Gunmen ambush American embassy car, wound 2 men

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Gunmen Foreign Minister Esmat Meguid's office said he asked U.S. Ambassador Frank G. Wisner to form Secretary of State George P. Shultz of Egypt's regret and assure him "that authorities are doing their utmost to apprehend the culprits."

A U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the men escaped because embassy security chief Dennis L. Williams used "defensive driving maneuvers" to get away from the other car — a U-turn on the eight-lane highway along the Nile's east bank. It was the first attack in memory on an American official in Egypt. Several hours afterward, an anonymous telephone caller to a Western news agency said it was the work of Egypt's Revolution, a shadowy group which claimed responsibility for three attacks on Egyptian Embassy personnel that killed two people.

possible both were creased by bullets in the shooting on the corniche that connects the upper-class Maadi suburb with Cairo. Williams, who had small bandages on his head, told reporters at the embassy that the weapon was automatic, but he did not know the fragment," he said. "It was unbelievable," he said of the attack, which occurred beside an overpass about 5 miles south of Cairo. Egyptian officials said three men were in the other vehicle, but Williams said he did not know the number. The attack was the first on U.S. diplomats in Egypt since diplomatic relations were renewed in 1978, but there have been occasional threats from Muslim extremist groups opposed to U.S. policies in the Middle East.

With the new law, it would only "make sense" to extend the same voter registration county-bond election. Vautsa said the Secretary of State's Office and the Association of County Clerks are considering proposing a new law requiring voter registration for county-bond elections. "I'm an advocate of voter registration for all elections," he said.

Kent, who was out of town and couldn't be reached for comment, had declined prosecution because of lack of criminal intent. Kent said, "If (Baxter's) failure has led to further violations in the bond election."
 Baxter and Pence are public servants "duly elected and sworn to uphold" constitutions of the state and the United States, Kent said. Even if the election was "null and void," he claims it is he still wants his damages because he said his constitutional rights were violated.

Money in highway trust accounts or school endowment accounts can't be used to offset possible deficits in state operating budgets, she said. Mrs. Edwards said Baker promised to deny bail to accused murderers and some violent criminals, in fact, she says, it's too long. Hakim says he's holding Secord funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Albert Hakim, a key money man in the Iran-Contra affair, says he still is holding money in a bank account earmarked for retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, who directed much of the operation, a congressional investigator said Tuesday.

Hakim's public testimony, which was to have begun on Wednesday, has been postponed by a week to allow investigators to follow up leads, obtain documents and corroborate testimony taken over the weekend in private depositions, the House and Senate committees announced.

Rep. Michael DeWine, R-Ohio, one of four lawmakers responsible for the main questioning of Hakim, said he believed that when the businessman does take the stand he will offer intriguing glimpses into how money was moved among various secret accounts to keep it hidden, and what it was used for.

"It's an extremely complicated story," said DeWine. "It's going to fill in some blanks as far as the actual money trail. It's going to be interesting when we compare his testimony with Secord's, because he is the money man."

Specifically, DeWine said Hakim will testify that he put an unspecified amount of money aside in a secret Swiss account earmarked for Secord, who has denied that profit was a motive for his participation in sales of arms to Iran.

"The money was in fact earmarked, put in an account with a name on it. Hakim will say, 'This was Secord's money,'" DeWine said.

But that will not end debate about Secord's motives, he added, because Hakim — Secord's business partner — also says Secord at one point told him he did not want the money that was being set aside.

"I'm sure the senators and congressmen are going to delve into that, and you're going to get all the ramifications and nuances of that conversation," DeWine said. "There will be questions remaining. You still are back to the question of what Secord's true motivation is and was."

Several members of the House and Senate panels have said they intend to have Secord, who was the leadoff witness for the hearings, back to face another round of questioning, and Secord has said he is willing to return.

Hakim controverted the Swiss bank accounts used in the deals, and according to a deposition given last month he still controls bank accounts containing $3 million.

Having postponed Hakim's appearance, investigators will begin the fourth week of televised hearings Wednesday by instead questioning retired Air Force Col. Robert C. Dutton, a man who ran day-to-day operations of a resupply network for Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

Dutton's ties to Secord go back to the 1970s when the two worked together on U.S. military aid to the regime of the Shah of Iran, who was later deposed by the Islamic fundamentalist revolution of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

In Spring 1986, Dutton retired from the military, joined the firm of Secord and Hakim, Stanford Technology Trading Group International, and assumed responsibility for running the rebel resupply operation. Dutton worked out of the firm's Vienna, Va., office, staying in close contact with operators at Ilopango Air Base in El Salvador, according to published reports.

Eugene Hasegawa, the American captured when a C-124K transport plane was shot down over Nicaragua last October while attempting to drop weapons to the Contras, has said the man who recruited him — William J. Cooper — was hired by Dutton. Cooper was killed in the crash.

Dutton also had a hand in the Iran arms sales, traveling to Israel in the fall of 1985 to supervise the loading of a plane carrying ROW anti-tank missiles to Iran, according to a report from the Senate Intelligence Committee. He also was reported to have gone to Beirut last November with Secord to talk with hostage David Jacobson after his release.

Commuter plane hits fences, vehicles

KENNER, La. (AP) — A twin-engine commuter plane taking off from New Orleans International Airport on Tuesday crashed through several fences and slammed into at least three vehicles as it skidded across an eight-lane highway. All 11 people on board escaped using emergency exits. Thirteen people, including some motorists, were taken to area hospitals for treatment.

Nine passengers and two pilots were aboard the British Aerospace Jetstream 31, a twin-engine propeller that seals 19, Jobe said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles.

Three were listed in serious condition, but the others apparently suffered minor injuries, officials said.

Continental Express Flight 2962, operated by Air New Orleans, lost power for an unknown reason as it took off about 4:45 p.m. from Eglin Air Force Base at Fort Walton Beach, Fla., said Continental Express president Tony Jobe.

No word on whether pilot will be questioned Stark probe team meets with Iraqis BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Americans investigating the Iraqi attack on the USS Stark met with defense officials Tuesday, but there was no word on whether they would be allowed to see the pilot who fired the missiles.

A diplomatic source said "everything seems to be going well" in the joint investigation of the May 17 attack in the Persian Gulf, which killed 37 American sailors on the guided-missile frigate and wounded 21.

Unconfirmed reports in the Iraqi capital Tuesday said the pilot had been beheaded, apparently for embarrassing President Saddam Hussein's government. Information Ministry officials denied it.

The eight-man U.S. team led by Rear Adm.

David Rogers, deputy director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, spent several hours with senior Iraqi officials Tuesday morning.

Afterward, they drove in a motorcade to the fortified U.S. Embassy for meetings with American officials and communication with Washington, diplomatic sources said.

Several of the Navy, Army and Air Force specialists scuffled between the embassy compound and the Iraqi Defense Ministry during the afternoon. Neither the Americans nor Iraqis would comment on the discussions.

"Both sides are determined to stay with this until they can wrap it up," one U.S. official said privately. "There's no deadline. They're here at the invitation of the Iraqi government, and they're engaged in talks to determine what happened and prevent it happening again."

He said initial sessions with the Iraqis were "primarily technical meetings."

The official did not elaborate, but a central question is why the lone pilot Iraq says attacked the Stark did not respond to two signals from the ship identifying it as American.

President Hussein has said the pilot of the French-built Mirage F-1 thought he was firing his Exocet missiles at an Iranian target.

Iraq's official news agency said Hussein received a cable from President Reagan to mark the feast ending the Moslem holy month of Ramadan that said: "The tragic attack on the Stark underlines the need to bring about peace to the region."

China sends Iran new shipment of missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — China has shipped a second delivery of Silkworm antiship missiles to Iran, a U.S. official said Tuesday as the Pentagon disclosed that the Navy had escorted a Kuwaiti cargo ship carrying U.S. tanks to Bahrain.

News that the Navy had accompanied a Kuwaiti merchant ship carrying American-made M-162 tanks came as the Reagan administration weighs options for protecting oil tankers in the Persian Gulf.

The Chinese missiles were delivered about two weeks ago, adding to an arsenal provided by China earlier in the year, a U.S. official said Tuesday. They could enhance Iran's ability to attack ships moving through the Strait of Hormuz.

"The missiles add a dangerous dimension to shipping in the Gulf," said the official, who demanded anonymity.

He said Iran had prepared sites for the weapons, but had not deployed either batch of Silkworms.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz asked the Chinese on a trip to Beijing in March to limit weapons shipments to Iran. He reiterated the appeal to a visiting Chinese military delegation here last week.

Administration officials said China's reply was to not acknowledge arming Iran with the rockets.

Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., returned Tuesday night from a visit to the Persian Gulf and the frigate, the USS Stark. He called for the establishment of a multinational approach to keeping the oil flowing from the region.

"We must not permit the tragedy of the USS Stark to weaken our resolve to defend our commitments in the region," Sasser said. "But we cannot be blind to the danger of the situation."

Deaver's lawyers file counsel law challenge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense attorneys for lobbyist Michael K. Deaver on Tuesday filed a new constitutional challenge to the independent counsel statute that could delay the perjury trial of the former presidential aide.

The lawyers appealed U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson's refusal to dismiss the indictment against Deaver, which the defense contended was invalid because the independent counsel law is unconstitutional.

The trial, scheduled to begin June 8, might be delayed several months if the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals agrees to take the case.

Deaver is charged in the five-count indictment with lying to a House subcommittee and a federal grand jury that investigated the lobbying business he formed after resigning as deputy White House chief of staff in 1985.

The defense contends the appointment of independent counsels by a special three-judge court under a provision of the Ethics in Government Act violates the constitutional principle of separation of powers.

Opinion

Flexibility remains the hallmark of the U.S. Constitution

Americans love to argue. What are you, a Democrat or a Republican? Feminist or traditionalist? Are you pro-defense, or anti-spending? Do you like the Sandinistas or the Contras?

If you think that we have disagreements, imagine yourself as a framer of our national government 200 years ago. You didn't have a blueprint to work with — democracies weren't exactly the rage at the time.

But you knew what you didn't like, and that was a place to start. You didn't appreciate the presence of kings, royal privileges, or the taxes that they seemingly generated. If you were from the South, you were afraid that the northerners would go after your slaves. If you were from a small state, you feared bigger states. And so on.

AMERICA

Retrospect and Prospect

Today:
Scott Tudehope

No wonder if I took four years for just the Articles of Confederation to be signed. A league of free and independent states, each with the veto power of a sledgehammer, the Articles clearly addressed states' rights, but the national government was a rudderless raft. She was a real pushover.

Enter our heroes. On May 25, 1787, seven states — a majority — were seated in the Philadelphia State House. Although all agreed that General Washington should chair the proceedings, to even be there was controversial. Fear of a strong national government, rather than distance, kept the other states away. Patrick Henry "smelled a rat," fearing that the national government would obliterate the various states' positions, while Palme, Jefferson and John Adams were in Europe. Franklin, now 81, was credited with cooling hot tempers in that humid little room, while the youngest member of the group, Hamilton at 32, stirred up the fire of discord on occasion. And there was so much at stake. Would they agree to set up a parliamentary form of national legislature? How much power would the Congress have over the states? Would there be a singular ruler of some type, or would there be a three-man committee, as some wanted? How would property rights figure into citizenship duties? Where would the courts figure into all this?

Thirty-nine of the 55 men there signed the document in September. While dissenters left early to warn their state legislatures, there was right and wrong in each man's theory. I clearly so respected them that I didn't want to take a chance on either man getting mad at me. And therein lies the reason why much is wrong with our government. Some people are just afraid to speak out.

What those men of Philadelphia came away with was more than a document. It was a set of ideas that swirled around the dignity of man. To be sure, women and racial minorities were excluded at first, as they came at the time. But for 200 years, this imperfect piece of paper, now with 26 amendments, and languidly considering one more for its females, boasts a certain durability.

And its hallmark is its flexibility — just the thing for people who love to argue.

Now bodies are needed for hearing on springs

People of Magic Valley, now I need your bodies. No, I'm not a dirty old man. I need all of you to show up for the hearing — either at 10 a.m. or at 7 p.m. May 28, at the Gooding Grange Hall on South Main in Gooding.

I would hope to have enough of you to more than fill that building and either extend it into the second day or move it to a larger building. You've been great in signing petitions and writing letters — but now we need you.

This is a first where public interest will be tried and it is a law and has been now for eight years. What better place to get public interest than here at Niagara Springs — with a comparison to Crystal Lake and the area there?

We just can't let it happen. It's one of the last few left of those fantastic springs and the creek through the park.

I'm representing you, the public, and I know I've had only a minimum of education. I'll be opposed by Idaho Power and Hardy's attorneys, and they're the best.

I just couldn't find one who would give me senior citizen rates or take food stamps.

Please come and help. Back off from that TV, give up a few brews that night. I just need people, people, people, who will be asked to say just one sentence is all, but say it over and over again.

You think you've got problems speaking in public. I know I have, but we've got to do it or those waters will be gone forever — to the benefit of Mr. Hardy and his kind.

Leave Niagara Springs as they are at present

Help! Cannot we have Niagara Springs left as it is? All we have left is Niagara Springs. We've lost Clear Lake, Thousand Springs, Box Canyon, Crystal Springs. Do we have to lose everything?

I have lived in the Clear Lakes, West Point, Wendell area all my life (all but 6 weeks) and the time my husband was in service. I went to a country school for 9 years at Clear Lakes. We enjoy the canyon, its beauty, nature, and most of all, the clean, clear water. Our children have enjoyed it also.

Niagara is a peaceful place; a place where you can relax and rest, a place where you can lie on the grass and look up into the sky and thank God for all your blessings. As I said before, we've lost the other places. So please leave us one that is close. So we can have it — a place to fish, swim, relax, for family get-togethers. Let our generations to come to know some of the beauty of nature's ways, that is left in our area.

You say, I'm not for progress. You are wrong. I do believe in progress, but not at the expense of everyone else. I see from other hatcheries what is happening.

How many times we fished over the years in the canyon. Not too many places are left. By the way the crow flies it's not very far to Box Canyon, a little over a mile. That's out now, the natural spawning places are all leaving us. To me it is more educational to see a natural environment than to see a hatchery environment.

"Think!" People of Gooding County and the Magic Valley area. Let's not lose Niagara Springs as we have lost the others. Our historical scenery is slowly, rather fast, going down the drain. I, for one, am against any more scenic upsets. Let's leave something of our beautiful canyon for the generations to come.

Accusations are detrimental

A May 18th Post-Register story quoted Clark Collins, president, Blue Ribbon Coalition, as saying that he had "spoken to the Idaho Conservation League" at the group's spring conference on public lands at Redfish Lake.

I was one of the 30 organizers for this meeting and specifically in charge of registration. Collins was not registered. In fact, he was present at all, he did not pay the conference fee.

Collins was quoted in the P-R and elsewhere as saying that the ICL is "attempting to dominate everyone . . . that ICL can't co-exist with the rest of us." Collins failed to say that the 150 at- "radical" groups as the Idaho Fish & Wildlife Service, Challis National Forest, SNRA, Idaho Wildlife Federation, The Nature Conservancy, Audubon, Outfitters & Guides Association, the Columbia River Indian Tribes, and others. Collins clearly represents only one group — motorized off-road vehicles — as evidenced by the first issue of his Blue Ribbon newspaper.

ICL is also accused by Collins of being "environmental extremists." At Redfish, Dave Foreman of Earth First and former Congressional aide Andy Wiesner both attended. Their contrasting styles were identified by reporters present as "the rebel" and "the pragmatist." To say one or the other is dictating ICL policy is ridiculous.

Collins has distributed letters calling conservationists "nature nazis." He appears the spokesman for Idaho's off-road vehicle interests. As such, his continuous vindictive name calling and accusations toward those who disagree with him, is detrimental toward resolving the uses of Idaho's public lands.

Peavey's comments overdue

You know I once had two uncles, one was Democrat, one was Republican. Now both my uncles had very strong views on how our government should be run and how the company should progress. Now I greatly admired and respected both men, so therefore I would never argue a point with either one, even though I could see that there was right and wrong in each man's theory. I clearly so respected them that I didn't want to take a chance on either man getting mad at me. And therein lies the reason why much is wrong with our government. Some people are just afraid to speak out.

Now in Sunday's paper I read with much interest the article from Harry Massoth. Mr. Massoth truly writes very well and brings his point across. But in reading this article the message I gathered was that Mr. Massoth was leading all men would be under the rule of one governing body. Well, if this was the true meaning Mr. Massoth was trying to relate to the people I have a few things to state.

First of all, I just won't work. This is not a new idea. The communist party has been teaching this idea since the early days of its beginning. This idea goes back as far as Alexander the Great. It didn't work then and it can't work now. When you put that much power in the hands of a few, greed and corruption are sure to follow.

Even the Bible speaks against this type of government. True it may sound good in theory and on paper, but this idea, Mr. Massoth, just wasn't wash.

Also in Sunday's Times-News there was an article on John Peavey for denouncing Idaho Power Company for failing to include a PCB warning with a trucking shipment of transformers that crashed May 16 east of Fairfield.

"Congratulations John!" But boy, hardy, it's about time. Senator Peavey, about a month ago I wrote an article for the Times-News, stating how most truck drivers was not aware of the cargo they was hauling, and how they was not even properly trained on the proper procedure on how to handle an emergency should one arise. I'm sure you feel as I do that all laws must be obeyed by all people, whether they be very small, small business or a very large and powerful business. I know it's very hard to crawl out on that limb and take a stand, but after all you did represent me, I know it's very hard to crawl out on that limb and take a stand, but after all you did represent me, you will find that you've not out there by yourself. So congratulations John, but I might add it's long overdue.

Different view of Hansen

As a visitor from Washington, D.C., I was shown the letter in your paper signed by Alice Jackson who believes that convicted felon George Hansen is one of the greatest men of our day and that he has been the victim of persecution, etc.

I have never read such balderdash. I suggest that Alice Jackson and Jennie Ross read the transcripts of their hero's trial. It might also interest them to know that, on the Hill, he is known as Cry-Baby Hansen.

Guilty-trying the guilty

Our congressmen are holding one hearing after another. They seem to be making mountains out of mole hills. It is apparent that the guilty is trying the guilty. While they are spending untold amounts of money holding hearing after hearing, their own despicable actions go unquestioned. If the law has been broken, and the guilty should be punished, why are not the courts the proper place for the offenders to be tried?

In the past 50 years, treason in high places has been committed. Our country has been sold out, our free enterprise system strangled, our Constitution discarded, our national honor dissipated, and our elected officials participate and wink at these treasonous proceedings.

They would prefer to become television stars, with tinkering little hearings which will expose them as such to the world. The image they wish to portray is one of watch dog. How hypocritical. When are we going to awaken to the fact they have bankrupt our country, discarded the free enterprise system, invoked socialism, and closed our industry and driven it to foreign lands?

Letters/ Readers should look between the lines of Chisholm's letter

Profit by his insights

When I read my dear son, William K.'s, letter in The Times-News 5/20/87, I know there would be responses from many good Americans incensed by his seemingly almost traitorous remarks. I beg them to read between the lines, to reconsider their reactions.

Bill loves his country deeply — so deeply that he treasures its natural resources and endowments and is outraged by the negative behavior of many of his fellow citizens. To him and to me, waving the beautiful symbol of our great country is good — but much more beneficial to its future concern about the decline of the traditional moral value in business, politics, entertainment, respect for life in all stages, education, and even religion.

True, each generation has produced its share of backsliders, explorers, concert artists, deviates and sybarites, but they were recognized for what they were and had much less impact on society as a whole than their glamorized successors of the present day. To me it makes much more sense to listen to Bill and profit by his insights than to castigate him for "telling I like it is."

Description was improper

William K. Chisholm, in his most recent diatribe, said "The flag once stood for the government of the people, for the people and by the people a nation under God.

In the same article, Chisholm described the flag of the United States of America as "the ugliest damn flag" he'd ever seen. If he had exercised his freedom of speech, which many of us flagwavers defended, in the same language back in the days he described, his next attempt would have been through a slit in his anus.

Checked on chapter, verse

In reply to a letter of opposition to the LDS insert in your Times-News from Virgil Jennings on May 11.

Eight points of opposition and I just picked one (a) God is an exalted man with a body of flesh and bones.

In the New Testament, Jesus stated that he was the same as his father and you see one you see the other.

In Luke Chapter 24 Verse 39, Jesus told his disciples "Handle me and see, for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me bare." I don't know what Bible Mr. Jennings uses, but I use the King James version and I checked this chapter and verse in four different Bibles, modern version, international version, one printed in 1888, another printed in 1802 — before the Book of Mormon was revealed, and my own scriptures. I never bothered to check out the others as he was so far off on this one he would not believe anything anyway.

Also, we commend Latham Motors for their flag display. We join with others to protest loud mouth salesmen on TV.

