of 350,000, the China Daily reported Monday.

The Forest Ministry said that, in the parched northeast, a soft rain slowed the southward movement of a fire that has burned nearly 1.5 million acres and killed at least 200 people.

By Saturday, 48 people had been killed and 82 injured in Guangdong, the English-language newspaper reported. It said the flooding in Canton, the provincial capital, was the worst in 13 years.

Nearly 350,000 acres of farmland were flooded and 5,300 homes destroyed, it said, quoting the Canton Evening News.

A report Monday in Ta Kung Pao, a pro-Beijing daily published in Hong Kong, put the death toll at 92 and said 414 people were injured. In a dispatch from Canton, it said the flood had caused $108 million in damage.

In its report, the China Daily said Guangdong's four major rivers had risen more than 6 feet, overflowing their banks and washing away roads.

Light rain Sunday in the far northeast slowed a 15-mile-long fire advancing on the area's great forest reserves, the Forestry Ministry reported.

The fire in the Daxingzong Forest of Heilongjiang province has left more than 50,000 people homeless.

Shen Wandu, a ministry spokeswoman, said 3,600 firefighters were making a new firebreak in a southern section and 7,000 had left the fire's eastern section to clear another area.

Negotiate with Solidarity, Kennedy tells Polish leaders

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy urged the government Monday to negotiate with the Solidarity labor movement, which it outlawed five years ago, as a means of resolving Poland's political and economic problems.

Kennedy told an airport news conference at the end of a four-day visit that he would ask the Reagan administration to resume the "special relationship" that existed between the United States and Poland until Solidarity was suppressed and outlawed under martial law.

The Massachusetts Democrat said his talks with government, Roman Catholic church and Solidarity leaders led him to believe "economic reform and national reconciliation" are possible if the communist authorities are "willing to engage in honest and open dialogue with all the leaders of all the people."

"If there is to be the kind of national consensus needed to revitalize and rebuild the Polish economy, I would urge the government to talk and meet with Solidarity," he said.

At its birth in the labor strife of 1980 under Lech Walesa's leadership, Solidarity was the first free labor federation in the Soviet bloc. The government has refused to talk with Solidarity leaders since the crackdown, claiming they want to overthrow the communist system.

The senator and more than a dozen members of his family accompanying him flew to Rome, where Ken-neddy said he would discuss the trip in an audience with Pope John Paul II scheduled for today. The pontiff is to visit his native Poland next month.

Kennedy called his sojourn in Poland "an enormous success" even though a meeting with Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski was canceled.

When asked why the meeting with Jaruzelski did not take place, the senator said: "You'll have to ask him." Kennedy said he "went to the university and had coffee with some of the students" instead.

"I think it's always useful to get a chance to talk to heads of state, but quite frankly we were able to achieve and to accomplish the things this trip was set for," he said.

Western diplomats suggested that the government was displeased by Kennedy's appearance Sunday with Walesa and thousands of Solidarity supporters at a rally in Gdansk.

Kennedy called his day with Walesa "the high point of my trip" and said he left Gdansk, where Solidarity founder is a shipyard electrician, with "renewed admiration for the courage and leadership of this great Polish patriot (and) crusader in the cause of human rights."

During his four days in Poland, Kennedy presented a human rights award named for his assassinated brother Robert to Solidarity adviser Adam Michnik and former underground leader Zbigniew Brzezinski.

Korean students protest cover-up

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of students shouted "Down with torture!" Monday in protests against a purported cover-up in the water torture death of a student.

Yonhap, the Korean news agency, said at least 7,400 students took part in protests at 23 universities and colleges around the country.

Police fought hundreds of students in a running battle before breaking up one demonstration in Seoul.

Opposition leaders charged the government was behind a massive fabrication.

The Reunification Democratic Party, South Korea's main opposition group, said President Chun Doo-hwan's government lost all right to govern by trying to cover up the death of dissident student Park Chong-chul while he was under police interrogation last January.

"By fabricating the torture case, the current regime has completely lost its moral basis to exist and popular trust in it," it said in a statement.

Government prosecutors Monday again questioned five top police commanders over a possible cover-up. The five, who were held over the weekend, were allowed to return home, but officials said the case was continuing.

Five junior officers were charged earlier in connection with Park's death and are awaiting trial.

An official investigation found that Park died after his throat was pressed against a bathtub. Chun fired his home minister and national police chief.

Protest police firing tear gas moved into Sungkyunkwan University in Seoul and battled for two hours with about 700 students, who hurled firebombs and rocks. Students elsewhere shaved their heads in protest. Some began hunger strikes.

Prosecutors reconstructed Park's death as part of the probe, but government officials declined to give details of the investigation ordered by Chun.

Korean Broadcasting System, the state radio system, said the five police commanders denied being involved in a cover-up or any other wrongdoing.

Some Korean newspapers speculated Monday that Prime Minister Cho Sun-yong might resign to accept responsibility for Park's death and subsequent actions. Officials declined comment.

Authorities said an anti-government activist died in a hospital Monday from burns after setting himself on fire in a demonstration May 17 in Pusan.

Also Monday, officials said eight students drew prison terms of up to four years for their role in the occupation of the U.S. Information Service building in Pusan during a protest in December.