We do read your editorial page every day and some days we agree with you and others we do not.

Pool can be free in future

It's a nice town to live in, thanks to the early (and later) settlers who planned for streets, schools and parks to be enjoyed by all.

For 75 years or so, youngsters in Buhl had an easily accessible place to swim, within walking distance of their homes; it was available also to others when their parents came to town to shop.

And it was free, until the summer of '86 when user fees were initiated.

Recently in TIME magazine I came across an item about the national Boys Club and its effort across the nation to give kids a break, "a place where they can feel good about themselves."

Our swimming pool and wading pool were given our children something healthy, positive, and refreshing to do in their summer holidays. The park was "a place where they could feel good about themselves."

to look through a fence at others having fun; it is a frustration that can last a lifetime.

The Buhl situation, a free pool, is a bit different from other city pools in that it is a tradition which has existed almost since the time the townsite was settled, and a good tradition is something which citizens are loathe to relinquish. Not only children, but all age groups have enjoyed the pool.

The pool is maintained through the city property tax; it is managed by the city.

Everyone pays property tax, directly or indirectly, in varying degrees, in one way or another through rents, mortgage payments, home ownership. Now the pool, paid for by everyone, becomes reserved for those most able to pay to swim. It is a true subsidy, with limited benefits.

An uglier way to say this is "since the pool is maintained through the city property tax, and the user fee, the wealthy are subsidized by the poor who cannot afford the fee."

Privatization is not the answer. There are water saving swimming pools in many cities of Buhl, within about 10-15 miles of Buhl, for those who can afford to pay.

Subsidized swimming should be for the benefit of all the children of the community, not just the privileged few, and we should remember that the farm area which surrounds us is also a part of the Buhl community.

The town was able to manage the free pool from the beginning, through wars and depressions, until '86. Surely it can be done again if the desire is strong enough.

Help keep parks cleaned up

I recently sent a letter to the Twin Falls County Commissioners in reference to one of their county parks. It is a pleasure and an enjoyment to fish and camp at this particular park because of the hard work and labor of the caretaker there.

However, we have visited several other parks and fishing areas in other counties around our area, and some could be called garbage disposal areas and certainly not fit to either camp or fish in — in fact, these areas are not even sanitary for the public's use.

Therefore, we as two retired people send out a request to the public for their awareness of these conditions, and help by putting forth every effort to clean up and help maintain the city and county parks, recreation areas, and fishing areas in the Magic Valley and in all of southeastern Idaho.

The city and county workers and caretakers do more than their part in making these areas a pleasure to visit, so why can't we, the public, do our part in appreciation for what they do and help keep our areas of Idaho beautiful.

Platform plunges, kills 3

HOUSTON (AP) — A window-washing platform blown sideways by strong winds fell from near the top of a 36-story downtown skyscraper Tuesday, killing three people and injuring a fourth, officials said.

Killed were two men who were on the platform when it fell and a female pedestrian, said Paul Pepe, director of emergency services for Houston. The injured person, a woman, was also a pedestrian.

"It looks like they (the men) might have stayed with the scaffolding all the way down. The two men were in the front of the scaffold. The women were side by side when they were hit," Pepe said.

Four bolts anchoring the window-washing scaffolding to the top of the Pennzoil Building gave way as winds blew the scaffolding sideways, said Deputy Fire Chief L.O. Martin.

The scaffolding, believed to have fallen from the 31st floor, bounced off the street and hit the two women, who were standing at a corner of the busy downtown intersection.

Goetz victim admitted plot

NEW YORK (AP) — One of four youths wounded by Bernhard Goetz said he lay wounded on the floor of a subway car that they had intended to rob Goetz, but "the white guy shot us first," a police officer testified Tuesday.

The testimony came shortly after Justice Stephen Crane ruled the jury would descend into the city's subway system this week to examine a subway car similar to the one in which the Dec. 22, 1984, shootings occurred.

Officer Peter Smith, the third defense witness, testified one of the victims made the statement about their intent to rob Goetz as the policeman and his partner attempted to aid the four wounded teens.

But Smith, a rookie at the time, acknowledged under cross-examination that he never told detectives at the crime scene about the statement, and he never made a notation in his memo book, as required by police regulations, before he went off duty that day.

Doctor admits fake results

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A doctor responsible for drug tests on employees involved in railroad and airplane accidents pleaded guilty Tuesday to giving federal officials false test results on workers in three train accidents.

Delbert J. Laceyfield, 52, faces up to 15 years in prison and $30,000 in fines on the three counts. U.S. District Judge Lee West set no sentencing date and released him on $5,000 bond.

The charges allege that Laceyfield provided false results on blood plasma tests, presumably conducted with equipment he did not have, to determine any recent drug or alcohol use by railroad workers, U.S. Attorney Bill Price said.

Jay Bond, Laceyfield's attorney, said neither he nor his client would comment.

Although Laceyfield supervised test results on the Conrail-Amtrak accident Jan. 4 outside Baltimore in which 16 people died, that accident did not trigger the U.S. Department of Transportation's investigation, said Wendy DeMocker, a spokeswoman for the Federal Railroad Administration.

Tornado survivors bury dead

SARAGOSA, Texas (AP) — Thousands of people joined with the surviving residents of this little town Tuesday as they buried 17 of the 23 people killed by the tornado that destroyed their community.

President Reagan issued a disaster declaration Tuesday to make federal aid available. The Red Cross had received almost half a million dollars in pledges of donations.

"Today we bid farewell to men and women who loved Jesus and his church and who loved their family and would die for their children. . . They will be missed," said Roman Catholic Bishop Raymond Pena of the El Paso diocese, who said Mass from the back of a flatbed truck.

The tornado struck Friday night during a graduation ceremony for preschool pupils. Parents pulled their children from the stage and tried to shelter them under tables and chairs, but six children were among the dead.

Scores of pallbearers carried 16 caskets, one holding the bodies of a mother and her baby, and set them in two neat rows for the funeral Mass. Later, 12 caskets were lowered into the ground in the Saragosa cemetery; four were buried later in nearby Balmorhea.

Pena reminded the mourners that while their church was destroyed by Friday's twister, its foundation was intact.

Reagan lauds CIA as Webster sworn in

McLEAN, Va. (AP) — President Reagan, witnessing William Webster's installation Tuesday as the 14th director of the CIA, pictured the spy agency as underappreciated, misunderstood and a likely subject of controversy. "Unfortunately, many of your successes can only be celebrated in private," Reagan told employees at CIA headquarters in this Washington suburb.

Reagan traveled here by motorcade to pay tribute to Webster, the former FBI director confirmed by the Senate last week on a 94-vote, and to say a few words about the CIA, founded in 1947 to replace the Office of Strategic Services.

"It has become fashionable in some quarters to act as if the Central Intelligence Agency were somehow not completely a part of our own government, as if it were not constantly working against hostile powers who threaten the security of the American people," the president said.

"But our liberty, our way of life, requires eternal vigilance," he added. "The United States cannot survive in the modern world without a vigorous intelligence agency capable of acting swiftly and in secret. So long as I am president, I will never consent to see our intelligence capability undermined."

After taking the oath of office from Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell, said Webster said, "We will work with the congressional committee with must act in secret matters as surrogates for Congress and the American people, and we will be worthy of their trust," he said. "And we will diligently carry out our assignments around the world, however difficult, with fidelity to the Constitution and the laws of our beloved country."

Webster succeeds William J. Casey.

Ride leaves astronaut corps for science post

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Sally K. Ride, the first American woman to fly in space, is leaving NASA to take a position at Stanford University, her alma mater, she said Tuesday.

Ms. Ride, who was 36 on Tuesday, will be leaving the National Aeronautics and Space Administration this fall to become a scientist for the Stanford University Center for International Security and Arms Control in Palo Alto, Calif.

The announcement comes a few weeks after she and her husband, astronaut Steven Hawley, were divorced.

She became the first American woman in space in 1983 as a mission specialist on a six-day space shuttle mission with four crewmates. She flew a second time in 1984 on an eight-day mission.

She also held a variety of other jobs for NASA, including service as a member of the presidential commission that investigated the Challenger accident.

Tuesday that she would miss spaceflight, but that the Stanford job "is a good opportunity. I'm going to be using for the first time in quite a while, my physics background."

The new job, said Ms. Ride, "is something I've been thinking about for quite a while." Spaceflight, she said, was a unique opportunity, something that I am well aware that most people don't get a chance to do. I'm going to miss it.

In 1982, Ms. Ride married Hawley, an astronaut who met after they were both named to the astronaut corps. She said they separated in September and were divorced a few weeks ago in Houston.

"It was completely amicable," she said Tuesday. "We talk at least once a week."

Hawley, deputy chief of the astronaut office, declined comment. A NASA spokesman said he is in line for spaceflight.

In a statement released by NASA, Ms. Ride said her time in NASA gave her "invaluable experience."

Ms. Ride was one of six women selected for the astronaut corps in 1978 and her assignment to the shuttle flight made her an instant celebrity, which she found distasteful.

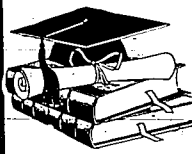

She chided the press for making "such a big deal" about a woman in space and declared: "It's time that people realize that women in this country can do any job that they want to do."

RAZOR BLADES

Q. Shavers rarely remember exactly when they last put new blades in their razors. Why aren't blades sold in containers that show the day each new blade is removed?

A. That would cut into profits. Even as mustard sellers make less money on mustard caken than a mustard left on the plate, so blade makers make much money on blades too soon tossed out.

New Jersey senator target of roast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey, who insists he's not yet interested in running for president, will be roasted next month by fellow Democrats who are scheduled for a public ribbing June 23 from seven Democrats who have announced or are expected to announce a bid for their party's 1988 presidential nomination.

The event, with the Capitol Hill-based Independent Action as the host, is a fund-raiser for 1987 Senate and House candidates, said group spokeswoman Carol Casperson.

The presidential prospect "roasters" will include Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee, former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt and the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

"They've all accepted," Mr. Casperson said.

Asked why Bradley was picked, she said: "We always try to pick somebody who we think is going to be a national figure in the future."

Bradley, 43, has resisted suggestions that he join the 1988 Democratic field.

Independent Action, headed by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, supports "progressive Democratic candidates," Ms. Casperson said. She said 1,500 tickets will be available for the Bradley roast, at prices from $250 to $500.

Wisconsin city considers banning profanity

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Officials are considering toughening anti-harassment rules for city workers by banning profane language on the job.

"We have tight now as part of our anti-harassment... administrative rules that the use of sexually degrading language or racial epithets is forbidden," mayoral aide David Chandler said Tuesday. "It's my feeling that we may have to look at the use of abusive, profane language in the workplace in general."

Concern about profane language stems from recent racial discrimination lawsuits against the city, Chandler said. He added that profanity was cited in the suits as adding to an abusive atmosphere.

Of course, deciding what is abusive language would be an issue, said Chandler, who is considering the issue with Assistant City Attorney Eunice Gibson.

FBI agent searches home of Japanese Americans shortly after U.S. entered World War II

Display on 1942 internment marks constitutional chapter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Smithsonian Institution is marking the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution with an educational exhibit that chronicles what civil libertarians consider one of the darkest chapters in U.S. history: the World War II internment of thousands of Japanese Americans.

But four months before the show's official opening, it already has triggered a torrent of mail and undergone a name change.

Instead of carrying the title, "With Liberty and Justice for All," words taken from the Pledge of Allegiance, the show now will borrow four famous words from the Constitution itself: "A More Perfect Union: Japanese Americans and the U.S. Constitution."

The director of the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History knew from the start that they wanted this exhibition to be more than a costume drama or mere entertainment. They wanted to mount a show that would not only attract large numbers of visitors, but send a message as well.

The tempest over its controversial focus indicates that they are well on the way toward that goal.

The museum directors have received letters complaining that dredging up photographs, artwork and footage from the World War II prison camps is an inappropriate way to mark the bicentennial of the Constitution.

But they are also getting mail congratulating them for putting together this first-of-its-kind exhibition.

The exhibit, like the story of the Japanese Americans themselves, begins with the immigration of Asians to the United States at the end of the 19th century.

It touches on the prejudice all Asians found in America, then goes on to tell the story of World War II: the mass detentions and the U.S. exevative of Japanese Americans. The exhibit follows the Japanese Americans as they fight for compensation for property losses suffered by those who were imprisoned.

"It was staged the show in 1945, at the end of World War II, this would be regarded as a story of the failure of the Constitution to protect individual rights," Crouch said.

"By taking it up to the present, we have the story of a people who have struggled for change."

The exhibit will include not only photographs but videotapes of people, talking about their experiences in detention, and military gear worn by Japanese Americans who fought in the war.

"The new title really encapsulates what this show is all about," said Crouch. "It is about people who have spent time working within the system, trying to build a more perfect—union,—not just for themselves but for everyone."

All the attention is a welcome change for exhibit curators. "Normally, we get absolutely no feedback. But (this) subject, no matter how you feel about it, apparently has touched everyone."

The Smithsonian Institution has scheduled a number of more traditional salutes to the bicentennial of the Constitution, ranging from historical seminars and symposiums to an exhibit of Colonial American portraits.

The Japanese-American internment show will be the biggest, and perhaps the longest-running, Crouch said the exhibit, which has cost $500,000 to $750,000 to put on.

Wives of hostages plead for release

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The wives of three American teachers and an Indian educator kidnapped four months ago pleaded with their husbands on the Islamic holiday ending the holy month of Ramadan this week.

"As they have given the gift of knowledge to thousands, at this time please give them the gift of freedom," Virginia Rose Steen said. Her husband is American, hostage Alan Steen, 47, of Boston.

All four men were teachers at the U.S.-affiliated Beirut University College in Moslem-west Beirut. They were abducted from the campus Jan. 24 by gunmen disguised as policemen.

The Islamic religion's Feast of Lesser Bairam, ending the month of dawn-to-dusk fasting, falls on Wednesday or Thursday depending on lunar monitoring of the crescent moon that marks the beginning of each month of the Moslem lunar calendar.

All four wives appeared at a news conference on the college campus.

Badr Turner, pregnant wife of hostage Jesse Turner, 39, of Boise, Idaho, said: "We will get our first baby within three weeks. We plead with you to release our husbands as a gift (Lesser Bairam) gift."

"In the name of all holy teachings and at the occasion of this blessed feast we call on all to work for the release of our husbands," said Foryal Polhill, wife of American hostage Robert Polhill, 53, of New York City.

Mrs. Turner is a Moslem Arab, and Mrs. Polhill is a Christian Arab.

"I wish all of you a happy Eid (feast) and hope you will be freed soon," said Lalmani Singh, wife of hostage Mithleshwar Singh, a native of India and legal resident alien of the United States.

Istvan Jibai, for the Liberation of Palestine, a group unknown until the kidnapping of the professors, has offered to swap the four captives for 400 Arab prisoners held in Israel.

Pollard scandal blame laid at Peres' doorstep

JERUSALEM (AP) — A military and economic aid, was parliamentary committee, looking into the Jonathan Jay Pollard spy case laid most of the blame for the scandal Tuesday on the doorstep of Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, Israel television reported.

It said the committee also held Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin responsible.

A second, government-appointed committee faulted the entire government on Tuesday but did not single out individual politicians and made no specific recommendations, Israel radio said.

The investigations were made to appease U.S. wrath over the case.

Pollard, 32, an American Jew, was sentenced in Washington to life in prison last March for selling hundreds of classified U.S. military documents to Israel in 1984 and 1985 while employed as a civilian U.S. Navy analyst.

On Tuesday, the seven-member parliamentary foreign affairs and defense subcommittee said Peres was "first among equals" in responsibility. Peres was prime minister at the time and head of the three-man ministerial team which handled the affair after Pollard's arrest in November 1985.

The committee raked Rabin, a member of the left-leaning Labor Party, for failing to supervise the Defense Ministry spy unit which operated Pollard, the television said.

Peres, head of the Labor Party and Shamir, leader of the right-wing Likud bloc, have switched jobs in the coalition government since the Pollard case broke.

Barbie remains mute as 5 witnesses identify him in court

LYON, France (AP) — Klaus Barbie, his attorney and the French-German man who had not answered the defendant during the four years of judicial investigation claimed to be the witness against his will Tuesday to face five questions posed by Presiding Judge Andre Cerdini.

Barbie, 73, who since May 13 had nine-member jury during the 25-minute confrontation. "And, as crimes against humanity as Gestapo chief of Lyon, smiled and nodded to answer."

In rapid succession, five witnesses responded as each identified him as the man who tortured and deported France. "It's certainly Barbie," said Lucien Margaine, 66. "I couldn't be mistaken."

Some of the hundreds of people in the courtroom gasped, forcing Cerdini to call for silence.

As each of the five witnesses, Margaine, Marie Blardone, 63, Vincent Planque, 68, Raymonde Belot, 66, and Robert Clot, 65, climbed to the witness stand, Barbie stared at them without expression.

Seizure INS officials still refuse to identify owner of aircraft

By Times-News writers

PICABO — U.S. Immigration officials are still refusing to identify the Blaine County resident who owns a plane seized by their agents last Wednesday in connection with the suspected transportation of illegal aliens.

The plane was seized without incident at a Picabo airfield by agents of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service's anti-smuggling unit, said John Colson, who heads the unit.

Colson refused to identify the owner or release details of the incident because he said the case was still under investigation. Colson said the single-engine plane, a Cessna 210, was owned by a Blaine County resident. No charges had yet been filed.

Colson said there were no aliens at the scene when the plane was seized. The seizure was related to an alleged prior violation, he said.

The aircraft was later transported to Boise where it was impounded, Colson said.

A seizure warrant for the aircraft was apparently signed by a Picatto federal magistrate last week, but was not yet filed in the U.S. District Court office in Boise.

Blaine County officials said they had heard rumors about the incident but were not aware of any details. The sheriff's office said it was not involved in the investigation of plane seizure and had not been informed of it.

Randall Robinson of the INS regional office in Helena, Mont.

said he wouldn't discuss any specific case.

Generally, he said, the INS has authority under federal law to seize vehicles used in the transportation or harboring of illegal aliens. Property purchased with money from the transportation of illegal aliens may also be seized.

Each year, the INS seizes several vans, trucks, boats and airplanes, Robinson said. He had no figures on value or amount of property confiscated each year in the region, which includes Idaho and Montana.

When someone is caught transporting aliens, the vehicles may be seized on the spot, Robinson said.

A vehicle may also be seized upon issuance of a seizure warrant signed by a federal magistrate judge.

Investigating officers first present the judge with an affidavit about an alleged violation.

The seizure of property is civil in nature and separate from any criminal action, he added. Return of property by INS is not dependent on a criminal conviction.

The owners of seized property may have their property returned by petitioning the district director of the INS or filing a court action.

Seized property will eventually be sold at auction, he said. The INS may also request to keep some property to use for undercover operations to transport aliens.

INS officers have taken into custody.

Union Pacific donates 57-year-old railway depot to Burley

By RONDA TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The Union Pacific Railroad has donated a 57-year-old freight depot to the city of Burley, and city officials hope that the building can be turned into an economic asset this summer.

UP special representative Charles G. Clark of Boise handed Burley Mayor Kenneth Frank the keys to the 57-year-old depot Tuesday, marking the end of one chapter of the building's history and the beginning of another. The city now owns the building and will lease it and part of the railroad for the nominal fee of $1 per year.

Frank said that city plans to renovate the depot and use it as a "business incubator building" to assist young local businesses.

"What we're doing is taking a fledgling business, putting it in a building like this, helping it to keep expenses low and get going," he said. Once a business is established and encouraged to go out and continue on its own in the community, he said.

The city's plan for the depot is "commendable," Clark told representatives from the Cassia County Board of Commissioners, the Burley Area Chamber of Commerce, the Burley City Council and Heyburn Mayor Harold Hurst at a luncheon in Frank's office hosted by UP prior to the key ceremony.

This is the third UP depot to be given away in Idaho. The two others are located in Blackfoot and Kellogg, he said. While the other Idaho depots

Gooding County Clinic plans sale of its surplus equipment

Hospital alters name; hopes sale will help

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

GOODING — Gooding County Memorial Hospital, renamed

Gooding County Clinic, will be holding a garage sale next week. A full inventory of the obsolete or surplus equipment was not immediately available, but a three-day sale is scheduled next week for materials, including its nearly two dozen beds. The County Board of Commissioners also hired a new administrator Tuesday and discussed allowing two Jerome doctors to extend practices to the clinic.

The commissioners renamed the hospital Tuesday following elimination of emergency room services May 11 and phasing out acute-care, or overnight hospital stays, effective June 8. In addition to the name change reflecting recent cutbacks in services, the sale highlights the notion that getting rid of hospital beds means just that.

The commissioners agreed to a sale June 2, 3 and 4 between noon and 4 p.m. for marked furniture and equipment at the clinic. Purchases require "cash on the barrelhead," said Administrator Janet McKinney, and the material will have to be removed by June 4.