Barbie may return to court, face witnesses

LYON, France (AP) — Klaus Barbie, once the Nazi Gestapo chief of Lyon, may appear in court today for the first time in 13 days to face witnesses who accuse him of torture and sending prisoners to death camps.

Barbie announced on May 13, the third day of his war crimes trial, that he no longer would attend court sessions on grounds that he was brought here from South America illegally in February 1983. He was expelled by the government of Bolivia, where he had lived for three decades.

Presiding Judge Andre Cordini has ruled twice against demands by some lawyers for civil parties that Barbie, 73, be brought to court by force if necessary from his cell at St. Joseph's prison.

After testimony Monday by two witnesses who said the man called the "Butcher of Lyon" tortured them personally, Prosecutor Pierre Truche suggested the time had come to bring the defendant in.

"It is necessary that at a certain moment we bring him by force to meet the witnesses with whom he has not been confronted," Truche said.

Cordini did not issue an immediate order but appeared to agree. He asked witnesses Lucien Margaine, 61, and Mario Blandone, 61, to remain in Lyon for another 24 hours.

"You can say it is sure that he is coming," Jean-Olivier Vient, an assistant prosecutor, said after Monday's session.

Asked what his reaction would be if his client was brought to court by force, defense lawyer Jacques Verges smiled and said: "I'll be calm, as usual." He said there was nothing he could do.

It's Lakers in a sweep LA sets sights on fourth NBA title of decade

SEATTLE (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers have won three NBA titles and have been to the championship series two other times since 1980, so another trip to the finals is not about to get them very excited.

"The only thing I think the players are going to be satisfied with is to win the whole thing," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said Monday after a 133-102 victory over Seattle gave the Lakers a 4-0 sweep of the Western Conference finals.

Although any outward signs of excitement were absent, Riley said the Lakers are playing with a sense of purpose after losing to Houston in five games in the conference finals a year ago.

"Everybody wrote this team off at the first of the year, but there was a battle cry last year after Houston beat us," Riley said. "The difference between this year's team and last year's team is our attitude. We wanted to get it done. We still do."

James Worthy continued his hot scoring with 26 points, and the Lakers devastated the SuperSonics with a near-perfect 22-5 spurt in the second quarter.

"You don't know how the players are going to react being up 3-0," Riley said. "I'm just ecstatic—after we played. We came out alive and alert. We just got a good run going. We are a team of spurts."

The Sonics, who lost the first three games of the series by a total of 14 points, are now believers in the Lakers after their performance in Game 4.

"I think they'll win the championship," Seattle forward Tom Chambers said. "They're a very talented team. I can't see anyone beating them."

The Lakers, winners of 11 of 12 playoff games, advanced to the championship series against either Boston or Detroit. The finals will start either Sunday or June 2, depending on whether the Celtics-Pistons series, currently tied 2-2, goes six or seven games.

"The Lakers are playing such great basketball right now that I can't see anybody beating them," Sonics guard Dale Ellis said. "They've been around a number of years and they know how to get it done down the stretch. They take advantage of everything."

Worthy, who led the Lakers in all four games against Seattle, finished with 122 points in the series.

Magic Johnson had 21 points Monday and 12 assists, 11 in the first half, and Byron Scott and A.C. Green scored 19 points each.

Chambers led Seattle with 20 points and Xavier McDaniel, who had a career-high 42 in Seattle's 122-121 defeat in Game 3, had 18.

A 10-3 spurt helped Seattle cut an early 15-point deficit to 46-40 with 6:31 left in the second period.

Then Los Angeles, which won 25 more games than the Sonics during the regular season, turned the game into a rout. The Lakers made nine of 10 field goal attempts during the 22-5 run, including seven layups, a dunk by Worthy and a 3-point goal by Scott.

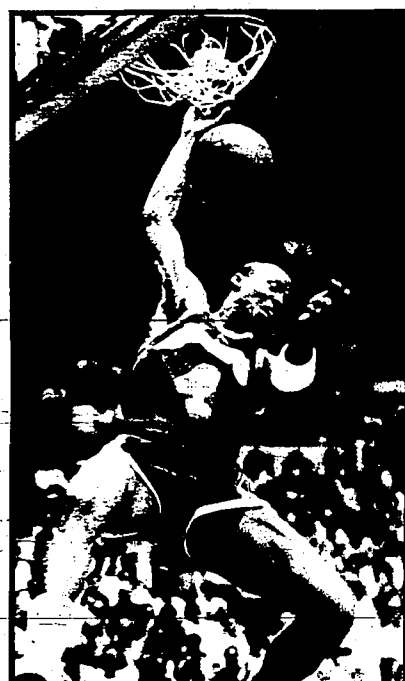

The decisive spurt made the score 68-45 with 1:03 left in the half. The Sonics, who got no closer than 17 in the second half, shot 32 percent from the field in the second period.

Worthy scored 11 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar eight as Los Angeles grabbed a 37-22 lead in the first 10 minutes before settling for a 33-29 advantage after one period.

Chambers, who totaled only 15 points in seven consecutive quarters in Games 2 and 3, had 11 points and five rebounds in the period for the Sonics.

The Sonics started the second half as if they might make a run at the Lakers.

They scored six straight points early in the third quarter to cut the deficit to 72-55 with 9:54 left.

It's down to best of three in east

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The trip to Isiah's House is one Larry Bird would just as soon forget.

In the first two games of the NBA Eastern Conference finals, Bird scored 18 and 31 points, leading the Boston Celtics to a seemingly safe 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven series against the Detroit Pistons.

Isiah Thomas, the Detroit guard who scored 18 and 36 points in those two games, said things would be different when the series shifted to the Silverdome. He made good on the boast.

Detroit won those two games, squaring the series 2-2. Game 5 will be played Tuesday night at Boston.

"I call it the 'Silverdome Mystique' because of the size and the fans," Thomas said. "It's a very difficult place to shoot in. Depth of perception is much more difficult."

Thomas scored 23 and 22 points and didn't commit a turnover as Detroit won Games 3 and 4. Bird, meanwhile was held to 17 and 16 points.

"I think we're very frustrated now," Bird said. "If you look at fast-break opportunities, I think that's the difference in the games."

"We don't seem to bounce back like we used to. In the old days, this game would have gone down to the wire, instead of us getting blown out."

Detroit won Game 3 122-104 Saturday, then beat the Celtics 145-119 in Game 4 Sunday, Boston's sixth game in nine days.

To make matters worse for Bird, he got into a fight with Detroit center Bill Laimbeer in the fourth quarter of Game 3. Both players were ejected, but it didn't end there.

Sunday, Bird refused Laimbeer's handshake before the opening tip. He was booed by the crowd of 27,287, and every time he touched the ball the rest of the game.

"I don't like Bill Laimbeer," Bird said. "I don't think I should shake the hand of somebody I don't like."

Laimbeer said he was stung by Bird's attitude.

"He said some snide comments, but that's his prerogative," Laimbeer said. "I'm sure he felt I took him down intentionally, but replays show, and in my heart I know, differently."

Indy winner takes $500,000 check into unemployment line

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Al Unser, whose fourth victory was worth $226,763 from a record purse of $4,490,375, isn't sure he'll get back into an Indy car before he goes for a record fifth Indianapolis 500 triumph next May.

His son, Al Jr., is trying to help him find work.

A hand-lettered sign displayed Monday on Al Jr.'s team bus told the story.

"Real race driver needs work. Rent '500' experience. Inquire within," it said.

Roger Penske, who fired Unser after Danny Ongais was injured in a practice accident, said Monday that he planned to offer Unser an Indy 500 ride in a Penske car next year.

"I believe everything possible should be done to have the Indy 500 champion defend his victory," Penske said. "If Al can't find something to do, he likes for next year, he would be welcome on our team. Al is a team member. He works well with us and yesterday wasn't our first success with him."

Unser, already the career leader in prize money won at the Speedway, pushed his total winnings from 23 Indy 500 races to $2,317,579. His first prize from Sunday's race was 22 percent of the record $581,063 set by Bobby Rahal last year, but this year total topped the former mark of $4,001,450 distributed a year ago.

The 1987 prize package was announced Monday night at the annual Victory Awards Dinner. Fabrizio Barbazza was named Rookie of the Year.

Roberto Guerrero won $305,013 for second place and Barbazza took home $284,663 for finishing third. His total included $10,000 as Rookie of the Year.

Mario Andretti, who started from the pole position and led most of the race, finished ninth and earned $368,063.

Unser, whose previous biggest paycheck was $290,364 for winning the 1978 race, also might drive for the Penske team for two other races this year.

"I would certainly hope we would run him for the Triple Crown in the three 500s (Michigan and Pocono), but we don't plan anything else at this point," said Penske, who got his sixth Indy victory as an owner when Unser capitalized on the misfortunes of Andretti and Guerrero to join A.J. Foyt as a four-time 500 winner.

Unser, who will be 48 Friday, left the Penske team last year hoping to drive the entire Indy circuit. Penske was unable to offer him that kind of deal because he already had two-time Indy 500 winner Rick Mears and 1985 Winner Danny Sullivan under contract and didn't want to race three cars all year.

"I want to run all the time. I want a full-time deal," Unser said. "I found out last year I didn't want to quit."

"I had several offers (this year), but they weren't what I was looking for."

Despite the victory, Unser isn't expecting to find a full-time ride at this stage of the season.

"I don't know where they would come from," he said. "There's not that many car owners, and the teams that had problems yesterday are set."

A possibility is Porsche, which plans to join the Indy-car circuit in time for the final three races.

"I have no idea about that," Unser said, adding that he would welcome the chance to drive for the new team.

"I'd love to see Porsche come in. I've said earlier that I wish all manufacturers would come into this racing."

Unser, who won previously at Indianapolis in 1970, 1971 and 1978, and won the national driving championship with the Penske team when he replaced the injured Mears in 1985, isn't willing to get into just any race car.

"I've been in this game too long to do that. I have my specifications and there are some teams that just don't meet them," he said. "When I race, I want to be in a situation where I can win. I can win and I'm able to be selective."

"I know that Al will drive a car to its fullest potential," said Penske, who was forced to abandon his PCs in when the cars had trouble running competitively in practice. Penske said he would use the same year-old March cars he campaigned Sunday for this week's race at Milwaukee.