The sale is one way to capitalize on clinic assets; a patient who stayed three days, despite being empty, there has only been one admission to the hospital — a patient who stayed three days. Despite being empty, there have been two nurses on duty 24-hours a day at perhaps $18 an hour, she said.

"That's cost us a lot of money," McKinney said.

"That's kind of representative of the support we've had," said Commission Chairman Bob Thackeray, referring to the hospital average of only about four patients a day for the past six months.

Hospital officials estimated the facility lost $30,000 a month staying open with that low census. Lay-offs and cutbacks in services are hoped to stem the tide of mounting debt the hospital accumulated during the past two years.

The commissioners voted to shut off admissions June 1 in anticipation of the June 8 end to overnight stays.

McKinney also noted that a Boise collection agency collected less than 10 percent of the outstanding debt owed the hospital since taking over the accounts April 1. The hospital

Fountain of support guarantees survival of Arctic Circle sign

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Aurora Details will beam again above the Arctic Circle restaurant after being relighted by an admiring public.

A neon sign, which has topped the Twin Falls drive-in like a multi-colored crown for 21 years, was in danger of being darkened by a modeling project at the Lynwood Shopping Center.

But a comet of support for the sign's stay in place has succeeded in keeping the Northern Lights sign lit. The Arctic Circle manager Alan Howa, who conducted a month-long ballot among customers at the restaurant.

"The voters saved the sign, I have no doubt in my mind," he said Tuesday.

The large sign over the drive-in door shows snow-capped mountains and ice-laden letters "Arctic Circle" backed by spikes of light representing the Aurora Borealis. At night, the features glow in blue and white.

Early last month, the Lynwood's Lindor, Nelsen & Co. of Twin Falls, began a $250,000 project to modernize its rooftop. Existing leases required the Arctic Circle and other stores in the plaza to remodel their signs to fit the new decor.

The Howas balked, describing their neon sign as a landmark working of preservation and a beacon drawing business to the small center.

But are the drive-in's customers also captivated by its glow? Nelsen & Co.'s general manager wanted proof before making any exceptions.

The Howas put a ballot box in their store and asked their patrons to vote before chowing down. Some even voted without stopping to eat, Allan Howa said.

Although an exact count is not yet available, close to 95 percent of more than 2,000 ballots voted to keep the sign glow. And, "the management listened," Howa said.

Property Manager Mary Atkinson of Lynwood Shopping Center confirmed Tuesday the sign will continue to light up the night sky.

When it does, the sign will shine brighter than ever, Howa said. The sign was taken down earlier this month to allow carpenters to install with a weather-resistant coat of paint, more vivid colors and some neon now, he said.

After its $4,000 renovation, the sign will reappear with a burst of promotional hoopla. It will be unveiled with ceremony after a week under wraps.

"I want to bring down the high school band and have them play 'Born Free' when we take the cover off," Howa said with a chuckle.

Adult, juvenile held on charges of taking collector's weapons

Home of detention center owner was entered illegally

By the Times-News

JEROME — One juvenile boy and an adult were in custody Tuesday, charged with taking about $5,000 worth of collector guns over the holiday weekend from the home of Clyde and Bette Edwards, owners of the Southern Idaho Juvenile Detention Center in Jerome County.

Jerome County officers said several other juveniles, one of them believed to be a former resident of the center, are under investigation and additional charges may be filed. A total of 17 guns, many of them antique and collector items were taken from the Edwards home Monday, officers said.

Deputy Sheriff Deanie Moore said Tuesday that Todd Gavett, Jaramillo, 21, of Twin Falls has been charged with first degree burglary and a 17-year-old Twin Falls youth was also in custody Tuesday in Jerome County on a similar charge-pending court action.

The Edwards residence, a double-wide mobile home located behind the detention center, was burglarized sometime Sunday night. Moore said entry was gained by prying open a sliding glass door. The burglars then removed the guns from a closet in the home.

Jaramillo and one juvenile were arrested after Twin Falls police checked on a vehicle that was blocking a driveway and found a group of young males in the vehicle with a quantity of guns.

Officers in Twin Falls notified Jerome authorities when it was determined the guns had originated in that county, and the two agencies joined in the investigation.

Edwards said Tuesday that officers had recovered and returned most of his guns. He could not say at this time if a former resident of the detention center is involved, but he said the two arrested individuals have never been housed in the center.

Edwards said he was told by county officers that a number of other burglaries occurred during the holiday weekend in various parts of Jerome County.

Jerome police said the guns that have been recovered were in a home in Twin Falls where police stopped to check out a vehicle Monday afternoon.

Council appoints American Falls' Will Jerome police chief

By TERESA Z. TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — During a special meeting Tuesday, the Jerome City Council appointed American Falls Sheriff's Deputy Greg Will as Jerome's new chief of police.

The vote to appoint Will as police chief was split, with Councilman Gerald Ostler and Councilwoman Jeanne Vandiver voting against Will's appointment. Councilmen H.B. Pharris and Nathan Brooks voted for Will, and Mayor Ralph Peters broke the tie to choose Will over an unnamed, out-of-state applicant for the position.

Another applicant who was not selected, Jerome Police Department Sgt. Lon Meadows, is criticizing the selection process used by council members to process applicants for the position.

Saying the criteria used to pick a new police chief was politically based, rather than based on technical ability or experience, Meadows resigned Tuesday to take a position out-of-state.

"The City Council has no idea how to select a police chief," Meadows said. "They are picking someone who will be purely administrative, not someone who really knows law enforcement."

Meadows said the best way to select a person for a position such as police chief would be to convene a board of other law enforcement professionals, perhaps other police chiefs in the area, to help judge an individual's qualifications for the job.

Peters said Meadows could "think what he wanted," but the primary reason Will was selected was that he was an "Idaho person." He also said that he felt a person from outside the area would inject new ideas into the department.

"He was in the Jerome police department about 10 years ago. He has been in the sheriff's department in American Falls for about six years, and has worked himself up to the rank of lieutenant," Peters said.

"All the applicants were highly qualified," Peters said, "I just felt Will was more qualified. Because he has been in law enforcement in this area for so long, he will have a head start over the others. He knows the area and knows police department problems."

Ostler said his "no" vote did not mean he was against Will, but rather he felt that more expert-making the final cut possessed more experience in law enforcement. City officials did not release the name of the other top applicant.

"I felt the other individual was better qualified, had more experience, and he was just my choice," Ostler said.

will be used to house chambers of commerce and assist in local tourism efforts, the Burley project will be different, he said.

"It's the only one we know of where you'll be able to renovate the old economic and industrial development project," he said. "It's nice to see that even though we're returning it, and it's out of service, that it will still go on and contribute to the economy."

The 200-foot-long by 25-foot-wide brick building was built by UP's predecessor, the Oregon Short Line Railroad, in 1929. It hasn't been used as a freight depot in more than 30 years, according to regional public relations director Edward Tincher. However, part of the building was used as a freight agent's office until 1984 when the company consolidated its offices, he said.

The Burley depot never served passengers and was used for shipping less than carload lots of freight, he said. City officials sent a letter to the railroad five years ago asking that the city be considered when UP no longer wanted to maintain the building, he said.

Tincher stressed that each depot is evaluated individually by UP before any decisions are made to relinquish ownership. However, UP always maintains ownership of the property, because the building is considered surplus while the land is not, he said.

UP requires that the new owners accept legal liability, close all openings into the building facing the tracks and build a one-foot curb around the depot and the tracks. The city is currently negotiating to be able to change the fencing and opening requirements slightly, in case new businesses could use the loading dock for mail, merchandise shipments, Frank said.

Depending upon the final decision by UP officials in Omaha, Neb., the city will fix the building up to meet UP specifications, he said.

"We don't anticipate having to spend a lot of time and money to fix up the building, he said. However, the exact cost is not yet known.

An Oakley plastics company, currently operating out of a backyard shack for lack of room, is looking for a building, he said. A member of the Oakley firm may be able to help fix up a broken skylight, do some minor brick work and get the building into shape over the summer. It is not clear if the project would come from the city's building and maintenance fund, he said.

The Burley depot predecessor, a wooden freight depot built with a similar design, was the first example of the building, he said. Many of the families of representatives present Tuesday.

City Councilman Leonard King said that the land in downtown Burley where the depot now sits was once filled with the tents of the fair for many of the families of representatives present Tuesday.

UP is the only railroad serving southern Idaho.

He said his father, who moved to Burley via the railroad in 1912, took a picture of the tent city that same year.

Cassia County Commissioner Chairman J. Weldon Beck said his family moved from Spanish Fork, Utah, to Cassia County in 1917. He said his family moved all 19 head of horses as well as all their other household items by the railroad lines, which were the major access route into the area. "We had no cars, no roads. The roads we had then were all rabbit trails," he said.

Beck said that he remembers when the brick depot was built in 1929, the same year that he graduated from high school. All the area's livestock and grain was shipped from the depot for many years, he said. A separate passenger depot took people in and out of the area no longer exists, he said.

Heyburn's Mayor Hurst said his family also moved to the Declo area from Montana via the railroad in 1932.

Union Pacific is the nation's third largest railroad, serving 20 states and running 21,500 miles, Tincher said. It runs from the West Coast cities of Seattle, San Francisco, and Los Angeles, through the heartland of America to Chicago and the Gulf Coast ports in New Orleans, he said.

UP is the only railroad serving southern Idaho.

Brothers receive drug charges

TWIN FALLS — Two brothers appeared in 5th District Magistrate Court in Twin Falls Tuesday on separate charges after police recovered 2.6 grams of marijuana following the pair's arrest on another charge.

William D. Praeger, 20, of Burley was arraigned on a possession of a controlled substance charge. Michael Praeger, 22, was charged with obstructing an officer.

County officers said they were asked to transport the two to the Twin Falls county sheriff's department by state police officers who stopped their vehicle on U. S. Highway 23, about 26 miles south of the Idaho-Nevada state line. The state officers charged the pair had an open container of alcoholic beverage in their vehicle. Later officers said they discovered 2.6 grams of material identified as marijuana. Michael Praeger was charged with obstructing an officer after he allegedly attempted to flush the substance down the toilet in the men's room across the hall from the sheriff's dispatch office.

The public defender was appointed to represent both men.

Idaho sites possible for film

BOISE (AP) — Several southern Idaho locations are being considered as possible sites for filming of a six-hour television miniseries on the life of Ernest Hemingway.

Linda Marmelstein of Daniel Wilson Productions, the producer of "Hemingway," scouted a number of locations in Gooding, Lincoln, Jerome and Blaine counties last month.

"It looks very promising," Ms. Marmelstein said. "The views are still too early to tell what the final decision will be."

Hemingway lived in Ketchum, where he committed suicide on July 2, 1961. Actor Stacy Keach will star as the Nobel Prize-winning author in the production that's slated to include location footage from Paris, Spain, Venice, Africa and the Swiss Alps, Ms. Marmelstein said.

The film is scheduled for release in April 1968 and will be broadcast on some independent television stations.

The class will meet from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on each of the four days at the Ketchum City Hall Council Chambers.

According to Dr. Deputy, the course purpose is to present information and techniques leading to increased effectiveness and efficiency and stimulate thinking and action towards the realization of one's potential.

Woman, 37, charged with arson

JEROME — A Jerome woman was charged Tuesday with arson in connection with a fire in the bedroom of the house where her estranged husband resides.

Jerome County sheriff's reports show that Beverly Jean Fritz Lerback, 37, of Jerome was charged with arson after county fire department responded to a fire alarm at the Larry Lerback home Sunday. The home, which officers said is owned by Lerback's employer, is located two miles north and six miles east of Jerome.

"No estimate of damage was available, but sheriff's officers said fire was confined to a bedroom on the north side of the house. Lerback discovered the fire when he returned from fishing Sunday.

Officers and fire fighters said a one-gallon gasoline can and other evidence of arson were found at the scene.

Man, 31, dies of gunshot wound

TWIN FALLS — Paulino Munoz, 31, of Castleford, died Monday morning of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, deputy Twin Falls County coroner Gerald Kurz said Tuesday.

Munoz, he said, was driving north on the Lilly Grade road 10.5 miles south of Castleford when his pickup truck left the roadway and rolled over. Kurz said the man's blood alcohol content and other evidence indicated the man had been drinking and there were several bottles of beer in the vehicle.

An autopsy indicated the man shot himself with a 30-30 rifle after the vehicle rolled one and one-half miles when it left the roadway, Kurz said. He had been dead only about 20 minutes when the accident was reported, the coroner said.

Shirley James Munoz said Munoz was scheduled to appear for arraignment in Magistrate Court Tuesday on a drunk driving charge.

Symms has no apologies for donation

BOISE (AP) — Sen. Steve Symms says he has no apology for accepting a campaign contribution last year from an organization later reported to have pro-Nazi links.

"That's one of the good things about our system, that things like this are reported," said Symms.

He held a news conference here Tuesday to make $500 donations to a Jewish organization and the Curzon County Salvation Army.

SEN. STEVE SYMMS Makes pair of donations

In questions that followed, Symms was asked about a $1,000 donation he received last year during his U.S. Senate campaign from an organization with Nazi links.

Symms said in a campaign in which he raised $32 million, it wasn't surprising that a couple of improper donations were accepted. He said he wasn't aware of the problem until a Boise television station discovered the pro-Nazi link. Symms later donated the money to a Jewish organization.

The Republican said he felt he ran a very good campaign last year, and that the system for public disclosure of campaign finances works.

"It is a very good system," he said.

Symms also noted that he received a check from an individual, whom he did not name, who staffers later discovered was under federal indictment. He said that check also was returned to the donor.

He received in the long campaign for the Senate against Democrat John Evans.

A leader of Idaho's Jewish community said the state has a bad image because of the activities of a handful of white supremacists.

Daniel Stern, accepted Symms' $500 check as a donation to the national Holocaust Memorial being constructed in Washington, D.C. Symms raised the money in a "fun run" on his birthday in April. Symms made a personal donation of $100 to Stern. Stern said the donation was welcome.

"It's an indication to people that Idaho is misrepresented by a very vocal minority," he said.

Symms also said the state's image has been harmed by white supremacists and racist organizations.

"They represent a very small number of people," Symms said. "But they have given Idaho a black eye nationally."

Capt. Carl Blessing of the Salvation Army said the donation is welcome, because heavy demands have been placed on the organization's resources in recent months.

He said at least 15,000 people were given assistance through the Nampa office of Caldwell Salvation Army organizations last year, and perhaps 18,000 people were aided by other welfare or public organizations.

Birds, bullets battering power transmission line

BOISE (AP) — Birds and bullets are right on target 12 miles south of Boise, and Pacific Power and Light Co. isn't happy with either of them.

The Oregon utility's 500,000-volt transmission line across southern Idaho is a magnet for young ravens and target shooters, line patrolman Mike Mulrooney said.

While Mulrooney and his crew from Bend, Ore., took a break recently from fixing power lines damaged by bird droppings, a half-dozen insulators were shot out.

The company is working with the federal Bureau of Land Management, the Ada County Sheriff's Department, the Idaho National Guard, area residents and pilots who fly over the line on the raven problem. It also is advertising a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of insulator shooters.

Mulrooney and a repair crew were in Boise earlier this month to do spring maintenance and scrub up the plate-shaped glass insulators on the towers after ravens had gathered on them in the desert. Soon afterward they discovered the newly shot-out insulators.

Summit to stress global economy ties

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's economy is part of the global economy. Changing patterns of production, marketing and trade impact both the domestic economy and the ability of Idaho producers to sell on world markets.

Those changing patterns, and how Idaho companies can take advantage of them, will serve as the central theme for the 1987 "Idaho Economic Summit" here today.

It's an effort to bring governmental, educational and industrial leaders together to come up with ideas for improving the state economy.

Co-chairmen are Gov. Cecil Andrus and the four members of the Idaho congressional delegation. Sen. Steve Symms and Congressmen Richard Stallings and Larry Craig will serve as co-chairmen and moderators along with Andrus.

Missing will be Sen. James McClure, who is a member of the House-Senate panel investigating the Iran-Contra affair. McClure is scheduled to be among the senators questioning key witnesses.

The hearings start at 7 a.m. MDT, 90 minutes before the Idaho conference opens. A McClure staff member in Washington said although the senator will be unable to be in Boise for the conference, McClure plans to address the conference by telephone during the day.

Jim Hawkins, director of the Department of Commerce, will welcome delegates.

"How to Attract Organizations to Locate and Stay in Idaho" is the title of a speech from Marc Henderson, executive vice president of The Fantus Corp., San Mateo, Calif. Robert O'Connor, chairman of Idaho Power Co., and Lt. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter will speak on private and state cooperation in economic development.

An Iowa State University economics professor will speak on developing Idaho's agricultural strengths.

At a Tuesday news conference, Symms said he's ready for some action on the economy.

"We've had enough talk about the problems. We need to set our sights on what we can do to move Idaho forward," said Symms.

"We need to set aside our partisan bickering and move the economy on," said Symms.

He said Idaho needs to build on its strengths, because it is impossible to ignore the fact the state is a resource-producing state.

He said now that the divisive 1986 election is over, the state's leaders can concentrate on a bipartisan effort to develop the economy.

More barriers to disabled falling, DAV official says

BOISE (AP) — Disabled veterans face many barriers in American society, but more of those barriers are being overcome every year, a national official of the Disabled American Veterans says.

H.A. Geiger, a Georgia native who is vice commander of the national organization, said many in Boise that disabled people have "good minds and good hearts. We ought to allow them to develop those things, to their full potential."

Geiger, 36, has a hearing disability stemming from his service in a tank gunner in Vietnam. He spoke at a Memorial Day ceremony at Veterans Memorial Park, urging parents to explain to their children and grandchildren the sacrifices made for democracy.

The best thing Americans can do to help disabled veterans is to pass along to their children the knowledge of what has been done to preserve American liberties and this country's way of life, Geiger said. "Let kids know what it took to make this country what it is."

He recalled being taken to Memorial Day ceremonies by his father, a World War II pilot, and wondering what the colorful ceremonies were all about.

"I think if we do one significant thing today other than remembering those we honor, it's spend a few moments to explain to our children and our grandchildren what all this is about," Geiger said. "You will do a great favor both to yourself and your children."

With increased awareness of the plight of disabled people, the most obvious remaining barriers are architectural, he said, recalling a disabled friend who had to be carried up steps to attend classes because he was unable to walk.

"Those things are really being addressed today," Geiger said. "The American public does care."

will be used to house chambers of commerce and assist in local tourism efforts, Burley project will differ, he said.

"It's the only one we know of where you'll be able to renovate this to an economic and industrial development project," he said. "It's nice to see that even though it's returning to us, it's out of service, that it will still go on and contribute to the economy."

The 200-foot-long — by 25-foot-wide brick building was built by UP's predecessor, the Oregon Short Line Railroad, in 1929. It hasn't been used as a freight depot in more than 20 years, according to regional public relations director Richard Tischer. However, part of the building was used as a freight agent's office until 1984 when the company consolidated its offices, he said.

The Burley depot never served passengers and was used for shipping less than carload lots of freight, he said. City officials sent a letter to the railroad five years ago asking that the city be considered when UP no longer wanted to maintain the building, he said.

Tischer stressed that each depot is evaluated individually by UP before decisions are made to relinquish ownership. However, UP always maintains ownership of the property, because the building is considered surplus while the land is not, he said.

UP requires that the new owner accept legal liability, close all openings into the building facing the tracks, and build a fence between the depot and the tracks. The city is currently negotiating to be able to change the fencing and opening requirements slightly, in case new businesses could use the loading dock for railroad merchandise shipments, Frank said.

Depending upon the final decision by UP officials in Omaha, Neb., the city will fix the building up to meet UP specifications, he said.

"We don't anticipate having to spend a lot of time and money" to fix up the building, he said. However, the exact cost is not yet known.

An Oakley plastics company, currently operating out of a backyard garage, may be the first occupant of the building, he said. A member of the Oakley firm may be able to help fix up a broken skylight, do some minor brick work and get the building into shape over the summer, he said. Any city money for the project would come from the city's building and maintenance fund, he said.

The Burley depot's predecessor, a wooden freight depot built with a similar design, was the gateway for many of the families of representatives present Tuesday.

City Councilman Leonard King said that the land in downtown Burley where the depot now sits was once filled with the tents of the farm workers who labored at the neighboring old sugar factory. He said his father, who moved to Burley via the railroad in 1912, took a picture of the tent city that same year.

Cassia County Commissioner Chairman J. Weldon Beck said his uncle, a Spanish Fork, Utah, resident, owned the depot in 1917. He said his family moved 19 head of horses as well as all their other household items by the railroad lines, which were the major access route into the area. "We had no cars, no roads. The roads we had then were all rabbit trails," he said.