Unser won when Andretti and then Guerrero experienced mechanical problems late in the race.

"I feel sorry for Mario," said Unser, who arrived at the Speedway in 1965 as a rookie with Andretti and two-time Indy winner Gordon Johncock. "I knew I wasn't going to catch him. His Chevy engine was too strong. But he had his problem and it opened the door. That's racing."

Andretti, who set an unofficial lap record of more than 218 mph in practice and easily won the pole position for his 22nd Indy start, led 170 of the 200 laps.

But a broken fuel seal 23 laps from the finish added another chapter to his frustrating story at Indianapolis. Andretti eventually withdrew after 180 laps and finished ninth.

When Andretti went out, the last driver between Unser and the checked victory flag was Guerrero, who took the lead for five laps and seemed in control. But after the 182nd lap, Guerrero came in for a pit stop and couldn't get the car out of gear.

"The clutch was giving us problems. I tried to start it up, but the engine stalled on it," Guerrero said after his second runner-up finish at Indy in four years. "The car was working well and we didn't need tires, so we just wanted to make a quick stop for fuel."

Shoulder ailment may shelve Garvey for year

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Veteran San Diego Padres first baseman Steve Garvey, troubled by a nagging shoulder injury, was placed on the 21-day disabled list Monday, a team spokesman said.

Garvey said he will be tested by doctors Tuesday and a decision would be made then whether surgery is needed to repair a torn biceps tendon in his left shoulder.

If surgery is called for, Garvey said he would be out three to six months, effectively the rest of the 1987 season.

"They seem to think that surgery would repair it," Garvey said of his team doctors. "It's always been my philosophy that if I do have an injury and it can be repaired by surgery, to do it as soon as possible so I have as much recuperative time as possible."

Garvey, 38, who has played in the majors for 17 years, said he had been bothered by pain in the shoulder as early as last season. The 10-time All-Star was benched May 3 after his poor offensive start and a decision by Padres' management to give more playing time to younger players.

Since his demotion, Garvey has had seven at-bats with four hits and two RBI in a pinch-hitting role.

Overall, he is batting .211 with one home run and nine RBI. Garvey has 2,599 career hits.

Minor league outfielder Shane Mack was called up to take his place, a team spokesman said.

Cowboy batters NCAA hitting mark

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Robin Ventura's first-lining home run Monday in Oklahoma State's 11-9 victory over Texas A&M extended his consecutive-game hitting streak to 56 games.

Fifty-six has always been a magic number for hitting streaks because that is the standard Hall-of-Famer Joe DiMaggio of the New York Yankees established in 1941.

Ventura, a sophomore third baseman, will get a chance to extend the streak this season as the victory in the Midwest Regional advanced Oklahoma State to the College World Series.

"To get something started is a good feeling, but not necessarily to keep the streak going. Other people worry about it more than I do," Ventura said.

He said he didn't like being compared with DiMaggio, who had a 61-game streak when he was playing in the minor leagues.

"You are at totally two different levels," Ventura said.

Ventura broke the NCAA consecutive-game hitting streak when he hit safely in his 52th consecutive game to break the mark set by Phil Stephenson of Wichita State in 1962.

He did so reaching 56 mph, having been better than breaking Stephenson's mark.

"Today was probably more important because we won and we're a step higher on the World Series," he said.

Ventura goes through a toe-tapping, light-on-the-gloves routine every time he steps to the plate and it seems to be working as the 19-year-old from Santa Maria, Calif., has a .434 batting average and .743 slugging percentage.

The ritual before each pitch for Ventura goes something like this: rake the box with the foot, tap both shoes with the bat, step out of the box, take two swings, touch the helmet, spit on the gloves and step back in. And 43 percent of the time, he ends that ritual with a hit.

Relaxation plays a part in the ritual, too. The Cowboy went through a relaxation program during the fall, where they learned that it takes about 13 seconds between pitches to be totally relaxed at the plate. Ventura's ritual takes about 13 seconds.

"The hitting streak got kind of out of proportion. While it was coming before the team," Ventura said, "I think all the hoopla's over now. When it was at 47 it was such a big deal. People were calling from all over. It was way out of proportion in my sense."

Teammate Jimmy Barragan labeled Ventura "The Franchise," and the nickname has stuck. Now he just has to live up to it.

So far that hasn't been a problem. Last year's .469 average was a school record, bettering the mark of .463 set by Pete Incaviglia of the Texas Rangers in 1985. Almost every time Ventura gets a hit, he breaks a record.

He has had stretches of near perfection. In the 1986 NCAA Midwest Regional, he got 10 hits in 15 at-bats, scoring 10 runs and driving in seven more. During this year's Big Eight tournament he hit an even 500.

Three Clark errors help Atlanta to season-high run output

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis first baseman Jack Clark tied a major-league record by committing three errors during a five-run second inning and the Atlanta Braves rallied 17 hits Monday night in a 14-5 victory, ending the Cardinals' five-game winning streak.

The Braves reached a season high for runs and hits. They had six doubles, including two by Glenn Hubbard, a triple by Ken Oberkott and Ozie Virgil's solo home run, his 15th this season. Hubbard had three hits while Gerald Perry and Albert Hall each drove home two runs.

Dale Murphy and Perry hit consecutive doubles leading off the second. Singles by Andres Thomas, Hubbard and Smith, and Clark's errors made it 5-0.

With no outs and runners on first and third, Clark misplayed a grounder by Hall for his first error. He laid the ball into the outfield after failing to catch a throw that would have completed an inning-ending double play.

Clark's errors tied a record for most errors in one inning by a first baseman that is held by five others.

ings for his sixth victory Monday and the Cincinnati Reds held off the Chicago Cubs 5-4 to end their four-game losing streak.

The Reds won for only the second time in their last 10 games. They rapped nine hits, including a solo home run by Nick Esasky, and four doubles.

Gullickson, 6-7, gave up six hits. The right-hander allowed a pair of solo homers in the third by Steve Sandberg and Leon Durham, then retired 13 of the next 11 batters before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the bottom of the sixth with a 5-3 lead.

Mets 8, Giants 7

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ronke Wilson triggered a four-run first inning with a single and hit a two-run triple in the sixth Monday, leading the New York Mets to an 8-7 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

The Mets broke a 4-4 tie in the fifth against Mark Grant, 1-1. Wally Backman singled, took third on Keith Hernandez's hit-and-run single and scored on a double-play grounder by Kevin McReynolds.

Astros 7, Pirates 2

HOUSTON (AP) — Glenn Davis homered and drove in three runs and Jim Deshaies pitched a four-hit Monday night as the Houston Astros ended a five-game losing streak by beating Pittsburgh 7-2, stopping the Pirates' five-game winning streak.

Davis hit his eighth home run of the season leading off the fourth inning, breaking a 2-2 tie against Don Taylor, 1-1. Davis, who also doubled and had a sacrifice fly, has eight RBI during a seven-game hitting streak.

Expos 3, Dodgers 1

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Larry Sorensen and two relievers combined on a four-hit and Tim Lincecum and Mitch Webster each rapped three hits Monday night as the Montreal Expos defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1.

Sorensen, 3-1, making his third start of the season, allowed two hits in 6 1/3 innings. He struck out three, walked none and retired 14 consecutive batters at one point.

Phillies 6, Padres 4

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Luis Aguayo hit a pair of solo home runs and Von Hayes hit a three-run homer Monday night, leading the Philadelphia Phillies to a 6-4 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Aguayo's second homer, giving him a career-high eight this season, broke a 4-4 tie in the seventh inning. Aguayo was the first batter to face Dave Dravecky, 1-5. He connected for his third homer in the first inning off Ed Whitson. The Padres tied it in their off the first in John Kruk's three-run homer, his fourth, off Mike Jackson.

Blue Jays take 6-5 victory over Seattle

SEATTLE (AP) — George Bell drove in five runs and hit two homers, including a tie-breaking three-run shot in the eighth inning, as the Toronto Blue Jays rallied to defeat the Seattle Mariners 6-5 Monday.

Seattle had taken a 3-2 lead in the seventh on Rey Quinones' fifth home run of the season. But with one out in the Toronto eighth, Tony Fernandez singled and continued to second on an error by left fielder Phil Bradley.

Rance Mulliniks singled tied the score and Seattle starter Mike Morgan, 4-5, left after walking Willie Upshaw. Bell greeted Steve Shields with his second home run of the game, 15th of the season and his fifth in the four-game series.

Yanks 6, Angels 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Rickey Henderson opened the game with a home run for the 33rd time in his career and Don Pasqua also homered as the New York Yankees beat the Angels 6-3 Monday, completing a sweep of their four-game series.

American League

Winner Tommy John, 4-1, blanked the Angels on five hits over six innings before he was chased during a three-run rally in the seventh.

The Yankees launched an early attack against Jack Lamota, 0-1, a 31-year-old journeyman right-hander making only his third major-league start.

Henderson hit the third pitch of the game for his ninth home run of the season and fifth game-opening homer. His 33 leadoff homers is two short of Bobby Bonds' major-league record. He broke Eddie Yost's American League mark of 28 home runs for the 33rd time in his earlier this season. Bonds holds the National League record of 30 and also hit five in the AL.

Pasqua hit his sixth home run to lead off the second inning and the Yankees scored three times in the fifth for a 5-0 lead.

Royals 6, White Sox 1

CHICAGO (AP) — Bret Saberhagen pitched a six-hitter and became the major league's first eighth game winner and Jorge Orta and Steve Baham homered, leading the Kansas City Royals to a 6-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox on Monday night.

Saberhagen, 8-1, pitched his fifth complete game of the season and exceeded his victory total for 1986 when he struck up to 7-2 after winning the Cy Young Award with a 20-6 record in 1985. He walked two, struck out six and lost his shutout bid when Tim Lincecum hit his seventh home run of the season with two out in the ninth inning.

The victory was the 16th in the last 21 games for the Royals, who snapped Chicago's three-game winning streak.

Tigers 8, Rangers 5

DETROIT (AP) — Matt Nokes homered on his first two at-bats and Lou Whitaker hit a three-run homer as the Detroit Tigers beat the Texas Rangers 8-5 Monday night for their 10th victory in 12 games and reached the 500 mark for the first time since April 20.