Beck said that he remembers when the brick depot was built in 1929, the same year that he graduated from high school. All the area's livestock and grain was shipped from the depot for many years, he said. A separate passenger depot that took people in and out of the area no longer exists, he said.

Heyburn's Mayor Hursel said his family also moved to the DeLoe area from Montana via the railroad in 1932.

Union Pacific is the nation's third largest railroad, serving 20 states and running 21,000 miles. It runs from the West Coast cities of Seattle, San Francisco, and Los Angeles, through the heartland of America to Chicago and the Gulf Coast ports in New Orleans, he said. UP is the only railroad serving southern Idaho.

Thiokol plans full-scale booster test

BRIGHAM CITY—Utah AP — Morton Thiokol Inc. plans to test a partially redesigned booster rocket Wednesday in its first full-scale test-firing since the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger. The test rocket will be of the same basic design as the Challenger's twin boosters, but will include several new components.

Brothers receive drug charges

TWIN FALLS — Two brothers appeared in 5th District Magistrate Court in Twin Falls Tuesday on separate charges after police recovered 2.8 grams of marijuana following the pair's arrest on other charges.

William D. Praegeritz, 20, of Burley was arraigned on charges of possession of a controlled substance and Michael Praegeritz, 22, was charged with obstructing an officer.

County officers said they were asked to transport the two to the Twin Falls county sheriff's department by state police officers who stopped their vehicle on U. S. Highway 51, about 25 miles south of the Idaho-Nevada state line. The state officers charged the pair with an open container of alcohol in the back seat of the vehicle. Later officers said they discovered 2.8 grams of material identified as marijuana. Michael Praegeritz was charged with obstructing an officer after he allegedly attempted to flush the substance down the toilet in the men's room across the hall from the sheriff's dispatch office.

The public defender was appointed to represent both men.

Additional information is available at the ISU Center, 734-4470 or from Dr. Deputy, 236-3495.

Woman, 37, charged with arson

JEROME — A Jerome woman was charged Tuesday with arson in connection with a fire in the bedroom of the home where her estranged husband resides.

Jerome County sheriff's reports show that Beverly Jean Fritz Leback, 37, of Jerome was charged with arson after county fire department responded to a fire alarm at the Larry Leback home Sunday. The home, which officers said is owned by Leback's employer, Northside Canal Co., is located two miles north and six miles east of Jerome.

No estimate of damage was available, but sheriff's officials said fire was confined to a bedroom on the north side of the house. Leback discovered the fire when he returned from fishing Sunday.

Officers and fire fighters said a one-gallon gasoline can and other evidence of arson were found at the scene.

Man, 31, dies of gunshot wound

TWIN FALLS — Paulino Munoz, 31, of Castleford died Monday morning of a self-inflicted gunshot wound, deputy Twin Falls County coroner Gerald Kurz said Tuesday.

Munoz, he said, was driving north on the Lilly Grade road 0.5 miles south of Castleford when his pickup truck left the roadway and rolled over. Kurz said the man's blood alcohol content and other evidence indicated the man had been drinking and there were several bottles of beer in the vehicle.

Investigation indicated the man shot himself with a .38-caliber rifle. The vehicle rolled one and one-half miles off the roadway and rolled over. He had been dead only about 30 minutes when the accident was reported, the coroner said.

Sheriff James Munn said Munoz was scheduled to appear for arraignment in Magistrate Court Tuesday on a drunk driving charge.

Idaho sites possible for film

BOISE (AP) — Several southern Idaho locations are being considered as possible sites for filming of a six-hour television miniseries on the life of Ernest Hemingway.

Linda Marmelstein of Daniel Wilson Productions, the producer of "Hemingway," said a number of sites in Gooding, Lincoln, Jerome and Blaine counties last month.

"It looks very promising," Ms. Marmelstein said. "However, it's still too early to tell what the final decision will be."

Hemingway lived in Ketchum, where he committed suicide on July 2, 1961. Actor Stacy Keach will star as the Nobel Prize-winning author in the production that's slated to include location footage from Paris, Spain, Venice, Africa and the Swiss Alps. Ms. Marmelstein said.

The film is scheduled for release in April 1988 and will be broadcast on some independent television stations.

TWIN FALLS — The University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service is offering a training session Tuesday for farmers, trappers and others using restricted pesticides to control rock chucks, ground squirrels and other rodents.

The session is scheduled at 1 p.m. in the basement of the Jerome County courthouse. Fee is $5. The session is the only one of its kind in the Magic Valley this summer. The instructor qualifies applicants for the license, which is required for use of the pesticides.

Twin Falls-ISU bus considered

TWIN FALLS — A commuter bus from Twin Falls to the Idaho State University campus in Pocatello is being planned for the summer sessions. If interest is sufficient, the bus will be used for the summer sessions.

Students interested in riding the bus to the campus for any part of the summer are asked to call the ISU Resident Center, 734-4470.

received $2,000 of about $23,000 owed at that time is only through May 25, before "hard letters" went out, McGinnis said.

The clinic is expected to lose money despite cutting back services to only same-day services such as lab work, radiology, physical therapy and a clinic during business hours. In an effort to increase budgeting business, the commissioners have met with two Jerome doctors interested in extending their practice to Gooding, where one-fifth of their patients live.

Dr. David Martin and Grant Van Blunden have met with commissioners and clinic officials about setting up a half-day practice five days a week in Gooding. The doctors are trained for family practices.

Van Blunden said the expansion from Jerome would help both them and their patients because 20 percent of their practice already comes from Gooding.

"I think there's little doubt that it's an easier way to access patients up town," Van Blunden said.

Even if by the doctor's offices was extended next five because of government grant requires that 50 percent of the building be used for health care operations until 1990. The county would owe the government nearly $50,000 if that requirement isn't met.

The county's district health nurse is moving her office into the clinic Thursday and the auxiliary may set up an office there.

"In our efforts to utilize the building, we won't be charging rent from anyone doing anything out there," Thackeray said.

Thackeray said this offer to Jerome doctors is different from recruiting new doctors to area because there will be no salary paid. The doctors will make their money on a fee-for-service basis, he said.

Symms has no apologies for donation

BOISE (AP) — Sen. Steve Symms says he has no apology for accepting a campaign contribution last year from an organization later reported to have pro-Nazi links.

"That's one of the good things about our system, that things like this are reported," said Symms.

He held a news conference here Tuesday to make $500 donations to a Jewish organization and the Canyon County Salvation Army.

SEN. STEVE SYMMS
Makes pair of donations

In questions that followed, Symms was asked about a $1,000 donation he received last year during his U.S. Senate campaign from an organization with Nazi links.

Symms said in a campaign in which he raised $3.2 million, it wasn't surprising that a couple of improper donations were accepted. He said he wasn't aware of the problem until a Boise television station discovered the pro-Nazi link. Symms later donated the money to a Jewish organization.

The Republican said he felt he ran a very good campaign last year, and that the system for public disclosure of campaign finances works.

"It is a very good system," he said.

Symms also noted that he received a check from an individual, whom he did not name, who staffers later discovered was under federal indictment. He said that check also was repaid, as were a few others received in the long campaign for the Senate against Democrat John Evans.

A leader of Idaho's Jewish community said the state has a bad image because of the activities of a handful of white supremacists.

Daniel Stern accepted Symms' $500 check as a donation to the national Holocaust Memorial being constructed in Washington, D.C. Symms raised the money in a "fun run" on his birthday in April. Symms made a personal donation of $100 to Stern. Stern said the donation was welcome.

"It's an indication to people that Idaho is misrepresented by a very vocal minority," he said.

Symms also said the state's image has been harmed by white supremacist and racist organizations.

"They represent a very small number of people," Symms said. "But they have given Idaho a black eye nationally."

Capt. Carl Stessing of the Salvation Army said the donation is welcome, because heavy demands have been placed on the organization's resources in recent months.

He said at least 15,000 people were given assistance through the Salvation Army's Caldwell, Idaho, branch last year, and perhaps 10,000 people were aided by other welfare or public organizations.

Birds, bullets battering power transmission line

BOISE (AP) — Birds and bullets are right on target 12 miles south of Boise, and Pacific Power and Light Co. isn't happy with either of them.

The Oregon utility's 500,000-volt transmission line across southern Idaho is a magnet for young ravens and target shooters, line patrolman Mike Mulrooney said.

While Mulrooney and his crew from Bend, Ore., took a break recently from fixing power lines damaged by bird droppings, line patrolmen and a repair crew were in Boise earlier this month to do spring maintenance and scrub up the plate-shaped glass insulators on the towers after ravens had gathered on them in the desert. Soon afterward they discovered the newly shot-out insulators.

The company is working with insulators.

Summit to stress global economy ties

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's economy is part of the global economy.

Changing patterns of production, marketing and trade impact both the domestic economy and the ability of Idaho producers to sell on world markets.

Those changing patterns, and how Idaho companies can take advantage of them, will serve as the central theme for the 1987 "Idaho Economic Summit" here today.

It's an effort to bring governmental, educational and industrial leaders together to come up with ideas for improving the state economy.

Co-chairmen are Gov. Cecil Andrus and the four members of the Idaho congressional delegation. Sen. Steve Symms and congressmen Richard Stallings and Larry Craig will serve as cochairmen and moderators along with Andrus.

Missing will be Sen. James McClure, who is a member of the House-Senate panel investigating the Iran-Contra affair. McClure is scheduled to be among the senators questioning key witnesses.

The hearings start at 7 a.m. MDT, 90 minutes before the Idaho conference opens. A McClure staff member in Washington said although the senator will be unable to be in Boise for the conference, McClure plans to address the conference by telephone during the day.

Jim Hawkins, director of the Department of Commerce, will welcome delegates.

"How to Attract Organizations to Locate and Stay in Idaho" is the title of a speech from Marc Henderson, executive vice president of The Fantus Corp., San Mateo, Calif. Robert O'Connor, chairman of Idaho Power Co., and Lt. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter will speak on private and state cooperation in economic development.

At a Tuesday news conference, Symms said he's ready for some action on the economy.

"We've had enough talk about the problems. We need to get our sights on what we can do to move Idaho forward," said Symms.

"We need to set aside our partisan bickering and move the economy on," said Symms.

He said Idaho needs to build on its strengths, because it is impossible to ignore the fact the state is a resource-producing state.

He said now that the divisive 1986 election is over, the state's leaders can concentrate on a bipartisan effort to develop the economy.

More barriers to disabled falling, DAV official says

BOISE (AP) — Disabled veterans face many barriers in American society, but more of those barriers are being overcome every year, a national official of the Disabled American Veterans says.

H.A. Geiger, a Georgia native who is vice commander of the national organization, said Monday in Boise that disabled people have "good minds and good hearts. We ought to allow them to develop those things to their full potential."

Geiger, 36, has a hearing disability stemming from his service as a tank gunner in Vietnam. He spoke at a Memorial Day ceremony at Veterans Memorial Park, urging parents to explain to their children and grandchildren the sacrifices made for democracy.

The best thing Americans can do to help disabled veterans is to pass along to their children the knowledge of what has been done to preserve American liberties and this country's way of life, Geiger said. "Let kids know what it took to make this country what it is."

He recalled being taken to Memorial Day ceremonies by his father, a World War II pilot, and wondering what the colorful ceremonies were all about.

"I think if we do one significant thing today other than remembering those we honor, it's spend a few moments to explain to our children and our grandchildren what all this is about," Geiger said. "You will do a great favor both to yourself and your children."

With increased awareness of the plight of disabled people, the most obvious remaining barriers are architectural, he said, recalling a disabled friend who had to be carried up steps to attend classes because he was unable to walk.

"Those things are really being addressed today," Geiger said. "The American public does care."

Wounds fatal, pathologist tells hearing

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Idaho Falls schoolteacher Susan Michelbacher died of blood loss from eight gunshot wounds, the pathologist who conducted her autopsy testified Tuesday in the opening of a preliminary hearing for the man charged in her death.

An investigator also testified that Paul Evar Rhoades appeared to be under the influence of drugs when he was arrested.

Rhoades, 30, is charged with two counts of first-degree murder in the March slayings of Ms. Michelbacher, 34, and convenience store clerk Ronald Haddon.

Prosecutors said the preliminary hearing could take until the middle of next week. Court sources said the prosecution plans to call more than 40 witnesses in a hearing that is to determine only if Rhoades will be bound over to district court to face the charges.

Security was tight for spectators, who jammed the 40-seat courtroom for the start of testimony. Security officers used metal detectors on all entering the court chambers except court officials.

In a separate case, Rhoades also faces a July 15 preliminary hearing in Blackfoot on charges of kidnapping and first-degree murder in the death of Stacy Balfanz, 21, in late February.

At Tuesday's hearing, Charles Garrison, Pocatello pathologist, said the blood less resulted from several gunshot wounds made by eight bullets, all fired from more than 24 inches away.

Seven shots were fired while the woman was lying on her back and the other while she was lying on her stomach, he said.

Victor Rodriguez, the primary investigator in the Michelbacher case for the sheriff's office, testified that Rhoades appeared to be under the influence of drugs when he was arrested in Wells, Nev., in March.

He said Rhoades appeared to be a stooper when he talked, and required help in walking.

"He did not appear to be human for a while. I guess that's the best way to put it," Rodriguez said.

The detective said that when Rhoades was interviewed later by another Bonneville County detective, "He was more aware of his senses, a little more friendly."

The first witness, Burt Michelbacher, Mrs. Michelbacher's husband, testified that the murder victim was his wife and that he was the owner of a van found abandoned in Idaho Falls the day the special-education teacher disappeared.

Bonneville County Sheriff Richard Ackerman stood beside the witness box as Michelbacher testified, which brought an objection from John Radin, one of Rhoades' attorneys. Seventh District Magistrate Michael B. Kennedy, who is conducting the hearing, overruled the objection, accepting the prosecution's contention the action was necessary for security.

Rhoades is being represented by Radin, Bonneville County public defender, and Steven Hart, representing the state. Bonneville Prosecutor Kimball Mason and Deputy Prosecutor Stevan Thompson. Assisting with the case is Bingham County Prosecutor Thomas Moss.

Haddon, 20, of Blackfoot was found fatally shot in the walk-in cooler of an Idaho Falls convenience store March 17 and died a few hours later at an Idaho Falls hospital. Mrs. Michelbacher, 34, disappeared from the parking lot of an Idaho Falls grocery store March 19, and her body was found March 21.

Rhoades faces two counts of first-degree murder and 11 other charges in the deaths of Haddon, a convenience store clerk and student at the Eastern Idaho Vocational-Technical School, and Mrs. Michelbacher.

Besides murder, Rhoades is charged with robbery and two counts of using a firearm in a felony in Haddon's slaying. In Mrs. Michelbacher's death, he faces charges of first-degree kidnapping, rape, infamous crime against nature, robbery, and four counts of using a firearm in a felony.

Defense attorneys tried to close the preliminary hearing.

Jetliner scrapes wing, stays grounded

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A China Airlines 747 jetliner, scheduled to take off for Taiwan, scraped a wing against a building and never got off the ground, a Los Angeles International Airport official said Tuesday.

A Pan Am tractor was towing the plane from its gate Monday afternoon when its left wing scraped a terminal building, airport operations superintendent Richard Davison said.

The incident imbedded an antenna from the wingtip in the building. Pan Am officials estimated it would take 20 hours to repair the plane.

The 186 passengers preparing for a flight to Taipei instead were ushered back into the terminal, Davison said. China Airlines diverted another jet to Los Angeles and they eventually departed for Taiwan.

Shooting conviction upheld

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A Missouri appeals court Tuesday upheld the convictions of white supremacist David C. Tate for the slaying of a Missouri Highway Patrol trooper.

The Missouri Court of Appeals upheld convictions of Tate on charges of armed criminal action and first-degree assault in the April 16, 1985 wounding of Trooper Allen Hines.

The appeals court, which issued a three-line opinion in upholding the conviction, had earlier upheld the conviction of Tate for murdering Hines' partner, Trooper Jimmie Linegar.

The two troopers were shot after they stopped Tate's van while making routine traffic checks at a roadblock near Branson, Tate, who operated fine on the troopers with an automatic weapon equipped with a silencer, was captured after a five-day manhunt in the rugged Ozarks.

Tate is serving a life term for killing Linegar, a life term for armed criminal action in the wounding of Hines and a 15-year sentence for the assault on Hines. The two life terms are to run consecutively.

Tate also is serving a 50-year prison term after he was convicted in July 1986 on federal weapons charges. Weapons found in Tate's van when Linegar and Hines were shot led to convictions on 14 charges of possessing illegal and unregistered guns, hand grenades and silencers.

The federal sentence is to be served consecutive to the two life terms.

Tate, 23, of Athol, Idaho, allegedly was a member of the white supremacist group The Order. He was among 53 members of the group indicted in 1985 in Seattle for racketeering.

Prosecutors at the trial alleged members of The Order waged a crime campaign designed to topple the U.S. government and replace it with an all-white nation. They accused sect members of a murder, robberies, counterfeiting and other crimes in 1983 and 1984.

Seattle authorities had not pursued Tate because of this Missouri convictions.

Plane crash victims show improvement

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Four people whose plane crash-landed on the black-top vacant building and careened through a cinder-block shed remained hospitalized Tuesday, one in serious condition, officials said.

Pilot Billy Ray Stephens, 56, and his wife Charlotte, 35, of Cloverdale, Calif., were in fair condition at St. Benedict's Hospital following Monday's crash, said spokeswoman Julie Huss.

Harold Wilkinson, 69, of Courtsold, Calif., remained in serious but stable condition, and his wife, Juanema, 63, improved from serious to satisfactory condition. McKay-Dee Hospital officials reported Tuesday.

The four were en route from Oronia, Minn., to Santa Rosa, Calif., when the plane blew a piston and Stephens tried to land on the building. The plane skidded off the roof and into the shed across the street, knocking cinder blocks 200 feet, officials said.

Soviet Union seeking to expand influence in Middle East

By JOHN THOR DAHLBURG
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — The Kremlin in recent weeks has moved to improve its chilly relations with several Mideast countries as it seeks to become a more important actor in Arab-Israeli peace negotiations.

Moscow-based diplomats say the shift in tone is also part of a wider strategy under Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to enhance Kremlin foreign policy prestige throughout the world.

Events this month in the Iran-Iraq war have dramatically shown that the Soviet Union can also be a victim of regional conflicts, giving it an obvious stake in resolving or limiting them.

Analysis

In the past three months, the Soviets have mended relations with U.S.-aligned Egypt and hinted they may be willing to scale back demands for resuming diplomatic ties with Israel.

Diplomats cite those actions as signs of the new tone.

The Soviets want to establish themselves as a reasonable partner and interlocutor in the region. This is the crux of their recent actions," said a Moscow-based diplomat, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

But the evolution in Middle East policy hasn't meant an end to the characteristic stringency of Soviet statements.

The Communist Party daily Pravda continues to blame "Israeli and Imperialist circles" for regional tension, and the Tass news agency claims the secret U.S. arms sales to Iran aggravated and prolonged the war with Iraq.

The potential dangers of that conflict have been driven home in recent weeks, with attacks on U.S. and Soviet ships.

The Soviet freighter Ivan Korolev was fired on by launches without markings as it sailed in Persian Gulf waters and the tanker Marshal Chukov was hit a mine, blowing a large hole in the hull, Tass reported.

On May 17, the day the Soviet tanker was damaged, the U.S. Navy frigate Stark was attacked by an Iraqi warplane, and 37 sailors were killed.

Tass, in a Friday commentary, said the Pentagon was exploiting the developments to stage a military buildup in the gulf and subject the oil-rich region to "imperialist

But the chief political adviser to President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt said the Kremlin response to the attacks on shipping had been "cool and calculated... not trigger-happy."

Ever though the Soviets have had a chance to increase their military presence in the gulf... it was quite obvious that the Soviets did not grab this opportunity to upset the military balance of forces," Osama el-Baz told reporters in Cairo last week.

Kremlin officials last year repeatedly expressed a desire to deepen relations with Iran.

Gorbachev describes changes

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Tuesday attacked incompetence in government and self-serving propaganda and said top jobs should be given to qualified people, even if they are not Communists.

"Half a truth is worse than a lie," he said, carrying his campaign for greater openness to the Soviet bloc country where his reform policies are met the most public rejection — in the speeches of President Nicolae Ceausescu.

"A must in developing democratization is open and full information of the masses. We have begun this stage," the Kremlin leader told a crowd of about 4,000 at Bucharest's Palace of Congresses.

Gorbachev spoke to a crowd of about 4,000 people at Bucharest's Palace of Congresses. During an earlier hour-long speech by Ceausescu, the audience rose 19 times in ovation and chanting. But it sat mostly in silence as Gorbachev talked about his restructuring efforts in the Soviet Union.

He cautioned, "We must not pretend that everything goes on smoothly. ... We all care for socialism and want to make it as attractive as possible, but if we go on brushing up, gliding things, they get worse."