After spotting the Rangers a first-inning run on Ruben Sierra's bases-loaded sacrifice fly, the Tigers scored four runs in the bottom of the first and four more in the third.

Whitaker started the Detroit first with a walk off Edwin Correa, 1-5. Darrell Evans singled and both runners moved up on Kirk Gibson's grounder. Alan Trammell singled then home and Nokes hit the first pitch into the second deck in right field for his seventh home run and a 4-1 lead.

Red Sox 10, Indians 5

BOSTON (AP) — Rookie Ellis Burks hit his first career grand slam and Marty Barrett hit a three-run homer as the Boston Red Sox ended a holiday weekend scoring drought Monday with a 10-6 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The Red Sox, who managed just five runs and 12 hits in three consecutive losses to the Chicago White Sox, took a 6-0 lead in the first two innings but needed Burks' tie-breaking grand slam after Cleveland pulled into a 6-6 tie with a five-run fifth.

NBA levies fight fines

SEATTLE (AP) — The NBA has fined Bill Laimbeer of Detroit $5,000 and Larry Bird of Boston $2,000 for their involvement in a scuffle during Saturday's Eastern Conference playoff game in Detroit.

Laimbeer was appeared to pull Bird down by the neck as he went up for a shot in the fourth quarter of the game, which Detroit won 122-104. Bird threw several punches at Laimbeer as they lay on the court and then got up and threw the ball at Laimbeer. Both players were ejected.

Laimbeer was fined for "a flagrant foul after the 24-second clock had expired and for his part in the ensuing altercation," said Rod Thorn, the NBA's vice president for operations. Thorn said Bird was fined for fighting.

Boston's Bill Walton was fined $500 for leaving the bench during the incident.

Avies Copy wins Jersey Derby

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — Avies Copy took the lead for good on the first turn and held off a rally on the far outside by Frontend Duke to narrowly capture the 43rd running of the $300,000 Jersey Derby on Monday at Garden State Park.

The victory was the first stakes win for Avies Copy, the surprising third-place finisher in the Kentucky Derby as a member of the mudfield, and it also earned him a conditional trip to the June 6 Belmont Stakes.

Owner T. Brown Baggett said the condition was that the horse came out of the stakes in good condition.

Avies Copy looked very good in winning the Grade III, 1 1/2-mile Jersey Derby in 2:03 2/5. The 3-year-old son of Lord Avie broke from the rail and was put on the lead by jockey Mickey Salomone on the first turn.

Langer wraps up British title

WENTWORTH, England (AP) — West German Bernhard Langer won the $38,000 British PGA Championship by four strokes over Severiano Ballesteros Monday.

Langer shot a final round 69 for an 18-under-par total of 270 — a tournament record.

It left him well ahead of Ballesteros, whose final round 69 gave him a total of 274. The Spaniard finished four strokes ahead of countryman Jose-Maria Canizares and Australian Peter Senior, who tied for third with 278.

Senior had a 66 Monday and Canizares shot a final-round 69. American Rick Hartman wound up in a four-way tie for fifth at 280. He had a 70 Monday.

Yank personnel robbed again

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — New York Yankees personnel were robbed for the second time on the team's current road trip, including Manager Lou Piniella.

When he returned to the hotel following Saturday night's game, Piniella discovered that $1,300 was missing from his clothing, which had been left unattended in the visiting manager's office at Anaheim Stadium.

When the trip began two weeks ago, Don Mattingly and Mike Pagliarulo also reported thefts. Money was taken from the players' belongings from the visitor's clubhouse in the Seattle Kingdome. Mattingly's losses were reported from $300-$400 and Pagliarulo said $150 was taken from him.

In a clubhouse meeting Sunday prior to Monday's game, Piniella discussed new clubhouse policy, which included tighter security. He also advised his players to take as little money as possible to the ball park with them.

Gregg supports defensive back

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Green Bay Packers Coach Forrest Gregg says his opinion of Mossy Cade has not been altered by a guilty verdict on charges that the defensive back sexually assaulted a relative's wife.

"I have a lot of respect for him and this doesn't change that one bit," Gregg said.

Cade, 26, was found guilty Saturday by a Circuit Court jury on two counts of sexual assault. He is to be sentenced June 29. He faces a maximum penalty of $10,000 and 10 years in prison on each count.

Cade's agent, Jon Teer of Austin, Texas, said the conviction could lead to a suspension from the National Football League. Teer said he hopes the Packers allow Cade to remain in playing condition by working out at the team's training facilities.

Prosecutor Royce Finne said he "really cannot believe the team or the league would permit a convicted sex offender to participate in the league. But that's not my decision."

Gregg, told of Finne's remark, responded: "No one will be able to tell the Green Bay Packers or NFL what to do."

Accident victim loved Indy

ROTHSCHILD, Wis. (AP) — A Rothschild man who was fatally injured when a loose tire struck him during the Indianapolis 500 auto race was a regular visitor to the Memorial Day weekend classic, neighbors say.

"He mentioned to us that he always went to those races," village president Daniel Gorski said of Lyle Kurtenbach, 41.

"He talked about it casually. They usually go every year to watch that race," Gorski said.

The victim had served two years as a village trustee before losing re-election last month.

Kurtenbach, a sales representative for a cement company, was attending a family reunion at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. He was in the stands when a loose tire struck Sunday by a tire that tore loose from Tony Bettenhausen's race car and bounced off Roberto Guerrero's car.

Alysheba resumes workouts

NEW YORK (AP) — Alysheba, the Kentucky Derby and Preakness winner, worked one mile Monday in 1:41 3/5 at Belmont Park.

Trainer Jack Van Berg, whose colt can sweep the Triple Crown with a victory in the June 6 Belmont Stakes, called the workout "a little faster than I wanted."

"He just did it easy, though, and the way he came out of the work was perfect, and that's what counts."

Gulch takes Metropolitan race

NEW YORK (AP) — Gulch, the only 3-year-old in the field, rallied on the outside for a neck victory over King's Swan and survived a foul claim Monday to win the $601,500 Metropolitan Handicap at Belmont Park.

The victory thrust Gulch, who finished seventh in the Kentucky Derby and fourth in the Preakness, into the picture for the June 6 Belmont Stakes at 14-1 odds.

"He'll probably race back in the Belmont," trainer LeRoy Jolley said. "We'll decide in a couple of days."

The one-mile Metropolitan was more to Gulch's liking. With Pat Day aboard, the son of Mr. Prospector covered the distance in 1:24 4/5 under 110 pounds as the lightest in the field at time.

Gulch, who jumped to the lead at the start but quickly dropped back to last, finally overtook King's Swan late in the stretch run.

Soccer fans' throat cut

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — A cricket fan's throat was cut by a flying bottle Monday during a series between England and Pakistan.

Riaz Mohammed, 25, suffered a cut jugular vein.

Police Constable Theresa Sharples gave Mohammed first aid until he reached Birmingham Accident Hospital, where he underwent emergency surgery and was reported in serious condition.

Police said they found a blood-covered wine cruet on the grounds after several clashes between rival fans, but that they were treating the incident as a reckless act rather than a deliberate crime.

Jurors selected in trial over Bias death

UPPER MERIBORO, Md. (AP) — A jury of seven men and five women was selected Monday to hear the trial of Brian Lee Tribble, the man accused of providing University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias with the cocaine that killed him.

Prince George's County Circuit Court Judge James M. Rea sent the latter part of the afternoon listening to a series of pre-trial motions by prosecutor Robert Bonisb and defense attorney Thomas Morrow.

Opening arguments in the case are scheduled to begin Tuesday morning.

Tribble, 24, is believed to be one of three men in the College Park dormitory room with Bias when the 21-year-old collapsed in the early-morning hours of June 19, 1986.

The top pick of the Boston Celtics in the 1985 NBA draft, was subsequently pronounced dead of cocaine intoxication, according to the autopsy report.

The other two men in the room, David George and Terry Long, are expected to be the prosecution's key witnesses in the trial that is expected to last about two weeks.

George and Long, Bias' former teammates, had charges against them dropped in exchange for their testimony against Tribble.

Tribble, a friend of Bias' and a former student at the university, is charged with possession of cocaine, with intent to distribute cocaine and conspiracy to distribute cocaine. He has pleaded innocent to all the charges.

During pre-trial motions, Morrow approached the bench and asked Rea to drop the conspiracy charge, which had been added last month. The basis for the request was not revealed, but Rea denied the motion.

Neither Bonisb or Morrow would comment on the decision, citing a gag order imposed by the judge.

Morrow also asked Rea to sequester the jury for the duration of the trial, but Rea also denied that request, saying he would poll the jury each morning and make a decision on whether to isolate them on a day-to-day basis.

The jury, which was sequestered until being dismissed for the night, was selected from more than 100 persons. Rea opened questioning of the prospective jurors by telling them that this was a different case due to the notoriety it had received.

Within an hour, 24 prospective jurors were eliminated, 21 of whom admitted they had already formed an opinion on the case.

Niekros on verge of breaking pitching record for brothers

By JIM DONAGHY
AP Sports Writer

48-year-old brother, after victory No. 529. "I told him I'll do it and he can go get the record next time."

"I want to see him break the record, since he has the most wins. He deserves it. The ideal situation would be for me to win it and him to save it, for the same team, but that isn't likely to happen."

There also was a time when it seemed unlikely that the Niekros would ever get a chance at becoming baseball's most illustrious pitching brothers since the St. Louis Cardinals' Dean boys — Dizzy and Paul — in the 1930s. "At one point, when the (Detroit) Tigers sent me down, I thought about quitting. I think it was in 1972," Joe said. "The Tigers told me they were sending me to Toledo and the next day I felt so low I didn't even want to get out of bed."

"I went to Toledo, and in my first start, I pitched a perfect game, one of the games I'll remember all my life."

Joe spent a couple of uncertain years in the Detroit organization, but in 1973 hooked up with Phil at Atlanta.

"Being with Phil helped a great deal," Joe said. "He was encouraging me, and being with him helped me remember what my dad (Phil Sr.) always told us. He always said not to be cocky, to appreciate the things we had and to keep things in perspective. He said you've got to be able to handle the ups and downs because that's what life is."

Kneuckleballs also are about handling ups and downs, and the Niekros learned the pitch from their father.