Gorbachev stressed the need to promote "honest, high-principled people to high posts... whether they are Communist or not."

In a country that has shown no sign of adopting the "glasnost" (limited openness) recently seen in Soviet news media and the arts, Gorbachev zeroed in on the need not to paint a falsely rosy picture of Communism and to inform citizens fully.

"But the other side of the problem is the release of those who do not measure up to... who cannot go in step with the time and even more so those who besmirched themselves with dishonesty, lack of principle, nepotism, chasing after profit and who lost the appearance of a party member."

Gorbachev was speaking about the Soviet Union, but his remarks could be seen as indirect criticism of Ceausescu. The president's wife Elena is first deputy premier, and his son Victor is head of the Young Communist League.

Other Ceausescu family members, hold fairly senior posts.

Despite differences, both men indicated they agreed during last Monday and Tuesday to improve bilateral cooperation.

Ceausescu praised Soviet initiatives to eliminate nuclear and conventional weapons.

China forest fire put out by vast crew

BEIJING (AP) — Tens of thousands of firefighters, with some help induced from the heavens, have extinguished the worst forest fire in the history of communist China, the official Xinhua News Agency reported Tuesday.

The Forestry Ministry has not released figures for several days, but at last count the fires had killed more than 200 people, leveled several villages, burned 1.48 million acres of forests and farms and left more than 50,000 homeless.

The last two fire fronts in the western area of the blaze in the Daxingling forest of northeastern China's Heilongjiang province were beaten out Tuesday morning, Xinhua said.

The fire was stopped from spreading by artificial rain triggered by artillery and airplanes, the news agency said. More than 3,000 silver iodide shells were fired and dry ice was spread in the sky to make rain.

The fires, which broke out May 6, had been advancing on virgin forest areas of Inner Mongolia and threatening to join up with a separate fire in the Soviet Union.

There were no visible signs of fire in the area, and about 50,000 soldiers, forestry police and local residents were checking to make sure all fires were out, the report said. The last two fire fronts were nearly two miles long each, Xinhua said.

Americans tap savings to pay income taxes

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans dipped into savings last month to pay off hefty tax bills as their after-tax incomes took the sharpest plunge in 12 years, the government reported Tuesday.

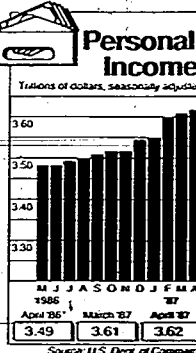

The Commerce Department said that after-tax incomes slumped 2.1 percent in April while the personal savings rate fell to an all-time low of 0.1 percent.

Normally, such big income and savings declines would spur fears of a possible recession as overextended consumers cut back on purchases. But analysts maintained the weakness in April overstated the problems facing the economy. They said these figures primarily reflected temporary impacts from the new tax law.

Analysts said the higher-than-normal tax payments occurred because Americans sold assets at the end of last year in order to take advantage of lower tax rates for capital gains under the old tax law. Those year-end sales meant higher 1986 tax liabilities.

The big tax bills required Americans to dip into their savings during the month. The savings rate, savings as a percent of disposable income, fell to a record low of 0.1 percent, down from 3.2 percent in March.

Economists predicted that both disposable incomes and savings would rebound in May.

"This is a one-shot decline caused by tax reform," said John Fagan, economist for Wharton Economics of Bala Cynwyd, Pa. "Real consumer spending and real disposable income will increase by about 2 percent this year. That's a lot slower than last year, but will be enough to keep us out of a recession."

Many economists are looking for economic growth during the current April-June quarter to slow considerably after a rapid 4 percent increase in the gross national product during the first three months of the year.

Hagens predicted the GNP would expand at less than a 1 percent rate during the current quarter with some analysts even more pessimistically forecasting a declining GNP, something that has not occurred since the end of the 1981-82 recession.

In other economic news, the National Association of Realtors reported Tuesday that existing home sales "dropped 1.4 percent in April to an annual rate of $3.8 billion. The April price of a house fell by $20 to $85,400 with the small decline attributed to sellers compensating for the rise in mortgage rates during the month.

Mortgage rates and a variety of other interest rates have climbed by about 1.5 percentage points in the past two months because of renewed worries about higher inflation.

Beryl Sprinkel, the president's chief economist, told reporters Tuesday that fears of sharply higher inflation were "misplaced," and he predicted that the overall inflation rate this year will be very close to the 4 percent average turned in during the first three years of the recovery.

The 2.4 percent April decline in after-tax income, the biggest setback since a 2.9 percent drop in June 1975, followed a tiny 0.1 percent March increase.

The 0.3 percent rise in personal incomes before taxes followed a 0.2 percent March increase and continued the pattern of generally modest advances in overall income. The April incomes increase was depressed slightly by a drop in subsidy payments to farmers and by an initial payment many federal employees made to a newly established retirement savings fund. Without those two developments, incomes would have risen a stronger 0.5 percent.

The key wages and salaries component of incomes increased $7.3 billion in April, very close to the $7.1 billion March increase.

Payrolls at manufacturing firms fell by $600 million in April compared with a March decrease of $1 billion. The 0.6 percent rise in consumer spending included a $7.2 billion annual increase in the purchase of durable goods, items expected to last three or more years. Spending on durable goods had fallen at an annual rate of $1.5 billion in March. The market of non-durable goods rose at an annual rate of $4.7 billion in April, compared with a decline of $100 million in March.

Investors give Dow its 3rd largest day

NEW YORK — The stock market surged Monday, trading the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials its third largest one-day gain ever.

The closely watched indicator leaped 51.74 points to 2,297.94. The advance was the biggest since April 21, when the blue-chip, barometer rose 66.47 points to 2,337.07.

Advancing issues outstripped decliners by around 4-to-1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 1,335 issues advancing, 349 declining and 298 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 152.46 million shares, up from 155.82 million in Friday's session. The market was closed Monday in observance of the Memorial Day holiday.

Analysts said stock prices were boosted throughout the trading session by Tuesday's advances in the dollar and bond prices and by a decline in commodity prices. A sharp upward spike in commodity prices in recent weeks had sparked concern that inflation could build momen-

Volcker favored to be reappointed

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, whose status as reappointed head of the central bank once looked slim, is now the odds-on favorite for the job, private economists believe.

In fact, many close Fed observers think the announcement could come in the next two weeks, before President Reagan leaves for the seven-nation economic summit in Venice.

Publicly, the White House is giving no hints of what the president's decision will be. Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said last week that the president had made no decision yet.

But many Fed watchers discount the public statements, contending that the administration has already made its choice to reappoint Volcker for a third four-year term.

"I think he is a shoo-in," said Jerry Jasnowski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers. "Certainly, the business community wants him. They may not always agree with his positions, but they feel confident he will get us through difficult situations."

To Jasnowski and other economists, the need for Volcker's continued presence at the Fed has been underscored by the tremendous volatility of late in financial markets.

PAUL VOLCKER
In line for 3rd term?

Volcker's chances received a big boost with the departure of Regan, who was replaced as the president's chief of staff by Howard Baker, a Volcker admirer.

"I will tell you without hesitation that I think Paul Volcker has been an extraordinarily good chairman of the Federal Reserve system," Baker said earlier this month in comments that have been echoed by Treasury Secretary James Baker III, who says it is instrumental in persuading Reagan to reappoint Volcker in 1983.

In addition, observers say they have detected no signs that the White House has soured on Volcker, who will be 60 in September, has wondered in the past if he was doing a disservice to his family by staying in a government job paying $89,500 annually when he could be commanding million-dollar benefits on Wall Street.

But Volcker's friends say that money has never interested Volcker as much as government service and they think that has not changed.

Lyle Gramley, a former member of the seven-member Federal Reserve Board and Volcker's close associate, said he believes Volcker would accept another term, although he said he might not stay for the full four years.

Some observers speculate that Volcker may privately agree to serve until January 1990, and then resign. Volcker has often expressed the belief that a new president should be able to make his own decision on a Fed chief after being in office for a year.

David Jones, an economist at Aubrey G. Lunsford & Co. predicted the announcement of Volcker's reappointment would come before the Venice summit to avoid a repeat of problems that occurred because the 1983 decision was delayed until after the economic conference that year.

"The last time all the speculation during the summit was whether Volcker would be reappointed. I think they want to avoid that," he said.

One wild card in the entire process is Barbara Volcker, the chairman's wife of 32 years and someone not wild about the pressures the Fed job places on her husband. According to one report, she broke into tears when she heard the news on television in 1983 that he had been re-appointed for a second term.

But, asked recently by a reporter about the chances for a third term, she replied, "I can't give you any information because I don't know. I didn't think he would accept last time and look where it got me."

Housing starts slide in 1st quarter of 1987

NEW YORK (AP) — Residential building hobbled by a continued decline in apartment construction, slipped 1 percent in the first quarter of 1987, a national construction information group said Monday.

occupied housing by as many as 100,000 units.

Although single-family building remained steady during the period, multifamily construction continued the retreat precipitated by tax reform, said F.W. Dodge, a division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co.

"Strong demand for single-family homes supported a generally high level of total housing starts through 1987's first quarter, even though the rental building market softened," said George A. Christie, F.W. Dodge's chief economist.

Tax reform legislation, which began to take effect this year, abolished many of the tax shelters once available to builders of multifamily, rental units. Removal of those loopholes has led to a drastic decline in apartment construction, Christie said.

Christie also warned that the recent surge in mortgage rates could cut this year's production of owner-

With apartment building already inhibited by tax reform, April's surge of fixed-rate mortgages back into the 10 to 11 percent range requires a lowering of our total housing start forecast for 1987 to 1.65 million units, a decline of nearly 10 percent from last year," Christie said in a statement.

The outlook follows a government report earlier this month that showed housing construction off 2.9 percent in April. The Commerce Department's monthly report also cited a dropoff in apartment building as the main reason for the decline.

F.W. Dodge said the Los Angeles-Long Beach metropolitan area and Washington, D.C., led the nation in total housing starts in the first three months of the year.

But Los Angeles, with 13,171 units, was off 6 percent from a year ago, F.W. Dodge said.

Residential building in the nation's capital totaled 11,398 units, an increase of 9 percent.

Supreme Court ruling brings out more harassment cases

Which of the following would you consider to be sexual harassment?

Example No. 1: Lynn repeatedly refused her boss's invitations to cocktails at his place. Her boss told him that she was to maintain a professional, not personal, relationship, he informed her that he was reneging on the much-desired promotion she had been promised.

Example No. 2: The manager of Kathy's department continued to make extremely distasteful and sexually offensive remarks about her, after she repeatedly told him to stop. While Kathy's job status was not verbally threatened, his behavior made her dread the job she had to perform.

The answer: Both are examples of sexual harassment on the work site.

The effect that sexual harassment has had on keeping women at all levels — from blue-collar to white-collar workers — out of certain jobs is impossible to calculate. As more women enter the work force in upper-management positions, the treatment persists. And the attitude that these actions are simply "the price women have to pay" to make it in the work force is now being more and more hostile environment cases," reports Joan Foster, an attorney with Gruta, Glassman and Holman, a law firm specializing in advising corporate clients on employment policies. "Many companies are now fearing chain reactions," she told my research associate, Beth Koblener.

One major confusion: What you may think is a friendly or matter-of-fact gesture or remark may be considered insulting or offensive by a co-worker. Depending on where you work, standards also vary. In high stress situations — such as a hospital or trading floor — there are different thresholds of what is accepted.

In 1986, women constituted 45 percent of the entire work force as compared to 41 percent in 1976 and 36 percent in 1966, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Complaints of sexual harassment have also been rising, says the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), which published federal guidelines defining sexual harassment in 1980. In charges of discrimination, sexual harassment was raised as an issue 7,273 times in 1985. That figure has surged each year from the 4,272 complaints made in 1981.

"The number of people speaking out has increased," Sarah Burns, legislative director of the NOW Legal Defense and Education Fund, notes. Since the Supreme Court's decision, the National Organization for Women has noticed that more women seem to be aware of their rights and more managers are in turn becoming informed.

To protect women — as well as themselves — employers are instituting policies to deal with this problem. Although the court rejected a ruling that employers are automatically liable in harassment cases, if an employee does not have a reasonable way to complain to management, the employer may indeed be liable.

"Employers must let workers know that sexual harassment is illegal and will not be tolerated," says Foster.

Companies with sophisticated human resource departments tend to have programs providing procedures for an employee to file grievances. Legal action is the last resort; the costs in terms of dollars as well as human expenses are astronomical for all involved.

If you are being harassed and there is no company policy, first tell the person to stop. If that does not help, put your complaint in writing and send it to the person who is harassing you, suggests Burns. Be clear and polite, but firmly explain that you will send the letter to the supervisor if the harassment does not cease.

Document all incidents and keep copies of correspondence at home, not in the office. If it does not help, put your complaint in writing and send it to the person who is harassing you, suggests Burns. Be clear and polite, but firmly explain that you will send the letter to the supervisor if the harassment does not cease.

Contact the affirmative action specialist or local or federal Equal Employment or Human Relations office if the problem persists.

Note: Someone against whom you are taking action may turn around and sue for defamation of character, discrimination or the like.

Sweet treats (top to bottom): Berry Banana Trifle, Walnut Rum Raisin Cheesecake, mixed pastries

Special Occasions SPECIAL SWEETS

Traditions abound this time of year, with graduations and weddings. And many cooks find themselves hosting a special occasion party, whether it is an elegant wedding shower or an after-graduation gathering for out-of-town relatives.

It's a good time to experiment with some show-stopping desserts.

For sheer glamour, Walnut Rum Raisin Cheesecake is hard to top. The creamy cheesecake filling is made with sweetened condensed milk and dotted with rum-flavored raisins. A walnut praline glaze adds the crowning touch.

Berry Banana Trifle is heavenly layers of rich, vanilla pudding, bananas, raspberry sauce and toasted walnuts. Sandwiched between the layers are elegant ladyfingers.

The easy-to-make macarons offer two variations: one filled with crisp, crunchy walnuts and the other "studded" with sweet, chewy raisins.

For those with a real sweet-tooth, Double-Decker Raisin Walnut Fudge will be a favorite. Raisins and walnuts add contrast, and microwave instructions simplify the candy-making.

Pretty as a picture are Petite Lemon Raisin Tarts. A rich pastry encloses tiny muffin cups to hold a light and lemony raisin filling. Twists of lemon peel and a sprinkle of sugar garnish the tarts.

BERRY BANANA TRIFLE

Makes 10 to 12 servings
1 (10 oz.) package frozen raspberries in syrup, thawed and drained, reserving 1/2 cup syrup
1/2 cup red currant or strawberry jelly
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 (14 oz.) can sweetened condensed milk (not evaporated milk)
1 1/2 cups cold water
1 (4 serving size) package instant vanilla (flavor) pudding and pie filling mix
2 cups (1 pint) whipping cream, whipped
1 (3 oz.) package ladyfingers, split or 1 (10 1/2 oz.) loaf pound cake, cut into 12 slices then each slice cut in half vertically
3 medium bananas, sliced and dipped in lemon juice
1 cup coarsely chopped toasted walnuts
In small saucepan, combine reserved raspberry syrup, jelly and cornstarch. Cook and stir until thickened and clear. Stir in raspberries. Cool. In large bowl, combine sweetened condensed milk and water. Add pudding mix, beat well. Chill 5 minutes. Fold in whipped cream. Spoon half the pudding mixture into 2 1/2 to 3 quart glass serving bowl. Line side of bowl with ladyfingers; arrange remaining ladyfingers on top of pudding. Top with half each of the bananas, raspberry sauce and walnuts. Repeat with remaining ingredients. Garnish as desired. Refrigerate leftovers.

DOUBLE-DECKER RAISIN WALNUT FUDGE

Makes about 2 pounds
1/2 pound white confectioners' coating
1 (14 oz.) can sweetened condensed milk (not evaporated milk)
1 1/2 teaspoons white vinegar
1/2 cup raisins
1/2 cup vanilla extract
1 (6 oz.) package semi-sweet chocolate chips
Dash salt
1/2 cup chopped walnuts
In heavy saucepan, over low heat, melt coating with 1/2 cup sweetened condensed milk and vinegar. Remove from heat; stir in raisins and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Spread evenly into wax paper-lined 8 or 9 inch square pan. Chill 30 minutes. In small saucepan, over low heat, melt chocolate chips with remaining sweetened condensed milk and salt. Remove from heat; stir in remaining 1/2 teaspoon vanilla and nuts. Spread evenly over white fudge layer. Chill 2 hours or until firm. Turn fudge onto cutting board; peel off paper and cut into squares. Store tightly covered at room temperature.

MICROWAVE: In 2-quart glass measure, combine coating with 1/2 cup sweetened condensed milk and vinegar. Microwave on full power (high) 4 to 6 minutes or until coating melted, stirring after 2 minutes. Stir in 1 teaspoon vanilla and raisins. Spread evenly into prepared pan. Chill 30 minutes. In 1-quart glass measure, combine chocolate chips with remaining sweetened condensed milk and salt. Microwave on full power (high) 45 seconds. See OCCASIONS on Page C2.

Angel food Special desserts can leave indelible mark upon guests

There are two maxims that seem to run a thread through my life. The first is that there is a time or a season for all things, and the other is the law of cause and effect.

The way these work sometimes overlaps. Like right now it's the season or the time for some polished silver, shine-the-crystal, iron-the-linen preparation for some no-holds-barred, champagne-and-entertainment.

This is because, well, because of the law of cause and effect. We've been entertained, so it's time to entertain.

From a list of my readers, I gather that close behind speaking in public (the perfect widespread fear known to mankind) must be the fear of entertaining.

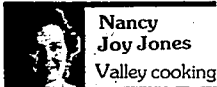

Now my own science has come up with a few ways to overcome the phobias and the best is just a little dose of the feared item at a time.

So the first step is to invite someone you consider very un-threatening over for a cup of coffee and a trifle. (You could even have her bring the trifle.)

The next week invite a couple over for a very casual cocktail. You know, paper plates and food that can be totally done in advance. If you want to have something on the barbeque, let your husband cook it. You can always transfer your guilt about overdone meat onto him.

Now get in the habit of doing something every single week. Kids are great to practice on. Borrow someone's variety and perfect your cookie- and candy-making techniques, and then your homemade lemonade. Gradually you'll work yourself into the big leagues.

Yes, this takes time and effort. It does need to get a notebook and start clipping things to inspire you: recipes, table settings, party plans, flower arrangements, all sorts of things.

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

If you feel you don't have the dishes you need, start collecting NOW. You can make placemats and napkins from leftover materials, you can get that one glorious book that will give you ideas. Get that glossy table-top book on entertaining. It will help you and be there when you are ready. Right now use those booklets put out by supermarkets and food companies for simple beginnings.

Look for patterns of china and silver or flatware and stoneware. Let your family know what you want. Most stores keep a preference file and will be glad to add your name to it along with what you want. You don't have to be a bride for this privilege.

One thing that helped me cook for guests was to concentrate on one thing at a time. For example, I became a pasta person. I took me ages, but I have a few dishes in my mind that I can do with a minimum of ingredients and they taste terrific. I also let guests bring things like salad and bread.

Another thing is soup. I concentrated on hot soup as after-ski get-together fare and became famous (well, semi-known) for my minestrone.

Yes, there were times when I cooked the vegetables until they died and tasted like carrot glue. Sometimes my pasta stuck together or to the pot or to the top of the guest mouths (a real conversation stopper!) but I kept keeping on. And so should you.

Entertaining should be one of the joys of life. Actually it's sharing yourself and things you've prepared for people you like and love. That,

Cool flavor of lemon desserts add elegant touch to any event

Celebrations such as graduations, bridal showers and other spring and summer events call for special desserts. The cool, refreshing flavor of lemon dessert adds an elegant finishing touch to any memorable event.

Guests won't be able to resist the luscious taste of Double Lemon Cheesecake. A creamy lemon-flavored cheesecake, topped with a satiny lemon glaze. Sliced, fresh strawberries are the perfect complement to the double lemon flavor.

Everyone appreciates delicious desserts that can be made ahead and pulled out of the freezer just before serving. A smooth filling of sour cream, sweetened condensed milk and lemon juice is poured in to a graham cracker crumb crust.

DOUBLE LEMON CHEESECAKE

1/4 cup sugar
4 (8-ounce) packages cream cheese, softened
1 (14-ounce) can, sweetened condensed milk (do not substitute evaporated milk)

Prom night Innovative caterer has ways to please youthful revelers

By JOAN BEAN

BURLEY — Parties, Proms, wedding receptions, graduation celebrations. Lois Dewey has put together hundreds of such events, professionally and personally.

Professionally, from 1971 to 1985, she was the sales and catering manager for the Burley Inn. She says she not only catered conventions, but "all kinds of parties — everything under the sun you can name, I was asked to do that."

When it comes to planning the food for a wedding reception, she says the most important consideration is the time of day it will take place. If the wedding will be earlier in the day, with guests returning at 7:30 p.m., dessert items are nice to have.

But if the reception is to be held during the breakfast, lunch or dinner hour, guests are apt to be hungry, particularly if they come from out of town, she warns. She advises planning heavier items on the buffet for those times.

Even if the wedding is at 11 a.m. and just light hors d'oeuvres are served, people will be hungry and will fill their plates with the dainty finger food.

For prom night, she suggests a nice sit-down dinner or buffet, taking into consideration the fact the young people will be nervous and excited.

"I don't think they enjoy cutting a steak — something they have to sit there and work at," she says. "They're not light-hearted and so excited that they like something like tender, fillet of chicken breast, a seafood platter or something they know how to handle," she says.

She says flowers are the most attractive decoration for a graduation party at home. A centerpiece can be added with the school colors and streamers leading to place cards.

"This can also be done on card tables. If they are used for table overflow. The graduates' favorite music on the stereo provides a nice background.

Before the meal begins, a punch bowl and hors d'oeuvres help break the ice. This can also be done in a different room than the one dinner is served in, making last-minute table setting convenient.

She also recommends gathering or eating out on the lawn this time of year. To illuminate the festivity, torch lights could be placed on the lawn.

"Young people like to be easy and free," she says. "Keep it more informal, because you know they're self-conscious. (Have) food that they understand and that they like — like individual pizzas, or cut up a big quiche. They like quiche — they really do like something besides hamburgers."

During the '50s, Dewey was a home economics teacher for the Declo High School. And she had the first breakfast in her home for about 12 years.

"I did it long after my daughter and son were graduated," she says. "It was just custom."
For the breakfast, she made sour-dough pancakes, scrambled eggs and Women sap jobs, gourmet jelly from tough Mayhaw tree

COLQUITT, Ga. (AP) — A thorny tree that thrives in the bogs of southwestern Georgia has become a symbol of success in economically depressed Miller County, where four women are squeezing jobs and profits from its tart red berries.

Joy Jinks, founder of a company that makes jelly from the fruit of the mayhaw tree, said she and her three partners started the business to create jobs in Colquitt, a farming community of 2,000 with two peanut plants and a panty factory.

Like many other rural communities, Colquitt is plagued by poverty and a shortage of good-paying jobs. The women considered a number of possible projects, like making draperies, before settling on producing a jelly that has been made in the South for generations, Mrs. Jinks recalled.

Mayhaw trees, a relative of the hawthorne, grow in swampy areas from North Carolina to Texas. The berries, resembling small crab apples, are available for only a few weeks each spring.

"It was the thing we had that no one else was doing," said Mrs. Jinks. "We felt we had a unique product."

"Everyone grew up on mayhaw jelly," said Betty Jo Toole, another partner. "It's been around for generations. My family wouldn't eat any other kind."

Since starting the business in 1983, the women have doubled their sales each year. They have added six new products and Gov. Joe Frank Harris issued a proclamation last July praising the effort to improve the Miller County economy.

In small mixer bowl, beat sweetened condensed milk, egg and lemon juice until smooth; stir in rind. Place raisins in prepared muffin cups; fill with sweetened condensed milk mixture. hot chocolate. She says Belgian waffles or crepes are also nice for this and the batter can be made ahead.

Dewey says her ham and turkey loaf is "good for a graduation party, a formal dinner or it could be for just anything. It could go to the backyard with potato salad."

HAM AND TURKEY LOAF

For the ham layer, stir and set aside:
3 pounds of ground, uncooked ham
2 eggs, slightly beaten
3 cups fine soft bread crumbs
3 cups buttermilk
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons ground horseradish
For the turkey layer, mix well:
2 1/2 cups cooked turkey, ground and packed well in mixing cups
1 cup soft bread crumbs
This should be firm. Pack half of the ham mixture in a 9x5x3-inch loaf pan, the turkey mixture, then ham. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 1/2 hours. Serve hot or cold.
After slicing and putting this on a plate, spoon the following rich sauce lightly over it.
The rich sauce:
2 tablespoons butter

like to use superfine granulated sugar, but it is not necessary if you sift it carefully. A quick way to make the sugar even finer is to zip it into a food processor or blender.

Most of the old recipes call for baking at 350 degrees. I would lower this to 300 and if the altitude is over 3,500 feet, then try it at 325 degrees.

GREATEST ANGEL FOOD CAKE

1 1/2 cups sifted cake flour
1 1/2 cups sifted sugar
1 1/2 cups egg whites (about 12 extra-large)
1 1/2 teaspoon FRESH cream of tartar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract (or 1 teaspoon vanilla extract and 1/2 teaspoon almond extract)
1/2 teaspoon lemon juice (optional)
Preheat oven and have pan ready. Sift the flour onto a piece of waxed paper and set aside. Do the same with the sugar.
Put the egg whites in a mixing bowl and beat until foamy. Sift the cream of tartar and salt over the whites and add the extract.
Beat the whites to soft peaks, sometimes described as stiff but moist. When the bowl is tilted, the whites should flow (not run or slide out in a clumpy mass).
Use a whisk or a rubber spatula and very carefully fold in 1/2 cup of the sugar, one or two tablespoons at a time.
Now mix and sift the remaining sugar with the flour (sift 3 times) and sift 1/2 cup over the eggs at a time, folding in gently and lightly, but thoroughly.
Four the batter into the pan and smooth the top with the spatula. You can rap the pan against a counter a couple of times to remove big bubbles.
Bake until pale brown and springy to touch, usually over an hour. Sometimes it takes as little as 50 minutes and sometimes up to an hour plus 10 more minutes.

Remove from oven and cool upside down. If the cake is above the pan top, invert the pan on a bottle. It should cool at least an hour.
Carefully run a knife or very thin metal spatula around the side edges and the edges of the center tube to loosen.
Now for the elegance. You can glaze with a frosting and pipe flowers or other decorations. You could put a vase in the center and use fresh flowers there. You could carefully slice crosswise (use a serrated knife) and fill with fresh berries and/or whipped cream or a custard sauce.
If the cake is for a graduate, make little rolls of paper and tie with ribbons to look like diplomas for the top.
Try it, it's easier than you might think.
Enjoy!

MACHOSES

Melt together one 10-ounce can tomatoes and green chilis and one large brick of Velveeta cheese.
Brown 2 pounds ground beef, and add 1 envelope taco seasoning and 2 bags of tortilla chips. Spread chips in two large covered glass dishes. Sprinkle browned seasoned beef over the chips. Pour cheese mixture over all. Can also top with sour cream or guacamole.
This recipe is for a large crowd. Dewey usually cuts it in half.
Dewey says she received compliments from young men and kids for the Let 'er Buck she served in the lobby of the Ranley Inn on Guest Appreciation Night, every 3 weeks.

LET 'ER BUCK

1 loaf french bread, cut in half lengthwise

1 large size jar Cheese Whiz
About 1 pound crumbled hamburger, fried
2 small cans mushrooms
1/2 teaspoon oregano
1/2 cup chopped green onions
1/2 cans tomato sauce
2 tablespoons olive oil
Spread a big piece of aluminum foil, cupping the ends so the juice won't run over, on a cookie sheet or in a shallow pan. Place the two halves of bread, cut side up. Then spread in the bread the next five ingredients in order listed. Be sure to spread the cheese all the way to the edges. Then spoon the tomato sauce on top, and finally, drizzle the oil over the works. Do not broil it. Just put it in a 325 degree oven for 20 minutes.

"You slice it on the bias, and they can pick it up and go with it. We always served it in the chafing pan, and they could pick it up and put it on their plates. It's easy to handle and delicious," she says.

For a wedding reception, she has a recipe for a refrigerator dessert tinted the bride's color.

And lastly, she shares a recipe for a punch-grog as is, or spiked for an adult crowd.

BANANA FREEZE

Bring to a boil 6 cups water and 2 cups sugar. Let cool. Add 4 or 6 mashed bananas, one 6-ounce can frozen orange juice and water called for with the orange juice, one 46-ounce can pineapple juice and the juice of 2 lemons. Freeze this mixture. Thaw a little and slowly add about 1 1/2 quarts of ginger ale. Press in the bottom of a 13x9 1/2-inch dish or pan. Take a flat spatula and press them down evenly in the pan. Cream 1 cup butter or margarine (butter works better) with 2 cups amount of powdered sugar. Beat until very creamy.

AREFRIGERATOR DESSERT

This recipe calls for one large package of Nabisco Wafers — the flat box with gold edge, but the size of the box has been reduced, so the now takes about a box and a half.
Roll and crush half of the wafers. Press in the bottom of a 13x9 1/2-inch dish or pan. Take a flat spatula and press them down evenly in the pan. Cream 1 cup butter or margarine (butter works better) with 2 cups amount of powdered sugar. Beat until very creamy.
Add 4 eggs, one at a time (break nice and thick, like a frappe," she says.

"I can tell she likes me, too. She's so good to me. She's always there in my moments of need. I hate to admit it but right now there are some things I can't do by myself. I won't go into details but you can figure them out for yourself. This wonderful girl is so warm and tender—the ideal helpmate. There's only one thing I would change about her, (although she's made a lot of changes on me). She's always dressed in white. When we get married, I'm going to buy her some fancy clothes. By the way, do you think I'm too young to get married?"

Intensive planting methods help smaller plots produce

If you have a small garden plot, you may be interested in using one of the intensive planting methods to obtain maximum production from a small space.

Even if you have plenty of space, you may want to grow the same crops in a smaller space to cut down on work. There are several variations of intensive gardening, but the idea behind it is to plant in wider blocks rather than single-file rows. It works well with the small vegetables such as root and leaf types. It also can be used for medium-size vegetables such as beans, peas, cabbage, broccoli and cauliflower.

Suppose you plant two rows of carrots and space them two feet apart. In the first foot of these two rows you would probably have about a dozen carrots after thinning to about two inches apart. By broadcasting carrot seed in the space between these two single rows, you could grow about 72 carrots when spaced two inches apart. In this case, the block is two feet wide. You can make the blocks as wide as is convenient to reach in to weed or harvest. Of course you have to allow space between blocks so you will have some working room.

I like to make weekly plantings of radishes in one foot square blocks. Two or three dozen radishes is all we can use while they are at their peak.

After broadcasting small seeded vegetables, scatter soil by hand or rake soil over the top. For improved germination, cover seed with vermiculite or peat moss instead of soil.

I generally plant beans and peas in triple rows about six inches apart. Three rows 5 to 10 feet long will provide all we can eat fresh during the three weeks of picking. That leaves space to make another planting about the end of June for an early September crop. Or if we want some to can or freeze, we just make the rows longer.

Cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli and peppers can be planted in double or triple rows about 12 to 18 inches apart.

Intensive planting is not generally used with larger vegetables such as squash, tomatoes, melons or cucumbers. One plant grows as wide as you want.

I have a vegetable guide booklet which describes intensive planting, succession planting and the use of plastic mulch and row covers. If you would like a copy, send $1 and a self-addressed envelope to Allen Wilson, P.O. Box 20, Rexburg, Idaho 83440. Ask for vegetable guide.

Springtime is the right time to track down giant rhubarb

By HENRY MITCHELL
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Spring is the great season for rhubarb, which all Yankees apparently grow up on, as it is supposed to be a general tonic and clear the blood (whatever that means) and get ready for living again after a long, hard winter.

But there are other rhubarbs even more ornamental than the ones grown in kitchen gardens, such as the Alexandrian, the Alexandrian rhubarb, and the giant rhubarb, R. palmatum, in its several varieties such as "Bowles' Crimson." You see these ornamental rhubarbs in British gardens, but I have never seen them in America.

R. palmatum grows — about shoulder height and has leaves rather like a large castor oil plant, and in some varieties the leaves are bright red. I have never seen them in America.

But this giant rhubarb is of interest for its medicinal properties, and Clifford Foust, history professor at the University of Maryland, is far gone in his study of it, writing a book on the subject.

He does not grow it (though he is an avid consumer of garden rhubarb) but became interested in it when his study of trade in the 18th century between Russia and China brought it to his attention.

The Russians used to buy it on their Chinese border, whence they shipped it to St. Petersburg and thence to Antwerp, after which it was generally distributed throughout Western Europe. It was thought to be the ideal laxative.

Foust says there were endless other laxatives, but most were too powerful and "burned" the patient's insides, and while they worked they resulted in diarrhea hard to stop. But Rheum palmatum was gentle with no after-effects.

As he began investigating the Russian trade in the herb he discovered it was an important item for revenue beginning in the 1680s or thereabouts. Trade in rhubarb from China dates at least to Roman times, but only since the 17th century did it become a notable item, which it remained until near the close of the 19th century.

The English thought they might as well import the drug themselves, and the East India Co. started doing so in the 18th century, winding up with a profitable business, though relatively minor in comparison with the importation of tea, porcelain, textiles and so forth.

Even so, by the end of the century it was importing more than 50,000 tons of dried rhubarb root. This was ground to a powder and sold in London for 6 to 14 shillings a pound wholesale. It was not considered as good as Russian rhubarb, which in 1750 sold for 1 pound 8 shillings wholesale in London. (A man's coat about the size of the U.S. Capitol cost about 50,000 pounds then).

Foust notes that rhubarb was more costly than exotic spices. He has found the East India Co.'s agents for some reason were not able to get the same quality roots from China that the Russians did on their Mongol border, and the Russians seemed to maintain a better quality control throughout the journey from China to Europe.

The English tried many times to grow this rhubarb at home, but without success worth speaking of. One family firm in England grew it from 1801 to 1946, and its old drying barn, a stone structure, still stands but was converted into an automobile repair shop. So, passes the glory.

Foust (pronounced Faust) has concerned himself with rhubarb for 20 years, and for the past 10 years more intensively, so that research for his book is now complete.

He has not taken the powdered rhubarb himself, since like most modern, sane people he has had no need for purgatives, but he has examined the agreeably-smelling, yellow-brown powder in London.

He says that the very high price of rhubarb in the 18th century led to adulteration, usually with dried leaves of virtually anything, with the result that rhubarb was a factor in the first pure food and drug laws.

The first such law, surprisingly, was in the United States in 1848, in which Customs officials were exhorted to inspect drug imports. How inspectors were supposed to detect impure or adulterated rhubarb he does not know.

This recipe will help Americans cut down on high salt intakes

By NINA KILLHAM
The Washington Post

In recognition of National High Blood Pressure Month, the American Heart Association wants to remind you that excessive salt intake is dangerous to your health.

The average American, it reports, consumes 6 to 18 grams of salt daily (roughly 1 to 2 teaspoons). According to the AHA, anything above 0.5 grams is too much.

Diseases of the heart and blood vessels are the No. 1 cause of death in the United States. High blood pressure, which affects more than 58 million Americans, is a leading cause of heart attacks and strokes. And while it can't be cured, it can be controlled in many cases through a low-sodium diet. Accordingly, the AHA recommends a maximum sodium intake of 1 gram (1,000 milligrams) for every 1,000 calories.

Ordinary table salt is not pure sodium. It is a compound called sodium chloride, with 40 percent sodium by weight. There are 28 grams of sodium in 1 ounce of salt, 5.5 grams of sodium to a teaspoon of salt.

But you can start right now on a lower salt diet. With vegetable oil and black pepper in the cupboard, it's just a dash through the Express Lane.

LIME-BROILED FISH STEAKS WITH MUSTARD AND GINGER
1 cup lime juice
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 teaspoon salt-free Dijon-style mustard
2 teaspoons grated ginger
1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper
Freshly ground black pepper
4 8-ounce fish steaks (salmon, swordfish, halibut), each about 1 inch thick

In a bowl, combine the lime juice, 1/2 cup lime juice, mustard, ginger, cayenne pepper, and black pepper to taste.

Marinate the fish steaks in the marinade for 30 to 60 minutes, turning occasionally.

Preheat the broiler. Brush the broiler pan with the remaining oil. If cooking outdoors, use white coals and brush the grill with remaining oil.

cream and food coloring if desired. Pour into prepared crust. Freeze 6 hours or until firm. Let stand 10 minutes before serving. Garnish as desired. Return ungarished leftovers to freezer.

CITRUS ANGEL TARTS
(Makes 10 tarts)
1 (14-ounce) meringue shells*
3 (8-ounce) cans sweetened condensed milk (do not substitute evaporated milk)
1/2 cup bottled lemon juice
2 teaspoons grated orange rind
Few drops yellow food coloring, optional

1 cup (1/2 pint) whipping cream, whipped

Prepare meringue shells; set aside. In medium mixing bowl, beat egg yolks; stir in sweetened condensed milk, lemon juice and food coloring if desired. Fold in whipped cream. Chill at least 2 hours. Just before serving, spoon equal portions into meringue shells. Garnish, as desired. Refrigerate leftovers.

Meringue shells: Covering-baking sheets with brown ungreased paper. Draw 10 (3-inch) circles about 2 inches apart. Set aside. In large mixer bowl, combine 3 egg whites at room temperature with 1 tablespoon vanilla extract, 1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar and dash of salt. Beat at medium speed until soft peaks form. Gradually beat in 1 cup sugar at high speed until very stiff peaks form. Stir in 1/2 cup finely chopped nuts. Spread each of the small circles on paper with about 1/2 cup meringue, using a spoon to shape into shells or rings through pastry tube. Bake in preheated 300 degree oven for 35 to 40 minutes or until a light beige condensed milk then lemon juice, sour

Wife wants to grin and bear dental bill

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 70 and recently retired. I am 65. We live comfortably and are in relatively good health. I'm a nice-looking woman, but my teeth are ugly, and I want to have them fixed. I'm talking about extensive dental work — crowns, bridgework and beautification. My dentist says the job would run me about $9,500. My husband says we can't afford it — that I'm better off having all my teeth pulled and getting dentures, which would be cheaper and just as pretty. He's had dentures for years and says they're fine. Dentures would run me about $1,500.

We own $200,000 in certificates of deposit, bonds and short-term savings and checking accounts. Our home is valued at $160,000 and we have made provisions (trusts) for our three grandchildren when they reach 18 years of age. We give generously to our church and local charities and, of course, we both get Social Security checks every month. Can we afford a $9,500 dental bill?

I'LL NEVER SMILE AGAIN
DEAR ILL: You certainly can! Do not consider having all your teeth extracted and getting dentures. Keep your natural teeth as long as you can, and tell your husband to put his money where your mouth is. Besides, it's your money, too, so get your teeth fixed, and may your smile be brighter than that of your days.

DEAR ABBY: I was moved to tears reading the letter signed "His Widow in Idaho" who approved of her husband's correspondence with his childhood sweetheart until they were both dead in the old way.

As her husband was dying, he asked her to please call this lady to convey this final farewell. The wife called, and the lady said, "Tell him I love him in the same old way." They were both dead.

What a beautiful lady that wife was! It is a testament to the unselfish spirit that some people are capable of. And that so many of us do not have that capacity of understanding.

We all have wonderful memories of youth and the people who were so important during that period. It has nothing to do with the love we have for husbands or wife.

Her husband must have loved her very much, knowing she transcended petty jealousy. God bless that woman — but he already has!

— A READER IN EAST MEADOW
DEAR READER: You and I are in total agreement. However, another reader wrote to express an entirely different point of view.

DEAR ABBY: To the "Widow in Idaho" who helped encourage correspondence with her late husband's first girlfriend, I have a message for her: You are sick, sick, sick!

If feelings existed for so many years between these two ex-lovers, why didn't they get married? Also, how could she stand being with a man who still thought of his ex-girlfriend? Strange relationship!

— PLEASE, NO NAME OR TOWN

CONFIDENTIAL TO HURT AND DISAPPOINTED: When people snoop around in the drawers of others and read diaries and letters that were not meant for their eyes, whatever are they looking for? I'm not sure, but invariably they find something that will hurt and disappoint them.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long-stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Most say they want to quit

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Three of four smokers would like to quit, say researchers at the University of Rochester's Smoking Research Program.

"The reasons smokers give include awareness of the risks to their health, and changing social expectations," says epidemiologist Gary Giovino.

The majority prefer to quit on their own, without the help of a clinic, and many are eventually successful. Relapses are common for would-be quitters, says Giovino.

"The important thing is not to give up; previous slips don't mean the smoker will never make it," he says. "The quitter should analyze the reason for the relapse and be prepared when similar circumstances arise again to use another strategy to cope."

Flyers do the unheard of: Win in Edmonton

By KEN RAPPOPORT
The Associated Press

EDMONTON, Alberta — Brian Propp assisted on all four goals, including two by Rick Tocchet, as the Philadelphia Flyers rallied to defeat the Edmonton Oilers 4-3 Tuesday night and stayed alive in the Stanley Cup playoffs.

The Oilers still lead the best-of-seven series 3-2 and can wrap up their third NHL title in four years with a victory in Philadelphia Thursday night.