"He taught us the knuckleball," Joe said. "It took me a lot longer to develop it than it did Phil."

In 1979, they both had mastered the pitch, as Joe had a 21-11 record with the Houston Astros and Phil won 21 games for the last-place Atlanta Braves.

The Niekros grew up in Martins Ferry, Ohio, the only boys in a family that included an older sister. Because of the difference in age, Phil was more like a father to Joe, who idolized his older brother.

"We had a great relationship," Phil recalled. "We never fought and quarreled as most brothers do."

In their matchups against each other, Joe holds a 5-4 edge, but remembers one particular victory over Phil.

On May 26, 1976, while pitching for Houston, Joe beat Phil and the Braves 4-3 and hit a home run.

"I'll always remember the time I hit a home run against him... the only one I hit in the majors. It tied the game in the seventh inning, 2-2, and we went on to win."

When Phil won his 300th game on the final day of the 1985 season at Toronto, both were teammates on the Yankees. Joe was the first to reach the amount and congratulate his brother.

"The nicest feeling of the whole day was when Joe told me right after I came off the mound that they took my father out of intensive care," Phil said.

In a few years, Phil, who also has a 3,300 career strikeouts, will surely become a member of the Hall of Fame and Joe will share that day, too.

"Phil's a great pitcher and a great man," Joe said. "I'm proud of him and proud of having the same name."

They have shared a room, a dream and a pitch. Now, Phil and Joe Niekros share a place in baseball history.

Last Saturday night at Anaheim, Calif., Joe Niekro and the New York Yankees beat the California Angels 3-0. It was the 529th victory by the pitching Niekro brothers, with 216 belonging to Joe and 313 belonging to Phil.

"That's the major league record for victories by brothers, set by Gaylord and Jim Perry."

Next Wednesday night, Phil Niekro is scheduled to pitch for the Cleveland Indians against Roger Clemens with a chance to break the tie.

If not this week, then sometime soon no doubt. After all, with a combined 44 seasons, the Niekro brothers and their dancing knuckleballs are good for a few more starts.

"I called me in the morning and wished me luck," Joe, 42, said of his

Stanley Cup focuses on Gretzky

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Wayne Gretzky has become the center of attention for the Philadelphia Flyers in the Stanley Cup finals.

"He's a smart hockey player," Flyers left wing Derrick Smith said of the Edmonton Oilers' All-Star center. "He knows just how long to hang on to the puck and how to slip it to one of our players."

"We have to concentrate a lot more on him in the next game. We can't be letting him make those passes that turn into goals. We have to take the pass from him and maybe bump him off the puck and make it a miserable game for him."

It is because of Gretzky's proficiency at passing that the Oilers are on the brink of winning their third Stanley Cup in four years. They can do it with a victory in Game 5 Tuesday night in the Northlands Coliseum.

Gretzky had three assists on perfect passes, leading the Oilers to a 4-1 victory Sunday night and a commanding 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series.

"He's playing well," Flyers defenseman Mark Howe said of Gretzky, the playoff scoring leader with 31 points (5 goals and 26 assists).

"I know a lot of people want us to hit him, but it's like trying to hit a goal. He's a great hockey player."

Despite what many of the Flyers feel about Gretzky, Flyers Philadelphia goaltender Ron Hextall thinks it would be a mistake for his team to put too much emphasis on Gretzky in Game 5.

"We've got to play one man on Wayne Gretzky, not two," Hextall said. "We can't charge at him because that would leave somebody else open. He's great at taking himself out of the play to set up other people."

Gretzky expects a lot of attention from the Flyers Tuesday night, but not only for himself.

"We expect a tough game," Gretzky said. "We don't want to change a lot about our game. There'll be a lot of flying from both teams."

"But we've had a lot of experience in the Stanley Cup finals. We know the next win will be the hardest."

The Flyers will have to win three games in a row if they want to take the Cup. Only once in Stanley Cup history has a team come back from a 3-1 deficit in the finals — the 1942 Toronto Maple Leafs against the Detroit Red Wings.

For more recent inspiration, the Flyers can look to the performance of the New York Islanders and Red Wings, both of whom rallied from 3-1 deficits in playoff series this season.

The Islanders did it against the Washington Capitals in a first-round series, then almost did it again against the Flyers in the Patrick Division finals before losing in Game 7. The Red Wings did it against Toronto in the Smythe Division final.

"It's not insurmountable," Flyers right wing Rick Tocchet said. "It's like climbing a mountain. It's going to be tough, but I think we've got a lot of mountain climbers here."

The Islanders have done it and we can draw from the Islanders' character.

"If there's a team in the NHL that can do it, I think we can do it."

Along with the 1942 Maple Leafs, and the Islanders and Red Wings in 1987, only one other team in NHL history has come back from a 3-1 deficit in the playoffs — the 1975 Islanders against the Pittsburgh Penguins.

Despite their commanding lead in the series, the Oilers are anything but cocky.

"The Flyers are not going to roll over and give us the Stanley Cup," Gretzky said.

Added Oilers' defenseman Kevin Lowe: "The Flyers have one quality, and that's a lot of blood and guts. We saw it in the Islanders and Montreal series (in the Wales Conference Finals)."