The Flyers, looking all but finished when they fell behind 2-0 in the first period and 3-1 in the second, battled back behind Propp and Tocchet, their gritty forwards, to send the series back to Philadelphia.

Tocchet's second goal of the night and 11th of the playoffs at 5:56 of the third period put the Flyers ahead to stay.

The Flyers hope to become only the second team in NHL history to win the Stanley Cup finals after falling behind 3-1. The only team to come back from a 3-1 deficit to win the Cup was the Toronto Maple Leafs, who beat the Detroit Red Wings in 1942 after losing the first three games.

After Jari Kurri and Marty McSorley had scored for a 2-0 Edmonton lead, Tocchet scored late in the first period. McSorley restored the Oilers' two-goal lead with his second of the night early in the second period.

But Propp then set up Doug Crossman and Pelle Eklund later in the second period, sending the game into the final period tied 3-3.

Propp did most of the work on the winning goal when he took the puck away from Edmonton defenseman Craig Muni and fed Tocchet across the crease. Tocchet one-timed the puck into the net, beating Edmonton goaltender Grant Fuhr on the short side.

Edmonton pulled Fuhr at 18:51 for an extra attacker, but Flyers rookie goalie Ron Hextall — who was booed loudly by the sellout crowd of 17,502 at the start of the game for his part in a slashing incident in Game 4, held them off. Hextall made 31 saves, as did Fuhr.

Propp's four assists tied a club record for a playoff game.

The Oilers, who have scored first

The shot went by the glove of Hextall, who was partially screened by Oilers center Mike Krushelnyski.

McSorley gave the Oilers a 2-0 lead with his third goal of the playoffs at 6:39. Wayne Gretzky set up the goal when he carried the puck over the blue line and shot from the top of the left circle. McSorley followed the puck into the crease and just nudged it over the goal line while diving past a sprawled Hextall.

Gretzky's assist was his 27th of the playoffs and extended his total points to 32, tops in these playoffs.

The Flyers got a goal by Tocchet at 18:10 to cut the Oilers' lead to 2-1. Propp set it up when he skated from behind the net and fed the puck to Tocchet, who scored his 11th goal of the playoffs. It was the first time the Flyers had scored in the first period in the finals.

The free-wheeling first period featured 16 shots by each team and strong performances in goal by Hextall and Fuhr.

The Oilers' lead would have been larger after the first 20 minutes, but they missed three breakaway and Kent Nilsson — the victim of Hextall's slashing in the fourth game — hit the goalpost with a shot.

The Oilers went ahead 3-1 at 1:32 of the second period on McSorley's second goal of the game. Krushelnyski won a faceoff and got the puck back to Jaroslav Pouzar, beyond the right faceoff circle. Pouzar shot a 40-footer that McSorley deflected into the net from the slot.

Doug Crossman cut Edmonton's lead to 3-2 at 8:08. Propp took a feed from Pelle Eklund in the Flyers' end and skated up ice on a 3-on-2. Propp was in the right faceoff circle when he fed Crossman in the slot and the defenseman beat Fuhr with a 20-footer.

Bird steals one from Pistons

By HOWARD ULMAN
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Detroit had the victory in the bag. Then Larry Bird stole it.

Bird, who had missed two shots in the final 30 seconds, picked off Isiah Thomas' inbound pass with five seconds left. The Boston star fed Dennis Johnson for the winning layup with one second to go as the Celtics beat the Pistons 108-107 and took a 3-2 lead in their NBA Eastern Conference final series Tuesday night.

"We were in a hole," Bird said. "I thought it was really just a matter of luck."

"I'll put that on top of everything Larry's ever done, Boston assistant coach Chris Ford said.

"It was sort of a lazy pass over to Bill Laimbeer," Johnson said. "I didn't see where Larry came from."

Neither did Thomas, whose foul-line jumper had put Detroit ahead 107-106 with 17 seconds remaining.

"You can see I should have called a timeout," he said. "You see, I should not have thrown the pass. You can see I should have thrown the ball harder or Bill should have come in. But all I can say is I stole the ball and they won the game."

"I made a mental mistake by not calling timeout," said Laimbeer, who wanted under Boston's basket for Thomas to pass from the sideline. "In the heat of battle, I made the proper decisions sometimes are not made."

"I thought basically we had the game won," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said. "All we had to do was inbound the ball."

Then Bird stepped in.

"I was going to foul Laimbeer. I stuck my hand in there and then I knew I had it stolen," he added.

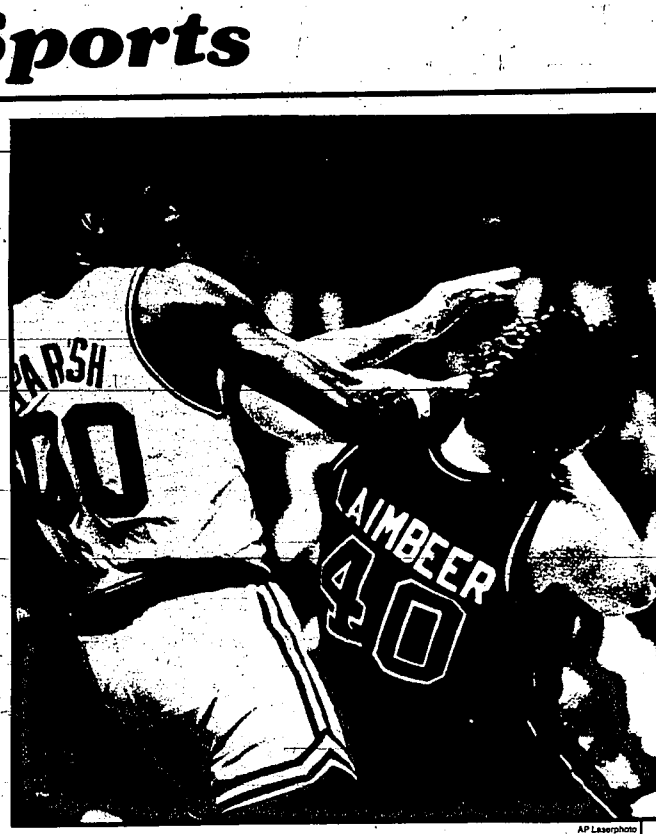

"Then I turned around and saw D.J. standing in the lane."

But Johnson still had to make the basket with Joe Dumars guarding him closely. He drove down the left side of the lane and put the shot up with his right hand.

"I was off-balance," Johnson said. "It rolled around and went down."

Detroit then called timeout and put the ball in play from midcourt. Adrian Dantley's pass hit Laimbeer's hands and went out of bounds as the final buzzer sounded.

Bill Laimbeer of the Detroit Pistons goes down as he is hit by Boston's Robert Parish.

Game 6 of the best-of-seven series in Boston on Thursday night. A seventh game, if necessary, will be in Boston Saturday. The series survivor will play the Western Conference champion Los Angeles Lakers for the NBA title.

Boston, which won for the 35th time in the last 36 games at Boston Garden, was led by Bird with 36 points, Kevin McHale with 20 and Johnson with 18.

Detroit, winless in its last 17 games at the Garden since winning on Dec. 19, 1982, was led by Adrian Dantley with 25 points, Vinnie Johnson with 20 and Thomas with 17.

Boston center Robert Parish left the game when he aggravated a sprained left ankle with 3:41 to go. Vinnie Johnson then hit a long jumper that put Detroit in front 99-95 with 3:05 remaining. But Darren Daye hit a three-point play and made two free throws that gave Boston a 100-99 lead with 2:39 to go and began an 11-4 surge.

Danny Ainge ended the run with a jumper from the top of the key for a 106-103 lead with 53 seconds left.

Then Laimbeer connected from just beyond the foul line with 46 seconds left before Bird missed a short shot with 28 seconds remaining. Detroit called a timeout to set up the play on which Thomas gave the Pistons their last lead.

Leading 58-56 at halftime, Boston began the third quarter with an 11-2 run that made the score 69-58 with 9:02 left in the period. Then Detroit went on a 13-3 run to tie the game 71-71.

The Celtics were leading 83-77 when Vinnie Johnson entered the game for Detroit with 2:31 to go in the quarter. He hit a 16-foot jumper to start an 8-0 Detroit spurt in which he had three field goals. It gave the Pistons an 85-83 lead, but Boston got the last three points of the period on foul shots to go ahead 86-85.

Boston took its biggest lead at 48-36 with 7:23 left. In the first half, Parish punched Johnson's two free throws. Then Dantley scored nine points in a 20-10 Pistons' surge that cut their deficit to two points at halftime.

With 23 seconds left in the first half, Parish punched Laimbeer twice after they battled for a rebound which Laimbeer had grabbed under the Celtics' basket. Laimbeer appeared to have pushed Parish in the chest before he was punched.

Laimbeer fell to the floor but no foul was called on either player. The incident came one day after Laimbeer was fined $5,000 and Bird $2,000 for a skirmish on Saturday's third game. Laimbeer had knocked Bird to the floor with a hard foul and Bird punched him and threw the ball at him.

Laimbeer's layup had given Detroit its only lead of the first half, 2-0. Boston scored the next nine points. After missing their first three shots, the Celtics sank seven straight.

But Parish wasn't punished because, the officials said, they didn't see the blows.

"I didn't see any punches," referee Jess Kersey said after the Celtics' 108-107 victory in Game 5 of the NBA Eastern Conference final.

"Obviously, we aren't going to allow anyone to throw a punch and get away with it," Jack Madden, the other referee, said. "I saw Laimbeer fall but I don't know how he fell."

"No comment," Laimbeer said when asked about Parish being allowed to stay in the game. He said red marks just below his neck were a result of Parish's punches.

Welty leaps to NCAA, but Miller's mark shy

By The Times-News

Twin Falls' Amber Welty, a sophomore at Idaho State University, broke a Mountain West Athletic Conference track record over the weekend at the conference meet in Boise and will be going to the NCAA Track and Field Championships.

Twin Falls' Mack Miller, a senior at Boise State University, broke two MWAC records and will be staying home.

Welty set an MWAC record in the high jump Saturday by leap 6 feet, 4 inches, eclipsing the old conference record by 2 1/2 inches and qualifying for the NCAA meet. She is inch shy of Shelly's record of 6 feet, 6 1/2 inches.

Miller actually finished second to Idaho State's Marci Payne in the triple jump, but Miller's record was broken by Payne because Payne's leap of 40-3/4 was wind-aided. The old conference record was 37-5/8.

The previous MWAC long jump record was 19-7/8.

Miller and Welty still hold the Idaho State Class A-1 high school records for the long jump and the high jump, respectively. Miller leaped 18-10 1/4 in 1983; Welty jumped 5-7 1/2 two years later.

record by 2 1/2 inches with a leap of 19-9, but she missed the NCAA qualifying mark by 1 foot, 3 inches. Miller also broke the MWAC triple jump record by almost 3 inches with a mark of 38-7/8, which is 5 1/2 inches shy of the NCAA qualifying mark for that event.

Prosecutor charges Bias was a middleman in cocaine sales

By DAVID GINSBURG
The Associated Press

UPPER MERIDEN, Md. — The prosecutor in the trial of Brian Tribble said Tuesday that former University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias acted as "courtesy middleman" for Tribble in the distribution of cocaine.

Tribble is being tried in Prince George's County Circuit Court on cocaine distribution and possession charges in connection with Bias' cocaine-induced death.

Prosecutor Robert Bonsib, in disputing a defense request that a conspiracy charge against Tribble be dropped, told Judge James M. Rea that an arrangement existed among Bias, Tribble and a third man, Terrence Moore, concerning drug use.

"On each occasion, he (Bias) was acting as a courtesy middleman, if you will," said Bonsib, saying the conspiracy charge stems from incidents going back to January 1986.

Later, neither he nor defense attorney Thomas Morrow would elaborate, citing a gag order imposed by the judge.

It was the second time, defense attorney Morrow had asked the judge to drop the conspiracy charge and Rea stood to the denial he issued Monday.

In his argument against the charge, Morrow noted that Bias could not be proven to disprove it.

Bias died of cocaine intoxication last June 19, just two days after he had been selected in the first round of the 1986 NBA draft by the Boston Celtics.

In his opening argument, assistant state's attorney Jeff Harding said "evidence will show Brian Tribble was involved in an ongoing conspiracy to distribute cocaine."

Prosecutors say they will try to prove that Tribble supplied the cocaine that killed Bias. Harding said the evidence will show that in the early-morning hours of June 19 Tribble, Bias, David Gregg and Terry Long were snorting what Harding called "a large pile of almost pure cocaine."

Harding said that Tribble told friends that he got the drug "from the bottom of the stash, and I'm going to get another kick tomorrow."

In his opening argument, Morrow said the prosecution's case was built on "rumors, innuendoes and generalizations." He questioned the validity of the state's prime witnesses, Long and Gregg, saying their testimony was obtained after a "shotgun" was placed at their heads in the form of an indictment.

Long and Gregg agreed to testify

for the state after the charges against them were dropped.

Following opening arguments, the defense brought in police and rescue officials who told the jury what they saw and found in the hours after Bias collapsed in his College Park dormitory.

Police officer Karl Schallhorn, of the College Park police department, said he found straws with cocaine residue in a dumpster behind the dormitory. He also said police found more than eight grams of cocaine in Bias' car.

The trial is expected to last about two weeks.

Flyers do the unheard of: Win in Edmonton

By REN RAPPOPORT
The Associated Press

EDMONTON, Alberta — Brian Propp assisted on all four goals, including two by Rick Tocchet, as the Philadelphia Flyers rallied to defeat the Edmonton Oilers 4-3 Tuesday night and stayed alive in the Stanley Cup finals.

The Oilers still lead the best-of-seven series 3-2 and can wrap up their third NHL title in four years with a victory in Philadelphia Thursday night.

The Flyers, looking all but finished when they fell behind 2-0 in the first period and 3-1 in the second, battled back behind Propp and Tocchet, their gritty forwards, to send the series back to Philadelphia.

Tocchet's second goal of the night and 11th of the playoffs at 15:36 of the third period put the Flyers ahead to stay.

The Flyers hope to become only the second team in NHL history to win the Stanley Cup finals after falling behind 3-1. The only team to come back from a 3-1 deficit to win the Cup was the Toronto Maple Leafs, who beat the Detroit Red Wings in 1942 after losing the first three games.

After Jari Kurri and Marty McSorley had scored for a 2-0 Edmonton lead, Tocchet scored late in the first period. McSorley restored the Oilers' two-goal lead with his second of the night early in the second period.

But Propp then set up Doug Crossman and Pelle Eklund later in the second period, sending the game into the final period tied 3-3.

Propp did most of the work on the winning goal when he took the puck away from Edmonton defenseman Craig Muni and fed Tocchet across the crease. Tocchet one-timed the puck into the net, beating Edmonton goaltender Grant Fuhr on the short side.

Edmonton pulled Fuhr at 18:51 for an extra attacker, but Flyers rookie goalie Ron Hextall — who was hoisted loudly by the sellout crowd of 17,502 at the start of the game for his part in a slashing incident in Game 4, held them off. Hextall made 31 saves, as did Fuhr.

Propp's four assists tied a club record for a playoff game.

The Oilers, who have scored first in every game of the series, got off to a 1-0 lead on Kurri's power-play goal at 2:58 of the first period.

McSorley gave the Oilers a 2-0 lead with his third goal of the playoffs at 6:39. Wayne Gretzky set up the goal when he carried the puck over the blue line and shot from the top of the left circle. McSorley followed the puck into the crease and just nudged it over the goal line while diving past a sprawled Hextall.

Gretzky's assist was his 27th of the playoffs and extended his total points to 32, tops in these playoffs.

The Flyers got a goal by Tocchet at 19:10 to cut the Oilers' lead to 2-1. Propp set it up when he skated from behind the net and fed the puck to Tocchet, who shot it over the top of the Oilers' 16th goal of the playoffs. It was the first time Hextall had scored in the first period in the finals.

The free-wheeling first period featured 16 shots by each team and strong performances in goal by Hextall and Fuhr.

The Oilers' lead would have been larger after the first 20 minutes, but they missed three breakaways when the Oilers were 3-0 up. second goal of the game. Krushelnyski won a faceoff and got the puck back to Jaroslav Puzar, who passed out to Charlie Hudny before the right faceoff circle. Hudny shot a 49-footer that McSorley deflected into the net from the slot.

Doug Crossman cut Edmonton's lead to 3-2 at 8:08. Propp took a feed from Pelle Eklund in the Flyers' end and skated up ice on a 3-on-2. Propp was in the left faceoff circle when he fed Crossman in the slot and the defenseman beat Fuhr with a 20-footer.

Eklund tied it on a power-play goal at 12:20. Fuhr had stopped a shot by Eklund from the right circle before the Flyers center punched his own rebound past the Oilers goaltender, who was out of position.

Bird steals one from Pistons

By HOWARD ULMAN
The Associated Press

BOSTON — Detroit had the victory in the bag. Then Larry Bird stole it.

Bird, who had missed two shots in the final 30 seconds, picked off Isiah Thomas' inbound pass with five seconds left. The Boston star fed Dennis Johnson for the winning layup with one second to go as the Celtics beat the Pistons 108-107 and took a 3-2 lead in their NBA Eastern Conference final series Tuesday night.

"We were in a big hole," Bird said. "I thought it was really just a matter of luck."

"I'll put that on top of everything Larry's ever done," Boston assistant coach Chris Ford said.

"It was sort of a lazy pass over to Bill Laimbeer," Johnson said. "I didn't see where Larry came from."

Neither did Thomas, whose foul-line jumper had put Detroit ahead 107-106 with 17 seconds remaining.

"You can see I should have called a timeout," he said. "You can see I should not have thrown the pass. You can see I should have thrown the ball harder or Bill should have come in. But all I can say is they stole the ball and they won the game."

"I made a mental mistake by not calling a timeout," said Laimbeer, who walked under Boston's basket for Thomas to pass from the sideline. "In the heat of battle" the proper decisions sometimes are not made.

"I thought basically we had the game won," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said. "All we had to do was inbound the ball."

Then Bird stepped in.

"I was going to foul Laimbeer. I stuck my hand in there and then I knew I had it stolen," he added.

"Then I turned around and saw D.J. standing in the lane."

But Johnson still had to make the basket with Joe Dumars guarding him closely. He drove down the left side of the lane and put the shot up with his right hand.

"I was off-balance," Johnson said. "It rolled around and went down."

Detroit then called timeout and put the ball in play from mid-court. Adrian Dantley's pass hit Laimbeer's hands and went out of bounds as the final buzzer sounded.

The defending champion Celtics can reach the NBA finals for the fourth straight year by winning Bill Laimbeer of the Detroit Pistons goes down as he is hit by Boston's Robert Parrish.

Game 6 of the best-of-seven series in Pontiac, Mich., Thursday night. A seventh game, if necessary, will be in Boston Saturday. The series survivor will play the Western Conference champion Los Angeles Lakers for the NBA title.

Boston, which won for the 35th time in the last 35 games at Boston Garden, was led by Bird with 36 points, Kevin McHale with 20 and Johnson with 18.

Detroit, winless in its last 17 games at the Garden since winning on Dec. 19, 1982, was led by Adrian Dantley with 25 points, Vinnie Johnson with 20 and Thomas with 17.

short shot with 28 seconds remaining. Detroit called a timeout to set up the play on which Thomas gave the Pistons their last lead.

Leading 85-86 at halftime, Boston began the third quarter with an 11-2 run that made the score 69-88 with 9:02 left in the period. Then Detroit went on a 12-2 run to tie the game 71-71.

The Celtics were leading 83-77 when Vinnie Johnson entered the game for Detroit with 2:31 to go in the quarter. He hit a 15-foot jumper to start an 8-0 Detroit spurt in which he had three field goals. It gave the Pistons an 85-83 lead, but Boston got the last three points of the period on foul shots to go ahead 86-85.

Boston took its biggest lead at 48-36 with 7:23 left in the first half on Sam Vincent's two free throws. Then Dantley scored nine points in a 20-10 Pistons' surge that cut their deficit to two points at halftime.

With 53 seconds left in the first half, Parrish punched Laimbeer twice after they battled for a rebound which Laimbeer had grabbed under the Celtics' basket. Laimbeer appeared to have pushed Parrish in the chest before he was punched.

Laimbeer fell to the floor but no foul was called on either player. The incident came one day after Laimbeer was fined $5,000 and Bird $2,000 for a skirmish in Saturday's third game. Laimbeer had kicked Bird to the floor with a hard foul and Bird punched him and threw the ball at him.

Laimbeer's layup had given Detroit its only lead of the first half. 2-0. Boston scored the next nine points. After missing their first three shots, the Celtics sank seven straight.

"But Parrish" wasn't punished because, the officials said, they didn't see the blows.

"I didn't see any punches," referee Jess Kersey said after game 5. "I saw Laimbeer fall but I don't know how he fell."

"No comment," Laimbeer said when asked about Parrish being allowed to stay in the game. He said red marks just below his neck were a result of Parrish's punches.

Welty leaps to NCAA, but Miller's mark shy

By The Times-News

Twin Falls' Amber Welty, a sophomore at Idaho State University, broke a Mountain West Athletic Conference track record over a weekend at the conference meet in Boise and will be going to the NCAA Track and Field Championships.

Welty set an MWAC record in the high jump Saturday by leap 6 feet, 4 inches, eclipsing the old conference record by 2 1/4 inches and qualifying for the NCAA meet by 1 1/2 inches. She'll represent the Bengals in the NCAA meet, which starts on the campus of Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge on June 1.

Miller broke the MWAC long jump record by 2 1/2 inches with a leap of 19-9, but she missed the NCAA qualifying mark by 1 foot, 3 inches. Miller also broke the MWAC triple jump record by almost 3 inches with a leap of 40-6, which is 1/4 inch shy of the NCAA qualifying mark for that event.

Miller actually finished second to Idaho State's Marci Payne in the triple jump, but Miller's record will stand in the MWAC books because Payne's leap of 40-3 1/2 was wind-aided. The old conference record was 37-5 1/2.

The previous MWAC long jump record was 18-7 1/2. Miller and Welty still hold the Idaho state Class A-1 high school records for the long jump and the high jump, respectively. Miller leaped 18-10 1/2 in 1983; Welty jumped 5-7 1/2 two years later.

Prosecutor charges Bias was a middleman in cocaine sales

By DAVID GINSBURG
The Associated Press

UPPER MERLBORO, Md. — The prosecutor in the trial of Brian Tribble said Tuesday that former University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias acted as "courtesy middleman" for Tribble in the distribution of cocaine.

Tribble is being tried in Prince George's County Circuit Court on cocaine distribution and possession charges in connection with Bias' cocaine-induced death.

Prosecutor Robert Bossis, in disputing a defense request that a conspiracy charge against Tribble be dropped, told Judge James M. Rea that an arrangement existed among Bias, Tribble and a third man, Terrence Moore, concerning drug use.

"On each occasion, he (Bias) was acting as a courtesy middleman, if you will," said Bossis, saying the conspiracy charge stems from incidents going back to January 1986.

Later, neither he nor defense attorney Thomas Morrow would elaborate, citing a gag order imposed by the judge.

It was the second time, defense attorney Morrow had asked the judge to drop the conspiracy charge and Rea struck to the denial he issued Monday.

In his argument against the charge, Morrow noted that Bias could not be present to disprove it.

Bias died of cocaine intoxication last June 19, just two days after he had been selected in the first round of the 1986 NBA draft by the Boston Celtics.

In his opening argument, assistant state attorney Jeff Harding said "evidence will show Brian Tribble was involved in an ongoing conspiracy to distribute cocaine."

Prosecutors say they will try to prove that Tribble supplied the cocaine that killed Bias. Harding said the evidence will show that in the early-morning hours of June 19 Tribble, Bias, David Gregg and Terry Long were snorting what Harding called "a large pile of almost pure cocaine."

Harding said that Tribble told relatives that he got the drug "from the bottom of the stash, and I'm going to get another kilo tomorrow."

In his opening argument, Morrow said the prosecution's case was built on "rumors, innuendoes and speculation." Morrow also questioned the validity of the state's prime witnesses, Long and Gregg, saying their testimony was obtained after a "shotgun" was placed at their heads in the form of an indictment.

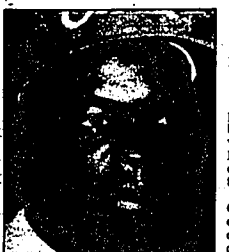

Long and Gregg agreed to testify

for the state after the charges against them were dropped.

Following opening arguments, the defense brought in police and rescue officials who testified that they, too, saw and found in the hours after Bias collapsed in his College Park dormitory.

Police officer Karl Schallhorn, of the College Park police department, said he found straws with cocaine residue in a dumpster behind the dormitory. He also said police found more than eight grams of cocaine in Bias' car.

The trial is expected to last about two weeks.

NL: Rusty right-hander guns down St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Doyle Alexander's contract may be hurting his pride, but not his pitching.

Alexander threw five strong innings after a shaky first to help the Atlanta Braves to a 5-4 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Tuesday night. It was Alexander's season debut after not signing as a free agent over the winter.

In the first inning, I made some bad pitches and they hit them," Alexander said of the consecutive home runs by Jack Clark and Willie McGee. "But after that I was pretty good with my performance."

The 35-year-old right-hander did not walk a batter and struck out six in six innings.

"Control is his key, and he had it tonight," Braves Manager Chuck Tanner said. "It's so nice to get him back."

Ken Griffey led off the sixth with his fifth homer of the year to break a 4-4 tie and get his fourth game-winning run batted in.

Before Tuesday, Alexander had pitched seven-innings three times in extended spring training in Bradenton, Fla., under a $1-million contract terms with Atlanta on May 1.

"I'm not happy about the contract I ended up with, but I'll put it behind me and do the best I can," Alexander said.

Baseball

"I had averaged 250 innings, 15 wins and 35 starts in the last three years and nobody wanted me," Alexander said. "It proves to me that something had to be going on."

Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog said Alexander "changed speeds. He had some of our guys out in front of I thought he pitched pretty good."

Jim Acker relieved Alexander and earned his fifth save. "He was terrific," Tanner said of Acker. "It was his best outing of the year."

Bill Dawley, 0-4, who pitched four innings in relief of Bob Forsch, took the loss.

Trailing 4-3 in the fifth, St. Louis tied the game on Ozzie Smith's two-out RBI double.

Atlanta took a 1-0 lead in the first when Gerald Perry singled with two outs, stole second and scored on the second. St. Louis scored three runs in their half of the first when Smith doubled with two outs before Clark and McGee homered.

Clark's home run was his 13th and gave him the National League lead in RBIs with 45.

Cincinnati 3 Cincinnati 2

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dave Parker hit a homer to lead off the ninth inning Tuesday night, pacing the Cincinnati Reds to a 3-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Parker's homer, his 11th, appeared to hit off center fielder Bob Dernier's glove but when Dernier crashed into the wall, the ball popped out of his glove and went over the fence.

Lee Smith, 1-3, took the loss. John Franco, 3-1, earned the victory after pitching the ninth for Cincinnati.

Trailing 2-1, the Cubs tied the game in the ninth when Andre Dawson's bases-loaded infield single scored Shawn Dunston with two outs.

Cincinnati took a 2-0 lead in the seventh. Dave Parker singled to open the inning, only the fourth hit allowed by Scott Sanderson, 3-2. Parker stole second on a missed hit-and-run play, then scored on Buddy Bell's single to center field.

Bell moved to third when Jody Davis threw Bob Diaz's bump into center field and Nick Esasky capped the inning with a sacrifice fly to right.

The Cubs scored their first run in eighth when Leon Durham doubled with two out off Ron Murphy and scored on Davis' single.

Houston 10 Pittsburgh 3

HOUSTON (AP) — Kevin Bass hit a three-run double to highlight seven-run seventh inning Tuesday night, leading the Houston Astros to a 10-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

With the score 3-3, Bass doubled down the left-field line off John Smiley for the game-winning hit.

The seven runs were the most the Astros have scored in a one inning this year.

Dave Meads, 4-1, was the winner, pitching three innings of scoreless relief. Hippolito Pena, 0-2, allowed three runs on two hits in 1½ innings.

Billy Hatcher led off the seventh with a double. After a walk to Bill Doran and a sacrifice bunt by Chuck Jackson, Glenn Davis walked, loading the bases and chasing Pena. Smiley walked pinch-hitter Paul Houserholder for one run before Bass' double.

Alan Ashby added an RBI single. Hatcher hit a sacrifice fly and Doran singled in another run.

Davis hit his ninth homer in the eighth made for the final run.

Houston took a 1-0 lead in the third on an RBI single by Doran.

Pittsburgh tied the score in the fourth when Barry Bonds led off with a double and scored on Jim Morrison's single.

The Astros moved ahead 2-1 in the bottom of the fourth on a run-scoring double by Ashby.

Philadelphia 3 San Diego 2

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Glenn Wilson hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning to break 1-1 tie and Steve Rawley and Steve Bedrosian combined on a six-hit Tuesday night as Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Diego Padres 3-2.

All Nipper, 4-4, scattered 11 hits over 7½ innings as the Red Sox won two games in a row for the first time in three weeks. Joe Carter hit a three-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning off reliever Calvin Schiraldi, Cleveland's 15th hit.

Nipper was aided by an outstanding defense before Tony Bernazard spoiled the shutout bid with his sixth homer at the start of the seventh.

Left fielder Jim Rice threw out Pat Tabler trying to stretch a single with two out in the first and center fielder Ellis Burks threw out Rick Dempsey attempting to stretch a double in the third. The Indians also lost a scoring bid in the sixth when Mel Hall was called out for passing Joe Carter around third base.

AL: Red-hot Kansas City stretches lead in West to 5 games

CHICAGO (AP) — Willie Wilson had three hits including a leadoff home run Tuesday night in leading the Kansas City Royals to a 5-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

"Hitting home runs is not my game," said Wilson, whose homer was his first of the season. "My game is getting on base and making things happen." He hit nine home runs last year but hit only 269. That's not good for me."

Wilson, who boosted his average to .290, thought his double in the gap in the seventh inning was a bigger hit. It came with two outs after James Quirk had singled and both runners scored on a single by Kevin Seitzer.

At the time it gave the Royals a 4-1 lead but they needed all of that plus a bloop, run-scoring pinch single by Hal McTee in the ninth that scored Bo Jackson with what eventually proved to be the winning run.

It helped make a winner out of Danny Jackson, 2-6. Jackson retired five batters in one inning and struck out career-high 12 strikeouts but still needed ninth-inning help from Dan Quisenberry who picked up his sixth save.

Doubles by Greg Walker and Ken Williams, who had homered in the first, put the Sox in a hole. White Sox a run in the fifth and Jackson led the game in the ninth after Walker hit his eighth homer with a man on base to close the gap.

"I pitched great tonight," said Wilson. "I pitched great tonight," said Wilson. "He has lost a lot of close games but for the first time we got him a lead and he got it in a good groove."

It was the ninth victory in the last 11 games for the first-place Royals who opened a five-game lead in the American League West.

Jackson gave up eight hits and walked one. He struck out Harold Baines four times.

Frank White broke a 1-1 tie with his fourth homer in the fourth inning, off Bill Long, 1-1.

Detroit 8 Texas 7

DETROIT (AP) — Kirk Gibson, who homered earlier, lined a two-out, two-run double in the 11th inning Tuesday night and gave the Detroit Tigers an 8-7 victory over the Texas Rangers.

The Tigers won their third straight game and have won .500 for the first time since April 19.

After Pete O'Brien led off the Texas 11th with a home run, Detroit's Dave Bergman singled with one out in the bottom of the 11th and Lou Whitaker followed with a single. Darrell Evans hit a long fly out, with Bergman moving to third and Whitaker holding first.

Gibson then lined a 2-2 pitch from Dale Mohorcic, 3-2, up the gap in left-center.

Mike Henneaman, 2-0, the fourth Detroit pitcher, worked the final 2½ innings and got the victory. The game, held up for 31 minutes at the start because of rain, took 3 hours and 51 minutes to play.

Ruben Sierra hit two homers and drove in four runs for Texas.

Each team scored a run in the ninth. Scott Fletcher's second double drove home Jerry Browne and put Texas ahead 6-5 before Whitaker tied it with a one-out RBI single off Mohorcic.

Sierra's two-run homer gave the Rangers a 5-4 lead in the seventh. The Tigers tied it in their half of the seventh when Mike Heath doubled and scored on a single by Tom Brookens.

Sierra's solo homer, his fifth of the season, made it 3-3 in the third against Dan Petroy. Gibson hit his fourth homer in the bottom of the third off Bob Melly, making his major-league debut after being called up Thursday from Class A Gastonia, S.C.

Minnesota 4 Milwaukee 2

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Tom Brunansky homered and tripled and Bert Blyleven combined with Jeff Reardon on a four-hit Tuesday night as the Minnesota Twins beat the Milwaukee Brewers 4-2.

Blyleven, 4-4, pitched seven innings and gave up four hits, including a two-run homer to Jim Gantner in the fifth. Blyleven, who allowed a major-league record 50 home runs last season, has yielded 20 this year and at least one in all 11 starts.

Blyleven struck out eight and walked two. Reardon finished with hillside relief, allowing just one walk for his 10th save.

Juan Nieves, 3-2, went six innings and took the loss.

All Newman hit an RBI double in the Twins' first. Brunansky hit a run-scoring triple in the fourth and scored on a passed ball.

Brunansky hit a solo home run in the sixth on a 3-0 pitch from Nieves. Brunansky's eighth homer of the season hit the left-field foul pole.

Owners, player negotiators meet to try to resolve issues

NEW YORK (AP) — Negotiators for NFL players and owners met formally Tuesday for the first time since they exchanged opening proposals last month in hopes that long discussions can eliminate some of the cavernous differences between them.

"It's time to get down to serious business," Jack Donlan, the chief management negotiator, said after the day-long discussions at a New York hotel. "We have to do some talking on a continuing basis so we can fully understand each other's positions."

But both sides—have reiterated they hope to avoid a repeat of the 57-day strike in 1982, which eliminated seven weeks of the regular season.

McEnroe falters again at French Open

By ANDREW WARSHAW
The Associated Press

PARIS — A flustered John McEnroe was eliminated from the French Open tennis championships in the first round Tuesday by Horacio de la Pena of Argentina and was followed by three more seeds.

McEnroe, playing his first match since being fined for walking off court in last week's World Team Cup in West Germany, was beaten 6-2, 6-4, 6-2.

"You stink, this is absolute banality," McEnroe shouted to himself as his volleys and approach shots stood up to be hit or landed in the net.

Defending champion Chris Evert easily won her opening round match, beating Eva Pfaff of West Germany, 6-1, 6-3, but Martina Navratilova had a tough time subduing Catherine Tanvier of France, 6-2, 7-6.

McEnroe's loss marked the second time he had been ousted in the first round of a Grand Slam event. In 1985, he lost to Paul Anacone in after taking a seven-month break to get his mind and body in shape.

After losing to de la Pena, the 28-year-old New Yorker, seeded third, he needed another brief period of rehabilitation.

"Physically, I was not up to it. In retrospect, I should not have played last week. Perhaps I overdid it," a tired-looking, disconsolate McEnroe said. "It could not have come at a worse time. This is a big tournament for me. Now I need at least 10 days rest."

After just two days of the championships, one quarter of the men's singles already have been eliminated. Johan Kriek went out Monday and joining McEnroe on the sidelines Tuesday were No. 9 Henri Leconte of France and Pat Cash, the 12th-seeded Australian.

Leconte, limping badly from a recurrence of a back injury that required micro-surgery in February and sidelined him for two months, lost 6-3, 6-2, 6-7, 6-4 to Rick Osterthun, a West German ranked 124th in the world.

"All I had to do was keep the ball in play," Osterthun said. Cash, whose game is more suited to the grass of Wimbledon and his native Australia, was ousted by Californian Jim Pugh 3-6, 6-2, 6-4, 7-6.

"I had the match in my hands and let it slip," Cash said. "It's disappointing when you set the point up and miss the easy shot."

The other seed to be toppled on the second day was American Melissa Gurney, No. 9 in the women's draw. She lost 6-4, 6-2 to Australia's Nicole Provis.

Evert and Navratilova were among eleven other seeds who advanced to the second round. Evert, who ended a five-month injury in February, said she was pleased with her performance.

"The first round is the round every player wants to get through the most," said Evert, bidding to win the French singles title for the eighth time. "Being No. 3 in the world, I'm probably the underdog but I've won three straight tournaments going into the French."

Navratilova, still without a tournament victory this year, as fighting to hold onto her Wimbledon title. Tanvier had a set point in the second-set tiebreaker but missed her chance and Navratilova came through on her second match point to win.

Navratilova spent much of the pre-match conference dismissing a disputed point that went against her, despite a heated protest, towards the end of the tiebreaker.

"On clay, it's very unexpected," Navratilova said. "The mark and there was no doubt the ball was out. If it had not been so crucial a time, I don't think I'd have argued so much."

She said she was relishing the prospect of proving herself at Roland Garros.

"I welcome the challenge. I served well today and that's a step in the right direction from how I've been playing," Navratilova said.

Also advanced from the women's draw were No. 4 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, who swept Yugoslavia's Milica Jausovec 6-0, 6-0; No. 6 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, with a 3-6, 6-3, 6-1 over Italy's Sandra Cecchi; No. 8 Claudia Kohde-Korns of West Germany, who defeated Patricia Hy of Hong Kong 6-2, 6-3; No. 11 Catarina Lindqvist of Sweden, 6-0, 7-5; who beat Argentina's Mercedes Paz, No. 13 Marylou Sureson of the United States, 6-4, 6-6; 6-2 over compatriot Kathy Harwitz; and No. 14 Raffaella Barbato of Italy, a 6-4, 6-1 winner against Christina Singer of West Germany.

Among the men, No. 3 and Stefan Edberg of Sweden showed no sign of a recent groin injury as he whipped American Mike Leach 6-2, 6-3, 6-1.

Yevgeny Kafelnikov, seeded fourth, won 6-2, 6-1, 6-3 victory over Todd Williams of the United States.

McEnroe's 10th-seeded Andre Gomer, winner of the Tournament of Champions in New York and always a threat on clay, overpowered Switzerland's Roland Stadler 6-4, 6-2, 6-4.

Two other seeds were poised for victory when early evening rain brought a premature end to the day's play.

Two-time Wimbledon champion Peter Dinkov, seeded No. 2, was leading 6-1, 6-1 against Diego Perez of Uruguay. Jimmy Connors was up 7-5, 6-2, 4-0 against Todd Williams.

Against de la Pena, whom he had beaten previously, McEnroe made the occasional mad dash to umpire Jean Philippe Merlat but for the most part kept his volatile temper in check during an unrespectful match.

"With more variety than his 20-year-old opponent, McEnroe took the opening set in 52 minutes, but ultimately fell apart.

His serve-and-volley game neutralized on the slow clay. McEnroe was passed repeatedly on both sides of the court as de la Pena bred the match. The Argentine, taking advantage of a sluggish and unusually sluggish McEnroe, won nine successive points in the middle of the third set.

Shue named latest Clippers coach

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gene Shue, a self-described optimist, was introduced as the head coach of the Los Angeles Clippers at a news conference Tuesday and said he's confident he can help change the fortunes of the NBA's poorest team.

"I'm wearing a yellow tie," said Shue, whose hiring was announced last Wednesday. "Yellow, of course, is the most optimistic color."

Pro basketball

"I think the future of the Clippers starting now will be very bright, indeed. I always try to look at the bright side of things. The team really is at the bottom; they had a lot of problems, a lot of injuries. This team needs more than anything a positive image."

The Clippers do need turning around. Not only were they the poorest team in the NBA this past season, they have failed to qualify for the playoffs for 11 straight years.

Their best record in those 11 years was in 1979-80, when they were playing in San Diego.

Shue, the fourth-winningest coach in NBA history with a 757-768 career record and twice the league's Coach of the Year, said he signed a three-year contract with the Clippers.

Shue has coached having nothing but positive things to say about him. We're confident he can turn this team around.

He succeeds Don Chaney, who was fired April 22, a few days after the Clippers completed a 12-70 season, second-worst in NBA history.

Kohl already has said he would give the Mavericks permission to talk to Nelson, who has said he won't coach at Milwaukee next season because of differences with Kohl.

Nelson emerges as favorite as Motta's Dallas successor

DALLAS (AP) — Milwaukee Bucks Coach Don Nelson emerged Tuesday as the favorite to succeed Jerry Motta as the Dallas Mavericks head coaching job after a conference between Mavericks owner Don Carter and general manager Norm Sonju, team officials said.

A club spokesman said Herb Kohl Wednesday to obtain permission to interview Nelson for the Mavericks job, which opened when Dick Motta resigned unexpectedly last week.

"They really didn't contact with the Milwaukee owner today. They have plans to accomplish that in the morning," said Gene Sullivan, the Mavericks' director of media relations.

Sullivan said the talks had not yet reached the compensation issue. Carter and Sonju have said they would not talk to any coach under contract until they settled any compensation question.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"To win without risk is to triumph without glory."

—Cornelius

There were several hurdles to negotiate to bring home today's touch-and-go game, played in the knockout teams at a recent regional in Honolulu...

West's club 10 went to East's ace and a club return cleared the suit. Eddie Wolf of Houston, Texas, had to decide whether to try to win eight major-suit tricks on the run or to develop one winner or more in diamonds.
